Serbs refuse to accept peace, vow to fight on

■ Bosnian Serb leader attempts to persuade diehard rebels that armed resistance would be futile.

Associated Press

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The leader of the Bosnian Serbs promised Friday night to "accept the peace," but residents of Serb-held Sarajevo suburbs vowed to fight on.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic appeared on Bosnian Serb television in an attempt to persuade diehard rebels that further armed resistance would be futile.

"The time has come to use political means to achieve our goals," he said.

But he faced a tough audience: Earlier in the day, the leaders of Serb-held suburbs of Sarajevo told Karadzic in a meeting that they could not accept the U.S.-brokered plan that obliged them to cede control of their territory.

"The people of Serb Sarajevo simply have nowhere to go unless America offers us a new city in Ohio where we all can move," Ratko Adzic, who heads the local "war council" of the Ilijas suburb, was quoted as saying by the Bosnian Serb news agency SRNA.

He said Sarajevo Serbs "will have to militarily defend our city and property and to fight one for all and all for one."

Under the peace agreement reached in Dayton, Ohio, Sarajevo becomes Bosnia's reunited capital. Bosnia will be subdivided in half — one part run by the Bosnian Serbs, the other by a Muslim-Croat federation.

Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, who represented the Bosnian Serbs at the talks, persuaded Bosnian Serb leaders to accept the plan. But it was clear in Friday night's broadcast that their acceptance was reluctant.

Looking subdued and somber, Karadzic and his

Filmmaker dies

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Louis Malle, the versatile filmmaker who directed the American drama "Atlantic City" and the French memoir "Au Revoir Les Enfants," has died. He was 63. Malle died from lymphoma Thanksgiving evening at home with his wife, actress Candice Bergen, beside him, publicist Pat Kingsley said Friday. He had been severely ill for several months. After making his professional start in documentaries, sharing an Academy Award for the 1956 Jacques Cousteau film "The Silent World," Malle went on to create memorable character stories, from Brooke Shields' "Pretty Baby" to the groundbreaking "My Dinner With Andre." Story page 4B

Flu season

AUSTIN — It's not too late to get vaccinated against the flu. And if you get the disease, you can fight it with something more powerful than chicken soup. That's the advice from Lynne Sehulster, staff epidemiologist at the Texas Department of Health. She said Friday Texas' flu season is slowly developing. "Things are happening slowly. ... We haven't intensified to an epidemic period just yet," Ms. Sehulster said. Story page 5B

Flag burning ban

Proposed amendment runs out of momentum

WASHINGTON (AP) — After cruising through the House on an overwhelming vote this spring, a proposed constitutional amendment to ban flag burning has lost momentum in the Senate, where opponents say it could lead to serious disputes in states.

Would a ban on "physical desecration" mean that flags on clothing, posters or buttons are protected by law — or not?

The tersely worded proposed amendment would leave it to the states to further define desecration, the opponents say.

The amendment would overturn the Supreme Court's 1989 ruling that flag-burning can be a protected form of free speech under the First Amendment. That ruling arose from the conviction of Gregory Johnson for burning a flag at the 1984 Republican National Convention.

There have been an average of eight flag-burning incidents a year since the high court's decision.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole opened his presidential campaign in early September by vowing to the American Legion that he would bring the amendment before the Senate for a vote this fall.

Now, it is not clear when it will go to the floor. A spokeswoman for Dole, Joyce Campbell, had no immediate comment when asked about a timetable. And supporters concede they're several votes shy of the two-thirds majority needed. The Senate rejected a similar amendment five years ago.

Not only that, the Senate has had a full legislative plate — including considerable time spent on the Republican plan for balancing the budget by the year 2002.

For an amendment to become part of the Constitution, 290 House members and 66 senators must vote for it and 38 state legislatures must ratify it. There is one vacancy in the 100-member Senate, that of Bob Packwood, R-Wash.

The House vote for the measure was 312-120, well above the two-thirds majority needed. Forty-nine states — all but Vermont — have passed resolutions urging Congress to support the amendment.

At last count there were 56 co-sponsors of the Senate measure, including 11 Democrats — among them liberal Sen. Dianne Feinstein of California.

With bell-ringers in place, Salvation Army kicks off '95 Kettle campaign

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Holiday season programs of the local Salvation Army are under way, with staff and volunteers hoping to help more than 1,500 disadvantaged local children.

Friday marked the beginning of this year's Kettle campaign, with bell-ringers already in place at 17 locations, said Sgt. Richard Branscum, administrative assistant for the Midland Salvation Army.

A Kettle Kick Off celebration at the Midland Park Mall Friday featured Juice the Moose and Christmas music by the Midland High School Quartet.

Other Kettle locations are still being negotiated. "We would like to have 20 or 21," Branscum said.

The kettles were first started more than 100 years ago in San Francisco, when residents put food into a large cauldron to be passed out to arriving sailors, Branscum said.

Some people also put money into the pots, Branscum said. "That's sort of how the transition took place," he said.

Today, kettles can be found across

Texas shoppers, Santa doubt analysts' gloomy holiday forecast

HOUSTON (AP) — Bah-humbug to the analysts predicting gloomy holiday sales for the nation's retailers. Santa Claus, the final arbiter on such matters, predicts a ho-ho-hearty Christmas shopping season.

Calvin Bent, Greenspoint Mall's 400-year-old Santa with rosy cheeks and a white beard that's real, said Friday that the jolly old elf would likely spend as much as ever on Christmas gifts for good little children.

"I don't know what I'd be spending, a couple two or three million dollars," he joked.

Glad tidings for Texas retailers. Many shoppers gobbling up post-Thanksgiving bargains around the state agreed with Santa's forecast.

The popular wisdom among analysts is that economic uncertainty and overloaded credit cards will hold down holiday spending this year.

Canary Williams, 32, of Houston said her budget was tighter than last year, but "if you have kids, you have no choice. It makes a difference." She hit the mall at 6 a.m. to take advantage of a department store sale.

"Things are more reasonable, more things on clearance racks and on sale," she said. By 10 a.m., Ms. Williams carried three large shopping bags of gifts and was considering a $700 drum kit for her 16-year-old son. "That's it for him."

> "So far everything is going as we expected. You know how Christmas is. It's a special time. People are going to spend money whether they have it or not, and worry about it later.'

> — Lee Benson
> manager
> Tis The Season

At Tis The Season, a shop selling ornaments and other holiday paraphernalia, only a dozen or so customers milled about, but manager Lee Benson said business was picking up.

"So far everything is going as we expected," Benson said. "You know how Christmas is. It's a special time. People are going to spend money whether they have it or not, and worry about it later."

John DiCiccio, general manager at the recently opened Lakeline Mall in Austin, said people were waiting to get in when the mall opened an hour early at 9 a.m.

"It's been very strong, positive and upbeat," DiCiccio said. "A lot of the shops have people in them, and they are buying."

Austin's Northcross Mall opened two hours early at 8 a.m.

"I think we're doing pretty well considering the additional competition and everything that goes on. We've definitely got people in all the stores," said marketing director Susan Plourde.

Among other attractions set up to lure shoppers, people visiting Northcross could register for a trip to Disney World. Santa's young visitors also were given a freebie — a four-pack of single-serving cereal.

Pauline Lawson was one of several hundred hard-core shoppers so eager to begin that they flooded a Target parking lot in Dallas before the store opened.

She led the charge, chanting "Shop! Shop! Shop!" once the doors were unlocked.

"After we do all our fast trips, then we're going to go back, slow down and really shop some more," Ms. Lawson said. "Usually, I work, work, work. Yesterday, I ate, ate, ate. Today, I'm going to shop, shop, shop."

Target employees were ready for such die-hards, passing out a shopping survival kit that included a drink, candy and coupons.

If it's any indication of holiday spending, business was good for Bent, whose lap was getting a good workout. Family budget or no family budget, children never let up on their demands from Santa.

"They're all happy," Bent said. "Except for the 1-year-olds. They're all afraid of Santa."

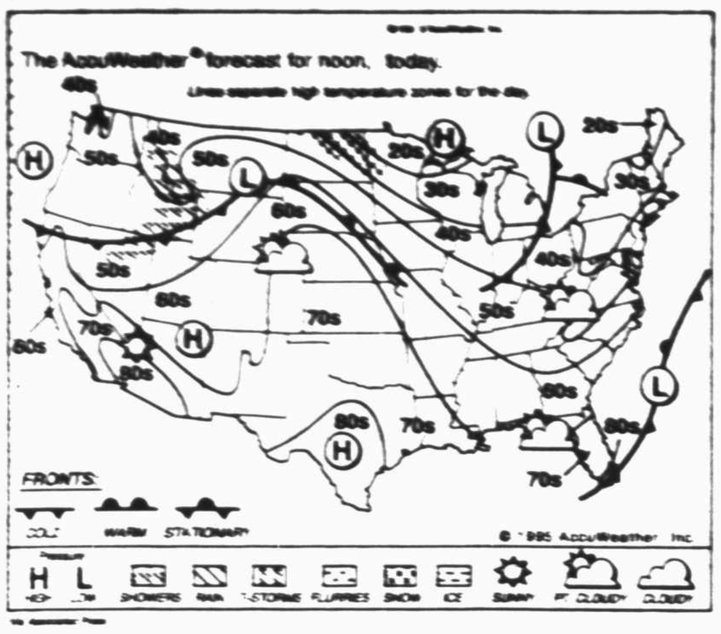
WEATHER WATCH



Today mostly sunny, mid-80s

Staff Report

Today's forecast is for mostly sunny skies with a high in the low 80s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight's forecast calls for fair skies with a low near 45, the NWS said.

Sunday's forecast is for partly cloudy skies and breezy with a high near 85.

After an overnight low of 32, Friday's high was 70, compared to the record high of 83, set in 1965. The record low was 10, set in 1938.

STATE

Texas shoppers enjoyed pleasant weather for the kickoff of the Christmas buying season. Temperatures were mild Friday and winds were mostly light and southerly.

However, South Texas had northerly breezes in the wake of a cool front.

Readings warmed into the 60s and 70s and ranged at 3 p.m. from 64 degrees at Galveston to 74 at Laughlin Air Force Base near Del Rio.

Low pressure extended southward along the eastern slope of the Rockies into the Permian Basin of West Texas. Otherwise, high pressure continued to dominate the state Friday.

Skies were mostly fair across Texas.

The forecast for North Texas is for mostly sunny skies today with increasing wind in the west. Afternoon highs will range from the low 70s in the northeast to low 80s in the southwest. Tonight will see the arrival of a few clouds. Overnight lows will range from the mid 40s in the southeast to mid 50s in the west. Sunday will have increasing cloudiness with highs into the 80s.

South Texas is to have continued sunshine with highs in the upper 70s to near 80. Lows in the low to mid 40s.

Forecasters expect sunny days and fair nights through Sunday for West Texas. Highs in the 70s and 80s and lows in the 30s and 40s.

NATION

Light snow and drizzle were scattered over the north-central part of the nation Friday, and locally heavy rain fell in parts of the Northwest.

A fast-moving weather system spread generally light freezing rain and snow across North Dakota during the morning and began pushing toward the east.

Snow showers and freezing drizzle spread across the northern Plains into the western Great Lakes region.

Snowfall amounts from North Dakota into Upper Michigan were likely to range only from a trace to about 3 inches in most locations.

Gusty wind and cold air accompanied the snow and drizzle. Friday's low for the Lower 48 states was 13 below zero at Ely, Minn., and Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., chilled to a record low for the date of 4 below zero.

Rain fell throughout the northern Pacific Coast region during the morning.

Some of the heaviest rainfall was around Portland, Ore., which collected 1.4 inches in 24 hours. Along the Oregon coast, up to an inch fell around the towns of Newport and Astoria.

Snow was likely in the mountains of the Northwest down to elevations as low as 4,000 feet during the night and today.

Between those two weather systems, wind gusting to more than 60 mph was common along the Front Range of the Rockies in Montana and in parts of central and southern Wyoming.

Cut Bank, Mont., reported a gust to 67 mph.

Elsewhere, showers and a few thunderstorms were scattered from the Florida Panhandle across Georgia and the Carolinas into coastal Virginia.

Friday's warmest temperature around the Lower 48 by early afternoon was 78 at Laguna Peak, Calif. The lowest wind chill, the rating based on both wind speed and temperature, was 48 below zero atop 6,288-foot Mount Washington in New Hampshire.

FIGHT: Rebel Serbs refuse to accept plan

(From 1A)

deputy, Momcilo Krajisnik, argued that their demands were ignored at the negotiations, both by the Americans who convened the talks and by Milosevic, who negotiated on their behalf.

Krajisnik was the senior Bosnian Serb at the talks, which ended with a Bosnian peace agreement on Tuesday. Karadzic, accused of war crimes by an international tribunal, did not attend the talks.

On Thursday, the two met with Milosevic, their former war ally who agreed to peace in order to achieve a lifting of punishing U.N. sanctions on Yugoslavia, which is dominated by Serbia.

Krajisnik repeatedly criticized Milosevic, who he said made decisions arbitrarily without consulting him.

"It seems that nobody conveyed our messages to the international negotiators," he said. He said "Milosevic outvoted us" on the issue of posting NATO troops in Serb-held territory, something the rebels opposed. The Serbian president also agreed to cede territory in western Bosnia that the rebels had wanted to keep, he said.

Karadzic said most painful to his leadership was the loss of towns in the west of Bosnia and of Sarajevo, where he claimed 150,000 Serbs loyal to him live in front-line suburbs.

"Sarajevo ... is a problem that has not been solved," Karadzic said.

He likened the city to Jerusalem, over which Jews and Arabs have clashed for decades.

Despite their reservations, the Serbs were clearly attempting Friday to sell the peace to their people.

Nikola Koljevic, a Bosnian Serb leader who participated in the peace talks in Dayton, appealed to recalcitrant Serbs to accept "a historic task" and finally reach a compromise that leads to peace.

Speaking on Montenegro television, Koljevic, a possible successor to Karadzic, conceded that NATO deployment in Bosnia to enforce the Dayton agreement would be the hardest nut to crack for the Serbs.

"Those who yesterday bombed our people now become peacemakers," he said. "The wounds are still fresh and our main problem will be to persuade our people to accept NATO on our soil."

In Belgrade, sources said Milosevic met Friday with Yugoslav President Zoran Lilic and Montenegrin President Momir Bulatovic in the swank Dedinje district.

No details were announced. But the three were believed to have weighed their options in the event that defiant Serbs of Sarajevo do something to jeopardize the peace agreement — and with it the suspension of economic sanctions on Yugoslavia, now consisting of Serbia and Montenegro.

Many Sarajevo Serbs have said they're ready to die if the Dayton agreement takes effect. Others told reporters they'd burn their homes in case they are forced to leave.

Rajko Koprivica, a Vogosca leader, said for "no price" would Serbs allow all of Sarajevo to be given to the Bosnian federation.

"Only those who have bled ... could decide our fate," he was quoted as saying by SRNA. "The voice of 120,000 Serbs from Serbian Sarajevo has to be honored, especially because the bloodiest war was waged" around the capital.

PLAN: Proposed amendment stalls in Senate

(From 1A)

100 groups lobbying for the amendment, said she was optimistic.

"There's nothing out there that makes us think that it wouldn't happen in November," Ridge said, adding that she expected a Senate vote by year's end "at the very latest."

Ridge said she believes another seven or eight senators likely would vote for the amendment.

Supporters assert that the Stars and Stripes, as the binding symbol of the nation, must be protected by law and that flag desecration is not a free-speech activity protected under the Constitution's First Amendment.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who sponsored the measure with Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., calls the flag "a unique symbol in our country."

"We don't believe it's an expression of free speech to trample on the flag, to urinate on it," said Hatch, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Opponents, including civil libertarians and some conservatives as well as the Clinton administration, contend that the First Amendment would be trampled by the measure. They say the First Amendment's free-speech guarantee should not be abridged and that an amendment would give flag-burning — and those who would burn flags — undue importance.

The proposed amendment "protects nothing: not the flag, not values, and certainly not free speech," William B. Ketter, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, said in a recent commentary.

"If it is approved, the essence of free political speech will drift for the first time from the First Amendment mooring that gives every citizen a constitutional right to challenge, even cast aspersions on, the icons of government," he said.

Another critic, American Bar Association President George E. Bushnell Jr., calls the proposed amendment "reckless."

Salvation Army provides food, help, hope

By Patricia Wade
Reporter-Telegram Correspondent

BIG SPRING — It's been said that the holiday season is the most depressing time of the year for many people.

Sometimes it is because there is not enough money to buy gifts for all of the children, or because there is no possible way to pay for a turkey and no one to eat it with anyway. Maybe it's the bittersweet reminder of beautiful linens, candles, and holly garnishing the table, waiting for yesterday's loved ones to arrive.

But whatever the reason, the Salvation Army is prepared to provide hope for the hurting and sustenance to those in need. And Maj. Roy Tolcher — pastor of the Salvation Army Church — believes he has been called to provide that hope and sustenance, not only during Thanksgiving and Christmas, but through the rest of the year as well.

The Salvation Army performs a multitude of services to the community all year long. Tolcher has been a part of this outreach almost all of his life.

"I was born into the Salvation Army," said Tolcher, whose parents were officers. Other family members, including a sister, aunts, uncles were also Salvation Army officers.

Tolcher remembers that his parents and grandparents were tremendous role models for him. Recalling the memories of their hard work through the years, Tolcher said, "I was very proud to have parents and grandparents who served very well as Salvation Army officers.

"To see them do the work that they did helped me to know what I would be dealing with one day."

He also felt a strong sense of love and acceptance; he knew that his parents would support him when he needed them. "I always had someone to count on who cared about me very much."

After being very involved in the church during his early childhood, Tolcher received his calling to go into the ministry at age 13.

After seminary training and after being promoted many times in his career, he became a major in the Salvation Army. He has served in that position for the past 11 years.

The mission of the Salvation Army, Tolcher said, can be summed up this way: "Heart to God and Hand to Man" and "Meet the need at the time of the need," which simply conveys the church's goal of responding immediately to people who have a need.

One of the most rewarding aspects of his career with the Salvation Army has been seeing the positive impact on the lives that he and others in this ministry have touched.

"It is truly a blessing when you see a man or a woman who has been destitute, or a drug addict, or an alcoholic completely turn their life around to where they now are a productive citizen of the community in which they live."

It was this same compassion for the downtrodden that inspired the birth of the Salvation Army back in 1865, when William Booth and his son were overwhelmed by the hopeless situation of the less fortunate in London's lower east side. After ministering to these people, Booth was amazed to discover that there was no church for them to attend, and began the "Christian Mission" in a storefront building. Eventually this storefront church would become the Salvation Army.

The current members of the Salvation Army not only feel concern for the welfare of their fellow man, they also provide for many of his needs, physically and most importantly spiritually. They reach out to their community by providing food for the hungry, shelter for the homeless, and compassion to the lonely.

As the pastor, Tolcher is very involved in ministering to those seeking help. His days are often interrupted by people needing counseling, making it difficult to live by a datebook. "I don't really set a schedule, because when someone comes into the Salvation Army in need of someone to talk to, I feel I have to stop whatever it is I'm doing to help them."

It is with the arrival of the holiday season that the work load for the Salvation Army very nearly doubles in size, requiring more time and energy from the already busy pastor. "I work anywhere from 40 to 60 hours in a normal week," Tolcher said, but admits he puts in close to twice that amount during the holidays.

Tolcher was in charge of seeing that all of the preparations were made for the community's Thanksgiving Day dinner. The Salvation Army had to prepare enough food to serve an estimated 300 people a traditional dinner of turkey and dressing. Many of those who came to the church on Thanksgiving were craving good conversation as much as, if not more than, good food.

Tolcher said that the Thanksgiving Day dinner is one of his favorite times in the ministry. He said that it is "rewarding to get the opportunity to sit and talk with the guests who come to have dinner."

Although it would seem that Tolcher might have a little time to rest after the Thanksgiving Day feast, he is already hard at work preparing for the campaign that is undoubtedly one of the most well-known of the church's outreaches.

Plans for the "Toys for Tots" drive have been under way since well before Thanksgiving. The blessings provided to the community during this campaign are worth much more than the time and energy put forth.

Tolcher said that "Toys for Tots" and the other Salvation Army outreaches could not be possible without a great deal of outside support and is thankful for the involvement of others.

"We could not do the things we do without the support of our community, the American people, and people throughout the world."

HELP: Salvation Army kicks off campaign

(From 1A)

the United States and are growing in popularity around the world.

"We hope to raise $50,000 for toys and food ... we ordered in the summer," said Capt. Harold Tracy, local Salvation Army commanding officer. "They gave us until the 15th to pay for it," he said.

These bulk-purchased toys and food will be distributed this Christmas to "the large numbers of families that we help," Branscum said.

Part of this expense will be offset through the Midland Toys For Tots program, sponsored by KWES-9, The U.S. Marine Corps office, The Salvation Army, the city of Midland, Midland Fire Department, KNFM radio and the Reporter-Telegram.

Donations for Toys For Tots can be made at local Sonic Drive-Ins, Midland American Bank and any Fire Department station, Tracy said.

Finally, this is the 12th year of "Dress-a-Live-Doll," where Midland residents purchase clothes for local disadvantaged children.

