Higher court overturns Bush murder conviction

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday overturned the capital murder conviction of Paul Berry Bush, 28, of Amarillo, who was charged in connection with the July 12, 1980 shooting death of Hemphill County Deputy Sheriff "Corky" Gutherie.

The conviction was overturned due to the fact that testimony concerning the defendant's use of drugs was admitted during the murder trial.

The trial was held in Wichita Falls on a change of venue, and the jurors returned a death penalty against Bush.

"Corky" Gutherie, a familiar figure in Hemphill County, was investigating a late night burglary alarm at Lad's Pharmacy in Canadian when he was gunned down while still in his police vehicle. Lad's Pharmacy is located within blocks of the Hemphill County Sheriff's Department.

Judge Wendell Odom's opinion for the criminal appeals court said the testimony about Bush's drug use was improper because it involved a separate offense.

"Clearly, the overall effect of the repeated references to the drug was to portray (Bush) as a drug addict and criminal generally," Odom said.

"This is precisely the purpose for creating the general rules against the admissibility of extraneous offenses," the judge ruled.

Larry King of Fritch testified that he loaned Bush his car to go to Canadian and burglarize the pharmacy to get Preludin, a prototype of amphetamine, that he injected with a syringe.

"We also noted that the commission of the burglary could not have been proven without injecting the testimony tending to portray Bush as a drug addict," the court concluded in the opinion.

The appeals court ordered a retrial of the Bush case. It will file for a rehearing shortly, but former District Attorney Harold Comer is already working on a motion for a rehearing of the case before the Court of Criminal Appeals.

"However, they don't usually reverse their findings," Comer said today.

"I admit that I was surprised by the court's overturning the murder conviction," Comer added.

"The court overturned the case due to evidence entered as to Bush's drug use. The rule is that generally it is not permissible to show the defendant may have been guilty of other misconduct because there is a danger the jury may misuse that evidence and convict the defendant on that evidence and not for what he is being tried," Comer said.

"There are well recognized exceptions to the extraneous offense rule and the most notable one is the Ras Gestae rule. That rule provides that a jury is entitled to get the whole picture, both events leading up to, at the time or after the offense for which the man is being tried. That is so even though it may cast the defendant in an unfavorable light," Comer explained.

"In this case, the evidence was that on the day before the shooting, the defendant, Bush, was looking for Preludin and was unable to find it. He made a statement to one of his friends, 'I am going to Canadian to knock off that drugstore there and get some preludin.' The state offered the testimony to show why Bush was there," Comer said.

"The fact that it may have shown that Bush was a user of narcotics is beside the point, because for the jury to have the whole picture, they were entitled to know why Bush was there in Canadian," Comer said.

"That is a well known rule of evidence, the Res Gestae," he said.

The next point that Comer will raise in asking for the rehearing before the Court of Criminal Appeals is that the error, if any, was harmless.

"Another well known rule of law is that before the Court of Criminal Appeals can overturn a conviction they must be satisfied that the evidence was not harmless," Comer said.

"In this case, the evidence was uncontroverted that Bush told the principal state witness, Larry King, that he had killed the officer and 'it was like shooting a rabbit' and then Bush took officers to where the gun was," Comer said.

"The court did not raise any questions about the admissibility of that evidence," Comer said.

"Assuming that the evidence of drug use was in error - it was harmless. There is no possiblity that any intelligent jury would convict Bush of drug abuse in light of Bush's confession that he did the actual shooting," Comer said.

On Feb. 7, 1979, Bush was arrested for a drug offense alleged to have occurred on June 5, 1978. He received an eight - year sentence.

The criminal appeals court in October 1980 reversed Bush's conviction in Potter County on that drug charge. The reversal was granted on grounds of "entrapment."

Bush had two previous felony convictions. The first was in Oldham County for burglary in 1972 and in 1978 for a Potter County theft. He was convicted in 1980 on a charge of attempting to obtain a controlled substance with a forged prescription and received an automatic life sentence.

Hemphill County Sheriff C.H. Wright, a longtime friend and co - worker of "Corky" Gutherie, said today that the Court of Criminal Appeals was going on the legalities of the case only.

"No one feels any worse than I do that this overturning has come up. I don't look forward to going through the entire thing again," Wright said.

A WEEKEND IN VERMONT. With five inches of snow still frozen on the ground, Pampans are getting a taste of weather in Vermont, without leaving their own homes. The winter blast is expected to dump up to eight more inches of snow on Pampa by Saturday, when a warming trend is expected to occur.

Up to eight more inches of snow in the forecast for Panhandle

Compiled from staff and Associated Press reports

Light snow fell in the Texas Panhandle early today, prompting the National Weather Service (NWS) to issue a travelers advisory because of snow on the roads.

The rest of the state had cloudy skies and cold temperatures.

But, for the Panhandle, where icy roads and blowing snow have hampered motor vehicle travel since late Monday evening, NWS forecasters had even worse news today.

The weathermen issued a winter storm warning for the Panhandle for tonight and Friday, calling for the possibility of an additional eight inches of snowfall by Friday evening.

The NWS station at Amarillo called for an 80 percent chance of additional snow this evening, tonight and Friday.

Forecasters predicted the afternoon high today and Friday will only be about 12 degrees. They said they expected the temperature to drop to one degree below zero by early Friday morning.

In Pampa the mercury dropped to one degree above zero this morning and with easterly winds of about 13 mph early this morning the wind child factor made it feel like about 30 degrees below zero on exposed skin.

The easterly winds, cloudiness and light snow prevailed over most of the Panhandle this morning and the NWS reported "motorists can expect hazardous driving conditions" to remain. Weathermen said they expected about two inches of new snow to fall today before arrival of the new storm front this afternoon, which is expected to bring heavier snowfall.

Saturday should find a slight warming trend beginning, the weather experts said, with afternoon highs climbing from 20 degrees Saturday afternoon to about 40 degrees Monday.

Overnight lows are expected to increase from about eight degrees Saturday morning to the 20s by Monday, they predicted.

The show must go on!

The show must go on.

That's the word from Choir Director Bill Talley.

Despite the bad weather, Talley said the choral department at Pampa High School has $4,000 invested in costumes and sets for Friday and Saturday's performances of "Babes in Arms," scheduled for 7:30 p.m. each night in M.K. Brown Auditorium, and cannot afford to cancel the production until warmer weather reappears.

The musical comedy by Rodgers and Hart features such well - known melodies as "The Lady is a Tramp," "Johnny One Note," "Where or When," and "My Funny Valentine," sung by local high school vocalists.

Leading roles will be played by concert choir members Jeff Hinkle as Val White, Doretta Bruce as Susie Ward, Elizabeth Fraser as Jennifer Owen, Melissa Mackey as Bunny Byron, Brandi Huff as Terry Thompson, Clif Baker as Gus Field, Brian Welborn as Seymour Fleming, Jim Waddell as Lee Calhoun, Jacquie Reed as Phyllis Owen and Brad Voyles as Steve Edwards, accompanied by 18 PHS band members.

Tickets are $3.50 and may be purchased from any high school choir member or at the door.

Disaster drill a success for city

BY SHEILA ECCLES
Staff Writer

The Civil Defense disaster drill Wednesday "went well," according to coordinator Steve Vaughn, "and helped us pinpoint those few areas that in the event of a real emergency would need some additional work."

The disaster centered around the supposition that a tornado had stricken the city in a 2,000 - foot path across Hobart and McCullough Streets and continued through the southern portion of town demolishing several homes.

The drill was the first of its kind to be conducted in Pampa and centered around the decision - making process by city and county officials, law enforcement, fire department personnel and public utility and business representatives.

"Everyone turned out, and we found that we all could work together in a coordinated effort to save lives and property in time of a disaster," Vaughn said.

"The communications room was very hectic during the drill, but the questions that were important were asked and answered," Vaughn said.

The areas that needed some attention, according to Vaughn, included having more people in the communications room during a disaster to complete all phases of the workload and earlier sounding of the disaster sirens around the city.

"The sirens are now set up to sound if a tornado is within two miles of the city. The main feeders to the sirens are located three miles from the city so mechanically the sirens could actually be put out of order before the tornado warning system is needed," he said.

"This will be changed and sirens will sound if a tornado is sighted within five miles of the city," Vaughn said. "So residents will be hearing the sirens more often, but this decision is for their own protection."

"We discussed the problems of resident evacuation, property security and aid from local towns," Vaughn said.

"We found that everyone necessary to the decision - making process was in the communications center. The chamber of commerce rounded up vehicles and generators, the Emergency Medical Technician Association evacuated the injured, the Pampa police department started search and rescue. The Red Cross and Salvation Army set up immediately in designated shelters for mass feedings. Energas personnel handled all leaking gas lines. Southwestern Public Service personnel worked to reconnect electricity to key points. Southwestern Bell Telephone Company made phone lines available and REACT members and volunteer Ham Operators assisted in providing information," Vaughn said.

Reagan bill offers hope for TEC return

BY LYNN HUNTER
Managing Editor

At least a glimmer of hope is on the horizon for a reappearance of the Texas Employment Commission (TEC) in Pampa.

An Associated Press report Wednesday said the Reagan administration is telling states to keep all unemployment offices open while Congress works on a $2.3 billion measure for unemployment benefits.

The report quotes Assistant Labor Secretary Albert Angrisani as saying, "We instructed them today (Wednesday) not to close any office."

Tagged to that bill is a resolution, offered by Rep. Sidney Yates, D-Ill., which would restore to employment budgets some $210 million in earlier cuts, which resulted in the closing of some 400 employment offices across the nation, including the three in the Texas Panhandle.

