'Different winds blow'

Superpowers set new course

■ Bush, Gorbachev sign landmark arms pact, call for Mideast peace conference.

Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev voiced unprecedented solidarity Wednesday as they concluded a summit that produced a landmark arms control treaty and a striking initiative to prod peace in the Middle East. "Different winds are blowing," Gorbachev proclaimed.

The leaders showed, in their actions as much as their rhetoric, that the superpowers had embarked on a new course of trying to engineer peace around the world instead of testing each other.

"We take a significant step forward in dispelling a half century of mistrust," Bush said as he and Gorbachev signed the long-negotiated Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty in the Kremlin.

Bush heads to Kiev in the Ukraine today for a firsthand look at life in one of the Soviet's chafing republics. The two-day summit drew to a close with a dinner at the American ambassador's residence where the two leaders pledged friendship and efforts to work together for peace.

In addition to the treaty signing, the ceremonial centerpiece of the summit, the final day produced the ambitious move for peace in the Middle East.

CIA reported rogue bank tie five years ago

■ Agencies had clear warning of secret ownership of First American.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency said Wednesday that it prepared a report in 1986 stating that Bank of Credit and Commerce International acquired control of Washington's largest banking company in 1982.

Government officials outside the intelligence agency said the information on First American Bankshares Inc.'s ownership was distributed at the time to the state and treasury departments and possibly to other agencies.

The CIA report is important because it shows that at least five years ago government agencies had clear warning that the rogue international bank secretly owned First American. Officials at the Federal Reserve have said they would never have permitted BCCI to own an American bank if they had known about it.

Federal Reserve officials said Wednesday that they did not remember seeing the CIA report in 1986.

Until Wednesday, the Federal Reserve and other authorities have said they

Gramm-Gingrich bill introduces tax-cut package

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas is testing Congress' commitment to fixing the economy through tax cuts a decade after he and other conservatives introduced the nation to such supply-side economics during the Reagan era.

Gramm, R-College Station, and fellow conservative Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., on Wednesday introduced tax-cut legislation that they say will create a half-million jobs in five years and increase the gross national product by $146 billion by 2000. The series of tax cuts includes a controversial plan to slash the tax on capital gains.

Senate OKs women in combat planes

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Senate voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to overturn a 43-year-old law that bars women from flying warplanes in combat.

The new measure, an amendment to the military budget bill for the 1992 fiscal year, would permit, but would not require, the Air Force, the Navy, the Army and the Marine Corps to allow women to fly combat missions.

Wednesday's vote made enactment of the measure virtually certain.

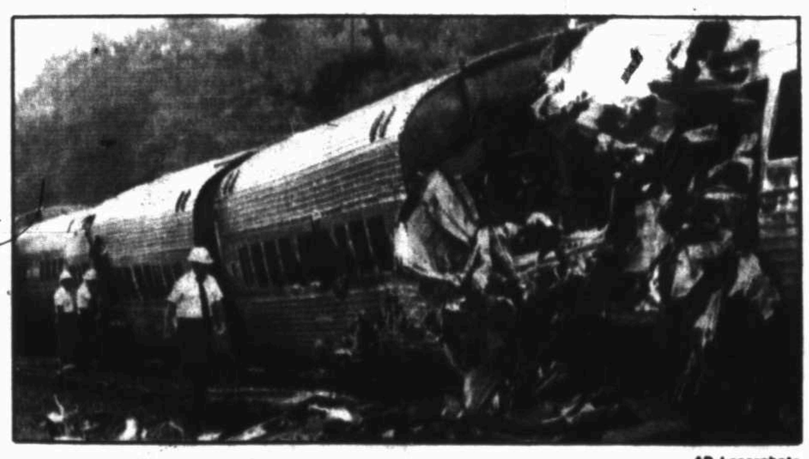

The House approved similar legislation last month and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has indicated that he does not oppose the provision.

The chiefs of the four uniformed services have expressed strong reservations to opening combat positions to women. But the performance of the 35,000 women who served in the Persian Gulf war has generated strong support in Congress and in public opinion polls to broaden women's role in the military, and the Pentagon is likely to go along grudgingly.

"I can't predict exactly what we'll do," the Pentagon spokesman, Pete Williams said. "But if the ultimate direction given us is to lift the combat-exclusionary law, then I think we'll look at it and proceed carefully."

Girl Scout bus overturns, killing seven, injuring 53

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — A bus full of Girl Scouts apparently lost its brakes on a winding road and flipped repeatedly down a boulder-strewn mountain Wednesday, killing seven people and injuring 53, authorities said.

Seven of the injured were in critical condition and five others serious, hospital officials said.

The chartered yellow school bus was returning the girls from a ride on the Palm Springs Aerial Tramway up Mount San Jacinto when it crashed, officials and witnesses said.

"It's the absolute worst, it's the absolute saddest thing that could happen," said an emotional Palm Springs Mayor Sonny Bono, who helped carry several stretchers from the accident.

The bus driver and six Girl Scouts were killed, police Sgt. Ron Starrs said.

The bus carried Girl Scout cadets ages 15 to 18 who were participating in a event called "California Dreamin'," said Sharon Hewitt, spokeswoman for the Pomona-based Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council, the event's sponsor.

The bus was one of at least three carrying 105 Girl Scouts from 20 states, Ms. Hewitt said. She said four girls in the group were from Finland. The girls were staying with host families in Southern California.

AUSTIN — For those who lived through Aug. 1, 1966, the day Charles Whitman climbed the University of Texas tower and unleashed a deadly barrage of bullets, the ensuing 25 years have brought a deeper bond with others involved in the ordeal and gratitude for life itself. Today marks the 25th anniversary of the day Whitman, having already slain his wife and mother, dragged a footlocker full of weapons up the 28-story clock tower in the center of campus and opened fire. He killed 14 people and wounded 31 during a nearly two-hour rampage that remains one of the bloodiest in modern American history./1B

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A judge Wednesday postponed William Kennedy Smith's sexual assault trial indefinitely, rejecting objections from prosecutors and the woman who says Smith raped her. In their motion for a delay, defense lawyers pointed to recent disclosures about three new prosecution witnesses who claim Smith sexually attacked them. Lead prosecutor Moira Lasch urged that the trial start as scheduled on Aug. 5.

WEATHER SUMMARY

August arrives sunny, hot

Staff Report

Continued sunny skies and high temperatures dominate the early August forecast, according to forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The high today and Friday are expected to be in the upper 90s with light south winds at 5-15 mph.

The low tonight is expected to dip into the upper 60s, NWS said.

After an overnight low of 66, Wednesday's high was 93, a dozen degrees short of the record 105 set on Aug. 1, 1944. The record low for today's date is 56, set in 1936.

STATE

Texas was mostly sunny Wednesday as high pressure dominated the state's weather pattern. However, low clouds and isolated thunderstorms developed near the remnants of a weak frontal boundary in Southeast Texas.

North to northeasterly winds were common across the central and eastern sections with southerly breezes in the West. Wind speeds were mainly 5 to 10 miles an hour.

Temperatures at 3 p.m. ranged from 87 degrees at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene to 98 degrees at the Addison Airport in Dallas.

The North Texas forecast calls for clear nights and partly cloudy days through Friday. A slight chance of thunderstorms is expected in the southeast on Friday. Afternoons will continue to be warm with highs today and Friday in the upper 90s. Lows tonight are expected to be in the lower 70s.

Forecasters expect South Texas will remain sunny and hot during the day and mild at night through Friday with widely scattered showers and thunderstorms. High temperatures will reach near 100 degrees in the southwest while lows will range from the 60s in the Hill Country to near 80 on the coast.

The West Texas forecast includes isolated showers and thunderstorms for the Big Bend and Far West. Otherwise, mostly clear nights and mostly sunny days are expected through Friday. High temperatures are expected to be in the 90s with lows in the 60s.

NATION

San Diego got less than a fifth of an inch of rain Wednesday, but it still was a record — the first measurable rainfall for the date in that city in 116 years of record-keeping.

Rain also fell over parts of the Midwest and Southeast, while dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation at midday, the National Weather Service said.

Skies were sunny in the southern Plains, the lower Mississippi, Tennessee and Ohio valleys and the lower Great Lakes region. Skies also were clear from Minnesota through South Dakota and Nebraska to Montana.

A few showers and thunderstorms were scattered across southern Kansas, northern Missouri and southeastern Iowa in the early afternoon. Rain also fell over western Nebraska, central Iowa and Upper Michigan.

Showers and thunderstorms pelted an area from Florida to eastern North Carolina, and a few showers also dampened northern Maine.

An upper-level weather disturbance over Southern California and southern Nevada in the morning dumped .17 inch of rain on San Diego — the first measurable rainfall on July 31 there since records began in 1875.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

COURSE: Initiative prods for peace in Mideast

(From 1A)

With Israeli participation still up in the air, Bush said he and Gorbachev had decided to seize the initiative themselves and would issue invitations for peace talks in October.

"This historic opportunity must not be lost" to get Israel, the Arab states and Palestinians to sit at the same peace table, Bush said. He said he was sending Secretary of State James A. Baker III to Jerusalem today "to obtain Israel's answer."

Israeli leaders have objected to the makeup of a Palestinian delegation that would attend.

Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh said he would travel to Israel separately with papers to re-establish full diplomatic relations — a step the Soviets have said must await Israel's readiness to talk peace with her Arab neighbors.

Warming U.S.-Soviet relations and other pressing issues such as the Middle East drained some of the drama from the nuclear treaty signing ceremony.

Even so, the pact marked the first time that the superpowers had agreed to actually reduce the number of transcontinental nuclear weapons in their arsenals. If ratified by the Senate and the Supreme Soviet, the 700-page treaty would reduce these stockpiles by 30 percent.

"It is an event of global significance," Gorbachev said at the ceremony at Vladimir Hall in the Kremlin. He said the pact would begin "dismantling the infrastructure of fear that has ruled the world."

The treaty followed a 1987 pact under which both the Soviet Union and the United States destroyed hundreds of intermediate-range nuclear weapons — those with a range of several hundred miles.

Bush and Gorbachev signed the START pact Wednesday with pens made of metal from U.S. and Soviet missiles destroyed as part of that 1987 treaty.

Asked at their concluding joint news conference why they wouldn't go a step further and propose a ban on all nuclear weapons, both leaders said that such a move would be too extreme.

Bush said it would leave the superpowers helpless against "renegades getting hold of nuclear weapons."

Gorbachev agreed, saying it could lead to an "absurd" situation in which smaller nations had nuclear weapons and the largest ones did not.

The Soviet leader said that he was delighted that he and Bush had been able to play a role in making the world safer from nuclear annihilation.

REPORT: Agencies had warning of bank's ties

could not document the foreign ownership of First American until last January. Clark M. Clifford, the prominent Washington lawyer and Democratic adviser, who is chairman of First American, has said he was unaware that foreign interests controlled the company.

In a 100-page report the Fed released Monday, central bank investigators contend that BCCI bought control of three American banks in Washington, Georgia and Florida by passing funds to a group of Arab agents who acted on behalf of BCCI.

There is no evidence, however, that BCCI's ownership influenced the operations of First American or compromised its safety and soundness.

What is significant from a regulatory standpoint is that the CIA calls into question the vigilance with which American bank regulators monitored the ownership of the bank which has operations in Maryland, Virginia, New York, Florida, Georgia and Tennessee as well as Washington.

A Senate subcommittee preparing for a hearing on BCCI scheduled for Thursday obtained the report, and the chairman, John F. Kerry, D-Mass., got the intelligence agency on Wednesday to declassify the part dealing with the Washington bank.

Kerry issued this statement: "BCCI's secret ownership of First American was illegal and in direct violation of the conditions under which an Arab group purchased the bank. Yet, despite the fact that a number of U.S. agencies were told about the secret ownership of First American by BCCI, apparently no one did anything about it. The question is, why?"

The government also had earlier evidence that First American was owned by BCCI. During a Customs Service investigation of money laundering in Florida by BCCI, which led to a guilty plea by BCCI, an official of the international bank, Amjad Awan, confided to undercover government agents that First American "belongs to BCCI."

Customs officials later gave that information to federal law enforcement and bank regulatory officials.

As the scandal involving BCCI has unfolded, many questions have been raised on Capitol Hill and elsewhere as to why the Justice Department and bank regulators did not move more swiftly as evidence mounted. So far, the Justice Department has said that it is continuing to investigate.

According to past and present government officials, CIA reports like the one on BCCI are normally given to the Federal Reserve as well as the state and treasury departments.

Generally, such a report would go to the treasury secretary, who has considerable influence over bank regulation. James A. Baker III, who is now secretary of state, was treasury secretary in 1986.

COMBAT: Senate follows House in repealing law

restrict women to noncombat functions, but the distinction is sometimes a fine one.

Although women could not serve in infantry or artillery units, aboard fighting ships or on combat aircraft during the gulf war, female helicopter pilots ferried food, fuel and troops throughout combat zones.

Most senior military officers and Pentagon officials oppose allowing women to serve in ground combat forces, which may require superior physical strength and endurance, but some lawmakers and women's rights advocates want servicewomen to have the option of making the grade.

The measure approved Wednesday does not apply to combat surface ships or submarines, or to armored, artillery or other ground forces.

But it does apply to combat flying by women in all four services.

The Army, unlike the other services, is not technically covered by the 1948 law and instead has internal regulations consistent with that law.

A vote on the entire $291 billion military budget bill is expected Friday or Saturday.

Although the Senate approved the measure by voice vote, the outcome was actually sealed earlier in the day when, on a vote of 69 to 30, the amendment's supporters defeated an attempt to kill it.

Both Barbara A. Mikulski, D-Md., and Nancy Landon Kassebaum, Republican of Kansas, the two female members of the Senate, voted to save the measure.

"This is a victory for the women pilots who demonstrated in the gulf their capabilities, their heroism and their competency," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., a principal sponsor of the amendment. Sen William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., was the other main sponsor.

Opponents of the amendment offered a competing measure to create a 15-member commission to study the issue and make recommendations by December 1992.

That amendment also passed, by a vote of 96 to 3, but the strategy failed: 29 Republicans and 40 Democrats voted for the aviator amendment as well.

The commission, which is not expected to conflict with provisions of the aviator amendment, is expected to ask Cheney to open temporarily to women a select number of positions in a wide array of combat jobs.

BILL: Plan's Kemp-Roth successor, sponsor says

tax cut — which mainly benefits wealthier taxpayers who have substantial investments — with a few goodies for the middle class, including a penalty-free Individual Retirement Account and an increase in the Social Security earnings limit.

Gingrich called the proposal "the clear successor to the Kemp-Roth bill." That bill, the cornerstone of supply-side strategies of the early 1980s, gave Americans a 25 percent tax cut as a way of stimulating the economy.

Gramm actively supported those 1980s tax cuts when he was among junior activist House conservatives. The cuts sparked the longest sustained period of economic growth in American history, Gramm said.

Democrats assailed the Gramm-Gingrich plan Wednesday as warmed-over seconds of failed economic strategies that led to a tripling of the national debt to more than $3 trillion.

"It sounds like capital gains (tax cuts) with a few bones thrown in," said James Pratt, spokesman for Sen. Jim Sasser of Tennessee, chairman of the Democratic Budget Committee. "It would be nice to see them worry more about the 3 million Americans who are out of work."

Democrats led by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas say their priority is passing a measure to extend federal unemployment benefits by up to 13 weeks for eligible workers.

Gramm said: "The Democratic response to a plodding economy is ... to spread the misery of the problem. Our response is to eliminate the misery."

Gramm and Gingrich assert that their plan would not increase the federal deficit, so would not be outlawed under last fall's five-year budget agreement that bars additions to the deficit.

Among the provisions in the package are:

- A maximum 30 percent cut in capital yesterday-gains taxes on profits from the sale of real estate, stocks and other assets held at least three years.

For the first time, the taxes would apply to profits adjusted for inflation, so inflationary increases in value wouldn't be counted in calculating taxes owed.

The U.S. Treasury would presumably reap $9.5 billion in additional revenues over five years.

- An IRA plan that would allow people, regardless of income, to make non-deductible contributions that would gain interest and then could be withdrawn tax-free at retirement. Currently, withdrawals are taxed at the time of retirement.

- The amount of money that elderly people could earn annually before losing a portion of their Social Security benefits would be raised from $9,720 to $17,600.

BUS: Seven of injured are in critical condition

(From 1A)

It wasn't immediately known which buses were carrying which girls.

The bus was traveling down Tramway Road, a sloping desert-mountain road, when it apparently lost its brakes two miles west of Highway 111, said Jovanna Wooden, the council's executive director.

The bus rolled as many as 10 times, Starrs said. The mangled wreckage ended up about 25 yards from the roadway, witnesses said.

It had been raining off and on throughout the day in Palm Springs, 100 miles east of Los Angeles, but Starrs said the road apparently was dry at the time of the crash. "We're looking toward faulty brakes" as the cause, he said.

The girls had taken a ride on the tramway up Mount San Jacinto, said a spokeswoman at the tram's business office who wouldn't give her name.

Helicopters carried the most seriously injured girls to hospitals.

Desert Hospital in Palm Springs received 21 passengers, seven of them in critical condition and 13 in fair condition. One of the passengers died on the operating table, said spokeswoman Kay Hazen.

Nine passengers were taken to Eisenhower Medical Center in Rancho Mirage, and five were in serious condition and four were in stable, said spokeswoman Marianne Burdette.

John F. Kennedy Memorial Hospital in Indio was treating 23 passengers, all of them in fair to good condition and many being prepared for discharge, said hospital Chief Executive Officer Barry Wolfman.

The Spanish Trails council includes 34 cities in eastern Los Angeles County and western San Bernardino County. It had sponsored what is known as a Wider Opportunity Event, in which girls ages 12 to 18 take part in adventures outside their own councils.

Council officials selected the girls from among 600 applicants, Ms. Hewitt said.

A National Transportation Safety Board team was en route to the crash site to investigate, spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz said.

Amtrak train derails; at least seven killed in predawn crash

CAMDEN, S.C. (NYC) — At least seven people were killed and as many as 125 were injured Wednesday when an Amtrak passenger train traveling from Miami to New York derailed near this central South Carolina city and crashed into freight cars sitting on a factory railroad siding.

The predawn crash of the Silver Star pinned some of the 426 passengers in their seats. Many were sleeping when the train crashed. Howard Robertson, a spokesman for Amtrak, said seven people were declared dead by officials at the scene of the crash. One person died later at a hospital.

