Petroleum Board Suggests 35-Cent Crude Oil Increase

He Gave His Feet - - - You Can Lend Money

Here was a private in the 2nd Marines—a brown-eyed youngster with a nice grin. When he went to the Solomons he probably was of average height, only now both legs are off above the knees. This is what Ralph J. Theis of Ionia, Ia., had to say.

"It's hard to talk to anybody about it—who hasn't been there. When one of the other guys comes along, we start remembering things.

"Well, we were advancing along a hill. The Japs had started firing mortars. Something knocked me off my feet. I tried to get up and start on, but my feet wouldn't move. I looked down, and I didn't have any feet.

"I didn't feel anything then; the corpsman came and got me. I couldn't look at my feet, because I wouldn't believe I didn't have any. One was still hanging, but they cut that off at the dressing station.

"It's all right; I get low sometimes, but I feel better today. This morning a fellow came in from the next ward. He is just learning to walk on two new legs. He hasn't any arms, or any legs, either. He's perfectly cheerful. I though if he can feel that way I shouldn't worry. I'll be glad when I can get up and do things for myself."

Buy a Bomb for Der Fuehrer's Birthday

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP) — Next Tuesday is Adolf Hitler's 54th birthday, and the people backing the treasury's second war loan drive figure there's a good way for Americans to celebrate the occasion fittingly—by buying war bonds.

Americans have raised more than one-third of the $13,000,000,000 goal of the bond drive.

To push it further toward the goal, Editor Austin V. McClain of the Washington, Pa., Observer, suggests that any American can, by buying bonds, make Hitler a birthday present of almost any military item he chooses.

A new bomb, for instance.

Authorities on birthday presents who also have a slight knowledge of ordnance will tell you that you might look a long time before you find a more appropriate birthday present for Adolf Hitler.

There's such a wide range of selection, for one thing. You can get anything from an incendiary to a two-ton block-buster.

The army will deliver it free of charge to the most appropriate spot.

The whole idea is: You can buy any size bond and have at least a share in a birthday gift to a personality which has presented the world with untold misery and suffering.

What Would Happen to YOU If Our Troops Couldn't Fight?

By BROWNWOOD EMERSON

Let's be honest about it.

There isn't a man in the armed forces of this nation who wouldn't rather be safe at home, like you are, rather than risking his life thousands of miles away in the Solomons, Alaska, North Africa, over Germany and France, or on the seas.

Yet, there they are, fighting and dying so that you can be snug and safe in America, that your life may continue in the same manner as it always had.

What would happen if these men should decide to keep hiding in foxholes all the time, never attacking, just like some of you keep your dollars hidden away in bank vaults?

How long would it be before the Rising Sun flag replaced the Stars and Stripes?

That's why it's a do-or-die proposition now on purchasing Victory bonds, supplying the money that makes it possible for our men to keep fighting and for you to be safe and snug in Pampa and in Gray county today.

S. D. Stennis, chairman of the drive in Gray county, today reported yesterday's sale of bonds totaled $26,252.50. That's a lot of money but it's still short of the daily average of $32,000 that must be made for the county to reach it's goal in time.

The unofficial total stood at $255,852.50 today.

How do you feel about all this?

Maybe it will open your eyes to read an excerpt from a letter received by County Treasurer and Mrs. W. E. James from their son Ernest, 19, a student at Texas Technological college.

They have another son, W. E., who is in the army and who is stationed at Camp Wolters. Ernest is just as anxious to do his share as W. E., but as the letter explains:

"All this semester I've been arguing with myself. It's about this war. In my opinion going to school isn't helping to win this war at all. Yes, I know the draft board seemed to think that my schooling is important but I want to do something

Winning of War Is Major Task

By BYRON PRICE
Director, Office of Censorship
(Written for the Associated Press and The Pampa News)

The first thing any of us should be thinking about today is the winning of the war. If your extra dollars hasten victory by even a fraction of a second, they will be well spent.

The second thing we should be thinking about is security after the war is won. A war bond is your government's promise to help you in the uncertain years of readjustment after the victory. It is a promise to pay you—with interest.

You serve your country and yourself by buying war bonds.

Congress Wants Food Meet Data

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP)—Congress moved today to send its own observers to the international food conference scheduled to begin at Hot Springs, Va., May 18 with a demand from the senate agriculture committee that some of its members be permitted to attend.

Senator Aiken (R-CT) told reporters it was the consensus of the committee it ought to have first hand information on the discussions, since it seems likely that newspaper reporters are going to be barred from all except the perfunctory opening and closing sessions and denied contact with delegates.

Ickes Orders Increase In Texas Quota

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP)—Petroleum Administrator Ickes has recommended a general crude oil price increase averaging 35 cents a barrel, he told the House Small Business committee today.

The recommendation was sent to the Office of Price Administration April 7, but an OPT official testified that after its receipt he told Price Administrator Prentiss Brown that he thought it was "a pretty bad time" for such an increase.

Brown also appeared before the committee, but did not testify on Ickes' recommendation. He did, however, tell the committee it was the "obligation" of his agency to increase the price of crude oil if such action was necessary for successful prosecution of the war.

Testifying before the Patman Small Business committee, Brown emphasized, however, that it was incumbent upon the petroleum industry to make "the strongest kind of a showing" if the OPA is to be persuaded to make an exception to the President's "hold-the-line" anti-inflation order.

Numerous witnesses representing independent oil producers from all sections of the nation had testified earlier this week before both the small business and the House Interstate Commerce committees that a crude oil price increase is necessary if production is to keep up with consumption and explorations are to be continued for new fields.

FORT WORTH, April 16 (AP)—Increase of 60,000 barrels of oil daily in Texas production was ordered by Petroleum Administrator for War Ickes in his directive to the Texas Railroad commission for May, Chairman Beauford Jester of the state regulatory body announced today at the opening of its monthly statewide proration hearing.

This lifted the total production permitted for Texas under the PAW directives to 1,562,000 barrels daily, the first increase in two months. The directives had remained stationary at 1,502,000 barrels during March and April.

The increase of 60,000 barrels to

Seven Held For Faulty Welding

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP)—J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director announced today the arrest of seven men, formerly employed as welders, on charges of sabotaging Liberty ships being built at the Bethlehem-Fairfield (Md) shipyards.

Hoover said that the men "have admitted performing faulty welding in order to finish their work in a hurry and earn more money." He added that there was no evidence of "any Axis direction or sympathies on the part of the welders."

"Many of the improper welds were in vital parts of these ships" the head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said, "and were only discernible through the use of X-ray. The full extent of the damage is not yet known; however, many structurally weak ships would have gone to sea if the destructive welding had not been discovered."

'Revolt' Against FDR Order Seen Developing

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP)—The administration was confronted today with the first strike growing out of President Roosevelt's hold-the-line order against inflation.

As labor protests against the order mounted, employes of the Universal Atlas Cement company, Universal, Pa., who were the first to feel its effects, went on strike.

AFL members of the war labor board denounced the order as a "flagrant violation" of the no-strike-no-lockout agreement and said the administration will lose the workers' confidence.

CIO leaders added nothing publicly to President Phillip Murray's letter of two days ago but privately conveyed their views to stabilization director James F. Byrnes and the WLB. More than 150 protesting telegrams were delivered to the board, more than half of them from CIO united automobile workers local unions. The Universal Atlas employes are represented by the CIO mine, mill and smelter workers.

Hub of the controversy is the WLB's loss of power to approve pay increases for the correction of "inequalities." Murray's letter to affiliates called this a serious omission and urged that cases of injustices be called to Byrnes' attention.

In the Universal Atlas Cement case, the WLB unanimously cut a referee's recommendation of a 5½ cent hourly raise to 2 cents and said it was powerless to allow the other 3½ cents to adjust "inequalities."

The board still may grant increases consistent with the Little Steel formula and to eliminate substandard wages. The Little Steel formula permits only a total average increase of 15 per cent over the pay levels of any group of workers on January 1, 1941. Prior to the president's hold-the-line order of April 8, however, the WLB could exceed the Little Steel formula, if necessary, to equalize wages within an industry or area. Now that power is reserved to Byrnes.

Mark McGee Fights Change To District OPA Director

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP) — A memorandum from national Office of Price Administrator Prentiss Brown, forwarded to district directors in the southwest OPA region, reaffirmed an order creating district OPA offices and eliminating the function of state director, Clyde Herring, senior assistant to Brown, explained today.

Herring made his explanation after the question of the status of Mark McGee, who headed the Texas state office, was brought yesterday to his attention by members of the Texas congressional delegation.

McGee did not understand a recent communication bearing on his status, said Herring.

The memorandum, forwarded by regional OPA head Max McCullough, reaffirmed an order issued four or five months ago, Herring said.

He said that McGee then became district director in the Fort Worth district and that four other Texas districts were set up "because of the size of the state."

McCullough had announced at Dallas that a new field reorganization order had reduced state offices to district offices and given state directors the titles of district directors.