"This is a little bit more specific ... more personal," Tracy said.

This program lets children start the year with some new clothes and more self-esteem," Tracy explained.

Local citizens or groups can adopt a child by calling 697-7262, or by going to JCPenny at Midland Park Mall, Tracy said.

There they will be given their "adopted" child's first name, age and clothing sizes.

After clothing is purchased, staff at the Salvation Army office, 3500 Park Lane, will see that it is marked and passed out to the right child. "If you buy a dress and a pair of shoes for Susie, then Susie is going to get that clothing," Tracy said.

The clothing can be dropped off between 6:30 a.m. and 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, he said.

There is certainly no shortage of legitimate, needy children in the community, Tracy explained. "This is a very worthwhile and very satisfying program," he said.

This is a very good program for small groups, such as Sunday school classes, to be involved in, he said. This way several people can be included "to offset the cost, because clothes are kind of expensive these days," Tracy said.

The gifts of clothing will be distributed by Salvation Army volunteers, he said.

Princess Di wins support; royals lose respect, poll results indicate

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana won her TV gamble. She wanted a royal role for herself, and Buckingham Palace will probably give her one. She wanted public support and she got it.

But years of headlines about royal scandals and indiscretions are taking a toll on the monarchy, an institution Diana desperately wants to preserve for her sons, who are second and third in line to the throne.

A poll taken just before her interview and released Friday shows public respect for the royal family has slipped more sharply than for any profession during the 1990s.

The royals are now less respected than teachers and social workers, especially among 18- to 24-year-olds, according to the Market and Opinion Research International poll for The Times newspaper.

But Diana won support from most of the public for the hour-long interview, shown Monday on the British Broadcasting Corp., in which she admitted to adultery, said she had suffered from postnatal depression and bulimia, and accused the royal family of campaigning against her.

Callers to phone-in programs overwhelmingly supported her. Nearly three-quarters of those questioned in another MORI poll published in Friday's edition of The Sun said they believe Diana is a caring, thoughtful and honest woman who was treated badly by the royal family.

The interview was to air Friday night in the United States on ABC.

In it, Diana questioned her husband's ability to be king and intimated that she would prefer to see their 13-year-old son, Prince William, succeed Queen Elizabeth II.

The princess made it clear that she believes the monarchy is out of touch with modern Britain.

"I would like a monarchy that has more contact with its people," she said, adding that she has taken William and his 11-year-old brother, Prince Harry, to visit the homeless and people with AIDS and cancer so they will understand people's hopes and distress.

Diana hopes William will be the flag-bearer for her kind of monarchy, according to Andrew Morton, author of "Diana: Her True Story," which he wrote with her consent. That's why "she is so reluctant to relinquish her role inside the monarchy," he wrote in the Daily Mirror.

But he called her vision "a naive and quixotic dream" because "the Windsors will never allow her to be a king-maker."

Military historian John Keegan, The Daily Telegraph's defense editor, said however that Diana's bluntness will probably prompt changes in the way the royals have conducted themselves since the 19th century.

French dog owners express outrage over lawmaker's proposal to tax canines

■ Money made would finance efforts to clean streets and sidewalks of plentiful dog droppings.

Associated Press

PARIS — Pay for affection? Put a price tag on the companionship provided by man's best friend? That's how outraged French dog owners feel about a proposal to tax their canine comrades.

The lawmaker who introduced an annual dog tax this month sees it differently: as a means of financing efforts to clean the pooch droppings smeared on city streets and sidewalks.

"Being a pedestrian in a city means walking through, at best, an obstacle course," said Pierre Pascallon, a conservative Parliament member from Puy-de-Dome in central France.

But the dog-crazed French, who own 9 million mutts in a nation of 58 million people, argue furry companions shouldn't shoulder all the blame for city grime.

The French treat their dogs like royalty. Owners escort their petits princes and princesses, tucked under their arms, into restaurants, subways and stores. Sweater-clad dogs crouch beneath tables or proudly sit in grocery carts.

As could be expected, dog droppings are a perennial problem. In Paris alone, about 200,000 dogs soil streets and sidewalks daily, according to City Hall figures.

High-heeled women curse after stepping in a fresh "crotte." Children dodge doggie doo on their way to school.

Owners who don't pick up the droppings or train their pooches to use the gutter could theoretically be hit with a fine of $600 or more, but it is rarely imposed.

Instead, French cities have deployed a small army of cleaners, armed with brooms and more high-tech means at a cost of millions of dollars. Authorities refused to put a price tag on the effort.

In Paris, about 75 green-suited city workers ride around on special vacuum-cleaning motorcycles, called "caninettes," sucking up the doodoo. Each one covers about 14 miles of Parisian streets and sidewalks daily, collecting about 110 pounds of dog waste.

Meanwhile, humorous posters all over the city encourage owners to help out. "If he doesn't remember the gutter, think to pick it up," reads one.

The new tax, if passed by the National Assembly, would be fixed by each municipality, as is done in Germany, where the average local tax for dogs is around $40. The fine for those who don't pay the tax also would be determined the same way.

Under the deputy's plan, France's Fifis and Fidos would wear tags certifying their owners had paid the tax. French dog owners do not have to buy a license for their pets, as is done in the United States.

Pascallon would not comment on his bill's chances of being approved by the National Assembly.

Salinas' sister-in-law linked to drug trafficking, Swiss officials say

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — The sister-in-law of Mexico's former president has been arrested in connection with a huge drug operation, Swiss officials disclosed Friday, adding a dramatic new element to a scandal that includes murder and high-level political intrigue.

Paulina Castanon and her brother were arrested on Nov. 15 as they tried to make withdrawals from Geneva bank accounts containing $84 million, using papers that carried her husband's photo but a phony name, Mexican prosecutors said Thursday.

Without mentioning any names, Swiss authorities made it clear on Friday that the arrests were tied to drug running, and that the drug operations were enormous. Speculation in Mexico had suggested the Geneva money came from bribes.

The Swiss announcement is the latest twist in the scandal exploding around former President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

His brother — Paulina Castanon's husband, Raul Salinas de Gortari — is in a maximum security jail west of Mexico City, charged with masterminding the September 1994 murder of Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu, secretary-general of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party.

Carlos Salinas has not been implicated in the slaying, but Ruiz Massieu's own brother has — accused of covering up for Raul Salinas. And like Raul Salinas, Mario Ruiz Massieu — who once led Mexico's anti-drug efforts — is said to have millions of dollars he couldn't have earned on the job.

Mexican prosecutors claim he has nearly $7 million in Texas bank accounts. He was arrested in the United States while en route to Europe earlier this year, and is being held while Mexico tries to have him extradited.

No clear motive has been established for the murder of Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu. Some witnesses and prosecutors have suggested he had squabbled with Raul Salinas over business deals or over his divorce of Raul's sister. Mario Ruiz Massieu suggested his brother was killed because of his supposedly reformist ideas.

Raul Salinas, a longtime member of the party that has dominated Mexican politics for 66 years, had held the kind of high-ranking jobs that provide power and prestige. He has long been accused of shady business deals and he has been a favorite target of his brother's critics.

Some allegations have linked him to Mexico's drug kingpins, but he has denied having ties to narcotics traffickers.

In Switzerland on Friday, the federal prosecutor and the Office of Police Affairs issued a joint statement saying that two people were arrested Nov. 15 "in connection with the financing of drug trafficking and laundering of drug money."

The Swiss would not confirm the names of the two suspects arrested, but they said they were talking about the reports from Mexico about the arrests of Paulina Castanon and her brother.

Several bank accounts containing millions of dollars were frozen in Geneva and Zurich, and Swiss authorities are investigating several Mexican citizens, the statement said. Several houses were searched.

The investigation in Switzerland was being conducted in cooperation with U.S. and Mexican authorities, Swiss authorities said.

Dana Seely, spokeswoman for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, would not comment on U.S. involvement with the investigation. "This is an internal matter between the government of Switzerland and the government of Mexico," she said.

Prosecutors in Mexico said Paulina and Antonion Castanon were trying to use false papers bearing Raul Salinas' photograph but a different name, Juan Guillermo Gomez Gutierrez, to withdraw from accounts containing $84 million. The officials said they did not know how much the two were trying to withdraw.

Mexican officials said they had found Raul Salinas' photo and signature on applications for a birth certificate, driver's license, passport and property documents in the name of Juan Guillermo Gomez Gutierrez.

The comptroller's office said Raul Salinas declared ownership of 18 properties in February 1983 and 39 in May 1992, a period when he was generally in government service.

Legal divorce election divides Ireland at polls

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Doubts about legalizing divorce divided the nation, families — and even some hearts — as Ireland voted Friday on whether to permit the government to dissolve marriages.

"I only made up my mind this morning," said Emily Brannelly, a mother of seven who runs a guest house in the family home.

Her husband planned to vote "yes," she said, as did her three sons, who liked the idea of legal divorce "so that they could just ditch the girl when things get boring or rough." But her daughters would vote against it, she said.

Her own "no" vote came after much deliberating, Brannelly said minutes after casting her ballot at Convent Road in suburban southern Dublin. "I gathered up all the 'pro' and 'anti' literature and gave it a good read over breakfast," she said.

The same uncertainty showed among other voters, who chewed their pens as they sat in the polling station contemplating the ballot. Others were in and out in seconds.

Turnout for the vote on legalizing divorce was unusually high in Dublin, the key battleground in the referendum, nine years after voters firmly rejected the last divorce proposal.

Ireland is the only Western nation that constitutionally bans divorce. The outcome of the vote to amend the constitution will be announced this afternoon.

"I just voted 'yes.' My wife's voting 'no,'" said Eamon Burke, 34, an accountant with two children. "As a practicing Catholic it's against my religion, but that's not the point. The state shouldn't be legislating for your morals."

Late polls show that the vote will be close. Supporters of legalizing divorce had the lead early in the debate over the referendum, but opponents began catching up thanks to a campaign that included a direct appeal from Pope John Paul II.

If a majority votes in favor, the 58-year-old constitution would be changed immediately to allow divorces for couples who have been separated for at least four years. The government previously approved the amendment wording and a trove of related laws defining the rights of separated spouses, children and property.

Some voters in both camps felt in their gut that the amendment would be narrowly defeated.

"I've a horrible feeling that people will still say no," said Anne Carter, 36, who is single. "It will just prove how narrow-minded and bigoted and fearful people in Ireland really are."

Carter voted "yes," she said, because "people should be allowed to make mistakes."

Outside, Betty English shook her collection can for Dublin Central Mission, a charity connected to her Methodist church.

English, married with three grown children, said she would vote "yes" because "I know too many unhappy people, Protestant and Catholic, stuck in legal limbo in second relationships."

Dublin's south suburbs are home for many Protestants, who account for less than 5 percent of Ireland's population of 3.5 million.

Government ministers and opposition politicians say a "yes" vote would show respect for the civil rights of the Protestant minority, and send a conciliatory signal to British-ruled Northern Ireland and its Protestant majority.

> 'As a practicing Catholic it's against my religion, but that's not the point. The state shouldn't be legislating for your morals.'
> — Eamon Burke, 34, accountant

English said most arguments put forward by anti-divorce campaigners were "pure and utter rubbish designed to panic people" and lacked compassion for the estimated 75,000 people stuck in broken marriages.

But the police officer overseeing the polling station, Dave Brady, agreed with the Anti-Divorce Campaign's key billboard slogan, "YOU WILL PAY!"

"This country can't afford divorce," said Brady, 28, who is engaged to be married. "You'd have men leaving women and the state left to pick up the bill. Regardless of what a court says, a man couldn't afford to pay for two families — I know I couldn't. He'd have no choice but to run for it, leave the country maybe."

Another voter, Mary Foley, had to leave the country to get a divorce, a common practice for people who want to be married again. She voted "yes."

"There's plenty of people who go to America to be divorced," said Foley, who separated from her husband 17 years ago. Her husband and she secured a divorce through a U.S. lawyer in Haiti and he has since remarried, although the state doesn't recognize the union.

Foley, too, has lived with a new partner for 11 years.

Irish President Mary Robinson, left, casts her ballot in Dublin, Friday, in the referendum to decide whether this strongly Roman Catholic nation should permit divorce.

Public workers' strike paralyzes most of France

PARIS (AP) — Striking public workers angered by plans to revamp the social security system paralyzed most of France Friday, forcing thousands to walk, hitchhike and cycle to work.

In Paris, all 14 subway lines were shut down and 90 percent of buses were idled. Across France, most long-distance trains were not running. Only 16 percent of airline flights were operating.

"I'm sick of it. They're always on strike, and we're the ones who pay for it, not the people in the government," said 29-year-old Maurice Lheritier, an electronics shop assistant manager. He spoke on his bicycle as he waited at a red light in a long line of cars in suburban Neuilly, just west of Paris.

Friday's 24-hour strike by unions representing France's 5 million public workers was the second major walkout in two months. A third is planned Tuesday.

Mail went undelivered. Most schools, banks, museums and government offices were closed. Hospital service was scaled back.

Open-air neighborhood markets in Paris and Neuilly were full of browsers who didn't go to work for lack of transport.

Among those trying to get to work were men in business suits hitchhiking to Paris from Neuilly and beyond.

Photographer jailed in model's disappearance leads police to human remains

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After two suicide attempts, the last one in jail, a photographer who told authorities he accidentally killed a missing model led deputies Friday to a set of human remains off a remote mountain road.

Authorities couldn't say immediately whether they had found the grave of Linda Sobek, 27, a model and former cheerleader for the Los Angeles Raiders. Sobek disappeared a week ago after leaving for a photo session from her home in Hermosa Beach, a Los Angeles suburb.

Charles E. Rathbun, a freelance photographer, was arrested Wednesday after a shooting at his Hollywood home and held for investigation of murder. Authorities say he had tried to kill himself.

Rathbun, 38, was under a suicide watch when he used a jail-issue razor to cut his wrists Friday. After getting stitches at a hospital, he and his lawyer were flown in a helicopter in an aerial search of the Angeles National Forest. On the ground, searchers with bloodhounds hunted Sobek's body.

Rathbun told authorities he accidentally killed Sobek in a car accident. He claimed he was racing to get her medical help when she died, then dug a shallow grave near Palmdale, using his hands and makeshift tools, the Daily Breeze of Torrance said Friday, citing unidentified police sources.

The remains, confirmed as human, were found just off Pacifico Mountain Road about 15 miles south of Palmdale, said sheriff's Deputy Mark Bailey. The remains weren't expected to be identified until today at the earliest. The site is about 25 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

For two days, Rathbun guided the search through parts of the rugged 694,000-acre national forest. Authorities had said Rathbun was having trouble remembering just where he drove after the accident.

Sobek's abandoned vehicle was found Wednesday in a restaurant parking lot. She had previously worked with Rathbun, whose cheesecake-and-car shots appear in automotive magazines.

Rathbun reportedly told investigators that during the photo shoot in a dry lake bed, he wanted Sobek to do "doughnuts" with a new Lexus sport utility vehicle — rapid turns to make the rear end spin.

Rathbun said Sobek was unable to do the maneuver so he tried to show her but accidentally struck the model, the Breeze said.

Neighbors regret not taking action before girl's death

NEW YORK (AP) — Apartment 20A, once a little girl's noisy hell, was filled Friday with a deafening silence.

Neighbors in the housing project now know that 6-year-old Alisa Izquierdo was tortured to death, allegedly by a demented mother who thought her daughter was possessed by the devil.

They wondered if they should have taken 20A's constant clamor of yelling adults and sobbing children more seriously.

"You would hear shouting and screaming," Tony Ng, who lives next door, said Friday. "We thought it was their way of disciplining the kids. That's not unusual, in this building at least. Now we feel bad that we didn't call the police or something."

Alisa's story recalled for many the case of 6-year-old Lisa Steinberg, who was beaten to death by her father, a cocaine-abusing lawyer, in 1987. Police and school officials were harshly criticized for failing to notice that the girl was being abused.

Alisa's body displayed a roadmap of pain so frightful that the paramedics who tried to revive her Wednesday needed counseling. Dozens of small bruises and apparent cigarette burns dotted her skin. A bone was protruding from her right pinky, one of several broken fingers.

EPA must deal with additional budget cuts, officials say

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In the past several weeks, the Environmental Protection Agency has canceled hundreds of pollution inspections at factories, water treatment plants and other sites nationwide because of budget cuts imposed by temporary spending legislation.

Senior officials in the agency say that the reduction in inspections, which began when stopgap spending bills reduced the agency's budget last month, is likely to intensify in coming months if Congress imposes even deeper reductions in the agency's enforcement activities.

A Republican-backed bill to pay for the operations of the EPA and other agencies would cut spending on environmental enforcement by more than 20 percent. The House and Senate are expected to vote on the measure next week.

At Frankford Arsenal, an industrial park in Philadelphia, federal inspectors who were tipped off to a possible violation postponed a visit because technicians were unable to pay for travel from a laboratory in Annapolis, Md.

The local fire department visited the scene instead, and found drums of PCBs stored there, a violation that was viewed as very serious. EPA then sent an emergency response official who persuaded the responsible company to correct the problem, officials recounted.

But, said John Ruggero, an EPA official involved in the episode, "If everyone does not respond until it is an emergency, then there are problems there waiting to happen."

"Clearly, we are not out in the field as much as we used to be," said W. Michael McCabe, the top EPA official in the mid-Atlantic states, "and if we are not out in the field we are not discovering the problems, and we are not able to correct them."

Republicans said their view is simple: that there is not enough money to fix every environmental problem.

"Our objective with the EPA is to first, by way of the dollars, get the attention of this agency," said Rep. Jerry Lewis of Californian, who is the House Republicans' point man on the EPA bill. "They have grown like Topsy and are placing regulation upon regulation. They are in the enforcement business almost for the sake of it, rather than for what they can accomplish."

The argument over environmental spending will be a prominent feature in the budget talks between the White House and the Republican leaders in Congress.

The two sides agreed last Sunday on a framework for a balanced federal budget in seven years, but the agreement hinged on some conditions.

One was that that the budget legislation that emerges provide for spending that President Clinton considers adequate for, among other things, protecting the environment.

Bargains entice consumers into stores, but sales don't fulfill retailers' hopes

■ Shoppers cite uncertain economy, overextended budgets as reasons for cautious buying.

Associated Press

Enticing sales lured consumers into the nation's stores Friday, but economic uncertainty kept some from parting with as much money as retailers would have hoped for on the biggest shopping day of the year.

Many retailers, anxious about grim sales forecasts, opened their doors before dawn, hoping to draw in crowds by offering bargains and giveaways.

"We're all crazy," said shopper Millie Ruffino at the Wal-Mart store in South Philadelphia, where crowds began forming at 6 a.m. "It's one time of year, but you have to do it."

Crowds bolted into stores around the country as early as 5 a.m., with big discounts making early morning shopping the way to go.

In Columbus, Ohio, Christmas trees already had been sold at Michaels discount arts and crafts store by 5:30 a.m. Some shoppers were already loading their cars at the Toys R Us in Little Rock, Ark., by 8 a.m.

The nation's retailers launched major promotions this holiday season in an effort to spur interest in wary consumers after months of depressed sales. Prices were slashed as much as 50 percent on everything from clothes to computers to sporting goods.

"I saw a lot of things I needed and figured this was the best time to do it," said Luester Roberson of Columbia, S.C., who hit a local Wal-Mart early to get the extra discounts between 6 and 11 a.m.

At the Target discount store in Ballwin, Mo. all 1,000 of the store's giveaway "holiday survival" bags, filled with goodies like snacks and coupons, were gone within an hour.

"There was a mad dash in here when we opened the doors," said Jeff Frad, manager of a Kmart in Albuquerque, N.M. . "If it keeps going like this, it's going to far outdo what we had last year."

Retailers are betting on the Christmas sales to help turn around what has been a dismal year. Yet some consumers are showing caution about spending, citing an uncertain economy and overextended personal budgets.

In Chicago, Marshall Field's President Dan Skoda said the department store's 2 million square feet were packed with people Friday, but many of them were looking, not buying.

That was true for shopper Sharon Sky in Denver, who said she was cutting back this year because "it's just tougher times. It seems as if my dollar doesn't go as far."

Some consumers are also thinking twice before saying "charge it" because they're already behind on credit-card repayments. The government reported last month that banks are seeing more consumer delinquencies in credit card and other installment loans.

"A couple years ago I charged all the Christmas presents thinking that would make it easier," said Felicia Bumgarner, who was shopping at Bass Pro Shops in Springfield, Mo. "Man, you're paying Christmas off till June with the high interest rates."

Despite the high levels of debt, consumers are still expected to charge more than $120 billion between now and Christmas, according to RAM Research, which tracks credit card use.

Anecdotal evidence gathered Friday also suggested not everyone was worried.

"I live for this day," said Tamara Raye of Southfield, Mich., as she juggled three shopping bags and studied a store map in search of more things to buy.

"If you're a shopper and you like bargains," she said, "there is nothing like it."

Big zinc bonus

Zinc has long been hailed for its powers to boost immune functioning, especially in older people. For one thing, it seems to bring the aging thymus gland, that presides over the immune system, back to life. But now there's increasing evidence that zinc also is a powerful antioxidant, says Debasis Bagchi of Creighton University School of Pharmacy and Allied Health. In fact, he says a certain form of zinc ranks right up there with well-known vitamin E, vitamin C and beta carotene in antioxidant strength. Antioxidants squelch free radical chemicals that are a primary cause of chronic age-related diseases such as cancer, heart disease, cataracts, mental decline and premature aging.

