CHINESE PRESIDENT SOUNDS WAR CRY TO ARMY

Midland Officers Battle With Guns Over Muzzling Of Dog

WATCHMAN AND POLICE CHIEF 'SHOOT IT OUT'

Night Guard Killed By Bullet From Gun Of His Opponent

INQUEST IS SECRET

City Officer Not Expected To Live; Mexican Dies In Affray

MIDLAND, Texas, July 21. (AP)—Two veteran West Texas peace officers early today ended with pistols a disagreement said to have originated in a ruling by one that all unmuzzled dogs here would be shot.

Night Watchman J. C. Holcombe, 58, was slain and Chief of Police King Reed, about 50, who promulgated the dog order, fell on the town's main street with wounds that probably will cause his death.

The findings of an inquest, held on the street corner where Reed and Holcombe shot it out and later continued at the morgue, were withheld.

After the police chief's announcement that unmuzzled dogs, because of a hydrophobia menace, must be killed, it was believed that he met Holcombe, who always had a dog with him on his nightly rounds, that the men quarreled and began firing.

MADDENED MEXICAN KILLS ONE, WOUNDS FOUR

MIDLAND, Texas, July 21. (AP)—A Mexican believed to have been temporarily mad ran wild with a gun here today, shooting four other Mexicans, one of them a girl.

Merced Chaves, was killed. The extent of injuries to Julio Barrera, Pedro [illegible] and the girl, whose name was not learned, could not be ascertained.

The alleged slayer, Jose Hinojos, who also assertedly beat two other of his countrymen with his weapon, will be given an examining trial tomorrow.

Central American Wheat Demands Increasing

WASHINGTON, July 21. (US)—Central American demands for United States wheat are constantly increasing, according to a commerce department bulletin published today, with an increase of approximately 15 per cent in the shipment of flour in 1928 over the figures for 1927.

In 1928 the United States shipped 736,000 barrels of flour to Central American countries, compared with 635,000 barrels the year before. The annual pre-war shipment was about 800,000,000 barrels.

New Orleans Prepares To Deal With Strikers

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 21. (AP)—Determined to break the deadlock between Public Service and the local carmen's union and put an end to the street car strike of 20 days' duration, the city commission council today perfected plans to deal direct after its arbitration committee of seven citizens failed.

What ends the council will employ when representatives of the company and of the union appear before the municipal body tomorrow were unannounced.

$15,000,000 Building Program at Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 21. (UP)—Construction work amounting to more than $15,000,000 and calling for employment of 3,000 craftsmen will be started this week.

The announcement of the building of the bus terminal group of buildings is the latest project planned. More building projects adding several millions in the development of the business district will be announced shortly.

Co-Ed's Slayer on Trial Today

Judge Henry S. Scarlett of Columbus, Ohio, (left), will preside Monday over the trial of Dr. James H. Snook (below), confessed slayer of Theora K. Hix (right). On the eve of the trial's opening the defense forces said they hoped to show through alienists the Snook's actions were not rational. The prosecution plans showing that Snook coldly planned the killing.

Aged Cotton County Farmer Killed By Rifle Bullet Near Temple, Okla.

W. H. Campbell Held in Walters Jail Following Killing Near Farm Home Late Saturday

Special to The Record News

WALTERS, Okla., July 21.—W. Jones, 65, farmer living near here, was shot to death early Saturday night a short distance from the home of W. H. Campbell, also 65, 12 miles southeast of Temple, Okla.

An hour after the shooting, Campbell was placed in custody of Sheriff C. G. Hooper and Deputy Sheriff W. T. Stapp and brought to the county jail here. Today a murder charge was filed against him by County Attorney C. S. McCuistion. Bond was denied pending examining trial, which McCuistion said would be held in a few days.

Jones' wife was a witness to the shooting. Officers investigating the tragedy said that Jones was killed as he went to the Campbell home to get his wife. No motive was announced.

Officers said Jones' body was found 87 yards from the Campbell home. A bullet from a Winchester had entered just below the heart.

Funeral services at the county's expense were held at 4 p. m. today for the slain man. He leaves only his wife.

Campbell for a number of years has been known by his nickname, "Catfish Bill." He is a farmer. He has been convicted in two shootings here, one of which resulted fatally, but both convictions were reversed. He was convicted on a charge of assault with intent to kill H. C. Schnapel Sept. 18, 1914, and given one year. This conviction was reversed by the appelate court in February, 1918. He was convicted of the murder of J. L. Dobbs here Aug. 6, 1920 and given 15 years in the penitentiary. This verdict likewise was reversed April 19, 1924.

SUMMER GRADS HEAR SERMON

McKenney Addresses Seniors at First Methodist

More than sixty members of the summer school Junior college and high school graduating classes attended the morning services at the First Methodist church Sunday morning, and heard the baccalaureate sermon given by Dr. S. S. McKenney, pastor, on the subject "Imprisoned Possibilities."

Dr. McKenney declared that the only way in which the value of an education may be determined is by the capacity of the student, and that the only limitation on life originates within the individual.

The speaker chose the following texts for his address; Exodus iv:2; "What is that in thine hand?"; Luke xxiv: 15-16, "Jesus Himself drew near and went with them, but their eyes were holden, that they should not know Him:" and Luke xvix:41-42, "If thou hadst known, even thou, the things which belong unto thy peace, but now are they hid from thy sight." The text of Dr. McKenney's sermon follows:

Capacity Decides Value

"These texts point to unawakened energies, unrecognised oppotrunities, and imprisoned possibilities. The clasped hand, the closed eye, and the clouded minds are the symbols of these. The first referred to Moses, called to deliver Israel. The second to two disciples who journeyed with their risen Lord and knew Him not. The third, to the

Dying Woman Reveals Herself As Mother of Long Idolized Actor

MEXICO CITY, July 21. (AP)—A little elderly woman who for years was a regular gallery patron of one of Mexico City's leading theaters to watch Roberto Soto, the country's most popular comedian perform, has revealed herself as the mother the actor thought had died at his birth.

Soto's parents parted soon after his birth and he was brought up by his father in the state of Zacatecas, with the impression that his mother was dead.

He is 30 years old and for years has been prominent in Mexican theatricals, oblivious to the fact that his mother, who was poverty stricken, watched him several times a week from a cheap seat in the gallery.

Ill, and sensing the proximity of death, the mother summoned the actor to her modest home and revealed her secret at the same time informing him that he has three half-brothers, the children of a second marriage.

JAMES TUNNEY NAMED IN NEW $500,000 SUIT

Former Husband of Katherine King Fogarty To Ask for Balm

ALIENATION CLAIMED

Retired Champion Accused Of Presenting Woman As His Wife

STAMFORD, Conn., July 21. (AP)—James J. Tunney, retired heavyweight boxing champion of the world, faces another suit for $500,000 as a result of his admitted acquaintanceship with Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty, divorcee of New York City and Fort Worth, Texas.

Suit is to be entered against him in the September term of the superior court at Bridgeport by John S. Fogarty, former husband of the woman, for alienation of affections. Preliminary steps were taken here yesterday when Fogarty's attorneys obtained attachments on property owned by the ex-champion.

Woman's Suit Set

Mrs. Fogarty's suit for $500,000 based on alleged breach of promise is scheduled for trial in the September term of the same court. The attachments in Fogarty's action is the second in several months, as Mrs. Fogarty's attorneys attached the Tunney property the same day her suit was filed.

Fogarty, in a complaint already made public, says he was the legal husband of Mrs. Fogarty at the time Tunney is said to have been friendly and intimate with her. Fogarty charges that in February, 1925, Tunney "stole the love and devotion" of Mrs. Fogarty and induced her to divorce him. This is said to have occurred at Hot Springs, while Tunney was there in training. Mrs. Fogarty herself named this as the scene of Tunney's proposal to her, four days after she obtained a divorce from Fogarty.

Called "Mrs. Tunney"

Fogarty also declared in the complaint, that Tunney publicly described Mrs. Fogarty as his wife and appeared with her in Chicago, Miami, St. Paul, New York and other cities. Tunney, in his reply to Mrs. Fogarty's action, declared that he had paid her $35,000 to sign a waiver of rights on him and denied her allegations of a proposal. Officials said the attachment on the Tunney property was tantamount to a filing of Fogarty's suit.

Woman Loses $9,185 In Jewels Boarding Train

LOS ANGELES, July 21. (US)—In her haste to catch an electric train, Mrs. George Morrison of Denver lost a purse containing jewels valued at $9,185 today. She does not know whether she dropped the purse or had it stolen by a pickpocket.

Mrs. Morrison and her husband, a Denver coal magnate, were boarding an electric train at the Pacific Electric station when the loss was discovered. They were on their way to the harbor, where they expected to embark for New York.

French Accord Faces Senates of Both Nations

WASHINGTON, July 21. (AP)—The French war debt settlement with this country, which was approved early today after a stiff fight by the French chamber of deputies must run the gauntlet of the American congress, if it is accepted by the French senate, as confidently expected. Gratified by the French action after three years of waiting, administration leaders were figuring today on adding the debt agreement to the program of the extra session and taking it up in the house after it reconvenes in September.

FRIEND IN NEED

Nature Performs Task of Those Seeking to Aid Poor Farmer

CHICAGO, July 21. (US)—Nature has come to the aid of President Hoover in his endeavor to affect proper farm relief by "removing wheat for the next year or two from the group of products that need assistance," according to Bernard W. Snow, noted grain expert.

"The change in the position of wheat," said Mr. Snow, "during the last 60 days, perhaps never has been equaled, in so far as prices are concerned.

"With the wheat crop shortage set at approximately 450 million bushels the stupendous task that confronted the federal farm board has been lightened."

HOYT RETURNS TO FAIRBANKS

Message Tells Briefly Of 'Tough Trip' to Nome

WHITE HORSE, Yukon, July 21. (AP)—Capt. Ross G. Hoyt, New York to Nome flier, landed here at 9 a. m., today on his return flight from Nome and took off again at 11 o'clock. He expected to reach Edmonton, Alberta, tonight and New York tomorrow.

NEW YORK, July 21. (AP)—A telegram from Capt. Ross G. Hoyt, army flier, on a roundtrip flight from Mitchel field, New York, to Nome, Alaska, today announced his return to Fairbanks, Alaska, after a "tough trip to Nome and return."

"Back at Fairbanks," the telegram sent to J. H. Adamson, assistant to F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war for aviation, read. "Leave Fairbanks at 4 a. m., local time. Tough trip to Nome and return. Rain, low clouds entire trip. Plan to reach New York Monday. Will wire any changes."

Adamson said Captain Hoyt's schedule provided for his arrival at White House three hours after [illegible] Fairbanks and that the flier should reach Edmonton, Alberta, a 1,500-mile jump from Fairbanks, just before dark tonight. He is expected to arrive in New York about noon Monday.

BILLION DOLLAR CITY FLYING SMOOTHLY

HOUSTON, July 21. (UP)—In the air more than 100 hours, the Stinson-Detroiter monoplane Billion Dollar City, piloted by Joe Glass and G. L. Loomis, remained in the air late today. Glass and Loomis rounded out their fifth full day in the air shortly after noon.

KWKH PASSES ITS 100TH HOUR UP

SHREVEPORT, La., July 21. (AP)—The monoplane KWKH, out for a new endurance refueling record, passed its 100th hour at 2:29:32 p. m. today. Van Lear Leary and Currey Sanders, pilots, reported the motor functioning perfectly.

ST. LOUIS PLANE PASSES 200 HOURS

ST. LOUIS, July 21. (AP)—The St. Louis Robin, piloted by Dale "Red" Jackson and Forest O'Brine, passed its 200th hour in the air at 3:17 p. m. (central standard time) and whirled on toward the stretch in its flight for a new endurance record. Its sister endurance plane, the Missouri Robin, had been aloft more than 100 hours at that hour, and was still going strong.

SIX DISTILLERS SOON TO BEGIN MAKING LIQUOR

Doran Announces Details Of Plans to Replenish Whisky Supply

LOSSES FIGURED OUT

Evaporation and Soakage To Claim Fifth Of Year's Output

WASHINGTON, July 21. (US)—Pure, carefully distilled, fully aged and lawful whisky is about to be produced in the United States for the first time in eight years.

Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran announced today that his bureau is ready to act on applications for permits to manufacture, in order to replenish the dwindling stock of whisky for medicinal use.

Bourbon and Rye

Two million gallons will be made in the first year. Barrel soakage and evaporation will reduce this in four years to between 1,600,000 and 1,700,000 gallons, Doran said.

About 70 per cent of the new whisky will be bourbon and the rest rye.

The amount to be made in future years will be governed by conditions at the time, Doran said.

Six distillers or groups of distillers will make the whisky.

The quantity of non-beverage whisky in the country July 1 was 9,549,017 gallons, Doran announced following completion of studies by his bureau. The yearly consumption he put at 1,500,000 to 1,650,000 gallons, there are also continuing evaporation losses, Doran pointed out.

To Start Jan. 1

Need for reconditioning distilling plants will delay production of new whisky until nearly Jan. 1. By that time the present whisky stock will be reduced to 8,440,555 gallons, Doran estimated. They will represent a five years' supply.

Four years must be allowed for the new whisky to age, to meet the standards of federal and state pharmacy laws. In this time about four-fifths of the present stock will have been used up or will have evaporated. The rest, a year's supply, will constitute "a reasonable margin of bottled stock in the warehouses, in the hands of the wholesale druggists and in the hands of the retail druggists."

The barrels holding the present stock of 9,549,017 gallons in concentration warehouses originally contained 15,127,380 gallons, Doran said. The loss he attributed to normal evaporation, the great bulk of the whisky having been made at least 12 years ago. A small quantity was made after the Volstead act became effective, but before the Willis-Campbell act of 1921.

H. J. Leahy's Sanity Hearing on Today

GEORGETOWN, Texas, July 21. (AP)—Harry J. Leahy goes to trial for his sanity—and his life—in district court here tomorrow. Leahy, convicted murderer of Dr. J. A. Every Soldier Called To Help Quell Menace Of 'Red Imperialism'

Chiang Kai Shek Says Russia's Arrogant Attitude Cannot Be Ignored; Soviet Press Pleads for War Measures; Soviet Attack Reported

PEKING, China, July 21. (AP)—President Chiang Kai Shek called upon the Chinese armies to rise against "red imperialism" and uphold the sovereign rights of China in a manifesto issued this morning.

The president, who is ex-officio generalissimo of the armies, declared the abolition of unequal treaties and realization of national independence constituted the most important points of the Chinese revolutionary program and that every officer and soldier of the national army should be willing to sacrifice his life for their realization.

The manifesto concluded: "Russia's arrogant attitude towards our government cannot be ignored. Unless we unite in the fight against Red imperialism our country and our people will perish."

Toho news agency (Japanese) dispatches from Harbin said Wan Fu Lin, governor of Heilungking province, would be appointed commander in chief of the western front, heading 80,000 troops. L. Chen-Sheng, governor of Kirin province, will command 60,000 men on the eastern front.

A detachment of heavy artillery with 30,000 men arrived at Tsitsihar from Shanhaikwan, Chihli province.

About 3,000 west bound trans-Siberian travellers are held up at Harbin, owing to interruption of rail service.

The last Siberian express arrived at Matzieskaya, just west of Manchuli, July 17, where the Russians made the passengers comfortable.

RUSSIAN PRESS WARNS TO PREPARE

MOSCOW, July 21. (US)—The Soviet press today warns the Russian people they must frantically prepare for war. The papers assert that positive proof has been received that big powers, especially Britain and Japan, are inflaming the entire Levant and Orient against the Soviets and urging a gigantic military advance by the yellow and brown races on all eastern fronts.

The seizure of the Chinese Eastern railway is regarded merely as a provocative action to unleash the Asiatic war dogs against the Soviets. Britain is accused specifically of giving military advice to Nanking; strengthening the Indian air forces with squadrons of New mote army planes capable of making 240 kilometers an hour; strengthening the Basra, Mesopotamia, air base so as to enable seaplanes to land in the Caspian sea within four hours.

Japan is accused of fomenting Mongolian tribes into raiding Soviet territory.

It is impossible here to obtain confirmation of reported clashes along the Manchurian border.

WAR LORD REPORTS SOVIET ATTACK

NANKING, China, July 21. (AP)—Marshal Chang Hsueh Liang, Manchurian war lord, reported direct to the Nationalist government that Soviet forces opened an attack on Chinese at 8 o'clock yesterday morning along the Suifenho river, on the eastern border of Manchuria.

Marshal Chang reported that Chinese troops remained on the defensive and that Russian troops were said to be equipped with poison gas and 32 field guns.

SOVIET'S CAVALRY NEAR MANCHULI

TOKYO, July 21. (AP)—Rengo dispatches from Manchuli, on the western end of the Chinese Eastern railway in Manchuria, today said Soviet cavalry appeared within half a mile of Manchuli this morning.

Official reports said Japanese residents in Progranichnaya and Manchuli were withdarwing to Harbin and Tsitsihar after consular warnings.

