Three winners: 7-8-15-42-46-47

■ Lucky tickets were sold in South Texas, Central Texas, Dallas area.

Associated Press

SEMINOLE — New Mexico residents flocked Wednesday to the tiny convenience store boasting Texas' biggest lottery sales, but the three winners came from other points across the Lone Star State.

The winning numbers 7-8-15-42-46-47 were sold in South Texas, Central Texas and the Dallas area, meaning three lucky people will share the estimated $50 million prize, said lottery spokeswoman Carmen Luevanos.

Further details, including the exact total the winners will share, were to be released today, she said. The pot returns to $3 million for Saturday's drawing.

Thanks to the high-dollar drawing that drew people to convenience stores and across state borders, $23.1 million worth of tickets were sold Wednesday, making it the second-best day in lottery history.

At the Hester Stateline Oil Co. in Seminole, just four miles east of Hobbs, N.M., lottery players jammed the parking lot and jostled for counter space inside.

"They say you can't win unless you do it," said Hobbs homemaker Janet McAtee. "Everybody I know comes over here."

The tiny convenience store in Seminole has sold $1.9 million in Lotto and scratch-and-win tickets

FBI shift on guns

WASHINGTON — The Federal Bureau of Investigation is proposing to break its tradition of public neutrality on political issues and call for the immediate enactment of the Brady bill, which would require a five-day waiting period for buying handguns, government officials said Wednesday./3A

Bustamante trial

SAN ANTONIO — Prosecutors set out Wednesday to prove former congressman Albert Bustamante went from a poor man chasing the American dream to an elected official peddling his office for money. On children, valium

BOSTON — Valium can safely reduce the risk of the alarming, fever-induced convulsions that are experienced by tens of thousands of babies and small children each year, researchers said Wednesday. A six-year study involving more than 400 children shows that oral doses of Valium, a tranquilizing drug, at the time of fever can markedly reduce the recurrence of febrile seizures, the fever-triggered convulsions that occur in about 4 percent of all children in the United States./7A

FORT WORTH — The Tarrant County district attorney has dropped a controversial proposal to allow some young adults to have sexual assault charges dismissed under some conditions. Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Curry initially had defended the changes in the county's deferred prosecution program. FORT MITCHELL, Ky. — A bunch of dummies gathered Wednesday for a convention. And they brought along their ventriloquists, too. The convention, in its 19th year, annually draws about 400 people to the Vent Haven Museum in this northern Kentucky city. The museum features dummies and ventriloquists' memorabilia. The gathering began Wednesday with a show for the public.

Clinton dives into summit with flourish

■ President seeks to erase leadership doubts among Japanese, strengthen politically shaky hand at home.

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press writer

TOKYO — Wherever you looked, there was Bill Clinton — giving a speech, holding a news conference, mixing with shoppers, meeting with world leaders. The blur of activity was intended to erase doubts about Clinton's global leadership and strengthen his politically shaky hand at home.

"I'm having a good time," the president said Wednesday after his debut at the seven-nation economic summit.

No wonder. He was doing what he loves best: meeting people, shaking hands, and discussing complex issues that leave most people scratching their heads. The subjects were trade and macroeconomic coordination and microeconomic problems of job creation and structural unemployment.

All day long, the president starred in a stream of photo opportunities with the leaders of Britain, Canada, France, Germany, Italy and Japan.

His partners seemed content to quietly share the limelight.

"Anytime the president is leading on the world stage, it helps him," said

After first trade accord, leaders tepid on Bosnia

TOKYO (AP) — After crafting a breakthrough agreement on free trade, Western leaders struggled Thursday to find common ground on Bosnia. They forged a statement that warned against "dismembering" Bosnia but shied away from the threat of force to protect besieged Muslims.

Last-minute disagreement emerged over Bosnia when President Clinton and the other six leaders put the finishing touches on their joint political communique. Release of the document was delayed, diplomatic sources said, when French President Francois Mitterrand made an 11th-hour pitch for firmer support for the embattled Muslims.

In the end, the leaders agreed to this statement:

"We cannot agree to a solution dictated by the Serbs and the Croats at the expense of the Bosnian Muslims. We will not accept any territorial solution unless it has the agree-

Cisneros stakes out striking role of contrarian on racism

By Jason DeParle
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Henry G. Cisneros, the secretary of Housing and Urban Development, has staked out a striking role: that of a Cabinet-level contrarian on the volatile question of race.

In an administration that has been largely silent on the subject, Cisneros has gone out of his way to call racism a driving force behind many social ills, particularly urban poverty.

In a recent interview, he criticized those he calls "quote, New Democrats," the party centrists being courted by President Clinton, for "failing to acknowledge the problems are as severe as they are." Cisneros

Perot block no shot in dark, White House pollster finds

By Richard L. Berke
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Voters who supported Ross Perot in last year's election remain deeply committed to him and are "increasingly skeptical" of President Clinton, who wants their support to win re-election, a national survey released Wednesday by Clinton's pollster has found.

Whfle the pollster, Stanley B. Greenberg, said Clinton could draw support from Perot's backers, the findings underscored how difficult that effort could be. Clinton would have to prove that his policies fundamentally improved the economy, the study said, and to persuade the Perot voters that he had significantly changed government by cutting waste and bureaucracy and greatly curb-

Hot, humid, windy pattern stalls in basin

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

West Texas has never been known for its lush, tropical weather, especially during the long days of summer.

However, if is seems just a little hotter and a little more windy than usual, it's not your imagination. The Permian Basin is stuck in a hot, windy weather pattern that shows no signs of letting up anytime soon.

There are several reasons for the weather pattern, but none of them are even in the state of Texas, according to a National Weather Service spokesman. A low pressure center across New Mexico and Mexico, southwest of El Paso, coupled with a stationary front over northern Missouri, Kansas and southeast Colorado have put the area in the middle of two strong atomspheric systems. The result is the stagnant weather pattern with stronger winds and hot, humid temperatures.

It's been a busy week for weather watchers across North America: a hurricane off Mexico, thunderstorms and record floods in the Midwest, a heat wave in the East, and snow — in July? — in the Rockies.

Hurricane Calvin is careening northward along Mexico's Pacific coast, closing seaports and airports. By Wednesday, still more than 1,000 miles south of the United States, it had killed more than two dozen people and flooding had forced 14,000 from their homes.

Around the popular seaside resort of Acapulco, coconut palms and other trees were uprooted. Dozens of seaside cottages, thatched roof restaurants and fishermen's huts were torn off their foundations or washed away.

"My house is your house — or what's left of it," said homeowner Dora Garcia as she looked at the ruins being pounded by the surf.

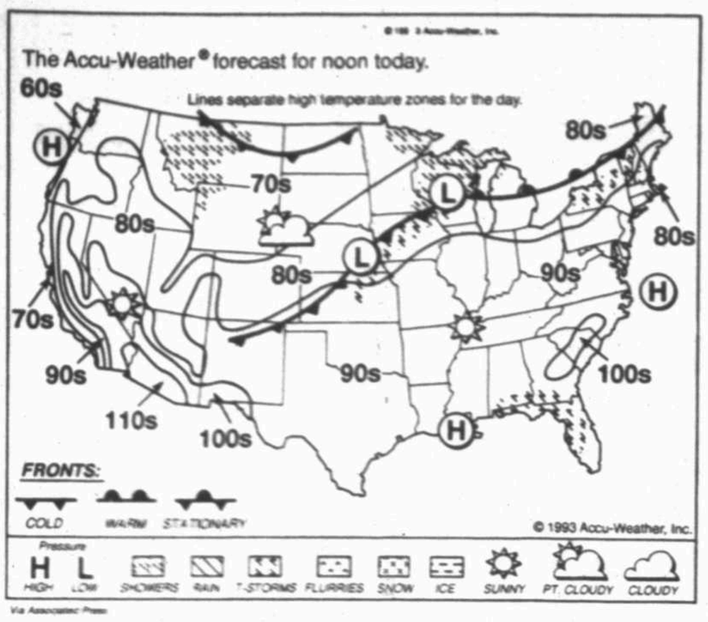

But while the hurricane was moving, the pattern of thunderstorms over the waterlogged, flooded upper Midwest was like a broken record that has been playing for weeks.

DIVE: President steps onto world stage

(From 1A)

Clinton adviser George Stephanopoulous. "The president is serious about leading, there's no question about that."

A good summit performance could improve Clinton's standing when he returns from Japan and South Korea to referee final action in Congress on an ambitious deficit-reduction plan.

With his eye firmly fixed on problems at home, Clinton repeatedly talked about how the summit's results could bring jobs and higher incomes for Americans.

Intent on stamping Clinton's imprint on the summit, American officials made sure that the U.S. side of the story was loudly heard. Even by summit standards of heavy "spinning," it was a remarkable performance.

Trade Secretary Mickey Kantor gave a press conference. So did Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen and Secretary of State Warren Christopher. Presidential counselor David Gergen held two news conferences. There were background briefings.

And Clinton held his own news conference — after being exempted from restrictions on discussing the summit while it's underway. The meeting with reporters came just in time for morning television shows.

"Bye," Clinton said as he steered off stage by Christopher, who didn't want the president to break summit protocol rules.

Clinton sprinkled the day with diplomatic meetings. He conferred with President Suharto of Indonesia and met with Italy's prime minister, Carlo Ciampi. He invited British Prime Major John Major for a talk, but then put off the meeting for hours to allow time for the news conference.

Gergen credited leaders of Britain, Germany and Japan with helping produce a long-sought agreement on trade.

But, Gergen said, the trade pact and an expected aid package for Russia where two areas where Clinton felt "he could make a special difference in this summit if he exercised his leadership, stepped into these two issues and tried to give them both a lift."

"I think he's taken a forceful stand and initiated much of the agenda here," Gergen said.

Risking charges that he was interfering in Japanese politics, Clinton began the day with a speech telling Japanese consumers that they were being hurt by their government's trade tariffs. You're paying too much for products because your government restricts imports, Clinton said.

In a nation soon to hold parliamentary elections, he spoke of the need for a change of direction in Japan's economic policies.

Clinton pointedly said that Japan's policies were fueling resentment in America. At the end, the audience of college students stood in ovation. Outside, 200 student radicals shouted, "Smash the summit."

From his speech, Clinton and his wife went hand in hand to a shopping area for a campaign-style tour. He ducked into a store selling pennants and came out with one commemorating his visit. He knelt to talk with a five-year-old girl. He stopped in a restaurant and shook hands.

"I just wanted to get out and see the people where they live," the president said.

The whole event was put together by Hollywood producer Mort Engelberg, who also orchestrated Clinton bus trips.

At the summit's opening plenary session, each leader made a presentation. Clinton was last to speak, forced into uncharacteristic silence for 1½ hours while waiting his turn.

STALLS: Area stays hot, windy far as the mercury goes, the air outside seems a lot hotter than the usual mid- to upper 90-degree readings because of the higher humidity, the spokesman said.

Also, while the humidity may be higher, the area is not getting the normal precipitation for this time of year. The normal reading for the first part of July is around ½ inch of precipitation. This year, the NWS has only recorded a trace of rain.

The NWS spokesman said the pattern is not likely to let up any time in the near future, with forecasts calling for mostly sunny skies through Monday, highs in the 90s and lows in the 70s.

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies, a high in the upper-90s and south winds at 15-25 mph. Tonight should be mostly clear with a low in the lower 70s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 73, Wednesday's high reached 97, compared to the record high for that date of 103 set in 1964. The record low was 56 set in 1952.

STATE

Most of Texas was hot and breezy Wednesday, except for West Texas which was hit by heavy storms and extremely strong winds.

A person in Nazareth phoned Castro County officials to report a tornado, but sheriff's department officers hadn't verified it almost an hour later, said department dispatcher Tana Young.

Ms. Young said storms were pelting the area with damage likely, though no injuries had been reported.

The rest of the region either endured showers and thunderstorms or enjoyed mostly sunny skies.

Fair overnight conditions were expected to lead into a partly to mostly sunny today, with a chance of isolated evening thunderstorms over most of West Texas.

Predicted lows were in the 60s and 70s with highs today in the 90s to near 105 along the Big Bend River valleys.

Gusty winds blew across South Texas, the fiercest hitting 25 mph. Skies were partly cloudy across the region. Temperatures were in the 80s in the west with 90s reported elsewhere.

Some showers tried creeping into the deep south and middle coastal area set off by a sea breeze front moving in from the Gulf of Mexico.

The area can expect partly cloudy conditions through today. Overnight lows will be in the 70s and 80s with today's highs reaching the 90s.

The North Texas skies were partly cloudy, except for Abilene and Mineral Wells where they had clear skies.

Temperatures peaked in the 90s, though the heat index made North Texans feel like it was 100. Some areas got a little relief from winds of about 15 to 25 mph.

The western and central parts of the region were under a wind advisory for the late afternoon Wednesday.

Today, the forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with wind and isolated thunderstorms east. Highs could reach 97 and lows will dip to 73.

NATION

Rain and thunderstorms were scattered over the eastern third of the nation Wednesday and temperatures hit record lows in the Northwest. An East Coast heat wave included record highs in the Northeast.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over much of the Mississippi Valley, the eastern Dakotas, southeastern Kansas, Oklahoma, the Gulf of Mexico coast, the southern Atlantic Coast states, and the northern Appalachians.

As much as 7 inches of rain fell overnight at Jefferson City, Mo., contributing to flooding there, and the Mississippi River continued rising along Iowa, Iilinois and Missouri.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT included 2.00 inches at Enid, Okla.; and 1.41 at Kirksville, Mo.

High temperatures and high humidity combined to produce high heat indexes in the East, with heat advisories posted for parts of New York state, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina and eastern South Carolina.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

ing the influence of special interests.

The survey was commissioned by the Democratic Leadership Council, a centrist group that was a base for Clinton's campaign and has since battled Democratic liberals over what the new president's White House should represent.

Wednesday, the council's leaders sought to use the findings to make a case that Clinton should follow many of its recommendations to draw Perot voters into his camp.

In a strategy for expanding Clinton's support beyond the 43 percent of the electorate that voted for him and for drawing some of the 19 percent that voted for Perot, the council cited the survey as evidence that the president must create new jobs, reform government, demonstrate that he spent taxpayer money with discipline, was more assertive toward Congress and more clearly invoked the middle-class values of work, family and individual responsibility.

Given the disaffection among Perot voters and the political parties, Greenberg said it would not be easy to win their support. "We're dealing with something that's big," he said. "The depth of alienation is so strong and deep, it's hard to imagine they will be moved over to any direction until there is evidence of change."

Greenberg said he had agreed to conduct the study over the last three months because he and the White House were concerned that Perot could be a serious threat to Clinton's political future.

He said the White House was not involved in the poll and had no role in producing or releasing it, though he planned to share the results with officials there.

The telephone survey of 1,200 Perot voters nationwide was the most comprehensive of that voting group taken since the election, according to Greenberg, who later conducted discussions with six focus groups among Perot backers in California, Ohio and Maine. The survey also included 800 voters who did not support Perot.

The national survey was conducted from April 12 to April 20, and the margin of error for the full sample of Perot voters was plus or minus three percentage points. The focus groups were held from May 13 to May 18, after which the results were collated and studied.

"The Perot block is for real and has considerable staying power," the study concluded. "Perot voters remain committed to their 1992 vote and, for the moment, want to stick with Perot in 1996, even if he were to run as a Republican. That is a measure of their independence and alienation, which will remain important in our future national elections."

LOTTO: Three to share estimated $50 million since the Texas Lottery began last year. Officials say a Town & Country store in McAllen was Texas' No. 2 lottery retailer with $1.5 million sales.

(From 1A)

The Seminole store is nothing fancy — a few dusty gas pumps out front, shelves crammed with air freshener and Campbell's soup. But here, less than a quarter-mile from the state line, customers come in from the hot sandy wind to dream their vision of wealth.

Hester vice president Al Hester Jr., said that 70 percent of the players at his store come from New Mexico. Also, Texans often make the drive 24 miles west of Seminole and 100 miles southwest of Lubbock because they think the store is lucky based on the high volume of tickets sold, Hester said. That's even though there has never been a ticket sold that won the jackpot, he added.

Hester said he never imagined the mom-and-pop operation his parents started 40 years ago would ring up sales surpassing those in larger cities.

By Wednesday afternoon, lottery players were leaning against a 20-foot wooden counter, elbows propped up and eyebrows furrowed in concentration. Some took their time and consulted friends before picking their numbers; others worked silently and speedily beside liter bottles of soda pop.

"On this one, I just closed my eyes and stabbed" one woman said to no one in particular.

"One's just as good as another, far as I know," a man told his companion. A New Mexican who asked not to be identified bought 600 tickets. She said she wished her state would start a lottery.

Lottery officials were watching closely to see if the single-day sales record of $24 million would be broken Wednesday. That mark was set May 1, helping the state reach the previous record jackpot of $48.6 million.

Fourteen winners split the May 1 jackpot.

"They want that opportunity to strike the dream of a fortune," Al Hester said. "It's big bang for the bucks."

Many of the lottery players already had plans for the money.

'What am I going to do with it? I'm going to disappear. Wouldn't you?" asked Paul Torrez, a Hobbs man who plays twice a week. "I don't know if we're risk takers or not. Everybody just wants to get rich."

ment of the three parts."

The political statement was in sharp contrast to last year's communique which said that military action might be necessary. This year's weaker statement reflected the allied lack of support for a U.S. proposal to arm the Muslims and bomb Serb artillery sites.

The Group of Seven economic summit got off to a fast start Wednesday with announcement of an agreement among the world's leading industrial countries on a proposal to restart long-stalled international trade talks. They turned their attention back to the global economy after issuing their political statement.

In it, the Group of Seven urged Israel to respect U.N. resolutions calling for withdrawal from lands occupied in the 1967 Mideast war and agreed to pressure Iraq and Libya to cooperate with the United Nations.

"In an interdependent world, partnership is the key to building global peace and prosperity," the statement concluded. "We commit ourselves to a new effort to help shape a more secure and humane world, and urge others to join us."

While the conflict in the former Yugoslavia defied solution, the leaders did reach agreement on a sharply worded declaration criticizing Iran and Iraq for defying international standards of conduct.

Despite hints from U.S. officials a day earlier that the statement would contain a sharp rebuke of Iran, Iraq and Libya for defying international standards of conduct, the draft communique included only tepid calls for them to abide by various U.N. Security Council resolutions.

Surveying an uncertain world, the summit countries backed expanded peace-keeping operations by the United Nations and safeguards against the spread of nuclear technology.

The communique also gave support to the economic and political reforms undertaken by Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

ROLE: HUD chief speaks out on racism

(From 1A)

called racism a "malignancy" and "the great Achilles heel of our nation's future."

Cisneros' role is more than rhetorical. He is moving to reverse decades of federal housing policy that he says has not just tolerated but promoted racial segregation.

Most notably, he is trying to move subsidized housing out of central cities and into white suburbs, an effort he acknowledges will be met with fierce local opposition.

"I'm not naive about how difficult this is," he said. "Suburban settings don't want to accept public housing."

Cisneros, as is his manner, has been careful to avoid criticizing his colleagues by name, though he has cited disagreements with the Democratic Leadership Council, the organizational umbrella of "New Democrats" that Clinton once headed.

