Court's ruling no 'windfall,' no surprise

From Staff Reports

By upholding the constitutionality of the 1980 Windfall Profits Tax on oil, the Supreme Court Monday removed all uncertainty — and hope — in the minds of local oil operators.

"It's the law of the land now, so I guess we've got to live with it," said Loyd G. Whitley, senior vice president at Adobe Oil & Gas Corp.

Midland oilmen said they were not surprised by the decision, although it did remove any glimmer of hope the tax might be lifted.

They blamed the high court's decision, in part, on the federal government's budget deficit.

"We weren't surprised," said Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, the nation's largest regional petroleum organization. "They weren't going to give up any of the tax money they had already collected. The whole time the government's been against us in our fight on this tax, so why should the Supreme Court be any different?"

Related stories, Page 4B

Through last October, the windfall tax had raised $26 billion for the U.S. Treasury.

One-fifth of all oil produced in the United States comes from the Permian Basin region. No tax is paid on Alaskan production, so somewhat more than a fifth of all Windfall Profits Tax payments have come from local production.

"The court, given its make-up, has to take the national view," L.D. Robbins, president of Hanley Petroleum, said. "The tax sounds very palatable unless it's your ox that's being gored."

"There is no justification in fact," for the tax, said independent Don McClure. "I grew up in the oilfield, started on a pulling unit, and worked my way up to being an independent operator. I feel ripped off by the (WPT)...It's totally unfair, and it doesn't benefit anyone but the federal government."

McClure continued, "The tax helped cause the slump that's now occurring in the industry. Check the rig count before the Windfall Profits Tax, and look at it now."

On the positive side, local independents said because doubt sometimes leads to delay, the industry can now move ahead, knowing where it stands.

That's a view Thompson shares. "I really don't think it's going to effect the industry in the Basin that much," he said. "I think one of the things that brought on the fall in activity out here was the fact '81 was the first year they had to pay the Windfall Profits Tax, and people hadn't realized how much it was going to cost them until it took a lot of their cash flow away suddenly. They're going to be a lot more careful about what they're going to do."

HCW Exploration's Frank Agar said he would "really have been surprised" at any other outcome (for WPT). "I've never seen the government give up anything they gained.

"The tax is a penalization of oil companies for 'unjust' profits that no longer exist. It hurts oil companies," Agar said. "The Windfall Profits Tax is a misnomer — just another word for an excise tax."

American diplomats leave Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government says three expelled U.S. diplomats plotted with the CIA to kill Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto with poisoned liquor and to form terrorist assassination squads.

The three diplomats flew Monday night to Guatemala City and arrived in Miami just before noon today.

U.S. Ambassador Anthony Quainton, who accompanied the three to the Managua airport Monday night, told reporters the charges were "absurd" and said the embassy protested the expulsions.

The three were identified as Linda M. Pfeifel, a counselor for political affairs at the U.S. Embassy; David Noble Greig, a first secretary, and Ermila Rodriguez, a second secretary.

A family member said Ms. Pfeifel is 40 and lived in Washington. Ages and hometowns for the other two were not available.

The three refused to make any statement. Greig said they could not talk to reporters because of their diplomatic status.

A Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry communique made public Monday, but dated Sunday, declared the three diplomats "personae non grata" and gave them 24 hours to leave the country.

The communique said "the criminal actions that the diplomats were planning to carry out included the organization of attempts on the lives of leaders of the Sandinista revolution and of high-ranking officials of the Nicaraguan government."

At a news conference Monday, government security chief Lenin Cerna said that in addition to scheming to kill D'Escoto, the three conspired to "create terrorist commandos to carry out attacks against our leaders and exercise influence on rightist political parties and labor unions."

He said they were caught when they tried to recruit Marlene Moncada, a consular secretary at the Nicaraguan embassy in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, to deliver a bottle of liquor to D'Escoto, a Maryknoll priest.