Official sources also reported that white Russian Cossacks estimated at 3,000 were forming a "self defense corps" in the Manchuli district.

BORDER RESIDENTS PANIC STRICKEN

POGRANIC HINAYA, Manchuria, July 20. (Delayed) (AP)—The Population of this border city has become panic stricken as a result of repeated appearance of four Russian airplanes, not 17. Japanese residents fled to Harbin yesterday aboard a special train.

Vladivostok, "the heart of the East," as the Russians call it, was cut off from the world as far as railway traffic is concerned. Railway authorities claim the interruption is due to floods along the Amur railway, which skirts Manchuria and connects with the trans-Siberian railway.

The traffic blockade at the rail-

DEATH HOVERS OVER MUELLER

German Chancellor Undergoes Bladder Operation

BAD MERGENHEIM, Germany, July 21. (AP)—The condition of Chancellor Hermann Mueller was most grave tonight. An emergency operation was performed this evening by Dr. Eugene Enderlen, who was hurriedly called from Heidelberg.

The chancellor has been suffering from inflammation of the gall bladder and the operation disclosed it was already broken. This raised the danger of peritonitis.

The attending physician, Dr. E. Haug, has also summoned Dr. Rudolph von Krehl of Heidelberg, and Dr. Hermann Zande of Berlin.

MUELLER LONG IN ILL HEALTH

BERLIN, July 21. (AP)—Chancellor Hermann Mueller was operated upon today for gall bladder trouble, and his condition tonight was said to be critical.

The chancellor, who is only 53 years of age, has been in ill health for months. Several times he was forced to be absent on state occasions because of his health. On July 1 he left the capital for Bad Mergenheim to take a four to six months' cure for his gall trouble.

161 Indicted Under Jones Law Face Trial

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 22. (UP)—One hundred and sixty-one persons indicted under the Jones law during the past two days will be arraigned tomorrow in a special term of federal court.

The same number is expected to plead guilty, hoping to escape the maximum penalties assessed under the law.

Since the Jones law became effective here last March, no defendant charged with violation of the act has stood trial. All have pleaded guilty.

Many women will be in the group mainly charged with selling beer.

The indictments were the result of an effort by federal officers to dry up Kansas City in a series of raids.

Gil Plans to Ban All Employes Who Drink

MEXICO CITY, July 21. (AP)—Government employes addicted to liquor will be discharged and applicants for positions will have to prove that they are not drinkers if a campaign initiated by the national anti-alcohol committee created by President Gil is successful. Several government departments already have offered to cooperate in the committees campaign and pressure is being brought on others.

Second Mexican Plane Plant to Open Soon

MEXICO CITY, July 21. (AP)—Mexico's second airplane plant, situated near Valbuena field on the outskirts of Mexico City, is to begin operations soon. General Abelardo Rodriguez, governor of the northern district of Lower California and proprietor of the airplane plant at Tia Juana is one of the principal stockholders in the new enterprise.

MACDONALD TO VISIT HOOVER

October Set as Date For Englishman's Trip

LONDON, July 21. (US)—October has been selected as the date for Premier Ramsay MacDonald's long heralded visit to President Hoover, it was learned today.

Conversations between Premier MacDonald and Ambassador Dawes looking toward greater Anglo-American amity have now progressed to such an extent that they have finally agreed upon the autumn date for the prime minister's trip.

It was learned also that the negotiations regarding "yardsticks" between the British admirality and the American naval department have now reached a state that the yardsticks are nearly ready to be laid side by side for comparison.

The American yardstick is already complete and the British measure is nearing completion. Once the experts reach the final specifications for their respective yardsticks, the difficult task of making those yardsticks conform will be left to the statesmen representing the countries rather than to the experts.

In order to go to Washington in October Premier MacDonald will face a busy program of engagement for the next two months. He is expected to take part in the reparations negotiations which will probably be held in Brussels early in August and will address the League of Nation at Geneva in September.

After the League of Nations meeting he will hurry to Washington and return to London in time for the opening of parliament in the latter part of October.

Missourians Plan To Hold Reunion

Special to The Record News.

SILVERTON, Texas, July 21.—Arrangements are being made for what is usually known as the reunion of Missourians here Aug. 4, according to A. P. Donnell, the first of the Missourian group to arrive in Briscoe county, reaching this section in 1891, a short while before the county was organized.

It was estimated that 140 people attended the affair last year, and more than this number are expected at the next gathering. The reunion is primarily a family affair, members and relatives of the three families, Donnell, Dookes and Dickerson, who originated in Benton and Hickory counties, Missouri. A basket dinner is always held on this annual occasion, and various forms of entertainment are arranged. Dr. Edward Dickerson, of Southern Methodist university, Dallas, also one of the Missourians, will deliver a sermon for the reunion attendants.

SILVERTON, Texas, July 21.—Engineers have surveyed the city for sewage lines and only the selection of the site of the disposal plant is lacking for the sewer system plans to be complete, states Mayor T. M. Nichols. In view of the level terrain in this section of the plains, locating a disposal plant wherein the cost is not prohibitive is no easy matter. However, engineers are considering several slight depressions, which are lakes during rainy weather, for handling the city's sewage without pumping.

Silverton to Celebrate Opening of New School

SILVERTON, Texas, July 21.—A community entertainment upon the occasion of the completion of the new high school building, about Aug. 1, is being arranged by a committee of the Lions club composed of W. W. McClister, T. L. Miller and J. A. Neill. It is planned to have a county-wide "housewarming" party in cooperation with the school board, in the dedication of Silverton's most imposing and attractive building.

YOUNGEST BOOSTER

QUANAH, Texas, July 21.—B. W. Kelley, 13 years old, bears the distinction of being the youngest member of Quanah Chamber of Commerce. He voluntarily applied for membership, saying he "wanted to help do something for Quanah." He is the son of R. A. Kelley, grocer.

County Commissioners Resume Study of Tax Problems Today

Officials Also to Vote on Naming of Dairy Expert for Wichita County

County commissioners will take a fresh start on the 1929 tax rate problem when the regular session starts Monday morning most of them having spent the week-end pouring over the figures presented for their consideration by the county auditor last week.

Opposition to the 10-cent raise indicated in the auditor's report remained strong, although at least two members of the body had admitted Sunday that an 80 cent rate, as opposed to the present 75 cent figure, might prove necessary. The court expects to spend most of Monday juggling the apportionments for each of the county funds which must be supplied, hoping to cut away from some of them enough money to meet the needs of the other. Practically every county official interested in the question had forked out his own pet solution to the problem by Sunday afternoon, and from these varying plans the answer is expected to emerge before the day's work is done.

L. L. Kuntz, commissioner for the Iowa Park district, explained Sunday afternoon that he favors consulting a representative group of property owners in the county before any decision is reached, whether a raise looms as inevitable or not. Members of the court, in a private conference called by Judge Marrs last Friday, expressed the view that a mass meeting of the taxpayers should be called before any raise is voted.

The discussion arose when Paul Barnett, county auditor, told the court that two special road and bridge funds, for which bonds have been voted, would be seriously "in the red" in 1931 unless their apportionment were raised at once.

During Monday's meeting, members of the court will select one man out of three applicants to fill the position of dairy expert for Wichita county. The favor of the commissioners was divided Sunday between John L. Mizzell, secretary of the chamber of commerce at Yoakum, and D. L. Putnam of Ardmore, Oklahoma. H. D. Sheflett of Yale, Okla., is also a candidate. George P. Grout, superintendent of schools at Panhandle, Texas, the choice of the committe which has been promoting the movement, has been eliminated because of a difference in the salary question.

Men Pushing Wrecked Car From Lamp Post Receive Fatal Shock

NEW ORLEANS, July 21. (AP)—Two men were almost instantly killed and four others narrowly escaped death today when a high-tension electric wire came in contact with an automobile they were attempting to push from a street curbing.

Patrick Henry Ford, 24, and Robert Moise Wilts, 20, were killed.

The automobile had a few minutes before struck a white way light and they were endeavoring to pull it back to the street. Ford, who lived nearby, was attracted by the noise of the collision and hurried to the street to aid the men. Wiltz, on his way home, also was attracted to the scene to aid James P. Gillespie, driver, when he was killed.

Gillespie, 21; Joseph Fontenet, 21; Bert Cogdell, 18; and Norman Goutieres, 34, were injured.

Proposed Transfer of Indian Students to Lawton School Opposed

Special to The Record News

LAWTON, Okla., July 21.—Proposed elimination of the seventh, eighth and ninth grades from the Fort Sill Indian school by sending the Indian students of these grades to the Lawton Junior High school is not being favorably received here by the committee on Indian affairs of the chamber of commerce or other citizens who have long interested themselves in the development of the Indian school. About 80 Indian students would be involved.

The fact that such a move was in contemplation was learned here when J. A. Buntin of Anadarko, superintendent of the Kiowa Indian agency received a communication from the commissioner of Indian affairs at Washington asking what attitude would be taken by the citizens in this section toward such a proposal.

People of this section have taken much pride in the progress of the Indian school and will oppose the move with organized force. Those most familiar with Indian nature state that the young Indian girls and boys are shy and diffident in the presence of the white children and to attempt to force them into the city schools will mean that but few will attend. Teachers at the Indian school are trained especially for the work and know how to get best results from the pupils.

Indian parents of school pupils will not take kindly to the suggested change, it is asserted.

GRADE CRASH KILLS SEVEN

Two Men, Two Women And Three Children Die

EATON, Ohio, July 21. (AP)—Seven persons were killed here today when their automobile was struck by a Pennsylvania railroad train on the Dayton-Richmond road.

Two men, two women and three children were listed among the dead. They were removed to an undertaking establishment here. The crew of the Pennsylvania passenger train that struck the automobile brought a man, woman and a child into Eaton and sent the ambulance for other victims.

Dr. R. L. Emerick, Eaton, who was called to the accident scene by a telephone operator, said the seven were killed instantly.

Wreckage was strewn for 400 yards along the railroad tracks.

city of Jerusalem, over which Jesus wept.

"A tree was felled in Cirrencester, England, some years ago, in which was found a nest of perfectly preserved bird eggs. The sap rings of the tree indicated that the eggs had been laid there one century before. Think of it, a century of imprisoned possibilities. Birds that never came to birth, songs that were never sung, and the world was poorer thereby. Imprisoned possibilities surround us on every hand. Unpainted Madonnas lie sleeping on every canvas; unchiseled statues repose in every stone; unshapen rainbows slumber on every cloud; unharnessed Niagaras pour from every cataract. In these days of broadcasting by radio, the air is full of music, and the skies are full of song for those who have the patience and skill to listen in. But oh, what harmony flows by us unheard; what beauty passes us unseen. What continents of truth lie by us unexplored.

"Personality is the realm of greatest possibility. The only limitation on life is from within. Unawakened energies and undiscovered opportunities challenge man to his highest and best. The value of eduaction can only be determined by the capacity of the student. It is not a question of how much he spends for it, but how much he stores away. All life has boundless possibilities. Life is the power that draws oaks out of acorns, and eagles from eggs. Because a grain of corn has life, it has incalculable capacities. It may be eaten, stored, or planted. Eaten, it would satisfy the appetite of a moment. Stored, it would be devoured by worms and weevils. Planted, its produce within the lifetime of an ordinary generation would feed all the nations of the world. Like possibilities obtain in a higher degree with reference to human life.

Graduates in Section

"'My people perish for lack of knowledge,' said the prophet long ago. All wealth is intellectual rather than material. Two men own a field, the father and his son. One, unconscious of its resources, lives in penury and dies in poverty. The other discovers on it a mine of wealth, and lives in luxury. The difference was not in possession, but in knowledge. One was poor because he did not know. The other was rich because he did.

"As the camera awaits the touch of light, and the cannon awaits the touch of fire, so the mind of men awaits the touch of knowledge. The great challenge of life for us all is to utilize our energies, recognize our opportunities, and to bring to perfection the possibilities that call to us in daily life."

Entering after the congregation was seated, to the processional given out by the organ, the graduates occupied a section at the front of the middle section of pews. A large number of teachers, and members of the school board, were present for the services.

Commencement exercises are to be held at the Junior college auditorium Wednesday morning, July 24.

Farm Contest Held at Hollis

Special to The Record News

HOLLIS, Okla., July 21.—As the result of a farm engineering contest conducted Friday on the farm of Ed Curry, west of Hollis, two Harmon county boys, Glen Bennet and Clyde Curry get a trip to Stillwater, where they will compete for high honors in farm engineering.

The contest was conducted under the supervision of County Agent Tom Marks. Five boys entered. The work consisted mostly in terracing and profile leveling.

The meeting at Stillwater will be from July 30 to Aug. 3 inclusive.

Patrol Leaders Meet At Diversion Aug. 1-4

A Boy Scout patrol leaders' conference will be held at Camp Ephriam Griffin at Diversion lake Aug. 1 to 4 when instructions as to qualifications and duties of patrol leaders will be given, it has been announced by Frank B. Creighton, scout executive.

The instruction will be given under the supervision of the Wichita area leadership training committee. All meals for the four days will be served at the camp and handicraft material will be furnished for the instruction in scoutcraft work. The cost to each patrol leader will be $6 and only registered patrol leaders will be allowed to attend, Mr. Creighton said. Names must be turned in to scout headquarters not later than July 27.

Dairy Products Bring $325,000 to Childress

CHILDRESS, Texas, July 21.—During the year 1928 dealers in Childress paid out a little more than $325,000 for cream and whole milk, but the greater part was for cream. Buyers say the receipts for this year are as large, and possibly larger, than a year ago, while the prices have remained good. The prediction is made that more than $400,000 will be paid Childress county farmers for dairy products during the year.

TARIFF DOOMS CANAL PROJECT

St. Lawrence Waterway Plan Knocked in Head

By CH. RLES S. HAYDEN
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Whatever other results may flow from it the Hawley-Smoot tariff, now in the process of making, is destined to wreck one pet project of the Hoover administration and do it most effectively. This is none other than the St. Lawrence waterway to the sea upon which two dozen states in the West and middle West have set their hearts and which they fondly hoped might be the crowning achievement of President Hoover's administration.

The two Canadian provinces of Ontario and Quebec, through which the St. Lawrence river flows and which must lend their cooperation if the seaway is built, have long been rather luke-warm on the project and their leaders have seized upon the new tariff, raising still higher the rates against their exports into this country, to stimulate resentment against the United States. Of course there are other things. The Canadians never have relished the rates under the Fordney-McCumber bill, they have resented what they felt was the "bogging" of radio wave lengths by this country and the officiousness of our officials in demanding that aid in the enforcement of prohibition as well as our attitude during and after the sinking of the I'm Alone.

Hoover in Dilemma

Those close to the administration, however, feel there might have been a chance to placate them were it not for the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill. On that matter, however, the administration finds itself between the horns of a dilemma. The widely heralded purpose of the Hawley-Smoot bill is to place agriculture on a parity with industry and this means that tariff rates on farm products constitute the bulk of the imports from Canada into the United states, amounting last year to just about a half a billion dollars. During the same period Canada purchased from this country commodities to the value of $826,000,000 so that the balance of trade in favor of the United States is now $330,000,000. In proportion as the higher tariff rates under the Hawley-Smoot bill reduces imports of agricultural products—and it is of little value to farmers in this country unless it does—the Canadian farmer must find other markets for his produce.

President Hoover and his advisers are fully cognizant of these facts and realize that it will be impossible to satisfy the demands of the farmers for a tariff and at the same time placate the Canadians. Nevertheless the seaway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic is close to the heart of President Hoover, who, as secretary of commerce, was head of the commission named to represent this country on the St. Lawrence as the preferable route and one of the factors militating against Gov. Alfred E. Smith in the presidential campaign last fall was the belief of western farmers and advocates of the seaway that Smith as governor of New York, had committed himself to the socalled all-American route, via the old Erie canal, admittedly a much more expensive project. His enemies insisted New York City interests favored this route in the belief that with it, instead of the St. Lawrence route, they would be able to control in a measure the growth of inland cities along the Great Lakes.

No Reply to Proposal

Of course there has been no formal announcement by any responsible official of the Canadian government that they propose to break off the negotiations looking to the drafting of a treaty for joint use of the St. Lawrence seaway. However, they are in status quo and have been for more than a year, being discontinued in April, 1928, for the avowed purpose of permitting the Canadian officials to try and satisfy objections interposed by the provincial governments of Ontario and Quebec. Proposal was made by Frank B. Kellogg, then secretary of state, that the negotiations between Canada and this country as well as between the dominion and provincial governments be carried on concurrently but this did not appeal to the Canadian government and those officials made no reply to this suggestion.

Fahy Calls Off His Coast-to-Coast Hop

MITCHELL FIELD, L. I., July 21. (US)—Preparations for refueling the plane of Herbert Fahy, scheduled to arrive here tonight to complete the first half of a transcontinental round trip flight were suddenly canceled at 7 o'clock. Harold Wilder, who had charge of refueling arrangements, then announced the flight had been called off. He gave no indication that Fahy would again attempt to shatter the cross-country record made by Captain M. Hawks a short time ago.