He has been careful to praise Clinton's racial sensibilities, saying, "I am perfectly respectful of where the president's instincts bring him out on this issue."

But Cisneros' critique of urban poverty places him at odds with a view endorsed by many Democrats, including some of the administration's top appointees.

That view acknowledges the historic impact of racism. But it argues that the quandary of the black urban ghettos today stems more directly from other problems, like family break-up, drug abuse, educational failure, and the economic shifts that have reduced the number of well-paying, low-skilled jobs.

By contrast, Cisneros insists that "race is at the core of the problems which confront America's urban areas" and says, "that is not a message that resonates well with some of the New Democrats."

Cisneros' housing proposals are also, in many regards, at odds with those of his predecessor, Jack F. Kemp. Kemp also criticized racial division and talked about the need for poor people and minorities to have choices in where they live. But he placed his greatest emphasis on plans to let inner-city residents improve, not flee, the ghettos, by buying their homes.

It is unclear how much support Cisneros will ultimately find at the White House. He said the president has been "very supportive"

But during presidential campaign, Clinton sought an image of independence from minority advocacy groups, who, like Cisneros, have argued that racism remains a central fact of American life. And Clinton has been seeking to court the centrist and conservative legislators most likely to be skeptical of Cisneros' actions and views.

In a recent interview in his office, Cisneros summoned several top aides for what became a mini-seminar on race in America.

Recounting a night he had recently spent in the Ida B. Wells public housing development on the South Side of Chicago, Cisneros painted an eerie portrait of waking to morning fog and young corpses, victims of gang warfare.

In telling the story, he emphasized what he called the "spatial separation" of that public housing complex and others from the rest of society.

stalled across the Plains, a turbulent nursery for bad weather.

Between the spring snowmelt and the continuous rain storms, there has been flooding on the upper Mississippi and its tributaries since April, hitting a record 110 days on Tuesday, the Army Corps of Engineers said. Some streams in eastern South Dakota have been flooded continuously since the snow melted, and parts of the area got 7 inches of rain during the weekend.

Around the western end of the stalled front, cold air rushed southward into the Rockies during the weekend, dropping up to a foot of snow in the mountains of northern Wyoming. In Colorado, the Arapahoe Basin ski area celebrated the Fourth of July with one last run down the slopes.

Making an end run to the east around the stalled front, hot, humid air oozed northward along the East Coast, pushing temperatures into the 90s as far north as Maine. Rochester, N.Y., near the short of Lake Ontario, hit a record 97 on Tuesday.

"It's been a good summer thus far," said Tom Black, who owns three Baskin-Robbins ice cream stores in Columbus, Ga.

'Big Muddy' rushes 7 miles beyond banks

At least 15 dead, billions of dollars in damage, more rain pushes river even higher.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Mississippi River sprawled 7 miles outside its banks Wednesday north of St. Louis and threatened to breach levees protecting West Alton, Mo. A levee on a small river failed in Iowa and forced 800 people from their rural homes.

Still more waves of thunderstorms pummeled the region with heavy rain, and federal officials estimated crop damage alone across the upper Midwest would be about $1 billion.

In Davenport, Iowa, residents watched in vain for the Mississippi to crest and begin draining out of their city. The river, fed by heavy rain, rose above flood stage on June 11 to start the worst flooding since 1965. River officials said it should crest Thursday.

In Illinois, most of Pontoosuc was under water and few people were left in town, officials said. And the Illinois and Mississippi rivers combined to flood Grafton — the city operated a boat shuttle service to the only major road out.

Some 7 inches of rain overnight flooded streets in Jefferson City, Mo. Rain also helped collapse part of a bridge in Nebraska and flooded out residents along Iowa's Des Moines and Iowa rivers.

Flooding on the Mississippi and its tributaries throughout the Midwest has been blamed for 15 deaths and billions of dollars in damage to property and crops. In Washington, federal officials pledged comprehensive assistance for the Midwest.

Hundreds of National Guardsmen were on duty in Iowa, Illinois and Missouri to help with sandbagging and evacuations, and Illinois also had mobilized 400 state prison inmates to help.

Rising water in southeast Iowa forced about 800 people from a 4-square-mile area south of Wapello

Coast Guard finds 4th Chinese alien flotilla

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Less than a month after President Clinton announced a crackdown on smuggling of illegal immigrants, the Coast Guard found 659 undocumented Chinese on three boats floating in international waters Wednesday.

U.S. officers briefly boarded the freighters off the coast of Mexico, south of here.

But the government had not decided whether to tow them to the United States or Mexico, or simply turn them around, officials said.

It wasn't known where the boats came from. But they were suspected of bearing Chinese bound for the United States illegally.

One vessel's engines were broken. It had asked for help. The other two were inspected because the Coast Guard thought they were suspicious after patrols spotted them last weekend.

"We were concerned because they appeared to be the same type of boats the Chinese have been using to smuggle people into the United States," said spokeswoman Brandy Ian in Long Beach.

The agency was awaiting State Department instruction before taking further action.

A spokeswoman for the State Department said an interagency group that also included the Immigration and Naturalization Service and possibly the White House was meeting to discuss the next step.

In the past six months, boats of undocumented Chinese have landed in Mexico, San Diego, San Francisco and New York.

FBI abruptly shifts policy on gun control

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation is proposing to break its tradition of public neutrality on political issues and call for the immediate enactment of the Brady bill, which would require a five-day waiting period for buying handguns, government officials said Wednesday.

FBI Director William S. Sessions sent Attorney General Janet Reno a letter Tuesday outlining a proposed six-point policy statement on the bill and other gun control issues. He asked her to approve the move and advise President Clinton of the decision, the officials said.

Sessions notified each of the FBI's special agents in charge of its 56 field offices throughout the country of the proposed policy change in a teletyped message Tuesday. A spokesman for Ms. Reno said Wednesday that she had not yet had an opportunity to review the FBI proposal and did know how she would respond.

Bureau officials called the proposal a one-time departure from the FBI's tradition of not taking a stand on political issues.

Many FBI officials have urged for years that the bureau break that rule in the case of the Brady bill. But Sessions had long resisted the idea while he was working for Reagan and Bush.

The director's abrupt reversal at a time when his job is in jeopardy was widely interpreted within law-enforcement circles as an effort to improve his standing within the Clinton administration, which supports the Brady bill.

Thousands homeless as hurricane pounds Mexico

Perhaps 28 dead as Calvin hovers off Pacific coast.

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico (AP) — Hurricane Calvin lost strength Wednesday as it passed over the Mexican mainland after leaving a trail of flooding and destruction along the country's Pacific Coast.

At least 28 people have been reported killed since Monday by winds, floods and storm-related rains from the Yucatan Peninsula to the Gulf of California. More than 18,000 people were forced from their homes.

By 8 p.m. EDT, the hurricane was 25 miles west-southwest of Puerto Vallarta, moving northwest at about 13 mph. Mexican officials issued a hurricane warning for Baja California, 300 miles to the northwest and the next land to be hit by the storm if its path is consistent.

Earlier, docks and airports closed as the hurricane moved slowly northward past posh resorts, oil ports and fishing villages. Coconut palms and other trees fell. Dozens of seaside cottages, thatched-roof restaurants and fishermens' huts were torn off their foundations or washed away.

Calvin hit Manzanillo, a city of 93,000, with winds of 85 mph, then sliced inland through sparsely populated countryside, toward Puerto Vallarta, said the U.S. National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla.

Maximum sustained winds then decreased to about 75 mph. Officials at the U.S. National Weather Service in Miami, Fla., said, however, that winds may pick up as the hurricane moved back over water.

There were no immediate reports of deaths in the Manzanillo-Puerto Vallarta region, but phones and power were out in much of the area, many roads were blocked and there was extensive flooding, said Marcelino Rojo of the Civil Protection Agency for Jalisco State, which includes Puerto Vallarta.

"There is damage ... but we can't say how much there is because of the lack of communication," he said, adding there were reports of waist-deep water in some towns.

Yeltsin comes to summit with better economic news

TOKYO (AP) — For the first time since he launched a radical transformation of the Russian economy in January 1992, Boris Yeltsin is seeing signs of success.

The turnaround comes as welcome news at this week's Tokyo summit of the Group of Seven industrial powers, all of which are hard pressed to provide financial aid to Moscow at a time when their own economic outlook is not bright.

Yeltsin, due to arrive here Thursday for one-on-one talks with the G-7 leaders, will be able to report that Russian inflation is down, the ruble's plunge has been arrested, industrial production in some areas is picking up, and privatization of state-owned businesses is gaining speed. Some serious problems remain, of course, as Yeltsin converts a command economy to one guided by market forces.

Appearing at a G-7 summit for the second year, Yeltsin will not be part of the formal seven-nation talks but is scheduled to meet separately with most of the group's leaders.

Just three months ago, world leaders were worried about Yeltsin's political survival and the fate of his reforms.

Yeltsin's victory in the April 25 referendum on the president's power and policies, plus the effects of disarray among the opposition, have given him more authority to pursue the reforms.

Yeltsin is likely to point to the progress made in privatizing the Russian economy, which was almost completely state-run when the Soviet Union collapsed in 1991.

More than 35 percent of Russia's work force is employed in newly private companies, and the government hopes that figure reaches 50 percent by year's end.

When he meets with the G-7 leaders, Yeltsin will seek their commitment to a $4 billion privatization fund proposed by the United States. Japan has been cool to the proposal. Yeltsin's first scheduled visit here is with Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa.

Progress in privatization may be one of Yeltsin's main arguments to persuade the G-7 nations to lift trade barriers that remain from the Cold War days.

"The most important thing is to give our firms and enterprises an opportunity to engage in normal trade. This would be the greatest kind of help the G-7 could give us," Finance Minister Boris Fyodorov said.

Yeltsin also will note that the threat of hyper-inflation has receded.

Clinton decides to admit fewer Eastern Europeans

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Citing a lack of demand, the Clinton administration has cut by 1,000 the number of displaced persons from Eastern Europe that it will resettle in the United States, State Department officials say.

Refugee organizations say that more than 2 million people have been displaced by the fighting in Bosnia-Herzegovina. But the State Department said that because of an apparent reluctance to leave the Balkans, only 1,000 refugees from Bosnia-Herzegovina have applied for resettlement in the United States since Oct. 1. As a result, the number of slots reserved for Eastern European refugees in fiscal 1993, which ends on Sept. 30, will be reduced to 2,500 from 3,500.

In a cable sent to relief organizations, the State Department said 1,000 resettlement slots transferred last year from the allocation for the former Soviet Union to the allocation for Eastern Europe were being transferred back. The slots had been given to Eastern Europe to settle more refugees from Bosnia.

Senator's visit to Vietnam spurs hope on POW issue

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — A U.S. senator's visit this week may speed Vietnamese cooperation to account for American servicemen missing from the Vietnam War, the chief of MIA investigations in Vietnam said Wednesday.

Sen. Bob Smith, R-N.H., was scheduled to arrive Thursday to see whether Vietnam is doing as much as it can to help resolve the remaining 2,253 MIA cases from the war, which ended in 1975.

Smith advocates an intensified search for MIAs and has in the past accused Vietnam of not cooperating fully.

But Army Lt. Col. John Cray, commander of the U.S. MIA office in Hanoi, believes Smith's visit probably would spur the Vietnamese to work harder on the remaining cases of missing Americans.

He noted that Vietnam has made greater strides toward settling the MIA issue over the last couple of years.

Iraqi parliament threatens retaliation if America attacks again

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Defiant lawmakers, meeting in a tense Iraqi capital, said Wednesday that Baghdad was not seeking another international confrontation but promised it would retaliate if attacked again.

In an emergency session, Parliament also said it would not bow to U.N. terms for long-term video monitoring of missile sites unless the international community offered something in return.

The session came hours before air raid sirens sounded in the capital, followed by an all-clear signal about 20 minutes later. State-run television said Iraqi air defense "suspected a hostile air raid."

The alert sent hundreds of residents, hardened by years of confrontation with the West, into the streets to see if there were any signs of attack. Many vehicles took cover.

Tension has been building in the city since the June 27 U.S. missile attack on Baghdad. On June 29, anti-aircraft guns in Baghdad fired at a target that apparently turned out to be an Iraqi military plane.

In Washington, Pentagon officials would not comment on the alert.

Assembly Speaker Saadi Mehdi Saleh, addressing Parliament, said Iraq was not seeking another confrontation with the United Nations or the United States.

But "let the aggressor know, we will do what we can to reply to the aggression," he said.

All 250 members of the National Assembly raised their hands in support of the stance. But some

Georgia talks of cutting ties with Russia unless Moscow stops war

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Georgia said Wednesday it may cut diplomatic relations with Russia unless Moscow acts urgently to stop the 11-month-old civil war in the separatist Georgian province of Abkhazia.

Georgia accuses Russia of backing the Abkhazian separatists and fueling the uprising. Moscow denies it.

Fierce fighting was reported in the region Wednesday, with each side claiming it inflicted heavy casualties.

Georgia accuses Russia of fueling separatist uprising.

The conflict has killed more than 1,000 people. It began after a mainly Muslim minority in Abkhazia declared sovereignty and Georgia sent in thousands of troops.

Prime Minister Tengiz Sigua told a news conference Wednesday, "If Russia fails to undertake radical measures on halting the conflict in Abkhazia in two days, the issue of severing diplomatic relations between Georgia and Russia may arise."

The Abkhazians launched a successful offensive last week, cutting off land approaches to their Georgian-held capital of Sukhumi, once a thriving resort of 130,000 on the Black Sea.

Egypt cracks down on terrorism by preparing to indict 770 extremists

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Pressing ahead in the government crackdown on Muslim extremists, prosecutors are preparing indictments against 770 men accused of plotting assassinations and car bombings, a military source said Wednesday.

It's the biggest action so far against suspected Muslim extremists in Egypt.

The suspects will be charged with belonging to an illegal group called "The Vanguards of Islam," a revival of the Jihad organization which assassinated President Anwar Sadat in 1981.

The military source, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said the 770 men were planning a series of attacks in June but were arrested before their offensive got under way. Authorities seized large amounts of weapons and explosives with them.

President Hosni Mubarak started referring Muslim radicals to military courts late last year to ensure their speedy trial.

The military courts have sentenced 22 men to death, but only two executions have been carried out.

Vests are 'thanks' to Midland officers

There's a very special relationship that exists between the residents of a city such as Midland and the men and women in the law enforcement community who swear to protect those citizens even it if means giving up their own lives to do so. The relationship is one based on trust.

That such a relationship exists in Midland was underscored soundly through the "Invest in a Vest" program. Midlanders freely put their hard-earned dollars into the program, eclipsing the $80,000 goal by almost $60,000! What that means is that the Midland Police Department will be able to purchase bullet-proof vests for 130 officers AND use the additional funds for a vest replacement fund, which is a necessary feature since the vests can only be used safely for about five years before being replaced.

The vest program got overwhelming support from local residents including schoolchildren who opted to forego exchanging $2 Christmas gifts to purchase a vest and others who sold aluminum cans to raise money for the program.

The message was clear: Midlanders appreciate the protection they get daily from law enforcement officers and want to return a measure of that protection to the officers who stand in harm's way to protect the citizens of Midland. They want to have a part in "protecting the protectors" in what is an increasingly dangerous world.

Midland City Council also pledged $40,000 toward the purchase of the vests.

Hopefully, the vests will give to the police officers of Midland and their families a small measure of the security the officers give daily to the residents of this community.

They are Midland's way of saying "thank you" to the officers who put their lives on the line for us every day of the year!

GEORGE WILL

Anarchy is achievement of liberalism

WASHINGTON — We need a new taxonomy of politics. A ruling by a federal district judge proves that anarchy, usually defined as the absence of government, can be approximated by a glut of the kind of government produced by liberal legislation and judicial activism.

Will

A federal law (if something so indeterminant in its requirements can be so called) requires the government to file environmental impact statements for all "proposals for legislation and other major federal actions significantly affecting the quality of the human environment." "Human" encompasses spotted owls. It is unclear what "major" and "significantly" mean.

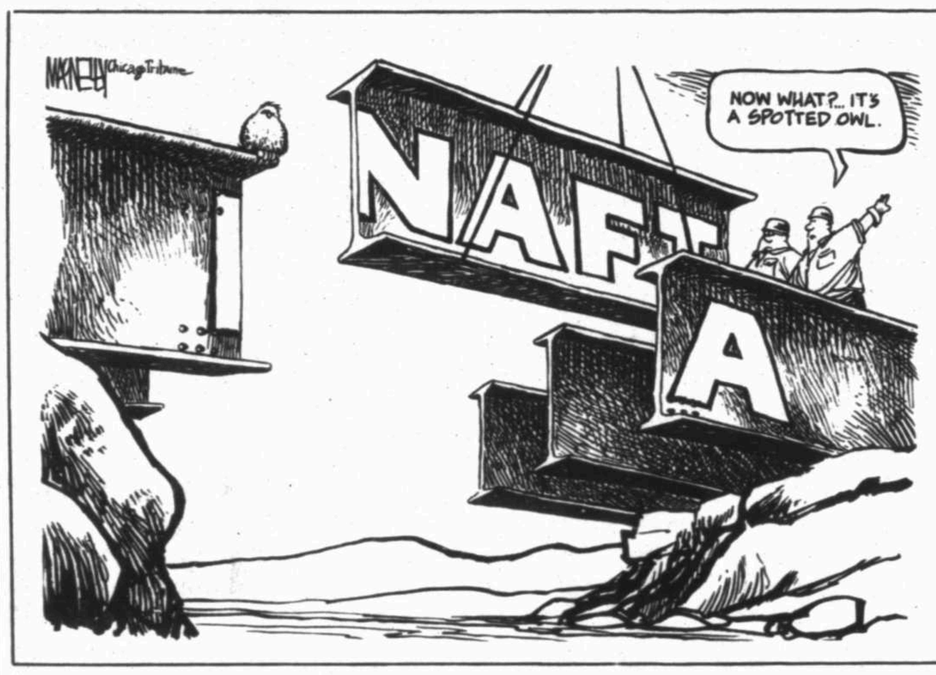

Last week Judge Charles Richey decreed that the Clinton administration must file an impact statement regarding the North American Free Trade Agreement. The law Richey purports to be enforcing was enacted in 1970. Richey is the first judge to discover that the president's power to complete international agreements is contingent upon the filing of impact statements.

The administration plans to appeal Richey's decision, whatever it is. Richey did not say — how could he under the Constitution? — that the president cannot submit, or Congress cannot ratify, NAFTA until the "impact" is calculated. His ruling may just be judicial noise, but it can be consequential. It may deprive NAFTA of whatever scant momentum the president has imparted to it, and will give timid legislators, frightened by interests who are frightened by the threat of free trade, an excuse to run from it.

Regarding NAFTA, and free trade generally, President Clinton (to borrow words Teddy Roosevelt used of William Howard Taft) "means well, feebly." Clinton favors NAFTA. But of his four most relevant aides — Trade Representative Mickey Kantor, Commerce Secretary Ron Brown, Laura Tyson, the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen — only Bentsen seems to have his heart in free trade. And beneath the senior levels, Clinton's administration is largely staffed by left-leaning Democrats who regard NAFTA as a disagreeable interference with the government's right to interfere with economic freedom.

