City announces National Preparedness Month

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

Sept. 11 seemed like a good time to announce that this is National Preparedness Month, said Pampa City Manager John Horst.

The Pampa City Commission adopted a resolution during their meeting on Tuesday recognizing September as National Preparedness Month.

The U.S. Department of Homeland Security was encouraging communities, businesses and individuals to join together to prepare for natural and manmade disasters, Horst said.

The resolution encouraged people to prepare prior to any disaster in an effort to minimize the potential threat to their safety and well being. The city commission said they wanted to reduce personal injury, prevent the loss of life and speed the recovery process in the wake of a disaster.

Tuesday's resolution encourages residents to learn more about preparing for disaster situations by building emergency supply kits, making a family emergency plan, becoming informed about different threats and becoming more involved in community efforts concerning disaster planning.

"There are four parts to emergency management," said Fred Courtney, Gray County's emergency management coordinator. "The first is prevention and protection. Then, there's preparedness. Then, there's response and recovery."

While prevention, response and recovery revolved around emergency non-governmental and governmental agencies, preparedness concerns not only the agencies but individuals as well.

"Preparedness is really planning," Courtney said.

Disasters can come in many forms, he said, citing the tornado that struck Pampa in 1995, the wildfires that burned more than a million acres across the eastern Texas Panhandle

Forfeiture funds on county agenda

By MARILYN POWERS
Staff Writer

Use of forfeiture funds by the district attorney's office is once again on the agenda for Gray County commissioners, who will meet at 9 a.m. Friday in the second-floor courtroom at Gray County Courthouse, 205 N. Russell.

An additional supplemental salary for the assistant district attorney through use of forfeiture funds will be discussed. A request by 31st District Attorney Lynn Switzer to use forfeiture funds to supplement her employees' salary was denied by a vote of 3-2 at commissioners' Aug. 31 meeting.

A resolution calling for a joint election between Gray County and the city of Pampa concerning a constitutional amendment and a firefighter election issue will be offered. The items will appear on the ballot for the November general election if approved.

Land lease rates at Perry

LeFors Airport will once again be considered. The issue was on the Aug. 31 agenda, but commissioners agreed to seek additional information from the airport board of directors before making a decision on the rates. Current rates are five cents per square foot for non-commercial renters and 10 cents per square foot for commercial customers.

Renewal of the annual maintenance contract for the VINE program will be voted on. The computer program notifies crime victims of the impending release of inmates who perpetrated crimes against them.

Also on Friday's agenda are the county retirement rate for fiscal year 2008, the county treasurer's report, payment of bills and salaries, line item transfers and recognition of the salaries of the auditor, assistant auditor and court reporter, which are set by district judges under Local Government Code 152.031 (a) and 152.031 (b).

Cattleman's barbecue popular

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

AMARILLO — The shame of it all. A Texas cattleman is barbecuing chicken, but the line outside Lane Thompson's booth was long with people wanting to try his chicken and pork ribs.

Alanreed rancher Lane Thompson teamed up with the National Bank of Commerce in McLean and Red River Steakhouse for the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce's annual barbecue cook-off this week.

Besides ranching, Thompson is also the chief cook and taster for Red Mud Barbecue Sauce and a long time barbecue aficionado. "It's just something I did," Thompson shrugged, standing beneath the fly next to his barbecue cooker. "I was just never happy with what I could purchase, and I like messing around with stuff so I kept monkeying around and came up with my own sauce."

Originally, it was just for his family and friends, but his mother insisted that he bottle it and sell it to the public.

He started bottling it several years ago. Now, it's available through a number of outlets, including United Supermarkets. It's even available online through a Floydada company called Texas-In-A-Box along with a selection of meat for barbecuing. The Red River Steakhouse in McLean has it on their menu.

"It's the only steakhouse that sells it," Thompson said.

Thompson said the sauce was developed through a try-and-taste method.

"I was just experimenting," Thompson said. As for his cooking here at the corner of 11th and Polk in Amarillo, which will continue through tonight, Thompson said the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce provided the meat. They gave each contestant 18 briskets, 20 chickens and four cases of ribs.

"It's a bunch of danged meat," he said. To make the competition even tougher, many of the other contestants are using Red Mud Barbecue Sauce.

With his ranching operation, Thompson said the barbecue sauce is just a sideline, although after losing a lot of grass, fence and cattle to the March 2006 wildfires, he paused and added that maybe he should devote more of his time to making barbecue sauce than ranching.