While state TEC and Labor Department officials are cautious and not overly optimistic, all admit a chance exists for the reopening of the Pampa office.

Executive Director of Field Services for the TEC Pat Joiner of Austin said the bill pending in the House would restore the TEC back to Oct. 1 funding levels. Joiner said he is the one who will ultimately recommend to the three - man employment commission which offices, if any, would be reopened.

"If that bill passes, we can reinvestigate our circumstances," he said. "If it doesn't pass, then there's no chance at all."

Regarding the bill's chances of passing, Joiner said, "I've been down that yellow brick road so many times. I'm a little bit cynical. I think there is a reason to be somewhat enthusiastic on this thing, but I want to see it in writing first. Promises don't pay the bills."

"We don't know for sure how much it cost us to close down the offices and how much it would cost us to reopen them, and it could well be that the help is a little too little too late. There are just a number of variables in there, despite the urging, that I'm just a little hesitant to move based on that," he said.

"I'd hate to promise those folks anything and not be able to deliver," Joiner said.

"Until, No. 1, I see the bill pass, and No. 2, I see what the Department of Labor does with it, I can't give you any assurances," Joiner said.

"What I can assure you is that if there is any way possible we can keep Pampa and - or Borger and - or Dumas open, if there is any way possible, we will do so," Joiner said.

"It was a hard decision to pull them out," Joiner said.

According to the Associated Press Wednesday, the $2.3 billion Reagan has asked for includes $1.94 billion in advances for state unemployment funds. Assistant Labor Secretary Angrisani said that money was necessary to keep the federal account from being exhausted by mid - March.

The remaining $343 million is for job service personnel and unemployment claims processors. Angrisani said $210 million of that would provide enough money for 24,800 job placement personnel in unemployment offices.

That's the level of personnel called for before Congress passed Reagan's second round of budget cuts last December and agreed to reduce the number of 17,500.

Joiner said what is called "the first round of cuts" was an agency - wide RIF (reduction in force) of some 400 TEC employees throughout the state.

The second round of cuts, Joiner said, was a second employee RIF, in conjunction with the closing of TEC offices, including those in the Panhandle. It is this cut which the $210 million is attempting to replace.

Joiner said the continuing resolution that called for cuts came out Dec. 11.

"We estimated what Texas's proportion of that would be, and we assumed that it would be something in line with the continuing resolution, which was a 12 percent across the board cut. So we scaled our office closings and the December office RIF based on that cut. The Department of Labor didn't give us any actual obligation authority, which is what we operate on, until Jan. 10. At that time, it became clear that they cut us quite a bit more than 12 percent, more like 16 percent, so we had to make up the additional four percent with additional office closings, i.e. the 12 more offices, including Borger," he said.

He said this puts Borger and Pampa in the same boat.

"If the intent of this thing is to restore that level, you can't presume that that will automatically mean that those offices will be reopened. We've suffered some heavy costs in closing them and reopening them, and you just don't know what's going to fall by the wayside," he said.

Joiner said he was familiar with Pampa's unique employment situation — a lack of employees, not a lack of jobs.

"What you have got up there is a circumstance we address with our particular type of system," Joiner said. "We have job orders from all over the state that present themselves to some degree of availability to the Pampa labor market."

Joiner said through the TEC's telecommunications system, "if you need somebody in Pampa, you are able to see who is available for work in Beaumont, Brownsville, Texarkana and El Paso."

"We get you the people you need to work in your area," Joiner said.

"If that Pampa office is reopened, it will be in large part through the efforts of Foster Whaley. He has really made us fully aware of all the circumstances in Pampa and really fought hard to keep that office there. I feel like with the kind of community support he has shown this agency, that ought to be one of our first considerations in reopening that office," Joiner said.

State Representative Foster Whaley said, "What I'd like to see happen was what (Mayor) Ray Thompson suggested (in a late December meeting) — let's shut the federal government down totally in that matter and let us reopen that up if we want to and we could do it with the same tax that we got and have a more elaborate program than before they closed it down. We could save our employers."

"I agree with shutting a lot of these federal programs down. I agree with President Reagan on that, but why don't they make the Texas Employment Commission, or the federal employment commissions, No. 1? And give us back half the money we have been sending up there, and then give us time when we meet in the legislature again in 1983, and we could restore everybody and put them back to work. And have every office we had," Whaley said.

Whaley said the employer's tax levied amounts to $42 for every employee. Texas employers send $250 million in employment taxes to the federal government each year for unemployment benefits and job placement services. Only $90 million returns to the state through the Texas Employment Commission.

"As far as we're concerned in Pampa, we're left without service. Let's excuse these employers up here if we're not served — that's taxation without representation. What they're doing is cutting out the services but retaining the taxes," Whaley said.

"I'm tired of subsidizing them to the tune of $13 or $14 million on the windofall profits tax and then turning right around and subsidizing them on the unemployment tax," Whaley said.

Anti-busing legislation considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is poised to approve stringent anti-busing legislation that critics say could undo school desegregation plans dating back to the 1960s if it became law.

The vote today was expected to be the first of a series of conservative victories in the Senate on social issues delayed last year while Congress worked on President Reagan's economic program.

The others include abortion, school prayer and a federal death penalty. All are likely to be debated in the Senate over the next three or four months.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., led a small band of Senate liberals in successful filibusters that postponed final votes on the busing issue for much of 1981. However, that filibuster finally was broken before Congress recessed last year.

Today's vote was scheduled to act on anti-busing amendments by Sens. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Bennett Johnston, D-La. Both would be attached to the Justice Department's overall authorization bill if approved as expected.

The Johnston amendment, not yet considered by the House, would prohibit courts from ordering the busing of a student more than five miles or 15 minutes from home and, according to him, would apply retroactively. Critics say such an application could disrupt hundreds of existing desegregation plans put in place in the last decade.

The Helms part of the rider, already approved by the House, would prevent the Justice Department from spending money to ask federal judges to use busing as a method of desegregating schools.

Anticipating passage of the amendments, Weicker indicated earlier that he is ready to continue the battle by delaying final passage of the overall legislation with another filibuster.

However, Senate sources said conservatives have the 60 votes they will need to shut off debate and pass the authorization bill in action expected next week.

Landau said the ACLU's biggest fear is passage of different anti-busing legislation likely to be voted on in the Senate Judicary Committee next week.

Poland's top churchmen visit Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The leaders of Poland's powerful Roman Catholic Church met with Pope John Paul II shortly after arriving from Warsaw today for talks on martial law in Poland and the pope's plans to visit his homeland next summer.

The Polish-born pontiff received Archbishop Jozef Glemp, the Polish primate, together with the archbishop of Krakow, Franciszek Macharski, and the archbishop of Wroclaw, Henryk Gulbinowicz.

When a journalist remarked that the pope prays constantly for Poland, Macharski replied, "We pray for the pope and for everyone."

Western diplomatic sources in Warsaw said Glemp was expected to stay in Italy until Feb. 14, but this could not be confirmed.

It was the first visit by Glemp to the pontiff since martial law was declared in Poland Dec. 13 in an attempt to check the reform movement led by the independent Solidarity labor union.

The pope and the Polish hierarchy were staunch supporters of the reform movement, but the hierarchy also sought to mediate between the government and Solidarity.

Since the suspension of the union and the internment of its chief leaders following imposition of martial law, the church has become the sole opposition voice inside Poland. But since more than 90 percent of the 36 million Poles are baptized Catholics and more than 75 percent attend church services regularly, the government has made no attempt to silence the bishops.

Vatican sources say the bishops differ on how militant a stance to take toward the military government, although they all supported a pastoral letter calling for restoration of civil rights and freedoms that was read in Polish churches the past two weekends.

Reagan to propose spending boost for '83

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although President Reagan is holding his request for actual defense spending for next year to about $1 billion more than he predicted last September, he is seeking an extra $13.6 billion in new budget authority for the Pentagon, administration sources say.

The distinction is that most of the extra $13.6 billion in "budget authority" would not actually be spent in fiscal 1983. The Pentagon could, however, let contracts for that amount which would have to be paid for in later years.

The additions would bring the proposed totals for fiscal 1983 to a record $215.9 billion for defense spending and $257.7 billion in budget authority.

Administration sources said the main effort in shaping the new defense budget, which Reagan will send to Congress next Monday, has focused on keeping 1983 spending increases in check because it is spending that directly affects the size of the anticipated federal budget deficit. And the size of the deficit has become one of the administration's major economic problems.

"The administration tried to calibrate the budget's effect on the economy so we focused on spending," said a senior administration official who asked to remain anonymous.

He did not say anything about another factor: the likelihood that the administration is eager to keep the new spending figure close to earlier projections — modest when compared to the jump in budget authority — because the spending figure is the one that draws the most public attention.

Most people outside of government are unaware of budget authority, which permits the Pentagon to make contract commitments which are "spent out" in future years as new ships, planes and other equipment are produced.

Officials said that although the $215.9 billion defense spending request is $1 billion more than the spending total Reagan forecast last September for fiscal 1983, which starts Oct. 1, it really is just a technical increase. They said it represents a shifting of some functions from the Education and Energy Departments to the Defense Department.

The $215.9 billion would be an increase of $34.1 billion over this year's anticipated spending level, as stated by Reagan in September.

The new total of $257.7 billion in budget authority would be $43.6 billion above the expected 1982 level, officials said.

In addition to taking into account inflation factors revised since September, officials said the added budget authority primarily reflects administration decisions to buy an extra, $3.5 billion aircraft carrier, to push ahead with an expanded long-term buildup in U.S. strategic airlift, and a higher rate of the number of aircraft purchases.

