Industrious spy

WASHINGTON — Aldrich Ames was an industrious mole in the CIA. During one tour of duty, the secret material he slipped to his Soviet employers represented a stack of documents 15 to 20 feet high, CIA Director John Deutch said Friday in the first extensive public assessment of the worst spy case in U.S. history. During the nine years Ames passed information to Soviet and then Russian intelligence, Deutch said, he caused "severe, wide-ranging and continuing damage to U.S. national security interests." In addition to Deutch's assessment, the Senate Intelligence Committee made public a CIA inspector general's report on the CIA's handling of information from sources controlled by the KGB. Some of that information went to the president and other policy makers without any indication it came from tainted sources. Story page 5B

Council OKs citywide vote for new terminal

■ Officials vote 6-1 in favor of voters' petition for referendum on $30 million terminal building at Midland International Airport.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland City Council in a 6-1 vote on Friday approved a voters' petition for a citywide referendum on the new $30 million terminal building at Midland International Airport.

Groundwork for the project is under way; $1.6 million has been spent on the project, according to the council.

"I believe very strongly that it is going to be very close vote," Mayor Bobby Burns said following the council's acceptance of the petition, which was led by corporate pilot Tom Dollahite, a former council candidate.

"And we are going to have to tell our story very straightforwardly and very honestly and get the facts to (the public)," Burns said.

Dollahite, who was out of town on Friday, expressed pleasure in the upcoming referendum, which is set for the spring.

"I think democracy is regaining its life in Midland," Dollahite said Friday night in a telephone interview. "It would be a vote of the people — that's democracy in action."

Dollahite said he is pleased that "the City Council has reached a reasonable and just decision in this matter. ...

"I am looking forward to the facts coming out and the voters being able to voice their opinion," Dollahite said. "I would like to humbly thank all the people who diligently labored in this petition drive."

Attorneys wrap up closing arguments; case goes to jurors

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A verdict was not reached Friday in the capital murder trial of Brandon Richardson. Jurors are to return Monday morning to continue their deliberation.

Richardson, 20, faces charges of capital murder in the Aug. 25, 1994, shooting deaths of Augustine "Guero" Vidal and Roumaldo "Raymond" Gonzalez, both 18. The shooting occurred at 938 N. Dallas St.

The charge is capital murder because more than one person was killed during the same crime.

The state is not seeking the death penalty in the case, so if Richardson is found guilty of capital murder he will automatically receive life in prison.

If he is found guilty of capital murder the trial will end. If, however, he is found guilty of the lesser crimes of murder, voluntary manslaughter or attempted murder, the sentencing phase will begin.

The trial began Tuesday in 142nd District Court in Midland.

Defense attorney Tom Hirsch claims Richardson shot the four men that night in self defense when they were attacking him.

In addition to the shootings of Vidal and Gonzalez, Richardson is accused of shooting Isa "Bullet" Romero and Program's officers honor volunteers for their valuable community work

By Gary Shanks

A local volunteer organization is bursting at the seams with eager members even though it is only two years old.

Members of the Retired & Senior Volunteer Program number more than 300, and at least 200 of them were present at a luncheon in their honor Friday at Green Tree Country Club.

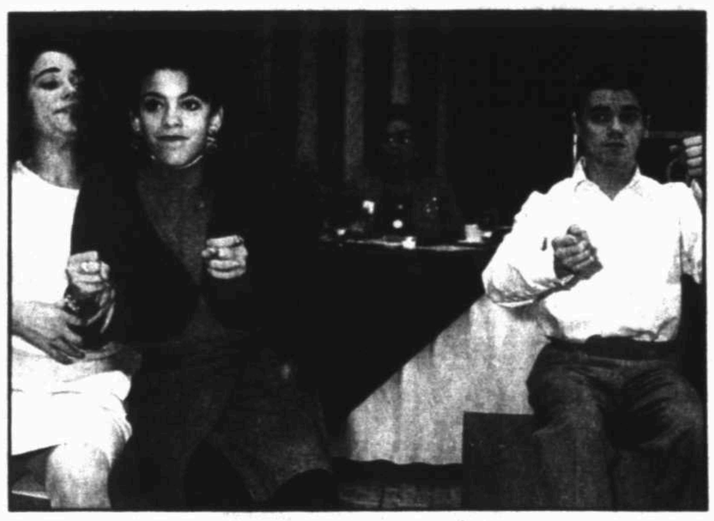

Despite the newness of the organization, its volunteers already have become a valuable asset to the community, said RSVP Director Carla Curtner.

RSVP volunteers can be found all over Midland, donating their time at places like Casa de Amigos, Habitat for Humanity, Midland Need to Read, Meals on Wheels and even local government offices.

RSVP members can be found teaching literacy skills to adults and children, picking up trash, planting trees, building and repairing homes, stuffing envelopes for various local causes and performing all manner of other services in the community, Ms. Curtner said.

In honor of the service of these volunteers, Ms. Curtner and RSVP Volunteer

'Montanabahn': Residents question hazards of no daytime speed limit

By David Foster
Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. — Mike Spear is ecstatic about Montana's new highway speed limit, which by day is virtually no limit at all.

"It's a blast going fast," said the 16-year-old. He snowboards fast, skis even faster, and pushes his mom's car to 90 mph — making a lot of other drivers nervous.

Montanans, who groused for years about speed limits that paid no heed to the West's wide open spaces and empty highways, on Friday got what they demanded with a nationwide lifting of federal controls.

Now, however, in interviews and a statewide poll, many are expressing second thoughts about their new "Montanabahn."

"I have a feeling there are going to be horrendous accidents," Dennis Balian said Friday. "This is the land of the free and the brave, with an emphasis on the brave."

Chechnya gains new freedoms with accord

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia and the Kremlin-backed government in Chechnya signed a political accord Friday giving the separatist republic some new freedoms but denying it full sovereignty.

The accord was signed at the Kremlin by Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, President Boris Yeltsin's envoy to Chechnya, Oleg Lobov, and Doku Zavgayev, head of the Moscow-backed Chechen government.

Rebels, who have been battling Moscow for independence for a year, were not involved in drafting the agreement.

Zavgayev praised the accord as a step toward a formal treaty, to be signed after Chechen elections on Dec. 17 and the adoption of a new constitution.

"The agreement opens a new page on ways of reviving peace in the republic," Zavgayev told a news conference. "It will contribute to political stability and bring peace."

Chernomyrdin told reporters the pact "gives Chechnya equal rights with other republics integrated into Russia, and will be put into effect within the framework of the Russian Constitution."

It allows Chechnya to open diplomatic offices abroad and conduct international trade, and offers protection for rebels who turn over their guns, Zavgayev said.

"We have to forgive things ... where it is possible," he said.

The accord also clears the way for the elections to be held in Chechnya for the Russian parliament and for new local leadership.

Rebels have threatened to disrupt the elections, saying no vote can take place until Russian troops leave. But Zavgayev said adequate security measures were in place and the balloting will go ahead as scheduled.

He said the agreement reflected "the sentiments of people in Chechnya and their attitude to the coming elections in a republic where no elections have been held in five years."

The signing Friday came nearly a year after about 40,000 Russian troops poured into Chechnya to crush the secessionist drive of leader Dzhokhar Dudayev. Tens of thousands of people died in the fighting, and many cities and towns were destroyed.

The Interfax news agency said Friday a total of 1,928 Russian soldiers have died since the outbreak of hostilities, including deaths from wounds, diseases or in accidents.

New York-based Human Rights Watch harshly criticized Russia's handling of the war, saying in a report released Friday that it was waged "with total disregard for humanitarian law, causing thousands of needless civilian casualties."

The report said both sides in the conflict were guilty of human rights abuses, including torture, illegal detentions and the execution of prisoners.

The report also criticized Russia's human rights record in other areas, saying police brutality and Russian xenophobia had produced "a brutal state-sponsored campaign against dark-skinned people ... since 1993."

The Russian army was singled out for abuse of conscripts. "The rate of death due to abuse of recruits remained unchanged at 3,000 in 1995," the report said.

Search for missing Russian airliner moves into Pacific: Overloading may have caused crash

MOSCOW (AP) — Navy ships with sophisticated equipment scanned the waters of the Pacific Ocean into the early hours Saturday as the search for a missing Russian airliner shifted from land to sea.

No trace has been found of the Tupolev-154 that disappeared from radar screens early Thursday with 97 people on board and is presumed to have crashed.

The plane — which belonged to Khabarovsk Airlines, a regional offshoot of Aeroflot — lost radio contact shortly after it took off from Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk on Sakhalin Island. It was scheduled to stop over in Khabarovsk on the mainland before continuing on to Novosibirsk in Siberia.

Russia's Independent Television reported Friday night that the passenger plane was carrying 5 tons of caviar. A report by a Russian aviation committee last year said planes often are overloaded to make extra money.

Military and civilian helicopters and planes suspended their search Friday night because of darkness. Navy ships continued scanning the Tatar Strait into the night, the ITAR-Tass news agency said, quoting the Emergency Situations Ministry.

Strong winds and waves nearly 10 feet high hampered the search, ITAR-Tass said.

There was conflicting information on whether the plane crashed on water or land.

The Emergency Situations Ministry said it believed the plane may have crashed in the strait near the western coast of Sakhalin Island, ITAR-Tass said.

But Sergei Ogloblin of the Far Eastern Civil Defense and Emergency Committee said control tower logs and experts' reports show the airliner crossed the Tatar Strait and crashed on the mainland, the Interfax news agency said. He said the plane was last detected 130 miles east of Khabarovsk.

Since helicopters and planes have thoroughly surveyed the land the airliner was supposed to fly over and found no sign of it, the search was increasingly focused on the sea.

The Pacific Fleet had a frigate and a small anti-submarine ship in the area. Three other ships with deep-sea and bottom-scanning search equipment were preparing to assist the search, reports said.

Shipping companies and fishing boats also were helping.

The missing plane had been in operation since 1976 and had flown a total of 30,000 hours, according to Russian news reports. ITAR-Tass quoted pilots as saying it had been overhauled four times and was likely to have experienced technical problems.

WEATHER WATCH

It's finally beginning to feel like winter

Staff Report

Today's temperatures will rise only to a high of between 35-40 with northeast winds blowing 5-15 mph, according to a forecaster at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The winds should become southeasterly later in the afternoon with skies becoming mostly clear tonight with a low between 20-25.

Sunday should be mostly sunny and warmer with a high in the mid-50s.

After an overnight low of 41, Friday's high reached 69, compared to the record high for that date of 83 set in 1977. The record low was zero set in 1994.

STATE

DALLAS (AP) — Cowboys in the Panhandle turned their ponies out of the blustery north wind Friday as a bone-chilling arctic cold knifed deep into Texas.

The front was preceded by showers and thundershowers that soaked much of North Texas and promoted Forest Service officials in East Texas to cancel an outdoor burning ban in 19 counties.

Winds ahead of the front were light and variable but brisk at 20 to 30 mph from the northwest behind it. Skies were gray over much of the state, with glimmers of sunshine in the west.

By evening, the front draped a cold, wet blanket across the northwest half of the state. As freezing temperatures approached, Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer urged Texans to cover outside faucets, wrap pipes and allow indoor and outdoor faucets to drip slightly.

The North Texas forecast: button up. Texans will be shivering in the sunshine today with highs only in the mid 30s to mid 40s. Tonight will be clear and continued cold with lows from 17 degrees in the northeast to mid 20s in the west. Sunday will be partly cloudy and warmer with highs in the upper 40s to mid 50s.

South Texas is to be clear and cold today with highs in the 40s and 50s and a stout north wind at 15 to 25 mph. Tonight will be clear and colder. Lows from near 30 inland to the 40s along the coast. Sunday will be partly cloudy with highs in the 50s.

LIMIT: Montanans have mixed feelings about speed

(From 1A)

tana's replacement of 65 mph interstate limits with the more ambiguous requirement that drivers be "careful and prudent" and speeds be "reasonable and proper."

Balian rested both hands casually at the bottom of his steering wheel, talking while his Chevy pickup sailed along at 75 mph on Interstate 90 between Billings and Bozeman, where he develops real estate.

The temperature was 10 below zero. Fog billowed up from the Yellowstone River, which shares the valley with the highway. Dry snow swirled and settled an inch thick on the highway's shoulder, but wind had swept the traveling lanes clean and dry — "almost like summer," Balian said. In 40 miles, he passed just two cars. No one passed him.

"This seems pretty reasonable to me," he said.

Traffic Friday stayed mostly within the 70 to 80 mph range, highway officers reported. One motorist was stopped doing 92 mph on Interstate 15 near Helena, but he was let off with a written warning.

Most Montanans favor the change. A state highway study this year showed that half of all drivers exceeded the 65 mph limit on Montana's interstates. Two-thirds ignored the 55 mph signs on two-lane highways.

Yet many residents also worry that abolishing specific limits altogether is not the answer. Sixty percent favor some limit on interstates, according to a poll of 408 Montanans conducted Dec. 1-4 by Montana State University-Billings.

Montana's quirky status as the only state without daytime speed limits follows a long-running feud with the federal government. It began in December 1973, at the height of energy shortages caused by the Arab oil embargo.

Congress required states to set freeway speed limits at 55 mph or lose federal highway funds. Most states obliged, initially seeing it as their contribution to energy conservation and then, as highway deaths decreased, as an effective safety measure.

Not so in Montana. State legislators set a 55 mph limit, but defiantly pegged the speeding fine at just $5 — a pittance payable directly to the highway patrol officer.

Violations didn't count against driving records, and some Montanans simply kept a stash of $5 bills over the visor, ready to pay and go.

"The joke goes that if you got pulled over, you'd just give the officer a $20 bill, then tell the next three guys you already paid," Balian said.

When Congress and President Clinton told the states to decide their own speed limits, Montana stood ready, having passed legislation decreeing a return to 1973's "proper and reasonable" standard.

Blame it on the West's vast and lonesome spaces. The 55 mph limit — raised in 1987 to 65 mph on rural highways — has never been popular in the West. From North Dakota to New Mexico, Colorado to Nevada, drivers hurtle from one remote outpost to the next like spaceships through a universe of grass and sage, sand and rock.

A car going 65 mph takes more than 10 hours to cross Montana. Go 80 mph, and you shave off two hours.

Drive east on Interstate 94 from Billings, whose 87,000 residents make it Montana's largest city. It will be 145 miles to the first town with a traffic light — the aptly named Miles City, pop. 8,400.

Until Friday, distances like these made an outlaw of Geraldine Custer, the Rosebud County clerk. She drives the 100 miles to Billings twice a month or so to go shopping. It takes her just over an hour.

"I don't feel 80 mph is excessive," said Custer, who in two years has put 45,000 miles on her 1993 Honda Accord.

Others question whether it's wise for Montana to take a leap back to 1973, when the nation's highway mortality rate was twice what it is today. Montana's highway death rate remains high — 2.3 fatalities per 100 million vehicle miles, well above the national rate of 1.8, according to the National Safety Council.

"A lot of people are kind of concerned that it's going to be a rat race out there; they're afraid they're going to be eaten alive," said Highway Patrol officer Tom Olds, patrolling near Helena.

"A lot of motorists will be driving beyond their abilities," predicted officer Paul Hazelton of Miles City. "Over 70 mph, an air bag won't do much for you. You take your eyes off the road for a second and drop a wheel off the edge of the road ... We're going to be going out there and picking up the pieces."

"I have concerns that our death rate will increase," echoed Albert Goke, chief of the state's Highway Traffic Safety Bureau.

But he notes that Montana's highways are not entirely without limits. Nighttime limits remain — 65 mph on the freeways, 55 mph on two-lane highways — with stiff penalties for speeding.

Trucks are limited to 65 on the freeways at all times.

And the $5 ticket is history, replaced by an average $70 fine for violating the "reasonable and proper" rule, Goke said.

Until the Legislature meets in January 1997, motorists will be testing what highway patrol officers think is "reasonable and proper." Various Montanans have their own definitions.

TRIAL: Double-murder case goes to jury

(From 11)

Joe Olgin during the same incident.

Both sides rested their cases Thursday and made closing arguments Friday. The jury began deliberating about 3 p.m. Friday.

During closing arguments, Hirsch said Vidal provoked the fight with Richardson and that it was reasonable for Richardson to believe that with multiple assailants his life was in danger and he had to shoot to protect himself.

He said Richardson was entitled to defend himself. He said the shootings should not constitute capital murder.

"This is not the purpose of this statute ... he shot in self-defense," Hirsch said.

"If Brandon didn't have that gun that night you'd be looking at photos of him at the trials of Augustine Vidal, Raymond Gonzalez and Isa Romero," Hirsch said.

He asked the jurors to put themselves "in the shoes of Brandon Richardson on Aug. 25, 1994, and see if he acted reasonably or unreasonably."

Midland County Assistant District Attorney John Westbrook told the jury that Richardson shot those men because he was getting beat up and told the jury if they let him off they will be sending a message that it is OK "to pack heat."

He said Richardson wasn't carrying the gun because he was afraid for his life, but carried the gun because of the people he associated with.

He said Richardson was involved in another shooting just a month before the one he is on trial for. Richardson was apparently with Melvin Hill when he reportedly shot a man for bumping his car.

Westbrook called Richardson a "punk kid" who carried a gun and used it when he got mad.

"If you think this is self-defense, then you better put a morgue in every elementary school, junior high and high school in town," Westbrook said.

Richardson remains in the custody of the Midland County Detention Center.

APPROVE: Council OKs referendum for terminal

(From 1A)

As a member of the petition committee, Dollahite said, "I certainly intend to cooperate fully with the City Council to ensure that we have a just and fair vote. ..."

While 5,076 people signed the petition, only 3,818 signatures were verified as valid by Lyn Miller, interim city secretary. The 3,818 signatures fell short of the city charter's required 10 percent, or 4,822, of the city's registered voters for a called election. The valid signatures represented 8 percent.

City Attorney Keith Stretcher told the council that the petition was invalid under the city charter. However, the Texas Certificates-of-Obligations Act provides for a called-referendum election if 5 percent of the voters sign the petition, he said.

The petition has "some technical difficulty," since it didn't include voter-registration numbers of the signers, the dates of their signatures, and an affidavit, Stretcher said. Despite that, he acknowledged that courts have ruled similar petitions were substantially complete.

The city's bond counsel, Mark Westergard — who recommended that the petition be approved — said that the city's requested $21 million in certificates of obligations to finance the bulk of the construction could not be sold until the petition issue was resolved.

The indebtedness incurred in the sale of those certificates would be paid off through airport revenues.

In the subsequent vote, called by Jim Webb, Jose Cuevas cast the only dissenting vote.

"This petition is wrong," Cuevas said.

He said the petitioners stumbled onto the state law that allowed the 5 percent vote in referendums in certificates-of-obligation issues. "I don't think they have done what they were supposed to."

Webb said "the odds are overwhelming that the citizens will vote for approval of the new terminal building" and that the City Council members would "do our best to calmly inform the public of all the facts" involving airport construction.

While council member Pat Schneider had no quarrel with the concept of the petition, she said she was angry that the petition had not been circulated two years earlier when public hearings were held on the proposed airport project.

"I am furious ... (the people who initiated the petition) are wrong."

Mayor Pro-Tem Juluis Brooks said he is "confident that this terminal will be built. We don't want to stop the progress of the city of Midland."

In agreeing to call the election, Dale Brown said he had "more confidence in the people of Midland" to decide the airport's fate than he did in a judge if the petition were to go to court.

Berry Simpson, who is new to the governing body, said he had assumed that the airport project was "a done deal" and was beyond formal protest.

City Manager Mike McGregor said the six-month delay in airport construction while the election is being prepared would amount to $600,000 in "inflation cost," in addition to the $10,000 cost of holding the election.

Burns thinks the voters will favor the new airport building once they understand that the building is "not going to cost them one red cent. Midland taxpayers (will) pay nothing. ... (The) whole region (would) pay for the terminal" through airport usage fees, including the $3-per-boarding PFC (passenger facility charge).

Research indicates that 60 percent of the airport's paying customers live outside Midland County.

"We need to plan for this whole region," Burns said. "It's not just Midland's air terminal; it's the region's. I believe the people of Midland will stand up and say, 'This is the right decision' — to build the $30 million facility. And the facts bear it out."

Burns said the indebtedness incurred in the $21 million in certificates of obligation would be paid off in 20 years.

In a prepared statement that he read before the vote, Burns said the council "should hold the election not because we have to, but because it is the right thing to do."

The mayor said those who promoted the petition were obstructionists and "have done the wrong things for the city and for the wrong reasons. Mr. Dollahite seems to be saying 'we don't need a new airport terminal because Midland will dry up and blow away in 20 years.'

"In order to prevent Mr. Dollahite's future, we must build the airport facility, and we must double our efforts to make the future vital and successful."

In justifying the petition, Dollahite said the petitioners were "following the (called-elections) provisions of the city charter, which can be amended at any time by the City Council. The city charter does not restrict or set any time limitation or any subject limitation, including recall elections.

Don Kyser, who joined Dollahite in promoting the petition, said "the taxpayers of Midland are the ultimate guarantors" on the airport indebtedness should the city default on debt payments. "That's why we should have a right to vote."

Kyser said he thinks "the mayor and the council are doing a good job, and I hope they won't take this petition as a personal affront."

Former Mayor G. Thane Akins said following the 6-1 vote that the need for the airport project is "so obvious and the financing is so obvious that it doesn't take much of a rocket scientist to see that."

City Council members and Midland International Airport advisory board members have been consistently unanimous in supporting the project, Akins said.

Akins said the proposed election is really "not a democratic process, and that's the unfairness of it. Sixty percent of those who pay for it are outside the city of Midland and cannot vote.

"Probably less than half of our population in Midland fly. They have the right the vote, but they are not paying for it. So, it's a very unfair process to have this kind of referendum.

"I have no problem at all with people having their say," Akins said. "But this is not the way to do it. A complex question (such as the airport project) takes hours of study of experts. ... The man on the street doesn't have time to do this. But we've got to educate the man on the street in order to have this referendum."

City Hall chamber was packed by airport-project supporters. Midland private pilot Earl Erdmann said he signed the petition but then withdrew his name. "I was misled ... to believe that my taxes would go up" if the project were completed.

