'Stuck together'

Self-described 'hermit' turns old metal into art

By Don Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

David Hix doesn't think of himself as an artist, but anyone driving down Bennett Street can seek his art on display.

"As I gathered it and piled it up, I didn't want to throw it away. So I got an idea and one day, I started sticking it together," David Hix

His art — metal sculptures — are not being exhibited in a gallery or studio; his work is being shown in his front yard.

Hix, who's retired from the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT), said he began to collect scrap metal.

"As I gathered it and piled it up, I didn't want to throw it away. So I got an idea and one day, I started sticking it together," he said.

What he "stuck together" could be called "Hereford Gothic," sort of a Panhandle version of the famous Grant Wood painting "American Gothic."

Standing in his front yard, looking out toward the street, are the metal figures of a man and a woman, with a dog nearby.

The figures were sculptured from a variety of metal — rebar, old tools, bicycle seats, hinges, nuts and bolts. Both the male and female figures have added touches: he holds a coffee cup; she wears a straw hat.

Since placing these sculptures in place, Hix said he's been thinking about another piece.

"I have an idea of making a horse to go over there," he said, pointing toward a spot about midway between the front door of his house and the sidewalk.

"I'll come up with it one of these days," he said.

Hix has a crackerbox welder and a cutting torch to do his sculptures.

"Anywhere I find something, I keep it until I can figure out what I want to do with it," he said. "Spring and warmer weather is when you really want to get out and start making something. When it's cold and rainy, you can't. If I had a little shop, I'd probably stay in it all the time."

Sculpting is not the only artistic endeavor of the self-described "hermit of Bennett Street," he also does some painting.

"I did a little painting at one time," he said, pointing to a landscape hanging on the wall of his living room.

"I did some others, but I gave them all away."

A native of Pleasant Hill, N.M., Hix and his parents moved to Hereford in 1939. His father was a farm laborer, but Hix held a variety of jobs in town before going to work for TxDOT's sign maintenance, working for the state agency for 22 years before retiring.

After retiring, Hix still does some work.

"I mostly do heavy mowing — vacant lots and other places where the weeds have gotten too thick for most lawnmowers. I have a heavy-duty mower that can cut right through the weeds. That's what I do generally, but I will do some yards," he said.

"Last year, there wasn't much mowing because it was so dry. I hope this year will be different. I also do a little tree work, but I'm getting too old and too stiff for that," he said.

"I do some welding, too. I've been doing welding for a long time — did it for the state. I had a welder on the truck, cutting torch and all that, so I could patch up mowers out on the road," he said.

After his retirement, he did boot repair for about three years — a trade he learned on the job.

"A friend of mine decided to buy a boot shop and he'd sell boots and I'd repair them. I

Easter traces its roots to pagan beliefs

Easter Sunday, April 4

By Don Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Easter is the holiest of all Christian holidays, but its roots are in ancient pagan beliefs.

The holiday is a blending of two traditions: Judeo-Christian and pagan, both built around themes of death and resurrection. Both also fall near the spring equinox.

For example, neo-pagans and Wiccans conduct religious celebrations on the day or eve of the equinox; Christians celebrate Easter after the next full moon.

According to the Venerable Bede, a seventh-century Christian scholar, Easter was named after Eostre, the mother goddess of the Saxon tribes of northern Europe, and whose name meant "spring."

Several other ancient religions also had goddesses associated with the spring equinox,

Marketing firm plans to give HRMC facelift

By Don Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

A Lubbock public relations company plans to give Hereford Regional Medical Center a makeover.

The Price Communications Group, which was hired Tuesday by the Deaf Smith County Hospital District to launch a public awareness campaign in the area, also recommended a new logo, a new motto and new literature promoting the hospital.

The new logo, brochure and motto are key elements in the marketing strategy outlined by Phil Price, president and founder of the agency.

Price submitted a six-month budget proposal, which carried a $61,000 price tag, although he acknowledged he knew not all of the elements would be accepted by the board. In fact, the board just hired his firm to boost awareness about the hospital and its services within the environs of Hereford.

In his company's situation analysis of HRMC, Price stated although the hospital has been providing quality health care and has the most modern equipment available, it is plagued by outmigration.

"Several factors have contributed to this migration to Amarillo. Two reasons are believed to be that residents are unaware of the services the hospital provides, and the primary caregivers are referring patients to Amarillo," the study stated.

Price also took note of an issue that could generate some controversy within the community: a new hospital building.

"While the (Deaf Smith County) Chamber of Commerce supports building a new facility, some landowners are opposed because of the proposed increase in taxes," the study stated.

However, when Price was asked if the awareness campaign were to promote construction of a new facility, he said the proposal he presented was to build awareness of what services the current facility has available, not build a new hospital.

The awareness campaign developed by the agency will target the HRMC medical staff, volunteers and directors; residents in Hereford and surrounding communities; the primary caregivers, staffs and other health care personnel in the Hereford area; Hispanics; and senior citizens.

The major objectives of the campaign are

Kids' work

Dianna F. Dandridge

Some things are better left to the younger generations. Unfortunately, I am beginning to find out just how much I used to do without thinking about it -- but which now takes forever.

This really dawned on me earlier this week when my kids received the new bicycles they had been promised as birthday gifts.

The night we brought the new bikes home, we had to stop and air up the tires. No big deal. They were purchased all ready assembled and the tires were just a little bit low.

I told the kids that I would change the tires and put in solid inner tubes, probably this weekend, but of course they wanted to ride them to school and I didn't want to ruin tires and perfectly good inner tubes.

Then they wanted to know when I was going to put the new tubes in my bike's tires, so we could all go riding together.

I figured it was much easier to just to put new tubes on mine than deal with their bikes before the new ran completely off.

After work one evening, I brought my bike in and started on what I thought would be routine.

Growing up the way I did, I learned how to remove the tire and wheel; take the tube out repair or patch the tube and reverse the process in nothing flat.

Like I said, sometimes I forget I'm getting older and I'm a little out of practice.

It took me more than 20 minutes to just get the front tire off my bike. Granted, my bike is probably more than 15 years old, and I can't remember when I last replaced the tube, so it's been a while since the wheel was loosened.

I didn't even try to separate the tube and tire until I removed the back tire. It was lots of fun, let me assure you.

I had forgotten how much fun it is to disassemble some of those brake parts that go on a multi-gear bike. I finally got the gadgets and gizmos loose and could loosen the wheels. Somewhere along the way, somehow string or thread or twine managed to get tangled around the hub.

So after getting a knife, cutting off the offending fibers and removing them from the deep, narrow grooves with old tweezers, I finally got to remove the wheel.

From there it should have only been a matter of minutes until I had both tires off the rims and new tubes replacing the old ones. Maybe it was 35 years ago when I had to do it nearly daily.

It took another hour to replace the tubes, get the tires realigned on the rims and the wheels back on the bike.

As long as I had gone this far I figured I might as well doctor the brake lines, straighten the seat, replace the broken reflector and give the whole thing a good oiling.

By the time I finally finished with the brakes, I had decided I better get them put back together and forget any notion I ever had of becoming a bike mechanic in my spare time.

I started the job about 6:30. I finally called it quits sometime after 11.

My front yard, my porch, my newspaper-covered living room floor and the slab on the side of the house now look like something from a bicycle wrecking yard.

My son's old bike stands upside down in the front yard, where he left it after trying to fix the pedal bearings. Rebecca's old bike (her sister's old hand-me-down) has the chain off and one broken pedal and rests against the house on the concrete slab. Her old bike, forgotten and lopsided because of the one missing handlebar, has died a slow death and waits for a burial in the back yard.

The kids have been told before this weekend's cold weather arrives, they have to make my yard once again resemble a lawn, not a wrecking yard.

Now all that faces me is changing out the kids cheap factory inner tubes with the good solid ones. That's four tires -- oh my, what have I gotten myself into?

At some point I really thought I had outgrown having to do things like bicycle repairs. Then I had kids. What could I have been thinking?

Anti-missile defense system was bad idea when it was offered by Reagan; it's still a very bad idea

Don Cooper

"Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired, signifies in the final sense a theft from those who hunger and are not fed, those who are cold and are not clothed. This world in arms is not spending money alone. It is spending the sweat of its laborers, the genius of its scientists, the houses of its children."

President Eisenhower, April 16, 1953

"Star Wars" is back. Of course, members of Congress are calling it an "national missile defense system," but no matter what the lawmakers call it, it's still "Star Wars," a script written in the movie mind set of former President Reagan.

It was a bad script when Reagan wanted to produce it; it's still a bad script.

As its proponents would have you believe, "Star Wars" -- excuse me, the national missile defense system -- will put up an impenetrable shield over the United States, that will protect us from incoming intercontinental ballistic missiles.

In the reel world, this shield will work; however, in the real world, it won't. Even the Pentagon brass don't know if it will. Although the Pentagon has spent $50 billion on missile defense work over the past three decades, the military hints that just another $10 billion or so will provide an answer.

In a rare example of bipartisanship, congressional Democrats and Republicans came together to approve "Star Wars." In the House, the vote was 317-105 for the system; in the Senate, it was 97-3. Of course, the Texas House delegation -- never a group to turn the other way when the Pentagon comes calling -- voted almost en masse for "Star Wars." And, both Texas senators, Kay Bailey Hutchison and Phil Gramm, apparently have never seen a weapon they didn't like, favored the system.

Will this now-popular defense system work -- and at the cost projected by the Pentagon?

Not if you believe Defense Secretary William Cohen, who said the project carries a "high risk" of failure -- an assessment that would indicate the $10 billion price tag likely is far too low.

I admit the "Star Wars" proponents sound convincing with their argument the system will make every American more secure.

But will it make every American more secure?

No. One of the reasons the "Star Wars" system will not make us more secure because it fails to protect us from what is the most likely scenario -- a small terrorist group that assembles its weapon in this country.

"Star Wars" would have offered no protection to those people working in the Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, nor would have shielded the workers in the World Trade Tower.

"Star Wars" would not protect communities from terrorists introducing viruses into

No, I am convinced that "Star Wars" is nothing more than wishful thinking. It will be a boondoggle, and will be nothing more than a welfare program for defense contractors.

This so-called national missile defense system is an idea doomed to failure and the nation cannot afford it.

A few days after the House vote, Rep. Larry Combest, the Lubbock Republican whose district includes Deaf Smith County, sent out a press release letting his constituents know about his vote for "Star Wars."

Rep. Combest is proud of his vote. I think he should be ashamed of it.

The blue-ribbon panel: It doesn't always work

Walter R. Mears

The Associated Press

When the issues get toughest, the habit in Congress and the White House is to hand them off to commissions, special panels that are supposed to bridge political differences and come up with answers both sides can buy.

Sometimes it works. Not now.

Not on Medicare, which could be broke in less than a decade without an overhaul or new funding, or both.

After a year on the case, a bipartisan commission on the future of Medicare couldn't agree on a recommendation, and President Clinton rebuffed a proposal from its majority.

That puts the future of the government health care system for senior Americans back into the political mix, and it may stay there, unresolved, until after the next election.

Republicans suspect that is what the Democrats want, since they have used Medicare to advantage in past campaigns, and could try it again in 2000, in the contest for the White House and for the six-seat gain it would capture control of the House.

The Democrats' well-rehearsed theme is that Republicans want to use money best earmarked for Medicare and Social Security for tax cuts instead; the GOP retort is that the surplus budget can afford both, and that they are more reliable reformers.

That's where it all stood before the commission got its delayed start on the problem, after a political hassle over who would run it. The White House wanted a Democrat, and got one, Sen. John Breaux of Louisiana.

The plan Breaux shepherded to approval by 10 commission members, one short of the super-majority required to make it a formal recommendation, wasn't to Clinton's liking. Breaux, a Clinton ally, had a hard time getting the president even to talk about the proposal.

Breaux and his commission partner, Republican Rep. Bill Thomas of California, recommended that Medicare be transformed into a system more like private health insurance, with the government providing allowances beneficiaries would use to buy their own coverage.

That's like the system that covers federal employees, and Congress.

The plan, which Breaux and Thomas are proposing to Congress on their own now, includes limited coverage for prescription drugs and a gradual increase in the eligibility age, from 65 to 67.

Clinton wants more extensive prescription coverage and insists on keeping the basic benefit system in place. He wants 15 percent of projected budget surpluses over the next 15 years, an estimated $700 billion, earmarked for Medicare.

Just before the commission's final session, on March 16, Clinton said its approach "falls short," taking on an issue he hadn't said much about. In successive State of the Union messages, he had proposed opening the Medicare system to people as young as 55, letting the uninsured among them buy into the government coverage, covering prescriptions* and reserving the surplus to keep it all solvent.

Republicans, and Breaux, are wary that the surplus plan would paper over the underlying problems in Medicare and ease the pressure for reform in the system.

That draws the lines for another season of arguments. Clinton said that with hard choices, there can be reform this year. He said Medicare is too important to let partisanship prevent progress.

It has before, and may again.

None of this is new business. The projections of a go-broke year were made long ago. An earlier commission on entitlement reform pointed to Ross Perot did it. Steve Forbes is doing it again. Now Texas Gov. George W. Bush is weighing whether to give up millions of federal dollars for a presidential campaign so he can escape spending limits.

It would be a bold move in next year's Republican primaries for Bush, who doesn't have a personal fortune like Perot and Forbes. He'd have to raise an unprecedented $50 million just to keep pace with fellow Republicans who will follow tradition and take the federal matching funds. estimated $32 million. "We're going to see how the fund raising goes," Bush spokeswoman Mindy Tucker said. "There's more flexibility within the campaign if you do not take matching funds."

Bush's willingness to consider giving up the federal money shows that one of the major legacies of Watergate — partial public financing of presidential primary campaigns in exchange for limits on spending — may be losing its appeal for some candidates.

Even if Bush gives up the matching funds for the primary, he still would be eligible for full federal funding of the fall campaign if he is the GOP nominee, Federal Election Commission spokeswoman Sharon Snyder said.

In the meantime, Bush would be better equipped to fend off competition from Forbes, whose self-financed campaign won't be bound by spending limits either.

Political experts say that if anyone can raise $50 million, it would be Bush, son of the former president and brother of Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, both of whom have their own extensive fund-raising networks to augment his.

"He has the fattest Rolodex of anybody," Republican political consultant Eddie Mahe said.

American University political science professor Candice Nelson said bypassing the spending limits won't bother voters in 2000, considering that the Democratic and Republican parties raised $260 million in unregulated "soft money" in the 1996 season and spent much of it on advertisements that aided their presidential nominees.

"The actual spending limits were so dwarfed by what was spent with soft money that it's not an argument that people would worry about," Nelson said.

President Clinton considered forgoing federal funds in 1996 but ended up taking the money. Forbes spent $42 million, most of it from his own pocket, in 1996. Perot didn't seek federal funds for primaries or the general election, choosing to bankroll his own independent bids for president in 1992 and 1996.