Teams from the National Transportation Safety Board were at the scene and had roped off the area as workers attempted to right the wrecked cars. Little information was available on the possible causes of the crash which was the worst in terms of fatalities since a 1987 crash in Chase, Md., in which 16 people were killed.

The last six cars of the 18-car train jumped the tracks in the wreck, which occurred at 5:02 a.m. The sides of some of the cars were sheered off in the collision with the freight cars, according to witnesses and surviving passengers.

Investigators for the board said it was too early to pinpoint the cause of the accident. But Christopher Hart, head of the board's investigative team, said the derailment was near a switch that took trains from the main line to a siding.

"That makes the switch a suspect," he said.

Passengers described a scene of chaos and fear.

"It literally looked as if somebody took a can opener and peeled the sides of the car away," said Stephen Clark, a passenger who was on the way to his home in Philadelphia, as he described the last car.

Bill Foushee, 42, also of Philadelphia, was in a coach two cars in front of those most heavily damaged. He recalled being jolted from his sleep by bumping and side to side movement. He said there was no panic in the car he was riding in, just confusion. But he said it was a different story as he walked toward the rear of the train in the near darkness.

"It was unbelievable," he said as he sat in a temporary Red Cross shelter set up in the cafeteria of Camden High School. "It was like screaming from hell. There was blood and people bruised. It wasn't long before help arrived, but they just seemed overwhelmed because of all the injuries."

Cora Smith was traveling with her mother and six children from a visit to Disney World in Orlando to her home in Chicago. She was in the last car, one of those that ended up leaning at about a 60 degree angle near the factory siding.

"You just can't believe it, coming from a fun, fun trip to Disney World and then seeing people you were just talking to dead," she said, before she began crying.

There have been several derailments of Amtrak passenger trains in recent years, but few have resulted in fatalities.

Robertson said the switch where the crash occurred was at a siding behind an E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. plant. The first dozen cars and the two locomotives of the train appeared to have passed over the switch without problems, he said.

"But the rear cars didn't," he said.

According to railroad officials, six of those killed were passengers in the last car and a seventh fatality was in the second to last car.

According to officials at three area hospitals, 81 people were taken to the hospital, but only 15 were admitted. The injuries ranged from minor cuts to broken bones to internal injuries, said Georgianna Puckett, a spokesman for Richland Memorial Hospital in Columbia, 20 miles southwest of here where some of the injured were taken. Four of the 10 people admitted at Richland, she said, were listed in critical condition as of late Wednesday afternoon while five were said to be stable and one was in good condition.

Five others admitted to two other hospitals in the area were reported in stable condition.

Denise Mulhearn, an Amtrak employee who lives in Lindenhurst, N.Y., and was returning from vacationing in Florida, said there was no screaming.

"Everybody was helping everybody," she said. Destalear Randolph, a grandmother from Chicago who was traveling with Ms. Smith and her grandchildren also said things were calm at first with everyone in the last car giving "calm commands" to exit the train from the rear.

The top of the last car, according to many, collapsed on top of those in the cabin and the sheering of the side of the car extended from the front to about the middle. Ms. Randolph was well behind this point.

Foushee said it was 15 to 20 minutes after the accident that emergency personnel arrived. He said that as he walked amid the debris and wreckage he saw one passenger pinned in his seat and being attended by a fellow passenger who just urged him to "keep breathing."

■ Judge grants delay in Smith trial

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A judge Wednesday postponed William Kennedy Smith's sexual assault trial indefinitely, rejecting objections from prosecutors and the woman who says Smith raped her.

In their motion for a delay, defense lawyers pointed to recent disclosures about three new prosecution witnesses who claim Smith sexually attacked them.

"This latest raft of publicity has really worked to deny Mr. Smith a fair trial," attorney Roy Black said. The defense sought a delay of at least three months.

Lead prosecutor Moira Lasch urged that the trial start as scheduled on Aug. 5. And the woman who says Smith attacked her "would strenuously object to any continuance in this case," said her lawyer, David Roth.

■ Space shuttle prepares for liftoff

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Its mission postponed twice by technical problems, the space shuttle Atlantis prepared Wednesday for another attempt to carry into space a giant communications satellite designed to serve as a celestial switchboard for scientific data.

The shuttle and its crew of five astronauts were to rocket into space on Thursday on the 42nd space shuttle flight, carrying in the cargo bay a satellite that will join three others in a network used to relay information around the world.

■ Five killed in fire; woman arrested

DETROIT — An apartment building went up in flames early Wednesday, killing four adults and a toddler, and a woman who residents said was angry at a boyfriend in the building was arrested on arson and murder charges.

One man died when he leaped from the fourth floor. The fire in the Poinciana Apartments left dozens of residents, mostly low-income and elderly, with nowhere to go.

Watkins said a 45-year-old Detroit woman confessed the crime to a friend, who told police. The woman's name was not released.

Police arrested the woman on arson and murder charges, Sgt. Christopher Buck said. He and the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office said no court appearance had been scheduled.

Prosecutors won't seek death in murder of actress

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man charged with fatally shooting actress Rebecca Shaeffer agreed Wednesday to be tried without a jury after prosecutors promised they won't seek the death penalty if he is convicted.

Robert John Bardo, 21, faces trial Sept. 25 in the 1989 killing of Schaeffer, best known for her costarring role in the TV series "My Sister Sam."

Schaeffer, 21, was killed after answering the door at her apartment house. Authorities describe Bardo as an obsessed fan who wrote her dozens of letters and hired a private investigator to obtain her address.

Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark said Bardo's lawyer proposed letting a judge decide the case.

"I discussed it with my superiors and with the family of Rebecca Schaeffer and everyone agreed it was a good idea," Clark said. She said Bardo likely wouldn't have gotten the death penalty if a jury convicted him.

Superior Court Judge Dino Fulgoni will decide the case. Bardo's lawyer, Deputy Public Defender Stephen Galindo, said he wanted to remove the threat of the death penalty and also put the case before a judge experienced in psychiatric matters.

Fulgoni was a specialist in that area when he was a deputy district attorney.

"Mental state will be an issue," Galindo said. Bardo hasn't pleaded insanity but, the lawyer said, "Mental state is always an issue, especially in any type of homicide allegation."

In February 1990, Galindo refused to enter a plea for Bardo, saying Bardo's extradition from Arizona to California was a mistake.

Dahmer says he was not abused boy

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jeffrey L. Dahmer's father told probation agents his son was abused by a neighbor boy at age 8, possibly leading to sexual problems, but the incident never was reported to police, authorities said Wednesday.

In a jailhouse interview Wednesday with police, however, Dahmer denied he had been sexually or physically abused as a child, a police official in Ohio said.

Lionel Dahmer told his son's probation agent of the alleged abuse in a telephone call April 27, 1990, 22 years after he said it happened, according to the agent's notes filed with the state probation division in Milwaukee.

Jeffrey Dahmer, 31, has confessed to killing 17 people over 13 years, including one in Ohio and three at his grandmother's house in suburban Milwaukee, police said. Last week, police found 11 mutilated bodies in his Milwaukee apartment.

The probation notes don't specify the nature of the alleged abuse, which would have occurred while the Dahmers were living in Bath Township, Ohio. But the notes quoted the father as saying the incident "may be reason why (Jeffrey Dahmer) has problems with sexuality issues."

The notes don't specify the age or name of the neighbor boy or other details.

Lionel Dahmer couldn't be reached for comment Wednesday. There was no answer at his home in Medina, Ohio. PPG Industries in Pittsburgh, where he works, said he would be out of the office for a few days.

Capt. John Gardner of the Bath Township Police Department said his agency asked Milwaukee police to question Dahmer about his father's statement.

Dahmer answered that "he was never abused, sexually or physically, as a child." Gardner said.

The probation records also said Jeffrey Dahmer told his agent he was homosexual: "that's the way it is ... client appears to still be struggling with this ... client states he knows he prefers male partners but client feels guilty about this," the records said.

Dahmer's lawyer, Gerald Boyle, said through a spokeswoman he has no knowledge of his client being either physically or sexually abused as a boy.

Capt. John Gardner of the Bath Township Police Department said his agency was aware of Lionel Dahmer's statement in probation records but had no record of a complaint from the Dahmer family about any abuse of Jeffrey Dahmer in 1968 when the family lived in the suburb of Akron.

Welch served present, past

The death earlier this week of Charles R. "Charlie" Welch will touch many, many Midlanders — even those who did not know him — because during his years as a Midland County commissioner and an active worker in farm and ranch programs here, Welch worked for the best interests of the residents of Midland and Midland County.

He served as county commissioner of Precinct 2 from 1968 until 1982 and during his final campaign made the comment that "My first obligation has always been to the people of Precinct 2, but I am dedicated to making all of Midland County a better place to live, work and rear our children." That seemed to encompass Charlie's philosophy of life.

On the commissioner's court, he was one of the strongest fighters against increasing taxes and for cleaning up effluent that was seeping into the underground water system and, according to Welch, potentially polluting the aquifer. Without a doubt, Welch's campaigns on both matters helped to bring about effective action.

Welch served as a member of the Farm and Ranch Committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, as president of the Midland County Farm Bureau, and as a director of the Midland County Livestock Association, including the youth program. He was a cofounder of the Ranch Rodeo Association.

In recent years, Charlie became a regular attraction at parades and outdoor events, riding in a turn-of-the-century carriage or surrey pulled by his bay mare, Big Mama. Charlie and wife, Eileen, even joined the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train in 1986, backtracking the footsteps of this region's pioneers from the Guadalupe Mountains to Fort Worth.

Welch's interest in others and particularly in the young people of Midland, and his love and appreciation for the heritage of the ranching industry will long be remembered. He will be missed.

We extend our condolences to his family.

JACK ANDERSON

Syrian vice president snitch for CIA

WASHINGTON — The brother of Syrian President Hafez Assad is a longtime, clandestine snitch for the Central Intelligence Agency, feeding the CIA information about other countries in the Middle East and passing back-channel information to Washington for Assad.

Anderson

The spy is Syrian Vice President Rifaat Assad, the younger brother of the president and the man most likely to succeed Hafez Assad if he ever steps down.

It is almost unheard of in the Arab world in recent times for the CIA to land a contact as high up in government as Rifaat Assad, especially in an Arab country with a history of hostile relations with the United States.

Instead of conducting diplomatic negotiations through the State Department, Rifaat is one vice president who takes his deals to the CIA. He recently held discussions with CIA officials about the prospects for long-term peace in the Middle East and the sincerity of his brother's peace proposals. One knowledgeable source said that the globe-trotting Rifaat was "debriefed" on those matters at a CIA safehouse in Maine.

Rifaat is loyal to his brother, but very different from him, and it isn't clear whether Hafez always knows what his brother is telling the CIA.

The Assads are members of a minority Muslim sect, the Alawites, who must use an iron fist to keep control over the majority Sunni Muslims.

Rifaat became the hatchet man of his brother's government in the early 1980s. He led government military forces in quelling an uprising in the city of Hama in February 1982 when a fundamentalist sect tried to take over the city and kill Assad's supporters. By the time Rifaat was finished with the city, at least 10,000 people were dead.

He is despised by many Syrians for that, and for his ostentatious lifestyle that he flaunts in a poor country. Hafez Assad leads an ascetic life, but Rifaat loves luxury. He has at least four wives and a fortune of more than $100 million. He alternately lives in Paris, Geneva and other European capitals.

Knowledgeable sources say it was Rifaat who first approached the CIA about a proposed relationship. This happened before the summer of 1982, because the CIA stepped in to smooth over some trouble Rifaat had in the United States that fall.

Through a front corporation, in August 1982, Rifaat bought a $1.1 million mansion in Potomac, Md., the priciest suburb of Washington. Neighbors, unaware of who the new guy was on the block, soon began to count more than 40 burly armed guards hanging around the place and other strange goings on. Then, in September, the fire department responded to a fire at the house. The residents had already fled, but fire investigators managed to snag two maids hurrying out with guns in briefcases. Inside, it looked like Rifaat's men were prepared for what organized crime syndicates call "going to the mattresses" — hunkering down in a house furnished with little more than guns and mattresses to wait for a gangland war.

Our sources say the CIA tried to keep the incident under wraps because of their growing relationship with Rifaat.

While he has received CIA gifts and money, Rifaat does not work with the CIA for profit. He likes the intrigue and the clout it gives him in the West. His brother has not discouraged the relationship, even at a time when the Soviet Union was the primary external source of funding and arms for Syria.

Kuwaiti oil field problem may be worse

Those oil wells in Kuwait are still burning — more of them than at first reported, with unknown final effects, and probably for a longer period than officially projected.

Wicker

Not just "about 500," as generally reported, but 732 Kuwaiti oil wells were set afire by retreating Iraqi forces last winter. A Senate subcommittee, chaired by Joseph Lieberman of Connecticut, received that hard figure on July 11 from Kuwait's ambassador to the U.S., Sheik Saud Nasir al-Sabah, and E.L. Shannon Jr., chairman of Santa Fe International, an oil drilling company owned by Kuwait.

Shannon testified that by July 8, "some 199 wells had been extinguished or capped," which means that more than 500 still were burning four months after the war ended.

In fact, the overall problem may have gotten worse, owing to huge oil lakes being formed by wells that are still gushing but no longer afire.

James George, a former Canadian ambassador to Kuwait and an environmental scientist who led a Friends of the Earth inspection team to Kuwait in June, told the subcommittee that now these lakes are catching fire, causing more pollution than a well fire, and will be harder to extinguish.

Shannon said the Kuwaiti government had set a goal of 500 wells "secured" by the end of the year, and all by March 1992. But George, in much more pessimistic testimony, said his FOE team had concluded that the fires "will not be controlled for years — perhaps four or five years — as Red Adair told the committee a month ago."

Both Shannon and George agreed that the work in Kuwait is being complicated by the hazard of unexploded munitions, some of them now submerged in the oil lakes.

Various scientific teams have reached differing conclusions as to the fires' consequences.

Most now believe that they will cause neither a widespread "nuclear winter" effect (falling temperatures as smoke blocks the sun's rays) or a major increase in global warming (from the "greenhouse effect" of carbon dioxide emissions).

But within those extremes, there's much disagreement. Data are still scarce and there are no useful precedents; the largest previous oilfield blaze — only five fires — was in Libya in 1965.

Some evidence indicates that the Kuwaiti fires could become a far-reaching environmental catastrophe.

John Horgan of Scientific American has reported that levels of soot — believed to be from Kuwait — above the Mauna Loa Observatory in Hawaii were five times higher in March than in the three previous Marches.

Balloon observations at the University of Wyoming, Horgan reported, suggest that Kuwaiti smoke has passed over the continental U.S. Particle concentrations in the troposphere above Wyoming increased by a factor of 10 or more from early February to late March 1991.

By far the most apocalyptic speculation — much disputed — is that smoke from Kuwait may have worsened the gigantic typhoon that killed over 100,000 persons in Bangladesh on May 1.

This theory holds that the smoke warmed the atmosphere and increased the customary monsoon rains. Tiruvalam Krishnamurti of Florida State University, a monsoon expert, told Horgan that floods in Bangladesh rose two feet higher than ever before recorded and that rains after the storm were unusually severe.

The visible smoke plume from Kuwait would cover most of the coastal U.S. from New York to Florida. Kuwaiti soot has been detected in northern Japan.

Soviet scientists already have measured unprecedented levels of acid rain in regions of the Soviet Union, and similar fallout is expected in areas 2,000 kilometers from Kuwait, possibly as far away as China.

Temperature drops of up to 10 degrees are predicted for a radius of hundreds of kilometers around Kuwait; drops of 1 or 2 degrees may be felt for 1,000 kilometers.

Nearby Bahrain has just had its coolest May in 35 years. These effects could produce crop failures and famine; and soot falling on snowy regions — already seen in the Himalayas — may cause rapid melting, followed by flooding.

ANOTHER VIEW

Salman Rushdie's life remains in danger

Circumstantial evidence, like finding feathers in the cat's milk, can be highly persuasive. Such evidence links Iran to the July 12 murder in Tokyo of the Japanese translator of Salman Rushdie's "Satanic Verses" and to the earlier stabbing in Milan of the Italian translator of Rushdie's allegedly blasphemous novel. Iran's rulers deny responsibility. Believing them is no easier than ignoring telltale feathers.

Rushdie, a British subject, has been in hiding since February 1989, when Ayatollah Khomeini castigated the book and demanded the death of the author and his publishers. A few months later, the old ayatollah died and optimists hoped his threat would be quietly withdrawn. When Britain resumed relations with Tehran last September, Iran's ruling mullahs promised to abide by world law. In December a subdued Rushdie openly embraced Islam and canceled plans for a British paperback of his book.

None of this made any difference. Iranian leaders stridently reaffirmed the death threat. A private Islamic foundation doubled the $1 million bounty on Rushdie's head. Last year assassins killed Kazem Rajavi, an exiled foe of the mullahs, in Geneva. Now comes the murder of one translator and the near-death of another. Incredibly, the deeds were endorsed in ringing terms by two leaders of Britain's Muslim community: "These people who have translated cannot get away with it. That is the position. Even if it means death."

Such words merely echo the actual intolerance inside Iran, where rival mullahs vie for fundamentalist support. Iranians accused of religious or political crimes are executed, tortured, stoned and whipped. The mullahs assume that Western diplomats, eager for better relations with Iran, will avert their eyes. That same mentality guides Iran's cruel manipulation of Western hostages, including five Americans held captive by pro-Iranian gangs in Lebanon.

Sadly, intimidation works. Little or nothing has been said in Washington or other capitals about Iran's literary vendetta. It has been left to private individuals and groups to affirm the obvious: Writing, publishing or translating a book is not a capital offense, punishable by executioners on foreign soil. Official mumbling about Iran's death decrees only increases the risk that somebody will carry them out, with or without Iranian connivance.

Not all agencies fight same corruption

Most Americans are under the impression that the various branches of government in Washington are all committed to fight the same evil and corruption. This is far from the truth. Every department has its own agenda and is trying to achieve a different result with whatever legal or illegal means available.

Buchwald

Which brings me to the First National Bank of the Sheik of Mustapha. When the scandal broke that it was the largest launderer of drug money in the world, the leading financier of illicit nuclear arms, the chief bagman of all the crooked politicians on the globe and the major employer of corrupt law enforcement agencies, a hue and cry went up from the people. They demanded that those involved in this country be investigated and brought to the bar of justice.

It was not surprising that many branches of the government opposed an inquiry.