His father, pilot-airport supporter Paul Erdmann, said the existing airport terminal is "a disgrace. It's decayed and cancerous. The airport is rotten from the inside out," he said. "Everything needs repair. The federal government doesn't pay you to do renovative work."

Midlander John Lowe said he signed the petition, since "I think the citizens need to help clear the air. Let's have the election and do our homework properly."

CHECK: Officers honor volunteers

(From 1A)

Coordinator Saul Herrera created a symbolic check for $160,000 that represents the benefit to the city from the more than 20,000 volunteer hours.

"It's probably much more than that, if I could get all of you to turn your time sheets in," Ms. Curtner said, joking with the luncheon crowd.

At the luncheon, this symbolic check was presented to Monette Burke, Health & Senior Services administrator for the city of Midland.

Volunteers present received praise for their efforts, which have greatly benefited several long-standing and crucial community services such as Meals On Wheels, said Connie Glover, executive director of Community & Senior Services.

"What you do for this community cannot be measured in money," said Orland Purcell, a board member for Community & Senior Services. "What you do for this community is — you keep it alive ...," he said.

Midland Community Theatre's Pickwick Players presented a skit written specifically for RSVP volunteers.

County Judge Jeff Norwood and County Commissioner Guy McCrary also were on hand to show their support for the burgeoning program.

RSVP is growing in numbers and in scope each year, Ms. Curtner said. A new program for 1996 is being planned to help children in the Washington Park area, Ms. Curtner said.

Miners fight police over French strike

PARIS (NYT) — A wave of strikes that has paralyzed much of France swept into a third week Friday as miners fought with the police in the east of the country and the government abandoned a position of unyielding aloofness by opening negotiations with striking rail workers.

There was no immediate sign of a breakthrough, and it appeared certain that the strikes — staged to protest France's attempts to streamline its overburdened state sector, trim social programs and cut chronic budget deficits — would continue at least until Tuesday, when labor unions are planning demonstrations.

Twenty-eight miners and a policeman were injured in violence Friday in eastern Lorraine, where 4,000 striking miners wielding crowbars and hurling rocks set fire to an office building at a mine and invaded a power station. The police fired tear gas and stun grenades at the miners, who are protesting cuts in subsidies that would lead to layoffs.

A government-appointed mediator opened talks with railroad unions and appeared to make a first concession by agreeing to delay the signing of a contested five-year plan to reform the state-owned railways, which are losing about $2.4 billion a year. The plan would end some rail services and overhaul the company's pension scheme.

But the postponement seemed unlikely to have any immediate impact on the strike.

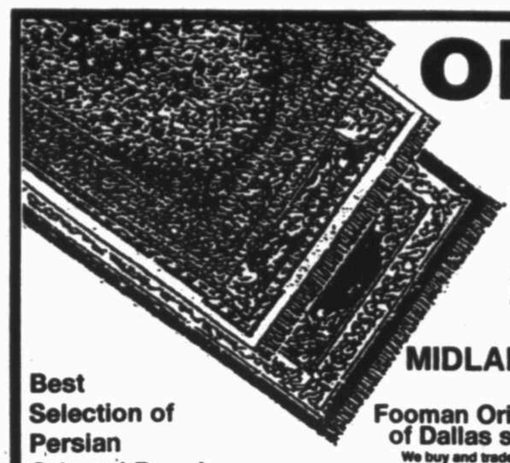

Railroad workers, echoing the sentiments of many state employees, say the plan would threaten their jobs and pensions. Unemployment is already about 11.5 percent.

But beyond the specific complaints, there seems to lurk a far deeper malaise. It is this that makes the duration of the strike, and the terms on which it might be settled, particularly hard to predict.

"The government tells our people that the only objective is to fight against deficits and debt," Charles Pasqua, a former interior minister with a keen sense of the sentiment in the French heartland, told the weekly magazine L'Express. "But you cannot run this country as you would run a board of directors. The French need dreams, they need hope and they need passion."

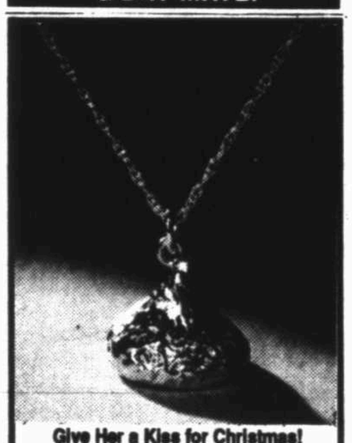

At present the integration of Europe, the project in whose name the budget cuts and reforms of Prime Minister Alain Juppe are being presented, seems to offer very little in the way of dreams, hope or passion.

Indeed French workers increasingly see the Maastricht Treaty of European Union, which calls for the introduction of a single European currency by 1999, as synonymous with job cuts, austerity, declining benefits and general joylessness.

IRA holds up peace talks to haggle over guns

LONDON (AP) — The Irish Republican Army's determination to stick to its guns has stymied Northern Ireland peace talks just one week after President Clinton seemed to have revived negotiations.

Under pressure to show progress before Clinton arrived in the region last week, Britain and Ireland agreed to set aside their disagreement on disarming the IRA and set late February as a target for all-party talks to begin.

In addition, an international commission, led by former Sen. George Mitchell of Maine, was formed to seek compromise on the future of IRA and pro-British "loyalist" arsenals.

But in an uncompromising statement Thursday, the IRA said this "back door" approach will remain closed until its allied Sinn Fein party gains full entry to negotiations on Northern Ireland's future.

Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams endorsed the IRA line Friday, arguing that "disarmament is both achievable and necessary as part of an evolving peace process, but without dialogue everything's impossible."

Britain has insisted that the IRA must start to disarm before Sinn Fein can join multiparty talks on the future of the British-ruled province.

The hopes that were raised with Clinton's visit a week ago may have suffered a further jolt Friday when a man was shot to death near Queen's University in central Belfast. The motive was unknown and no one immediately claimed responsibility.

Prime Minister John Major of Britain called the Sinn Fein and IRA statements "a slap in the face" to the huge crowds who cheered Clinton during his visit to the British-ruled north and independent south of Ireland.

"Gerry Adams had better make up his mind what he wants," Major said. "Is Gerry Adams the man who wants to help bring peace to Northern Ireland or is he a straightforward spokesman for a terrorist organization who continues ... putting a bottleneck in the way of peace?"

Leaders of the province's pro-British Protestant majority, meanwhile, said the IRA statement confirmed their argument for demanding disarmament in the first place.

"Sinn Fein and the IRA are bluntly saying, 'We don't care what anyone else does or says — we are holding onto our guns'," said Peter Robinson, deputy leader of the Rev. Ian Paisley's Democratic Unionist Party. The extreme pro-British party has more support in Northern Ireland than Sinn Fein — 17 percent compared to 11 percent.

"Of course they wait until President Clinton's back is turned before they say it," Robinson added.

The confrontation over paramilitary weapons and negotiations has bedeviled the peace process for the past year.

Big Spring High School band does about face under new leadership

By Patricia Wade
Reporter-Telegram Correspondent

After many years of being plagued with a high drop-out rate, the Big Spring High School Band has done a complete about face. Under the enthusiastic leadership of new band director Rocky Harris, the band's talents and numbers have flourished.

The band hall receives one new student nearly every week, Harris said.

"It is very common for many students to drop out of band during band camp in the summer. Then, for one reason or another, we lose several more during the school year. This year, we have not had a single student drop band," he said. "In fact, we have gotten new students almost every week, some of which have just moved to Big Spring and many who already attend Big Spring High."

Part of the band's newly acquired appeal to the community probably lies in the more popular music selections that Harris has been choosing to perform. This music not only stirs up student involvement, it also gets the audience involved.

Steven Waggoner, a former band director and presently a band parent, believes that Harris knows how to choose music that people are able to relate to.

"The music Harris selects has a more popular orientation than what was used in the past," he said. "The audience recognizes the music, and they enjoy hearing music they know."

Some of that familiar music can be heard when the sixth- to 12th-grade bands perform a Christmas concert beginning 6 p.m. today at the high school auditorium.

The band boosters will be manning a crafts and bake sale before and during the concert.

Harris' students are also very excited about his style of teaching. He maintains a tough agenda and works the students hard, but he is also very interested in the students who are in the band program.

"Mr. Harris is geared towards keeping people in band," said Stefanie Waggoner, a sophomore clarinet player.

The band director has even put the eighth-grade band on the field with the high school band in order to show the young musicians what goes into a warching program, she said.

Another big change for the band has been the actual style of marching. Whereas in the past the focus of the marching program was fancier choreography to concert-style music selections, the programs now consist of marching and music that respect the integrity of outdoor sports.

Harris said he wanted the band to produce a program that would be appreciated during half time of football games.

"A great (number) of bands have gone with more orchestral types of numbers and try to be more exotic on the field. That's fine if they are on a stage in a closed environment. What I've been working on is bringing a more traditional program to the marching band."

The satisfaction and reaction of the listeners is very important to Harris. One of his goals has been to bring a strong band sound to the games to feed the excitement of the band, audience, and players.

"I have really tried to bring good band literature that is more enjoyable to the football type audience," he said.

He likes for his band to produce "good band sounds to get everyone's blood pumping."

Many parents have been singing the praises of Harris. Lana Schooler, mother of musicians Farrah and Aaron Schooler, touts Harris as a miracle worker.

"When he first looked at the band he saw drab uniforms, and staying strong with the school colors, he transformed them into a very sharp looking group of kids," she said.

Harris' remedy was to add gold sequin sashes and plumes on the hats.

Ms. Waggoner's father also had good words to say about Harris' style of teaching.

"He has taken a different approach with the band. He has worked the kids hard and that is what it takes to have a successful band program," Waggoner said.

The new director has selected music that keeps the kids enthusiastic about playing in the band, he said.

"The new music is more enjoyable for the students. I'm very glad that my daughter is again enjoying participating in the band program."

Although all of the praise the community has heaped on his band has been appreciated, Harris admits that at times it has been a little scary. He occasionally feels intimidated by the recent successes and positive feedback from the community, but he certainly hopes they will continue.

"We're now so different and enjoyable. Even with our problems we still get so much positive response."

He also knows that with the praise he has a responsibility to keep the students' egos in check.

"When I'm continually told how great we're doing, I tell the band, 'Quit listening to everything the people are saying.' We know we still have problems, so let's get to work."

POLICE REPORTS

Robbery

Police are searching for a man who robbed the manager of a restaurant at gunpoint Thursday night, according to police reports.

The robbery occurred at 9:30 p.m. Thursday at Pizza Hut, 4320 Andrews Highway.

Police said a black man entered the east door of the restaurant armed with a handgun. The robber pointed the weapon at three customers and four employees and ordered them to lie on the floor.

The manager, who was in the kitchen area, was approached by the suspect, pushed toward the back of the restaurant where the safe was located and ordered the manager to open the safe, according to reports.

The manager balked at first, police said, but the suspect cocked the weapon and advised her he would shoot. The manager then opened the safe and handed the suspect an undetermined amount of cash.

The manager was then ordered to open the cash register and hand that money over as well. The man then ordered the manager to lie on the floor.

The man exited the east door and fled on foot southeast of Pizza Hut.

The man is described as a black man in his 30s about 5 feet7 inches to 5 feet 8 inches, with a slender build, wearing a black ski mask with red writing, black sweatshirt, black pants and black shoes with stripes.

Police said the investigation continues.

Drug arrests

After a two-month undercover investigation nine men were arrested on a variety of drug charges including selling marijuana, cocaine and heroin.

In an unrelated vehicle search more than $60,000 in marijuana was confiscated and two men arrested.

The Permian Basin Drug Task Force, Reeves County Sheriff's Office, Pecos Police Department and the U.S. Border Patrol issued the warrants on Thursday for the nine men.

Arrested were Daniel Bustamente Ortiz, 24, on charges of delivery of marijuana; Gregorio Juarez Navarrete, 41, delivery of cocaine; Antonio Garcia Montanez, 50, delivery of heroin and cocaine; Ruben Garcia Tercero, 29, delivery of cocaine; Efren Ramirez Rodriguez, 32, delivery of cocaine; Raul Rodriguez Pando, 29, delivery of cocaine; Jesus Manuel Hermudez Gomez, 27, delivery of cocaine, possession of cocaine within a correctional facility; Daniel Salcido Dutchover, 46, possession of marijuana; and Rudy Paul Freeman, 21, possession of marijuana.

At about 11:30 p.m. Thursday, the canine unit of the task force stopped two vehicles in Ector County and after a search of the cars, the dog alerted officers to approximately 56 pounds of marijuana concealed in a gasoline tank of one of the vehicles.

The marijuana was valued at $67,200.

Arrested were Arthur Martinez, 34, and Joel E. Hernandez, 24, both of Gainesville.

Japan revises religion laws to curb cult activity

TOKYO (AP) — Japan revised its law on religion Friday for the first time in more than four decades, granting the government new powers to police religious groups.

Supporters said the change will help prevent the emergence of terrorist groups like the Aum Shinri Kyo cult, which is blamed for a series of murders and kidnappings as well as the nerve gas attack on Tokyo's subways in March that killed 12 people and injured more than 5,500.

Critics accused the Liberal Democrats, the largest member of the coalition government, of using the issue as a political weapon to punish a Buddhist group for helping the opposition in August elections.

With the change — the first ever made to the Religious Corporation Law — religious groups are placed under central government authority and must disclose more to the government. The law passed the upper house of Parliament on Friday and takes effect within a year.

In imperial Japan, the government imprisoned those who strayed from Shinto, the state religion. But in 1951, U.S. occupation forces drafting Japan's modern constitution wrote the Religious Corporation Law.

Since then, Japan has experienced an explosion in the number of officially registered religions. About 100 new religious corporations are approved in Japan each year, and the tens of thousands of groups currently operating claim one in five Japanese as members.

The Aum Shinri Kyo went largely unnoticed by the central government and the public until police acknowledged last spring that its top members were prime suspects in a murder, kidnapping and terror spree that included the gas attack on Tokyo's subways on March 20.

Police now say that for years, the cult had been developing its own machine guns, doing biological weapons research, and making deadly sarin gas and LSD. Guru Shoko Asahara even had plans to take over the world.

After the attack, U.S. congressmen expressed shock at the lack of oversight, saying Washington's own investigation turned up cult plans for terrorist attacks in Japan and the United States.

Japanese leaders were embarrassed by the revelations, and supporters of the new law said it will insure that such breaches will not happen again.

The revised law places religions operating in more than two of Japan's 47 prefectures under the authority of the Minister of Education instead of local authorities. Religious groups will be obligated to disclose more financial information and to submit reports any time the government asks for them.

For weeks, the issue has been at the center of a showdown between the Liberal Democrats and the New Frontier Party, the largest opposition group.

The Liberal Democrats were dealt a major blow by the opposition in August parliamentary elections — in part because of support from Sokka Gakkai, an 8-million-member Buddhist lay organization. Opposition parties fear the Liberal Democrats might try to punish the religious group with investigations before a general election, expected within several months.

"If this is supposed to be a response to the sarin attack and the Aum Shinri Kyo problem, why is it only after they lost an election that they suddenly decide to put it into law?" said Tsutomu Hata, a top official at the New Frontier Party.

Castro ventures into Vietnam to talk solidarity

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro was warmly welcomed by Vietnam's top leaders Friday at the start of a rare visit to demonstrate communist solidarity.

Several hundred Vietnamese stood outside Hanoi's Presidential Palace waving Cuban and Vietnamese flags, shouting: "Viva Cuba! Viva Fidel!"

Castro emerged from a limousine and hugged Vietnam's Communist Party chief Do Muoi, President Le Duc Anh and Prime Minister Vo Van Kiet.

"The whole country awaits the commandante," Muoi told Castro, who replied that he had a "special feeling" for Vietnam.

"When I set out this morning I felt weak. As I arrive in Vietnam I feel healthier," Castro said.

Castro's last visit to Vietnam was in 1973, when he traveled to a zone in the South "liberated" by the communists.

During this visit, Castro will study Vietnam's economic liberalization and offer his hosts moral support as the communist world shrinks.

Vietnamese officials plan to show him factories, farms and a new economic zone for export industries.

"We are going to give him an opportunity to see the successes of economic renovation and our experiences, both positive and negative, so that Cuba can draw its own conclusions and formulate its own development model," said Nguyen Xuan Phong, director of the Foreign Ministry's Americas Department.

Phong said Vietnam's experience shows "it is possible to uphold completely the principles and goals of socialism while using a market economy to achieve our objectives."

Cuba, like Vietnam, stagnated economically while following the Stalinist model of state ownership and control. Since the 1991 collapse of the Soviet Union deprived Cuba of aid, Castro has reluctantly allowed small-scale private enterprise and foreign investment.

Vietnam implemented market reforms sooner and more boldly, so that while Cuba's economy has grown only 2 percent this year, Vietnam's has surged an estimated 9.5 percent.

Cuba's economy also has been hurt by a 33-year-old U.S. trade embargo. In February 1994, the United States lifted the embargo it imposed on Vietnam in 1975.

Tour guide school at Disney to cost government $1,000 a head

WASHINGTON (AP) — The week after the government's budget-crisis shutdown, more than 200 federal workers whirled off to Disney World — at taxpayer expense — for a week of training to be better tour guides.

They attended lectures on such topics as "The Power of Magic in Shaping History," had dinner at Sea World marine amusement park and took field trips to Disney's Magic Kingdom and Epcot Center.

According to organizers, about 400 employees of the National Park Service, Army Corps of Engineers, Forest Service, Fish and Wildlife Service and Bureau of Land Management attended the five-day National Association for Interpretation (NAI) workshop in Orlando, Fla.

The government could not provide an exact count of how many were sent with federal training funds, and how many went at their own expense.

But spokesmen for the agencies estimate about half of the 400 went on the taxpayers' tab, with an average cost per worker of about $1,000, or a total estimated cost of at least $200,000.

Most of those who went — park rangers and federal land guides — had been deemed non-essential and sent home when the government partially shut down for six days last month.

"It's a recognized training function, and they take a lot back to the parks. And we don't view that as a boondoggle," said Park Service spokeswoman Elaine Sevy. "It is a shame that it fell the week after the shutdown. But this was scheduled long before."

The Park Service, which faces large budget cuts, had the largest contingent, accounting for 351 of the 970 workshop participants, according to the NAI. The Park Service estimates 150 to 200 were paid by the government to attend.

The Army Corps said it sent 12 staffers at a cost of about $12,000 and the Forest Service said it sent 45 at a cost of $43,877. The Interior Department estimated another 50 staffers went from BLM and Fish and Wildife.

The main classroom was the four-star Buena Vista Palace hotel just outside Disney, where room rates normally run between $130 and $250 a night.

Participants, who got their rooms for $99 a night, were offered three days' worth of six to eight hours of seminars and lectures on such subjects as "Goofy (and Educational) Nature Songs" and "Interpreting Resources Along Scenic Byways and Corridors."

In between, there was a Sunday night picnic at Disney's River Country water park, a dinner reception at Sea World and an entire day for field excursions, which ranged from NASA's Kennedy Space Center to wildlife refuges.

The most popular, organizers say, were backstage tours of the Disney attractions, which drew about 150 of the conference participants, including Park Service spokeswoman Dana Dierkes.

"Uh-oh, I'm afraid I'm going to see this in the paper," said Dierkes when asked where she took her field trip. "I went on an excursion ... to the Magic Kingdom."

She said the trip was designed to "take a look at the environmental things ... that Disney offers." She added: "It IS considered bona fide training."

NAI, the workshop's sponsor, is a non-profit professional organization with 2,600 members from federal, state and local government and private industry. It is dedicated to training interpreters: tour guides, park rangers and nature center staff who explain the historical, natural and cultural attractions at tourist spots.

Executive Director Tim Merriman said the group has held annual workshops for years — usually in remote locations with natural resources. He said the Orlando trip "broke the mold for us." Next year, he said, it will be in Billings, Mont.

Harlem shooting, fire leaves eight dead

NEW YORK (AP) — A gunman opened fire on workers and customers at a Harlem clothing store Friday, then barricaded himself inside and started a blaze that engulfed the building in an instant. Eight people were found dead inside.

One was the 35-year-old gunman, still clutching an empty pistol.

The gunman's motive was a mystery, but police said they were looking into a landlord-tenant dispute that had made the store a target of community protests.

Thomas Pierre, a voter registration worker who was in a third-floor window across the street, said he saw police arrive, heard shots from inside the store and watched an injured construction worker stagger out the door.

"Suddenly, the whole front went up in flames," Pierre said. "It started just like that."

Police Commissioner William Bratton said seven of the victims were killed by the fire, not bullets. He did not say what killed the gunman. It was not immediately known whether anyone who died in the fire had been wounded.

Five more people were hurt: Three were shot and critically wounded, a fourth was grazed by a bullet, and another suffered smoke inhalation.

None of the victims were immediately identified.

The man stormed into Freddie's Fashion Mart across from the historic Apollo Theater on 125th Street, Harlem's main thoroughfare, around 10:15 a.m.

He was "yelling wildly for everyone" — employees, customers, construction workers renovating an upper floor — "to get out," said Louis Anemone, a police chief.

A bystander alerted two policemen on the street, and one entered the store, where he was trapped by the gunman's shooting. His partner summoned reinforcements, who got the besieged officer out of the store.

The gunman then barricaded the door and set fires, Anemone said.

Because of the shooting, police wouldn't let firefighters go inside right away, said Donald Burns, Fire Department chief of operations. When they finally entered, they found four bodies in the basement and four more, including the gunman's, on the first floor.

Freddie's had been the target of community protests over its plans to evict The Record Shack, a store that had subleased adjoining space for about 20 years. The record store is black-owned, Pierre said, while Freddie's is not.

The Rev. Al Sharpton, who had been involved in the protests, said there was no connection between the dispute and the attack: "We don't even know the identity of the gunman."

The street — simply "25th" to Harlem residents — is one of the most storied in black history. It is the site of the Apollo, a mecca for black performers since the 1930s; the Hotel Theresa, where Fidel Castro once stayed; and many popular restaurants and stores.