The new budget will reflect a continued administration drive toward its stated goal to regain naval superiority by increasing the present fleet of about 450 ships to 600 by the end of the decade.

Tape reportedly shows pilots knew of ice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tape recordings from the Air Florida jet that crashed into the Potomac River last month support theories that ice or snow on the wings made it stall — and strongly suggest the pilots knew of the problem before taking off, according to a report in today's Washington Post.

The cockpit voice tape suggests the pilot and copilot had seen a buildup of ice or snow on the Boeing 737's wings but went ahead with the ill-fated flight anyway, an unidentified source close to the National Transportation Safety Board investigation told the newspaper.

NTSB spokesman Ira Furman and Francis McAdams, head of the NTSB investigation, could not be reached for comment on the report Wednesday night.

According to a preliminary transcript of the tape, pilot Larry Wheaton and copilot Alan Petit spoke to each other repeatedly about the heavy snow falling on Jan. 13 as they prepared to take off, the Post said.

One source told the newspaper that their words suggest they at one point looked out their windows specifically to check for snow or ice on the wings, noted there was some, but took off anyway.

About 30 seconds later, Petit's final words to Wheaton reportedly were, "We're going down, Larry," and Wheaton responded, "I know it."

Army asks UN to verify massacre claim

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's army says it is asking the U.N. Human Rights Commission to verify its claim that leftist guerrillas slaughtered more than 150 peasants in an attack on a northeastern village.

"The communist attackers dedicated themselves to killing, to butchery, to exterminating the population, and they killed children, women and men — even animals," an army spokesman said Wednesday.

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the rebels' weekend raid on Nueva Trinidad, in Morazan Province near the Honduran border, left between 150 and 200 dead — more than half the population.

Reporters who visited the village Tuesday reported finding about a dozen corpses lying in the street.

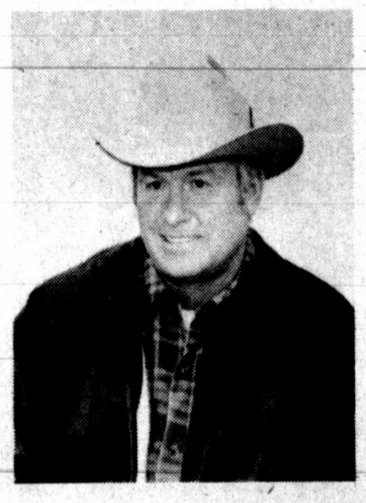

Leftist sources claim the government recently converted Nueva Trinidad into a base for paramilitary groups that cross into neighboring Honduras, round up Salvadoran refugees in camps there and bring them back across the border.

The sources, who have ties to the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, a coalition of guerrilla groups battling the U.S.-backed junta, claim 25 soldiers and members of such paramilitary groups were killed in the attack.

The leftists made no mention of civilian casualties.

The army's claim of a guerrilla massacre followed recent unconfirmed reports that more than 1,000 civilians were massacred by government troops during a recent offensive in Morazan, a guerrilla stronghold.

The earlier reports embarrassed the Reagan administration, which plans to send $26 million in military assistance to El Salvador's ruling junta this year under the Foreign Aid Act. The act requires the administration to certify that progress on human rights is being made in the little Central American nation, and President Reagan did this last week despite the charges of an army massacre.

Ronnie Rice seeks commissioner post

Ronnie Rice, has recently announced his candidacy for the post of Commissioner Precinct 2 subject to the Democratic Primary.

Rice is currently serving as commissioner of Precinct 2 and has aided in decisions affecting the sale of Highland General Hospital and the construction of the privately owned Coronado Community Hospital. He has worked to facilitate industrial growth and has successfully worked to lower the Gray County tax rate $.05.

Rice graduated from Lefors High School and from Texas Tech with a B.A. in Industrial Management.

"I would like the opportunity to serve the people of Gray County and Precinct 2 for another four years. I have enjoyed working with the current court members and I feel proud of the accomplishments of the court over the past five years," Rice said.

Rice lives three miles south of Pampa with his wife Joy and four children. Tracy, a junior at Austin College; Ron attending Oklahoma State Tech; Darin and Rustin, both at Pampa High School. Mrs. Rice teaches fourth grade at Austin Elementary School.

Lemons scholarship fund is established

A memorial scholarship fund has been started in memory of Wayne Lemons by the Pampa Talented and Gifted Association.

Lemons was co-chairman and one of the founders of this group of parents of gifted, talented students.

Lemons was one of two men who died earlier this week in the crash of a light aircraft near Perry Lefors Airport.

Donations to the fund may be made at Citizen's Bank and Trust Company.

Dozier is glad to be home

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proclaiming "it's doggone good to be home," Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier is commemorating one week of freedom from Red Brigade terrorists with a prayer breakfast as President Reagan's guest and then an Oval Office meeting.

Before beginning a leave of absence, Dozier also will brief Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and hold a press conference at the Pentagon.

That will be his last official duty for a while.

"He'd like to be sort of left to his own devices to rest and catch up and relax a bit," said Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto.

Dozier, who was held captive for 42 days, was welcomed home Wednesday at Andrews Air Force Base by Vice President George Bush.

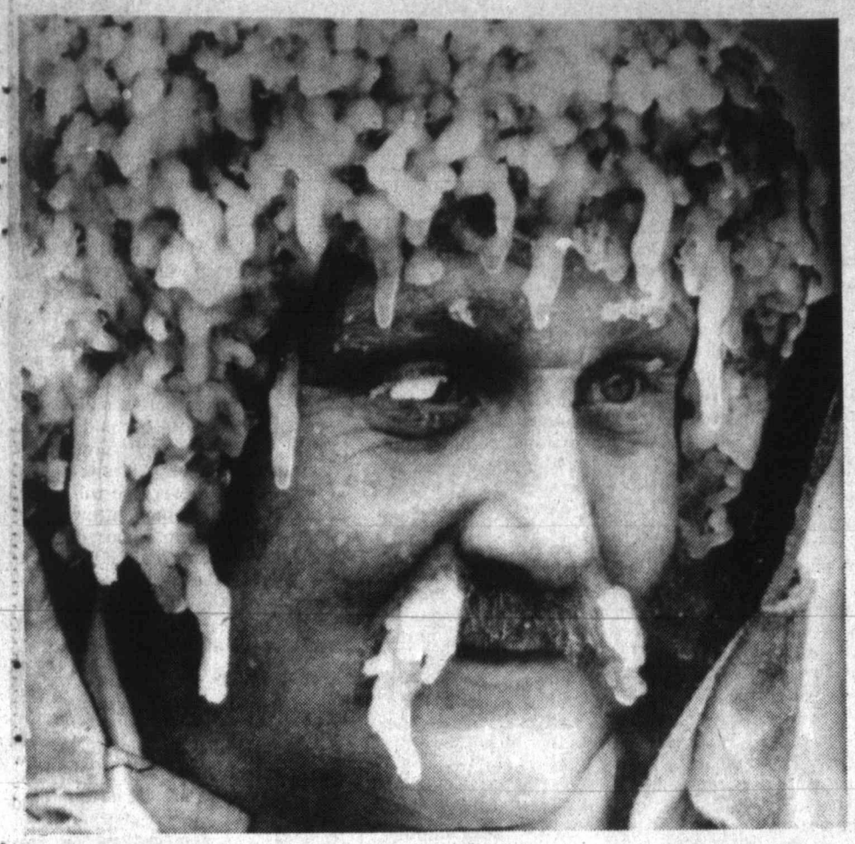

"I don't think there are any ribbons for valor in the face of kidnapping, but if there were one, someone would be pinning it on him today," said Bush.

Dozier told his welcomers that he wanted to thank everyone for their prayers and "those of us who were the object of your prayers could feel what was coming across."

The general said he experienced "excruciating boredom" during his captivity and was forced to wear earphones and listen to hard rock music.

Dozier's return to the United States was made more dramatic when the pilot of the Air Force C-141 Starlifter that brought him home from Italy aborted his first landing attempt.

Lt. Col. Robert Thatcher, a spokesman at Andrews Air Force base, said the pilot changed his mind about the first landing because he wasn't lined up on the runway where he wanted to be. The second landing went smoothly.

McAllen officer says it was a hard night

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Isidro Ybanez Jr. said it had been a long, difficult day on the McAllen police force when another officer brought in a prisoner to be booked on a drunkenness charge.

Ybanez, 34, said he lost control in the early morning hours of May 20, 1979, when he threw Joseph Allen Smith to the floor at the station.

"The man was drunk. It was a long hard night. I did lose my temper and I used more force than the situation demanded." Ybanez said Wednesday in pleading guilty to a misdemeanor civil rights charge.

In a plea bargain with federal prosecutors, Ybanez changed his plea from innocent in exchange for a recommended suspended 30-day jail term and probation.

Ybanez, who was fired from the police force in 1980, appeared before U.S. Magistrate William Mallet.

Ross Connealy, a Justice Department lawyer from Washington, said the plea agreement includes a recommended five years probation, three of which would be supervised, and a stipulation that Ybanez not work in law enforcement during that time.

Mallet set sentencing for March 5. The maximum punishment is one year in prison and a $1,000 fine. Mallet is not bound by the plea bargain but said he would let Ybanez withdraw his guilty plea if he rejected the recommended sentence.

The former officer currently works in a sporting goods store.

Ybanez earlier had pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charge and was scheduled to be tried next week.

"It's not really over for Mr. Ybanez until after the sentencing," defense lawyer Preston Henrichson said. Ybanez declined comment on the proceeding.