The first to be wary of looking too deeply into the charges was the CIA. Charles F. Spook, the CIA spokesman, said, "The Bank of Mustapha is our neighborhood financial institution and if we start asking questions about dirty money and rotten eggs, it might cancel our agency's credit cards. In addition, the bank provides an important service for us. It acts as our paymaster for some of the greatest leaders in the world who count on those monthly checks to feed their families."

The White House is not too happy about probing the Bank of Mustapha because the trail of wrongdoing could lead almost to the door of the Oval Office. One of the staffers in the situation room told me, "It's true that when Ollie North was in the White House he and his people had passbooks. But that was because Mustapha was the only bank that provided drive-in windows to pay for arms shipments to Iran and Nicaragua. We think that it would be a big mistake to launch a political investigation when President Bush never had an account there and, to our knowledge, neither did his son Neil."

The organization in Washington that has the most to lose if there is a congressional investigation of American ties to the bank is the Justice Department.

An assistant attorney general in my tennis club confided, "It would be wrong to investigate the Bank of Mustapha in this country because we might find wrongdoing, and that isn't what the Justice Department is supposed to do. On the surface the bank might not be as clean as other banks, but what bank is? Our job is to notify the Sheik of Mustapha that we're not happy about the way he does business with the drug cartels and individual depositors such as Noriega. It's up to Mustapha to clean up its act, because the atTorney general wants to run for senator from Pennsylvania."

I said, "I knew you people were competent, but I didn't know that you also had a heart."

"This is a practical matter as well as one of the heart. If we go after the bank there could be a run on it by its depositors, and then all the CIA agents would have to carry around large bundles of cash in their underwear."

There is a rumor that Clark Clifford, the famous American lawyer, has close connections with Mustapha. A paralegal in his firm denied it. "Mr. Clifford never heard of the bank, he has never represented it, and he has never set foot in it."

"But isn't he the chairman of the bank in Washington owned by Mustapha?"

"No, he's chairman of the bank across the street."

NAACP, AFL-CIO oppose Thomas nomination to high court

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The nation's largest civil rights group and the leaders of organized labor said in coordinated announcements on Wednesday that they opposed the nomination of Judge Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court.

"Judge Thomas's inconsistent views on civil rights policy make him an unpredictable element on an increasingly radical conservative court," said Dr. William F. Gibson, chairman of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in making the announcement for his organization.

Both supporters and opponents of Thomas said the odds still favored his confirmation by the Senate, but the opposition by these two groups means the Bush administration will face a much tougher fight. Also, opponents of Thomas said that Wednesday's announcements gives them a chance to reassemble the coalition that four years ago defeated the nomination of Robert H. Bork to the court. In news conferences here and in Chicago, leaders of the civil rights organization and the AFL-CIO declared their opposition to the black appellate court judge after meetings of their governing boards.

The dual press conferences were more than coincidence. On Monday,Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the NAACP, met with the AFL-CIO executive council in Chicago and informed them that the leaders of the civil rights group would be meeting Wednesday in Washington to considered their position on the Thomas nomination. The union leaders decided to delay their vote on the nomination until after the NAACP took its action.

The civil rights organization has criticized Thomas in the past over his opposition to race-based affirmative action programs and what the group says was his failure to enforce civil rights laws while chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in the Reagan administration and the early days of the Bush administration.

At a meeting at a Washington hotel, the group's directors voted 50 to 1 to oppose Thomas' nomination to the high court. He currently sits on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

At their press conference on Wednesday, NAACP leaders revealed for the first time that they had met with Thomas to discuss his views, though they declined to reveal any details of the meeting.

But, an official with the group, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the meeting took place at a home in Washington on the afternoon of July 19. This official, who did not attend the meeting but was briefed on it, said Thomas met with Hooks, Gibson, Hazel Dukes, the organization's president, and two staff members.

The group put several questions to Thomas that were drafted by the staff about his views.

Public Notice

On April 9, 1991, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to request that the optional feature "Call Transfer Disconnect" be available to all PLEXAR I customers by including the feature in Southwestern Bell's PLEXAR I tariff. Currently, this optional feature is available only on a customer requested basis.

Call Transfer Disconnect (CTD) is an optional feature that allows PLEXAR I customers the ability to transfer a call to another telephone number within or outside their PLEXAR I system, hang up, and permit the two remaining parties to continue with the call. The PLEXAR I user is then free to place or accept another call. CTD is not intended to be used to avoid toll charges. Therefore, CTD will not be available to PLEXAR I customers subscribing to optional Extended Metropolitan Service or Extended Area Calling Service.

If the company's application is approved, the monthly rate for CTD will be $4.00 for each PLEXAR I station line. Prior to the June 19, 1991, interim rate approval, Southwestern Bell was billing customers who receive the service $1.50 for each station line equipped with this feature. In addition, under Southwestern Bell's proposed tariff, every line within the PLEXAR I system must be equipped with this feature. The nonrecurring charge for the additional lines which must be equipped with CTD will be waived for existing CTD customers. The tariffed monthly rate will apply to all existing and future CTD customers.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0256, or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

Members of the Croatian National Guard protect a convoy of refugees from the village of Kostajnica from attacks by Serbian snipers. The convoy included more than 1,000 people and hundreds of vehicles.

Retreat

Croats abandon vital stronghold

■ More world news 8B

SISAK, Yugoslavia (AP) — Croatia's security forces, leading a convoy of 1,000 fearful villagers to safety, abandoned a strategically vital stronghold to Serbian militants Wednesday in a major military setback.

While the 3½-mile convoy wound through territory held by hostile ethnic Serbs toward this industrial city, Croatian authorities mobilized more troops and the federal leadership presented a draft cease-fire agreement to the breakaway republic.

European Community officials arrived in Belgrade on Wednesday seeking a truce in Croatia, which declared independence June 25 and has been convulsed with Serb-Croat violence that has left 50 people dead since last week.

Croatia's police and national guard were forced to abandon Kostajnica, 70 miles southeast of the Croatian capital, Zagreb, after federal air force jets strafed and army troops rained down heavy mortar fire on the town of 4,000 people, Croatian radio said. A Croatian policeman was reportedly killed and several townsfolk injured.

Wednesday evening, the retreating convoy crawled along toward Sisak at 25 miles an hour. It included anything that moved — cars, trucks, vans, and buses — and worried Croats from neighboring villages swelled its ranks along the way, said Associated Press photographer Franz Pammer.

The fleeing Croats took a circuitous route nearly five times longer than the 18-mile distance between Kostajnica and Sisak, a city of 40,000, because so much territory lay in Serb hands.

Wednesday's withdrawal was a major setback in the Croats' struggle with their Serb foes, who are supported by neighboring Serbia, the fragmenting federation's largest republic. Kostajnica lies uncomfortably close to Zagreb, and Croatian officials had vowed to defend it at all costs.

Kostajnica was also the last Croatian stronghold in the Banija region, which lies between the Croatian Serbs' stronghold of Krajina, and Slavonia — Croatia's rich agricultural eastern region, parts of which are also held by Serb militants.

The retreat should allow ethnic Serbs and army troops to move freely between southern Croatia and Serbia, the news agency Tanjug said.

Speculation has centered on the possibility that Serb militias were making a last-minute land grab to build a powerful bargaining position in the case of a truce.

Mandela threatens to end negotiations

MEXICO CITY (NYT) — Nelson Mandela dismissed South African President F.W. de Klerk's promise to stop secret funding of political parties and threatened to pull out of negotiations if the government fails to take stronger measures.

Mandela, using unusually harsh language, also charged that the De Klerk government bears responsibility for thousands of deaths in clashes between rival political factions in South Africa.

"It was de Klerk who allowed it to happen, that 10,000 people have been killed," he said during a Mexico City press conference.

Earlier this week, de Klerk announced that he ordered an end to secret funding of political parties. His government was shaken by revelations that it had given more than $80,000 to the Inkatha Freedom Party, a black political organization that is the chief rival to Mandela's African National Congress, and more than $500,000 to an affiliated labor union.

In a rare press conference, de Klerk said that he wanted to establish "an equal political playing field" and viewed giving government money to some parties as "unacceptable."

He also demoted two top Cabinet ministers involved in covert activities. Defense Minister Magnus Malan was demoted to minister of water affairs and forestry, and Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok was demoted to minister of budget and correctional services.

The ANC had demanded a multiparty investigation of covert operations and the elimination of counterinsurgency forces, and Mandela said Wednesday that de Klerk had not done enough.

In his press conference, Mandela also called for an "interim government." He did not say what kind of government that might be, but a Bush administration source said the ANC was seeking a coalition government to replace that of de Klerk.

River 'rising like a cobra' strikes Indian community

MOWAD, India (AP) — Ramrao Parate sat on his haunches on a heap of rubble that was his home a day ago, and looked blankly at the soggy grains of maize clutched in his knotty fists.

A few yards away flies swarmed hungrily on the carcass of a bull, its head split open and half-eaten by crows and dogs.

Bedraggled residents clawed the debris with bare hands, looking for their dead and for dry food. But the progress was slow on the slippery muck.

Rescue workers saw similar scenes in every street of Mowad on Wednesday, a day after the remote village in western India was devastated by a deluge from the rain-swollen Wardha River.

Well over 100 people were killed, police said.

"Nothing was saved. There is no food, no work, no help," said Parate, a 55-year-old weaver.

Parate said he heard the river making a strange roar on Monday night. "I took my wife and three children to the river and saw it rising like a cobra."

Tons of mud carried by the river were dumped in streets, inside homes and on tin roofs.

U.S. nears Persian Gulf treaties

WASHINGTON (NYT) — As the Bush administration consults with its allies about future military action against Iraq, U.S. officials say they are nearing completion of new long-term security alliances with governments in the Persian Gulf.

Although Arab allies have expressed reservations about renewed bombing of Iraq's nuclear plants, the talks on future security arrangements have steadily advanced.

Administration officials say they are still wrangling over important details like the positioning of United States military equipment in Saudi Arabia.

But U.S. negotiators who met last month with their counterparts in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar, Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates said they had made "considerable progress" on a range of issues from joint military exercises to arms sales to the use of air bases.

"There's definitely a willingness by these countries to cooperate and improve the relations," Frederick C. Smith, director of the Defense Department's Near Eastern and South Asian affairs office, said at a recent Congressional hearing.

Administration officials are seeking a strong security pact to prevent a return to the loose arrangements that existed last Aug. 2, when Iraqi forces invaded Kuwait and threatened Saudi oilfields with virtually no resistance from Arab countries in the region.

The agreement would establish new security arrangements with countries like Kuwait and Qatar, and enhance existing ones with nations like Saudi Arabia and Bahrain.

"We will find that we're able to do regular naval exercises, periodic air deployments and exercise our units with units of governments in the region," Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said recently.

U.S. diplomats in Arab capitals are working to resolve the remaining legal, technical and financial details. Among the most politically sensitive issues, particularly for Saudi Arabia, is the positioning of U.S. military equipment in the region for ready use in future crises.

"It's a balancing act between a desire for better protection on one hand, and not having alien forces present on the other," a Pentagon official said of the Saudi position.

Administration officials declined to say how much equipment the United States would position in each gulf country, but a Pentagon official familiar with the talks said Washington would have some equipment in each of the six countries in the Gulf Cooperation Council, a regional alliance led by Saudi Arabia. Its other members are Kuwait, Qatar, Bahrain, Oman and the Emirates.

The Pentagon this month asked Congress for about $290 million in additional funds to pay for equipment to be positioned in the gulf.

As the talks near conclusion, the U.S. military has already withdrawn more than 70 percent of its equipment and all but 44,000 troops from Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, the United States Central Command says.

The Army in particular wants to leave some of its heaviest equipment behind because bulky tanks, trucks and airplane-loading equipment are impractical to transport by air and take weeks to move by ship from U.S. bases in Europe or the United States.

Cheney said several weeks ago that the United States would seek to leave behind in Saudi Arabia as much as a division's worth of equipment. A division typically includes as many as 300 M1-A1 tanks and 300 Bradley fighting vehicles.

But in the face of growing opposition from conservative elements in Saudi Arabia to a vivid reminder of Western influence, administration officials say they have scaled back their original goals.

Officials at the Pentagon and at the Central Command are still fine-tuning their new aims.

MISD board approves building-bond sale

■ Trustees say bonds are being offered to them at average interest rate of 6.74 percent.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland School board trustees were all smiles when they approved the sale of school building bonds in a special meeting Wednesday evening.

Although trustees had expected to pay a 7 percent interest rate, they received an average rate of 6.74 percent.

"This means we will save $3 million dollars over the life of the bond," said Ken Marks, school board president.

"That's an excellent rate," said trustee Gary Willis.

There will be two bond sales, according to Ted Miller, spokesperson for Midland Independent School District. The first bond will be issued in the amount of about $21 million.

The bond received Moody's "AAA" and Standard & Poor's "Aaa" ratings.

School board trustees also approved an authorization from MISD administrators to employ additional teachers to meet anticipated enrollment.

"We will need to maintain teacher-to-pupil ratios," said Joseph Baressi Jr., MISD superintendent.

Trustees officially welcomed Jane Carrens as principal of Midland High School at the meeting.

The former Goddard Junior High School principal said she was honored, but was taking the responsibility seriously.

The position she vacated at Goddard was posted Wednesday, according Miller. "It will be posted for a week," he said.

In other action, trustees approved authorization to seek a waiver from the Texas Education Agency concerning fees paid by students for private music lessons during school hours.

A proposal which would allow Anson Jones Elementary School first graders to participate in a project with first graders in the U.S.S.R. died when Willis' motion to approve it received no second.

Willis moved to approve the proposal sponsored by the Midland Texas Chapter of the professional fraternity in education Phi Delta Kappa.

School board trustee Jack Hightower questioned the value of the project to MISD.

The Phi Delta Kappa project would involve testing students in both countries on the same skills, according to Marillyn K. Odum, who would head up the project in Midland.

Ms. Odum, the principal of Anson Jones Elementary School, said first grade progress at her elementary school would be compared to the progress of Soviet students.

"We will have our tests translated into Russian," she said.

Ms. Odum said the collaborative research study would show the best methods for intervention with at-risk students.

Defunct school to hold reunion

■ Ex-students and teachers of Prairie Lee, which was established in 1907 and consolidated with two other schools to become GISD, will gather to reminisce.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Nostalgic memories of the old Prairie Lee country school likely will be enlivened this Saturday at Greenwood when former students, teachers, principals, superintendents, trustees and bus drivers return for their ninth annual reunion.

The school, which was established in 1907 midway between Midland and what is now Greenwood, closed in 1950 when three rural schools, Prairie Lee, Stokes and McClintic, consolidated to form the Greenwood Independent School District.

"I enjoyed the people, the friendly people," said Martin Meissner, a Prairie Lee ex-student. "In a small school, you had good, close relationships that you don't have in a big school. That's something you don't ever forget."

"A small school," said Meissner, "is like an expanded family."

At reunions, what some folks have forgotten, others will recall.

Meissner may recall his favorite teacher, Ethel Staton.

"She was a very strong disciplinarian — very strict," Meissner said of his sixth-grade teacher.

An effective teacher, she knew how to motivate her students, especially Meissner.

"She'd brag on me when I'd do my lessons," Meissner recalled, "and I'd study my fool head off for her."

But, as he realized later, the studying was for himself.

"I learned more that one year than any two years put together, maybe three," in Ethel Staton's classroom. "I was her pet, and she was my favorite teacher."

And there was another disciplinarian, J.C. "Jake" Bradley, a school-bus driver.

"He knew everybody," Meissner said. "He watched us and made us behave" en route to school and

City engineers survey damage caused by rains

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

When Midland streets become raging rivers and city lawns look more like swimming pools — as was the case last weekend — a team of city engineers uses the grim occasion as a learning experience.

Last week's heavy rains caused numerous residential and business floodings, delayed construction on Wadley Avenue and rendered roads impassable for hours. In other words, said city staff members who had been out surveying the damage, it was unfortunate business as usual.

"We were out looking to see what was draining and what wasn't," said Rene Franks, a city design engineer. "There are some problems you can't fix, but others we can and that's what we're looking at."

She said the best way to control flooding is "to stop it before it starts." Thus the department has taken steps to avoid flooding in newly developed neighborhoods.

"Normally (builders) would allow for development in drainage calculations," said Harvey Hansen, director of engineering and transportation. "But I don't think anybody knew how Midland would grow. Just in the last five to 10 years we've been paying more attention to drainage."

With continual growth in the city, age-old drainage problems have worsened, and make themselves known with each heavy rain, Hansen said. Midland and Jal draws, artificially re-routed through the years to allow for construction, continue as the source of most major flooding in neighborhood and business areas, he said.

"We don't have the rapidly running floodwaters, but typical here is the slow rising water that can cause real damage to carpet and Sheetrock," Hansen said. "Some areas along the draws can get quite hazardous just the same."

In the past, many homeowners were unaware of the flood danger in their area until it was too late because maps of the floodplain were incomplete. Now a study performed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) will determine more exact locations that could be submerged by floodwaters.

The results of the study, expected in late September, will be used to alert builders and homeowners of the potentially hazardous areas. Unfortunately, the news may not be popular: existing homes throughout the city are located in the floodplain and as a result, owners could be required to buy flood insurance. Builders are likewise required to raise new construction at least one foot above the "safe" line.

Newer developments such as Green Tree, in the northwest corner of the city, are good examples of the flooding problem, Hansen said. Developers there, unaware of the exact floodplain location, built many houses in areas where flooding is a possibility, he said, while some homes under construction now have foundations raised a foot or more to minimize that danger.

The engineering firm Parkhill, Smith & Cooper has been hired to develop a comprehensive drainage plan for the future. Although it may seem of little benefit to existing homes and businesses plagued by flooding, officials said the plan would insure past mistakes aren't duplicated.

In areas where flooding has been a problem for years, city engineers design a number of possible solutions to be used as money is allocated. In some cases, widening of the existing channel works to keep water away from nearby neighborhoods. Bridges are constructed in the place of narrow pipes at road crossings to minimize obstructions in the way of running water.

"A good analogy for flooding is cars on a busy highway," Ms. Franks said. "You can't restrict four lanes to one suddenly and expect that to work." She acknowledged there are problems with some of the current methods.

Hansen said funding is often a problem, although more than $2 million has been spent on drainage projects in the last six years.

Other problems are cosmetic. Channels, which carry running water, and detention basins — strategically placed ponds designed to hold water away from homes — are often eyesores and breeding grounds for mosquitoes, Franks said. In some cases, channels have been widened as far as possible and flooding is still a problem due to blockage or lack of space for further development.

