In the wake of Odessa's hydrogen sulfide leak earlier this month, safety equipment and emergency breathing apparatus are among the most popular exhibits at the 1986 Permian Basin Oil Show at the Ector County Coliseum complex in Odessa.

Eighteen suspects arrested in attack at Wailing Wall

JERUSALEM (AP) — In a massive dragnet, police today arrested 18 suspects, all Arabs, in and around Jerusalem's Old City after guerrillas tossed grenades into a crowd near the Wailing Wall, killing one man and wounding 69.

Israel Radio earlier reported that 29 people had been detained for questioning in Wednesday's attack, but police said 11 of them were released.

The PLO and another Palestinian organization claimed responsibility for the assault, and both indicated more could follow.

Firemen hosed blood from the pavement and cleared debris from the scene early today.

"There was a huge explosion," one wounded soldier told Israel Radio. "Shrapnel flew all over the place. People were stricken with fear."

One of the wounded was in serious condition, the radio said. Twenty-nine of the injured were reported released from hospitals overnight.

The arrests were made during intensive searches that continued throughout the day in the mainly Palestinian Old City and the nearby village of Silwan. Bridges across the Jordan River from the occupied West Bank to Jordan were closed.

Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization claimed responsibility for the attack in a statement distributed by the Cairo, Egypt office of the organization's WAFA news agency.

The statement called the attack a "heroic operation," and said it "serves to underline a decision by the Palestinian leadership at a recent meeting to escalate the armed struggle..." It did not say when or where the decision was made.

Another guerrilla group, the pro-Moscow Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, headed by Naif Hawatmeh, also claimed credit for the attack and dismissed the PLO claim as "pure lies."

"It is only one out of a number of operations the DFLP command decided to carry out in retaliation for the assassination on June 9, 1986, in Athens, Greece of Col. Khaled Nazzal, secretary of the DFLP central committee," the Damascus, Syria-based group said in a statement.

Security officials said at least two guerrillas threw two or three grenades, then escaped. The officials, who commented on condition of anonymity, said the attackers must have known the area well.

"It was just unfortunately a relatively easy target," Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said on Israel Radio.

Rabin linked the attack to Israel's recent appointment of moderate Palestinian mayors to the West Bank cities of Hebron, Ramallah and El Bireh.

He said the PLO views the appointments as attempts to encourage an accommodation between Palestinians and the Jewish state, an idea that is anathema to the PLO.

The assault, the worst terrorist violence in Jerusalem since a Dec. 6, 1983 grenade attack left six dead and 44 wounded, came during the three weeks of Jewish observances begun by the High Holy Days of Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur.

The grenades went off near the Dung Gate, one of eight entrances into the predominantly Palestinian walled Old City that Israel captured from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war.

"I thought it was a bad nightmare and I hit the floor," said 10-year-old Daniela Israel, who was sitting in her family's car when the blasts occured. Her father Yaakov suffered shrapnel wounds in his back.

The grenades were hurled at a group of about 300 new recruits of an elite army infantry force and their families, after a swearing-in ceremony at the Wailing Wall, the last remnant of the biblical Jewish Temple that was largely destroyed in A.D. 70.

Oil show called 'most important ever'

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

"The most important show we've ever had," is how 1986 Permian Basin Oil Show president T.L. (Woody) Gregory described this year's edition of the largest exhibition of inland oil equipment.

From the outward appearances of the 27th biennial version which kicked off Wednesday, one could scarcely tell that the petroleum industry is in the midst of one of its worst slumps ever.

A record number of exhibitors, 594, launched the four-day look into the future of the petroleum industry. Show officials are optimistic that on the strength of the first day crowd, that this year's show could break an all-time attendance mark.

Gregory says pre-registration of oil industry personnel in 10 cities from Hobbs to Abilene has been up to the pace of the 1984 show, when more than 100,000 visitors to the show were registered.

Long-time exhibitors said Wednesday that the attendance was typical of opening day crowds, and the show's executive vice president, Jay Alvey, said it would be late this afternoon before show officials could accurately estimate the actual number of industry visitors greeted by the show.

Gregory says that this year's number of no-shows, who pay for exhibit space but fail to arrive for the show, was no higher than in past shows, with fewer than a dozen booths without displays.

Consolidation and sizing down of booths by exhibitors from past shows has provided opportunities for companies like Belco Manufacturing Co. which have been left on the waiting list during past shows.

Belco, a fiberglass tank manufacturing company based in Belton, Texas, is taking advantage of available space to display its scale model tank battery and make important business contacts for coming months.

Greater availability of space has also invited participation from larger numbers of small businesses which are not fully dependent on the oil industry, but to whom oil businesses could represent a significant additional market.

China delegation to tour oil show, El Paso Products, UTPB

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Midland's sister city delegation is spending the day in Odessa today.

The delegation's day began at the Buzz Hurt ranch north of the city with a chuckwagon breakfast and a cutting horse demonstration. The remainder of the day will be taken up by a nearly five hour tour of the Oil Show, followed by an afternoon tour of El Paso Products, the city's sewage treatment facility and a visit to the Uniiversity of Texas of the Permian Basin campus.

The seven-member Dongying group, headed by Mayor Tang Shenghai, will have an hour to rest after the UTPB tour before attending a wine and cheese reception, featuring Texas wines. They will then be guests of honor tonight at a dinner hosted by UTPB.

Chinese delegation addresses local businessmen on dealing with China

— 1C

Wednesday's activities were highlighted by an oil and gas forum in the Health Science lecture hall at Midland College that drew about 20 local oil industry representatives interested in doing business with China.

The questions asked and responses given indicated, for the most part, trade opportunities that may evolve from the Dongying/Midland sister city relationship will offer "no short-term fix" for the current economic problems of local business people involved in the oil industry.

This was evidenced by an explanation by Madam Xiao Ling, assistant director of the China National Offshore Oil Co. (NOSOC) based in Houston's consulate office. She advised those interested in doing business with China to learn the culture and study her country's business structures, and perhaps acquaint themselves with the history of China.

Madam Xiao noted that for many years China was a closed country but that it is moving slowly in establishing relationships with other countries and that these relationships will be built on friendship and mutual trust, a process that will require time to nurture.

Hasenfus identifies man responsible for 1976 jet bombing

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The government claims a man identified by a captured American as a CIA employee who coordinated rebel supply flights is responsible for the 1976 bombing of a Cuban airliner that killed 73 people.

Deputy Interior Minister Luis Carrion Cruz, at a news conference Wednesday at the Managua presidential offices, said pictures of the man once jailed in the airliner bombing were identified last week by captured American Eugene Hasenfus.

Shown the photos of Luis Posada, Hasenfus identified the man as "a person that he understands is Ramon Medina," Carrion said, but refused to reveal his other sources that caused the government to conclude that Medina's real identity is Posada.

Carrion said Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., told the Nicaraguan secret police that "Ramon Medina is really Luis Posada Carriles, responsible for the blowing up of a Cubana de Aviacion" plane on a commercial flight from Venezuela to Cuba.

The plane blew up shortly after takeoff from a stopover in Barbados, killing all 73 on board.

Most of the passengers were Cuban athletes returning from a fencing tournament in Caracas, Venezuela.

Hasenfus, captured after Sandinista troops in southern Nicaragua shot down a rebel supply flight Oct. 5, said that Medina and another Cuban-American, Max Gomez, worked for the CIA and coordinated rebel arms supply flights from Ilopango, El Salvador's military airport.

Asked for comment about the report, Jake Gillespie, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in El Salvador, said: "I know nothing about it."

President Reagan and other U.S. officials have denied government involvement in the Contra rebel supply flights, which would violate congressional restrictions on aid to the groups fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

Posada was jailed for eight years in Venezuela for the 1976 bombing, but escaped under mysterious circumstances last year and disappeared.

"Later, we learned that Luis Posada was in El Salvador using the pseudonym of Ramon Medina," Carrion said, adding that Posada is "not only a long-term criminal terrorist but is also a long-term CIA agent."

Hasenfus told Nicaraguan authorities that Medina liked to brag about being a personal friend of Vice President George Bush, Carrion said.

Rich and famous to attend benefit

DALLAS (AP) — Planeloads of movie stars, government leaders and European royalty are expected in Dallas for a four-day festival, beginning today, on behalf of the late Princess Grace Kelly's charity foundation.

Residents are practicing their manners and polishing their city in preparation for the Princess Grace Foundation Awards Gala, a benefit designed to aid young performing artists.

The staff of the Loews Anatole Hotel, the festival headquarters hotel, has been preparing for the event for 18 months. The 1,600 hotel workers attended workshops to learn such things as how to pronounce the name of His Serene Highness Prince Rainier III (it's Ren-yay) and how to coordinate the arrival of 500 guests arriving at the airport on 250 separate flights.

About 120 waiters, wine servers and bartenders went through intensive training to prepare for a $1,500-per-plate dinner on Saturday night.

The servers, said Anatole manager Randy Gantenbein, all "had to become certified to work the party."

The hotel also has given special training to 30 room service waiters, 50 housekeepers, 40 valet parkers, 15 bellmen, three seamstresses and 40 security people who will cater to the needs of the famous guests.

Expected guests include the royal family of Monaco, Prince Rainier, Prince Albert and Princesses Stephanie and Caroline; singer Frank Sinatra; and film stars Cary Grant, Joan Collins, Gregory Peck, Robert Wagner, Stefanie Powers and Brooke Shields. From the government will be Navy Secretary John Lehman Jr.

About 400 reporters from the U.S., Europe and South America, writing in a variety of languages, will cover the events they are permitted to attend. Only an official photographer will be allowed inside for the Saturday dinner — and an army of security personnel are trained to keep out gate crashers.

In addition to the dinner, the guests invited to the four-day weekend will be treated to a rodeo, a cocktail party, another dinner, a fashion show, and a horse show. There also will be tours of Dallas and of Neiman-Marcus department store.

Officials expect the event to raise about $750,000 for the foundation endowment.

OPEC oil ministers seem to be near tentative agreement

GENEVA, Switzerland (NYT) — OPEC oil ministers, emerging from their 10th day of talks, appeared Wednesday to be edging toward a tentative agreement on reapportioning their nations' production quotas to support oil prices.

The 13 ministers met several hours Wednesday evening. James Audu, the spokesman for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said they had discussed "quotas and parameters," referring to individual production ceilings and the rules the ministers are seeking to define for setting them.

Sources close to the delegations said the ministers appeared to be considering putting new quotas into effect Jan. 1 and raising OPEC's overall output ceiling to about 17.5 million barrels a day. The present ceiling is 14.8 million barrels for 12 members, Iraq being excluded. Its production is estimated at 1.8 million barrels a day.

Reagan to call for special arms meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, saying it has a strong diplomatic signal from Moscow, is about to call for a special meeting of U.S. and Soviet negotiators to try to nail down an agreement to reduce nuclear missile warheads in Europe to 100 on each side.

The Geneva session, which an administration official said may be held as early as Friday, will test whether Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's attempt to sidetrack the U.S. "Star Wars" program in Iceland will carry over to the negotiating table.

Both superpowers indicated Wednesday they were ready to build on the Reykjavik summit and move toward an agreement sharply reducing U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons in Europe.

While President Reagan declared in a Baltimore speech, "Let's not look back and place blame," U.S. arms specialists worked on a package of proposals for Max Kampelman, the chief U.S. negotiator, to present to Viktor Karpov, head of the Soviet delegation in Geneva.

Either side can request a special session in the Swiss city and it is customarily granted.

The main U.S. objective will be to formalize Gorbachev's apparent acceptance in Iceland of Reagan's proposal that Soviet intermediate-range warheads in Asia by reduced to 100 from the current level of 513.

The U.S. official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said the Soviets had indicated through diplomatic channels they were ready to separate the missiles issue from their demand at the summit that Reagan constrain the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative.

"We're going ahead," the official said.

Confirmation of the Soviet signal appeared to come from Bonn, West Germany, where Karpov said his government was ready to talk about removing medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe without linking the issue to Star Wars.

"We are ready to discuss and solve the question separately if there is willingness on the part of the United States," the Soviet negotiator said.

But there was a conflicting signal from Moscow. Argentine President Raul Alfonsin, after meeting with Gorbachev on Wednesday, quoted the Soviet leader as saying the proposals were not divisible. That would include Gorbachev's demand about Star Wars.

The Soviet warheads in Asia, targeted on China, Japan and other countries, were considered the last major roadblock to a Euromissile treaty.

The agreement would impose a ceiling of 100 U.S. and Soviet warheads on the continent. An additional 100 U.S. warheads would be held in reserve at home to match the Soviets' Asian arsenal.

The result would be a sharp weapons reduction, possibly an easing of East-West tensions, and the first nuclear arms control pact in nearly six years of Reagan's presidency.

There now are 268 U.S. warheads in West Germany, Britain, Italy and Belgium, targeted on Soviet territory, and 810 Soviet warheads aimed at Western Europe.

In other post-summit developments Wednesday:

— The State Department questioned the sincerity of a Soviet decision to withdraw six regiments from Afghanistan. New arms were shipped in recently, and four of the regiments were not in combat. If all of them left, there still would be more than 110,000 Soviet troops in the country, spokesman Pete Martinez said.

— The last of 25 Soviet diplomats expelled from the United States under a broad accusation of spying have left the country, the State Department announced. A U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that among the final five to depart were Valery Savchenko, said to be the KGB station chief in New York, and Vladislav Skvortsov, said to be the New York chief of the GRU, Soviet military intelligence.

— Soviet sources confirmed that Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze will meet in Vienna early next month with Secretary of State George Shultz. They will be among 35 ministers attending a review of the 1975 Helsinki agreement, which was designed to ease East-West tensions. Like the Geneva talks, the session provides an opportunity to pick up the pieces after Iceland.

Reagan, in his Baltimore speech, welcomed a promise by Gorbachev not to abandon negotiations despite the stalemate in Iceland over Star Wars and repeated his proposal for the elimination of all ballistic missiles over a 10-year period.

"Let's look forward and seek agreements," the president said. "Let's not look back and place blame. I repeat my offer to Mr. Gorbachev: Our proposals are serious, they remain on the table and we continue to be prepared for a summit."

But Igor Bulay, press counselor at the Soviet Embassy, said his government wanted to be certain of "concrete results" before setting a date for Gorbachev to come here for a third summit with Reagan.

A Soviet editor, appearing with Bulay at a news conference, said "last-minute intransigence" by Reagan over the Strategic Defense Initiative deprived the world of an agreement to reduce strategic nuclear weapons by 50 percent.

"The results of Reykjavik undermined the hopes and aspirations of people around the world," said Giorgi Fediyashin, editor of Soviet Life, an English-language magazine circulated in the United States.

Similarly, Spurgeon Keeny, executive director of the private Arms Control Association, said, "We have lost an immediate opportunity for a major breakthrough in arms control."

Reagan and Gorbachev had blamed each other Tuesday for the summit stalemate over Star Wars but offered reassurances of their determination to reverse the nuclear arms race at the bargaining table or at a future summit.

CHINESE

Dick Dunbar, chairmen of the Midland chamber's Sister City Relationship Committee, told those attending the forum that meetings are being planned at regular intervals to acquaint local business people with processes that need to be followed to establish business and personal relationships in China.

Mayor Tang and members of his delegation particularly interested in the operational aspects of municipal government and the infrastructure it oversees spent most of Wednesday afternoon with Mayor Carroll Thomas, City Manager Jim Brown and several department heads. Thomas briefly explained the election process and the role he and council members exercise in the management of municipal affairs.

Brown, explaining that he is hired by and functions at the pleasure of the council, said it was his responsibility to assure that council mandates are carried out and oversee ongoing operations of city government.

Tang and delegation members were briefed on the purpose of the city's master plan by Richard Hennessy and on the public works infrastructure by Fred Baker, director of public works. Baker explained that many of the city's public services, such as water and sewer service, are supported by user fees, while funds for street construction and maintenance come from property taxes.

Doug Henson, head of development for the Scharbauer family, explained the role of private land developers and the process they are required to follow in developing tracts of land. Plans of developers, including dedication of land for street, water and sewer systems that will ultimately be maintained by the city, must have city approval before they can be implemented, he said.

The briefing on municipal infrastructure ended with a tour of the city's effluent disposal and irrigation system with director John Lowe explaining how the process functioned.

Wei Zhongwu, director of the Dongying Foreign Affairs Office, described the briefing and tour as very beneficial.

He said that Donguing, a city of about 1.4 million people that is about two years old, has no such facilities as the effluent treatment and irrigation system, but they are planned for the future.

Wei said that was part of the purpose of the trip to Midland, to see and understand various systems needed in his country and decide which model to follow. However, because of the technical nature of such things as the treatment plant, he said, it may be necessary to send some of their experts to study the system and accumulate data before a decision on what type of system would best function in the Dongying area.

The City of Dongying was established on its current site, at the mouth of the Yellow River, about two years ago. Preparations are underway to construct an entirely new city some 15 miles from the current site.

Wednesday ended with an evening of entertainment at the Midland College Allison Fine Arts Center, with performances by Ballet Midland, the Thouvenel String Quartet and the MC Chorale.

More than 250 people, including Dongying delegation members, joined by Consul General Ni Yaoli and his wife, attended the performance and the reception that followed.

Israeli planes raid guerrilla bases

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes today attacked suspected Palestinian guerrilla bases near Sidon in south Lebanon, police said, a day after a grenade attack killed one Israeli and wounded 69 others in Jerusalem.

Sidon's Hammoud Hospital said at least three civilians were wounded.

Four jets attacked shortly before 3:50 p.m. (9:50 a.m EDT), flying in from the Mediterranean in three bombing and rocketing runs on Palestinian positions near the Mieh Mieh refugee camp. The camp is southeast of Sidon, a port city 25 miles south of Beirut.

Israeli pilots divebombed their targets and released balloons that deflected heat-seeking surface-to-air missiles. The raid lasted about 25 minutes.

Black smoke hung over the area as fire engines and ambulances, their silens wailing, raced to the scene.

It was Israel's 13th air strike in Lebanon this year. It came less than 24 hours after assailants tossed hand grenades at a group of Israeli army recruits and their relatives near Jerusalem's Wailing Wall.

Conflicting claims of responsibility for the grenade attack were issued in the name of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, Nayef Hawatmeh's Moscow-oriented Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, and a previously unknown group calling itself the Islamic Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

White subpoenaed in Lucas trial

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — Gov. Mark White said Wednesday he has been subpoenaed to testify in an El Paso murder trial involving Henry Lee Lucas, but has asked that the summons be quashed.

"I'm sure the court will quash the subpoena and I will not have to serve it out," said White during a re-election campaign stop in Grand Prairie.

Lucas faces trial on a charge of murder in the 1983 death of Librada Apodaca. A pretrial hearing on motions has been under way since Sept. 8 and White's testimony was sought in connection with a motion to exclude from trial evidence a confession given by Lucas.

Defense attorney Rod Ponton said White's testimony was sought "to find out if he (White) was covering up for the Texas Rangers."

Rangers investigated Lucas' contention that he killed as many as 600 people nationwide, and the officers concluded that he had killed 266. However, Lucas later recanted many of the confessions, including a statement he gave in the Apodaca killing. Lucas also contended that state police coaxed him into the confessions.

HASENFUS

But Carrion also said, "We did not find in the (downed) airplane any type of documents that directly tie Vice President Bush to the operation."

Published reports have said Bush's national security adviser Donald Gregg helped place Gomez at Ilopango and that Gomez told associates he reported to Bush in his role as head of the Contra air supply operation.

Bush has denied he directed the operation, but said he met Gomez three times and that "he's a patriot."

Gregg also denied directing Gomez.

Carrion said the Nicaraguan government learned through Hasenfus and other sources that one of Medina's jobs was to "take care of procedures to get documents in the United States Embassy, obviously for the American personnel in El Salvador."

Such cards for pilot William J. Cooper and co-pilot Wallace Blaine Sawyer Jr., both Americans and both killed in the crash of the supply plane, were displayed last week.

Carrion did not specify what he meant by American personnel, but was apparently referring to the 24 to 26 Americans in El Salvador that Hasenfus said worked for Corporate Air Services, a Miami-based company.

The Nicaraguan official said Hasenfus told interrogators that Corporate Air "was a front name for CIA."

However, Carrion said Hasenfus also is telling his interrogators that no one in El Salvador ever introduced himself as a CIA officer.

Carrion said Hasenfus "does not feel an obligation to conceal or retain any information he knows about this operation.

OIL

Firms such as temporary personnel agencies, apartment management firms, office machine and computer equipment retailers, and bottled water and ice machine companies are wedged in with the oilfield service and supply firms which have historically made up the bulk of the show's exhibitors.

"People who think the oil patch is dead, all they need to do is come out here to see what survivor spirit is all about," said one exhibitor.

"This is a much truer indication of the attitude of the oil industry than an FDIC auction."

Overcoming misconceptions about the viability of the future of the industry is one mission which makes the '86 show important, according to Gregory.

Consolidations and mergers among service and supply companies have created many new names on the booths of this year's show.

Face-to-face contact with company representatives is important for customer firms as well as to the suppliers who are dealing with new clients by virtue of large-scale early retirements and layoffs at producing companies, Gregory explains.

"The record participation level and great crowds on hand for the first day of the show demonstrates how much importance both the manufacturing and consuming sides of the industry place on the Permian Basin show."

ATTACK

Ruth Meckel, a spokeswoman at the Hadassah Hospital, identified the man who was killed in the blast as the father of a soldier.

Police said the wounded included 42 soldiers and 27 civilians, mostly relatives who came to watch the swearing-in ceremony.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres expressed "deep shock" over the attack, the national Itim news agency reported, and vowed that Israel would do all it could to capture those responsible.

Nigerian wins literature prize, American wins economics

James Buchanan

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Wole Soyinka of Nigeria, a forceful writer of novels and plays, today became the first African winner of the Nobel Prize for literature.

The Swedish Academy of Letters cited Soyinka, 52, as a writer "who in a wide cultural perspective and with poetic overtones fashions the drama of existence."

Earlier today, an American, James McGill Buchanan, won the 1986 Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science for his contributions to understanding economic and political decision-making.

Soyinka "has a large and richly varied literary production behind him and is in his prime as an author," the academy said in a prepared statement.

The author has long lived in exile in London. He was arrested in Nigeria in 1967 and accused of conspiring with anti-government rebels fighting for the independent state of Biafra. Soyinka was held prisoner for 22 months.

Last year, the prize was awarded to French writer Claude Simon, who in the 1950s helped pioneer an experimental "new novel" style that did away with such literary norms as plot and character development.

WORLD

Buchanan, 67, a professor at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va., was cited for his contributions in a field called new political economy, or "public choice," an area on the boundary of economic and political science studies.

In announcing the award, the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences said Buchanan's work filled a gap in traditional economics, which had lacked an independent theory of political decision-making.

"Buchanan's contribution is that he has transferred the concept of gain derived from mutual exchange between individuals to the realm of political decision-making," the academy said in a statement.

"The political process thus becomes a means of cooperation aimed at achieving reciprocal advantages," the statement said.

The Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science is not one of the original five Nobel Prizes, which were first awarded in 1901 as a legacy of Swedish industrialist Alfred Nobel, the inventor of dynamite.

The economics prize was established in 1968 by the Swedish National Bank as a memorial to Nobel. It has the same value as the other prizes — the equivalent of $290,000.

American theorist Franco Modigliani of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who is credited with pioneering theories of personal finance, won the economics award last year.

The prize in chemistry was awarded Wednesday to Dudley R. Herschbach, 54, of Harvard University; Yuan T. Lee, 49, of the University of California at Berkeley, and John C. Polanyi, 57, of the University of Toronto, for their study of how molecules interact to form new substances.

Also Wednesday, the physics prize went to three inventors of high-powered microscopes: Ernst Ruska of West Berlin, Gerd Binnig of Frankfurt, West Germany, and Heinrich Rohrer of Switzerland.

Salvadorans deny use of military base for storage, shipping of goods

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The government permitted U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebels to use a heavily guarded military base to store and ship supplies to their combatants, well informed sources say.

The sources, who agreed to be interviewed only on condition of anonymity, confirmed rumors and reports that long have circulated here of clandestine use of the Ilopango Military Base by the Nicaraguan Contras.

"We have no choice but to deny it," said a high ranking Salvadoran officer. "What can we say now?"

The officer and two other sources familiar with activities involving the Contra rebels said in recent interviews that the Salvadoran government gave its tacit approval to store supplies and send flights from Ilopango.

There was no response to repeated requests by The Associated Press for interviews with the head of the air force, Gen. Juan Rafael Bustillo.

The two other sources said the supply flights have been going on at least since 1983.

"Everyone has known this has been going on," one said.

The Salvadoran connection in delivering war materiel to the Contras has been discussed — and denied — for the past three years.

The issue surfaced again when an American was captured in Nicaragua after soldiers of the leftist Sandinista government shot down his plane Oct. 5.

The American, Eugene Hasenfus, told reporters he had taken part in 10 flights to drop weapons and ammunition to the rebels. He said four of them were from Aguacate air base in Honduras and six from Ilopango.

Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte and the military command denied Hasenfus' report. The U.S. government suggested that Hasenfus, who has been allowed to see an American consul for only 11 minutes since his capture, was coerced into implicating El Salvador and the U.S. government.