The Dallas Office of War Information said that the original order to which Herring referred, as applied in Texas, had cut the territory served by the state office at Fort Worth to 49 counties, but that McGee had retained the title of state director, and certain statewide functions, such as appointment of rationing boards.

The new directive limits his powers to district status, OWI added.

However, Senator Connally (D-Tex.) said he had told McGee in a telegram that his duties would be "just as they have been."

"I told him in effect that he was still OPA state director. As I understand it, he is a state director in charge of a district and in addition some of his functions apply to the whole state.

"This whole arrangement is only going to continue for about 30 days anyway, and after that the OPA will decide whether to go back to the state director method or continue on the present basis."

Substitute Drawn For Favors' Bill

AUSTIN, April 16 (AP)—The department of public service can pay 185,000 old people $20 monthly pensions during the next two years if the senate civil jurisprudence committees version of a house bill is adopted.

Sen. Jesse Martin of Fort Worth made this statement yesterday when the committee favorably reported a bill authorizing a $75,000 monthly increase in old age assistance expenditures.

The bill now goes to the senate floor as a substitute for Rep. Ennis Favors' measure lifting the ceiling on monthly payments and not specifying a monthly limitation on pension outlays.

Written by Martin and Sens. William E. Stone of Galveston and Allan Shivers of Fort Arthur, the senate bill raises the ceiling on total monthly payments from $1,750,000 to $1,825,000.

Passage of the substitute bill plus the $1,154,000 which may be made available to the pension fund by house bill 159 would provide an additional $900,000 a year above current allotments, Martin said.

Both houses have passed bills releasing $1,154,000 frozen in the pension fund for payment of current pensions. The senate stipulated that the sum be expended in 24 equal monthly payments while the house did not include this restriction.

The bill is now in conference committee.

Senate Passes Bill Freezing Union Dues

AUSTIN, April 16 (AP)—A bill freezing labor union dues, assessments and admission fees to the 1939-1942 level and imposing penalties for misrepresenting working conditions was finally passed unanimously by the senate today.

Fines of from $100 to $1,000 and imprisonment of from 10 to 60 days were set for union agents or employees who misrepresent permanency of employment, the amount of work to be done or the nature of working conditions to induce a person to join a union.

Sen. Grady Hazelwood of Amarillo, sponsored the measure.

Shortly before final passage, Hazelwood attached an amendment declaring null and void any provisions of his bill that may be judged in conflict with the Manford union regulation bill recently passed by the legislature.

The same penalties included for misrepresenting working conditions were set for violating the maximum dues and assessments provision.

The measure prohibits "any dues or assessments as initiation fees or any charge whatsoever for admission to membership in any amount in excess of similar dues, assessments or charges made for the year 1939, 1940 and 1941."

Shuttled back to the senate was a secret ballot bill passed finally by the house yesterday with amendments. The measure provides that each ballot have a perforated corner on which is written a serial lumber and name of the voter.

The ballot itself bears only the number. The perforated corner is to be torn off and deposited with the secretary of state. When ballots must be rechecked for election contest purposes, the secretary of state will locate the tab with the voters name and number and inform the court of the ballot number. The ballot bearing that number then can be taken from the locked ballot box.

The senate will consider the house amendment next week.

The house was in week-end adjournment.

Cafe Operators Can Apply for Quotas

DALLAS, April 16 (AP)—Restaurant and cafe operators may now apply to their local war price and rationing boards for their May and June food allotment certificates, the regional office of price administration announced today.

Application may be made by letter, since no forms are available.

The OPA also announced that the new factor for determining sugar allotments would be .04 instead of .03. This means that one pound will be granted for each 25 meals served rather than for each 33.

Eighth Army Masses Power for Climactic Push Against Rommel

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, April 16—(AP)—First army infantrymen drove to within 15 miles of the key road junction of Tebourba yesterday in some of the fiercest fighting of the Tunisian campaign, it was announced today.

In a series of local attacks east of Medjez-El-Bab, the Allied mountain line advanced to points between 25 and 30 miles from Tunis. Tebourba, once held by the Allies in the eastward push last fall, lies 18 miles airline west of the Axis-held capital.

Allied bombers and fighters continued their assaults upon Axis air fields in Tunisia, although the weather was bad, and it was announced that RAF Wellingtons struck effectively Wednesday night at enemy airdromes in southern Sardenia.

Only patrol activity was reported on the Enfidaville line front, where Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's Eighth army is again massing strength for a climactic push to the north.

The First army, led by Lieut. Gen. K. A. N. Anderson, by a series of infantry attacks in the mountains, gained the highest ground in northern Tunisia, overlooking the plain to Tunis.

The Germans, in two savage counterattacks yesterday, temporarily regained the 2,000-foot Djebel anchorage, eight miles northwest of Medjez-El-Bab, but British infantry launched a counter assault of their own and not only retook the peak but ground beyond it as well.

(Axis communique broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press said

heavy artillery duelling and bitter local fighting marked the Tunisian front. A transocean dispatch broadcast from Berlin declared Allied attacks in the hills were repelled and a large number of British troops were captured while Nazi counter-attacks "attained scheduled objectives."

(Transocean added that the supply of Axis forces in Tunisia involves difficulties, but it said that on the whole they "are receiving what they need"—including reinforcements moved across the Mediterranean by both sea and air.)

French forces who stormed forward Wednesday to capture the Djebel Sefsouf, seven miles above the village of Kararhoun on the southwestern rim of the Axis lines before Tunis and Bizerte, also were hard pressed by the Germans, but held their ground and captured more prisoners.

The Eighth army, pulled up before the Enfidaville line, about 50 miles south of Sousse, continued to patrol its mountain front while awaiting artillery to blast the Germans from their positions.

Air operations over Tunisia were restricted by bad weather, the communique said, but medium bombers again raked the remaining Axis air fields in the battle area and big Wellington bombers visited southern Sardinia to start large fires on the Decimomannu air field.

Allied fighter planes executed offensive sweeps and patrols over the forward areas and fighter-bombers attacked enemy tanks and vehicles. Two enemy planes were reported destroyed. All Allied planes returned to their bases.

The air offensive over Tunisia and the Mediterranean already has cost the enemy more than 450 planes in combat alone since the beginning of the Mareth offensive March 20. An additional 150 Ger-

Enemy Convoy Is Blasted In Pacific Waters

By The Associated Press

With a pledge of greater aerial reinforcements, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's warplanes pressed home the attack on a nine-ship Japanese convoy off northern New Guinea today, after crippling three vessels in the opening assault and pounding other enemy targets across the wide expanse of the 2,500-mile south seas battle arc.

Spotted at dusk yesterday off the base at Wewak, the enemy convoy consisted of six merchant vessels, a light cruiser and two other warships.

In swift waves, U. S. Flying Fortresses pounced on the enemy with these results: an 8,000-ton cargo ship left sinking; another 8,000-tonner floating lopsidedly, and a 5,000-tonner beached.

"We are continuing the attack," Allied headquarters said.

Buoyed by War Secretary Stimson's promise of a constantly increasing flow of planes and other war supplies to the southwest Pacific, Allied fliers reached out across the seas to blast three major Japanese air bases—at Rabaul and Gasmata, New Britain, and Lae, New Guinea—and raided enemy-occupied Trangan in the Aroe islands, bombed coastal shipping off the Tanimbars and strafed a Japanese-held village on Timor island.

In addition, swarms of A-20 attack planes swept low over Japanese troops in the Mubo sector, below the enemy's big Salamaua base in New Guinea bombing and strafing the invaders 11 times.

Meanwhile, Allied headquarters disclosed that Japanese casualties in the New Guinea campaign up to April 1 totalled 38,000, mostly killed, against 10,531 Allied casualties. American casualties were listed as 2,175 killed or missing in action and 2,144 wounded.

On the Burma front, British headquarters announced that Field Marshal Sir Archibald P. Wavell's forces ambushed two groups of Japanese in the Mayu hills, along the Bay of Bengal, and inflicted casualties.

A communique said British troops had now consolidated their forward positions covering the approaches to the Maungdaw-Buthedaung area some 55 miles above the big Japanese coastal base at Akyab.

This indicated that the British had dug in after withdrawing from expositions on the Mayu peninsula to await the monson rains and suggested at least some confidence of stemming the Japanese drive toward the Indian frontier.

BEW Looks Into Pair of Fancy Pants Off of Der Fuehrer's Sub

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP)—The board of economic warfare is looking into a pair of fancy pants—right off one of Der Fuerher's U-boats. . . .

They're waterproof jeans of a German submarine officer who was taken prisoner by the navy.

BEW is giving them the double-o in an effort to learn from them something of how things are going economically in the Reich.

They're a mighty swanky pair of britches—made of chrome-tanned sheepskin leather—and BEW estimates they'd cost $30 to $40 in this country.

Government experts cannot say whether all the U-boat bosses are still rating such finery, because there is some evidence the pants were made back in '39.