"We're doing the best we can do with those right now, but this

UT rampage survivors 'thankful for each new day'

AUSTIN (AP) — For those who lived through Aug. 1, 1966, the day Charles Whitman climbed the University of Texas tower and unleashed a deadly barrage of bullets, the ensuing 25 years have brought a deeper bond with others involved in the ordeal and gratitude for life itself.

"I'm thankful for each new day," Morris Hohmann, 55, said Wednesday.

Today marks the 25th anniversary of the day Whitman, having already slain his wife and mother, dragged a footlocker full of weapons up the 28-story clock tower in the center of campus and opened fire.

Despite inflation and the government's high-speed printing presses and mints, a dollar is a dollar, and a nickel is a nickel.

Evidence of that is on days when you are flat broke. I've seen a few. Who hasn't?

Even with money in the bank, you can be as poor as an old bloke on the street corner who figures that anybody who drives a car be must be well off.

I wasn't in rags, but in 1964, I was fresh out of school, was driving a 1953 Chevrolet car, which I brought for $500 loaned by my home-town bank, was making $82.50 a week working for a newspaper down at Galveston, and was broke.

Payday was two days off, the rent was paid, and I had food — a loaf of bread and a jar of peanut butter.

But I was desperate.

I had not one red cent and I was out of cigarettes. That's when you are really broke and desperate.

Experience taught me that a cigarette, even if you are broke and are all alone, is your friend. Back then, before smoking became socially unacceptable and suicidal, a cigarette had respect. Real cigarettes, the ready-rolls, were big sellers, but filtered-tipped cigarettes were becoming popular.

I was broke and desperate. Trying to remain resourceful and honest, I began searching the nooks and grannies of the furniture in my one-room apartment, which rented for about $35 a month.

Fortunately, I came up with 25 cents, headed to the neighborhood store, and got a pack of Lucky Strike cigarettes.

That, I suppose, was the best pack of cigarettes I ever smoked in my life. And I budgeted those wonderful cigarettes better than I ever budgeted money.

I shied away from bumming smokes, because, for one thing, I didn't want to be labeled as a poor bum, and, for another, I was "sold on" Lucky Strike — a real smoker's cigarette — up there in the big leagues with Camel, Old Gold and Picayune cigarettes.

Those were the days, before big-time inflation hit the marketplace. A nickel was still quite respectable and, like the dollar, had buying power.

The nickel could buy a cup of coffee. Coca-Colas, for years a nickel by the bottle, had gone to six cents and then to a dime.

A regular hamburger was about a quarter, maybe a bit more, and candy bars were still a nickel or dime.

Run-of-the-mill new cars and pickup trucks were less than $2,000 or much less but seemed high by those standards.

Gasoline was about 19 cents, maybe a quarter, a gallon.

And you could buy a nice new house for $10,000 or $12,000 and an older house for less money. Beyond that, you were getting into affluence or debt.

Money, money, money. Marriages and other bonds are made and broken by it.

Money or, at least, what it represents — power, clout and influence — play in appointments to political offices.

And money represents the quest for security and the passion for immediate, if not instant, gratification.

Too much money is like too many clothes and shoes in the wardrobe. Too much is so much that it is devoid of meaning ... until there is none.

Everybody deserves to be broke at least once.

Bradley would stop the bus and would call the misbehaving children up to the front of the of bus.

"And he'd give us a good 'talking to' or, maybe, a blistering," recalled Meissner. "Mostly, it was a 'talking to.' Seldom would he spank someone."

One thing for sure, though, the school children "did not want" Bradley to tell their parents about any misbehaving on the bus.

If Bradley told the parents, "We caught it when we got home," Meissner said. "It was a strong, discipline-type school.

"Yet, I think it was fair," Meissner said. "I can recall getting a good blistering at Prairie Lee, and I got one when I got home."

Meissner attended Prairie Lee from the first-grade through the seventh-grade and then transferred to Midland. He graduated from Midland High School in 1949.

"Generally, we had good school teachers," Meissner said of his Prairie Lee years. "Some could have been improved."

The Prairie Lee School Reunion will gather around the dinner tables in the Greenwood Grade School Cafeteria at 10 a.m. and for a covered-dish luncheon.

Organizing the 1991 reunion are Darlene Livingston Jones, reunion president; Rosie Lee Hart, vice president, and Velda Dee (Pigg) Rhoads, secretary-treasurer.

In addition to recalling those fond school-day memories, the 100 or so people at the reunion may affectionately remember old classmates and friends who died in the past year: J.W. "Bill" Arnett, Clermon Sorge, M.V. Sorge, Louise Evans, Jo Stewart, Sula Fay Stanley, Jim Prince, and Vera Lay.

UT: Survivors says they'll never forget sniper's '66 shooting spree

(From 1B)

He killed 14 people and wounded 31 during a nearly two-hour rampage that remains one of the bloodiest in modern American history.

University officials say they'll let the day pass quietly.

"There is nothing planned in the way of a ceremony or service or anything. The flags will be at half staff, but that's all," said John Durham, a UT spokesman.

Others can't help but remember.

"It was something you never forget. It's like being in a war," said Sgt. Bill Vanlandingham, 53, a 26-year Austin Police Department veteran.

Vanlandingham, a rookie motorcycle officer in 1966, was among those who rushed to the tower and was on his way to the top when Whitman was killed.

As he made his way to the spire, he ran past students "dropping like flies" as they were shot, Vanlandingham recalled.

"I think about it every time I look at the University of Texas tower. And for many nights after that, when I was on patrol duty at night and going down the streets immediately adjacent to the campus, I could hear the shots ring out. It took me many months to get out of my mind. I could hear the 'pow pow pow.' It was bad," he said.

Whitman, 25, was a former Marine and architectural engineering student.

Shortly after 11:30 a.m., he arrived at the tower, killed a receptionist and shot a family of tourists coming up the stairs. Two of them died, two were wounded.

Once on the tower's 230-foot-high observation deck, Whitman opened deadly accurate fire with his high-powered rifle, shooting most of his victims at a distance of more than 300 feet.

Leeda Bryce, a nurse who retired in 1976 after supervising the Brackenridge Hospital emergency room for 32 years, remembers treating the victims.

"It was such a shock — it just started coming, and it just didn't stop. Every time you looked up there was somebody coming in," said Ms. Bryce, 65. "I asked somebody, why the hell don't they kill him?"

Whitman finally was killed by police officers Ramiro Martinez and Houston McCoy, who had made their way to the observation deck.

Hohmann, now owner of a funeral home, was shot in the leg while bringing an ambulance to carry five other victims to the hospital. Wounded above the right knee, he rolled under a parked car.

"I laid there for about 40 to 45 minutes waiting to be rescued and listening to two construction workers arguing about who was going to expose themselves to recover me," Hohmann said.

Bleeding badly from an exploding bullet that ruptured his vein, Hohmann was the last victim taken to the hospital. He received eight pints of blood.

"I was conscious enough to know it was mayhem," he said.

Since then, Hohmann said an unspoken bond has developed between him and others he knew that day.

"I've got a different feeling for people that I'm close to going back to that period of time," he said. "We get along a lot better. We look out after each other a little better."

Bob Higley, now a senior vice president in investments for Kidder Peabody Co. in Houston, said he, too, has a special friendship with a friend who lived through the ordeal with him, then-student body president Clif Drummond.

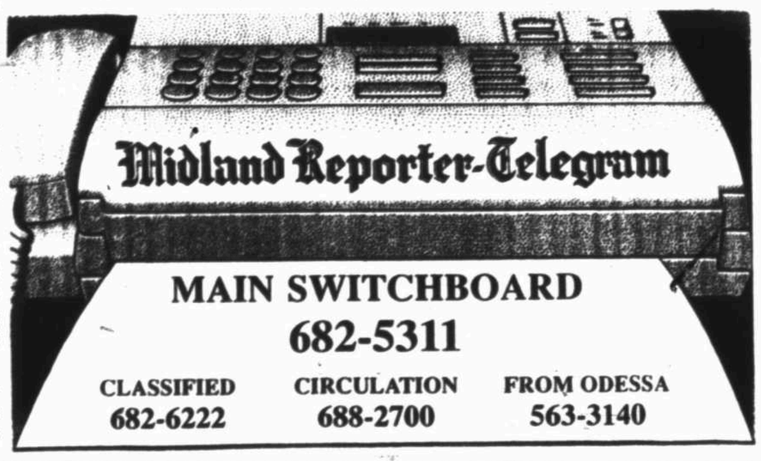

"It puts tears in my eyes to think about that," said Higley, 44. "I don't enshrine that memory. August the first always dredges it up."

Higley, then 19, and Drummond were eating lunch in the UT student union building, almost directly below the tower, when the shooting began.

They spotted a wounded student leaning against a parking meter across the street, and without debate prepared to go to him.

The two worked their way to the victim, crawling behind parked cars as Whitman fired.

"Then we got down behind a car, and I could reach up, and got the student and pulled him towards me," Higley said. "He'd apparently looked up at the tower at the time and been shot in the throat. There was no visible sign of injury, but when he came down, it was very apparent that he was dead."

Calcium can help PMS syndrome

By Jean Carper

If you suffer mood swings or physical pain before or during menstruation, get extra calcium. It may relieve much of the discomfort. That's an intriguing new finding by psychologist James G. Penland, at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Research Service in Grand Forks, N.D.

Carper

Dr. Penland studied 10 women, with typical menstrual cycles, for five and a half months. They had many fewer menstrual problems, including PMS (premenstrual syndrome) when they got 1,300 milligrams of calcium a day rather than 600 mg, which is the average dietary intake among American women.

On the typical 600 mg of calcium daily, the women, notably in the week before menstruation, had more PMS-like mood swings, characterized by irritability, anxiety, crying and depression. Their work performance and efficiency also dropped just prior to and during menstruation when on the lower calcium regimen.

The women also had more headaches, backaches, cramps and muscle stiffness during menstruation when eating less calcium.

All that's needed to bring the calcium intake up to 1,300 mg is an extra cup of skim milk and 8 ounces of non-fat yogurt a day, says Dr. Penland.

Cancer-fighting foods

Your best dietary deterrent to cancer overwhelmingly is to eat more fruits and vegetables. That's the revelation from a recent analysis by Dr. Gladys Block, formerly at the National Cancer Institute and now at the University of California at Berkeley.

In the first review of its type, Dr. Block found that fully 89 of 99 studies linked eating fruits and/or vegetables to preventing cancer of various types.

Smokers and former smokers in particular should load up on vegetables, the analysis suggests. Twenty-six of 28 studies showed that those who ate the most vegetables had lower rates of lung cancer.

If you are concerned about colon cancer, boost your consumption of both fruit and vegetables, suggest 14 out of 15 studies. Stomach cancer, too, was lower in those who ate the most fruit and raw vegetables according to 14 of 15 studies.

Vitamin C may be a particularly powerful anti-cancer agent in fruit and vegetables, as shown in 33 of 46 studies. However, it's not the only agent by any means, says Dr. Block. She thinks many constituents in fruits and vegetables work together against cancer.

Goodbye headaches

If you have chronic migraine or tension-type headaches, and drugs don't do much good, take a good look at your diet. A particular food or additive may be the cause. That's what Australian scientists recently reported at an international conference on headaches.

Although many experts now believe such headaches stem from a peculiar glitch in brain biology, food can trigger headaches in susceptible persons, as the Australian researchers found.

They looked at 59 patients who still experienced four headache episodes every four weeks during a six-month period, despite medication. The subjects, ages 9 to 71, were told to cut out wheat and all other grains except rice, as well as foods containing yeast, preservatives, MSG, nitrites, salicylates and artificial coloring.

Vitamin A deficiency

New dietary test may be able to save sight of millions of children

WASHINGTON (AP) — New tests to detect vitamin A deficiency may be able to save the sight and lives of millions of children in countries where dietary shortages of the vitamin are common, a medical chemist says.

Daniel D. Bankson of the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle said Monday that up 100 million children in underdeveloped countries suffer from undiagnosed vitamin A deficiency. For many, the lack of the vitamin will result in a loss of visual acuity, blindness or even death.

Vitamin A is essential to eyesight and also plays an important, but poorly understood, role in the immune system, said Bankson. Foods that are high in the vitamin are often absent in the diets of families in India, Southeast Asia and Central America, he said.

"We see little vitamin A deficiency in the United States because milk and cereal products are supplemented," Bankson said in an interview at a meeting of the American Association for Clinical Chemistry, where he was a speaker.

While vitamin A is essential for all ages, its absence has the most serious and enduring effect on children, said Bankson.

"When a baby is born, the vitamin A stores are fairly low," he said. "A baby's eyesight can be affected within several months of birth."

The deficiency is often "subclinical," or lacking obvious symptoms, said Bankson. As a result, he said, "it could go unnoticed for months to years until the condition is irreversible."

Often, the first major symptom of deficiency is a fatal illness.

"It (vitamin A) interacts so strongly in the immune system that with a deficiency a child's ability to fight an infection is much reduced," said Bankson. "Blindness is one issue, but the mortality is even a greater issue. Children short of A are less able to fight infections."

The best measure of vitamin A status in a patient is a liver biopsy, which is a complex and hazardous procedure that cannot be used for widespread screening, Bankson said.

As a result, researchers have developed two new tests that enable clinicians to detect vitamin A shortages using blood samples or loose cells collected from the surface of the eye.

The blood test is conducted by giving a patient a high dose of vitamin A and then testing the blood five hours later, Bankson said. In a person with healthy vitamin A stores, the vitamin in the blood will be at a normal level. In persons short of A, the levels will soar.

"In a normal person, the A would go to liver and stay there," Bankson said. "But if a person is deficient, the vitamin A goes to the liver and then right back out. You can see a peak in the blood within five hours after you dose them."

In the other test, the eye cells are examined under a microscope. If certain types of specimens, called goblet cells, are absent or if the cells have an abnormal appearance, "then it is highly correlated with a vitamin A deficiency," Bankson said.

He said the tests can be important in public health efforts to treat children short of vitamin A or to start a program to encourage parents to included foods rich in vitamin A in the diets of infants.

Vitamin A is present in meats, particularly liver; and in leafy, yellow or orange vegetables. Egg yolk is also high in the vitamin.

Federal health officials authorize study of aspirin, women's hearts

N.Y. Times News Service

Overruling an advisory group, federal health officials are planning to pay for a study of whether low doses of aspirin protect women against heart attacks.

If the study meets the scientific standards of the National Heart Lung and Blood Institute, it will be combined with a study of 45,000 nurses age 50 and older who have been through menopause. The aspirin portion of the study, which will be conducted by researchers at Harvard University, is scheduled to begin in September.

The issue of whether to study the benefits and risks of aspirin in preventing heart attacks in women has become politically charged since an earlier study produced convincing findings that aspirin protected men against heart attacks.

Many researchers believed the study should be repeated in women. But scientists who reviewed such a proposal for the heart institute expressed serious doubts, saying the data did not provide a convincing case for repeating the study in women. The proposed study by Dr. Charles H. Hennekens of Harvard Medical School was rejected three times.

Then last February, Dr. Claude J. Lenfant, the institute's director, decided to pay for the $10 million study on the effects of aspirin on heart attacks in women because of its potential health significance and intense congressional interest. But, Lenfant delayed the study after new scientific findings were reported in the spring.

The new findings suggested that men and women did not differ in their response to aspirin, and that the risk of a first heart attack was decreased in women who use from one to six aspirins each week. The evidence suggested that such use of aspirin by women could reduce their risk of a first heart attack by 30 percent.

On July 15, the advisory committee voted 5 to 4 not to pay for Hennekens' study because of technical difficulties with the proposal. Yet the committee said determining the benefits and risks of aspirin therapy in a healthy population of women was of "the highest priority." Lenfant said in an interview on Friday night that he had decided to overrule the advisory committee.

By using 45,000 nurses for the aspirin study, Hennekens said the sample would be large enough to assess whether the findings apply to whites, as well as blacks, Hispanics and other minorities. Hennekens said that his 1982 study of aspirin focused on men because the participants were all doctors and that at that time less that 10 percent of the doctors in the country over age 40 were women.

There were approximately 22,000 men in the study. Twice as many women would have been need to get statistically meaningful results because one in five men has a coronary by age 60 but only one in 17 women.

"We didn't want to neglect women," Hennekens said, "but we couldn't study them in that population."

In the new study, Hennekens will study the effects of low doses of aspirin in preventing heart disease and strokes.

Men often complain of headaches after sex

LONDON (AP) — The classic bedroom complaint "I've got a headache" may also be true after sex, especially among men.

"Hearing of sex headaches may bring a smile to the lips of the uninformed, but they are anything but amusing to those who have experienced them," Dr. James Lance, a neurologist at the University of New South Wales in Australia, wrote in an article in this week's British Medical Journal.

Lance said sex headaches are more common among men — having been reported in patients from 18 to 58 years old — and develop "without any obvious change in sexual technique."

Dr. Seymour Diamond, director of the Diamond Headache Clinic in Chicago, said he treats about two to three patients a month who suffer from sex headaches, most of them men.

He said he also suspects there are sex-headache sufferers too ashamed to seek help.

House committee votes to establish state lottery

AUSTIN (AP) — A House committee Wednesday voted to set up a state lottery, but a fight developed over what stores would be allowed to sell the gambling tickets.

Meanwhile, lottery opponents said they believed they still had enough votes to kill the measure before the full House, and accused the House Ways and Means Committee of adopting the legislation without proper public hearings.

Setting up a lottery would require changing the state constitution. That requires two-thirds approval in the House and Senate and approval by Texas voters. Under the current proposal, voters would decide the issue Nov. 5.

"I certainly feel the tire tracks on my back at the moment as the train just came running over us," said Sue Cox, executive director of Texans Who Care, after Ways and Means approved lottery measures 8-2.

"We are still confident that we can stop it on the floor" of the House, she said. Lottery bills were rejected in 1983, 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990 and earlier this year.

But State Rep. Ron Wilson, lottery sponsor, said legislators are searching for ways to increase revenue, and "lottery has basically taken on a life of its own. We need the revenue, and it's going to drive itself."

Budget experts have said a lottery would raise about $450 million over the next two years.

House members probably will have another chance to vote on the lottery early next week, Wilson said.

Lawmakers are meeting in special session to write a state budget and face a projected shortfall of $4.8 billion to continue the current level of services.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said he supported the lottery, but did not know if the House would adopt it.