Photos of alleged counter-revolutionaries who Cerna said tried to recruit Ms. Moncada were displayed at the news conference. The black bottle sat on a table and Cerna gestured toward it as he spoke. Although he called it a bottle of wine, it appeared to be one containing a brandy liqueur.

Ms. Moncada, who was at the news conference, said alleged agents who contacted her after she transferred to Managua last year asked her about D'Escoto's habits and told her to go to Tegucigalpa in March.

There, she said, she was told that "D'Escoto must be eliminated because he used the priesthood to introduce communism in Nicaragua." She said she played along with the scheme on instructions from her superiors.

The government decided to act after the bottle was left for her in a hole near a Managua restaurant on May 5, she said.

The Nicaraguan communique claimed investigations carried out by the Interior Ministry's state security department "demonstrated" the diplomats met secretly with a number of prominent Nicaraguans, including Sandinista officials, "to recruit, train, and supply them with the necessary means for the execution of criminal projects."

U.S. Embassy spokesman Gilbert Callaway told The Associated Press, "These accusations are simply absurd and we are protesting energetically to Nicaragua about the expulsion of our three diplomats."

In Washington, Deputy White House Press Secretary Larry Speakes said the Reagan administration "totally rejects their conclusions and their charges in that matter."

Relations between the United States and Nicaragua have deteriorated since the July 1979 Sandinista revolution.

Aid cut-off vote due

WASHINGTON (AP) — After two weeks of negotiations with the Reagan administration, a House committee is preparing to approve cut-off of U.S. undercover aid to rebels in Nicaragua, although its Democratic sponsors concede it has no chance of becoming law.

In a test vote Monday, the House Foreign Affairs Committee rejected 21-12 an amendment to continue U.S. financing of undercover operations unless Nicaragua agrees to halt arms shipments to leftist rebels in El Salvador.

The vote followed closely along party lines and was expected to set the pattern for today's scheduled vote on the overall bill, which would end covert aid after 45 days and substitute $80 million in open assistance to friendly nations to control leftist gun-running in Central America.

The aid cut-off measure was approved May 3 by the House Intelligence Committee. Its approval by the foreign affairs panel would clear the way for a vote by the House, which like its committees is controlled by Democrats.

Tax cut limit expected to fail

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his Republican allies in the Senate say it is a safe bet that House Democrats will fail in their drive to place a $700 limit on the individual income tax cut due in July.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., launched the final Democratic assault against the third installment of Reagan's tax cut program Monday. He said the $700 limitation would affect only those earning more than $50,000 a year and would bring in more revenue to pare budget deficits.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said Democratic leaders in Congress are "virtually unanimous that there should be a cap, in the interest of fairness."

Democrats say the cap is necessary to prevent windfalls to the very wealthy. Republicans claim the very wealthy got their tax break in 1981 when the top tax rate was cut from 70 percent to 50 percent, and that the cap would have its biggest effect on middle and upper middle-income taxpayers.

House Democrats were meeting today to discuss the tax issue as well as a pending conference of House and Senate negotiators who likely will meet Wednesday to begin work on a compromise version of separate budget plans adopted by the House and Senate.

Reagan, meanwhile, said the only message he had for O'Neill was that "I'll give him my autograph on the veto bill." The president made the remark as he handed out autographed cards to finalists in the National Spelling Bee who were visiting him in the White House Rose Garden on Monday.

The president said that O'Neill was ignoring "the fact that 72 percent of the (tax cut) savings already will go to people below the figure he wants to cap."

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes dismissed O'Neill's suggestion, saying Democrats "always want to raise taxes."

El Paso munitions test site closed

Recruits, instructor injured in rocket explosion

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Army officials, hoping to prevent "more accidents of this type," shut down a munitions test site after an anti-tank rocket explosion injured 24 recruits and an instructor.

Maj. Gen. James Maloney ordered the Meyer Range at Fort Bliss closed until investigators can determine why the weapon misfired Monday during an outdoor arms demonstration, flinging shrapnel into the crowd of 60 soldiers who were huddled close to the instructor.