The pants perusal will continue on the chance that more thorough investigatioon ay show evidence of the use of substitute aterials, new chemicals for waterproofing, or any indication of careless, apathetic workmanship among Hitler's pants makers.

One thing is certain — the sea raider who wore the pants did plenty of sitting. They're well-worn aft.

He definitely was a pessimist:

There's a total of 12 suspender buttons, in addition to a pull-belt in the back!

New Sulfanilamide Drug Offered As Cure for Most Common Colds

DETROIT, April 16 (AP)—A new common cold remedy, described as having cut war plant absenteeism more than in half in its first trials, was reported tot he American Chemical society here last night.

The reemdy, a new sulfanilamide drug, is called Vasosulfa. It is a nasal spray. Dr. Henry R. Hamilton of the Lockheed Aircraft companny, California, who reported it, said that when a cold starts, the spray frequently stops it.

It appears that if the cold is due to virus infections, the new remedy is not effective.

"Vasosulfa," Dr. Hamilton said, "is remarkably effective. It is not a cure-all but it is so effective that countrywide trials are being made of it by outstanding nose and throat specialists, with good effects.

"The common cold is probably the cause of more absenteeism than any other factor. Vasosulfa is proving helpful in preventing colds or shortening the cold absenteeism."

In Lockheed's chemical division, where a thorough check of the drug's effectiveness was possible, there was recently five man-days lost due to reported common colds, during a period when the average expectation was a loss of 126 man-days.

Market Briefs

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, April 15 (AP)—Stocks hit a fast clip on the recovery track in today's market but profit taking barriers eventually stemmed the sprint and extreme gains running to two or more points generally were reduced in the final hour.

Dealings dwindled after mid-day although transfers for the full proceedings were around 1,500,000 shares.

Bolstering sentiment was good European war news. Commitments were lightened here and there, however, because of cloudier Far Pacific developments. Investment demand again was a bullish factor.

In the stock section International Telephone, Norfolk & Western and Schenley posted new highs for the year or longer. Favored most of the time were Santa Fe, Lackawanna, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, American Telephone, Sears Roebuck, Bethlehem, Goodrich, J. I. Case, American Can, Standard Oil of Calif., Loew's, Paramount, Distillers Corp., General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, and Johns-manville.

Kate Smith swaps stories with Mrs. Patrick of Kansas City, Mo.

"In 1910, a few days after I was married," writes Mrs. G. G. Patrick of Kansas City, Mo., "I visited the corner grocery store. And the grocer, knowing I was a young bride, gave me a Calumet cook book. I still have that little cook book, Miss Smith.

"On one occasion, I was out of Calumet and borrowed some baking powder from a neighbor. But hers was another brand and my cake was a failure. I've never used any baking powder since but Calumet."

"Well, Mrs. Patrick," Kate writes back, "after 33 years of baking success with Calumet, you certainly are in a position to help other young brides. You can tell them with real authority that Double-Acting Calumet will give them delicious, high, light cakes and hot breads that men just love.

"Here's a dandy new Calumet recipe for your collection. It's Calumet Johnny Cake . . . a perfect way to make tomorrow's breakfast extra special!"

Sunday School Lesson

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

All four gospels tell the story of the resurrection of Jesus, and thoughtful readers of the scriptures should not read or study any single one without comparing it with the others. An outstanding impression will probably be of the variety in detail, although the accounts agree on the central fact. The differences in the stories are important because they entirely dispose of the idea that the story of the resurrection could have been invented or could be the figment of anyone's imagination.

Peter says in his second Epistle (1:16): "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty."

One thinks of that in connection with the story of the resurrection, for if this triumphant story of the rising of Jesus from the dead had been in any sense a "cunningly devised fable," surely those who invented or recorded it would have been very careful to have told the story with complete identity of detail.

Of the account of the resurrection in John's gospel, which constitutes our lesson, it may be said that it is very rich in its record of personal experience and in the vividness with which it narrates the effect of the resurrection upon the early visitors to the tomb.

It is predominantly the story of Mary Magdalen, the woman who loved her Master with deep gratitude and intensity, who loved Him so deeply that she had come early in the morning to visit His tomb. When she found the stone rolled away from the mouth of the sepulchre, she was full of surprise and she came running to Simon Peter and to "the other disciple whom Jesus loved," evidently the apostle John, greatly troubled, and telling them that the Lord's body had disappeared.

Peter and John ran quickly to the tomb. John stooped down and looked in, but Peter with his impulsiveness went into the sepulchre and found the linen cloths lying there and the napkin that had been about the Master's head wrapped in a place by itself.

The record of the action of the two disciples is somewhat puzzling. We are told that they believed, though they had not understood the saying of Jesus that He must rise again from the dead. But for some strange reason they went off to their home, although Mary remained at the door of the tomb, weeping. Why did Peter and John go home Did they anticipate meeting with the Master there? It is quite possibly assumed that if He were living, He would make His way to their dwelling.

Mary, with her love and loyalty, could not so easily leave the place, and stooping down to look into the tomb, she was rewarded when she had the vision of the angels, and as she turned she saw Jesus Himself, standing there, although she did not know Him. It was when He spoke her name, Mary, that He was revealed to her.

Amarillo Pastor To Conduct Services

The First Baptist church congregation will hear the Rev. J. C. McKenzie, Amarillo, at the morning worship service Sunday morning. Mr. McKenzie, district missionary of Panhandle Baptists, will speak in the absence of E. Douglas Carver, pastor, who is conducting a series of evangelistic services with the First Baptist church of Portales, N. M.

At the Sunday evening service Associate Pastor H. Paul Briggs will speak. The large chorus choir will be featured in the singing of a number of spirited selections, it was announced.

Plans are complete for a record day on Easter Sunday when Pastor Carver will return to the pulpit. A special musical program of Easter selections by the 40-voice robed choir will be one of the highlights of the Easter services, Mr. Briggs said.

Easter Sunday will mark the beginning of the church's dedication week meetings to be held each evening at 8 o'clock. Dr. W. R. White, president of Hardin-Simmons university, Abilene, will be guest speaker at the special dedication services to be concluded May 2.

"Doctrine of Atonement" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 18.

The golden text is: "Grace be to you and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ, who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father." (Galatians 1:3, 4).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God dis beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." (II Corinthians 5:20).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The atonement requires constant self-immolation on the sinner's part." (page 23.)

About Union Finances

The American Federation of Labor has 11 affiliates large enough to have cast at least 1,000 votes each in the last convention, held in Ottawa in October of 1942. In order to size these were the teamsters, 5,056 votes; the carpenters, 3,667; the machinists, 3,285; the common laborers, 2,837; the hotel workers, 2,420; the garment workers, 2,250; the electrical workers, 2,079; the musicians and the retail clerks, 1,000 each.

Of these, the teamsters, carpenters, common laborers, electrical workers, and musicians have been subjected to much criticism, which is one reason why congress is considering a bill to require that union finances be made a matter of public record, accessible to the lay membership and others.

So far as can be determined from the index at the New York public library there is no document there which might contain financial data from the electrical workers since 1925, from the carpenters since 1916, from the teamsters since 1925.

The card recording general convention reports of the hod carriers and common laborers bears a notation "Ceased publication in 1911."

A monthly magazine of the teamsters union gives reports on annual conventions and gatherings of the general executive board through September of 1940, but there is no mention of finances

Of these five organizations which have been under frequent attack, only James Caesar Petrillo's musicians publish an audited financial accounting which has reached the largest public library in the United States other than the congressional library.

This is given in considerable detail—almost in embarrassing detail in some respects—though there are lump sum statements which a good investigator would want to have broken down before he formed any conclusions.

In Schedule A, general fund receits and disbursements, the salary and expenses of President Petrillo are given as $26,669.69; while in schedule C, general fund income and expenses, they show as $26,160.51. The discrepancy is small and probably unimportant. Yet it might puzzle a trumpet player or bass drummer who read that far.

In schedule A the salary and expenses of Honorary President and General Adviser Joseph N. Weber show as $20,901.11, but in schedule C they appear as only $8,083.34.

In the A. F of L. there are 6,194,382 dues paying members. We doubt that many of them will find an enlightening accounting of their union funds in any public library.

Uudaunted by War

Atlantic City's press agent is undaunted by global war. Come rationing, come U-boats, come death on the African desert, on Palm Sunday, "as usual, style experts, escorted by a squadron of the city's most photogenic policemen, will single out the 50 best dressed women on the Walk and award them with (sic) consages."

A concession to the war is planned. Men in uniform, if accompanying best-dressed contest winners, are to receive cartons of cigarets.

Transportation is a key to victory, but week-end crowds indicate that Palm and Easter Sunday crowds "will equal if not surpass those of peacetime years."

Ho, hum. That was a terrible dream we were having about a second world war. Time to wake up.

THE AAA GOES ON
(Detroit Free Press)

Ask 10 city dwellers what the AAA is to the farmer and nine will likely answer that it was an agency set up to help the food producers during the depression. Use of the past tense would imply that the war's need for maximum harvests had washed out all the AAA's provisions for limited production, crop restrictions, and the like.