Hasenfus also reported that two Cuban-Americans he identified as CIA agents did most of the coordination of the rebel supply flights. President Reagan and other U.S. officials have denied any government role in the arms drops.

U.S. government involvement would violate congressional restrictions on aid to the rebels.

Duarte frequently charges that the Sandinistas ship arms and supplies to leftist rebels who have been fighting his U.S.-supported government for the past seven years.

Novelist adds spice to history with pinch of romance, smidgen of action

By MARY LOU FULTON

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Author Douglas C. Jones adds a pinch of romance and a smidgen of action to history. A historical novelist, Jones, 62, inserts fictional characters into a generally accurate portrayal of a period in history.

"History turns a lot of people off," he said. "Unfortunately, a lot of people had a bad experience in high school. But the average person on the street will read more when there's some romance and action and character development. Good historical novelists teach more history than historians do."

Jones is best known for his 1976 book, "The Court Martial of George Armstrong Custer," which hypothesized Custer survived the Battle of Little Big Horn. The book, his first historical novel, detailed a trial in which Custer, his fellow officers and subordinates testified about Custer's judgment. The novel was made into a Hallmark Hall of Fame television movie in 1977.

Since then, he has written about one book a year — works in the late 1970s focused on adventures of American Indians and later novels concentrated on 19th-century Arkansas families.

Some find fault with works that mix history and fiction, but Jones doesn't think he's deceiving anyone.

"If you're really interested after you read my book about Custer, then you've got to go to the library and read some real history on it," he said. Jones' roots are in the places and people he writes about. A native of the northwestern Arkansas town of Winslow near Fayetteville, he returned home to write after a career that took him from the Army to academia. This time, he says he's back for good.

He spent 27 years in the military, retiring in 1968 as a lieutenant colonel. Part of his tour of duty was spent as a Pentagon press officer, and during that time, the Army sent him to the University of Wisconsin to do graduate work in mass communications. He earned his master's degree in 1962, and was an instructor there from 1968 to 1974 in the School of Journalism and Mass Communications.

He says it's possible to teach basic writing structure, but not talent.

"If you could teach that kind of creativity we'd be up to our shoulders in Pablo Casals playing the cello," Jones says.

It was at UW that he wrote his first book, "The Treaty of Medicine Lodge," a non-fiction work on the council between the Southern Plains Indians and the U.S. Peace Commission at Medicine Lodge. That book convinced him that being a pure historian was not the path for him.

"When you're doing history, you have to spend a hell of a lot of time being sure of your facts. You spend years putting out a single book," he said. "If you do a historical novel, you get the big major stuff and for anything you're not sure of, you don't have to take off three months to go to London to find out.

"It's more attractive to me and a lot more fun," he said. "There's a great deal more satisfaction to me and a whole lot more money. People are more inclined to read them."

He now works out of his Fayetteville home in a wood-paneled room. The walls are decorated with his paintings and pencil drawings of American Indians. Jones has quit painting to devote all his time to writing.

The most advanced piece of machinery on Jones' desk is an electric typewriter, and he intends to keep it that way.

Special park constructed for transients

By LEN IWANSKI

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Transients who visit this Rocky Mountain town will find their own place in the sun: A vest-pocket park built just for them.

While drifters are a plague to many downtown Helena merchants, they are warmly welcomed at the private God's Love shelter, and they now have their own park next door that is nicer than many municipal counterparts.

Located on a half-acre lot on Helena's main street, the professionally landscaped park is surrounded by a wrought-iron fence and has a waterfall, a decorative fountain and a 16-foot-diameter gazebo with stained glass panels depicting scenes from the life of Christ.

Contursi Park was built at a cost of $125,000 by Wayne Miller, a wealthy wholesale coin dealer who established the God's Love shelter and is its chief financial backer. It was named after Miller's business partner, Steve Contursi, of Newport Beach, Calif.

"When we placed the park down here, we wanted something that would be a gesture of friendship to the merchants that are nearby," Miller said. "We felt that if we had a park here, it would draw the transients into our park and away from some of the other parks around town where they've been congregating for the last 30 or 40 years during the summer."

His shelter can lodge up to 29 men each night, and it feeds more than 300 people a day during the summer, in addition to providing health information and helping clients find jobs.

"I think it's wonderful to have a place for people like us," said Bob Connolly, who was staying at the shelter when the park was officially dedicated recently.

"Once you've been on the road so long, you can come in and find a place to relax and not get harassed. It really helps," said Connolly, 54, a migrant farm worker from St. Johns, Ariz., who was en route to Washington state for the pear and apple harvests.

Transients have been robbed, harassed and even stoned in some Helena city parks, according to Dewey Amberson, 46, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., another migrant farm worker staying at the shelter.

But the transients' park and shelter are not popular with downtown business people, who were unhappy about the shelter locating there two years ago and are skeptical the new park will improve the situation.

Typical are Gerry and Bev Du Bois, a couple in their mid-50s who have managed the Imperial 400 Motor Inn across the street from the park and shelter for about a year.

"He has the right idea" in wanting to help transients, Bev Du Bois said about Miller, "but when you're trying to revitalize the downtown area, I don't think this is the right place to put it.

"If you were coming to the motel and you saw some of the people who stay there (at the shelter), would you maybe change your mind about staying here?" she asked.

Next door to the motel, at Dundee's Imperial Barber and Styling, owner Dundee Warden, 24, also thinks the shelter is doing good work, but in the wrong place.

But Miller said any place the shelter went would have caused some negative impact on its neighbors, and he hoped the park would help reduce the impact.

Although the new vest-pocket park is supposed to draw transients away from city parks, nearby merchants say it isn't getting much use. But the director of the God's Love shelter, Leigh McCarter, says the transients' park is being used.

"They use it in the evenings," she said. "Most of the men staying here are out of work and looking for jobs. They don't have time to sit around during the day."

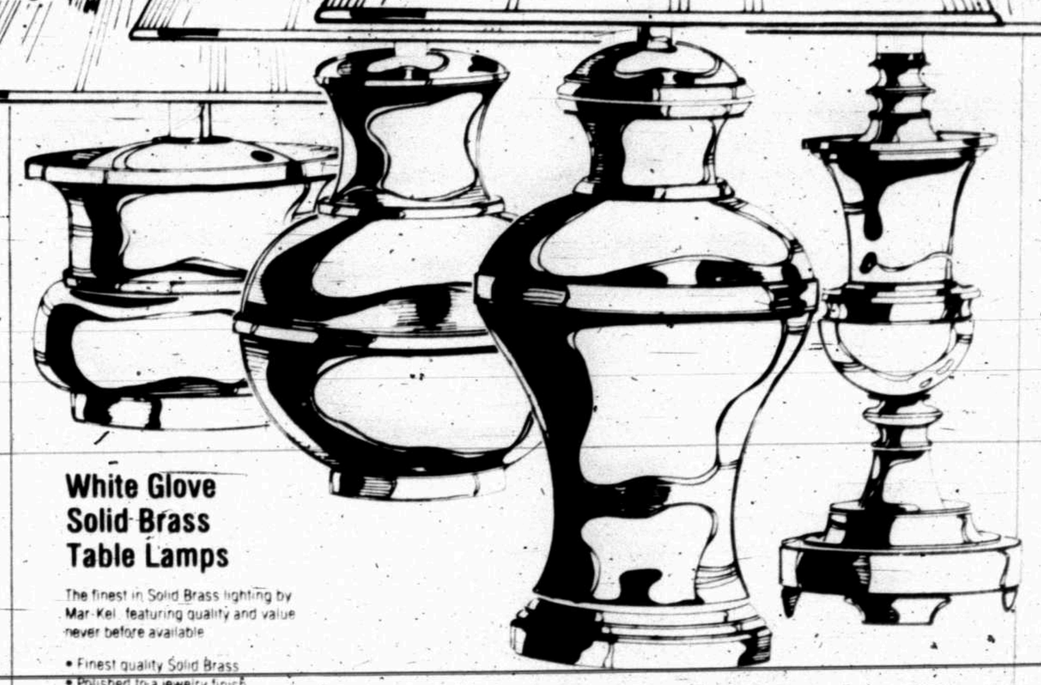

Staffers at God's Love shelter maintain — and nearby business people concede — that many of the vagrants the merchants complain about are not staying at the shelter, but rather are more-or-less permanent local residents who frequent the neighborhood.

Romantic France — now a nation troubled by terrorism

By MORT ROSENBLUM

PARIS (AP) — The baby carriages and the lovers in Paris parks have been joined by grim odd couples: Gendarmes in sober blue flak vests, clutching radios and submachine guns.

The scene typifies a nation troubled by a recent rash of terrorist bombs and by the cumulative effects of centuries of attempting to shape the rest of the world.

African colonies were freed, but new governments were designed to depend heavily on France for aid, advice, trade and defense. The Ivory Coast, Gabon and a dozen others still stand close by France.

Paris kept overseas provinces: French Polynesia and New Caledonia in the Pacific; Guadeloupe and Martinique in the Caribbean and French Guiana in South America; Reunion in the Indian Ocean, and St. Pierre-Miquelon off Newfoundland in Canada.

France gave up its mandate over Lebanon and Syria in 1945 but remained active in the Middle East ever since.

Today, problems are arising all over the map.

France's house-of-cards Middle East policy teeters precariously. And former colonies have produced legions of Arabs and Africans whose presence in France is increasingly resented. Militant New Caledonians want independence. There is ferment in the Caribbean.

Also, there are troubles at home. An unemployment rate of 10.7 percent and uncompetitive industry worsens self-doubt. Culture and the language, the nation's traditional Maginot Line, are battered by foreign onslaught.

For political scientists, the question is whether France will remain a major player on the world stage, a role it has held since Charlemagne.

But many of France's 55 million inhabitants worry less about the philosophical aspects than the more tangible effects.

Bombings by Lebanese terrorists in Paris killed 10 people over a 10-day period in September. They were followed by heavy security which worries many people as much as the terrorism itself.

A wide range of intellectuals, film stars and public figures signed a joint letter arguing, "The terrorists win if, by combating them, democracies cease to be themselves."

They added, "The logic of a state of war, a police state, of suspicion and informers breeds arbitrariness and comforts racist, xenophobic attitudes."

If Soviets link issues, U.S. arms negotiator to renege commitments

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Senior U.S. arms negotiator Max Kampelman today said that if the Kremlin tries to link cuts in medium-range missiles to curbs on "Star Wars," it would renege on earlier commitments to the West.

But Kampelman also said he expected "uncertainty and ambiguity" from the Soviets "until they get their act together" and decide whether they want to link the two issues.

Kampelman made his remarks at a breakfast meeting with reporters in Bonn before meetings with West German officials in which he was to brief them on the results of the weekend superpower meeting in Reykjavik, Iceland.

A day earlier, the chief Soviet arms negotiator, Viktor Karpov, was in Bonn to explain the Soviet side.

Kampelman, who heads the U.S. negotiating team in Geneva, denied that he was fighting a public relations battle with Karpov.

Kampelman said the United States is ready to "build on what was done at Reykjavik" by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"We're waiting to see if the Soviets are serious. If they are serious, we can proceed to an agreement" in Geneva on the medium-range missiles issue, Kampelman said.

Disagreement over Star Wars, the program of research into space-based defense which is formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, was blamed for the failure to reach arms control agreements at Reykjavik.

The talks collapsed when Reagan balked at Gorbachev's stipulation that Star Wars testing and research be kept to the laboratory for the next 10 years.

Kampelman said Gorbachev stated publicly at least once before that progress on the issue of the superpowers' medium-range missiles in Europe was not dependent on the Star Wars disagreement.

"As far as the U.S. is concerned, we would consider a decision not to go forward on INF (medium-range missiles) a significant walking-back of commitments made to us in Geneva, and to us by letter, and I believe also to the West German government by letter," he said. "It would be a bad sign."

Gorbachev was quoted Wednesday as telling visiting Argentine President Raul Alfonsin in Moscow that proposals he made at the Reykjavik meeting formed a package that could not be split up.

Sport Aid raises $45.7 million for African famine

LONDON (AP) — Sport Aid raised the equivalent of $45.7 million for famine relief in Africa and the United Nations Children's Fund — a "phenomenal" sum, organizer Bob Geldof said.

Geldof said Wednesday that he had expected only about $7 million from the May 25 Sport Aid "Save the World" run in 277 of the world's cities.

The Irish pop singer announced the actual figure when he received a check for nearly $1.8 million raised by the Young Men's Christian Association World Development Wing, Y Care International.

Geldof said the YMCA check was an "extraordinary contribution," that could, for example, pay for 500 wells to be dug in Sudan, each serving some 400 people.

Soviet tuna boats banned

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A newspaper reported today that Kiribati, the first South Pacific nation to grant fishing rights to the Soviet Union, has told the Soviets their tuna boats can no longer fish in its waters.

The Age, published in Melbourne, quoted a Kiribati government spokesman as saying fishing rights were withdrawn because a one-year agreement had expired and negotiations between the two countries for a new one had reached a deadlock.

In the first such agreement with a Pacific island nation, the Soviet Union paid $1.7 million for the right to fish in Kiribati's waters for one year.

The agreement drew sharp reaction from the United States and Australia, which expressed concern that it gave the Soviets a political toehold in the region at a time of an unprecedented buildup of the Soviet Pacific fleet.

Champagne harvest good

EPERNAY, France (AP) — The 1986 champagne harvest, held in "ideal climatic conditions," is expected to produce good quality wine but in lesser volume than orginally forecast, the industry said.

The Interprofessional Committee of Champagne Wines said Wednesday that the Chardonnay grapes should produce "wines with a good constitution." For Pinot Noir and Meunier grapes, "the quality varies according to the 'crus' (areas), from acceptable to very good," it said.

Senate to convince Reagan that immigration bill is 'good bill'

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moving swiftly to maintain momentum on a House-passed immigration bill, the chief Senate sponsor is working furiously to head off a filibuster and discourage a presidential veto.

Taking no chances after the landmark bill cleared the House on Wednesday by a 238-173 vote, Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., scheduled a White House meeting today to try to convince President Reagan the measure is "a damn good bill of goods."

And he began "a spirited education effort" with senators, including those he said are "intent upon killing the bill" when it reaches the Senate floor — probably today.

Several Senate conservatives have traditionally opposed immigration bills as being too expensive, and have criticized them as being too lenient because they would grant amnesty to millions of illegal aliens.

Written by a House-Senate conference, the immigration bill offers legalization to aliens who came to the United States illegally before 1982 but have established roots here since then.

To balance that program, the bill provides for fines and prison terms for employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers.

"The possibility still clearly exists for a delay, and even filibuster," said a worried Simpson.

But despite administration concerns about some portions of the bill, Simpson said he was optimistic about Reagan's support, because, "every time I go to that remarkable man, I've been able to move it (the bill) along."

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, branded the bill "very expensive" and said it could violate budget ceiling limitations.

The House delegation from Texas, which has a long border with Mexico, was a strong force against the bill, voting "no" by a 20-6 margin.

"Granting amnesty to 4 million illegal aliens to solve the immigration problem is like trying to solve the problem of illegal drugs in this country by legalizing cocaine," said Rep. Dick Armey, R-Texas.

None of the supporters who spoke in the House debate Wednesday expressed approval of the entire compromise bill, but most agreed with the comment of a prime author, Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif., "It isn't the Sistine Chapel, but it's not a bad paint job."

Voting for the bill were 161 Democrats and 77 Republicans. Opposed were 80 Democrats and 93 Republicans.

The Hispanic caucus was split, with five members voting yes and six no.

The bill includes a new protection for Hispanics who could face job discrimination because of the employer sanctions. Employment bias based on national origin or citizenship status would be prohibited, and a special counsel would be created in the Justice Department to enforce the protections.

In one of the many balancing acts of the bill, the civil rights language could be wiped out by Congress after three years if a General Accounting Office report found the provisions were unfair to employers. Likewise, employer sanctions could end at the same time, if found to cause widespread discrimination.

The bill would provide $4 billion over four years to reimburse state and local governments for providing benefits to newly legalized aliens, who would be barred from receiving federal assistance for five years.

That's the amount offered by President Reagan, but disliked by many lawmakers from states with large numbers of illegal aliens — who favor a full reimbursement.

Foreign agricultural workers harvesting non-perishable crops would be provided free legal services, on the condition that these services would be limited to wages, transportation, housing or other working conditions.

Hundreds of thousands of foreigners who harvest perishable fruits and vegetables, mostly in Western states, would be eligible to win status as legal residents under separate provisions from the general amnesty program.

National average beef prices dropped

DENVER (AP) — The national average price of five selected cuts of beef decreased during the past month, the National Cattlemen's Association said Wednesday.

The association surveys 19 cities each month for the prices of ground beef, round steak, sirloin steak, t-bone steak and chuck roast to determine price trends.

Don Butler, NCA president, said the average price of the five cuts on Oct. 9 was $2.39 a pound, compared with $2.49 on Sept. 11 and $2.31 on Oct. 10, 1985.

Wholesale beef prices did not show much change during the period between the two surveys, Butler said.

He said the retail average dropped significantly, apparently because of more special pricing at the time of the survey.

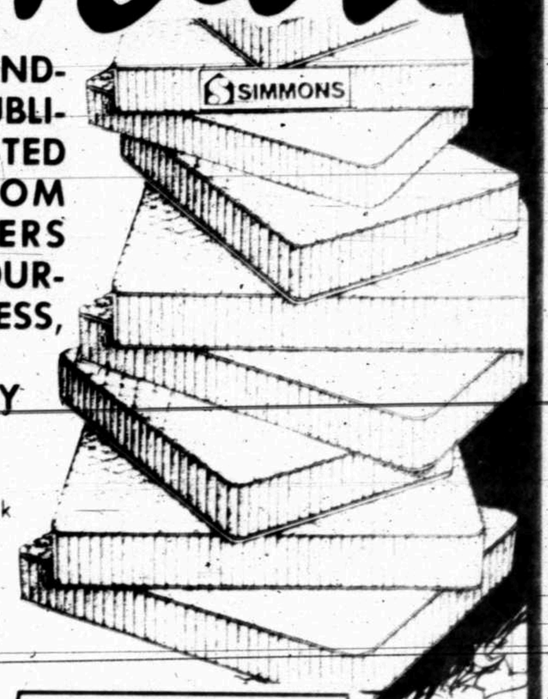

Decreases in the average prices of sirloin and t-bone steak were largely responsible for the overall price decrease, he said. The ground beef average decreased slightly and round steak and chuck roast averages rose.

Value of truth

Truth is a precious commodity. With it, individuals can make reasonable decisions. Without it, actions can lack reason. In those instances, the truth can be reshaped into a sword of destruction. Even freedom can be threatened.

That's why the news that the United States government recently carried out a "disinformation" campaign against Libya's Col. Moammar Gadhafi created such a stir in the media world. Disinformation? Isn't that what the Soviet Union employs to confuse and impede this government? Isn't that false information disseminated as pure fact?

Yes, it is and that's precisely what this government was doing when White House Spokesman Larry Speakes described a newspaper report about the U.S. and Libya being on a collision course as "unauthorized but highly authoritative." Speakes, it should be pointed out, knows that's just the kind of disavowment to get journalists interested.

It did, but as reporters — notably the Washington Post's Bob Woodward — pursued the "story," they learned that not everything was falling into place as indicated by government officials.

Pinned down, the administration acknowledged its policy was to mislead Gadhafi. In fact, Secretary of State George Shultz said, "Frankly, I don't have any problems with a little psychological warfare against Gadhafi."

We're not naive. This surely isn't the first time this has happened; it probably won't be the last time it's attempted. The news media, while recognizing the necessity for this government to be involved in such pursuits as psychological warfare, also recognizes the value of truth in a free society. We understand the need to fight-fire-with-fire in dealings with adversarial nations, but the media cannot and will not be a willing party to "disinformation" campaigns. That is the role of newspapers like Pravda in the Soviet Union. The public soon loses its regard for such publications.

This was a good refresher course for the Reagan administration and the media. The administration should deal as it must with other nations; the media will doggedly attempt to learn and publish or broadcast the truth as best it can determine it. That's the way it has always been. That's the way it must remain if a society is to remain educated and free.

Another View:

No veto required

Tax reform aside, passage of a new Superfund law may be the real tour de force of the 99th Congress. The final version of this monumental piece of health and environmental legislation cleared Congress by a combined House and Senate vote of 474-35 (88-8 in the Republican-controlled Senate). Yet, the administration threatens to veto the bill because it frowns on one segment of the measure's complex financing mechanism.

The existing Superfund program to clean up the nation's toxic waste dumps has limped along on emergency appropriations for a year since the original financing provisions expired. Lee M. Thomas, Environmental Protection Agency chief, has been pleading with Congress to complete action on a new law so that the program would not become a total shambles.

Over at the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes said, "We'd be satisfied if they continued the present method of funding of Superfund, but a (new) tax won't do at all." The problem is that the oil and chemical industries paid the bulk of the $1.6 billion cost for the first phase of the program, during which only a handful of toxic dump sites were purged. It is only fair now that the burden be spread more widely, particularly since the price tag for the next five years is nearly $9 billion.

The oil and chemical industries still would pay more than $4 billion of the reauthorized program. Another $1.25 billion would come out of general revenues. What the administration objects to is a broad-based levy on large corporations amounting to $2.5 billion, claiming that it is a new tax. It is not entirely new, however, since the tax would be based on the alternative minimum income tax established by the tax reform act of 1986. Virtually every industry in America has contributed to the toxic waste legacy in some fashion. It is only equitable that they share in financing the solution.

Superfund is not an expendable environmental program. It is a critical effort to cope with a massive societal problem that threatens the health and well-being of Americans everywhere. One of the projects that would be delayed without the new legislation is the cleanup of a 120,000-acre ground-water basin that provides drinking water for half a million Los Angeles-area residents.

Congress is so committed to this effort that 81 senators have written to President Reagan in impassioned terms urging him to overcome his tax objections and sign the bill into law. "A mother whose child has been poisoned by toxic waste in the water will not ask whether a broad-base tax mechanism was used to fund Superfund," the letter said. Sen. Alan K. Simpson of Wyoming, the No. 2 GOP leader in the Senate, said a presidential veto would be "a great misreading of this body" and the mood of the public.

While our 20th century economy and lifestyle were driven to new heights by the miracles of technology, we tended to tuck the nasty byproducts and dregs under the nearest rocks. Now, we must pay the price. The new Superfund legislation is the way to do it. The president should sign it at the earliest opportunity.

GEORGE F. WILL

Reagan's finest hour was saying 'no'

WASHINGTON — It was the President's finest hour.

In an odd place, at an inauspicious moment, he gave a watching world the most important moment of presidential decisiveness since President Truman picked up Stalin's gauntlet and committed the nation to the policy of containment. And he gave the nation a clinic in leadership: With his mind on future generations, not the next election, he spurned the short-term applause that comes automatically to any President who signs any arms-control agreement.

George F. Will

Iceland, where surveys reveal that 55 percent of the population believe in elves, was a suitable place for a summit clamored for by people who believe in arms control as the key to taming the Soviet Union. The Iceland summit was the most successful U.S. summit. Although the air is thick with lamentations from arms-control enthusiasts, the President may almost have made the arms-control "process" palatable to people who are skeptical about its utility and even its safety.

He did this by demonstrating something that there were abundant reasons for doubting: He demonstrated that a President can go to a summit and dare to return without an agreement.

Summitry is a part of the arms-control "process." Summits have come to be regarded as events where arms-control agreements are consummated. A dangerous asymmetry in this process is that Western public opinion is the only public opinion that matters in this process, and Western publics have never met an arms-control agreement they did not like. (Never mind that they have never met an arms-control agreement that seriously controlled arms.)

It may be the case that, by venturing to Iceland for that fast-food summit, the President strode into what the Soviet side fancied was a clever trap — a heads-we-win, tails-you-lose situation. They would either kill the Strategic Defense Initiative or vilify it as the only impediment to arms reductions so comprehensive as to constitute the termination of the Cold War.

However, it is almost certainly wrong to think, as many even in the administration may think, that important agreements really were within reach regarding intermediate-range and strategic missiles. It is probable that the Soviet offers and expressions of interest were designed in large measure to contribute to the orchestrated euphoria, the collapse of which was counted on to deepen resentment of SDI. And if the President had, to the Soviets' surprise, killed SDI to get Soviet agreement to cuts, it is probable that many of the cuts would have been vitiated in years of negotiations about details, in cheating, and in deployments of new weapons not covered by any Iceland agreements.

One reason for believing that the Iceland outcome was the one the Soviet side aimed for is that their crucial demand was an act of brazen overreaching. They sought a revision of the ABM treaty — a "strengthening" of the treaty that would have suffocated SDI by confining research to the laboratory. The Soviets could not seriously have expected the President to eviscerate his presidency by suddenly scrapping a program that he has advocated with the most intense moral and prudential arguments.

But, then, brazenness is not in short supply in the Soviet regime that speaks of "strengthening" an ABM teaty it is flagrantly violating, a regime that stigmatizes SDI as highly imprudent and immoral, yet has spent far more on defensive systems than has the United States.

Certainly the Iceland outcome will enable Gorbachev to fan the flames of anti-Americanism among the European left. But it is equally certain that no President can make policy hostage to the hopeless and squalid project of trying to dampen Europe's appeasement reflex.