Chillicothe School Head Back From University

CHILLICOTHE, Texas, July 21. (Spl.)—Supt. W. E. Hancock of the city schools has returned from Austin where he has been taking a summer course at the Texas university. He is ready to begin laying plans for the school term beginning in September.

Hollis Girl Struck in Eye With Plum May Lose Sight in Optic

Special to The Record News.

HOLLIS, Okla., July 21.—Miss Mildred Scott, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Scott, who live about four miles southwest of Hollis, is in Altus under treatment of Dr. Abernathy, eye specialist, as the result of having been hit in the eye with a plum.

Mildred and a cousin were picking plums and her cousin, who was picking at a distance, flipped a plum and struck her squarely in the left eye.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott took her to Altus for treatment at once, and it is feared that she may lose the entire sight of her eye.

Soviet Attack and Manifesto By China Darken Oriental War Cloud

MANIFESTO BLAMES COMMUNIST PROPAGANDA

SHANGHAI, July 21. (AP)—A manifesto issued by the Chinese Nationalist government today said that in view of communist propaganda undermining the government, it therefore had been constrained to adopt measure of self defense with regard to the Chinese Eastern railway.

The manifesto was drawn up yesterday, signed by the presidents of the five Yuans and made public today. It declared the Soviet government, disregarding the consequences, had adopted warlike preparations, thereby violating the spirit of the anti-war pact to which it was signatory.

It declared the responsibility for the disturbance of world peace, therefore must rest upon the Soviet government. The manifesto concluded with an invitation to the world to give its attention to evidence of the Soviet government's propaganda, which it said was subversive to Chinese aNtional interests. The manifesto claimed that by interrupting traffic on the trans-Siberian railways the Soviet actually caused interruption of international communication.

BRITAIN READY TO AVERT CONFLICT

WASHINGTON, July 21. (AP)—Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador, today informed Secretary Stimson that the British government fully associates itself with the secretary's move to bring peace in the Sino-Soviet controversy.

Acting on instructions from Foreign Minister Henderson, the ambassador delivered the formal note to the state department and it was immediately communicated to Secretary Stimson.

Sir Esme, representing one of the four powers which were parties to the Pan-Pacific treaty of 1921, was consulted Tuesday by Mr. Stimson in connection with his action in calling to the attention of the Soviet and China their obligations under the Kellogg anti-war treaty.

The French and Japanese ambassadors also were brought into the conferences as representing powers party to the treaty, which binds them to confer when peace is threatened in the East.

The British note said the government was "happy to associate itself," with the secretary's move to bring peace in the Manchurian situation.

SEIZURE OF SHIP REPORTED IN JAPAN

TOKYO, July 21. (UP)—The Nippon Dempo News agency correspondent at Harbin reported tonight that a Soviet warship had seized two Chinese steamers in the lower Heilung river and is holding the cargoes and crews.

The dispatch said the ships were seized Saturday. The Heilung river is the Chinese name for the Amur river, which is the Manchurian-Siberian border on the north but flows through Siberian territory to the sea.

The correspondent said that it is understood that American military and naval attaches are en route to Harbin from Peking.

The Harbin correspondent of the newspaper Asahi reported that all "Red Russians" more than 16 years old are being concentrated in a virtual prison camp pending their deportation.

The war office here has no information of any armed clashes along the Manchurian border and it appeared that both Chinese and Russian patrols are scrupulously refraining from proximity of the border.

SOVIET OCCUPATION OF CITY DENIED

NANKING, July 21.—The reported occupation of Manchili and Pogranitchnaya by Russian forces was officially denied today by the Nanking government.

Asserting that the Russians are "in no position to attack," the Nanking officials quoted official messages from Harbin stating that Chinese forces aggregating 200,000 men are concentrated in defensive positions along the Manchurian border.

Dr. C. T. Wang, Nationalist foreign minister, today deprecated alarmist reports and reiterated that the hopes of the Chinese for a peaceful settlement with the Soviets had not been abandoned.

FORMER KAISER IN PLEA FOR CHINA

LONDON, July 21. (US)—Asserting that "she cannot be conquered," former Kaiser Wilhelm from his retirement in a Dutch castle at Doorn, issued an appeal in behalf of China in an interview published here today. The interview was given to The Hague correspondent of the Sunday Chronicle.

The Chronicle's Hague special quotes the former kaiser as saying:

"The attempt to bolshevise China is the last trump card of the Soviets. But China is unconquerable.

"It is doubtful whether the Soviets could survive a debacle in Asia. At heart the Japanese sympathize with the Chinese in their struggle for national independence. 'Asia for the Asiatics' is a slogan that inflames Chinese and Japanese alike."

Appealing for fair play for the Chinese the ex-kaiser says:

"China has a right to be free. Nothing can stop the re-birth of China as a nation. A people with a culture more ancient than ours, they insist on equality of treatment. They ask nothing of the world except fair play. The are entitled to get it. The Chinaman wants to feel that he is master of his own house. He will do business with all and pay tribute to none."

Paving Work Starts On Chillicothe Road

CHILLICOTHE, Texas, July 21. (Spl.)—The pouring of concrete started Monday on Highway 28, between Vernon and the Foard county line. It began near Lockett and will be poured to Vernon, a distance of eight miles. It is planned to complete the paving by the time for hauling of cotton to market. Upon completion of this strip, paving will be started at the Foard county line and will connect with this strip, near Lockett.

Present plans call for opening the highway in Wilbarger county on Nov. 1. Wilbarger is the first county in the state to complete paving of the Lee highway.

110 Communists Taken In Raid By Paris Cops

He shot 290 out of a possible 300, thereby defeating M. L. Mowery, Dallas police force, who has been champion in this state for the past two or three years.

O. D. Pogue was also entered from Chillicothe and was declared a winner but could not equal the King mark. There were about 100 entrants in the contest, divided up into seven teams.

TEXAS PORTS SHOW GROWTH

Texas City and Corpus Christi Shipping Increases

WASHINGTON, July 21. (US)—Remarkable growth of the Texas ports of Texas City and Corpus Christi is shown today in a report by the board of engineer for rivers and harbors of the war department.

The figures for Texas City show a growth in shipping from 263,280 tons in 1917 to 3,751,012 tons in 1928, and for Corpus Christi from 54,941 tons in 1926 to 3,554,873 tons in 1928.

For Texas City the principal commodities handled the sulphur, petroleum products, grain and sugar. For Corpus Christi the outstanding shipments are of crude oil, gasoline, raw cotton, cottonseed cake, and lead.

Registrations for Last Scout Camp Close July 27

Registrations for the last period of the Boy Scout summer camp, which opens at Diversion lake Aug. 4, must be made by July 27, it was announced Sunday by Frank B. Creighton, scout executive. The cost for the trip and camp will be $10.50 per boy, the camp to last 10 days.

Several new stunts for the last period have been planned, Mr. Creighton said. The Battle of Flowers will be held and the promised treasure hunt will also be staged. An athletic field meet will be held on Saturday afternoon and a swimming meet and a lonk swim down the canal near the camp will be staged some time during the 10 days. Baseball, volley ball and horse shoe contests will be held each night after supper, it was said, and a schedule of the games won will be kept, the winning teams receiving prizes at the end of the week. A different program around the camp fire will be put on each night.

MEMPHIS MAY GET CREAMERY

Armour and Co., Expected To Install Plant

Special to The Record News

MEMPHIS, Texas, July 21.—J. V. Jones, who has been manager of the Memphis Produce company here for several years, and who is now with Armour and Co., purchasers of the interests of the Wichita Poultry and Egg company in Memphis, has intimated that Memphis would soon have a modern creamery operated by Armour and Co.

Memphis has long waited for such an enterprise, and the dairying business is being retarded for the lack of a nearby market, and Hall county's carefully planned program of diversification is being somewhat hindered.

Need for a modern creamy in Memphis is made urgent due to the fact that rapid strides are being made in dairying in this section. More fine blooded dairy cows were sold to farmers of this vicinity during the spring than at any previous season since dairying was introduced into this county. A large market is being created for dairy products by leaps and bounds, and the necessity of adequate local consumption has become pressing.

Jones in speaking of the probability of Armour and Co., establishing a creamery in Memphis said "It is apparent that the company will biuld a creamery either here or at Childress, and since Childress already has one in operation I believe our chances for securing the plant are very good."

A desirable location was purchased in Memphis last spring by the Gate City Creamery of Childress, and they announced their intention of installing a modern creamery in Memphis, but the construction of such an enterprise has not been started, and it cannot be ascertained from the officials just when such a business will be built.

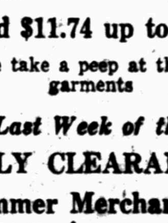

Oral Jones Removed From Hospital to Home

Oral Jones, vice president and cashier of the City National bank, who underwent a major operation at the Wichita Falls Clinic hospital more than two weeks ago, Sunday was removed to his home, 1810 Tenth street. Mr. Jones has shown rapid improvement during the past week, it was said, but will be confined to his bed for at least a week longer. A further period of convalescence is expected after that before he is able to resume his duties at the City National.

Delightful Reception Given by Mrs. Smoot

Outstanding among recent social functions was the delightful reception given by Mrs. George Smoot at her home on Tilden Friday afternoon, honoring Mrs. P. M. Buchanan.

The house was decorated with tall baskets of cut flowers, daisies, zinnias and crepe myrtle predominating in all their lovely coloring.

The dining table was covered with cream filet over pink satin and centered with a huge punch bowl over which Mrs. Edward Bunnenberg presided.

Piano and vocal selections were given by Mrs. O. G. Stephens and a fortune telling hour was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Buchanan was presented with a dainty pink hand made box, containing lovely gifts from each of her friends.

Those enjoying Mrs. Smoot's charming hospitality were Mesdames F. H. Elam, Berry, C. T. Everts, McDonald, Gordon Morris, D. M. Burgan, B. J. McWilliams, O. G. Stephens, P. M. Buchanan, Mrs. M. C. Hayes, house guest of Mrs. Smoot, and the hostess.

TRUTH ABOUT ELEPHANTS

It seems so peculiar to me,
And really I think you'll agree—
An elephant's big as a house
And yet he's afraid of a mouse!
Oh, pooh!
They must be mistaken, I know;
I really don't think it is so,
In fact, I must say that I'm bound
To think it's the other way round,
Don't you?

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS L. N. CASON

Driving in Country Club Estates, we saw afar something brilliantly red and went several blocks before we could tell it was the blossoming crepe myrtle planted in one of the little parkways. It seems this year, crepe myrtle is more beautiful than it has ever been in Wichita. And, if you will notice, the evergreens have seemed to take on a new span of life.

We read in a San Diego paper the other day of a county in Kansas where the woman hater would not like to reside. Stanton county, this telegram said, had a sheriff 100 pounds light with bobbed hair and three children as well as a hatred for lawlessness. And the register of deeds, newspaper editor, county treasurer and superintendent of schools were all women.

Doctor Johnson said that language is the dress of thought. Doctor Johnson was certainly right of his own day and time, when men met for rounded and rhetorical conversation. But not today. This is a hurrying world; no thought must be dressed but with the bare words necessary.

A. W. James Surprised With Birthday Party

A. W. James was honoree at a surprise birthday bridge party at his home, 1709 Britain, Friday evening. His friends were seated at five tables, when he entered ready for the games. All the guests were members of St. Pauls Lutheran church, with which Mr. James is affiliated.

In the games, Miss Frieda Serrien was high among the ladies, Mrs. A. T. Kramer, second and Mrs. Roenfeldt, low.

J. J. Engleman won high among the men, George Anderson second and Mr. Guebert low. Mrs. Guebert was fortunate in the cut prize.

A delicious ice course was served to Messrs. and Mesdames A. T. Kramer, Geo. Kirkman, Irvin Ramming, Will Roenfeldt, J. J. Engleman, W. Guebert, Geo. Anderson, Arthur Kramer, Mrs. Anna Serrien, Misses Frieda Serrien, Margaret Birkman, Linda Serrien and Herbert Housler beside Mr. and Mrs. James.

Everybody is talking about the guaranteed ice cold watermelons at the Wichita Ice Co. plant, Ninth and Union Station. A call will be appreciated.—Adv.

We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

Pity the Poor Bachelor

A friend of mine has just suggested a sad thought:

An Italian gentleman who spends his time proposing to one signorina after another, dying to get married and unable to land a wife because he doesn't possess that elusive something which makes for success with women—and all the while dutifully paying his bachelor's tax.

It is to weep!

◆ ◆ ◆

Mussolini, dictator at large and social reformer, has decreed that every unmarried male above a certain age is subject to a tax.

Freedom costs money in Italy.

And that seems right, for bachelors are parasites of sorts, superior beings who subsist upon free dinners (very good ones, too), who selfishly spend their earnings upon themselves alone, who can transfer abodes at a moment's notice, who never have to worry about the high cost of certified milk or babies' shoes and who take no thought of the morrow.

Decidedly such privileges should be paid for.

◆ ◆ ◆

Signor Mussolini has a rather sardonic sense of humor in addition to his famed astuteness. He applies this tax, which amounted to 50,000,000 lira last year, to reducing maternity and infant mortality by providing the proper health and medical conditions for all classes.

The Italian bachelor therefore carries the expense of one or two infants without having the fun of teaching them to say da-da.

Naturally every man of perception prefers to support his own offspring rather than some other man's, the result being a gratifying increase in the marriage rate.

Still, there remains the man who would like to be a husband and father but can't work up with his girl friends any enthusiasm for a veil and orange blossoms with him.

◆ ◆ ◆

The fair thing, it seems to me, would be to force a bachelor to "show cause."

If he can prove that he has made earnest and repeated efforts to better his condition, all to no avail, he should be provided with an exemption tag and allowed to go scot free!

Even then it would probably amount to the same thing. Man's vanity being what it is, he would rather pay and pay and pay than admit himself so unattractive that no girl of his acquaintance will accept him.

If you have a domestic problem on which you wish help, send me a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Noted Librarian Claimed by Death

NEW YORK, July 21. (AP)—John Cotton Dana, 72, Newark, N. J., nationally known librarian, died today at St. Vincent's hospital of acute toxemia which followed an operation he underwent some time ago.

Born in Woodstock, Vt., Aug. 19, 1856, Dana was graduated from Dartmouth college in 1878. Later he studied law, but his health forced him to go West. He spent two years in Colorado as a surveyor and was admitted to the bar there in 1880. He had been Newark's librarian since 1902.

Girls Born Snobs, D. Dix Advises Wise Professor

Why Advise Girls to Cultivate Snobbery When They are Born That Way, Anyhow, and When That Is the One Trait That Has Done More Than Anything Else to Prevent Their Progress?

Professor Rogers, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in his parting advice to the students, urged them to be snobs, and told them that it was just as easy to marry the boss' daughter as the stenographer. Now his wife tells girls that it is just as important for them to be high-hat and snobbish as it is for their brothers.

Which is, of course, the truth. Also, it is equally disastrous in both cases, for there is no other one thing on earth that so thoroughly handicaps a youngster of either sex as snobbery in a democratic country where everybody thinks he is not only as good as anybody else but a little better, and where the crowning insult that you can offer any one is to patronize him.

However, to advise girls to cultivate snobbery is a work of supererogation. It is gilding the lily and painting the rose, for most women are born snobs at heart and they take just as naturally to high-hatting as a duck does to water. Look around you in any city and you will see that the most exclusive matron and the one who is most determined to keep all climbers out of the sacred inner circle of society is a lady who has just jimmied her way in with a golden crowbar. No princess of the blood royal lays such stress on blood as the woman who couldn't have told you the name of her grandfather until she hired a genealogist to manufacture her a family tree. No mere duchess can condescend to you as does the wife of a successful bootlegger.

When a couple prosper and rise in the world it is the wife, not the husband, who insists on leaving the old neighborhood and going to live where they will get to know people who don't want to know them and who sends the children off to fashionable schools and forgets the very names of the old neighbors and friends who helped them nurse their sick and laid out their dead and split their last $5 with them when the rent was overdue and there was no money to pay it.

You often hear a self-made man brag of his humble beginning and tell of being ragged and half-starved and of the miserable jobs by which he worked his way up, but you never hear a woman admit that she is a self-made woman and boast of how she used to wash and scrub and pinch pennies. The most she will ever concede is that she was an impoverished aristocrat who had been robbed of her fortune by nefarious villains.

Hence, it seems gratuitous advice to urge girls to be snobs, and, as a matter of fact, snobbery has been women's bane and is the one thing that has done more than anything else to prevent their progress, because it has filled the entire sex with the idea that they are too good to do plain, honest work and that if they work at all it must be at some high-falutin' employment that has a romantic or literary or artistic halo about it. It is what makes a million girls aspire to be movie actresses or dancers or poets to one who is willing to be a good cook.