Clinton considered forgoing federal funding in 1996.

Other than Forbes, the only major party contender who has rejected federal matching funds since the system was put in place for the 1976 election was former Texas Gov. John Connally in 1980.

Within next year's projected spending limit of $40 million, candidates can spend only a limited amount in each state. In 1996, Forbes spent huge amounts in early-voting states, causing headaches for eventual GOP nominee Bob Dole.

The limit in 2000 is projected to be $1.1 million each in Iowa and $669,160 in New Hampshire.

Refusing the federal funds would mean Bush, like Forbes, could spend more money in key states. After all, Iowa Gov. Tom Vilsack raised $2.9 million for his gubernatorial campaign last year.

To reach the $40 million, plus $5 million for overhead and legal fees that don't fall under the spending limit, Republican consultant, Stan Huckaby projects that candidates need to raise just over $32 million, to be matched with a bit more than $13 million in federal funds.

Bush, on the other hand, would have to raise almost $50 million, most of it limited by law to checks of $1,000 or less. Because fund raising itself is expensive, it would take around $17 million to replace the matching funds. The government matches the first $250 of each individual contribution.

Could Bush do it? Maybe.

There are at least 50,000 donors who contributed $1,000 to a GOP presidential candidate in 1996, according to Huckaby's analysis. Bush would have to compete with other Republican candidates for their money and draw in new donors, perhaps through the various governors and other officials who support him.

"A leading Republican challenger would have the ability to raise tremendous amounts of money," said Clinton's chief fund-raiser, Terence McAuliffe.

On the other hand, an endless Bush fund-raising campaign could vacuum up millions of dollars otherwise earmarked for GOP congressional candidates.

That was one of the reasons Clinton agreed to the spending limits, McAuliffe said. "If we go on forever raising money, it dries up money that is available for House candidates, Senate candidates and others."

the problems but divided on the solutions in 1994, telling Clinton then that "tough action is needed sooner rather than later."

The Senate voted in 1997 to raise the Medicare age to 67 and to base premiums on income so that the well-to-do would pay more for health coverage. That was dropped from the budget bill that year, which instead included stop-gap steps to keep Medicare solvent for a decade — and set up the commission to work on long term changes.

That was supposed to insulate the issue against the politics of the 1998 campaign. Now it will bump into the politics of 2000.

"Some people want an issue out of Medicare rather than solving the problem," Breaux said.

Bush finds social issues nettlesome for campaign

By Michelle Mittelstadt

The Associated Press

As Gov. George W. Bush begins to navigate the slippery shoals of presidential politics and flesh out his positions, he's finding that social issues are proving particularly hazardous.

How else could the Texas Republican explain the criticism in recent weeks over his pronouncements on abortion, gay rights and hate crimes?

Considered the early front-runner in a crowded field of Republican hopefuls, Bush must engage in a delicate balancing act.

On the one hand, he must articulate views that appeal to the social conservatives whose sway is felt most in the GOP primary process. Yet he cannot afford to alienate moderates, without whom he cannot hope to win in November 2000.

Bush himself realizes the difficulty of the task. "I don't expect to get everybody's vote should I decide to run for the presidency," he told Texas newspaper executives this week, shrugging off criticism about his stance on abortion.

"It's an important issue. It's not the only issue," he added.

In fact, abortion isn't the only hot-button issue that Bush has tackled lately.

ANALYSIS

His stated ambivalence toward hate-crimes legislation making its way through the Texas Legislature and opposition to adoption by gays and lesbians has stirred criticism from civil-rights and gay-rights leaders.

"It's a kinder and gentler form of bigotry," said Dianne Hardy Garcia, executive director of the Lesbian and Gay Rights Lobby of Texas. "But it's bigotry nonetheless."

When Bush waded gingerly into the fractious debate over abortion earlier this month, after announcing formation of his presidential exploratory committee, activists in both camps found room for disagreement.

His unwillingness to rule out abortion in cases of incest, rape or when the mother's life is threatened earned him the wrath of some anti-abortion leaders, who refuse to bestow the "pro-life" label on him.

At the same time, an abortion-rights group is running television ads in Iowa and New Hampshire accusing Bush and Elizabeth Dole, who also is considering a presidential bid, of soft-peddling their "extreme views."

The attacks from both sides may help Bush, who calls himself a "compassionate conservative," build an appeal to mainstream voters, some say.

"For the activists on the left and right who want a candidate to adhere completely to their agenda, he will not be their candidate," said Larry Sabato, a University of Virginia political scientist.

Several other prospective Republican candidates are competing for the social conservative vote, including former Vice President Dan Quayle, businessman Steve Forbes, TV commentator Pat Buchanan, social activist Gary Bauer and Sen. Bob Smith of New Hampshire.

Bush "is not necessarily going to be (social conservatives') favorite candidate. What he's aiming for is acceptability," said John Pitney, a professor of government at Claremont McKenna College.

Addressing politically sensitive topics this early makes sense, some analysts suggest.

"What we're seeing here is the equivalent of a distant early warning system," said Pitney. "It's much better for him to deal with the controversy now than have it erupt in the primary season."

including Astarte (Phoenicia), Demeter (Mycenae), Hathor (Egypt), Aphrodite (Greece), Kali (India) and Ostara (Norse).

A major pagan celebration at the spring equinox involved the worship of Attis, the consort of the Phrygian fertility goddess Cybele. In this Mediterranean religion, Attis died and was resurrected every year during the equinox.

Historians report that early Christians celebrated the death and resurrection of Jesus at the same time as the pagan celebration of Attis. Whenever the two religions celebrated in the same area, Christians and pagans clashed.

Christians link their celebration of Easter to the Jewish observance of Passover, which was described in the book of Exodus as the night when the angel of the Lord "passed over" the homes of the Jews that had been marked with blood from a sacrificial animal. However, the angel killed the first-born son of every family whose home wasn't marked.

The early church observed Easter on the same day as Passover -- 14-15 Nisan, a date governed by a lunar calendar -- until the second century, when Christians shifted it to the Sunday following 14-15.

However, the Eastern Orthodox churches, which use the Julian calendar rather than the Gregorian, celebrate Easter several weeks after the Western churches.

For the first four centuries of the Christian era, the church observed only two holidays: Easter and Pentecost.

Other holidays connected with Jesus' death later would be added to the Christian celebrations: Lent, Ash Wednesday and the various Holy Week activities.

Electric cooperative sets meet

Special to The Brand

Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative members will receive $1 million in capital credit refunds from 1995-98 and part of 1999 at the cooperative's annual meeting.

The session will begin at 5 p.m. Tuesday at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn.

The members also will elect two directors. The candidates for Position 1 are incumbent Gilbert (Nick) Yost and Dwight Jester; Position 2 candidates are incumbent Anthony Acker and Vincent Gerber.

The meeting will feature a dinner of fish, chicken and beef, with entertainment to be provided by the Palmisto State Quarter.

The group, which is making its second consecutive appearance at the cooperative's annual meeting, has been performing for more than 40 years. During its existence, the Palmisto State Quarter has served as host of several television programs, including the nationally syndicated "The Family General" and "The Tonight Show." The group also has been a regular performer at the National Quarter Convention in Nashville, Tenn.

The event also will feature drawings for cash prizes and a cash bar. Tickets are available at group rates.

Program to ease the fears of kids

Special to The Brand

Remember when you were little and you were terrified of anyone in a white coat with a stethoscope?

Or you were scared when you were told you had to go see the doctor? How many of us were told that if we were not good that the nurse would give us a shot?

The fears of a small child can hamper a decision to seek necessary medical attention, or the fears may interfere with the delivery of service. No one, especially parents, wants a small child to suffer or fear treatment.

Hereford Regional Medical Center is offering "Teddy Bear Clinics" next month for the public to help ease fears that small children might have about coming to the hospital or its emergency room.

During these tours or "clinics," the children will be escorted through the hospital, emergency room and ambulance to become familiar with some of the workings of each.

When anyone becomes aware of the basic things that might take place during a visit at the hospital the fear of the unknown is then reduced or taken away. HRMC officials hope that by providing the facts, the fear of the unknown will be reduced.

To assist in alleviating the fears, the child's "teddy bear" will be the patient. The child will have the chance to see how the teddy bear is cared for, just like they will be if they were the patient.

"Teddy Bear Clinics" will be April 5-9 at the hospital.

Anyone interested in scheduling a tour for a child, class or day care group should contact Carolan Garza at 364-2141, extension 3317.

Reservations for tours should be made as soon as possible because space may be limited.

WTRT accepts applications for its annual scholarships

Special to The Brand

Applications for West Texas Rural Telephone scholarships will be accepted until April 12. The scholarships will be awarded in May.

Scholarships are open only to students whose parents or guardians are WTRT members, or to students who are WTRT members themselves. Applicants must also be either high school seniors who are candidates for graduation this spring, have completed high school, or have received their GED.

The 1999 scholarships are open only to eligible, qualified applications from the Hereford, Friona, Bovina, Farwell, Lazbuddie, Dimmitt, Adrian, and Vega school districts. Scholarship monies will be disbursed in increments per semester.

An official application form, accompanied by two letters of recommendation, must be submitted. One of the letters of recommendation must be from a teacher, principal, or counselor from the high school that the applicant is currently attending, or attended.

In Hereford, applications may be picked up only at the WTRT offices on U.S. Highway 385 South.

Applications and rules may be picked up at the high school counselor's offices in Friona, Bovina, Lazbuddie, Farwell, Dimmitt, Adrian and Vega.

To be considered, applications must be fully completed, have no attachments other than the two required letters of recommendation, and must be received at the offices of WTRT, Box 1737, Hereford 79045, no later than April 12.

Applicants may be asked to attend an interview at the discretion of the WTRT board.

Mechanics of the scholarships include the following:

- WTRT scholarships may be used at any state or church-sponsored college or university, or at any accredited vocational or technical school.

- Recipients must maintain a minimum of 12 credited hours throughout each semester, or have full-time student status at vocational or trade schools.

- It is important that as soon as enrollment or pre-enrollment for the fall semester is completed, that recipients send the Cooperative a confirmation from the registrar's office. Should a recipient drop out of school for any reason, the unused portion of the scholarship will be rescinded.

- At the end of each semester, recipients are requested to send a report of their grades to: West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative, Box 1737, Hereford 79045.

Music students in showcase

CANYON - Students in the West Texas A&M University Department of Music and Dance will showcase their talent in instrumental, classical, jazz and choral music at WTAMU's 18th Annual Showcase of Music beginning at 8 p.m. April 9 at the Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium.

Globe-News, includes soloists, chamber ensembles and a 100-member choral and instrumental group.

"This is definitely the most exciting concert the department produces each year," Dr. Ted DuBois, head of the Department of Music and Dance, said. "The groups have prepared some of their finest work for this performance."

Groups slated to perform include the Symphonic Band, the Double Reed Ensemble, the Percussion Ensemble, a French Horn Choir, the Music Therapy Club, the Clarinet

Choir, the Collegiate Chorus, Sforzando, the WT Chorale, the Jazz Band, the Trumpet Choir and the Flute Choir.

A special student group, Southern Fried Funk, won the Jett's House of Music Showcase Student Competition and a spot on the Showcase program.

Easter symbols

What are the origins of some of the most commonly Easter symbols and traditions?

Hot cross buns: Celebrants at the feast of Eostre, the Saxon goddess of fertility, sacrificed an ox. The ox horns became a feast symbol and would be carved into the ritual bread. "Buns" is derived from the Saxon word "boun," which means "sacred ox." The symbol of the symmetrical cross later would decorate the buns. The buns represent the moon, which is associated with the goddess, and its four quarters.

Easter rabbit and eggs: The rabbit and the egg are symbols of the Norse goddess Ostara and represent fertility. Today's Easter tradition is derived from these. Also, dyed eggs were part of the rituals of ancient Babylonian religions.

Easter lilies: This flower was revered by ancient pagans as a symbol associated with reproductive organs, and was considered a phallic symbol.

Easter sunrise services: Another custom that dates back to the ancient pagan rituals of welcoming the sun god at the vernal equinox.

Easter candles: Some churches light the candles on the eve of Easter Sunday. These are believed to be linked to the pagan custom of lighting bonfires around the spring equinox to welcome the rebirth and resurrection of the sun god.

YOUR EYES

PREVENTING PINK EYE

Caused by a bacterial or viral infection, conjunctivitis (also known as pink eye) is highly contagious. If you suspect you have it (your eyes are red and itchy, they feel gritty, there's a discharge, and your vision is blurred and sensitive to light), you may need to seek treatment. In the meantime, take the following steps to prevent spreading the infection:

1. Keep your hands away from your eyes.
2. Wash your hands thoroughly and frequently.
3. Use a new towel and washcloth daily.
4. Wash clothes after each time you wear them.
5. Change your pillowcase daily.
6. Throw away eye makeup you've been using.

To avoid catching it from someone else, don't use other people's eye makeup and don't share towels and handkerchiefs with others.

You can soothe the discomfort of conjunctivitis by applying warm compresses to the eye and eye area.

BEEF CAPITAL:

Whiteface tennis team struggles in first day

From staff reports
The competition was sweltering at times here Friday during the Beef Capital of the World tennis tournament, even if stiff winds and cool temperatures made jackets and windbreakers the chosen uniforms of the day.

And when the eight-team field had concluded the day's opening rounds, Hereford's game had been through both the hot and cold extremes.

There weren't many highlights left to embrace for the host team.

The Whitefaces' brightest outlook going into Saturday's finals were shots for third place in boy's singles competition, fifth in girl's doubles and seventh in both boy's doubles and girl's singles.

While Hereford's gains were modest, the final championship rounds were shaping up to be a showdown between Dumas, Andrews, Frenship, Midland and perennial powerhouse Vernon — coached by former Hereford High School graduate and tennis standout Pudgy Vargas.

Brent Berend led as the Whiteface's top achiever after he crushed Randall's Mark Woods 6-1, 6-1 in boy's singles play and then beat Justin Boardman of Dumas 6-1, 6-0 before falling to Vernon's Wes Lehman 7-6, 7-6.

Lehman was to meet teammate John Leavitt for the singles championship, while Berend and Andrews' Will Foster were scheduled to play for third place.

Hereford's Ivory Issacson took a three-set win over Randi Powell of Vernon 2-6, 6-2, 6-3 in girl's singles competition, but she lost her second match to Frenship's Amy Drachenberg and then suffered a three-set loss for fifth place to Emily Mudroch of Randall High. The back-to-back losses set up Saturday's meeting against Midland's Becky Morgan for seventh.

Dumas singles players Stephanie Lechner and Jamille Pool were scheduled to meet in the top bracket of girl's play.

In boy's doubles action, Dumas' Coggins-Tebeest and Midland's Breithaupt-Brouch were to meet in the championship bracket after advancing through three brackets of play.