"It's a revenue measure plus it's one of those situations where the people of Texas have indicated time and time again that they want the opportunity to vote on lottery," said Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

Aside from traditional anti-gambling opponents, one of the Legislature's most powerful lawmakers, Rep. Hugo Berlanga, said he will oppose the game if corporations whose employees have been convicted of felonies are allowed to sell lottery tickets.

A ban against stores with felony convictions could prevent the nation's largest convenience store retailer, Southland Corp., from selling lottery tickets in Texas, Wilson said. Southland is the parent company of more than 1,000 7-Eleven stores in the state.

In 1984, Southland executive Gene DeFalco was fired after he pleaded guilty in a conspiracy case to bribe New York tax commissioners and agreed to testify against Southland officials.

Clark J. Matthews, Southland's current chief executive, and S. Richmond Dole, executive vice president of 7-Eleven Stores, were accused in the case. Matthews was convicted but that was overturned in appeals court. Dole was found innocent by a jury.

No bribe actually was paid. Southland paid a $10,000 fine in the case.

Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, said, "Why in the hell should we allow convicted felons, personal, or corporations, or corporate officers, to be allowed to sell a lottery ticket?"

Berlanga is chairman of the House Calendars Committee, which decides which legislation will be considered by the full House.

He also was one of the primary sponsors of pari-mutuel wagering on horse and dog races. Dog racing interests want the state's tax on dog race wagering lowered because they say competing against a lottery would reduce their projected revenues by 20 percent.

Doctors seek ritual evidence

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Medical examiners have exhumed a teen-ager's body to determine if he was a victim of a sacrificial ritual, West Texas authorities said.

Doctors began examining the body of Tate Rowland on Tuesday after his family asked Childress County Sheriff Reece Bowen to reopen his investigation into their son's death.

Rowland, 17, of Childress was believed to have hanged himself from a tree in 1988. But a former sheriff may have ignored reports that Rowland died as part of a sacrifice, said District Attorney David McCoy.

He said a Lockhart girl told authorities she dreamed that Rowland was killed and hanged in a tree.

Officials said preliminary autopsy results released Tuesday show that Rowland did not sustain a broken neck, skull or any other bones. But tissue samples were sent to Dallas for analyses, including a screen for drugs.

Results of those tests should be available in about a week, Deputy Sheriff Kevin Overstreet told the Wichita Falls Times Record News.

An Amarillo pathologist also wants to examine the pattern of rope abrasions on Rowland's neck, said McCoy.

He said the pathologist indicated that the rope marks are "highly unusual" if Rowland committed suicide, Overstreet said.

"The hanging itself is very suspicious," he said.

The teen's body was found hanging from a tree 5 miles northwest of Childress on July 26, 1988.

Childress is located about 250 miles northwest of Dallas.

Agency asks court to order Wright to answer questions

FORT WORTH (AP) — Jim Wright, whose book sales helped drive him from Congress two years ago, could be forced by a federal court to answer more questions about the publication.

The former House speaker has refused to answer questions posed by Federal Election Commission officials about sales of "Reflections of a Public Man" because his case was already heard in the House of Representatives, his lawyer said Tuesday.

The commission has asked the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas to force Wright to honor an FEC administrative order to answer questions issued to him Feb. 12. A date has not been set for court consideration.

A complaint to the FEC by Citizens for Reagan on July 18, 1988, said Wright used sales of the book to circumvent House limitations on outside income.

But Wright's lawyer, Stan Brand, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram the FEC's request is an attempt to try Wright on the same charges.

"Under the constitutional Speech or Debate clause you can't relitigate what already has happened in the House," said Brand. "The case has already been heard in a court — in the House of Representatives."

Wright's refusal to answer the FEC's questions is a matter of principle, Brand said.

"It's not that we are concerned about or afraid of the answers," he said.

Wright was traveling in Mexico and could not be reached for comment, the newspaper reported. He did not immediately return a telephone call by The Associated Press on Wednesday.

Wright didn't answer written questions about book sales because he said the U.S. Constitution's "Speech or Debate" and "Self-Disciplinary" clauses of Article I bar the FEC from pursuing its investigation.

'Under the constitutional Speech or Debate clause you can't relitigate what already has happened in the House.'

— Lawyer Stan Brand

Brand said the speech clause bars the FEC's consideration of issues previously considered by the House. He added that to do otherwise would infringe on the House's ability to exercise self-disciplinary power.

The FEC argued it is acting within authority and told the court its investigation of the book sales is within its jurisdiction. The commission said information sought is relevant to the investigation.

At issue are bulk purchases of the book and whether they constitute payments for appearances by Wright. The collection of essays and observations, published in 1984, became a focus of the inquiry because Wright's critics alleged that it was sold in bulk to special interest groups in lieu of honorariums.

Critics argued that the bulk sales allowed Wright to evade limits on the amount of speaking fees a member of Congress could accept.

Representing Fort Worth in Congress for 34 years, Wright stepped down as speaker in May 1989 amid an investigation of his personal finances by the House ethics committee. He resigned from Congress and now lives in Fort Worth.

Train crew to be tested for drugs, alcohol

MAGNOLIA (AP) — The crew of a freight train that slammed into a work train were being tested for drugs or alcohol as firefighters Wednesday contained the blaze that burned for hours after the collision.

Crews on Wednesday began the process of removing the wreckage from the curved section of track in a wooded area about seven miles north of Magnolia, a small town about 40 miles northwest of Houston.

Authorities said the Burlington Northern freight train on Tuesday was traveling at about 40 mph, charging toward a smaller work train that was spraying pesticide on weeds along the tracks.

A tank car was punctured in the wreck, igniting a fire that was fueled by wood alcohol and hay that also spilled from the freight train's eight loaded cargo cars. Twelve other cars were empty.

Burlington spokeswoman Yvette Kinsey said the crew would undergo routine testing for drugs and alcohol as required by federal law. The company also began a routine investigation into the precise cause of the collision.

One train engineer suffered burns in the accident and remained hospitalized Wednesday, Ms. Kinsey said.

Jim Vance, 41, was flown to Hermann Hospital in Houston with second- and third-degree burns over 55 percent of his body, said hospital spokeswoman Teresa Kowpak. He was listed in critical but stable condition Wednesday. Vance was aboard the work train.

Another engineer suffered a broken ankle and four other people had cuts and bruises, Ms. Kinsey said. The five had been treated and released from the hospital.

Damage to the trains and track was estimated at $1.6 million.

Grandparents won't be charged in toddler's death

ARLINGTON (AP) — A young girl's death from excessive heat inside a van will not result in criminal liability for her grandparents, a prosecutor said.

But the parents of 2-year-old Angelique Darby said Tuesday they were angered by the Tarrant County district attorney's decision that no evidence of criminal negligence existed in the death.

Ronald and Maricela "Marty" Darby, Angelique's parents, said they still don't believe the explanation of James and Gloria Sylvester of Arlington that they forgot the toddler was in the van July 13.

"I just don't understand how he could say they don't have a case," said Darby.

His wife said her parents neglected her daughter and should be prosecuted. The Sylvesters said at the time that they were busy with preparations for a family meeting.

"I disagree, because they didn't do nothing to them," said Mrs. Darby. "I would never speak to my mom — when she took my daughter's life like that. I just can't forgive her."

Money-making ideas come from unusual sources. A home computer makes a fantastic Christmas gift for the whole family. Starting a cottage industry next February could prove very lucrative. A smart career move in April of 1992 will put you in the money by summer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Tempestt Bledsoe, comedian Dom DeLuise, actor Giancarlo Giannini, musician Jerry Garcia.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Career growth and personal fulfillment are top priorities now. Travel and public appearances may be the best way to achieve your goals. Play a more aggressive role in romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Signs of financial progress are very gratifying. Your recent efforts are beginning to pay off. Consider your real needs before spending your hard-earned cash on something unimportant. Emphasize quality over quantity.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your hunches are right on target today. Think in long-range terms and show enthusiasm for a client's idea. Play detective if concerned by your mate's recent behavior. The mystery is soon solved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Career discussions inspire you to work harder. Listen to someone who has had more experience in the business world. A new occupational endeavor gets off to a good start. Move forward with confidence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You and your loved ones may wish to spend some time apart on separate activities. Do not make a mountain out of a molehill. A teen-ager shares a wonderful secret. Celebrate!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A well-connected friend can be helpful to your business now. Your social and professional interests combine nicely at a social function. Do not willingly take on more than you can handle.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your concentration is excellent today. Focus on important matters, not side issues. Running a tighter ship will win you new respect. Be firm but fair. Be objective when evaluating a competitor's performance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Outside pressures could affect your home life. Try to leave your work at the office. You are about to enter a new, more rewarding cycle. A platonic relationship could turn romantic. Go slow.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Work toward your long-range objectives, no matter how awesome the responsibility they entail. Someone in authority is deeply influenced by appearances. Rid your work space of unnecessary clutter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Psychologically, intellectually and emotionally, this can be a great day for you. Upgrade a special campaign or project. Check with financial experts before making new investments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your financial situation improves, thanks to a new contract or legal settlement. Resist the urge to go on a shopping spree. A friend wants to play matchmaker. What do you have to lose!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may be more impressionable than usual now. Snap back to reality. Refuse to be rushed into making a decision. Do not feel guilty about wanting to spend some time alone.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are human dynamos — energetic, outspoken and self-confident. Even as tots, these Leos will show a real flair for getting their point across. Generous to a fault, they often give away more than they can afford. Born optimists, they feel certain that tomorrow will bring new and better opportunities their way! As motivational speakers, they have no equal. They make highly effective community organizers and preachers, bringing out the best in their followers.

When bridge problems are presented for analysis, usually there are a lot of x's to represent the spot cards. More often than not, it makes no difference. But you would have a hard time coming up with the right solution if you did not have the exact spots on this deal.

Both North and South took optimistic, though not unreasonable, positions in the auction, and the result was an "iffy" game. North's invitation was based largely on the 10 9 in partner's suit, and South was equally enchanted with the ten-third in responder's suit.

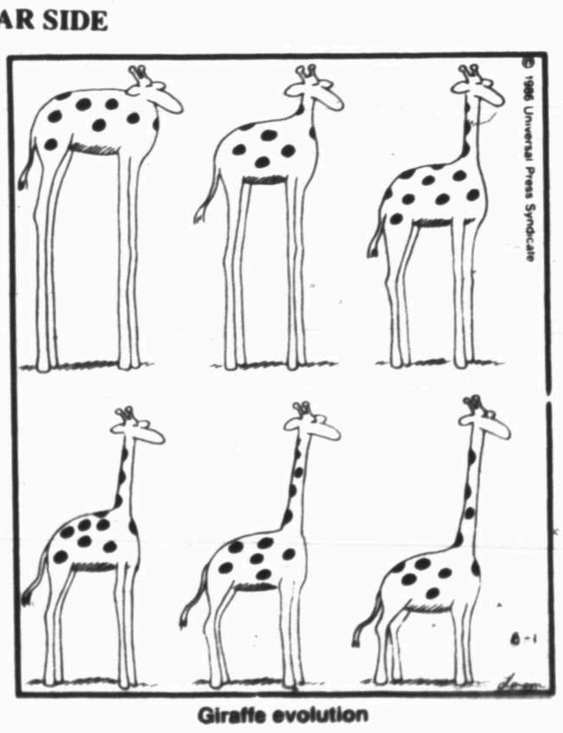

West made the normal lead of a low spade, and dummy's queen won. Declarer had seven fast tricks, and even breaks in the red suits would produce the two more needed to fulfill the game. So at trick two, declarer led the ten of diamonds from dummy, intending to duck it to West if East did not cover. When East produced the jack, declarer won the king and noted with interest that West followed with the seven.

Since declarer wanted to keep East off lead, the table was entered with the queen of hearts and the nine of diamonds was led. Again, East had to cover to prevent declarer from winning a cheap trick, and South's ace won as West contributed the eight.

If you have been following the play carefully, you should have reached the conclusion that declarer can now virtually claim the contract. West would not follow with the seven and eight of diamonds holding a lower card, so you can bet the ranch declarer is poised with the six-four of diamonds over East's five-three. South reached the same diagnosis, so all that remained was for declarer to cross to the board with a heart, lead the two of diamonds and just cover any spotcard East produced. Declarer was home with two spades, three hearts and four diamonds.

Charlie Sheen hopes switch will improve his luck in films

LOS ANGELES — Actor Charlie Sheen, known for his dramatic roles in such box-office hits as "Platoon" and "Wall Street," takes a shot at comedy in "Hot Shots!" and hopes it will end his six film flops.

"I'm not blind. I know what people are saying about me," Sheen said in a recent interview promoting the film, which opened Wednesday. Sheen plays a hotshot Navy pilot in the spoof of "Top Gun."

Sheen

"One of the reasons I did this film was that everything I've tried for the last couple of years hasn't worked, and I figured I had nothing to lose by going in a completely opposite direction," he said.

Sheen blames his string of bad movies on bad scripts and bad timing, but he also said bad judgment played a role. He said it coincided with his alcohol and drug years, which he says he has now overcome.

"Occasionally during those six years, I was straight, like during 'Eight Men Out' and 'Major League,' when I knew I'd have to get in shape and play some ball," he said.

"But for the most part, particularly during the last two years, I was in bad shape. I was on a quest for the ultimate high. I was looking for the ultimate night out."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — No hard feelings. Singer Tammy Wynette has been divorced from George Jones since 1975, but she's pulling for him to make it into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Jones is among five finalists for the honor. The others are singers Don Gibson, Merle Haggard, Ray Price and the songwriting team of Felice and Boudleaux Bryant.

"He deserves it so much," Wynette said Tuesday of Jones, whom she married in 1969. "He's had such an influence on young artists. So many of them idolize him. He is country music."

Wynette and Jones have recorded several duets together, including "Golden Ring" and "Two Story House."

The inductee will be announced Oct. 2 during the nationally televised Country Music Association awards show. Wynette has never been nominated for the honor.

CONCORD, Calif. (AP) — Jay Leno says he doesn't need a sidekick and he won't replace Ed McMahon, who is retiring along with Johnny Carson from the Tonight Show in May.

Leno said Wednesday he hasn't had a sidekick since he started as Carson's guest host, so "it would seem odd to suddenly turn to someone and start interacting."

Leno said all the speculation about who would replace McMahon was just that, speculation. He said he never spoke to Dana Carvey or Jan Hooks of "Saturday Night Live" about the job, as some newspapers reported.

Leno

Leno also said reports of his reaction to becoming Carson's successor were exaggerated.

"I'm excited about it. I think it'll be great fun. I'm not someone who leaps up and down. One newspaper said I ran around screaming when I got the job, which made my wife laugh because I didn't run around screaming on my wedding night."

HONOLULU (AP) — Ivan F. Boesky's estranged wife is suing the convicted Wall Street inside trader claiming he hasn't paid loans of more than $2.3 million.

Seema Boesky filed a lawsuit in state court July 19, seeking possession of Boesky's Yacht Harbor Towers condomium here. It charges he failed to meet interest payments on two loans used to buy the condo: a $2 million promissory note made April 15, 1987, and a $320,518 note issued August 1988.

Andrew Linder, the New York attorney representing Mrs. Boesky, declined to comment Wednesday. Robert McCaw, a Washington attorney who represents Boesky, wasn't immediately available for comment, his secretary said.

Boesky served two years of a three-year federal prison term after pleading guilty to a criminal charge stemming from trading stocks with inside information.

NEW YORK — CNN's Peter Arnett, whose Gulf War reports from Baghdad angered the Pentagon but drew praise from many reviewers, is returning to Iraq's capital city, Cable News Network said Wednesday.

Arnett will file some reports for CNN during his three weeks in Iraq, but is returning Sunday mainly to research a book he's writing about his recent experiences there, a spokesman said.

The veteran combat correspondent reported live from Baghdad when the allied attacks began the night of Jan. 17, and was there when the war ended Feb. 27. He left the city on March 7 to return to the United States.

Lithuanians suspect 'black berets' in border killings

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Assailants killed six Lithuanians and wounded two at a border post Wednesday, in the worst violence in the Baltic region in six months.

The incident spotlighted Moscow's tensions with independence-minded Lithuania just as Presidents Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev wrapped up their summit in the Soviet capital.

Lithuanian officials said they suspected Interior Ministry "black beret" troops, those responsible for previous anti-independence violence in the Baltics. The Tass news agency quoted the national Interior Ministry as denying any role by the black berets.

Lithuania's president called a special session of Parliament for Friday to discuss the Kremlin's "terrorist and repressive structures," and offered a 500,000-ruble reward for information leading to identification of the killers. That's more than 100 times the salary of the average Soviet.

Lithuania and the other Baltic republics regard their border posts as important symbols of their claim to sovereignty. Soviet officials call the posts illegal but deny ordering the series of attacks against them this year.

President Vytautas Landsbergis declared an official day of mourning on Saturday, when the funeral will be held.

"Every drop of blood which falls on the road to independence makes that road sacred," he said in a TV and radio address in Vilnius on Wednesday.

Lithuania's interior minister, Marionas Misiukonas, said all eight men on duty were shot at the post near Medininkai on the Byelorussian border. A truck driver found the bodies at about 5 a.m.

Investigators believe the customs post attack occurred after 2 a.m., when the last vehicle was checked by the post. The Soviet evening news program "Vremya" showed a pool of blood on the floor.

Lithuania sent a letter Wednesday night to President Bush asking him to act as a mediator in forming an international commission to investigate the slayings, said parliamentary spokeswoman Rita Dapkus.

Soviet Interior Minister Boris Pugo said his ministry would help find the attackers and Gorbachev, apparently moving to defuse the sitution, expressed regret and sympathy for the victims' families.

"We are doing everything in order not only to take action but also to avoid such excesses, such conflicts on the basis of resolution of basic issues," Gorbachev said at a news conference with Bush.

It was the worst violence in the region since January, when Soviet troops killed 22 people and wounded hundreds in Lithuania and neighboring Latvia.

The Baltic republics — Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia — have all declared independence from the Soviet Union, which annexed them in 1941.

Lithuania says more than 20 customs posts in the three republics have been seized or destroyed in the past two months. One guard was killed and nine people were wounded in the previous attacks.

A Lithuanian representative in Moscow, Linas Puchinaskas, said Wednesday's attack may have been in response to Lithuania's demand last week that all black berets be withdrawn from the republic.

The men were believed shot at about the same time an explosion rocked a Soviet Interior Ministry barracks next to an army base in Vilnius, Baltfax news agency said.