He is one of five former McAllen officers indicted in November in connection with three separate incidents of alleged police brutality.

Former Lt. Robert Ramos pleaded guilty last month in an agreement with prosecutors after a federal district court jury deadlocked on a verdict. Government lawyers have recommended five years unsupervised probation for Ramos.

The three other former policemen — Tom Carter, Jaime Contreras and Alfredo Saldana — go on trial next week before Mallet. Evidence in their case will include a videotape made on a police station monitor of an arrest.

The three men are accused of using excessive force on a prisoner being processed at the booking desk.

Bubonic plague kills Ector County man

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — The form of bubonic plague that killed a 23-year-old Ector County man Jan. 10 is not contagious person-to-person, says acting county health director Robert Rowntree.

The man, whose name was not released, is believed to have contracted the disease from a flea bite while rabbit hunting in northern Ector County in December, Dr. Rowntree said.

"This is the first confirmed case in Texas since 1953," Rowntree said.

Dr. Tom Betts of the state health department in Austin said more than a dozen cases of the disease were reported in New Mexico in 1980 but "it's been a considerable amount of time" since a previous bubonic plague case was confirmed as having originated in Texas.

The state health department health department laboratory in Austin confirmed Tuesday that the Ector County man died of bubonic plague, Rowntree said.

Border Patrol gets tough

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — On a couple of occasions this month, illegal aliens crossing into El Paso from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, have found the banks of the Rio Grande crawling with Border Patrol agents.

"We set it up in a grid pattern," said acting chief agent Jack Richardson. "We may let that alien get away from the man on the river, then he's pursued by a second one and then the third one catches him. That boy's got his tongue hanging out from running. By that time, he wants to get in the car and go back to Mexico."

Richardson is the architect of the three-layer crackdown plan, which he compares to the alignment of a defensive squad in a football game.

"Set up like this, we can effectively control the border for eight hours," he said.

The predawn river raids and associated raids at businesses led to 12,360 arrests of illegal aliens in January, Richardson said, adding that the number was a 25 percent increase over the amount arrested in December.

The system began after Richardson took over as acting chief Jan. 4. Richardson is the chief agent in Del Rio, but is working in El Paso until a new chief agent is selected.

Richardson said that when he arrived in El Paso, too much time was being devoted to paperwork and not enough time was spent catching illegal aliens. But he's changed all that.

For the river raids, every agent with arrest capability — even those who normally work in the office — were sent to the riverbanks to round up the aliens as they crossed into the United States.

"That's based on two philosophies," said Richardson, 52, who participates in the raids himself. "When I go to the river, everybody goes to the river. Secondly ... we're simply allowing people do their stated mission by law.

"My first duty is to keep them from coming in," he added. "By golly, we'll do that job."

Most of the aliens arrested are simply returned to Mexico and the attempt to cross is put on their record. More serious cases — repeat offenders or people who are aiding aliens to cross — are prosecuted, he said.

Richardson said the secret has been to streamline the processing of the aliens so that the officers get back to the river to catch more.

"I know when you catch them, you've got to clean them," Richardson said in a tongue-in-cheek reference to fishing. "But while you're cleaning them, you ain't catching them."

Asked if it does any good to catch the aliens only to return them to Mexico, Richardson said, "I don't know. But I know what the result is if you don't grab them.

"My goal is to get an acceptable level of control," he said. "I'm worried about those that penetrate Border Patrol operations and go into the interior of the United States. It costs the United States money to return them to the country whence they came. Piles of money. It's cheaper to turn them back at the river."

Richardson said the raids are the first step of a "one-two punch" he has planned for the border around El Paso. He won't say what the second punch is, but he says with a twinkle in his eye that it's coming soon.

Clements is stuck with White

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White says he won't authorize Gov. Bill Clements to use state money to hire a lawyer to replace White in a redistricting case.

The governor wants an outside lawyer to represent him in the legislative redistricting suit. Clements, a defendant in the case, says White is not representing his interests.

However, White on Wednesday rejected Clements' request.

"There are not two interests involved," said White. "This is not a Mark White issue or Bill Clements issue. Only one interest is being served and that is the interest of the state of Texas."

Clements wanted White to tell a three-judge federal panel in Dallas to draw the lines. However, one of White's assistants asked the court to approve the same plans rejected by the U.S. Justice Department.

The judges have decided they will draw lines to be used for the 1982 elections. The 1983 Texas Legislature then will take another shot at drawing the maps.

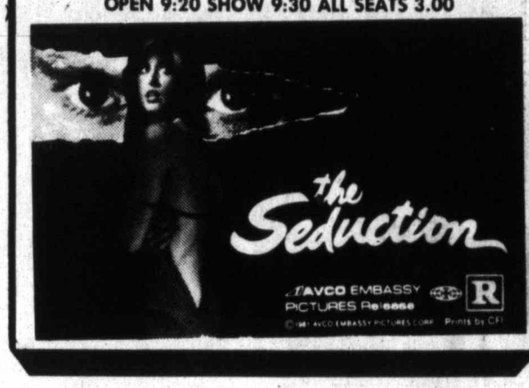

White denied Clements' charge that the attorney general had a conflict of interests because White was on the all-Democratic Legislative Redistricting Board that drew the rejected lines.

Exposing special interests

By CHARLES D. VAN EATON

Bill Moyers recently did a little economic commentary for CBS News. His central purpose in the commentary was to analyze the implications of the current recession for Reagan's program. There was nothing particularly profound about his economic analysis — in fact some of his economic observations were absolutely incorrect — but his final statement deserves consideration. "The problem," Moyers siad, "is not weakness in the economy, but weakness in politics."

I have no idea what Mr. Moyers had in mind when he talked about "weakness in politics." He is alleged to be the individual who, more than anyone else, persuaded President Lyndon Johnson that the federal government could eliminate poverty if it spent enough money. I don't know if he means by "weakness in politics" that our current problems are the result of too much budget cutting. Whatever he thinks today, his feeling that something is wrong in politics is one I share. The facts point only in that direction.

Just before he left office last January, President Carter presented his last budget to Congress. (It is this budget which was the subject of debate and revision last summer). Carter offered some somber analysis of recent federal spending trends. He noted a need to curtail the great "entitlement" programs — Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, food stamps, unemployment compensation, and other welfare programs — all of which had been the favorite political instruments of his own party. He argued that these programs had been the major cause of runaway government spending.

In a statement which even President Reagan couldn't match, Carter said: "Although growth in these programs in which spending is relatively uncontrollable may have been desirable during the past three decades, we have reached a point where uncontrollable spending threatens the effectiveness of the budget as an instrument of national economic policy."

In his four years in office Carter did virtually nothing to accomplish the goals he indicated needed to be accomplished in his final budget message. Why? Because while in office he played the political game of making whatever concession needed to be made to win passage of first one bill, and then another, etc. For fear of losing on this bill or that bill he ended up losing on the one issue which was most important: providing the leadership necessary to remove government as a source of instability in the economy.

As he gets ready to present the first budget for which his administration is totally responsible, President Reagan is about to make the same mistake. For fear of losing on some bills, Reagan may lose everything.

In his infamous Atlantic interview, OMB Director David Stockman observed that government had lost control over the budget because it lost the ability to judge claims against the federal purse. His observation is so true that it hardly merits discussion. But whose fault is it? I suggest that it has been the fault of the president of the United States — whoever he was or is.

A member of the House or Senate lives in a very narrow world. At most, a senator can expect four years of political independence until he has to return to serve the narrow aims of the most vocal elements in his home state. A member of the House, with only a two - year term, has no period of rest — he has to bend to his most powerful constituents every moment. By contrast, a president is, theoretically, able to stand above such forces. The fact that most presidents have allowed themselves to wallow in the mire of pressure politics is the heart of the problem.

President Reagan wants his budget considered as a whole rather than line - by - line. He and his aides think that such an approach will allow them to escape the powers of special - interest groups and their successes in 1981 bolster them. But eventually we must recognize what those federal programs are and whom they are really helping.

Reagan has got to lay the budget open and force each group to prove that unless its program continues the world is going to come to an end (so to speak!). If Reagan will force these groups to expose their true interests for all to see at least everyone will know, for perhaps the first time, just who it is that's stealing them blind. Even if Reagan loses a few here and there, the weak link in the system — special interest politics — will be exposed.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Feb. 4, the 35th day of 1982. There are 330 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 4, 1783, hostilities ended in the Revolutionary War between the United States and Britain.

On this date:

In 1938, in Nazi Germany Adolf Hitler assumed the office of war minister and named Joachim von Ribbentrop foreign minister.

In 1964, China charged that the Soviet Union seeks world domination through a policy of collaboration with the United States.

In 1977, U.S. intelligence officials said the United States and the Soviet Union were attempting to develop high-energy beams that could destroy nuclear missiles in flight.

And in 1979, Iran's Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar said he would arrest Ayatollah Khomeini if the Moslem Provisional Government tried to take over the country.

Ten years ago, British troops sealed all approaches to Newry in Northern Ireland and searched visitors for weapons prior to a civil rights march planned by Roman Catholics.

Five years ago, two elevated trains crashed in Chicago, killing eleven people and injuring more than 150 others.

One year ago, talks broke down between Poland's government and leaders of a strike in the southern province of Bielsko-Biala.

Today's birthdays: Feminist leader Betty Friedan is 61. Actress Ida Lupino is 64.

Thought For Today: History is, indeed, little more than the register of the crimes, follies and misfortunes of mankind. — Edward Gibbon, English historian (1737-1794).

Poverty lobby says 'no' to reductions

Ever since President Reagan announced his proposed budget cuts last February, the doomsayers have been proclaiming calamity for the nation's poor.