In the networks' rush to judgment on Iceland, the editorializing was as clear as it was unconscious. The outcome was called a "collapse" of the summit, a collapse that dashed hopes of "progress" and knocked U.S.-Soviet relations "off the rails." The word "collapse" implies calamity; the word "progress" is defined exclusively in terms of the achievement of agreements. And what is one to make of the "rails" metaphor? What rails were the relationship on before Iceland?

"Collapse" implies disorder. The Iceland outcome was an orderly result of an orderly assessment. That is progress of the highest sort — progress toward realism.

Perhaps the Iceland outcome will confer the ancillary blessing of putting an end to the nonsense about the President and the First Lady being mesmerized by arms-control agreements as guarantors of his "place in history." Both he and she know that every President since the onset of the U.S.-Soviet arms-control process 17 years ago has achieved an arms-control agreement (counting, as one should, the Ford-Brezhnev agreement at Vladivostok). Mr. and Mrs. Reagan know that it is nonsense on stilts to say that arms-control agreements sealed for Nixon, Ford and Carter enviable "places in history."

The arms-control "process" has indeed now given this President the high place in history that was waiting for the first President who would show that it is possible to "just say no."

Soviet 'sleepers' could create havoc in West

WASHINGTON — An unknown number of Soviet "sleepers" have been planted in Western countries ready to wake up and go into action in the event of war. They are undercover agents whose sole function is to provide shelter and intelligence for the Spetsnaz — Soviet special forces — who would infiltrate these countries just prior to the outbreak of hostilities and create havoc by sabotage, kidnapping and assassination.

Jack Anderson

As Milton wrote of a less malignant situation, "They also serve who only stand and wait." A Soviet defector considered reliable by the CIA and the Pentagon estimates that there are at least 110 Soviet sleepers already in position in the West.

Even one sleeper could spell disaster, as a Defense Intelligence Agency official explained with this story about the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968:

"One (sleeper), a Czech captain, prepared plans for the KGB for the occupation of the Central Committee building and Prague Military Headquarters, including plans of the secret exits through the city sewer system," the DIA official related. "The same man then led a KGB assault detachment into the Central Committee building, disarmed the Czech guards and arrested the Czech leadership."

U.S. officials are reluctant to discuss the sensitive information they have gathered on the Soviet sleeper network. There has been only one official reference to it in a public document — an obscure Army Field Manual, 100-2-2, issued in July 1984. It explains how important prior infiltration of "target countries" is in Soviet offensive strategy. It says:

"Agent networks in the target country support Soviet unconventional warfare operations. The KGB and GRU (military intelligence) recruit agents in vital areas of the enemy's social structure — in political circles, in his intelligence services, at all levels of the military, within key industries, in a variety of academic institutions, and in the media — press, radio and television.

"Some of these agents actively engage in subversion, while others are sleepers, prepared to act on call. Agents are trained to operate as political agitators, intelligence collectors and saboteurs. The GRU recruits agents (including sleepers) in the vicinity of military targets — airports, missile bases, arsenals, communication centers, tank-dispersal centers and also on routes used for troop movements."

Occasionally, evidence of sleeper activity is discovered. A Soviet transmitter was unearthed in Wales, and others in sealed plastic bags have been dug up in Scandinavian countries.

The Spetsnaz infiltrators who contact Soviet sleepers for help would either be in civilian clothes or the uniform of the target country. Some Spetsnaz teams are 30 percent women, because they presumably draw less suspicion as saboteurs or assassins. One of their specific jobs is to dress attractively and hitch a ride with a hopeful truck driver. The would-be Lothario is then killed and the Spetsnaz team has a truck to use.

A secret Pentagon report describes the Spetsnaz wartime mission this way: "To operate to the full depth of the enemy's rear in an effort to locate and destroy nuclear weapons systems, disrupt command, control, communications and intelligence systems, and interfere with efforts to sustain (defense) forces. ... The greatest number of teams will be allocated against nuclear targets. Secondary or non-nuclear targets will be attacked simultaneously but with fewer teams."

"He's meeting in secret with his Wise Men."

"Wise Men?"

"Those who gave more than $5,000. The Wise Men are entitled to consult with the President twice a year on any topic vital to the security of Hollywood."

"It must be an honor to be a Wise Man."

"It's not the highest honor. Seven thousand dollars makes you a Royal Gerrymander. A Royal Gerrymander is entitled to be privately briefed by the CIA on any subject of his choice. You also get to wear a green blazer to a White House Rose Garden ceremony."

"That sounds like a very exclusive club."

"There is so much competition for political money that we have to come up with ways of making it all worthwhile. We have organizations for women as well as for men. Over there are the Mothers of a Noble America. You have to have given $10,000 to be a Mother."

"What do you get for it?"

"A chance to try on Nancy Reagan's wardrobe when she isn't there."

I said, "It seems that the key to attracting contributions is to give the donors a role in the political process."

"People won't come across unless they feel important. This doesn't mean that if you forget to donate to the party, you're automatically going to fail to get a Federal Judgeship for your son ... but it does mean that you are not worthy to be an insider."

"One of your people seems to be herding that group over there behind the stage."

"That's the Golden Egg and Clam Chowder Society. They all raised at least $25,000. Not only are the members entitled to play tennis on the White House courts, but they have first crack at any ambassadorships that might be floating around."

"Is that the top of the line for political donors?"

"No, we have an exclusive Imperial Breakfast Club for anyone who brings us more than $30,000 from a PAC."

"What are the privileges?"

"You get to have breakfast with George Bush five times a week."

"That doesn't sound like such a big deal."

"In his bathrobe?"

"I guess for some social climbers it could have meaning," I said.

"We also have the Sparrow Beeper Club for Fat Cats. Anyone who has raised $50,000 with his own family is issued a beeper which makes it possible for him to speak to any SAC bomber base in the United States."

I said, "I can see that your fund-raising has really become sophisticated."

"We're always trying to improve on our methods. It used to be if someone gave a donation, you sent him a thank-you note. Now if he raises $100,000 for the party, you hand him a red fez, a sword and arrange for him to play Scrabble with Caspar Weinberger."

MDA hails discovery of gene causing disease

NEW YORK (AP) — The Muscular Dystrophy Association is hailing the "historic discovery" of the gene responsible for the most common form of the disease, but says more research is needed before the finding leads to new treatments.

The isolation of the gene provides the first clues to the root cause of the incurable Duchenne muscular dystrophy, which afflicts 20,000 to 50,000 American boys, who are not expected to survive beyond their 20s.

The Muscular Dystrophy Association provided much of the financing for the research, which was published today in Nature, a British scientific journal.

"We're extremely encouraged and excited by this historic discovery," said Donald Wood, MDA associate director of research. "It's a very big step forward in our efforts to conquer this disease, but we still have a long way to go to develop treatments."

The finding was made by Louis Kunkel, Anthony Monaco and colleagues and Children's Hospital and Harvard Medical School in Boston.

They reported that they have isolated a segment of genetic material that makes up about 10 percent of the Duchenne muscular dystrophy gene, which can now be used to isolate the entire gene.

The discovery of the gene caps several years of unusual cooperation by scientists around the world.

Earlier this year, Kunkel published the results of a stunning collaboration in which 75 researchers from 20 laboratories worked together to help close in on the location of the gene.

The identification of the muscular dystrophy gene rested in part upon the chance discovery last year by Dr. Hans Ochs of Seattle and Uta Francke of Yale University of a boy with a severe genetic abnormality that left him with three hereditary diseases, including muscular dystrophy.

Studies of this unusual child revealed that he was lacking a small segment of his X chromosome. Kunkel was able to prove that the muscular dystrophy gene resided on that segment, and through a variety of clever and original technical tricks was able finally to identify the gene itself on that segment.

Many other unusual cases of muscular dystrophy had been studied earlier by Ronald Worton of the University of Toronto and other researchers to narrow down the location of the gene.

Kunkel said in a telephone interview Wednesday that the next critical step in the research will be to identify the protein encoded by the gene, a straightforward task that could be accomplished within a year.

Then, he said, "we can go back and look at patients, to see how their protein differs from normal, to understand the physiology of the disease."

When the physiology is understood, researchers might be able to devise ways to alter it — thus ameliorating or even curing the disease.

"It could be a long way off," Kunkel said. "What we don't want is for everybody to say, 'Now that the gene is cloned (identified), next year there will be a cure for muscular dystrophy.' This does not mean that. It means we can attempt to understand what's wrong, then maybe design rational treatment."

The researchers also found that the gene appears to serve as the blueprint for manufacture of a protein in muscle tissue. Duchenne muscular dystrophy is an inherited disease marked by gradual death of muscle tissue. It occurs when the protein is missing or altered.

Scientists had long presumed that the defective protein responsible for the disease was located in muscle tissue, but so little had been known about the ailment that scientists had been unable to prove that — until now.

Kunkel and his collaborators found that the gene had produced in muscle tissue a substance called messenger RNA, an intermediate step in the production of a protein by the gene.

Earlier work by Kunkel and others had made possible diagnosis of the disease and identification of female carriers in families with a history of the disease.

Scientists isolate first anti-cancer gene

BOSTON (AP) — Scientists have isolated the first anti-cancer gene, one that causes rare forms of eye and bone cancer when it is absent and could hold clues to other such genes that are the key to more common forms of cancer.

In recent years, researchers have identified several different genes that can cause cancer. But the newly discovered gene is the first that results in cancer only when it is missing or incomplete.

When babies are born without this gene, they face a high risk of rare forms of childhood cancer called retinoblastoma and oestosarcoma.

"These are not major diseases, but we think that the other major cancers, like some colon and breast and lung cancers, are caused because genes like this are lost," said Dr. Thaddeus P. Dryja of Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary.

Cancer genes are the subject of intense research in the quest to understand and control the disease. Experts believe there are two kinds of genes: Those that cause cancer by their presence and those that cause it by their absence. Both types are mutant or incomplete versions of ordinary genes that normally regulate cell growth.

One kind is called a dominant oncogene. Because of a mutation, this gene instructs a cell to grow too much and become cancerous. About two dozen dominant oncogenes have been isolated so far.

The other variety, called recessive oncogenes, until now have eluded isolation. Normally they limit or stop the growth of cells. When they work correctly, they prevent cancer. But when they are lost, cells proliferate wildly.

"If you keep those normal copies, you don't get the tumor," said Dryja. "It's only if you lose the normal copies that you get the tumor. So this gene somehow prevents cancer. We've never had a gene before like that."

Dryja said one of the next research goals will be to figure out what kind of signal this gene sends to stop cancer. That information may be helpful in deciphering the genetic origins of more common forms of the disease.

"It's likely that these recessive oncogenes are not just found in a couple of tumors but are likely to be an important mechanism of tumor formation in a number of cancers, both in adults and children and both leukemias and solid tumors," said Dr. Stephen H. Friend, a co-author of the study.

Friend, a researcher at Children's Hospital and the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research, noted that although many dominant oncogenes have been isolated, researchers have had difficulty finding activated versions of these genes in human tumors.

"We've known that the dominant oncogene is not the whole story," Friend said. "Now we get to see part of the other side of the story. It's too early to say that one is more important than the other. It's likely that both acting together may be causing some tumors."

Retinoblastoma and osteosarcoma each probably affect no more than 500 people in the United States each year. However, retinoblastoma is the most common kind of eye cancer in children.

Spending compromise gets Reagan endorsement

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the government technically out of business, Congress is working to quickly wrap up a half-trillion dollar, spending compromise that received a qualified endorsement from President Reagan.

The House on Wednesday night approved a $576 billion omnibus spending bill, covering virtually all aspects of government operations for fiscal 1987, by a vote of 235-172. It then added amendments, opposed by the White House, that the Republican-controlled Senate was expected to strip away when it takes up the measure today.

House passage came despite complaints the bill was too big and unwieldy. But weary lawmakers were eager to hit the campaign trail, and the spending package is the biggest hurdle in their way.

"I'm tired," said Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., reflecting the feelings of many members. "I want to go home and see my people."

Meanwhile, the government's spending authority, provided in three stopgap bills since the fiscal year began Oct. 1, expired at midnight. Any additional House-Senate-White House jousting on the extraneous provisions could require enactment of a fourth stopgap bill to prevent a government shutdown.

The House approved early today, 258-97, a 24-hour interim spending bill to carry the government through midnight tonight. House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., assured him of action early today.

It was not immediately known whether Reagan would sign such a measure. Government employees were to report to work and a decision would be made mid-day on whether they would be sent home, said Ed Dale, spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget.

The president endorsed the House-Senate compromise reached Wednesday even though $30 billion was cut from his original military spending request. He said "on balance, it is a measure that will provide funds at acceptable levels for the next fiscal year."

"I urge that members support the product of the (House-Senate) conference committee on the basis of essential and time sensitive national security concerns and other necessary programs of the federal government," the president wrote in a letter to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

The president called on Congress to "eliminate those policy provisions that remain of concern to me so that I can sign the bill."

White House Budget Director James C. Miller III said those provisions included a prohibition on contractors setting up shadow corporations to evade fair labor laws, and a requirement that offshore oil rigs use American-made equipment.

The compromise spending package contained about $290 billion for the Pentagon and defense projects in other agencies, and $13.4 billion for foreign aid, both levels below the president's request.

The military was receiving an increase of less than 2 percent, the smallest annual Pentagon spending increase of Reagan's presidency. However, the package included $100 million for the Contra rebels in Nicaragua, an appropriation dear to the White House.

The bill freezes or cuts slightly many domestic programs, but would not impose the deep cuts proposed by the president except in the case of revenue-sharing, a program being eliminated.

An extra $1.7 billion goes to pay for new programs to fight drug abuse and money to hire more air traffic controllers.

Guiness Book record holder dies of heart attack at 71

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Simon Argevitch, mentioned in the Guinness Book of World Records for whistling, humming, singing and doing bird calls while smoking 17 cigars at once, has died of a heart attack at age 71.

Argevitch, who died Sunday in a convalescent hospital, performed his record-book feat July 3, 1982, outside the Guinness Museum in San Francisco.

He raised Groucho Marx's eyebrows when he appeared on the "You Bet Your Life" TV show in the 1950s. He also appeared on Johnny Carson's "The Tonight Show" and stumped the panel on television's "I've Got a Secret."

When CBS celebrated 50 years of televised broadcasting, it included a film clip of Argevitch with his mouth full of cigars.

He would often add diversity to his act by stuffing a salad fork, a dinner fork, a knife and three types of spoons into his mouth.

Argevitch was a member of the International Association of Whistlers and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists.

NATION IN BRIEF

China gets port call from two guided-missile ships

WASHINGTON (AP) — A destroyer and two guided-missile ships will make a port call to mainland China in November, the first such visit by U.S. warships in 37 years, the Navy has announced.

The visit was to take place last year, but U.S. officials refused to confirm a Chinese assertion that the ships would not be carrying nuclear weapons. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has declined to say how the issue was resolved, beyond noting there has been no change in the U.S. policy of never confirming whether a U.S. ship is carrying nuclear arms.

The port call will involve the guided-missile cruiser Reeves and the destroyer Oldendorf, both based in Japan, and the guided-missile frigate Rentz based in San Diego, a spokesman said, adding that Adm. James A. Lyons Jr., commander of the Pacific Fleet, will travel aboard the Reeves for the visit.

The three vessels will visit the East China Sea port of Qingdao from Nov. 5 to Nov. 11.

Waterways eyed for clean

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved and sent to the Senate a compromise $18 billion anti-pollution bill to clean up the nation's waterways.

By a vote of 408-0, the lawmakers moved to extend and strengthen the Clean Water Act, providing three times more money through 1994 than the Reagan administration had proposed.

The legislation, which would build sewage and wastewater treatment facilities, does, however, end the federal grant program in 1994, a goal sought by the administration.

There has been no signal as to whether the spending level is high enough to tempt a presidential veto.

MIA question unresolved

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former top Pentagon official says the United States will never resolve the question of American soldiers missing after the Vietnam War until Hanoi cooperates and U.S. teams can search Indochinese jungles.

"It is Hanoi's reluctance to resolve this issue that keeps us from resolving this," said retired Lt. Gen. Eugene F. Tighe Jr., former director of the Defense Intelligence Agency.

Tighe headed a review panel which examined the classified evidence on whether American prisoners remained in Indochina. He repeated Wednesday the claim that there is "a strong possibility" prisoners are still there.

Company to fight NASA

WASHINGTON (AP) — A small Maryland company that wants to become a major commercial satellite launcher said Wednesday it will fight a NASA decision that would prevent the company from marketing the Delta rocket.

Transpace Carriers, Inc., was notified this week that NASA plans to deal directly with McDonnell Douglas, which builds the Delta, thus cutting out Transpace as a middleman.

"You can't unilaterally disenfranchise somebody and give it to someone who hasn't asked for it," said Rick Endres, an official of the Lanham, Md., company.

James C. Fletcher, NASA administrator, told Transpace chairman David W. Grimes in a letter that the space agency plans to enter into commercial agreements with rocket manufacturers directly.

Endres called that "a drop dead letter" and said the company will fight it by appealing to the administration, Congress and the courts.

Mild weather in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Permian Basin residents may expect mild weather over the next day or so, according to the forecast given by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. A high in the upper 70s and partly cloudy skies are predicted for Friday.

Tonight's forecast calls for a low in the upper 40s with partly cloudy skies. Southerly winds will prevail, tonight at five to 10 mph, increasing to 10-15 mph on Friday.

Wednesday's high was 20 degrees below the record high of 94 set for that date in 1962. Today's low was 47, seven degrees above the record low set for this date in 1967.

STATE

Clear skies prevailed over much of Texas today because of a high pressure ridge that stretched all the way from the Pacific Northwest to the coastal waters of the Lone Star State.

Southwesterly breezes in the 5 to 10 mph range brushed across the Panhandle and South Plains. Elsewhere, winds were variable and generally below 5 mph.

The National Weather Service said skies should be fair in North and South Texas and partly cloudy in West Texas through Friday.

NATION

Much of the nation was having fair weather today, although parts of Florida were rainy and a section of the Midwest got a mixture of rain and snow.

A large high pressure system over Oklahoma that lowered temperatures and cleared skies dominated the weather pattern.

Showers and thunderstorms were limited early today to the Florida Peninsula, while rain and snow showers dotted the western Great Lakes region.

Today's forecast called for rain scattered across central and southern Florida, the Great Lakes region and northern Maine and for most of the rest of the nation to have fair weather.

Astros drop another 'best ever' playoff

By DAVE ANDERSON
New York Times News Service

HOUSTON — Yes, the box scores will show that the Mets won the 1986 National League pennant in a six-game series. But what the Mets accomplished shouldn't be demeaned by being described simply as a six-game series. It deserves to be remembered as one composite box score, one 64-inning game. Especially the last 28 innings. Particularly the last 16 innings.

The Mets didn't just win, 4-2, in six games. They won, 21-17, in 64 innings.

"What a series — everybody out there was using that expression," Keith Hernandez was saying now, his black mustache wet with champagne. "Every time one of the Astros would get to first base, Doran, Walling, Ashby, they'd turn to me and say, 'What a series.' This was the best league series ever, better than when the Phillies beat the Astros in 1980. What a series.'

And what a 64-inning classic, which is what it really was.

When the Mets were created by Casey Stengel a quarter of a century ago, their original manager once asked, "Can't anybody here play this game?" But if he had watched these Mets win, he would have said, "Everybody here can play this game," Everybody.

That's why the Mets finally outlasted the Astros, 7-6, in 16 innings, the longest postseason game in baseball history. When it boiled down to a battle of the bullpens, the Mets had the better arms.

Jesse Orosco, weary but still throwing his slider, clinched the pennant by striking out Kevin Bass with the potential tying run on second after the Astros had rallied for two runs. At the mound, Gary Carter had told Orosco to throw nothing but sliders, saying: "I told Jesse I'd call for other pitches, but just keep shaking me off to confuse him," the Mets' catcher said. "Just throw the slider."

On a 3-2 count, Bass missed a slider for strike three. At last, after enduring the tension of Wednesday's 16 innings and Tuesday's 12 innings, the Mets were in the World Series that opens Saturday night in Shea Stadium.

But before Orosco held off the Astros for three innings, Roger McDowell had fired five shutout innings, the longest relief appearance of his career.

McDowell had arrived after the Mets' three-run ninth-inning rally stunned Bob Knepper, the Astros' starter. And as McDowell kept pitching, Mel Stottlemyre, the caretaker of the staff, who counts pitches more carefully than some people count their money, turned to Dave Johnson.

"How far are you going to go with Roger?" Stottlemyre asked the Mets' manager.

"We're taking all he's got," the manager said. "We're saving nothin' for tomorrow."

Even if the Mets had lost, they had a tomorrow. But it was a tomorrow they preferred to avoid. If the Astros won, Mike Scott, the right-hander with the suspected split-fingered sandpaper ball, would be pitching the decisive seventh game. Even with a 3-2 lead in games, the Mets felt that Wednesday's game was as much a "must" game for them as it was for the Astros.

"Our basic incentive was that we didn't want to face Scott again," Carter said. "But even when we were down 3-0, we kept thinking that we'd get something going."

At the ninth opened, Knepper appeared to be in command. Through eight innings, the 32-year-old lefthander had spun a two-hitter. But suddenly Lenny Dykstra lofted a triple over Billy Hatcher's head in right-center field.

"Lenny got the big hit to get us going," Carter said. "Just like he got the big hit with his homer that won Saturday's game. And when Lenny got his triple, you could see the guys saying to themselves, hey, we can hit this guy."

One strike away Angels fold in 7

By TOM VERDUCCI
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BOSTON — The champagne corks popped, the Prudential Building — a long fly ball from Fenway Park — lit up with a big numeral 1 and the city erupted in a carnival of horn-honking, backslapping, shouting and sighs of relief. It was a party Wednesday night, a celebration after the Red Sox disposed of the Angels, 8-1, to win the American League pennant and a World Series date with the Mets.

In retrospect, it was not an impromptu party. Dave Henderson had sent out the invitations Sunday when he did likewise with a pitch from Donnie Moore. He belted a two-out, two-strike homer in the ninth inning to save Boston from the brink of elimination. And what a brink's job it was.

John Havlicek stole the ball, Doug Flutie threw the Hail Mary in Miami and Henderson hit the homer. Boston sports history has already embraced Henderson in the company of its most revered moments.

THE RED Sox finished off the Angels with three runs in the second inning and four in the fourth, all of them unearned, off John Candelaria. With a less-than-dominating but an effective Roger Clemens holding the Angels scoreless through seven innings, and Calvin Schiraldi striking out five of the final six outs, Boston easily gained its first World Series berth in 11 years, beginning Saturday night at Shea Stadium. And they shut Angels manager Gene Mauch out of the World Series, stretching Mauch's frustration to 25 years.

"I've already begun thinking about it," Henderson said of the magnitude of his homer. "A lot of years down the road people are going to be replaying it over and over. It was a big home run. I don't know how big the word big means, but it was a big home run."

Don Baylor, a member of the 1982 Angels who blew a 2-0 lead to Milwaukee in a best-of-five championship series, grasped a bottle of champagne in each hand. Baylor, who had a single during Boston's three-run second inning, was still in his uniform, only missing his cap. He had waited 15 years for a ticket to the World Series and when it was in his hands, he was calm, less excited than after Game 5.

"I think Sunday was the sweetest win I've ever been involved in," Baylor said. "I don't think they ever recovered from that. I don't think so. When you're that close to winning and then have that happen ... I'll replay that in my mind over and over. Not this game."

Baylor was in the Boston dugout when Henderson batted. He said the picture he will remember will be of Mauch and Reggie Jackson. "They were in the dugout, arm-in-arm," Baylor said. Boston manager John McNamara said he will remember Jackson removing his cap and his glasses, awaiting an onrush of fans.

"People were hanging on the backstop," Baylor said. "I've never seen that in Anaheim and I played six years there."

MEANWHILE, clubhouse boys were popping champagne bottles in the clubhouse so that the Angels would have them ready to pour. It was a celebration that never was. Up jumped those relentless gremlins that have haunted Mauch and California, neither of which has ever made it to the World Series. Suddenly, they were fighting their past as much as they were the Red Sox. It was too much to overcome.

The Red Sox were comforted by two games in their cozy ballpark and knowing they had Clemens, their ace, on the mound for the deciding game. They were so loose that Baylor said Game 7 felt "like a regular-season game."

District 4-5A teams can't help looking ahead

MHS hits road in search of offense

Abilene High wants 4-5A victory

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High's troubled Bulldogs skip town Friday night for Abilene while searching for their football identity and an offense to go with it.

After three straight District 4-5A losses and a scoring deficit of 122-6, MHS will face upstart Abilene High at 8 p.m. Friday in P.E. Shotwell Stadium.

The Eagles of AHS are coming off a 7-0 non-conference victory over Austin Johnston after losing a heart breaking 28-26 decision to unbeaten San Angelo two weeks ago. That was the same Bobcat team that pounded Midland High Friday in a 42-0 rout.

"We're at the point where we need something good to happen to us early," said MHS coach Doug McCutchen. "The kickoff return that San Angelo had on us to open the game last week was more devastating to our team than I would have thought. I was very disappointed in the way our kids played after that.

"We can still pull off a good season if we bounce back, but we'll have to start with Abilene High and they are coming off a victory. Granted, it wasn't an impressive victory, but it was a win after a tough loss to San Angelo. Abilene has played well. They could easily be 4-2 instead of 2-4."