What kind of mind believes it is possible to anticipate and quantify the "impact" on the entire "human environment" of an agreement establishing the world's largest free trade zone, encompassing 360 million people and substantially enlarging trade with America's third largest trading partner, Mexico? It is a mind that believes the future can be known because it can, and therefore should, be controlled by the political class. That class, according to that class, is wiser (and of course more "disinterested" and "caring") than the billions of daily decisions that propel a free society into an exhilaratingly unknowable future. This is the mind of modern government.

Take a law that is less a law than a gesture or sentiment, a law inherently preposterous in what it requires. Stir in some interest groups (in this instance, environmentalists) skillful at using litigation for political purposes. Add a judge recklessly indifferent to precedent and to constitutional assignments of responsibilities. Factor in a political class eager to duck responsibilities. Finally, add a president eager to please but whose political party is displeased by a trade agreement that would inhibit the party's agenda for further politicizing economic life.

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

ART BUCHWALD

Guess who is not coming to dinner?

I don't mind friends who want you to love them. What bothers me are the ones who insist that you love their dogs as well. I know people who can't understand why I don't find their pet the most wonderful animal in the world — like they do.

Buchwald

I invited some friends over for dinner the other night. Bob Healy asked if he could bring his dog, Pasta.

I said no.

He asked, "Why not?"

"I don't have enough soup dishes."

"Tell me the truth — you don't like my dog."

"What difference does it make if I like him or not? You're the only one he needs for a friend."

"Pasta is one of the greatest dogs in the world. He's kind and gentle and only bites strangers."

"He could have one of Demi Moore's shoes in his mouth and I still wouldn't want him over for dinner."

"We're in a spot," Healy said. "We'd like to come to dinner, but at the same time we don't want to leave Pasta at home. It would be the second time this week we've gone out without him."

"This is nothing personal, Bob, but if I wanted a dog as a dinner guest I would have invited one. Please explain to Pasta that he's not being rejected because he has lousy table manners."

"What do I tell Mary?"

"Tell her the truth. I'm not having any dogs over on Thursday."

I could tell that Bob was getting more and more upset when he said, "You don't know anything about pets. They're family. We take Pasta everywhere we go. People like you have no sense of the bond we share with our animals. I don't think you realize that when you refuse to accept Pasta, what you are saying is, 'Healys, you can come into my house but your dog is not welcome.'"

"That's exactly what I'm saying."

"What's the difference between a dog and a human being as a dinner guest?"

"A human being doesn't get under the table and slobber all over your pants. He doesn't put his paws on the table hoping that someone will give him a slice of beef, and he doesn't wander around the living room licking people's shoes just as they get to the punch line of a story."

"That's how much you know about Pasta," Healy said. "If he came he'd sit in the corner and not make a sound — nobody would even know he was there."

I responded, "Maybe everything you say is true, but if I let you bring your pet, then I have to allow all my other guests to bring theirs."

"What hurts is that you've known Pasta since he was a puppy. You played 'fetch' with him in the park. He jumps in your lap every time he sees you. Yet now you're refusing to permit him to sit quietly in your dining room. You don't know what it's like to look into his eyes and tell him that we are going out for the evening. Maybe we won't come over after all."

"That's your choice, Bob. But I refuse to be blackmailed into inviting Pasta."

"For heaven's sake, give me one good reason why he can't come."

"OK, Healy, I'll tell you the truth. He would make 13 at the table."

Slow news weekend brings Haiti out front

The news was so thin over the weekend that Haiti made the front pages in several newspapers. You can tell an editor has been looking into a bare pantry when he comes back with a Caribbean story. When Haiti is the juiciest Caribbean story going it feels as if the end of history may be more than a book by Francis Fukuyama.

Baker

We are not slurring poor Haiti, but merely stating the fact. As the philosopher-journalist James Reston once observed, Americans will do anything for Latin America except read about it.

One of the things we will do for Latin America is rid it of governments that irritate ours and equip it with sensible governments that don't. Since 1961 we have been yearning to do this favor for Cuba, but haven't yet managed it. The failure amounts to a rare lapse in our policy of distributing beneficence among neighbors to the south.

Haiti, too, has been passed over lately when Yankee-friendly governments were being distributed. Guatemala, El Salvador and Nicaragua — in recent years all have had Washington's helping hand to rid themselves of governments that just wouldn't do.

Long ago we did the same sort of thing for Haiti, sending the Marines to occupy the country and provide Haitians a working model of American democracy in action. In modern times, however, Haiti has made a nuisance of itself, not only by failing to produce anything of the slightest value to American corporations, not only by failing to proclaim a hankering for communism that would have entitled us to invade it, but also by being hopelessly, miserably, disgustingly poor.

In the first part of the century everybody used to say," Turkey is the sick man of Europe." In the second part, everybody says, "Haiti is the basket case of the Western Hemisphere."

Nothing irritates America more than poverty on the grand scale. That's why congressmen turn blue in the face and stamp their feet whenever somebody asks them to do something to prevent the death of America's cities. In a closely fought poverty competition, Haiti could be mistaken for one of America's biggest cities, except that it shares a whole island with another country, the Dominican Republic.

The Dominican Republic, incidentally, is not the home office of the Dominican religious orders, nor is it a basket case like Haiti. In fact, during the 1960s we helped it militarily to form a government that wouldn't irritate us. This may have been because it produces something of great value to American entrepreneurs; to wit, immensely skilled baseball players.

Radio didn't fail public during recent windstorm

As a member of the media, I resent Mark Gilham's insinuation that radio somehow failed the public during the recent windstorm. (Letters, June 24).

Yes, radio stations are required to air the EBS tests that Gilham finds so annoying. However, radio stations cannot arbitrarily initiate the Emergency Broadcasting System. That responsibility lies with governmental agencies.

As for advance warning of the windstorm, predictions of freak weather occurrences cannot be accomplished even with the complex forecasting equipment used by the National Weather Service, which is where the electronic media gets its weather advisories.

Unfortunately, radio stations (and television stations) are also vulnerable to the effects of incidents such as the windstorm. Had Gilham bothered to check his radio, he would have found that many stations had been knocked off the air during the storm. Those that remained on the air disseminated what little information was available.

Who dropped the ball, Gilham? Only those who assumed that someone else was responsible for their personal safety during a completely unpredictable crisis that affected everyone.

Family physicians take stand for what is right

I would like to take this opportunity to commend and thank each and every Midland physician who allowed his name to be published as opposing the Midland Planned Parenthood Clinic's introduction of abortion services. I was proud to find several of my family physicians listed. These people are truly dedicated to their profession and the preservation of life and have the courage of conviction to take a powerful stand.

The U.S. Supreme Court has recognized that abortion is distinguished from other medical procedures: "Abortion is inherently different from other medical procedures, because no other procedure involves the purposeful termination of a potential life." Harris v McRae, 448 U.S. 297, 325 (1980).

I felt compelled to let it be known how much I appreciate so many of our Midland physicians taking a stand for what is right.

If we are oppressed, we are doing it to ourselves

In a letter appearing in your June 30 edition, Elinore Chase stated, "Americans suffer far more oppression from today's federal government than did the men of 1776 from the British monarch." This, of course, is a matter of opinion and I have no argument with it one way or the other, but circumstances were very different then than now.

In 1776 Americans had no choice in who made the laws which they lived and were taxed by. If we Americans are oppressed it is by people we freely elected to look after our interests and bring back government money to our area. Congressmen who do just that are well thought of in their home districts. It's all those other congressmen who are wasting money and not our man. This may have something to do with what has happened in the last 12 years.

The Senate and House passed money bills and laws. The president signed them. President Reagan exercised his veto power many times and not once was overridden. He probably could have vetoed others and Congress could have been more prudent in spending money. They are both responsible and we are responsible because we elected them. The national debt is ours and it is our own doing.

Gridlock, to a degree, is caused by our elected officials who put the country last. The party and next election come first.

Of the many political PACs in the country, I am a member of two for which I make no excuse. Any one of these PACs can kill a good bill because of something they don't like in it. As a result there are so many powerful political groups that nothing is done because no one has a majority. That's what I call gridlock.

So, Elinore Chase, if we are oppressed, it appears to me we are doing it to ourselves.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Administration, for now, abandons hope of lifting military gay ban

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Nearing resolution of a new policy toward gay men and lesbians in the military, Defense Secretary Les Aspin will give President Clinton later this week three proposals on how to phrase or rephrase one declaration that is the crux of a contentious issue. The statement: "Homosexuality is incompatible with military service."

That sentence is currently the first in the Pentagon's regulation banning homosexuals from the armed forces. The administration has, for now, abandoned hope of lifting the ban and declaring homosexuality compatible with military service. So now, Aspin and his top aides are struggling over minor changes that could carry large symbolic meaning.

Aspin, who was previously scheduled to join Clinton in South Korea on Friday, is expected to bring at least three versions of the sentence and other details of policy changes for Clinton to review. One option, strongly favored by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, would be to leave the existing language unchanged, though all the chiefs acknowledge that gay men and lesbians now serve admirably, but in secret.

Aspin, top aides struggle to implement minor changes that could carry symbolic message.

A second option, a slight modification, would deem homosexuality incompatible only if a person demonstrates homosexual "actions, statements or marriage." Pentagon officials were preparing a third option Wednesday, which is believed to borrow elements of the first two. The officials declined to comment on this option, but it is likely to be the recommendation of Aspin.

"We're looking for a formulation that takes into account the Chiefs' views, but moves the issue," a senior Defense Department official said. "We're working in a fairly modest ball park."

Clinton is expected to make a decision by July 15, when he returns from his Asia trip and a brief vacation in Hawaii.

Pentagon officials indicated Wednesday that while a compromise might be reached on the language, homosexuals in the military would not be allowed to discuss their sexual orientation, even in private conversations. How rigorously this would be enforced, however, is still in question.

Aspin and top civilian aides met three times for several hours on Friday with the Joint Chiefs in what one official described as intense consultations to try to resolve the impasse. Gen. Carl E. Mundy Jr., the Marine Corps commandant, was the most vocal opponent of modifying the language on incompatibility, one participant said.

Aspin, who does not have a heartfelt position on the issue, is trying to broker an agreement between parties who do: the Joint Chiefs and Clinton.

Despite cuts, youth jobs program gets underway

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration announced distribution of $166.5 million for additional summer youth jobs Wednesday, bringing to 700,000 the number of opportunities available to disadvantaged teen-agers.

Despite the new money, the number of jobs is just half the 1.3 million the administration had hoped to provide this year.

In his $16.3 billion economic stimulus proposal last winter, President Clinton had sought $1 billion for summer jobs in addition to the $868 million already available from previous appropriations and left over from last summer.

But the request was killed in a Republican-led Senate filibuster and Clinton had to settle for a $1 billion measure that Congress passed last Thursday. That legislation included the extra $166.5 million for summer jobs.

As a result, the amount of federal funds for the program this year remained about the same as last year, the final summer of the Bush presidency.

A Labor Department survey of 40 cities in May and early June suggested that federally subsidized jobs would be available this summer for only about half of the applicants, aged 14 to 21.

The jobs include clerical work in city offices, maintenance work for public properties, recreational work at parks, nursing assistance in hospitals and supervising and tutoring children at day care facilities.

Labor Secretary Robert B. Reich appealed to private business last month to help bridge the gap. But partly because of the sluggish economy and a stagnant labor market, the private sector in many areas was unable to pick up the slack.

"The private sector effort just fell apart in Los Angeles," said James Seeley, federal legislative representative for the city here. "They just didn't have any jobs."

LaVonne Douville, director of the Division of Family and Youth Services in Seattle, said about 4,000 youths had registered for the 1,000 jobs available there, including 320 that local businesses were able to provide.

"Providing our young people with the opportunity to work and learn over the summer continues to be a high priority of the Clinton administration," he said. "The summer jobs program translates to meaningful work assignments, labor market experiences and, last but not least, real earnings for thousands of low-income youth who want and need a chance to be part of the labor force."

Funds for the Summer Youth Employment and Training Program are distributed to the states according to a formula based on such factors as unemployment and poverty levels.

Valium could save thousands of infants' lives

BOSTON (NYT) — Valium can safely reduce the risk of the alarming, fever-induced convulsions that are experienced by tens of thousands of babies and small children each year, researchers said Wednesday.

A six-year study involving more than 400 children shows that oral doses of Valium, a tranquilizing drug, at the time of fever can markedly reduce the recurrence of febrile seizures, the fever-triggered convulsions that occur in about four percent of all children in the United States.

While these seizures are generally not considered to cause long-term harm to the child, experts said they can cause great anxiety for parents and, in rare cases, increase the risk of epilepsy among those already susceptible to it.

The researchers, as well as experts not connected with the study, said the results should change the way febrile seizures are treated, particularly in light of recent evidence that the sedative most often used to treat the condition for 40 years is ineffective and possibly harmful.

Many doctors now give a daily dose of the sedative phenobarbital to children who have had one fever-related seizure in the first year or two of life, hoping to prevent more seizures.

But the phenobarbital treatment may sedate youngsters and make them lethargic, specialists said, and recent studies indicate the drug may lead to IQ scores that are lower than normal.

No major side effects from using periodic doses of Valium, generically known as diazepam, to reduce the recurrence of febrile seizures were found in the study published this week in The New England Journal of Medicine.

Black tar heroin oozes across lengthy U.S.-Mexican border

By Philip True
Hearst News Service

LAREDO — Federal narcotics agents on the Texas-Mexico border say Mexican black tar heroin is the growing drug of choice among area smugglers.

Produced on the slopes of the Sierra Madre in the Mexican states of Sinaloa and Durango, the heroin is being transported across the Rio Grande between the Texas cities of Del Rio and Brownsville on its way to northern distribution centers in Chicago and New York, the agents say.

By the time it hits the streets there, a pound of it is worth more than $1 million.

Texas Department of Public Safety narcotics investigators say the trade is flourishing in "every major city in the state."

While the quantities recovered in recent seizures are nowhere near the weights associated with South American cocaine or Mexican marijuana, the heroin still is vastly profitable — and much harder to detect.

"Heroin is on the increase," said Frank Seib, Eagle Pass resident agent in charge for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

"I've seen three heroin seizures all in the past three months," Seib said by telephone.

His latest — 10 ounces in Del Rio last week — was recovered from a Mexican woman from the state of Guerrero with a nursing infant.

"We are getting information that all kinds of loads are passing and are planned to be passed here," Seib continued.

One pound from Mexico's Sierra Madre is worth about $1 million.

DEA agents in McAllen recovered 5 pounds and arrested six people, including a Guadalajara attorney, last December.

"We sometimes get inundated with the 100- or 1,000-pound seizures common with marijuana and cocaine," Ball said.

"Heroin is smaller. You never see a 100-pound seizure," he continued.

That makes it ideal for smugglers, said Pat Schaub, a McAllen intelligence agent with the U.S. Border Patrol.

Black tar heroin is a gooey, tarlike substance rather than a powder, officials explain.

As such, "You can mold it to your smuggling needs. You can carry it on your body, inside body cavities or about any other way you can think of," said Rod Alvarez, McAllen DEA group supervisor.

Ball said, 1 pound of black tar heroin, worth about $64,000 on the Mexican border, can bring more than $1.25 million by the time it's sold on the streets of New York or Chicago.

Testimony begins in former congressman's bribery trial

■ More state news/1D

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Prosecutors set out Wednesday to prove former congressman Albert Bustamante went from a poor man chasing the American dream to an elected official peddling his office for money.

"You're about to learn the story about Albert Bustamante, who was on the take," prosecutor Jackie Bennett told jurors as Bustamante's racketeering and bribery trial began.

Bennett launched the government's attack by calling a retired Air Force general, who testified Bustamante threatened him while trying to land a government food service contract for his friends.

Lawyers for Bustamante and his wife Rebecca, an attorney on trial for aiding and abetting her husband, told jurors Bustamante did what any congressman would and worked for his constituents.

They sought to paint Bennett as a Washington lawyer who stormed into town intimidating witnesses in his zeal to make a case against Bustamante.

"Talk about bullies," said defense attorney Tony Canales. "You know, not to be afraid of your government is a blessed thing. . . . We are not blessed here today."

After Bennett dubbed Mrs. Bustamante "a sort of female bag man" who was used for funneling her husband's bribe money, Mrs. Bustamante's attorney A.L. Hernden told jurors there was nothing illegal about the money she was paid.

"The president's wife is a lawyer. When he was governor of Arkansas, she made $500,000 a year. This thing is absolutely ridiculous," Hernden shouted in his opening statement.

Bustamante, 59, a Democrat, lost the 23rd congressional seat last year to Republican Henry Bonilla amid publicity about the 3½-year federal probe. Bustamante was named in a 10-count indictment in February that alleged racketeering, conspiracy to commit racketeering and eight counts of bribery.

Mrs. Bustamante, 49, was named in seven counts charging her with aiding and abetting her husband in wrongdoing.

Bennett characterized the Bustamantes as a couple who started with humble but proud beginnings, "the very epitome of the American dream," but who went astray.

Once a migrant farm worker, Bustamante went to college and became a teacher before getting elected Bexar County judge and congressman. Mrs. Bustamante, who as a young woman almost became a nun, later taught elementary special education and attended law school while raising three children.

"The evidence is going to show that somewhere along the way, Albert and Rebecca Bustamante changed as people," Bennett said.

County drops sexual assault cases from deferred prosecution program

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Tarrant County district attorney has dropped a controversial proposal to allow some young adults to have sexual assault charges dismissed under some conditions.

Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Curry initially had defended the changes in the county's deferred prosecution program. He said that including sex crimes in the program did not necessarily mean every offender would get off. But he since has changed his mind.

"We included something that doesn't need to be included, and at least the perception is that it's troubling," Curry said Tuesday. "I'm pulling it out."

In the past, the program administered by the Tarrant County district attorney's office was limited to people 17 to 21 with no prior arrests. It included only non-violent, non-drug related crimes ranging from petty theft to home burglary.

But Curry had proposed expanding the program to include cases of consensual sex involving an underage partner, other sexual assaults, misdemeanor drug possession and assaults with minor injuries.

It was the inclusion of sex crimes that concerned two judges and drew criticism from others.

Assistant District Attorney Marshall Hines, who administers the program, said women's organizations and concerned residents complained about the program. But the proposal was only under consideration, he said.

A situation where a 16-year-old boy and a 17-year-old girl have consensual sex would be the type of case that would have been considered, Hines said.

Texas law directs judges to throw out such cases when the youths involved were within two years in age, but "it doesn't mean that charges can't be filed and the case prosecuted," he said.

State District Judge Bill Burdock, who was concerned about making sexual assaults eligible for dismissal, called Curry's announcement "a good move."

Children and their families gathered along the curb of the 500 block of West Estes Avenue, watched with excitement and some nervousness as a German shepherd took aim and attacked Richard Edens' arm.

Protected by an arm guard, Edens, team leader for the Midland Police Department's canine unit, moved in circles as the dog kept his grip on his arm, letting go only when Paula Bynum called instructions to do so.

"She gives him instructions in German," Edens told the crowd, as the dog ran back to Ms. Bynum, another member of the canine unit. "That way, a suspect won't know what the dog is going to do."