It is only in the last few years that women have divested themselves of their snobbery enough to be willing to admit that they work for money and to take a pride in their jobs. Up to then the boarding-house keeper took a few paying guests for company; the stenographer went into an office because she was so bored with society and tired of dragging around to Newport and Palm Beach, and the saleslgirl's only reason for standing behind a counter was because it gave her such an opportunity to study human nature.

And the boarding-housekeeper failed because she felt herself too grand to go to market and buy good food and see it properly cooked. And the stenographer failed because her employer wanted some one who knew how to spell to write his letters instead of some one who affected to believe that she was attending a pink tea and that her mission was to ornament the office instead of turning out efficient work. And the saleswoman failed because customers wouldn't stand for a languid grand lady who condescended to wait upon them and who smiled superciliously at them when they wanted stockings at $1.50 a pair instead of $10.

Women have only begun to succeed in business since they have learned to scape their snobbery and to be honest about why they work and proud that they have enough intelligence and grit to hold down a job instead of being ashamed of it. It is not the girls who highhat their customers whose commissions fatten their pay envelope. It is the friendly, human, interested Miss Smith or Miss Jones that customers ask for. So to the girl who has to make her own living no advice could be more fatal than to tell her to be a snob.

Nor will any girl ever reach the altar by high-hatting men. Dear Lady Disdain was a hit, according to old-fashioned novels in our great-grandparents' time, but she would be a flop with the modern youth. He isn't going to spend his time and his money taking out a girl who acts as if she was a millionairess and considered him a cheap skate. The girl who tries this and who, when a boy takes her to the movies, discourses about how fine a $7-a-seat play was or who, when a boy takes her out in his flivver, turns up her nose about it and talks about the Rolls Royce that some other boy has, never has but that one date. It is goodnight for her when they part.

And many a girl does herself out of a good husband by the snobbery that makes her pretend that she is only used to riches and luxury and scorns the simple ways of life. Girls who make their own clothes at night will smile and say: "Oh, this is a cheap little French importation that I got for $140," or "I picked this hat up at a bargain. It only cost $50." Or they boast of their inability to cook and say that nothing on earth would ever induce them to go into a kitchen, and the poor young man who is just beginning to climb the ladder of success, figures out that his entire salary wouldn't provide this snobbish lady with chiffon lingerie, to say nothing of caviar and champagne, and so he decides that she isn't the kind of wife he wants, and moves on.

As for advising a girl to pick out a rich man for a husband instead of a poor one, that is equally bad counsel, even from a financial standpoint, for in this land of opportunity the wheel of fortune turns so rapidly that the rich man of today is very likely to be the poor man of tomorrow and the poor man of today the millionaire of tomorrow, and so the girl who marries for money very often doesn't even have that by the time she is middle-aged.

So, taking it all in all, I think that the advice to boys and girls to be snobs is misleading. Far better to tell them to be simple and honest and true to themselves and to cultivate humility of spirit instead of arrogance.—DOROTHY DIX.

Recalls Early Days in Texas

Mrs. Mary Alice Smith, visitor in Wichita Falls, can recall Sherman's blockade of the South, Dallas' first passenger train and the recapture of Cynthia Ann Parker as among the interesting events of her more than 82 years of life.

Visitor Here Tells of Running Yank Blockade

By MRS. L. N. CASON
The Record News Staff

A woman who once went through the Yankee blockade to escape Sherman's shelling at Atlanta; who came to Texas 64 years ago, when, she says, there were only 75 miles of railroad in the state; who married one of the men who fought with Sul Ross when 40 American soldiers fought the Indians and recaptured Cynthia Ann Parker; whose grandfather lost thousands of bales of cotton during the civil war and over 200 slaves at the end of the war—that is Mrs. Mary Alice Smith, born in Huntsville, Ala., 82 years ago on Oct. 6, and now a resident of Fort Worth. She is at present visiting in Wichita Falls.

She has never weighed 100 pounds and now weighs only 80, but until she had a fall, a short time ago, she was as active as one of her daughters. Her big, bright eyes read without glasses and they have no look of age. She says she has no future, and not much happens in the present, so she is living a great deal in the past. No woman with her active mind can fail to have future as long as life lasts, but the past was so interesting one would not blame her for living in it.

Running Blockade

When she was 16 years old, she and her 13-year-old brother were visiting in Atlanta. Word came for all women and children to evacuate as Sherman would shell the city. They had nothing, she said, but confederate money and they knew they had to pass both federal and confederate lines before reaching home. Confederate money meant nothing to the Yankee soldiers. They reached Tuscumbia and relatives there found gold and silver for them—"hard money," she called it. The Yankees let them through the lines without any trouble; the Tennessee river was in high water and the Yankes put them on a yawl and ferried them across. She said she pulled out her hard money then and asked what they charged, and their leader said, "Why, do you think we'd charge a pretty little girl like you anything?" This kindness frightened her and they hurried away.

The length of time it took them to make the trip she laid to confederate soldiers. They, she and her little brother and an old woman, were traveling in a stage when the confederate picket galloped up and stopped them; her little brother, convinced they were preparing to take him as a soldier, hid between the skirts of the women. They were questioned thoroughly and there was much consultation of officers before they were allowed to go on to their home.

Early Days in Texas

After her father's death, her mother re-married and they came to Texas with the stepfather, who had lived here long before the civil war. They came, she said, by the Texas Central to Hempstead and from there to Waco by barouche and covered wagons. The barouche steps were so low, she said, that she often stepped out while the horses were moving, to pick some of the marvelous wild flowers. Huntsville, Ala., is in the hills and though rich in trees and flowers, there were no prairies blossoming like these so new to her.

"How large was Waco?" she was asked.

She tossed her little head (and by the way, her hair isn't bobbed and not very gray), and laughed: "Just a road crossing; two stores there."

A Mr. Robinson had moved to Texas from south Alabama and settled near Waco, taking up a league of land, she said. He laid out and founded a little town near Waco, building a church and calling the town Robinsonville. His son was in business in Galveston; yellow fever was raging there in 1867 and he came home, met the little miss from Alabama, and in a few months they were married. But he carried her to his father's home and left her there until the yellow fever was over and then took her to Galveston, the largest city in the state, where she lived for 18 years. Mr. Robinson furnished the shipping for Galveston, owning several two-mast schooners. Mrs. Smith spoke of the stories her husband had told her of the fight with Indians when they captured Cynthia Ann Parker.

"He said she ran like a deer, and when we caught her, she fought her captors."

"Most of the traveling was done by stage and in the daytime," Mrs. Smith went on. "We'd stop in little towns at night, on account of the desperadoes."

"Did you ever have any experience with a desperado?" she was asked.

"No," she smiled, "but the stage drivers have pointed out many a tree where one was hanged."

"There were many trees in Texas then—big post oaks around Waco and live oaks in South Texas. It was a great honey country and they used to cut the trees to get the honey. When you visited in the big country homes, they gave you honey for 'long sweetening.' Texas was short of sugar in those days."

Mrs. Smith said she rode on the first passenger that ever went into Dallas. She wanted the experience. Such a tiny little woman to wish to know all sides of life!

Her marriage to her second husband prevented her drawing Texas' pension to widows of Indian fighters. She draws Texas Confederate widows pension. She is a vivid, forceful little character, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. B. A. Moore, 2214 Broad street. Her home is with another daughter in Fort Worth. Both daughters are active in U. D. C. work.

Denison Guest Named Honoree At Bridge Lunch

Charmingly colorful with pink the chosen tint, was the bridge luncheon given at the country club Saturday morning in honor of Miss Elizabeth Russell of Denison, Texas, the house guest of Miss Margaret Kendall.

Tallies and score cards were dainty maids in pink. In the games, Miss Dell Hatchitt was winner of high score and Miss Charlotte Robertson was low. They were presented with lovely pieces of costume jewelry and the honor guest received a gift to match.

The luncheon table was lovely with white napery and shining silver and in the center a massed bowl of pink roses. Green crystal service was used.

Seated with the honoree were Misses Anabel Couper, Dell Hatchitt, Bonnie Holmgren, Charlotte Robertson, Melba Jordan, Elizabeth Smith and the charming hostess.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, July 21. (US)—The new bathing dresses in England are called "go-diving dresses."

Lord Castlerosse of the English nobility, writes for the London newspapers, that a snob is a man who chooses his friends for their position rather than their qualities. He says "the old type of snob is rapidly dying, for hereditary titles count so little that they are seldom appreciated, except by those who have paid for them."

He says the poorer members of English aristocracy have a fighting chance of marrying "rich American young women who come from the middle West." He thinks the market for New York women is bankrupt because New York is a much better place than London for those who "have made money and now wish to buy friends."

In other words the title market is shot.

A woman witness in a London police court spake thus:

"He smashed the eggs in my hair so I gave him the chips."

London records another quip by a woman in the Penge police court, who told the judge:

"I would not hurt a cat. I have a mother of my own."

A European paper, commenting in its society department on some society dinners remarks:

"One should think, too, of all the knavish clowns who feed at the tables of rich men and women.

"All this is as it should be.

"Imagine, if the state affairs were different, how bored all the unhappy millionaires would become."

The actress mentioned in that particular column must have read this last item with mixed emotions.

HOT WEDDING

So Hot, in Fact, The Groom Faints Twice While Knot Is Tied

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 21. (UP)—The wedding was a success although the bridegroom fainted twice.

Intense heat in a church here was blamed for the unusual interruptions in the marriage service joining Adolph Matuscheck, a merchant of Farrell, Pa., and Katherine Matuscheck of Uniontown. Matuscheck had to be revived twice with smelling salts. On each occasion his bride caught him as he dropped to the floor.

Matuscheck said he felt better after the ceremony?

Herbert Kaufman's "ALL IN ONE LIFETIME" Daily Editorial

IF YOU are 50 years old, you can remember when there were a 100 telephones in town and none of them in private households. In all probability there wasn't a piece of sanitary plumbing among the homes in your immediate block, and it's just as likely that the neighborhood drew its water from back yard wells or corner pumps.

You were possibly 10 before a member of your family had ever traveled in a Pullman, or on a "cable car." And you certainly recall the wide gap between the sputtering arc light, and Mr. Edison's first little bulb lamps.

About which time you dropped a nickel in a slot, put a pair of rubber dinguses to your ear and heard his wax cylinder phonograph wheeze John McCullough's ravings of the Blue Danube Waltz. A few years later, the kinetoscope, crudely presented pictures in motion by riffling a series of progressively taken photographs. Your Christmas stocking oranges still came from Spain or Italy.

Painless dentistry was undreamed of. Koller hadn't discovered the anesthetic property of cocaine in eye operations, newspapers were set entirely by hand and half tone illustrations remained unknown. There were cranks who "dared" to prophesy that Jules Vernes imaginary submarine would "eventually" turn true but no one took their predictions seriously, any more than the late eighties ever expected inventors to perfect a horseless wagon or a flying machine.

You observed the trolley make its bow to America, and were quite a lad when the safety bicycle hove into sight.

Half your life was lived without the slightest suspicion of hertzian or X-rays, radium, commercialized aluminum, power cranes, pneumatic rivets or acetylene welding.

YOU reached maturity without once glimpsing an automobile, and hadn't recovered from your early admiration of George Eastman's marvelous kodak when the twentieth century, opening the bag of tricks, started to show the past how to achieve practically "everything" that had previously been held impossible. As if by magic, out houses and plagues disappeared, traffic dived into subways and under river beds, motor cars, overnight, replaced carriages, and rural country roads changed to paved highways. A pole in Ireland hurled a telegraphic spark to another in New Foundland and blazed the way for actual transatlantic conversations, fast followed by television and, hard on its heels, telephone images in full action and color.

Radio, pure food and blue sky laws, packing house control and statutes prohibiting the fraudulent use of the mails, are contemporaries of yours. So are bloodless surgery, specifics for syphilis and hookworm, diphtheria, typhoid and scarlet fever antitoxins and the Pasteur treatment.

Iceless refrigerators, electro-hydraulics, vacuum cleaners, correspondence schools and mail order selling grew up with you.

You watched the cinema break spell at "The Great Train Robbery" and you have seen it learn to talk and sing and sprout peacock feathers.

Aviation, bone transplanting, cataract removal, the harnessing of Niagara Falls and the conquest of the Imperial valley, the rise of the skyscraper and the evolution of the tenement into the apartment house all transpired under your eyes.

You have counted the fall of a dozen kingdoms and the passing of 20 ancient dynasties, the banishment of yellow fever and malaria, the creation of the Panama canal, the abolishment of child slavery and the enfranchisement of women.

And yet the next man who proposes to accomplish something, that prevalent opinion finds unfeasible, will doubtless find you betting "it can't be done," with the same fervor that the Council of Salamanaca jeered the hare-brained dream of a certain Christopher Columbus.

Cotton growers are still trying to induce women to wear more cotton. Why don't they try devising some warm garment for summer and a chilly costume for winter?

◇

Men spend about $1,000,000,000 a year in the United States in efforts to make themselves beautiful. Yet they say the ladies are wasteful.

France is trying to cut down on American movies. We could cut down a little ourselves and not be too restrictive.

Edison says he once went 174 hours without sleep. He knows how it is then to live next door to a guy with a cornet.

Isn't it about time we'd be hearing of a woman with 12 great grandchildren staying up in a plane 300 hours?

Last of the Log Drives

THE TIDE of empire, according to the old proverb, has been pushing its way westward for a good many years. Here and there it has left a short stretch of frontier behind, surrounded by modern complexity. But these spots are fast vanishing. Year by year they grow fewer. New York and Detroit are altogether too much for them.

The last of the great white pine log drives is now being finished in the upper peninsula of Michigan. Nearly 2,500,000 feet of logs are coming down the Manistique river; when the drive is finished, lumbermen say, Michigan will have seen the last of the really large-scale affairs of that kind.

Thus another lost bit of the old frontier, incongruously preserved in as up to date a state as Michigan, passes on. For the old time lumber jack and his log drives were things of the frontier, beyond all argument. They started, as far as Michigan was concerned, when Michigan was one vast wilderness, and they are coming to an end because that wilderness has vanished, giving way to farms, manufacturing towns, railroads, paved roads and golf courses.

It was 'way back in 1832 that Michigan's logging days started. Someone built a sawmill at Saginaw in that year, and from that moment the axes of the lumber jacks were constantly flashing and ringing. Gangs of men worked month after month, heaping tremendous piles of odorous new logs by the river bank; then in the spring, when melted snows gave the river added power, the logs were tumbled in and floated down to the mills—floated down with busy lumber jacks along to make the wild river behave itself, floated down to the tune of danger and hardship and endurance and death.

Epic stories came out of this strange, picturesque industry. Timber kings were made over night, building grotesque mansions in isolated mill towns. The lumber jack became famous—famous for his deeds of strength and courage, famous for his wild, uncontrollable sprees with which he celebrated the ending of each drive, famous for his fights and for the liquor he could drink.

And Michigan's forests disappeared. By 1900 the lower peninsula was about cleared. Ten years later the bulk of the big operations in the upper peninsula were finished. There are still logging camps there, to be sure; but the great days are ended. The Manistique river is floating down its last big drive. After this the story will be just about closed.

America still produces timber, of course. But the big forests now are far to the west. The tide of empire is moving toward the setting sun, pushing the frontier ahead of it. What Oregon and Washington are now, Michigan was three decades ago—and what Michigan is now, Oregon and Washington will be in a few more years. The lumber jack, riding downstream on a shifting carpet of swaying logs, is on his way to join the cowboy and the old time sailor.

The Price of Service

THE LATE Myron T. Herrick, America's famous and well beloved ambassador to France, was reported a very rich man during his life time. But when his will was probated recently it was found that his wealth was not at all imposing, by modern standards. His estate was worth little more than a million dollars, and when all expenses are met will probably net considerably less than that.

To be sure, that is a good deal of money—but Mr. Herrick was richer than that at one time. It is quite probable that the heavy expenses which our ambassadors must meet out of their own pockets, coupled with the fact that Mr. Herrick's devotion to his duty kept him from attending to his private business affairs, constituted a heavy drain on his fortune.

Which, of course, is just one more indication of Mr. Herrick's patriotism and unselfish loyalty to his country.

A Chance for Trouble

TWO DECADES AGO the Balkans were called "the powder magazine of Europe." It was felt that any real disturbance there might easily involve all Europe in a war—and so, tragically enough, it finally happened.

Right now the Chinese-Russian border might be given a title somewhat similar. Every major power has interests in that region, and every one watches what happens there with jealous care. It would not be at all hard for a conflict in that locality to breed a great war.

For that reason the present difficulty between the new Chinese government and Soviet Russia is worth watching. It may—probably will—be smothered over somehow; or, if fighting comes, it may be confined to the two nations primarily involved. But almost anything could happen. The situation is not exactly reassuring.

CHATTY—GODDESS OF GAB

By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of: "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," ETC.

COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

"It's nice," Billie agreed, "I think I'll take it."

READ THIS FIRST

Charlotte Chatterton, whose nickname is Chatty, is a born gossip and busybody. She loses her job in Mrs. Mayberry's hat shop because she talks too much, and leaves without collecting her week's salary. However, Pud, her young brother, gets it for her and hears from Mrs. Mayberry why Chatty was fired.