Some Harlem residents have long complained of non-black domination of the street's commercial life. But former Manhattan Borough President Percy Sutton, a black businessman who has an office on the street, said racial tensions were not high.

Murder of lesbian couple shocks town

ASHLAND, Ore. (AP) — The murder of a lesbian couple who fought an anti-gay rights measure last year has sent a shiver of fear and pain through their friends in gay and AIDS support groups.

Police discovered the bodies of Roxanne Ellis and Michelle Abdill in the back of their pickup truck Thursday in neighboring Medford, and authorities were investigating whether their deaths were linked to their political activism.

"The gay community is rightly very concerned right now," said Medford police Sgt. Mike Moran. "But we have no real information pursuing the hate crime angle. We are also considering the possibility this could be a personal vendetta, a business grievance, and the less likely scenario of random crime."

Ellis, 54, and Abdill, 42, were domestic partners as well as partners in a property management business in Medford.

"To me they modeled how to live as active community members who were proud to be lesbians," said Brenda Brown, a lesbian activist and member of the board of directors of the Lambda Community Center Association.

"The shock and pain comes from the fact that these were very loving, gracious, giving women of faith," said the Rev. Michael Powell, pastor of the First United Methodist Church, where both women served in the leadership. "We loved them because they were sisters in Christ."

On Monday, Ellis had an appointment to show a duplex apartment. She phoned her daughter, Lorri Ellis, several hours after the appointment to say she was going shopping. Then an hour later, she phoned Abdill and asked her to come to the apartment to help jump-start her pickup because the battery had died.

That evening, Lorri Ellis drove by the apartment to check on the couple and told police she saw her mother's pickup drive away. She tried to flag it down, but the driver eluded her.

On Thursday afternoon, a cable television installer spotted the pickup in the parking lot of an apartment complex across town. He had memorized the license plate when he went home for lunch and watched the news on TV.

In the bed of the pickup, underneath a canopy, police found the bodies of the women.

Both died violently, Moran said. Police withheld further details pending an autopsy.

Police want to question a gray-haired man with wire-rimmed glasses seen at the duplex. Police said they don't consider him a suspect yet.

From the time the women disappeared, people who knew Ellis and Abdill had feared that their gay-rights activism had something to do with it.

Ashland is known as a safe haven for people who are different in a region not otherwise known for its tolerance.

It is home to the nation's biggest regional theater, the Oregon Shakespeare Festival, as well as Southern Oregon State College, and is a popular tourist destination for people from the San Francisco Bay area.

But the rest of Jackson County, including Medford, is much more conservative.

Medford grew up on timber and pear orchards, but since environmental concerns over logging and a flat housing market have closed many mills, the economy is changing. Much of the region's growth has come from retired people moving in from Southern California.

Neighbors' squabble costs D.A.'s office $75,000 plus apology

DENVER (AP) — While eavesdropping on their neighbors' cordless phone conversations with a scanner, Mitchell and Candice Aronson say, they heard the Quigleys call them "loud New York Jews."

They listened in, they claim, as William and Dorothy Quigley talked of painting a large oven on the side of the Aronson home and tossing soap and lampshades on their lawn — apparent references to the Holocaust.

"In the beginning, we thought about moving, but Jewish people have had a long history of being driven from homes ... and quite frankly, it got our backs up," Mitchell Aronson said. "If we would have moved, we would just have succumbed to that kind of harassment that has been prevalent for centuries. I felt I had to take a stand."

But what started as a neighborhood squabble over dogs and children led eventually to criminal charges, three lawsuits — and, this week, an apology and $75,000 settlement from the district attorney to the Quigleys for pursuing charges of ethnic intimidation.

"People can say cruel things, but they may not violate the ethnic intimidation statute," said District Attorney Dave Thomas.

He dropped 13 felony charges against the Quigleys in January, saying there was no evidence to prove the allegations. A key problem was a change in federal law, effective Oct. 25, 1994, that made taping cordless telephone conversations illegal.

Thomas also said that none of the threats were made directly to the Aronsons and that the tone of their voices indicated the callers weren't serious about carrying out the acts.

The problems began in the fall of 1994, a couple of months after the Aronsons moved from New York City to a house two doors away from the Quigleys in a well-to-do neighborhood of Evergreen, about 30 miles west of Denver.

The town just down the road from Buffalo Bill's grave is in a fast-growing area of the Rocky Mountain foothills, favored by professionals who commute to Denver. William Quigley is a senior vice president of United Artists Theater Circuit Corp., the nation's largest theater chain.

The couples' pre-teen and teenage children — the Quigleys have two and the Aronsons three — bickered.

Then the Quigleys complained that the Aronsons' dog was roving onto their property. The Aronsons filed a counter-complaint about the Quigleys' pet running loose.

Around Oct. 20, 1994, the Aronsons' scanner intercepted a conversation from a cordless telephone. The couple began taping the telephone conversations and, in late 1994, turned the tapes over to Jefferson County authorities.

Over more than 40 hours of conversations taped by the Aronsons, the Quigleys allegedly made the Holocaust references and discussed dousing one of the Aronsons' children with flammable liquid and throwing a hand grenade at their house.

The district attorney charged the Quigleys with ethnic intimidation, only to drop the case a few months later. Thomas said Tuesday his office agreed to pay the Quigleys and apologize to avoid being sued under the new federal wiretap laws.

Reebok "Comfort Ultra"

our best-selling walking shoe at a great everyday price

$39

What is Dynamic Cushioning?

Reebok's "Comfort Ultra" walker features Dynamic Cushioning air chambers in the sole of the shoe. While walking, your heel strikes the ground and compresses the heel chamber, forcing air into the forefoot chamber. When you "toe off," the forefoot chamber forces air back to the heel. This air movement pampers and cushions your feet. Even while you're standing, Dynamic Cushioning stimulates circulation and helps reduce fatigue.

With a full-grain garment leather upper and soles made of Goodyear's remarkable "Indy 500 Plus" compound, these shoes are made for long-lasting comfort and performance. Women's sizes in white; men's sizes in black or white.

New heart saver

If you're not getting enough folic acid, a B vitamin, you are needlessly risking heart disease. Evidence has been mounting for several years, showing that this inexpensive B vitamin can help fend off heart attacks. Most recent is a compelling analysis by Shirley Beresford, associate professor at the University of Washington School of Public Health in Seattle. After examining 38 studies, she estimates that increasing folic acid intake could save up to 50,000 Americans from heart disease deaths every year.

Folic acid helps defuse an amino acid in the blood called homocysteine, considered a new villain in heart disease. Harvard researchers recently declared that 150,000 heart attacks annually are tied to high blood levels of homocysteine. Right now, there is no widely available screening test for homocysteine.

In the meantime, everyone should buck up their intake of folic acid, say experts. The cheapest, most reliable way: Take a supplement of 400 micrograms of folic acid a day alone or in a multivitamin pill. Some researchers take 1,000 micrograms. Foods high in folic acid are green leafy vegetables, dried beans, orange juice.

Potent ginkgo

Men suffering from impotence may want to consider taking ginkgo supplements. Ginkgo, an herbal remedy made from the leaves of the ginkgo tree, has been shown to help reverse mental decline and memory loss in older people, possibly because ginkgo dilates blood vessels of the brain. Now recent research by German urologists at the University Clinics of RWTH in Aachen finds that ginkgo treatment also improves blood flow to the penis. In one study, 78 percent of 50 men suffering from "arterial erectile impotence" improved after taking 240 milligrams of ginkgo bilboa extract daily for nine months. Researchers noted no side effects from the ginkgo.

Previously, the same researchers had found some improvement from lower doses of 60 milligrams of ginkgo bilboa extract a day. This standardized ginkgo extract is available in health-food stores.

Lutein for sale

It's in spinach, kale, collard greens, winter squash and Chinese cabbage. Lutein is a potent antioxidant. In fact, it may be more important than well-known beta carotene in warding off chronic diseases, says Frederick Khachik, Ph.D., research chemist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Studies suggest lutein may help prevent cancer and especially eye diseases, such as cataracts and macular degeneration.

Now, a new purified lutein extract is hitting the market. Lutein, a yellow fat-soluble pigment, is extracted from marigolds and put in capsules. One capsule contains 17 milligrams of lutein, says Khachik, or amount in about 5 cups of raw chopped spinach or 3 cups of cooked spinach. However, Khachik says the pill is more potent, because you absorb more from the concentrated extract than the food. Lutein in lower doses is also being added to antioxidant supplement mixtures.

Khachik thinks lutein will soon be tested to try to prevent cataracts and possibly macular degeneration. To find lutein, check supplement labels and ask your health-food store.

Alleviating allergies

NEW YORK (AP) — Approaching the winter allergy and sinus season, more than 50 useful tips for allergy sufferers are offered in a new calendar from the American Lung Association, including:

- Avoid windy days, when air is heavy with pollen. Rainy, cloudy and windless days usually have lower pollen counts.
- Keep children's toys in a box to prevent dust buildup. Store clothing and linens in plastic zipper bags.
- Clean air conditioners, humidifiers and dehumidifiers frequently to prevent mold growth.
- Use synthetic pillows with vinyl encasements. Feathers breed dust mites.

"Tips for Living Well with Allergies" calendar is free by calling (800) 828-4783.

Holograms can give surgeons advance look

By Martha Mendoza

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The surgeon leans into the drill as it grinds into the patient's skull. Then he pauses, turning to study a shimmering, translucent image of a head projected nearby.

He moves his fingers through the ghostly image sculpted in light, gauging the distance between a tumor and a blood vessel, estimating how deeply he should scoop his instruments into the patient's brain.

Then he returns to his drill and continues his work.

This is medical technology in 1995.

About 100 surgeons around the country have been using such hologram displays in clinical trials for the past four years, and the University of New Mexico was one of the first places to use them in the operating room.

"It's very cool technology. It actually gives the surgeons a preview of what they're getting into," says Dr. Frederick Rupp, a radiologist at the university.

The hologram system, sold under the name Voxgram, was offered for sale for the first time recently at the Radiological Society of North America conference in Chicago. The technology, produced by VOXEL of Laguna Hills, Calif., received clearance from the Food and Drug Administration on Oct. 1.

Rupp planned to present some of his findings at the conference and in the new issue of the Journal of Neurosurgery's CD-ROM edition.

The system includes a $175,000 machine that makes holograms of already high-tech images such as computed tomography or CT, X-ray scans, and magnetic resonance images, called MRIs.

A light box displays the hologram as a three-dimensional image floating in space, unlike the flat CT or MRI picture. A surgeon can put a hand into this mirage and gain a sense of depth.

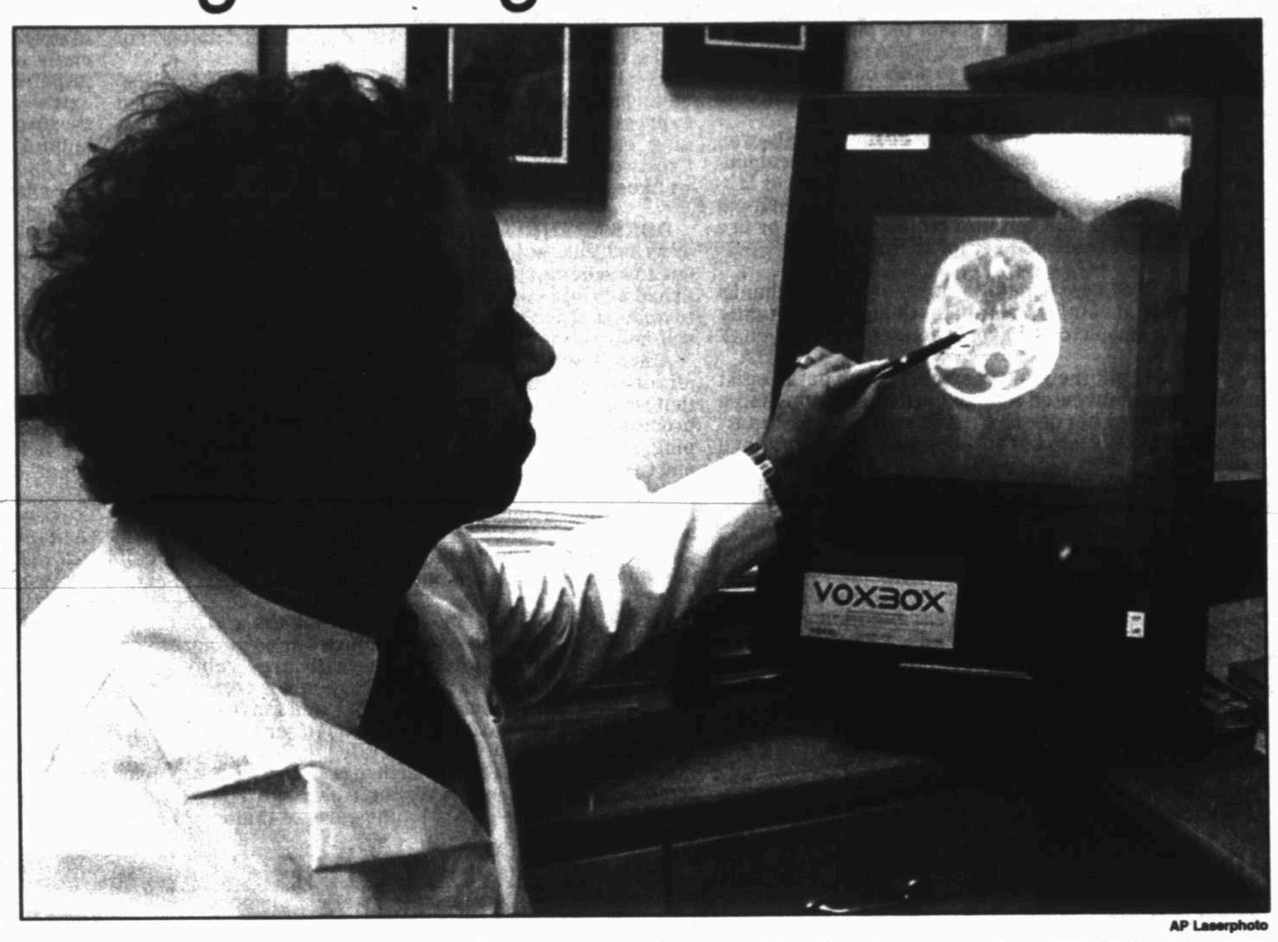

Dr. Allen Wolfe, who heads VOXEL, says getting the technology to market is a dream come true.

"More years ago than I care to count, I was awed by the extraordinary powers of Superman displayed across the pages of my comic books. Now I'm engaged in an effort to give all doctors '3-D X-Ray Vision,' " he says.

At UNM, surgeons and radiologists use the holograms to test the size of screws and other implants, waving the hardware through the life-size, glassy mirages to compare it to the patient's tissue.

They slide their fingers down an illusion of a spinal column and poke its shattered disks.

They peer below, above and behind visions of arteries, separating dangerous aneurysms from normal vascular loops.

AP Laserphoto

Dr. Frederick Rupp, a radiologist, points to a hologram image of a brain. From a hospital in Albuquerque, N.M., Rupp said the hologram technology gives surgeons a preview of what they are getting into before an operation.

The VOXEL technology was developed by Stephen Hart, a British astronomer who wanted to figure out the shape of a particularly obscure nebula.

His telescope could focus only at one distance at a time. He would look at one level of a distant astral cloud and map its outline, but then had to refocus on a different level, or slice.

He couldn't get a real sense of the cloud's overall shape.

Then Hart saw a TV program about holograms and he and a physicist made a hologram from his slices.

There are skeptics.

"I would need to know whether it's a scientifically based process or another fly-by-night gimmick," says Dr. Charles Dudley Lee, a radiologist in San Diego.

Even if the technology is useful, it may be too expensive, says Dr. Jerry Froelich, director of radiology at the Swedish Medical Center in Denver.

"The real problem right now is money," he says. "Five years ago there weren't market constraints, but the current system of reimbursement and restricted capital may take good technology and mothball it."

Most radiologists involved in trials are convinced the technology has value.

"With this technology, the person who really needs the information — the surgeon — is in control. He or she doesn't have to rely on someone to run a videotape frame by frame or display it as a computer loop," says Dr. Douglas Robertson, associate professor at the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis.

At Children's Hospital in Philadelphia, Dr. Jill Hunter used holograms to examine tiny plates screwed into children's skulls to control the fusion of skull bones.

Holograms revealed what CT scans had not: the plates were shifting and needed to be removed before they cut into the children's brains.

"The surgeons were extremely excited when they saw the holograms," says Hunter. "This study has led to a change in the surgical procedure."

At UNM, Dr. Edward Benzel had to operate on the spine of a 36-year-old woman with a fractured vertebra.

A Voxgram image showed something not apparent from other imaging systems: The damage extended two vertebrae above where he was operating.

"Without the information gained from the hologram, surgery may not have totally solved the patient's problem," Benzel says.

But holograms, by themselves, can't save lives.

"A fool with a tool is still a fool," he says. "And this is just a tool. It's nothing magic."

Emphasis on dieting can be harmful to health

By Carolyn Poirot
N.Y. Times News Service

I was at my favorite bakery last week when I heard myself — to my horror — making the excuse to my daughter, "We don't want to get fat," when she insisted that we needed a dozen of her favorite cupcakes instead of only half a dozen.

I know that as a health and fitness writer who sees every new study and poll maligning obesity, high-fat diets and Americans' general lack of fitness, I might be expected to say something like that. But I had spent the previous two weeks researching and writing about eating disorders, and I had come to suspect that all our emphasis on low-fat, healthful eating may be contributing to the low-fat, unhealthful dieting that's afflicting a lot of smart young girls.

It seems more than a coincidence that the increase in deadly anorexia and bulimia comes at the height of the health and fitness revolution in this country.

"Most of the fitness fad in America is really an appearance fad," Dr. Donald Durham, a national authority on eating disorders, said at a recent daylong seminar on eating disorders.

He's right.

How many of us really exercise to prevent our heart muscles from getting flabby? The truth is, most of us are much more concerned about the flab that jiggles when we walk and bursts seams when we sit down.

When we look in the mirror we never see our heart muscles, reminding us that we need to take in fewer calories and use up more.

If we were really into aerobics for the sake of cardiovascular fitness, we wouldn't hop on the bathroom scale the minute we get in from jogging. The scale tells us nothing about the condition of our circulatory system.

One of the young women I interviewed for the eating disorders story said her obsession with food and exercise (she was getting two hours of sleep a night and bingeing, purging and working out the other 22 hours a day) started after her mother lost 30 pounds with dieting and aerobics.

"It just made everybody sooooo happy," said the 16-year-old, who almost starved herself to death striving to inspire a similar response to her own "perfect body."

I know there's bound to be some middle ground here (all things in moderation, as they say), but this is a tough one.

I am concerned about the messages we are giving our children. When we say, "You don't need french fries AND ice cream. That's too much fat," do they hear, "You don't need french fries AND ice cream. You're too fat."? When we say, "Too many of us today are overweight and out-of-shape," do the children hear, "Too many of us are flawed and inferior"?

Anorexia and bulimia are terribly complex "diseases of the spirit" that affect our mental health as much as our physical health, and such comments do not "cause" eating disorders.

But the past couple of weeks, I've thought a lot about the possibility that I might unintentionally contribute to the problem — both as a mother and a columnist.

Expert says, sometimes you are what you drive

By Dr. Hap LeCrone
N.Y. Times News Service

Many people choose cars they feel best express their personalities. High school and college students often initially described their peers by the style of their transportation. He drives a truck, or she has a convertible.

Recently I participated in a support group where one of the activities was to choose a toy car from a wide variety displayed for us. Later we were asked to explain to the group our reasons for that selection.

■ Nell chose a sturdy four-wheel drive jeep to the amazement of her friends who think of her more as a luxury four-door sedan type. But Nell said she's always had a family automobile that took her to social functions, committee meetings, to church on Sunday. She wanted something now that would be utilitarian, to pack and use for trips to the mountains where she enjoys painting landscapes.

■ Tom picked a truck, and a bright flashy red one at that. Aiming for early retirement, Tom decided it was time to forego his usual mode of traveling in a leased automobile, which he drove to work every day and parked in a designated space. His plans were for fun, freedom and relaxation in the near future, with fishing, hunting and an outdoor life.

■ Mary, on the other hand, had always conservatively driven a good used car, one that got good gas mileage and required little upkeep. With her days of carpooling and shopping for the family close to an end, she decided it was time to indulge in a fantasy she's had since adolescence. A flashy new sports car was Mary's expression of a need to do something special for herself.

Automobile styles, models and even colors can reveal a great deal about a person's personality and stage in life.

■ A rite of passage and sign of freedom and independence for teens is acquiring wheels as soon as possible after obtaining a driver's license. They strongly identity with the car they drive, and are often sentimental about their "first car."

■ Rental cars are often selected for reasons of a particular event. A person on vacation may pick up a car at the airport that is totally different from the car in their garage at home. Instead of an economy model, they want a luxury car for their vacation period. Or they may opt for a van for storage and space.

Consider the staid black automobile as expressive of the London cabby and compare them to the yellow cabs driven in our country.

Whatever your self-image, when you are behind the wheel, check yourself. Are you expressing inner feelings of your own personal identity?

X-rays offer possible glimpse of heart-valve failure

By Richard Saltus
N.Y. Times News Service

Thousands of patients who had potentially defective heart valves implanted in the 1970s and 1980s can now undergo X-ray exams that will identify many — but not all — of the valves that are about to fail, suggests a study of 315 valve recipients.

The Bjork-Shiley convexo-concave metal valves were implanted in about 86,000 patients worldwide between 1979 and 1986, and because of a manufacturing problem, they have had a high rate of mechanical failure, which is often fatal.

Patients and their doctors have faced an excruciating dilemma: The risk of valve fracture is between 0.5 percent and 1 percent a year, but removing and replacing the valve with open-heart surgery carries a death rate of 3 to 5 percent. Thus far, 564 valves have failed, causing death two-thirds of the time.