Contras rearm after attacks by Sandinistas

QUILALI, Nicaragua (NYT) — This isolated mountain village was asleep early one day last week when about 80 rearmed veterans of the Contra rebellion attacked the local police station in a six-hour battle that grew out of growing tension between the former rebels and their old foes, the Sandinistas.

A day later, the village's muddy streets were filled with more than 200 reinforcements from the police and army, which are still controlled by the Sandinista Front despite the party's ouster from power in national elections last year.

As the reinforcements searched houses for suspected collaborators, people began to feel the enormity of the most significant action since some of the Contras, who laid down their arms after the new center-right President, Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, came to power, began rearming early this year.

"I don't know what Dona Violeta is going to do with two armies," said Donaldo Moreno Ceas. Surrounded by a group of friends gathered in a general store, he said that he was not home when the police came looking for him the night before and that the "only crime of those being arrested is that we are not Sandinistas."

Sitting in the bullet-scarred city hall, next door to the police station, Mayor Carlos Altamirano did not try to conceal his sympathies with the leader of the attackers, a man known as Comandante Indomable.

At least two men died — one on each side, according to the mayor — and several were wounded before the attackers withdrew. Other accounts put the number of dead as high as four.

Rangers put Ryan on DL

■ While the playing future of 44-year-old Nolan Ryan is in question, Texas tries to patch together a starting rotation by activating Bobby Witt.

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Nolan Ryan is going back on the disabled list because of an aching right shoulder and it is uncertain when the 44-year-old pitching marvel might return.

"I haven't talked to anybody yet to figure out what timetable to go by," said Ryan, who took himself out of Sunday's 10-6 Texas Rangers victory over Detroit in the sixth inning because of a recurring ache in his right shoulder.

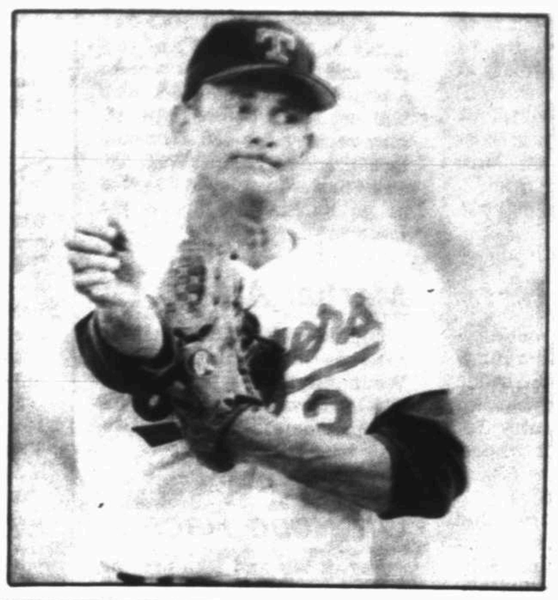

Ryan was credited with his 309th victory, striking out 10 for the fifth time this season and the 212th time in his career.

On Wednesday, the Rangers said Ryan would go on the disabled list today and would be replaced on the roster by right-hander Bobby Witt, who has been on the DL since May 27 because of a sore shoulder.

Ryan said his problems began after he pitched his seven no-hitter May 1 against Toronto.

"It's a nagging type of thing that I think I will have to put up with all season," Ryan said. "I don't think it will get better until the offseason when I can give it time to heal."

Ryan said he has had periods when "it hasn't bothered me but I guess fatigue sets in after awhile. There is no time for the stamina to build up. I can go three or four starts and be fine and then it starts to bother me."

A disheartened Nolan Ryan in his most recent start Sunday against Detroit.

Ryan said he wouldn't want extended rest periods between starts.

"I think I can get to the point where I can take my regular turn and have the team juggle the starting rotation."

Ryan was on the 15-day disabled list in May. When he misses his start Friday, it will be the fourth time it has happened and on three occasions he has taken himself out of games.

Does he ever think that one of these days when he takes himself out might be his last?

Rangers vs. White Sox/5C

"I don't think about those things," he said, "but I guess it's always a possibility. I look at what happened in May and I came back and had effective games. I don't look at it as a career-crippling thing. Just a nagging injury that comes up during the season.

"I don't have the luxury of giving it the time it needs."

Manager Bobby Valentine is being cautious about the situation.

"This is the third time it has happened," he said. "DL is not a bad word. Missing a turn has nothing to do with it. He will pitch when he's ready, when mother nature tells him he can pitch again.

"Remember, we're dealing with a 44-year-old arm," Valentine said. "It is important for him to be physically and mechanically sound. Nolan Ryan is a special kind of guy."

No Jack City

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Payne Stewart says Jack Nicklaus' fearsome stare isn't worth a spot on the U.S. Ryder Cup team any more.

The subject came up when Stewart was asked if he thought Dave Stockton, captain of the U.S. Ryder Cup team, should pick Nicklaus for the team. The 51-year-old Nicklaus has been playing well lately. He the tied the Oakland Hills course record with a 65 while defeating Chi Chi Rodriguez in an 18-hole playoff for the U.S. Senior Open championship Monday.

"No, I wouldn't pick Jack Nicklaus," Stewart said. "Intimidation is the major reason why you'd pick Jack Nicklaus. But he'd only be good for one match a day. What if they needed him to play 36 holes? The man is 51 years old. I don't know if he's capable of playing 36 holes.

"I don't think intimidation is that big of a factor anymore in golf. Jack is the best player, he's proven that, but that comes from something inside."

Spurs sale

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Several business people are organizing a group to buy into the San Antonio Spurs to head off outsiders who might purchase and move the team, a published report said Wednesday.

"There is a great concern that, if the Spurs were sold, they would leave town," said William Greehey, chief executive officer of Valero Energy Corp. "We have talked to a number of people in town to see if they are interested."

The San Antonio Express-News reported several people met Tuesday to discuss buying the Spurs.

Among those reportedly attending the meeting were a Valero representative; Mayor Nelson Wolff; Robert McDermott, chairman of USAA, an insurance and financial services firm; and Robert Coleman, owner of Texace Co., a manufacturer of golf hats and visors.

Raburn, King face off in final

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Marna Raburn has been hitting for two since the start of the 28th Midland City Women's Golf Championship, while Paula King has been nothing less than a hit in her initial run at the Tall City title.

Now Raburn, the defending titlist, who is past the midpoint in her third pregnancy and King, a soon-to-be junior at Midland Lee, are all that stand between each other and the match-play championship.

On the heels of their closely-contested semifinal victories Wednesday at Hogan Park Golf Course, Raburn and King are set to clash for the title today at 10:40 a.m. at Midland Country Club.

Being in a family way is not likely to slow Raburn.

"My pregnancies tend to make me play better, more consistent," Raburn said after she defeated former Midland High standout Jenny Hyde 3 and 2 in Wednesday's semifinal round at Hogan Park Golf Course.

"You don't try to swing as hard and you hit the ball down the middle," she said.

Hyde, who also kept the ball in play most of the day, said it was on the

Carlson finishes holdout

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Cody Carlson and the weather were the main topics of conversation as the Houston Oilers wrapped up two-a-day practices in San Antonio Wednesday.

Carlson, Warren Moon's backup at quarterback, ended a 14-day holdout by signing a two-year deal with the team.

"I'm excited the holdout is over," said Carlson, who ended his holdout one day later than he did last year. "I've been sitting on pins and needles for the past month."

The signing was well-received by most of the players.

Carlson's signing should have a positive effect on the team, said coach Jack Pardee.

"It feels good to start getting some players back, both from injuries and signings," Pardee said. "We're going to get better as we turn our attention to the football field."

Pardee said his biggest concern now is how quickly Carlson can get in condition to play.

"I'm sure he has stayed in shape," Pardee said. "But I don't think he's in football shape. We need to see if we can get him enough work in the next two days."

The Oilers will have an afternoon practice and then fly to San Diego Friday for their preseason opener against the Chargers Saturday.

While Carlson's signing was the hot topic, it wasn't the only one. Temperatures soared to a record high for the day at 103 degrees and hovered around the century mark throughout the afternoon workout.

Former Steeler recalls rivalry with Dallas

AUSTIN — Cliff Stoudt, a former Pittsburgh Steeler who now has the inside track as the Dallas Cowboys' backup quarterback, sees the irony of his new address.

During the 1970s, the Steelers and the Cowboys battled for NFL supremacy. Now Stoudt is with the once-hated enemy, and he doesn't mind a bit.

"What makes it easier is that the whole team is different," said the 36-year-old football veteran. "I'm the only Steeler left. The rivalry isn't what it was. (Tom) Landry, (Tex) Schramm, (Roger) Staubach, they're all gone. Of course it's been a lot of years since I've been with the Steelers."

Stoudt recalled the methods coach Chuck Noll would use to fire up the Steelers in their rivalry with the Cowboys.

"It was more than Cowboys vs. Steelers," Stoudt said. "It was white hats against black hats. The computer against the chalkboard. Staubach vs. Terry Bradshaw. Doomsday against the Steel Curtain. I don't know if it'll ever happen again."

With Tuesday's release of quarterback Babe Laufenberg, Stoudt becomes the front-runner over rookie Bill Musgrave in the competition for the role as Troy Aikman's backup.

Stoudt cemented his position when the 16-year veteran completed 11 of 16 passes for 134 yards and two touchdowns in last Thursday's 30-30 scrimmage tie with the Houston Oilers.

There's not much wear and tear on his arm after years of carrying a clipboard on the sidelines. He also brings experience to the table. He's as old as some assistant coaches.

Coach Jimmy Johnson has indicated the backup job is Stoudt's to lose.

Still, Stoudt says he can't afford to be complacent. He was on the bubble last year at training camp with the Miami Dolphins before he was cut and has been in the same position for most of the summers of his career.

He was signed by Dallas at the close of last season as an emergency quarterback after Aikman went down with a separated shoulder. After being released by the Dolphins at the close of 1990 training camp, he bided his time at home in Phoenix, paring his golf handicap from a 10 to a four before the Cowboys called. Dallas' offense at the time was similar to Miami's and Stoudt would require no lengthy break-in period.

"I wasn't doing anything else," Stoudt said. "I had a chance to go to the playoffs. I said, 'What the heck. Let's go.'"

He dressed as Laufenberg's backup in Dallas' season finale against Atlanta as Laufenberg struggled through a 10-of-24 afternoon. The 28-7 defeat dealt a crippling blow to Dallas' hopes for a wild card playoff spot.

Stoudt re-signed with the Cowboys in the spring as a long-shot to make the team.

Stallings takes bronze

Staff Report

Jeremy Stallings, Stanton's Class 2A state champion in the 800 and 1600 meters, turned in a career best acutrack time of 1:53.01 to capture the bronze medal in the 17-18 division of the 800 meters at the Athletic Congress National Junior Olympics in late July at Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

Stallings, who ran a 1:54.05 in the prelims, decided to concentrate on the 800 and did not qualify for the 1500 meters.

Stallings will wrap up the summer track season at the Texas Amateur Athletic Federation State Games, Aug. 4 in Carrollton.

Caddy will be Indy pacer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — For the first time in 19 years, a Cadillac will pace the field in the Indianapolis 500.

Officials of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and GM's Cadillac Motor Car Division announced Wednesday that a 1993 candy apple-red Allante convertible will be the pace car for the race on May 24, 1992.

It will be the sixth time a Cadillac-produced car has led the pack at Indy, and the first since a Cadillac Eldorado piloted by 1960 winner Jim Rathmann in 1973.

Musburger stands by remarks about Cuba

HAVANA (AP) — Brent Musburger says ABC came to Cuba "with their eyes open," and his remarks critical of Fidel Castro and his communist regime should not embarrass the network.

"I'm not playing this game where everything is great down here," Musburger said Wednesday. "Now, they're saying they might have the Olympics down here. Who are they kidding?"

Musburger will be ABC's studio host for 20 hours of coverage of the games, which begin with Friday night's opening ceremonies.

"You have to understand that the camera distorts things," Musburger said. "You put it on a cathedral or a street, and it looks like a nice pastoral scene on TV. But that's not the way it is."

Musburger first made his critical remarks in Wednesday's editions of USA Today, pointing to shortages of hot water and food and the shabbiness of the facilities for athletes.

WOMEN: Callaway outlasts Heck

(From 1C)

putting surfaces that she was at a disadvantage Wednesday.

"I stroked the ball real well and hit almost every fairway," Hyde said. "But Marna drained putts all day, and that's where the game really is.

"My putting really hurt me."

King and Kristen Arnold were even after nine holes in the other semifinal match. But a birdie on the 11th hole put King 1 up, and after Arnold salvaged a tie on No. 14 with a 20-foot uphill putt, King grabbed a two-stroke lead with a par at 15.

Ties at Nos. 16 and 17 made King a 2 and 1 winner.

"I felt like there was a lot of pressure on me toward the finish because I didn't know how we were both going to play," said King, who represented Lee at the regional golf tournament as a sophomore.

However, in winning the 15th hole, King placed the pressure on Arnold.

"When I lost 15 that was it," Arnold said. "There were only three holes left to make up the two strokes, and Paula wasn't making any mistakes.

"She was hitting the ball where she should have been."

King will not lack for confidence as she enters her first city final.

"She (Raburn) has played in it before and she knows what the pressure is like, but I feel like I have a pretty good chance," King said.

Capping play Wednesday was a battle royal between Mamie Callaway and Katie Heck. Callaway, 78, to whom the city championship was dedicated a year ago, outlasted Heck 1 up in a 23-match marathon in the consolation bracket of the sixth flight.

NL president upholds Dibble's 4-game suspension

NEW YORK (AP) — Rob Dibble, still waiting for a decision on a possible suspension for throwing at a runner, had his four-game suspension and $1,000 fine for hitting a fan with a ball upheld Wednesday by National League president Bill White.

White originally suspended Dibble on May 3, but the pitcher appealed.

Ventura robs Rangers in 9th

Associated Press

American

CHICAGO — Robin Ventura hit a grand slam with two outs in the ninth inning, his second home run of the game, and the Chicago White Sox rallied past the Texas Rangers 10-8 Wednesday night for the seventh straight victory.

Ventura got four hits, and his game-winner came against Rich Gossage (4-2). He hit his 16th home run of the season, including 12 in July.

Blue Jays 3, Indians 1

TORONTO — Jimmy Key won for the first time in eight starts and Toronto ended a four-game losing streak, beating Cleveland.

Key (11-6) pitched a six-hitter, walked one and struck out four in eight innings. He had four losses and three no-decisions since his last victory on June 13, 1-0 over Cleveland.

Tom Henke pitched the ninth and stayed perfect in 21 save chances. Cleveland lost its fourth straight game.

Eric King (4-6) came off the disabled list earlier in the day and pitched his first complete game of the season. He gave up six hits, walked none and struck out four.

Twins 12, Yankees 3

NEW YORK — Kent Hrbek hit a grand slam and Chili Davis and Shane Mack also homered during an eight-run second inning that powered Minnesota past the New York Yankees.

Mack hit two homers and drove in three runs as Minnesota rapped a season-high 20 hits. Mike Pagliarulo had four hits and Mack and Hrbek each got three as the Twins won for the sixth time in seven games.

Kevin Tapani (8-7) allowed one run on five hits in seven innings. Scott Sanderson (10-7) was knocked out in the second and lost his fourth straight decision. The Yankees have lost four in a row and eight of 10.

Davis hit his 23rd home run with one out in the second, starting the Twins' outburst. Mack hit his 10th homer with two outs and RBI singles by Dan Gladden and Chuck Knoblauch set up Hrbek's seventh career grand slam and 11th home run of the season.

Royals 5, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE — Brian McRae had four hits and drove in one run as Kansas City beat Milwaukee.

The Royals chased Chris Bosio (7-8) with four runs in the third inning. McRae's RBI single in the fourth made it 5-1.

Luis Aquino (5-2) allowed three runs in 6 1-3 innings. Jeff Montgomery pitched 1 1-3 innings for his 20th save.

George Brett, Jim Eisenreich and Brent Mayne singled home runs in the third and another scored on Bill Pecota's RBI grounder. Bosio lasted just 2 2-3 innings, his shortest outing of the season.

Tigers 3, Angels 1

DETROIT — Cecil Fielder hit two more home runs and took over the major league lead with 29, leading Detroit over California.

Rob Deer homered for Detroit's other run as the Tigers prevented Mark Langston (14-5) from becoming the first 15-game winner in baseball. Ex-Tiger Lance Parrish homered for the only run off Walt Terrell (7-9).

Fielder led off the second inning with a drive into the left-field stands, and then connected again in the eighth, breaking a tie with Jose Canseco for most in the majors.

Fielder hit 11 home runs in July, and it was the 11th multi-homer game of his career. He is on a pace for 47 home runs this season after leading the majors last year with 51.

Terrell scattered seven hits, walked none and struck out five in his third complete game of the season. It was his first complete game victory since Sept. 27, 1989. Langston allowed six hits.

Red Sox 11, Athletics 10

BOSTON (AP) — Jack Clark hit his third home run of the game, a two-out drive in the 14th inning that led Boston over Oakland, and stopped the Athletics' five-game winning streak.

Clark hit a grand slam and two solo shots for the first three-homer game of his career. Wade Boggs went 5-for-7 with three doubles and a walk as Boston won in 5 hours, 1 minute.

Clark hit a 2-2 pitch from Steve Chitren (1-3) far over the screen in left-center for his 17th homer of the season. He hit his ninth career slam in the third inning off Dave Stewart and a solo homer in the eighth off Rick Honeycutt.

Greg Harris (7-11) pitched four hitless innings, striking out five for the victory.

Boggs' RBI single with one out in the ninth tied it at 10. Ellis Burks led off the inning with a triple, Boston's 10th extra-base hit of the game. Jody Reed hit a two-run homer and Clark also connected in the eighth as Boston closed to 10-9.

Sanders heads for football

Associated Press

National

ATLANTA — It was "Prime Time" Wednesday night in Atlanta.

Deion Sanders, making his farewell baseball appearance of the season, hit a three-run homer in a six-run fifth inning as the Atlanta Braves beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-6 for a four-game sweep.

It was the fifth consecutive loss for the Pirates, who still have the best record in baseball at 60-39 despite losing nine of 12 games to the Braves.

Sanders, who also plays cornerback for the Atlanta Falcons, is scheduled to report to their training camp Thursday. However, he said he will take some time off and report Monday.

"It was a great feeling to end up on a good note," Sanders said. "It's been a long time since I felt like I contributed to a win."