Edens and Bynum were part of a group of Midland police officers who visited with the residents of West Estes and the surrounding area Wednesday.

Billed as "Come Meet Your Officer" night, officers handed out soft drinks, answered questions, conducted demonstrations with the canine unit and played music from the department's D.A.R.E van.

It is the second such event that the officers who patrol Division II have conducted. Division II includes the area from Loop 250 and Front Street between Midkiff Road and Big Spring Street.

"It's a chance for us to come out and visit with these people on their own terms," said Officer Rene Flores, who organized Thursday's event. "You open up a line of communication. You find out what they need and try to help."

Flores said the visits are part of the department's Problem-Oriented Policing (POP) strategy put into place two years ago thatstresses proactive, rather than reactive, policing.

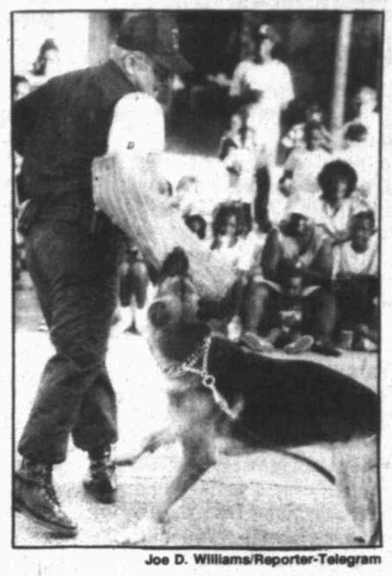

"We are targeting problem areas and visiting them," he said. "Problem areas are defined as places where officers have been called two or more times. You try to find a solution to the problem, rather than just seeing these people when there is trouble."

Flores said officers have already set up a trash detail in the neighborhood, which is plagued with vandalism. In addition, he asked parents to sign up to attend a community meeting in order to continue efforts to clean up the neighborhood.

"We want these people to see that we don't just talk, we take action," he said.

Brand New Opree celebrates 18th season at Globe with weekend of entertainment

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

Nostalgia plays Odessa's Globe Theatre when the Brand New Opree celebrates its 18th season Friday and Saturday.

"It's a great place to play and a great place to watch a show," said emcee Barry Sykes, who hasn't produced an Opree show at the Globe in 15 years.

"I don't think there's a more perfect venue to have a show in than the Globe Theatre. Whether you're watching or playing, it's just a great feeling to be in that place."

Activities include three full shows, featuring country & western, bluegrass and gospel music, and an Odessa Chuck Wagon Gang barbecue.

"People can come to the whole weekend for $21.50," said Sykes, who is the voice of the Midland Angels.

Each show costs $5 for adults and $3 for seniors and children under 12. The barbecue is $6.50. Reservations at the Globe, which seats 410, may be made by calling 332-1586.

"The performers will be everywhere from age 15 to early 70s," Sykes said. "We've got a wide range of talent and styles and ages. The audience will be the same, from teens to retirees."

Among the performers will be Midlanders Arwayne Bishop, Tammy Renea, Tamee Holleman Frazier, an Opree favorite of the late 1970s who first sang at age 11, and The Storm Band, featuring Kurt Weston, Mike Fletcher, Phillip Palmer, Lanie Allen, Patti Green and Bill Green.

"Ronna Reeves got her start singing on the Opree back in the mid-'70s," Sykes said. "We like to say we knew her when she only had one 'n' in her name. She was a 10-year-old schoolgirl from Big Spring. Now she is well-known. We're hoping she's one of a lot who used to call the Opree home who become stars later on."

This weekend's performances begin with three bands and a host of area singers performing Friday beginning at 7 p.m.

"They can expect for a very low price to see top notch singers, bands and instrumentalists perform for them," Sykes said.

Testimony begins in former congressman's bribery trial

■ More state news/1D

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Prosecutors set out Wednesday to prove former congressman Albert Bustamante went from a poor man chasing the American dream to an elected official peddling his office for money.

"You're about to learn the story about Albert Bustamante, who was on the take," prosecutor Jackie Bennett told jurors as Bustamante's racketeering and bribery trial began.

Bennett launched the government's attack by calling a retired Air Force general, who testified Bustamante threatened him while trying to land a government food service contract for his friends.

Lawyers for Bustamante and his wife Rebecca, an attorney on trial for aiding and abetting her husband, told jurors Bustamante did what any congressman would and worked for his constituents.

They sought to paint Bennett as a Washington lawyer who stormed into town intimidating witnesses in his zeal to make a case against Bustamante.

"Talk about bullies," said defense attorney Tony Canales. "You know, not to be afraid of your government is a blessed thing. . . . We are not blessed here today."

After Bennett dubbed Mrs. Bustamante "a sort of female bag man" who was used for funneling her husband's bribe money, Mrs. Bustamante's attorney A.L. Hernden told jurors there was nothing illegal about the money she was paid.

"The president's wife is a lawyer. When he was governor of Arkansas, she made $500,000 a year. This thing is absolutely ridiculous," Hernden shouted in his opening statement.

Bustamante, 59, a Democrat, lost the 23rd congressional seat last year to Republican Henry Bonilla amid publicity about the 3½-year federal probe. Bustamante was named in a 10-count indictment in February that alleged racketeering, conspiracy to commit racketeering and eight counts of bribery.

Mrs. Bustamante, 49, was named in seven counts charging her with aiding and abetting her husband in wrongdoing.

Bennett characterized the Bustamantes as a couple who started with humble but proud beginnings, "the very epitome of the American dream," but who went astray.

Once a migrant farm worker, Bustamante went to college and became a teacher before getting elected Bexar County judge and congressman. Mrs. Bustamante, who as a young woman almost became a nun, later taught elementary special education and attended law school while raising three children.

"The evidence is going to show that somewhere along the way, Albert and Rebecca Bustamante changed as people," Bennett said.

County drops sexual assault cases from deferred prosecution program

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Tarrant County district attorney has dropped a controversial proposal to allow some young adults to have sexual assault charges dismissed under some conditions.

Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Curry initially had defended the changes in the county's deferred prosecution program. He said that including sex crimes in the program did not necessarily mean every offender would get off. But he since has changed his mind.

"We included something that doesn't need to be included, and at least the perception is that it's troubling," Curry said Tuesday. "I'm pulling it out."

In the past, the program administered by the Tarrant County district attorney's office was limited to people 17 to 21 with no prior arrests. It included only non-violent, non-drug related crimes ranging from petty theft to home burglary.

But Curry had proposed expanding the program to include cases of consensual sex involving an underage partner, other sexual assaults, misdemeanor drug possession and assaults with minor injuries.

It was the inclusion of sex crimes that concerned two judges and drew criticism from others.

Assistant District Attorney Marshall Hines, who administers the program, said women's organizations and concerned residents complained about the program. But the proposal was only under consideration, he said.

A situation where a 16-year-old boy and a 17-year-old girl have consensual sex would be the type of case that would have been considered, Hines said.

Texas law directs judges to throw out such cases when the youths involved were within two years in age, but "it doesn't mean that charges can't be filed and the case prosecuted," he said.

State District Judge Bill Burdock, who was concerned about making sexual assaults eligible for dismissal, called Curry's announcement "a good move."

"They can leave with a good taste in their mouths because they will know they have seen a really good show. And, it's all amateur talent. They are all donating their time."

Talent for Friday's show includes "The Opree House Band," featuring Bill Provance with guest singer and guitarist Brad Ingram, deputy sheriff of Sterling City, both of whom will be remembered by Opree fans for performing "Dueling Banjos" on the second Opree show in 1975; Lee Bingham Jr., who was awarded Opree Singer of the Year several times in the '70s and '80s; The Country Express, featuring Mark Lummus, winner of the 1978 Male Vocalist of the Year award; and Miss Renea and Texas Legacy, an Odessa band.

Next, comes the outdoor matinee from 2 to 4:30 p.m. Saturday with an "Opree on the Green" featuring six singers, the band West Texas Edition and Tami Whitmire Casparis, Female Vocalist of the Year for 1977 and 1978.

"Opree on the Green" will be followed by "pickin' and grinnin'" by area musicians who enjoy entertaining during the Chuck Wagon Gang feed which starts at 5 p.m. All musicians and singers in the audience who want to join in may do so.

The evening performance Saturday will feature Ms. Frazier and the Storm Band as well as Debbie Davis, Jennifer Mahan, Terry Rimer, Big Spring resident J. Lane Phinney, winner of the 1977-78 Bard's Award; and "The Concho Drifters," Roy Adams and George Lasater of San Angelo, both of whom are more than 70 years old. Adams was the grand champion fiddler for the 1978 old-time fiddlers contest at the Globe that drew contestants from as far away as Albuquerque and San Antonio.

"And really with the Opree being around, you can say that the Globe presents everything from Willie Shakespeare to Willie Nelson," Sykes said.

Odessa's Brand New Opree was started by Charles David McCally in 1975.

"He turned it over to Wanda Snodgrass, and she basically nurtured it from its humble beginnings to West Texas' longest running continuous country music show and certainly the only one in a Shakespearean theater."

Past coordinators who are producing this weekend's shows include Sally Pond, Paula Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Provance, Terry Bivens, Davis, Les Goddard, Ms. Snodgrass, Sykes and Midlander Dave Davis.

The Globe Theatre is an exact replica of William Shakespeare's famous Globe Theatre with two exceptions — air-conditioning and a roof. The original Globe was an open theater.

Both the Globe and the Brand New Opree are non-profit organizations.

"The Globe itself lives on grants and we live off the Globe," Sykes said. "We're trying basically to make it (the Opree) stand on its own two feet and that's why we're trying to do a really big splash to re-educate the public about what the Opree is about.

"A lot of people don't know we exist. We are trying to make them not only aware of the Opree, but" to let them know "that it's a good clean family show."

INFORM: Menopause workshop to be offered

(From 1B)

Ms. Bruce, an Odessan who has a master's degree in public health from the University of Texas Health Science Center in Houston, said she also realized there was more to menopause than just physical changes.

"Every women will face changes which come with years," she said. "Children grow up and leave, parents weaken and pass, sometimes relationships fail, friends move away, career plans are altered and a woman's body moves through remarkable changes as she approaches and goes through menopause."

To show how these mid-life changes can be positive opportunities for growth, Ms. Bruce will conduct the day-long workshop "Mid-Life Challenges, Changes & Choices."

The workshop will be offered from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday in the Best Western Garden Oasis, Interstate 20 and South Grant Street in Odessa.

Cost of the workshop is $20 and an all-you-can-eat luncheon buffet is available for $4.95. The workshop fee covers cost of extensive hand-out materials and room rental. "The seminar is literally my gift to the community," Ms. Bruce said.

Seminar topics will include "Loving Yourself," "The Need for Self-Nurturing," "Dealing With Stress and Depression," "Letting Go of the Past and Moving On," "Getting Through Menopause and Staying Sane," Mid-Life Diet and Exercise," "Using Natural Healing for Greater Energy and Vitality."

Ms. Bruce, a former school teacher, is also a free-lance writer and has had articles published in "Today's Health," "Today's Chiropractor," "The New England Senior Citizen's Journal," and other consumer health publications.

She has a bachelor's degree in communications as well as the master's degree.

For information on the seminar, call 337-1079.

Texas builder always knows time of day

By Garry Wesner
The Hereford Brand

HEREFORD — Take a walk around A.E. McBride's property in south Hereford.

It sure doesn't look like a house in the middle of town.

In fact, it looks much more like a residence that would be found in the middle of the country.

There is an old wellhouse, a pump attached to a large barrel, a large garden and several antique farm tools.

They are all part of McBride's collection.

Inside the well house is a compact workshop. That is natural for a man who worked much of his adult life as a cabinet maker and builder.

But it is inside the small nearby shed and in the house that the true purpose of McBride's workshop is known.

There, hanging from walls, standing in corners and sitting on shelves are literally dozens of wooden clocks that he has crafted over the last quarter-century.

"I started in 1967. The first clock I made is in the house. I've been making them ever since," he said. "It kind of gets in your blood."

Stand quietly in the shed for a moment and listen to the soft ticking of the seven-day wall clocks.

None of the clocks are set to the same time — that becomes perfectly clear at the hour, when chimes sound out one after another in a melodious cacophony of time.

"Every time I build a clock, it's to use different wood," McBride explained.

"This one here is made of ironwood out of Mexico," he said, holding up a mantle clock. Another one — dated March 1990 — is crafted from elm wood.

"I dug a root out of a tree — one of those old elm trees — and I made this clock out of a root that had been under ground," he went on, handling each clock with the loving care that only a craftsman can have.

On another shelf stands a clock crafted from an old cedar fence post.

"I make it piece by piece," he said, only purchasing the numbers and works.

Although the 78-year-old McBride has only been making clocks for 26 years, he has been working with wood a lot longer than that.

"This is the first piece of woodwork I ever did," McBride said, holding up a small, open square frame with a round ball rolling around inside.

It was carved, he said, in March 1929, when he and his brother-in-law were snowed into the family home with only a path to the barn (where they would feed the chickens).

That brother-in-law vowed to make McBride a carpenter, but died before he could teach his prodigy.

Still, wood was in McBride's blood and he worked 20 years in the lumber business in Amarillo before changing careers.

"During the war, a fellow said, 'You reckon if I buy you some power tools, you could build me some doors and window screens?,' " McBride recalled.

That was all it took to change from lumber sales to cabinetmaker.

He worked in Amarillo from 1940 until 1960, working for the same man until he decided to go solo.

For 10 years, he worked in Amarillo, then, since he had been building cabinets in Amarillo and driving them to Hereford, he decided to move here permanently.

He then joined with his son and a friend and began building homes, a profession he kept until retiring several years ago.

With him on that move came an antique tool collection that had started when he had his own shop in Amarillo.

Around 1967, he had some old tools that he hung on the wall of his Amarillo shop.

"Some of my customers kept coming in and hanging tools on the wall," he said. Thus a collection was born.

Today that collection is relegated to McBride's garage.

Soon it will be gone.

McBride is in the process of moving back to Amarillo with Pearl, his wife of 13 years. Each has children in Amarillo and the city is more convenient to their doctors.

So, the collection of tools — as well as some of the clocks — will be auctioned off on Saturday.

Although McBride does not want to part with the collection, he realizes it is time.

Much of the collection was gathered by McBride and his first wife, Elsie, whom he married in 1940. She died in 1979 and is buried here.

"This stuff is just like parting with her," he said, but "I had to part with her," so he feels he can part with the tools.

McBride and Elsie moved to the house on South Julian in 1975 when it was a "little, bitty two bedroom house" with a basement.

He built another bedroom and living room himself, then added a two-car garage.

fill in the colors of the flag, which was designed by local artist Jerry Johnson.

"These kids are out to prove that there are some decent teens around," she said. "And they're intent on making a difference. I think they just enjoy making our community look better, and then they can see their work five or ten years later and see they did make a difference."

The task force has already painted murals on two buildings, including an eyeball and the word "¡despierta!" on a building at Hidalgo Park and a depiction of children of the world on the Mr. M's Food Store at 1100 N. Big Spring St. Both sites have received rave reviews from passers-by, Ms. Egan said.

Ms. Egan is encouraging people to come to the park Saturday morning at 9 a.m. and watch the painting.

"This will be the largest job yet. They plan to paint three sides of the building. It will really brighten up the area," she said.

City officials plan to spend about $15,000 to upgrade Elkins Park over the next two or three years, including landscaping work along Front Street and the installation of an automated irrigation system.

HONOR: Writer receives awards

(From 1B)

Verla Long, chairman of the State Communications Committee in Austin, said, "Although newspapers all over the state provided plenty of coverage of general education news this past year, some newspapers just seem to do it better when it comes to conveying information to the public fairly, consistently and accurately."

Other newspapers receiving the key award were the Conroe Courier News and the Corsicana News.

Ms. Salcedo also received the Silver Apple Award from the Midland Chapter of Texas Classroom Teachers Association for fair and accurate reporting of local education news.

Attorney general files lawsuit against publishing company

Staff report

School librarians being harrassed about books they didn't order should contact the Texas Attorney General's Office.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales has filed a lawsuit against Library Distributors of America Inc. He said the company is harrassing librarians for payments on books they didn't order.

Morales filed a lawsuit Tuesday in Judge Joe B. Evins 206th State District Court of Hidalgo County and obtained a temporary restraining order against the publishing company.

Morales received information from school officials across the state that Library Distributors of America Inc., sends unsolicited books to schools with a notice that reads "On Approval Basis." This leads recipients to believe that the books have been received as the result of an order. If this were true, the recipient would be responsible for payment of the merchandise.

However, the librarians in these schools receive this merchandise without having requested it and therefore are under no obligation to pay for or return merchandise.

An example of the methods used by the publishing company involves a librarian at the Christa McAuliffe School in McAllen. After she attempted to dispute the defendant's collection efforts the they sent a letter to the librarian threatening her with a lawsuit if a payment wasn't made.

Morales is asking all public school officials to report to the Office of the Attorney General any similar business activity that may have occurred in their schools.

The lawsuit states that the defendant violated the Deceptive Trade Practices Act when it misrepresented and attempted to deceive the consumers as to its intended business practices.

Assistant Attorney General Michale Winget-Hernandez, chief of Morales' McAllen Consumer Protection Office, is handling the case.

To contact the attorney general's office call (512) 463-2100.

ly answered safety questions asked by Flores and Sgt. Victor Rivera.

Narvie Garnett and Nida Lemons, who stood watching the neighborhood children trying to answer the questions, both agreed that the event was a good idea.

"I think it's great," Ms. Garnett said. "This neighborhood is too drug-infested."

"Yeah, but maybe this will keep the traffic down," Ms. Lemons said.

When asked if she thought getting to know the officers would deter the children from getting involved in criminal activities, Ms. Garnett said she didn't know.

"I think it will make the children more aware," she said. "But, it will only work if the parents get behind it. It's the family that makes a difference."

AT WIT'S END

Young adults rate movies for parents

By Erma Bombeck

The "YG" rating is one the movie industry never talks about.

It stands for "Yuppie Guidance" and is the stamp on movies endorsed by grown kids for viewing by their parents. Our kids are movie freaks. They see every movie that comes to town 15 minutes after it gets there. Between them they screen the contents and decide whether it is too violent, too sexy, or too far out for their parents to enjoy.

Bombeck

They put their stamp of approval on cartoons, "Home Alone I and II" and anything directed by Ron Howard, whom they consider the Barry Manilow of films.

They have one rating which they call YG-50. That means anyone over 50 will not enjoy the film, as they remember the original one with some actor or actress who died 30 years ago.

Their "R" rating stands for Raunchy. They discourage our seeing an R movie, as we would ruin the film for everyone else by sucking in our breath and saying, "That kiss looks like he missed lunch!"

I asked them if I would enjoy "The Crying Game."

"Forget it," snapped my daughter. "You're not old enough."

"Would someone go with me?"

"It's not a film you want to see with your children, like 'It's a Wonderful Life.'"

"I am sick of seeing 'The Wizard of Oz'!" I said. "I've seen it nine times. Surely, there's some film around that's a YG."

"Maybe she could catch 'Aladdin.'"

"What about 'Made in America'?" I asked.

"Mom, it's not about the garment workers."

"I'd like to see 'Jurassic Park,'" I said.

"You'll have bad dreams."