Amit Patel and Riley Hall of Hereford were set to play for seventh in boy's doubles action after they won a 6-3, 6-0 decision over Wichita Falls and then lost to Vernon's Moore-Petros 6-2, 6-3 and Melban-Kuzak of Dumas in their quest for fifth place.

The Hereford duo of Harrison Hoffman and Nathan Horell were to play in the consolation bracket after losing two matches Friday.

Diana Detten and Noelle Merrick of Hereford were scheduled to play for fifth place in girl's doubles play Saturday after they earned a quick two-set win over Frenship's Nguyen-Sanchez

Duke, Michigan St. meet again

But this time, it's for all the marbles

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — The first time was early December in Chicago, two of the top teams in the country meeting in the Great Eight.

The second time will be late March in St. Petersburg, two of the top teams in the country meeting in the Final Four.

The game Saturday night between top-ranked Duke and Michigan State is far more important, of course. And this time the winner gets to play for the national championship on Monday night.

That first game, won by Duke 73-67, won't have much bearing on the rematch, the players and coaches said. But they did spend a lot of time talking about it Friday.

"I think Michigan State's a lot different and I think we are, too," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski, who has the Blue Devils (36-1) in the Final Four for the eighth time since 1986.

"They know each other even better. They seem to be very healthy and have a deep rotation with eight or nine guys. So I think they use their people better now that they did earlier, and so do we."

That game was the first of Duke's school-record 31 straight wins. Michigan State (33-4) lost its next game to then-No. 1 Connecticut and has won 29 of 30 since, including the last 22.

"We were a totally different team back then," Spartans junior forward A.J. Granger said.

"We've matured along the way and so have they. I would say the maturity is going to play a big part in the game, and we've come a long way in that department."

In the first game in United Center, Duke took a 17-2 lead as Trajan Langdon hit two 3-pointers and a free throw in the opening four minutes. Langdon finished with 23 points on 7-for-12 shooting, 4-of-7 beyond the arc.

"I think my teammates did a great job setting screens and Will Avery did a great job getting me the ball in my rhythm," said Langdon, a second-team All-America who had 47 points in the last two NCAA tournament games on 9-for-12 from 3-point range.

Nesting ground predator control: More ducks for our bucks?

Political/philosophical controversy has a way of dividing groups that ought to be allies working from the same page in the playbook. Waterfowl enthusiasts have witnessed this unfortunate circumstance in the case of Delta Waterfowl and Ducks Unlimited and their views on predator control on duck nesting grounds.

The continental population of a number of duck species, particularly pintail and canvasback, went into a disturbingly deep nosedive during much of the past decade-and-a-half, and pintails, in particular, remain in distress. The decline of many duck species was due to changing agricultural patterns that resulted in the disappearance of prime nesting habitat. Drought played a huge role too.

Delta Waterfowl conducted a five-year study comparing the nesting success of ducks on areas where predators were trapped during the nesting season, versus areas where there was no predator control.

Delta's conclusion: Managing nest-preying predators like foxes, skunks and raccoons on the northern nesting ground is the best way to increase duck production over the long haul. Delta maintains that "the impact of predators is often so overwhelming that it negates benefits received from habitat management practices."

The crux of their message is pretty simple: With duck habitat limited and moisture conditions constantly fickle, we'd best produce the maximum number of ducks from the best habitat available.

Touting its "single-mindedness of purpose," Ducks Unlimited has denounced Delta's findings and still clings to its firm belief that "if you build the habitat, the ducks will come." ...Sort of a shut-up and just keep sending-in the money attitude... Turn soil, catch water, build projects... Bucks spell ducks.

I've been a DU member for many years, have helped to raise more than a few thousand dollars for DU, and have worked with organizations such as the Playa Lakes Joint Venture that count DU among their primary participants. DU has gotten the conservation job done for many years, and is an undisputed

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Steiert

champion at fund raising.

Unfortunately, in my opinion, DU is missing the boat on the issue of predator management amidst prime nesting habitat.

Even Dr. Bruce Batt, DU's chief biologist, who helped that organization formulate its anti-predator control policy, has allowed that in the midst of drought and declining habitat, "the single most important factor depressing current waterfowl populations is low success rate of nesting hens that is a result of severe predation on the prairies. In many areas of Canada, this factor is thought to be even more significant than the historical loss of wetlands."

Non-profit Delta launched a predator study in 1994 that has now stretched into its sixth year, seeking to determine if predator management really works.

Delta has hired trappers who remove predators from selected areas, and has compared nest success against similar, untreated land tracts. Monitoring has occurred on 320,000 acres in the nesting habitat of North Dakota.

Five-year-average nest success on areas where predators have been controlled is 43 percent. Nesting success of 15-20 percent is necessary just to maintain the population at existing levels. --The five-year-average for non-treated areas was 14 percent--beneath the break-even level!

Lloyd Jones of Delta's U.S. office, was quoted in the April/May issue of Wildfowl Magazine. Jones says Delta has spent 80 cents an acre on predator control over the life of the study--"pretty inexpensive crop insurance, especially compared to the thousands or tens-of-thousands of dollars spent per-acre to construct islands or peninsulas, or build predator exclosures," he says.

"We've never suggested trying to eradicate duck predators across the entire Prairie Pothole region. We propose identifying areas with the highest potential for duck production and reducing the predator population in these areas during the nesting season."

"Sportsmen spend millions of dollars through their license fees and their membership in conservation organizations, but some of the projects that their dollars support aren't producing ducks. If some of that money were devoted to controlling predators, sportsmen would see a better return on their investment."

...Makes sense to me...

Duck fortunes turned around a bit in the past five years, with improved habitat on the prairies of the U.S. and Canada, and more nesting opportunities available, thanks to the CRP program.

Drought is never a stranger to the prairie regions that hatch the continent's wild duck population. It will be back, one of these days.

Jones wonders that as the end of the current wet cycle that gave duck numbers a boost is bound to come, and opportunity to really get a jump on duck population recovery may have been lost.

He says waterfowl aficionados may have just been predator-precluded from a chance to make more ducklings while the ponds were full.

Come on you DU/Delta guys... We're after the same thing, and we can get along here. It's all a matter making the obvious choices that lead to more ducks for our bucks.

Lady Whitefaces lose twinbill with Monterey

LUBBOCK — The Lubbock Monterey Lady Plainsman gave Hereford a preview of things to come during the very first inning of a twinbill here Friday — the hint wasn't very subtle either.

Hereford gave up 16-runs on six hits, six walks, two hit by pitcher and eight errors in the first frame of play and watched as the Lady Plainsmen began a march to sweep the double header with 21-3 and 14-4 wins.

The losses, which were both absorbed by Lady Whiteface hurler Monica Dominguez, dropped Hereford to 5-11 for the season.

Larissa True went all nine innings to win for Estacado.

Lubbock earned five more runs in the second inning before the Lady Whitefaces answered with three of their own in the third following a walk by Salina Hastings, a single by Dayanara Garcia and a Teresa Zimmerman triple that drove in two runs. Jessica Gaitan then brought Zimmerman home off a single to finish the opener.

The Lady Whitefaces recovered somewhat in second game, trailing 1-0 through three innings before taking four runs off Lubbock in the top of the fourth.

Hereford loaded the bases and Lubbock walked Crystal Luna walk to bring in one run, and Jessica Gaitan followed with a double to drive in Hereford's last three runs of the game.

Monterey earned six runs in its half of the fourth, added two in the fifth and five in the sixth to cinch the contest.

Hereford's best bats for the day were; Gaitan who finished 3-3 and three RBIs, Luna who went 2-2 and Erica Dominguez with 2-4.

The Lady Whitefaces will return to action Monday when they travel to meet Frenship in a game set to begin at 4:30 p.m.

doubles team, suffered a 6-2, 6-2 defeat to Dumas' Pendergrass-Ames, and then bounced back to win their third match against Frenship's McFadden-McCollum team.

Hereford's Kimberly Scott and Auckerman doubles team went 1-2 to slide into the top half of the consolation bracket of the tourney.

Andrew's Overbeck-Stein and Vernon's Carr-Gooch were heading into the championship round of girl's double competition.

Estacado Matadors down Hereford, 12-2

Loss drops Herd to 3-8-3 with loop playing beginning next week

From staff reports

LUBBOCK — The day was shaping up splendidly after sophomore Whiteface pitcher Eddie Lacy fanned one hitter, allowed no walks and held Lubbock Estacado bats silent in the first inning here Friday.

But the day changed when the beast woke up. Estacado won its sixth straight game 12-2 over the Whitefaces with three runs in the second and third innings, one in fourth and another five in the fifth.

The Whitefaces slipped to 3-8-3 heading into its first district game Tuesday against Dumas there at 4:30 p.m.

Hereford drew first blood in the top of the second inning behind a base hit down the third base line by designated hitter Richard Salinas, a base hit by Andrew Villareal, a Lacey walk to load the bases and another walk by Andrew Ramirez to score Salinas.

But Estacado came back in the bottom of the second and scored three runs on four hits.

The Whitefaces earned their final run in the top of the third on a George Castillo score.

Hereford was scheduled to meet the Canyon Eagles there in a pre-district warm-up game Saturday at 1 p.m.

CBS pulls plug on ties with online gambling

Following NCAA concerns with CBS affiliate's offshore gambling link

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — In response to concerns raised by the NCAA, an Internet company partially owned by CBS will sever ties to an online sportsbook. "We will continue to support the NCAA's aggressive anti-gambling efforts," CBS spokeswoman LeslieAnne Wade said Friday.

A day earlier, NCAA executive director Cedric Dempsey had expressed unease over broadcast partner CBS' ties to Sportsbook.com, a popular Web site that takes offshore bets on the NCAA tournament. With the TV contract running through 2002, Dempsey said the NCAA could do little to force the network's hand.

"But as we look toward renewing a contract, or negotiating a new one, any relationship to gambling would certainly influence our thinking," Dempsey said.

Wade said CBS was unaware of the relationship between Sportsline USA, a Fort Lauderdale, Fla.-based Internet company that produces the CBS Sportsline site and Sportsbook.com.

Sportsline USA president Michael Levy confirmed that his company leased the Sportsbook.com Web site address — known as an URL, or universal resource locator — to a gambling operation run by Global Internet, a company based in the Caribbean. Although CBS owns a 20 percent stake in Sportsline USA, Levy said he was uncertain whether he had informed his corporate partner of the lease.

On Friday, however, a spokesman for Sportsline USA said the Web address would be put up for sale immediately.

Dempsey said even though the connection to CBS was distant, the NCAA was sensitive to the appearance of impropriety. The organization has been rocked by point-shaving and gambling scandals in recent years.

Meet

"It just felt good in Chicago that night. I had a variety of different people on me. It wasn't that they did a bad job, just my teammates did a great job of getting me the ball."

Mateen Cleaves, Michigan State's first-team All-America, had a bad night in the first meeting, going 3-for-17 from the field with nine points and six assists.

"I don't even think about that last game. I try to get that game out of my head," said Cleaves, who has averaged 11.3 points and 7.0 assists while keeping up his tough defense in the NCAA tournament. "I'm really not going out there to play for payback or that I have to prove to somebody that I can shoot better against Duke.

"My thing is I have to concentrate on doing a better job for my team," he said. "I didn't do a good job with my team then, my shooting. ... This time I have to do a better job of running my team."

Both teams are better than they were in December and history becomes a fading factor in an event like the Final Four. Still, reality is reality.

Coach Tom Izzo, who has the Spartans in the Final Four for the first time since 1979, was asked if he has found a flaw in Duke.

"I guess if you have to really search and search and search, there's no backup point guard for Avery if he gets in foul trouble and that could be a problem," he said.

Hospital's staff, board will honor physicians at breakfast

Special to The Brand

The Hereford Regional Medical Center physicians will be honored Tuesday as part of the observance of National Doctors Day.

The breakfast will be sponsored by the hospital staff and administration and the Deaf Smith Hospital District directors.

Doctor's Day has been observed annually on March 30 since 1933 in commemoration of the first use of ether anesthesia in 1842. The day has evolved into a celebration to show appreciation for the role of physicians for caring for the sick, advancing medical knowledge, and promoting good health.

The HRMC staff includes 10 highly skilled and qualified physicians on active staff, with another 36 physicians on the hospital consulting staff.

The physicians include:

"to create a positive level of awareness of (HRMC) specialized doctors and services; to positively influence market share by encouraging residents to stay in Hereford for health care."

In its presentation, Price said the hospital has some unique selling points: personal care; the nurse-patient ratio, which is two nurses per patient; special attention to detail, citing the dietary staff's home-cooked meals and other personal touches; specialized local services, such as laproscopic, ultrasound, pain management, and physical and occupational therapy; and epidurals, which will be available at the end of this month.

Price also stated the concept for the awareness campaign will focus on five services offered by the hospital: emergency room/EMS; physical/occupational therapy and rehab (outpatient services); general hospital services; surgical services (inpatient); and OB-GYN services/epidurals (women's services).

The agency recommended a new logo, although board President Mal Manchee said the current logo is only about five years old. Price, however, said a new logo would provide a fresh look in building the corporate identity for HRMC.

He also suggested replacing the motto "Neighbors helping neighbors" because the slogan doesn't make any connection with quality health care service.

He also said brochures would be a good way to promote the new image of HRMC. The brochures would be consistent in appearance and message, he said.

In other areas, Price identified public relations opportunities for the hospital. He suggested preparing press releases identifying new doctors and other new hospital employees, as well as any new programs or equipment/services.

He recommended establishing a hospital speakers bureau, which would involve hospital personnel, physicians and board members. The speakers would be available to promote the hospital and its services through appearances at civic and community groups, seminars and workshops.

Price also suggested the hospital should sponsor a "monthly luncheon with four to five community/opinion leaders. The HRMC administrator and department heads should be present and use ... (the luncheon) to inform community leaders on the medical and economic benefits of HRMC in the area."

In the efforts to boost public awareness of the hospital and its services, representatives of the agency will work closely with a marketing committee at the hospital. The members of the committee are HRMC administrator John Studrud, administrative assistant Carolan Garza and special projects coordinator Donna Kemp.

Tom Bailey will forever carry the reminder of his fifth trip to Africa — the one where he contracted malaria.

The Church of Christ minister from Hereford, along with Joe Don Cummings, a member of his church, recently returned from a mission trip to Guinea, Africa, where there are many refugee camps.

Bailey has made similar mission trips four times previously, but this was the first trip for Cummings.

"My first impression was it was so hot. When we stepped off the plane it was like getting into a sauna," Cummings said. "And there was no breeze. It was suffocating."

According to Bailey, there are only two seasons in that part of Africa — the wet season and the dry season.

"It starts raining in May and the rainy season ends in December or January. It gets a little cooler then," Bailey said.

Bailey and Cummings made the trip to Conakry, Guinea, by air, but their 12-hour journey from that point inland to Gueckedou was in a rented Toyota.