To determine zinc's antioxidant power, Dr. Bagchi tested several types — zinc gluconate, zinc picolinate, zinc sulfate, zinc citrate, zinc oxide and a zinc-methionine complex known as OptiZinc. In the tests the zinc-methionine complex was two to 10 times more effective in neutralizing free radicals than the other zinc forms. Least effective were zinc oxide and zinc citrate. The form of zinc used in supplements is noted on the label.

Smart breakfast

To give your kids an edge at school, be sure they eat a good breakfast, according to a new study from Uppsala University in Sweden, the National Institute for Occupational Health in Denmark and the Kellogg Company in Great Britain.

About 200 Swedish 10-year-olds were given test breakfasts on random days. One breakfast, based on cereal, provided about 25 percent of the child's daily nutritional requirements, including appropriate amounts of fat, carbohydrates, fiber, protein and micronutrients. The other — a low-energy breakfast — provided less than 10 percent of the daily needed calories and nutrients. Teachers did not know which children got which breakfasts.

The results: Kids getting the high-energy cereal breakfasts scored significantly higher on tests of creativity and physical endurance. Kids on the low-energy breakfasts scored significantly worse on tests of addition. Other research shows that children who skip breakfast have decreased problem-solving ability, recall, verbal fluency and are twice as likely to be overweight.

Food for thought

If you are pregnant and not eating fatty fish, you are taking unnecessary chances with your future baby's intellectual development, says researcher William E. Connor at the Oregon Health Sciences University. He is alarmed at the lack of knowledge about the importance of fish oil to neurological development. He says a particular constituent of omega-3 fish oil, called DHA, is critical to fetal brains. "A deficiency of DHA can cause impaired vision and intellectual impairment."

In a recent study Dr. Conner showed that fish oil eaten by pregnant women actually reached the brains of their fetuses. He had pregnant women consume 2.4 grams of omega-3 fatty acids every day for nine weeks from the 26th through the 35th week of pregnancy. Indeed, blood tests of their newborns showed high levels of DHA, proving it had been transferred from mother to child in the womb. In the study, the women ate half a can of sardines and took two fish oil capsules a day. Other fish high in brain-enhancing omega-3 fish oil are salmon, mackerel, herring and tuna.

Milk reaction

If your infant or young child suffers from chronic constipation, the reason could be an allergy to cow's milk, say Italian researchers at the University of Palermo. The constipation happens because the youngsters are allergic to a protein in cow's milk that produces inflammation and painful ulcerations or cleavages in the colon and rectum, they say. Other foods can aggravate the situation — mainly eggs, tomatoes, fish and citrus fruit.

The solution, according to the doctors, is to switch infants under 6 months to a nonallergic formula, such as Nutramigen, in which offending proteins have been obliterated. You can find such formulas sold along with other commercial formulas. Older infants may drink a soy-based formula, although this too can cause allergic reactions.

Your infant can be tested for milk allergy, but the best test is to put the child on a milk-free diet for a week or two and see if the constipation clears up, say the researchers.

Vegetarians now found in high schools

By Michael Lopez
N.Y. Times News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — In the cafeteria at Niskayuna High School, students are hurriedly paying the cashier for their lunch choices: pizza, nachos and today's special, a BLT.

Sprinkled in this sea of students are people like Alissa Ferro, 14, whom you might call a near-vegetarian, poking at her pureed plums-and-apples baby food, or Kate Bodane, 16, a vegetarian who believes cattle production is wrecking the environment. There appears to be more to their determination to be vegetarian than an aversion to meat.

At the risk of parental and peer disapproval, these youths say they turn to the vegetarian diet because they disapprove of the way animals are raised and slaughtered for consumption and fear livestock production is not the best way to use resources or feed people.

Bodane, for instance, reasons: "I've learned that distribution of land in the world could be put to a lot better use, instead of using it for beef production ... We would not have starvation. We would have enough grain to feed people."

Though young vegetarians may constitute a slim show of hands in their crowded school cafeterias, indications are their numbers are growing.

The Vegetarian Network, a national group for vegetarians ages 13-24, saw its 12-page newsletter grow over five years into a 36-page quarterly magazine with a circulation of 10,000.

In a recent Roper poll commissioned by another national organization, the Vegetarian Resource Group, youths said they've sworn off meat, poultry, fish and dairy products in greater numbers than adults.

Sally Clinton, 30, is the director of the Pennsylvania-based Vegetarian Education Network, which publishes How on Earth! magazine. In recent issues, the magazine included vegetarian recipes, articles on disappearing rain forests and stories about the clash between vegetarians, their families and society. Clinton says youths, exposed to greater information on animal welfare and the endangered environment in the last several years than their predecessors, have increasingly turned to vegetarianism, more out of humanitarian rather than health concerns.

The network, which grew from Clinton's 1989 college thesis on how schools educate youth about vegetarianism, maintains the vegan (pronounced VEE-gun) diet is the most compassionate, sound lifestyle. The diet also eliminates dairy and eggs and their derivatives.

Still, youths are encouraged to "think for themselves and develop critical thinking skills," she says. "The point is to get people thinking about these issues." And, indeed, they are.

Sneezing season is here

Allergist Dr. Pramila Daftary, shown here in her Waco office, says the biggest problem with allergies this time of year is clean air. With cooler temperatures, people tend to spend more time outside breathing ragweed and pollen. She advises to keep the windows closed and have your heating system cleaned.

New psoriasis medication has advantages

By Dr. Jerome L. Shupack
Associated Press

A new drug for psoriasis is offering a welcome alternative for many persons with the skin disorder. It is the first new external, non-cortisone drug for psoriasis to become available in about four decades. The drug is calcipotriene, sold under the brand-name Dovonex. It is available by prescription only.

It can be used by persons whose psoriasis is mild enough to be treated by self-applied medications in ointment form — perhaps four of every five cases.

Calcipotriene has one major drawback. It doesn't work for up to half of all patients who try it, for unknown reasons. It's impossible to predict who will be helped and who won't.

For persons who do respond to it, calcipotriene offers a number of advantages over existing ointment-based medications for psoriasis. The oldest class of such medications are coal tars and a molecular relative, anthralin. They can keep psoriasis under control, but they have an unpleasant smell and-or can discolor the skin and clothing.

They have largely been replaced by cortisone ointments, which can be highly effective but also have limiting side effects, such as skin atrophy and the formation of unsightly superficial blood vessels, or acnelike lesions.

Dermatologists thus have long sought a nonsteroidal, nonstaining and odorless ointment for psoriasis. Now they have one. Calcipotriene is a derivative of vitamin D. One reason dermatologists often recommend careful exposure to sunlight for persons with psoriasis is that it promotes the body's production of vitamin D (although the ultraviolet radiation in sunlight gives its major effect against psoriasis through several other mechanisms). The ointment is usually applied twice a day. Its psoriasis-controlling effects generally start to become evident after two weeks, in patients with whom it is effective.

Psoriasis affects about 2 percent of the population. The disease, the cause is unknown, causes the formation of red, scaly and sometimes itchy plaques on the skin, sometimes in limited areas such as the elbows, knees and scalp, sometimes all over the body. The cause is an unexplained overgrowth of skin cells. The disease can come and go, with remissions sometimes lasting several years. It tends to run in families.

About 20 percent of cases may be accompanied by inflammatory arthritis of the joints. Severe cases can be treated by oral medications such as methotrexate or by radiation therapy, using ultraviolet light or superficial X-rays.

Dr. Jerome L. Shupack is Professor of Clinical Dermatology at New York University School of Medicine.

Breast cancer can deeply affect victims' husbands

Hearst News Service

Breast cancer does not just strike 110 out of every 100,000 women as the American Cancer Society reports — it also deeply affects victims' husbands.

One of a husband's first challenges, Mary Tannen wrote in an article in a recent issue of Town & Country, is to summon the courage to acknowledge his fears. Too often a man is so terrified he shuts down emotionally and his wife senses she can't speak to him about her illness.

Many wives want their husbands to be "strong," to assure them that they will get better, according to psychotherapist Joel M. Adelman of the Rhonda Fleming Mann Resource Center for Women with Cancer at the University of California, Los Angeles. They do not want to hear that their husbands are as frightened as they are. "Men are frozen into their roles," Adelman said. "They can't speak of the terror. They are protectors. Men are crying in the shower and trying not to show their emotions."

Some hospitals and cancer organizations are setting up hot lines and support groups through which the husbands of women with breast cancer can compare notes.

In the support group that Adelman runs with psychotherapist Halina Irving, the husbands and wives begin each session by meeting together, then split into separate groups, and finish up with more couples counseling. An attentive and loving husband can be an enormous help to a woman recovering from breast cancer, said Dr. Lana Holstein, director of women's health at Canyon Ranch in Tucson. Ariz.

Holstein stressed how important it is that a woman's husband be willing to look at her scar, to talk about it and not hide from reality.

If the couple is allowed to pretend that the scar does not exist, then when it finally is touched, even accidentally, it reawakens memories of "the wounding" of cancer and surgery. "It's better to move through," Holstein said. "You end up with a more stable individual. There's more communication between the two. Some women become much more intimate with their partner as a result of facing it together."

The hardest thing husbands must accept is the threat of recurrence, said Cathy Bell, coordinator of the Adelphi New York State Breast Cancer Hotline at Adelphi University. The American Cancer Society reports that the five-year-survival rate for localized breast cancer is 94 percent. But the five-year-survival rate is not the key figure it is for other cancers.

Unlike the survival rates for many other cancers, which tend to level off after five years, those for breast cancer patients continue to decline. Sixty-three percent of all women diagnosed with breast cancer survive 10 years. Only 56 percent live 15 years.

Bell, who has run an ongoing mens' support group for five years, said, "The men who drop out of the group are the ones who don't want to hear that this goes on forever."

"We're all living with fear," said clothing-chain vice-president Leonard Thomas, whose wife, Toya, a human-resources manager, had breast cancer several years ago and now volunteers at the hot line sponsored by Y-Me, a Chicago organization serving breast-cancer patients and their families nationwide. "Every ache and pain she has sets off alarms."

In some circumstances, breast cancer can actually improve relationships for long-married couples. "There's a sweetness, almost as if they've first met," said Jane Rodney, who heads the Princeton YWCA Breast Cancer Resource Center and chairs the New Jersey chapter of the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation's Race for a Cure. "They appreciate their time together."

Study finds SIDS deaths often are preceded by breathing irregularities

By Jane E. Allen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The differences in breathing rates of healthy babies and those who eventually died of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome are so subtle they can easily go undetected, researchers said. Some SIDS babies show abnormal breathing patterns in their first few days or months, said the authors of a study presented recently at the Society for Neuroscience meeting in San Diego. The finding might one day be used to develop screening tests that would identify infants in danger of SIDS, the researchers said. In the meantime, it's led at least one researcher toward closer study of the part of the brain that controls breathing.

While sleeping, healthy infants usually compensate for a long breath with either a longer or shorter subsequent breath. But close monitoring of babies' every breath revealed that some who succumbed to SIDS didn't vary their breathing as much as other infants did, said Ronald Harper, an anatomy professor at the University of California at Los Angeles and a member of the UCLA Brain Research Institute.

SIDS, defined as the sudden, unexplained death of an infant, kills 5,000 American babies each year. It usually occurs without warning during sleep, most often in the early morning. Campaigns to have babies sleep on their backs has reduced its incidence.

Scientists know that during sleep, a baby's blood pressure will go up slightly and slow breathing, or drop slightly and speed up breathing. If the child is breathing too fast, or burying its nose in a pillow, carbon dioxide levels get too high. Normally, the child reacts by waking up and crying, which kicks oxygen levels back to normal.

But SIDS babies "just don't wake up," Harper said. "It's heartbreaking."

Harper and two other UCLA researchers, in collaboration with scientists at the Brompton Hospital and University of Sheffield in Britain, recorded heart and breathing patterns in 6,914 apparently healthy infants who ranged in age from two days to 65 days.

Sixteen of the babies subsequently died of SIDS. When doctors compared their breathing patterns with those of 35 surviving infants matched for age, they pinpointed the differences in breath control.

Chickenpox vaccine has many benefits, expert says

By Dr. Harris Burstin
Associated Press

Every parent should consider giving their child the chickenpox vaccine — not only to help the child immediately and over the long run, but also to help the child's family.

Chickenpox (the formal medical name is varicella) is generally a relatively benign disease when it is contracted in childhood. The young patient may suffer fever and an itchy rash for five to seven days, with some pockmarks that may leave small scars. But the infection can be deadly in children whose immune systems have been weakened, such as young patients receiving chemotherapy for cancer.

Even when a child has a typical mild case of chickenpox, family problems can arise. Because the child can't go to school or day-care, a working parenat may lose a week's pay or more.

If the disease occurs in an adult, it's a more serious matter. It may cause pneumonia or encephalitis, along with more severe scarring.

But it's much later in life that the vaccine may bring a real benefit. The varicella virus that causes chickenpox can remain quiet in the body, becoming reactivated many years later — most often after age 50. That's when the virus causes herpes zoster, a condition more commonly known as shingles. It can inflame parts of the nervous system and the skin, causing pockmarks, chills, fever, general malaise and pain that can be severe.

The complications of shingles can include eye problems and continuing neurological pain. There is no specific treatment for shingles, although steroids often are given.

Chickenpox vaccine has been available for about 15 years. It is believed that it can reduce the occurrence of shingles when given in childhood. And although it's not on the list of mandatory childhood immunizations yet, it is offered by most pediatricians.

Dr. Harris Burstin is Clinical Associate Professor of Pediatrics at New York University School of Medicine.

Powerful 'healing options' investigated

By Bill Hendrick
N.Y. Times News Service

'We want to generate some self-healing. There's increasing scientific evidence that some of this works. There's an awful lot of scientific skepticism too, but we aren't going to dismiss this work.'

— Dr. Larry Burk, radiologist and researcher, Duke University

A look of perplexed fear transfixes the face of the 73-year-old cancer patient when Jon Seskevich, clad in a white lab coat, strolls in, drags a chair to the man's bedside and gently takes his trembling, clammy hands.

"How you doing today?" asks Seskevich, his gaze bouncing from the patient's eyes to those of the man's relatives. "Y'all got a few minutes?"

Bracing for his first bout of chemotherapy, the man is already used to having his body probed, but is surprised to hear Seskevich introduce a list of unorthodox "healing" options — such as the "awesome" powers of stress reduction, positive thinking, prayer, even "therapeutic touch."

This is not what you'd expect to hear from a researcher in the cavernous Duke University Medical Center, one of the top research hospitals in the world.

But in their zeal to fight deadly diseases, Duke scientists are in the fore of researchers who're studying healing methods that many academics deride as New Age quackery. The Duke researchers counter by pointing to growing evidence that unorthodox treatments do seem to help.

DUKE'S MIND Body Study Group, a team of some 50 researchers including specialists ranging from radiologists to psychiatrists to oncologists, contends:

- Teaching terminal patients to relax can prolong lives by reducing stress and strengthening the body's ability to fight disease.
- Religion, dismissed by many scientists, seems to help terminal patients live longer and aids people with high blood pressure and heart disease.
- Prayer may help because it reduces stress and increases production of disease-fighting mechanisms triggered by upbeat attitudes.

Dr. Larry Burk, a radiologist who heads the Duke group, prefers the term "complementary medicine" because researchers aren't looking for miracles but at "how emotions affect the immune system." The group meets twice monthly to discuss experimental therapies and results.

"We want to generate some self-healing," he says. "There's increasing scientific evidence that some of this works. There's an awful lot of scientific skepticism, too, but we aren't going to dismiss this work."

BURK, WHO says little is known about the mind's healing powers, cites a study in which small cuts were made in the arms of 44 volunteers. Over a period of days, they were told to stick their arms through a hole in a wall to be photographed, so the progress of healing could be tracked. But that was a trick. Nothing happened to the arms of half the volunteers, the "control" group.

The other half received "noncontact therapeutic touch," in which a researcher on the other side let his hands hover over the person's arm without touching it. They were testing the idea — which Burk concedes is weird — that somehow, energy transferred from researcher to patient may expedite healing. In the study, cuts of those who received "noncontact therapeutic touch" healed more after eight days than the others healed in 16.

"It shouldn't have made a difference," Seskevich says, and Burk couldn't explain why either. But Seskevich says that in his work, "I've seen therapeutic touch help people with nausea, calm them down, make them happier."

Burk theorizes such therapies help patients relax, reducing pain-worsening tension and increasing the will to live.

AND RECENT research supports this idea:

- A study published this month in the journal Hypertension found that stress-reduction techniques such as transcendental meditation and muscle relaxation reduced high blood pressure among elderly African-Americans as much as medications.
- Another study, in the Archives of General Psychiatry, found that only three of 34 malignant melanoma patients who participated in a social support group had died within six years of diagnosis — compared with 10 of 34 others who did not participate in such therapy.
- And a third, in the British journal Lancet, found women with advanced breast cancer who participated in support groups and received psychological help lived about 18 months longer than a control group that didn't receive such help.

Dr. Hugo Zee of Emory University says very sick people "feel a sense of helplessness and look for a rescuer, and . . . this psychologically can be restorative of new hope. We don't understand this but it shouldn't be dismissed. When hope is restored, we often find an improving healing process. Take a person out of a state of hopelessness and give them hope and, not infrequently, things do improve."

THOUGH MANY patients find solace in a deity, even that notion has evolved to help people feel "connected," just as babies do with their mothers, says Zee, a professor of psychiatry. "We reinstitutionalize this in the form of God, something of great power, and we never lose this sense."

And though Zee doesn't believe in miracles, he sees how people such as Christine Anderson, 43, of Norcross, Ga., do.

Diagnosed with breast cancer in 1989, she had a mastectomy, then chemotherapy. But by Christmas, her oncologist, Dr. Jeffrey Scott, told her the cancer had spread to both lungs and she had six months to live; a second doctor said three months.

"They held a prayer session one night at the Clairmont Hills Baptist Church after they had told me it had spread," she says. Then she underwent more chemotherapy. "I had a scan of my lungs two weeks later . . . and my lungs were clear."

Scott says, "When we looked at the CAT scans later, the cancer was gone. I believe there are things that cannot be explained. From a nonreligious standpoint, if you have 100 people in that situation, you may have one person who is that lucky, who responds to the chemo. That is the scientific answer. Her answer is, she got cured by God, and she strongly believes that."

MANY SCIENTISTS discount such accounts as flukes.

But Dr. David Larson, a psychiatrist who founded the National Institute for Healthcare Research in Rockville, Md., who has compiled many studies on the mind's healing powers, says, "It's understandable scientists are reluctant to in any way involve themselves in spirituality and religion" for fear of ostracism, even the loss of jobs.

In a recent study involving 232 people, Dr. Thomas Oxman of Dartmouth Medical School concluded that those who found comfort in religion were more than three times as likely to be alive six months after heart surgery as patients who weren't spiritual.

"We don't know why, but when people face crisis and find support systems, it can be a healthy force in their lives," Zee says.

Study: Fainting can be sign of health problems

By Daniel Q. Haney

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — People who faint face a substantially higher than normal risk of heart attacks and death, according to the nation's largest study of fainting. Although fainting can be a sign of heart trouble and stroke, these conditions did not entirely appear to explain the increased risk associated with what doctors call syncope. The research, conducted by Dr. Ming Hui Chen and colleagues from the Framingham Heart Study in Massachusetts, was presented at the annual scientific meeting of the American Heart Association.

"If you are young and don't have any risk for heart disease or stroke, your prognosis is really pretty good," Chen said. "But there is morbidity and mortality associated with syncope, even if it seems to be a benign case."

The researchers looked at episodes of fainting among the 8,200 residents of Framingham, Mass., who participate in the study and get physical exams every other year. The researchers believe this provides the first accurate estimate of just how common fainting really is. They identified 801 episodes of fainting among 543 people between 1971 and 1990. They said this works out to nine episodes of fainting for every 1,000 years of life. Chen said this makes fainting considerably less common than was suggested by earlier studies based on less broad cross-sections, such as people going to emergency rooms.

During the 19 years studied, those who fainted were 30 percent more likely to die from all causes and 39 percent more likely to suffer a heart attack or die from coronary heart disease.

About one-quarter of the faints were caused by stress, the so-called vasovagal episodes, such as passing out while giving blood. In one-third of the cases, doctors could not pinpoint the cause. Other less common causes of fainting include heart trouble and strokes.

The study also found that fainting is rare until about age 65. "People faint a lot more when they get older," Chen said. "It is not a condition of the young."

Among other reports presented at the meeting:

- Doctors from City Hospital in Birmingham, England, found a strong link between infection with chlamydia, a common sexually transmitted disease, and stroke. They found that 48 percent of stroke victims tested had been exposed to chlamydia during their lives, compared with 20 percent of people hospitalized for other reasons.
- An aspirin skin patch, similar to those used to deliver estrogen and other drugs, appears to work. Testing on 10 volunteers at the Center for Cardiovascular Sciences in Dublin, Ireland, found that the patch suppressed platelets, the blood cells that make clots. The patch may allow people to take aspirin to prevent heart attacks without risking stomach irritation.
- Scans with electron beam CT machines, which look for calcium deposits in the heart arteries, are proving to be an effective way to spot heart trouble. In a study at the University of California at Los Angeles, doctors scanned 519 people. The seven who died the following year all had substantially higher than average amounts of calcium in their arteries.