"No I won't."

"You had bad dreams with 'Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles'!"

"Are you saying there isn't anything out there with a YG rating?"

"It's tough," said my son. "You don't like anything where they use profanity as verbs. You're offended by nudity in the first five minutes. You can't stand it if people are killed and no one cares. And you demand a plot. You have eliminated everything that is currently playing."

The YG rating is for my own good. They're just trying to protect me. I know that. But it poses the question, when did I become so young and they become so old?

DEAR ABBY

Reader wonders where older women are

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In retirement, I am now hooked on talk shows. I enjoy the "make-overs," but they always use thin young women with thick hair, never older women with extra pounds and thinning hair.

Van Buren

I subscribe to many magazines; they often have articles on looking good at 30, 40 and 50 — never 60, 70 and 80. Yet the population is definitely living longer. Women may now have 40 or 50 years to live after their children are raised. I have two sisters who are still vital at 83 and 84.

Ladies Home Journal has a monthly feature, "Can This Marriage Be Saved?" Yet they report only on couples in their 20s and 30s!

The latest Weight Watchers ad on TV in this area shows only young women.

All young women will get old one day — if they are lucky. Why are older women so invisible? — MRS. BEA ZIRK, RETIRED AT 69, RICHLAND, WASH.

DEAR BEA: Where did you get the idea that older women are invisible? A few years ago, Frances (formerly "Mrs. Norman") Lear launched Lears magazine with the catchy subtitle, "For the Woman Who Wasn't Born Yesterday."

And Helen Gurley Brown, editor-in-chief of Cosmopolitan magazine and author of the famed best seller "Sex and the Single Girl," has recently written another best seller, "The Late Show: A Semi-Wild But Practical Survival Plan for Women Over 50." (It is loaded with practical advice, but if racy language turns you off — as it does me — please consider this a disclaimer.)

On television and in film, setting wonderful examples as role models are: Angela Lansbury, Barbara Walters, the Golden Girls — who have now moved to the Golden Palace — and don't forget Jessica Tandy, Joanne Woodward, Mitzi Gaynor, Chita Rivera, Rita Moreno and the indomitable Liz Taylor — all over 60.

Gastronomes feast on the creations of Julia Child, and Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis is now a senior editor at Doubleday Publishing Co.

Bea, perhaps you should consider coming out of retirement. Watching too much television can be hazardous to your perspective.

DEAR ABBY: Norman E. Savage of Hickory Ridge, Ark., asked why women stand and men are seated in portrait photographs. You said you didn't know, but pointed out that the wedding photographs taken during your great grandparents' era showed the men seated and the women standing.

I speak only from my experience as a photographer. Most photographers like to have their husband-wife subjects as close together as possible. It makes for a more pleasing photograph — also a better enlargement. And since most men are taller than their wives, the photographer gets a better picture when the man is seated.

No mystery, no tradition. Pure practicality. — JIM CAIELLA, ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR OF PHOTOGRAPHY, TIMES-DISPATCH, RICHMOND, VA.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JULY 8, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will be liberated from stifling routines and boring activities. Travel, intellectual stimulation and new friends brighten your social life. November and December form a transitional period leading to a fresh career start in early 1994. Wider public recognition will be yours by next March. Your creative and imaginative efforts bring good financial luck. Plan a wedding for early summer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Anjelica Huston, singer Steve Lawrence, actress Kim Darby, psychologist Elisabeth Kubler-Ross.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone who has aided you in the past may be able to help again. You reach a crucial decision and move closer to a long-term goal. Be friendly to your colleagues.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep a low profile until you see how the land lies today. Communications about the future are best avoided. An older person who enters your life now could be a good match.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid experimenting; stick to what has worked in the past. Let your colleagues get to know you on a deeper level. When the stars come out, romance will soar to new heights.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A lack of up-to-date information could frustrate your efforts. Do not act alone; seek guidance. Strengthen your personal relationships through timely talks and letters.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Success comes easily if you are dealing with a younger person. Networking provides important information. Keeping an aura of mystery about you will help spark romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Obtain the training or equipment you need to boost productivity. A sublime romance may not last as long as you think. Get your feet back on the ground.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): This is no time to be frivolous. Other people are counting on you to keep your promises. Resist jumping to hasty conclusions. Withhold judgment until you have all the facts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone who seems too good to be true merits further investigation. Postpone signing legal documents and pay close attention to any fine print. Romance turns serious. Know your own heart tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A great day for business trips. Give prior commitments precedence over a spur-of-the-moment invitation. A newcomer takes to you in a big way. Go slow where romance is concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone's indecision could have you climbing the walls. Talk things over with a trusted friend who has the right qualifications to advise you. Spend a cozy evening at home with your family.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may be thinking too far ahead when what you need to do is concentrate on the present. A project could become boring. Use your creativity to bring variety to whatever you do.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be careful not to put the cart before the horse. Reputation and publicity are not the same thing. Nurture a relationship that dates back to your childhood.

Opening lead: King of ♡

As far back as we can remember this column has preached that aces were meant to capture kings. But even advice that would receive universal endorsement must be qualified by common sense—no one can forsee every possibility that might arise.

Not many players would choose to open the South hand with three spades. With a king and a void outside the trump suit, the hand is too strong, both defensively and offensively. However, no harm was done even though North's ace-king of clubs were almost wasted values.

West led the king of hearts, taken by the ace. After discarding a heart on the king of clubs, the internal solidity of the combined diamond holding boded well for smooth sailing. Since the contract could almost be claimed if trumps were 2-1, declarer led a trump to the king.

East's diamond discard was a sore blow. Fortunately, West came to declarer's rescue by winning the ace. Since a heart return would set up a trick for declarer in that suit and a diamond shift and continuation would cost a natural trump trick, West elected to return a club.

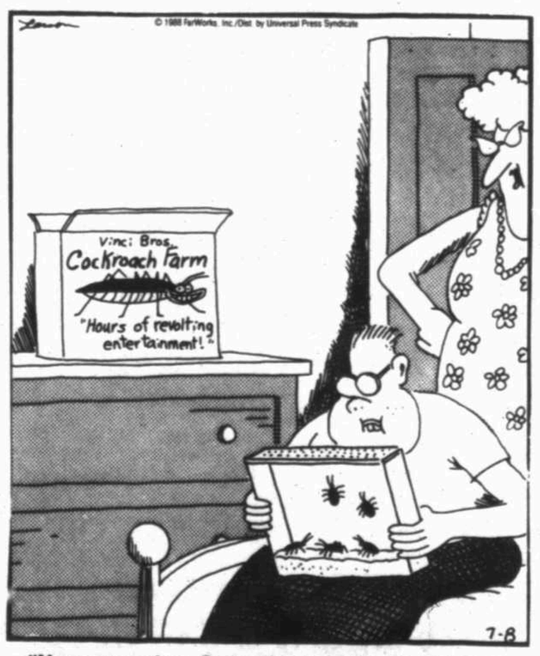

Declarer was quick to take advantage of the extra entry to dummy that provided. A diamond was discarded on the ace of clubs and the jack of diamonds was led. East did as well as possible by rising with the ace and forcing declarer with a club. South countered by ruffing high and leading a low trump. West could win the jack, but dummy's remaining trump served as an entry to finesse for the queen of diamonds and land the game.

Note that, if West refuses the first trump, the contract must go down. West can be thrown in with a trump, but that defender can draw another round of trumps and then exit with any card and, barring an egregious error by East, declarer must lose two diamonds.

John F. Kennedy Jr. resigns district attorney's office post

NEW YORK — John F. Kennedy Jr. is throwing in the towel at the Manhattan district attorney's office, and no one seems to know where the "sexiest man alive" is going next.

Kennedy

Kennedy will leave after he disposes of his cases, which could take several weeks, District Attorney Robert Morgenthau's office said Wednesday.

Kennedy, 32, declined to comment on his plans and neither would his confidants. He has said he might run for office one day.

The Daily News reported Wednesday that Kennedy is rumored to be taking a job in the Labor Department. Newsweek said this week that he would be attending the John F. Kennedy School of Government in Cambridge, Mass.

Steve Singer, a spokesman for the Kennedy School, said: "There's no plans for him to do that."

Kennedy joined the DA's office in 1989. He failed the New York bar exam twice, passing in 1990. The test is considered one of the nation's toughest.

People magazine once dubbed Kennedy, the only son of the late President John F. Kennedy and Jacqueline Onassis, "the sexiest man alive." Lately, he has been seeing actress Daryl Hannah and recently took her to his 10th reunion at Brown University in Providence, R.I.

DETROIT — City Council member Gilbert Hill, better known as Inspector Todd in the "Beverly Hills Cop" movies, is taking a few days off the campaign trail to do some acting.

Hill

The former Detroit homicide detective will play Todd, Eddie Murphy's tart-tongued boss, in Paramount's "Beverly Hills Cop III." Hill had the part in both the 1984 original "Beverly Hills Cop" and the 1987 sequel.

Hill was voted into the council in 1989, but denies that his movie career has affected his politics.

"I don't see any tremendous impact on my campaign," Hill said of his latest acting job. "I want people to vote for me because of what Gil has done."

Filming starts Sept. 8, six days before the nonpartisan City Council primary.

BRANSON, Mo. — June Carter Cash says her return to Missouri's Ozark Mountains has been a happy homecoming.

The Carter Family — June, her sisters Helen and Anita, and her mother Maybelle — were regular performers on Red Foley's national radio show "Ozark Jubilee" in the 1950s. The family used to live in nearby Springfield.

June Carter Cash and husband Johnny Cash now perform regularly at the Wayne Newton Theatre in Branson along with The Carter Family. The couple lives in Nashville, Tenn.

The only disappointment for the singer was a visit to the Springfield home she once lived in. It's now vacant and in disrepair.

"It used to have huge boxwoods in the front yard, and now it's a parking lot," she said. "It was a lovely old southern colonial mansion. It just breaks my heart."

June Carter Cash learned guitar from Chet Atkins, studied at the Actor's Theater in New York, starred on television and in movies, wrote two books, a screenplay and hit songs, won two Grammys and raised seven children.

LONDON — Princess Diana's maternal grandmother, the Dowager Lady Fermoy, has died at age 84, Buckingham Palace said Wednesday.

She died at her home Tuesday. The cause of her death was not made public.

The palace said funeral arrangements were not complete, but Diana was planning to leave Saturday for a tour of Zimbabwe in southern Africa.

Diana was said to have been close to Lady Fermoy, who comforted her after her parents divorced when she was 8.

Lady Fermoy, a close friend of the royal family, and the Queen Mother Elizabeth were long rumored to have been matchmakers for Diana and Prince Charles. But in a rare interview, she once said, "You can say that if you like, but it simply wouldn't be true."

Lady Fermoy is survived by two daughters.

MIAMI — Whitney Houston's first concert tour in two years got off to a bad start. The pop diva was late for her first show, had words with at least one fan and got booed by others.

The concert Monday night started more than an hour past the scheduled start with two unannounced opening acts. Houston didn't take the stage for another 45 minutes.

She then shocked the crowd by dismissing an autograph-seeking fan who approached the stage. The singer raised her arm and pointed out toward the auditorium, "Your ticket definitely says 'seat,' doesn't it?"

Mark models

Rapper Marky Mark, shown in this file photo, models a pair of Calvin Klein underwear for an advertisement that appears on buses, billboards and in magazines. The undergarment market brings in about $39 million annually, and companies are trying to get men to buy more fashion underwear.

Tons of clothes are donated

NEW YORK (AP) — United Colors of Benetton has collected 500 tons of donated clothing for needy people, according to Luciano Benetton, founder and chairman of the Italian clothier.

The project, from Jan. 26-March 13, was spurred by ads in newspapers and magazines worldwide exhorting customers to bring used clothing to any of the 5,500 participating Benetton stores.

The U.S. effort was part of the 42 tons of clothing collected in North and South America. Gifts in Kind is undertaking U.S. redistribution.

Women shop at men's stores

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — A lot of women are not inclined to float through summer wearing flower-print granny dresses. They like a crisper image. For them, shopping in a men's store is a plus. There they find well-made merchandise with a sporty, tailored edge and a slightly oversized scale that is so desirable.

A spokeswoman for Paul Stuart, the men's haberdashery at Madison Avenue and 45th Street, said one of every four customers there was a woman. This summer many of them are buying striped cotton dress shirts with French cuffs, for $110.

Next door at Brooks Brothers (Madison Avenue at 44th Street) they're buying cotton oxford button-down shirts, especially in white, for $48. Women also like the store's cotton boxer shorts ($15 to $20) to wear on the street.

Paul Smith, 108 Fifth Avenue (at 16th Street) is a store for more adventurous women, just as it is for men. Cotton shirts with a flower print on a dark ground, for $150, are definitely unstuffy.

Ben Chapman

Chapman dies

HOOVER, Ala. — Ben Chapman, who played in the New York Yankees outfield alongside Babe Ruth and made history as the first batter in an All-Star game, died today at his home. He was 84.

A family member said Chapman died of an apparent heart attack in this Birmingham suburb.

Chapman became the player-manager of the Philadelphia Phillies in 1945, and remained there for four seasons, compiling a 196-276 record.

Chapman had a career average of .302 during a 15-year career, playing in one World Series with the Yankees and four All-Star games. He was the first batter to come to the plate in the first All-Star game at Chicago's Comiskey Park on July 6, 1933.

Although overshadowed by the likes of Ruth and Lou Gehrig, Chapman was a star in his own right as one of the game's top baserunners. He led the American League in stolen bases four times, ranking among the top five on three different occasions. He also led the league in triples one year.

His .305 average with the Yankees ranks sixth on the club's all-time list, just ahead of Hall of Famer Mickey Mantle.

Monday hired

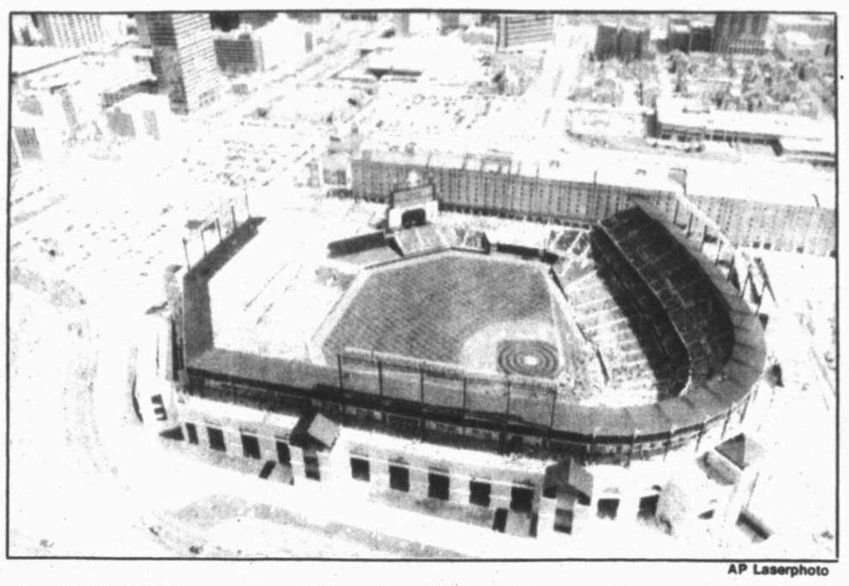

LOS ANGELES — Former major league outfielder Rick Monday will join the Los Angeles Dodgers broadcast team for the rest of the 1993 season as a replacement for Don Drysdale.

The team said Wednesday that Monday will join the Dodgers in New York for Thursday's doubleheader against the Mets. He will continue to host DodgerTalk on KABC radio, the team's flagship station, on weekends.

Monday, 47, spent four seasons (1989-92) doing play-by-play and color commentary for the San Diego Padres on radio and television.

"I'm filling in to the end of the season because we've all lost a very dear friend in Don Drysdale," Monday said in a statement released by the Dodgers. "I feel honored that the Dodger organization asked me to join their broadcast team for the rest of the season."

NEW YORK — There will be a new look to the All-Star teams that take the field in Baltimore next Tuesday night.

Eight first-time starters were elected Wednesday by fans, the most new starters since nine were chosen in 1976.

Rodriguez

"It's a scary thought that the fans want to see me play," said Philadelphia first baseman John Kruk, one of the first-time starters. "What is society coming to these days?"

Barry Bonds, whose blistering first half led San Francisco to first place in the NL West, led all players with 3,074,603 votes, the most since Davey Lopes of the Los Angeles Dodgers received 3,862,403 in 1980. Bonds was elected to start last year for the first time, when he was with Pittsburgh.

"Well, I earned it," Bonds said. "It wasn't given to me. I've worked very hard, especially with the big contract deal."

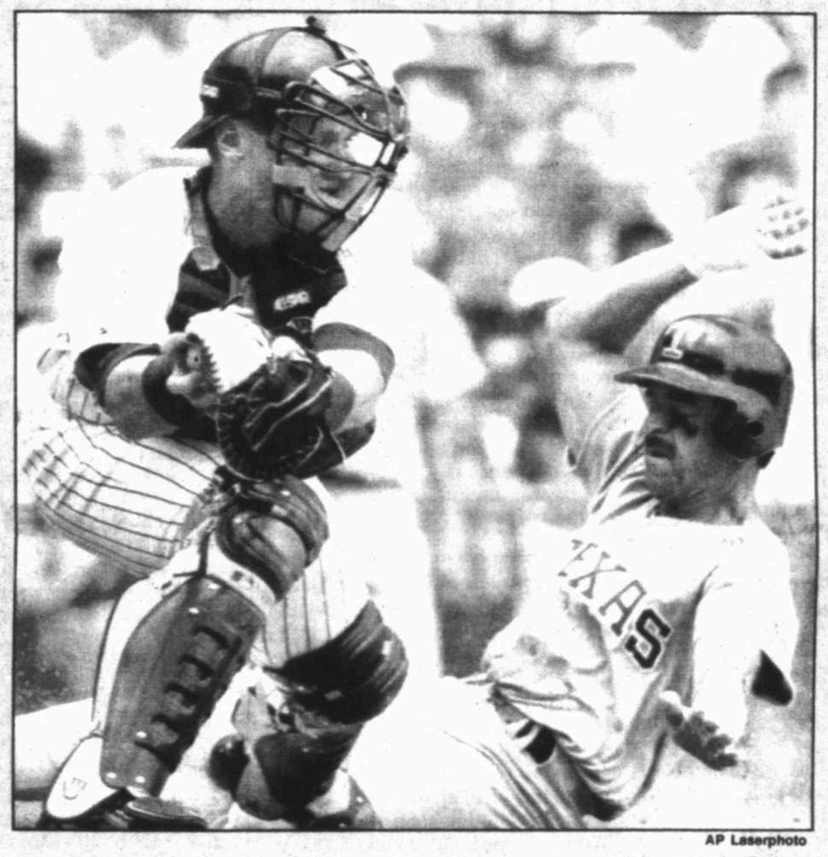

Ken Griffey Jr., who last year made his family the first father-son combo to hit All-Star homers, topped AL players with 2,696,918 votes. Griffey, the top AL vote-getter in in 1991, will start for the fourth straight season.

"I'm excited," he said. "I was hoping Dave Winfield was voted in so I could steal his jersey."