A balanced diet is a rib in each hand. Alanreed rancher Lane Thompson cuts up ribs he barbecued using his own Red Mud barbecue sauce during opening night of the Amarillo Barbecue Cookoff. The cookoff continues from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. today at 11th and Polk in Amarillo.

Humberto crashes ashore in Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — Hurricane Humberto crashed ashore along Southeast Texas early today, bringing heavy rains and maximum sustained winds of up to 80 mph as it made its way to Louisiana, the National Weather Service said.

The Category 1 storm made landfall about five miles east of High Island, near Sea Rim State Park, where wind gusts measured 62 mph, meteorologist Jim Sweeney said. The storm was expected to start weakening as it continued inland.

"It's a very compact storm," Sweeney said. "The strongest winds are very close to the center of circulation."

FPC gains top ranking

By KERRI SMITH
Staff Writer

Frank Phillips College has been ranked as one of the top 30 community colleges in the United States by Washington Monthly magazine in its recently published list of college rankings.

Frank Phillips College came in at 27th in the nation and is the only community college in a nearly 300-mile radius to earn a place on the list.

The rankings are based on graduation rate statistics compiled by the U.S. Department of Education and results of the Community College Survey of Student Engagement, which surveys community colleges nationwide regarding how well schools use teaching techniques that have proven to facilitate better learning.

According to the article, most people assume that every four-year university will rate above community colleges, but that is not the reality. The survey revealed that on a number of important measures, community colleges outperform universities in student learning. The article concludes that great teaching can happen anywhere, a university or a community college.

"I am delighted and pleased to have external validation reveal the quality of teaching and learning that takes place at our community's college," Frank Phillips

College President Dr. Herbert Swender said. "Often times, the choice for students is not between Frank Phillips College and a state university, but it is between Frank Phillips College and nothing. Frank Phillips College does in fact make a positive difference for the students, our community and certainly for the State of Texas. I give credit to our faculty, administration and staff for this prestigious honor."

In March 2006, the blizzards last winter that stranded motorists, ranchers and livestock in northeastern New Mexico and the flooding in Canyon that closed Interstate 27 last week.

Each is a different hazard. Each requires different actions.

Preparedness, Courtney said, is trying to anticipate all of the hazards.

In the winter, he said, a motorist needs to have blankets and a full tank of gas before starting out. Depending upon the circumstances, the motorist may need to have chains and a shovel in the trunk and, perhaps, water and food.

During storm season, emergency crews will go first to areas that suffered the most damage, but damage in one area may also mean that power lines are down and other parts of town lack electricity.

Homeowners need a battery operated radio that will pick up National Weather Service and emergency broadcasts. They may need canned or packed food and bottled water.

"Don't get frozen food," Courtney warned. If the power goes out, the refrigerator or freezer won't work.

Homeland Security's basic emergency supply kit includes one gallon of water per day per person for at least three days, a three-day supply of non-perishable food, a battery powered radio with extra batteries, a flashlight with extra batteries, a first aid kit, a whistle to signal for help, a dust mask, plastic sheeting, duct tape, moist towlettes and garbage bags, wrench or pliers to turn off utilities, a can opener and local maps.

Depending upon the situation, Courtney said, residents may also consider extra prescription medicines and glasses, infant formula, diapers, food and water for pets, family documents and insurance papers, cash or travelers checks, sleeping bags or blankets and household chlorine bleach and a medicine dropper for water purification.

Homeland Security offers a more complete list on their Web site at www.ready.gov.

Courtney said that while the city and county plan for emergencies because they are required to by state and federal law, the real reason is for the protection of Pampa and Gray County residents.

Don't let special date pass you by ...

A significant date is coming up on the calendar. A date that should be celebrated by every American. A date dedicated to a historic document that represents the very spirit of these United States.

The date is Sept. 17. It is the day set aside as Constitution Day. The day when a groundbreaking document became more than a collection of laws. It became a manifesto of a great country, where all are free to pursue liberty and happiness.

Take a moment now, and on that coming day, to consider an America without this piece of writing.

Take a moment to consider what the Constitution of the United States means to you, to your family, and how it has shaped the values you hold dear.

The text below was provided at the Web site of the Bill of Rights Institute. Take time to read over it. Refresh your memory. Honor and celebrate these words.