Diabetes Type II is not condition to take lightly

By Jane E. Brody
N.Y. Times News Service

If cancer is the big C, diabetes is the big D. Type 2 diabetes, the kind that many people think of as mild because it does not usually require insulin treatments, is an increasingly common killer and crippler that takes a bite out of the health care dollar five times as great as its incidence would suggest.

Despite such serious complications of untreated or undertreated diabetes as blindness, heart disease, kidney disease, nerve damage and the need to amputate legs because of poor blood flow, patients and many doctors fail to take it seriously.

Dr. Frank Vinicor, president of the American Diabetes Association, calls it the "Rodney Dangerfield of chronic diseases."

At least half the cases of type 2 diabetes in the United States have not been diagnosed, and many if not most patients will find out they have this insidious disease only after serious complications develop. Yet there is growing evidence that most complications can be prevented or postponed if proper treatment is instituted to normalize blood sugar and the body's need for insulin.

About 15 million Americans have type 2 diabetes, or what used to be called adult-onset or noninsulin-dependent diabetes. Unlike the situation in type 1, where the body fails to produce the hormone insulin, in type 2 adequate amounts of insulin are produced, at least at first, but the body tissues develop a resistance to its actions. Insulin is the pancreatic hormone that regulates transport of glucose, or blood sugar, into cells.

When the body fails to respond properly to insulin, blood glucose levels rise and pancreatic cells pour out more and more of the hormone in a vain attempt to process glucose properly. Insulin levels can be two to three times as high as normal when a person with type 2 diabetes is fasting and three to five times as high after that person eats a meal. Eventually, the insulin-producing cells can wear out, causing an insulin shortage.

Type 2 diabetes disproportionately afflicts nonwhites, with rates about twice as high in African-Americans, two to three times as high in people of Hispanic descent and five to six times as high in American Indians as it is in whites. Minorities tend to get the disease earlier in life, and because they have it longer, they tend to develop complications sooner than white Americans. All together, about 25 percent to 30 percent of Americans carry a gene that predisposes them to developing type 2 diabetes.

Dr. Richard Eastman, a diabetes specialist at the National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases in Bethesda, Md., says the incidence of type 2 diabetes has risen sharply in recent decades. It now afflicts more than 3 percent of Americans, up from less than 1 percent in 1958, with no sign of slowing.

Type 2 diabetes and its complications account for as much as 15 percent of current health care costs. Each year 24,000 people become legally blind, 56,000 develop kidney failure and 54,000 have to have a leg amputated as a result of poorly controlled diabetes, and at any age, people with diabetes have twice the normal death rate.

At a conference convened by the American Medical Association, Eastman pointed out that the routine test of urine for glucose was all but useless in diagnosing type 2 diabetes before it had caused serious harm to various body organs. By the time significant amounts of glucose spill into the urine, the disease is fairly well advanced. Currently there is a seven-year gap between the onset of diabetes and its diagnosis, said Vinicor, a diabetes specialist at the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta.

Symptoms that should prompt a more thorough check of the body's ability to handle glucose include urinary frequency, undue thirst, blurred vision and unexplained weight loss.

Diagnostic tests include measurements of the amount of sugar in blood after an all-night fast and, if this level is unduly high, an hours-long glucose tolerance test, which involves drinking a concentrated sugar solution after a three-day diet high in carbohydrates and an all-night fast. Blood glucose levels are then checked periodically for three to five hours.

Eastman suggested that all pregnant women should be tested, since 3 percent will develop gestational diabetes, which can complicate the pregnancy and increase the risk of later developing type 2 diabetes.

Vinicor said that outside of pregnancy, a routine screening test for glucose can help doctors decide who should be tested more thoroughly. The test is done on a drop of blood from a finger prick. The blood is taken after a fast or two hours after a meal.

A leading risk factor for developing type 2 diabetes is obesity, especially abdominal obesity, which often results in insulin resistance. Americans who are overweight are nearly three times as likely as people of normal weight to develop diabetes, said Dr. F. Xavier Pi-Sunyer, an endocrinologist and obesity specialist at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in New York. He said that worldwide "obesity is the most important environmental determinant of diabetes" and that the recent rise in diabetes could be traced to a rise in obesity, a result of increasing inactivity without a compensating decrease in caloric intake.

Film director Louis Malle, 63, dies at home from effects of lymphoma

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Filmmaker Louis Malle, whose movies "Atlantic City" and "Au Revoir Les Enfants," showed his partiality for human characters over superhuman plots, has died. He was 63.

Malle died from lymphoma Thanksgiving evening at home with his wife, actress Candice Bergen, beside him, publicist Pat Kingsley said Friday. He had been severely ill for several months.

After making his professional start in documentaries, sharing an Academy Award for the 1956 Jacques Cousteau film "The Silent World," Malle went on to create memorable character stories, from Brooke Shields' "Pretty Baby" to the groundbreaking "My Dinner With Andre."

His movies were tightly focused and filmed with such beauty that images — such as Burt Lancaster watching Susan Sarandon bathe herself with lemons in "Atlantic City" — remained with people long after seeing the films.

The daring director rarely shied away from difficult, often sexual, subject matter and provocative photography during his five-decade career. His films explored everything from incest to Nazi collaboration to child prostitution to bigamy. He turned out two controversial romantic dramas in two truly different eras — 1958's "The Lovers" with Jeanne Moreau and 1992's "Damage," starring Jeremy Irons.

The languid cinematography of "The Lovers" set a modern benchmark for love scenes, and "Damage" was remarkable for its disturbingly candid sex scene between a father and his son's fiancee.

"I'm a filmmaker, not a sociologist," he said in an interview after finishing 1978's controversial "Pretty Baby." His first film produced in America starred the pubescent model Shields as a 12-year-old prostitute. "I was simply very, very interested in the story," he said.

His 25th and last film, "Vanya on 42nd Street," was released in 1994.

"Atlantic City" will likely be remembered as Malle's career highlight. The 1980 film featured Lancaster as a low-rent gangster opposite Sarandon. It was nominated for five Oscars, including best picture and best director.

Malle married Bergen, who went on to star as TV's "Murphy Brown," that same year, and later made a cameo appearance as a film director on the sitcom.

Another well-received film was his autobiographical and deeply felt Holocaust story "Au Revoir, Les Enfants" ("Goodbye, Children"). That 1987 work won seven Cesars, the French equivalent of the Academy Awards, and was nominated for a foreign-language film Oscar. The film followed Malle's childhood friendship with a sensitive, timid Jewish schoolmate who is turned over to Nazis and sent to die at in a concentration camp.

The shock of that experience is what led him to become a filmmaker, Malle said after the movie won the coveted Golden Lion prize at the Venice Film festival.

"After that moment I felt the world of adults was one of injustice, pretending, hypocrisy and lies. That forced me to go see for myself what was behind the stereotypes and preconceived notions," he said. "Soon after that I told my parents I wanted to make movies."

Some of his other films were "Murmur of the Heart," "Crackers," "Lacomb Lucien," "Black Moon," "Alamo Bay," "A Very Private Affair" and "The Fire Within." Documentaries included "God's Country" and "The Pursuit of Happiness."

Malle, an heir to a family sugar fortune, was born on Oct. 30, 1932, in the northern French town of Thumeries.

Authorities bring in FBI to help search for missing millionaire

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — Jacqueline Levitz was a fixture of high society in Palm Beach, Fla., a millionaire's wife known for elegant soirees and work with charities. She owned diamonds once worn by Marilyn Monroe.

After her husband's death, she moved to this historic small city for peace and quiet and to get back to her Southern roots.

Then she vanished, leaving signs of a violent struggle and blood in her one-story brick house. There was blood all over a bedroom carpet, blood soaked into a mattress and evidence someone had tried to clean up in a bathroom.

"This case is a little strange," Warren County Sheriff Paul Barrett said. "We believe she is dead. In cases like this, we can't figure out why they would take the body."

Authorities said they were calling in the FBI after a helicopter search turned up no sign of either the 62-year-old woman's body or sheets missing from her bed, which might have been used to wrap her body.

"They can help us," Barrett said of the federal agents. "They can talk to people in Florida and in California that we can't talk to and we need to talk to."

Investigators have found no trace of Ms. Levitz along any road in the county or along either bank of the powerful mile-wide Mississippi River. She was last seen alive Nov. 18.

The blood was being analyzed at the state crime lab to determine if it is hers, the sheriff said.

Ms. Levitz was born at Oak Grove, La., and moved to Beaumont, Texas, where she lived with a sister, Pat Tuminello, worked as a secretary and won a beauty pageant.

She and her first husband moved to Washington, where she began buying and reselling houses.

"She would decorate them to the eights and to the nines, right down to the forks on the table," said designer Lee Menichetti, who met Ms. Levitz about 10 years ago. "She was a decorator at heart."

She and her first husband divorced — they had a son — and her second husband died in 1968.

Watergate counsel is in spotlight again in Whitewater case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two decades after he gained fame as chief counsel to the Senate Watergate Committee, Sam Dash is once again in the throes of a politically charged investigation of a president — this time as ethics counselor to the Whitewater investigators.

When Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr was criticized for representing a politically conservative group at the same time he was investigating Democrats, he consulted Dash.

When an indictment was issued against the Clintons' Whitewater real estate partners, Dash pushed for a public statement specifying that it contained no charges of wrongdoing by the president and first lady.

And Dash put a halt to widespread speculation this spring that senior White House adviser Bruce Lindsey was about to be charged, persuading the prosecutor to issue a public statement saying it wasn't true.

Dash looks much the same as when America last saw the bespectacled law professor on national television even-handedly interrogating President Nixon's disgraced aides.

"As a prosecutor, your job is to seek justice, not just to convict. Other lawyers feel this way too, but it is an absolute mission with me," said Dash, a lawyer of 45 years who teaches at Georgetown University Law Center.

From the start, Starr's motives have been questioned by critics, citing his extensive ties to Republicans. He hired Dash a year ago as a consultant, bringing in an experienced lawyer — and registered Democrat — to offer an outsider's perspective to investigators immersed in a highly complex undertaking.

"In four or five instances, when I believed it was important for fairness, I've advised Ken 'you should do this or you shouldn't do that' and he's accepted my position. Otherwise, he knows I wouldn't stay on," Dash said.

Starr speaks in deference of "Professor Dash," saying he consults him "about all critical questions."

"I felt it important to have the wisdom and learning, and for the public to have the assurance ... that there would be an individual of this standing and reputation," Starr said.

A bone density test can provide essential information on bone health in five minutes or less

Osteoporosis and associated fractures can rob you of your mobility and your independence. Approximately 50% of women over the age of 50 have osteoporosis and are at risk of an osteoporosis-related fracture. A woman's risk of hip fracture alone is equal to the combined risk of developing breast, uterine, and ovarian cancer – and up to 20% of victims who suffer hip fractures die within one year of the fracture.

A bone density test is safe, fast, non-invasive, and painless – and it will provide essential information to help your doctor assess the health of your bones.

Ask your doctor about bone density testing, or call us for more information.

Texas resident sheds light on questions surrounding State Cemetery

AUSTIN (AP) — A canopy of blue morning glories once covered Confederate soldiers' graves in the Texas State Cemetery. Large goldfish swam in the graveyard's fountain. Five milk cows helped keep the grass down.

State officials learned this from Viola Barnes, 93, who stepped forward to share her memories of living at the cemetery while her father was its caretaker in 1912-1950, the Austin American-Statesman reported Friday.

"It has made it alive," Gerron Hite, preservation architect with the Texas Historical Commission, said of details provided by Ms. Barnes about the 144-year-old cemetery.

The State Cemetery — final resting place of governors, war veterans and other Texas notables — is undergoing a $4.7 million restoration. Ms. Barnes contacted the state in response to an appeal for information about the cemetery's past.

Her memory and her collection of childhood photographs have "really been the best" information source, Hite said.

Photographs show the cemetery once was surrounded by a fence of concrete bricks, which Ms. Barnes said were made on the grounds. She said her job was to stand guard at the fence to keep out neighborhood children trying to climb it and attend funerals.

"They were curious; they were just children. I'd say, 'No, you can't come in here. No you will not. If you come in, I'm gonna call the police,'" she told the newspaper.

Officials learned from Ms. Barnes that a state-owned mule named Kit lived on the grounds. The animal pulled a mower and was buried on the property when it died. The grave hasn't been located.

Ms. Barnes' collection of about 75 photographs shows a well-manicured cemetery with many trees that don't currently grow there.

Her father, Ernest Robert Barnes, liked to make a flourish with flowers, growing chrysanthemums, roses, hollyhocks, pansies, sweet williams, phlox and other blooms.

Colorful flower beds shaped like a star and an anchor adorned the grounds.

"When we went out there, there was nothing. He made the place look like something," Ms. Barnes said.

Ms. Barnes also remembers a special task that had to be done every time it rained: Sheltering a bronze wreath that hung on the monument to Stephen F. Austin.

"When the weather got wet and all, it was staining up the marker, so we would take it home" until the rain stopped, she said.

No one knows where the wreath is today. Only its broken stem is on the monument.

"We'd heard there was a wreath. We didn't understand why it wasn't permanently mounted. There is just a hook there now. Without the photograph (from Ms. Barnes), you'd never know what it was for. Now, everything sort o falls into place," Hite said.

Growing up in a cemetery didn't frighten the Barnes children, Ms. Barnes said. To them, it was home and a place to work. The seven children helped their father by trimming the grass around the tombstones by hand.

"I got down on my hands and knees and cut around them with a pair of scissors. It saved the state money and gave us knowledge, too" about historical figures, Ms. Barnes said.

She added, "Every last one of us worked in that cemetery, even my mother."

Ms. Barnes, who has visited the cemetery with Hite, said she's willing to help officials any time.

Texas flu season gets late start

AUSTIN (AP) — It's not too late to get vaccinated against the flu. And if you get the disease, you can fight it with something more powerful than chicken soup.

That's the advice from Lynne Sehulster, staff epidemiologist at the Texas Department of Health. She said Friday Texas' flu season is slowly developing.

"Things are happening slowly. ... We haven't intensified to an epidemic period just yet," Ms. Sehulster said. "That's typical for this time of year."

In a typical year, the influenza season peaks in mid-to-late January, then tapers off, she said.

Flu cases have been confirmed through laboratory tests in three areas of Texas, she said. They are Pasadena, in the Houston area; in Dallas County, where one patient was ill on her return from London with an imported flu type; and in Central Texas' Bell County.

All the cases were strains of influenza A, which Ms. Sehulster said is treatable with two types of anti-viral medications, amantadine or rimantadine.

If people begin feeling flu symptoms, "we would advise you to call your doctor" to see if the medication can be prescribed, she said.

"It will definitely shorten its course and make your symptoms less severe, and get you back on your feet that much quicker," she said. "You can still use chicken soup, but you won't suffer quite as much" with the addition of the medication.

Without medication to fight the virus, the flu will likely run its course in about five to seven days, Ms. Sehulster said. People might feel "not quite 100 percent" for several more days, she said.

With the anti-viral medication, people likely will be well enough to resume daily activities in three to five days, she said.

"I think it would be worth it," she said. "If you've ever had the flu, you know how miserable you feel. The only energy you have is enough to crawl out of bed, grab your pillow and blanket and hit the couch."

The best preventive measure is the flu vaccine, Ms. Sehulster added.

The vaccine is recommended by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta for people at high risk for flu, including those 65 and older, nursing home residents, children with asthmas and adults and children with chronic disorders. recommend

"Now's a good time still to go get it," Ms. Sehulster said.

Facts about influenza, or the flu:

- The flu season generally begins in November. Outbreaks usually don't occur until December or January.
- Common symptoms include fever, cough, sore throat, runny nose, headache, muscle ache and extreme fatigue. Most people recover in about a week.
- The flu vaccine is about 80 percent fully effective.
- Flu contributes to the deaths of about 20,000 people in the United States each year, often when the flu develops into pneumonia. A flu "pandemic," or severe epidemic, killed more than 20 million people worldwide in 1918.
- Ten percent to 20 percent of the U.S. population gets the flu annually.
- People at high risk for influenza should be vaccinated. High-risk people include those 65 and older, nursing home residents, children with asthma, and people with chronic illnesses. Those in doubt about their risk should consult a doctor.

Texas mother claims IRS will not acknowledge her children's existence

ARLINGTON (AP) — The mother of two children is having a hard time convincing the Internal Revenue Service that the children exist and she is eligible for a $2,288 income tax credit.

"I've just really been offended over all of it. I feel like my integrity is on the line here," said Jeanmarie Long.

"The thing is there's nothing I've done wrong. If there was something I've done wrong, I could understand."

Ms. Long said she needs the money from the federal payment to the working poor to buy a car so that she can drive herself to a technical school for classes in computer-aided drafting.

Her 1-year-old daughter, Megan, who has a rare intestinal disease, also must be taken to the doctor for treatments.

"Everybody who knows me knows I take pride in my children, but the IRS is telling me I don't have these two," said Ms. Long, pointing at Megan and her sister, Ashley, 3.

Jackie Antweiler, a spokeswoman for the IRS Austin Compliance Center, said she couldn't comment on specific cases. However, she said Ms. Long's case is one of millions of claims for the earned income credit, a tax feature that has been the focus of an anti-fraud campaign since January.

While the IRS has uncovered 2,700 fraudulent schemes involving more than 30,000 tax returns in which people have listed fictitious children so they can claim the tax credit, some honest taxpayers have mistakenly been targeted, Ms. Antweiler said.

"It's unfortunate that the honest taxpayer credits are delayed because there is so much fraud," she told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram for a story Friday editions.

Ms. Long said that during the seven-month process, she has complied with the agency's requests — mailing copies of her daughters' life insurance policies, letters from fellow church members, lease agreements and medical documents.

On Oct. 25, she received a "deficiency" letter from the agency informing her that she owes $2,350 in back taxes.

Despite the intervention of U.S. Rep. Martin Frost, a Dallas Democrat, more than a month ago, Ms. Long still hasn't received her tax credit, said Jennifer Ward, Frost's staff assistant.

Information about the case will be forwarded to the IRS personnel center's Problem Resolution Office, said Ms. Antweiler.

"I feel sorry for anyone who's got hung up in any system where they feel like their needs aren't getting met," she said. "Our goal is to give the best public service that we can."

Ms. Long, who had surgery almost three months ago for ovarian cancer, said she has been receiving state welfare payments while church members pay her rent. They also drive her to and from school daily.

"She is working really hard to get beyond this point — I see that day in and day out," said fellow church member Sarah Meador. "That encourages us to help, because she's trying to help herself and her children."

Art lovers save outdoor statues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some Americans, spurred by a love of art and history, are determined to rescue statues and other outdoor sculpture from the ravages of neglect and abuse.

Thousands of public art works are getting registered and in many cases repaired by volunteers in a "Save Outdoor Sculpture" project backed by the Smithsonian Institution.

From the nation's capital to Chicago to Seattle, more than 15,000 individuals and private organizations and public groups and governments have joined the SOS effort since 1992, registering three-dimensional outdoor sculptures.

So far, more than 22,000 outdoor "sculptures" have been catalogued — from a 12-mile-wide volcanic crater in Arizona to manhole covers in Seattle that depict compasses with the "N" pointing north. More than half of them need repairs, and 10 percent urgently, the project reports.

"These are the orphans of the art and history worlds — the statues that someone put up more than a hundred years ago and forgot," says Susan Nichols, project director. "Even some well-known sculptures have been neglected."

In the nation's capital, someone stole Andrew Jackson's stirrups at Lafayette Square. Revolutionary War hero Thaddeus Kosciusko, the Polish patriot who shares the park near the White House, is without saber and hat.

Nationwide, help is on the way for such art works.

Photographers in Minnesota camped across the state to document 25 outdoor pieces. Rollerbladers in Florida took to the roads. City's like Dallas and Los Angeles instituted "adopt a sculpture" programs. And Girl Scouts earned merit badges by documenting the public works.

The sculpture project administrators — the Smithsonian's National Museum of American Art and the National Institute for the Conservation of Culture Property — say it's the largest cultural volunteer effort.

Each community uses its own standards in deciding which works to document. Monuments such as the Statue of Liberty in New York City and the presidential faces carved into Mount Rushmore in South Dakota are counted.

But the Washington Monument and the St. Louis arch aren't. Bob's Big Boy and McDonald's Ronald don't make the cut.

"My definition of sculpture is anything that anyone tells me is sculpture is," says Helen Ingalls, a conservator at the National Museum of American Art who has trained SOS volunteers how to measure and describe the works for the registry.

Scheduled for completion in 1997, the registry funded by private and business donations has prompted many towns to repair public treasures.

Upland, Calif., raised some $40,000 to save its only statue — the "Madonna of the Trail" depicting a female settler and her children — after an earthquake nearly toppled her.

In Americus, Ga., the acid rain-pocked "Doughboy," a copper statue of a World War I soldier, is getting a face lift — and his long-lost hand returned.