Winfield might make it, yet. The rest of the teams will be announced Thursday. Toronto, which leads the AL East, had the most starters with three: first baseman John Olerud, second baseman

■ Robin Yount's game-winning hit cools off the hot Rangers, 7-6.

By Rick Gano
AP Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE — Robin Yount singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning Wednesday as the Milwaukee Brewers blew a three-run lead, then beat Texas 7-6 to end the Rangers' four-game winning streak.

Yount's single was his 3,082nd hit, moving him into 12th place on the career list.

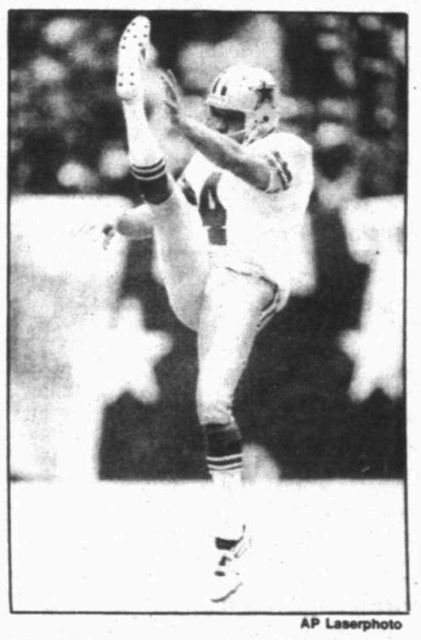

Juan Bell singled with one out in the eighth off Craig Lefferts (1-7) and stole second. Gary Redus, whose three-run pinch-homer in the eighth tied the game at 6, made a running catch in right to rob Darryl Hamilton, with Bell taking third.

Matt Whiteside then replaced Lefferts, who gave up only one hit in 2 2-3 innings and Yount, pinch hitting, singled to left on a 1-0 pitch.

Doug Henry (1-2) blew a save in the eighth but got the victory with a scoreless ninth as Milwaukee won for just the fifth time in 18 games.

Redus hit the first pitch from Henry for a three-run homer in the top of the eighth. Henry had replaced Jesse Orosco, who gave up a leadoff double to Rafael Palmeiro and single to Juan

Mike Saxon was released by Dallas on Wednesday.

Cowboys release punter

By John McFarland
Associated Press Writer

IRVING — Since 1989 the Dallas Cowboys haven't brought any punters into training camp to compete with incumbent Mike Saxon.

This year, they released Saxon without a proven National Football League punter on the roster.

"Mike did a good job for us through the years," head coach Jimmy Johnson said in a statement. "We simply have decided to move in a different direction with the punting position on this team."

Saxon, originally an 11th-round draft pick of the Detroit Lions in 1985, spent all eight of his NFL seasons with the Cowboys. He has a career average of 41.5 yards per punt and 68 career punts downed inside the 20 yard line.

Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple said Johnson would give no further details about Saxon's release. Before being cut, Saxon had the longest tenure of all punters in the National Football Conference.

Raiders deal Dickerson to Atlanta

By Ken Berger
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Falcons are the latest NFL team to think they can make Eric Dickerson happy.

After waiting a week for Al Davis' approval, the Falcons on Wednesday completed a trade with the Los Angeles Raiders for Dickerson, the NFL's No. 2 career rusher.

In return for Dickerson, the Raiders get a conditional sixth-round choice in the 1994 draft. The draft pick reportedly becomes a fifth-rounder if Dickerson rushes for at least 1,000 yards.

Dickerson, 32, and the Falcons agreed last week on a contract reportedly loaded with incentives because of his age.

"After my visit to Atlanta (in mid-June), my focus has been on getting a deal with the Falcons," Dickerson told the Atlanta Journal-Constitution on Wednesday. "This whole change to Atlanta and an offense I like ... it's had me feeling like a young colt again."

Dickerson played five seasons with the Los Angeles Rams and five with the Indianapolis Colts before playing for the Raiders last year. He is nearing the end of a career notable as much for controversy as for accomplishment.

His 13,168 yards are second only to Walter Payton's 16,726. He reached 10,000 yards in only 91 games, faster than any other player in history. He has rushed for 1,000 yards seven times, played in six Pro Bowls and won four NFL rushing titles.

But there is a down side. Indianapolis got him in a blockbuster three-team deal on Halloween night in 1987, reuniting him with Ron Meyer, his former coach at Southern Methodist. The honeymoon didn't last long.

Indianapolis gave up the rights to their first-round draft pick that year, linebacker Cornelius Bennett. The Bills also got the Colts' first- and second-round picks in 1989 and running back Greg Bell.

Cipollini captures yellow jersey at Tour de France

AVRANCHES, France (AP) — Mario Cipollini replaced Wilfried Nelissen at the head of the Tour de France on Wednesday as the Italian cyclist's GB-MB squad won the fourth-stage team time trial.

Spaniard Miguel Indurain, seeking his third Tour de France victory, put himself in a strong position even though his Banesto team finished seventh.

GB-MG won the 50-mile time trial in 1 hour, 34 minutes, 10 seconds. ONCE was next, five seconds behind, and the American Motorola team was third, 16 seconds.

In the individual overall standings, Cipollini led Nelissen, a Belgian, by six seconds. Alex Zulle of ONCE was third, 21 seconds behind. Nelissen had led for the previous two days.

"To get the yellow jersey is not really a surprise," Cipollini said. "It's a dream. Pinch me. A victory in a stage on Sunday, and Wednesday the leader's jersey. That shows I am not a tourist in this race."

Indurain was concerned about losing a few minutes to contenders Claudio Chiappucci and Giani Bugno. Indurain ended up just 86 seconds behind and gained time on Bugno, whose Gatorade team trailed Banesto by 12 seconds. Bugno was 31st, 1:47 behind Cipollini, but 25 seconds behind Indurain.

"The deficit that we had wasn't excessive," Indurain said. "I have reason to be confident in the future."

Indurain can easily make his difference up in the individual time trial Monday at Lac de Madine outside Nancy.

The Spanish cyclist has not lost a major time trial in the last two years and won last year's first time trial in the Tour de France by three minutes.

Tony Rominger of Switzerland was the big loser on the day when his CLAS team was 3:06 back putting Rominger in 88th.

AL: Former Midland Angels pace California

(From 1C)

Gonzalez.

Orosco started the eighth in place of Cal Eldred, who allowed six hits, including Gonzalez's 22nd homer in a three-run third. Eldred failed for the fourth straight start to get his 10th win.

Milwaukee, took a 4-3 lead with two runs in the fourth as B.J. Surhoff singled and John Jaha hit an RBI double. Dave Nilsson reached when Ranger shortstop Mario Diaz and left fielder Gonzalez miscommunicated and Gonzalez dropped Nilsson's short fly for an error. Juan Bell then hit a go-ahead RBI single.

Surhoff doubled and Nilsson and Darryl Hamilton had run-scoring singles in the fifth for a 6-3 lead. Brown lasted five inning, giving up 10 hits.

Gonzalez hit a two-run, 430-foot shot in the third. Rafael Palmeiro also had a sacrifice fly in the inning.

Milwaukee loaded the bases in the first when Brown walked three batters but couldn't score. Nilsson, Hamilton, Bill Spiers and Greg Vaughn hit singles in the second to make it 2-0.

Angels 7, Red Sox 6

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Tim Salmon's RBI single capped a three-run ninth inning against Jeff Russell, and California beat Boston.

Gary DiSarcina and pinch-hitter Greg Myers greeted Russell with doubles into the left-field corner, cutting Boston's lead to 6-5. Luis Polonia then beat out a bunt single to Russell (0-2), who did not retire any of the five batters he faced.

Chad Curtis followed with a slow grounder to second base, and Rod Correia, running for Myers, beat Scott Fletcher's throw with a head-first slide into the plate. Salmon followed with an opposite-field drive to right for his second RBI of the game.

■ AL Roundup

The Red Sox took a 3-2 lead against Scott Sanderson on Andre Dawson's leadoff homer in the second, a double by Valentin, Fletcher's triple and a sacrifice fly by Bob Zupcic in the third.

The Angels tied it in the bottom of the inning on Curtis' third homer, his first in 109 at-bats.

Sanderson allowed four runs on five hits over six innings. The right-hander remained 0-6 in eight starts since May 27.

Athletics 3, Indians 0

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Brent Gates drove in two runs and four Oakland pitchers shut out Cleveland.

The victory gave the A's, who had dropped two in a row, a split of the four-game series.

When Oakland's scheduled starter, Bobby Witt, showed up at the ballpark with the flu, Mike Mohler got the emergency start. Pitching on three days' rest, he went 3 1-3 innings and gave up two hits.

He was followed by Kevin Campbell, who pitched 1 2-3 innings, and Joe Boever (4-2), who went three.

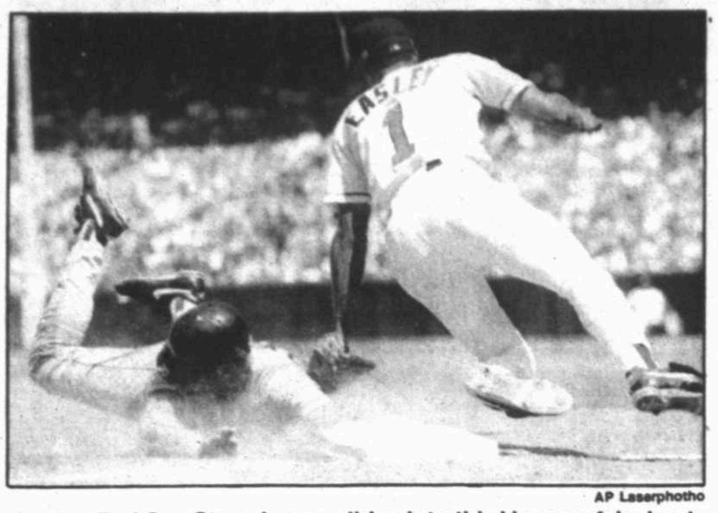

Dennis Eckersley pitched the ninth for his 20th save and 10th in his last 11 chances.

Jose Mesa (8-6) hadn't given up a run to the Athletics in two previous starts this season, covering 15 1-3 innings. This time, the A's scored three runs in the second by loading the bases with one out.

Kevin Seitzer scored on a wild pitch, and a two-out walk to Rickey Henderson loaded the bases again for Gates, who hit a two-run single.

Mesa, who had won his last two starts, allowed five hits in four innings,walking four and striking out two.

The Indians had runners at first and third with two outs in the fifth against Campbell, but Junior Ortiz grounded out.

Boston Red Sox Steve Lyons slides into third base safely, beating the tag by former Midland Angel Damion Easley during California's 7-6 win Wednesday afternoon.

Mariners 6, Yankees 5

SEATTLE — Ken Griffey Jr., the top vote-getter among AL players in All-Star balloting, hit his 22nd home run and Jay Buhner hit a two-run double as Seattle beat New York.

Ex-Yankee Tim Leary (7-3) got the victory, allowing three runs on seven hits in six innings. Chris Bosio replaced Leary at the start of the seventh and Norm Charlton struck out the side in the ninth for his 17th save.

Seattle sent Bob Wickman (8-3) to his third consecutive defeat as it beat the Yankees for the second straight game. New York lost for the fifth time in six road games.

The Yankees pulled to 6-5 in the eighth when Matt Nokes followed Paul O'Neill's two-out double with his ninth home run.

Wickman, who hasn't won since June 20, was taken out after walking Dave Magadan leading off the sixth. In five innings, Wickman gave up five runs on four hits and five walks.

Tigers 8, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Cecil Fielder and Alan Trammell hit consecutive homers in the third inning and Bill Gullickson won his first game since June 11 as Detroit beat Minnesota.

After losing 13 of 15 games, the Tigers won back-to-back contests for the first time since June 19-20.

Fielder's homer, his 23rd of the season, tied him with teammate Mickey Tettleton for the major-league lead. His three RBIs give him 76, also the best in the majors.

Gullickson (5-4) pitched 6 1-3 innings, giving up three runs on eight hits for his first victory in his last five starts. Sean Bergman allowed one run on three hits over the final two innings in his major-league debut.

Jim Deshaies (9-6) lost at the Metrodome for the first time in eight decisions. He allowed six runs on eight hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Detroit took a 4-0 lead in the third inning on two home runs. Tony Phillips walked with one out and Dan Gladden followed with a single. One out later, Fielder hit a 3-2 pitch over the left-field wall.

Trammell, who had three hits, hit the next pitch to nearly the same spot for his fourth homer of the season.

Kirby Puckett's 11th homer in the Twins half cut the lead to 4-1.

Two-out RBI doubles by Milt Cuyler, Phillips and Gladden in the sixth put the Tigers ahead 7-1.

White Sox 5, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO — Alex Fernandez scattered seven hits in 7 1-3 innings as Chicago beat Toronto and sent the Blue Jays to its sixth loss in seven games.

Tim Raines had three hits and scored two runs for Chicago, which had 16 hits in all. The White Sox trailed 2-1 before Lance Johnson's two-run double, one of his three hits, in the fifth.

Fernandez (10-4) struck out three and walked four.

Orioles 8, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Chris Hoiles hit two home runs for the third time in less than a month as Baltimore beat Kansas City and knocked the Royals out of a first-place tie in the AL West.

Hoiles hit a three-run drive off Hipolito Pichardo (4-5) in the fourth inning, and added a solo shot in the sixth. Hoiles, who homered twice against Detroit on June 22 and the New York Yankees on June 26, has 16 this season.

Mike Mussina (10-4) won for the first time in four starts, allowing four his in seven innings with five strikeouts and one walk.

Pirates hand Astros third straight defeat

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Orlando Merced drove in three runs with a double and a single to lead Pittsburgh to a victory over Houston, handing the Astros its third straight loss.

Paul Wagner (4-5) logged 3 1-3 innings off scoreless relief, giving up two hits while striking out three and walking two. He entered with two outs in the fourth and the bases loaded in relief of Tim Wakefield and retired Craig Biggio on a grounder to end the inning.

Joel Johnston, called up Tuesday from Triple-A Buffalo, pitched 1 1-3 innings of scoreless relief but walked two batters in the ninth and gave way to Stan Belinda, who got the final out for his 16th save.

Houston's Mark Portugal (6-4) went 3 1-3 innings, allowing 10 hits. He struck out four and walked one.

Pittsburgh took a 1-0 lead in the third after Carlos Garcia singled and moved to second on a wild pitch. He took third on a single by Al Martin and scored on a single by Merced.

The Pirates made it 5-0 in the fourth. Wakefield hit his first career home run, a 420-foot drive over the wall in left field. Garcia was hit by a pitch and moved to second on Jay Bell's single. After a walk to Martin loaded the bases, Merced hit a two-run double. King singled in Martin.

Houston cut the deficit to 5-2 in the fourth when Jeff Bagwell led off with a single and moved to third on a single by Ken Caminiti. Bagwell scored on a sacrifice fly by Andujar Cedeno. Caminiti went to third on a double by Scott Servais and scored when pinch-hitter Chris Donnels singled.

■ NL Roundup

Padres 2, Mets 0

NEW YORK — Hard-luck Anthony Young gave up a two-run homer to Archi Cianfrocco in the eighth inning and his record streak of consecutive losses was extended to 26 as San Diego beat New York.

Young gave up a weak ground single to center field by Jeff Gardner leading off the game.

He then retired 23 straight batters, including seven on strikeouts, until Kevin Higgins blooped a single to right-center with two outs in the eighth. Cianfrocco, a .196 hitter with only six RBIs coming into the game, followed with a home run over the right-field wall. It was his third homer of the season and second in two games.

Young (0-12) and Andy Benes (9-6) were brilliant in the 100-degree heat. Each pitcher allowed only one hit through seven innings.

Benes pitched one-hit ball over eight-plus innings, walking four and striking out eight. The Mets did not get a runner to third base against Benes.

Reds 4, Cubs 3

CHICAGO — Kevin Mitchell hit two homers and drove in three runs as Cincinnati beat Chicago.

Mitchell has hit safely in 26 of his last 27 games. In that span, he has nine home runs and 21 RBIs.

Tim Pugh (5-9) won his second consecutive start by pitching 7 2-3 innings and allowing three runs on seven hits.

Jeff Reardon got the last out in the eighth inning and Rob Dibble, the third Reds pitcher, got the final three outs for his 11th save. He loaded the bases on two walks and a single before striking out Jose Vizcaino to end the game.

Greg Hibbard (7-5) gave up four runs on 11 hits in five innings.

The Cubs took a 3-0 lead in the first when Ryne Sandberg hit his fifth home run after Vizcaino walked, and Sammy Sosa hit his 17th home run.

Expos 3, Giants 0

MONTREAL — Mark Rueter allowed two hits over 8 1-3 innings in his major-league debut, and Larry Walker and Moises Alou homered as Montreal cooled off San Francisco.

Rueter (1-0) allowed a leadoff walk and a single, then retired the next 18 batters. The 22-year-old left-hander faced just three batters in every inning but the first, eighth and ninth in stopping the Giants' three-game winning streak and the Expos' three-game losing streak.

In previous three games, the Giants had scored 33 runs on 44 hits. They had beaten the Expos six straight times.

Rueter left after walking Steve Scarsone with one out in the ninth. John Wetteland got the final two outs for his 19th save.

Reueter walked Will Clark to start the seventh, but the Expos turned an inning-ending double play. Rueter struck out five and walked three in beating San Francisco rookie Greg Brummett (1-2).

Walker led off the second with his 11th homer, the only hit Brummett allowed until Darrin Fletcher's two-out single in the fifth.

Cardinals 3, Braves 1

ST. LOUIS — Resurgent Joe Magrane outpitched run-starved Greg Maddux — whose error opened the door for St. Louis — and the Cardinals beat Atlanta for its third straight victory.

Magrane (8-7) allowed five hits in seven innings to win for the sixth time in seven decisions. Lee Smith got the final four outs for his major-league-leading 30th save.

Maddux (7-8) allowed 10 hits, with one walk and six strikeouts in his fourth complete game, but lost his third straight decision. The Braves have scored a total of nine runs in Maddux's losses.

Maddux was perfect until the fourth when Ozzie Smith reached second when the pitcher threw his high hopper away for an error. Smith was credited with a single on the play.

Rockies 6, Marlins 5

DENVER — Chris Jones hit a two-out single off relief ace Bryan Harvey in the bottom of the ninth inning, rallying Colorado by Florida in an expansion-team matchup.

Harvey (1-2) entered the game in the ninth and yielded a one-out single to Eric Young, who stole second and went to third on a grounder. He scored on Jones' grounder into the hole, which Walt Weiss stopped but couldn't make an accurate throw.

Steve Reed (5-2) pitched the last two innings for the Rockies.

The Marlins — sustaining their fifth straight loss — took a 5-0 lead against Keith Shepherd, making the first start of his major-league career. Jeff Conine and Henry Cotto two-run homers for Frorida.

After Orestes Destrade reached base on an error to lead off the second inning, Conine hit a 416-foot homer.

The Rockies scored in the third, fourth and fifth innings.

Ryan pitched free of pain, ready to return

By Jennifer Briggs
N.Y. Times News Service

ARLINGTON — It probably isn't the way the rest of the world pictures it when considering the long and tedious comeback of one of its favorite pitchers.