In a recent issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, researchers from William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak, Mich., report that with the aid of high-resolution X-ray images taken from two different angles, specialists spotted 11 valves in the 315 patients that looked as if they were about to fail. All 11 patients underwent operations: In 10 patients, the valves had cracked and were replaced, though one patient died during surgery. The 11th valve was found intact.

Two other heart-valve patients died during the 1½-year test period after the X-rays failed to detect impending breakage.

Low-salt diet can help reduce some risks — for a while

By Paul Raeburn

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Losing 10 pounds and modestly cutting salt intake significantly lowered the risk of heart attacks and strokes in people with blood pressure only slightly above normal — a group that includes 80 million Americans.

The benefits of lowering blood pressure are well known in people with hypertension, or blood pressure higher than 140 millimeters over 90. The picture has been less clear for those with blood pressure lower than that but still above the normal 120 over 80.

A study reported at the American Heart Association's annual meeting showed that a 10-pound weight loss and a 20-25 percent reduction in salt intake produced a drop of about 2 millimeters in both the top and bottom blood-pressure numbers.

That may sound small, but if that were achieved throughout the American population, it would save tens of thousands of lives, said the study's author, Dr. Paul Whelton of Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

The study used personal counseling to help 2,382 overweight men and women lose weight and eat less salt. After six months, the researchers measured a 2-millimeter drop in blood pressure.

One problem, though, was that the participants did not maintain their weight loss, salt reduction and blood pressure drop over the three-year course of the study. By the end of the study, the blood pressure drop was only 1 millimeter, and the average weight loss 4-5 pounds, Whelton said.

Whelton's conclusion is that watching one's diet over the long term and keeping blood pressure down will require deeper changes in the way Americans live and eat.

"We have to work with manufacturers to lower sodium. Eighty percent of our sodium comes from processed foods," not from the salt shaker on the dinner table, Whelton said. The development of more low-fat foods is also important, he said, as well as "making it easier and fun for us to get more exercise."

The heart institute has already begun discussions with the food industry to encourage it to reduce salt and calories, said Dr. Jeffrey Cutler of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, which funded the study.

Shopping for disabled made easier by companies

By Jane E. Brody
N.Y. Times News Service

It is that time of year again when most people race from store to store and comb through stacks of catalogues searching for the perfect gift for everyone on their holiday lists.

For some shoppers the task is particularly challenging because the recipient has a physical disability that renders inappropriate many popular gifts, like in-line skates, books, CDs, board games or tickets to a play or concert.

For example, what might you get for the parent or grandparent who enjoys reading but whose vision is now seriously impaired, or the friend who loves to cook but is now limited by arthritic pain in her hands, or a special person who uses a wheelchair, or, worse yet, is bedridden?

Let's say your gift list includes someone like Shawna Koch of Billings, Mont., a young women with cerebral palsy who is deaf and unable to speak, or Rey Crespo of Milwaukee, a young man who suffered serious injuries in an automobile accident that left him unable to speak or use his left arm. What could you get for them?

THE TASK is easier than it might seem at first, thanks to companies and catalogs that have thought of virtually everything for people of all ages who face physical challenges.

In 1977, Ruth Leff, then a 30-year old speech pathologist from Milwaukee, invented a flash card system to enable her sister to convey her needs, even though she was so paralyzed by multiple sclerosis that she could no longer move or speak.

The system, called Talking Pictures, became the linchpin for Crestwood Co., which now produces scores of language aids for people with communicative disabilities.

For Ms. Koch, for example, the $215 Communiclock by Crestwood, which enables her to convey her needs by pressing a button that moves a pointer to the desired picture or word, allowed her to break through her communication barrier. In just three months, she increased her vocabulary to 200 words on the device and continues to expand her communicative horizons.

Crespo uses a $200 bilingual Talking Crespeaker, a pocket-size device with a keyboard and speaker that vocalizes messages he types into it.

MRS. LEFF'S company also offers a host of inexpensive items that can become tickets to independence for the disabled, including a $50 Supermarket Shopping Passport, a series of 315 picture cards of supermarket items that can help people find their groceries by showing the desired items to a store clerk, and a $27 Dining Passport that can enable a verbally impaired person to ask for food at home or order in a restaurant.

For those who have trouble feeding themselves because of physical disabilities, Crestwood lists items like a contoured bowl with nonskid bottom for $12 and food bumpers for two plates for $8, as well as right- and left-handed curved utensils ($10 each) for people with limited wrist movement and grasping ability.

Also listed are many toys that can help learning disabled children and adults improve their language skills and express their feelings. To obtain the company's free catalog, call (414) 352-5678 or fax (414) 352-5679 or write to Crestwood Co., 6625 North Sidney Place, Dept. 50, Milwaukee, Wis. 53209.

DOES ARTHRITIS limit someone's ability to sew, cook or write? Has confinement to a wheelchair sentenced someone to a sedentary life? The Arthritis Foundation has published a "Guide to Independent Living," which offers tips to make daily living easier and describes more than 1,000 self-help aids and devices.

Among them are a Lazy Susan kitchen organizer that can eliminate painful reaching; double-handled cookware that reduces strain on the joints when pots are lifted; a food processor and blender that can take over chores of chopping, slicing, grating and pureeing, which can be painful and tiring for someone with arthritis, and an electric toothbrush, which is easier to manipulate than a manual one.

For further guidance about appropriate gifts for people with arthritis, including a $20 gift membership in the Arthritis Foundation, contact your local foundation chapter or call the toll-free information line at (800) 283-7800.

ALSO HELPFUL for the arthritic cook (as well as cooks with tendinitis, repetitive stress injuries or no impairments at all) are Good Grips kitchen tools with large, rubber-grip handles. They include a peeler-scraper, ice cream scoop, garlic press, jar opener, can opener and knives (ranging from $6 to $13), sold in most stores that offer kitchen equipment and through the Chef's Catalogue, (800) 338-3232.

For the avid writer with arthritis, A.T. Cross has just come out with the Comfort Writer, a pen with a large, lightweight resin body and a gripping surface that eases handling.

The stylish pen is available as a ballpoint for $22.50 and rolling ball for $27.50 and has been commended by the Arthritis Foundation. There are also triangular plastic grips (50 cents each) that slip over pens and pencils, available at office supply stores.

FOR THOSE whose disabilities seem to preclude ordinary forms of exercise, the Best Priced Products catalog — (800) 824-2939 or (914) 472-1006 — includes a Can-Do pedal exerciser ($140) that can be used in a bed, chair, wheelchair or on the floor, making it ideal for people with impaired balance; a wheelchair treadmill ($422), a Tricep extension exerciser ($252) and a wheelchair-accessible multi-exerciser ($260). The catalog also lists numerous devices helpful to the development of physically or neurologically impaired children.

Anyone shopping for gifts for people with limited vision can request The Lighthouse Inc. consumer catalog by calling (800) 829-0500 any time, any day. From talking watches (ranging in price from $9.75 to $93) and alarm clocks ($20 to $25) to television screen enlargers ($40 to $110) and line guides for writing checks and letters ($2.45 to $27), this pioneering organization seems to have thought of everything.

Included are a $6 pushbutton padlock; Braille Bingo boards ($7.50 each in plastic, $6.50 for 10 in cardboard); Braille and Low-Vision Scrabble ($50); an audible basketball set (the equipment makes a noise so a blind person can follow the ball), ($30); a page enlarger ($2); a talking dictionary ($488); a large-button Braille flashing telephone ($75); large-type books, cookbooks, address book ($15), appointment calendar ($30), calculator ($13) and crossword puzzle books; cassette players (perfect for listening to books on tape); Braille-marked tape measures ($25 to $30); handled holders for milk and juice cartons ($3 for two, useful also for those with poor gripping ability); special knives; a $20 cutting board that is white on one side, black on the other to provide contrast for different foods; a lightweight upright vacuum ($100); electric razors ($50 to $100); a $15 lighted magnifying mirror, and needle threaders (35 cents to $2.65).

AND MODESTY should not prevent this column from suggesting The New York Times Large-Type Weekly ($70.20 a year), which can be ordered at (800) 631-2580 or by writing to the weekly at P.O. Box 9564, Uniondale, N.Y. 11555-9564.

High-intensity exercise is 'in' workout style

By Nancy Stedman
N.Y. Times News Service

Just when gentle exercise like yoga has become fashionable, high-intensity exercise has returned to the health club.

Exercisers are crowding into high-intensity classes, in which workouts significantly raise the heart rate. And the classes have go-for-it names, like "heat" (cardiovascular work on a treadmill, plus weight-training, at the Martin Henry Fitness Studio in West Hollywood, Calif.), "cardio blast" (an aerobics class at Goodbody's Fitness Clinic in Dallas that demands great cardiovascular endurance), "boot camp" (strength and cardiovascular endurance, taught by a former Marine at Reebok Sports Club New York) and "spinning."

The main reason club members exercise is to lose weight, a study by the International Health, Racquet and Sportsclub Association says. These high-intensity, calorie-burning classes achieve that goal quickly. The newest classes use basic cardiovascular movements, like running on a treadmill or riding a stationary bike, instead of aerobic dance movements.

Equipment-oriented classes can be tougher, said Martin Henry, the owner of the health club that bears his name in West Hollywood, because they rely on machines to provide resistance and not just on an exerciser's body weight.

Nevertheless, there has been a resurgence in high-impact aerobics classes, which were largely replaced by lower-impact classes about six years ago. In low-impact aerobics, one foot is always on the floor at any given time; in high-impact classes, both feet can be off the ground, as in jumping jacks.

In some classes, like Zone Training at the Crunch Fitness Clubs in Manhattan, teachers hand out heart-rate monitors so exercisers can make sure their heart rates do not go too high or low.

Laser used against nearsightedness

By Richard Saltus
N.Y. Times News Service

After years of stringent testing, a laser device that corrects nearsightedness by reshaping the eye in a matter of seconds is ready for prime time. Soon, the advertising blitz will begin.

The potential market is enormous, following government approval of the laser last month. But no one knows how many people will actually step forward, open their wallets, and have their corneas permanently etched so they can throw away their glasses or contacts.

"I think the demand is really unknown, to be honest with you," said Dr. Anthony Adamis, an eye surgeon at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary who performs the laser procedure, called PRK, or photorefractive keratectomy.

IN ADDITION to Mass Eye and Ear, lasers approved for PRK are in place at the New England Eye Center of New England Medical Center and the Lawrence Memorial Hospital Eye Center in Medford, Mass.

"Although it's very exciting, it's going to take some time for the general public to really embrace it," said Stephen Blinn, vice president at Sight Resource Corp. of Burlington, Mass. The firm buys the $500,000 excimer lasers used in the procedure and creates partnerships with the specialists who operate them.

One of those who didn't waste any time is Geraldine Hagan, a 45-year-old nurse who said she has been waiting eagerly for the treatment to be approved. Last week, calmed by Valium, she lay beneath an excimer laser at the New England Eye Center while Dr. Roger Steinert triggered the bursts of laser light that subtly altered the shape of her cornea.

"Afterward, he let me sit up and I could see the clock on the wall in detail, for the first time in my life" without glasses or contacts, said Hagan, adding that her vision had been so poor she could scarcely see the eye chart. "It was so exciting."

'Although it's very exciting, it's going to take some time for the general public to really embrace it.'
— Stephen Blinn, Sight Resource Corp.

LIKE MOST people opting for laser correction, she will pay the fee ($1,500 for each eye in her case) out of pocket, as insurers don't cover it.

She spent the weekend recuperating with a patch on her eye and returned to work Tuesday.

The cornea takes from two to 6 months to heal completely. As it heals, vision improves, though some patients experience a slight haze or haloes around lights at night. These side effects ultimately go away. Surgeons generally recommend waiting three months before treating the second eye.

Most eye specialists think photorefractive keratectomy is relatively safe and gives excellent results in most cases.

The Food and Drug Administration's approval in October came after exhaustive scrutiny — and only for mild to moderate nearsightedness and with the caveat that the long-term consequences aren't known.

The treatment, initially priced at $1,500 to $2,000 per eye, could become enormously popular with many of the millions of nearsighted people who don't like glasses and either can't wear contacts or find them too much of a hassle.

But the potential demand is also of intense interest to ophthalmologists, many of whom are turning to the procedure to offset their declining income from cataract surgeries and other procedures, which has fallen because of government cuts in Medicare reimbursements.

AT A MINIMUM, the laser should lure many of the estimated 250,000 people who annually undergo a different type of refractive surgery, called radial keratotomy or RK. In RK, surgeons use a scalpel to make incisions partway through the eye's cornea to reshape it. PRK, which uses the laser to vaporize layers of cells to make the cornea flatter, is less invasive and doesn't weaken the cornea as RK does.

The laser, which unlike RK has been subjected to rigorous scientific testing under the FDA scrutiny, may have far wider appeal than RK.

Hagan, the nurse who underwent laser correction last week, said, "I work with tons of physicians and other people who are nearsighted, and they're all waiting with bated breath to see what happens when I go back to work on Tuesday."

David Muller, president of Summit Technology Inc. in Waltham, Mass., which manufactures the only laser approved thus far for the treatment, says extrapolations from a survey indicated that 5 million to 8 million Americans would be "very interested" or "somewhat interested" in having PRK.

NATIONALLY, MULLER estimated, 75 to 100 Summit lasers will be up and running by January.

Since the government approved PRK for use in mild to moderately nearsighted patients, Adamis at the Mass Eye and Ear and other laser surgeons say they have received many calls.

"These are nearsighted people who are calling mainly because they are having difficulty with contact lenses, or have professional reasons (to want near-perfect vision without glasses), like law enforcement or firefighters or martial arts participants," said Adamis.

Summit Technology says its laser system, in use for several years overseas, has been used in more than 200,000 treatments for nearsightedness with no major complications. Under the control of the computer, which allows the laser to shave off only a thin layer of cells at a time, it would be almost impossible to seriously harm the eye, say Summit officials.

In the trials overseen by the FDA, more than 2,500 eyes have undergone the treatment.

SUMMING UP the results of the trials, the FDA said:

- In 95 percent of the eyes treated, the laser corrected vision to 20/40 or better without glasses or contacts. That's the level most states require for driving without correction.
- In 65 percent of eyes, final vision was 20/20 or better.
- More than 60 percent of patients had mild haze on their corneas following surgery, but it disappeared within six months. Ten percent noticed glare of halos around lights. That also cleared up.
- In about 5 percent of cases, patients had slightly worse vision following surgery than they had had with glasses before the operation. In 1 percent it was significantly worse. However, the FDA tests did not permit a second laser treatment, which ophthalmologists say can usually improve on the initial results.

The FDA said people who should not undergo PRK include pregnant women, people with uncontrolled vascular disease or autoimmune disease. The laser method should be "approached with caution" by individuals who have had radial keratotomy.

'These are nearsighted people who are calling mainly because they are having difficulty with contact lenses, or have professional reasons (to want near-perfect vision without glasses), like law enforcement or firefighters or martial arts particpants.'
— Dr. Anthony Adamis, eye surgeon

THUS FAR, the laser has been approved to treat nearsightedness of up to 7 diopters, which includes about 90 percent of nearsighted people. Those with poorer vision may not get good results with today's techniques.

Radial keratotomy may actually be the better choice for some people who are mildly nearsighted, said Dr. Daniel Durrie, an eye surgeon at the Hunkeler Eye Center in Kansas City, Mo.

"It doesn't hurt as much, and it's cheaper," he said in a telephone interview. At the Hunkeler clinic, RK costs $1,250 per eye, compared to $1,950 for the laser.

The laser isn't yet approved for treating farsightedness or astigmatism, but even these difficult problems are expected to yield to the laser in time. Patients need to know that the treatment is permanent, and that when they lose close vision in middle age, they will still need glasses to read.

THE LASER treatment, done with mild sedation and local anesthetic in less than a minute, is painless.

But afterward, in the first 24 hours, some people say they have mild discomfort, like sand in the eye, and others report "a pretty ragged night of poor sleep," said Muller, the Summit executive. "But it's over after 24 hours."

Only ophthalmologists — eye specialists with an MD — can perform the procedure. Summit Technology requires those who purchase its lasers to take a training course in the theory and practice of PRK.

Consumers should not only seek out well-trained and experienced surgeons, but also make certain that the professionals who check their corneal healing in the months afterward are knowledgeable, said Durrie at the Hunkeler clinic.

"There is variability in how people heal, and things can be done with medication during the three- to six-month followup period that can get them back on course" if vision appears to be slightly over- or under-corrected, he said.

Jurors convict representative on 3 felony counts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rep. Walter Tucker III was convicted Friday of accepting and demanding bribes while mayor of a Los Angeles suburb, and said he would probably resign.

Tucker closed his eyes as the first guilty verdict was read in U.S. District Court but showed no other reaction. His wife, Robin, cried.

The 38-year-old Democrat was charged with selling his vote on a proposed $250 million waste-to energy conversion project while mayor of Compton in 1991 and 1992.

Jurors deliberated nine days before finding him guilty on seven counts of extortion and two counts of tax evasion. The jury could not reach a verdict on three other counts of extortion.

"I believe the jury made the wrong decision" Tucker, clutching a Bible, told reporters outside the courtroom. "I know what happened in these circumstances. The government knows what happened. It was entrapment."

He added: "Maybe I'll start a prison ministry — there's a lot of people in there who need to be saved."

Defense attorney Bob Ramsey Jr. said was unsure whether Tucker would seek a new trial.

Tucker faces up to 10 years in prison when he is sentenced March 18. He was elected in 1992 to represent the 37th District, which includes the working-class communities of Compton, Watts, Carson and part of Long Beach.

He said he would resign to avoid an expulsion hearing in Congress.

Tucker, a nondenominational minister who is black, had said before the trial that he was targeted by authorities because of his race and Christian beliefs.

Asked Friday if the trial had racial implications, he did not answer directly, saying it was "a highly organized conspiracy by the government."

His attorneys maintained that he accepted funds only as a consultant.

U.S. Attorney Nora Manella said the verdicts "put to rest any claims that Mr. Tucker was the victim of government entrapment."

CIA mole Ames proves to have been most prolific spy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aldrich Ames was an industrious mole in the CIA. During one tour of duty, the secret material he slipped to his Soviet employers represented a stack of documents 15 to 20 feet high, CIA Director John Deutch said Friday in the first extensive public assessment of the worst spy case in U.S. history.

During the nine years Ames passed information to Soviet and then Russian intelligence, Deutch said, he caused "severe, wide-ranging and continuing damage to U.S. national security interests."

In addition to Deutch's assessment, the Senate Intelligence Committee made public a CIA inspector general's report on the CIA's handling of information from sources controlled by the KGB. Some of that information went to the president and other policy makers without any indication it came from tainted sources.

Inspector General Frederick P. Hitz said CIA officials "did not take appropriate measures to ensure that consumers of certain intelligence reports were aware of the possibility that information in those reports may have been transmitted at the direction of an opposition intelligence service."

It already has been disclosed that Presidents Reagan and Bush received such reports and that at least one went to President Clinton in the weeks before he took office.

Sens. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., and Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the committee, said they have asked Deutch for a more comprehensive review of all reporting from CIA sources over the past 10 years "which may have been, or still are, controlled by the KGB."

Asked about the damage to the CIA's directorate of operations, which is responsible for clandestine operations, Kerrey said, "I think the damage is severe. ... I think their credibility has been damaged."

The two senators also took issue with the CIA assessment that the impact of the tainted information "varied from program to program. In some cases the impact was negligible. In other cases the impact was measurable, but only on the margin."

Specter and Kerrey said little more than half the 900 reports identified as containing information from KGB agents were thoroughly reviewed for their impact. They also noted that the State Department, which they called "a major intelligence consumer," did not participate in the survey.

Responding to their criticism, the CIA issued a statement saying Deutch "will continue to cooperate fully to address the committee's questions."

The CIA director's report added detail to a sordid story already disclosed in court documents and fragments of testimony given to the Senate and House Intelligence committees.

It described a spy who worked hard for his KGB bosses.

"He went to extraordinary length to learn about U.S. double agent operations and pass information on them to the Soviets," wrote Deutch, who became CIA director after the Ames scandal surfaced. "He disclosed details about U.S. counterintelligence activities that not only devastated our efforts at the time, but also made us more vulnerable to KGB operations against us."

The report said Ames, who pleaded guilty to espionage and is serving a life sentence in prison, "provided finished intelligence reports, current intelligence reporting, arms control papers, and selected Department of State and Department of Defense cables.

"For example, during one assignment, he gave the KGB a stack of documents estimated to be 15 to 20 feet high."

Deutch said Ames contends he identified only a few U.S. intelligence officials. "We do not believe that assertion," said the CIA director.

The Hitz report said 12 officials, including a director of operations and top executives of the division responsible for Soviet intelligence, should be held responsible for failing to warn recipients of intelligence reports that the reports contained information from sources controlled by the KGB. Eleven of the officials have resigned or retired and the other was reprimanded by Deutch.

The inspector general also criticized Deutch's predecessors over the past decade. He did not name them, but they were William Webster, Robert Gates and James Woolsey.

DECEMBER 1995

Norris' program helps children kick drugs

By concentrating on what Norris calls a "positive alternative," children learn to eliminate negative influences such as drugs, violence and gangs.

DALLAS (AP) — On the television show "Walker, Texas Ranger," Chuck Norris' character often takes time away from his life as a crime fighter to promote martial arts as a way to keep children from trouble.

The subplot is no story. It's something Norris has been doing for five years with "Kick Drugs Out Of America," a pilot program used in Houston, Galveston and Dallas middle schools.

Through martial arts and its colored-belt award system, students from sixth through eighth grades are taught discipline, respect and self-esteem. By concentrating on what Norris calls a "positive alternative," children learn to eliminate negative influences such as drugs, violence and gangs.

"It's constant encouragement to be the best you can be," Norris said. "We feed them positive thoughts. The belts are ways of achieving those particular goals. When these children start achieving belt ranks, they get a sense of pride in themselves. They feel successful and want to become even more successful."

Hundreds of children apply each year to be among the dozens accepted into the program, which is taught during the school day by trained professionals Norris hires. If chosen, the students must give up any gang affiliation, promise to stay off drugs and dedicate themselves to their school work.

In October, Norris invited 32 students from the program to Dallas to help film a "Walker" episode, scheduled to air tonight. It involves a student facing peer pressure to join a gang.