Black market demand believed to have prompted TV camera thefts

HOUSTON (AP) — Industry and police officials say the theft of 16 expensive video cameras from television stations in Houston and three other cities might be the work of a single group that sells them on the black market.

The cameras, each valued at $30,000 to $65,000, were pilfered from stations in Houston, San Antonio, New Orleans and Baton Rouge, La., within the past month.

Five were stolen from photographers covering the Selena murder trial in Houston.

"This is the work of professionals," said Vivian Leigh, a San Antonio broadcaster present during the Selena trial when a camera was stolen outside the Harris County Courthouse. "I mean, if it was kids, they would grab the microphones, the spare batteries, the tripods."

Officials believe it is unlikely the equipment is being sold to other U.S. media organizations because their serial numbers can easily be traced. More likely, authorities say, the cameras are being sold to pornographic film producers or smuggled to Mexico.

"It looks like it's premeditated, organized and planned," said Charles Cooper, executive director of the National Press Photographers Association in Durham, N.C. The group represents 11,000 journalists.

"I guess (television cameras are) a hot ticket, particularly if you can get them into Mexico or another country.... There's bound to be an underground market playing with this."

The video cameras use the high-resolution BETA format preferred by most professionals and not generally used by the public. Their high cost is because of large lenses required for use in low light.

Four cameras were stolen Oct. 23, the day Yolanda Saldivar was found guilty of killing Selena. During the trial, dozens of television crews were stationed outside the courthouse.

In San Antonio, two television stations lost cameras from locked parking lots last weekend. On Monday, a camera was taken from a Baton Rouge station, while four cameras were stolen the following day during separate thefts at two stations in New Orleans.

The Houston Police Department took the step of issuing a special advisory on Nov. 17, two days after a trio of Houston stations were victimized.

Man enters TV station, confesses to murder of 65-year-old mother

DALLAS (AP) — On one of the slowest news days of the year, a man walked into the lobby of KDFW-TV on Friday and gave the station a scoop — his confession to fatally stabbing of his 65-year-old mother.

James Wylie Parker sat down for an interview during a noon newscast and admitted that he stabbed his mother, Ann Parker, several times with a butcher knife before setting fire to her house.

Parker, 42, was immediately arrested and murder charges were being filed Friday afternoon, said Dallas police Sgt. Mia Sullivan. The district attorney's office will decide next week whether to also file arson charges, she said.

KDFW reporter Richard Ray had spent about an hour at the scene of the fire Friday morning before returning to the downtown studios to prepare his story, which was one of the lead items on the noon broadcast.

Shortly after it aired, Ray went across the street to pick up lunch. Parker was in the lobby when he returned.

"He walked into our studios around 12:05 and he made it clear he wanted to surrender," Ray said. "I told him the police were on the way and I asked him if he wanted to talk about it.

"He said he woke up this morning and he had to kill his mother, that she was evil. I told him that neighbors said she was wonderful and he said she was, but she was also evil."

Police immediately were called to the scene. The station aired the confession and arrest during the last few minutes of the noon broadcast.

Parker told Ray that he had spent the last few years at a federal veterans hospital in Waco, where he was treated for manic depression and schizophrenia.

"He was agitated, but not threatening," Ray said. "He seemed pretty lucid, except at one point he said, 'I'm Lee Harvey Oswald.'"

This was the third time in four years that a person has surrendered and admitted to murder to a Dallas-Fort Worth area television station.

Thoughtful Moments™

How do I Love thee?

Let me count the ways.
I love thee to the depth and breadth and height
My soul can reach, when feeling out of sight
For the ends of Being and ideal Grace.
I love thee to the level of every day's
Most quiet need, by sun and candle light.
I love thee freely, as men strive for Right;
I love thee purely, as they turn from Praise.
I love thee with the passion put to use
In my old griefs, and with my childhood's faith.
I love thee with a love I seemed to lose
With my lost saints - I love thee with the breath,
Smiles, tears, of all my life! - and, if God choose,
I shall but love thee better after death.

New character set

The Grinch. Santa. Rudolph. Frosty. All familiar characters that will dance across the television screens of millions this holiday season. But this year, someone will be joining them: Hans, the main character in the brand-new, animated children's television feature, "Red Boots for Christmas."

The 30-minute special, produced by Lutheran Hour Ministries, is aimed at bringing the "real" story of Christmas back to television and sharing that message with families worldwide.

"Red Boots for Christmas" can be seen 2:30 p.m. Dec. 17 and Dec. 24 on KMID-TV and 4 p.m. Dec. 24 on Faith and Values Network.

The story is a German folk tale about Hans, a sad, lonely shoemaker who learns to embrace the true meaning of Christmas after a visit from an angel with a very special message.

For more information about "Red Boots for Christmas," call the "News About 'Red Boots' Hotline" toll-free at (800) 442-0324.

Leaders urge interfaith couples to choose 1 religion for children

By David Briggs
Associated Press

NEW YORK — As the great wave of interfaith marriages reaches the child-rearing stage, more parents are facing the difficult challenge of deciding which religion they should bring up their children in.

Some parents have chosen to raise their children in both faiths, with the expectation the child will choose later on.

But some religious leaders, who claim fundamental differences in religious beliefs make it impossible for a person to be, for example, both Christian and Jewish, are encouraging parents to make a choice.

In Reform Judaism, a leader in reaching out to interfaith couples, a committee is recommending that congregations offer enrollment in religious schools and day schools only to children who are not receive formal religious education in another religion.

The proposal from the Commission on Reform Jewish Outreach will go before the Biennial Convention of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations next week in Atlanta.

"We happen to believe parents should make up their mind and determine which tradition a child should be raised in," said Rabbi Eric Yoffie, president-elect of the Reform Jewish group.

As members of various religious groups have assimilated into the mainstream of American society, the intermarriage rate has risen rapidly. In the Jewish community, it has risen by a factor of 10 in the last 30 years, and about half of all Jewish people today marry non-Jewish spouses.

Among the interfaith couples who have children, 28 percent bring their children up in the Jewish faith, 31 percent raise their children with no religion, 21 percent raise their kids in a religion other than Judaism and 20 percent raise their kids with a combination of religions, according to a UAHC estimate.

One can no longer assume even children enrolled in Jewish schools are being raised exclusively as Jews, Reform officials said.

"We basically have made the assumption that if people are enrolling their children in Jewish religious schools, they intend to raise their children as Jews," said Dru Greenwood, outreach director for the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

But incidents in synagogues show the assumption no longer automatically holds. For example, she said, in one synagogue a girl came for her bat mitzvah wearing a cross.

Although Reform Judaism has been noted for its outreach to interfaith couples — including passage of a controversial policy on patrilineal descent recognizing that Jewish fathers, as well as Jewish mothers, pass on Jewishness — the proposed policy on religious schools recognizes limits need to be set, Reform leaders said.

"It's a matter of retaining our integrity," Yoffie said.

"I think they're drawing a line: Outreach, yes, but it has to be, from our definition, authentic," said Rabbi James Rudin, director of interreligious affairs for the American Jewish Committee.

There is a difference between a religious school and academic classes about religion, Rudin said.

"When you go to school with another child, you're making religion," Rudin said. "It isn't just comparative religion anymore. It's a community. That's what makes religion work."

Few religious groups have official policies on the issue.

In the Roman Catholic Church, couples are strongly encouraged even before their marriage to raise their children as Catholics, but the final decision is up to the parents, said Robert Colbert, executive director of the Department of Religious Education for the National Catholic Education Association.

If an interfaith couple chose to give their children religious training in both the Jewish and Catholic faiths, they would be welcomed "with open arms," he said.

The Rev. Jay Rock, co-director of Interfaith Relations for the National Council of Churches, said Protestant churches have not taken a position on the issue although the growth of interfaith couples means more pastors are confronted with the sensitive decision.

"So what are you going to do, tell them their child cannot enroll in church school. Unlikely, very unlikely," Rock said. "If you do, you're likely going to lose that couple."

Rock said he thinks a policy prohibiting children from receiving training in two faiths is shortsighted because many interfaith parents will then choose to raise their children with no religious training.

"It doesn't help anyone. It doesn't help the couple. It doesn't help the child," he said.

In the non-binding resolution before the Reform Jewish group, however, the outreach commission says it is theologically inconsistent for a person to identify as both Jewish and Christian.

And placing such an "impossible decision" on children imperils their healthy spiritual development, Reform Jewish leaders said.

"Wittingly or unwittingly, the two eligions are pitted against one another in competition, and the parents are pitted against one another in competition," Rudin said.

Former attorney general pays penance in church

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — Ernie Preate Jr. — former state attorney general, now convicted felon — has been spending his free time of late at a local church.

He scrubs toilets there. For free.

Preate, who resigned in June after pleading guilty to one count of mail fraud, has been volunteering his time at the St. Francis of Assisi Kitchen since October.

"Nobody asked me to come down here," Preate said. "It's about penance and starting over."

In addition to shining the porcelain, Pennsylvania's former top cop has helped out on the serving line and pushed a broom around. He usually shows up before the kitchen opens to prepare for lunch and stays afterward to help clean up.

Monsignor Constantine Siconolfi, who runs the kitchen, said Preate called him out of the blue one day and asked if he could volunteer. He showed up a couple of days later.

"I suggested cutting vegetables and serving and possibly talking to some people," Siconolfi said. "He said no. He wanted to do the bathrooms."

Preate, 55, is awaiting sentencing by a federal judge in Harrisburg. He faces up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine. No sentencing date has been set.

The former attorney general admitted in June to filing false campaign finance reports to cover up $20,000 in contributions from video poker operators while he ran for Lackawanna County district attorney.

Federal prosecutors have said Preate has been working hard to improve his public image following his conviction.

"I presume it's a spiritual motivation," Siconolfi said of Preate's four to five days of work a week. "But no one can know what is in one's heart. That is between the individual and God himself."

Rebs win by one thin dime

■ Midland Lee victory over El Paso Socorro was too close for comfort but Rebels finally get their 10th win of the season.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee put its hard-earned dime in the hip pocket Friday night and left Memorial Stadium wiping its state playoff brow.

The Rebels met a team goal set at the beginning of the season, earning their 10th victory of the season, but the 28-26 verdict over El Paso Socorro was an unexpected scare from the Border City that was almost unthinkable for the No. 8 state ranked Rebels, who carry around a dime to remind them of the 10-win goal. They have the dime, but they can be thankful for three big plays.

Still, Lee is alive in the playoffs, thanks to three major breakdowns by the Bulldogs and the Rebels will travel to Texas Stadium next Saturday to face the winner of today's 4:30 p.m. game between Arlington Lamar and Lewisville. The time of that game will be determined today.

"Socorro is a good team, with a good plan," said Lee head coach John Parchman, who once coached at Socorro. "They looked at this as a great opportunity to establish credibility for their program. They are now used to winning and played us to win. You have to give them and their coaching staff a lot of credit. It didn't help much that the TV people announced that this game was won before it was played."

Quarterback John Thurman hit Tim Lirley with a 63-yard touchdown pass to erase Socorro's early 6-0 lead that came when Chris Mossman blocked Clay Boyd's punt and he took the ball in from the Defense sends 'Huskers to Fiesta Bowl

LINCOLN, Neb. — With its Heisman Trophy candidate struggling and its potent offense stifled, No. 1 Nebraska turned to its defense to beat Oklahoma and wrap up a trip to the Fiesta Bowl for a shot at a second consecutive national championship.

The Cornhuskers (11-0, 7-0 Big Eight) needed two defensive touchdowns to spark a 37-0 victory Friday as quarterback Tommie Frazier had a very average day. Frazier, locked in a tight Heisman Trophy race with Ohio State tailback Eddie George, completed 12-of-25 for 128 yards with one interception. He threw a 38-yard touchdown pass early in the fourth quarter.

"I don't think I played a bad game," said Frazier, who improved to 32-3 as a starter. "I did everything I normally do. It's just that things didn't fall into the right places for me today."

It was a lot worse for Oklahoma (5-5-1, 2-5). Of its 14 possessions, 10 ended in punts, two in interceptions, one in a fumble and the other on downs. Oklahoma managed just 51 rushing yards, 162 below its average.

The teams combined for seven fumbles, 12 penalties and 14 punts in Nebraska's first shutout of Oklahoma since a 7-0 victory in 1942. The victory concluded Nebraska's third consecutive HAWLEY — The Midland Christian Mustangs are now within one win of their fifth consecutive state title after they waxed the Waxahachie Cornerstone Christian Eagles 69-22 Friday night in a TAPPS state semifinal game.

The Mustangs will face Abilene Christian in the championship game next weekend at a date and time to be determined. Abilene Christian beat Bryan Allen Academy 44-42 in the other state semifinal.

Midland Christian (11-1) brought the high-powered Eagle offense to a virtual standstill as the Mustangs allowed the Eagles 190 yards. Cornerstone, which ends its season at 10-2, entered the game as the state's No. 1-ranked offense, scoring an average of 62 points per game.

Tailback Anthony Gattin, who had rushed for 1,570 yards this season, was held to a meager 16 yards. Senior quarterback James Brooks, who tossed 24 touchdowns and threw for just over 2,000 yards, was limited to 92 yards in the air.

"It was crunch time and the kids knew that," Midland Christian coach James Blake said. "Our defense has been the

Judge sacks Browns' move

CLEVELAND (AP) — An Ohio judge issued a preliminary injunction Friday blocking the Browns from moving to Baltimore until a trial is held in the city's lawsuit.

In a courtroom proceeding that lasted only five seconds, Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Kenneth Callahan announced that he had ruled in favor of the city. Callahan heard three days of testimony earlier this week on the city's request for the injunction.

Browns owner Art Modell announced Nov. 6 he intended to move the team to Baltimore for the start of the 1996 season.

The city is seeking an order forcing the team to stay in Cleveland Stadium until the Browns' lease expires in 1998.

"We're very gratified," said George von Mehren, a lawyer for the city. "This however, is just one step in the process of keeping the Browns in Cleveland. But on this Friday afternoon, we're very happy."

The judge asked the Browns and the city to submit a suggested trial date by Monday.

Pied Pipers end Stanton's season, 39-28

By Stewart Doreen

SAN ANGELO — After Stanton's win over No. 9 Iraan last week, there was no doubt it would take a proven team to eliminate the Buffs from the Class 2A playoffs.

Friday, the Hamlin Pied Pipers proved to be that team with a 39-28 area-round win in San Angelo Stadium.

Hamlin, 10-1 for the season and the champion of District 7-2A, will face West Texas, a 10-0 winner over Seagraves, in the regional semifinals. For the Buffaloes, it is the end of a better than expected season.

"It was a tremendous year," said Stanton coach Mark Cotton. "We were picked by most people to finish fourth or fifth in the district. I don't think the media gave this team credit for how good they are."

Cotton also said that this Stanton team is working its way to the levels of teams like Hamlin, whose post-season experience gave them an advantage on this night.

"We haven't been there and Hamlin has," said Cotton. "It makes a world of difference."

Hamlin, which has scored 32 points a game, got an early lead and held off the

Sudan running back scores 7 times to beat Rankin, 46-7

■ Roger Huey scored all of the Hornets' touchdowns as Red Devils end their season.

By Mike Butts

SEMINOLE — Rankin's Red Devils knew they had to keep Sudan running back Roger Huey in check to beat the Hornets in Friday's area round playoff. Well, at least Rankin held the senior speedster to only one touchdown on defense.

Huey scored all seven of Sudan's touchdowns in the Class 1A playoff in Seminole as the Hornets stung the Red Devils 46-7 to put Rankin out of the playoffs for the second time in three seasons. Huey was the story, scoring the first of Sudan's seven unanswered touchdowns with a 31-yard run and the last on an 100-yard interception return with three minutes and 40 seconds left in the game.

"He's a great ball player," Sudan coach Royce McAdams said. "If there's a better ball player around, we could certainly use him."

Rankin first-year coach Greg Althof said when he took the job last spring that he wanted to throw the ball more. But this probably wasn't what he had in mind. The Red Devils, their running game held to 44 yards, went to the air 38 times. And despite quarterback Jo'el Armendariz completing 18 of those throws for 195 yards, Rankin scored only once, on its opening drive.

The Hornets (7-4) outhit the Red Devils (9-3) in what was a hard-hitting contest. The shots culminated in Rankin junior Richard Acosta being knocked cold in the fourth quarter. He lay motionless on the grass for several minutes before trainers helped him off the field.

"We did come out tonight and played really tough," McAdams said. "We've kind of been pulling towards that all year. Earlier in the season we were sitting back on our heels and letting things happen to us."

The Hornets had lost four straight games to teams of higher classifications after coming into the year ranked in the top ten in the state. Friday they looked like a team capable of winning some more playoff games.

three-yard line for the score.

Lirley was left wide open on the Thurman bomb, catching the ball all alone at the Socorro 25-yard line and waltzed to the end zone.

"I cut down inside on the play, but the defenders charged down on Ricky Green and that left me wide open," Lirley said. "I realized I was in bounds and then just had to catch the ball."

Mossman said of his blocked punt for a score, "We were just going as hard as we could for the block. That gave us a lot of confidence. We gave it all we had. We were real competitive, but it was just the three big mistakes that beat us. That's all it was."

The Rebels never trailed again, but they were never comfortable either. Lee then turned a blocked punt by Shae Jones into a touchdown when John Norman recovered and took it in from seven yards out for a 14-6 lead. That was the third of three big mistakes that cost the Bulldogs a chance at one of the biggest upsets in Region I this year.

The third big mistake came in the third quarter when a snap went over the head of Socorro punter Jesse Martinez. Jones recovered at the three-yard line, his second big play of the game. Sophomore Josh Norman scored two plays later for a 21-12 lead.

Socorro scored as time ran out in the first half to trail 14-12 when quarterback Nick Alvarez threw the first of his three touchdowns, this time to Paul Carrillo for four yards. Alvarez completed 22 of 32 passes for 264 yards and three touchdowns. His last was a six-yard pass to Joey Sanchez with just 1:08 left in the game.

Lee ran out the clock behind Alex Strambler, who finished the night with 111 yards rushing. John Thurman also busted a 31-yard TD for the Rebels with 5:43 left in the game, making Socorro's comeback bid futile.

It was a bitter defeat for the Bulldogs, but Socorro coach Jim Carson, who once coached under Parchman, could not fault his Bulldogs.

"I wouldn't be prouder of this team if they would have won," Carson said. "I'd been a lot happier, but not prouder. We left nothing out there on the field and there was nothing we left out that we could do against them. We made three big mistakes, but that's part of the game. Our special teams had carried us all year, and the mistakes were more due to Lee than to bad execution on our part."

Lee was a huge favorite in the game. And the playoff ladder gets steeper from now on. This could be one of a long line of scares if Lee is to remain playing. They were close to joining the Thanksgiving turkey.

BUFFS: Stanton ends season to tough Hamlin team

(From 1C)

Buffaloes every time they looked to be closing in. Leading the attack for the 1994 state semifinalist was sophomore quarterback Chas Shira and junior running back Timmy Davis. Shira threw for 159 yards and two touchdowns while Davis equaled that amount on the ground. The two players made it hard for the Buffalo defense to key in on one specific area, and when Stanton did make mistakes, the Pied Pipers capitalized.

Down 33-28, the Bulldogs, who have never won an area game, did have one shot if they could stop Hamlin for one last series, but their window of opportunity was closed shut by a 40-yard touchdown rumble up the middle of the field from Hamlin's Scotty Nichols.

"It was a case of making too many mistakes against a good football team," said Cotton. "It was a combination of poor tackling and good blocking on their part."

Stanton, 9 for the season and runner up in District 6-2A, did have success on the night and a brilliant performance from running back Todd Davis, who rushed for 165 yards and two TDs, had one of the game's top efforts when he outraced a fast Hamlin defense for an 87-yard third-quarter touchdown. Quarterback Taylor Looney also put in a quality effort against a top-notched defense that came into the game holding opponents to 9.1 points game. Looney threw for 150 yards and two scores.

But the reality was Hamlin won the game on past playoff experience. Coming into the game Hamlin coach Alan Cherry said that the Pied Piper's biggest asset is their experience and that showed in a big way. Hamlin, which beat Cisco 35-0 in its bi-district game, never got riled despite a Stanton team that came to play. And that was no more apparent than in the first half.

Heading the charge in the first 24 minutes was Hamlin's all-world safety and wide receiver James Clawson. The senior showed immediately the athletic ability that made him an all-state safety in 1994.

On a fourth-and-one during Hamlin's first possession of the game, Clawson caught a Shira pass in the flat and turned on the jets for 69 yards. If the score wasn't enough, Clawson also had a interception of a Stanton two-point conversion attempt, the subsequent 95-yard return for two Hamlin points, an onsides-kick recovery, a called-back 85-yard return of a Stanton interception and a key 10-yard reception to set up a Hamlin field goal that made the score 17-3.

"He's a tremendous player," said Cotton. "We talked about knowing where he was at all times. We just couldn't stop him."

Stanton could have folded at that point in the second quarter, but the Buffaloes stampeded back. Stanton got the ball in good territory when Hamlin's second onsides kick of the first half failed. Then the Buffs went 45 yards in four plays, capped by a Looney to Leo McCalister 14-yard pass in the corner of the end zone. The resulting extra-point attempt failed, making the score 17-9.