As a story from Lansing yesterday about the Michigan farm bureau attested, the nine urbanites would be wrong. AAA goes merrily on; so merrily, in fact, that 20,000 farm bureau members are fed up. Their representatives have petitioned congress to stop for the duration all subsidies, penalties, and regulations.

The proposal makes first rate sense. The farm problem has changed radically in the last two years and the AAA program operates in a vacuum so far as the realities are concerned. The farmer's needs today are man power and more man power, machinery, an end to silly restrictions, and at least a chance at self-sustenance. The AAA crutch of the 1930s has been transformed by events into shackles and a millstone.

Husbands recently called to service respond with cheerfulness, say draft board officials. House cleaning is just around the corner.—Illinois State Journal.

ANOTHER REGULATION
(The Wall Street Journal)

Today we have another example of the absurdities which Government regulation—admittedly undertaken with the best intent—may inflict upon the bewildered citizen, pursuing a task which is not only legitimate but in which the Government urges him to increase his efforts.

A poultryman called the factory agent with whom he had been dealing for some time in search of electrical brooding equipment. The agent said his company had made and sold its quota, but he generously gave his customer the name of another company which was still allowed to produce.

The poultryman was not altogether happy. He was familiar with the type of equipment he had used; in fact, his operations were geared to it. He would have to learn the new equipment and since the maker had no agent nearby, the poultryman feared he might not be able to get replacement parts without delay. However, he thought he saw some fairness in the quota rule. If it were not in force the big makers would get all the business to the injury of the smaller ones. So he set about to write to the factory of the company recommended.

The firm with which the man had been dealing is a large maker of poultry equipment. However, it is not a "big business." As modern industry goes it is comparatively small. The second firm truly enough is not a largemaker of poultry equipment. Indeed such products are a small fraction of its production. But the firm has many products, is a very large manufacturer and is a subsidiary of one of the country's largest corporations. But, because it has not made its quota of a certain type of poultry equipment, it can continue to sell and the other firm, which really is a small business, must turn away customers.

The rule was laid down with the praiseworthy intent of "protecting the little fellow." But when the rule operates in this case it has the opposite effect of curtailing a "little fellow."

When the absurdities worked by many Washington regulations come to light there is always an inclination to denounce some "bureaucrats." That, it seems to us, is not the basic trouble. When the Government interfered with production, some quota distribution was necessary in the interest of fairness. It is beyond human power to draw a plan which will fit all varying circumstances. The basic trouble is the Government interference. In wartime that is necessary. But surely we have seen enough to convince us that we want no control a moment longer than is necessary.

Common Ground

"I speak the pass-word primeval. I give the sign of democracy. By God! I will accept nothing which all cannot have their counterpart of on the same terms."

PRESIDENT'S VETO NORM MEANS LESS FOOD

When President Roosevelt vetoed the Bankhead Farm Parity Bill he said it would give the farmers "an unwarranted bonus at the expense of the consumers."

By what norm or impersonal rule does he arrive at the conclusion that the farmers would be getting more than they are warranted in getting?

His record of knowing the relative value of things has never been proved. Remember he thought German marks were worth more than they were worth.

He has never been educated in knowing the value of things by being obliged to make a living for himself. If he made a mistake, his mother's money or what he inherited took care of him.

Any man who makes a statement like that evidently thinks he knows more about values than all the people in the country know about values. But the evidence that he knows the value of farm crops is all against him.

Workers are leaving the farms to go to higher paid jobs. Roosevelt is, in effect, telling those people that they are dumb. That they are getting more by staying on the farm. Neither Roosevelt or any of his sons however want to work on a farm at what me claims are parity prices.

His statement, in his veto message, is evidence that he has a swelled head and is a dictator at heart. That he wants to take away from the workers the right of choice as to the kind of work they prefer to do for the pay. It shows super colossal conceit; or it simply shows that he thinks the city workers have more votes than the farm workers.

Largely Responsible for Inflation

He brought on the inflation and the abnormal scarcity of farm food by laws such as the Wagner law which permitted city workers to arbitrarily set their wages by collective bargaining and by his refusal to permit a tax being put on them to pay their proportionate share of government expense.

He has never explained how we will get the kind or amount of food produced we need when the price ceiling will not permit the workers to be as well off as they are when working for the government or at wages established by intimidation and force made possible under the Wagner Act.

The norm to determine a good law is not alone whether it will cause inflation. People would prefer prices that will cause food to be produced rather than keep the present value on the kind of money Roosevelt has had banks make so plentiful it has little real value.

If inflation or lower prices were the only test, as he seems to use as a norm of rightness, then it would be wise to cut the prices of farm products down to one-hundredth of what they are. Or, if we could get the farmers to live on air alone and furnish us with free food, that would also retard inflation. But the trouble would be, we would not get the food, just as we are not now getting all the food we should have with farm prices set arbitrarily low by the capricious will of the President. The eventual result of prices being set so low that farm labor leaves for the city because the farmers cannot compete in paying wages, is that we will have more hunger than necessary or the government will be obliged to draft labor to work on the farm. But even then we would not get as much production as we would with free labor. And, beside, this is only a form of slavery. It is forced labor just as they have in Europe that we are fighting against.

The American Parity

The American and Christian way of establishing parity of labor or justice is to permit all workers, not just some, to have the right to help establish parity or values.

Jesus recognized this way when he said "Who made me a divider of you", when He was asked to speak to a man about sharing property.

But Roosevelt seems to believe that he is smarter than Jesus or than all the people. That they need not bother about relative prices. That he will take care of that and the lower paid working people will not have to pay their proportionate share of the cost of government.

He has not been willing to consent to the only practical way of avoiding inflation and preserving equality before the law, or the American Christian way. That way is to tax in proportion to consumption, and permit a free market. That will retard wasteful consumption and stimulate production of the things people want and must have. That way will more nearly bring justice to all. All men, under that way, are permitted to be charitable in a manner they believe best instead of having only one man—the President—have a right to force every man to give as Roosevelt thinks best.

The increasing scarcity of things should be evidence that the Roosevelt way is not the best way. That if it is continued, we will continue to get poorer and more helpless.

It is encouraging that Congress is beginning to see the danger of permitting Roosevelt to arbitrarily set prices. This is evidenced by a vote of 78 for and 2 against the Bankhead Bill in the Senate and 149 to 40 in the House.

The question is how empty our stomachs will have to get before we begin to see that the Roosevelt way, the European way of collectivism, is not the way to win the war and return to an ever increasing standard of living.

LET'S HOLD THIS BATTLE LINE, TOO

The National Whirligig

News Behind The News

By RAY TUCKER

SOIL: President Avila Camancho's announcement that he would cross the border and visit irrigation projects in the United States was taken as an indication of the cordial relations between our two countries. But those in close touch with Mexican affairs divulge that there is another reason for the trip. The leader is earnestly trying to solve his local agricultural problem and is seeking helpful information in this nation.

In 1915, the neighbor government seized large estates and promised to partition them among the poor. The peons apply for expropriated land and are given collective farms, paying rent in crops. The chief executive in 1940 agreed to grant titles to those living on federal fields as soon as possible and a great many across recently have been parceled out among the peasants.

But the Indians prefer to raise only enough to satisfy the needs of their own families. They have allowed water ditches to go to waste and often are too indolent to harvest enough food to satisfy the authorities. Hence soil is always being forfeited and then reclaimed after the tiller grows hungry. The properties are constantly shifting from a communal status to that of private ownership.

Another attempt to show kindness to the descendants of the Aztecs also created complications. Mine workers usually receive five pesos a week. When the war boom brought added business, some managements increased the wage one peso. The laborer's standard of living is such that he can exist on the smaller sum, so when his pay was raised he quit work one day a week.

BRICKS: Allied intelligence reports that, instead of going to the Reich, more than one hundred thousand Frenchmen whom Laval compelled to enter German forced labor ranks have been sent to Italy, where they are stringing barbed wire along the coast. It is unusually galling for them to toil under Black Shirt taskmasters.

In Belgium, the Nazis not only have lined the dunes and beaches with pill-boxes but have also established a fortified line between the Sambre and the Meuse rivers to forestall an Anglo-American drive from the direction of northern France, in case our troops successfully debark and commence the march to Berlin on the 1918 pattern.

Worried Nazis are tearing down buildings in the Netherlands which are within the range of coastal guns. Houses in Velseff, Ymuiden and other invasion zone cities are dismantled carefully, and window frames, plumbing and even bricks are saved for construction elsewhere. The famous Duinoord church and the Red Cross hospital in The Hague have been demolished. Aged folk have been turned out of their homes in cold weather without warning.

RESEARCH: Two Yankee Republicans, Senators Wallace H. White Jr., of Maine and John A. Danaher of Connecticut, lately teamed to five the New Deal congress something by which to remember Thomas Jefferson. They dug up a letter which Gen. William King, Maine's first governor, received from the Virginian after sending a copy of the state's constitution to the sage of Monticello for his scrutiny.