After Sanders' 406-foot drive over the right-center field fence pulled the Braves to 6-5, he was asked to make an encore appearance by the 23,955 fans. Sanders came out of the Braves' dugout and pumped his fists in the air.

Midland High graduate Mike Stanton gained his second save of the season with 2 2-3 innings of scoreless relief.

Astros 9, Cardinals 5

HOUSTON — Ken Caminiti hit a two-run double in a four-run first inning and Jeff Bagwell homered for the second consecutive game as Houston beat St. Louis.

Darryl Kile (4-6) gave up one run and five hits in six innings and struck out four as he ended his four-game losing streak. Dean Wilkins pitched 2 2-3 innings for his first save.

Bob Tewksbury (7-7) allowed five runs and four hits in four innings.

Houston, which won its fourth straight, took the lead in the first when Steve Finley tripled and scored on first baseman Gerald Perry's fielding error. Jeff Bagwell singled, Caminiti hit his double off the glove of right fielder Felix Jose and Andujar Cedeno singled in a run for a 4-0 lead.

Luis Gonzalez hit his 10th homer in the third, giving the Astros home runs in four consecutive games for the first time this season.

Phillies 9, Padres 3

PHILADELPHIA — Wes Chamberlain drove in a career-high six runs with a pair of two-run homers as Philadelphia beat San Diego.

Chamberlain was just 5-for-24 before his second-inning single. He homered in the fourth and sixth off Greg Harris (2-3) and singled in the seventh.

Bruce Ruffin (2-3) allowed two runs and six hits in seven innings and struck out seven as the Phillies won their second straight following a seven-game losing streak. Roger McDowell and Joe Boever finished with three-hit relief.

Reds 5, Cubs 1

CINCINNATI — Jose Rijo allowed one run in seven innings and hit a two-run single as Cincinnati beat the Chicago Cubs.

Rijo (7-2), making his second start since coming off the disabled list last week, allowed six hits, struck out two and walked one. Ted Power got five outs for his second save.

Frank Castillo (3-2) gave up four runs and seven hits in four innings.

Prices jump

Energy futures prices soared Wednesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange on a report about a sharp downturn in supplies and on persistent rumors of refinery troubles.

West Texas Intermediate climbed 26 cents to close at $21.68. The move prompted local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian and Texaco Trading and Transportation to raise their posted price 25 cents to $20.50.

Dollar dives

NEW YORK — The dollar fell broadly in light trading Wednesday after two economic reports failed to ease persistent worries about the durability of the U.S. recovery from recession.

In New York, the dollar fell to 137.36 yen from late Tuesday's 137.90 yen.

The dollar also fell against the British pound. Sterling settled at $1.6860 in New York, more expensive than late Tuesday's $1.6770.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's rates, included: 1.7440 German marks, down from 1.7635; 1.5233 Swiss francs, down from 1.5308; 5.9310 French francs, down from 5.9640; 1,302.00 Italian lire, down from 1,310.00; and 1.15125 Canadian dollars, down from 1.15225.

State failures

AUSTIN — Texas has lost more than 36,000 business establishments since 1986, but the rate of losses has declined dramatically in recent years, the comptroller's office reports.

"As the Texas economy continues to rebound, we've left that high rate of business failures in the rearview mirror," Comptroller John Sharp said Wednesday.

In 1986, at the depths of the oil bust, Texas lost 214 of every 10,000 businesses in the state. Last year, the rate was 87 for every 10,000.

Unlike other economic indicators, such as employment figures, which show how the economy is doing now, the business failure rate lags and reflects the lingering aftershock of the Texas recession, Sharp said.

Drexel payoff

NEW YORK — More than 17 months after filing for bankruptcy protection, Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. released a draft of its plan to pay creditors and establish a second life on Wall Street.

The collapsed securities firm, among the industry's most powerful in the 1980s, said Wednesday it gave the "working draft" of its reorganization to the two federal judges handling the case.

Reports point to sluggish recovery

■ Concern remain that economy could dip back into recession after a period of growth.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's main economic barometer, released Wednesday, continues to point toward recovery, but analysts said an accompanying report on slumping factory orders illustrates the sluggish, choppy nature of the turnaround.

The Commerce Department said its Index of Leading Economic Indicators rose 0.5 percent in June, its fifth straight increase. At the same time, however, it said orders to U.S. factories fell 1.4 percent, breaking a two-month advance.

The string of gains in the leading indicators "pretty much confirms that the recovery began in the second quarter," said Sung won Sohn, an economist with the Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis.

Still, only five of the 11 forward-looking indicators posted gains. One was virtually unchanged.

"The increases are less that we've been accustomed to in a recovery, but we've been saying it will be a weaker recovery than average," said economist Robert G. Dederick of the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

The Bush administration and many private analysts believe the economy will grow about 2.5 percent to 3 percent for the rest of the year, compared to a 6 percent average growth rate in the other eight recoveries since World War II.

But some analysts express concern the economy could even dip back into recession after a period of growth.

Sung, for instance, said "the probability of a double-dip recession is not exactly negligible. If anything, it is increasing."

Richard Rahn, an economist with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, also contended the revival could be short-lived.

"At best, the numbers support a rate of economic growth of only about 1 percent — hardly fitting anyone's notion of a significant recovery," he said.

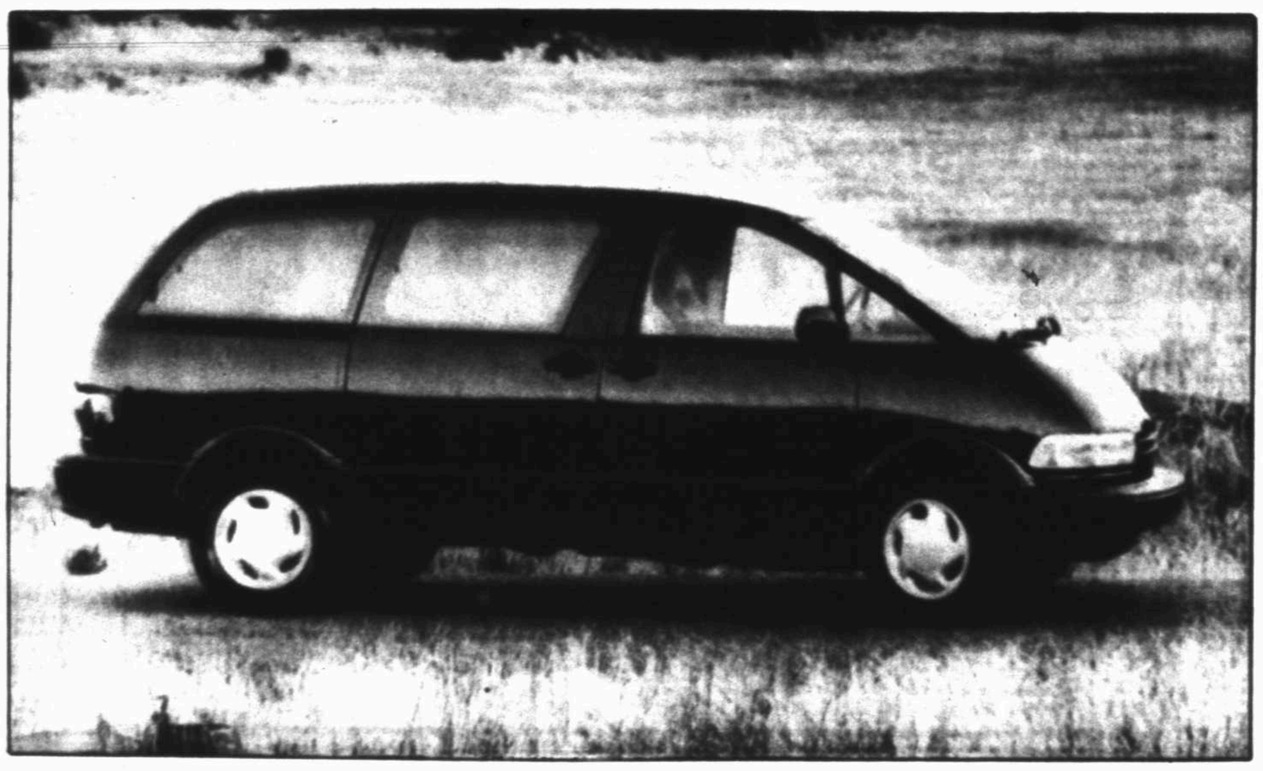

Since the end of World War II, five of the eight recessions have experienced the so-called "double dip," in which the economy expanded for one quarter before resuming its contraction.

Still, Dederick said "such decreases (as the drop in factory orders) are not uncommon in the opening stages of a recovery."

And Bruce Steinberg, an economist with Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York, said that whenever the leading indicators performed similarly coming out of previous recessions, "it's been pretty much clear sailing."

Steinberg also noted that the factory orders report showed inventories falling for six of the last seven months, which could spur production — and thus economic growth — once demand picks up and businesses begin restocking shelves.

The leading indicators are designed to forecast economic activity six to nine months ahead. The biggest contributor to the index growth in June was a longer average workweek.

Toyota's 1991 Previas, pictured, don't have air bags, but the 1992 models will. Toyota Motors seized the initiative in the battle for the growing minivan market, announcing that its '92 Previa will be equipped with air bags and be the first model to meet all U.S. passenger-car safety standards.

Columbia Gas, major eastern utility, files for bankruptcy

N.Y. Times News Service

Columbia Gas System Inc., one of the largest natural gas companies in the United States, filed for bankruptcy Wednesday, citing old contracts that commit it to buy gas at prices of up to five times the current market price.

The company said five weeks ago that it would have to renegotiate the contracts by October or face bankruptcy, but after that announcement its $1.3 billion in credit lines dried up.

With summer a time of low revenues and high construction spending for the natural gas industry, the bankruptcy came faster than anticipated, said John H. Croom, the chairman and chief executive.

But one analyst, David N. Fleischer of Prudential Securities, pointed out that the company's net worth was far larger than the potential loss from the contracts, which Columbia put at $1 billion, and described the filing as a tactic to force renegotiation of the contracts, much as Texaco declared bankruptcy as a way to reach a settlement with Pennzoil.

Croom acknowledged that the company's value exceeds its liabilities, but said Columbia had a liquidity problem so it had to file.

Since Columbia publicly described its troubles in June, it has missed more than $83 million in interest payments, and it has a $33 million payment on debentures due today.

Croom said that while the pipeline portion of the company faced losses, "in terms of preserving the viability of all our facilities, it was critical we not do anything to hamper the operation of other companies."

Columbia is the fourth-largest operator of local gas utilities, after Southern California Gas, Pacific Gas and Electric, and Arkla systems.

The company, with headquarters in Wilmington, Del., serves 8 million customers in 15 Eastern states.

The American Gas Association ranks Columbia around eighth among pipeline companies; it has 18,900 miles of pipeline and delivered 1.4 trillion cubic feet of gas last year, more than 7 percent of national consumption.

Japanese brokers admit improper payments

TOKYO (NYT) — In a new round of disclosures Wednesday of the extent of the discriminatory practices in the Japanese stock market, 13 brokerage houses said they improperly covered more than $300 million in losses for some of the country's largest industrial groups and a politically powerful religious organization.

On Monday, Japan's four largest securities houses released a list of clients to whom they had paid nearly $1 billion in improper compensation for market losses. Those payments have created a scandal that has appeared to substantiate longstanding criticisms that the market here favors powerful interests and discriminates against individuals and foreigners.

The disclosure of the two lists resulted from heavy pressure by the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, whose image has suffered because of the scandal. The releases have been intended to quell public outrage, but they have left numerous questions unanswered.

The disclosures cover only those improper payments made up to March 31, 1990. The stock market's crash lasted for most of the remainder of the year, thus there were presumably more payments. Despite the resignations of the heads of two large brokerage houses, none of the individuals involved have been identified or punished.

The new list, like the first, included members of most of Japan's most powerful corporate groups, including Mitsubishi, Mitsui, Sumitomo, Matsushita, Toshiba and Hitachi. Also receiving the improper payments were the Seibu Department Store, Nippon Steel and public pension funds.

In all, 380 companies and 6 individuals — identified only by their initials or as corporate directors — were on the list. Altogether, those on the new list were paid a total of about $315 million at current exchange rates.

But there were key differences in the two lists. First, the new one included more large banks, including the Daiwa Bank, the Mitsui Bank (now Mitsui Taiyo Kobe Bank), and the Saitama Bank and the Kyowa Bank, which have merged.

The most interesting addition was the Soka Gakkai, Japan's biggest Buddhist organization. The list showed this powerful nonprofit group, which has been involved in several other scandals this year, received slightly more than $3 million from Kokusai Securities, which is affiliated with Nomura Securities.

Soka Gakkai is also affiliated with one of Japan's leading opposition parties, the Komeito, or Clean Government Party. This is the first confirmation of widespread rumors that politicians benefited, even if indirectly, from the improper payoffs.

Most of the 13 securities firms that made the payments are affiliated with larger brokerage houses and banks.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Making big money from rare coins is difficult

By Bill Doyle

Q. My wife and I are trying to save for our son's college costs. We have been doing a little bit in stocks, U.S. savings bonds and coin collecting.

Doyle

Lately, we have been phoned several times by coin brokers, who inform us the rare coin market will produce average annual returns of about 20 percent. But I find nothing to substantiate that claim other than those brokers' newsletters, which I find to be self-serving.

A. It has been, in some cases. But such high returns have been as unusual as coins are rare and of high quality. It's unlikely those brokers phoning you are offering the genuine article.

As is the story with all "collectibles," dabbling in rare coins can be profitable only for individuals who put in a great amount of time and effort learning the subject, then buying and selling wisely. Most amateurs get taken to the cleaners.

Chances are the coins those brokers want to sell to you are lower than investment grade.

A mighty important point to keep in mind is that the public buys collectibles at retail prices and gets much lower wholesale prices when selling. The difference between those two prices usually is substantial. It means you have to own the item for years before being able to sell at a profit — even if the price is rising. You can't be sure that will happen.

For your son's college fund, my advice is to stay with savings bonds and, depending on your tolerance for risk, common stocks of profitable companies.

Q. I have some old U.S. coins, including silver dollars and dimes, as well as nickels, minted in the 1800s and early 1900s. Where can I cash them?

A. Even though those coins are still legal tender, don't simply cash them by exchanging them for folding money or using them to buy things. You can sell them for whatever collector's value they have.

That value depends on the rarity and condition of each coin. Age does not necessarily determine rarity; the number of the particular coin available in the market does. Condition ranges from 70, for "mint state" or perfect, down to 1, for a coin that is worn almost smooth.

Despite claims to the contrary, grading remains an objective thing. Two grading "experts" might come up with different numbers for the same coin. The Federal Trade Commission has cracked down on coin-grading outfits for misleading and outright false grades.

Before selling your coins, visit a public library and look up prices in coin reference books. Then get quotes from a number of different coin dealers listed in the yellow pages of your phone book.

Try to contact a coin-collecting club for more information about coins, prices and dealers. Your local chamber of commerce might be able to direct you to such a club.

Q. I purchased investment-grade diamonds at the top of the market. There is no question about the grading of the gems, but the firm from which I made the purchases has since gone out of business.

I have been unable to keep up with the value of my diamonds. Can you refer me to someone reliable who could provide this information? Perhaps it could be a firm which which I might do business when I am ready to sell.

A. This column never points readers toward specific dealers, brokers and the like. That would be a sure invitation to disaster, because complaints surely would come in. You'll have to check prices with a number of jewelers.

For your sake, let's hope there's no doubt about the gems' gradings. That should be the case, if they are in line with the Gemological Institute of America's ratings. However, the closure of the firm from which you bought raises a warning flag.

You must have gone for a bundle, as the lowest priced investment-grade diamond retails for more than $10,000. That market topped out in the early 1980s and still hasn't fully recovered.

New packaging to hatch

By Anthony Ramirez
N.Y. Times News Service

One of the best-known packages in consumer-products history, the ubiquitous plastic eggs that hold L'eggs panty hose, will soon disappear. Next year, L'eggs will be sold in a kind of art-school depiction of an egg, a small cardboard box with an ovoid peak.

Analysts say the new package is an important innovation in the slow-growing panty hose business. Sales have been hurt by panty hose's increasing durability, which means fewer purchases.

L'eggs is by far the largest seller of panty hose, helped by its pioneering move in using brand-name marketing for what was once a moribund generic commodity. L'eggs put its colorful, eye-catching plastic eggs in carrousels and slanted display racks in what were then unusual places like drugstores, supermarkets and convenience stores. In doing so, it helped transform the women's hosiery business into one dominated by panty hose, rather than the more cumbersome stockings and garters.

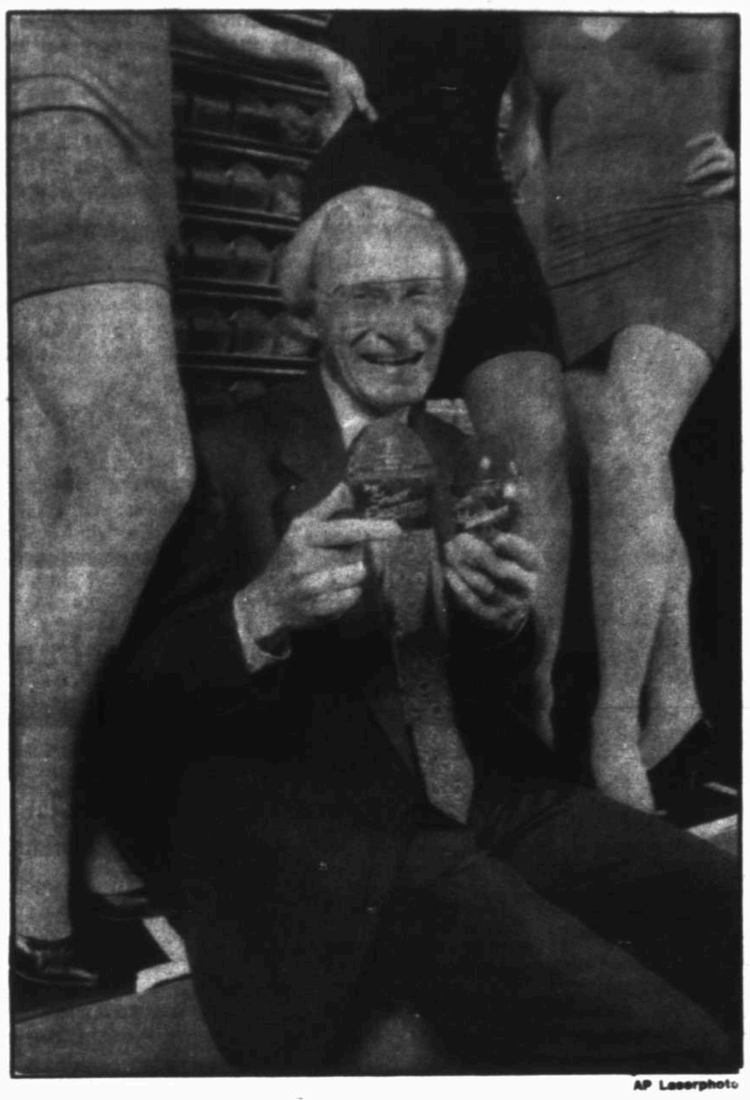

L'eggs executives say the new packaging updates a 20-year-old design and they cite favorable market research. "We have gained a great deal in shopability, while retaining the egg heritage," said Ronald W. Zabel, president of the L'eggs Products Inc., alluding to years of L'eggs television and print advertising.