Then Stanton took advantage of a Hamlin mistake when David Cazares recovered a botched Pied Piper snap to give the Buffs the ball in Hamlin territory. Again, Looney converted a third-down conversion and turned it into points. On third-and-12, Looney hit Nick Hull streaking across the middle. Hull reversed his field and scampered into the end zone. On the following two-point conversion, Clawson worked his magic picking off Looney's pass and racing 95 yards for two Hamlin points, making the halftime score 19-15.

top-ranked defense in the state the last four years and they showed it tonight."

But what really took the air out of the Eagles' flight happened on the game's opening kickoff when Aaron Cunningham's 75-yard return for a touchdown was called back. That play set the tone for the rest of the game.

"It definitely took a lot air out of our sails," Cornerstone coach Brent Green said. "At the time, we were all fired up and we were ahead, and the penalty threw us for a loop."

The more-experienced Mustangs, however, took advantage of Cornerstone's mental letdown. After holding Cornerstone on downs at the Mustang 38, Midland Christian put it in high gear, going 43 yards on two plays for the game's first score.

On the third play of the drive, Alex Awtry found a wide-open John Koss for a 32-yard touchdown. The Mustangs then opened the flood gates as they scored on their next two possessions.

First MCHS tallied on an Andrew Bufford 35-yard scamper, followed by a 9-yard scoring pass to Cody Howard who danced through a mine field of Cornerstone defenders before arriving in the end zone.

"The game was about big plays," Green said. "They made them and we didn't."

The Mustangs were led on defense by a determined Jerod Womack, who was in the Cornerstone backfield almost as much as their running backs were.

"This is the way we practice. We come out to play hard and we make the big plays," Womack said. "I was just glad that we were able to take the next step in defending our championship. It's feels great and we're ready to go next week."

was recovered at the Hornet 17 yard line. Armendariz threw to John Evridge two plays later for a 7-0 Red Devil lead. Then Huey began his one-man show.

He scored on runs of 31 and 15 yards and caught a 3-yard touchdown to put Sudan up 21-7 at halftime. He then ran for touchdowns of 12 and nine yards in the third quarter and broke an 82-yarder in the fourth. But just in case the Hornet fans had not seen Huey outrun enough Rankin defenders, the 170-pounder picked off an Armendariz pass on the goal line and galloped the length of the field with under four minutes to play.

Huey finished with 43 points, 211 yards rushing and 312 all-purpose yards.

But even then McAdams wouldn't concede that his team proved itself better than Rankin.

"I never felt like we were a better team," McAdams said. "We got some opportunities that helped us. (But) up to the third quarter we didn't have much more yardage than they had."

Actually, Huey alone had 108 yards rushing in the first half while the Red Devils had 101 total yards. The Hornets play Sunray (10-2) in the region round.

Coma victim's relatives hope sounds of football game will revive him

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — Those close to a 17-year-old fullback nearly killed in an auto accident hope the familiar grunts, whistles and cheers of football will stir him from his coma.

Brant Theurer is confined to a bed at Meridian Neuro Care hospital, but he never misses a game.

His coach at Paraclete High School, Steve Hagerty, wears a tape recorder during games to capture the sounds. The games also are videotaped, and the tapes are played later for Theurer, who can open his eyes.

"We turn on the VCR and say, 'Brant, here's what the team did last week,'" Mike Theurer said of his son. "Every once in a while you see him tense up, move his head."

While watching the team's last regular-season game — a wrenching 28-27 loss to Rosamond High School — Brant "got all tense and agitated," said friend and teammate Ryan Johnson. "I think he was mad."

Brant's reaction prompted Johnson to do a little dance around the hospital room.

"I still think he's going to pull out of it," said Ryan, who has known Brant since they were 7 years old. "This time, he seemed a lot more like him."

Theuer's family has been playing tapes recorded at games and practices since shortly after the accident July 29. He he was flung from a friend's car while on the way home from a football camp.

He and three teammates were returning from the camp when the driver fell asleep. Theuer, was not wearing a seat belt, was the only one hurt.

The base of his brain was badly injured but no bones were broken and his spinal cord was undamaged, his mother, Mary, said Friday in a telephone interview from her home in Lancaster. So the prospects for him being able to use his body again are good if he regains full consciousness, she said.

"We're working to get him out of his coma and responding," Mrs. Theurer said. "He does sometimes follow a command — you'll ask him to turn his head and he will, sometimes — but it takes him a while to process it."

Other times he is completely unresponsive, and doctors say they can't predict when and if recovery may come.

"You do the best you can and you pray," Mrs. Theurer said. "There's someone with him nearly all the time."

Just before the crash the 5-foot-7, 200-pound Theuer was moved from center to fullback.

Cooper survives Irvin, 19-16

EL PASO — Abilene Cooper had a tough time defeating El Paso Irvin here Friday night in the Sun Bowl, winning 19-16 in a Class 5A area Small School football playoff.

No details on the game were available at press time, but Cooper climbed to 6-4-1 for the year while Irvin fell to 9-3. Midland Lee defeated Irvin 49-0 earlier this year in Midland.

Cooper will play the Flower Mound Marcus-Fort Worth O.D. Minnesota renews Wacker's contract despite poor marks

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jim Wacker knows how lucky he is. He knows how easy it would have been to be out of a job by year's end.

Yet despite his 12-31 record as Minnesota's football coach over the past four years, Wacker will stay on for three more pending board of regents approval.

"I really believe that I'm the most fortunate man in all of America," Wacker said Friday. "I'm thrilled to death at the chance. I'm thrilled to death at the challenge."

Men's athletic director Mark Dienhart said he is recommending the two-year extension because Wacker is a "fundamentally honest man" who needs more time to turn the Golden Gophers (3-7, 1-6 Big Ten) into a winning team.

Wacker is in the fourth year of a five-year contract.

"Jim can help us find our way out of the woods. We didn't get lost in the woods because of Jim Wacker," Dienhart said. "He was hired because for 25 years we've been looking for a way out of the mess we've been in. We haven't found it yet."

But Dienhart made it clear that he wouldn't favor the extension if he didn't think the team could improve dramatically as early as next year.

While stressing that he's not happy with the team's winning percentage, Dienhart said there were mitigating factors, including several key injuries and the fact that Minnesota had one of the toughest schedules in the nation this year.

The first-year athletic director noted that academic standards have improved, that attendance in the Metrodome has been up every year and that revenue has increased by $500,000 since Wacker's tenure began.

Dienhart's decision came sooner than expected. He has said repeatedly that he wouldn't make up his mind until after the Gophers played Saturday's season finale at Iowa.

But Dienhart sped up his timetable for the players' sake.

"It had become apparent to me that the players were carrying a burden that I hoped they never would — the future of the coaching staff," he said. "I believe it has affected the way they've played in the not-so-distant past."

Minnesota was humiliated 48-14 last Saturday at Illinois, a game that Wacker called "the low point in my career."

"One week ago, I didn't think there was any way" of keeping his job, Wacker said.

Dienhart said that would have been too easy.

"There is no doubt that given the advice I received, especially from my colleagues around the country, that the easiest decision to make would have been a decision to change coaches," Dienhart said. "... (But) I believe Jim has earned an opportunity to see his seniors compete next year."

The only senior recruited by Wacker is running back Chris Darkins, who broke the school's rushing record last season.

Dienhart called that "an example of the improvement that has taken place in our overall recruiting."

The athletic director also noted that Wacker took over a program in 1992 mired in mediocrity. The Gophers have gone to just one bowl game in the past 25 years, and have had only two seasons in which they have finished better than 6-5.

"Only very recently have we come to grips with how we might improve our lot as a Big Ten institution," he said. "Many of those changes have not had an opportunity to take hold."

Since taking over, Wacker has raised his team's graduation rate, and the grade-point average of the players — 2.62 — is the highest it's ever been.

But Wacker also said Friday he knows the bottom line is winning.

"That's my responsibility," he said. "I have not done that and I'm sick about that."

MC men win fourth straight

CASPER, Wyo. — Freshman forward Ceedric Goodwyn hit on 13 of 14 shots from the field and ended with 37 points for his best performance in a Chaparral uniform as Midland College beat Ricks College 90-70.

Preseason all-American D'Juan Baker, a sophomore, had 19 points and freshman guard Milton Palacio added 10 as the Chaps improved to 5-3 on the year and picked up their fourth-straight win.

Goodwyn made his last nine two-point baskets and all four of his 3-point attemps to finish with the career-high 37.

The Chaps pulled away in the second half after taking a slim, 41-36 lead at the break. Midland College held Ricks to 36-percent shooting in the second half (11-of-31) to pad its lead.

Goodwyn began the season with an ankle injury in the Chaps' opener. He did not play again until the fourth game, which MC lost to Mesa College. But Friday's performance was by far his best since returning to the lineup.

MOVE: Cleveland mayor 'ecstatic'

(From 1C)

who was on vacation, was "ecstatic," according to spokeswoman Nancy Lesic.

The Browns could appeal, but preliminary injunctions are difficult to overturn.

"We're obviously disappointed by the order," said Dennis Kelly, a lawyer for the Browns, adding that an appeal was a possibility.

"It's just one battle in a much larger engagement — to prove to the NFL owners who are voting on this in January that we are going to work tirelessly and not stop our efforts, despite this victory, to keep the team here," Lesic said.

Dianna Rosborough, a spokeswoman for Maryland Gov. Parris Glendening, said the ruling "was not unexpected from a Cleveland judge."

"We're extremely confident that ultimately Mr. Modell will be free to move his team from Cleveland, so this doesn't change our plans in the least bit," Rosborough said. "We have an extremely strong legally binding contract, so we're not anxious or worried about this temporary injunction."

Maryland state Sen. John Pica, chairman of Baltimore city delegation, agreed.

"No one expected this to be comfortable and we didn't expect it to come easily. At the same time, you can't expect a hometown judge facing re-election to rule against his city," said Pica, in whose district the Browns' new stadium would be built.

"This is no different than any other tenancy," he said. "They can leave when the rent is paid. I can't see how a court can make a tenant stay if they're willing to pay the remaining rent payments. The decision sounds more emotional than rational."

Arnold Pinkney, a chairman of the "Save Our Browns" campaign begun by White after the announcement, said the ruling is a motivator for his supporters.

"Our campaign is separate from the legal campaign — our campaign is to marshal public support here and across the country to keep the Browns in Cleveland," he said. "This is just a shot in the arm to that effort, particularly to our national backers."

White had testified that the city faced huge financial losses and a critical loss of prestige if the Browns were to leave town.

He had said the team's financial impact on the city was conservatively estimated to be $47 million.

White said loss of the team also would slow the city's growth and tarnish the "comeback" city image Cleveland had cultivated in the past 10 years.

Lawyers for the city argued that the team had signed an ironclad, 25-year lease at Cleveland Stadium. But lawyers for the Browns insisted that only Cleveland Stadium Corp. — a company created and owned by Modell — had signed the lease with the city.

The Browns signed a sublease with the corporation, and lawyers for the team argued the city had no right to interfere in that agreement.

The day Modell signed a 30-year lease with the Maryland Stadium Authority, he signed a deal in which the Stadium Corp. agreed to allow the Browns to break their lease three years early.

Texas fans want to keep 'Big Mac'

■ Longhorn coach John Mackovic, who was nearly run of out town in his first three seasons, finds support after winning.

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Texas coach John Mackovic seemingly the target of a most wanted list put out by Longhorns faithful last year now is actually wanted — to stay.

After stumbling through seasons of 6-5 in 1992 and 5-5-1 in 1993, Mackovic was nearly run out of town last year during a season plagued by player suspensions and upset losses to Texas Tech and Rice.

But the fourth-year coach has won over many of his critics by taking a hands-on approach with his team and going 12-1-1 over the last 14 games.

A columnist in the local newspaper who repeatedly called for Mackovic's job last year on Friday said the coach of the No. 9 Longhorns (9-1-1, 6-0 Southwest Conference) deserves a new contract.

Mackovic, almost a lock to win SWC coach of the year honors, has one year left on his current deal.

"We'll talk to John (about his contract), but probably not for another 10 days," said Texas President Robert Berdahl. "He's too busy right now."

Texas moved one step closer to claiming its first outright league championship since 1990 by beating Baylor 21-13 Thursday night.

In a game that started bleakly on offense behind backup redshirt freshman quarterback Richard Walton, the Longhorns rode their defense to victory. That set up a showdown next week with rival Texas A&M.

If the Aggies (7-2, 4-1) beat Texas Christian on Saturday, A&M and Texas will play on Dec. 2 for a berth in either the Orange or Sugar bowls and the right to say goodbye to the SWC on top. The 81-year-old league is disbanding after next season.

If A&M beats TCU and Texas, the Longhorns would likely go to the Alamo Bowl in San Antonio on Dec. 28 against either Michigan or Penn State.

"I told him (Mackovic) before the game, and I mean it even more now, that I respect everything he has done with this football program through all he has had to deal with," Baylor coach Chuck Reedy said. "They are an outstanding football team."

After losing to Notre Dame (55-27) and tying Oklahoma (24-24), Texas has won five straight. The streak has included a last-play, desperation 50-yard field goal to beat Virginia (17-16), a rout of Texas Tech (48-7), two come-from-behind victories against Houston (52-20) and TCU (27-19) and the triumph over Baylor without injured starting quarterback James Brown.

"This has been a tough stretch of games," Mackovic said. "We've clinched at least a co-championship and next week we play for all the marbles. We have said all along we wanted to be playing on Dec. 2 for the championship. It should be a real classic against a great team."

The victory over Baylor (7-4, 5-2) may have been Mackovic's finest hour this season. With Brown, the SWC's leader in pass efficiency and total offense out of the game with a left ankle sprain, Walton opened by spraying errant passes all over the field.

After six possessions, the Longhorns had 1 yard of offense, a turnover and no first downs. But Mackovic could be seen extolling his players up and down the sideline.

"I kept telling Rich, 'You're doing just fine. Keep your tires pumped up because you're going to hit the groove,' and he finally did," Mackovic said.

Players said in recent years the team might have gotten down and let the game slip away. But they say the adversity of the past couple years has toughened them.

The defense rose to the challenge and shut down Baylor's explosive running attack, limiting the Bears to 164 yards of offense without a score in the first half.

The strong defensive effort gave Walton enough time to find a rhythm. He hit tight end Pat Fitzgerald on a 70-yard touchdown pass with 4:39 left in the first half.

The Longhorns went on to build a 21-0 lead before Baylor scored twice late in the fourth quarter.

"We were not to be denied," Mackovic said. "Our defense was superior. We didn't have a chance in the game if our defense didn't play the way it did for three and a half quarters."

Texas running back Shon Mitchell became the first Texas running back since 1987 to gain 1,000 yards in a season when he climbed to 1,010 for the year after Thursday night's Texas win over Baylor.

Northwestern, Buckeyes vie for Rose Bowl berth

The Associated Press

■ Top 25 Roundup

"Hail to The Victors," the Michigan fight song, could become a very popular ditty Saturday in Evanston, Ill., the home of the Northwestern Wildcats.

Should second-ranked Ohio State be upset or tied by No. 18 Michigan, fourth-ranked Northwestern, which has completed its season at 10-1, would go to the Rose Bowl.

The most played song at Michigan Stadium, however, is expected to be Ohio State's "Buckeye Battle Cry" as running back Eddie George, quarterback Bobby Hoying and flanker Terry Glenn attempt to lead the Buckeyes into the Rose Bowl against Southern California and keep them in the battle for the national title with an 12-0 record.

Michigan has an 8-3 record and is coming off a loss to Penn State.

Ohio State also will be trying to snap a three-game losing streak at Michigan Stadium. In 1993, the Buckeyes went to Ann Arbor with a 9-0-1 record and lost 28-0.

In other games Saturday involving ranked teams, No. 6 Florida State is at No. 3 Florida, Vanderbilt plays at No. 5 Tennessee, No. 14 Penn State visits Michigan State; No. 15 Texas A&M is at Texas Christian and No. 22 Syracuse plays at No. 25 Miami.

Florida State (9-1) vs. Florida (10-0) should be doubly offensive as the archrivals battle for a chance to play top-ranked Nebraska in the Fiesta Bowl.

Quarterback Danny Kanell sparks a Florida State offense that averages 50.8 points and 575 yards. Florida is averaging 46.5 points and 548 yards behind quarterback Danny Wuerffel.

Although Vanderbilt is only 2-8, the Commodores can expect to be taken seriously by Tennessee (9-1) in the wake of the Vols' 34-31 squeaker over Kentucky last Saturday.

Vanderbilt has scored 13 touchdowns. Tennessee, led by quarterback Peyton Manning, has 50.

Penn State and Michigan State lost the scent of roses some time ago, but Michigan State coach Lou Saban calls the matchup "a big game. It's clear to everyone what's at stake — Michigan State and Penn State playing for third place in the Big Ten."

The visiting Nittany Lions (7-3, 4-3 in the conference) go into the game off a win against Michigan. Michigan State (6-3-1, 4-2-1) will be seeking its fifth win in the last six games.

Texas Christian (6-4) is hoping to go to consecutive bowl games for the first time since 1958-59. To keep alive their chances for a bowl Bid, however, the Horned Frogs will have to snap a 22-game losing streak against Texas A&M (7-2) and they'll have to do it against the nation's top ranked defense (241 yards pet game).

Syracuse and Miami, each 5-1 in the Big East, will be playing a share of the conference championship with Virginia Tech, which finished at 6-1. Syracuse (8-2) will field an offense that has scored 100 points over the last two games against a Miami defense that has allowed only seven touchdowns in the last five games.

Marshall goes for NCAA I-AA title

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — It's full circle for Marshall tailback Chris Parker, who has become a force to reckon with in the Thundering Herd's attack. The Herd won a national title in Parker's first year of eligibility. As a senior now, Parker would like to finish his career by helping his team go all the way again.

"That would definitely be the best ending I could have," Parker said. "It would be the perfect ending. I've accomplished everything I wanted to do in college football."

Parker, a 5-foot-11, 198-pound senior from Lynchburg, Va., has 4,571 career yards in the regular season and another 917 in NCAA I-AA playoff games. He is the Southern Conference's all-time leading rusher and finished with the fifth-best career rushing total in I-AA history. He also has 48 regular-season touchdowns and 13 more in the playoffs and has averaged 5.9 yards per carry during the regular season and 3.9 per rush in the playoffs.

"He's been a real constant," said Marshall coach Jim Donnan. "He's never been hurt, played very hard in his whole career. Once in a lifetime you get a chance to coach a guy like him. He's been a big part of our success."

Aggies, Horned Frogs end 68-year grid history

■ Texas A&M needs a win over the 11-point underdogs from TCU to ensure a SWC title shot.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

FORT WORTH — Texas A&M and Texas Christian end a 68-year series today.

The 15th-ranked Aggies, boasting the nation's top-ranked defense by allowing only 241 yards a game, were an 11-point favorite over the Horned Frogs, whom they've beaten 22 times in a row.

The last TCU win over A&M was 13-10 at Kyle Field in 1972 under Billy Tohill. Still, A&M only has an 18-13-2 edge at Amon Carter Stadium.

The rivalry ends with this meeting because the Southwest Conference is breaking up. A&M is going to the Big 12 Conference while TCU will join the Western Athletic Conference. There are no plans for the series to continue.

A&M (7-2, 4-1) must win today for next weekend's game against Texas to determine the league champion and possibly a berth in either the Orange or Sugar Bowls. The loser of the game between the Longhorns and the Aggies may be headed to the Alamo Bowl in San Antonio.

Texas A&M is trying to record at least eight wins for the seventh consecutive year, while the Horned Frogs (6-4, 3-3) are hoping for back-to-back bowl berths for the first time since 1958-59.

There will be a battle of excellent running backs. Texas A&M's Leeland McElroy has finally shaken his injured ankle and should be at top form, while TCU senior running back Andre Davis will be playing his second game since an NCAA suspension. He had 141 yards rushing against Texas last week.

McElroy has rushed for 892 yards while Davis has 769 yards. Davis averages 128 yards per game and McElroy averages 111 yards.

Both teams feature senior quarterback, Corey Pullig for A&M and Max Knake for TCU. Knake has a career 49 touchdown passes, third best in SWC history.

Pullig is second in the SWC in passing efficiency while Knake averages 195 yards per game in total offense.

Last week, the Frogs lost 27-19 to Texas while A&M beat Middle Tennessee 56-14.

A&M coach R.C. Slocum is 6-0 against the Horned Frogs while TCU coach Pat Sullivan is 0-3 against the Aggies.

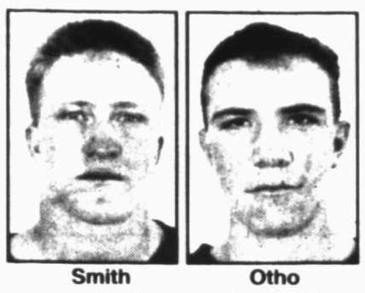
Rangers need turnover-free game

■ Greenwood has had only one miscue-free contest this year as it faces highly-touted Abilene Wylie.

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer



Smith Otho

Greenwood has consistently committed football's cardinal sin this year and gotten away with it. This could be the day the Rangers pay penance.