"There's a drive-by shooting where this one boy, whose older brother was a graduate of our (karate) school, was shot," Norris said. "The pressure the boy faces now is to join the gang and retaliate.

"But he's a student here and his loyalty is pulled."

In one scene, students go through a drill designed to promote self-esteem as leader Ed Saenz barks out questions and the students shout their responses in unison.

"Who are you?" Saenz asks.

"We are TEAM, sir," the students answer.

After getting them to break down the acronym letter-by-letter — "Truth! Esteem! Attitude! Motivation!" — Saenz hollers: "What can you become?"

"Anything I want to be, sir," they say.

When asked why, the students say they're winners.

The program is a winner, too — growing to five classes per day in 14 schools and involving 1,700 students.

It wasn't so easy at the beginning. Norris had a tough time convincing educators it could work.

Since then, there have been plenty of success stories, including one about a student who had beaten up a teacher and was headed to reform school until another teacher intervened and sent him to a Kick Drugs program.

Norris said the boy's mother wrote him and thanked him for "saving my son's life." She said he went from bringing gang members home, who would tear things up, to bringing fellow students from the program home for homework sessions, Norris said. The boy's grades improved from an F to a C average.

"I called the instructor and said, 'Gee, I got the most fascinating letter from this mother. Why didn't you tell me about him?'" Norris said. "He said, 'That's nothing unusual. This happens all the time.'"

U.S. Rep. Bryant announces bid to unseat Gramm

AUSTIN (AP) — Declaring that Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm is his real opponent, Democratic U.S. Rep. John Bryant announced his bid Friday to unseat the two-term senator.

But Bryant, who will retire from the House by making the Senate race, must defeat three fellow Democrats to get a shot at Gramm.

Joining him on the primary election ballot will be U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman of Sulphur Springs, Houston lawyer John Odam and Mesquite teacher Victor Morales.

Bryant predicted that he would be the Democratic nominee because his Democratic opponents already are far behind him.

"My opponent in this race is Phil Gramm," Bryant said. "Texans have realized that Phil Gramm is not on their side."

Gramm, who has served in the Senate since 1985, is seeking re-election and running for president under Texas' "LBJ Law."

Bryant said he wouldn't complain about Gramm's use of that law because two Democrats — Lyndon B. Johnson and Lloyd Bentsen — also used it.

Rather, Bryant said of Gramm's dual candidacy, "He should be defeated for both."

Larry Neal, Gramm's Senate press secretary, said Bryant can't defeat Gramm because of his voting record.

"John Bryant is a proud liberal who never met a tax hike or government spending program he didn't love," Neal said. "If he is their nominee ultimately, it could be a very interesting race. The differences between Phil Gramm and John Bryant are stark. Bryant believes in government. Phil Gramm believes in freedom. And they've got records to prove it."

Bryant

Bryant's quick claim to front-runner status drew skepticism from the other Democrats.

Tom Stewart, spokesman for Chapman, said it was interesting that a candidate just entering the race would claim other candidates are trailing him.

"Democrats need to unite early behind the candidate who is most electable, and that is Jim Chapman," Stewart said. "Johnny Bryant has a record and a philosophy of someone who can't" win.

Elyse Glimore Yates, spokeswoman for Odam, said Bryant is just another congressman in a year when voters want Washington outsiders.

"One congressman, two congressmen or 15 congressmen does not make a difference," Mrs. Yates said.

"We are still the outsider. John (Odam) is a public citizen who wants to represent the people of Texas in a system in D.C. that is not working. He is the outsider who can fix that, and Bryant is part of that same system," she said.

Bryant currently represents 11 counties in eastern and north-central Texas.

A native of Lake Jackson, Bryant said Texans deserve at least "one senator who will fight for working families and against the Republican extremists who have turned the U.S. Congress into an assault weapon aimed at the American people."

The seven-term congressman described himself as a populist Democrat who isn't afraid to stand up to Republicans.

"I think the people of Texas see what a Republican Congress amounts to. I don't think they support cutting Medicaid for tax breaks for the rich," Bryant said.

Jury to try 5th day of deliberations in Hidalgo County bid-rigging trial

McALLEN (AP) — The jury in the Hidalgo County bid-rigging trial retired for the fourth night Friday without reaching a verdict following 23 1/2 hours of deliberations.

Just after 4:30 p.m., the jurors told U.S. District Judge Ricardo Hinojosa they were "still trying" but had not been able to come to any decisions.

The panel was told to return at 9 a.m. today.

Earlier, the seven-woman, five-man panel announced it was deadlocked and could not reach verdicts on any of the six defendants.

"We have not been able to come to any decision on all defendants and on all counts," the jury said in a note to the judge. "We are deadlocked, and the only thing we agree on is that we cannot and will not be able to agree on anything."

Hinojosa directed them to continue, saying they had deliberated "a relatively short period of time."

Before that, the jurors asked Hinojosa if they arrived at decisions on "one, two or three defendants" whether they could they go ahead and present those judgments.

Hinojosa told them an announcement would be made once decisions are reached on all of the defendants.

County Judge J. Edgar Ruiz and five other officials are accused of conspiring to award more than $1 million in county business to companies represented by former county purchasing agent Ramiro Gonzalez.

In return, prosecutors allege, they received more than $25,000 in kickbacks in the form of cash and airline tickets.

Also accused are County Commissioners Samuel Sanchez and Abelardo Arcaute, former Commissioner Leonardo Camarillo, County Drainage District 1 Manager Joaquin Cerda and Head Start Director Luciano Ozuna.

They are charged in a 102-count indictment that alleges mail fraud, conspiracy to commit mail fraud, bribery, official extortion, conspiracy to commit racketeering and money laundering. All pleaded innocent.

The jury must vote either guilty or innocent on each charge that each defendant faces. They could find a defendant guilty on some charges and innocent on others or one defendant guilty on all charges and another completely innocent.

Ruiz is charged with 75 counts, Arcaute 34, Cerda 31, Ozuna 24, Camarillo seven and Sanchez four.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys have said the lengthiness of the deliberations is not unusual for a two-month trial. But the defendants and their relatives appeared to grow more tense as the week wore on.

While waiting for the jury's note in the courtroom Friday morning, Ruiz's wife, Rosie, read from the Bible while the family's friends and relatives held hands, bowed their heads and prayed.

The judge's mother sagged over the back of a courtroom bench, crying.

The jury received the case Tuesday night. On Wednesday, after eight hours of deliberations, the jurors sent Hinojosa a note saying they did not think they would be able to reach a decision, but the judge directed them to continue deliberating.

Before retiring Thursday evening, the jurors asked Hinojosa to reread part of his instructions to them, including the law on conspiracy charges and plea bargains.

Prayer can assist healing, researchers say

BOSTON (AP) — When religious leaders say that prayer and meditation can help cure physical ailments, they are preaching to the choir among some medical researchers.

Repeating a prayer can lower the heart rate, breathing rate and brain wave activity and sometimes even help someone avoid surgery, according to medical experts who are sharing their techniques at a conference this week.

They say the idea is gaining support among cost-conscious health organizations.

"The supposed gulf between science and spirituality in healing does not always exist," said Dr. Herbert Benson, a Harvard Medical School professor and founder of the Mind/Body Medical Institute at Boston's Deaconess Hospital.

"Scientific studies demonstrate that, by repeating prayers, words or sounds and passively disregarding other thoughts, many people are able to trigger a specific set of physiological changes," Benson said.

Benson says studies show this "relaxation response" decreased visits to health maintenance organizations by 36 percent. And nearly 40 percent of couples who believed they were infertile conceived within six months of practicing the technique, he said.

Benson said he receives five or six calls per week from HMOs looking to incorporate the method in their treatment programs.

Others at the conference discussed what impact spiritual practice has on pain, and the costs and benefits of the technique to health organizations.

Benson started researching what he calls the "mind-body response" about 25 years ago when people practicing transcendental meditation asked him to research the physiological effect of their technique.

He compiled scientific evidence for the health benefits of TM, then began studying how a change in thinking could heal those suffering from stress-related diseases. His work is detailed in his best-selling 1975 book, "The Relaxation Response."

Benson said he found the mind could work "like a drug," especially among people who had strong faith in God or a higher power.

"Eighty percent of the patients, when given the choice of a word sound or a prayer to repeat, chose prayer. I discovered I was teaching prayer," Benson said.

Among the words patients chose to repeat were an oft-used TM mantra or chant, "Ohmmmmmmmm." But more often, Benson found they chanted "Hail Mary," a prayer to the Virgin Mary used in the Roman Catholic Church, and "Sh'ma Yisrael," a key phrase from one of the most important prayers in the Jewish religion.

The revelation prompted Benson to compare notes with priests, rabbis, theologians and spiritual healers, many of whom spoke at the Boston conference this week in support of Benson's research.

"We have our own HMO's — healing ministry outreach," said Samuel Solivan, professor of Christian theology at Andover Newton Theological Seminary.

■ New York shouldn't cut taxes

ALBANY, N.Y. — New York state has no business reducing taxes when it is cutting programs that help the poor, leaders of the New York State Council of Churches said.

The council, which is comprised of some 4,000 congregations, is starting a campaign to convince government and community leaders to share more of the state's wealth with the needy.

Gov. George Pataki is expected to propose in his state budget for the fiscal year beginning April 1, 1996, that the state enact the second year of a state income tax cut that will reduce state revenues by nearly $4 billion over three years. In addition, corporate groups are pushing for big business tax cuts next year.

The council said the tax cut will not benefit the poor or the middle class.

"It's insane. It's extremely foolish to talk about ... cutting taxes for people who already have more than enough," said William Gibson, a Presbyterian clergyman and an associate with the Center for Religion, Ethics and Social Policy at Cornell University.

■ Church revises hymn book

CLEVELAND — In the new United Church of Christ hymnal, God is no longer master, is seldom Lord and also is both father and mother.

That is the interpretation of the New Century Hymnal, the church's revised song book. Old hymns have new lyrics, new hymns were added and, in some cases, hymns that had fallen out of use were brought back.

The book is an attempt to show that everyone is created in God's image, said Andy Lang, a spokesman at church headquarters in Cleveland.

"Language should reflect that truth," Lang said.

He said many traditional hymns were filled with predominantly male metaphors, including concepts such as "kingship."

National Finals

LAS VEGAS — For the first time since the National Finals Rodeo moved to Las Vegas in 1985, a cowboy competing in the timed events won the all-around title.

Joe Beaver of Huntsville, Texas, clinched his first all-around title with a first place in the calf roping Friday night. Beaver had an 8.2-second run to win $12,670 and increase his season earnings to $130,165.

"I just needed to get a check," said Beaver, who finished second in the all-around in 1991, '93 and '94. "I knew I had a good calf. It's about time."

Beaver entered the NFR in second place in calf roping, but had finished in the money only twice in seven rounds before the clinching round.

"I'm going to wait until Sunday to celebrate," Beaver said. "I've still got an outside chance to win two more rounds and maybe get something in the average."

Beaver regularly competes only in calf roping, but this season started team roping more when six-time all-around cowboy Ty Murray of Stephenville, Texas, injured a knee and couldn't compete.

"My calf roping has suffered a little," said Beaver, who won $19,154 team roping during the season.

Three battle for Heisman prize

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

NEW YORK — Eddie George, Tommie Frazier and Danny Wuerffel have won major postseason awards. Now they're involved in a tight three-way battle for the biggest individual prize in college football.

The race for the Heisman Trophy, which will be awarded tonight at the Downtown Athletic Club, is too close to call.

A survey published Friday by USA Today showed George holding a slim lead over Frazier and Wuerffel. In a poll of 232 of the 921 eligible Heisman voters, George led Frazier by 21 points and Wuerffel by 48 points.

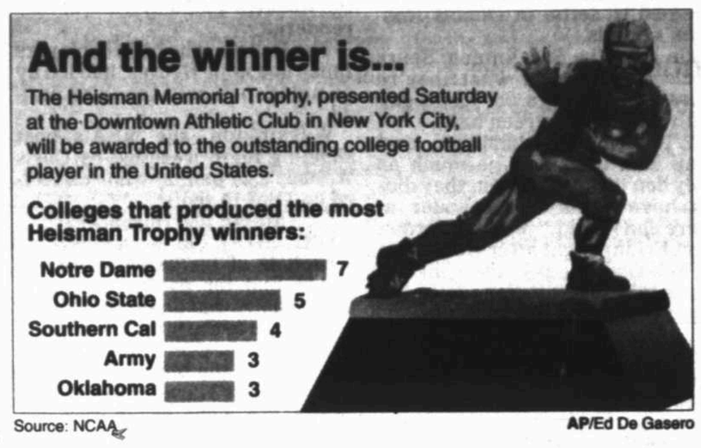

"I think we're all good candidates," Wuerffel said. "Whoever wins will be a good choice."

George received six fewer first-place votes than Frazier and Wuerffel in the USA Today poll, but got more points because he received more second- and third-place votes. A player gets three points for a first-place vote, two for a second and one for a third.

If the poll is an accurate sample, it could be one of the closest votes in the Heisman's 60-year history.

MHS takes first round in OT

■ Basketball battle between Bulldogs and Rebels is always a fight. MHS wins this one, 81-77 in overtime.

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee-Midland High boys basketball series always promises some high drama, and this installment didn't disappoint.

The Bulldogs, given a second chance when teetering on the brink of a loss, made good on their redemption and beat the Rebels 81-77 in overtime Friday night in the semifinals of the Tall City Oilman's Invitational at Chaparral Center.

"This was a typical game in our rivalry. Both teams played great and it was a close ball game," Midland High coach Jack Stephenson said. "Everyone stepped it up tonight. I can't say enough about these kids."

Lee and Midland High slugged it out for three quarters before Lee took control in the fourth and looked as if it would win its fifth straight game, but the Bulldogs came back on clutch shooting from sophomore forward Kirby Lemons and horrible free throw shooting by the Rebels.

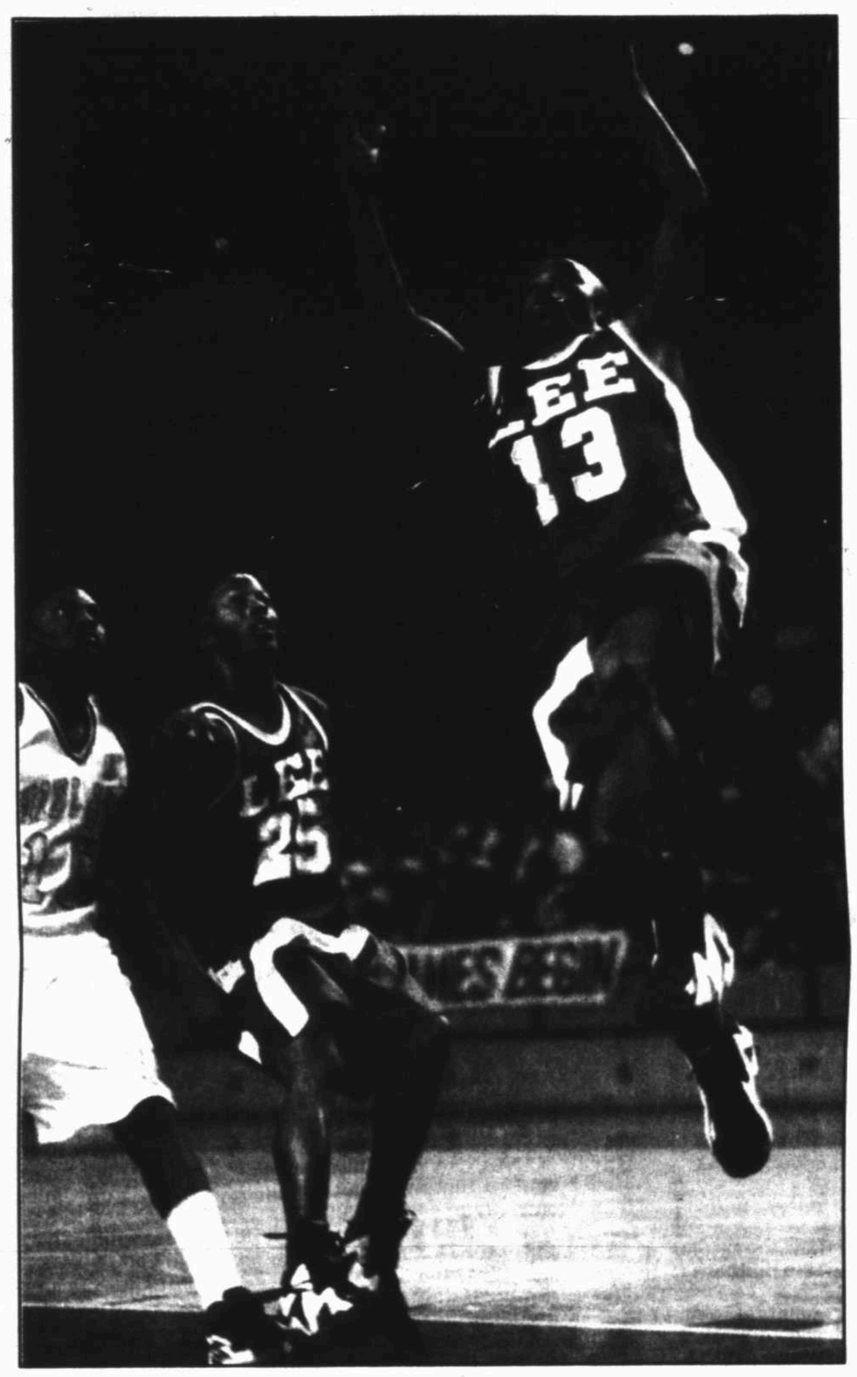

"We played a good game, but we failed to do the little things that you need to do to win." Lee coach Jon House said. "We didn't box out, we weren't hitting our shots and we could not make free throws. If you do that you're going to get beat."

The Rebels executed its game plan and took a 69-63 lead with 3:58 left in the game when the Bulldogs went on an 8-1 run to take the lead.

"Once we started to play as a team, there was nothing that could stop us," said Lemons, who scored a game-high 25 points. "We hit the shot we needed to and got it done. It was a great game out there."

Lemons hit a basket in traffic and Terry Johnson hit two free throws to cut it to 69-67 when senior James Whitfield

Levelland girls rip Lady Rebs, 48-19

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Embarrassing.

That is the only word that Midland Lee girls basketball coach Elise Kail needed to describe the performance of her Lady Rebels Saturday.

In fact, there were probably not many people at Chap Center who could find a ray of hope in Midland Lee's 48-19 loss to Class 4A Levelland.

"Nobody stepped out on the floor ready to play," said Kail. "There was no team unity, and without team unity, nobody can step up and take charge. That sums up the whole game."

The contest, the team's last before starting up District 4-5A play at the Lee gym against Abilene High on Tuesday at 8 p.m., was not the kind of game that makes a coach feel confident for the upcoming battles that district play will provide.

"They can take this as a wake-up call, or cancel the rest of the season," Kail said. "We have the potential to be one of the top teams in the district. I've got ten girls who are good basketball players, but right now they are not a team."

Midland Lee fell behind the 1994 Class 4A regional finalist right off the bat and never appeared to really be focused on a Levelland team that hit from inside and outside. The Loboettes were led by sophomore post Bandi Bayer, who had eight of her 10 points in the first half, as the team hit 11 of their 25 first half shots.

Defensively is where Levelland proved to be an even more dominant team. The Loboettes forced 13 Rebel turnovers in the first half while holding Lee to 4-of-15 shooting. The combination proved to be devastating for the Lady Rebels, who fell behind by scores 6-0, 13-2, 21-4 and 28-10 in the first half.

The same type of ball was shown by both teams in the second half as the Lady Rebels were held to one point in the third quarter (a Susanna Reed free throw) while Levelland shot 7-for-12 from the field. Levelland's sophomore guard Shanti Nix, the team's high scorer with 13, had six points in the 15-1 stretch.

Lee's only field goal in the second half came with four minutes left in the game.

Permian Basin soccer teams get to show off

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

Permian Basin soccer players seem to get better every year. Even when they're just showin' off.

That's what four Midland and one Odessa team will be doing in the fifth annual Blast Coach's Classic today and Sunday. The classic attracts club teams and college coaches from all across the country hoping to make a match between players and scholarship offers. And while exact numbers are hard to come by, the classic has helped several Midland high school soccer players get college coaches interested in them.

Blast Coach's Classic
Soccer Tournament

When: Today and Sunday. Games start at 7:30 a.m. on both days. Sunday's last game is 1:30 p.m.

Where: Hogan Park, Fields 1-4.

Who: Thirty teams from five states including Texas.

Why: College coaches attend the tournament to hook up with potential athletes while the athletes are seeking colleges at which to continue their playing careers.

"There's probably been an average of seven to 10 Midland players that have received scholarship offers from this tournament (each year)," said former Coach's Classic director Mary Huber. "And we heard of six Odessa players (getting offers) last year and no telling about the other teams."

Coaches from 20 to 25 colleges will watch players from 30 teams in 60 games this year starting at 7:30 a.m. Saturday at Hogan Park. Fives states are represented by the under 19-year-old men, under 17 men and under 17 women's teams, including first-time visits from a Missouri and an Oklahoma squad. For the first time local teams had to be turned away from the tournament.

"This year we had to turn down probably 10 to 20 teams," Huber said. "Due to that we'll go to a selection process next year."

One of the visiting coaches will be Schreiner College's Steven Dart. Dart has come to the tournament before and now has five former Midland players on his Kerrville, Texas, team's roster.

"It's a really great opportunity for coaches to see a lot of quality players at one time," Dart said. "(And) as more and more time goes by I think coaches are going to realize the quality of players from the Midland area."

Red Sox secure Canseco's bat

■ Power source for Boston is settled with $9 million, two-year contract.

By Jon Marcus
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — The middle of the Boston Red Sox batting order for the near future has been settled by signing of Jose Canseco to a $9 million, two-year contract.

Other holes remain — such as finding a closer — but for the Red Sox the power sources are in place: American League MVP Mo Vaughn and Canseco.

"He's one of the main cogs in the middle of our order," general manager Dan Duquette said Friday.