Guinea borders war-torn Sierra Leone, leaving it as the closest haven for vast numbers of refugees fleeing the area.

"From the first time I went to Guinea, which was several years ago, to now, I see a sadness in the refugees I have never seen before," Bailey said. "And I saw more malnutrition. The United Nations has cut its help to try to get them to go back home."

Bailey asked one of the natives of Guinea if he resented having so many refugees from Sierra Leone and Liberia in Guinea.

"Oh, no," he responded. "They are our brothers. The people that live there used to live here and we know that if everything was turned around they would accept us."

Bailey feels that the government of Guinea has shown some resistance to the refugees because they don't know how to handle so many.

"But," Bailey said, "there is so much corruption in the government (which is primarily a dictatorship), the people have no respect for the government."

Signs of the corruption were evident to Bailey and Cummings when dealing with customs officials in the airport.

"As we were going through customs, Joe Don took out some money to pay what he thought was an exit tax that was required. That wasn't really what they wanted, but when they saw Joe Don's money they took nearly all of it," Bailey said.

"This is a game with them. They don't blatantly confiscate everything, but they have ways of taking things. They play this game to provide for themselves. You have to learn not to be intimidated by them."

Rice is the main staple in the diet of the natives where Bailey and Cummings visited. The language is primarily French or English besides the tribal tongues.

"There are literally thousands of refugees living in camps made of mud houses with tarps for roofs," Cummings said.

Conditions in these refugee camps are deplorable, according to descriptions by Bailey and Cummings, and the people just want to go home, but they can't because they will be killed in the war.

There is no running water and no bathroom facilities.

Medical care is virtually nonexistent.

"In one of the camps, we visited a hospital that was awful. The smell was horrible, one room had four or five cots with no ventilation and no lights. The man we went to visit had been there for a week and had not seen a doctor," Bailey said.

Life expectancy is 50 to 55 years, according to Bailey.

"Sixty is very old. They even considered me old this time," he said.

Malaria is the second leading cause of death in Africa, surpassed only by AIDS. The refugees have no money to buy the medications that would keep the disease under control.

Bailey kept a journal during his trip which conveys much about his feelings and the conditions in the areas he and Cummings visited.

Excerpts from that journal follow.

The Journal

Conakry, Guinea, Thursday, Feb. 4: We are here and all is well. We arrived last night. This morning we went to Christian Missionary Alliance to exchange some money. The exchange rate was $1 U.S. = $1,360 Guinea Franks. We arranged for a vehicle, a Toyota, to take us inland tomorrow. It will cost $1,000 American for the 10-day trip. We are to leave in the morning to go inland. We will travel dangerously close to the border of Sierra Leone. The war continues to drive many residents into Guinea. I pray for courage. A hungry mosquito visited me last night.

Gueckedou, Guinea, Friday, Feb. 5: We made the trip. It took 12 hours. The jungle was burning all the way. At this rate there will not be a jungle in a few years. I feel pretty well but my stomach is a little uneasy. It seems to be cooler here.

Saturday, Feb. 6:

We went to meet all the important people today. We had to negotiate the rent for the next six months. It was decided that the church would pay $15 per month. The church has had problems in the past with their treasurers running off with the church funds. It has happened twice. Money is so hard to come by that it is a great temptation. Money is the root of all evil.

Barry is getting malaria. It is the second leading cause of death in Africa. Aids is the first. If you come enough you will eventually get malaria. I hope I don't.

My thoughts drift back home. I wonder what my family is doing. I pray all is well.

Sunday, Feb. 7:

I preached in Sayanin. It was a four mile walk to get there. We then had to walk an additional four miles to Farako. It was getting warm and we were late. At times we almost ran. My feet hurt. I wore my dress shoes, a mistake.

Monday, Feb. 8:

What a day. I'm so-o-o tired. We walked to town to find some needed items. I tried to call home but missed Cindy. Joe (Joe Don Cummings) did get to talk to Ann. By the time we got back my stomach was feeling bad. I tried to rest but some brothers from a congregation having problems came to talk. It took many hours and was very difficult. As we talked I became feverish. The light hurt my eyes. It was difficult for me to listen and be patient.

I took Tylenol twice. It did not help. The last time I doubled up with aspirin. I felt a little better for a while. I wish I could speak to Cindy. But, I am glad she does not know of my condition. She would worry.

We went to visit a hospital today. The conditions there would make anyone sick. It was almost too much for my queasy stomach. I would hate to end up there. I will be okay. I'll take it easy tomorrow.

Tuesday, Feb. 9:

Boy! What a night. It was rough. I'm beginning to think that I may have a touch of malaria: fever, aches, stomach problems. I have slept much and taken all the stomach medicine I dare but with little results. I long for a modern bathroom. I have passed on my bucket bath for two days. To soak in a tub of warm water would be nice. As evening comes I long for the comforts of home. The comforts we all take for granted every day. I hope to sleep tonight and get stronger tomorrow. I must do the work I came to do.

We have learned that all the refugees are involved in a nationwide census. They have to register this week if they plan to get UN aid. The aid is not much but it is all many have. It can mean the difference in survival. It will make some of our work difficult.

Wednesday, Feb. 10:

Last night was rough. I was sick all night. The mosquito has done his thing. I should say her thing. It is the female mosquito that carries the disease. Wouldn't you know it? I guess I have malaria. If you come to Africa enough times you will get it. This is my fifth trip. My luck just ran out.

They brought me some medicine today for malaria. I have not eaten in two days. This is a great weight loss program. I feel stronger tonight. Maybe the worst is over.

Thursday, Feb. 11:

Today I do feel better. The fever seems to have broken.

I may have been premature about getting better. The fever is back. I know I have lost weight. My appetite is gone. What little I do eat is forced. Malaria is not much fun. They can keep it.

We helped a blind man today. He is a Christian brother and needed some financial help. He seemed very thankful. His is a sad story. Africa is full of sad stories. There is so much war. There doesn't seem to be much worth fighting for. The people are friendly and gentle. It doesn't make much sense. The leaders are the problem. The refugees just want to go home.

The census has stopped most activity. They stand in lines for hours and days waiting to be counted and registered.

The rest of the world rushes on at a fast pace. Here everything seems to crawl. The people are unaware and could care less about the rest of the world. Who can blame them?

We have so much and we take it all for granted. We flip a switch and "Wah la" a light comes on. It seems so simple.

I was asked if I had a car. When they found out that I had two they were in awe. Anyone with one car is considered very rich here. I didn't have the heart to tell them that my daughter in college has a car as well. You almost become embarrassed, no ashamed, of our wealth.

Friday, Feb. 12:

Last night I slept well and the fever is less. We went to town this morning and I purchased an umbrella to try and stay out of the heat. I wouldn't be caught dead using it at home, but here I am not concerned with appearances.

Engagement announced

Tommy and Linda Brown of Hereford announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Tracy Lynn Brown, of Manhattan, Kan., to Matt William Wallace, also of Manhattan.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Danny and Roxie Wallace of Grady, N.M.

The couple will be married July 17 in the First Baptist Church of Hereford.

The bride-elect is a 1996 graduate of Grady High School. She is a pre-pharmacy student at Kansas State University.

Wallace is a 1995 graduate of Grady High School. He is a candidate for May graduation from Kansas State University with a bachelor's degree in animal science.

Girl Scout Carnival is Tuesday

The annual Hereford Girl Scout Carnival will be held from 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday in Hereford Community Center.

The fund-raiser will feature game and food booths and is open to the public.

My energy is still not good. I force myself to eat but it is still not much. It is so hot. I would pay for some of that West Texas wind.

Saturday, Feb. 13:

We got up early this morning to make the trip to visit the congregations. We stopped many places along the way to meet and encourage the brethren. A stray bullet from the war had recently killed a sister in the church. This is how close we are. I saw a military truck with several bullet holes in the windshield. This is not safe Hereford. At home we take our safety for granted. I am so glad my children are not here. I wish they could see this place for a short time. It would change them. Joe claimed the other day that he would never complain again about anything at home. I laughed but he was serious. I understand.

They just brought supper, bananas and oranges. I just sucked an orange. You don't eat them here. All is well but I could use a Big Mac.

After meeting the camp leaders we took a tour of the camp. This is the saddest place I've seen. Seventy-five percent of the people are malnourished. The children are the hardest hit. One hospital is full of those who have been mutilated by the rebels in Sierra Leone. It is almost too much. The stories are inhuman. The people just want to go home. Going home sounds good to me. I go home to a free, safe place with plenty of everything. The freedom we have come and continues to come at a great price. Most take it for granted without a thought.

The landlord came to welcome me. It is their custom to welcome a stranger with a gift. I was given a chicken. It was just what I wanted. This is considered a great gift here. I was thankful but I don't think I will try and take it home.

My energy is gone again. It doesn't take much. The sickness took a lot out of me and the heat takes the rest. As I look up at the African sky I realize how far I am from my own children. I will soon be home. Will I ever return to Africa? I don't know. I would rather stay home where all is well. But what of the precious souls here, would others come if I did not? Who? It makes me tired to think about it.

Conakry, Monday, Feb. 15:

We left at 6 a.m. The trip was just as long and hot as it was coming. After arrival we went to the "Texas Chicken" to eat. I even had ice cream. It was so Goo-o-o-d! I will sleep tonight.

Brussels, Thursday, Feb. 18:

I am behind on my writing. I will catch up. Tuesday we went to C.M.A. to get our tickets. We had trouble finding it again but we finally connected but we missed lunch. We had plans to eat at the Texas Chicken again. This is how it goes in Africa.

Wednesday we did get to eat at the Texas Chicken. There is just no chicken like Texas chicken.

On the way back we stopped at an international fair that was taking place. Africa is a place of extreme contrasts. We saw them selling Toyotas priced at $80,000 right next to a place selling baby chickens and eggs.

Today we are in Brussels anticipating home. After washing up in the bathroom, where there was warm running water and real live toilets, we readied for the long leg home. It will be a total of 32 hours travel time before Hereford, but it will be home. America the beautiful. I can't wait. I am so blessed to live there. I take so much for granted. I have been reminded again how much we have. I pray for Africa. I pray for the war to end. I thank God for home.

Education Roundup

By Carolyn Waters

"If we had no winter, the spring would not be so pleasant; if we did not sometimes taste of adversity, prosperity would not be so welcome." —Anne Bradstreet (1612-1672)

Choral directors, Jane Gulley and Margaret Williams, and choir members at HHS and HJH are working diligently to prepare for the choral ensemble contest which will be held in late April. Musical selections for each choir are from a prescribed list from UIL and are chosen according to the size of the school. Most of the music for each choir will be classical music. Approximately 50 HJH students and 40 HHS students will participate in the competition.

Pace Lawson's essay on the millennium was printed in the Newspaper in Education section of the Amarillo Daily News, March 5. Pace, like many other students, has a talent for writing and he is practicing that talent in the contest area. There are many opportunities for students and they sometimes need some encouragement from parents and teachers to do this. Opportunities for scholarships often include an essay — again proving that any experience in this area is valuable.

It is not too early for next year's fourth through eighth graders to begin preparation for the Geography and Spelling Bees. Everyday experiences can enhance knowledge in each of these activities.

Josephina Zapata will represent HISD in the senior division of Spelling Bee and Clayton Patton will represent the district in Geography Bee.

Although the Geography Bee material delivered to HJH was inadvertently "returned to sender," the director contacted us personally and plans have been completed for Clayton's trip to Fort Worth for the state competition on April 8-10.

American history students in Diedra Drake's classes are studying the Bill of Rights and will be using the newspaper to locate examples of the Bill of Rights in today's world. Each student will write a short essay on their findings.

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Our 16-year-old son recently admitted that he is having sex with his girlfriend, "Evie." It's not as if we have never discussed sex. We have had long talks with him about it and discouraged premarital intimacy. He seemed to understand the dangers, but apparently, that didn't stop him.

Evie's parents are divorced, but we are friends with both of them. I think the girl should tell her parents that she is having sex so they can advise her and help her choose an appropriate method of birth control. Our son says he is using condoms, but I know they are not always 100 percent reliable. Both of these kids want to go to college, and we are concerned that an unplanned pregnancy could destroy their lives.

I don't know how to get Evie to tell her parents. Her mother is a very understanding woman, so this ought not be a problem. Should I let my son know that if Evie doesn't tell her folks, I will? My husband says it is none of our business, but I say what happens to our teenage son definitely IS our business. Please advise me. — Upset in Cape Coral, Fla.

Dear Cape Coral: Do NOT tell the girl's parents that their daughter is having sex with your son. The young couple would consider it a betrayal, and it could poison their relationship with you for all time. It is up to Evie to tell her parents, if she chooses to do so.

Although your son is demonstrating responsibility by using condoms, he should know that the failure rate for condoms is about 17 percent. A pregnancy for these two would be disastrous. Don't count on a frank discussion to change their behavior, however. Experts tell us that once teenagers become sexually active, they rarely stop.

Since your son has told you what is going on, urge him to insist that the girl tell her folks, so she can see a gynecologist on a regular basis. It is important that she stay healthy and informed. Some visits with the school counselor would be very helpful. I recommend it.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 40 years old and recently divorced. I was married for 20 years to a man who was abusive physically, emotionally and mentally. It took a lot of strength for me to leave him, but I finally did it. My 19-year-old daughter just moved into her own apartment, and my teenage son lives with his father.

My kids were very understanding at the time of the split and quite supportive. It's been six months now, and I have met someone new. This man is kind and loving and respects me. I haven't been this happy in a long time. He has asked me to move in with him, and I have agreed. It means, however, that we will be moving to a nearby state. When I told my daughter about our plans, she became upset and laid a major guilt trip on me.

Ann, I love this man and want to be with him, but I desperately need my children's approval for my own peace of mind. Their father is seeing someone, which seems fine with them, but evidently, it is NOT fine for me. What should I do? — Troubled in Florida

Dear Florida: Don't move — just yet. Visit for several weekends, and see how it works. You will then have a better idea what life with Mr. Wonderful would be like on a full-time basis. If you take your time, your children will be much more accepting. Their support could be a big plus, but don't let their approval be the deciding factor on what kind of social life you are going to have.

Gem of the Day: It is perfectly OK to ask dumb questions. They are a lot easier to handle than dumb mistakes.

ABUSED CHILDREN AND PLAY THERAPY

It is a well known fact among psychology professionals that a carefully supplied playroom, rather than an office, is a better location for child therapy especially when abuse is suspected. The play media will assist children in their efforts to communicate their feelings and the natural environment will help the child client feel safe and in control. It has been proven that play therapy has been the most effective in helping abused or neglected children. The play behavior of these children is likely to be primitive and disorganized, thus making them a behavior problem in the classroom or at home. They often see themselves as powerless to affect the behavior of others.