Mrs. Harriet Chatterton, Chatty's mother, does plain sewing. Her only fashionable customer is an old friend of hers, Mrs. Van Nuys. Through Mrs. Van Nuys Chatty is given a job, helping in the filing department of Mr. Van Nuy's bond house downtown.

There Chatty sees a young man she once noticed buying flowers for a girl in the flower shop near Mrs. Mayberry's hat store. Billie Langenau, the head of the filing department, tells Chatty he is one of the bond salesmen, David Jordan, and that the only girl in the office he ever goes out with is Mr. Van Nuys' secretary, Agnes Hertford, a plain, quiet girl.

Chatty thinks he is stunning, and for the first time in her life she wants to be attractive to a man. She buys some French face powder, and some pink nail polish so that she can have hands as pretty as Billie's hands. Billie is always well groomed in the office, for George Mayhew, the man she is in love with, works there.

In the evening following her first day in the office, Chatty quarrels with Pud, as they wash the dishes together, because Pud "kids" her about having the kind of job where she must not talk much—for Billie has told her never to mention the names of customers that are card indexed in the Van Nuys company's files. Chatty angrily leaves him to finish the dishes. She goes into her room to experiment with the new powder and nail polish.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER V

It was $3 less than Chatty had been making in Mrs. Mayberry's shop. But she said that it would be quite enough, and she thanked Miss Herford and went back to her files.

"I'd work here for a dollar a week!" she told herself. "At least long enough to become acquainted with that Jordan!"

It had cheered her up enormously to know that there was no girl with whom he went about, steadily.

"There are ten bond salesmen out in the big office," Billie told her, when they were putting away their things for the night, "and only one of them is married . . . They're awfully nice boys. I want you to meet them in a day or two. I go around with George Mayhew. He's the tall one with blue eyes and light hair . . . Did you notice him?"

Chatty hadn't. But she fibbed and said she had . . . She hadn't noticed any of them but the red-headed Jordan.

She hoped he would say good-night to her. But when she passed his desk he was reading the stock market reports and he did not look up.

Chatty walked part of the way home. The sun was still shining, and the sky was blue above the tall, gray office buildings of the downtown district.

At the corner of Norris street and Folkstone court, where she waited for a street car, there was a drug store.

Its big front window was brightly lighted, and in it stood dozens and dozens of bottles of French perfume and just as many boxes of the same brand of French face powder.

"Silly stuff!" sniffed Chatty.

But she walked over and looked at it. There was a sign in the window that advertised it, and she read that, too.

"The magic of charm," it read, "is far greater than beauty. Any woman can have charm—the charm that draws men—by using the right kind of perfume and powder."

"Is that so?" thought Chatty. "Well, I don't believe it!"

Her street car was coming. She looked at it. Then she looked back at the powder and perfume in the window.

In a second she was inside the drug store.

There were four dollars in the bottom of her shabby little bag.

"How much is that powder in the window?" she asked the clerk who came to wait on her.

"That 'Charmain' powder?" he asked. "That is three dollars the box, miss."

"I'll have a box," said Chatty, sturdily. "And while you're getting that you can get me a bottle of this pink, shiny stuff that women use on their fingernails, too!"

For the first time in her life, Chatty felt the need of beauty . . . At last she had found out why other girls cut their hair short and painted their faces and rubbed perfume under their chins . . . It was because they wanted some man or other to fall in love with them and think them beautiful.

She walked all the rest of the way to the Lipton street flat—and she thought about David Jordan every step of the long way.

"It's a slick job," she told Pud that night while the two of them were doing the dishes. "All I have to do is to keep some cards straight in a row of filing cabinets—and hunt up papers in them."

"Sounds perfectly simplex to me—perfectly simples," answered Pud, and then went on whistling "Drizzle, drizzle, the party's a fizzle, but, oh, what a night to love!"

"And I'm never to tell what names are in that filing department," his sister went on, "for they're the names of all the rich people who buy the Van Nuy's company's bonds—and naturally they don't want any other company to find out their customers because then they might sell bonds to them, too."

Pud burst into a wild loud laugh. "Oh, boy!" he gurgled, "that certainly is good! If that's the kind of a job it is, where you're not supposed to tell anything—oh, boy! That certainly is some job for you!"

Chatty slapped him across the face with the wet disheloth.

"Now, you shut up, Pud Chatterton!" she flamed out at him. "You just say that I talk too much because you heard that was what Mrs. Mayberry said about me! Why don't you get a thought of your own, some time for a change!"

And she stamped out of the kitchen, leaving him alone to finish the dishes.

She went into the room she shared with her mother. It was empty, for Mrs. Chatterton was sewing in the front room. She opened her handbag and took from it the powder and the nail polish. She went carefully to work.

Chatty never had tried to make herself pretty and alluring for some man's eyes before in her life. She had been "plain Jane"—clean as wax and neat as a pin—and let it go at that. And so she was awkward and slow as she went to work to beautify herself that Monday night.

It took her a full hour to "do" her nails. But when they were finished they were almost as shiny and pink and pointed as Billie Langenau's lovely finger tips.

Then she fluffed some of the new perfumed powder over her face. She loved the creamy, velvety look it gave to her skin.

"It takes all the shine away—and it makes my eyes look bigger, somehow," she told herself, smiling at herself in the glass.

Next she went out into the kitchen and sponged her faded black working dress with cold tea to bring the color back. She carefully pressed it, and hung it up in the closet all ready for tomorrow morning.

It was 10 o'clock, and she was brushing her hair before the old mahogany dresser when Mrs. Chatterton came into the bedroom.

"What in the world have you put on your face?" she asked, coming close. "You've put powder on, and it'll make your pores big just as sure—and what on earth have you done to your nails?"

"Polished them," answered Chatty, calmly. "Now, mother, don't pretend you've never seen liquid nail polish before. Most of your customers use it—and I know I look much better, fixed up a little, than I did two hours ago." She puffed her hair over her ears, and drew it up in a loose knot at the back of her head.

"You look just like a Zu-zu belle—only you're blond!" Mrs. Chatterton declared, shaking her head. "No, I thought you looked sweeter and younger the old way, Chatty! And this stuff is positively injurious—" She reached for the wonderful face powder.

But Chatty was too quick for her. She snatched the box up, and held it behind her back. She faced her mother defiantly.

"Now, look here!" she said, almost in a shout, "if you throw this powder out I'll just buy more . . . I'm tired of looking like Bessie Backwoods, and if I want to have my nails shiny and my hair waved and the shine off my nose—why it's my own business! I'm going to have some pep and look like the rest of the girls in the world or know the reason why! And I don't care who knows it!"

That was lucky, for she was talking at the top of her voice by this time and the window beside her was open.

Mrs. Chatterton laid one hand across her mouth.

"Hush!" she said quietly. "You don't have to yell at me like that . . . But it's my duty to tell you what you ought to do, and I'm going to do it. After that, it's up to you if you obey me or not. I know you're a grown woman, Chatty. But the truth is that you don't need powder. Some people who have freckles or blotches may need it, but your skin is so lovely just as it is—and you look like a nice girl. A nice, quiet girl—"

"I don't want to look like a nice, quiet girl! I've looked like a nice, quiet girl too long!" Chatty brought the flat of her small hand down upon the dresser top with a bang. "The men never look at a girl these days unless she's all lit up like the northern lights—and that's the truth, whether you believe it or not!"

Her mother raised her eyebrows. "Oh, so that's it? The men!" she was beginning, but Chatty cut her words short.

"Well, what if it is?" she wanted to know. "It's time I began to notice a few men, isn't it? I'm 20! Oh, mother, why don't you let me grow up? Why, Pud, at his age, has a lot more freedom than I have. He can stay out as late as he pleases—"

"That reminds me—he's not home yet," Mrs. Chatterton interrupted. "Pud ought to have been home an hour ago. Ben Tomlinson knows I want him home by 9 o'clock—and he's promised to send him home then."

By a quarter past ten young Pud had not come, and Mrs. Chatterton went into the front of the house to telephone Tomlinsons' drug store at the corner.

"It doesn't answer, Tomlinson must have closed up for the night," she said anxiously to Chatty, coming back into the bedroom. "We'll have to go down and look for him, Chatty. It makes me so nervous to a cat to have him out late like this.

◇

Ben Tomlinson's drug store was in darkness, except for one small blue light that burned in the prescription room behind the store itself.

"Now, where do you suppose that Pud is?" Mrs. Chatterton wailed, and began to wring her hands. "You know Ben Tomlinson's been letting him deliver packages lately—and heaven only knows where he delivers them or what kind of terrible people he meets—"

"He can't meet anybody very terrible in a quiet neighborhood like this," Chatty soothed her. And as she spoke a small closed car came swiftly out of the alley behind the drug store.

The arc light on the corner sent its rays straight into it . . . and there sat young Pud, with Ben Tomlinson beside him.

"Pud! — Pud! — Putnam Chatterton!" his mother called shrilly, as the car passed her and Chatty.

But neither Pud nor Ben Tomlinson heard her, and the car swung into West River street and sped away into the darkness. The tail light became a tiny red spark in the vast blackness of the night, and then vanished altogether.

"Now, where on earth are they going, do you suppose?" Mrs. Chatterton wondered aloud. "At this time of the night? and why didn't Pud come home? He knows he ought to be at home, and so does Ben Tomlinson!"

◇

It was 11 o'clock before Pud did come home.

His mother and Chatty saw him drive up in front of the apartment house in Ben Tomlinson's car, and saw Tomlinson drive away.

A moment later Pud softly unlocked the door of the flat and came in. His blue eyes opened wide when he saw his mother and sister sitting in the front room—not reading or sewing, but just sitting there, waiting for him.

"Thought you two'd be getting your beauty sleep!" he said, and grinned at them. "Hot siggety! Will you look at Chatty?"

His twinkling eyes took in the fluffy hair, the pink powder that covered her face, the bright pink nails, and the tops of Chatty's stockings, which had been "rolled" for the first time since Chatty had begun to wear stockings. "A form you love to clutch," he misquoted, with a loud laugh. "Oh, boy! You'll knock 'em dead when you stroll into old Van Nuys' office tomorrow morning, girl!"

"Don't let me hear you speak that way of Mr. Van Nuys, Putnam!" his mother said to him sharply. "'Old Van Nuys!' You ought to be ashamed of yourself! Now, where have you been until this hour?"

Pud reddened. "Drug store," he answered shortly, walking towards the door that led to the bedrooms.

"No, you haven't . . . I saw you leaving the store almost an hour ago with Ben Tomlinson!"

"Sure," said Pud, easily. "And that's where I was—with Ben, delivering some packages in his car. He just brought me home. You can call him up and ask him—"

"I don't want to," Mrs. Chatterton told him. "You go to bed now and don't stay down there after nine o'clock any more. Understand? Come along, Chatty, we may as well get some sleep."

But she wouldn't have had her sleep if she had known where he had gone with Ben Tomlinson, and what he had been doing.

She was not to know for a long time.

The next afternoon at 4 o'clock David Jordan came walking into the room where the files were kept.

Chatty was all alone there. For Billie Langenau had gone out at two to hunt for a new place to live, and she had not come back.

"Get out all the dope we have on this man—'George W. Morner,'" he said to Chatty, laying a slip with the man's name on it down before her.

Chatty opened the filing cabinet that held the names that began with "M." She was quick, and she found the name she wanted almost at once.

"Here it is," she said, handing it to him. . . . Jiminy! But wasn't he the best-looking thing with his red hair rumpled and his face flushed under his freckles as if he had been hurrying all day long!

"Thanks." He took the card. But instead of looking at it he looked at her. And he frowned.

"I liked you better the other way," he said. "Much better."

"What way?" Chatty was breathless.

"Without that make-up on your face," Dave Jordan said gravely. "And your hair smooth and tight the way it was yesterday. The minute I saw you I thought, 'What a nice young kid.'"

Chatty stared at him, her big eyes growing bigger with every second.

"But Miss Langenau makes up, and just see how pretty she is!" she cried. "Why, she has hardly any color of her own—and she puts black stuff on her lashes, too. I saw her wash and then fix herself all up this noon before she went out to lunch with Mr. Mayhew—"

Davy Jordan raised his hand to stop her. He was laughing.

"Maybe she wouldn't like you to tell all that about her, Miss What's-Your-Name," he said. "Most girls like to have fellows think that their bloom of youth is all their own, you know."

He started away, and then he came back for just a moment.

"And most fellows don't like to see girls all made up," he added. "No foolin'."

When Billie Langenau came back at half past four Chatty had washed most of the powder from her face, and she was busily at work, scraping the too-bright pink polish from her finger nails.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, July 21.—Admiral Cary Grayson, who was personal physician to President Wilson during his two terms of office, told this writer an entertaining story the other day about Lloyd George and the "Rebel yell." When Admiral Grayson attended the peace conference in Paris, he met Lloyd George and was amazed to find that not only was the then British prime minister keenly interested in Stonewall Jackson, but was also somewhat of an authority. Admiral Grayson himself comes from Virginia, where he still lives.

Lloyd George invited him to dine with him and after the dinner, which was not hobbled by prohibition although both the distinguished men are observing, he invited Admiral Grayson, as a favor, to give the old "Rebel yell." In reply to this suggestion the admiral said:

"Mr. Prime Minister, I don't think it would be appropriate to give such a yell in Paris, nor do I feel that I could do justice to the yell, but if you will come to Virginia I'll see that you hear the 'rebel yell' in the best surroundings'."

Lloyd George promised to comply with the conditions, and when he attended the disarmament conference during President Harding's administration, he met Admiral Grayson in the New Willard hotel in Washington and his first question was:

"How about the 'rebel yell'?"

"If you come across the Potomac," replied Grayson, "I'll see that you hear it."

So Lloyd George made an engagement to visit the admiral, and, as part of the program, Grayson went to the old Confederate Veteran Soldiers' home where there were 90 survivors of the war of the rebellion. He arranged to have them dressed up as best they could in their old tattered and confederate uniforms. Then, personally conducting Lloyd George about, he asked him whether he would be interested in shaking hands with some veterans of the civil war. The British prime minister was not only interested but enthusiastic.

Drawn up at as strict attention as their old bodies would permit, the 90 veterans stood siffly in line, and Lloyd George approached each and shook hands warmly, saying:

"Under whom did you serve?"

One said Robert E. Lee, another some well known confederate leader and finally one old, grizzled faded soldier said proudly:

"I served under the greatest general that ever lived, Stonewall Jackson."

As he said this, tears filled his eyes. Lloyd George was touched by the sight of this man whose commander died 58 years before and still was so affected by his memory that it brought tears to his eyes.

Then Admiral Grayson gave the signal, which was the climax of the entertainment and the 90 veterans broke out into the "rebel yell" which shook the hills of Virginia. The British prime minister was so pleased with the performance he turned to Grayson and said:

"I am glad you didn't try to give that yell in Paris or anywhere but here. That was one of the greatest thrills of my life. Thank you."

Putting Him in His Place

Playing a crowded golf course recently in a foursome which had started early and moved slowly was the president of a big locomotive company. This foursome was an obstruction to all players on the course and was also a stone wall when it came to letting anybody behind them shift through. Finally one wit in a foursome which had been held up on every shot, turned to his companion and said:

"As far as I am concerned I have bought my last locomotive from that guy."

"Even if he built battleships," replied the irritated companion of the first speaker, "I'd never buy another battleship from him."

"Matty's" Banking System

Traveling in a sleeper the other day from New York to Chicago I was reminded of a habit Christy Mathewson had when this writer used to travel with the New York Giants as a reporter. Matty was different from most ball players in many ways. In the first place, he was in a class by himself. In the second place, most ball players carry very little money when they go on a trip. Matty always toted a sizable bankroll because he liked to play bridge and other games of chance and this bankroll was usually larger on his way home than when he started, because he was a good gambler. When he retired at night on a sleeping car, he would take one sock, insert the bankroll in it tie a knot in it and stick the whole works under his pillow. The theory was a sound one. With a bankroll under the pillow no one could steal it. With it in one of his socks, he would not forget it because he would remember to put the sock on the next morning. I never heard of this banking system falling down.

The Hollywood Diet

We're naming diets after cities now. Hollywood has won the first recognition in the big national Shrink and Shrivel carnival. The latest fad among the ladies whose 1928 summer gowns don't fit them this season is the Hollywood diet. It is an 18-day hunger strike dedicated to the proposition of making the people thin and the citrus fruit growers fat.

PHILLIPS

"Back to girlishness in 432 hours" is the slogan. Why look fat and happy when you can become thin and miserable in better than three weeks with a little will power and a lot of grapefruit?

Grapefruit was formerly regarded as a rather cumbersome fruit whose chief purpose was to test the table manners of house guests, but today it has taken its place in American life as a substitute for exercise.

An apple a day may keep the doctor away, but two grapefruit a day will keep him from recognizing the patient.