The instructor remained in critical condition today.

Maloney said the precautionary closing of Meyer Range, a part of McGregor Range in southern New Mexico, was necessary "so that there can be no more accidents of this type."

The anti-tank weapon blew up after it had been set aside following a demonstration, with the trainees sitting as close as 8 feet from the rocket launcher, he said.

The general said most of the trainees, members of the First 88th Training Brigade, had been in the Army only "for a few weeks."

Col. Edmund Solymosy, commander of the 88th Brigade, is heading the investigation, which will center on the overall safety of the rocket launcher. One investigator said he believed the reason the weapon misfired was from "something done right there," Fort Bliss spokesman Ed Starnes said.

A soldier wounded in the explosion Monday of an anti-tank weapon at El Paso's Fort Bliss is placed in an ambulance.

The LAW, or light anti-tank weapon, is a 3½-pound, disposable rocket launcher designed to pierce tank armor that is 12 to 18 inches thick. It is a shoulder-firing weapon with a 250-yard range.

"They were all in close. It just was one of those things that happen," Starnes said.

"Some were moaning. Others seemed in shock," said Sharon Saperstein, who was visiting a friend at the William Beaumont Army Medical Center when the injured arrived from the test range about 30 miles northeast of El Paso.

Instructor Antonio Gonzalez, whose home town was not available, was in critical condition after surgery to remove shrapnel that lodged in his abdomen and bladder, said hospital spokesman Capt. David Cotzin today. Six others were in serious condition, and 10 others were hospitalized overnight for observation. Eight others were treated and released.

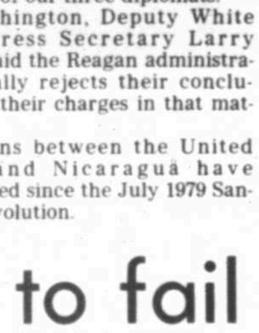

Twenty of the injured were airlifted by helicopter to El Paso, said hospital spokesman Jim Bryant. Five trainees were taken to the hospital by ambulance.

"The thing just blew up. I can't tell you why, but there are training accidents like this from time to time," Bryant said.

Monday's incident was the second serious rocket launcher accident in the last two years, Starnes said. In 1981, a Fort Bliss soldier was decapitated by shrapnel when his rocket launcher blew up.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

An area of showers from Louisiana to Virginia and rain in Maine are forecast by the National Weather Service.

Midland set new record low

An unusually cool June evening, with overnight temperatures dipping into the upper 40s, set a new record low for the Midland area. The overnight low of 48 dropped past the previous record of 55, set in 1978, while the high of 70 was 34 degrees cooler than the record high of 104, set in 1964.

Temperatures are expected to turn more seasonal tonight and Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Skies should be partly cloudy tonight with a low near 60 while Wednesday is expected to bring increasingly cloudy skies and highs in the middle 80s.

A 20 percent chance of showers or thunderstorms Wednesday may increase the monthly rainfall total of .01 of an inch. Precipitation recorded for the year stands at 2.18 inches.

Skies mostly clear across state

By The Associated Press

A high-pressure system sent thermometers falling to record lows and painted mostly clear skies across Texas before dawn today.

Abilene recorded a 55-degree reading, tying a record dating back to 1915. Wichita Falls noted 53, beating the previous record of 55 in 1970. The thermometer fell to 58 at Dallas-Fort Worth, one degree less than the low for the date in 1970.

Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 47 at Amarillo to 73 at Brownsville.

Clear skies and light winds were the rule across most of Texas. Scattered clouds drifted across the Panhandle, South Central Texas and the upper coast. Low clouds and scattered showers dotted portions of South Texas and the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Utah's sandbag efforts continue

By The Associated Press

Volunteers in Utah continued to sandbag furiously as residents of Colorado and Nebraska kept an eye on brimming rivers and reservoirs in anticipation of flooding predicted for later this week.