The Action Mental Wellness Center uses a contingency play format to teach impulse control and maintain enjoyable interactions with peers and adults. Sexually abused children require extra consideration, understanding, and support from therapists, parents, teachers, and other care givers. The children are initially unable to discuss the problem because of the intense feelings of guilt, believing that somehow they provoked the attack or could have done something to prevent it.

They may feel worthless and ashamed of having been used or abused in such a manner. They may be more affected by the questions and reactions that follow than by the act itself, and they often feel intense guilt at having gotten a parent or other adult "in trouble" or "in jail," or barred from the home because they "told." Many times the child will deny it ever happening because of the embarrassment, guilt and fear.

The adults involved in such incidents need to be very cautious and professional for the protection and confidentiality of the child. The child should be rescued from threats either to tell or not to tell and the incident be given to the professionally trained psychology counselors so as more trauma will not be caused the child. Caution must be taken to avoid influencing the child's statements by asking leading or closed questions.

Children may need information about what is appropriate and inappropriate touching or treatment and to be assured that certain parts of their bodies are private. They may need to be told that the adult's sexual or punishing behavior was inappropriate. Young children will have limited mental development and understanding so communication and treatment will need to be at their cognitive level of the child. The anxiety surrounding the topic can create some post-traumatic stress symptoms which will need professional therapy to resolve.

Preventive programs are the most useful for children who have been abused as well as children who have not, because they give both groups information and confidence to handle situations. The DRESS YOUR FAMILY FOR SUCCESS PROGRAM held at San Jose Community Center is one of those such programs. Trained child specialists teach the children a safety program that has received national recognition for empowering children against abuse. If your family needs help with these or other problems, contact Tili Boozer at 364-HELP (4357).

At the Front of the Pack: The Art of Leadership

If you think you're a born leader, but have no followers, you may just be taking a walk.
— a paraphrased proverb

Many people talk about leadership; few really know what it is. Many set out to become great leaders, but few accomplish the task.

For those of you who would like to develop your leadership skills, I offer these words of wisdom. I gleaned them from some great resources, which I list at the end of this column.

Leadership Characteristics

• Leaders Are Laborers Worthy of Their Hire. A leader is one who "shows the way", "marks the course for others" and "guides by example." Leaders can expect no more effort from their followers than they put forth personally. Leaders love to labor and they love their labor.

• Leaders Are Earnest. The word earnest means to be "serious and intense," "zealous and sincere" and "focused on the most important matters." One of the great characteristics of leadership may be the ability to discern what is important that needs attention, and what is trivial that can be ignored.

• Leaders Maintain Positive Attitudes. As I grow older, I become more convinced that maintaining a positive attitude is critical to personal success. I am also convinced that it is easy to maintain a good attitude simply by following the advice found in Philippians 4:8.

• Leaders Are Diligent. The word diligent describes those who are "hardworking," those who work with "careful, steady efforts" and those who are "dependable and steadfast." Great leaders from history have demanded diligence from those around them. They got it because they set the example with their own diligence.

• Leaders Are Filled With Enthusiasm. W. Clement Stone described enthusiasm as "inspiration to action." Leaders are inspired to act. And they inspire action in others. When people are filled with excitement they talk. When they are filled with enthusiasm they act. Actions have always spoken louder than words and produced more results.

• Leaders are Responsible. I've noticed that difficult tasks tend to move toward those who are willing to do them. Personal growth comes from exercising your will to accomplish, and accepting the responsibility for getting it done. Harry Truman had a sign on his desk that read, "The buck stops here."

• Leaders are Self-confident. I believe there is a direct link between confidence and capacity. As you grow in the assurance of your abilities you acquire the capacity to achieve more. More than 2,000 years ago, Publius Vergilius Maro - the Roman poet better known as Virgil - wrote: "They can do all because they think they can."

• Leaders are Humble. All great leaders give credit to others. Alexander Pope wrote "Who builds a church to God and not to fame, will never mark the marble with his name." I might add that the more you blow your own whistle the more likely you are to run out of steam.

• Leaders have Integrity. To me integrity is "the quality of sound moral principles," "dealing with honesty and sincerity" and "avoiding spin, lies, and strategic omissions." Remember this: Truth is eternal, lies are temporary. A friend in the insurance business says that honesty is the only policy, but there aren't nearly enough policyholders.

• Leaders Prioritize Their Lives. Leaders work on the most important tasks first. Their lives are structured around their most important priorities. Matthew 6:33 offers great advice in the area. When your priorities are right, living is great.

The following books provide many great leadership examples and further direction: "The Bible," "Developing the Leader Within You" by John C. Maxwell and "The Book of Leadership Wisdom," by various business leaders.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By Martha Russell

The saga of the TIF grant continues. TIF stands for telecommunications infrastructure, by the way.

The Texas Panhandle Library Collaborative grant proposal has been fully funded in the amount of nearly $2,000,000. You don't need to adjust your glasses; you read it correctly the first time. The grant is non-competitive, which means that most, if not all, feasible proposals will be granted at some level, as long as the money holds out. The fact that our was fully funded is a testimony to the fine job done by the Texas Panhandle Library System staff and Amarillo Public Library staff (and probably others I am not aware of).

Now don't think that all that money is going to the Deaf Smith County Library, although we will share in our part of it. The money will be used Panhandle-wide to improve or establish telecommunications with the other libraries in the Panhandle. While we already have the Harrington Library Consortium, it is desirable to upgrade and improve our capabilities with a view to the future. This grant will be able to go beyond what HLC is able to do, especially as regards the small, remote libraries that are scattered throughout our area.

One of the provisions of the grant is that an expert in the field of telecommunications will go to each of the grantee libraries to assess their site and make recommendations, considering community resources, for the most economical and efficient way for each one to be linked to the others. It may be that the library is already using the best system for that location or, especially in the isolated areas, there may be some new, cutting edge technology that will make distance learning, resource sharing, and who knows what else, available for everyone in the Panhandle, no matter where they live. They may not have a grocery store in their little burg, but they will be able to access the information resources of the world. What an incredible opportunity!

Along with the telecommunications technology, the grant provides for the user-end hardware (PCs). As I understand it, each member library will be given two PC workstations, with which to access the Internet, and other equipment for a local area network. This will help us as we experience more and more patron use of the Internet.

Now that we're going to get all this fancy equipment, what are we going to do with it? The grant covers that also. The entire library staff is going to a series of workshops to learn all we can about our new equipment, how to use it, and how to fix simple things that might go wrong. We're going to be so smart! We may turn out knowing just enough to be dangerous. And it may take all six of us pooling our knowledge to be able to accomplish anything, but that's the beauty of being able to send the whole staff to training.

The downside to this training business is that staffing schedules are a little busy right now. When you come in, you may have to wait just a minute to be waited on, especially if the phone is ringing, someone wants to use the computer, and a family is looking for AR books. We are all having to dig in and cover for the staff members who are not here because of training. While we are short-handed, we ask for your patience in the hope that, as we enter the new millennium, we will do so prepared and able to use the technology available to us to assist you.

It really is an exciting time for libraries. The incorporation of new technology requires us to broaden our vision, stretch our abilities, and be open to new ways of meeting the needs of our communities. While the image of the "library dragon" with her hair in a bun, her glasses halfway down her nose, and her face contorted in a perpetual pucker, is no longer appropriate, it is sometimes hard for those whose world has revolved around books to expand to accept the importance of other delivery systems of information without being intimidated.

The comfort is that, as wonderful, exciting, and desirable as technology is, they still haven't found a way to totally replace books. Laptops still aren't small enough to stick in your coat pocket like a paperback. Computers, even laptops, still have to be plugged in to something to access the Internet, but a book will go with you to the Outback (not the steakhouse), if you wish. And, no computer could possibly have the satisfying feel and smell of a good book.

Speaking of computers and being prepared for the new millennium, have you begun stocking up on supplies for the Y2K event? If you need help to know what you will need, we have the book for you.

Making the Best of Basics: Family Preparedness Handbook by James Talmage Stevens gives you guidance to be able to live from your own personal resources for up to a year regardless of external conditions. This handbook gives you a plan for acquiring and maintaining your in-home storage, charts defining what foods and nonfoods to buy, and a list of resources to help you find local suppliers.

Jaime Steiert hones skills in 4-H

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

In the course of time, 10 years registers as an infinitesimal dot when compared with the eons which have passed before and those yet to come.

But one Hereford High School senior, Jaime Steiert, considers the last 10 years as the foundation for what she hopes to build her life, and the cornerstone for the foundation is her work in the local 4-H club.

Steiert has spent her club time working through the programs to where she's now the state first vice president -- the second leading state officer.

Her position as first vice president, recently allowed her the opportunity to speak to a group of 1,500 4-Hers during the Houston Livestock Show.

"I had a week's notice to prepare a speech and be ready to go to Houston," she said. "I compared the group of 4-H members to the earth, wind, fire and water."

"It all came up suddenly, when the state president announced she was unable to fulfill her duties."

In her speech to the 4-H club members gathered for the world's largest stock show, Steiert stressed the fire was the spirit that drives all 4-H members, the wind is the direction they choose to travel in life, water is what is added to improve life, and the earth is the person who is responsible for all.

Talking day, no guess she thing but sonable this has

"When I joined 4-H, I was so shy and introverted that my teachers used to have to pry me out of the corners, just to get me to join a group," she said.

I remember signing a green sheet of paper, thinking I would cook a few things or maybe do some simple sewing, but it turned out to be so much more."

Steiert admits she joined 4-H mainly because a few friends did and she really didn't have much expectations. Her big dream was of earning a green jacket which is worn by state council members.

"I tried lots of different 4-H programs, but getting involved in the public speaking is probably what had the greatest impact. It taught me I could get up in front of a group and talk and not be afraid," she said.

"The best thing about 4-H is it can be tailored to nearly anyone's interests."

"What I have learned in 4-H carries over into every aspect of my life. It's brought me out of my shell, and opened a whole new world full of different cultures and perspectives," she said.

Her time in 4-H hasn't always been good times and fond memories, but the lessons she has learned from these hard lessons have helped build her weaknesses and encourage her strengths.

Steiert considers the record keeping skills to be one of the best things she has gained from her years in the club.

"I've learned how important it is to document everything and how much easier it is applying for scholarships and college with all my projects and dates at hand," she said. "Without the records no one could possibly keep up with dates and other important events."

She attributes her personal growth and accomplishments to the help she has received from the county agents, sponsors, and the community in general.

"4-H is about so much more than just cows and plows," she said. "It's about learning the values of community service, and that winning isn't everything. When the kids show their animals, it's not about the animals, but what the kids get from raising and caring for it."

Steiert does not believe in sole effort accomplishments.

"Nothing in life is the end result of a sole individual. Everyone has help along the way, and 4-H members in this community get unbelievable support from the community as a whole."

As she nears the end of her high school years, Steiert, knows exactly where she is going and what she wants to do.

She plans to attend Texas A&M, and major in Agricultural Development. She plans to continue in collegiate 4-H and someday she wants to teach, preferably in a rural school system, or maybe work for agricultural betterment through the legislature.

"None of this would have been possible without the help from the 4-H sponsors and the lessons learned in the last ten years."

Parasitic mites threaten bees Honeybee pollination falls 90 percent

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Two parasitic mites have so decimated wild honeybee populations in Texas, researchers say their numbers now hover close to extinction.

By Texas A&M University's estimate, the state's wild honeybee population — responsible for pollinating produce and wildflowers — has fallen by 90 percent since 1985. Commercial beekeepers have seen their honeybee colonies reduced by 50 percent over the same time period.

Bees may seem pesky, but beekeeper Clint Walker of Heidenheimer says their absence would be worse.

"If you buy groceries, have a garden or like to see wildflowers, you're going to be affected by this," Walker told the Temple Daily Telegram.

The value of pollination of the cultivated crops by managed colonies of honey bees is estimated at $487 million annually, said Dr. John Thomas, Texas Beekeepers Association executive secretary.

The culprits are the tracheal and varroa mites, which first infiltrated commercial hives in the 1980s, then escaped into the wild. Tracheal mites lodge in bees' throats, while varroa mites seal themselves into egg chambers and feed off developing larvae.

A&M's Texas Agricultural Experiment Station is one of several federal and state agencies asking the Texas Legislature to spend $1.4 million on research and management programs to bolster the bee population.

Bee numbers nationwide have dropped dramatically, and academics and government agencies are trying to find ways to save the insect, which America's first settlers from Europe imported.

"It's not a trivial issue at all," explains Robert Coulson, entomologist for the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, who was prompted last summer to visit East Texas' national forests when word trickled down that the bees were all but absent from the woody region.

Coulson and his team laid out "bee boxes" to trap and study them.

"We didn't scare a bee up," he said Sunday.

While most farmers depend on commercial bees for pollination of their crops, many other farmers have counted on the wild honeybee to just show up when the time for pollination is near. Blackberries and watermelons are just two crops that rely more on wild honeybees than commercial bees, Coulson says.

"A lot of crops that are naturally pollinated ... assume that the pollinators will be there," he added. "Most people don't think about it until it doesn't happen."

Walker raises bees in about 20 Texas counties from the Gulf Coast to the High Plains and in South Texas between San Antonio and Laredo.

"I have lease agreements with about 170 landowners," he said. "They get free pollination and some honey out of the deal. Most people are more than willing to make that deal."

Consumers won't see results of lower tomato farm prices

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — Florida's tomato growers and their employees are taking a beating in the industry, hurt by competition from Mexico and an abundant harvest that makes the fruit a money-losing venture.

But even as growers receive less and less money for their crops, most large supermarkets aren't lowering prices to consumers, a situation that may soon get scrutiny from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

A primary bone of contention for farmers is the North American Free Trade Agreement, which opened the market to cheap tomatoes from Mexico.

Florida supplied 65 percent of the tomatoes consumed in the United States before NAFTA, compared with Mexico's 35 percent market share, said Skip Jonas of the Florida Tomato Committee, a growers group. Now, Florida supplies only about 35 percent of tomatoes sold in supermarkets, with 65 percent coming from Mexico.

"Every year I see farmers going broke or quit. Every year," said Robert Borek, a second-generation farmer from Homestead, near Miami, who is contemplating getting rid of his 250 acres of tomatoes.

Borek's tomato crop used to account for half the income on his 1,500 acre farm. "My only two choices are to quit or to stay in this thing till I go bankrupt."

Farmers say the flood of cheap fruit from Mexico was exacerbated by this year's favorable growing weather.

"The growing in both Florida and in Mexico has been ideal this year. We've just had too many tomatoes," said Jonas. "It has occurred in the past, but way back. It's just very unusual."

As of Wednesday, the average price paid to farmers was 22 cents a pound, down from 28 cents last week, said Bob Blankenship, an economics researcher for the state agriculture commissioner. The Florida Tomato Committee estimates that 28 cents to 32 cents per pound is the break-even point.

NAFTA hasn't helped, Florida's tomato growers say. Cheap land and abundant water, in addition to growers who don't have to pay for Social Security, worker's compensation, or unemployment benefits, makes the playing field uneven.