Nolan Ryan threw 105 pitches yesterday in a simulated game at Arlington Stadium.

College players and high school kids were used as batters. The grounds crew and Ryan's daughter, Wendy, shagged in the outfield, with Wendy and Tom House offering advice and 20 or so people in the stands forming the crowd.

And yes, the kids — including Ben Grieve, son of Rangers general manager Tom and an above-average high school player — did make considerable contact with the ball.

But Ryan was pitching well, looking like Ryan is supposed to look, regaining some of his mechanics and form.

Afterward, Ryan declared the pain behind him. He looks forward to a probable July 19 start.

His 105 pitches were all real, gamelike pitches. The predetermined number for the workout was 90, but going more by how he felt than by how many pitches he had thrown, Ryan said he was in a good enough rhythm to keep going.

It is the first time he has truly thrown in almost two months.

That aside, Ryan said he was pleased.

"Ten days ago, I would not have thought I'd be throwing," he said.

It has been 10 days since he felt pain in the hip, and yesterday he reported no stiffness or pain.

"The 19th is the target," he said. "That is what we're shooting for.

"I hope to accomplish that, and each day now I feel closer to accomplishing that."

Ryan is clearly feeling confident again.

Another simulated game is planned for the third day of the All-Star break, with Ryan throwing against actual players.

"That," Ryan said, "will pretty much dictate whether they decide to use me."

In retrospect, it is becoming clear how tricky the injury was.

"There was a possibility I would not be back," he said. "There wasn't a time frame on when the muscle would reattach."

Or when Ryan would reappear.

The entire ordeal has left no doubt in Ryan's mind despite earlier statements that left a minute chance he would play one more season.

"This has to be it," he said. "I don't have a choice.

"All these things are trying to tell me something."

Montgomery's home run lifts Generals past Angels

Staff report

JACKSON, Miss. — Ray Montgomery hit a two-out, two-run home run in the bottom of the third inning to boost the Jackson Generals to a 5-3 win over the Midland Angels her Wednesday night.

The game was the first of a five-game set with the Generals and 10-game road trip for the Angels.

Angel pitcher John Fritz, recently voted to the Texas League All-Star game, took the loss.

With the contest tied at 2-2, Roberto Petagine singled off Fritz. Montgomery followed with his round-tripper over the left field fence on a 1-0 count.

Bob Hurta got the win for Jackson, allowing one earned run in six innings and striking out four.

The first four runs of the game were scored on ground outs. Midland second baseman P.J. Forbes led off the game with a single to left and advanced to second on a wild pitch. He went to third on Orlando Palmeiro's bunt and scored on Mark Dalesandro's ground out for a 1-0 Angel lead.

The Generals tied the score in the bottom of the first when Dave Hajek doubled to right center and later came home on Petigine's ground out. It was Petigine's 63rd RBI of the year — a total good for second in the Texas League.

Jackson took the lead in the second when Frank Kellner led off with a double and Chris Hatcher drove him home with another ground out after Kellner had moved to third on a wild pitch.

The Angels tied it in the third when Mark Wasinger reached on a two-base throwing error by Hurta, moved to second on a Forbes single, and scored on a Palmeiro ground out.

Midland cut the General lead to 4-3 in the fourth as Jeff Kipila walked and moved to third on another throwing error by Hurta. Kipila scored on a sacrifice fly by Mark Sweeney.

The Angels will throw Shad Williams (5-5, 4.92) against the Generals' Chris White (1-1) in tonight's game.

PBA Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Standings Wednesday after the second round of the PBA Tucson Open, with 16-game pinfall totals:

1, Joe Firpo, Lake Worth, Fla., 3,658. 2, John Mazza, Mount Clemens, Mich., 3,600. 3, Dennis Horan Jr., San Diego, 3,597. 4, Mike Aulby, Indianapolis, 3,582. 5, Walter Ray Williams Jr., Stockton, Calif., 3,576. 6, David Ozio, Vidor, Texas, 3,553.

7, Parker Bohn III, Freehold, N.J., 3,551. 8, Derek Williams, Groves, Texas, 3,544. 9, Rob

GAME: Fans vote starting lineup for contest

(From 1C)

Roberto Alomar and outfielder Joe Carter.

Olerud, hitting .401 entering Wednesday's game, had 1,285,334 votes, 338,542 more than Detroit's Cecil Fielder, who has 23 home runs and a major league-leading 76 RBIs.

"I definitely had quite a first half but it still comes as kind of a surprise," Olerud said. "Going into the year, I wouldn't have guessed I'd be voted in over guys like (Mark) McGwire, Fielder and (Frank) Thomas. It means a lot to me to be with such an elite group."

Philadelphia, first in the NL East, was the only other team with more than one starter: catcher Darren Daulton and Kruk. It's the first time since 1982 the Phillies will have more than one starter.

"I'm very pleased, it's a great honor," said Daulton, an All-Star reserve in 1992. "Last year was very exciting and I'm looking forward even more now that I've got one under my belt."

Kruk had 1,200,219 votes, finishing ahead of San Diego's Fred McGriff (1,080,347), San Francisco's Will Clark (992,420) and Colorado's Andres Galarraga (778,562), who began Wednesday with a .399 average and 63 RBIs.

"At least it means we know we'll play," said Kruk, who didn't get into the 1991 All-Star game but got two hits last year in the NL's 13-6 loss.

Barry Larkin of the Cincinnati Reds won at shortstop in the NL, stopping Ozzie Smith's streak of 10 consecutive elections. Larkin received 1,259,939 votes to 1,147,552 for his St. Louis rival, the closest race for any spot.

The other first-time starters in the NL are Gary Sheffield of Florida at third base and David Justice of Atlanta in the outfield. Sheffield, traded last month from San Diego to the Marlins, is the first player elected from an expansion team.

Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez joined Olerud and Carter as new starters in the AL.

Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs, last year's leading NL votegetter, was elected to start at second base for the eighth straight time and the ninth time in 10 years. Outfielder Andy Van Slyke of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who is on the disabled list, was elected for the second straight time. Philadelphia outfielder Lenny Dykstra finished fourth and is the likely replacement.

Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. will start for the 10th consecutive season, including 1988, when he replaced Alan Trammell of Detroit, who was elected to start.

Wade Boggs of the New York Yankees was elected at third base for the seventh consecutive year. His first six appearances were with the Boston Red Sox.

Minnesota outfielder Kirby Puckett was elected for the second straight season and the fourth time overall. Alomar was elected for the third consecutive season.

Puckett got a $100,000 bonus for being voted to the team. The other players received $50,000 bonuses, except for Rodriguez, who got $10,000, and Bonds and Sheffield, who earned no extra money.

Anxious Aikman returns to Dallas early

By Richie Whitt
N.Y. Times News Service

IRVING — Because his back feels fine, his finger has an itch and his confidence is swelling, Dallas Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman will shorten his rehabilitation stay on the West Coast and return to the Metroplex tomorrow afternoon.

Aikman, originally scheduled for two weeks of rehab in Los Angeles, plans to catch a one-way flight to Dallas after only four days of work at the Kerlan-Jobe Clinic in Inglewood, Calif. Aikman said he wants to be on hand when players receive their Super Bowl rings Sunday night, and he wants to be at Valley Ranch on Monday for the team's final minicamp before the July 15 start of training camp in Austin.

"I want to be in Dallas and be with the guys," Aikman said. "That ring ceremony is very important to me. And as long as I can do the same exercises in Dallas, being at the minicamp is important, too."

Aikman plans to remain with the team through the minicamp and for the first two weeks of training camp in Austin. When the team heads to London for an exhibition game Aug. 2, Aikman will return to Los Angeles.

Leaving California early will allow Aikman, who underwent surgery June 19 by Dr. Robert Watkins for a herniated disk, to get his ring at the private ceremony at Texas Stadium.

After the surgery, Watkins prescribed two weeks of rest and two weeks of rehab at the clinic before wanting Aikman to return home. But being comfortable with the program and uncomfortable at being away from teammates and trophies, Aikman is setting his own agenda.

SAXON: Cowboys release veteran punter

(From 1C)

Saxon could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Since 1985, Saxon leads the NFL in dropping punts inside the 20, with 166. The next closest punter is John Kidd of the San Diego Chargers, who has 153.

In 1986, Saxon set a club record for punts in a season with 86.

Last season, Saxon averaged 43 yards per punt, the second-highest average of his career. He had 19 kicks inside the 20 and nine touchbacks.

Free agents Steve Domingos and John Jett will compete for the position when training camp opens in Austin on July 15.

Domingos, 6-3, 200 pounds, was cut by the Los Angeles Rams in their training camp in 1992. He played at San Francisco State and spent the 1991 season with the semipro Fresno Bandits.

Domingos had a 45.6 gross-punt average with the Bandits.

Jett is a 6-0, 184-pounder from East Carolina who was released from the Minnesota Vikings' training camp last year.

Agassi joins tennis benefit

MAHWAH, N.J. (AP) — Andre Agassi will join tennis stars Pete Sampras and John McEnroe in a special exhibition for Arthur Ashe's Safe Passage Foundation preceding the Pathmark Tennis Classic.

Agassi decided to play the July 18 match after realizing how important the Safe Passage Foundation was to McEnroe, exhibition director John Korff said Wednesday. Ashe, who died of AIDS in February, started the Newark-based program in 1990 to provide tennis and academic programs to disadvantaged youngsters.

Korff said McEnroe will figure out the tournament format after he returns from London this week.

Agassi will donate half his appearance money for the event to the Ashe program and the other half will go to Agassi's charitable foundation, Korff said.

McEnroe intends to donate his total purse to the children in the ABC Cities Tennis Program of the Safe Passage Foundation,

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — The skittish oil market fell on Wednesday amid uncertainty over what will come of talks at the United Nations regarding a limited sale of Iraqi oil.

The Iraqi-initiated talks started Wednesday as lawmakers in Baghdad insisted the country should be compensated for accepting U.N. restrictions on the sale.

The limited sale itself has not been a concern to the oil markets as much as the prospects that more sales could follow.

August-delivery of West Texas Intermediate settled at $18.02 per barrel, down 27 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $16.50 per barrel.

After trading ended Wednesday, the American Petroleum Institute reported a sharp drop in last week's domestic inventory of crude oil, while refineries increased production.

Desk & Derrick

The Desk and Derrick Club of Midland will meet this evening ath the Petroleum Club. The meeting will begin with cocktails at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Danita Walker, an independent landman and immediate past president of the Permian Basin Landmen's Association. Her topic will be "Women in the Oil and Gas Business."

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar rose Wednesday against major European currencies but weakened against the Japanese yen as leaders of the Group of Seven industrialized nations met in Tokyo.

In New York, the dollar was quoted late at 107.65 yen, down from 108.83 late Tuesday.

In New York, the British pound was trading at $1.4935, down from $1.5025 Tuesday.

Other late New York dollar rates, compared with late Tuesday: 1.7065 German marks, up from 1.7050; 1.5130 Swiss francs, up from 1.5115; 5.7735 French francs, up from 5.7668; 1,551.00 Italian lire, up from 1,546.00, and 1.2852 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2844.

Stocks rebound

NEW YORK — Diminished inflation fears and buying among depressed stocks gave the market a boost Wednesday after two days of heavy selling.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 25.74 points to 3,475.67.

But the broader market did not advance as firmly. Advancing issues outnumbered declines by a slim 10 to 9 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Nasdaq composite index fell 3.43 to 698.79. The NYSE composite index rose 0.61 to 245.68 and at the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.98 to 431.79.

U.N. talks focus on Iraq oil sales

■ Negotiations are expected to continue for rest of week.

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Iraq, which previously spurned a U.N.-supervised oil sale, now seems desperate to arrange $1.6 billion in exports to finance humanitarian assistance for its people.

Negotiations on the sale, which began Wednesday and were expected to continue for at least the rest of the week, come at a time when the Baghdad government and the United Nations are at loggerheads over U.N. efforts to install remote-controlled cameras at two former missile test sites.

Iraq had initiated the talks before the U.S. missile strike against Baghdad.

Arab diplomats said Iraq is suffering because of the U.N. sanctions. Without the sale of oil, they said, Iraq must continue to sell off its gold reserves in order to buy food.

The Security Council imposed an oil embargo and sweeping trade sanctions against Iraq in August 1990 after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. It decided to maintain the oil and trade embargoes as part of the cease-fire terms ending the Persian Gulf War.

The oil embargo has been upheld in general, despite reports of a major Iraqi transfer to Iran and a small, U.N.-approved transfer to Jordan in exchange for food and other goods.

The Security Council had offered to permit Iraq to sell $1.6 billion in oil. But Iraq only would receive about $900 million and would not control any revenue, which would go into a U.N. account.

Most of the revenue would finance U.N. weapons inspections and related post-Gulf war operations in Iraq; some also would go into a fund for reparations to war victims.

The United Nations would strictly control oil production, approve contracts and oversee distribution of humanitarian aid.

Previous talks broke down more than a year ago after Iraq said that it would receive too small a share of the $1.6 billion and that the U.N. conditions of strict surveillance were onerous and a violation of Iraq's sovereignty. It especially opposed U.N. distribution of the humanitarian assistance to the Iraqi people.

Iraq has argued for a larger overall sale and less U.N. control, especially over distribution to its restive Kurdish population in the north and Shiites in the south.

Iraq's pre-invasion output of oil, its top foreign currency earner, was around 3 million barrels a day. Its current production is around 500,000 barrels daily, mainly for domestic consumption. Iraq completely has rebuilt its oil industry, heavily damaged in the war, and can surpass its pre-war production.

Tandy brings in outsider to run Radio Shack unit

FORT WORTH (NYT) — Tandy Corp., the Fort Worth retailer saddled in recent years by sluggish growth in its Radio Shack unit, on Wednesday tapped a company outsider to shore up the operations of its flagship consumer electronics chain.

Leonard Roberts, a 44-year-old marketing executive with a reputation for turning around lagging restaurant companies, is the new president of Radio Shack — a nearly $3 billion operation that has posted unspectacular financial results in recent years.

Roberts, who most recently was the chairman of Nashville's Shoney's Inc. and had previously guided a revitalization of the Arby's fast-food chain, was a surprise choice for the Radio Shack job because of his lack of experience in the consumer electronics industry, analysts said.

Even so, Roberts said many of the skills he used to manage a nationwide network of stores selling roast-beef sandwiches are applicable in an organization that has thousands of outlets selling consumer electronics parts.

"Our similarities are greater than our differences," said Roberts, who added that his primary goals are to sharpen Radio Shack's marketing image and improve its operations at the store level.

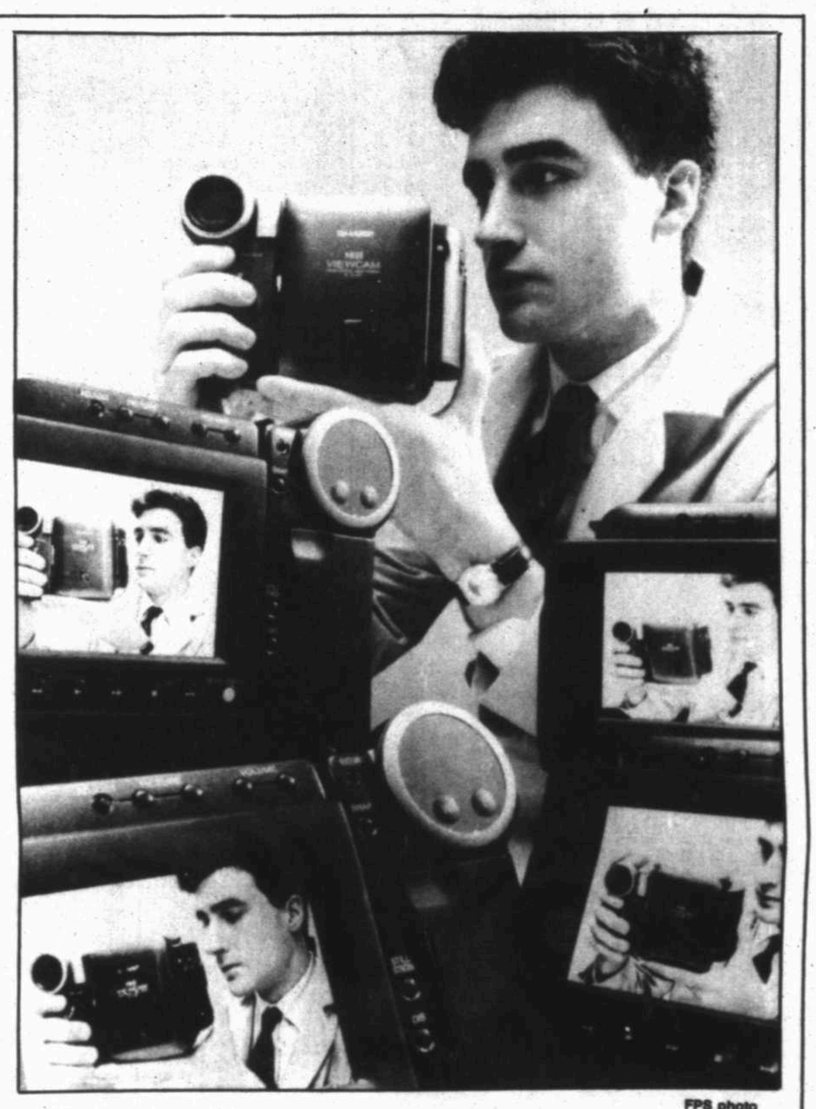

"We must understand who our customers are, understand what they value in us and understand how we enhance that value," Roberts said. "I've been driven by those three things, and, to the extent that they are applicable here, we can do magic together."

Radio Shack's financial results have been less than magical in recent years. The unit has eliminated nearly 500 marginal outlets since 1991 and has seen overall sales stall near $3 billion in recent years. Its profit margins have reached historic lows as the tumbling prices for personal computers have put a squeeze on Radio Shack earnings.

While Roberts said he has not been on the job long enough to identify specific weaknesses of the Radio Shack operation, he said his initial merchandising strategy will focus on promoting more frequent visits by current Radio Shack customers.

At both Shoney's and Arby's, Roberts said the chains increased their awareness among consumers by shifting more of its marketing efforts into television commercials and away from newspaper and magazine advertising. However, it is too soon to determine any new direction for Radio Shack marketing, Roberts said.

Roberts in his past jobs has ordered extensive customer surveys to determine the strengths and weaknesses of his companies. He said he expects to rely on similar types of research in shaping any new merchandising and marketing strategies for Radio Shack.

Banks support El Paso Electric restructure plan, Central says

DALLAS (AP) — Central and South West Corp. says its reorganization plan for El Paso Electric Co. has been supported by banks providing letters of credit associated with the El Paso utility's pollution control bonds.

Central said Wednesday that the banks — including Citibank N.A., Credit Suisse, Canadian Imperial Bank and Westpac — have agreed to file supporting motions in federal bankruptcy court in Austin.

Dallas-based Central previously said it has gathered support from El Paso Electric's unsecured creditors committee, and from the unofficial committee of first and second bondholders.

Last Friday, Southwestern Public Service Co. of Amarillo announced a $2.2 billion proposal to acquire the El Paso utility. Southwestern is asking the bankruptcy court to allow it to file its reorganization plan, which calls for making El Paso Electric one of its divisions.