Almost daily accounts in the media have detailed how millions of underprivileged are being lacerated by a fearless administration, which is made up, we are often reminded, mostly of millionaires. Numerous interviews with poor persons have reflected awful hardships to come, even starvation.

The time has come to leaven these fears with some facts.

First, the American people should realize that the multi - billion - dollar federal assistance programs have generated a powerful lobby to resist any and all reductions. The Food Research and Action Center (FRAC), the National Anti - Hunger Coalition, and six other national groups lobby for food stamps. Another potent lobby, a Low - Income Houston Coalition of church, labor, civil rights, and tenant groups pushes for public housing; the National Gray Panthers for Medicaid, and so on down a long list of activists for the poor.

Poverty programs have developed a powerful, subterranean politics of their own. The General Accounting Office last year charged FRAC had illegally used government money to lobby against a federal "workfare" project. In March, the government - funded Community Services Administration (CSA) was found to have been involved in a massive mailing of fliers declaring "Reagan Says 'No' to Human Needs . . ." and urging citizens to lobby legislators against the administration's proposed budget cuts.

And the politics of poverty have scattered federal goodies year after year over so many millions of recipients that any sort of discipline has become politically unpalatable. The Census Bureau calculated that 27.2 million households — one third of all U.S. households — receives at least one federal in - kind benefit. Federal spending in 1980 for food stamps, school lunches, public housing and medical care for the poor was $45.3 billion, nearly three times the $17.3 billion spent on cash transfer programs for the poor.

Actually, millions of Americans receiving federal assistance are in the middle - class category and not at the poverty level. The Census Bureau reports that almost 40 percent of food stamp recipients had incomes exceeding the government's poverty level. More than 50 percent of those receiving subsidies under Medicaid, houseing and school lunch programs were above the federal poverty level as were more than 80 percent of those in the Medicare program. The Project on Food Assistance and Poverty estimated that 85 percent of their recipients have income above the poverty level. Nevertheless, the subsidy programs have kept on expanding along with their costs.

The truly needy, it is worth remembering, are not to be found in one out of every three U.S. households. In his book, Welfare, Martin C. Anderson, President Reagan's chief domestic adviser, argues that the last 20 years have "virtually eliminated poverty in the United States." And Moton Paglin, Portland State University economist and authority on the subject has concluded that only three percent of the population are poor, about eight million persons. To be sure, these low figures are vigorously contested in some quarters, but they suggest the case for welfare reform is even stronger than the administration had been arguing.

During one press conference, the president once more sought to calm the spreading alarm about hurting the poor. He promised that "nothing will happen" to those who truly require federal assistance. Almost in the same breath he made clear his broader goal of picking up the welfare slack with 13 million new

Guide Congress in November

It's worse than we thought.

When we observed last month on the goodies the members of Congess handed out to themselves just before the Christmas vacation, little did we know how generous they had been.

Now the Internal Revenue Service has issued regulations, in accordance with the will of the Congress. Together with standard deductions available to everyone, the new rules virtually will eliminate income taxes on congressional salaries.

Isn't that nice? The congressmen won't have to pay any income taxes at all on their $60,662.50 salaries.

The IRS issued new regulations without a customary period for public comment, because "there is a need for immediate guidance."

Yes, there is a need for guidance, but it won't be immediate. Taxpayers can make their comments in November in the voting booth

Local calls are cheaper than you think

By ART BUCHWALD

No one knows what is going to happen when the AT & T breaks up, according to the recent settlement they made with the government.

"Ma Bell" will be permitted to keep its long - distance service, its laboratories, and go into all sorts of new electronic communications. But it has agreed to sell off the local telephone companies it owned, which service communities.

According to the people who should know, this could increase the cost of local telephone calls tremendously because AT & T subsidized this service, while it profited from long - distance.

This means a whole new advertising campaign for local telephone companies, to encourage people to use the phone.

The TV commercials might go something like this:

Camera showing taxi driver. Voiceover.

"Do you realize that you can now call your local delicatessen after 11 o'clock at night for only $3.95?"

Taxi driver. "You got to be kidding. Only $3.95?"

"That's right. For $3.95 you can call anywhere in the city after 11 o'clock, and all day Sunday."

Shot of woman in supermarket. "When was the last time you spoke to your child when she was sleeping over at a friend's house?"

"I never call her because it's too expensive."

"What would you say if I told you that if you dial direct you could talk to her for three minutes for $2.75 after midnight?"

"I'd say you were pulling my leg."

"I'm not pulling your leg. The B & S Telephone Co. will now let you call anyone within a 10 - mile radius after midnight for $2.75 for three minutes, and only $1.20 for every added minute. Surely there is someone in your town who would love to hear from you."

Shot of conference room in office. Stocky banker - type man walks in and says to people sitting around the table:

"Where's Slocum?"

"He went over to see Ronstetter on K Street about the merger deal."

"K Street, that's three blocks away."

Slocum walks in and everyone looks at him sternly.

Banker - type says, "Slocum, haven't you heard of a local telephone call? For just $6.95 you could have spoken to Ronstetter on the phone."

"Gosh, sir, I never thought of it."

Banker smiles. "That's why you're not going anywhere in the firm. A local telephone call is the only way to do business. Isn't that right, gang?"

Everyone at the table all together, "RIGHT CHIEF."

Shot of grandmotherly type talking into the phone. Grandfatherly type comes into room. "Who are you talking to, mother?"

"Hilda, next door. She seemed so happy to hear my voice."

Voiceover, "You don't need a good reason to call someone locally any more. Just pick up the phone and suprise them. You'd be amazed at how little it costs compared to hiring a Cadillac limousine. Make someone in your neighborhod happy today by saying, 'Hello.'"

Shot of attractive mother in kitchen baking pies. Phone rings and mother answers. Operator's voice can be heard, "We have a collect call from the Giant Food Market for anyone from Connie Marks."

Mother says, "I'll take it. Connie, is there anything wrong?"

"Mom, they're out of heavy sweet cream. Do you want me to buy light cream instead?"

"I'll make do. But it was very smart of you to call collect. By the way, don't forget the cottage cheese."

"Sure, mom. It's on my list."

Housing costs are crippling some budgets

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — How bad is the housing situation? In some regions, people now spend 40 percent of their income on home mortgages, real estate taxes and hazard insurance. Remember when it used to be 25?

As recently as five years ago, bankers said one-quarter of income was the upper limit in budgeting for housing costs. Most people paid far less than that, generally well under 20 percent.

In 1976 homebuyers spent 18.4 percent of income for mortgages, taxes and insurance on conventionally financed homes, according to Advance Mortgage Corp., one of the nation's largest home mortgage bankers.

In the latter half of 1981 it put the percentage at 32.1 percent, the result of the average home price having risen to $78,200 from $44,330, the mortgage to 15.14 percent from 8.87, and annual payments to $9,600 from $3,400, while household income rose only to $29,900 from $18,500.

Most people still consider $11,400 a fair pay raise over a five-year period, but it was no match for rising mortgage interest and prices.

San Diego homebuyers in 1976 spent 24.2 percent of income on housing. But that, says Robert J. Mylod, president of Advance Mortgage, was low in comparison to what ensued. Three years later the percentage had risen to 34.6. By 1981 it was 42.2, the nation's highest. San Diego, says Mylod, is "the most psychogically depressed housing market."

The San Francisco-Oakland-San Jose market was slightly better, with 40.7 pecent of income going for home payments. If it weren't for unusually big incomes — an average household income of $39,500 — the percentage might have looked even worse. Prices averaged $130,800, compared with $59,200 in 1976. Buyers in 1976 paid $4,600 on mortgages, taxes, insurance. Buyers last year spent $15,500.

In Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Columbus, Dallas, Los Angeles, Miami, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, New York, Phoenix, Portland, Ore., St. Louis, Seattle, Tampa and Washington the income percentages were 30 or more.

Of all the major markets surveyed, only Chicago, Cleveland, Denver, Detroit, Houston, Indianpolis, Kansas City, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh remained under 30 percent of income for housing, and some of these percentages were depressed because of poor economies.

Mylod found Denver and Houston to be exceptions to the general trend. Since 1979, the percent of income needed by Denver homebuyers has steadily fallen, from 25.4 percent, to 24.8 in 1980 to 23.9 in 1981.

Oilfield workers submit to searches for drugs

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Oilfield companies are beginning to require on-the-site body and personal property searches of their workers because of the use of alcohol and drugs on the job.

"The problem may not be new, but the concern is only two or three years old," said Charles Booker, author of a drilling magazine article concerning drug and alcohol use in the oilfields.

In the past two years, drilling contractors and other oilfield employers have started requiring their workers to submit to impromptu body and personal property searches. A 1980 federal court ruling allowed that such searches were legal, as long as employees were forewarned.

Booker says government statistics indicate that 42 percent of all oilfield workers smoke or have smoked marijuana. The use of hard drugs by oilfield workers, however, is proportional to hard drug use by the population at large, he added.

"The recent explosion of drilling activity has brought new people into the industry who weren't in it before," Booker said. "A lot of them are younger people with 1960s values — including drugs."

Amoco Production Co., posts a memo that defines the type of "contraband material" — including drugs, weapons and alcohol — outlawed on company property.

The memo states that any employee "who refuses to submit to a search or is found in possession of any such illegal or unauthorized items" will be disciplined and possibly fired.

Amoco officials said inspections can occur at any time, although it requires the written consent of the person being searched. If a worker refuses to cooperate, he is asked to leave company property, officials say.