The Bill of Rights
The Conventions of a number of the States having, at the time of adopting the Constitution, expressed a desire, in order to prevent misconstruction or abuse of its powers, that further declaratory and restrictive clauses should be added, and as extending the ground of public confidence in the Government will best ensure the beneficent ends of its institution;

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, two-thirds of both Houses concurring, that the following articles be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States, as amendments to the Constitution of the United States; all or any of which articles, when ratified by three-fourths of the said Legislatures, to be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the said Constitution, namely:

Amendment I

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Sept. 13, the 256th day of 2007. There are 109 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 13, 1788, the Congress of the Confederation authorized the first national election, and declared New York City the temporary national capital.

On this date:

In 1759, during the final French and Indian War, the British defeated the French on the Plains of Abraham overlooking Quebec City.

In 1803, Commodore John Barry, considered by many the father of the American Navy, died in Philadelphia.

In 1851, American medical pioneer Walter Reed was born in Gloucester County, Va.

In 1857, Milton S. Hershey, founder of the candy empire that bears his name, was born in Dauphin County, Pa.

In 1907, the RMS Lusitania arrived in New York, completing its maiden voyage from England.

In 1948, Republican Margaret Chase Smith of Maine was elected to the U.S. Senate, becoming the first woman to serve in both houses of Congress.

In 1971, a four-day inmates' rebellion at the Attica Correctional Facility in upstate New York ended as police and guards stormed the prison; the ordeal and final assault claimed 43 lives.

In 1977, conductor Leopold Stokowski died in Hampshire, England, at age 95.

In 1989, Fay Vincent was named commissioner of Major League Baseball, succeeding the late A. Bartlett Giamatti.

In 1993, at the White House, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat shook hands after signing an accord granting limited Palestinian autonomy.

Ten years ago: Funeral services were held in Calcutta, India, for Nobel peace laureate Mother Teresa.

Five years ago: President Bush said it was "highly doubtful" that Saddam Hussein would comply with demands that he disarm and avoid a confrontation with the world community. And he mocked Democrats and other lawmakers who wanted U.N. action before a congressional vote on confronting Saddam.

One year ago: Gunman Kimveer Gill, 25, opened fire in a cafeteria at Dawson College in Montreal, Canada, slaying one student and wounding 19 before killing himself.

Answers to some popular questions ...

Over the last few years, I've discovered that most all tech support questions focus on a few key subjects. In fact, I find myself on a weekly basis answering many of the following questions. I thought you might find the answers helpful.

1. How do I stop those annoying pop-up ads?

The best pop-up blocker I've found is also free. The Google toolbar (<http://toolbar.google.com>) does a great job at stopping these little windows. In addition, you get an easy way to search the Web.

2. What is spyware and how do I stop it?

Spyware is any software that secretly monitors your computer activities and reports them to a third party. Many advertising sites use spyware to track your purchases so that they can better target their advertising.

However, some spyware can be used to steal your identity. To discover and remove spyware, get "Spybot: Search and Destroy," (<http://www.spybot.info>) a great free program.

Also check out Microsoft's free anti-spyware program (<http://www.microsoft.com/defender>). You will be surprised how much spyware you already have.

3. Is there a "free" way to prevent viruses?

While Norton and McAfee control the majority of anti-virus software marketshare, they are not the only games in town. If you're looking for a good, free alternative, check out AVG Anti-virus (<http://free.grisoft.com>). The program and all updates are completely free for personal use. If you need a quick scan, check out Housecall (<http://housecall.antivirus.com>). It'll check your system via the Web.

4. When I try to defrag my system, it constantly starts over. Why?

As files are saved on your system, they are chopped up to fit in the available storage spaces (clusters). To retrieve a file, your system must put these pieces back together. If these pieces are next to each other physically (contiguous), the retrieval happens much quicker. Defragging rearranges the clusters so that they are contiguous.

However, if the Windows Defragmenter detects another program opening and saving files on your hard drive, it will start over (as the contents have changed). This can effectively prevent the defragmentation procedure from ever completing.

The best way to defrag is to boot your system into "Safe Mode." To do that, restart your system and continuously tap the F8 key until a menu appears. Choose "Safe Mode" with your cursor keys and hit enter. Once it finishes booting, you'll be able to defrag with no interruptions.