Central's rival $2.1 billion plan would allow El Paso Electric to emerge from Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection, where it has been since January 1992, as a wholly-owned subsidiary of Central, a utility holding company.

Central said the letter of credit banks for the Farmington and Maricopa pollution control bonds agreed to support the reorganization plan after negotiating a package of economic enhancements to it.

IBM to overhaul its U.S. marketing force

(NYT) — Providing the first glimpse of his plans to revive IBM, Louis V. Gerstner Jr., the new chief executive, has decided to overhaul the company's 40,000-member marketing force in the United States.

Instead of continuing to organize the sales staff solely by geographic area and expecting it to sell everything from PCs to mainframes, IBM will increasingly rely on specialists familiar with customers in specific industries and experts on specific computer products.

Company officials and industry consultants said Wednesday that the new marketing program, which will be put into effect in the next three months, represents a break with IBM tradition.

Analysts say the step is a carefully gauged effort by Gerstner to retain the advantages of being a big company by recasting IBM less as a supplier of computer equipment and more as a provider of information-management solutions to industries like banking.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

'Ex-dividend' means dividend goes to seller

By Bill Doyle

Q: We bought stock March 9. The date of record for a dividend was March 12. The stock went ex-dividend March 4. As we did not receive the dividend, I asked our broker who did. No answer was forthcoming.

Can you tell us who has our dividend?

Doyle

A: The person who sold the shares you purchased received the dividend. It's not yours, because you bought the stock after it went ex-dividend.

In simple terms, "ex-dividend" means "without dividend." Anyone who buys stock in a "regular way" transaction — the usual method in which stocks are traded — on or after the ex-dividend date is not entitled to the dividend. The seller gets that dividend.

When a company's board of directors declares a dividend, it is designated as payable to stockholders of record as of the close of business on a "record date" — in this case, Friday, March 12, at which time you were not yet the owner of record.

You seem to have dates mixed up. Because of the five-business-day rule for settlement of regular-way transactions, that stock went ex-dividend at the opening of stock exchange trading Monday, March 8.

Don't make the mistake many folks do and think only four business days passed between the ex-dividend and the record dates. Between the opening on March 8 and the closing on March 12, five business days elapsed.

Q: Are Saturdays and Sundays included when counting the five days between the time a stock goes ex-dividend and the record date for the dividend?

A: No. Nor do holidays. Only business days come into play.

For example, if the record date for a dividend on XYZ stock was Wednesday, June 2, XYZ went ex-dividend at the opening of stock exchange trading Wednesday, May 26. Saturday, May 29; Sunday, May 30; and Memorial Day, May 31, were not business days.

Q: Is there any way to purchase a stock after it goes ex-dividend and still receive the dividend?

A: Yes. You can designate your buy order as a four-day, three-day, two-day or same-day trade, thereby shortening the settlement period for that particular transaction and entitling you to the dividend.

Doing things that way will require special handling by your brokerage firm and probably result in a higher commission charge.

Q: It occurs to me it is wise to buy stock just before it goes ex-dividend. Right?

A: Wrong!

When a stock goes ex-dividend, the amount of the dividend is automatically deducted from the stock's market price. Then, the dividend is subject to income tax.

Let's say you buy 100 shares of stock at $10 a share on which a dividend of 50 cents per share is to be paid. On the ex-dividend date, the stock's price will drop to $9.50 — unless buying demand or selling pressure changes that price. Assuming no such price change, you will have stock worth $950 and a $50 dividend. But you will have to pay tax on the dividend, thus reducing the total value of your holdings.

Q: My broker has bought and sold stock for my account, without my knowledge. How do I get a true report of my holdings?

A: If you did not sign papers giving the broker discretionary power over your account, he should not buy or sell without your consent.

The periodic statements you receive from the broker should give you a true report of your holdings.

If you have a complaint about the broker, go first to his office manager and his firm's home office.

Then, if necessary, take your gripe to any stock exchange on which his firm holds membership, the National Association of Securities Dealers, your state's securities regulatory authority and the federal Securities and Exchange Commission.

Transportation Secretary Pena intervenes in Northwest, union talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Federico Pena called in Northwest Airlines executives and union leaders Wednesday to urge them to keep the airline out of bankruptcy court.

Pena, who is taking a more active role in the problems of the airline industry than his Republican predecessors, said the airline had agreed to postpone a bankruptcy filing while the unions decide whether to approve concessions.

"There is not a lot of time," Pena said.

Northwest President John Dasburg said, "We will be meeting beginning immediately."

Northwest, the nation's fourth largest airline, lost more than $1 billion last year and more than $100 million in the first three months of 1993.

The company is struggling under a huge debt from its 1989 buyout that has made it vulnerable to fare wars and economic downturns, particularly in Japan because the bulk of its profits once came from trans-Pacific flights.

The Clinton administration is anxious to avoid a bankruptcy that could destabilize the industry. Northwest could ignite a new round of fare cuts to maintain its cash flow.

On Tuesday, the pilots union reached agreement with Northwest on its part of an $886 million swap of pay concessions for stock in the carrier. The machinists and Teamsters unions, which have clashed with the pilots, also must sign on.

Dasburg and machinists officials went into a meeting soon after leaving Pena's office. There was no immediate comment on the progress of the talks.

Pena called the meeting Wednesday to "facilitate an agreement," said spokesman Bob Marx. The meeting lasted about an hour.

"It gave all of the parties an opportunity to lay out what their issues are at this point as a way to deciding where we all have to go next," said Nancy Stella, a spokeswoman for the Teamsters.

Pena did not say how long Northwest would hold off filing for reorganization.

"At this point, all I have attempted to do is to give the parties a little more time to continue their discussions," Pena said.

Union officials said Tuesday the company gave them an Aug. 1 deadline for reaching an agreement.

Northwest says it needs the union concessions to restructure $1.5 billion in bank debts and set more favorable terms for repayment of $800 million owed to suppliers.

The airline said preferred shareholders have agreed to annual cuts in stock dividends totaling nearly $325 million. That, combined with the employee wage concessions, would save Northwest more than $1 billion a year.

Job stress

Relief for burned, bummed out

By Torri Minton
N.Y. Times News Service

A software company owner doesn't have an office, wear a watch or use an alarm clock much. He lives in a hot springs resort two hours north of San Francisco, where he eats a macrobiotic diet, gets acupuncture and chiropractic adjustments.

An equipment manager manages his job stress by getting a massage. In his office. Once a week. Twenty minutes.

A surgical-instruments marketing forecaster works out, six days a week, to relax during 75- to 90-hour workweeks that include business management school. "I feel more relieved after karate than aerobics," she says, "because that's when I get to hit something."

They are burnout-busters in the fight against job stress — the 20th century disease.

The International Labor Organization recently called stress "one of the most serious health issues of the 20th century." It's a problem not just for employees' physical and mental health, but also for employers and governments who are starting to assess the financial damage, the United Nations agency report said.

It found, among other things, that job stress costs the U.S. economy $200 billion a year because of decreased productivity.

It also found that job burnout, the result of stress, brings low resistance to illness, inefficient work and increased pessimism. In Japan, death from overwork has a name: "karoshi."

"In the last five to seven years, across the board in all professions, almost everybody I encounter is experiencing too much work and not enough time to do it," says workplace psychologist Beverly Potter of Berkeley, Calif., author of "Preventing Job Burnout."

"Computers that are supposed to lead to the paperless office mean more work instead of less," Potter says. On top of that, companies are "taking the workload, cutting it up to add to people's jobs, and people are saying, 'I can't complain, at least I have a job.' ... The stress level and the burnout level seem to be escalating."

The cure? Depends on whom you talk to.

On the cutting edge are things like theta brain-wave machines that put you into a nap-like state with flashing lights and ocean sounds. There are "smart drinks" and massage breaks at business meetings. There are anti-stress office stretching exercises, and not just the kind where you walk out the door.

Having control over what you do is tremendously important, experts say.

Many companies offer stress-management classes. Intel also has eight-week paid leaves every seven years for all but part-time employees. Sun Microsystems lets loose by getting seriously silly.

On April Fools' Day 1991, the vice president of Sun Microsystems labs found his office in the fish roundabout at the Steinhart Aquarium — desk, filing cabinets, computer and pictures of wife and kids. Chief executive Scott McNealy called the joke, part of an April Fools' series, part of Sun's "work hard, play hard" philosophy.

Hypnotherapy can help, too. On the other hand, so can rose-colored glasses.

Or yellow ones. Potter, also known as "Beverly Burnout," had an eye-opening experience with them. One day in mid-winter, her car was stolen and wrecked. She had to ride on her motor scooter.

"If anybody should have been in a bad mood, I should have been," she says. Having no sunglasses, she put on some old yellow ski goggles and drove off. The foggy sky turned yellow.

"I thought, 'Hey, this is cool.' I lost my car, so what, I was in a good mood."

Problem is, the minute she pulled the glasses off, she was in a bad mood.

"A person doesn't have to sit there and meditate. A lot of people think it's hokey. They think it's California cosmic," says Potter.

Fine, she says. What's important is learning to notice when you're stressed, and how to cope, though exercise or diet or whatever — to keep yourself in the middle range between being bored and being overstimulated.

Breathing's a good one, too. Don't forget. People at work often do.

Coinless, computerized vending machines offer beer, soda to go

By Michael Janofsky
N.Y. Times News Service

It is hot. You have just three-putted to fall farther behind. You would love a cold drink to revive your spirits and maybe your game. But six holes remain between you and the clubhouse.

In the old days, like now, about the best a golfer could hope for was a nearby water fountain. But George R. Jensen Jr., who once turned old black-and-white movies to color for Ted Turner, is about to change all that by bringing the 19th hole right onto the course.

In his latest endeavor, Jensen, 44, runs a company that makes coinless, computerized vending machines that dispense cans of beer and soft drinks and charge the purchases to credit cards. He plans to install the first machines in December on golf courses in Florida, where they have been tested, and have 2,000 others in place within five years.

And that could be just the start. He said his company, USA Entertainment Center, based in Wayne, Pa., intended to expand into marinas, tennis clubs, hotels, motels, bowling centers and elsewhere, with machines that might sell other products like snacks, books and office supplies.

"It's the ultimate in low-overhead merchandising," Jensen said Wednesday. "If I'm right, there will be millions of machines all over the world. No doubt, they're coming."

In a simpler form, they are already here. Several years ago, a Danish company developed coin-operated beer vending machines that accommodated several currencies and dispensed beer according to the amount spent. Ben Steinman, executive editor of Beer Marketers Insights, a trade publication, said some beer in Japan is sold by vending dispensers.

The version made by USA Entertainment stretches the technology. The machines are equipped with surveillance systems that enable someone in the clubhouse, for example, to communicate with customers through a video camera and intercom. Only when the monitor is convinced that a buyer is of appropriate age and sobriety will the machine be activated. Short people might be at some disadvantage because the video camera is 5-feet, 8-inches off the ground.

"But it's a wide-angle lens," Jensen said. "It sees everything."

By Jensen's estimates, side-by-side dispensers, one selling as many as eight brands of beer, the other eight kinds of soft drinks, could generate annual revenues of more than $20,000, based on prices of $2.50 for a beer and $1 for a soda. The proprietor, who must have a liquor license, would keep 60 percent of the gross.

The computer system recognizes a credit card number for accounting purposes but does not verify the worthiness of the card, a function that would cost USA Entertainment more money.

Jensen, an investment banker and television producer before founding a company that added color to old movies, said 28 states, as well as the U.S. Virgin Islands and the Canadian province of Alberta, have approved the use of coinless vending machines with an attendant on site. Fourteen of the states, he said, would allow machines that used surveillance for controlled sales. The machines have not been approved in New York, New Jersey or Connecticut.

Both Steinman and Jesse Meyers, publisher of Beverage Digest, a trade publication, expressed curiosity about remote-controlled sales by credit card, especially because vending sales account for 11 percent of the $47 billion soft-drink industry, Meyers said.

Elevators, automobiles bring out people's true colors

By Bob St. John
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Years ago when I was a sportswriter covering a Dallas Cowboys game in St. Louis I was rushing back to my room to get my briefcase and typewriter, which you might recall was one of those instruments we used in the old days.

I mashed the elevator button for the fourth floor and two couples, obviously friends, were going to the second and ninth floors.

It was a noon game, but they were already in the spirit of things, both from the mental and Bloody Mary standpoint. When one couple got off at the second floor one of the guys held the elevator door open while they chatted.

After a couple of minutes, I said, "I'm sorry but I'm late and in a hurry. I need to get back to my room."

"Just a minute," said the guy and I repeated the request.

I was getting fairly testy when one of the women said, "Oh, let's go on up and keep this guy from having a heart attack." And they all laughed.

When I got off the fourth floor, I stood there for a few seconds in the elevator and faced the remaining couple, smiled and then mashed the buttons for the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth floors. I can't repeat in a family newspaper what the woman said as the door closed and I walked away.

I know, it was mean But I was in my 30s then and very immature and well, somewhat vengeful. But lack of elevator etiquette can by very annoying.

For instance, how many times have people charged into the elevator before you can even get off. The polite thing to do is wait until those on the elevator walk off before you try to get on, but some ignore this. I've even fought my way out only to have this guy say, "Stop shoving. Don't be so rude."

I have calmed down with age and not only expect but usually ignore rudeness, although certainly taking note of it.

There's the case of the four-way stop signs. Unwritten rules of common courtesy are very simple. Motorists who stop at the sign first, go first. If you are second in line, then you allow the driver who is first in line on either side or opposite you, to go.

People often show their characteristics and personalities, perhaps somewhat hidden otherwise, in automobiles. Some who are second in line will just barrel right out behind the car in front of them. I see this happen to some degree almost every time when I face the same four-way stop sign on the way to work. I suppose those who gun the engine and pass through out of turn are in a big hurry. Maybe the rest of us are too.

When I was in my late teens and early 20s and very immature I had a fantasy about having one of those tanklike Hudsons. When a motorist entering Central Expressway would do something like, say, commit that very common discourtesy of ignoring the "yield" sign and racing in front of you, I would just drive the old car into the nearest fender.

YOU'RE GOING DOWN CENTRAL AND THEY MAKE YOU BRAKE FOR GOODNESS SAKES!

But that doesn't bother me anymore. I just figure it's going to happen and coolly and calmly go on my way.

Something else used to be bothersome but now just makes me smile knowingly, benevolently. That is when somebody will leave a gallon of ice cream or frozen yogurt in the freezer with one bite left or a container of orange juice with one swallow. You lust for healthy frozen chocolate pecan yogurt, which you've only purchased the previous day and with spoon and dish at the ready, do not find enough left to sniff.

Census: Nearly half of Houston's Hispanic residents aren't citizens

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Almost one-half of Houston's voting-age Hispanics are not U.S. citizens — a Census Bureau finding that troubles local civic leaders working for a stronger Hispanic voice.

Figures from the 1990 Census show that 46.8 percent of Houston's voting age Hispanics, 56.5 percent of such Asians, 2.2 percent of whites and 1.1 percent of blacks were not citizens.

"It's truly unhealthy for that large of a segment of any community to not take part in the political life of the city," said Lisa Hernandez, coordinator of Harris County's Southwest Voter Registration Education Project.

Houston had 288,494 Hispanics of voting age, and 156,400 of those were not citizens, the Census Bureau said. Only citizens may vote, limiting the power of Hispanics in a city whose population is 28 percent Hispanic, Hernandez said. Although a higher percentage of Asians are not citizens, they make up only 4 percent of the population.

Hernandez said citizenship is important because voter registration is the natural second step. Of Harris County's 1.2 million registered voters, only 120,000 are Hispanic, she said.

"This is a real wake-up call for the populus," she said. "It says there must be a concerted effort by all communities to reach out to the new group of American hopefuls and incorporate them into the community."

Some qualified Hispanic immigrants choose not to become citizens, Hernandez said, because they are unwilling to go through the bureaucratic hassle. Others feel they would be slighting their home country. Many just don't understand the process, Hernandez said.

City officials have broken down the Census figures to show the number of voting age Hispanics in each City Council district. Last spring, a council revision of boundaries made Hispanic voters a majority in two districts.

Council has nine single-member districts, five at-large seats and a mayor. To gain better representation, Hispanics sued the city two years ago, asking for 16 single-member districts. Last week, the U.S. Justice Department approved the current system for the November elections.

Officials suspect death of Texas woman is linked to mystery virus

LUFKIN (AP) — Federal and state health officials on Wednesday tested rodents for a mysterious and deadly virus suspected in the death of an East Texas woman.

A 58-year-old registered nurse who died June 23 is a suspected victim of hantavirus, which has killed 11 people in the Four Corners states of New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Colorado.

John Bautch, district administrator at the Angelina County and Cities Health District, on Wednesday said preliminary lab results back up the suspicions.

"They found the presence of (hantavirus) antibodies," Bautch said. "In talking with TDH (Texas Department of Health) yesterday, they said it was highly suspected that it was the virus."

Final tests, being conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, should be completed in about two weeks, officials said.

A rodent trapped at the woman's home in Zavalla, about 22 miles southeast of Lufkin, was also being tested for the virus. In the Four Corners cases, the disease was found to have been spread by rodents.

Bautch said investigators from the CDC and the state health department were setting up shop in Zavalla on Wednesday to trap rodents there. Samples will be analyzed in Atlanta, officials said.

"All we can do is try to collect as many rodents as possible and wait," Bautch said.

No other cases are being investigated for hantavirus in Angelina County, Bautch said. However, health officials say there are at least nine other unconfirmed cases in Texas. The Zavalla case, if confirmed, would be the state's first.

CDC figures show that 15 cases of hantavirus have been confirmed.

BUY THE BASIN'S "Set A Goal" Starts with a Bang

Jim Woodcock, president of Hy-Bon Engineering Co., Inc, kicked off "Set a Goal" with a pledge of his own. His company sponsored this segment of the BUY THE BASIN campaign. Photo by Curtis Wilcott.

A week-long phone bank at the Midland Chamber of Commerce challenged area businesses to "Set A Goal" of increased local purchasing. Volunteers called as many local businesses as possible and asked them to try to purchase locally first whenever possible.

Hy-Bon Engineering Company sponsored this segment of the BUY THE BASIN campaign. Jim Woodcock, Hy-Bon president, set the pace with a pledge of his own.

"In the next year we're going to try to keep 25 percent more of our budget in the Permian Basin," Woodcock said. "We need to keep as much purchasing as possible here if our economy is to remain healthy."

Hy-Bon will be looking at the purchase of office supplies, computers, equipment components and other items.

"We're looking back over our records and seeing where an out-of-town company became the company of record just because we had done business with them before. Through the years that happens. Now we're taking the time to look around and see if we can find local companies with competitive prices."

BUY THE BASIN asks you to:
Think before you buy out of town
Work hard to allow all potential local suppliers to earn your business
Recognize all costs in evaluating the competitors
Buy locally if all things are at least equal
Give local retailers and vendors constructive feedback
Evaluate your purchases and set a goal

If you would like a pledge form for BUY THE BASIN, call the Midland Chamber of Commerce, 683-3381.

DELIVERY

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

Often Asked ????? Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth.

Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have F/T jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly!

Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subsribers'papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or a family member to substitute a for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW! $100.00 deposit.