The Eagles have dropped district decisions to San Angelo and Odessa Permian, but first-year coach Larry Pullin still thinks good things are in store for his team.

"San Angelo was a tough loss for us, but the kids rebounded well and had good workouts all last week," said Pullin. "It was a hard trip to Austin for a Saturday afternoon game and we didn't play very well. Still, we dropped three passes in the end zone and we haven't been dropping passes all season. I don't expect that to continue.

"The kids played extremely well against San Angelo except for the last three minutes and we've had to live with that."

Despite the offensive woes of the last three weeks, Midland High will enter the game with an offensive statistical advantage. The Bulldogs are averaging 244.5 yards per game to AHS' 212.3. MHS also has the defensive edge, allowing 247.8 yards per outing to the Eagles' 311.7, which is last in the league.

If Midland High is to re-discover its offensive form, this should be the game in which to do it.

"We just haven't got the job done offensively and the big thing this week is to put some points on the board," said McCutchen. "We're playing for pride now and we need to show that we are a respectable football team.

There are some compelling figures that suggest that this matchup might be a high scoring affair.

MHS quarterback Jaime Madrid ranks fourth in overall offense, averaging 105.7 yards per game running and passing. Madrid is also tied for the league lead in passing with 543 yards with Abilene High's Ron Davis. Halfback Anthony Adkison has 361 yards rushing and 121 receiving to rank fifth in tandem offense. Tight end Clyde Govan has 179 receiving yards on eight catches to rank fourth in 4-5A.

"Midland High has great speed with the potential to break at any time" notes Pullin. "They haven't been able to break the last three weeks, but when you have an Adkison in the backfield, it has to be a concern for you. I just hope we can defend them like the other teams that have played them."

But the Eagles can counter with a productive offense of its own. Fullback Junior Bell, a solid 200-pound brick, ranks third in 4-5A rushing with 457 yards. Bell is a three-year starter for the Eagles.

AHS also has Davis, who has completed 32 of 86 passes. Davis is coming on strong. He is a junior with no experience and has thrown five interceptions this year. His main target is split end John Jones, who has nine receptions for 189 yards.

"Abilene has some weapons. There's no question about that," said McCutchen. "Bell is probably the best back in the district behind Permian's Sean Crow and he's been playing varsity ball for three years now. Davis is the leading quarterback in the district."

Midland High, now out of the 4-5A playoff hunt, is still searching for that 6-3 season record. Abilene High is still technically in the playoff hunt at 0-2, but a loss to the Bulldogs would end those hopes.

1909 — The Pittsburgh Pirates won the World Championship as rookie Babe Adams registered his third victory, beating the Detroit Tigers 8-0 in the seventh game of the Series.

1912 — Fred Snodgrass dropped an easy fly ball in the 10th inning that permitted the Boston Red Sox to score two runs and take the World Series from the New York Giants.

1975 — Tony Perez broke an 0-for-15 slump with two home runs, powering the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-2 triumph over the Boston Red Sox in Game 5 of the World Series.

MVP honor shallow for Astros' Mike Scott

HOUSTON (AP) — Mike Scott didn't get a chance at a third victory in National League playoffs, but his first two games proved worthy of the series' most valuable player.

"This is an emotional time for me. I'm numb," the right-hander said Wednesday after the New York Mets won Game 6 of the best-of-seven series 7-6 in 16 innings.

If the Astros had held on to a 3-0 ninth-inning lead, Scott would have pitched Game 7 today.

"I know I'll appreciate it in a couple of months ... or a couple of years, but it's hard to celebrate," said Scott of his MVP honors. He pitched the two victories the Astros had during in series amid accusations by New York players that he was scuffing the baseball.

The only other player to win the playoff MVP while on the losing side, was California's Fred Lynn in 1982. Lynn was 11-for-18 with five runs batted in, but the Angels lost in five games to Milwaukee.

Scott entered the 1986 season with a career record of 47-52. The most he had ever struck out was 137 in 1985.

But last year Scott came up with a new pitch — the split-fingered fastball.

It gave Scott All-Star recognition, a no-hitter, 306 strikeouts, the ERA title and helped the Astros to an NL West title.

In Game 1 Scott was matched with New York ace Dwight Gooden. All Scott needed was a Glenn Davis homer, beating the Mets 1-0 on five hits while equaling a playoff record with 14 strikeouts.

After the Mets won the next two games, Scott took the mound at Shea Stadium Sunday night in Game 4 and beat the Mets 3-1.

In winning the MVP, Scott compiled playoff records by becoming the first pitcher with two complete games. Scott pitched the most consecutive shutout innings, 16 2-3, and his 19 strikeouts also was a record.

"It's kind of bittersweet," Scott said of winning the MVP award. "It was a defensive series with a lot of defensive plays and good pitching. I guess that's why I won."

For the series, Scott walked just one and allowed only one run on eight hits. There were, however, the constant allegations by Mets players that Scott scuffed the ball when throwing his split-fingered fastball.

Greenwood's Wes McDonell lunges for more yardage last week in the rain against Alpine. The Rangers are on the road this week at Fabens.

Hodges to look in mirror

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

It will be a homecoming of sorts for Greenwood coach Maurice Hodges this Friday when the Rangers travel to Fabens for a District 4-3A game.

Hodges coached at Fabens for two seasons, 1978-79, and put together a pair of district championships. Now Hodges will bring the Rangers back to his old school with playoff aspirations of his own for the Rangers.

"I coached two years out there and set up their program — they're still doing the same things so we're going to mirror each other," Hodges said.

In other area games of interest Friday, Stanton hosts Rankin; Reagan County and Forsan meet in a battle of unbeatens; Snyder is at Andrews; Garden City hosts Bronte; Crane is at Clint; Kermit travels to Alpine; Iraan hosts Marfa; Pecos is at Sweetwater; Fort Stockton is at Big Spring and Monahans is at Lake View.

Greenwood puts its two-game winning streak on the line against the Wildcats with a chance to jump out to a 2-0 District 4-3A record. The Rangers need every win they can get with district favorites Kermit and Crane on the schedule in the following weeks.

The Rangers have lit a fire at just the right time, bouncing back from an 0-4 start to win their final pre-district game and their district opener over Alpine last week.

"We were a little disappointed that we couldn't get our passing offense coordinated last week. But the conditions just wouldn't allow it," Hodges said. "And quarterback Glen Teal had kind of a sore shoulder so maybe it was for the best. He's fully recovered now, though."

So with Teal healthy, the Rangers are expected to air it out as a complement to the running of tailback Steve Popham. Popham was the cornerstone of the Ranger offense against Alpine, racking up 187 yards in just 19 carries.

Fabens suffered a 35-0 whipping at the hands of Crane last Friday in its 4-3A opener to drop its record to 0-1, 3-2. The Wildcats need a victory in this one if they plan to make a dent in the playoff chase.

"You really can't afford to lose more than one district game and expect to be in the playoffs — they know that," Hodges said. "And we're only looking at Fabens. That's the only game on our schedule to our kids right now."

The Rangers plan to leave at noon Friday to make the 300-mile trip. Game time is 7:30 Mountain time, 8:30 Central and Hodges expects to have a good-sized contingent from Greenwood on hand.

"It's going to be an ordeal for us just to travel out there. It's a 300-mile trip one way," Hodges said. "But the band is going, the spirit club will be there. We expect some people to show up."

Fred Akers tuning out UT job talk

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Texas Coach Fred Akers says he can't help but be bothered by the talk about his future with the Longhorn football program.

"I think things like that, though, bother you only as much as you let them," he said Wednesday during a telephone news conference. "We really don't have much time, I'm talking about myself as an adult, and our players, I hope it doesn't bother them too much. I'm sure they get tired ... as young as they are, they haven't had as much experience in handling it as I have."

Saturday's 47-12 loss to Oklahoma increased the pressure on Akers, and some speculate that only a Southwest Conference championship will save his job. But there's a limit to how much the discussion can be allowed to affect him and his team, Akers said.

"I don't pay that much attention to that and I just don't feel, I never have felt, that you can ever afford to let outside authorities predict your future for you. You just can't do it and this is what I try to teach our players. You have to tune them out. Sometimes that's difficult for a young person, working his rear end off trying to do as good as he can do and all he sees is the negative part of it."

Is he satisfied with the support he gets from the UT administration?

"I have one thing to do here and that's coach a football team. Our administrators have to do what they think is best in their position. I'm not trying to be an administrator; they don't try to coach so we have a pretty good arrangement there."

In light of his status as the coach with the second-best winning percentage in the history of the SWC, Akers was asked if he was surprised by the amount of talk about his future.

"Yes, I am. Let me say this, I haven't been the one talking about it, you understand that. You may be asking the wrong people. Maybe you need to ask those who write about it."

TCU's 'Wacker Backers' dwindle

FORT WORTH (AP) — "Wacker Backers", the most die-hard of Jim Wacker supporters, are questioning the coach's "Unbelieveable" program as never before.

After the Horned Frog's suffered a disheartening 37-31 defeat to Rice, some disgruntled alumni asked Horned Frog Club President Jerry Jack Terrell what was wrong.

"People want to know what I think," said Terrell. "I tell them I think Jim Wacker is the best thing to happen to this town in a long, long time."

Attendance at the past two Frog Club meetings was little more than half what it was at the first two September gatherings.

"I've had a little bit of feedback this week," Athletic Director Frank Windegger told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "Most of it has been about our defense — the same questions the coaching staff is asking in their meetings.

"I feel like our players are good enough to be winning," Windegger said. "They should know that themselves by now. I was disappointed that they didn't seem ready to play Saturday night. I just cannot understand that.

"But I'll tell you Jim Wacker is the same coach he was two years ago when he was everybody's national coach of the year. I think our talent level is outstanding, and it will come to the top.

"I think all our fans need to do is to stay hitched and things are going to be fine."

Still, the questions Wacker customarily fields from the audience at the weekly Frog Club luncheon have taken a sharper edge in the past two weeks. Last week, they focused on questions about the defense.

Tuesday, the only question Wacker took before ending the question-and-answer session concerned the wisdom behind some of his coaching decisions against SMU, Arkansas and Rice.

"I'm going to be real honest about this," Wacker said. "Do you want to coach?

"I'll make a deal with you," he said. "You spend 27 years in your profession, you win the national championship and you win the awards. Then you come to me, and I'm going to tell you how to run your business."

Those remarks were followed by applause.

Barrett elated over MVP title

BOSTON (AP) — Marty Barrett rates being named Most Valuable Player of the 1986 American League playoffs right up there with "getting married and seeing my baby girl."

Barrett, the Boston Red Sox second baseman, won the Most Valuable Player award Wednesday night after Boston defeated the California Angels 8-1 in Game 7 of the American League playoffs.

The Red Sox will play the New York Mets in the World Series, beginning Saturday night at Shea Stadium in New York.

Barrett collected 11 hits, including the game-winner in Game 6, to tie the AL playoff record for most hits. Chris Chambliss of the New York Yankees in 1976 and Fred Lynn of California in 1982 also had 11 hits when the playoffs were five-game series.

Barrett hit .367 after batting only .188 against California in the regular season. He struck out three times against the Angels on May 14.

"This is really something, to come out the MVP with players like Rice, Boggs and Buckner in the lineup," he said. "I think the greatest thing about being an MVP is that it means your team won."

Barrett was half-right; National League MVP Mike Scott won the award despite the fact that the Houston Astros lost the NL playoffs to the Mets in six games.

Barrett's bat came in handy because the Red Sox better-known hitters struggled at the plate.

Wade Boggs, the best regular-season hitter in baseball with a .357 average, hit just .233. Left-fielder Jim Rice finished with a playoff average of .161, while first baseman Bill Buckner and right fielder Dwight Evans each hit .214.

"He was the rising star when we needed it," Boggs said. "There is always one guy who is going to perform above and beyond, and Marty Barrett was the guy."

BARRETT'S GLOVE proved just as reliable. He handled 39 chances without an error, while the Red Sox and Angels combined for a playoff record 15 errors.

"Marty's just been there all year long," said Spike Owen, who set the playoff record for most errors by a shortstop with 5. "He's one of the best in the game, both defensively and offensively. He deserves it."

Barrett came off a regular season in which he played a career-high 158 games and batted .286, 20 points above his 1985 average. He became the starting second baseman in May 1984, and hit .303.

"Marty has been a sparkplug all year," Manager John McNamara said. "He's one of the most underrated ballplayers on this club and in the American League. He can do a lot of things to beat you."

Barrett pointed to the Red Sox' victory in Game 5 at Anaheim, when they rallied after being one strike away from losing the series, as the turning point.

"We were saying in the clubhouse in Anaheim that that was our seventh game," Barrett said. "We feld that if we beat (Mike) Witt we had a real good chance against the next two guys. And that's exactly what happened. The Angels had it dangling right there."

Barrett said pitching will be the key to the World Series.

And he feels while the Mets have an outstanding staff, including Dwight Gooden, Ron Darling and Bobby Ojeda, the Red Sox can keep pace.

"If we go with a three-man rotation, we should square off with them pretty good, he said. "I think Bruce Hurst and Roger Clemens. And Oil Can Boyd is pretty close to Darling. I like the way our pitching looks."

Corner Kick

By PAUL BREITZMAN

The isolated small city life found in Midland has many advantages, but for youth soccer players there is one big disadvantage: There are few teams to compete against.

The problem is worse for girls, whose numbers are limited. As these young ladies reach junior high age — when many other activities start to beckon — it often becomes difficult in Midland to field full teams.

Yet, success in the face of difficult circumstances is also a part of the Midland lifestyle as the Midland Soccer Association U-14 girls Chapparels soccer team proved last weekend by winning the Lubbock Open Soccer Tournament.

The Chapparrels came together only during the spring of this year and, faced with no one their own age and gender to play, competed against recreational division boys teams.

As might be expected, their record was not spectacular, but playing against the bigger and stronger players can force you to make a habit of working as hard as you can.

Competing against other U-14 girls, the Chapparrels won one and tied one during the first round of tournament play and advanced to final against the then 8-0 Lubbock Stars.

In what ranks as one of the biggest victories ever by a Midland girls team, the Chapparrels upset the Stars, 2-1.

Tanya Castillejos led the way for the Chapparrels by scoring four goals during the tournament. Amy Lowrance also scored two goals while Jilie Bryan recorded a goal plus an assist and Audrey Brockman had two assists.

Chapparrel coaches also pointed to the team's defense, which surrendered only three goals all tournament, as a key to their title. Goal keeper Lori Hammond, just now celebrating her 12th birthday, and fullbacks Melissa Bejil, Julie Bryan, Coleen Brown, Wendy Flynn and Nicole Craft make the Chapparrel defense.

This Saturday, the Chapparrels will again be at the MSA Hogan Park soccer complex to play against the boys. But, they may never again think that being a girls in a small West Texas city means they can't be part of a fine soccer team.

Wichita gains TL's Gators

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — The Class AA baseball franchise in Beaumont will move to Wichita, Kan., to attract more fans and to take advantage of better business opportunities, the owner announced.

Larry Schimittou, owner of the Golden Gators, said Tuesday he will ask the Texas League directors to officially approve his team's relocation at a special meeting Oct. 29.

But the approval will be a formality, Schimittou said.

"Only reason for the meeting is to decide division play," he said after talking to Texas League President Carl Sawatski.

The team at Wichita may move into the Eastern Division, but Schmittou said he will retain the Gators' working agreement with the San Diego Padres.

"I'm sad for the fans of Beaumont," the owner said. "I know there were some good fans there. I guess if there had been enough the team would not have been for sale. Wichita just has more pluses than Beaumont."

"Any business in our community is important," Meyers said. "Particularly one that offers clean and wholesome entertainment."

The move will leave Beaumont without professional baseball four years after Ted Moor, the original owner of the franchise, moved the team from Amarillo.

Wichita has not had a team since a Triple A club, the Aeros, left in 1984, officials said.

Schmittou is also a vice president in charge of marketing and administration for the Texas Rangers.

Horned Frogs picked to win SWC basketball title

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference's nine basketball coaches have chosen Jim Killingsworth's Texas Christian Horned Frogs as the pre-season men's favorite.

The Frogs, who shared the 1986 regular-season championship with Texas and Texas A&M, have four starters returning from last season's 22-9 team, including guards Carl Lott and Carven Holcombe.

Lott, the 1986 SWC Newcomer of the Year, also was a consensus All-SWC selection after averaging 15.8 points, 4.5 rebounds and 4.3 assists.

Holcombe, a second-team All-SWC pick, enters the season as TCU's fourth-leading career scorer with 1,192 points after averaging 12.7 points per game in 1985-86.

Arkansas enjoyed an exceptional recruiting year and returns four starters, including one of the SWC's most talented centers in 6-11 Andrew Lang. Head Coach Nolan Richardson also will rely heavily on forwards Mike Ratliff (13.1) and William Mills (13.8).

Houston, under new head coach Pat Foster, has three cornerstones in 6-9 center Greg Anderson, 6-8 forward Rickie Winslow and 6-1 guard Gerry McGee.

Anderson (19.1 ppg, 12.9 rpg) and Winslow (15.6 ppg, 10.4 rpg) both played on UH's 1984 Final Four team as freshmen. Foster enters the season as the ninth-winningest active coach in Division IA with his 134-49 record (.732).

Southern Methodist also returns three starters, including center Terry Williams (12.7 ppg), who led the league in field goal percentage (62 percent).

Dave Bliss, whose club made its third straight post-season appearance last season (NIT), is watching redshirt freshman Reginald Muhammad (6-9, 210) and tranfers Adrian Caldwell (6-8, 240) and Carlton McKinney (6-5, 205). Academic All-American Scott Johnson (6.0) returns in the backcourt.

Both Texas and Texas A&M have big holes to fill. The Longhorns, 19-12 and an NIT team a year ago, must replace two exceptional players — center John Brownlee, the SWC's 1986 Player of the Year, and Karl Willock, voted the conference's top defensive player.

Coach Bob Weltlich does have talent in forwards Raynard Davis (8.3 ppg) and Patrick Fairs (14.8 ppg) and guard Alex Broadway (4.8 ppg).

The Aggies welcome back three starters, including second-team All-SWC pick Winston Crite (13.3 ppg, 8.0 rpg). Coach Shelby Metcalf has some much-needed size in transfers Eric Bethea (7-0, 210) and Jessie Spinner (6-10, 215).

Texas Tech, last year's SWC Post-Season Classic champion, is led by guard Sean Gay. The 6-3, 170-pound sophomore earned a spot on the SWC's 1986 All-Newcomer team and was Tech's second-leading scorer (10.2) and assist man (76).

Coach Gerald Myers also can turn to two others with starting experience — forwards Dewyane Chism and Greg Crowe.

Rice and Baylor will be much improved this year. The Bears will build around four returning starters, leaning heavily on 6-3 guard Michael Williams (13.0 ppg) and 6-8 center Darryl Middleton, the Bears' leading returning scorer at 15.7.

Rice has three starters back, led by senior Greg Hines. The 6-3 forward averaged 16.7 points a game last year and was a second-team All-SWC selection.

METS

Hernandez's double finished Knepper, who will spend the rest of the offseason, if not the rest of his life, asking himself what he might have done differently to hold a three-run lead in the ninth.

Ray Knight's sacrifice fly drove in the Mets' third run in the ninth. And after Darryl Strawberry opened the 16th against Aurelio Lopez with a double that Hal Lanier, the Astros' manager, thought that Hatcher should have caught, Knight looked at Johnson before going up to hit.

"Do you want me to bunt?" Knight asked the manager.

"No, I want you to drive the ball to right field."

That's exactly what Knight did, scoring Strawberry with the go-ahead run. Two more runs followed, just enough to hold off the Astros' rally that finally ended with Bass missing Orosco's slider. Moments earlier, with Glenn Davis batting, Knight was seen shouting instructions to Kevin Elster, the rookie shortstop who found himself in one of baseball's most memorable games only a few weeks after his promotion from Jackson (Miss.) of the Texas League.

"I was telling Kevin to play deeper, we didn't want a ground ball to get through," Knight would explain later. "And he backed up behind the white line."

Of all the Mets, two of their oldest players, 34-year-old Knight and 32-year-old Carter, appeared to appreciate their champagne showers more than some of the younger players. Each finally was on a World Series team. And for Knight, it was particularly enjoyable. He had been discarded by the Astros, traded to the Mets late in the 1984 season in an otherwise obscure deal.

"I know the Astros thought I was through," Knight was saying now, "but they made a gross misjudgment."

Even as spring training started this year, Knight wasn't quite sure what the Mets had in mind for him.

"But I knew he could still play," Johnson said with a laugh. "I knew because Ray told me he could. Ray Knight epitomizes the competitive spirit that's on this ball club."

That spirit was never as obvious as it was in the ninth inning Wednesday and in the innings that followed.

"I never get headaches," Johnson said, laughing, "but I had a headache in the ninth inning, that's how tough this game was. Going into this series, some people were saying that we hadn't had to win a 'must' game all season. But we had four 'must' games in this series."

And now Johnson is a pennant-winning manager.

"As a player, you're happy when you win the pennant," he said, alluding to his years with the Baltimore Orioles. "But when you're the manager, to have the players shake my hand, to hug me or kiss me, I've never had that experience before. What a series."

What a a 64-inning classic.

"That was our Game 7 on Sunday," said second baseman Marty Barrett, who was named most valuable player for his record-tying 11 hits and a .367 batting average. "It took a lot out of them. I think they were in the dugout getting all ready for a celebration. The guards were ready. I heard ballboys were popping champagne in the clubhouse. They had it. It was theirs. It was dangling out in front of them.

"That was our motivation right there. After that, we were on the gravy train. We were playing with the house's money. We were playing loose. They knew they should have had it playing these two games. There was more pressure on them than on us."

If Mauch and the Angels are truly haunted, there was more evidence to study. Shortstop Dick Schofield, one of the finest fielding shortstops in the league — he had made only 18 errors all year — began the second inning by throwing a ball off the Boston dugout, allowing Jim Rice to reach second. Baylor singled to left and when Dwight Evans walked, the bases were full.

Rich Gedman scored one run with an infield out. Mauch decided to walk Henderson intentionally to reload the bases and hope for a double play. Spike Owen popped out. But Wade Boggs drilled a line drive that hit the second-base bag on the fly and caromed into centerfield for a two-run single.

More trouble arrived in the fourth. Gary Pettis, a Gold Glove centerfielder, dropped a fly ball with his back appropriately against the centerfield wall. Henderson, who hit the fly, raced to third on the error. Owen lifted a blooper to right-field that fell just in front of Ruppert Jones. Henderson scored.

Player dies during cage practice

ATLANTA (AP) — A Clark College basketball player collapsed during his first practice with the team early Wednesday and died at an Atlanta hospital.

Troy Norton, an 18-year-old freshman from Uniondale, N.Y., collapsed about 12:50 a.m. EDT, officials said. Wednesday was the first day of basketball practice allowed under NCAA rules and many teams, including Clark, traditionally hold the first practice immediately after midnight.

Assistant coach Mike Vickerstaff said Norton was going through a routine passing drill with head coach Robert Pritchett when he suddenly fell to the floor and stopped breathing.

"Coach Pritchett was working one-on-one with Troy," Vickerstaff said. "He was showing him the proper way to make an overhead pass. Troy had looked away. ... When Troy turned his head around, he fell to the floor."

Pritchett administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation, but Norton was pronounced dead at 2:15 a.m. at Grady Memorial Hospital.

Clark officials said the cause of death was not known and an autopsy was scheduled.

The 6-foot-4, 180-pound guard had undergone a physical examination Saturday and checked out fine, Vickerstaff said.

Dollar climbs

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar posted modest gains against most major currencies in early European trading today. Gold bullion prices also rose.

The dollar got a temporary boost in New York late Wednesday on the government's report of a 4.6 percent rise in U.S. retail sales in September. But the rally ran out of steam when it became known that auto sales accounted for most of the rise, indicating only slight improvement elsewhere in the economy.

In Europe early today, the dollar was knocked back further after West Germany Finance Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg told Parliament that the central Bundesbank was not expected to lower its key interest rates.

Traders said, however, that Stoltenberg's speech was likely to have only a temporary impact because it contained no surprises. By midmorning, the dollar was trading generally above levels of late Wednesday.

Some midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Wednesday:

—1.9740 West German marks, up from 1.9735

—1.6165 Swiss francs, up from 1.6135

Against the trend, the British pound rose to $1.4393 from $1.4370. Major British banks raised their base lending rates one percentage point, to 11 percent, on Wednesday.

The dollar closed in Tokyo at 154.22 Japanese yen, up fractionally from Wednesday's 154.05 yen. Later, in London, the dollar slipped back to 154.10 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $426 a troy ounce, up from $423.50 late Wednesday. A trader said gold fluctuated within a narrow range despite active buying and selling.

In Zurich, gold was bid at $425.75, up from $423.75.

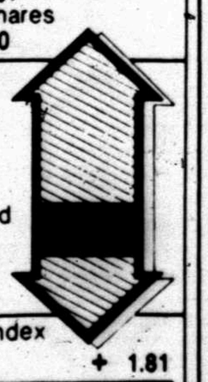

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold edged up to closing bid of $424.78, from Wednesday's $424.34.

Silver bullion traded in London at a bid of $5.57 an ounce, up from $5.54 late Wednesday.