Mr. Jefferson wrote that he found the document satisfactory on every point "except that of representation." Referring to the provision by which small communities were given as many members in the legislature as large cities, he recommended that it be changed to conform with more liberal principles.

This bit of memorabilia had remained hidden since it was written in 1819. When Mr. Danaher began his search, after a conversation with Mr. White, whose grandfather's papers contained a reference to the correspondence, he tried the Library of Congress and the Maine Historical society without success. The communication was finally discovered in the Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery.

Ironically, Mr. Danaher's own bailiwick is one of the worst offenders on the subject which the author of the Declaration of Independence criticized. Townships of only a few hundred enjoy the same representation in the state capital as Hartford, Bridgeport, Waterbury, New London, etc. Other commonwealths, however, also have methods whereby rural districts exert undue influence. The Nutmegger hinted that the New Deal, too, had departed from the great Democrat's traditions.

When Majority Leader Barkley congratulated him on the success of his research, the younger man replied, 'Let me add that I wish we were more nearly attuned to the definite government philosophy which Jefferson espoused than we seem to be."

ALLIANCE: Britain's close tie-up with Moscow has created more difficulties for Canadian Prime Minister Mackenzie King than our partnership with the Soviet has stirred up for President Roosevelt, although many groups in the U. S. A. openly dislike the association. The normally taciturn Ottawa leader not long ago denounced a Washington correspondent for Maple Leaf newspapers because he joshed Mr. King about his ambiguous attitude.

The reporter suggested that the Dominion leader's foreign policy was so inconsistent that he followed F. D. R. the first three days of the week, Churchill the next three and on Sunday behaved as the head of a sovereign nation. Mr. Kings' embarrassment was aggravated by the fact that he was conferring with Anthony Eden, chief advocate of friendlier relations with the Kremlin. The large Catholic population in the politically powerful province of Quebec accounts for the Premier's indecision.

Mr. Churchill in his latest speech apparently took cognizance of the northern statesman's predicament—or so Canadians suspect. In words directed to Western peoples, he emphasized that the Empire comprises believers in many faiths and therefore it preaches and practices tolerance, despite possible misinterpretation of the war-inspired arrangement.

This alliance question has caused more uneasiness than is generally realized, and it has become especially acute because of conversations about postbellum planning. But Washington and London officials believe that the majority of their countrymen now view the situation from a logical and practical standpoint. It will not be surprising, however, if certain moves are launched here and abroad to make the affinity more palatable to certain objectors.

A celebrated Angelican divine, the late Bishop of Rochester, who had been ailing for some time, decided to consult Sir Frederick Treves, the noted surgeon. After a careful examination, Sir Frederick pronounced his verdict: "Your lordship must go to Algiers or some winter resort on the Riviera."

"Impossible," replied the Bishop. "I have too much work to get through."

'Well," said the doctor. 'You must make your choice. It is either Algiers or heaven."

"Dear me," exclaimed the Bishop, with a sigh; "then I suppose it must be Algiers."

Around Hollywood

BY ERSKINE JOHNSON

Hollywood has discovered that there's glamor in a radish and that a head of lettuce can have personality.

Yes, victory gardens are sprouting behind all the big movie mansions in Beverly Hills, there's a premium of gardening tools, cocktail party conversation includes the price of seeds and the cure for aphid, and the agents, as expected, are thinking of collecting 10 per cent of their clients' crops.

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy decided to raise poultry. After purchasing some hatching eggs, Laurel hired Ollie's prize setting-hen. Instead of setting on Laurel's eggs, Hardy's hen up and laid six of her own.

Laurel claims the new eggs belong to him while Ollie, a former legal student, claims his hen and all her virtues belong to him. They'll probably have to go to Washington to settle the argument.

GARDENER GARY

Gardener Gary Cooper has a full half-acre of vegetables at his Brentwood home. To save labor, he even converted a gasoline motor driven lawn mower into a combination handplow and harrow. Now Gary's gardener (hard to get, harder to keep) refuses to mow the lawn any more. But the gardener WILL run the plow in the garden. Cooper mows the lawn.

Patriotic as he is corpulent, Sydney Greenstreet instructed his gardener to put in a victory garden. Only likely spot on his hilltop place was spaded and planted. Then it developed that all the neighborhood dogs, of which there are many too many, had long considered the garden site as their particular playground. Greenstreet either had to lay out $250 to fence the property, buy up all the dogs or give up his garden. He went for the fence.

One of the local trade papers has even started a "produce exchange" section which quickly developed into a humor corner. Sample ads: "Will trade one live 2-year-old male fur-bearing mink for one old eatable male cow." And—"Will trade 32 trained young greyhounds (where can you race them?) for a set of laying hens."

EXPENSIVE EGGS

But with Adolphe Menjou the raising of poultry is giving him a supercolossal headache. Despite his best efforts, Menjou figures that each egg he manages to wangle from eight prize hens sets him back about $4.

The $4 covers the latest off-the-ground hen houses of redwood, special trap nests, special heating equipment, sliding doors, feed boxes and special automatic water attachments.

Menjou was moaning about it all on the set of "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" when Director Irving Cummings broke in, "Maybe the chickens resent you. Maybe it's you that's laying all the eggs in the family?" To which Menjou replied, "Yau may have something there."

And, of course, there's Bob Hope. (There always seems to be Bob Hope.) The comedian planted everything except eggplant.

"Let's face it," he said, "My writers need their jobs."

So They Say

A world only half educated can only be half free. I am convinced that education for democracy throughout the world must somehow be achieved if the world is not to suffer generation after generation from ever more destructive wars.
—U. S. Education Commissioner Dr. JOHN W. STUDEBAKER.

It is our solemn duty, both to our fighting men and to the patriots on the home front, to direct ourselves toward a solution of post-war problems now.

Commercial Airlines Crisis

BY PETER EDSON
Pampa News Washington Correspondent

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the U. S. Airmail is to be observed May 15-16, but unless the U. S. commercial airlines can get a few more transport planes assigned to them by the army, there is a fair chance that the celebration, instead of being a joyous birthday, will be somewhat in the nature of a wake, marking the complete bog-down by overloading of the best airmail system in the world.

Airmail today is slow. Airmail is late. Airmail pouches get kicked off or kept off planes by high priority passengers. Postmaster General Frank C. Walker himself gave recognition to this bad situation by his recent admission that the airmail was in a bad way, might have to be dropped entirely as a war measure, to enable the commercial airlines to haul passengers and priority express, relieving them of the added burden of carrying mere mail.

The inside story, however, is that Postmaster Walker's statement was something in the nature of a trial balloon, intended to call attention to the serious situation now confronting the airmail service, indirectly to prod along and force action on the commercial airlines' entirely reasonable requests that they be allocated a few more planes to do the tremendous job that has been dumped on their wings by the war effort. As few as six planes would help, two dozen more planes would relieve the crisis and if assigned to the airlines immediately, this 25th anniversary would mark the rebirth of the airmail service instead of its collapse.

AIRLINES STEP UP MILEAGE

The fact is that U. S. commercial airlines have been doing a tremendous job under severe handicaps, with records of plane and personnel performance which the Army's Air Transport command, for all its recent bragging, would have a hard time matching if it would release its figures, which it won't because it considers such matters military secrets. Every commercial plane in the United States today is averaging 1600 miles of flight per day, as against an average of only 1150 miles per plane per day before the war.

Flying planes longer hours, greater mileage and with heavier loads has been the principal means by which the commercial airlines have attempted to make up for their lack of adequate equipment. As of Pearl Harbor, the commercial airlines had 365 planes. In April the army took over 25 per cent of them, in June got the airlines to convert about 70 planes to cargo use and in addition took over another 38 planes. That left the airlines with 166 planes, or less than half of what they had before, but with more passengers, more express and more mail to haul. The army took over control of priorities, to run the airlines from 16 regional offices. Twenty-five cities and twenty-one routes had their service stopped.

AIRMAIL VITAL TO WAR EFFORT

Congressman Jennings Randolph of Elkins, W. Va., who fathered the airmail pickup service and is now running a one-man crusade for 20,000 airports in the United States, has also been digging into this air transport crisis in the belief that a breakdown or a further curtailment of existing air services would be most disastrous to the war effort.

At Randolph's request, C. P. Graddick, of Chicago, director of the air cargo department for United Airlines, has prepared a lengthy and detailed statement on the situation, emphasizing the fact that the business of the United States is now geared to airmail and air express operation—not business as usual, airmail, but war business airmail, including blueprints, government contracts, specifications, rush orders, waybills, business letters and papers, soldier, sailor and marine mail. "No one wants to impede the war effort," writes Graddick, "but I do believe we have reached the point where we must weigh carefully the value to the war effort of maintaining . . . essential commercial service.