Duquette said Canseco agreed at 11:55 p.m. Thursday, minutes before a midnight deadline, but the deal wasn't reported until about a half hour later. Canseco can earn $1 million more each season in performances, and the Red Sox have an option for 1998 at his 1997 earnings.

"Those numbers are something we can both live with," Canseco said Friday. "The main thing I have to do is stay in the lineup day in and day out."

Canseco, 31, spent a month on the disabled list last year with a groin strain, coming back in June to help power a second-half surge. He was 0-for-13 in the playoffs.

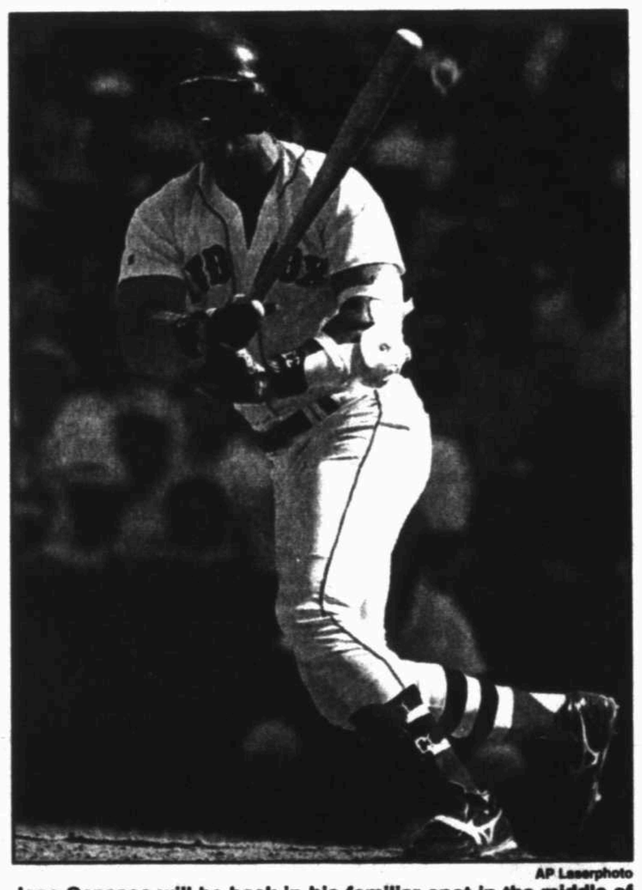

"The No. 1 goal for me, I think it's been the key, is just staying healthy," said Canseco, who said he played golf and lifted weights while his agent negotiated until the last minute for the contract. "As long as I'm in that lineup, I'm going to put us in real good numbers."

Duquette said the Red Sox justified the cost of the contract by requiring that Canseco play right field in at least some games, in addition to his role as designated hitter.

"We were able to find some middle ground there," Duquette said. He said how much time Canseco spends in the outfield will be manager Kevin Kennedy's prerogative.

Canseco played just two games in right field last year, once against Milwaukee on Sept. 28 and once during Cleveland's 3-0 sweep in the first round of the playoffs, but said Friday he was ready to spend more time there.

Worm turns for Spurs: Bulls win

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Almost every time the basketball came off the rim, it seemed to settle in Dennis Rodman's hands.

He gave the San Antonio Spurs a close-up view of what they're missing — and it's not just a guy with tattoos and green hair.

"He brings enthusiasm, and they lack that. And as much as they don't want to face it, they didn't have a major rebounder in there and we did," Michael Jordan said Friday night after Rodman's 21 rebounds helped the Chicago Bulls to a 106-87 victory over the team that dumped him.

"All I can say is I'm glad he's on our team."

Even after Rodman became the first Chicago player in eight seasons to grab at least 20 rebounds in consecutive games, Spurs coach Bob Hill was in a state of denial. More than anyone in the organization, Hill had to battle Rodman's personality quirks and disregard of team rules before San Antonio dealt him two months ago.

"Our chemistry is great," Hill said. "It was a great trade for everybody. It was good for Dennis, who got to come to a team like this. And it was good for us because he didn't want to be in San Antonio.

"But they've won with him and they've won without him, just as we did last season."

The Bulls, who outrebounded the Spurs 46-33, have become one of the NBA's best rebounding teams. Without Rodman, San Antonio has become one of the worst — despite the presence of 1994-95 MVP David Robinson, who leads the league with 11.2 rebounds a game.

"You've got to put your pride aside," Spurs guard Avery Johnson said. "Your pride wants to say he didn't do anything, but he was outstanding ... and we've been having rebounding problems."

Rodman, who also helped hold Robinson to two second-half baskets, declined comment. Robinson finished with 30 points and Sean Elliott added 20, but San Antonio's five-game winning streak was snapped.

Rockets 113, Bullets 107

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 34 points, including a 3-pointer with 46.7 seconds left, as Houston Rockets won its fourth straight game by beating Washington.

Clyde Drexler added 30 — 12 in the fourth quarter — and had 11 rebounds. Drexler started the final quarter with back-to-back baskets, including a 3-pointer, to give the Rockets a lead they never surrendered.

The Bullets, who had six players finish in double figures, had led by as many as five in the third period.

Washington, the NBA's best shooting team were led by Chris Webber's 24 points, who connected on 11-of-15 shots.

Magic 105, Hornets 95

ORLANDO, Fla. — Dennis Scott scored 13 of his 25 points in the fourth quarter as Orlando celebrated news that Shaquille O'Neal will return to the lineup next week with a victory over Charlotte.

Scott kept the Magic close until the defending Eastern Conference champions went on an 11-0 run while holding Charlotte scoreless for more than 4 minutes down the stretch.

Anfernee Hardaway led Orlando, which improved to 11-0 at home and 16-4 overall without the injured O'Neal, with 28 points and 13 assists. Nick Anderson contributed 20 points.

Glen Rice scored 31 points and Larry Johnson had 18 for Charlotte.

O'Neal has been sidelined six weeks with a broken right thumb. He was activated from the injured list earlier in the day, but was not in uniform against the Hornets.

Nets 91, Pacers 89

Top Chaparral sophomores combine for 66 points in win

Staff Report

LAMAR, Colo. — The Midland College Chaparral basketball team got a huge one-two punch from its top two sophomores to beat Otero Junior College 92-87 here Friday.

Devon Phillips threw in a season-high 36 points while the WJCAC's leading scorer D'Juan Baker had 30 to push the Chaps to 7-4 for the season.

Midland College, who led 46-44 at the half, got 18 points from Phillips and Baker in the games first 20 minutes despite the foul trouble that kept Midland College freshman Ceedric Goodwyn on the bench for most of the half.

With Goodwyn, who scored eight, back in the lineup in the second half, the Chaps fought back to regain a lead lost in the second 20 minutes. Midland College came back from 10 down with six minutes to go. In head coach Pat Rafferty's words, the team "turned it up a bit." Rafferty said that key minutes from Larry Jackson and Milton Palacio were an important factor for the Chaps.

Phillips, the conference's No. 2 ranked free throw shooter, lived up to the billing, knocking down five of six down the line to seal the win. Phillips was ten of 13 from the charity stripe during the night.

Quincy Huckles, Charles Brady and Arias Davis had 13 while Ricky Poole and Kevin Lewis had 16 and 15 for Otero.

Midland College will stay in Lamar today to play to hometown Lamar Community College.

Purdue (3-3) got a game-high from Jannon Roland with 26 points, while Stacey Lovelace added 13 points and Tonya Kirk chipped in 11.

Tennessee (7-0) also received 15 points each from Chamique Holdsclaw and Abby Conklin.

Tennessee broke open the game in the first half, taking a 19-8 lead at the 10:37 mark on Marciniak's 12-foot jumper.

The Boilermakers cut the deficit to 22-14 with 7:53 left on Lovelace's driving layup, but Tiffani Johnson made a layup with 5:47 remaining to give the Vols a double-digit lead at 27-16.

Tennessee led 35-21 at halftime as Purdue could never get closer than 11 points in the second half. The Boilermakers trailed 77-66 with just under a minute remaining.

The Boilermakers also trailed by 11 at 35-24 and 75-64.

No. 6 Georgetown destroys Sacramento State

The Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — For five straight possessions, the Georgetown Hoyas didn't let Sacramento State move the ball past halfcourt. In fact, the hapless Hornets could even get past their own free throw line.

Georgetown made 24 steals, forced 37 turnovers and rested guard Allen Iverson for the final 16:38 as the sixth-ranked Hoyas played out a 113-58 mismatch Friday night.

Against the quick moves of Iverson and Victor Page, Sacramento freshman guards Eric Carey and Markel Sadler looked like Model Ts trying to negotiate the fast lane of a Montana interstate. During one sequence early in the game, the Hornets (2-4) were outscored 10-0 without attempting a shot.

Top 25 Men

No. 9 Connecticut 93, Yale 66

HARTFORD, Conn. — Ray Allen had 29 points and Doron Sheffer a career-high 27 to lead Connecticut to a victory over Yale.

Connecticut (6-1) took a 10-0 lead before the Bulldogs (3-4) even got off a shot. Allen and Sheffer both had 3-pointers in that run.

Yale closed to 20-11, but Allen had seven of the next 11 points as UConn pushed the lead to 31-11. It was 45-24 at halftime as Allen had 19 points and Sheffer 14.

Yale scored the first five points of the second half and drew to within 48-32, but Allen and Sheffer combined for the next 17 UConn points to make it 65-34 with 15:10 left.

Yale got no closer than 21 thereafter. The Huskies also got 11 points from Travis Knight.

No. 17 Cincinnati 100, Wagner 64

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati completed a romp through its annual tournament as Art Long scored 18 points to lead a victory over Wagner for the Delta Air Lines Classic championship.

Immediately after the game, Cincinnati (3-0) headed for Arkansas and a nationally televised game Saturday afternoon. It will be the Bearcats' third game in three days and first major test of the season. None of the other three teams in Cincinnati's tournament had a winning record heading into Friday's games.

No. 21 Illinois 89, SE Missouri 70

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Richard Keene scored 18 points as No. 21 Illinois beat Southeast Missouri State in the first round of the Illini-Pepsi Classic.

The Illini (5-0) started slowly and made only 43 percent of its shots for the game, but that was enough to overwhelm Southeast Missouri (2-3), which shot only 40 percent and had 24 turnovers.

Illinois led by as many as 28 points in the second half. Keene, who scored 11 points in the first half, capped a 16-2 run with a layup with 7:41 to go to give the Illini a 69-43 lead.

The Illini led 36-25 at the half despite shooting only 32 percent. Southeast Missouri led 20-12 with 8:44 to go when Keene sparked a 17-0 run with an alley-oop pass to Chris Gandy for a dunk, then a layup and a 3-pointer.

Former Bull ties knot at halftime

Bob Love, the second-leading scorer in Chicago Bulls history, was married Friday night at center court of the United Center between the first and second halves of the Bulls' game against the San Antonio Spurs. Love, now the team's director of community relations, wed Rachel Dixon in a seven-minute ceremony attended by Bulls owner Jerry Reinsdorf, general manager Jerry Krause and other team officials.

Presiding was Lacy J. Banks, a Baptist minister who also happens to be a sportswriter for the Chicago Sun-Times. The sellout crowd cheered as Love said, "I do." The applause grew as the couple kissed at the conclusion of the ceremony. Love is one of only two Bulls besides Michael Jordan whose number has been retired. Jerry Sloan is the other.

Baylor men top Centenary in Dr. Pepper tourney; Baylor women fall

The Associated Press

WACO — Doug Brandt poured in 27 points, and Baylor needed them all as the Bears defeated Centenary 80-77 in the nightcap of the Dr Pepper Invitational basketball tournament on Friday.

The Baylor (2-3) forward also had a game-high nine rebounds to preserve victory for the host Bears. Center Brian Skinner added 13 points for Baylor, while guard Damond Mannon joined in with 11 points.

Baylor played Centenary (3-3) even during the first half, going into intermission ahead 33-28. Then, the Gentlemen resorted to long-range artillery, connecting on 8-of-23 3-point tries in the second half but only 16-of-41 overall from the field.

Meanwhile, Baylor was making 16 of 24 from the field and was good on one of its only two second-half 3-pointers. Centenary outscored Baylor 49-47 in the second half, but it was just short.

Guard Anthony Stephens led the Gents with 21 points and shared the team rebounding high of seven with guard Lincoln Abrams and reserve Herbert Lang. Guard Aljay Foreman had 18 points, while Abrams had 15.

Baylor will face Auburn for the tournament championship Saturday night, right after a consolation game between Centenary and Liberty. Auburn defeated Liberty 63-58 in Friday's tournament opener at The Ferrell Center on the Baylor University campus.

No. 21 Mississippi 72, Baylor 66

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Dorianne Johnson hit both ends of a 1-and-1 with 1:26 left to break the final tie and give No. 21 Mississippi a 72-66 victory over Baylor in the first round of the Lady Eagle Classic.

SWC Men, Women

An 8-0 run gave the Lady Bears (3-4) a 66-61 lead with 4:14 left, but Ole Miss (5-1) turned up the defensive heat and shut Baylor down the rest of the way.

With the score tied 66-66, Johnson hit both ends of the bonus and Ole Miss was in charge thereafter.

Yolanda Moore, who led Ole Miss (5-1) with 21 points, scored seven as the Lady Rebels opened a 12-2 lead. Baylor got six straight points from Tonia Harris in cutting the Ole Miss lead to 17-13 and the Lady Bears were in touch the rest of the way.

Baylor (3-4) trailed only 37-36 at halftime, then got off to a 6-2 start in the second half, building the lead to 42-39 on a basket by Tasia Wright. Ole Miss reponded with an 11-1 run later in the half and led 52-45 with 13:15 left.

Lisa Miller added 17 points for Mississippi. Baylor was led by Halley Moffit with 15 and Harris with 14.

TROPHY: Top three are in close race for college prize

(From 1C)

Long in 1985 was the slimmest ever. The closest three-man race was in 1956, when Paul Hornung beat runner-up Johnny Majors by 72 points and third-place Tommy McDonald by 93 points.

Recent races haven't been that close. Since 1985, the average winning margin has been 872 points. Only Andre Ware, who beat Anthony Thompson by 70 points in 1989, won by fewer than 300 during that span.

Frazier, George and Wuerffel had splendid seasons for high-profile teams, making it a difficult choice for voters.

"I voted for Frazier, but I had a hard time making up my mind," said Ivan Maisel of Newsday.

George and Wuerffel had more impressive stats than Frazier, but the senior quarterback led top-ranked Nebraska to its third straight national title game and helped the Huskers average an NCAA-best 52 points.

"A quarterback doesn't get big numbers in our (option) system," said Frazier, who passed or ran for 31 of his team's 77 touchdowns. "His job is to execute the offense and lead the team down the field."

George, a senior tailback, led the nation with 24 touchdowns and set Ohio State records for yards in a season (1,826) and a game (314 vs. Illinois).

"He may be the premier back in the country," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said after George rushed for 207 yards and two touchdowns against the Irish. "He's got more 200-yard games than any back in Ohio State history, and they've had some great backs."

Wuerffel, a junior quarterback, set an NCAA record for passing efficiency and led No. 2 Florida to the Fiesta Bowl, where the Gators will play Nebraska for the national championship.

"He's smart, he makes the big plays ... and he never gets rattled," said Florida receiver Jacquez Green. "He's just a great quarterback."

Wuerffel, Frazier and George will attend the Heisman ceremony along with running backs Darnell Autry of Northwestern and Troy Davis of Iowa State.

NCAA II title game pits heavyweights

By Ken Berger
Associated Press Writer

■ Small Colleges

FLORENCE, Ala. — The Fiesta Bowl has No. 1 vs. No. 2. The Division II championship game today has the teams of the '90s in a dream matchup that not even polls or politicking could produce.

North Alabama has lost only once in 41 games and has worn the small-college crown two years in a row. Pittsburg State has a 39-3-1 record the past three seasons, and is the winningest team in college football — at any level — since 1985, with a 122-13-2 record.

Pittsburg State has the best record in Division II in the '90s at 69-7-2. North Alabama is second best at 58-15-1.

In other small-college playoff action Saturday, Marshall (11-2) is at McNeese State (13-0) and Stephen F. Austin (11-1) visits Montana (11-2) in the I-AA semifinals. In the Stagg Bowl at Salem, Va., Wisconsin-LaCrosse (13-0) plays Rowan, N.J., (10-2-1) for the Division III title.

In the NAIA Division II semifinals, Findlay, Ohio (9-1-1) plays at Lambuth, Tenn. (10-0-1), and Mary, N.D. (11-1) plays Central Washington (9-3) at Puyallup, Wash.

Both North Alabama and Kansas-based Pittsburgh have put up statistics that are both startling and startlingly similar.

At least on paper, this is as even as teams get. But who knows? In small college football, where teams rarely play opponents from outside their region, the paper often lies.

"Very few teams from the South play teams from the East, the Midwest and the West," said North Alabama coach Bobby Wallace, explaining the difficulty in handicapping the game (1 p.m. CST, ESPN). "It's very hard to judge and compare on film."

For example, the semifinal game between North Alabama and Ferris State was billed as an even matchup between teams that had dominated their corner of the small college world. The Lions won 45-7.

No. 1 North Alabama (13-0) and No. 4 Pittsburg State (12-0-1) have never played each other, and they had no common opponents this season. Statistics say that if they had played, they would have tied. Both teams score an average of 37 points per game and give up 11.

The only real source of comparison is that the Gorillas beat Texas A&M-Kingsville 28-25 last week in the semifinals. North Alabama beat A&M 16-10 in last year's championship game.

Wallace insists that Pittsburg State is for real.

"They've been to the national championship game, and they've won the national championship game," he said. "I think this is going to be a very close game."

Pittsburg State coach Chuck Broyles gives the edge to North Alabama, partly because the game is played at the Lions' home field, Braly Stadium. But Broyles, who has won five Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletic Association championships and the national title in 1991 at Pittsburg State, said both teams have a chance.

"If you get in (the playoffs), you have a chance to win a game," said Broyles, who has coached the Gorillas to six straight playoff appearances and a third championship game. "If you win one, you might win another one. If you win two, there's just one game left between you and the national championship game."

Lo and behold, the approach worked.

"I think we kind of surprised ourselves," Broyles said.

Arkansas AD, Cowboys discuss possible job

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — University of Arkansas Athletic Director Frank Broyles and Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones are discussing a possible job for Broyles with the Cowboys.

"We have talked," Jones said from his office at Valley Ranch outside Dallas. "We did talk about whether a position would be a supplement or full-time."

Jones, who is from Arkansas and is a former Razorback, described the talks Thursday as preliminary. He said the conversations do not constitute a job offer.

Broyles, 70, has been with Arkansas for 39 years and has been either head coach or athletic director since 1957. In 1990, he led the Razorbacks out of the Southwest Conference, bringing the team to the Southeastern Conference.

"We have had two brief phone conversations," Broyles said. "I told him the university encourages its employees to seek part-time work and we talked about work as a consultant and full-time work. I was very flattered when he called and said he thought I could help the Cowboys."

Broyles said he's talked with the university about his options and expects to talk with Jones more in the future.

Jones insisted that he was serious and excited about the possibility of Broyles working for the Cowboys and that he had thought about specific duties if it happens.

"He would not be a coach or an administrator, but he would be more in a public relations aspect," Jones said.

He added, "To me, a job offer has to include discussion of time and finances and we haven't talked about those. I picked up the phone and called him to feel him out," Jones said. "At this juncture, though, either one of us could call the other and say the timing is not good, let's get back together six months or a year from now, and we could work it out then."

Broyles expressed interest in the projects Jones is undertaking in Dallas.

"Jerry is interested in building a theme park and in changing Texas Stadium, which I have experience with," Broyles said.

Lately, Jones has been drawing fire for striking his own marketing deal with Nike, contrary to NFL policy. Jones and the league have filed suit over the matter.

Broyles said Jones' actions were misunderstood.

"All (Jones) is trying to do is build a great team, but it isn't being reported that way. He feels I could help him with that and ease his workload so he can concentrate on more serious matters."

As director of athletics, Broyles has overseen more than $100 million in construction and remodeling of UA athletic facilities in the last 20 years, and various UA teams have won 25 national championships.

COWBOYS NOTES: Looking to shore up the Dallas defense, Cowboys owner Jerry Jones has contacted a former player who once refused to shake his hand.

Jones disclosed that former Cowboys linebacker Jesse Solomon is one of the players being considered by the team for a backup job. It was Solomon who once infuriated his boss by spurning a handshake on the practice field.

Solomon, whose last season with the Cowboys was in 1991, had accused Jones of reneging on a promise to renegotiate his contract.

"There are no issues at all with me regarding Jesse as far as anything personal," Jones says now. "He has already told me that he'll shake my hand."

HALEY'S BACK?: Coach Barry Switzer says defensive end Charles Haley told him he will return to Dallas this weekend, following Wednesday's back surgery in California.

An optimistic Switzer believes Haley has a chance to return to the lineup for the NFC Championship Game or Super Bowl. But that may be wishful thinking. After a similar operation in 1993, Troy Aikman returned to practice on a limited basis after six weeks, one third the typical recovery period. Haley's position is more physically demanding.

INSIDE OUT: Switzer is confident that Leon Lett will successfully adjust to the defensive end position, although he has carved a niche as one of the best tackles in the NFL.

"I know that Lett will be a good player, but does it mean he's going to be a good player the first series he plays?" Switzer said of the Lett, who returned to the lineup a week ago after a four-game suspension for violating the league's substance abuse policy.

"Blocking schemes on the perimeter are different than playing an inside tackle, and the plays are different out there; there are different people blocking on him."

LOOKING GOOD: Emmitt Smith impressed his coaches with his running in Thursday's practice, but Switzer says the NFL rushing leader needs only to give an average performance this week.

"I asked Emmitt if he could get us his average this week," the coach said.

Smith, who has averaged 148 yards against the Eagles, was limited because of a sprained knee last week.

LOUD MOUTH: Godfrey Myles, who will replace injured middle linebacker Robert Jones, is one of the most vocal players on the field. That's what Switzer thinks.