Report shows nation on verge of energy crisis

HOUSTON (AP) — Picture a world in which the United States imports nearly half its oil, largely from the Middle East, and the domestic petroleum exploration and production industry is a fraction of its recent size.

This is America in 1990, as forecast by the National Petroleum Council committee on the U.S. oil and gas outlook.

The committee, including a wide range of industry experts, in September adopted a draft interim report to be submitted to the full council in Washington, which will in turn review it and submit it to U.S. Energy Secretary John Herrington.

A final report, to be submitted in February, will discuss the forecast in greater detail and suggest countermeasures.

Herrington had asked the council last year, when the situation in the energy industry was quite different, to evaluate the nation's petroleum supply.

The report was intended to give Herrington a "fast-track" look at what has happened to the U.S. oil industry in recent months, and what is likely to occur in the near future if conditions remain unchanged, said Tenneco chairman James Ketelsen, who co-chaired the committee.

The interim report paints a stark picture of a nation on the verge of another energy crisis because of the recent plunge in oil prices engineered by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

STIFFENED BY events since the committee first met in April, several members persuaded the committee to add even tougher language, including this amendment from Houston independent Michel Halbouty:

"Until oil prices increase appreciably, U.S. exploration will remain stagnant, our dependence on imports will continue to increase, and our vulnerability to oil-price shocks and possible oil shortages or stoppages will rise to an excessively dangerous level," Halbouty's amendment said.

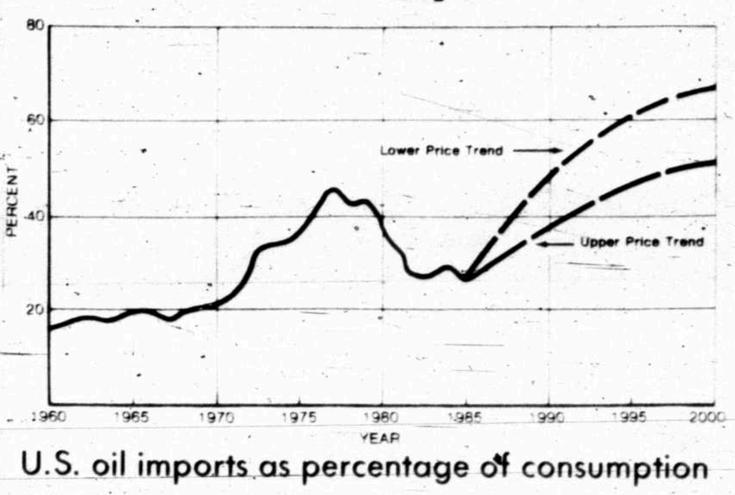

If oil prices remain in the $13-a-barrel range through 1995, the committee's study of government and industry data showed the United States could be producing 36 percent less oil and importing 60 percent of its needs.

If prices climb to the $18-a-barrel range, the nation could be producing 21 percent less oil and importing 47 percent of its needs by 1995, the committee forecast.

Only a price of at least $27 would restore domestic drilling to 1985 levels, and recent confidence-shaking price drops would cause investors to "react slowly" pending stability, the committee said, and even 1985 drilling levels would not prevent national oil reserves from declining.

Meanwhile, the industry is being dismantled, the report says. According to the committee, oil and gas extraction employment has fallen from 708,000 in 1982 to 443,000 as of last June, a 37 percent decline. Most of that decline occurred in the key oilfield-service industry, where employment has fallen from 435,000 to 212,000 during the same period, a 51 percent decline.

Please see REPORT, Page 3C

U.S. oil imports as percentage of consumption

NOTE: Potential import levels are based on responses to an NPC survey of future supply/demand outlooks that utilized two oil price trends provided by the Department of Energy: an upper price trend starting at $18/barrel in 1986 and growing at a real rate of 5%/year to $36 in 2000, and a lower price trend starting at $12/barrel in 1986 and growing at a real rate of 4%/year to $2 in 2000.

Oil men briefed on China oil field

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Over 50 area oilmen met with the sister city delegation from Dongying China Wednesday to hear a briefing on the Shengli oil field and exchange information for possible trade arrangements between the Permian Basin and the oil producing province.

Tang Shenghai, mayor of Dongying, a city of 1.4 million people, explained to the oil men, meeting at Midland College, that Shingli, in the province of Shandong, was the second largest oil field in China, producing about 700,000 barrels of oil daily.

The 3,000 square kilometer field, with development potential in a 20,000 square kilometer area was discovered in 1960 and commercial production from the field began in 1961 with a daily output of 555 tons or 4,051 barrels. Large scale development of the field began in 1964 when 10,000 oil workers from all over China converged upon the field to begin drilling in the field which is named for Shengli Village.

Wendy's plans to drop Pepsi in favor of Coke

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

Wendy's International, the nation's third-largest hamburger chain, said Wednesday that it planned to drop Pepsi-Cola from the menu at its 1,212 company-owned outlets in favor of Coca-Cola because of Pepsi's increasing prominence as an operator of fast-food restaurants.

Wendy's, which ranks behind McDonald's and Burger King, also said it would urge its 2,270 U.S. franchisees to make the switch (Under the company's agreements, franchises may serve what they choose).

The outlets will make the switch over the next two months, said officials of Wendy's, which is based in suburban Dublin, Ohio. Wendy's has served Pepsi-Cola since opening its first restaurant in 1969.

Pepsico, based in Purchase, N.Y., has operated Pizza Hut and Taco Bell restaurants for several years. But Robert L. Barney, Wendy's chairman and chief executive, said Pepsico "went one step too far" last summer in buying the Kentucky Fried Chicken chain of 6,500 fast-food restaurants. That $850 million acquisition made Pepsico the world's largest fast-food chain in terms of number of restaurants, with more than 14,000 outlets.

"Their interests are now in conflict with a Wendy's, and we will not support a company that is trying to make our customers it's customers," Barney said.

Pepsi-Cola spokesman Stuart Ross disputed that assertion. "If you want to talk about competition, Wendy's real competition is McDonald's and Coke," he said, adding that Pepsi's largest restaurant account is Pillsbury-owned Burger King.

Pickens quiet on Amerada Hess

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mesa Petroleum Co. Chairman T. Boone Pickens Jr. would not comment Wednesday on rumors he is planning to mount a takeover battle for Amerada Hess Corp., which topped the active list on the New York Stock Exchange throughout the day.

Amerada gained $1.125 to $26.875 a share on turnover of 4.026 million shares as the leader on the Big Board. Mesa Petroleum was unchanged at $3.50 a share.

Amerada, the nation's 13th-largest oil company with headquarters in New York, added 50 cents to $25.50 a share Tuesday and was third on the NYSE actives list.

In Amarillo, Texas, a spokewoman for Mesa said Pickens would have no comment on a rumored takeover of Amerada.

Pickens has made hefty profits by staging hostile takeover raids against Gulf Oil Corp., Cities Service Co., Superior Oil Co., Phillips Petroleum Co. and Unocal Corp. but he has not acquired any of his major oil company targets.

Last week Amerada said Leon Hess, its chairman and principal shareholder, would not sell the company.

Analysts estimate Hess owns almost 20 percent of Amerada's stock and controls a higher percentage of the outstanding shares.

People Express gets loan

HOUSTON (AP) — Financially-troubled People Express may be able to pay bills with $10 million Texas Air Corp. is sending, airline officials said.

Houston-based Texas Air officials said a tentative approval by the U.S. Department of Transportation allowing the company to acquire People Express, short comment period and progress made with Frontier Airlines employees were all factors in deciding to advance the discount carrier the $10 million.

"We felt it was the right thing to do to advance them the $10 million. And we're confident the acquistion will be approved," Texas Air spokesman Bruce Hicks said Wednesday.

Texas Air reached agreement with People in September to buy the airline and the remaining assets of its subsidiary, Frontier, for $298 million, most of it in securities.

The holding company agreed to provide up to $54 million to People during the transaction period as certain conditions were met, Hicks said. Texas Air so far has provided People with $40 million, including the $10 million advance announced Wednesday.

The transportation department gave tentative approval of the Texas Air-People merger Tuesday, saying it is not likely to substantially reduce competition.

Shearson makes offer for E.F. Hutton

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. offered to acquire E.F. Hutton Group for at least $1.5 billion in a friendly transaction but was turned down by the brokerage firm's management, according to Wall Street sources. Rumors, however, continued to circulate on Wall Street that other offers have been made to Hutton, including one from another investment banking firm, and that Shearson may at some point return to the bidding.

The sources said the Shearson proposal was made in recent days and was contingent on the deal being done on a friendly basis, a common prerequisite for brokerage industry mergers since the success of the business is so dependent on having cooperative employees.

Rumors that Shearson Lehman Brothers, a company that has been expanding rapidly in the brokerage business the last five years, had made the offer caused Hutton's stock to rise sharply yesterday on Wall Street.

In active trading, Hutton gained $1.875, to $48.75, on volume of more than 2.1 million shares. On a typical day over the last six weeks, even when there were takeover rumors present, an average of only 500,000 shares of Hutton stock traded daily.

Wednesday Shearson Lehman, a subsidiary of the American Express Co., offered no comment on the rumors, while Hutton said it knew of no reason for the activity in its stock. One report was that Hutton was willing to be acquired and would be meeting this weekend to consider rival offers. The one from Shearson would apparently be an exchange of the stock of the American Express Co., and that of the investment banking firm in cash.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said Shearson Lehman officials had approached Hutton on an informal basis and made an offer that would have given Hutton shareholders at least $50 a share, but less than $55 a share.

Wall Street analysts say Hutton's management, especially its two top executives — its chairman, Robert Foman, and president, Robert Rittereiser — have never publicly indicated that they wanted to sell the company despite a weakness with profits and other difficulites, including the company's guilty plea last year to 2,000 counts of mail and wire fraud in relation to a check overdrafting case.

The rumors that refuse to die revisited, again

After a spring and early summer deluged by rumors of the pending mass exodus from our fair city in the wake of the oil price collapse and resulting layoffs, I thought the furor of the imminent flattening of the Tall City had finally been laid to rest.

Then, just when you least expect it, comes an out-of-the-blue request for photo opportunities to dramatize the down-and-out condition of Midland and the oil patch of 1986.

The request came via phone from the Texas "stringer" for a slick weekly info-tainment magazine anxious to dispatch a photographer to catch the dire conditions of a city on the brink of collapse.

I calmly fielded his questions and tried to explain that although times are difficult and economic desperation is more widespread than we would like to think; nobody's throwing themselves off buildings and the town hasn't dried up and blown away. I tried to explain how the indomitable spirit of both the natives and adopted West Texans, like myself, is surfacing to tough it out and make the best of the situation.

He listened and seemed to understand that the national focus on negative news from our part of the world was bordering on overkill at this point.

After nearly a half hour, I thought I had him convinced that although there could be some suitable dramatic picture possibilities to demonstrate the current economic state, such as the boarded up entrance to Sakowitz and FDIC's "For Sale" signs on various properties around town, that there was no real news value to be served by them.

And I thought that was that.

BUT WITHIN THE HOUR, the phone rang again and it was my friend, the San Antonio stringer, wanting to check out some seemingly conflicting stories he'd gotten from other sources about the local state of affairs.

He said an old friend of his, now in the movie business — but still involved in the oil business — and living in Southern California, had some amazingly disparate views on Midland's economy from what I had given him.

He had a few more new questions for me based on his conversation with his California source:

"Aren't there entire shopping centers just boarded up without a single tenant?"

"What about the three month waiting list to rent a U-Haul trailer to move out of town?"

"Can't you buy just about any big-ticket item — real estate, cars and such — for 20 cents on the dollar?"

And "What about the apartment complexes giving a year's free rent and complimentary laundry service for signing a lease?"

"Or the oil operators willing to sign over their production to someone else just to keep the wells pumping, without a cent changing hands?"

Before I could think of a single answer for any of those stumpers, I was immediately struck by a question or two of my own:

"Who are these people offering free rent, volunteering to do my laundry and giving away oil wells and where do I get in line?"

THEN I REALIZED that despite the fact the we have locally warded off the gloom and doom rumors of economic demise, people — even those who ostensibly still have connections to our community — are being weaned on the smattering of national television news footage of FDIC auctions and bank closings that have led them to believe that all that is left here are deserted streets teeming with tumbling tumbleweeds.

As the man in the movie Cool Hand Luke said, "What we have here is a failure to communicate."

As Midlanders, "Our mission, should we choose to accept it," is to counteract these perceptions, individually, at every opportunity. Without misleading anyone, it is just as easy to focus on the positive aspects of the survival instincts of dedicated oil and gas industry workers as it is to dwell on the hardships being faced.

The facts are that since the first of the year, Southwestern Bell has disconnected a net total of 2,535 more business and residential telephone lines than its orders for new service hook- ups.

Over the same period, Texas Electric has lost a total of approximately 1,000 customers.

These numbers are hardly indicative of massive outbound migration from the city. The numbers — including the sizeable increase in local school enrollments this fall— suggest that we're doing very well, thank you very much.

The next time some out-of-towner asks how things are going, keep in mind the facts that our city is holding up very well under the strain, and take the opportunity to and remind them of that fact. Little by little, one by one, we may be able to stem the tide of negativism surrounding others' image of Midland.

And in the process, the perception you improve may be your own.

Horned Frogs picked to win SWC basketball title

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference's nine basketball coaches have chosen Jim Killingsworth's Texas Christian Horned Frogs as the pre-season men's favorite.

The Frogs, who shared the 1986 regular-season championship with Texas and Texas A&M, have four starters returning from last season's 22-9 team, including guards Carl Lott and Carven Holcombe.

Lott, the 1986 SWC Newcomer of the Year, also was a consensus All-SWC selection after averaging 15.8 points, 4.5 rebounds and 4.3 assists.

Holcombe, a second-team All-SWC pick, enters the season as TCU's fourth-leading career scorer with 1,192 points after averaging 12.7 points per game in 1985-86.

Arkansas enjoyed an exceptional recruiting year and returns four starters, including one of the SWC's most talented centers in 6-11 Andrew Lang. Head Coach Nolan Richardson also will rely heavily on forwards Mike Ratliff (13.1) and William Mills (13.8).

Houston, under new head coach Pat Foster, has three cornerstones in 6-9 center Greg Anderson, 6-8 forward Rickie Winslow and 6-1 guard Gerry McGee.

Anderson (19.1 ppg, 12.9 rpg) and Winslow (15.6 ppg, 10.4 rpg) both played on UH's 1984 Final Four team as freshmen. Foster enters the season as the ninth-winningest active coach in Division IA with his 134-49 record (.732).

Southern Methodist also returns three starters, including center Terry Williams (12.7 ppg), who led the league in field goal percentage (62 percent).

Dave Bliss, whose club made its third straight post-season appearance last season (NIT), is watching redshirt freshman Reginald Muhammad (6-9, 210) and tranfers Adrian Caldwell (6-8, 240) and Carlton McKinney (6-5, 205). Academic All-American Scott Johnson (6.0) returns in the backcourt.

Both Texas and Texas A&M have big holes to fill. The Longhorns, 19-12 and an NIT team a year ago, must replace two exceptional players — center John Brownlee, the SWC's 1986 Player of the Year, and Karl Willock, voted the conference's top defensive player.

Coach Bob Weltich does have talent in forwards Raynard Davis (8.3 ppg) and Patrick Fairs (14.8 ppg) and guard Alex Broadway (4.8 ppg).

The Aggies welcome back three starters, including second-team All-SWC pick Winston Crite (13.3 ppg, 8.0 rpg). Coach Shelby Metcalf has some much-needed size in transfers Eric Bethea (7-0, 210) and Jessie Spinner (6-10, 215).

Texas Tech, last year's SWC Post-Season Classic champion, is led by guard Sean Gay. The 6-3, 170-pound sophomore earned a spot on the SWC's 1986 All-Newcomer team and was Tech's second-leading scorer (10.2) and assist man (76).

Coach Gerald Myers also can turn to two others with starting experience — forwards Dewyane Chism and Greg Crowe.

Rice and Baylor will be much improved this year. The Bears will build around four returning starters, leaning heavily on 6-3 guard Michael Williams (13.0 ppg) and 6-8 center Darryl Middleton, the Bears' leading returning scorer at 15.7.

Rice has three starters back, led by senior Greg Hines. The 6-3 forward averaged 16.7 points a game last year and was a second-team All-SWC selection.

METS

Hernandez's double finished Knepper, who will spend the rest of the offseason, if not the rest of his life, asking himself what he might have done differently to hold a three-run lead in the ninth.

Ray Knight's sacrifice fly drove in the Mets' third run in the ninth. And after Darryl Strawberry opened the 16th against Aurelio Lopez with a double that Hal Lanier, the Astros' manager, thought that Hatcher should have caught, Knight looked at Johnson before going up to hit.

"Do you want me to bunt?" Knight asked the manager.

"No, I want you to drive the ball to right field."

That's exactly what Knight did, scoring Strawberry with the go-ahead run. Two more runs followed, just enough to hold off the Astros' rally that finally ended with Bass missing Orosco's slider. Moments earlier, with Glenn Davis batting, Knight was seen shouting instructions to Kevin Elster, the rookie shortstop who found himself in one of baseball's most memorable games only a few weeks after his promotion from Jackson (Miss.) of the Texas League.

"I was telling Kevin to play deeper, we didn't want a ground ball to get through," Knight would explain later. "And he backed up behind the white line."

Of all the Mets, two of their oldest players, 34-year-old Knight and 32-year-old Carter, appeared to appreciate their champagne showers more than some of the younger players. Each finally was on a World Series team. And for Knight, it was particularly enjoyable. He had been discarded by the Astros, traded to the Mets late in the 1984 season in an otherwise obscure deal.

"I know the Astros thought I was through," Knight was saying now, "but they made a gross misjudgment."

Even as spring training started this year, Knight wasn't quite sure what the Mets had in mind for him.

"But I knew he could still play," Johnson said with a laugh. "I knew because Ray told me he could. Ray Knight epitomizes the competitive spirit that's on this ball club."

That spirit was never as obvious as it was in the ninth inning Wednesday and in the innings that followed.

"I never get headaches," Johnson said, laughing, "but I had a headache in the ninth inning, that's how tough this game was. Going into this series, some people were saying that we hadn't had to win a 'must' game all season. But we had four 'must' games in this series."

And now Johnson is a pennant-winning manager.

"As a player, you're happy when you win the pennant," he said, alluding to his years with the Baltimore Orioles. "But when you're the manager, to have the players shake my hand, to hug me or kiss me, I've never had that experience before. What a series."

What a a 64-inning classic.

"That was our Game 7 on Sunday," said second baseman Marty Barrett, who was named most valuable player for his record-tying 11 hits and a .367 batting average. "It took a lot out of them. I think they were in the dugout getting all ready for a celebration. The guards were ready. I heard ballboys were popping champagne in the clubhouse. They had it. It was theirs. It was dangling out in front of them.

"That was our motivation right there. After that, we were on the gravy train. We were playing with the house's money. We were playing loose. They knew they should have had it playing these two games. There was more pressure on them than on us."

If Mauch and the Angels are truly haunted, there was more evidence to study. Shortstop Dick Schofield, one of the finest fielding shortstops in the league — he had made only 18 errors all year — began the second inning by throwing a ball off the Boston dugout, allowing Jim Rice to reach second. Baylor singled to left and when Dwight Evans walked, the bases were full.

Rich Gedman scored one run with an infield out. Mauch decided to walk Henderson intentionally to reload the bases and hope for a double play. Spike Owen popped out. But Wade Boggs drilled a line drive that hit the second-base bag on the fly and caromed into centerfield for a two-run single.

More trouble arrived in the fourth. Gary Pettis, a Gold Glove centerfielder, dropped a fly ball with his back appropriately against the centerfield wall. Henderson, who hit the fly, raced to third on the error. Owen lifted a blooper to right field that fell just in front of Ruppert Jones. Henderson scored.

Player dies during cage practice

ATLANTA (AP) — A Clark College basketball player collapsed during his first practice with the team early Wednesday and died at an Atlanta hospital.

Troy Norton, an 18-year-old freshman from Uniondale, N.Y., collapsed about 12:50 a.m. EDT, officials said. Wednesday was the first day of basketball practice allowed under NCAA rules and many teams, including Clark, traditionally hold the first practice immediately after midnight.

Assistant coach Mike Vickerstaff said Norton was going through a routine passing drill with head coach Robert Pritchett when he suddenly fell to the floor and stopped breathing.

"Coach Pritchett was working one-on-one with Troy," Vickerstaff said. "He was showing him the proper way to make an overhead pass. Troy had looked away. ... When Troy turned his head around, he fell to the floor."

Pritchett administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation, but Norton was pronounced dead at 2:15 a.m. at Grady Memorial Hospital.

Clark officials said the cause of death was not known and an autopsy was scheduled.

The 6-foot-4, 180-pound guard had undergone a physical examination Saturday and checked out fine, Vickerstaff said.

Dollar climbs

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar posted modest gains against most major currencies in early European trading today. Gold bullion prices also rose.

The dollar got a temporary boost in New York late Wednesday on the government's report of a 4.6 percent rise in U.S. retail sales in September. But the rally ran out of steam when it became known that auto sales accounted for most of the rise, indicating only slight improvement elsewhere in the economy.

In Europe early today, the dollar was knocked back further after West Germany Finance Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg told Parliament that the central Bundesbank was not expected to lower its key interest rates.

Traders said, however, that Stoltenberg's speech was likely to have only a temporary impact because it contained no surprises. By midmorning, the dollar was trading generally above levels of late Wednesday.

Some midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Wednesday:

—1.9740 West German marks, up from 1.9735

—1.6165 Swiss francs, up from 1.6135

Against the trend, the British pound rose to $1.4393 from $1.4370. Major British banks raised their base lending rates one percentage point, to 11 percent, on Wednesday.

The dollar closed in Tokyo at 154.22 Japanese yen, up fractionally from Wednesday's 154.05 yen. Later, in London, the dollar slipped back to 154.10 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $426 a troy ounce, up from $423.50 late Wednesday. A trader said gold fluctuated within a narrow range despite active buying and selling.

In Zurich, gold was bid at $425.75, up from $423.75.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold edged up to closing bid of $424.78, from Wednesday's $424.34.

Silver bullion traded in London at a bid of $5.57 an ounce, up from $5.54 late Wednesday.

Report shows nation on verge of energy crisis

HOUSTON (AP) — Picture a world in which the United States imports nearly half its oil, largely from the Middle East, and the domestic petroleum exploration and production industry is a fraction of its recent size.

This is America in 1990, as forecast by the National Petroleum Council committee on the U.S. oil and gas outlook.

The committee, including a wide range of industry experts, in September adopted a draft interim report to be submitted to the full council in Washington, which will in turn review it and submit it to U.S. Energy Secretary John Herrington.

A final report, to be submitted in February, will discuss the forecast in greater detail and suggest countermeasures.

Herrington had asked the council last year, when the situation in the energy industry was quite different, to evaluate the nation's petroleum supply.

The report was intended to give Herrington a "fast-track" look at what has happened to the U.S. oil industry in recent months, and what is likely to occur in the near future if conditions remain unchanged, said Tenneco chairman James Ketelsen, who co-chaired the committee.

The interim report paints a stark picture of a nation on the verge of another energy crisis because of the recent plunge in oil prices engineered by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

STIFFENED BY events since the committee first met in April, several members persuaded the committee to add even tougher language, including this amendment from Houston independent Michel Halbouty:

"Until oil prices increase appreciably, U.S. exploration will remain stagnant, our dependence on imports will continue to increase, and our vulnerability to oil-price shocks and possible oil shortages or stoppages will rise to an excessively dangerous level," Halbouty's amendment said.

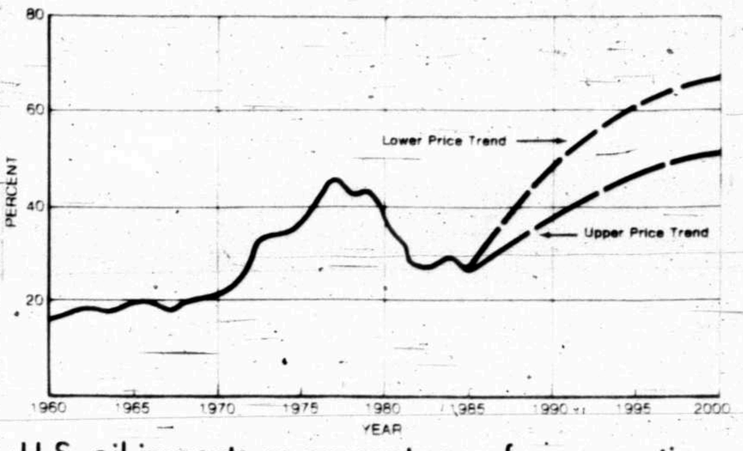

If oil prices remain in the $13-a-barrel range through 1995, the committee's study of government and industry data showed the United States could be producing 36 percent less oil and importing 60 percent of its needs.

If prices climb to the $18-a-barrel range, the nation could be producing 21 percent less oil and importing 47 percent of its needs by 1995, the committee forecast.

Only a price of at least $27 would restore domestic drilling to 1985 levels, and recent confidence-shaking price drops would cause investors to "react slowly" pending stability, the committee said, and even 1985 drilling levels would not prevent national oil reserves from declining.