"We're planning on 200,000 sandbags...including a 25 percent fudge factor," said Kevin Watts, who heads the volunteer effort in the Holladay area of southeastern Salt Lake County in Utah, where Big Cottonwood Creek is threatening to spill over its banks.

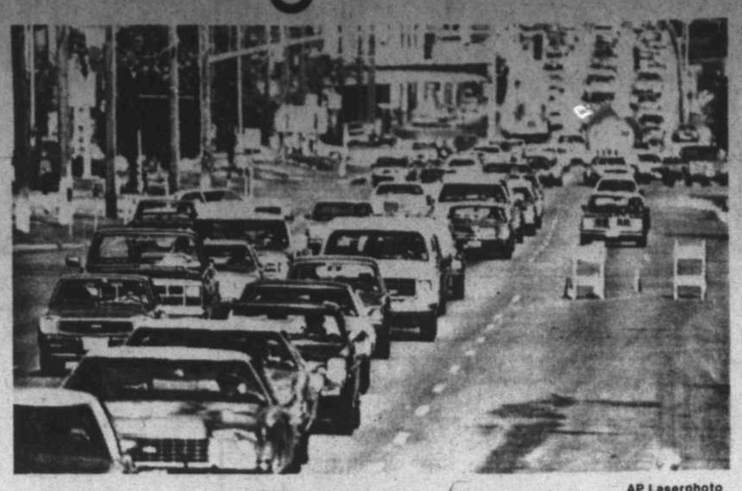

Runoff from a record mountain snowpack that began 13 days ago continued to subside, but officials warned that flooding later this week would top levels that drove 1,600 people from their homes last week.

Watts said about 400 homes in the flood plain where Big Cottonwood Creek once ran would be endangered if the dikes gave way in three areas.

The dikes failed at times last week, causing some flooding, and much higher flows are expected by Friday or Saturday, officials say.

"I'm confident ... we won't flood many homes," said Terry Holzworth, Salt Lake County flood control director. "But I've been wrong in the past."

In Salt Lake City, two $300,000 temporary bridges built over the State Street waterway eased a traffic crunch caused by floodwaters Monday, then were closed for repairs during the night. They were expected to reopen in time for today's rush hour. Meanwhile, workers tried to bore through a blockage in the aqueduct under North Temple Street.

AP Laserphoto

Despite rerouting because of flooding in downtown Salt Lake City, traffic seems to flow smoothly during Monday's rush hour.

In Colorado, the National Weather Service issued flood warnings along the South Platte River from Greeley to the Nebraska border and along South Boulder Creek today.

"We're in for a period of problems," said Larimer County Commissioner Courtlyn Hotchkiss. "The (Cache Le Poudre) river is continuing to rise.

Several families from a mobile home park near the Poudre in northeast Greeley, Colo., left their trailers Monday night as a precaution, said police Officer Dave Adams.

About 10 businesses in southeast Greeley reported being flooded by about two feet of water which subsided by Monday afternoon.

Poudre River Commissioner Jack Neutze estimated that 2,000 to 3,000 acres of farmland were under water Monday.

Officials said Gross Reservoir southwest of Boulder, Colo., was full, and water was expected to begin flowing over the spillways today.

In Brady, Neb., officials began making evacuation plans Monday and were considering cutting a channel through town to allow overflow from the Platte River to run through the town 50 miles east of North Platte.

Meanwhile, workers continued sandbagging in Nebraska communities along the North and South Platte Rivers, as the National Weather Service predicted flooding from the town of North Platte to Cozad, some 100 miles east.

"It's almost a hopeless job," said Lincoln County Commissioner Don Christensen. As soon as one area is sandbagged, he said, other problems develop.

Buildings again fall in Coalinga

COALINGA, Calif. (AP) — Damaged buildings left standing after a devastating May 2 earthquake are now falling victim to wrecking crews.

Three buildings in the hard-hit commercial district were demolished Monday, including the State Theater.

Tearing down the old movie theater "takes a chunk of my heart," said Billie Woods.