"I'm a lot more vocal than certain guys because I want to see everybody do well," said Myles, who is nursing a slightly separated shoulder. "I've been around here five years. I've been in this system five years. I know what's worked and what doesn't."

Defensive player wins Harlon Hill

FLORENCE, Ala. (AP) — North Alabama linebacker Ronald McKinnon became the first defensive player ever to win the Harlon Hill Trophy as Division II's player of the year.

McKinnon beat out Ferris State quarterback Bill Love and Portland State running back Steve Papin to win the award Friday.

A field of 22 contenders was narrowed to the three finalists, with sports information directors from the 142 Division II football schools picking the winner.

McKinnon leads North Alabama's "Purple Swarm" defense, the top-rated unit in the nation. The Gulf South Conference's No. 1 career tackler with 596, he became the third player to make first-team all-conference four straight seasons.

The senior made 114 tackles in 1995, including 10 for losses and three sacks.

Oilers could be without Chandler due to illness

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Chris Chandler is suffering from mononucleosis and the Houston Oilers likely won't determine his playing status until just before Sunday's game against Detroit.

Chandler has been ailing for two weeks and has lost 10 pounds because of the illness. He sat out the second half of last week's loss at Pittsburgh because he felt too weak.

Chandler said Friday test results revealed he has mononucleosis, a blood deficiency with symptoms including fatigue.

Oilers coach Jeff Fisher has said backup Will Furrer will start if Chandler can't, but he hopes to fit rookie Steve McNair into the game plan. Chandler said Friday he still was not well enough to play.

KRIV-TV reported late Friday that if Chandler is still ill Sunday, McNair will likely fill in, according to offensive coordinator Jerry Rhome.

"I believe he would," Rhome told KRIV-TV. "Coach Fisher has the last word on that, but I think that's what we're planning on."

Furrer has been ineffective throughout this season, including the Steelers game, and Houston fans have clamored for Fisher to insert McNair, the highly touted first-round draft pick.

Houston (5-8) has been all but eliminated from the NFL playoff picture. Detroit (7-6), meanwhile, has won four straight and is in the thick of the NFC wildcard race.

Angel publications receive awards

LOS ANGELES — Capping off its most successful season both on and off the field, the Midland Angels added to their list of honors here earlier this week at the Baseball Winter Meetings. In a competition conducted by two sports print companies, the Angels' 1995 team brochure was judged the finest single print project in all of minor league baseball.

The Angels' team brochure, program, pocket schedule and souvenir brochure all gained recognition in the "Best of Ballparks" competition, conducted by Multi Ad Services. Midland's Double A affiliate of the California Angels was the only club to collect four awards in the "Best of Ballpark" competition.

The highlight of the meeting for the Angels was the official presentation of the Bob Freita Award for the nation's top Double A franchise. Other Midland awards from the winter meetings were: Angel general manager Monty Hoppel named Texas League manager of the year by the Texas League, the Texas League's "Best Team Hotel" award (Midland Hilton Hotel and Towers), and Angel co-owner Miles Prentice named vice chair of the NAPBL Board of Trustees.

Coach gets milestone win at small college

By Dave Ivey
Associated Press Writer

More Sports/10C

PHILADELPHIA — A handful of games into Herb Magee's 29th season at Philadelphia Textile, the men's basketball coach has broken an NCAA record, reached a milestone and lost at home for the first time in five years.

The Rams' season-opening 71-67 defeat of Eastern was victory No. 600 of Magee's 29-year career. Game two, a 73-52 rout of Molloy, set a Division II record as Textile's 80th consecutive home win. But the streak was broken in the third game, a 65-62 overtime loss to West Chester.

"It's been quite a roller-coaster, that's for sure," Magee said after his 15th-ranked Rams (4-1) beat New York Tech, 86-81. "Hopefully, things will get back to normal around here now."

Normal at Textile means winning — a lot.

And the Rams have done it consistently since Magee, the school's second all-time leading scorer with 2,235 points, took over the coaching reigns at his alma mater in 1967-68. His teams have gone to 19 NCAA tournaments, more than any active Division II coach. Textile won a national title in 1970 and has been to the Sweet 16 five years running.

Since 1988, the Rams are an amazing 122-3 at Althouse Hall, an intimate 1,000-seat gymnasium dubbed "The Hall of Pain."

Magee, who is 603-214, has coached only two losing teams and produced a dozen All-Americans. He is one of only seven Division II coaches to get 600 wins and just the 28th in NCAA history at any level to reach the milestone. Magee, 54, ranks 14th among active winningest NCAA coaches.

"Coaching keeps me young. I want to go until I'm 70," Magee said. "I guess I could get a few more wins if I do that."

The wood-paneled walls of Magee's office are adorned with proclamations from the city and other honors and awards. He has been named regional Coach of the Year six times and national Coach of the Year twice. He was inducted into the Pennsylvania Sports Hall of Fame in 1979.

As an added bonus, Magee's players graduate. Only three recruits in his three decades of coaching haven't earned a degree, and one of them is still in school. Ninety percent of Textile's graduates have a job within 10 weeks of graduation — a handy recruiting statistic.

Located in the scenic and wooded neighborhood of East Falls, Textile is a private school with about 1,800 full-time students. The unique curriculum features coursework in graphic design, textile technology, architecture and polymer chemistry, as well as marketing, finance and psychology.

The Rams play in a competitive New York Collegiate Athletic Conference, which placed four schools in the 48-team NCAA tournament last year.

Playing in the shadows of Philadelphia's Big 5 of Villanova, Temple, La Salle, St. Joseph's and Penn, his small-school accomplishments have largely gone unnoticed outside of the city. Instead of a lucrative sneaker contract or ESPN coverage, Magee toils as a full-time faculty member who has coached golf, tennis and cross country during his tenure.

But Magee has the job he wants and he's not interested in the big time.

"I could have gone to the NBA as an assistant a couple of times, but I didn't want to leave my kids," said Magee, who has two grown daughters and will soon be a grandfather. "I'm exactly where I belong."

The 5-foot-10, 160-pound Irishman turned down his first shot at the NBA in 1963. A two-time small college All-American guard, Magee was selected by the Boston Celtics in the seventh round. But he turned it down to become an assistant at Textile, a job the school created just for him.

GIRLS: Lady Rebels fall to Levelland

(From 1C)

A fall-away jump shot by Roxanne Pylant ended a 9-2 Rebel run (seven free throws) to start the fourth quarter, but the run was only noteworthy in its existence as the Rebels would not score for the rest of the half.

For the night, the Rebels shot a 17 percent (5-of-29) from the field and committed 22 turnovers. Jamie Rhoads, who averages 16.4 points a game, led the Lady Rebels' offense with 13 points. Kail, however, felt Lee's inability offensively was a bigger factor than anything Levelland threw at her.

"They played good defense, but they didn't play that good," said Kail. "They did exactly what I expected."

The theme of disappointing team play was shared by Levelland's head coach, who didn't sound a bit pleased over a 29-point win over a District 4-5A school. Of course, Dean Weese's team went 32-3 last season and lost in the regional final on a last second three-point shot to the eventual 4A state champion, Cleburne.

"I wasn't happy with the way we played," said Weese. "I haven't been all year. I thought after ten games we'd be a good ball club, but we just haven't got to where I want us to be."

OIL: Bulldogs can defend last year's title with win tonight against Monterey fouled out with 17 points.

(From 1C)

Lee had a 70-69 lead and could have all but put it away but the Rebels could not hit key free throws down the stretch — they missed five of six in the final two minutes — to beat the Bulldogs.

"We played a good game, but we just did some stupid things out there," Lee senior Mark Holly said, who led the Rebels with 19 points. "As a senior, I should have hit those free throws."

Holly had a second chance to win it for Lee with fourth-tenths of a second left, hitting one of two free throws to send the game to overtime.

Lemons scored on a short jumper with 10.8 seconds left to put Midland High ahead by one at 71-70, but Lee had one last chance to win. Lee got the ball to its most reliable shooter in Holly who was fouled by Lemons going to the basket with 0.48 seconds left. The 6-2 senior hit the front end of the two-shot foul, but the second shot bounced off the rim which forced the overtime.

Nothing changed in the overtime period as both teams battled shot for shot before Johnson connected on a three-pointer with 1:51 left to put Midland High ahead 77-72.

"It was a crazy game, but those are the kind you expect when you play Midland Lee," Jon Stephenson said. "We battled and they battled and it was back and forth throughout the whole game. They didn't give up and we didn't either."

Israel Boyd hit for three of his 16 with 1:40 left in overtime which kept the Rebels in striking distance, down 77-75. The team traded baskets before Matt Meyer's last-chance three-point attempt fell short with 13.1 seconds left. Lemons added a basket at the buzzer to seal the win.

The win puts the Bulldogs (8-2) into the tournament championship game tonight at 8 p.m. against Lubbock Monterey, a 58-48 winner over Alamagordo (N.M.) High in the other semifinal contest.

Lee (5-6), which had its four-game winning streak snapped, will play Alamogordo (4-1) at 5 p.m. for third place.

The Plainsmen were led by Mike McPhaul who scored 18 points as Monterey pulled away in the second half. Ryan McDermott led Alamagordo with 15 points.

Alamagordo got to the semifinals with a 58-57 squeaker over El Paso Irvin in a morning game. Monterey beat El Paso Hanks 54-42 to advance.

In the consolation bracket played at the Lee High Gym, Pflugerville outlasted Lubbock Coronado 88-84, Troup blasted El Paso Coronado 58-38 and El Paso Eastwood destroyed Dumas 106-48.

Today's consolation bracket schedule has El Paso Irvin and Pflugerville at Chap Center and Troup taking on El Paso Eastwood at Lee High at 9 a.m. The winners meet at 3 p.m. at Chap Center in the consolation final.

Lubbock Coronado and El Paso Coronado play at 11 a.m. at Lee and Dumas plays the loser of the Pflugerville-El Paso Irvin game at 2 p.m.

The late-game theatrics against Lee were just a carryover from its first game on Friday as Midland High escaped with a 59-56 quarterfinal win over Class 4A Levelland on a three-pointer by Johnson with 14.8 seconds left.

The Bulldogs had a tougher time than expected with the (6-2), trailing much of the fourth quarter before pulling it out at the end. Johnson led the Bulldogs with 16 points while Whitfield had 13 and Josh Lane added 10.

Levelland (9-4) was led by Scott Fitzherbert's 15 points.

Lemons picked up his fourth personal foul with 5:15 left in the game and the game tied at 50. The Lobos took advantage, hitting a three-pointer to take its biggest lead of the game at 53-50.

The teams traded baskets and until Fitzherbert hit a free throw with 32.3 seconds left to put the Lobos ahead 56-54 and set thr stage for Johnson.

The Bulldogs called time out to set up the game-winning play, which went to Johnson in the corner. He took in the pass, squared up to shoot and nailed the three with 14.8 seconds remaining to put Midland High up for good.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Draw a blueprint for what you hope to achieve. Going back to school or getting additional training will boost your income potential. New perks or a promotion are featured next March. Postpone vacation travel until mid-summer. A brief encounter could lead to an exhilarating romance. The events of next fall will strengthen family and marital ties. Siblings who have fought in the past declare a truce. A wise investment pays handsome dividends.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: actress Dina Merrill, singer Joan Armatrading, basketball player Otis Birdsong, poet John Milton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A telephone call or special delivery letter brings welcome news. You gain new stature in the eyes of your loved ones by taking on more responsibility.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be realistic when doing your holiday shopping. There is no need to go into debt to prove your love. Homemade goodies or carefully chosen stocking gifts will be appreciated as much as more costly presents.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A family member who has fallen on hard times is looking for a sympathetic shoulder. Avoid saying, "I told you so." Watching a special video or singing Christmas carols puts you in the holiday spirit.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Go ahead and tell your mate what you feel is missing. Loved one wants to fulfill your needs. A fireside chat and beautiful music help create a peaceful mood.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Examine a friend's financial proposal more carefully. Although this person means well, you cannot afford to take risks. Keep on top of matters involving an elderly relative or friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Taking a day trip will help you break out of a rut. Invite a companion who shares your interests. Shopping in boutiques could yield unique gifts. Be patient with children exciting over the coming holiday.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Charitable work holds much stronger appeal now. Put more emphasis on community and church causes. A loved one who is down in the dumps would benefit from an encouraging word.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Luck is on your side if you seek a loan. Influential people are easier to contact than in the recent past. An old investment could pay unexpected dividends. Dress up if invited to a formal event.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Arguments can be averted if you are tactful and tolerant. Put your new ideas on paper, then discuss them with good friends. Events at a distance could affect your life in an exciting way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An anniversary, convention or reunion takes center stage today. You enjoy reliving long-ago days with your loved ones. Moving into a new residence can be lots of fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Let those nearest and dearest to your heart know of your devotion. An affectionate approach and open mind will endear you to a very special person.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Although you are self-sufficient, you can profit from following the suggestions of reliable friends. Take good advice when it is offered. Mop and polish your home until everything glows, then do some entertaining.

Courtney Love claims she was roughed up by concert security

NEW ORLEANS — Courtney Love says she was roughed up by security guards while hanging out backstage at a concert by the rock group Green Day.

Courtney Love says she was roughed up at concert.

Police said they were investigating the incident Wednesday at the University of New Orleans' Lakefront Arena.

Love, lead singer for the band Hole, said she was sitting on an equipment box signing autographs when three arena guards ordered her to move away.

She said they grabbed her by the neck and pushed her toward the seats, twisting her arm behind her back and pulling her hair while ignoring her attempts to show them her VIP backstage pass.

"My head was banged one, two, three, four times against a steel pole," Love said Thursday. "While this was happening, one guy was doing things down by my underwear. You don't touch a human being like that, celebrity or not."

Love said she was dragged into the audience area before the men released her.

"One of them said, 'Oh, you're Courtney Love. I'm sorry, it's all been a big mistake,'" Love said. "As if, just because I'm me, I shouldn't have been treated that way, but if I wasn't me, then I should."

An arena official declined to comment, saying he had not received a report on the incident.

LOS ANGELES — Former Joffrey Ballet star Gary Chryst says the aches and pains of being a middle-aged dancer aren't enough to make him retire.

"I'm a 46-year-old gay man," he said. "Most of my friends have died. The fact I'm even dancing ... it's amazing."

Chryst is now with Netherlands Dance Theatre 3, which makes its West Coast debut Friday in Los Angeles.

NDT3 was founded for dancers older than 40, an age when retirement is usually inevitable. The company emphasizes acting and theatrical skills over flashy moves its dancers no longer can execute.

Chryst wanted to retire in the 1970s but a final Joffrey Ballet tour to the Soviet Union made him reconsider.

"It changed my whole point of view," Chryst said. "The audience went crazy to see this. And I realized, someone gave you a gift to communicate to the audience, and that's what you're supposed to do."

SAN FRANCISCO — The King of Torts' legal empire is tottering.

Melvin Belli, whose clients have included Jim and Tammy Bakker, Errol Flynn, Mae West and Jack Ruby, is taking his law firm into Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

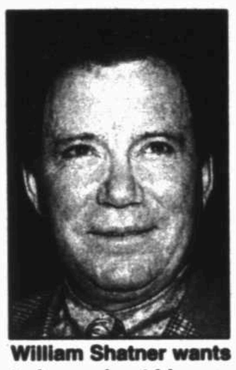

He blamed his multimillion-dollar divorce settlement in 1991 and the collapse of the settlement in the Dow Corning silicone breast implant case.

"The Belli firm was to receive over $200 million prior to Dow Corning filing bankruptcy," Belli said Thursday. "That's the case that got us into trouble."

The firm's creditors include doctors, hospitals and medical firms owed money for their work on the implant case.

JERUSALEM — William Shatner wants to boldly go where he's never gone before — deep into his Jewish heritage.

Standing on a cliff overlooking the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest site, the "Star Trek" actor said Friday: "I am here to absorb Jerusalem and Israel and take a look at my heritage. I think that it is so mystical and marvelous. It beckons everyone in the world, particularly Jews, to come here."

The Montreal-born actor attended a ceremony with Mayor Ehud Olmert dedicating a sculpture of the Twelve Tribes of Israel at a seminary across from the Western Wall.

Yankees miss deadline on McDowell

■ New York can't re-sign pitcher until May 1, leaving him open to shop around.

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Now the New York Yankees don't have to worry about affording both David Cone and Jack McDowell.

In a move that surprised some baseball executives, the Yankees didn't offer McDowell salary arbitration by Thursday's midnight deadline. They can't re-sign him until May 1, making it virtually certain he will pitch elsewhere next season.

The Yankees, who acquired first baseman Tino Martinez on Thursday from Seattle, were said Friday to be close to a two-year deal with free agent second baseman Mariano Duncan. He hit .287 last season with six homers and 36 RBIs in 265 at-bats.

Duncan, who will be 33 next season, began 1995 with Philadelphia and was traded to Cincinnati on Aug. 8 for a minor leaguer. Atlanta had tried to claim him on waivers but Cincinnati blocked the move.

A person familiar with the negotiations said a contract could be announced as early as Monday.

Yankees general manager Bob Watson hopes to sign Craig Biggio or Roberto Alomar as his starting second baseman. Duncan, under this scenario, would replace Randy Velarde, who agreed to a three-year contract with California after the Angels promised him a starting job.

Without McDowell, the Yankees' starting pitching is considerably weakened. If they don't re-sign Cone, they face the prospect of starting the season with a rotation of Dwight Gooden, Scott Kamieniecki, Andy Pettitte and perhaps Melido Perez and Jimmy Key if they are healthy.

McDowell started 30 games for New York last season and pitched 217 2-3 innings. By not offering arbitration, the Yankees also will not receive draft picks as compensation for losing him.

New York also won't get any draft picks for losing catcher Mike Stanley, who also wasn't offered arbitration. The Yankees did offer arbitration to first baseman Don Mattingly and reliever Rick Honeycutt. Both are contemplating retirement.

Indians solidify bid for 1996 World Series with Nagy

NEW YORK (AP) — The Cleveland Indians spent another $6.75 million on Friday, agreeing to a two-year contract with Charles Nagy.

Jaime Navarro, meanwhile, decided to stay with the Chicago Cubs, agreeing to an unusual contract that is worth $3.4 million for one year but could be worth $7.3 million for two years or $10.6 million for three years.

Outfielder Stan Javier moved across the San Francisco Bay, agreeing to a two-year contract with the San Francisco Giants worth about $2.2 million.

Catcher Greg Myers left California and signed with the Minnesota Twins, agreeing to a $475,000, one-year deal with a club option for 1997 at $550,000.

Milwaukee, which acquired Chuck Carr from Florida on Monday, agreed to a $325,000, one-year contract with the outfielder.

■ Free Agents

Scott Livingstone, who started most of the last two months of the 1995 season at first base for San Diego, agreed to a $1.15 million, two-year contract with the Padres.

The New York Yankees were said to be closing in on a two-year deal with second baseman Mariano Duncan. The Yankees surprised some in baseball on Thursday night when they failed to offer salary arbitration to Jack McDowell and lost negotiating rights until May 1.

Among the group not offered arbitration were pitchers Tom Gordon and Ken Hill, shortstop Shawon Dunston, outfielders Rickey Henderson and Roberto Kelly and catcher Benito Santiago.

Nagy, who had a $1.8 million salary this year, gets a $125,000 signing bonus and $3.25 million in each of the next two seasons. Cleveland can exercise a 1998 option at $3.33 million or pay a $125,000 buyout. He can earn $100,000 bonus each year for pitching 220 innings.

"He's overcome the arm injury he had a couple of years ago and went on last year to show the type of ability that we know that Charlie's had," Indians general manager John Hart said. "He pitched real big for us late in the season and pitched well for us in postseason."

Nagy, 28, had been eligible for salary arbitration.

Navarro, 27, gets a $400,000 signing bonus and $3 million in 1996. The pitcher has has an option for 1997 at $3.6 million plus any award bonuses he earns next year.

If he exercises his option, the Cubs then have an option for 1998 at $3.6 million plus any award bonuses he earns in the first two years of the deal. If the Cubs exercise their option, Navarro can either accept it or walk away with a $300,000 buyout and file for free agency.

Defending champs rule at Diner's Club Matches

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — Defending champions Ray Floyd and Dave Eichelberger defeated Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus 3 and 2 in the opening round of the Senior PGA portion of the $2,110,000 Diners Club Matches on Friday.

Floyd and Eichelberger won the first three holes with birdies to go 3-up. Palmer birdied the par-5 sixth hole to narrow the gap.

Floyd won the 10th hole with a par and Eichelberger won the par-4 11th with a 10-foot birdie putt.

Bob Tway and Scott Verplank advanced to today's semifinal round with a 2-up victory over rookies David Duval and Woody Austin. Tom Lehman and Duffy Waldorf defeated Steve Stricker and Kirk Triplett 1-up. Lehman's 15-footer at the 18th hole provided the margin of victory.

Kenny Perry and John Huston defeated Tom Kite and Billy Andrade 2 and 1 and will face Jim Gallagher and Steve Lowery, 2 and 1 winners over Phil Mickelson and Paul Azinger.

Laura Davies and Mardi Lunn teamed up to register a first-round defeat of Michelle McGann and Donna Andrews 4 and 3, recording eight birdies in 15 holes in the LPGA's portion of the event.

Dottie Mochrie and Julie Inkster defeated Betsy King and Val Skinner 1-up. Nanci Bowen and Annika Sorenstam had to play an extra hole to defeat Beth Daniel and Meg Mallon 1-up. Defending champions Tammie Green and Kelly Robbins defeated Jenny Lidback and Alicia Dibos 3 and 2 and will face Bowen and Sorenstam in Saturday's semifinal.

Jim Colbert and Bob Murphy advance to Saturday's round with a 2 and 1 victory over J.C. Snead and Gibby Gilbert. They will face George Archer and Dale Douglass, 1-up winners over Chi Chi Rodriguez and Jim Albus. Dave Stockton and Hale Irwin defeated Tom Weiskopf and Isao Aoki 2.

BAT: Red Sox continue Vaughn negotiation

(From 1C)

The Red Sox continue to negotiate salary with Vaughn, who isn't eligible for free agency following the 1997 season.