A.L. Mitchell, director of corporate security for Tom Brown Inc. of Midland, said the industry first noticed the alcohol and drug use problem on offshore rigs.

Mitchell says oilfield companies now realize the problem has moved to land-based drilling operations as well.

Mitchell's company began posting notices last spring similar to the Amoco memos and embarked on a drug education program for field and middle level supervisors.

Mitchell said.

"We're telling our employees up front that certain rules apply ... to provide safe working conditions," he said. "We will not search anyone who does not agree to be searched. But those who do not agree will be asked to leave," he said.

On strike over the 'comparable worth' issue

By STEVE WILSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — There is an eerie silence in the hallways at San Jose, Good Samaritan, O'Connor and Alexian Brothers hospitals. More than half the beds are empty, furniture is stacked for cleaning and the bustle of nurses, doctors, patients and visitors has vanished.

Some 1,300 registered nurses, members of the California Nurses Association, are on strike for higher wages. But more than that, they want pay comparable to equally trained professionals in male-dominated professions.

They say, for example, that hospital pharmacists, mostly men, receive $31,800 a year, while full-time registered nurses, mostly women, earned $22,700 to $24,300, depending on experience.

"This is an issue that goes far beyond four employers in San Jose," said Robert Brueckner, San Jose Hospital administrator. "What is the comparable worth of different jobs? Potentially, it's a very significant question that needs to be answered by society."

The "comparable worth" concept was first tested in this city, the nation's 17th largest, last summer, when city workers, demanding sexual equality in wages, walked out.

They returned to work after the city offered $1.5 million toward reducing wage disparities, as well as a 15.5 percent general pay increase worth $3.5 million.

At that time, Mayor Janet Gray Hayes hailed it as "a first giant step toward fairness in the workplace for women."

A nurses' victory would be a big step toward recognition of their increasing professionalism and could alter their relationship with doctors and other hospital employees.

"There are about 15,000 CNA nurses under contract in hospitals around California," said CNA vice-president Dr. Lorraine Hultquist. "Certainly what happens here in San Jose is being carefully watched throughout the state and probably around the country."

The strike by the nurses is a bid for more money — about 37 percent more over 18 months. The hospitals are offering the nurses about 21 percent more over a three-year period.

There's another issue, not spelled out in the strike demands, which bothers some nurses.

"Hospitals are here to give patient care and it's the nurses who give 95 percent of that care," said Florence Gallup, a registered nurse for 23 years. "Neither the doctors nor the hospital administrators fully appreciate the importance of nurses and that has to change."

Mrs. Gallup said that with the increased specialization of doctors and the growth of medical knowledge, nurses have had to assume more responsibility. California nurses are required to take 30 credits of continuing education every two years to keep up with medical advances.

"As an assistant head nurse, I'm in charge of a 10-bed unit that includes critical patients," Mrs. Gallup said. "When I take patients, I am responsible for them for perhaps eight hours."

While many of her responsibilities involve medical knowledge, "I do many things I shouldn't have to do," she said, "like mopping floors, changing beds, emptying laundry, moving equipment, running lab tests, going to the pharmacy, even cleaning toilets because there aren't always enough housekeepers or the system isn't working."

Mrs. Gallup and other CNA members contend that nurses have traditionally been underpaid because they were considered part-time or secondary wage earners. Many nurses now are full-time professionals with four or five years of higher education and nearly half provide the primary or sole support for their families.

Education benefits up for veterans

WACO — Recent legislation now provides additional educational benefits for certain Vietnam veterans.

The Veterans' Health Care, Training and Small Business Loan Act of 1981 extends by an additional two years — through Dec. 31, 1983 — the opportunity for many veterans to complete certain vocational, apprenticeship, on - the - job training or secondary schooling.

To be eligible for the new program, the veteran's delimiting time, normally within 10 years from separation from active military duty, must have run out by last Jan. 1.

Key limitations on the program noted:

—To receive benefits for secondary training beyond his or her limiting date, the veteran must not have a high school diploma or its equivalent.

—To receive benefits for vocational, apprenticeship or other on - the - job training beyond his or her delimiting date, the veteran must be in need of training to achieve a suitable occupational or vocational objective because he or she is unskilled or unemployed and unskilled.

—Training with a vocational objective must be residential and in non - college - degree courses.

Interested Vietnam - era veterans (Aug. 5, 1965 through May 7, 1975) should telephone any VA office toll free, or any veterans' service organization.

Wheat prices should rebound

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department analysts expect wheat prices to rebound slightly during the coming winter and spring months but remain well below year-ago levels.

They say, however, that much will depend on producer participation in the government's program to reduce the 1982 wheat crop — a plan some farm leaders have called "too little, too late" — and on the harvests in other wheat-producing nations.

During the first five months of the current wheat marketing year, which runs from June through May, the Agriculture Department said the national average price for wheat was $3.66 a bushel, despite record-setting demand for U.S. wheat.

That was a result of the record 1981 American wheat crop bolstered by a larger than expected crop in the Southern Hemisphere.

"In coming months, the export pace, the condition of (1982) winter wheat as it comes out of dormancy and the crop outlook for other major producers in the Northern Hemisphere will affect prices," the analysts said Tuesday in their quarterly Wheat Outlook and Situation Summary.

"Currently, these factors indicate that the average U.S. farm price for 1981-1982 will likely be about 20 cents a bushel below last season's $3.91," the summary said.

The $3.66-a-bushel average price from June through October triggered about $400 million in direct federal payments to wheat farmers because of the depressed market.

In an effort to bolster prices, Agriculture Secretary John Block announced last Friday that wheat farmers must reduce their 1982 acreage by 15 percent to remain qualified for government price supports and other benefits.

But farmers planted 66 million acres of winter wheat last fall before Block's formal announcement, the largest wheat acreage in history. Early estimates put the 1982 crop at a record 2.13 billion bushels. Winter wheat makes up 75 percent of overall U.S. wheat production.

"The final outcome of the harvest rests on the weather and growers' participation in the government's 15-percent reduced-acreage program," the analysts said. "Spring wheat growers haven't been surveyed yet, but the lowest prices in three years and prospects for burdensome year-end stocks will heavily influence producers' decisions to comply with acreage reduction requirements."

Leaders of a number of major farm organizations say there are not sufficient incentives in the acreage reduction program to convince producers to participate.

The summary said that demand for U.S. wheat between June and December hit a record 1.6 billion bushels, spurred by more than 1 billion bushels in exports.

But it said that with demand during the remainder of the marketing year expected to run at only 1.1 billion more, U.S. wheat stocks next June will probably reach more than 1.06 billion bushels, exceeding a billion bushels for the first time in four years.

Because of low prices, nearly 700 million bushels will be committed to the government's long-term reserve loan program or actually owned by the government, the summary said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Snow cover, adequate moisture and good fall wheat growth late last year cut wind erosion of soil in the Great Plains by nearly two-thirds from a year earlier, the Agriculture Department reports.

Norman Berg, chief of the department's Soil Conservation Service, said the 10-state Plains region reported less than 391,000 acres damaged by wind in November and December compared to more than 1.14 million acres during the end of 1980.

Wind did destroy crops or cover on more than 33,000 acres of land that was not directly damaged, Berg said.

However, four states reported greater erosion damage in the last two months of 1981 than a year earlier.

Dear Abby

Reader is partial to full text of poem

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently I had the sad task of correctly identifying a beautiful passage for inclusion in the eulogy for a young neighbor who died suddenly. I was, therefore, pleased but left unsatisfied to see a pale facsimile of it submitted by a Michigan reader and run in your column.

Your applied title of "Perspective" was good, but not as apt as the real one, "A Parable of Immortality." Further, the author's name is not Henry Scott Holland, but Henry Van Dyke, a famous American preacher, poet and philosopher — and the full text, while still brief, deserves to be printed. I enclose a copy for your use.

WILLIAM D. SANTORO, M.D.

"I am standing upon the seashore. A ship at my side spreads her white sails to the morning breeze and starts for the blue ocean. She is an object of beauty and strength and I stand and watch until at last she hangs like a speck of white cloud just where the sea and sky come down to mingle with each other. Then someone at my side says, 'There she goes!'

"Gone where? Gone from my sight . . . that is all. She is just as large in mast and hull and spar as she was when she left my side and just as able to bear her load of living freight to the place of destination. Her diminished size is in me, not in her. And just at the moment when someone at my side says, 'There she goes!' there are other eyes watching her coming and other voices ready to take up the glad shout, 'There she comes!' "

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Should a mother tell her daughter she is loud, and if so, how?

My daughter is truly a lovely person, and I am so proud of her for many reasons, but when she is in a group of people she tends to get loud and strident; she talks constantly and laughs raucously. These are not easy things to say to one's daughter. However, she's 35 years old, and I'm sure these are qualities that cause men to shy away from her. She is a beautiful girl, kind, happy and intelligent.

Can you suggest a way to handle this?

STYMIED MOM

DEAR MOM: Be as gentle and diplomatic as possible. First let your daughter know that you think she is "truly lovely, beautiful, kind and intelligent." Then suggest that at times her enthusiasm causes her to come on a little too strong, so if she could try to tone down a few decibels, she would be even more attractive.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: When signing cards, letters, invitations, etc., whose name appears first, my husband's or mine? We have been arguing about this for some time.

Also, where can I buy a breast pump?

RUTHIE IN ERIE

DEAR RUTHIE: If you write the card, letter, invitation, etc., your name appears first. If your husband does the writing, his name appears first.

You can purchase a breast pump at your local drugstore.

* * *

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Dr. Lamb

Why would liver enlarge?