"It didn't matter what the movie was," said Judy Eastman. "We'd go after the movie to the Sugar Bowl for Coke and the juke box. They would never chase you out."

But Cheryl Field was glad that removal of the ruined buildings has begun.

"It has been very depressing to look at this since the earthquake," she said. "This is a day of new beginnings for this town. Once we get it all down, we can get our lives back to normal."

Contractor John Peralta has 51 other buildings to clear away before the city can begin a redevelopment project to restore its commercial district. Virtually every building in the eight-block district was damaged during the quake.

"I hate to capitalize on somebody else's misfortune, but somebody has to clean up this city," Peralta said. "We came to do it."

Peralta will be paid $220,000 for the demolition plus all the bricks he can salvage.

That salvage effort still is a sore point with some who feel the city should have let them do their own demolition and get the money from the many old bricks.

Keith Shannon, owner of the weekly Coalinga Record, said he has sold his bricks to another party, and the city's position on having one contractor raze the entire area could lead to a lawsuit.

"I have $40,000 worth of salvageable material in there," Shannon said. "Why should I give up what I now have for a low interest loan?"

The earthquake, which registered at 6.5 on the open-ended Richter scale of ground motion, caused an estimated $31 million damage in this Central California city of 7,000 people 200 miles southeast of San Francisco. It injured 47 people, but there were no deaths.

Dear Mr. IRS: May I deduct...

Private tax rulings sought by 30,000 persons

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — What do you do if your son has a sex-change operation and you're wondering about the tax deductions?

Or you're a corporate executive buying insurance to protect against losing your job and you're not sure how the Internal Revenue Service will view such an arrangement.

Perhaps you're a divorced father whose daughter is living abroad. Can you claim her as an exemption?

Just write the IRS. More than 30,000 people did last year, asking for private rulings on unusual personal or corporate tax problems whose answers were unclear in the tax laws.

The IRS issued 32,269 such rulings in 1982, two thirds of them involving requests by taxpayers for permission to change their acounting methods. The agency answered 4,318 queries on corporate taxes and 2,842 on individual taxes.

When such a private ruling is issued, it is binding only on the taxpayer who requested it. These rulings, censored of any information that might identify the taxpayer, are made public by the IRS but they may not be cited by another person as authority for a certain tax position.

For example, the mother whose 24-year-old son had a series of sex-change operations was allowed to deduct certain costs in connection with his recuperation. But another mother whose son has the same operation could not count on the same treatment from the IRS.

If the IRS later determines that a private holding could affect many other taxpayers, the agency could publish it in its weekly bulletin and it would become a formal ruling. It then could be used by all taxpayers for guidance on a particular subject.

Here are some of the private rulings issued last month:

—The young man who had the sex-change operations had to go to an out-of-state clinic because the local hospitals where his physician practiced did not allow such surgery. The doctor required a family member to accompany the patient during the post-operation period. In this case, the patient's mother stayed with the son while he recuperated in a motel.

The IRS said the mother could deduct plane trips to and from the clinic and a rental car that was used to deliver medications, bandages and the like to the young man. But she could not deduct the son's meals and lodging in the motel.

—A corporate executive earning more than $50,000 a year bought an insurance policy that protected him in case he lost his position through no fault of his own. The policy assured him up to two years of salary while he was jobless and re-employment services, including counseling and secretarial services. IRS allowed a deduction for the salary insurance and for the re-employment benefits so long as they were not used to train him for a new field of work. Any benefits paid under the policy would be taxable.

—A divorced father whose young daughter lived in a foreign country with her mother was allowed to claim the child as an exemption because she is a citizen of both nations. The law generally requires a dependent who is not a U.S. citizen to live in the United States, Canada or Mexico.

—An Italian surgeon will have to pay U.S. taxes on money paid him by a U.S. university to conduct research at the school. A U.S.-Italian tax treaty exempts income of $2,000 or less if the recipient is in this country for 90 days or less, or for up to two years of teaching. The surgeon, who was not teaching, was here six months.