The Hollywood diet runs something like this:

First Day

Breakfast: One-half grapefruit, toast, coffee.

Lunch: One-half grapefruit, one egg, six slices cucumber, toast, tea or coffee.

Dinner: Two eggs, one tomato, one-half grapefruit, coffee.

Second Day

Breakfast: One grapefruit, coffee.

Lunch: One-half grapefruit, one lamb chop, one-half grapefruit.

Dinner: Half grapefruit, half grapefruit, four radishes, half grapefruit. (And if you're really hungry try some grapefruit.)

Third Day

Breakfast, lunch, dinner: How about grapefruit?

Prominent among those losing weight through the Hollywood diet are the apple growers of America. They lose five pounds every time they realize that they let the citrus fruit men steal a march on them. There isn't an apple, peach, pear or banana on the Hollywood diet.

The watermelon interests, it is understood, stand ready to part with any amount of money to the person who suggests a plan for putting across watermelons as flesh reducers.

Why not, for example, a Los Angeles, Chillicothe or West Philadelphia diet, with watermelons predominating?

First Day

Breakfast: One-quarter watermelon, dry toast, coffee.

Lunch: One watermelon, three olives, one egg.

Dinner: Two watermelons.

Second Day

Breakfast: Half watermelon, dry toast, coffee.

Lunch: Three artificial flies, half watermelon, one boiled pinecone.

Dinner: One bass plug, three wooden golf tees, one straw hat brim, one watermelon.

MUCOUS COLITIS

Patients suffering from intestinal irritation frequently notice large quantities of gelatinous, slimy mucous resembling frog spawn in stool. Sometimes patients think that mucous is the inside lining of their intestines. The mucous may also resemble transparent worms.

The intestines are lined with mucous membrane and secrete mucous normally as a lubricant, but when they are irritated by toxic material they endeavor to protect themselves by throwing off an excessive quantity of mucous. Where this irritation has continued over a length of time, the mucous membrane may develop a secretion neurosis or habit of secreting an excessive quantity of mucous. This condition is found most frequently in nervous, highstrung, hysterical or neurotic patients.

Sometimes an excessive secretion of mucous is caused by simple catarrh of the intestine, or it may be caused by a disease of the intestines which produces an irritation. Even the pressure of irritating fecal material from constipation may produce mucous colitis by creating tender inflamed spots in the colon.

Mucous colitis is often mistaken for appendicitis, inflammation of the ovaries, or other inflammatory conditions of the abdomen. This is because the irritation of the colon by the toxins and the distension from gas may cause symptoms which are attributed to some other abdominal origin.

Where there is some doubt about the diagnosis, a microscopic examination will distinguish the mucous cells from pus and mucous membrane, worms, indigested vegetable skins, or sausage skins, etc. In the majority of cases of mucous colitis, there will be found a complete sagging of all the abdominal organs, and usually adhesions will be found to have bound down the colon, making the bowels still more sluggish and obstructed.

There is usually a reduced amount of bile production. The stool is occasionally very light in color for this reason.

Mucous colitis is not an acute disease and therefore cannot be cured quickly by any known method. The interlying causes must be corrected. One must pay particular attention to using good combinations of food and plenty of exercise, especially of the abdominal muscles to develop a better peristaltic action of the colon.

The hardest cases to recover are those of a hysterical or neurotic nature. Emotional disturbances, worry and lack of sleep are especially likely to prevent recovery. Great care must therefore be used to conserve the nervous vitality. A careful dieting regimen and the frequent use of enemas to flush out poisonous substances of the lower bowel offers immediate relief from the distressing symptoms, but a complete cure cannot be expected within several months, and even a year or two may be required.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Infected Fingernails

Question—H. G. Writes: "For a year and a half I have been troubled with infected fingernails. Have tried several remedies but got only temporary relief. Two of the nails have come off. What do you advise?"

Answer—You are starving for bone-building salts. The acidosis from which you suffer can be cured if you will use a liberal amount of green vegetables, in proper combinations with proteins, whole grains, and other foods containing vitamins. Leave out all denatured foods, such as those made from white flour.

Fruit Fast for Liquor Habit

Questions—M. G. writes: "Referring to your article on the liquor habit, will you kindly advise character of diet treatment so as to obtain best results?"

Answer—A short fruit fast for a few days will positively eliminate any abnormal craving for liquor. If one wishes to stop drinking alcoholic intoxicants he will find it very easy to control himself after the cleansing effect of a fruit fast.

Trouble With Gums

Question—J. H. H. asks: "What causes so much acid in my mouth as to cause my teeth to be sore under the edge of my gums. Am very constipated. What can I do to remedy these conditions?"

Answer—Improper diet is the cause of pyorrhea, trench mouth, or any other similar disorder which would make your teeth sore under the gums. Go to a good dentist and have your teeth treated and scaled. At the same time, change your diet and overcome constipation by taking plenty of exercise, using more greens, and following the menus I give you every Friday in this column.

Deluge of Wives Proves Downfall Of Poor Mr. Bagum

NEW YORK, July 21. (UP)—A model husband, Samuel Bagum, 25, corresponded regularly with his wives—all four of them.

Everything would still be lovely if Mrs. Gertrude Reford Bagum hadn't come to New York from Los Angeles to surprise "dear hubby." She brought the baby's picture and when she found Bagum living with another woman in a Bronx apartment, she complained to the police.

Then it started to rain wives on Bagum. Mrs. Beatrice Kuntz Bagum of Philadelphia joined the Los Angeles woman in Morrisania court today.

The wives charged that he married Stella Berger of Cleveland in 1915, then he married Miss Reford, then he married Rose Katz of Washington, D. C., and in 1928 took his fourth wife, Miss Kuntz.

Bagum was held in $5,000 bail for a hearing July 24. He said he could explain everything.

BUFFS ROUT O'NEAL IN EIGHTH WITH 4 RUNS AND WIN, 5-2

ART REINHART IS EFFECTIVE

Bennett Hits Homer; Galloways Still Lead

Special to The Record News

HOUSTON, July 21.—Gene Bailey's battling Buffs Sunday simply refused to be licked. After poor base running had hurt their chances in the early innings, they unleashed a savage eighth round attack that netted four tallies, and enabled them to whip Jim Galloway's Wichita Falls Spudders, 5 to 2.

Art Reinhart, willowy southpaw who toiled superbly, started the big drive with a line single to center.

The game was bitterly fought, with Hermann being chased by Umpire Donnelly for disputing the decision when Martin pilfered third. The colorful Pepper Martin gave a great show getting a couple of hits, stealing a couple of bases, and turning in a spectacular running catch.

Fan Riles Our George

One of the big features of the thrilling engagement was the combined rooting of Red Gresham and Jimmy McCrea, two of the best rooters ever to attend a ball game at Buff stadium. McCrea was so vociferous in his rooting that he offered to take on Pitcher George Washington Payne of the visitors; but the battlers didn't get together—unfortunately for the spectators. And fortunately for Mr. McCrea.

Oran O'Neal, who several years ago pitched for Beaumont until the eighth inning twirled well for the visitors; but in that round he was driven from the hill.

Reinhart was too good for the Spudders, though it seemed for a time that Fred Bennett's fiercely hit drive over the left field wall in the fourth would be enough to beat the southpaw.

How Buffaloes Won

After Reinhart had led off with a single to center in the eighth, he took second on a passed ball. Eddie Hock reached up over his head and crashed a triple to center, scoring Reinhart. Taylor lined to Benton, for no advance. Martin doubled to left, scoring Hock. White relieved O'Neal. Martin stole third. Moore grounded to Benton, who threw home, and Martin raced up and down the line, until Moore had gone all the way to third, and then dove for the plate. Stapleton tagged him but dropped the ball, and Martin scored. Stapleton kicked at the decision claiming Martin had pulled the ball from his hand. Jordan scored Moore with a line single to center.

The ninth was exciting. Sullivan dropped a single back of short. Fitzgerald lined a single to center, sending Sullivan to third. Hunt intercepted Martin's riflelike throw toward third, and threw to Jordan to retire Fitzgerald trying to go to second on the play. Sullivan scored on Bennett's long fly to center.

Still in Lead

Despite the defeat the Spudders held first place, though the Shreveport Sports went into a tie for the lead. So closely are the first six clubs bunched that the two teams tied for fifth could go into first place tomorrow.

The Spudders open a two-day stand tomorrow at San Antonio. Payne is the probable hurler.

Producers Beat Boone-Kemp, 6-1

Creamers Take City Lead; McElreath Victor

Gabe Harris and Smoke Lupher pitched airtight ball for the Producers Creamery nine yesterday at Katy park and the Milkers won from the Boone-Kemp Auto company athletes by a 6 to 1 score. The two pitchers allowed only six hits in nine innings while their mates were gathering nine hits and six runs.

The victory gave the Creamery athletes undisputed possession of the league lead and sent the autoists into a tie with McElreath motor company for second place.

Snipe Connally swung the big mace for the victors with a single and two triples in four trips to the plate.

Dick Bagwell drove in half of the Producers' runs with two timely singles. None of the losers was able to gather over one hit each. Hatten pitched fine ball for the losers, but poor support in the pinches handicapped him.

McElreath Motor company staged a brilliant rally to win a 12 to 9 slugfest from the Dimock Plumbers in the first game of yesterday's double-header. Poling out 11 hits which resulted in as many runs in the last three innings, the autoists pulled the game out of the fire.

A large crowd witnessed the first double-header of the year at Katy park.

Tilden Wins Easily; Hunter Is Extended

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

BERLIN, July 21. (US)—America made a clean sweep of the Davis cup final challenge round against Germany today, "Big Bill" Tilden defeating Danial Prenn 6-1, 6-4, 6-1, and Francis T. Hunter, America's other veteran, taking a hard-fought battle from Hans Moldenhauer, 6-3, 1-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-1.

Bill Bill literally toyed with Germany's youthful star, giving an exhibition of tennis much after the manner of the schoolmaster teaching his youngsters.

Hunter, however, had to battle ferociously to defeat Moldenhauer, America's erratic ace and second line of defense being obviously off his game. When he was pressed, however, Hunter labored with a fierce determination, and Moldenhauer succumbed to Hunter's terrific drives.

The Fastest Human

The debate concerning the name of the fastest human is still under way.

Through Ohio and other parts of the United States Simpson of Ohio State has been nominated for this honor. Canada quite naturally objects to the Simpson nomination, as the name of Percy Williams is offered. Simpson still has a 100-yard record of 9 2-5 under official consideration, but Canada's rebuttal is that Williams won the 100 and 200-meter races from the pick of the world at the Olympic games a year ago, and that he has beaten such American sprinters as Tolan, Wyckoff and Bracey since. The use of the starting block still seems to be the barrier in the way of Simpson's new record. Whether or not he could beat Williams or whether Williams could beat him if both were right is a matter of opinion.

Williams has put more upon the record books in the course of the last year than any other sprinter. But Williams and Simpson would have to meet in more than one race before the sprinting supremacy could be officially awarded.

The Return of Sweetser

It is to be hoped that Jess Sweetser will find time and opportunity to make the trip to Pebble Beach for the next amateur golf championship. Sweetser proved that he had come back to his old stride when he stepped around Sleepy Hollow at an average of 71 for three rounds. His last two rounds of 70-68 were up to anybody's best.

Sweetser is a fine match play competitor. He is one of the most determined golfers in the hunt, a golfer with a lot of fiber who is always hard to discourage. He hasn't had the chance to play much golf since his return from the British amateur of 1926, but he has apparently picked up most of his old form. Sweetser's fine iron play makes him doubly formidable. He has little bend or break in his wrists at the top of the swing, and that seems to give him better control. The simplicity of his swing is one of its leading features. Sweetser would be a factor at Pebble Beach. He isn't sure that he can take the time away for a California jaunt, but he has had so little time off in the last few years he may decide that he needs a vacation.

The Near Impossible

The French can wait for the verdict in the final zone round of the Davis cup without any active tremors of dismay. As long as they have a Cochet and Lacoste still under 30, with a Borotra and a Brugnon to call on, there will be little to worry about.

They occupy about the same position that Tilden and Johnston held from 1921 through 1926. They are fully as hard to beat. There is almost no such thing as the impossible in sport, but stopping Cochet and Lacoste is at least near the impossible. Both are young and around their peak. They may start slipping soon, but they haven't started yet. Either would have been a tough match for Tilden when Tilden was at his best, and Tilden isn't the Big Bill of 1920-1926 by several low and high hurdles.

The French have dominated world tennis for three years, and their reign isn't over yet, if any one can bank on form and dope. They have too much skill, youth, experience and confidence to be halted, unless sport runs into the largest upset it has known in a number of years.

The Younger Stars

There are more younger stars coming into baseball than any other sport. Tennis, golf and boxing have no such youthful talent under way as Mel Ott, Jimmy Foxx and several others who are holding their own with the stars of other seasons.

In golf no young amateurs have come along to threaten Jones, Von Elm and one or two older players over the year's route.

Jones and Von Elm were struggling for mastery as far back as 1924. They were the leading amateurs in the open of 1928, and they were the leading amateurs in the open of 1929. Jones led the entire field, and only three professionals led Von Elm.

No youthful stars have yet come along in tennis who have anything like an even crack at the championship. Few young Americans have made any notable headway in the ring. One may pop out at any moment with a championship look, but championship talent in the way of a promising prospect has been scarcer than happy farmers.

"If the new golf ball," writes L. F., "accentuates my slice I will have to wear a mask on the back of my neck."

Wichita Poloists Lose at Detroit

Blue Jackets Beaten, 9-8 In Thrilling Game

Special to The Record News

DETROIT, Mich., July 21.—The powerful Detroit Freebooters beat Wichita Falls, 9 to 8 this afternoon in one of the fastest and hardest games of the season. Close to 10,000 assembled at Harrison field saw some of the best riding, blocking, turning and driving that has been witnessed on a Detroit polo grounds.

By reason of the substitution of Lieut. John Smith for Cecil Smith in the Freebooters' lineup, Wichita Falls received an allowance of six goals and therefore earned but two. Not that the Texans did not play higher polo than their rating but the defense of Capt. Huthsteiner and Lieutenant Smith was almost like a stone wall.

The failure of Wichita Falls to score more than a brace was due in a measure to tough luck. Time and again they missed by inches and feet and how they did fight to get at that goal on the other end. Featherstone, who captains this team, pulled the iron out of the fire time and again with his grand backhanders right on the lip of the goal. Gill was dashing out in front and when he did get the ball he generally managed to ride it until he encountered either Huthsteiner or Smith who would whack it to the side lines.

Childers played a star game both in advancing and blocking and Captain Morris showed better polo than he has during his stay in this city. A better break in luck and the Freebooters would have suffered a defeat. Score:

Freebooters	Position	Wichita Falls
P. H. Grennan	No. 1	Dean Gill
M. Harrison	No. 2	P. H. Morris
John Smith	No. 3	Cecil Childers
G. Huthsteiner	No. 4	C. Featherstone

Couple's Pet Turtle 'Bums' Plane Ride

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 21. (UP)—Lightning, pet turtle of Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Zacharoff, New York author and his artist wife, has a way with aviators, to which must be credited largely the arrival of the trio at Fairfax airport here today, after a hitch-hike from New York by air.

Zacharoff is a magazine writer and his wife is an artist, musician and teacher in public schools of Brooklyn. Both are 22 years old. Lightning's age is in doubt. One week ago they started to the Pacific, "bumming free rides through the clouds." Their longest wait before Lightning got his way with a flier was at Buffalo where there was a two-day layover.