5. My friends send me e-mail "warnings" and stories. How do I know if they're true?

Most e-mail warnings and stories are false and are started by pranksters to see how far and wide their joke is e-mailed. To encourage forwarding, they often tempt

Texas Thoughts

By The Associated Press

A sample of editorial opinion around Texas:

■ Sept. 2

Houston Chronicle on two years after Hurricane Katrina:

In August 2005, when Hurricane Katrina clobbered the Gulf Coast and flooded 80 percent of New Orleans, chaos reigned at every government level. The Federal Emergency Management Agency was unprepared to deal with a devastated population. Louisiana and New Orleans officials were not sure of their roles, and no one bore responsibility for evacuating or sheltering the sick, the poor and the elderly.

Two years later, the same disorganization, inertia and lack of direction seem as apparent as they were immediately after the storm.

The White House reports that $96 billion in federal funds has been spent or made available to state and local governments. But most of Katrina's survivors don't know what the money went for, or to whom it went.

Last week President Bush, who did not become fully engaged in Katrina's aftermath until days after the disaster began, visited the Gulf Coast. At a New Orleans school he said, "We're still paying attention. We understand."

Many Katrina survivors, however, remain unpersuaded, bitter and defeated by the red tape that stands in the way of federal aid.

New Orleans' population has reached 60 percent of its pre-K number, but recovery has been spotty. The French Quarter, tourism and port operations are bouncing back. But the neighborhoods that flooded, such as the poverty-stricken Ninth Ward, are mostly unrestored.

Basic questions have not been answered: Should neighborhoods in New Orleans below sea level be redeveloped? If so, in what way and at whose expense? How should Katrina victims be moved out of thousands of FEMA trailers and into permanent housing? How long is it reasonable to subsidize the rent of thousands of impoverished Katrina victims in Houston.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I was married a year ago. During our honeymoon, my husband started telling me I could not wear my wedding band and engagement ring together -- they were "too flashy," and he didn't want people to think he had money. (My wedding band and engagement ring together are about 2 1/2 carats.) Being a brand-new bride, and excited about being able to wear both my rings, I refused his request. Over the past year he has brought it up again often, saying I should wear only my wedding band. I love my rings and want to wear both. He selected my engagement ring himself, and we picked out my wedding band together, so I don't understand why he didn't buy me a smaller engagement ring or suggest that I get a simpler wedding band. I wouldn't have cared if my rings were smaller, but now that I have them, I love wearing them, and I don't want to stop. I always take my rings off when I'm in the shower. Three weeks ago, while I was taking my shower, my husband took my engagement ring. Now he refuses to give it back to me. I have searched everywhere, but I have no idea where he put it. Every time I look at my hand and see my lonely wedding band, I wish I had my engagement ring. I miss wearing it, and I'm beginning to resent my husband over this. Please tell me, Abby, am I being petty and materialistic, or does my husband have no right to keep the ring from me? -- RINGLESS IN INDIANA

DEAR RINGLESS: Your husband had no right to take the ring. It was given to you with the promise of marriage, and you have kept your part of the bargain. Is he controlling? Does he owe people money? Could that be why he wants you to appear less affluent than you are? If he didn't want you to enjoy it, why would he buy it for you in the first place? Your letter set off alarm bells. If you're smart, you'll start looking closely at all financial records. Something is up, and your husband is not being open about it. His behavior was reprehensible. If I were you, I'd be suspicious -- very suspicious.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me handle a problem with my brother-in-law, "George." George has a dog that is aggressive toward people. "Brutus" has bitten my nephews, nieces and several complete strangers. George brings Brutus everywhere. He even brought Brutus to our wedding, which was a formal event. I do not like Brutus, and I'm afraid of what he might do to our 1-year-old child, the neighbors or to me. My husband and in-laws won't talk to George about this. Am I wrong to expect my husband to step up and speak to his brother about Brutus? I want to say something, but my husband always makes me feel like I'm being "mean" and that saying anything would hurt George's feelings. Please help. -- DOG-TIRED IN MISSOULA, MONT.

DEAR DOG-TIRED: Ask yourself, and your wimp of a husband, which would be easier to heal: your brother-in-law's "feelings" or your child's sweet little face. A dog that has proven itself to be aggressive has no place around children. As a mother, it is your duty to protect your child from possible harm. If you don't speak up, it appears nobody else will. And if Brutus is as you describe him, he's an accident waiting to happen. P.S. That dog should not have attended your formal wedding. Not only was he a danger to the other guests, he couldn't conform to the dress code.