—A French pianist who plans to spend six months in the United States on a concert tour was told his earnings will be exempt from U.S. tax because he has no "fixed base" in this country. His pay would be taxable if he stayed longer than six months.

Ruling ends oilmen's uncertainty, hope

Most operators agreed the decision will not make much difference in the way oil companies handle their affairs, however. The vast majority of operators figured the Windfall Profits Tax into their budgets for 1983.

"I don't think anyone was making their plans based on this hope — and it truly was just a hope," Robbins said.

The Windfall Profit Tax affects operators in different ways depending upon the type of oil production they have, making it a nightmare for oil and gas accountants to administer, industry sources say. Jim Stimmel of BTA Oil Producers said, "The magnitude of reporting under (WPT) is onerous. We had to hire two extra accountants just to deal with its provisions. It's the same with the Natural Gas Policy Act. We have had to employ two additional accountants just to cope with that law.

The tax "increases problems of accounting," Stimmel said, "as well as increasing your liability (to pay the government)."

Jack E. Blake, another independent operator, voiced the opinion of many oilmen: "If the Supreme Court declared it unconstitutional, Congress would figure out a way to circumvent their decision," and continue the one-industry tax.

The WPT is computed by subtracting an adjusted base price from the current price of crude oil per barrel, adjusting for state severance taxes, to yield the net price per barrel upon which the tax is levied.

Stripper wells owned by independents, which make less than 10 barrels a day, are, to a degree, exempt from the tax.

On a typical barrel of new crude priced at $30, the tax is roughly $3 to $4. Old crude which was placed in production before 1979 can be taxed up to $9 per barrel, depending on the producer and how his crude is classified.

"The only thing that really concerns me about it is it might effect some of the stripper operations," Thompson said.

The first three barrels of oil produced each day from a stripper well are now exempt from the tax, Thompson explained. Paying the tax on production on barrels four through 10 "may make the difference in keeping a well producing and plugging it. So it might create some premature plugging and abandoning as far as stripper wells are concerned.

"We've got so many that are right on the edge, and the cost of lifting have gone up over the years, and with the price of oil coming down, suddenly, maintenance, workover and lifting costs have started matching actual income. Then, when you start adding tax on top of it, why it could create poblems for the stripper well operators."

If the high court had agreed with U.S. District Judge Ewing T. Kerr of Wyoming that the tax was illegal, it would have freed capital, especially from investors, to the oil industry.

"If we hadn't had this decision, we could have added almost $7 per barrel to our price," said independent Joe Melton. "The decison will do nothing more than further depress an economy that's already overburdened with government intervention and excess taxation."

Major oil companies also expressed displeasure with the tax. "Until we see the text of the ruling we can't make specific comments," said Gulf public affairs director Fred Meurer.

"Regardless of the constitutional validity of the so-called Windfall Profits Tax," Meurer said, "a single-industry tax such as this one is likely to be counterproductive to the nation's longterm energy needs. It is therefore still objectionable." Meurer said the ruling would have no effect on Gulf's Permian Basin operations.

With the court's sanction to the WPT, some operators fear this will give Congress encouragement to place a similar tax on natural gas.

"This may give them an incentive to put a windfall tax on gas, since it removes the uncertainty of the tax on oil," said John L. Wollaston, Midland gas marketing consultant.

Supreme Court to examine 'affirmative action' issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is going to take another look at a sensitive issue of today's difficult economic times: whether whites with more seniority than blacks may be laid off from their jobs in the name of "affirmative action."

The justices have agreed to hear an appeal by the city of Memphis, Tenn., from rulings that blocked the city from dismissing blacks who were hired to promote racial job equality in the Memphis fire department. The case will be scheduled for oral arguments next fall.

White firefighters say it was "reverse discrimination" to force them out of their jobs though they have more years of service than blacks who remained with the department.

The court had been expected to settle the issue in a case involving the Boston police and fire departments. But last month, the court backed out of that controversy.