In 1996, Florida growers settled antidumping lawsuits challenging Mexico's low tomato prices with an agreement that set a floor price for both Mexican and U.S. growers of $5.25 for a 25-pound box, or 21 cents a pound — not enough to make a profit.

Furthermore, there is no limit on the amount of tomatoes Mexico can export to the United States.

Florida officials have been told the U.S. Department of Commerce is investigating whether Mexico is again dumping cheap tomatoes in the U.S. market. A spokesman for the department who declined to be identified said the department is not investigating, but continues to monitor for dumping.

Calls to the Confederation of Agricultural Associations of the State of Sinaloa in Mexico weren't returned Thursday. Sinaloa is the largest tomato producing region in Mexico.

Despite the situation, supermarket prices for tomatoes are stable or even higher, said Blankenship.

In Florida, for instance, the retail price went up from $1.48 to $1.52 a pound last week. "We're puzzled why that would be happening," he said.

Congressional representatives have asked the U.S. Department of Agriculture to step in. Annette Clauson, an economist with the department, said Thursday it is considering whether to open an investigation.

Mickey Clerc, a spokesman for the big southern supermarket chain Winn-Dixie Stores Inc., sought to explain the disparity. "There are a lot of steps in between the field and the product packaged and offered for sale in the supermarket. Our objective is to be competitively priced."

Part of the problem is that large supermarket chains are buying each other out, Blankenship, the state economist, suggested.

"There are fewer buyers because of consolidation. There's less competition, and that's one of the overall things when you're looking at what impact this may be having not only on fruits and vegetables ... but all grocery items."

While consumers aren't seeing lower prices, they do get one perk from the current oversupply: higher quality.

Florida farmers for the last three to four weeks have harvested only the best quality tomatoes, an effort that artificially limits supply.

Borek estimated that about 60 percent of his crop would be harvested, with the rest left to rot on the vines.

Fireants threaten California agriculture

KERMAN, Calif. (AP) — Would fire ants make it to California? Fresno County Agriculture Department entomologist Norman Smith always knew it was a question of when, not if.

The pest, a major problem in the Southeast, has indeed been spotted in the Golden State, causing officials to go on heightened alert.

The California Department of Food and Agriculture last week announced statewide plans to eradicate the vicious ants, setting aside $2.8 million in seed money to assist counties and cities in the effort. The state also planned to add inspectors at border stations and work closely with local governments to remove the insect.

"We'll get this eradicated," Smith said, turning over soft dirt in an almond orchard in west Fresno County where he found hundreds of fire ant mounds. "It's possible here because once we get rid of this, that'll be it. The problem isn't as widespread as in the South."

The ants, which are native to South America, were first spotted in the southern United States in the late 1920s. Since then, the insects have dominated 11 Southeastern states, affecting human health, agriculture and the environment.

"By the time they said 'uh-oh,' it was too late," Smith said.

In October, the problem moved west when fire ants were discovered in Southern California after contaminated nursery stock was transported from Nevada.

The same fire ants known to viciously attack people also can hurt agriculture.

"They cause a whole raft of problems," said Sanford Porter, USDA Agriculture Research Service entomologist in Gainesville, Fla. "For example, they'll chew the bark of young citrus trees, eventually killing them. Citrus growers in Florida lose about 5 percent to 20 percent of their trees that way."

The ants also can decrease soybean production by a couple percent, he said.

It may not sound like much, "until you multiply tens of thousands of acres, then you're talking about millions of dollars in losses," Porter said.

Although recent discoveries of fire ants in California's farm-rich Central Valley have been controlled, no one is taking the insects lightly.

Smith found about a dozen fire ant mounds on a 1,200-acre almond grove in west Fresno County, but later discovered a bigger problem in a smaller orchard just half-mile north: hundreds of mounds in a 120-acre orchard.

"We had no idea they were out there until the county called," said Paul Betancourt, 39, a third-generation farmer who owns the orchard. "We haven't had anyone bitten in the orchard."

Porter, who has been following California's fire ant problem closely, believes it's not too late to remove the ants completely from the state.

"It's not necessarily a losing battle, but it'll be a very difficult battle," he said. "If it's anything less than a major effort, it'll surely fail. But not trying will essentially mean that within 20 to 30 years, the whole state could be infested."

Jalapeno farming provides legislator/farmer first hand knowledge of high value crops

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Once a month, state Rep. Gene Nicholas escapes the heat of the North Dakota legislature to tend to something hotter — his jalapeno farm in Arizona.

"It's a good reason to go to Phoenix in the wintertime," says Nicholas, who seeded 600 acres of jalapenos on his farm about 30 miles south of Phoenix last year.

That's big compared to your average pepper farm, which is only about 30 acres.

"I think we have to continually look at diversifying. I think agriculture is always changing," he said.

North Dakota Agriculture Commissioner Roger Johnson said more farmers are taking a closer look at high-value crops because "so much isn't profitable anymore."

"If they have some risk-ods, a division of Campbell Soup Co. of Camden, N.J., which makes picante and salsa sauces.

Mike Kilpatrick, a Campbell spokesman, said the company contracts with pepper growers in California, Florida, Texas and New Mexico as well as Arizona. Some of its supply is grown in Mexico, Kilpatrick said.

"They're a very critical part of the Pace product, having fresh jalapenos," Kilpatrick said.

Nicholas, who has been in the hot pepper business for three years, thinks the vegetable has potential.

"It's probably more profitable than grain farming," he said.

But he describes the jalapeno enterprise as "a more capital intensive" type of farming, compared to the agriculture in North Dakota.

"You have higher input cost, but you got a little more potential on an acre," he said.

Fertilizer and water are expensive. Costs per acre can run about $3,000, compared to probably $125 an acre for wheat in North Dakota.

The jalapeno transplants are seeded with a planter similar to a tree planter, only it can plant six rows at a time.

This year, Nicholas is using a sprinkler system instead of relying on ground water to irrigate the crop. He also has tried mechanical harvesting, with a combine built specially for jalapeno harvesting.

The peppers get picked about six to seven times a year. Nicholas planted in February and plans to start harvesting in the first of June. Then, the plants are cut down. They grow back and are picked again three or four times at the end of September or October before freezing in December.

After planting, it takes about 120 days until the peppers are ready to be picked. Then, the plants can be picked every 17 days.

farmers a devastating punch," the letter says. Congress provided $5.9 billion in assistance last fall, a month before the election. This isn't an election year, but Swenson said farmers are ahead of where they were at this time last year in convincing lawmakers that they need extra government assistance.

"Do we have a steep hill to climb, absolutely," Swenson said. But last March "we were told we had zero chance."

ington over the course of this month.

While they oppose production controls supported by the Farmers Union, the Farm Bureau members say in a letter to members of Congress that the 1996 farm law needs a "thorough reexamination" to "assure adequate economic and disaster assistance for all commodities."

The 1996 law gave farmers more flexibility on what they could plant but it sharply cut crop subsidies that were intended to provide a safety net with prices dropped significantly.

The Farm Bureau wants the Agriculture Department to expand its use of export subsidies and the Conservation Reserve Program and is asking Congress for tax cuts and a moratorium on new regulations that affect agriculture.

"Lack of significant progress in these areas combined with significant economic troubles in the world are throwing

Farmers appeal in person

Producers flock to Washington to be heard

WASHINGTON (AP) — They don't agree on what should be done, but scores of farmers are flying into the nation's capital this month to appeal for government help to survive another year of low commodity prices.

Wheat "at my local elevator is $3 a bushel and that's not enough to make it," said Mark Sitz of Drake, N.D.

He is among 150 members of the National Farmers Union who fanned out across Capitol Hill on Monday to lobby lawmakers for billions of dollars worth of proposals, including increased price supports, payments for on-farm grain storage, purchases of low-price corn for ethanol production, and a short-term land-idling program to reduce production.

"Fundamental changes must be made in farm policy," Farmers Union President Leland Swenson said.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

By POPULAR MECHANICS

For AP Special Features

When most of us think of finishing for our wood projects, we think of varnish. And, at one time, the term varnish was used for any coating applied as a liquid that dried to a hard, solid film.

Today, varnish is still a catchall term, but it is usually confined to finishes that contain oil and natural or synthetic resins, or, lately, latex and hardeners like polyurethane. The new, water-base latex varnishes go on white and dry clear, in contrast to the yellowing tendencies of older formulations.

While polyurethane resins are found in just about everything these days, they also deserve a category of their own. These plastic coatings are hard and resistant to scratches, abrasions, heat and moisture, and almost nothing sticks to them.

Unfortunately, polyurethane has trouble holding its grip on raw wood, and spotrepairs are difficult because an old coat won't accept a new coat. Polyurethane is so good at repelling things that it even repels additional coats of polyurethane once it has cured. Still, for high-traffic surfaces, such as tabletops and floors, it's hard to beat its durability.

Oil finishes come next on the list of popular coatings. Originally, furniture was finished with linseed oil. But linseed oil never really dries hard. For that reason, most woodworkers prefer tung oil, Danish oils or other so-called penetrating oils.

Several coats of tung oil, which usually comes thinned and fortified with drying agents, provide a low-luster satin finish that remains flexible and resists moisture and impact. Because tung oil dries fairly quickly and is not terribly resistant to scratches, it's not the best finish for dining tables and other high-use areas.

Penetrating oils may contain tung oil or linseed oil, but they go beyond these oils by incorporating resins that harden in the wood. As such, these finishes are actually thin varnishes. They offer the subtle appearance of an oil finish, but are generally harder and more resistant to scuffs, abrasions and scratches.

No Fatal Error in chilling new TBS Superstation thriller

Janine Turner plays Samantha Carter, an Army virobiologist sent to investigate a deadly virus, in Fatal Error, a TV movie premiering Sunday on the TBS Superstation. Antonio Sabato Jr. co-stars.

The suspenseful original music at the start of Fatal Error sets the tone for the first original TV movie produced for the TBS Superstation.

Premiering Sunday, March 28, Fatal Error stars Antonio Sabato Jr. (Melrose Place), Janine Turner (Northern Exposure) and screen veteran Robert Wagner (Hart to Hart).

The fast-paced cyberthriller begins with the graphic, grisly deaths of seven lawyers during a teleconference with an Australian communications mogul. The bodies of the lawyers instantly lose their fluids and calcify, breaking apart like brittle cookies.

Sabato plays Dr. Nick Baldwin, a medical maverick who happens to be on the scene when the lethal legals are discovered. In charge of the hush-hush investigation is Samantha Carter (Turner), an Army virus specialist examining a series of similar deaths.

The investigation reveals that the deaths do indeed come from a virus — a computer virus. The suspense builds as the doctor and the specialist put the pieces of the puzzle together while trying to beat the clock.

The special effects in Fatal Error are quite special. Both traditional animation and computerized effects are combined to produce the horrors of the viral plague.

"I feel very good about the computer-generated images. The idea is that someone crumbles, and that's very hard to do," executive producer Frank von Zerneck explains. "I know nothing about computers, but I certainly know what a computer virus is. The hook is, what would happen if you could break the barrier and wreak havoc with the human system?"

In one scene, von Zerneck says, a detailed life cast of an actress's head was used to create a horrifying shot of her jaw shattering. In another, the plague disintegrates a man's eye. The illusion is created with a large balloon painted with glue. The glue flakes off as the balloon deflates, and a computer shrinks the "disintegration," fitting it right into a shot of the victim's face.

The thriller operates, with a few twists, within the classic movie conventions: boy meets girl, and together they conquer the bad guys. That meant both challenges and opportunities for Turner, whom most associate with the role of feisty pilot Maggie O'Connell in the TV series Northern Exposure.

"(Carter) pretty well hides her emotions, so I thought this wouldn't be as emotionally draining," she says. "But I realized, in order to make the part interesting, you have to have subtleties and have a good sense of where your character is. Otherwise it's bland."

The producers, aided by director Armand Mastroianni, avoided the pitfalls of the action film genre by subverting the conventions, von Zerneck says. For instance, the plot doesn't hinge on hanky-panky between the main characters, despite how great they look together.

"We took great pains to make it that way," he adds. "I think everybody wants to see something grounded in reality. When they are beating the clock, they wouldn't be rolling around in bed together."

Other differences? "Role reversals," he says, explaining that you might assume Sabato would be the quirky Army officer and Turner would play the concerned doctor. Casting perennial favorite Wagner, he adds, was Mastroianni's idea — but saying more might give away the plot.

"One tries to be fresh and innovative, but there are certain ground rules," von Zerneck concludes. "You're making a thriller. You need to peel back the revelations like an onion to create a movie with a lot of twists and turns."

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ March 28-April 3

ARIES - March 21/April 20
When it comes to a family decision this week, you can't think just about yourself. You're not the only person who will be affected by this. Consider the toll your choice will take on everyone involved, and then decide. A close friend needs your help with a problem at work. Offer your advice, but don't get too involved.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
Keep a positive attitude when it comes to work, Taurus. There are a lot of rumors going around, but don't believe everything that you hear. Talk to reliable sources, and try to find out what's really going on. A loved one is feeling down in the dumps. Do what you can to cheer him or her up. Gemini is involved.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
"What are you talking about?" You'll find yourself asking this question a lot during the week. Friends and loved ones keep turning to you with irrational questions. Don't get frustrated; just try to help them understand what's going on. Leo plays an important role late in the week.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
A business accomplishment puts you in the spotlight at work. Don't shy away from the attention. You should be proud of what you've done. Your superiors are impressed with your efforts. That special someone is angered by something that you do late in the week. Try to make him or her understand your motivation.

LEO - July 23/August 23
Don't be taken in by an acquaintance's sweet talk. He or she is trying to get you to do something that you normally wouldn't do. Don't fall for his or her tricks. Stand up for what you believe in. A good friend shares a secret with you. Keep it to yourself, because it's not your place to tell anyone.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
Don't be nervous about an important meeting this week, Virgo. You are more than capable of handling the situation and coming out on top. Loved ones offer their help with a personal matter. Say yes. You know that you can't handle this on your own.

★ ★ LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

While you would prefer to be alone this week, you don't have that option. Co-workers get you involved in a difficult problem at work, and loved ones monopolize your time at home. Help everyone out, and do what they need you to do. Don't get frustrated — you'll have plenty of time to yourself soon.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
Don't try to monopolize that special someone's time this week. He or she has a lot to do and can't be spending every minute with you. Don't get nervous. His or her feelings for you haven't changed at all. You're still the one. A family member asks for your help with a financial matter. Do what you can for him or her.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
You really stick your foot in your mouth when talking with a loved one early in the week, Sagittarius. Don't get upset with yourself. Just explain what you really meant to say. He or she will understand. A close friend invites you out. While you don't want to go, say yes. You're sure to have a good time.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Try to keep a stiff upper lip when someone whom you respect is upset with you. While some harsh words may be said, he or she really has your best interest at heart. Try to remember that. That special someone has a surprise for you. Enjoy!