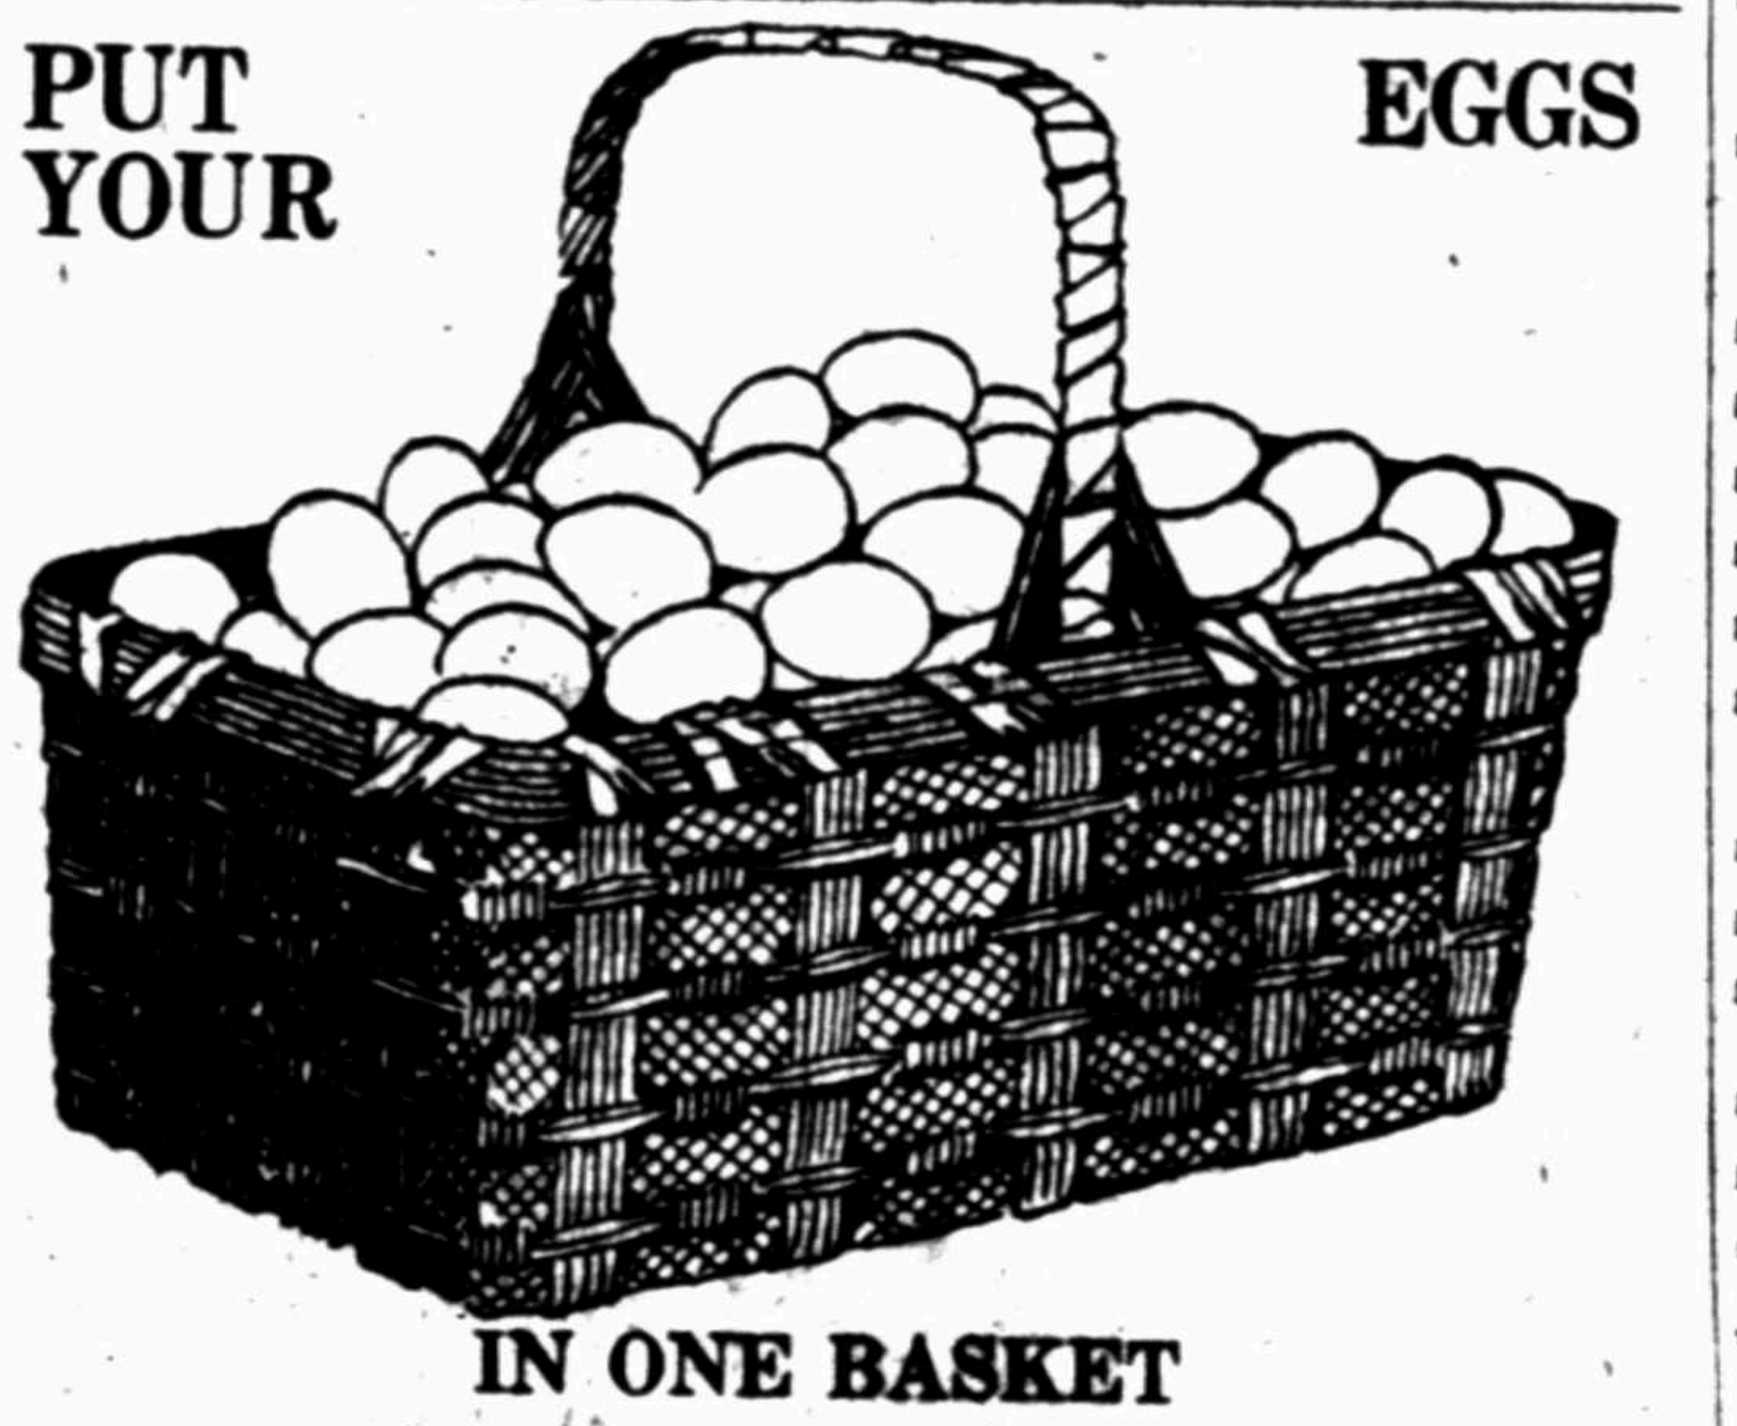

"Lightning's ambition, honesty and sobriety have been known to us for the last two years," Zacharoff said when the turtle poked his head from his shell for a glimpse of Kansas City and probably to select a susceptible flier bound westward.

Plainsman to Adopt Weeks Poultry Plan

HASKELL, Texas, July 21. (Spl.)—The Weeks' system of poultry houses will probably be installed by W. A. Beard, of a few miles south of Rule. He has about 1,000 birds in his flock and some up-to-date poultry houses. He is on a vacation now, looking over flocks and buildings in different parts of the state. He will adopt the Weeks plan unless he finds something that suits him better.

In 1927, according to the government of British India, 24,000 persons were killed by wild animals. Snakebite was responsible for the death of 19,069.

PARTY TO HUNT 'SEA SERPENT'

Lake Champlain's Monster Sighted Again

WILLSBORO, N. Y., July 21. (UP)—Capture—even sudden death—may soon terminate the 300-year career of Lake Champlain's famous "sea serpent," which popped into view again off Willsboro Point last Sunday, "rolled the water for half a mile around" with its enormous tail and caused a fishing party suddenly to abandon all piscatorial pursuits for the day.

Plans were secretly under way today to fit out an expedition of sportsmen to pursue the monster.

"The reason for the secrecy," a spokesman explained, "is that if it got around who was going and who was putting up the money for a sea serpent hunt, the whole expedition might be laughed out of existence. Personally, those interested in the expedition do not believe it is a sea serpent. But they do believe that a strange and limbless aquatic beast, of monster dimensions, inhabits Lake Champlain, and that its capture would be of scientific value.

"We intend to obtain leadership for this expedition that will permit of no snickering. The first offer will be made to Dr. Will Beebe, the internationally known New York scientist and submarine explorer, who is now cataloging the ocean shallows near the Bermuda islands."

Local legends have carried repeated accounts of the lake's "sea serpent" since the time of Champlain, but ichthyologists from other parts of the United States and Europe have sought in vain to obtain sufficient data to form an intelligent opinion as to its probable ranking among animals or fishes.

STOCK-A-DAY

The Belding Heminway company manufactures silk fabrics, silk thread and cotton thread and stamps linens. The principal products, however, are 100 and 50-yard spools of silk thread, broad silks, crepes, satins and other silk fabrics. The company's products are sold to retailers, jobbers and manufacturers through sales offices in the principal American cities. The company has six mills of which two are in Connecticut, one in Michigan, one in California and one in New York. It also owns a 25-story office building in New York city said to be worth more than $3,000,000.

For the last eight years there has been an almost continuous downward trend in earnings. The company attributes the disturbed condition of the silk industry and the popularity of ready to wear goods. In 1928 there was a deficit of $436,033. This compared with a profit of $521,952 in 1927. The company is now endeavoring to develop its hosiery business more extensively and plans to introduce a new fabric line suitable to modern conditions.

Funded debt totals $2,882,000. Capital stock outstanding includes $109,300 in 7 per cent cumulative preferred shares of $100 par, and 415,032 shares of no par common. The preferred stock now is in process of being purchased and retired. Dividends on the preferred have been paid regularly. No dividends have been paid since May 1, 1928. The rate prior to that time was 75 cents a share quarterly.

As of Jan. 1, 1929, total current assets were $7,712,450. Current liabilities totaled $191,103 and net working capital was $7,521,347. Book value of the common stock was $15.14 a share.

'BESSIE' MAKES HORRID ERROR

Junk Man's Mare Enters 'Five and Ten' Store

CHICAGO, July 21. (UP)—A door in any red structure spells hay and oats to Bessie, who earns her board by pulling a junk wagon for Joe Barker.

As Joe droned his "any rags, any bottles, any junk," along West Roosevelt road this afternoon, Bessie, although blind in one eye and nearsighted in the other, spied a door in a swell red barn.

Her horse sense told Bessie to enter, so she did, with Joe bumping along behind trying to keep the old iron, rags, bottles and other impediments of a junk man on the bouncing wagon.

Finally the wagon hit something and stopped. Bessie continued, her nearsighted eye roving around for the manger.

Joe dug himself out of the junk, ran to a telephone and spoke hurriedly to his employers:

"Says, Bessie just runs into a five and ten cent store. She musta thought it was a barn—"

"Well, get her out," Mr. Weinberger, the employer, told Joe, somewhat annoyed.

"That it, I can't. She slid into one of them runways and went to the basement," answered the harassed Joe.

Bessie, sans oats, finally was led up the stairway.

DANIEL TALKS OF DREAMS

Value of Vision Told By Bible Teacher

Daniel

Dreams and visions as the antecedents of all great deeds in every line of human endeavor were discussed by Roy J. Daniel before the Kay Bible class at the First Methodist church Sunday morning with numerous allusions to historic leaders of ancient and modern nations.

As the creative artist first conceives in his mind the completed work to which he sets his hand, the speaker said so every prospective leader of industrial, governmental, military or educational development is motivated by a vision of the new order which he would bring to pass.

"If the dreams which rose before us in youth have failed to come true," Mr. Daniel said, "may it not be due to our failure to put God and his laws at the center of every vision? Let us go back, and put Him first, to giving His promises a chance to fulfill our dreams."

The address follows:

"It was a great and inspiring experience to me last Sunday morning between 9:30 and 10:40 a. m. to sit before the radio in my brother's home in Oklahoma City and listen in and enjoy the program of the Kay Bible class over KGKO. Some 175 miles to the north yet everything came in just as clear as a bell. It all sounded mighty good—Mrs. Akin's playing on the pipe organ, the songs under McGregor's direction, Bohmfalk's solo, the prayers, the inspiring address of Brother Alvin White, and even the taking of the collection, which I missed of course but I am going to double up on my contribution this morning.

"Our lesson this morning is Ezekiel's Vision of Hope. Does your star of hope still shine? What do you think of visions and dreams? Shakespeare's opinion of what dreams are made of is very light stuff. Did you ever have any when you were a boy? Do you have dreams and visions now? Perhaps you recall the days and nights when you were a cowhand, and how you sat beside your prairie-chip fire and dreamed and sang 'Bury Me not on the Lone Prayree.' Then perhaps, after your fire had died away, you lay upon the ground with your saddle for a pillow and looked up at the blinking stars and dreamed such dreams as you never have since. Or perhaps you have been a soldier and have lain by your campfire and dreamed the dreams of victory and seen visions of home and loved ones far away. Nothing great has ever been done without first a dream or vision. They tell us that the great painter first has the completed picture in his mind as a vision before he takes the brush in his hand. The great sculptor has in his mind the completed statue before he touches the marble with his chisel. The great bridge builder sets the completed vision of his bridge before ever it spans the mighty river.

"Joseph dreamed one time that the sheaves of his brothers bowed down to his sheaf that stood upright. When Joseph told his brothers about that dream they did not like it. They finally sold him into slavery to the Egyptians, and he went into the land of the Pharoah's and there his dream came true. Joseph rose from slavery to be prime minister of Egypt, and in the days of famine in the land of his fathers, his brothers came to Egypt and bowed themselves before Joseph to get grain for needed food. The king of Egypt had a dream one time. His dream was that seven lean kine came up and devoured seven fat kine, and that seven lean ears of corn ate up seven full ears of corn. Joseph explained to the king the meaning of that dream. It was that in the land of Egypt seven years of prosperity and plenty would be followed by seven years of want and famine. And he advised the king to save up during the seven years of plenty to tide the country over during the seven years of famine. The king took Joseph's advice and it proved good advice so that Joseph lives today in history as a great statesman.

"The powerful king of Babylon had a vision one time at a great banquet. He saw written in big letters upon the wall of the banquethall the words, 'Mene mene tekel upharsin.' The prophet told him to prepare for the certain destruction of his empire. And the Babylonian empire fell.

"U. S. Grant said one time that while a cadet at West Point that General Winfield Scott inspected the corps of cadets, and that as the grizzled hero of the war of 1812 passed him the vision of some day being a great military commander came to his youthful heart. The vision of U. S. Grant was long delayed but it became a reality because he commanded the greatest military host the United States ever assembled until the world war.

"In his youth Napoleon read diligently Plutarch's 'Lives of Greek and Roman Heroes,' and the dreams and visions of his youth he made come nearer true than has any modern conqueror. He visioned himself so much in Roman history that the features of his face came actually to resemble those of the ancient Roman emperors.

"Can you dream dreams like Michelangelo did? Michelangelo would go to the hillside and look down into the valleys and up into the passing clouds, and dream dreams that brought his noble soul to tears. That man was an Italian sculptor, painter, architect, poet and one of the greatest artists of all time. He was the friend of the medici of Florence. The pope induced him to settle in Rome, and there he painted on the ceiling of the Sistine chapel those beautiful ferscoes representing the creation and principal events of Biblical history.

Cecil Rhodes once said, 'When I find myself in uncongenial company, or when people are playing their games, or when I am alone in a railway carriage, I shut my eyes and think of my great idea. It is the pleasantest companion I have.' His great idea was a dream, a vision—the Rhodes' scholarship fund, and many scholars from all parts of the world have come to know the benefits of that idea. The whole English speaking world is grateful for the opportunity given its finest young men to study at Oxford. Through the Rhodes scholars who have gone out from Oxford all countries of the world have had direct touch with the name of that great man, Cecil Rhodes. He was one of England's empire builders, and he was an empire builder because he was first a great empire dreamer.

"What was Ezekiel's vision? He saw a house and running out from under that house toward the east was a stream of water. A man came along and with a line measured 1,000 cubits. A cubit is 18 inches—a foot and a half. So that distance was 18,000 inches or 1,500 feet or 500 yards. Then the man took Ezekiel through the waters and the water was up to his ankles. The man then measured again 500 yards and the water was up to his knees. Then after another measurement of 500 yards the water was up to his hips. Then after another measurement of 500 yards the water had become a river over Ezekiel's head so that to pass over it he would have to swim. Then Ezekiel went to the bank of the river, and on both sides he saw many trees. The man told Ezekiel that the river flowed toward the east, that it went throuhg the desert and on down to the sea. Everywhere the river went there would be life. And all who went to the river would live. Now this is one interpretation I place on Ezekiel's vision: the stream he saw is God's river of religious experience. Our first 1,000 cubits of religion reaches our ankles. Then the second venture reaches to our knees, then the next reaches to our hips, and then God makes the next measurement to that we can plunge into the river and swim for Him and His cause in this world.

"Have our dreams and visions of youth and later years failed to come true? There is a reason for the failure if such there be. Perhaps we have failed to put God and to keep God in the center of our dreams and visions. Let us go back and put Him first and then they will all come true.