"So greatly overburdened is this service today that if a few more planes are not allocated to the commercial phase of the service, the entire war effort will be hurt."

Today's War Analysis

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press Writer

The divergence of views as expressed in Washington and in Australia regarding the danger of a Jap invasion of that great continent leaves the American public in an unfortunate state of doubt and consequently apprehension.

First we get from Australian sources a picture of 200,000 Nipponese massed and ready to invade as soon as they regain air control. Our Secretary of the Navy Knox counters with the view that there's no indication the Japs have the shipping to move so many men. An Allied spokesman in Australia retorts that a great Japanese combat fleet is massed in the Truk area "within three days' sailing distance of New Guinea."

Washington military authorities intervene with the view that Japanese operations have passed from the offensive stage to one of "aggressive defense." They say there's little danger the Nipponese will attempt to strike against Australia or any other important United Nations bastion.

Here Secretary of War Stimson steps in and pours oil on the troubled waters by promising a constantly increasing flow of planes and other supplies to General MacArthur. The secretary says that vigorous public officials in areas close to the war would be remiss if they failed to press their demands.

That last sentence may give a clew to our mystery. All this argument is coincident with the new Australian drive for more air power from the United States. You can't blame a puzzled public therefore if it wonders whether a high pressure advertising campaign is on.

The American people never questioned the need of building up Allied strength in the Pacific as rapidly as feasible. Secretary Stomson's promise of increasing aid will be warmly welcomed here.

Still, the uncomfortable fact remains that the Allies are incapable at this juncture of waging all-out offensives against enemies in both Europe and Asia at the same time. We haven't the equipment as yet for such widely separated operations. It's only in recent months that we have been able to amass enough strength to begin to take Herr Hitler for a ride.

There's no indication that the Allied high command has any intention of altering its basic strategy of knocking out Hitler first. That strategy was imposed on the high command by a Nazi strength which threatened to conquer all Europe quickly and then span the Atlantic. If the Allies should at this juncture divert any considerable amount of their striking power from Europe, in order to hit Japan, they might be handing Hitler a free ticket to victory.

Certainly we must get at Japan soon for every day the Japs have for consolidation adds to the danger. We also must divert as much strength as feasible to the Southwest Pacific. But it looks now as though our job there for the moment must be largely an aggressive holding operation.

I wonder what a gruelling experience it will be to realize the objective of peace, security and freedom, and I wonder whether it will not require more of the qualities of which mankind is capable than winning the war itself.
—Undersecretary of State SUMNER WELLES.

There are lots of lives being lost in the army because of the accumulation of fatigue and the lack of endurance and strength. Agility cannot be developed in the short training the army gives. It must be developed during the formative years in school.
—Col. THEODORE BANKS of War Department athletic branch.

SIDE GLANCES

"But what has a woman of 40, finding romance, got to do with me, Mom? I'm hungry!"

THE 2nd WAR LOAN DRIVE IS ON!

Are you a Part-time American?

IT ISN'T HARD to figure your percentage as an American. Just check what you are doing against what you could do if you gave every minute of your day, every ounce of your energy . . . and, yes, every drop of your blood . . . toward winning this war.

Many men and many women have made that supreme contribution. Many more will make it—working, fighting, and dying—for American victory and American freedom. For the fight ahead is a hard one. We are just at its beginning, not at its middle, or near its end.

Of course, not all of us are—not all of us can be—in this fight with our lives. But every one of us, every man and woman, can be in it with our dollars!

Why a Lot More Money Is Needed NOW!

With every foot of ground taken . . . with every vital task carried out . . . with every bombing mission against the enemy . . . the costs of war increase. More men are needed in the fight. More ships are needed for our supply lines. More planes and tanks and guns are needed on the expanding battle fronts.

This takes money. More money and still more money.

That's why the Government of the United States is asking us to lend it 13 billion dollars in the next few weeks. Asking us to invest, this month, an extra 13 billion dollars over and above our regular War Bond buying. And make no mistake about this: Uncle Sam's got to get that extra money to keep on fighting this war!

How to Invest Your Share!

Some time soon, you may be called on by a War Loan Drive volunteer. He'll tell you all about the greatest investments in the world today—the wartime securities of the United States. How they're tailored to fit your situation and your ability to buy.

But don't wait for him. Decide now to dig down—dig down deep. Then take every penny you can and go to your nearest bank or postoffice and turn the money into War Bonds.

Sure, it may hurt. But a lot of clean-cut young fellows in uniform are going to be hurt a lot worse than you are before this war is won. And don't ever forget this!

You're not giving your dollars—you're lending them. Your money's going to come back to you—and bring more money with it. Money that can mean not only no depression after this war, but plenty of peace-time jobs and peace-time goods for you and yours in a busier, more prosperous country than we've ever known.

So don't wait. For your Country's sake—for your own sake—invest all you can!

Soldiers Like Light Classical Music

Proof that the boys at Pampa Army Air Field appreciate light classical entertainment as well as swing and vaudeville was given Tuesday night when they jammed the recreation hall and applauded for encores when the Manhattan Music Masters' troupe presented a USO show here.

Howard Kubik, pianist and accompanist, was master of ceremonies. He played several selections for community singing, then several classics and light classical pieces. Also on the schedule were Miss Edna Lora, soprano, and Garfield Swift, baritone. The art of tereischore was interpreted by Rosa Rolland and Nicolas Beriozoff, of the world famous Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo.

Miss Lora and Swift "brought down the house" at the close of the show with their rendition of songs from "Porgy and Bess," the Gershwin operetta.

Uncle Jud Believes Yanks Will Repeat

Club Worst Appearing In Years

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK, April 16 (AP)—The New York Yankees this year are the worst-looking team Joe McCarthy ever has managed in the big leagues, yet everybody is picking them to win another American league pennant and there is no reason to believe the majority isn't right.

You only have to look once at the Yanks this spring to realize the changes that war has wrought on baseball and if you can stop shuddering long enough to look at them two or three times, you start naming over their rivals in the hope of finding some other pennant possibility.

But it is a sad commentary on the caliber of the clubs in the American league this season that not one can be counted on to step out in front of the Yankees.

The Yankees have only one regular infielder, Joe Gordon, and one regular outfielder, Charley (King Kong) Keller, back from last year.

They have lost Joe Dimaggio and Tom Henrich from the outfield, Buddy Hassett and Phil Rizzuto from the infield, and Red Ruffing from the pitching staff. Yet these may not prove to be mortal wounds because other clubs have been hit equally as hard.

The Boston Red Sox should finish second, just as they have in four of the last five years. Manager Joe Cronin has had to give up his entire outfield—Ted Williams, Dominic Dimaggio and Lou Finney—as well as shortstop Johnny Pesky, and two good pitchers, Bill Butland and Charley (Broadway) Wagner.

Back of these two clubs may come a three-way scramble between the Cleveland Indians, St. Louis Browns and Detroit Tigers, with their ultimate positions dependent largely on the draft.

On a hunch, we would place Cleveland third, St. Louis fourth, and Detroit fifth.

This leaves the Washington Senators, Chicago White Sox and Philadelphia Athletics to bring up the rear. Washington is much improved but is vulnerable to the draft. The White Sox are uncertain defensively and lack power, while the less said about the A's the better.

Fritz Crisler Believes Harmon Survived Plane Crash Somewhere

ANN ARBOR, Mich., April 16 (AP) Friends of Lieut. Tom Harmon, dashing former All-American halfback missing on an army flight in the Latin-America area, steadfastly clung to hope that he was safe today and Fritz Crisler was one to help them.

Calling Harmon "the greatest competitor I have ever known," Crisler said "there isn't another guy in the world who has a better chance of returning if he has had the slimmest of breaks."

Crisler, football coach and athletic director at the University of Michigan, was confidante and advisor to Harmon, both when the Wolverine gridder was piling up a sensational athletic record and in later business pursuits.

Fritz's No. 1 protege has been missing since April 8. That's all the word there has been from the war department.

"Call it wishful thinking—maybe that's what it is," Crisler said, "but I know Tom too well. I know what he has always done when the pressure was on him. I've seen his cocksureness and tremendous physical strength and I just won't believe he's through.

"My greatest fear is that his fighting heart spoiled his chances. In a jam he'd stick with the plane to the last moment, even when reason dictated otherwise, rather than try to save himself."

40 Texas League Men in Service

DALLAS, April 16 (AP)—More than 40 players who performed in the Texas league last season are in the armed service—meaning better than 25 per cent now are carrying guns for Uncle Sam.

A survey showed today that 43 players from the league which suspended operations now are in some branch of the service and that 54 are in other minor leagues. Nineteen are in the majors.

Dallas has eight in the service against an equal number in Class AA leagues and four in defense plants. One ex-rebel, Johnnie McPartland, went to the big leagues but entered the army before the season opened.