Meanwhile, the industry is being dismantled, the report says. According to the committee, oil and gas extraction employment has fallen from 708,000 in 1982 to 443,000 as of last June, a 37 percent decline. Most of that decline occurred in the key oilfield-service industry, where employment has fallen from 435,000 to 212,000 during the same period, a 51 percent decline.

Please see REPORT, Page 3C

U.S. oil imports as percentage of consumption

NOTE: Potential import levels are based on responses to an NPC survey of future supply/demand outlooks that utilized two oil price trends provided by the Department of Energy: an upper price trend starting at $18/barrel in 1986 and growing at a real rate of 5%/year to $36 in 2000, and a lower price trend starting at $12/barrel in 1986 and growing at a real rate of 4%/year to $2 in 2000.

Oil men briefed on China oil field

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Over 50 area oilmen met with the sister city delegation from Dongying China Wednesday to hear a briefing on the Shengli oil field and exchange information for possible trade arrangements between the Permian Basin and the oil producing province.

Tang Shenghai, mayor of Dongying, a city of 1.4 million people, explained to the oil men, meeting at Midland College, that Shingli, in the province of Shandong, was the second largest oil field in China, producing about 700,000 barrels of oil daily.

The 3,000 square kilometer field, with development potential in a 20,000 square kilometer area was discovered in 1960 and commercial production from the field began in 1961 with a daily output of 555 tons or 4,051 barrels. Large scale development of the field began in 1964 when 10,000 oil workers from all over China converged upon the field to begin drilling in the field which is named for Shengli Village.

Wendy's plans to drop Pepsi in favor of Coke

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

Wendy's International, the nation's third-largest hamburger chain, said Wednesday that it planned to drop Pepsi-Cola from the menu at its 1,212 company-owned outlets in favor of Coca-Cola because of Pepsi's increasing prominence as an operator of fast-food restaurants.

Wendy's, which ranks behind McDonald's and Burger King, also said it would urge its 2,270 U.S. franchisees to make the switch (Under the company's agreements, franchises may serve what they choose).

The outlets will make the switch over the next two months, said officials of Wendy's, which is based in suburban Dublin, Ohio. Wendy's has served Pepsi-Cola since opening its first restaurant in 1969.

Pepsico, based in Purchase, N.Y., has operated Pizza Hut and Taco Bell restaurants for several years. But Robert L. Barney, Wendy's chairman and chief executive, said Pepsico "went one step too far" last summer in buying the Kentucky Fried Chicken chain of 6,500 fast-food restaurants. That $850 million acquisition made Pepsico the world's largest fast-food chain in terms of number of restaurants, with more than 14,000 outlets.

"Their interests are now in conflict with a Wendy's, and we will not support a company that is trying to make our customers it's customers," Barney said.

Pepsi-Cola spokesman Stuart Ross disputed that assertion. "If you want to talk about competition, Wendy's real competition is McDonald's and Coke," he said, adding that Pepsi's largest restaurant account is Pillsbury-owned Burger King.

Pickens quiet on Amerada Hess

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mesa Petroleum Co. Chairman T. Boone Pickens Jr. would not comment Wednesday on rumors he is planning to mount a takeover battle for Amerada Hess Corp., which topped the active list on the New York Stock Exchange throughout the day.

Amerada gained $1.125 to $26.875 a share on turnover of 4.026-million shares as the leader on the Big Board. Mesa Petroleum was unchanged at $3.50 a share.

Amerada, the nation's 13th-largest oil company with headquarters in New York, added 50 cents to $25.50 a share Tuesday and was third on the NYSE actives list.

In Amarillo, Texas, a spokeswoman for Mesa said Pickens would have no comment on a rumored takeover of Amerada.

Pickens has made hefty profits by staging hostile takeover raids against Gulf Oil Corp., Cities Service Co., Superior Oil Co., Phillips Petroleum Co. and Unocal Corp, but he has not acquired any of his major oil company targets.

Last week Amerada said Leon Hess, its chairman and principal shareholder, would not sell the company.

Analysts estimate Hess owns almost 20 percent of Amerada's stock and controls a higher percentage of the outstanding shares.

People Express gets loan

HOUSTON (AP) — Financially-troubled People Express may be able to pay bills with $10 million Texas Air Corp. is sending, airline officials said.

Houston-based Texas Air officials said a tentative approval by the U.S. Department of Transportation allowing the company to acquire People Express, short comment period and progress made with Frontier Airlines employees were all factors in deciding to advance the discount carrier the $10 million.

"We felt it was the right thing to do to advance them the $10 million. And we're confident the acquistion will be approved," Texas Air spokesman Bruce Hicks said Wednesday.

Texas Air reached agreement with People in September to buy the airline and the remaining assets of its subsidiary, Frontier, for $298 million, most of it in securities.

The holding company agreed to provide up to $54 million to People during the transaction period as certain conditions were met, Hicks said. Texas Air so far has provided People with $40 million, including the $10 million advance announced Wednesday.

The transportation department gave tentative approval of the Texas Air-People merger Tuesday, saying it is not likely to substantially reduce competition.

Shearson makes offer for E.F. Hutton

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. offered to acquire E.F. Hutton Group for at least $1.5 billion in a friendly transaction but was turned down by the brokerage firm's management, according to Wall Street sources. Rumors, however, continued to circulate on Wall Street that other offers have been made to Hutton, including one from another investment banking firm, and that Shearson may at some point return to the bidding.

The sources said the Shearson proposal was made in recent days and was contingent on the deal being done on a friendly basis, a common prerequisite for brokerage industry mergers since the success of the business is so dependent on having cooperative employees.

Rumors that Shearson Lehman Brothers, a company that has been expanding rapidly in the brokerage business the last five years, had made the offer caused Hutton's stock to rise sharply yesterday on Wall Street.

In active trading, Hutton gained $1.875, to $48.75, on volume of more than 2.1 million shares. On a typical day over the last six weeks, even when there were takeover rumors present, an average of only 500,000 shares of Hutton stock traded daily.

Wednesday Shearson Lehman, a subsidiary of the American Express Co., offered no comment on the rumors, while Hutton said it knew of no reason for the activity in its stock. One report was that Hutton was willing to be acquired and would be meeting this weekend to consider rival offers. The one from Shearson would apparently be an exchange of the stock of the American Express Co., and that of the investment banking firm in cash.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said Shearson Lehman officials had approached Hutton on an informal basis and made an offer that would have given Hutton shareholders at least $50 a share, but less than $55 a share.

Wall Street analysts say Hutton's management, especially its two top executives — its chairman, Robert Foman, and president, Robert Rittereiser — have never publicly indicated that they wanted to sell the company despite a weakness with profits and other difficulites, including the company's guilty plea last year to 2,000 counts of mail and wire fraud in relation to a check overdrafting case.

The rumors that refuse to die revisited, again

After a spring and early summer deluged by rumors of the pending mass exodus from our fair city in the wake of the oil price collapse and resulting layoffs, I thought the furor of the imminent flattening of the Tall City had finally been laid to rest.

Then, just when you least expect it, comes an out-of-the-blue request for photo opportunities to dramatize the down-and-out condition of Midland and the oil patch of 1986.

The request came via phone from the Texas "stringer" for a slick weekly info-tainment magazine anxious to dispatch a photographer to catch the dire conditions of a city on the brink of collapse.

I calmly fielded his questions and tried to explain that although times are difficult and economic desperation is more widespread than we would like to think; nobody's throwing themselves off buildings and the town hasn't dried up and blown away. I tried to explain how the indomitable spirit of both the natives and adopted West Texans, like myself, is surfacing to tough it out and make the best of the situation.

He listened and seemed to understand that the national focus on negative news from our part of the world was bordering on overkill at this point.

After nearly a half hour, I thought I had him convinced that although there could be some suitable dramatic picture possibilities to demonstrate the current economic state, such as the boarded up entrance to Sakowitz and FDIC's "For Sale" signs on various properties around town, that there was no real news value to be served by them.

And I thought that was that.

BUT WITHIN THE HOUR, the phone rang again and it was my friend, the San Antonio stringer, wanting to check out some seemingly conflicting stories he'd gotten from other sources about the local state of affairs.

He said an old friend of his, now in the movie business — but still involved in the oil business — and living in Southern California, had some amazingly disparate views on Midland's economy from what I had given him.

He had a few more new questions for me based on his conversation with his California source:

"Aren't there entire shopping centers just boarded up without a single tenant?"

"What about the three month waiting list to rent a U-Haul trailer to move out of town?"

"Can't you buy just about any big-ticket item — real estate, cars and such — for 20 cents on the dollar?"

And "What about the apartment complexes giving a year's free rent and complimentary laundry service for signing a lease?"

"Or the oil operators willing to sign over their production to someone else just to keep the wells pumping, without a cent changing hands?"

Before I could think of a single answer for any of those stumpers, I was immediately struck by a question or two of my own:

"Who are these people offering free rent, volunteering to do my laundry and giving away oil wells and where do I get in line?"

THEN I REALIZED that despite the fact the we have locally warded off the gloom and doom rumors of economic demise, people — even those who ostensibly still have connections to our community — are being weaned on the smattering of national television news footage of FDIC auctions and bank closings that have led them to believe that all that is left here are deserted streets teeming with tumbling tumbleweeds.

As the man in the movie Cool Hand Luke said, "What we have here is a failure to communicate."

As Midlanders, "Our mission, should we choose to accept it," is to counteract these perceptions, individually, at every opportunity. Without misleading anyone, it is just as easy to focus on the positive aspects of the survival instincts of dedicated oil and gas industry workers as it is to dwell on the hardships being faced.

The facts are that since the first of the year, Southwestern Bell has disconnected a net total of 2,535 more business and residential telephone lines than its orders for new service hook-ups.

Over the same period, Texas Electric has lost a total of approximately 1,000 customers.

These numbers are hardly indicative of massive outbound migration from the city. The numbers — including the sizeable increase in local school enrollments this fall— suggest that we're doing very well, thank you very much.

The next time some out-of-towner asks how things are going, keep in mind the facts that our city is holding up very well under the strain, and take the opportunity to and remind them of that fact. Little by little, one by one, we may be able to stem the tide of negativism surrounding others' image of Midland.

And in the process, the perception you improve may be your own.

Canadian gas producers prepare for deregulation

TORONTO (UPI) — A consortium of 11 western Canadian natural gas producers has formed a company to sell directly to end users in a move to prepare for industry deregulation.

Direct Energy Marketing Ltd., which has set up offices in Toronto and Edmonton, said more than 26,000 large natural gas users in Canada should see price savings of up to 30 percent.

"Many Canadian large-volume gas users are unaware of the implications of deregulation in the natural gas industry, particularly the cost savings available to them," said John Lagadin, president of the company that will be the marketing arm of the 11 producers. "Our initial job is to help educate the market, show them how they can buy gas at lower cost and then supply it."

Vice President Rod Long said the move was a result of an agreement last October between the Canadian government and the western producing provinces.

REPORT

THE REPORT quotes an International Association of Drilling Contractors estimate that 40 percent of firms enganged in contract drilling of oil and gas wells in 1982 have gone out of business.

Twenty oil service, equipment and drilling companies surveyed by Salomon Brothers Inc. lost a total of $285 million during second-quarter 1986. During the same quarter in 1985, far from a boom period, the same 20 companies showed $260 million in profits, the report said.

"If these massive losses continue, the future viability of the industry to respond to an energy crisis will be questionable," the report said.

Much of the drilling and service equipment brought on line during the energy boom of the 1970s and early 1980s is being junked, mothballed or sold overseas, the committee said, and "the ability to re-equip itself in the future will be limited."

The committee warned the current collapse of the oilfield service industry may erase the U.S. lead in technology and allow state-supported service companies in other nations to reduce their need for American expertise.

The commitee acknowledged there have been some benefits to the U.S. economy as a result of lower oil prices, but the report says the benefits have been smaller than expected because national energy conservation measures made oil prices less important and because gains have been offset by economic damage in oil-producing areas.

IN ADDITION, the gains likely will be temporary, the committee said, because a sharp oil price decline "carries with it the seeds of its own destruction and can result in a sudden price spike" such as occurred in the 1970s. The 1973 and 1979 oil price increases imposed by OPEC led to recessions, the committee said.

"Because OPEC possesses 67 percent of world proven crude oil reserves, 82 percent of which are in the Middle East, there will be no problem meeting (U.S. demand) ... if OPEC chooses to do so," the committee said. "However, as OPEC production increases, its members will be equipped with greater power to restrict output and increase prices," the report said.

Charles Shultz, a Tenneco Inc. vice president who chaired the subcommittee that drafted the interim report, expressed concern that the report not be "shrill" or appear "biased" because that would weaken its impact on the White House and Congress.

But several others among the two dozen who were present when the interim report was adopted expressed worry that it was not strong enough.

CHINA

Since the field was discovered two decades ago, more than 20 wells with a daily production rate of 1,000 tons have been drilled. One well, the Gubei No. 10, produces over 3,600 tons daily. Total production from the field in 1985 was 27 million tons. (A ton equals 7.3 barrels.) Gas production in the field amounts to about 360,000 cubic meters per day. To date 52 oil pools have been proven in the field with 32 in production.

A geologist with the delegation, Ge Rong, explained that the Shingli reservoir was both a sandstone and carbonate reservoir with the main reservoir being tertiary sandstone. Midland geologist Keith Sommerville asked if there was a salt section in the reservoir and was told that there was a 500 foot salt section at about 3,000 foot.

Chen Fusheng, chief engineer and deputy manager of ChuenLiang headquarters of Shengli, helped explain the drilling procedures in the province where production ranges from 3,000 to 9,000 meters. Three types of depth rated rigs are used to drill the field with 7,000 meter rigs being the deeper rated rigs. About 40 "team" members, working three shifts, are employed in the drilling of the wells, which are drilled for about $100 per meter. A 3,000 meter (approximately 9,000 feet) requires about one month to complete.

While efforts by local oil men to pin down specific needs from from the delegation they were encouraged to pursue the possibility of trade in the Shengli oil field. Xiao Ling, interpreter for the group, told the oil men that it would take patience to establish trade arrangements in China because of the diversity of the two cultures.

"Americans are very direct," she said. "They will walk up to someone, say 'hello my name is so and so, now let's get down to business.' But this is not the way of the Chinese. More time is needed to adjust."

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Retail sales post record 4.6 percent increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales, led by a stampede to auto showrooms, rose 4.6 percent in September for the largest monthly increase on record, the Commerce Department said.

The department reported Wednesday that total retail sales, after adjusting for seasations, climbed to a record $127.2 billion last month following a revised 1.5 percent increase in August.

Without the strong demand for new cars, retail sales would have risen a tiny 0.1 percent.

USX Corp. plans to spin off chemicals business

PITTSBURGH (AP) — USX Corp. plans to spin off its chemicals business to current managers in a deal expected to bring the beleaguered oil and steelmaking giant up to $600 million.

The stock-for-assets swap with the newly formed Aristech Chemical Corp. doesn't include USX's TENN-USS venture in Pasadena, Texas, which has been losing money.

At least one Wall Street analyst said Wednesday the deal was unlikely to discourage a possible takeover by financier Carl Icahn, who has offered to buy USX for nearly $8 billion.

New Hampshire has 2.9 percent joblessness

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in nearly seven years, the unemployment rate in one of the nation's 50 states has dropped below the 3 percent barrier, according to Labor Department figures.

Civilian joblessness throughout the nation has averaged 7 percent so far this year, but the unemployment rate in New Hampshire dropped from 3.6 percent in July to 2.9 percent in August, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics reported Wednesday. Texas dropped from 9.3 percent to 9.1 percent.

Businesses give immigration bill mixed reviews

NEW YORK (AP) — A compromise immigration bill that sets the stage for sweeping changes in laws governing the hiring of non-citizens has received mixed reviews from business and trade groups.

The measure, approved by the full House Wednesday, would create some of the biggest changes in immigration law in recent history and affect nearly every employer in the country.

But many business and trade groups complain the legislation places unfair burdens on employers, especially a provision that forces employers to keep records of every job applicant.

Pay equity supporters admit temporary defeat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proponents of pay equity have acknowledged temporary defeat in their fight for a study of the 63-year-old federal jobs classification system, but vowed to press on next year.

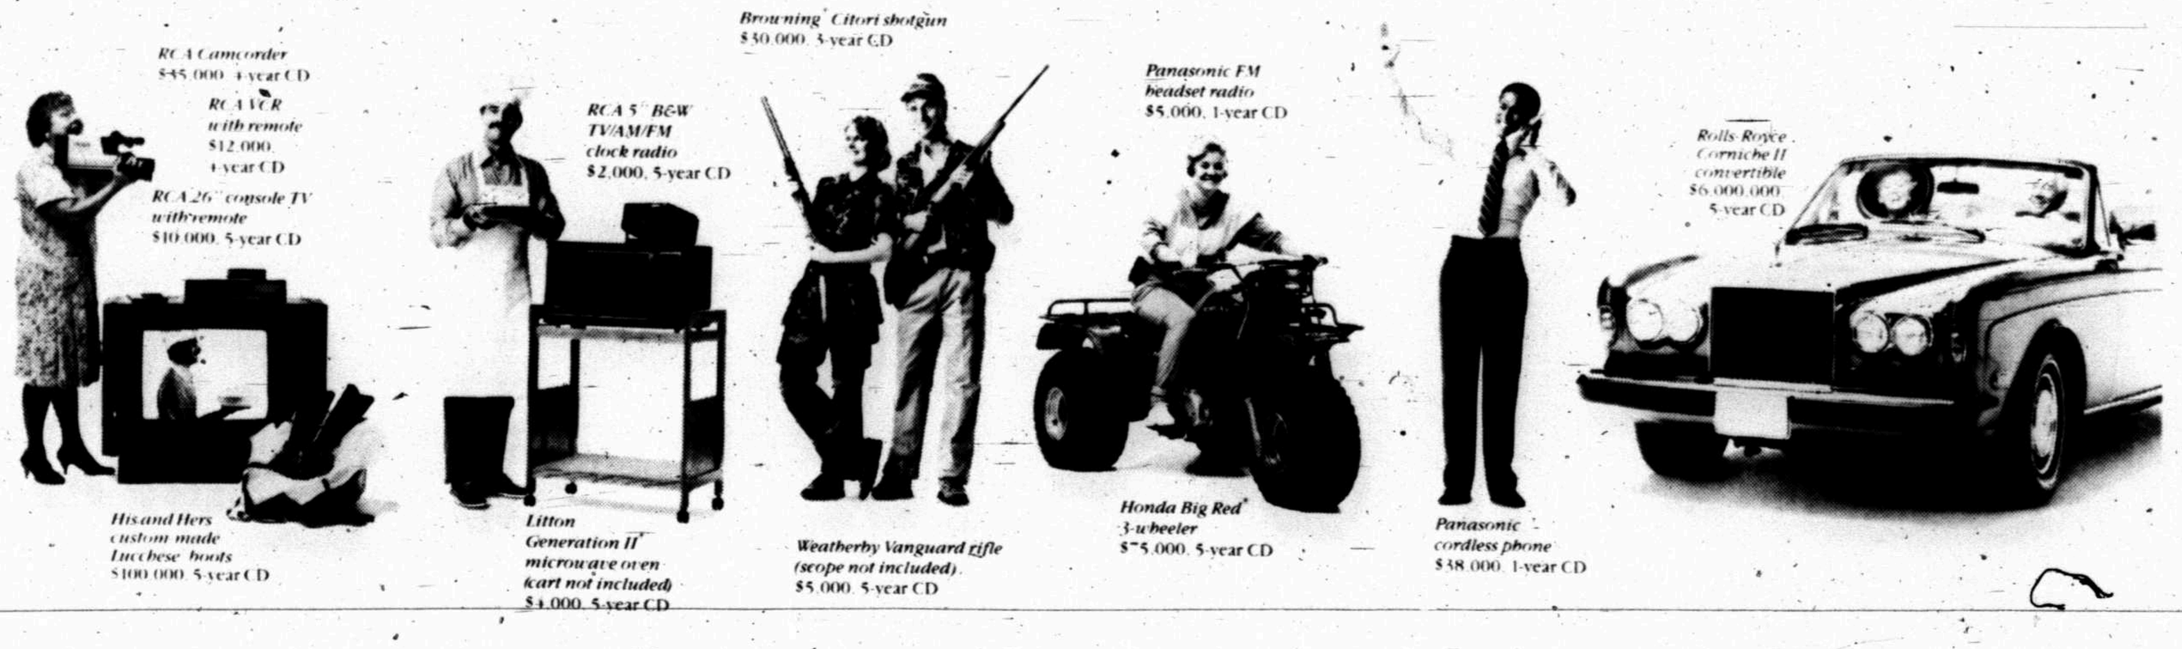

"We're going to go on and get this passed because this issue's not going to go away," Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, chief House sponsor of the study, said Wednesday.

It's not only declarer who should not rush in where angels fear to tread. The defenders, too, should consider carefully before committing themselves to a particular line. To illustrate our point, we've made one slight change in yesterday's hand.

In that column we saw that, after a club lead and continuation, declarer should ruff and lead a trump. If East wins and leads another club, declarer should not ruff—he must discard his diamond loser. Now the contract is secure if spades are 3-3 or, in the even that they don't break evenly, if the player with the long spades also has four or more diamonds.

However, winning the ace on the first trump lead is not the best defense. East should allow the king of trumps to win the first trick, and duck again when declarer continues with a low trump to his queen. This simple maneuver will force declarer to bow the knee.

When West shows out on the second round of trumps, declarer can no longer afford to play another trump—East will win and revert to clubs to set up a long trump in his hand for the setting trick. Declarer has to hope that spades are 3-3.

After winning the second trump declarer should cash the king, queen and ace of spades, and then the ace and king of diamonds. When these go through, declarer leads his 13th spade and ruffs with the jack of trumps. Now the contract is home. Whether or not East overruffs with the ace of trumps, declarer has no problem holding his losers to one trick in each suit except spades.

Note that declarer must time the hand exactly right to land his game. His problems have been caused by a simple, yet thoughtful defense.

Teen 'Mikey' promoting Life cereral

NEW YORK (AP) — John Gilchrist, who 15 years ago was "Mikey," the toddler coaxed in TV commercials by his two older brothers into eating Life cereal, has returned as a teen-ager to again promote the breafast food.

This time he's talking, and is rejected by a girl who refuses to believe he was the original "Mikey" who dug into a bowl of Life even though his two older brothers were pretty sure he wouldn't like it.

In the new commercial, the girl who doesn't believe he was the young Mikey tells Gilchrist that Mikey "would have been cuter."

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Pele, the former soccer star from Brazil, says being chosen grand marshal of the 1987 Rose Parade is "almost like winning the fourth World Cup."

Pele, who led his Brazilian teams to three championships in the international soccer tournament, was chosen Wednesday too the traditional New Year's Day parade.

"Also, the theme of the parade is important. The world is very complicated now with politics and bombs, and weapons and it's good that the Rose Parade chose 'A World of Wonders'" he said.

"Sport is the important thing, it doesn't matter what sport, it brings people together," said the 45-year-old Pele, the second foreigner chosen as grand marshal since the Rose Parade began in 1890. Thanat Khoman, an official from Thailand, became the first in 1967.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ronnie Milsap's "Lost in the Fifties Tonight (in the Still of the Night)" is the year's most recorded song of 1986 licensed by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

The group, which collects royalties for songwriters, on Wednesday also chose Troy Seals songwriter of the year. He and Mike Reid, a former defensive linebacker for the Cincinnati Bengals, wrote the song recorded by Milsap.

Seals' songwriter award was for "Lost in the Fifties Tonight," "Country Girls," "Drinkin' and Dreamin'," "Seven Spanish Angels" and "Who's Gonna Fill Their Shoes."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bronze sculpture of the late Princess Grace of Monaco, who gave up movie stardom for a royal marriage, has taken its place in that pantheon of America's historical and cultural greats, the National Portrait Gallery.

Nancy Reagan unveiled the bronze head Wednesday night at a black-tie reception attended by the princess' widower, Prince Ranier III of Monaco, and his three children, Princess Caroline, Princess Stephanie and Prince Albert.

The first lady paid a warm tribute to the friend she knew as Grace Kelly in their days together in Hollywood in the 1950s.

Grace Kelly, born to a prominent Irish-American family in Philadelphia, gave up her movie career to marry Prince Ranier in 1956 and move to the tiny principality on the Riviera. She was killed there in a car accident near her palace in 1982 at age 52.

"Her life made all of our lives richer and will continue to do so for the many generations that will wander these great halls," Mrs. Reagan said before lifting a red veil off the sculpture, which shows an older woman with a serious mien, her hair tucked in a bun and lips tight together.

Dutch artist Kees Verkade, a favorite of the princess, cast the bronze head in 1983 from a portrait of Grace taken in 1980.

Prince Ranier, who donated the sculpture to the museum, said it was hard to part with the work of art, but "it is here where it belongs, in the heart of the United States, Grace's land of birth, of work and of fame.

"So, with great pleasure and, of course, emotion, I donate this portrait of one of America's greatest ladies so that she may forever be remembered in the simplicity and beauty of this bronze," he said.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

'Asset management' accounts are for street name holdings

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have always taken care of my investment portfolio of about 30 stocks. All the stocks are registered in my name. I am not an in-and-out trader, but I buy and sell occasionally.