"I would be true for there are those who trust me,
I would be brave for there is much to dare,
I would be a dreamer for dreams inspire me,
I would be pure for there are those who care."

Hardly Had a Well Day in Four Years

Wichita Farmer in Wretched Shape Until He Started on Orgatone Treatment

I finally decided I should try Orgatone so one day while I was down town I bought a bottle and began taking it, and the results are I have gained in weight and strength and feel better than I have in four years." This is what Tom Bennett, of 304 Lee street, Wichita Falls, Texas, says after using Orgatone for about three weeks.

"I had suffered from indigestion and stomach trouble until my health was so shattered I couldn't eat anything without suffering from it. I even tried the lightest of diets and those also caused me all sorts of trouble.

"I often got so weak and dizzy that it seemed like I would just have to sit down and rest. I was very nervous all the time, could scarcely sleep and often had headaches. No one knows how I did suffer and although I spent lots of money and tried everything I knew of, nothing seemed to reach my case or do me any good.

"I kept falling off in weight and strength until I started on this Orgatone. I commenced to feel better in a few days after I had begun taking the medicine and have gradually picked up ever since. I now weigh 150 pounds—and have gained in health and strength, I can now eat what I want as much of it as I please with no bad feelings afterward. My headaches and billiousness are broken up, I sleep like a log and simply feel like a different man."

Genuine Orgatone is manufactured by one of the world's largest laboratories and is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific bile treatment and is sold in Wichita Falls, exclusively by the Allison's Drug Store.—Adv.

Deputy Nabs Suspect After Man Takes Refuge in Peach Tree

When Charlie Gant, deputy sheriff, bearing a warrant for the arrest of an alleged hot check artist, knocked at the door of a home on Kemp boulevard about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, his host peeped through a window, saw him first, and made for the back door which slammed just as the deputy rounded the corner at the side of the house.

The weather did not encourage sprinting, but down the alley the two of them went, Mr. Gant galloping behind the man who kept dodging in an out of back yards for several blocks. He inadvertently led the officer nearer to the sheriff's car and Mr. Gant leaped into the machine. Whereupon the fleeing man took to the alleys again, vaulted a fence, and skinned up a peach tree where the officer found him a few minutes later. The prisoner repented from his unusual exertions in the county jail all Sunday afternoon and evening.

Sunday Teacher Sees Growth Of Religious Power

"Ezekiel's famous 'Vision of Hope' is clearly intended to symbolize the widening, deepening stream of religious influence in the lives of individuals and nations the world over," said B. D. Sartin before the Men's Bible class of the Highland Christian church Sunday morning.

Describing the stream which Ezekiel records as having been shown to him by an angel, Judge Sartin interpreted the shallow water as representing the self-centered purpose of the Hebrews with relation to religion, and the deepening stream as depicting the rapid spread of Christianity to the other peoples of the world.

"Our interest in foreign missions today sometimes becomes quite as shallow as that described by Ezekiel," the speaker said. "We need some to guide us, like the eunuch, into deeper water. We keep wading in the shallows when the ocean depths lie before us for exploration."

Christ himself referred to His gospel of life as "living water," the speaker pointed out, and emphasized the thought that the principles of social relationships laid down by Jesus offer the only cure for the multiple ills of the human race.

"Despite its many critics, the church continues on its way, deeper and wider in its influence. This stream is too deep for infidel and agnostic, and it will flow triumphantly, majestically, into the sea of God's eternal purposes."

Two Arrested, Liquor Seized in Raid Here

After watching a man move from the back of a small cafe on the Burkburnett highway to a whisky plant in the back yard, members of the sheriff's department Sunday afternoon raided the cafe, scattered its would-be patrons, seized six pints of liquor and arrested the proprietor and his brother.

Charges of the possession of whisky will be filed Monday before United States Commissioner J. A. Lantz, Charlie Gant, deputy sheriff, announced. The raid was made by Mr. Gant, George Garrett, and Dick Morris, deputies.

WEBB URGES LAW SUPPORT

Anti-Saloon Head Tells Of Need for Education

Declaring that the nation has been committed definitely to dry policies by action of its voters last year, Dr. Atticus Webb of Dallas, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Texas, in an address Sunday morning at the Lory Memorial Baptist church, asserted a position in support of the prohibition amendment is the only one left for a loyal American citizen, regardless of his individual personal views.

The magnitude of the task facing the Anti-Saloon league now, Dr. Webb said, is due in part to the fact that many of its loyal supporters, following the passing of the eighteenth amendment, assumed that the organization had accomplished fully its objectives. With reference to that matter, he said, the organization issued in 1919 a statement which stated the opinion that passage of the amendment had been obtained 10 years earlier than the preparatory education of the citizenry of the country could be completed.

Tells of Contributions

Attesting the work being done in Texas toward the practice of temperance, Dr. Webb said that citizens of this state have contributed to the Anti-Saloon league of Texas during the past 10 years approximately as much money as it received from them during the same period immediately preceding passage of the prohibition amendment.

The address in part follows:

"The election of last year was gratifying to the friends of prohibition in that it revealed that among the voters of the country prohibition had gained tremendously during the 10 years since the amendment was passed. It indicated that about 80 per cent of the voters favor our government's going on uncompromisingly to destroy root and branch the traffic in intoxicating liquor.

"This conclusion is based upon elections to congress rather than the vote cast in the presidential race. Three-fourths of the lower house and four-fifths of the upper house are dry. Of the new members, 10 out of every 11 are dry. This indicates that prohibition can no longer be regarded as an experiment, or as a temporary policy, but that it is the permanent policy of the government, made so by mandate of the voters expressed at the polls. There is therefore only one position for the loyal American citizen to take. He must stand behind the government as it is engaged in war with an armed enemy within its own borders, namely, the outlawed liquor traffic. The more fiercely that enemy fights, the more loyal and effective our citizenry should be.

Two Addresses

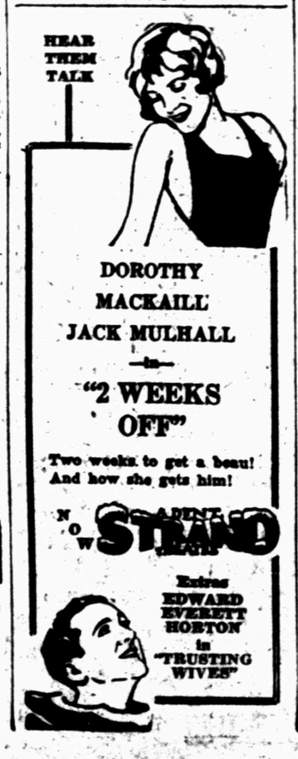

"The election last year released the Anti-Saloon league of Texas from the fight it had been making in defense of the law, and the league immediately launched a very aggressive and broad-guaged campaign of education for law observance and for temperance. This campaign is being conducted through literature, public speaking, and especially through programs given on week nights throughout most of the year. This program consists of a public address in a community mass meeting, followed by moving pictures that catch up the truths that we have been trying to drive home, and clinches those truths in the minds of both youth and adult. We have found this program effective and popular. Our audiences throughout the spring months were generally more than auditoriums selected for the purpose could accommodate.

"The work of the league must be supplemented by that of the pulpit, preaching temperance and the evils of liquor as did our fathers, and the work of the Sunday school, teaching lessons on temperance at least quarterly throughout the year."

Dr. Webb spoke at the Thrift Baptist church, near Burkburnett, Sunday night, and returned to Dallas at midnight. He announced that the engagements here closed the work of the league until September. At that time Charles Haffke, formerly superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league of Idaho, will become assistant-superintendent of the Texas organization, he said.

The circus is under the auspices of the army air corps reserve officers association of Kansas City.

"Dead" Church May Kill Religious Impulses of Members, Martin Says

In his address to the members of the Men's Bible class at the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning, Judge P. A. Martin drew a striking comparison between the Dead Sea of scriptural significance and a "dead church" which freezes, chills and kills the religious impulses of those who come into it. The speaker contrasted a "dead" with a "living church," carrying "living water" to the thirsty souls of men.

Judge Martin chose his text from the 47th chapter of Ezekiel and entitled his interpretation "The Healing Waters of Life." The address began with a description of the Dead Sea and its meaning in the life of the ancient Hebrews. An outline of his discussion is given below:

"In this scripture we have another splendid example of the wonderful imagery of the ancient Hebrew writers. In this day of municipal waterworks, wells and windmills, lakes and rivers, we are inclined to forget that water is the one element with which human life cannot exist; it is so plentiful that we are likely to consider it just one of the everyday things of life; not so with the ancient Hebrews; theirs was a country where water was an object in life, just as it was years ago on the great staked plains of Texas and is yet in some places of the arid west. Their wells and springs were popular places. People came many miles to fill their water jugs at the wells. The well was a place of neighborhood gathering; the river Jordan, their only stream of any importance, furnished life-giving refreshment to their flocks and herds and supported the verdure of the Jordan valley while among the trees that fringed its banks was found the 'locusts and wild honey' that supported the life of more than one prophet. So very early in Hebrew history water became the symbol of life and very properly so. We therefore find it used as a symbol of life in both the Old and New Testament. The Savior Himself used it as such a symbol and the sayings were well understood by those who heard him.

History of Dead Sea

"Now over to the eastward from Jerusalem there lay one of the wonders of the world—the Dead Sea, Sea of the Plain or Salt Sea, as it has been variously called. This remarkable body of water is over 1200 feet blow the level of the Mediterranean sea and so salty that no life of any sort survives in it; its waters are eight times saltier than sea water and a man cannot sink in it. The Jordan and several smaller streams flow into it, but it has no known outlet. In early times the vapors that rise from its surface were considered highly poisonous, but this seems to be a myth. In Bible times it was believed that the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, the cities of the plain of the book of Genesis were engulfed in this sea at the time of their destruction. Around its shores are hills of salt 300 feet thick and many evidences of vast volcanic action in ages past and it is not improbable that a civilization once existed wher the dead waters now wave. To the Hebrews of five centuries before Christ the Dead Sea was a useless thing, poison to the flesh, yielding no fish, feeding no vegetation, lined with no trees.

So we can readily understand the meaning of Ezekiel's vision of the healing waters. They flowed from the temple, the religious center of the Jews, first a rippling rivulet, ankle deep at a thousand cubits, (about 500 yards), knee deep at 1,000 yards and so on until it became a mighty river that could not be crossed and finally emptied into the great Salt Sea and healed its waters so that they teemed with fresh fish, so he said: 'It shall come to pass that everything that liveth, which moveth, whithersoever the rivers shall come, shall live; and there shall be a great multitude of fishes, because these waters shall come thither; for they shall be healed; and everything shall live whither the river cometh.'

"And the prophet goes on to say in succeeding verses that trees shall grow upon the banks of this river, whose fruit shall be for meat and whose leaves shall be for medicine to the people. Both water and land are to be blessed by the healing waters of the river of life. The old mystic thus closes his vision, leaving it to the reader to supply the interpretation; so let us turn over the pages of Sacred history until six centuries have rolled by and read, if we can, the interpretation.

"Out of one of the gates of Jerusalem we see a man led to his death on Calvary. He is carrying his cross on his back and wearing a crown of thorns. He has said: 'Behold I give you the living water and whosoever shall drink thereof shall never thirst' He dies. He rises again. He instructs his few disciples and commissions them to go into all the world and preach his Gospel to every creature, using water as a symbol of his faith and his grace—waters of baptism, the 'outward visible sign of an inward spiritual grace'—and they go, beginning at Jerusalem. The little stream has started. It reaches out to Samaria, to Ethiopia, to Antioch, to Damascus and finally it is carried by Paul to Europe and everywhere it touches humanity, it gives life and joy and peace and happiness to everyone it touches. And so on down through the centuries to the present time the gracious stream of life has run for the healing of the nations. Who can doubt that this is the interpretation of the prophet's vision?

Compares Church to Sea

"There is another lesson I would like to draw from our picture of the Dead Sea, contrasted with the river of life. The sea is dead because it is not moving. Moving, living waters of the Jordan have been flowing into it ever since the fall of Sodom at least, in the days of Abraham and Lot, perhaps for thousands af years back of that time and yet it is dead; it has no life in it, no movement, no energy, it is dead. On the other hand the Nile has been for all the same centuries moving from Central Africa down to its delta in northern Egypt. It raised the corn for Joseph, fed the Pharoahs, sang love-songs to Pharoah's daughter, carried the infant Moses on its bosom, listened to the songs of Cleopatra and Antony and now the governments interested are building great dams far above the one already in use at Assuan to carry its life-giving waters upon millions of acres of rich valley land. It is proving a blessing to all it touches. It is living water.

"I see a dead church. Into it has flowed for years the rich waters of God's grace. Hundreds of souls have joined it; have sunk into its bosom; have slept in its pews, have sung in its choirs, have set in its 'amen corners' have taken its communion, have paid its preachers, perhaps; and yet it is as dead as the Dead Sea. It consumes all, but yields nothing. From it there flow no streams of mercy yielding meat with leaves for healing. Like the Dead Sea kills the sweet waters that flow into it, it freezes, chills and kills the religious impulses of those who come into it. It is dead.

"On the other hand I see a live church. It is moving forward all the time; it is blessing all it touches and it is touching everybody in reach on every side. It is carrying a glad message to the world outside. Though small in numbers perhaps it is busy with its message to the world and the further it goes the greater it becomes until it makes glad the city or community in which it exists; all because it is alive and doing something; such a church may be likened to the great Nile whose waters have lapped the shores of Egypt throughout the ages gone by and produced the corn of the patriarchs of old, sustaining the life of the race. It is carrying the "living water" the Savior had in mind to the thirsty souls of men and that is why it is alive. Perhaps the old prophet had something like this in his mind also as he painted his word-picture of the healing waters of life."

M'CORKLE CASE CALLED TODAY

Hearing Set Monday In Death of Bennett

Trial of Bob McCorkle, 21, charged with negligent homicide in connection with the death of Tom Bennett in an automobile accident here on July 13, will be called in the county court at law Monday morning.

Mr. Bennett died from injuries received when he was struck by a car driven by Mr. McCorkle on Ohio street about 8:30 o'clock in the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett hand in hand, were attempting to cross the street at the time of the accident.

Investigations and measurements made by Wayne Somerville, county attorney, showed Mr. Bennett to have been dragged from 75 to 90 feet, according to a statement from the county attorney's office. McCorkle was released under a $500 bond.

Club Meet to Be Held at Bellevue

BELLEVUE, Texas, July 21. (Spl.)—The 4-H club boys of the county will hold a three-day encampment at the Boy Scout camp grounds on July 25, 26 and 27. The county agent will be assisted in handling the camp by Frank B. Creighton, local Boy Scout executive.

Club boys from Archer, Baylor, Clay, Jack, Knox, Throckmorton, Wichita, Wilbarger and Young counties are invited.

Sheep, pigs and cattle will be studied and lectures will be given during the day. A big program will be held each night around the campfire.

Tents, cots and dishes will be furnished by the Boy Scouts for a nominal fee. Opportunity to swim in a fine hole will be given the boys twice a day.

Suit Against Archer Sheriff Set Monday

Trial of a $10,000 damage suit brought by W. C. Powell against C. E. Goodwin, sheriff of Archer county, involving a false arrest charge, is set for Monday morning in the 89th district court. Powell alleges that the Archer county officer arrested him in Wichita Falls last fall without a warrant and held him in jail overnight. The damages are sought on allegations on injuries to his work and reputation and of suffering of himself and family. Powell is represented by Bob Crain, attorney.

Sparks Expected To Be Approved As Chicago Judge

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 21. (US)—Judge William M. Sparks of Rushville, is expected to be approved by United States Senator James E. Watson and Arthur Robinson tomorrow for recommendation to President Hoover as the successor of Judge A. B. Anderson who is to retire from the bench of the 70th district circuit court of appeals in Chicago.

This is by a strange turn of the political wheel since it was Judge Sparks who sat in the trial of D. C. Stephenson, former head of the Indian klan and an associate of both Watson and Robinson's before his conviction for the murder of Miss Madge Oberholtzer.

It is reliably reported that Stephenson blocked the appointment of Judge Sparks to the federal beneh here when Judge Anderson was named to the appeals bench. Papers found in the famous "black boxes" belonging to Stephenson showed that he had corresponded frequently with Senator Watson concerning political appointments.

Judge Sparks is 57 years of age and has made an excellent record.

Rabbit Breeders To Meet Tuesday Night

Members of the American Rabbit and Cavy Breeders' association of Texas will hold their regular bi-weekly meeting Tuesday night, July 23, at 8 o'clock, at the home of J. H. Stanfil, 1313 Fourteenth street, according to W. L. Smith, corresponding secretary of the organization.

All meetings during the summer will be held at the homes of various members, Mr. Smith said, in order better to acquaint the members with the equipment and methods used by each in the breeding of rabbits.

All persons interested in the production of rabbits for meat and fur are invited to these meetings, Mr. Smith stated.

Music for the meeting Tuesday evening will be furnished by McKinley's orchestra.