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 65 years of age and recently developed an enlarged liver. I am a non-smoker and was a very moderate drinker until learning of this condition — perhaps one or two social drinks per month for the past 25 years. Prior to age 40 I hardly touched the stuff.

My doctor wanted to blame the condition on excess drinking and tells me there is nothing that can be done except to discontinue the use of alcohol. Well, I know people who spill more in a week than I drank in a year. Can you tell me what other things cause the liver to enlarge and what can be done about it? It appears to have enlarged more since leaving the hospital.

DEAR READER — The list of things that can cause your liver to enlarge is rather long. It can simply be infiltrated with fat. This can be a complication of alcohol and poor diets. It can be infiltrated with amyloid, a starchy material. It can be dilated from too much blood in it like a sponge soaks up blood. This happens in some forms of heart failure. It can be enlarged from a tumor of the liver, inflammation, cirrhosis (scarring) of the liver or even an excess storage of iron. Clearly what should be done about it, if anything, depends upon what is causing it. A lot of people have a slight enlargement of the liver which is of no consequence and there is nothing to do about it.

Cirrhosis of the liver can occur in people who do not drink alcohol. It can follow liver damage from other toxins, from a virus infection (hepatitis) and nutritional problems.

If your liver is really still enlarging it is important for you to see your doctor again. He can do a biopsy and see exactly what is wrong with your liver. Unless there is a definite diagnosis made there is not much one can or should do simply for an enlarged liver. Of course you are wise to avoid alcohol at all as it is toxic to the liver, even if you eat well. You should stay on a balanced diet.

NATURE'S OWN healer, the juice of the aloe vera plant, now comes in a burn relief cream, available in drug stores, to take on resort trips for aid in healing sunburn.

Relief from the sun

NEW YORK (NEA) — The attempt to get a quick tan at a resort often results in nothing but painful sunburn. Tropical sun is much fiercer than summer sun in more northerly climates.

Unless you're olive-skinned, a week or two at a resort isn't going to give you a tan. Take along suntan protectors with a high number factor, as shown on the package. Even if you normally use a low-number tanner, resort sun calls for a more protective suntan aid.

There's a new cream for relieving sunburn that incorporates the juice of the aloe vera, a succulent plant found in the American Southwest. The plant juice from the cut leaves was used by the Indians as a healing aid.

In recent years, aloe vera juice has been used in hand creams, but the concentration is greater in the new burn-relief cream.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Elizabeth Taylor and I have a lot in common. We both agree that old age is inevitable and we welcome it . . . like an old friend.

To be sensitive about a few wrinkles and a couple of laugh lines in nonsense. After all, beauty comes from within. As a matter of fact, I rarely think about age anymore.

Some days I don't think about my age at all. Like today, I didn't give it a thought until I woke up. Lying in bed, it occurred to me that I wasn't growing older, it was just that people are getting ahead faster than they used to.

Take my priest, for example. We used to get them right out of the seminary from high school. But the other day, I saw a BISHOP who smelled like Clearasil.

Remember how the interns used to be the youngest doctors on the hospital staff? A doctor whe wears Calvin Klein jeans on rounds and can't be a day over 20 is a local cheif of staff!

I don't know how they do it.

There was a time when the stewards on planes looked like they had landed their first job. Now the men piloting the planes are looking forward to shaving for the first time.

As first I thought it was my perspective, but, correct me if I'm wrong — didn't tennis champions used to be a lot older than they are now? You never see anyone serving to a silver-haired opponent at Wimbledon anymore.

And isn't it sort of scary to know that today's skyscrapers, shopping centers and condos are being built by kids who will have to return to school after the summer is over?

Luckily, I don't give a thought to age or I'd have been terribly upset when I met a full colonel who was young enough to be my son.

And what has happened to education? My teachers were straight from the Stone Age. My son has a teacher whom I swear has a picture of himself aging in the attic while he looks like a pre-schooler.

Maybe Liz and I would feel differently if we were older, but to me she's still as beautiful as when she appeared in "National Velvet" last year . . . or was that two years ago? Time flies . . . when you lie to yourself.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

This coming year you may have the opportunity to take that trip of considerable distance which you always hoped someday to make. Dig your ditches and begin now to target a time for your departure.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Play to win in situations which are fun and competitive today, yet don't make winning too important. You could be the victor at the expense of wounding a friend's feelings. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be optimistic and hopeful today, but keep your expectations within realistic bounds. You'll accomplish what you set out to, yet you could be disappointed if you expect too much.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In situations where you have strong self-interests things may not work out too well today, but in areas where you think "we" and not just "me," the reverse will be true.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Where you are willing to work in order to receive today, your returns should be as you anticipate. In matters where you expect things to be handed to you, you could be disappointed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to avoid lethargic or indecisive companions today. They could slow you down considerably. Energetic, enthusiastic associates will inspire you to move onward.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You are likely to coast and take things easy today unless you are confronted by challenge. Situations which test your mettle will awaken your success drive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even if you know something juicy about a friend that other pals aren't aware of, don't disclose it today. If word leaks out, let it come from others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Self-doubts or negative thinking are the only factors which could deprive you of success today. Let your desire to achieve erase all such from your mind.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're a very astute observer today. You should be able to spot flaws in the thinking and ideas of your associates. Wisely, you won't put them down for it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Rather than dip into your reserves today, try to make the most of what is presently available. You're imaginative and clever enough to get the necessary mileage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In joint ventures it's unimportant today who conceives the best ideas; the thing that matters is working in harmony to make them count for your collective benefit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Much can be accomplished today provided you schedule your tasks intelligently.

Mavs fall to Clippers

DALLAS (AP) — San Diego Clipper coach Paul Silas overhauled his offense against the Dallas Mavericks and started a center — Joe Bryant — who had never played the position before.

It worked.

Bryant, normally a forward, scored 32 points, 20 of them in the second half, and grabbed nine rebounds to rally the Clippers from a 10-point deficit for Wednesday night's 113-106 National Basketball Association win over the Mavericks.

"We were short-handed and outmanned, but got a major contribution from Joe Bryant," said guard Phil Smith, who aided the Clipper cause with 20 points, 14 of them in the second half.

"Bryant played well in the high post," Silas added while discussing the Clippers' second-half resurgence. "We started going to the open man instead of shooting over people. Dallas did not execute well in the second half and we doubled up well on defense."

Silas' use of Bryant was not a premeditated piece of strategy — it was made necessary when none of the three regular centers could suit up.

Just routine night in SWC

By JOE STROOP
Associated Press Writer

A game delayed two hours when a band member knocks over a power pole, a coach draws a double-technical foul that cost his team the game, three of the top four teams shuffle places in the standings, a squad that didn't even play takes the top spot — just a routine night of Southwest Conference basketball.

The wackiest Wednesday night scene was played out in Waco where a bandsman trying to park a car smashed into a utility pole, disabled a power transformer and knocked out all the lights in Heart O' Texas Coliseum, where the Baylor Bears and Texas Aggies were trying to play.

A&M coach Shelby Metcalf agreed to play the second half only under the threat of forfeit. As it turns out, he could have stayed in the locker room.

Terry Teagle hit 24 points, including two late free throws on a key technical called against A&M assistant coach Barry Davis. Baylor won it 58-55 and knocked the Aggies out of first place in the SWC standings.

In other games, Texas broke a three-game losing string with a 69-56 win over hapless Southern Methodist, Texas Christian nudged Rice 58-57 on a last-minute field goal and Houston slid by Texas Tech 83-80 when Red Raider coach Gerald Myers drew a double-technical foul for protesting the officiating.

"Certainly the technical was a big difference because it came at a crucial time," said Baylor coach Jim Haller. Davis was whistled for griping about the officiating and Teagle converted both free shots.

But the hot topic was the lights — or lack thereof — in a coliseum notorious around the loop for dim lighting even when all the lamps are burning. Even after power was restored, only 40 percent of the coliseum's vapor lights came back on, with Metcalf claiming his team's end of the floor was completely unplayable.

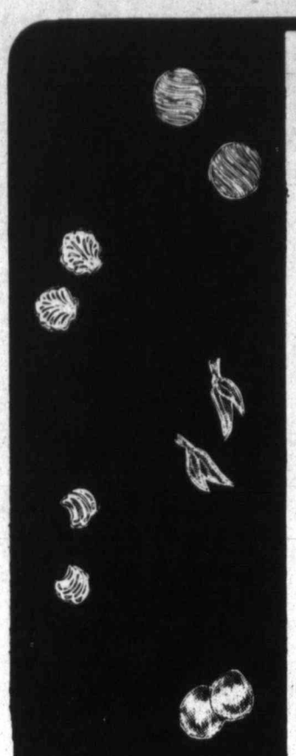

Head official Lynn Shortnacy, after conferring by telephone with SWC Commissioner Cliff Speegle, ordered the Aggies to play the second half.

"It will be a forfeit game, coach, if you don't get your team on the floor," Shortnacy said.

Ironically, one minute into the second half, all the lights in the stadium suddenly and inexplicably ignited.

"I bet he (Speegle) is mad we woke him up," Metcalf said.

The loss dropped the Aggies, 6-3, into a second-place tie with Texas and TCU. Arkansas, which was idle, backed into first place with a 6-2 mark.

Pampa seeks first-half basketball title tonight

Pampa's District 3-5A makeup games with Amarillo High will be played at 5:45 p.m. tonight.

The junior varsity games will be played at 4 p.m.

Pampa can wrap up the first-half District 3-5A title with a victory over Amarillo High in the Sandies' gym.

The crucial game had been scheduled to be played last Tuesday, but was canceled due to inclement weather.