A new broker at a large brokerage house, through whom I recently bought stock for the first time, is pressuring me to put all my stocks into a "street name" account with his firm. He points out that would make it easier to buy and sell in the future.

What is your opinion on this?

A. It has its good and bad points.

Doyle

When your securities are in a street name account, they are registered in the brokerage firm's name. You remain the "beneficial owner" — the real owner.

You get periodic statements, usually monthly, showing the status of your account and listing all the securities and cash in it. Dividends and/or interest paid on your securities are credited to your account.

Some brokerage houses automatically send customers checks for that money. Others don't and customers' cash sits in their accounts as "free credit balances," where it earns nothing. Letters keep coming to this column from readers who have long delays and problems prying money loose from straight street name accounts and obtaining checks after selling stocks and bonds.

That problem can be licked by instructing your broker to open a money market mutual fund for you and put all your street name account money into it.

Many brokerages have "asset management accounts" for street name holdings. With that arrangement, your cash is "swept" into a money market mutual fund, where it earns dividends and on which you can write checks. In general, that's a good deal.

Your broker is right about it being easier to sell when your stocks are in street name, because his firm already has your stocks and you don't have to deliver certificates to him. But it's really no easier to buy, unless you have money in the account. Then, you don't have to write and send a check.

A problem can arise in getting shareholder reports, annual meeting notices and other communications from companies whose stocks you leave in street name. All too many brokerages are notoriously slow in forwarding those things.

With your securities in street name, your broker has a handy record of all your holdings. He might make occasional or frequent sell and buy recommendations, which might be good or bad. And there's always the possibility that his suggestions would be motivated by his desire to pick up commissions.

• • •

Q. Do you and your "blue-eyed finance officer" have a street name brokerage account?

A. No. We have our securities registered in our names and keep the certificates in our bank safe deposit box — with two exceptions.

Shares of stock being acquired through dividend reinvestment plans are left with the plan agents. And we never request certificates for mutual fund shares, which are held by the funds' custodian banks. That's far more convenient, because full and fractional shares are involved.

• • •

Q. Suppose I leave my stocks with a brokerage in a street name account and the firm goes bankrupt. What happens to my holdings?

A. You'll be made whole by the Securities Investor Protection Corp. SIPC, established by act of Congress in 1970, protects each investor's holdings left with a failed brokerage firm up to $500,000, including up to $100,000 in cash.

• • •

Q. I opened an account at a brokerage house and the man with whom I deal calls himself a "financial consultant." Isn't he a broker?

A. Sure, he is. "Broker" is the generic name for a person with whom you place orders to buy and sell. In recent years, they've taken on other fancy titles, including such things as "registered representative" and "account executive." I hark back to when they were called "customers' men." That, of course, was when there were few women on Wall Street.

Town stops without barber

STAFFORD, Kan. (AP) — Life here just isn't the same since the last barbershop closed.

Just two years ago there were three barbers in this town of 1,400 people, but two have retired and the third left about six months ago.

To some residents, that's more traumatic than the recent loss of a couple of restaurants, a molasses plant and more than a half-dozen other businesses.

"A barber they have to have, like a doctor or a dentist," said Hugh Patchin Jr., a local banker. "Those other things, they figure they can do without. But they sure got concerned about this."

But Patchin says a town without a barber shop is missing something.

"There's just something about goin' down to the barber shop, gettin' in the chair, and shootin' the breeze," he said.

Former local bank official re-indicted for embezzlement

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A former Midland bank vice president and loan officer was re-indicted by a federal grand jury Wednesday for embezzlement, sharing the benefits of a loan, making false entries and receiving commissions for procuring loans.

Olen Mack Brock, former vice president and loan officer of the defunct First National Bank of Midland, was indicted July 10 on three counts of embezzlement and sharing the benefits of a loan, but U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton dismissed the charges August 12.

The seven-count indictment — handed down Wednesday by federal grand jurors — alleges Brock received an unspecified amount of money from a loan to Sam Orr of Midland in 1981.

Brock also is charged with fraudulently causing $87,000 to be loaned to the Bost Land Corp., and receiving $12,500 from that loan.

The third count alleges Brock made a false entry of $9,526.93 in loan proceeds to Bost Land Corp., and disbursed those proceeds to Midland Financial Services, which he owned.

In a fourth count, Brock is charged with obtaining a $2,973.07 money order, which he allegedly reported had been purchased by Western National Bank of Odessa, and disbursed the proceeds to Midland Financial Services.

The fifth count of the indictment charges that Brock received an unspecified amount of money through a loan transaction to J.L. Davis of Midland.

Counts six and seven allege Brock received $30,400 and $25,000 through loan transactions to Davis in April 1982 and January 1983.

If convicted, Brock could face up to 27 years in prison.

Brock left the First National Bank of Midland before it failed Oct. 14, 1983, when the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. declared it insolvent. The bank reportedly had lost millions of dollars in soured energy loans.

Since 1985, five ex-bankers, including three former bank presidents, have been convicted by federal juries in Midland for embezzlement and bank fraud.

— Eddie Thomas, 43, former president of the failed MetroBank of Midland, is serving a 20-year prison term and has been ordered to pay $550,000 in restitution. He was convicted of 14 counts of embezzlement, misapplication of funds and making false entries.

— Roger Harris Clark, 43, an engineer who was a former director of Permian Bank & Trust of Odessa and owner of manufacturing companies in Odessa and Tulsa, Okla., was sentenced by Bunton to 10 years in prison and was ordered to pay $378,317 in restitution. Clark was convicted of five counts of mail fraud, wire fraud, wire-transfer fraud and making false statements to secure a bank loan.

— Max Malone, 53, former president of Permian Bank and Trust of Odessa, was sentenced by Bunton to 24 years in prison and was ordered to pay $317,410 in restitution. Malone was convicted of 13 counts of embezzlement, misapplication of funds and making false entries. Bunton dismissed one of the counts.

Former Odessa bankers face charges of embezzling funds

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Two former Odessa bankers were indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury in the seventh major bank case filed since 1985. The men face charges ranging from embezzlement and misapplication of funds to fraudulently participating in loans.

Kenneth Martin Jumper, former chairman of the board and chief executive officer of National Bank of Odessa, could be sentenced up to 11 years in prison if convicted on each of the three counts alleged in the indictment filed Wednesday by Assistant U.S. Attorney James K. Blankinship.

Indicted under 14 counts was Ricky Lan Jumper, former vice president of National Bank of Odessa's commercial lending department. He faces up to 60 years in prison if convicted of the charges.

Kenneth Martin Jumper was charged with:

— Receiving $100,000 from William B. Sears of Odessa for procuring a loan and extending $2 million credit to Son's Fabrication Inc. of Odessa. Sears has since died.

— Receiving $90,000 from a $2 million loan to Son's Fabrication Inc.

— Failing to disclose his interest in DAK Drilling Co. to the bank's board of directors, which he partly-owned.

Ricky Lan Jumper was charged with:

— Making a false statement to the bank's directors by securing a $200,000 to purchase blowout preventer, but using the proceeds to invest with John W. Colgin, an NBO customer.

— Making a false statement on a Stock-Secured Extension of Credit statement from State National Bank of Odessa that a $200,000 loan would be used to purchase a blowout preventer.

— Receiving profits in the amount of $150,000, $150,000, $100,000 and $100,000 through loans to Terry Lawson, David Pearson, Lawson and Pearson Partnership and Forest Gillham.

— Making false entries in the minutes of the bank's board of directors meetings.

— Obtaining a $250,000 loan from State National Bank to purchase a blowout preventer and using the proceeds to invest in business with John W. Colgin.

— Making fraudulent statements to State National Bank that the purpose of the $250,000 loan was to purchase oil field equipment.

— Receiving profits in the amount of $100,000 each through loans to Forest Gillham, Lawson and Pearson and David Pearson.

— Receiving profits in the amount of $100,000, $150,000, $100,000, $150,000 and $200,000 through loans to Terry Lawson, David Pearson and Forest Gillham.

— Making a false statement to State National Bank that the purpose of a $260,000 loan was to purchase oil field equipment.

— Receiving $10,000 from William B. Sears for procuring a $2 million loan from National Bank of Odessa for Son's Fabrication Inc.

— Misapplying $90,000 by causing a loan of that amount to be paid to Son's Fabrication Inc.

— Failing to disclose to the bank that he owned an interest in DAK Drilling Co.

— Obtaining a loan suspence ticket in the amount of $1,377,000 from National Bank of Odessa to purchase a drilling rig and using the proceeds to repay participants in an investment with John Colgin.

— Embezzling $305,000 by "fraudulently causing" the bank to fund notes from Son's Fabrication Inc. and converting the proceeds to his own benefit.

Defense witness testifies murder victim fired at defendant first

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Defense witnesses continued their testimony early today in the murder trial of a Midland man, accused of the 1985 shooting death of a security guard and, for the second day, a defense witness testified the defendant was shot at by the victim before the two men struggled.

Ruben Bujanda, 35, is accused in the June 16, 1985, death of 26-year-old James Belis of Odessa. He is being tried in Judge Vann Culp's 238th District Court.

Carlos Ramos took the stand for the defense and told the seven-woman, five-man jury he saw Belis shoot twice at the defendant, who then walked up to Belis. He said the two men struggled and two more shots were fired, killing Belis.

But, under cross-examination by prosecutor David Rosado, Ramos said that, while the two wrestled, he heard two shots fired from an automatic pistol. He had testified that Belis' weapon was a revolver; he claimed he did not know who fired the shots from the automatic.

Midland pathologist Dr. David Schneidmann testified that Belis, who was working security at a racetrack in southeast Midland County, suffered two gunshot wounds to the head — one in the left forehead area and another in the right forehead area.

Schneidmann said the wound to the right forehead was probably made by a gun held less than two feet away because it exhibited signs of a "contact wound" — evidence of expelled gases from the gun barrel. Schneidmann said he did not know what caliber of bullet caused the fatal wounds.

Former Midland County Sheriff's investigator Monnie Weddell testified earlier that a call was received about 8:40 p.m. Sunday, June 16. He said investigators found the body when they arrived in an area "cluttered" with trash and beer bottles. He said he found several nine-millimeter shells near the body, but that investigators never found a murder weapon.

According to testimony, there were at least several hundred spectators and dozens of vehicles parked in the immediate area of the track where Belis was shot.

Charlie Coleman Jr., who was working security with Belis the day of the shooting, testified that a dispute arose about the outcome of a horse race. He said at least two men produced at least two weapons, a pistol and a shotgun, and there were several shots fired in what deteriorated into a melee.

Coleman, who was stabbed several times in the incident and hospitalized for a week afterward, testified Belis and another man struggled over one of the guns.

West Texas universities will go on chopping block again, Shaw says

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

West Texas universities and state institutions will be on the chopping block again when the Legislature meets in January, said State Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, addressing the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

"Both institutions (University of Texas of the Permian Basin and Sul Ross State University) have been on the chopping block and I guarantee they will be there again," Shaw said at the Tuesday meeting.

The commission also accepted a $4.8 million budget at the meeting and favorably reviewed a $2 million project at the Big Spring airpark.

Shaw, a Democrat for the 69th district who has recently been appointed to the appropriations committee, said the state's budget shortfall was not solved at the special session.

The Legislature could be facing a deficit of up to $7 billion when it meets in January and further cuts and taxes will be necessary, he said.

"It's nasty down there and it's going to be even rougher in January," he said.

Big Spring's Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf, the Big Spring State Hospital, UTPB and Sul Ross will be considered for cuts again by lawmakers, he said.

"People need to understand when we talk about cuts, they mean us," Shaw said.

Rural legislators have their work cut out for them in protecting area institutions from cuts, he said.

"We're outnumbered in rural areas, particularly in West Texas. We have to be very skilled and articulate on the issues to sell members why it's important to have these things," he said.

TUEC files third application to PUC to refund fuel costs

From Staff Reports

Texas Utilities Electric Company in November will file its third application this year asking the Public Utility Commission to authorize a refund of fuel cost savings to its customers, according to a press release from the company.

The refund, totaling approximately $58 million, including interest, is the result of lower fuel costs in July, August and September.

The refund will be made in accordance with the PUC's fuel rule requiring refunds to be made if amounts from customers exceed four percent of an electric utility's authorized annual fuel costs or $40 million, whichever is lower.

The company will ask the PUC to authorize the refund at the earliest possible date — probably January — through a credit to customers' bills.

Under the company's proposal, a residential customer with an average January usage of 1,200 kilowatt-hours would receive a refund of about $10.

Decreasing market prices of natural gas and the company's continuing efforts to obtain lower-priced gas supplies have resulted in lower fuel costs than expected in late 1985 and 1986, according to the press release.

As a result, the company requested a five percent reduction in fuel charges, approved by the PUC effective with March 1986 billings. Refunds totaling $205 million have been authorized. Approximately $140 million was refunded in May and $65 million is being refunded on customers' October bills.

Because the fuel cost savings are expected to continue in 1987, TUEC will also ask the PUC to approve lower fuel charges.

Proposed immigration bill already affecting workplaces in Southwest

DALLAS (AP) — Even though the immigration bill had not received final congressional approval, it was already having an effect in the kitchen of Andrew's, a trendy restaurant.

Anticipating enactment of the bill's civil and criminal penalties against employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens, restaurant managers have already started reducing the number of possible illegal aliens on the payroll.

And, said Andrew's vice president Greg Williams, "We will be more careful about hiring a Hispanic person."

Reaction to the proposed legislation, a House-Senate compromise measure approved by the House and sent Wednesday to the Senate, has been swift in the Southwest, where illegal aliens pour across the U.S.-Mexico border every day and where some industries count heavily on their labor.

Those near the border say the congressional attempt to stem the flow by sealing off job opportunities probably won't work, that aliens will keep coming and keep finding ways to outrun the law.

Hispanic groups have long opposed employer sanctions as discriminatory against Hispanics, and employers have complained that they'll be hard-pressed to find legal residents to fill the low-paying, hard-labor jobs traditionally held by new illegal immigrants.

"You can't get people to work eight hours a day in 110-degree sun for $4.50 an hour," said Dale Micetic, president of Terrain Systems Inc., a Scottsdale, Ariz., landscaping company.

Micetic's company had eight of its 70 employees picked up last week from a job site by U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service agents. About 90 percent of his job applications come from illegal aliens, he said.

"It's going to make me more hesitant to hire Hispanics. It puts the burden of proof on the employer, and I'll have to spend more administrative time checking out someone's credentials," Micetec said.

"You're darned if you do and darned if you don't," said Tim Underwood, a manager with the Lofland Co., a Dallas construction firm. "You don't want to penalize a race, but you certainly don't want to break the law."

The employer penalties would kick in after a six-month education period. Employers would have to keep records to show they checked documents to verify employees were legal residents. The civil penalties would range up to $10,000 per illegal alien, while maximum criminal punishment could amount to six months in prison or a $3,000 fine.

Unable to afford higher wages, construction and landscape companies will probably continue hiring those lacking legal documentation.

Most Texas lawmakers vote against immigration bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Far-reaching amnesty for illegal aliens and criminal employer sanctions contained in the compromise immigration bill prompted more than two-thirds of the Texas congressional delegation to vote no on the measure.

Despite the Texas vote, the Democratic-controlled House passed the bill on a 283-128 vote late Wednesday. Approval by the Republican-run Senate is expected this week.

"In Texas I think it's going to cause a lot of problems," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis. "We have a lot of aliens in Texas and now they're going to be able to bring their families in under U.S. immigration laws."

Barton said Texas could suffer more than most states because it has the longest border with Mexico and is in the middle of an unemployment crisis brought about by the collapse of the oil industry.

"My primary opposition was the guest worker provisions that would allow potentially up to 2 to 6 million people into our country over the next few years," said Rep. Michael Andrews, D-Houston.

Andrews agreed with Barton that it is ludicrous to grant a super amnesty at a time when Texas is suffering from a high jobless rate.

Rep. Dick Armey, R-Denton, also voted against the bill, because of its amnesty provisions.

"Granting amnesty to 4 million illegal aliens to solve the immigration problem is like trying to solve the problem of illegal drugs in this country by legalizing cocaine," Armey said.

Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, said the bill "opens the floodgates" to illegal aliens because those granted amnesty will be able to bring in family members and unfairly affects employers by placing the enforcement burden on their backs through criminal sanctions.

"I think that the only way to deal with the problem is to strengthen the border patrols," Boulter said. "We need to make a massive effort at the border, which costs a lot of money."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, sounding a theme heard among most Texans who supported the bill, said that although the bill has problems, something has to be passed so the country can begin gaining control of its borders.

"This is not a perfect bill, but apparently it's the best we can get. I intend to vote for it," Bentsen said. "We just have to get control of our borders and obviously we don't now have that control."

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, voiced strong opposition, saying he plans to look into whether the bill's expenditures exceed the congressional budget ceiling.

House Democrats voting in favor of the bill were: John Bryant, Albert Bustamante, Jake Pickle, Solomon Ortiz, Charles Wilson and Jim Wright. Jack Brooks did not record a vote.

Democrats voting against were: Michael Andrews, Jim Chapman, Ron Coleman, E. Kika de la Garza, Martin Frost, Henry B. Gonzalez, Ralph M. Hall, J. Marvin Leath, Mickey Leland and Charles W. Stenholm.

Texas Republicans voted unanimously against the bill.

In Austin, an official of the Texas Civil Liberties Union said employer sanctions in the bill will hurt undocumented workers.

"Employer sanctions not only will be used as a pretext for discrimination against Hispanics in the job market, but they also play upon latent racism in the workforce itself and help divide one group of workers against another," said a statement by Jim Harrington, TCLU legal counsel. "If the labor movement needs anything, it needs solidarity."

IMMIGRATION

Micetic said. Fake and stolen credentials are likely, he said.

And as long as the economy in Mexico is depressed, the flow will continue, he said. "If my family is starving and there's a job 200 miles to the north, I can become very creative at getting that job."

The measure will allow up to 350,000 foreign nationals to work as farm workers in the United States, require the federal government to provide up to $4 billion over four years for education, health care and social services for legalized aliens and grant amnesty to aliens who have been in the United States since Jan. 1, 1982.

But the amnesty will have little effect on construction projects around Dallas, where "a lot of the people working jobs now probably came over since then," says Dave Burns, senior project manager for Rucker Construction Co.

Labor costs will go up if illegal aliens are effectively taken out of the job pool, he said. "They're (Congress) going to cripple the construction industry in Texas as we know it."

The Dallas City Council, by a 7-3 vote, went on record Wednesday opposing the legislation.

The bill would create new protections against employment discrimination based on national origin or citizenship status and establishes a special counsel in the Justice Department to enforce the protections.

But that hasn't been enough for some Hispanic groups.

"We think that this bill is tragic, that this bill is a hoax, trying to get people to believe it will cut back on the flow of illegal immigrants," said Elsa Nava, state policy analyst for the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Educational Fund in San Antonio.

The U.S. Catholic Conference Immigration and Refugee Service has decided to neither endorse nor oppose the immigration bill, because the group likes some aspects, and dislikes others.

"We favor the amnesty, we oppose employer sanctions, and one of our big concerns is what happens to the people who came in after 1982," said Lily Gutierrez, deputy director of the El Paso office, located a few blocks from the Rio Grande, the border between Texas and Mexico.

The law won't provide more visas for Mexicans, so backlogs in legal channels will continue, she said, and "people will keep giving up waiting and come illegally. I doubt it's going to be any different on the border."

INS inspector among 29 arrested for gun running

LAREDO (AP) — Federal agents said seven of Laredo's 29 registered firearms dealers and an inspector for the Immigration and Naturalization Service were among 29 people arrested on charges of helping smuggle more than 7,500 weapons to suspected Mexican narcotics traffickers.

The arrests on Wednesday came after 39 sealed indictments were handed up Tuesday by a federal grand jury.

Phil Chojnacki, special agent in charge of the Houston office of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said the government seized only about a dozen of the weapons.

The recovered firearms include five machine guns and six or seven handguns, Chojnacki said. The rest of the weapons could not be located, and Chojnacki said he didn't know whether the firearms were traded for narcotics.

Firearms dealers used phony U.S. documents to cover up the illegal sale of guns to Mexicans believed to be drug traffickers, Chojnacki said.

Chojnacki said the indictments were returned as a result of the second major sting of "Operation Alliance" since the cooperative border project began. The arrests follow a September sweep in which 27 people were apprehended for allegedly aiding in similar gun sales in Brownsville.

Both sweeps were coordinated under a joint federal and local effort launched by the Reagan administration to slow the narcotics flow along the U.S.-Mexican border.

Six Laredo police officers and 31 federal agents took part in the arrests, all of which were peaceful, Chojnacki said.

Hospital to allow abortions for poor

FORT WORTH (AP) — Tarrant County commissioners approved a budget that will allow elective abortions for the poor at a publicly funded hospital despite threats by anti-abortion groups to sue.

The commissioners voted 3-2 to approve the 1986-87 budget for John Peter Smith Hospital, a county facility. The budget includes funds to provide abortions for needy women who request them.

Neil Adams, a lawyer for the Northeast Tarrant County Right-to-Life Association said it's likely the group will file a lawsuit protesting the tax-supported abortions.

He said the suit may focus on alleged civil rights violations of employees whom the lawyer said have been told to either help perform abortions or lose their jobs.

Hill names committee to study judge selection

AUSTIN (AP) — A committee of 100 people was named Wednesday by Chief Justice John L. Hill of the Texas Supreme Court to work for the merit selection of Texas judges.

The committee first was suggested by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Gib Lewis, who will serve as co-vice chairmen.

Hill, who will chair the committee, said its first meeting would be Oct. 25 in Austin.

Committee members will consider a plan drawn up by a State Bar committee in which a 15-member commission would submit three nominees for a judicial vacancy to the governor, who then would decide who to appoint, Hill said.

After an appointed judge had served two years, he would be subject to approval by voters, but would run without an opponent. If the judge is approved by voters, he would serve a new six-year term. If not, a new judge would have to be appointed.

MPD investigates theft of lawn, sporting equipment

From Staff Reports

The Midland Police Department is investigating the theft of lawn equipment and sporting gear valued at more than $1,500 from a local residence.

According to reports, a set of tires valued at $650, fishing gear valued at $600, a lawnmower and edger valued at $550, and a boat cover valued at $50 were stolen from a residence in the 4700 block of W. Illionois Ave. Reports said the items were taken sometime between 5:30 p.m. Tuesday and 4:30 p.m. Wednesday.

In other reports, golf clubs valued at $175 and a golf bag valued at $50 were stolen from a residence in the 5200 block of Brazos, police said. The victim, Michael Dancy, told police the items were stolen Wednesday between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m.

A cable box valued at $175 was stolen from a residence in the 2500 block of W. Francis, police said. Yolanda Ruiz, 2501 W. Francis, told police the box was stolen after someone entered the residence through an east side window. The burglary occurred Wednesday, sometime after noon, police said.

But Luis Villalobos, the only witness called by defense attorneys James Bobo and Jim Jordan Wednesday, testified through an interpreter that the defendant and Belis began arguing, and that Belis cursed at Bujanda and shot at him several times as he walked away.

Villalobos told the jury that, after the shots were fired, Bujanda lunged toward Belis. "I think for desperation."

"After awhile, Ruben got up," he said. "But the security guard did not move."

He said Bujanda staggered when he rose, bled from the nose and mouth, and had to be helped to a waiting vehicle.

Big Spring man in good condition after accident

From Staff Reports

A 43-year-old Big Spring man is in good condition after a two-vehicle accident late Wednesday in west Midland County, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Woodrow Thomas Rutledge Jr., of Big Spring, was listed in good condition early today in Midland Memorial Hospital with facial lacerations, neck and back injuries suffered in the accident that occurred about 8:20 p.m. Wednesday five miles west of Midland on Farm to Market Road 1788.

According to DPS reports, a 1981 Chevrolet Corvette driven by Rutledge was traveling southbound on 1788 at a "high rate of speed" when it struck a tractor trailer traveling northbound on 1788 and attempting to make a left turn into Warfield Truck Stop.

Reports said the car driven by Rutledge left more than 300 feet of skid marks.

Sul Ross and UTPB are important to help West Texas diversify economically, Shaw said.

"We may be rural. We may be in an area not considered important, but we've played our role in shaping this state. You will get more back out of us than you put into us," he said.

During the meeting the commission adopted its 1986-87 budget of $4.8 million.

The commission received $4,870,902 in state and federal grants and spent $4,814,431, leaving a surplus of $56,471.

The surplus is due to about an 11 percent increase in grants from the federal government, said Ernie Crawford, executive director of the commission.

An increase of $86,000 in operating funds and a $513,000 increase in pass-through funds came from two major new grants the Basin received, Crawford said.

The new grants include a $628,968 Maternal and Infant Health Improvement Act and a $325,000 Primary Health Care Service program.

Most of the increase in funding is coming from federal programs, he said.

However, the commission, which administers federal and state grants, has seen a 35 percent decrease overall during the last six years, Crawford said.

The commission has also cut its staff from 65 to 35 employees in the past six years and will give no salary increases for the second straight year, Crawford said.

The commission favorably reviewed adding a 4,500-feet runway with lights and an access road to the Big Spring McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark.

Big Spring is requesting $1,862,387 from the Federal Aviation Administration that they will match with $206,932 from airpark funds.

The McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark is a business service general aviation airpark.

Now your child can master algebra. With help from Sylvan Learning Center.

When problems with algebra threaten to hold your child back, you need to find a solution. Fast. Because the longer you wait, the further behind your child will fall.

Sylvan Learning Center can help. We'll teach your child to conquer the basics of algebra—and give him or her a better start toward a successful future.

The first step: An appraisal of your child's current abilities.
We begin by pinpointing your child's strengths and weaknesses in numeration, fractions, multiplication, time and measurement.

We test for auditory discrimination and vision, as well.

Then, based on the test results, we tailor an algebra program to meet your child's needs.

The duration of the program varies. Your child may need to review and reinforce basic math skills before proceeding to the algebra phase.

A proven effective program.
The algebra program consists of pre-identified skills arranged in sequential order on computer disks specially designed by Sylvan.

Your child's lessons—begin at the level we know he or she can handle. And they progress at a pace that will be challenging, but not overwhelming.

The program is directed by a fully certified teacher, along with specially trained instructors. There are never any more than three students per teacher, so your child is guaranteed personal attention whenever answers, support, praise or encouragement is needed.

You'll be kept informed. Your child will be rewarded.
You and your child's regular classroom teacher will be kept regularly informed of your child's progress in algebra.

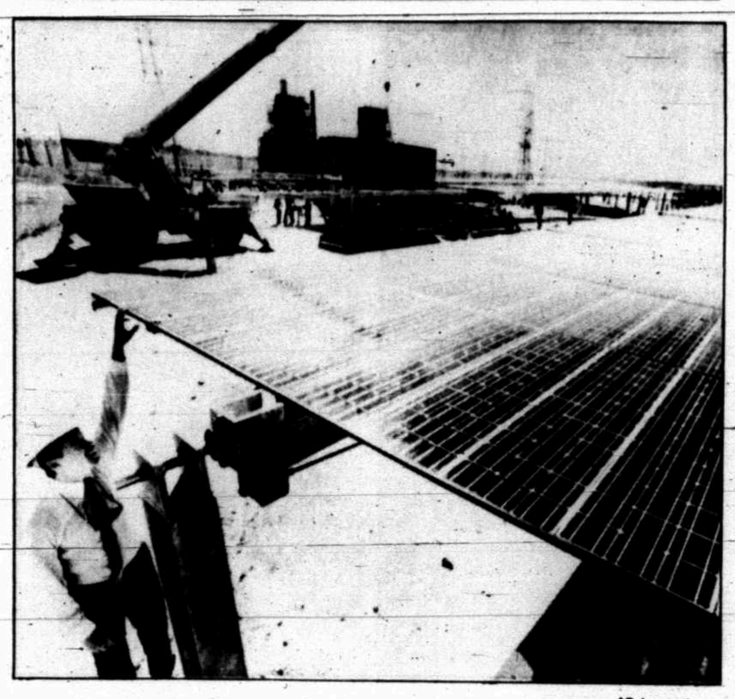

When a lesson is done right or a tough problem is finally overcome, your child's achievement will be rewarded with a token, good toward gifts from the Sylvan Store. Students can redeem the tokens right away, or save for things they want.

You'll see the difference!
The results of Sylvan instruction show up not just on the report card, but also in a reward proudly displayed, an exciting recounting of the day's lesson, and a whole new self-confidence and desire to learn that you may never have seen—or thought possible—before.

The Sylvan program is individualized. Your child can start any time. If you want to see your child do better, the time is now.

John Hoffner, manager of the solar project near Decker Lake, in Austin, surveys one of the 17-by-10-foot panels being installed. The plant will eventually produce 300 kilowatts of electricity for Austin.

Solar energy will power hundreds of city's homes

AUSTIN (AP) — City officials are scheduled in December to dedicate a new solar energy power plant that will produce up to 300 kilowatts of electricity for Austin.

Workers have begun placing 154 solar energy panels on three acres near the natural gas-fired Decker Creek power station in East Austin, says John Hoffner, manager of the solar project for the city electric department.

Rows of the 17-by-10-foot panels make up the plant, which is due for completion in mid-November. Each panel can generate 2,000 watts of electricity. Hundreds of small, rectangular silicon solar cells in the panels will track the sun as it moves across the sky and convert sunlight into electricity.

Three hundred kilowatts is enough electricity to supply 100 to 200 homes, Hoffner said. The output is small compared with the amount conventional plants can generate, but the project could lead to similar plants as solar technology develops, he said.

"We consider this a research and development project," Hoffner said. After about 18 months of tests, the electric department will consider another solar plant, he said.

Hoffner said solar energy use by utilities has grown in the past five years and the costs have drastically dropped since such panels were first introduced.

For example, he said, a solar cell cost $1,000 in the 1950s. Today it costs $5, he said.

Still, the project is "a little bit more than a lab" because it will be a working power plant, Hoffner said.

Arco Solar Inc., a subsidiary of Atlantic Richfield Co., is designer and builder of the $2.7 million project, which is financed by bonds approved by voters in October 1983.

The panels have been tested against 100 mph winds and one-inch hailstones traveling 70 mph. The panels also can produce electricity under overcast skies, at about 25 to 40 percent of capacity, he said.

The electric department has selected an innovative sun-tracking system called a passive tracker for the plant, Hoffner said.

Instead of using a motor and computer to control the panels, cylinders on each side of the panels will be filled with Freon. The sun will heat the Freon and push a piston, which will tilt the panels to follow the sun.

Raju Yenamandra, project manager for Arco, said the company has built larger solar projects, but this marks the first time it has used the tracking mechanism.

The device, invented by Robbins Engineering Co. of Ridgecrest, Calif., should be about $25,000 cheaper than using a motor, Yenamandra said. If one panel fails to operate, the rest will keep working, he said.

Sun's energy turns salt water into electricity

EL PASO (AP) — The sun's rays were turned into electricity using a salt-water pond, possibly saving a factory thousands of dollars by producing enough power to serve 10 houses a year, scientists said.

The solar pond at the Bruce Foods Corp. last year also became the first in the country to provide industrial process heat, needed in the company's canning operation, said Robert Reid, project manager and chairman of the Mechanical and Industrial Engineering Department at the University of Texas-El Paso.

The pond will produce 100 kilowatts of electricity "or approximately enough energy to serve 10 households a year," Reid said at the startup ceremony Wednesday.

Energy from the solar pond will save Bruce Foods $20,000 in electric bills annually, he estimated.

"Solar ponds are a world technology," said Reid. "They are low-cost...you dig a hole in the ground, put a (water) line in and throw some salt in."

The project started 3½ years ago as a joint effort by UTEP, the Bureau of Reclamation, an agency of the U.S. Department of the Interior, Bruce Foods and El Paso Electric Corp.

The 83-acre pond is 10 feet deep, has a capacity for two million gallons of water and needed 1,700 tons of salt. The salt was donated by the U.S. Department of Energy's nuclear waste disposal site near Carlsbad, N.M., said Stan Hightower of the Advance Energy Applications division of the Bureau of Reclamations.

Although Israel and Australia each have a solar pond power system, Hightower and Reid said this was the first time in the United States electric power was derived from a solar pond.

Plans are to use the pond in a desalination process next year, turning salty well water into drinking water, said Reid.

Electricity from a solar pond is generated when the sun heats salty water at the bottom of the pond. Because it is lighter than salt water, fresh water layers remain at the top, serving as insulation to prevent the heat from escaping back into the air.

The hot salty water is used to boil Freon which produces a vapor that goes through a turbine, making it turn to produce electricity.

"The engine is like a refrigerator working backward," Reid said, explaining that whereas a refrigerator expels useless heat through its back, the solar-pond engine uses the heat to turn the turbine.

Using the sun-heated water is an alternative to burning coal or other fuels to run a turbine and make electricity, Reid said. In areas of abundant sun, such as the Southwest, solar ponds are an attractive alternative.

The solar pond power system works on simpler technology than a photovoltaic plant, one using silicon cells to produce electricity from the sun. Installation of one of those systems began Wednesday in Austin.

One man killed in domestic disturbance

DAINGERFIELD (AP) — One man died and two women were wounded Wednesday night when a domestic disturbance in a rural community ended in shotgun fire, according to county authorities.

A suspect, Leo James Lewis, 21, was arrested by state troopers after he drove across five counties, authorities said. Officers said a woman in the car with Lewis, Patsy Fleming, 18, claimed she had been forced to accompany him.

Morris County sheriff's deputy Chet Thomas identified the dead man as James Earl Starnes, in his 40s.

Thomas said Starnes was killed when a shotgun-wielding assailant walked into a rural home 10 miles north of Daingerfield and started shooting. Two women, Lena Mae Everett and Helen Fleming, were wounded. Two children in the home were unharmed.

Morris County authorities said that Lewis was the boyfriend of Miss Fleming. Mrs. Fleming is the young woman's mother and Mrs. Everett is an aunt. Deputy Thomas said that Starnes was a boyfriend of Mrs. Fleming.

Mrs. Everett was listed in critical condition at St. Michael's Hospital in Texarkana. Mrs. Fleming was in guarded condition at the same hospital.

After the shooting, Lewis drove west in his car, Thomas said. County authorities alerted the highway patrol and Lewis' car was stopped about 60 miles from the scene. Officers said Lewis offered no resistance.

Ms. Fleming told officers Lewis had forced her to accompany him, though she acknowledged that he was her boyfriend. She was released from custody. Lewis was held in the Morris County jail in Daingerfield on an investigative charge of murder, authorities said.

Investigators recovered a 20-gauge shotgun at the shooting scene.

Judge refuses to extradite man who jumped bail

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas man who jumped bail after being convicted in a 1974 shooting that left a woman crippled, remains free in Michigan because a judge refuses to extradite him, authorities say.

The man, K. C. Roberson, 49, has been arrested repeatedly in Michigan, but district Judge Dale A. Riker in Flint, Mich., has refused to order Roberson returned to Dallas for sentencing.

Riker said the wheels of justice must spin slowly sometimes to protect the innocent. But he has agreed to schedule a trial Friday.

Meanwhile, Betty Winslett has not walked in the twelve years since she opened her door and stepped into the middle of a shootout and a bullet struck her in the spine.

Roberson was convicted in the shooting, but was permitted to remain free on bond while awaiting sentencing.

Pasadena launches ad campaign to attract 'urban non-cowboys'

PASADENA (AP) — The City Council has agreed to spend $32,000 to clear this industrial city's image of being a wasteland populated by hostile rednecks through a cable television program and advertisements.

Pasadena's fame rests with Gilley's, a country-western nightclub, and "Urban Cowboy," a popular movie starring John Travolta and Debra Winger.

But the city has more to offer, said City Council member O.L. Harris.

"We just haven't told our story often enough over a wide enough area," Harris said.

The council voted on Tuesday to spend $15,000 for the cable television program in which a group of experts will examine the Houston suburb's economic situation. City leaders also voted for $17,000 worth of advertisements in United and Southwest Spirit-TransStar airline magazines.

They said they allocated the money to lure tourists and potential businesses to their city of 120,000, where unemployment has risen as high as 14.2 percent in recent months.

"Houston's original prosperity came from the ship channel, Pasadena and Deer Park," said Bill Chamberlain, a retired Houston advertising executive who pioneered the concept of the television program. "But Pasadena has been the laughingstock of the area because of a blue-collar, redneck mentality."

'Semolina' makes more nutritious pasta

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. Our family is eating a lot more pasta now and I'm wondering how to tell which is the best. Some labels say, "Made with 100 percent Semolina," or something to that effect; others say "Semolina with Farina," or simply "enriched flour." Which is best? Wallie Romig, Watsonville, Calif.

A. One hundred percent semolina means a more nutritious, firmer and tastier pasta.

Although there are about 30,000 varieties of wheat, they can basically be lumped into three categories — very hard, hard and soft. The difference is in the protein-to-starch ratio. The harder the wheat, the more protein and less starch. Very hard flour should be used for pasta, hard flour should be used for bread, and soft flour should be used for cake, cookies, biscuits and pastries.

Durum wheat is a very hard wheat, and when it's milled into flour it's called semolina. Pasta made from 100 percent semolina maintains its firmness when cooked correctly. Pasta manufactured with the addition of softer flours will come out mushy or sloppy.

When a label indicates that the pasta is made with semolina plus farina, it means soft wheat flours (farina) have been added to the hard wheat flours, which is undesirable because the pasta will turn soggy on the plate. If no indication is given on the label, or if it just says made with enriched flour, chances are it's an inferior pasta made with soft flours, which are less expensive.

In Italy it is illegal to add common, or soft flours, to semolina, but there are no laws restricting American manufacturers to using only semolina in pasta. However, Prince, Ronzoni and Hershey Foods are just a few of the companies that use only semolina.

One way to tell whether common flour has been added to your pasta is by looking at the cooking water as the pasta softens. The water should be clear, not cloudy.

Q. What is the white polliwog-shaped mass attached to the yolk of an egg? My mom and sister both remove all of it before using the egg. My sister says it looks like an umbilical cord. L. Blevins, Modesto, Calif.

A. What you and your kin have observed is simply a ropy strand of egg white that anchors the yolk in place in the center of the thick white of the egg. It's called the chalaza. The more prominent the chalaza, the fresher the egg. It may look like the beginning of a chick, or an umbilical cord, but it's not. There's really no need to remove it, although some cooks like to strain chalazas from custard.

Q. I try to avoid foods with cholesterol in my fight against heart disease. Please tell me where carob ranks among the foods in regard to cholesterol content. Donald Mitchell, Tigard, Ore.

A. Carob, often called the "health food chocolate," does not contain cholesterol. Cholesterol is found only in products that contain an ingredient derived from animals. Carob comes from the beans of locust trees.

In the "Insider's Guide to Health Foods" by David Armstrong, we are informed that carob has some nutritional advantages over chocolate in that it has much less fat, is higher in calcium and fiber than cocoa, and has six times the vitamin A.

Cocoa, however, has three times the protein of carob, five times the potassium, eight times the phosphorus, and 10 times the iron. In addition, sweeteners are often added to carob, and some carob-coated candy bars contain palm kernel oil, which is 80 percent saturated fat. The cocoa butter used in chocolate bars is only 50 percent.

Armstrong also informs us that many consumers are eating carob in chocolate bars without realizing it. When the price of chocolate went up in the '70s, carob caught on as an extender. Processors can add up to 35 percent carob.

Those products labeled "chocolate-flavored chips" have neither chocolate nor carob in them. Instead they're made from corn syrup and chemical flavors.

If you buy carob, Armstrong advises that you purchase the unsweetened kind.

Reader feedback:

Lucille Howell, Portland, Ore.: "Regarding your recent column on freezing cheese, I would like to offer some advice that I have never seen published. The trick is to shred the cheese immediately on bringing it home, then sealing it in small freezer packets. It will keep very well up to three months, and fairly well up to six.

"I have never tried this with processed cheese as I do not use it, but find it works particularly well with a good quality sharp Cheddar. Swiss and Jack lose a shadow of flavor. A good Parmesan can also be grated and frozen with just a slight loss of flavor. To shred I use a food processor with a stainless steel blade."

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Brownies 'ultimate'

By LINDA ANDERSON

When you are a choco-holic, there is nothing that will grab your attention as fast as something labeled "double fudge."

And when that something is a new brownie mix called The Ultimate Brownie, there's no way to not check it out for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Fast. Before the chocolate attack becomes terminal.

The Ultimate Brownie mix from Pillsbury is available in three flavors: Rocky Road (with walnuts and creme swirl), Black Forest (cherries and cream swirl) and Double Fudge (the irresistable dark chocolate fudge swirl).

Price per box is $1.99 — at least the box we bought was, and that is the suggested retail price, according to information from Pillsbury. (Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

For something this fancy, label advertising naturally goes all out: "For a truly spectacular taste experience, indulge in The Ultimate Brownie ... Because of the special flavor swirls, every bite is moist and delicious. ... so easy to make. Simply mix and swirl ... then indulge in pure brownie bliss."

They are easy to make. Just blend filling mix with water, then add hot tap water, oil and egg to the brownie-part of the mix. Each brownie (each package is supposed to make 16 brownies) contains 160 calories, 24 g carbohydrate and 105 mg sodium, along with practically no vitamins or minerals, according to label information. (The brownies we tested were double fudge, of course, so nutrition information for the other two varieties may be different.)

The all-important taste test was somewhat of a disappointment. No one thought the new product tasted very different from ordinary boxed-mix brownies, except they had a fudge swirl on top — which does not improve with age. In fact, one adult said, "They leave a lot to be desired."

As one teen put it: "They're OK. But now my grandmother's brownies..."

Nursing home horror stories outweigh praise

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Before the furor dies down on nursing homes (granted there are many good ones but, unfortunately, a few rotten apples have soured the whole barrel), I submit the following: I was a very close friend of a poor, itinerant preacher. He became very ill, and toward the end he was placed in a prestigious nursing home by some well-to-do friends. In his dotage he asked for a wedding ring and a Parker pen. To satisfy his whims, I brought him both, neither of which I bought at the five-and-ten. The next time I visited him, both items had mysteriously disappeared. I promptly replaced them. The replacements also disappeared. I complained to the staff. Nobody knew anything.

Later, my husband was dying in an expensive religious-oriented hospital. At the end he was comatose, but he clutched a small golden crucifix, a small red and gold Bible, and a suede-bound book — the "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam" — all family heirlooms that I had brought him when he could respond only by touching something familiar and precious. When he died, I went into shock but returned to his room a short time later. The family heirlooms were not there! They were nowhere to be found, and haven't been seen since.

Tell me, Abby, who would steal a golden crucifix from a dying man or a wedding ring and a Parker pen from a broken-down preacher?

I know times have changed, but I'm not banking on it, and if I ever check into a nursing home, I'll take nothing with me except my dentures, a ballpoint pen and a Gideon Bible. — STUNNED IN THE BIBLE BELT

DEAR STUNNED: Before we close the books on nursing homes, let me say that Kirk Douglas was not wrong. According to my mail, there are far more substandard nursing homes than good ones.

DEAR ABBY: I love my husband. Let me tell you why:

I love him for not making any noise when he gets up at 6:30 every morning and knows I like to sleep a little later.

I love him for never asking me why I don't balance the checkbook.

I love him for walking the dog and feeding the cat even though they're both mine.

I love him for not making me pay him off when I lose a bet, even though he always pays when he loses.

I love him for not noticing when the beds aren't made.

I love him for noticing when my hair is done a new way.

I love him for being extra nice to my mom and dad.

I love him for watching a 1956 romantic movie with me even though the Celtics are on the other channel.

I love him for not getting mad when there's not a clean shirt in the drawer.

I want him to know it's the little things that count. — MRS. DAVID W. HEDLIN, NAPLES, FLA.

DEAR MRS. HEDLIN: Thanks for a real upper. You surely must be the luckiest woman in Naples (Italy or Florida).

DEAR ABBY: A bleeding-heart liberal vegetarian wrote to you and complained about the expression "Killing two birds with one stone." ("Why would anyone want to kill even one bird with a stone?" the bird-lover asked.) Do as the Finnish people do; say, "Kill two flies with one swat." I am a third-generation Finn, and I've taught this to many as a healthy alternative to "killing birds." — DONALD R. LEHTI, LOS ANGELES

DEAR DONALD: You and I may value a bird's life far above the life of the lowly insect. But killing two flies with one swat wouldn't fly in India among the Jainists, whose religion teaches a reverence for ALL life.

BETTER BUSINESS

Schemes shaky

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

If the start-up cost for an investment is substantial, watch out. Pyramid schemes pressure you to pay a large amount to become a "distributor." Profits are thus based on the signing up of new recruits. Beware of promises of quick, easy and unreasonably high profits.

Must you buy a product in order to become a distributor? Find out if the company will buy back the inventory — you could get stuck with unsold products. Remember that legitimate companies should offer and stick to inventory buybacks for at least 80 to 90 percent of what you paid.

What is the consumer market for the products? If the promoters seem to be making most of their money through the sale of distributorships or through volume sales to new recruits, stay away.

Get all the facts about the company, its officers and its products. Get written copies of the company's marketing plan, sales literature, etc. Avoid promoters who fail to provide clear and detailed explanations of their plans.

Resist the temptation to invest just because the person selling the program is a friend or is part of your religious or social organization. Remember that person may have been misled into believing he can make large amounts of money in a short time. Also remember that your participation in such a cash pyramid scheme may result in closer IRS scrutiny of your tax return.

Temporary workers part of work force

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Temporary workers now make up more than 27 percent of the American work force and 9 out of 10 companies currently use them, according to one recruiter.

Amtec Systems Corp., a firm that supplies temporary employees, says many high tech temporaries have gross salaries that are 25 percent higher than their in-house counterparts and some temporary software analysts make over $100,000 a year.

EXTENSION EXTRA

Method outdated

By MARIAN FARR

Overcooking pork as a safety measure is no longer necessary. The Food Safety and Inspection Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture recommends cooking pork to an internal temperature of 160 degrees.

The FSIS says that today's pork is safe when cooked to "medium doneness." Its previous recommendation was for the meat to be cooked until "well done" at 170 degrees.

FSIS officials consider 137 degrees as the temperature at which Trichinella Spiralis, a parasite that may be present in one-tenth of 1 percent of the pork supply, is destroyed instantly.

The new recommendation should encourage consumers to enjoy today's tender, flavorful pork without overcooking. Since pork today is much leaner than it used to be, it also cooks quicker.

Cutlets and thin pork chops should cook in 10-15 minutes. One-inch thick chops will cook in 15-20 minutes, and a pork roast should be taken from the oven or grill when the internal temperature reaches 155 degrees, as it will continue to cook before slicing.

Ambitions reflect stereotypes

LANGHORNE, Penn. (UPI) — In spite of the efforts of modern parents, children's career ambitions still reflect traditional sexual stereotypes.

When Sesame Place, an action-oriented play park, asked 400 children between the ages of 8 and 10, "What do you want to be when you grow up?", the results were fairly conservative. The majority of the youngsters polled chose careers that reflect traditional sexual roles. While girls dreamed of becoming nurses or teachers, boys wanted to be athletes or policemen.

When the children were asked what famous person they would like to be like, the boys were unable to name any one person consistently. The girls, on the other hand, clamored to be like singers Whitney Houston and lingerie queen Madonna.

The most popular career choices among girls were entertainer, 20 percent, teacher, 19 percent, and nurse, 18 percent.

Of the boys, 25 pecent wanted to become professional athletes, while 15 percent favored becoming a policeman or detective. A career in medicine appealed to 13 percent.

Lawmaker: Board must do more to prevent accidents

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Insurance either must do a better job of seeing that insurance firms teach accident prevention to their customers or have that task taken away, a legislator says.

Attorney General Jim Mattox told a news conference Wednesday that a 1973 law change requires the board to revoke the license of any insurance company that does not provide adequate accident-prevention services.

Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-LaMarque, said if the board does not improve its supervision of job accident-prevention in Texas, he will recommend that the 1987 Legislature give the task to the attorney general.

Both Mattox and Criss, chairman of the House Committee on Labor and Employment Relations, said the board has done little to enforce the 1973 law.

Catherine Fryer, a board member, said the board agreed with the opinion that it had the power to revoke licenses if necessary.

But "we think it is an invalid conclusion that we have not been doing our job," she said. "We have required companies to certify they have provided the services required by the legislation, and we have not received any complaints from consumers."

STATE IN BRIEF

Baylor debate team plays host to visiting Soviets

WACO (AP) — The Baylor University debate team is scheduled to host the visiting Soviet National debate team Oct. 22 with the topic "Soviet-American Cooperation in the Peaceful Exploration of Outer Space — An Alternative to the Arms Race."

The two teams will debate in public at 7 p.m. in the Barfield Drawing Room of the Bill Daniel Student Center. The event is free and open to the public.

The debate will not be judged, said Robert Rowland, assistant professor of communication studies and director of forensics at Baylor.

"This will be rather unusual because the Russian debaters are pros. They represent their entire country, while we just represent Baylor," Rowland said. "We expect some very good competition, to say the least."

Keith Randall, public relations director at Baylor, said Waco will be the only Soviet stop in Texas.

Farmers, ranchers honored

AUSTIN (AP) — One hundred and eighty-five Texas farm and ranch families were honored Wednesday for keeping their land in continuous agricultural production for 100 years or more.

Four of the properties are older than Texas, having been established before 1836, according to the Texas Department of Agriculture, which sponsored the annual ceremony.

The oldest property recognized this year was the Winfree ranch of Orange County, founded by Abraham Winfree in 1831.

Since it was started by the agriculture department in 1974, the Texas Family Land Heritage Program has reeognized 2,089 family farms and ranches for 100 or more years of continuous operaton.

Each of the 185 families honored Wednesday got a special gate sign designating their property as a "Texas Century Farm" or "Texas Century Ranch."

Playboys pianist dies

CLEBURNE (AP) — Al Stricklin, western singer Bob Wills' most memorable and inventive pianist, died Wednesday in Cleburne at 78.

"I never saw Brother Al when he wasn't smiling, as if he was bursting to tell a joke," said Nacogdoches record producer David Stallings, who worked with Stricklin on nine albums by Wills' Original Texas Playboys. "And he had plenty of jokes, most of 'em on himself and the band."

Stricklin staged his last performance of a half-century career on April 17 at the White Elephant Saloon in the Fort Worth Stockyards.