Even so, Sara Lee Corp., the Chicago-based food and consumer-products company that owns L'eggs, runs the risk of alienating longtime L'eggs customers accustomed to the plastic egg. "After all, Coca-Cola did a lot of market research when it introduced New Coke," a legendary marketing fiasco, said John Lister, creative director for Lister Butler Inc., a brand-identity consultant.

Still, Lister said, Sara Lee's change makes sense because an egg shape creates "a lot of dead space" that increases transportation and retailing costs. "Younger consumers are also bound to regard the egg as gimmicky and an example of overpackaging."

For its part, Sara Lee says the new box is better for the environment because it uses nearly 40 percent less packaging material and is made out of cardboard that can be recycled. The company is also quick to point out that the current plastic egg can also be recycled and insists that no environmental groups or consumers complained about the plastic packaging.

Zabel said the labeling on the new cardboard box better conveyed essential information, like size, color and kind (regular versus, say, support panty hose).

Ronald Zabel, president of L'eggs Products Inc., shows the company's new hosiery package (left) next to the landmark egg (right) at a New York news conference. The "egg" has been redesigned to be easier to handle and read, in a single-piece, recycled paperbound box. A division of Sara Lee Corp., L'eggs is the leader in the $2.2 billion hosiery industry.

L'eggs panty hose itself will remain unchanged, as will its suggested retail price range of $1.89 for regular to $4.99 for support.

Not coincidentally, the new package crams more product into scarce retail space. Sara Lee will be able to put 992 L'eggs packages into the typical supermarket display, 264 more than can now fit.

Roger W. Spencer, who follows Sara Lee for Paine Webber, said that putting more packages in the same shelf space was important because it meant "more chances for purchases and less chance of being out-of-stock."

Of Sara Lee's estimated $12.5 billion in annual revenue in the fiscal year ended June 30, about $1 billion came from panty hose, much of it from L'eggs.

With other major brands like Sheer Energy and Just My Size, as well as designer hose like Donna Karan and Liz Claiborne, Sara Lee has a 43 percent share of the hosiery market, which last year totaled about $2.2 billion in retail sales. No-Nonsense panty hose, a national brand made by privately held Kayser-Roth, is a distant second at a 12 percent market share.

The rest of the hosiery business is made up of lower-priced private-label brands that are not distributed nationally.

The new L'eggs boxes will be sold first in October in Western states, and in early 1992 in the rest of the country. A giant version of the new box was displayed on a fog-enshrouded stage at a recent news conference in Manhattan. In an exuberant, if perhaps politically incorrect, display of spandex, six leggy models in miniskirts assisted in the introduction. The nearly all female group of reporters and editors from consumer and fashion magazines watched in silence.

Style 'born to be wild,' but feminine

By Woody Hochswender
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The motorcycle jacket conveys a tough, don't-mess-with-me attitude. Men have always worn it to indicate that they were outsiders, beyond the law or born to be wild, even if only on weekends.

Women's fashion has absorbed the style, minus the exhaust, perhaps to send slightly different messages. Women like the attitude, the jagged counterpoint of tooled leather over more feminine shapes. The short biker jacket, with its asymmetric front zippers, floppy lapels and angled pockets, adds a series of sharp V-shapes, almost Cubist-like, to the top half of softer silhouettes.

There is a talismanic quality to the tough little jacket, thrown over a disco dress or topping a cat suit. It is protection. With a pair of dark shades, it is now possible for shy young women to be like Arnold Schwarzenegger in "Terminator 2," zipped-up and unapproachable.

Details from the motorcycle look turn up throughout current fashion, marking collections high and low. For the finale of Chanel's fall fashion show in Paris, Karl Lagerfeld sent the models out wearing quilted black leather jackets over long, full skirts in pink, burgundy and blue. The outfits were accessorized with gobs of gold chains and chunky metal belts with the Chanel name embossed on a quilted field of gold, evoking the Harley-Davidson emblem.

Claude Montana is also partly responsible, with his fetish for putting zippers everywhere, including down the fronts of expensive evening dresses.

New York retailers said last week that motorcycle jackets and motorcycle-inspired looks were among their best sellers.

Bergdorf Goodman filled one window on the 57th Street side of the store with motorcycle looks, including simple black dresses with zip fronts and suede skirts with slanted zipper pockets.

Bloomingdale's now has a shop called "The Bad and the Beautiful," on the store's third floor, devoted to motorcycle jackets for women. The styles include metallic gold, pink and other colors. Macy's plans to install a biker-fashion shop for the fall season.

The hot seller at several stores is the classic short motorcycle jacket by A Line, the new collection from Anne Klein. The jacket, in black or yellow, costs about $900. Saks Fifth Avenue, which sold out of the A Line jackets, sells a Saks label version in black for $350. The motorcycle attitude migrates into other tailored clothing. The A Line collection includes a wool blazer with an asymmetric zipper configuration.

Fabrics stretch fashion into sheer sexiness, bringing 'lingerie' out of the closet

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

T-shirts, tank tops and bodysuits as sheer as the filmiest stockings are suddenly popular. Woven with Lycra or nylon yarns, they cling, stretch and even give some support. And, unlike hose, they seem impressively impervious to runs.

Daring women are wearing these transparent coverings over nothing (usually shielded by a jacket), while those who are more modest put theirs over bras pretty enough to show off. Either way, the look is unquestionably sexy, fitting right in with the current mode of lingerie dressing.

In Paris, Christian Lacroix showed sheer tops under luxurious daytime suits. In New York, designer Isaac Mizrahi did the same. This is transparent dressing at a top price. One lingerie company, Only Hearts, however, is selling sheer black tank and long-sleeved tops at Henri Bendel for less than $30.

"They're the modern shell," says the sportswear designer Randolph Duke. This summer, his company has been deluged with orders for these see-through silk and nylon tops in black. They will sell for about $80 at Bloomingdale's this month.

Though the garments are only seven inches wide, "they stretch forever," Duke says. "They're not only sexy and comfortable to wear; they're also amazingly durable."

One Texas customer for whom Duke made a version studded with fake gems said she had never owned anything that "looked so fragile and wore so well."

"Why, I could go to war in it," she said.

DEAR ABBY

According to law, 'finders are keepers' in Supreme Court case

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to the couple in Anchorage who were torn over whether or not to keep the $42 the husband found in the glove compartment of the used car they had recently purchased.

Van Buren

They have no legal responsibility to return the money to the car's original owner. To illustrate, here's a similar case that went to the Supreme Court in 1981. In the case of the City of Everett v. the Estate of Sumstad, the Mitchells were a couple who purchased a used safe at an auction for $50. The safe had previously belonged to the Sumstad estate and contained a locked inside compartment. The Mitchells had a locksmith open the compartment and discovered $32,207 inside.

The Everett police impounded the money and brought an action against both the Sumstad estate and the Mitchells to determine the owner of the money. The trial court decided in favor of the estate, but in appeal, summary judgment was for the Mitchells.

Since the Mitchells understood the sale was final, and the auctioneer reserved no rights of the estate to any contents of the safe, the reasonable conclusion is that the auctioneer objectively intended to sell both the safe and its contents, and that both parties mutually assented to the sale. Therefore, the Anchorage couple should feel no guilt in keeping the $42, since the Supreme Court ruled that the Mitchells could keep $32,207. — KNOWS THE LAW

DEAR KNOWS: Surely you also must know that that which is legal is not always moral. I rest my case.

DEAR ABBY: The first time you quoted "The Reading Mother," I meant to write to you; when you did it again today, I decided I would not fail this time.

Why not a reading father? My three sons received bedtime readings from the time they were small until almost through high school. I, their father, was the reader; I love books, and I enjoyed the material at least as much as they did.

We got through the Alice books, "Gulliver's Travels," "Huckleberry Finn," "Lord of the Rings," and scores of others.

I was in medical school and psychiatric residency training during many of these years, and the hours spent reading to my children were a welcome relief to me, as well as an introduction to the world of literature to them.

I recommend reading aloud to children of all ages by either parent. — ROB HARDY, CHIEF, MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES, R.A.F., LAKENHEATH, UNITED KINGDOM

DEAR DR. HARDY: I am printing your letter in the interest of fairness to those fathers who read to their children. Although their numbers may not be as great as mothers, they deserve to be counted.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DESPERATE IN CHICAGO: "The darkest hour in a man's life is when he sits down to plan how to get money without earning it." — HORACE GREELEY

Psychiatrists should shrink from the light

By Erma Bombeck

A long time ago I accepted the fact that living on this planet put me in a no-win situation. If I gave up sweets and ate vegetables, the insecticides used on the vegetables would make me sick. If I stopped being a couch potato and started to jog, the carbon monoxide fumes from all those cars would do me in. If I tried to save my teeth, too many X-rays could put me at risk. If I drank eight glasses of water a day to stay healthy, the impure water supply could threaten my being.

Bombeck

Not once did I ever consider that sunglasses would be bad for me. I just figured they protected my eyes from the rays of the sun and kept me from planting oats and rye in the wrinkles around my eyes. Now a couple of psychiatrists in London have decided that people who habitually wear tinted glasses tend to develop abnormalities.

Give me a break. What's that supposed to mean? They say they gave personality tests to 20 people who wore sunglasses and 20 people who didn't. "The people we studied weren't just young, fashion-conscious people," said one of the doctors. "We're mostly talking about elderly ladies with chest pains, wearing tinted glasses in bed."

Well, there you are. If you're going to study Barbara Cartland-types who write romance novels from a bed while feeding Belgian chocolates to a small dog with bad teeth, what do you expect?

Their findings revealed that those who wore dark spectacles were much likelier to display signs of depression, anxiety, phobias, hypochondria and psychosis than those without glasses.

Are they telling me that the Jack Nicholson who watches the Lakers through dark glasses is really the same Stephen King maniacal character in "The Shining" who yelled, "Here's Johnny"? Get outta here.

I wear tinted glasses on days when the bags under my eyes look like ledges on the windows of vision and if I don't have them surgically removed, people will begin to set things on them. Is that depression?

I wear them because I know I won't get a good table without them. Is that anxiety?

I wear dark shades because I will lose whatever career edge I have without them ... like cutting one's hair. I suppose that's a form of hypochondria!

I put them on first thing in the morning because I think I bear a striking resemblance to Diane Sawyer in them. I guess that suggests a psychosis.

Psychiatrists! Get a life.

Cosmetic & Reconstructive Surgery

Q. Can breast implants interfere with the detection of breast cancer?

A. Modern mammography can detect most breast cancers before they are large enough to be felt and therefore is the best way to detect cancer early. Frequent self examination and regular physical examinations by the doctor are also very important in order to pick up those small number of tumors that may not be seen on an X-ray.

Depending on where the cancer develops in the breast, the presence of the implants could either delay discovery or in some cases actually make the detection easier. An implant usually complicates mammography by requiring special techniques and extra views to completely visualize all of the breast tissue. (The extra radiation is negligible and about equal to what one receives during a short plane trip.) These breast films must be done by a mammographer familiar with the proper techniques; "shopping center" screening clinics should be avoided. Studies on those few patients who developed breast cancer after augmentation suggest that diagnosis was not delayed any more than in those women without implants.

Cosmetic & Reconstructive Surgery

Q. Are breast implants safe?

A. Nothing in life is completely safe but breast implants are one of the safest surgically implanted devices in common medical use. It is estimated that more than two million women have had this procedure performed since the introduction of the modern silicone implant in 1963. Of course, surgery required for implantation of the silicone prosthesis has the usual operative risks, which the surgeon will discuss with the patient. As with any operation, bleeding, fluid collection, excess scar tissue, infection or anesthetic difficulties can occur. Fortunately, such complications are uncommon. Although they may need treatment, these problems are rarely severe enough to require even temporary removal of the implant.

In a very small number of women the body tissues do not tolerate the implant and the device may need to be permanently removed. Also, occasionally problems with the implant itself arise which necessitate surgical replacement. However, the silicone is generally recognized as safe, and reports of serious or life-threatening problems directly related to the implant itself are rare.

Weight Management

Q. I read "yo-yo" dieting can increase cardiovascular disease risk. Does this mean a "yo-yo" dieter should remain overweight?

A. Obesity is reaching epidemic propertions in the United States. Current data indicates approximately 40% of adult Americans are clinically obese, consume diets of 40-45% fat and support negligible activity. Obesity is a significant risk factor in the development of heart disease, hypertension, elevated cholesterol and triglyceride, diabetes and various cancers. A decision to remain obese is an obviously risky choice. To lose weight is comparatively less risky, and current reports of "yo-yo" dieting hazards are controversial and postulative. Of significance, however, is that weight loss is not a cure for obesity. Weight management is. The solution to "yo-yo" dieting and chronic obesity is not to remain obese, but to learn how to manage weight loss with a program offering long-term focus and education for lifestyle change and ultimate weight and health management.

Family Dentistry

Q. I had to wear braces all through high school. Now my 6-year old's permanent teeth are coming in crooked. Can anything be done to correct this now so that she doesn't have to go through what I went through?

A. Most likely. As the first adult teeth erupt, at around age five or six, it can usually be determined whether the teeth will need to be straightened. (About 70% of adult teeth come in crooked.) The new eruption guidance techniques use the natural forces of the erupting adult teeth to guide them into proper alignment.

These new methods can correct such problems as crowding of the adult teeth; overbite (upper teeth overlap the lower teeth too much); and overjet ("Buck teeth"). The bands of elastic-like tissue that anchor the teeth to the jaw bone are initially soft and relatively flexible. Therefore, it is usually better to guide adult teeth into proper alignment as they erupt, instead of waiting until a child is eleven or so to begin straightening the teeth with braces.

While this technique cannot correct all problems, the great majority of children treated with eruption guidance will not need further orthodontic treatment.

Saint Laurent shines in eye of Paris storm

By Bernadine Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS — After the raging fashion storm stirred up by the fall and winter couture openings, there came a pause in the week's entertainment.

Yves Saint Laurent provided an oasis of calm July 24, and the audience responded with a standing ovation.

It seems the appetite can be sated with too much Chinoiserie, rock clothes and ballerinas. There comes a time for staples, like meat and potatoes, and Saint Laurent provided it.

His day clothes were familiar and not extravagant, unless you consider a suede jacket edged in sable extravagant. The focus was on suits and simple dresses.

The newest shoe was a high-heel pump with a modest platform outlined in white stitches. The other accessories were not overwhelming, either.

The designer has the best color sense of anyone in fashion, but he didn't flaunt it. He occasionally put together audacious combinations that made you gasp in admiration, like a cerise suit with green suede shoes, a lizard handbag in a brighter green and a silk print blouse combining yellow, gold and blue.

But more often there were white with a dash of color, black, gray and several shades of beige. The strongest colors came in the plaid suits with pleated skirts that mix blue or green with red.

HEMLINES USUALLY stopped a few inches above the knees, but the designer offered food for thought in some variations. Trousers, for example, ended anywhere from just above the ankle to the middle of the calf.

He couldn't resist a few examples of knickers, including a pair in brown damask, which tied just below the knees, and some with an Eastern air. A few narrow calf-length skirts completed the hemline experimentation.

The action accelerated with new versions of the designer's "smoking" theme, men's dinner clothes for women, which long ago became a key to Saint Laurent's approach to evening dressing.

The pace really speeded up with a few black lingerielike dresses, resembling corsets decorated with a lot of ruffles and lace. These were the flash and dash of the collection.

The long dresses moved into traditionally glamorous areas, some gentle and simple, others resplendent in metallic fabrics, flaunting lavish embroideries and the sound of crisp silks on the move.

'Paris has become the ultimate showcase at the international level.'

— Mila Schon
designer

Once the enfant terrible of couture, Saint Laurent, who will be 55 years old this week, has grown up to be its major defender. The question is, for how long? Pierre Berge, the chairman since the company's inception nearly 30 years ago, predicts the end of couture as we now know it by the end of this century.

NOT BECAUSE OF lack of clients or craftsmen, he said, but for lack of couturiers. Young people, he said, are being trained in ready-to-wear.

Asked how he felt about the prediction, Saint Laurent said emotionally that it sounded very sad and that if true, he would continue to work privately.

As if to prove Berge's point, Pierre Balmain, now owned by Eric Fayer, a Canadian financier, showed a collection July 23 of just 22 styles by Herve Pierre, 25.

Pierre's idea of couture dressing involves feathers, fishtail effects in the back that preclude sitting comfortably, or at all, as well as trousers with each leg the size of a ballgown. It is not that he lacks imagination. Reality is what he has to learn about.

The arrival of Mila Schon bolstered this city's claim to being the world's fashion capital.

The head of her own company in Milan, Italy, since 1958, she joins two other Italians, Gianni Versace, who opened the showings here July 20, and Valentino, who introduced his clothes July 24, in the week of couture presentations.

"Paris has become the ultimate showcase at the international level," Mrs. Schon said.

Her specialty is the use of double-faced fabrics that obviate the need for linings in coats and suits.

This time, she often adds a border of matching fox in apple green or pink, which tends to recalls the golden years of Hollywood. Elaborate jeweled embroidery for evening and feathered headdresses reinforce that impression.

During the showings of Yves Saint Laurents' 1991-92 Fall/Winter haute couture collection in Paris July 24, one of the famed designer's stand out fashions was this black lace, longsleeved cocktail dress with a black satin bubble skirt and black lace stockings.

A model wears a satin-leather evening gown with huge bubble sleeves in amaranth, cooper, turquoise and emerald shades embroidered with sequined lace, designed by Yves Saint Laurent for the 1991-92 Fall/Winter haute couture collection presented in Paris July 24.

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