The Harvesters are 21-3 overall and 3-0 in district play. Amarillo High (17-5 and 2-0) could gain a share of the first-half crown with a win tonight. A win Friday night over Palo Duro would give the Sandies the title outright.

In girls' action, Pampa hosts first-half district champion Amarillo High at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Kentucky tripped by Auburn in overtime

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The way the Kentucky Wildcats were playing, the Auburn Tigers didn't need any breaks.

But they got one — and it eventually resulted in an 83-81 overtime victory for Auburn over the nation's ninth-ranked college basketball team Wednesday night.

"There's no way to take a basket away from us," said Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall after a field goal by Derrick Hord in overtime was disallowed because the clock had failed to start when Kentucky threw the ball into play. Officials ruled that all play between the inbounds pass and the time when the horn blew was negated.

Hall was, of course, dissatisfied with the explanation.

"The clock was't running, but there was no justification for taking away the bucket," said Hall. "I've seen games go for two minutes without the clock running and they didn't go back and take away points."

Meanwhile, Auburn stole everything from the listless Wildcats but their sneakers. Auburn "ran a heck of a trap and we just turned the ball over too much," said Hall. "This really damages our Southeastern Conference title chances."

Kentucky had 19 turnovers in the game, 12 after halftime, and Auburn also came up with nine steals.

"Just say we played good," said Auburn Coach Sonny Smith. "The most important thing for us was the change to the half-court trap. We made the steals. Another key was our free-throw shooting." Auburn made 31 of 38 shots from the foul line.

Charles Barkley, Odell Mosteller and Byron Henson scored four points each in overtime to lead Auburn's upset. Trailing 34-43 with 8:54 left in regulation, the Tigers used a trapping zone defense to force Kentucky into errors that enabled Auburn to get back into contention.

Barkley had 22 points, Mosteller 20 and Darrell Lockhart 16 for Auburn, while Jim Master, who scored two uncontested layups for Kentucky at the end, led all scorers with 29 points while Hord had 25. Before Wednesday night's victory, Auburn had lost 13 straight games to Kentucky.

Maryland shocked No. 13 Wake Forest 61-56 and Mississippi whipped No. 16 Tennessee 55-53 in overtime in other upsets Wednesday night. Elsewhere, No. 1 Missouri stopped Colorado 80-54, No. 3 Virginia beat No. 2 North Carolina 74-58, No. 4 DePaul edged St. Joseph's (Pa.) 46-44 in overtime, No. 8 Alabama took a 66-63 decision over Mississippi State, No. 12 Texas beat Southern Methodist 69-56, and No. 19 Kansas State trimmed Nebraska 75-64. Memphis State, tied for No. 19, was forced to postpone its game with St. Louis University because of snow.

Top Ten

Steve Stipanovich, Jon Sundvold and Ricky Frazier combined for 37 points, leading Missouri over Colorado. Stipanovich scored 14 points, Sundvold added 12 and Frazier had 11 as Missouri gained its 19th straight victory this season and its 29th consecutive at home. Both streaks are Missouri records.

Othell Wilson and Ralph Sampson led Virginia to a 17-point lead early in the second half and the Cavaliers held off two North Carolina rallies to beat the Tar Heels.

Wilson scored 20 points and Sampson added 18 as the Cavaliers took over the Atlantic Coast Conference lead and avenged their only defeat in 22 games overall. It was only the second loss in 18 starts for North Carolina, which had beaten Virginia 65-60 less than a month ago at Chapel Hill.

"We knew ourselves we could beat them and we just wanted to prove it to everyone else," said Wilson. "We had them beaten down there (at North Carolina) and came unglued. We knew if we did things right, we could beat them."

Terry Cummings scored a game-high 17 points, including a tip-in at the end of the overtime period, to help DePaul beat St. Joseph's. With the score tied at 44 and only seconds remaining in the overtime, Kenny Patterson put up a 20-footer. The ball kicked off the rim to teammate Jerry McMillan, whose 15-footer from the left side missed the iron, but Cummings came up with the air ball and banked in the layup at the buzzer.

Alabama, playing without flu-stricken senior forward Eddie Phillips, survived a scare from Mississippi State and used a four-corner offense to beat the Bulldogs. The Crimson Tide got balanced scoring from its starters, led by Phillip Lockett with 17.

Second Ten

Sophomore guard Denard Holmes moved into injured forward Mike Wacker's spot and scored 22 points as Texas defeated SMU.

Lefors places fourth

MIAMI—Lefors girls placed fourth in the Miami Junior High tournament last week with a 25-20 decision over Booker.

Lefors lost to Follett, 36-16, in the tournament opener, but bounced back to defeat Mobeetie, 41-27.

"It has taken us all year to learn how to play together," Lefors coach Jo Karbo said: and it sure makes a difference. If we can continue to play together we will not get blown off the courts."

Lefors top scorers for the tournament were Melissa Stubbs 23 points; Sandra Story 18 points; Debbie Stubbs 13 points; Crystal Roberts 10 points and Kerri Williams eight points.

Coach Karbo said her top defensive players were Debbie Stubbs, Kerri Williams and Sandra Story.

Karbo said other players who "did a great job" were Nita Gifford, Amy Goldsmith, Belinda Furgerson, Melanie Nickel, Carol Mangus, Felicia Bowley, Laura Griggs, Gina Carlisle and Valarie Wariner.

CHINA MEETS THE PRESS. Photographers and reporters gather round a place setting of the new White House china at the White House Wednesday. The ivory china with a red and gold border was introduced to the press before being officially introduced during a State Dinner for Egyptian President Mubarak Wednesday night.

Kennedy taped conservations

BOSTON (AP) — President John F. Kennedy secretly recorded conversations and telephone calls with world leaders, congressmen and his aides while he was in the White House, the director of the Kennedy library said today.

"I have no reason to think they knew they were being taped," Dan Fenn Jr., the library director, said of the people recorded in 100 to 140 hours of taped meetings and conversations. The tapes are being examined in Boston at the library in preparation for their release to the public, possibly this summer.

Fenn said 250 telephone conversations and 325 meetings in the Oval Office or Cabinet Room in the White House were recorded from mid-1962 to Nov. 7, 1963, 15 days before Kennedy was assassinated.

Among those recorded in telephone calls were Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, evangelist Billy Graham and Adlai Stevenson, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations under Kennedy. The list also includes members of Congress, according to an index of the tapes that Fenn had.

The subjects of the conversations included Vietnam, the Cuban missile crisis, the integration of the University of Mississippi and civil rights in general.

"I haven't the vaguest idea why Kennedy used the tapes or saved them," Fenn said. "I hope we'll be able to open some of them early this summer.

"When they're available, they'll be available to anyone, junior high school students, Arthur Schlesinger or anyone."

Any potentially classified material will be referred to the originating agency, which will decide whether to keep it classifed or allow the museum to release it, Fenn said.

"There was no attempt to hide the existence of this material," Fenn said early today in an interview at his Lexington, Mass., home. "We said those tapes did exist.

Nancy's new china survives debut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan's new china set survived its White House debut intact. Nary a $48 cup was broken.

And despite its $209,000 price tag — paid with a donation from the nonprofit Knapp Foundation — there didn't seem to be a critic in the house.

Even the butlers loved it, according to chief usher Rex Scouten.

The 4,372-piece set, which the first lady had said was so "badly, badly needed," was unveiled Wednesday night at a state dinner honoring President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt.

It was the first thing he mentioned in his after-dinner toast.

"Before I start, let me first congratulate Mrs. Reagan for the new china which very elegant," Mubarak said.

The 120 dinner guests applauded and the first lady laughed.

Mubarak wasn't the only one with compliments.

The butlers "are mighty proud of it," Scouten said. "They are thrilled to death. It's beautiful."

Vice President George Bush called it fine china and said it was outrageous to criticize the first lady since she acquired it at no cost to the taxpayers.

"I think she should get some credit," he said.

Lyn Nofziger, who recently quit his White House post of political director, said it was "about time we had some new china here and I don't know what all the fuss is about."

The 220-place setting service was ordered seven months ago and arrived by truck Tuesday in time to be hand-washed for Wednesday night's dinner.

The ivory china with a red and gold border was the showcase for a dinner of filet of mountain trout farcie with fleurons, supreme of chicken with red peppers and white rice, green beans amandine, port salut cheese, watercress and mushroom salad, chocolate mousse and petits fours.

Each place setting consists of 19 pieces, but only seven were used Wednesday: service plate, salad plate, dinner plate, fish plate, dessert plate, demitasse cup and saucer.

The other pieces are: soup plate, finger bowl plate, butter plate, tea cup and saucer, boullion cup, cream soup cup and stand, berry bowl, cereal bowl, ramekin, and cocktail cup. In addition, 60 extra demitasse cups and tea cups were ordered, along with 72 large platters.

According to Mrs. Tate, the only other White House china that was not paid by taxpayers was the Johnson service, contributed by an anonymous donor.

Mrs. Tate made the following cost comparisons with other White House china:

FDR — $9,301.20 actual cost; $74,108 in 1981 dollars.

Truman — $28,271.40 actual cost; $96,100 in 1981 dollars.

Johnson — $80,028.24 actual cost; $195,000 in 1981 dollars.

Reagan — $209,508 actual and 1981 cost.

"I thought it would be interesting historically."

Tentative agreement reached with Gulf

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — A tentative contract agreement has been reached between members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union and officials of Gulf Oil, a company spokesman said.

Jim Gatten, a spokesman for the Gulf plant, said Wednesday the agreement was reached after meetings between company officials and union representatives from local 4-23.

A ratification vote was set for Saturday, he said.