Greenwood (9-2) takes on Abilene Wylie (10-1) at 2 p.m. at San Angelo's Lake View Stadium. Wylie went to the state semifinals last year and had Texas' No. 7 Class 3A ranking this season before falling to Ballinger. The Rangers have had trouble protecting the ball, and even gave up two fumbles and an interception on their first three possessions in a 24-19 playoff win over Alpine last week.

"I'd just like to see us a play a game error-free one time and see if it makes a difference," Greenwood coach Bob Purser said.

A win in the area round contest would give Greenwood its most playoff victories (two) ever.

The Rangers probably won't be able to turn the ball over their first three possessions and win against the Bulldogs. Purser said Greenwood's only mistake free game this year was Sept. 29 against Alpine, and that was a loss.

"Turnovers are like anything," Purser said. "If you have a problem with it in a ball game the next week you're more attentive to it but then if you have a good ball game you slack off.

"Most of our turnovers come from the personality of our players. It comes from playing hard ... and trying to do too much. It's hard to take that away from them."

While Wylie lost to Ballinger 35-14 the Rangers beat Ballinger the first game of the season 21-6. A more accurate indicator of the teams' strengths may be the similar scores they had against Denver City. The Rangers beat the Mustangs 31-14 Sept. 22 and the Bulldogs eliminated Denver City from the playoffs last week 31-12.

"I don't think you can compare scores," Wylie coach Hugh Sandifer said. "I hope you can't because they beat Ballinger and Ballinger beat us."

But the Bulldogs run an effective pro-style offense with wide receiver-turned-quarterback Steven Thessing having thrown for over 1,200 yards. Wylie running back Dekendrick Woodard, a transfer from Hamlin, has 800 yards rushing and 450 receiving.

"I think the biggest advantage they have is going so far in the playoffs last year," Purser said. "That much playoff experience is hard to beat."

The Ranger wishbone has averaged 275 yards per game with halfback Bucky Smith leading the way with 902 yards. Quarterback Casey Otho has rushed for 643 yards. Quarterback Josh Jones will see more time at running back today.

GREENWOOD NOTES: Many of the seniors on the Ranger team, including offensive linemen Wes Graham, Cale Self, Andy Smith, Cody Stroud and Shaun Fietz, have played together since the fourth grade when they went undefeated in the Greater Midland Football League. "It's been a real close senior class," Purser said. "They have a lot of confidence in each other and I think that's made a difference in how they've handled our adversity this year."

undefeated regular season.

"It was a solid performance, maybe not inspired or spectacular, but solid," Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said. "I think the real measure and the real focus now is the whole ball of wax."

Fiesta Bowl officials said a bids can't be issued until Dec. 3, but they told Osborne and the players to expect an invitation to the Jan. 2 game at Tempe, Ariz.

Nebraska, which led the nation in scoring (54 points) and rushing (413 yards), finished with 271 rushing yards against the nation's 12th-ranked defense, led by 73 yards from Lawrence Phillips. While the offense sputtered, Nebraska's defense scored two touchdowns, forced three turnovers and allowed just 3.8 yards per play.

Oklahoma, which averaged 2.6 turnovers per game, also had nine penalties for 97 yards in the final game between two Big Eight Conference teams.

"Our football team played giveaway throughout the year and that was the story today," Oklahoma coach Howard Schnellenberger said. "I'd really like to see these two teams play with us taking out all our giveaways."

Nebraska opened the scoring on a 31-yard field goal by Kris Brown. On the ensuing possession, linebacker Jamel Williams picked off the third pass by Oklahoma redshirt freshman Eric Moore and returned it 31 yards for a touchdown. It was the fifth interception return for a score by Nebraska this season.

That score did not turn into momentum for Nebraska. The Huskers added a 27-yard field goal by Brown, but punted three times and failed on a fourth-and-15 play on the other first-half possessions.

"They were doing some things that caught us off guard," Frazier said. "They were shifting around up front a lot."

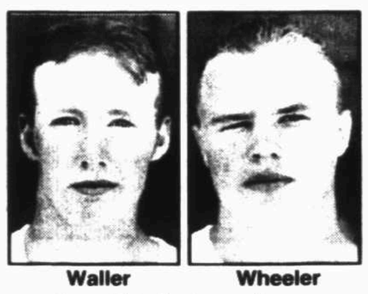
The Sooners offense, however, couldn't do much. Senior Garrick McGee, who replaced Moore after Oklahoma's third possession, completed half of his 30 passes for 159 yards, with one interception.

"I think our offense is just predictable," Sooners tailback Jerald Moore said. "Everybody knows we had to come out and run the ball to be successful. It wasn't a secret at all. They knew what they had to do and they stopped us."

Andrews faces stout Pampa for 2nd time

■ Harvesters whipped Mustangs 34-6 in pre-district game but the District 4-4A runner-up has added more offensive punch.

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer



Waller Wheeler

Andrews' fans can only guess how far their football team has come since the fourth week of the season. But they know exactly how much the Mustangs will have to improve to keep their playoff season going: by 28 points.

The District 4-4A runnerup faces Pampa (9-1) today at Jones Stadium in Lubbock at 2 p.m. in a Class 4A area round playoff. Pampa's Harvesters beat the Mustangs 34-6 on Sept. 29 in Pampa. Andrews coach Mike Lebby thinks his team has gained some offensive punch since then.

"Defensively we've been pretty solid all year long," Lebby said. "Offensively we're much better right now. (Freshman running back Shaud Williams) has something to do with it. And we've settled on a quarterback and those offensive lineman have seven or eight games under their belts."

Pampa did not overwhelm the Mustangs (5-6) in the teams' last meeting. But Andrews turnovers kept the game from being close.

"The first time we played them the stats were pretty even," Lebby said. "But we turned the ball over six times."

Pampa led 14-0 at the half and parlayed two Mustang fumbles and a kickoff return into a 31-0 lead early in the third quarter. The key this time around will be reversing the turnovers. Andrews defense may be able to keep the Harvester in check if it makes Pampa drive the length of the field to score. And the Mustang's offense will have to get some short drive opportunities.

"They give up 119 yards a game and we had 200 yards on them and most of those were on the ground," Lebby said. "We feel like we can move the ball on them, (but) I don't know if we can drive it 80 or 90 yards."

Williams, a halfback in the Mustangs' wishbone who did not play the first time the two teams met, has exploded on the varsity scene in the last two weeks. His 190 yards in Andrews' 20-0 bi-district win over El Paso High gave him 351 yards in the last two games and 831 for the season in limited playing time. Halfback Caleb Waller has also fully recovered from an earlier injury and Lebby likes the way fullbacks Danny Wheeler and Chris Terry have run lately.

But the Mustang coach admits his team will have to throw the ball well to beat Pampa. And that may not be easy. Andrews has completed only six passes for 76 yards in its last two games.

Marcus Bueno will start at quarterback for Andrews and Dewayne Wilkins, who played the position for part of the game against El Paso, will play wide receiver. Despite losing by four touchdowns in the last game between the two teams, Lebby said Andrews' players are anxious to get another shot at the Harvesters.

"We had a problem with that the week before the El Paso game," Lebby said. "The kids were talking about playing Pampa."

Now they can stop talking about it and start doing it.

Pieces of Frank Sinatra's homes to go on auction block for fans to own

NEW YORK — Frank Sinatra sings about "The House I Live In." Now, his fans can own a bit of one.

From a metal mailbox labeled "F. Sinatra" to the singer's Bosendorfer grand piano, many possessions that Sinatra and his wife, Barbara, kept at their former estate in Rancho Mirage, Calif., go on the block Friday at Christie's.

There are 1930s-era radios, a 1976 Jaguar coup, engraved goblets, a John Wayne statue, jade figurines and a collection of American Impressionist paintings highlighted by William Merritt Chase's "A Memory: In an Italian Villa," valued at $450,000.

There's even a golf cart complete with stereo system and the inscription "Ol' Blue Eyes." The estimated value: $4,000 to $6,000.

"We have always loved beautiful things — it's as simple as that," the couple says in a letter included in the sale catalog. "We admire people who paint and sculpt, just as we appreciate the talented composers, lyricists, musicians and performers we've know."

NEW YORK — Yeah, yeah, yeah — the Fab Four still know how to sell records.

The Beatles' "Anthology I" sold 450,000 copies in its first day of release Tuesday, the most single-day sales ever for an album, Capitol Records spokesman Paul Freundlich said.

It includes the first new Beatles song in 25 years, "Free As A Bird," creating by adding new tracks to a tape John Lennon made before his death.

The double CD could break the one-week sales mark set by Pearl Jam in 1993, when the Seattle rockers sold 950,000 copies of "Vs." in its first week of release.

HONG KONG — No sweatpants. No tight, sleeveless T-shirt. No stunts. Jackie Chan traded it all in Friday for a mortarboard, hood and gown.

The kung fu master who left home at 7 to be apprenticed to a drama group received an honorary doctorate from Baptist University "for being an epitome of the striving human spirit, for his distinguished achievements in the film industry and his unrelenting efforts to seek improvement and excellence."

Outside, fans shouted "Da Guo" — big brother. Gowned graduates elbowed reporters to get better photos of their film idol.

"I've won so many movie awards, but never in my life before have I thought of getting an academic degree," Chan said. "I am quite ashamed of myself. I haven't studied much. I am not good at either English or Chinese. I am thinking whether I am worthy of this degree."

To his young fans, Chan sent out one message: "Don't imitate me. Study hard."

LONDON — The Queen Mother is recovering well from her hip replacement operation of 10 days ago, Buckingham Palace said Friday.

Queen Mother is recovering well from hip replacement surgery.

She's "looking forward to a hard winter, so she can go skating in Sandringham," a royal residence in Norfolk, eastern England, said Princess Anne, her granddaughter.

The 95-year-old mother of Queen Elizabeth II has been getting regular visits from her family while she's at King Edward VII's Hospital for Officers in London.

The Queen Mother is expected to remain in hospital at least until the middle of next week. Doctors say the surgery went exceptionally well.

PARIS — Books combining the talents of Andre Breton and other French Surrealists with some of the 20th century's most famous artists are going on the auction block.

At the centerpiece of the sale are 28 manuscripts written by poet Rene Char and illustrated by Pablo Picasso, Joan Miro, Fernand Leger, Jean Arp, Max Ernst, Alberto Giacometti, Georges Braque and Henri Matisse, among others.

Among the 700 books expected to fetch a total of at least $7 million is a copy of Breton's "Le Revolver a Cheveux Blancs" illustrated by Salvador Dali, one of only 10 copies containing original prints, said auctioneer Guy Loudemer, who will bang the gavel on Dec. 1-2 at Drouot, the main auction house in central Paris.

"These books are quite unusual," Loudemer said Friday. "They represent the marriage of three talents — the literary, the visual, and the craftsmanship of the bookbinder."

Kentucky holds off Maryland in opener

The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Top-ranked Kentucky had a rough start and wasn't all that smooth near the finish, but the Wildcats opened the season Friday night with a 96-84 victory over No. 14 Maryland in the Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic.

In this game last year, Arkansas came in as the preseason No. 1 and left a 104-80 loser to Massachusetts.

The start didn't look much better for the Wildcats, who trailed 20-9 5:10 into the game. Then came the familiar swarming defense that ended the Terrapins' easy baskets on length-of-the-court passes. Another strong run to start the second half, again triggered by defense, got Kentucky a 55-38 lead with 14:46 left.

No. 19 Arizona 91, No. 5 Georgetown 81

NEW YORK — Arizona's Ben Davis took charge down the stretch, spoiling a brilliant individual show by Georgetown's Allen Iverson and leading the Wildcats to a 91-81 victory and the Preseason NIT championship Friday night.

In the consolation opener before a crowd of 12,949, No. 25 Georgia Tech got 26 points from freshman Stephon Marbury to defeat No. 16 Michigan 77-61.

After No. 5 Georgetown, down by as many as 17 points in the first half, battled back to finally tie the score at 63 with just under 10 minutes to play, Davis scored seven straight points to put No. 19 Arizona back in front.

He grabbed two key rebounds and made a steal during the crucial stretch that turned the game for the Wildcats (4-0).

No. 10 Iowa 101, No. 6 Connecticut 95 OT

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Kenyon Murray scored three key points in the last minute of overtime and the Iowa Hawkeyes beat back a determined Connecticut comeback for a 101-95 win Friday in the Great Alaska Shootout.

Iowa's Chris Kingsbury scored 27 points in the second half and overtime and made five 3-pointers to pace No. 10 Iowa. He scored 30 points and grabbed seven rebounds.

But it was Murray who made the timeliest shots, first tying the game at the end of regulation then putting it out of reach at the end.

No. 13 Louisville 90, American U. 86

BAYAMON, Puerto Rico — De Juan Wheat made a 3-pointer with 10 seconds left Friday night as No. 13 Louisville held on to beat American University of Puerto Rico 90-86 at the Puerto Rico Shootout.

Led by Joel Curbelo's school-record 47 points — the most ever against Louisville — American kept up with the Cardinals throughout the game. With Louisville leading 87-86 and 1:06 left, American's Miguel Davila missed two free throws.

No. 25 Georgia Tech 77, No. 16 Michigan 61

NEW YORK — Freshman Stephon Marbury celebrated his return to New York on Friday, sparking a second-half Georgia Tech comeback that carried the Yellow Jackets to a 77-61 victory over Michigan and third place in the Preseason NIT.

No. 5 Georgetown played No. 19 Arizona for the tournament title in the second game of the doubleheader at Madison Square Garden.

Michigan (2-2), ranked 16th, capitalized on Georgia Tech's errant 3-point shooting to take the early lead, extending it to 38-32 at halftime.

No. 17 Virginia 84, Tenn.-Martin 65

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Scott Johnson had 11 points and 11 rebounds, and Norman Nolan added 10 points and 11 rebounds Friday night as No. 17 Virginia beat Tennessee-Martin 84-65.

Though Virginia had six players in double figures, the Cavaliers shot only 43 percent (33 of 77) from the field and 63 percent (12 of 19) from the free-throw line in the season-opener for both teams.

Tennessee-Martin also was cold, making 38 percent (24 of 62) from the field and 64 percent (7 of 11) from the line.

The Cavaliers had plenty of second chances, controlling the offensive boards by a 27-22 margin and outrebounding the Skyhawks 55-33. Nolan, a sophomore, had six offensive boards and Johnson grabbed five.

DeWayne Powell beat the Virginia zone defense in the first half with his 3-point shooting, ending the game with 24 points, including 5 of 12 from 3-point distance. Michael Hart added 15 points for the Skyhawks.

Forced outside by the zone much of the game, the Skyhawks made 10 of 28 3-pointers.

Curtis Staples led the Cavaliers with 17 points, Courtney Alexander had 15.

■ SWC Roundup

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Curtis Simmons scored 25 points and Ohio held Texas Christian to four field goals in the second half for an 86-68 win Friday in the Great Alaska Shootout's consolation round.

Bobcats guard Geno Ford added 19, including a perfect nine for nine from the free throw line in the second half.

For the Horned Frogs (0-2) Damion Walker put up 21 points and James Penny scored 20.

TCU looked like easy winners in the first half, but the Horned Frogs' shooting fell apart after the intermission. Ohio (1-1), meanwhile, turned hot.

A Gus Johnson 3-pointer with 12 minutes left tied it at 54, then three tip-ins and a free throw by Simmons over the next four minutes had the Bobcats ahead for good.

Sam Houston St. 82, Baylor 79

WACO — Donnell Booker scored 18 points, one of three Bearkats scorers in double digits as Sam Houston State rallied to spoil Baylor's nonconference opener Friday, 82-79.

Baylor (0-1) lost despite having four players in double figures scoring.

The Bears led 45-33 at the half before the Bears offense went cold. Baylor was 11-of-32 from the field and 10-of-23 from the line during the second half.

Houston 91, Houston Baptist 59

HOUSTON — Former Midland college star Kirk Ford had 24 points while Kenya Capers added 23 to lead Houston past Houston Baptist 91-59 Friday in a nonconference, cross-town battle.

TCU player suffers neck injury

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Christian running back Matt Moore underwent emergency surgery after suffering a neck injury during practice Friday, the school announced.

Moore was listed in serious condition at Harris Methodist Fort Worth hospital after about three hours of surgery. The hospital said further details about his condition would be released Saturday morning.

Details of how he was hurt were not immediately available TCU sports information director Glen Stone said the players were involved in a light, non-contact drill when they noticed Moore lying motionless on the ground.

Moore, a sophomore from Houston, logged extensive playing time this season, replacing starter Andre Davis for four games after Davis was suspended for alleged contact with a professional sports agent.

Through 10 games, Moore has gained 235 yards and caught 10 passes, mostly as a backup.

The Horned Frogs play No. 15 Texas A&M at 2 p.m. on Saturday.

Chatty golfers go for money, Skins

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — The four golfers usually chat and kid each other on the first day. When the money grows more serious on the second day, so do they.

Tom Watson, who won $160,000 with a single putt last year, knows both the fun and the pressure of playing in the Skins Game.

Talking about Peter Jacobsen, who will be making his first appearance in the event, Watson said: "Peter is one of the wittiest players on the Tour and probably will be quite chatty. Actually, there's always a lot of conversation on the first nine holes, then it gets quiet on the back nine. I wonder why?"

Fred Couples, the runnerup all three times he's played the event, said: "In the Skins Game, you start out laughing and giggling, but if you don't get any skins, it gets a lot tougher. It will be intense at certain times, but there still will be a lot to laugh about."

The foursome plays nine holes on Saturday at Bighorn Golf Club, then nine more on Sunday. The first six holes are worth $20,000 each, the next six $30,000, and the last six $40,000.

The low scorer wins a hole, a "skin," and the prize money. If two players tie, however, that money carries over to the next hole and all four players are back in the hunt. The pot builds substantially if a few holes in a row are tied, such as when Watson rolled in a 20-footer on the first playoff hole a year ago to beat Couples and win $160,000.

Watson finished the 1994 event with a winning total of $210,000.

Now 46, Watson played in the first Skins Game against Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and came away with just one skin and $10,000. But he made up for that slow start by winning a total of $430,000 in his other three appearances. Although Couples has never won, he still has gone away from the event with a total of $640,000.

U.S. Open champion Corey Pavin joins Jacobsen as a rookie in the competition.

"Freddie makes a lot of birdies and the format is good for him," Pavin said, sizing up the competition. "Peter is a good ball-striker and will have a lot of good opportunities. Tom is hitting the ball better than he ever has. He knows how to win the skins at the right time."

Although Jacobsen hasn't played in a Skins Game, he's worked them as a member of the telecast team.

"It will be odd without him in the booth," said Vin Scully, who will be the announcer for ABC. "But if I know Peter, we will hear a great deal from him."

Watson, noting that the Skins Game is a pro version of the betting format common among weekend golfers, said, "This raises it to the ultimate level, with four top players competing for a lot of money."

Indiana then scored the final five points in the quarter and rallied to trail 94-85. The Cavaliers, who hit 27 of 31 free throws, then held on for the victory as Terrell Brandon, Mills and Bobby Phills each made two free throws.

BOSTON — Rony Seikaly had 23 points and 10 rebounds to lead Golden State to a win over Boston.

Tim Hardaway added 18 points and nine assists, Chris Mullin scored 15 points and B.J. Armstrong added 11 for the Warriors, who lost their first five road games this season.

Rick Fox led the Celtics with 21 points and Dino Radja had 15 points and nine rebounds. David Wesley, coming off a career-high 37 points in Wednesday's 129-124 win at Charlotte, had 13.

Magic 109, Timberwolves 98

MINNEAPOLIS — Nick Anderson found his shooting touch and scored a season-high 34 points Friday night as the Orlando Magic defeated the Minnesota Timberwolves 109-98.

Anderson, a career 47 percent shooter who entered the game shooting 36 percent this season, made 11 of his first 16 shots as the Magic snapped a two-game losing streak in Minnesota.

Smith's injury won't sideline star for long

IRVING (AP) — You can't keep Emmitt Smith down for long. It looked like the NFL's rushing leader was gone for the season on Thanksgiving Day after he injured his left knee injury and was carted off the field. Instead, he may be able to play next week.

Smith, who has missed only one game due to injury in his pro career, sustained a mild sprain of the medial collateral ligament against Kansas City and could play Dec. 3 when Dallas hosts Washington.

An MRI performed at Baylor University Medical Center on Friday "showed no serious damage," said Cowboys publicist Rich Dalrymple.

"Doctors said Emmitt will be listed as probable day-to-day and he could play next week," Dalrymple said. "Doctors will know more next Monday about his availability against the Redskins."

"Emmitt's MRI is something we can all be thankful for," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said. "Everybody knows his value to this football team. We're not going to rush his recovery.

"We've got 10 days before our next game and we're going to treat his knee and rehab it so that when he returns he'll be 100 percent. Our medical staff is not setting a date for him returning to practice."

Owner Jerry Jones, who two years ago found out the hard way about Smith's value to the team, said "We're thrilled about the news about Emmitt."

Smith missed the first two games of the 1993 season because of a contract dispute with Jones, who quickly yielded to Smith's demands after Dallas lost the two games without him. The Cowboys then rallied to win a second consecutive Super Bowl.

While the news was good about Smith, the 24-12 victory over the Chiefs was costly. Center Ray Donaldson out for the season and the playoffs with a broken right ankle. He underwent two hours of surgery Friday. Guard Derek Kennard will take over at center. Jones had refused to accept Kennard's retirement announcement this summer and enticed him into signing with the Cowboys.