Kevin Everett's mom hopeful of Bills player's recovery: 'He's like a miracle'

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Patricia Dugas can't help but notice that every time she enters Kevin Everett's hospital room, her son looks more and more like himself.

"I can't even explain it to you; he's like a miracle," Dugas said Wednesday, her voice breaking in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "There's not a whole lot, but enough to give me some hope. And that's all I need, because hope will take me a long way."

Look at how far it's gotten her since Sunday, when Everett, the Buffalo Bills reserve tight end, sustained a life-threatening spinal cord injury while making a tackle in the team's season opener against Denver.

Dugas left her home in Port Arthur, Texas, on Monday fearing her son would never walk again. Everything changed Tuesday, when she watched Everett move his limbs and feel her touch when he was partially awakened from a sedated state.

By Wednesday, doctors at Buffalo's Millard Fillmore Gates Hospital were confident enough to remove Everett from a respirator and began amending their initial prognosis from "bleak" to "cautious optimism," regarding the chances of his recovery.

"The patient's made significant improvement. But no one should think the functions in his legs is close to normal. Not even close," said Dr. Kevin Gibbons, the hospital's supervisor of neurosurgery. "If you ask me, 'Would he walk again?' I would tell you that I wouldn't bet against it. But he has a long way to go."

Everett can wiggle his toes, bend his hip, move his ankles, elevate and kick his leg, as well as extend his elbows and slightly flex his biceps, Gibbons said. While all are significant signs of improvement, he noted that Everett has yet to show any movement in his hands.

"Walking out of this hospital is not a realistic goal, but walking may be," said Dr. Andrew Cappuccino, the team's orthopedic surgeon.

Dugas spoke publicly for the first time Wednesday, elated at what she's witnessed since her initial visit, when she found her son under heavy sedation and his body functions controlled by life-support systems.

"It was devastating," she said. "I kind of stepped back. But I had to go forward. And I got up to him and told him I loved him."

And now?

"Happy," said Dugas, who has spent the past three days at her son's bedside. "I'm extremely happy. I'm grateful."

Everett was hurt after ducking his head while tackling the Denver Broncos' Domenik Hixon during the second-half kickoff of the Bills' season opener. He dropped face-first to the ground after his helmet hit Hixon high on the left shoulder and side of the helmet.

Unable to get the Bills game on TV at home, Everett's mother called several sports bars and learned one just around the corner was showing the game.

Dugas walked in as the second half began, just in time to see her son fall to the ground.

"That's the first thing I saw. I was so upset. I was distraught, and I started panicking. 'What can I do? And I've got to get to him because he's not getting up,'" she said. "I can't explain to you how I felt, because there's no words for it. It was the worst thing I had ever saw."

"Get up," Dugas recalled saying. "I mean, I can't explain it. It was just horrible."

With help from some bar patrons, Dugas composed herself, went home and immediately began making plans to travel to Buffalo.

Then came the next shock. Cappuccino called from the hospital to inform Dugas of her son's condition. A few minutes later, Everett was on the phone.

"He put him on the phone and (Everett) said, 'Momma, don't worry. I love you. I love my sisters. I know I'll be all right,'" Dugas said. "He asked if I was coming, and I said, 'Momma is coming. You don't even worry about that.'"

Despite knowing Everett's condition, Dugas was comforted by hearing his voice.

"I was so proud of him, laying in the condition that he was in and thinking about me, his family," she said.

His Bills family isn't just thinking about him — numerous players also visited Everett on their day off Tuesday.

"I started cracking little jokes to keep him upbeat," tight end Robert Royal said. "He was actually laughing a little bit when we were talking about football stuff. ... He was excited, and we told him we would stick by him no matter what."

Coach Dick Jauron, who also visited Everett, acknowledged it would be difficult for his team to prepare to play at Pittsburgh on Sunday.

"There's no way to pretend that Kevin's situation does not occupy our thoughts and our conversations a lot of the time. It certainly does," Jauron said. "But I think our guys are professional enough, and they really care enough about what they do."

Dugas thanked the Bills, the hospital medical staff and fans for their work and support. Part of her time with Everett is spent reading him the many cards and letters that already have arrived at the hospital.

"We're going to take it slow getting him up on his feet, but we hope to see him walk out of here," Dugas said. "I always told him when he was a little boy, 'You show them better than you can tell them.' He's going to be fine. I really believe it."