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
Don't just stand by and watch a close friend make a bad decision this week, Aquarius. Try to make him or her better understand the situation. While this person may be angry at first, he or she will be glad that you get involved. Gemini plays a key role late in the week.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
An acquaintance turns to you for help with a family problem. While you want to help, don't get involved. You don't know enough about the situation to give him or her sound advice. A loved one takes you out for a night on the town. Enjoy yourself!

Mara Wilson (Matilda) stars in Balloon Farm, the story of an eccentric farmer's magical crop that brings hope to a drought-stricken town. The movie premieres Sunday on ABC's Wonderful World of Disney.

Disney's lovely Balloon Farm a buoyant fable for families

By John Crook

OTVData Features Syndicate

A 12-year-old girl and an eccentric farmer teach the residents of a drought-stricken farm town about the power of hope and belief in Balloon Farm, a delightful fable premiering Sunday, March 28, on ABC's The Wonderful World of Disney.

Emmy winners Rip Torn (The Larry Sanders Show) and Laurie Metcalf (Roseanne) star with Mara Wilson (Matilda) in the TV movie, adapted from a popular children's book by Jerdine Nolen.

Torn stars as Harvey Potter, who startles the residents of tiny Waterston when he arrives in town and announces he plans to start a farm in the middle of a drought that has lingered for a year.

Harvey immediately captures the fancy of imaginative Willow (Wilson), especially after he grows, overnight, a crop of brilliantly colored balloon plants.

Willow's parents (Metcalf, Fredric Lane), like most of the other locals, see the inexplicable plants as a much-needed sign of hope. As the drought continues, however, town misanthrope Wheezy Mayfield (Roberts Blossom) plants seeds of suspicion, turning the townspeople against Harvey.

Only Willow keeps the faith, ultimately discovering the real purpose of the magical balloons and vindicating her friend Harvey.

"This is a wonderful story (that) celebrates the power of belief," executive producer Wesley Moore says. "We want viewers to come away with the thought that we all need a chance to believe things can change ... even if, right now, it looks like you have next to nothing."

Despite the presence of such stars as Torn and Metcalf, Balloon Farm obviously was filmed on a limited budget, but the simple presentation actually works in favor of this slender story, which easily could be overwhelmed by special effects.

Balloon Farm is a charming parable with a bumper crop of fine acting that should buoy the spirits of families suffering through a dry TV season.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: I am mesmerized by British actor Robson Green, who has starred in Reckless and The Prince of Hearts on Masterpiece Theatre and Touching Evil on Mystery. What can you tell me about him, and when will we see the proposed sequel to Reckless? —Rose Inman, Whiting, N.J. (similarly from B. McFarland, Alameda, Calif.)

A: Robson Golightly Green was born Dec. 18, 1964, in Hexham, Northumberland, England, but grew up in Dudley, a small mining village outside Newcastle-upon-Tyne. After acting in school plays, he played in a couple of bands, then acted in regional theaters before landing his breakout role of hospital porter Jimmy in the BBC series Casualty.

That led in turn to Soldier Soldier and other TV roles, but Green also found time to start a singing career with friend and partner Jerome Flynn. The duo's award-winning record "Unchained Melody/White Cliffs of Dover" sold nearly two million copies in the United Kingdom.

Green and his wife, Alison, an occupational therapist, make their home with their dog, Fern, in the Simonside Hills of Northumberland.

Masterpiece Theatre airs the original Reckless on Sundays from March 28 to April 11. A week later, on April 18, the two-hour sequel premieres. Mystery also will air new episodes of Touching Evil next season.

Green admirers with Internet access should visit www.robsongreen.com, a superb fan Website.

Q: Does the actor who plays Jimmy James of NewsRadio also provide the voice of Bill on King of the Hill? —Scott in Colorado Springs.

A: Yes, that's Stephen Root in both roles.

Robson Green

Q: I thought the new Babylon 5 "sequel" called Crusade was supposed to premiere in January. Where is it? —Joan Hansen, Amherst, Mass.

A: Crusade, starring Gary Cole, now is scheduled to premiere on TNT Wednesday, June 9. The chief reason for the delay is the complexity of the show's special effects, according to TNT publicist Denise Godoy.

Q: In recent Frasier reruns, I was surprised to hear mention that Frasier Crane had been married and divorced twice. I know of Lilith, but who was the other wife? —Charlie in Fort Myers, Fla.

A: In a Cheers episode, Frasier and Lilith took their son, Frederick, to see kiddie entertainer "Nanny Gee," played by Emma Thompson. To Lilith's horror, a stunned Frasier recognized "Nanny" as an old college girlfriend with whom he had had a brief but torrid marriage. (Lilith subsequently dubbed her "Nanny G-Spot.")

SOAP TALK

Davidson reprises role of Ashley on Y&RBy Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

She made Ashley Abbott one of the most popular characters on soaps, and now Eileen Davidson is back in the role on The Young and the Restless.

Davidson, who originated Ashley in 1982, left the show in 1989 to pursue other projects. She went on to work on Santa Barbara and Days of Our Lives.

A source close to Davidson says Y&R made her an offer she couldn't refuse.

Dear Candace: Is there any chance Brenda (Vanessa Marcil) will return to General Hospital? It was such a great show when Sonny and Jax (Maurice Benard, Ingo Rademacher) were fighting over her. —Bethany, Dallas, Texas.

Dear Reader: Marcil will return to Aaron Spelling's Beverly Hills, 90210 next season. It doesn't look as if she'll be visiting GH any time soon.

Dear Candace: Kelly Ripa (Hayley, All My Children) is way too thin. After she had her baby, it is like she went on a diet and forgot to get off about 15 pounds ago. She is a very pretty girl. Someone needs to free up her schedule so she has time to eat, or bring her a hamburger and some fries. —A Concerned Fan

Dear Reader: Ripa has a tough schedule and a baby to chase around at home. She is also blessed with a high metabolism.

Dear Candace: I think it is about time that Carrie and Mike (Christie Clark, Roark Critchlow, Days) finally had a real relationship. Austin (Austin Peck) is always running to Sami (Allison Sweeney) for something. Austin blew his marriage to Carrie, and he doesn't deserve her. —Sandy Caro, Michigan.

Dear Reader: Don't get too comfortable with the idea of Carrie and Mike as a couple.

Dear Candace: Who is the actor who plays Ben on One Life to Live? He looks so familiar. —B.N.D. via the Internet.

Dear Reader: Mark Derwin portrays Ben on OLTL. He also played Adrian on Y&R and Mallet on Guiding Light.

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

Here it is, another month gone. We will soon be moving our clocks forward again. It seems I just get the time clock adjusted to time change and here we're moving it again.

I remember when I was a kid, living on a farm in Oklahoma, we didn't move our clocks and had just as many hours to do our work. You worked from daylight to dark and sometimes longer. We didn't worry about having a lot of extra time in the evening, we sat on the front porch in the moonlight and talked.

Usually my brothers and I walked on stilts Daddy made for us or rolled each other in a tire until you couldn't stand when you got out of it. If we weren't doing that Dad had us run down the road half mile to the east or west corner and see who could run the fastest. We didn't have to worry about saving energy. We heated with coal and read by a kerosene lamp and later Aladdin lamps. I studied and read at a big library table in the front room.

Now it seems with moving the clocks forward or backward we don't have time to sit on the front porch. Don't get me wrong, I love my electric lights and heating and refrigerated air conditioning. Also hot and cold running water, a bathtub and a flushable commode. So guess its best to adjust to the time change and not complain.

As some of you know, we were awarded $10,000 from the Amarillo Area Foundation to help with floor repairs. To receive these funds, we need to raise the balance of the cost of repairs. We have a budget of $39,271. We have people who have donated $17,705 and with the $10,000 from the Amarillo Area Foundation, we now have a balance of $11,566 to raise before we start the project. We need to start immediately raising the rest of the funds. If you feel you can make a donation, we would really appreciate your help. We have a deadline to raise the needed funds and complete the project. We really appreciate the Amarillo Area Foundation for their help. They have awarded a large amount of money for different projects at HSCA in times past.

We have so many sick in our community at this time. Please pray for them. We are so thankful for friends and we all know there is no way to get through serious illnesses and loss of our friends and loved ones without each other.

We know its spring time when Jan Furr is working in our flower beds. We always look forward to the beautiful flower gardens she works with. She will be trimming rose bushes around the first of April if weather permits. Please watch for the transformation of the two brick flower beds at the auditorium entrance.

Have you noticed Ralph Packard trimmed the big red oak tree in front of our building? Thanks Ralph, we appreciate it very much. Jan working in flower beds, Ralph trimming trees, the Quilters, the Thriftstore volunteers, Maintenance, Nutrition program, activity instructors, and all other who helps in various spots reminds me of the article written by Bennie Womble. Please read it. It's very interesting.

Remember the banana - when it left the bunch it got skinned.

Gardening tempos: slow vs. fast

By GEORGE BRIA
POUND RIDGE, N.Y. (AP)
— In the midst of ever-dizzier speeds, a good place to slow down is the garden. You get time for reflection.

For sure, this is easier for retirees than for working people. But I've known dedicated gardeners who would find time for both job and garden, even rising earlier in the morning to tend their beloved plants and breathe easy among them.

Drop a seed in the ground, or in a flat under lights, and you've got to wait for it to sprout. Maybe it won't, if the seed is sick or dead or if the light, soil, humidity and temperature aren't right. But it will take at least a few days, and maybe a couple of weeks, or even more than a month, for you to find out.

That's part of the scene — the waiting, the anticipation and then the delight of seeing that first touch of green or the sense of failure if nothing shows.

But no message flashes across a screen saying you've goofed and telling you to retry or press any key to continue.

In a culture of sound bites and fast chips, slow motion may be tiresome to some. In fact, speed lovers have made some inroads into gardening. To cut time, many people have abandoned seed-sowing altogether in favor of ready-to-go plants. At a nursery, I've seen people spend hundreds of dollars in a single day on plants. They'll have lettuce patches and flowerbeds overnight.

Of course, with perennial ornamentals and trees, the time involved in getting growth makes it sensible to buy plants. But annual flowers and vegetables may easily be raised from seed, depending on your interest.

Gardening completely with store-bought plants resembles painting with numbers or eating only in restaurants or bringing takeout meals home. It's not art or cooking.

But you might ask what's wrong with beautifying your place with store-bought plants or cutting nursery-bred fresh lettuce leaves out of the garden? Who cares that they come from the nursery or, if you're well-off, that you hire somebody to do all the work?

Augusta Carter, a Georgia-born master gardener I knew, once told me, "A gardener has to get grimy and dirty and enjoy what comes out of real work. If you're one of those people who are afraid to get your fingernails soiled or broken and you don't want to put on dirty old jeans and old sneakers and get out and dig, you're not really a gardener."

Now dead, she was 81 at the time, but still intensely involved in the gardening she first got to love as a child in Georgia's red soil.

There are levels of gardening, of course. For some, it's just a kind of decor, like wallpaper or furniture. For others, it's a passion.

Even today, these aficionados not only plant from seed packets, they know how to save seeds from their own plants and propagate them. Many old-time tomato and

Meet our Volunteers

NEWEST VOLUNTEER

Anxious that we are for new volunteers at the center, we heartily welcome Janet Moody, who became our newest, and probably youngest, volunteer in January. Janet is willingness personified. She is dependable every day in her role as "jumper." For those not well acquainted with meal home delivery, a jumper hand carries the meals from the van to the people in their homes. A dual purpose here — first, to deliver the meal, and secondly, to check on people, to make certain they are alright. Janet is very adept in fulfilling these duties.

Janet was born and grew up in Hereford, graduating from Hereford High School. Should you mention family to her, she quickly produces pictures of son Kyle, and a granddaughter, who live out of state.

Janet likes to cross-stitch, play the piano, and bicycle. We hope she adds "volunteering" to her list of favorite things to do.

The glory of children

We are reminded of how lacking our Festival of Trees would be without the involvement of children. All elementary schools are invited to attend and many participate by decorating trees and, thus, become a very major part of the festival. But then on certain days, school busses can be seen pulling up at the center—and then groups of children appearing on stage in the auditorium to sing Christmas carols. Upon touring the center, there is excitement on their faces, particularly at the sight of the wonderland of trees and the Lionel Train. Candy canes quickly disappear before the children are transported back to their respective schools. Yes, we believe the festival is truly enjoyed by the children who participate and visit, but even more so by the seniors watching the children and their reactions to the festival. Children are glorious—we appreciate them! After all, seeing the anticipation of Christmas on the face of a child is what it's all about!

The word is 'symbiosis'

By Bennie Womble

This word means the association of two unlike organisms for the benefit of each other.

In Africa, the animal most feared by man is not the lion, rhino, or elephant, but rather the Cape Buffalo. The buffalo, with its wide horns (or cape), has been known to ambush and kill hunters. Yet, this fearsome beast lives its whole life in perfect harmony with a small bird called the Oxpecker. This bird feasts on the insects in the buffalo's ears and nostrils. These insects would likely drive the large animal crazy if the little bird didn't eat them. In exchange, the bird is fed well and protected from attack by falcons, hawks and eagles. So, each one of these two creatures benefits from helping each other.

Other examples of symbiosis are the honey bee and the hummingbird. Each of these thrive from the nectar in the flowers and yet keep the flowers alive by cross-pollination.

I believe we have symbiosis locally in our Senior Citizens Center. The center supplies us with many comforts, such as food, hobbies, games, exercise programs, places for meetings and get-togethers, social events, and transportation. In exchange, we seniors keep the center open by generous donations of our volunteer time, money and leadership.

Our quilters, for example, sew many quilts every year, which they sell to benefit the center. They, in turn, enjoy each other and form life-long friendships.

There are countless others who keep our center going. Many of these people are going to need to be replaced due to natural attrition. We can't keep the center as it is without more people stepping up to take the places of those leaving.

I don't know of another synonym for the word "symbiosis." The word "cooperation" is close, but alike organisms are not what symbiosis is.

Researchers define syndrome that precedes Alzheimer's

By ERIC FIDLER

Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Researchers here found a way to identify some people at high risk of developing Alzheimer's disease, a discovery that takes on added significance as scientists attempt to find a way to delay the onset of the devastating disease.

A study published in the March issue of the Archives of Neurology defined ways to diagnose people with mild Alzheimer's and mild cognitive impairment, a condition that often precedes Alzheimer's.

Researchers led by Ronald C. Petersen at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., gave participants a battery of neuropsychological tests, then assessed the results of each one and diagnosed the patients as being healthy, having mild cognitive impairment or suffering from mild Alzheimer's.

They then followed the progress of the subjects — 76 with mild cognitive impairment, 106 with mild Alzheimer's and 234 healthy control subjects — over seven years.