"How will (the Canseco deal) affect our negotiations with Mo? I think that Mo likes having Jose hit behind him," Duquette said.

"The impact of Canseco coming to the team is positive for Mo like it was positive this year in Mo's production," he said. "It's hard to carry the load all by yourself."

Duquette said his next priorities are pitching and catching.

Boston didn't offer arbitration to Rick Aguilera and can't re-sign him until May 1. Aguilera was acquired from Minnesota on July 6 and his stay was costly. The Red Sox gave up top pitching prospect Frankie Rodriguez to get him.

Boston did offer arbitration to Erik Hanson, its most consistent starter last season, but declined arbitration with Zane Smith, who was inconsistent as a starter and reliever.

Canseco's contract includes $75,000 bonuses each for 300, 350, 400, 450, 500 and 550 plate appearances and $75,000 each for 75, 85, 95, 105, 115 and 125 games played in the field.

Grand Slam Cup to crown new champ

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — There will be a new champion at the Grand Slam Cup to claim the fattest winner's check in tennis.

The semifinal field was completed Friday, when Yevgeny Kafelnikov rallied to beat Jacco Eltingh 3-6, 6-3, 6-2. The Russian will face hard-serving Goran Ivanisevic in the semifinals.

Each semifinalist is guaranteed $431,250. The winner of the tournament will collect $ 1.625 million.

In the second of the best-of-five semifinals Saturday, Boris Becker plays Todd Martin, who also was a semifinalist last year.

None of the four semifinalists has ever won the richest tournament in the world, which offers prize money of $6 million for the 16 participants with the year's best records from the four Grand Slam events — the Australian, French and U.S. Opens and Wimbledon.

Ivanisevic made the last four here for the third time in his career on a walkover when top-ranked Pete Sampras withdrew Thursday with an inflamed knee.

Sampras, who won the inaugural edition of the tournament in 1990, had been the only former champion still in the running.

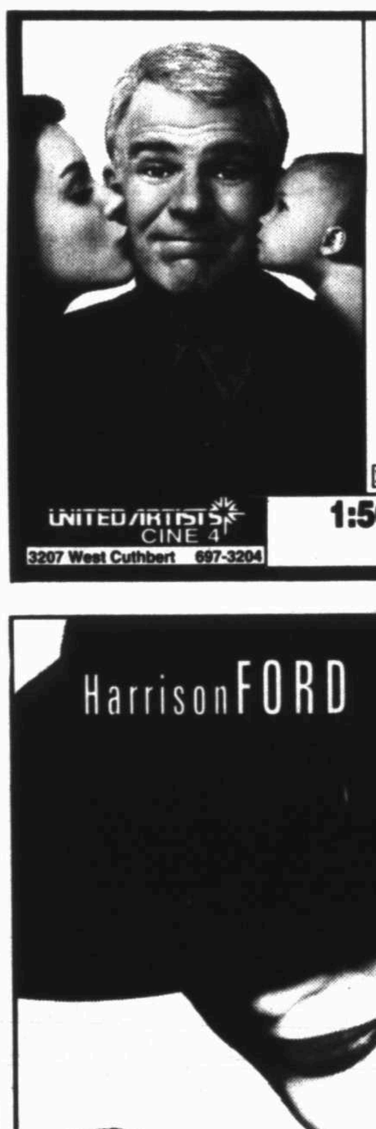

With the departure of Sampras, Becker is the highest-ranked semifinalist and seems the natural favorite to win the title.

Already one of the most successful players on indoor surfaces, the fourth-ranked Becker has been riding high in recent weeks.

He won the ATP World Championship in Frankfurt last month, and so far has looked impressive on the super-fast carpet surface in Munich's Olympic Hall.

Kitt suffers ACL injury to left knee

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP) - American AJ Kitt, one of America's top skiers, sustained a severe knee injury Friday on the same course where he gained his only World Cup victory.

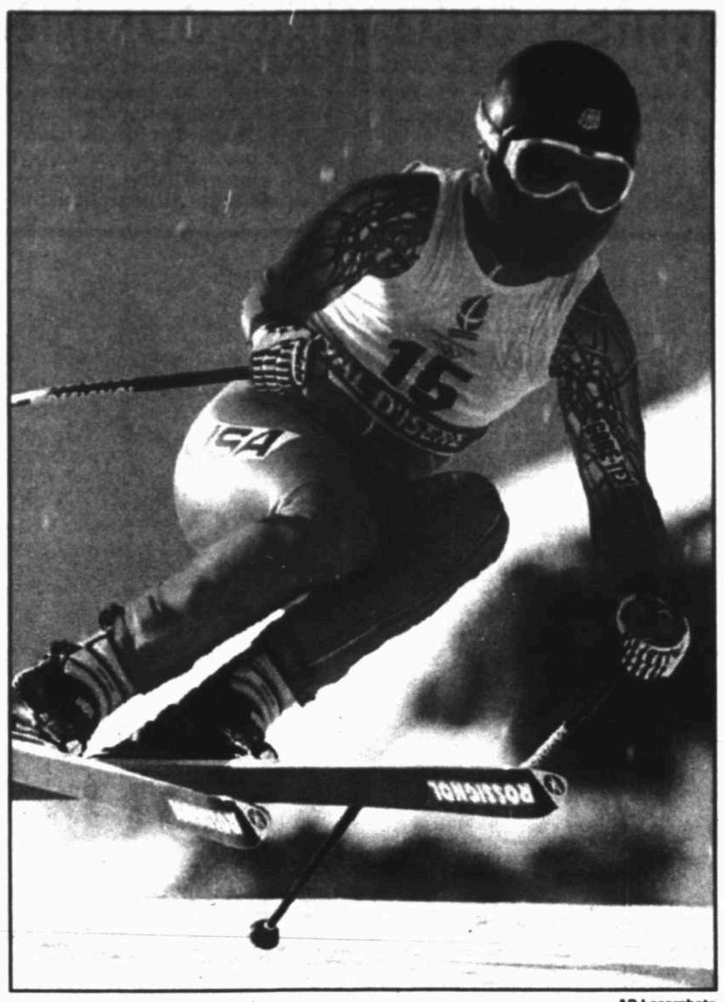

Preliminary examinations indicate a tear of an anterior cruciate ligament in the left knee. He crashed during the downhill practice for the men's World Cup race on the famed Oreiller-Killy course.

"At the tunnel jump, he got caught in air, just flew and landed on his tail," said Tomas Karlsson, the men's head coach. "He felt (the knee) go right away when he landed."

Karlsson said Kitt will leave this French mountain resort Sunday for Vail, Colo., where he will be examined by Dr. Richard Steadman. An ACL injury is among the most serious an athlete can sustain, and often requires up to a year of rehabilitation, perhaps more for a skier whose knees must sustain bumps at high speeds.

By its very nature, the sport is conducive to knee injuries.

"About three quarters of our kids have to come back from it," said Richard Watkins, the medical coordinator of U.S. Skiing.

Lee, MHS swim TISCA today

■ Lady Rebels, Lady Bulldogs swim and dive teams compete in West Zone meet at COM.

Staff Report

Midland Lee's Lady Rebel swim team may be too strong for it's own good this year. It's in need of some competition, but it probably won't get any today.

Lee and Midland High swimmers and divers join four other teams today in the finals of the West Zone Texas Interscholastic Swim Coaches (TISCA) meet at the Abell-Hanger pool.

"We need some kids to make those (Lee) girls have to work," City of Midland Aquatics coach Brad Swendig said.

Those girls, led by Olympic Trials qualifier Monica Stroman, won Region I last year and return a squad with even more depth for the 1995-96 season. The Lady Rebels won the San Angelo Invitational Nov. 18 with 425 points, 266 better than second-place San Angelo. They entered three 400 freestyle relay teams in San Angelo. The teams finished first, second and fourth.

"There's nobody in West Texas that can compete with them now," Swendig said.

The Lee girls opened the West Zone TISCA preliminaries Friday with eight first place finishes, including first, second and third in the 200-yard individual medley. The girls relay team of Stroman, Susie Carnett, Angela Sanchez and Lisa Wachsman finished over 13 seconds ahead of Lee's second-place B team with a 3 minute, 58 and 47 one hundredths second time.

Swendig had hoped a girls private school team from El Paso strong enough to push the Lee girls would enter the meet, but it failed to register.

Those athletes with good enough times today will be eligible to swim in the state TISCA meet in Austin Jan. 19 and 20 — considered a preview of the state UIL meet in March.

On the boys side San Angelo should have the best swimmers. The MHS and Lee boys are in rebuilding years.

"I think we have some boys that are really going to surprise some people," Swendig said. "They don't need to beat San Angelo right now. But if they can be close to them they can beat them in the end."

Matt Sullivan leads the MHS boys and Lee's Scott Strauss will pace his team. Two hundred IMer Veronica Pai leads the MHS girls.

Other winners in Friday's prelims were Stroman in the 200 and 100 freestyles, Lee's Nicole Edelbrock in the 100 breastroke, Lee's Sarah Conkey in the 200 IM, Carnett in the 100 butterfly, and Lee's Hallie Brink in the 500 freestyle.

For the boys, Strauss had the best times in the 200 IM (2:12.32) and the 500 freestyle (5:01.23). Lee's Michael Proksell placed first in the 100 breastroke with a 1:10.57.

Today's diving prelims and finals will start at 9 a.m. and the swimming finals will start at 12:30 p.m.

Anglers can stock up on gear during gift-giving season

By Bill Schulz
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — Christmas is the ideal time to start a youngster fishing or give a veteran angler some special piece of equipment.

Don't buy a child the cheapest gear around just because it's for a child. Youngsters need the help better quality equipment provides.

Try a good quality, medium duty spin-casting outfit. This would run in the $25 to $50 range. A spin-casting reel is shaped like a fat bullet and mounts on top of the rod. It is controlled with the thumb and is easier for a beginner to learn than either a baitcasting or spinning reel.

Add a spool of 10- or 12-pound line, a few plastic bobbers in assorted sizes, a box of assorted split-shot sinkers and some hooks, ranging from 2-0 to 8, and the child is ready for anything from sunfish to bass or walleye.

All that's left to do is pick up some worms or crickets and a license on the way to the lake.

A tacklebox always makes a good gift. They range from $10 to $40. A good rule of thumb is the more experienced the angler, the larger the tacklebox.

It's not the best idea for someone who knows little about fishing to give an experienced angler a rod or reel unless you've been getting a lot of hints about what they would like. If rod or reel types, brand names or model names have been part of conversation around the house, pay attention and get that particular make and model, not something a salesman says is just as good.

Baits make excellent stocking stuffers. Expect to pay $2 to $5 for a quality crankbait, spinnerbait or spinner. They always are good choices, because baits routinely escape into the depths and need to be replaced.

Some gadgets that make great gifts:

— An angler's pliers or one of the new multiple tools that combine a pliers, knife and whatever all-in-one tool. They run from $10 to $50.

— Fish scales. The new digital ones start at about $25 and go to $100 or more for a scale that will weigh a 100-pound fish.

— A lure retriever can save an angler a lot of cash. Retrievers slide down the line in a strong cord. They catch a lure's hooks and can pull it free of the snag on which it's caught. It doesn't take many retrieved $3 to $5 lures to repay the $5 to $20 cost of a retriever.

— A marine magnet that can be dropped over the side to recover keys, a reel or anything steel that found its way overboard.

— A good quality sunscreen, one that's waterproof and protects against both UVA and UVB rays. It should be rated at least SPF 15; going to SPF25 or 30 is extra protection.

Among the newest gadgets for outdoor enthusiasts are hand-held GPS receivers. They are navigating systems which make it almost impossible to get lost. They start at about $200 and go up from there.

Another safety gadget is an emergency strobe. MPI Outdoors offers a $23 unit that will flash for up to 60 hours on one D cell alkaline battery to mark the location of downed game or a stranded person.

A stranded boater can be saved by the Charge Pak from S&J Products. It contains 16 D cell batteries and can charge a boat's weakened battery through the cigarette lighter or direct connection. It goes for $50.

Someone lost in fog or at night can signal for help with the Master Blaster from Skyblazer, a mouth-blown horn that produces an exceptionally deep, 120-decibel sound. It floats if dropped overboard. Cost is $20.

Finally, for the angler who wants to see what's going on, Crystal Boats offers an 11-foot, clear bottom performance boat with underwater lights to attract fish. It comes with a 25-horsepower motor for $7,499.

Boxing returns to Madison Square Garden for first time since 1933

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Boxing Writer

NEW YORK — The advertisement at the top of the escalator in the subway station at Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street is a sight to gladden the heart of any Big Apple fight fan.

"Golden Boy; The Garden; A Great Combination," the ad proclaims.

Once can almost hear the cheers and jeers — "Thata baby; Ya got him; Get off the ropes, ya bum" — that have resounded through the history of four Gardens.

Boxing, kicked out of the Garden in 1993, will return Dec. 15 with a show that features a WBO lightweight title defense by Oscar De La Hoya, the Golden Boy, against Jesse James Leija.

And Garden officials say it's not a one-night stand.

"We want people to know boxing is going to be a regular thing in the Garden," said John Cirillo, a senior vice president, adding that Garden will be involved in fight promotion and not just serve as a rented venue.

Roy Jones Jr., the spectacular super middleweight champion, is scheduled to appear in a non-title fight against Merqui Sosa Jan. 12 in the Garden. It is possible George Foreman and Michael Moorer will meet in a heavyweight match there in February.

"I'm going to be part of history," said De La Hoya, 22.

That long, storied history began in 1879. John L. Sullivan boxed in the original Garden at Madison Square in the early 1880s. Jack Dempsey made his only Garden appearance in 1920 in the second Garden, on the site of the original. Joe Louis made eight title defenses in the third Garden at 50th Street and Eighth Avenue. Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier opened their great three-fight series March 8, 1971, in the current Garden atop Penn Station.

The Garden. Rocky Marciano knocked out Joe Louis there. Willie Pep dazzled there. And crowds thrilled to triple champion Henry Armstrong.

Sugar Ray Robinson began his pro career in 1940 and won his first title in 1946 in the Garden. Sugar Leonard ended his career in his only Garden appearance in 1991.

Emile Griffith fought in 23 Garden main events and Beau Jack appeared in 21. Many a star was born in the Garden, such as Rocky Graziano.

The Rock blasted his way into boxing's big time when, as a solid underdog, he knocked out Billy Arnold in the third round March 9, 1945. Harry Markson, who became involved with the Garden as a publicist in 1933 and left as director of boxing in 1973, recalls something that happened after a preliminary fight on the Graziano-Arnold card.

Janiro asked his manager, Frank Jacobs, who had congratulated him. He was told it was the vice president.

"The vice president of Madison Square Garden? Holy gee!" Janiro said.

It was the vice president of the United States, and 34 days later Harry Truman was sworn in as president.

Requested thoroughbred improvements could wipe out Manor Downs

MANOR (AP) — The Texas Thoroughbred Association wants Manor Downs, the state's lone Class II quarter horse-only facility, to make improvements that would allow thoroughbred horses to run at the track. Track officials say that could drive them into financial ruin.

In a recent letter to Howard Phillips, Manor Downs' chief operating officer, the group representing Texas thoroughbred owners and breeders called on Manor Downs to establish a viable timeline for bringing thoroughbred racing to the track near Austin.

The letter was forwarded to both the Texas Racing Commission and the Texas Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association. The request will be on the agenda for consideration at the racing commission's Tuesday meeting.

Phillips told the Austin American-Statesman that upgrading the track as specified by the thoroughbred association could cost as much as $1.5 million. He said the track is in the midst of some renovations and repairs forced by tornado damage this fall and is "in no way capable of such spending at this time."

"We told the Texas Thoroughbred Association that if they wanted to, they could buy the track and put the money into it to make the improvements they say are needed," Phillips said. But right now, he said, "we have no way of paying for the improvements or paying someone back for the improvements."

In January 1992, the track was granted an exemption to a Racing Commission rule that allowed the facility to run only straightaway races.

There was no termination date on the exemption, but Jeff Hooper, executive director of the Texas Thoroughbred Association, believes the exemption was to have lasted only a year and that state regulations require Manor Downs to upgrade.

"There is a law requiring all Texas tracks to have certain specifications, and Manor Downs is ignoring that law," he said. "Our members are in the business of breeding and training thoroughbred horses, and Manor's situation is not giving us the opportunity to race horses at their facility."

The thoroughbred association also asks that until thoroughbred races can be run at Manor Downs, half of all purse and Accredited Texas-Bred monies generated annually at the track be placed in escrow for the state's thoroughbred purses and Accredited Texas-Bred programs.

Manor Downs' total on-site handle for 1995 through Nov. 19 was $20.8 million. Of that, almost 83 percent — $17.2 million — was generated by wagering via televised "simulcasting" from other tracks, the majority of which is on thoroughbred races.

That's the real issue, Phillips told the American-Statesman.

"I firmly believe that the thoroughbred people don't really want to run at our track — what they want is to have a Class I circuit all to themselves, without quarter horses in the way," he said. "Meanwhile, they want to have a piece of our simulcasting pie, which is our lifeblood. We are just cannon fodder for them."

World Skate Championships misses fallen hero Grinkov

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The mourning is over. The numbness is fading. But the professional skating community, which gathers today for its World Championships, will be missing Sergei Grinkov for many years to come.

"It will be a long, long time before we're fortunate enough to witness another genius as good as he was," said Canadian pairs skater Paul Martini.

"I firmly believe — even with (three-time Olympic gold medalist) Irina Rodnina here coaching at this event — that we've lost one of, if not the greatest, pairs skater that ever put skates on."

The world's best-known skaters, many of whom were present at the time, were stunned into silence when Grinkov collapsed on the ice and died of a heart attack while practicing for a Stars On Ice show at Lake Placid on Nov. 20. Already a close-knit group, they supported each other and grieved together — some traveled to the state funeral in Moscow — and only now can they start to express their feelings openly.

"I think because of Sergei Grinkov dying, it's been hard to see each other as competitors as much as compatriots," Paul Wylie said. "We banded together as a family, and found a common goal in getting through that."

Grinkov and Ekaterina Gordeeva won gold medals at the 1988 and 1994 Olympics and were to defend their title at Landover, home of the most prestigious competition on an increasingly crowded pro circuit. In between their Olympic triumphs, they became husband and wife and set up a home in Connecticut. They had a daugther, Daria, now 3 years old.

"Because we toured together for months and months, we had become pseudo-siblings," Wylie said. "Sergei and Katia were different. They had a baby. They were basically starting their nuclear family on the road with us, and that was a source of stability."

"All of the skaters looked at their life as a model of what maybe someday we all could have if we were super-incredibly lucky," Kurt Browning said. "And to watch that all disappear, we couldn't believe it and we were right there. We couldn't accept it. Some things you can accept, but this we couldn't."

Grinkov's death hit the Russian skating community particularly hard. With most of the big-name Russian professionals now based in the United States, Grinkov was a strong member of a small peer group.

"We couldn't practice for, like, four days, because skating was like to joke," said ice dancer Alexander Zhulin, who was in Lake Placid with partner Maia Usova when Grinkov died.

After all those years of socks, neckties and sweaters, don't you wish you could find the perfect gift for your parents?

Your wish is granted.

Archrival Blue Devils derail Cavaliers in NCAA I men's soccer tournament

The Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Virginia's drive to an unprecedented fifth straight men's NCAA soccer championship was derailed Friday night when the Cavaliers lost 3-2 in the semifinals to archrival Duke, their first loss of the season.

The Cavaliers (21-1-2) had their NCAA playoff winning streak snapped at 17 and bade farewell to coach Bruce Arena one game earlier than expected.

Arena, who has built a dynasty in 18 years at Virginia, will coach the under-23 U.S. national team and the 1996 Olympic team. He also is rumored to be in line for the coaching job with D.C. United of the Major Soccer League.

The Cavaliers, who trailed 2-0 at halftime, kept the heat on Duke goalkeeper John Morton throughout much of the second half. Playing before a record crowd at Richmond Stadium, Virginia got goals from Sean Feary in the 55th minute and Matt Leonard in the 79th to tie it.

Craig Jeidy's second goal of the season — in the 71st minute — was the difference sent Duke into Sunday's championship game against Wisconsin.

Wisconsin 1, Portland 0

RICHMOND, Va. — Lars Hansen scored in the 74th minute, and Wisconsin advanced to its first NCAA soccer final with a 1-0 victory over Portland.

The game was played before a crowd of 21,319, the largest crowd for a college soccer game in the United States.

Wisconsin (19-4-1), in the Final Four for the first time, wasted several chances before Hansen took a pass from Mike Gentile and beat goalkeeper Todd Lawton with 26:31 remaining.

Portland (16-3-3) was playing without scoring leader Davide Xausa — suspended because of yellow cards.

quality of players from the Midland area."

Huber said the Blast soccer club sends out over 100 letters to college coaches informing them about the tournament. But some coaches Blast hasn't even contacted show interest.

"We have universities calling us and requesting information, and where they hear about it I don't know," Huber said. "We've had schools from Florida and South Carolina that have contacted us."

The Midland teams in the tournament are Black Magic 78 and Blast 78 in the U19 men's bracket, Black Magic 79 in the U17 men's bracket and Blast 78 in the U19 women's bracket. Odessa has the 78 Flames in the U19 women's bracket. Each team will play four games at fields No. 1 through 4 at Hogan.

Along with men's teams from Broken Bow, Oklahoma, and Ballwin, Missouri, a U19 men's will come from Galveston, making it the Texas team traveling the longest distance. Other cities represented are Germantown, Tenn., Dallas, Austin, Plano and Hobbs, N.M.

"It's a chance to watch probably as many college prospects as you do at any other place at one time," Dart said.

Among the Texas college teams which will be represented by head or assistant coaches are the Texas Tech and Texas A&M women, the Hardin-Simmons men and women and the Austin College men and women.

"We are willing to scout every corner of the state to evaluate talent," A&M women's coach Gerald Guerrieri said. "We are hoping to find the next diamond in the rough. These players are talented, but it is raw talent. We are looking for the people who were born to play."

The last games on Saturday begin at 9 p.m. Sunday's game start at 7:30 a.m. with the last games coming at 1:30 p.m.