Belichick speaks with Goodell, apologizes for videotape flap

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. (AP) — It's not just the NFL's players who are getting into trouble these days.

Commissioner Roger Goodell is investigating whether the Patriots illegally videotaped the opposing coaches during their Week 1 victory over the New York Jets. New England coach Bill Belichick apologized Wednesday — for what, it wasn't clear — and confirmed that he has spoken to Goodell about an "interpretation" of league rules.

"If they are in fact found guilty ... the rest of the member clubs are confident the league will take punitive action against it," said Tennessee Titans coach Jeff Fisher, who is also a co-chairman of the league's competition committee.

"There's no place for it. Everybody clearly understands the rules. The competition committee's responsibility is to protect the integrity of the game. With technology the way it is right now, things could get out of hand in a matter of weeks if we don't protect the integrity of the game."

NFL security confiscated a video camera and tape from Patriots video assistant Matt Estrella on Sunday when he was working on the Jets' sideline during New England's 38-14 victory. The league has confirmed that it is investigating whether the Patriots were taping the Jets' defensive coaches as they signaled to players on the field.

Belichick issued a one-paragraph statement 10 minutes before his regular Wednesday availability, saying he has spoken with Goodell "about a videotaping procedure during last Sunday's game and my interpretation of the rules."

"Although it remains a league matter, I want to apologize to everyone who has been affected, most of all ownership, staff and players," the statement said. "Following the league's decision, I will have further comment."

It was not clear whether Belichick was apologizing for his actions or the distraction it has caused his team as it prepares for Sunday night's marquee game against San Diego. But if he thought — or even hoped — that the standing-room crowd of media was there to talk about the Chargers, he failed to prepare in the manner that has made him one of the most successful coaches in the history of the league.

Never one to relish his interactions with the media, Belichick grimly refused to respond to a half-dozen questions about the scandal, possible punishments and the potential effect on his team. Begging for a football question, he seemed ready to abort the news conference after just a few minutes at the podium.

"Any questions about the Chargers?" he pleaded in his standard, other-things-to-do monotone. "Want to talk about the football game? If not, I think that statement pretty much covers it."

It appeared that there were no takers, but then a reporter asked about Chargers running back LaDainian Tomlinson.

Cubs tie for NL Central lead with 3-2 victory in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — The Chicago Cubs got just the kind of win they needed for their playoff drive.

Rich Hill allowed three hits over seven innings and the Cubs moved into a tie with Milwaukee for the NL Central lead with a 3-2 victory over the Houston Astros on Wednesday night.

Hill (9-8) struck out seven and walked three as the Cubs won for the third time in seven games and snapped a four-game losing streak at Minute Maid Park. They entered the day one game behind the Brewers, who lost 7-4 at Pittsburgh.

"This type of game really should get us on a roll," Cubs manager Lou Piniella said. "You have to think that the worm has turned. You've got to start feeling like things are going to go your way."

Ryan Dempster, who lost Tuesday's game in the 11th inning when he gave up a walkoff triple, earned his 26th save in 29 chances despite allowing a run in the ninth inning.

Cliff Floyd hit a solo homer in the second and tripled in the fourth off Houston starter Matt Albers (4-8). Ryan Theriot had two RBIs, snapping an 0-for-14 stretch with an infield single that scored Floyd.

The Cubs came in averaging 3.24 runs per game when Hill pitches, the lowest run support for any starter in the majors. Hill didn't need much help in this one, baffling every Astro but Mark Loretta, who had three hits, two against Hill.

"I'm really proud of the way our young left-hander pitched," Piniella said. "It was a pressure game for him to pitch in. And he responded as well as or better than you can expect."

The 27-year-old settled down after giving up a hit and two walks in the first two innings. He had a quick chat with catcher Jason Kendall in the dugout, then gave up only Loretta's single and a walk to Craig Biggio between the third and sixth innings.

"After that second inning, I regrouped and just talked with Jason," Hill said. "He said, 'You're fine. Just keep throwing the ball the way you're throwing it.'"

Hill's biggest mistake came in the seventh, when Loretta led off with a homer into the left-field porch, his third of the season and first since June 29.

Cuban launches HDNet Fights to push MMA in 3D

DALLAS (AP) — Leave it to Mark Cuban to offer the ultimate in-your-face fighting experience.

Coming soon to a theater near you: Mixed martial arts in 3D.