"I'm glad we stuck it out with Derek," Jones said. "I hate to see Ray's season come to an end like this. He was giving us great production at that position," Switzer said. "Derek Kennard will step in and do a great job for us in the middle."

The Cowboys signed Donaldson after Pro Bowl center Mark Stepnoski went to the Houston Oilers.

Smith was carried off the field after he injured his knee on a cutback in the third period against Kansas City. He wasn't touched as he planted his shoe on Texas Stadium's artificial surface, which hasn't been replaced since the facility opened in 1972.

Jones said earlier in the year "we would like to have grass in Texas Stadium but it would be difficult to grow because of the roof. We'll be reviewing some things in the offseason and see what we can do."

Smith also has gone on the record about his distaste for the fake grass. "I always have preferred running on grass," Smith said during training camp. "The turf in Texas Stadium is too hard."

Smith rushed for 56 yards and scored on a 15-yard run before his injury. The touchdown was his 21st of the season, leaving him just three behind John Riggins' NFL record.

Smith is known for his toughness, playing with a separated shoulder in 1993 in a division-clinching win against the New York Giants. He played last year with hamstring problems, only resting in the season finale when playoff spots already were determined. It was the first and only time in his career that he's missed a game because of an injury.

All Smith said Thursday before he left Texas Stadium was: "I'll be all right."

It was a good diagnosis.

Young back for 49ers

The Associated Press

NFLRoundup

Elvis will be at the San Francisco 49ers game Sunday, but he won't be performing — at least at the start.

Steve Young will return at quarterback for the 49ers against the St. Louis Rams after missing five games with a shoulder injury. During that time the 49ers were 3-2 with replacement Elvis Grbac, but two of those wins were big ones against Dallas and Miami in the last two games.

Those two victories enabled the 49ers to tie for first place with Atlanta in the NFC West, one game ahead of St. Louis. The Niners won the first meeting 44-10, as linebacker Ken Norton intercepted two passes by Chris Miller and returned them for touchdowns.

Falcons at Cardinals: Neither team's defense is fearsome, but the Falcons are much better at moving the ball than the Cardinals. Atlanta quarterback Jeff George had two of the top passing performances this season in the NFC (386 against New Orleans and 362 against Detroit).

Patriots at Bills: The Patriots better keep a close eye on wide receiver Bill Brooks if they want to sweep the Bills, the leader of the AFC East. Brooks has scored nine of the Bills' last 11 TDs. New England beat the Bills 27-14 Oct. 23.

Dolphins at Colts: This matchup of teams tied for second place in the AFC East, pits the conference's two top-rated quarterbacks. Not only is the Colts' Jim Harbaugh ranked No. 1 in the AFC, but he's No. 1 in the NFL. Harbaugh, however has completed 52 fewer passes for 598 fewer yards than the Dolphins' Dan Marino, who needs one touchdown pass for an NFL record 343 and another 300-yard game for a record 53rd. Harbaugh, however, has the services of running back Marshal Faulk.

Buccaneers at Packers: The Packers hope to maintain a one-game lead in the NFC Central with a sixth straight victory over the Bucs, tied for second with Chicago and Minnesota. Green Bay quarterback Brett Favre leads the NFL with 25 TD passes.

Bears at Giants: The Giants are on a three-game losing streak and aren't going anywhere. The Bears won't being going anywhere either if they lose a fourth straight game despite having the NFC's No. 3 offense (363.5 yards a game).

Steelers at Browns: Pittsburgh, the leader of the AFC Central, will try to sweep the Browns for the second straight year. The Steelers, No. 1 in the AFC in defense (279.2) shut down the Browns 20-3 Nov. 13. The Steelers' 49 points in a win at Cincinnati last Sunday were the most since they scored 52 against San Diego in 1984.

Bengals at Jaguars: The Jaguars will have to stop the passing of Jeff Blake if they are to beat the Bengals and snap a three-game losing streak. Blake has thrown TD passes in 18 straight games and leads the AFC with 23.

Broncos at Oilers: The Broncos will match the John Elway-led No. 2 passing attack in the AFC (251.4) against the No. 2 AFC pass defense (190.5) of the Oilers. The Oilers also have the AFC's second-ranked defense (287.5).

Eagles at Redskins: The Eagles have won six of their last seven games. Ricky Waters powers the Eagles' No. 2 rushing offense in the NFC (145.8) and needs 119 yards for a second straight 1,000-yard season. The Redskins, with Terry Allen running for 832 yards, have the NFC's No. 3 rushing offense.

Panthers at Saints: A sweep of the Saints would even the Panthers' record and would be their sixth win in the last seven games.

Jets at Seahawks: The Seahawks have scored 104 points in last three games and the Jets have lost three straight games. A victory would give Seattle its first four-game winning streak since 1986.

AUTOMOTIVE TODAY & Classified

Small car is unusually spacious

BY Bob Plunkett
Special to the Reporter-Telegram

Massive house-size machines at an automotive assembly plant in the heartland of Ohio manhandled the steel skeleton of a new compact sedan like it was nothing more than a featherweight pillow.

Proceeding through the vast factory on a series of automated conveyors, the car came together with doors and windows added, along with seats for five and finely crafted interior appointments, plus components of a low-clipped prow featuring smoothly rounded corners and bold new reflector headlights separated by bright chrome grille.

Eventually, quality control inspectors examined the completed product before checking it off as one of some 800 flowing out of the plant each day.

From Ohio, the new car moves to market — either overland to distributors and dealers across the United States or by seaworthy cargo ships which deliver to 55 foreign countries.

Ironically, this car that's built in Ohio and ends up in foreign markets happens to be the revamped new subcompact Civic by Honda of Japan.

And, as the ultimate irony, Japan becomes the primary foreign market that receives these American-made Hondas.

The dramatic revisions for Civic, which traces back in Honda lore to a 1972 introduction, represent a development program of four years that produced the sixth generation of models configured as sedan, coupe and hatchback.

Civic's new hatchback comes out of a Honda factory in Canada, and Civic sedans and coupes come together at Honda's Ohio-production facilities, with 92 percent of components manufactured in North America, including engines.

This categorizes Civic as a domestic vehicle built with American labor — 2,100 work at the East Liberty Assembly Plant where Honda will make 250,000 in a year's time and export 40,000 from Ohio to the world.

For years now, Civic set the pace for the subcompact class due to the quality of the product, its pleasant road manners and an impressive content of comfort features.

For the 1996 upgrade, Civic goes several steps further in terms of quality, performance and comfort, and it looks dramatically revised as well.

Civic's new exterior design appears contemporary and stylish, but vaguely similar to Honda's larger Accord.

All new Civics share a low nose highlighted by those bold headlights.

Inside, an expanded passenger compartment ringed by tall glass increases headroom for riders.

The hatchback, stretched more than four inches longer than before, provides more room for people and also increases cargo space. In addition, a new steeply raked hatch door makes this Civic look more like a classy European design than the typical Japanese.

Two hatchback models, CX and DX, stock a 1.6-liter 4-cylinder aluminum alloy engine generating 106 hp. The two models differ mainly in comfort and appearance items.

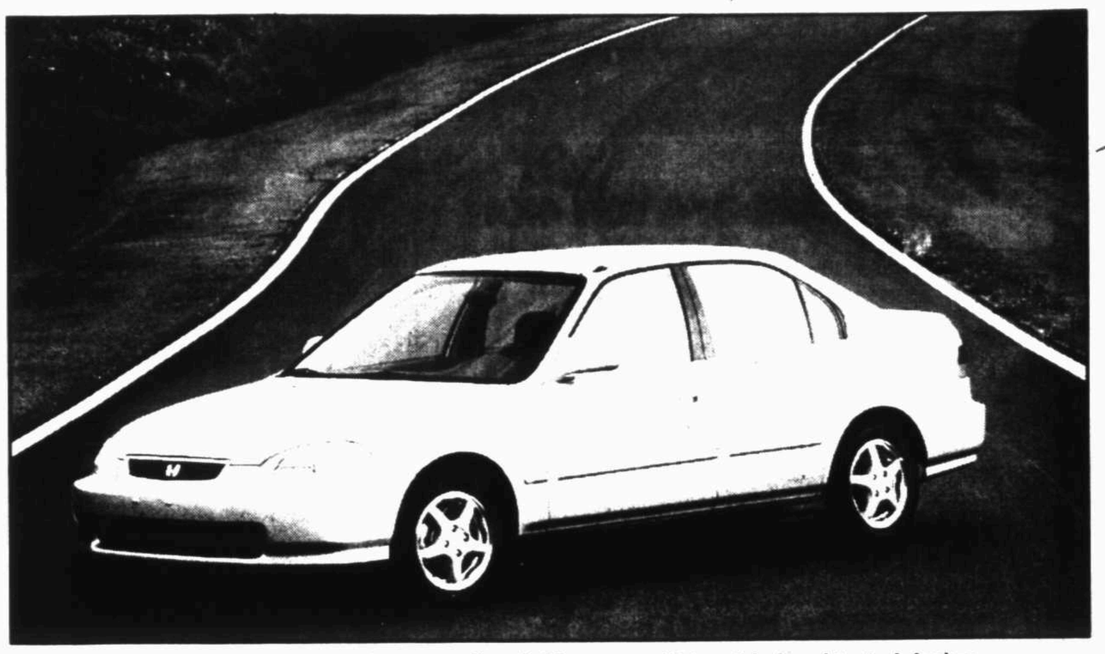
The sedan, with four passenger doors and a more formal outward appearance, supplies a surprising amount of room for riders on the inside, with increases of front and rear space for heads and legs.

Three sedan models use the 106 hp plant in DX and LX trim, while EX gets Honda's efficient VTEC edition with output boosted to 127 hp. Also, the range of conveniences increases with upgrades in trim.

The coupe, sleek with only two doors and a smooth swoop from roof to tail, emerges exclusively from Honda's Ohio plant and offers the same overall length as Civic's sedan so passengers don't compromise for legroom.

Three coupe models — DX, HX and EX — carry different engines and vary the appointments, with DX netting the base 106 hp motor and EX with the VTEC at 127 hp, but new HX gains a highly efficient new lean-burn 115 hp VTEC variation to score as Honda's fuel-economy leader at 45 mpg.

In addition, the Civic HX coupe will offer by mid-year an amazing new continuously variable transmission (CVT) which approaches a manual shifter's fuel economy but delivers virtually undetectable shift transitions.



The reworked Honda Civic makes the most of available space within a tried and tested design.

On rural routes running though Ohio's rolling corn country near the East Liberty Honda plant, pre-production hatchback, sedan and coupe editions of Civic were sampled in models which included three engines and manual 5-speed or automatic 4-speed transmission plus CvT.

Spend a day in these subcompacts as I did recently and another impression quickly surfaces. The passenger cabin with generous room for legs and shoulders when combined with all that window glass makes Civic seem like a much larger car than it actually measures.

It doesn't feel cramped as a typical small car does.

Another important positive impression concerned the precise and exacting way all of Civic's knobs and levers, handles and buttons operate. Everything's tight, exacting and good — conveying to me the image of quality.

As to the safety angle, equipment upgrades range from dual air bags and crumple zones designed in front and rear frames to steel door beams and optional anti-lock brakes.

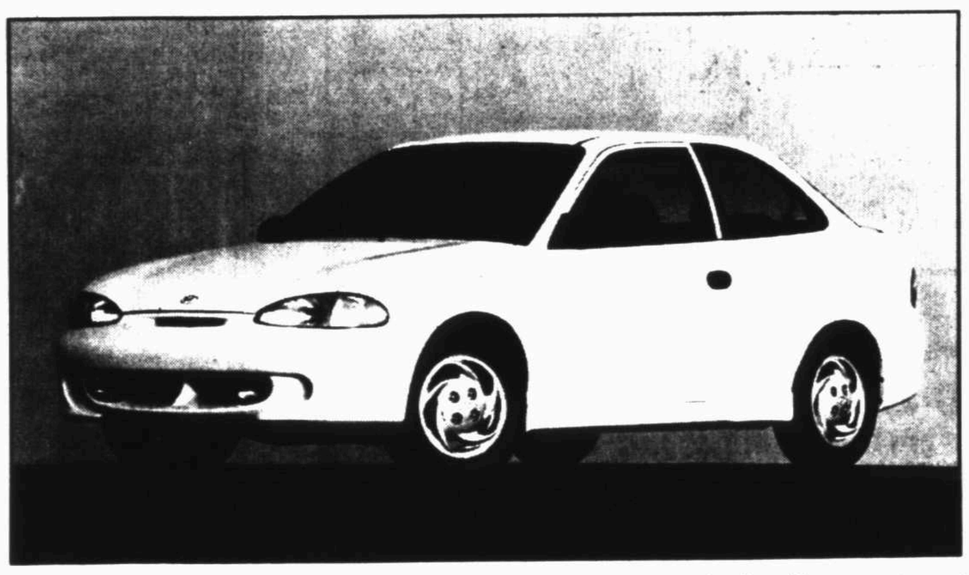
Despite the many improvements for new Civic, Honda pared developmental costs by 30 percent and brings the 1996 issues to market at prices rivaling those of 1995 models.

Accent sets new standard

After proving to buyers from California to New York that the Accent subcompact sedan is not only value-packed but lots of fun, Hyundai is raising that good time quotient to an even higher level with the new sporty Accent GT, scheduled to debut in January 1996.

Available as a three door sporty coupe hatchback, the Accent GT comes with more power, a new sporty appearance and more interior comfort and convenience than ever before. Yet, even with all these added features, this sporty model is still available at a price that even the young at heart and those with a penchant for fun can easily afford.

Accent GT's new features add even more to a vehicle that is already touted as the most technologically advanced in its class. The great looking Accent GT retains the standard Accent model's reliable and durable design benefits, its multitude of safety technology, as well as its many low maintenance features, all of which spell value to even the most cost conscious, savvy consumer.



The existing Alpha engine used in the current Accent has been significantly revised for the GT version. It now has 1 6-valves, dual overhead cams (DOHC), and a 15 percent increase in horsepower over the standard model. The powerplant develops 105 horsepower at 6000 rpm and 101 lb-ft of torque at 4500 rpm. The 1.5-liter engine is fed by multipoint fuel injection.

The sport-tuned suspension, with revised spring rates, shock valving and bushings provides better road control and quicker maneuvering. Complementing the sport-tuned suspension is a set of P175/65HR 14-inch performance tires mounted on alloy wheels, which result in better handling and enhanced performance.

The final drive gear ratio of the Accent GT has also been changed. The 3.842: 1 ratio of the Accent has been dropped to 4.056: 1 to provide better acceleration.

In addition to the new engine and suspension, the GT model receives a host of exterior appointments. Up front, integrated fog lamps complement Accent GT's aggressively styled front fascia, while lower body cladding enhances its sporty appeal. The Accent GT also comes with tinted glass and a rear window wiper-washer for added convenience. Finally, a rear-mounted body color spoiler with an integrated center high mounted stop lamp has been added to the decklid.

On the interior, the Accent GT gets its own unique style treatment as well. The seats and door inserts are trimmed in a sporty GT cloth, while the standard tachometer, leather wrapped steering wheel and gear shift knob give the cockpit a truly sporty feel. For additional comfort, the Accent features rotary-type heater and air conditioner controls, and a driver's side five-way adjustable seat with lumbar support to accommodate a variety of seating preferences.

The Accent GT benefits from the excellent safety equipment also found in every Accent model. There are standard dual air bags and five mile-per-hour bumpers in addition to side impact protection that meets 1997 Federal safety standards. Front and rear crumple zones provide additional protection in the event of an impact and full four-channel anti-lock brakes (ABS) are optionally available for added assurance.

Every Accent GT comes with a sport-tuned four-wheel independent suspension to provide for maximum road control and improved handling. The front suspension features MacPherson struts while the rear is controlled by a dual link design.Standard variably assisted rack-and-pinion steering contributes greatly to the Accent GT's precise road feel and handling. During low speeds and parking maneuvers, the effort required to turn the wheel is modest for ease and comfort. At higher speeds, the steering effort is tighter and more firm for improved stability and control.

1938 CHEVROLET PICKUP

Old Chevy pickups have been popular for years, and they appeal to a growing number of collectors as time goes by.

A bit of history: Following the Depression of 1929-1933, car and truck sales began to pick up again in the mid-1930s; 1936 was a good year, and so was 1937, but then a series of labor strikes and a new business recession hampered the production and sales of 1938 models. As a result, the 1938s have always been scarcer than the '37s and '39s.

In the October 23, 1937 issue of Automotive Industries magazine, the new Chevrolet trucks for 1938 were described. In the light delivery field, the Chevrolet passenger car chassis was used for the "coupe pickup" and "sedan delivery" models. Half-ton models, on the other hand, used the truck chassis, and included the pickup, panel-canopy express and Carryall Suburban (a large, metal bodied station wagon).

The 3/4-ton and 1-ton capacity Chevrolet trucks included pickup, stake, and panel models, on a 122 1/4-inch wheelbase. The heavy duty ton-and-a-half models included pickup, stake, canopy-express and panel models on a 131 1/2inch wheelbase, and high-rack, stake express, and stake models on a long 157-inch wheelbase.

A 201-inch-wheelbase Chevrolet school bus chassis was also available in 1938.

One-and-a-half-ton models had heavy-duty steel artillery wheels with no hub caps and with five semicircular holes in them, which helped to keep the brakes cool.

By the way, in case you're wondering—a stake truck is a flatbed type with attachable wooden or steel sidewalls that hold the payload in place. Canopy trucks have a raised roof above the bed in back, to protect the cargo from the weather.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1991 Buick Park Avenue with 70,000 miles on it. After the car has been running for over an hour, it will shudder or jerk while going up hills. I had the Buick dealer work on the car. They rebuilt the transmission, and replaced the ignition coil and gave it a full engine tune-up. They even replaced the computer. The car seems to run better, but still has the jerking and shudder up hills. Can you help? Bill S.

Dear Bill: With all the new parts installed, you know it was none of the above. This reminds me of a car in my shop a week ago with the same complaint. A lot of parts were replaced, and I told the owner it would now be easier to locate the problem. But there were no trouble codes in the computer and nothing showed up on a complete engine test. We went for a short road test with a fuel pressure gauge taped to the outside of the windshield and a portable lab scope connected to the oxygen sensor. A shop technician drove and I monitored the test equipment. Up a hill we went and part way up the car started to jerk. At this point the fuel pressure was below specs and the oxygen sensor voltage was zero. This indicated a lean condition (not enough fuel). Once at the shop, a check of the gas filter was done first; it was unrestricted. The next step was to pull out the fuel tank to check the electric fuel pump. Sure enough, the small rubber hose between the fuel pump and metal fuel line was leaking gas back into the tank. A piece of new hose and the car was repaired. I would suggest the same method of testing with your car.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1992 Chrysler LeBaron six-cylinder. Sometimes when the engine is hot and I try to restart it, the engine will stall unless I keep my foot on the gas pedal. The dealer has checked the car many times on the computer and cannot find the problem. If I let the car sit for a few hours, it will start up and run fine. G.D.

Dear G.D.: The idle speed and gas flow are metered by the computer from various sensors. If a sensor is out of range and has not completely failed, it will not cause the power loss light or in other vehicles a check engine light, to illuminate. When the sensor does not send a proper signal to the computer, the computer acts on what it sees. Remember the computer is nothing more than a big calculator. It has limitations. The first thing the technician has to do with your car is check all the basics: carbon in the throttle body, coolant sensor resistance, minimum idle air rate, throttle position, fuel pressure, idle speed motor, and the EGR valve. There is the possibility of carbon build-up on the intake valves that acts like a sponge and absorbs the gasoline. When the engine is hot, less gas is injected into the engine. You can have the fuel injectors cleaned and then use one can of the Mopar fuel injector cleaner into the gas tank.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1990 Chevrolet Astro Van. The problem I have is when traveling at 70 miles per hour and going up an incline, the transmission down-shifts and I get a vibration and shudder until the down-shifting is complete. This started at 40,000 miles. Is there anything that can be adjusted? C.H.

Dear C.H.: The problem sounds like the torque converter clutch is slipping when unlocking. There are many updates for the transmission. I suggest you get to a transmission shop to have this problem repaired before you have to have a complete transmission overhaul.

Dear Doctor: In 1992, I purchased a used 1989 Lincoln Town Car. Luckily, I did not have any major trouble till now. Recently I have had to add a quart of oil every six weeks. I have checked for oil leaks and there is none. I would be very grateful for any advice you could give me. J.P.

Dear J.P.: Oil consumption is not uncommon in some of today's engines. For the 302 V-8 in your car, have the technician check the PCV system and the small mesh breather under where the PCV valve sits. A clogged mesh screen can cause all your problems.

Dear Doctor: I just bought a 1987 Dodge Omni 5 speed manual transmission with 37,000 miles on it. Whenever I start out slowly, the clutch seems to grab and sometimes the engine stalls. When traveling at 35 miles per hour, when I let up off the gas pedal, sometimes the car will jerk F.B

Dear F.B.: The grabbing and chattering usually indicate either oil is on the clutch or there are heat spots on the clutch assembly. If either of these exists, the clutch must be replaced. The jerking could be caused by releasing the gas pedal, engine timing, fuel management, or an emission problem.