Beaumont has nine in the service and five in the major leagues. Tulsa has ten in the armed service and three in the majors. Fort Worth has none in the service so far as known while eleven are in AA leagues and two are in the majors. Oklahoma City shows six in the service but none in the majors. Seven San Antonio players entered the service while the others were divided among Toledo and the St. Louis Browns, and Manager Ralph Weingarner is in a defense plant at Wichita, Kas. Shreveport has eight players in the armed service, two are in the majors and all others except three who are farming or in private industry are in Class AA ball.

Houston has three of its 1942 players in the service but only one in the majors—Paul Dean.

Became Officer With Broken Neck

SAN MARCOS, April 16 (AP) — Football foes of Duane Purvis found him tough to handle back in the thirties when he was a prominent contender for All-America.

The army air force is finding him just as tough. He's the guy who went through Officers Candidate School at Miami Beach, Fla., with a broken neck.

Nine months ago the former Purdue university grid great and star javelin thrower was serving as a civilian physical training director at Ellington field, Houston, when he fell from some tumbling equipment. X-rays failed to reveal a break and some weeks later he reported at Miami Beach. He didn't feel up to par but Purvis carried on for 13 weeks of rigorous training, reporting to Kelly field, San Antonio, in December.

Examination there revealed the break and a delicate operation was performed. Doctors told him he was extremely lucky to be alive.

Speaking of luck, Purvis admits he has had his share of both kinds. Possibly the fact that he was born on Friday the thirteenth and was thirteen years old on Friday the thirteenth had something to do with it. Anyway, Purvis admits he's giving the idea some thought.

Injuries have played an integral part in his athletic career, but somehow the guy always has managed to come out on top. For instance, there was his senior year at Purdue when he couldn't compete in track until the last meet because of a football hurt. But he didn't want to default, so he limped out and took one throw with the javelin. He broke the state record and won his letter.

Today Purvis, now a lieutenant, is physical training director at the army air forces navigation school here but he can't participate in the exercises. However, he's not unhappy about it. After all, he was lucky to be in such great condition. If the muscles in his neck had not been ample and of such heavy texture, the tumbling accident might have been fatal.

BROOKLYN — The high-flying Brooklyn Dodgers cross the river again today to battle the New York Giants, whom they defeated Wednesday, 1 to 0. The veteran Curt Davis, who has been on the shelve with a thumb fracture suffered early in the training season, is scheduled to report for duty and may see his first mound action.

NEW YORK — Idle yesterday and with only a workout scheduled today, the New York Yankees approach the season's opener with a pitching staff suffering from lack of work. Only two chuckers have hurled as much as nine innings against major and minor league opposition, and Spurgeon Chandler seems to be the only one ready to go a full game.

BOSTON — Three concellations in three days have the Braves pitching staff upset and Casey Stengel is worried about the lack of work for Tobin, Barrett, Andrews and Jeffcoat. None has gone more than six innings and Stengel figures he may have to use two a game.

ST. LOUIS — Cardinal Manager Billy Southworth will try Mort Cooper for the full nine innings today in the fourth game of the city series with the Browns, and hints it is a tuneup for a probable opening-day assignment against the Reds next Wednesday.

CHICAGO — Manager Jimmy Wilson, although his Cubs won only one of three games from the White Sox in camp, forecast his team will win the spring city series starting today.

Ransom Is Hottest Guy In Golf Meet

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF

DALLAS, April 16 (AP)—The Texas Victory open, boasting a field of 250, started today—the forerunner, thinks PGA President Ed Dudley, of golf tournaments in every section of the country designed primarily to contribute to the war effort.

"I look for many more to be held now that it has been shown by the Texas open that such tournaments can be staged successfully," said the baldish Chicagoan. "Already, plans are being discussed for a similar tournament at Wichita, Kas."

Half-pint Ben Hogan, showing lack of practice but still considered the man to beat, headed up a field of 40 pros and more than 200 amateurs.

Ben, who doesn't take his opening 18 holes until this afternoon, tried the course out for the first time yesterday and complained about his rusty short game. "Between 36 and 45," he grinned when asked his score on the practice nine holes he played.

Henry Ransom, Houston pro, remained the hottest guy on the course. Ransom followed up his blistering nine-under-par 63 of Wednesday, when he tied the Dallas Sountry club course record, with a 7$, explaining that he was "taking it easy today."

Ray Hill of Randolph field, former assistant to open champion Craig Wood, turned in the best nine holes of the day. He was out in 38, but coming in he had seven birdies to give him a 31.

Others with 69's were Ray Kenny, Dallas schoolboy who won the Texas amateur championship last year; Earl Stewart of Dallas, former National Intercollegiate champion, and Dick Martin of Dallas, but the best 18-hole round of the day was played by George Aulbach of Amarillo, who had a 67 in which he showed six birdies.

A war bond rally is scheduled for tonight and tournament officials are going after sales totaling $1,000,000. They already have half that amount pledged. In addition, all proceeds from the tournament are being contributed to the Red Cross.

Sports Roundup

BY CHARLES DUNKLEY
(Pinch hitting for flu-stricken Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.)

CHICAGO, April 16 (AP)—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, 76-year-old commissioner of baseball, eased his feet down from his littered desk.

"No one knows what will happen to baseball this summer," he blurted. "It would only be a guess. But I have every hope that we will finish the season, as usual, and that the pennant races, in both leagues, will be exciting."

Landis pulls no punches in expressing his views on almost everything—except baseball. His hair snow-white, he sits in a high-back leather chair, behind a desk literally covered with papers, statues of baseball stars, an airplane clock and various documents piled two or three inches dep. His offices, high in an upper Michigan boulevard skyscraper, overlook Lake Michigan.

He believes spring training in the north, above the so-called Landis-Eastman line, proved satisfactory to the players. He said he hadn't received one complaint, either from players or club officials.

Landis is pleased so many major league stars—such as Ted Williams, Joe Di Maggio, Ted Lyons, Bob Feller, Red Ruffing, Johnny Beazley and a host of others—have entered the service of their country.

"As prominent as they were, they did the wire thing in joining the armed forces as quickly as possible," he commented.

Luke Sewell, manager of the St. Louis Browns, says anybody who tries to pick a pennant winner this season must be balmy. Good pitching, even steady pitching, will tell this year, more than any other, he says.

"You'll see from six to eight 20-game winners in each league," Sewell predicts. "Those long ball hitters, those .320 men have been thinned out."

More Sports After War Are Predicted

FORT WORTH, April 16 (AP) — Coach Leo (Dutch) Meyer of Texas Christian university thinks intercollegiate athletics of all kinds will be conducted on an even larger scale after the war than in past years.

He said he thinks spring training an important and valuable part of football, that it does not get in the way of regular spring sports, and that when the war ends the schools that have dropped these workouts will go back to them.

DARK JUNGLES

BY JOHN C. FLEMING & LOIS EBY

COPYRIGHT, 1943, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Barry Fielding has come to Guatemala in search of a quicksilver mine operated by the Quiche Indian tribe, who are hostile to white men. After an arduous journey through jungle and upland he and his Mexican guide, Jose, finally reach Quiche territory. He bears a letter from a friend of the tribe and so gains an audience with the chief. The chief and his council listen to Barry's plea that America needs quicksilver for war production. They promise to give him an answer in the morning.

MALARIA

CHAPTER XII

AT first Barry thought it was an evil dream—he heard the low, guttural chant from a dozen husky throats—then he opened his eyes slowly, cautiously. In the dim light he could see only the shadowy outline of the painted warriors. Their feet moved slowly up and down in an eerie cadence to their chant. Then he saw Jose standing in the corner, his eyes still heavy with sleep but unmistakable fear lighting them.

"What's wrong!" Barry said huskily.

"Someone's attacked an Indian girl. They say it was a white man!" Jose said quickly.

"But that's ridiculous!" Barry cried.

"That's what I've tried to tell them but they won't be convinced. They say we must come at once to the chief's tent for a trial."

Barry got up then, feeling strangely groggy, and the odd procession started through the murky light down the village street. The street was deserted but ahead Barry could see the flames of a great fire licking into the darkness. The fire burned in front of the chief's tent and around it moved a dozen natives in a slow dance to the rumbling rhythm of drums. Barry felt an icy fear go through him as he thought of stories he had read about white men being burned alive lashed to the stake.

When the little group reached the chief's tent one of the warriors shouted something in Quiche and they stopped. The oldest man of the group entered the tent, apparently to announce their arrival. In a moment he was back and the procession filed inside. The chief gave an order then and one of the warriors left the tent. Soon he came back and with him were two ancient Indian women who between them supported the Indian girl. She was a girl about 18 with a certain sloe-eyed beauty. Her large eyes were downcast and the spirit seemed drained from her body.

THE chief talked at some length and his council nodded their heads sagely. Finally Barry caught hold of Jose's sleeve.

"What is he saying?" he asked anxiously.

"They think you are the guilty one."

"Tell them I never left my tent!" Barry cried.

Jose spoke to the chief in Quiche but the chief only shook his head and drew from behind him the waterproof letter case that Barry had used to bring the letter from Renaldo.