"If you think watching MMA in person is amazing, if you think watching it in high-def is amazing, you ain't seen nothing until you see a punch come straight at you in 3D," Cuban said.

Testing is still being done and theaters are getting the equipment needed for this technological feat. It's all part of HDNet Fights, a promotion-production arm of Cuban's high-definition television network outlined Wednesday by the maverick owner of the Dallas Mavericks.

HDNet has been showing MMA events for more than a year, but under this new umbrella the network will have a lot more control of the product, all the way to setting up some of the fight cards. Their first installment will be Oct. 13 at the Mavs' arena. It will feature 10 bouts, with Eric Paulson coming out of retirement to take on Jeff "Big Diesel" Ford in the main event.

HDNet Fights is taking a new approach to MMA, which is a hybrid of everything from boxing to kickboxing to wrestling. The simple explanation is that they are going to promote each event like it's just another game in the NBA season. Cuban calls it "making these professional sporting events, as opposed to spectacles."

"There isn't really the need for a lot of sideshows and war paint and costumes and all those types of things because the sport of MMA in and of itself is enough of an attraction," Cuban said. "It's going to be more like Dirk Nowitzki and Dwyane Wade up here. They might not necessarily like each other, but they're very professional. We're going to introduce the sport to the concept of actually treating the athletes like professional athletes."

And like sci-fi characters, once the 3D showings take off.

Cuban said the idea came from seeing the NBA pull it off for the finals and the All-Star game.

"We're learning it right now," he said. "We're doing some testing with some folks out of Montreal. It's more about getting the theaters configured with the right equipment than it is on the broadcast side. It's going to be pretty cool."

Ultimate Fighting Championship is the leader in the MMA world. Cuban isn't planning on taking them on directly — at least, not yet. The goal now is working with all the other entities and trying to unify them on the high-def network, under the HDNet Fights brand.

"We're more of an umbrella organization," he said. "If we need to create our own fights, we will. But we'd rather partner with great promoters and help them."

Cuban said at least one theater per city in the Landmark Theatres' chain will have the equipment. Landmark has theaters in 23 markets, including Dallas, Austin and Houston, according to its Web site.

While Cuban's group may sign two or three big-name fighters, they will focus on developing their own stars.

you with phrases like, "Send it to your closest five friends and something neat will happen on your PC." Before you forward one of these hoaxes to everyone in your address book, check its validity at Snopes (<http://www.snopes.com>). It'll save you some embarrassment.

6. What's the best way to speed up my system?

First, destroy any spyware (see question 2), remove any programs you no longer use, and defragment your system (see question 4). If your system is still unbearably slow, consider purchasing more RAM. This low-cost investment can more than double your PC's performance, depending on how you have it configured. I've seen many "obsolete" systems become usable again with this simple upgrade. Contact your PC's manufacturer for more information or give our friendly techs a call at 806-353-0004.

7. How do I stop junk e-mail (spam)?

First, realize that junk e-mail is a fact of life. You will not be able to completely stop it. However, the Federal Government (specifically, Congress) is working on a way to outlaw many of the deceptive practices used to send this junk. Until then, the burden falls on your shoulders.

Fortunately, there are some specific, easy steps you can take to significantly reduce the torrent of spam in your inbox. However, space doesn't allow me to continue here. BUT, you can get my full, three-page "How to Stop Spam" report for free by signing up for my e-mail newsletter. Simply go to my Web site (<http://www.EricSpellmann.com>) and type in your e-mail address.

I will ONLY use your address for the newsletter and will not sell or give it to anyone else. The newsletter comes out twice a month and is full of tips and tricks to help you use your PC more efficiently. In fact, all of the tech questions above were selected from previous issues. It's free, so what are you waiting for?

I'll see you in Cyberspace!

Katrina

Master plans have been made but not implemented. New Orleans residents complain that the city government remains corrupt and supplies few services. A billion or more dollars have been spent repairing New Orleans' levees, but the city remains more vulnerable than it was when Katrina struck.

Mental illness, understandably, is rampant among people who lost everything they owned and have little money with which to replace it. Mental health workers say many Katrina survivors have not received treatment and counseling and suffer shock, depression and apathy, hindering recovery.

Given FEMA's unreliability, Texas has made its own evacuation and recovery arrangements. Perhaps Louisiana needs to take the initiative, following the example of Mississippi's energetic rebuilding.