Petersen said mild cognitive impairment was already a recognized syndrome, but the researchers developed more rigorous guidelines for diagnosing it, based on a battery of neuropsychological tests.

In a telephone interview from Washington, where he announced both the results of the study and the start of a new one, Petersen said mild cognitive impairment is the diagnosis when memory problems are severe enough to interfere with the lives of people who otherwise are functioning normally.

People with this impairment, researchers found, develop Alzheimer's at a rate of about 12 percent a year, meaning nearly 50 percent of a group diagnosed with mild cognitive impairment will develop Alzheimer's within four years, he said.

The researchers said the normal population develops Alzheimer's at a rate of about 1 percent a year.

There is no cure for Alzheimer's, but scientists are studying whether certain treatments, if used early enough in the progression of the disease, can delay its onset significantly.

"This is the first step in backing up the chain of pathological events that leads to Alzheimer's disease," said Bill Thiese, vice president for medical and scientific affairs of the Alzheimer's Association, which is based in Chicago.

The study being launched will seek to determine whether vitamin E or the drug donepezil, both of which are used in Alzheimer's treatment, will delay the onset of Alzheimer's in people with mild cognitive impairment. Petersen said results will not be available before 2003.

Nutrition Update

By Charlotte R. Clark
MS RD/LD

SALT AND HYPERTENSION FACTS AND FLAVORED SOLUTIONS

Everyone enjoys delicious foods, and each chooses favorite dishes based on how good their taste. Sometimes when changes are made in the foods eaten because of medical problems like high blood pressure (hypertension) the foods do not always taste as good. This does not have to be true! Foods that taste good are good for the person. One asks HOW? It is all about eating a variety of foods, seasoned properly, in the right amounts.

The Sodium-Hypertension Connection. A diet high in sodium is often linked to hypertension, but food choices are not the only cause. Contributing factors include family history, increased age, smoking, being overweight, and leading a sedentary lifestyle. Also, some ethnic groups, such as African Americans, have a higher incidence of hypertension.

So what's the sodium-hypertension connection? Studies show that although going easy on salt and sodium will not prevent hypertension, it can lower blood pressure in those who have hypertension. In fact, even healthy people should watch their sodium intake. Here's the bottom line: nutrition experts recommend a healthful eating pattern moderate in sodium, a physical active lifestyle, and a healthy weight.

What can one do about it? Flavor with less salt and sodium. Before one picks up the salt shaker, think about this — you were not born with a love of salt. A new baby has four primary tastes — sweet, bitter, sour, and salty. A newborn will embrace sweet foods and reject sour or bitter, and can take or leave salty foods. To put it simply, if one is raised on salty foods, they will grow up thinking foods need to be salty to be tasty. Also, most of the sodium one consumes comes from processed foods and foods eaten at restaurants.

The good news is that one can "retain" the taste buds. If one gradually decreases the sodium and salt in the diet, ne finds that the taste for salt declines, too. The less salt one consumes, the less one wants. By selecting lower-sodium brands of foods and adding fruits and vegetables without adding salt, one can lower the sodium in the diet considerably. For added flavor, try using herbs, spices, and salt-free seasoning blends. They are an easy, convenient way to add satisfying flavor to just about any recipe.

Flavorful salt-free solutions to reduce sodium intake.

- Pour one heaping teaspoon of salt-free Italian seasoning blend into boiling pasta water for a light Italian accent.

- Squeeze fresh lemon juice on steamed vegetables, broiled fish, rice or pasta for a refreshing taste.

- Add a few shakes of salt-free garlic and herb seasoning to homemade soup to liven up the flavor.

- Mix 1/4 cup of salt free onion and herb seasoning with vinegar, sugar, and olive oil for zesty vinaigrette.

- Add garlic-flavored vinegar to homemade potato salad recipes instead of salt.

- Slice potatoes and spray with nonstick spray. Sprinkle with a favorite salt-less herb seasoning blend and bake at 375° F for 30-40 minutes.

Label lingo. Today's health-conscious consumers have created a demand for reduced-sodium foods, so eating less sodium is easier than one thinks. Browse the supermarket shelves and you'll find hundreds of favorite foods in reduced-sodium varieties. One cannot always tell if a food is high in sodium by its flavor. Many foods containing sodium do not taste salty — so read the label.

If a product's sodium content has been reduced, one of the following terms will appear on the package:

- Sodium Free: contains 5 milligrams or less of sodium per serving.

- Very-Low Sodium: 35 milligrams or less of sodium per serving.

- Low-Sodium: 140 milligrams or less of sodium per serving.

- Reduced-Sodium: At least 25 percent less sodium than the original version of the product. Some reduced-sodium foods like chicken broth, canned soup, and soy sauce, may still contain a significant amount of sodium. Use them sparingly.

- No Added Salt or Unsalted: Making a great tasting, low sodium homemade marinara sauce is easier than one can believe.

brain disorder afflicting an estimated 4 million Americans. These said costs associated with treating Alzheimer's are currently about $100 billion a year and could rise to as much as $400 billion by 2050.

"It has the potential to overwhelm both our societal and personal resources," said Thiese, who was not involved in the research.

"It's important to recognize that this takes a terrific toll on the people who suffer from it and their families," he said.

Golden Line Dancers

Our Golden Line Dancers keep right on dancing, regardless of our failure to remember, mention and commend them for their hours of practice and performance. Comprising about 18-20 ladies, the group performs the first Monday of each month at Hereford Care Center, and the third Friday of each month at Golden Plains. These ladies do their line dancing for about thirty minutes at each performance. They keep trim and in step by practicing in between at the center - for an hour each Monday and Friday yet! We're proud to have these ladies representing HSCA. Strut your stuff, ladies - you are appreciated!

TRIAD/S.A.L.T. meeting hears Crime Stoppers presentation

On Friday, March 12, Officer Rob Roach with the Hereford Police Department gave a presentation about the Deaf Smith County Crime Stoppers at the TRIAD/S.A.L.T. meeting at the Senior Center.

Officer Roach accepted two new appointments in the last six months; one as coordinator over the Crime Stoppers program and the other as the newly appointed school resource officer for Hereford Independent School District.

A TRIAD consists of a three-way effort among the County Sheriff, Chief of Police and Senior Citizens working together to reduce the criminal victimization of older citizens and enhance the delivery of law enforcement.

85-year-old bartender holds record for longest stretch of serving brew

By KRISTEN HAYS
Associated Press Writer
WEST VIEW, Pa. (AP) —
Beer is to sell, not to drink.

That motto has served Angelo Cammarata well for the more than 60 years he has given faithful patrons cold brew, a sympathetic ear and a joke or two in his homey "shot and a beer" tavern.

At 85, Cammarata, or "Camm" as his customers and neighbors affectionately call him, has been anointed the world's oldest bartender by the Guinness Book of World Records.

"I don't know how much longer the good Lord will keep me here," Cammarata said, sipping "just plain old Pepsi" and nattily dressed in a striped shirt, blue tie and light blue cardigan sweater reminiscent of TV's Mr. Rogers. "I retired 20 years ago, but my boys won't let me quit."

His sons, John and Frank, officially run Cammarata's, a simple brick, two-story tavern in suburban Pittsburgh with 10-cent chicken wings every Monday, a cheeseburger with thick, greasy fries for $3.65 and a big-screen TV and a jukebox in the back room.

Cammarata, who lives in the apartment upstairs with his wife, Mary, still tends bar a few hours each day, particularly for the after-work crowd. The Guinness distinction, awarded in January, isn't just that he tends bar at his age.

He watched televised reports of Neil Armstrong walking on the moon in 1969 from behind his U-shaped bar. He was buying produce for the bar in Pittsburgh's Strip District when the world learned that President Kennedy had been shot in 1963.

He has commiserated with customers suffering from strained marriages, troubled children, depleted bank accounts and overbearing bosses.

"I got an education in the bar," he said. "You do become a kind of psychologist. You have to know your customer."

Cammarata looks more like a grandfather in his 60s than a world-record holder because of his age and occupation. He said he likes a highball now and then, but he took his father's advice to sell beer rather than drink it.

He first stepped behind a bar in 1933, minutes after Prohibition was repealed. His father, Catino Cammarata, didn't want a minute to go by before he started serving beer and liquor in the family's grocery store and ice-cream parlor.

That first day, Cammarata's offered two 12-ounce brews for a nickel. A few customers came in with quarters to get the most out of the special.

The tavern has only ever served beer and shots; its blue-collar crowd doesn't go for Pink Ladies or Manhattans.

Cammarata worked for his father until he joined the U.S. Navy in 1943 for a 29-month tour of duty in World War II. His father died during the war; when he returned, he and his three brothers took over the tavern.

Cammarata eventually became the sole proprietor as the grocery and dairy businesses were dropped.

He moved to West View in 1954. He had learned that the original Cammarata's would be torn down to make way for a shopping center, and he found a tavern for sale in the working-class suburb with an apartment on the second floor to house his family.

Cammarata's longevity behind the bar has brought him other accolades.

He was inducted into Bartender Magazine's Bartenders' Hall of Fame in 1987. Four years earlier, on the tavern's 50th anniversary, the Allegheny County Commission signed a proclamation declaring April 7, 1983, "Angelo Cammarata Day," and the original document with its tattered edges remains tacked on a wall above a cigarette vending machine in the bar.

Gardening

pepper growers are reproducing heirloom varieties year after year with the seeds they expertly save.

But the signs seem to point the other way. I've just seen two new books — "The 20-Minute Gardener" and "The 20-Minute Vegetable Gardener," both by Tom Christopher and Marty Asher. They give helpful hints on how you can garden in just 20 minutes a day, or 40 if you're doing both veggies and flowers.

In this time-saving climate, more and more seedhouses nowadays are offering pots of annual plants to be shipped to you at the right time, all set to go in the ground.

Even the great American pastime of mowing the lawn is affected. I do mine with an easy-to-use cordless electric mower. I asked my hardware store recently why they don't stock them.

The answer I got was, "Few people around here are even buying gas-driven mowers any more. They hire landscaping crews to come in and do the lawn for them."

Dr. Donohue

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: A close relative of mine was recently informed that she has pemphigus. I would appreciate any information you can give me on this disease. —J.S.

ANSWER: Pemphigus is not one but five skin diseases that literally make the skin boil. Painful blisters crop up on the skin, most commonly on the scalp, face, trunk, groin and under the arms. Even the mouth can have a crop of blisters. The blisters rupture, leaving a patch of raw, sensitive skin.

The cause of pemphigus is a renegade immune system that turns against its own skin cells.

In the days before cortisone drugs, pemphigus vulgaris, the most common kind of pemphigus, killed half of those afflicted with the disease. Now, with cortisone drugs and drugs that can control the immune system, such as azathioprine, cyclophosphamide and methotrexate, pemphigus patients often experience long intervals of disease remission.

Your relative has an ally whom he or she should get to know well. It's the National Pemphigus Foundation, whose phone number is (510) 527-4970. The foundation supplies patients with information and provides them support in coping with the illness.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have a relative with Churg-Strauss disease. What causes it? Any cure? Is it hereditary? Is it life-threatening? The relative is a woman of 68 years. —A.A.

ANSWER: Churg-Strauss disease is a rare, mystifying illness. Blood vessels incite a suicidal allergy assault on themselves. The reason why is a question for which there is no satisfactory answer.

Evidence that an allergic reaction is taking place is a rise in blood eosinophils. Eosinophils are one kind of white blood cell. Their numbers rise whenever an allergic response occurs.

In addition to the self-allergy attack, granulomas pile up in blood vessels and many organs and tissues.

Granulomas are mounds of the remains of worn-out cells that did battle with a hostile force.

Often the skin breaks out in bruises and tiny bumps. Granulomas can invade the heart and make its beat feeble. Affected nerves can send out peculiar and painful messages. Almost always body temperature rises, and the patient loses appetite and weight. The patient has such little energy that lying in bed or sitting in a chair is the extent of activity.

Lungs are a prime target of the illness. Asthma attacks signal lung involvement.

Before the era of cortisone drugs, only one in four patients survived for five years. These days, a more optimistic picture can be painted. Some have the illness to such a mild degree that it vanishes on its own. Others have to take cortisone drugs to stop the allergic reaction.

Armed with strong medicines, a doctor can usually save the patient from a disease that has the potential to be deadly.

No one has found evidence that Churg-Strauss disease is inherited.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My voice has changed. It has become deeper and raspy. Sometimes it cracks. My doctor examined me and said all was well. He said the voice change is something that happens with age. Can you recommend anything to change the situation? —I.L.

ANSWER: At least 10 percent of the older population develops the kind of voice changes you describe. Vocal cords can thin and stretch out of shape.

Sometimes they fill with fluid. All of this gives the voice a peculiar timbre.

You were wise to check with your doctor. Serious conditions, even cancer, can be responsible for similar voice changes.

To regain a modicum of their former voice quality, people should never yell. They should not whisper. Whispering strains vocal cords more than yelling. Do not clear the throat, a habit some people unconsciously develop. A speech therapist can teach vocal techniques that can often restore a more pleasant voice.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Here's some information I know you would like to pass on to people who lift weights even though they have high blood pressure.

I lift weights three times a week for two hours at a stretch and have been doing so since I was 50. I am now 85. You can see from my medicines that I have high blood pressure. It's controlled, and I think the exercise has done it for me more than the medicines. —R.M.

ANSWER: What can I add to your testimonial, R.M.? I am in awe.

Doctors used to frown when their high blood pressure patients lifted weights. Straining to lift a weight can cause a 30-point elevation in blood pressure. It's only a transient increase. However, for a person with uncontrolled blood pressure, it might cause big trouble. Your blood pressure is under control.

In the best of all worlds, it would be good to have pressure measured immediately after lifting weights. For most, that is impractical. If a person with high blood pressure gets a go-ahead to lift weights, the person should, concentrate on lifting light weights with many repetitions rather than straining to lift heavy weights with a few repetitions.

It's Not YOUR Problem if One in Five People Can't Read This Newspaper

ILLITERACY

It's not your problem. Just because it costs North American businesses over $225 billion a year in lost productivity doesn't mean you can do anything about it. Just because thousands of students can't read a textbook doesn't mean you can do anything about it. And just because your child can't read a bedtime story with you doesn't mean you can do anything about it.

It's time we stopped letting other people solve the problem of illiteracy. Let's do something about it - now. Because illiteracy isn't your problem. It's all of ours.

Before all else, parents themselves must know how to read. Illiteracy is a vicious cycle that almost always begins in the home. Children of functionally illiterate parents often fail to develop the basic reading, writing and computing skills necessary to be functioning members of their communities.

Volunteer to become a tutor.

Read to your children at an early age. Studies show that infants whose parents read to them learn how to read more quickly themselves.

Take your children to the library. Get them their own library cards when they're old enough. The library features reading materials for all ages, not to mention special programs that promote reading in a fun way.

Make children's books an essential part of charitable donations during the holidays.