"They say this letter case of yours was found in the girl's tent!" Jose said through dry lips.

"I must have dropped it here, in this tent, when I took the letter out to show it to the chief. Someone has framed this on me!" Barry said excitedly.

All was quiet then and Barry knew that his fate was sealed. The old chief finally spoke a few short words in a hard brittle voice and the young form of the girl slumped to the ground.

"He has pronounced the death sentence on the girl," Jose said quietly.

The two old women stepped forward and carried the limp form from the tent.

"But there must be something we can do!" Barry looked appealingly toward Jose.

"After the sentence is pronounced—there is nothing."

The chief waved his hands then and two Indians marched Barry and Jose from the tent. They marched the length of the street to the last tent, in the rosy light of a new dawn. The two men were shoved into the tent and the tent flaps were closed. Two guards stood watch outside.

"What will they do to that girl?" Barry asked after he and Jose had sat on the mat of straw that covered the floor of the tent.

"They will take her back to her tent and say the death chant until tomorrow night. When the moon comes up over Santa Maria she will close her eyes and be dead."

"But that's impossible!" Barry protested. "You can't just chant over a person and have them die."

"You can't perhaps, senor, but the Quiches can. It is the blood oath of the Chichicastenango. They have been doing this for over 600 years. Many doctors have come here and seen this done. They can't explain it. They just shake their heads and go away."

"Maybe if we could get word to Renaldo we could save the girl?" Barry said.

"You could get no one to interfere with this oath," Jose said with finality. "Even the government soldiers from Guatemala City would not come. They let the Quiches alone."

BARRY did not speak again for a long time. He laid his head down in the straw and felt a strange feverishness envelop him. His head throbbed and the strength seemed to drain from his body. Finally he opened his eyes and looked steadily at Jose. "What will they do to us?"

"They will not pass sentence until the moon has risen tonight over Santa Maria. After the girl has died then they will come for us again and pass their sentence."

Jose's eyes narrowed then and his teeth gleamed as he said, "But when they come, senor, we will not be here!"

"You mean we'll make an escape?" Barry asked.

"Soon now all the Indians, all but those guards outside, will follow the chief to the Cave of the Winds. There they will make offerings to their god Vienda. After they have gone—," Jose rolled his sleeves higher then and bared his powerfully muscular arms, "I will take care of those guards."

The men waited then until they heard the commotion in the street outside. Dogs barked and they heard the slow shuffle of padded feet as the grim procession marched away.

Jose got noiselessly to his feet and waved to Barry to follow him. Suddenly, like a crouching tiger, he sprang out of the tent and locking the two heads of the Indians in his powerful arms shouted to Barry.

"Get two mules from the picket line there!"

Bewildered, Barry ran toward the line where a score of mules were tied. He untied two quickly and led them back to the tent. When he returned Jose was still holding the squirming Indians. Barry struck out at them. They slumped to the ground. Barry and Jose mounted the mules quickly and rode away.

"If we get below the timber line we are safe. They will not go out of their own country," Jose said.

They rode on in silence for a long time down, down, over ledges of rock, through sweet-smelling pines and towering tamaracks. Finally, Jose pulled his mule to a stop beside a shimmering cascade of clear water.

"We are safe now. We will camp here for the night."

Barry climbed stiffly from his mule and stood braced against it, breathing heavily. His face was flaming with fever, his eyes bloodshot. Jose cried,

"You are ill, senor!"

"I am a fool," said Barry. "I was too excited to ward it off with medicine. I've got malaria."

Jap-Americans Get Training

CAMP SHELBY, Miss., April 16 (AP)—Some 2,500 Japanese-American soldiers from Hawaii have arrived here to join approximately the same number from the United States mainland to form a Japanese-American combat team, organized into a small, streamlined army.

These loyal Americans of Japanese ancestry who are taking advantage of an opportunity offered by the War department for military service against the enemies of the United States, made a 4,000-mile trip via boat and rail.

The soldiers, carefully selected from all walks of life in the Hawaiian islands, made the trip here by special trains from San Francisco.

"We sat up most of the night watching the lights from the train at Chicago," said George A. Suenaga, a former milk truck driver, "It's good to see lights at night. We've been blacked out since the war began over there."

"I saw a lot of the fireworks at Pearl Harbor," chimed in Hirota Sugana of Kolo, a former stevedore. "We are all anxious to get started here. It's the only thing that will help some of us forget."

Col. Charles W. Pence, commander of the new outfit, said no other group of men ever traveled 4,000 miles to train to fight for their country.

He explained the combat team really would be a small, streamlined army with components of infantry, field artillery, engineer and medical personnel.

PETROLEUM

1,562,000 barrels compares with nominations by purchasers of 1,670,142 barrels for May, a gain of 15,275 barrels, announced by the commission. However, the current daily allowable in Texas is 1,460,834 barrels, with additional production of approximately 120,000 barrels of consensate daily.

While Ickes ordered an increase in Texas production, he specified that more than one-half be given to pools yielding asphalt crudes, directing that the output of this type of oil be lifted to 71,000 barrels daily from current flow of 35,000 barrels, or an increase of 36,000 barrels.

Ickes also ordered that the asphalt crudes, which come under group 5 of the PAL's classification of oils, be made available to the following refining areas: Houston 12,400 barrels; New Orleans 14,000 barrels; Beaumont-Port Arthur 8,600 barrels, and district 1, eastern state 36,100 barrels.

The petroleum administrator further directed the commission to make 60,000 barrels of sweet crude daily available to the oLngview terminal of the Big Inch pipe line from that east Texas city to Norris City, Ill. This is in addition to the sweet crude certified for this purpose in April.

The purchasers asked for an increase of 16,868 barrels in the Gulf coast, raising that district to 367,922 barrels daily. A reduction of 21,368 barrels to 373,448 barrels was nominated for east Texas, while the west Texas nominations were raised 4,947 barrels to 225,772 barrels.

man and Italian planes have been destroyed on the ground, officers estimated.

The German air force has been so weakened that fighters are sent up only to repel Allied bombers and they have avoided combat with the large American-British fighter sweeps over the Tunis area.

An announcement of the U. S. Army Air forces said that traffic into the important port of Ferryville at the southwestern end of Lake Bizerte had ceased as a result of bombings.

"The entire dockyard area of Ferryville, which is vitally important to the flow of Axis supplies into North Africa, has been devastated by the northwest strategic air force," the announcement said.

tangible, something that I know will prove to everyone that I am proud of this nation, proud that I'm part of it and that it's part of me.

"I want to help change America back into a nation without rationing; a place where we can invite company to Sunday dinner without having to do without for the rest of the week because all the points in our book are gone; a place where in September we can start wondering what the new car models for the next year will be like.

"On the other hand, if we don't all do our part not only will we never have these things again but on top of that our nation will be just like France, Poland, Austria, and the others, where people are shot for talking, put in concentration camps for thinking.

There's a poignant note in the letter as Ernest tells of the time when he was a boy and how he begged his parents not to kill the turkey bought for Thanksgiving because he had fed it a few times and become attached to it.

Millions of other fine American men probably felt the same way as boys. Now they are "over there" where it's a case of kill or be killed and the dollars you put in Victory bonds may spell the difference between a muddy grave for an American on Guadalcanal or his triumphant return down Main street.

"What I want to do is join the air corps, there I believe I could do the most good or the most damage, (whivhever you prefer.) And what I would like for you to do, please, is to ask the draft board how I can get in—and how soon," Ernest concludes his letter to his parents here.

Ernest is a pre-medical student at Tech, and has been deferred for that reason as doctors are in demand. His father has already complied with his son's request and conferred with the draft board here but they hold he should continue his work in college for at least one more year. Ernest will complete his pre-medical course this semester.

How you can help America is plain—buy Victory bonds. "How soon" is easy to answer—the time is now. No Japanese sniper is going to delay murdering some American waiting for your answer.

To bring the vital message of the Victory loan closer to your home, a series of radio talks has been arranged by the speakers committee. The time will be from 6:15 p. m. to 6:30 p. m. over Radio Station KPDN, beginning tonight and extending through Saturday, April 24.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"The more I read about it, Judge, the more I realize the tactics and requirements of this war are as different from the one I fought in 25 years ago as night is from day."

"Yes, and I can give you an example of how true that is, Fred. In World War I the chief uses of alcohol produced for war purposes were found in smokeless powder, medical supplies and chemical warfare materials. In this war the need for this product is far more vital because it is also used as a fuel to propel torpedoes, to make shatterproof glass for airplane windshields and instrument covers, to make lacquers used in camouflaging equipment and as a base for synthetic rubber needed for tires, gas masks, paratroop equipment and dozens of other things.

"Every time I think of it, Fred, I realize how fortunate we were in having a beverage distilling industry in existence when war broke out... ready and willing to convert 100% to the production of this critically needed war product. I'm mighty sure bootleggers wouldn't have."

Conference of Alcoholic Beverage Industries, Inc.