In other major actions Monday, the court:

—Unanimously ruled that the 1980 windfall profits tax on oil is constitutional, thereby permitting the deficit-ridden government to go on collecting the tens of billions of dollars the tax produces in annual revenue.

—By an 8-0 vote, said the government need not consider disposal risks on a plant-by-plant basis when licensing new nuclear power facilities. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission acted properly in setting across-the-board standards on waste, the court said. But the decision may have little current impact on the nuclear power industry where growth is practically at a standstill.

—Agreed to decide in a North Dakota case whether federal inspectors need a court's approval to force businesses to surrender their records.

In the Memphis fire department case, there has been a history of legal controversy over hiring of blacks.

In 1980, the city — without conceding it engaged in any past discrimination — agreed to resolve a federal suit by hiring enough blacks to eventually comprise half the fire department.

The city also promised to hire and promote qualified blacks into 20 percent of the department vacancies.

In an economic pinch in the spring of 1981, the city sought to lay off public employees to cut costs.

A federal judge said the newly hired blacks could not be among those losing their jobs or demoted to lower ranking jobs. The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the decision last year.

It said that almost 60 percent of those facing demotions were from minorities and ordered the jobs of blacks protected.

The laid-off whites have since been recalled to work. But the city said the issue still is a live controversy because whites with more seniority could be laid off again in the future.

In the similar case involving the Boston police and fire departments, the whites who challenged the affirmative action program were rehired and protected by law from losing their jobs in the future.

Cattlemen urging White to call special session

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas cattlemen, who say they face multi-million-dollar losses if a U.S. Department of Agriculture brucellosis quarantine goes into effect, are trying to convince state officials and legislators they need quick action on the matter.

More than 1,000 cattlemen are scheduled to gather in Austin todayat the invitation of the Texas Brahman Breeders Association to urge Gov. Mark White to call a special legislative session.

Bob Armstrong

At the same time, an emissary of the Texas Department of Agriculture, former land commissioner Bob Armstrong, is asking other states to hold off on embargoes of Texas cattle until a federal court hearing June 14.

Montana already has said Texas cattle are not welcome. Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska are considering embargoes.

"However, I think most of the states will wait and see if the quarantine plays out or what we will do about it," Armstrong, a cattleman, said Monday.

Brucellosis is a livestock disease that causes weight loss and miscarriages in cattle but poses no danger to consumers of meat or pasteurized dairy products.

The threatened quarantine would prevent interstate shipment of breeding stock from Texas, unless they are from qualified herds that have passed two inspections 120 days apart. Steers and spayed heifers — or neutered animals — over six months of age would be exempted.

The Texas Farm Bureau has estimated the quarantine could reduce cattle income in Texas by up to $130 million a year.

Since 1979, the state has been at odds with the federal government over the brucellosis inspection and vaccination program. Some large Texas ranchers, including former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, claim the federal program is ineffective and too costly.

Rancher R.J. "Red" Nunley of Sabinal obtained a permanent injunction in state district court to prohibit the Texas Animal Health Commission from inspecting his herd for brucellosis on the grounds the program was unconstitutional.

A legislative measure that would have made the Texas program conform to federal standards failed by one vote in the state legislative session that ended May 30.

The USDA quarantine, which would have been effective last Wednesday, was stopped for at least 10 days by a temporary restraining order issued by U.S. District Judge James Nowlin of Austin.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Duffey of San Antonio argued the quarantine was needed because the state has no legal authority to inspect herds for brucellosis. He cited the order prohibiting inspection of Nunley's cattle, saying "Nunley cattle are shipped throughout the state."

Dave Richards, assistant state attorney general, argued the quarantine discriminated against Texas, where 98 percent of the cattle are certified brucellosis-free. He said Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas have much higher rates of brucellosis and are not quarantined.

At the Austin hearing scheduled June 14, U.S. District Judge H.F. Garcia will decide whether to extend Nowlin's temporary restraining order.

As of January 1982, Texas had 13.7 million head of cattle valued at about $4.5 billion. The state exports about 2 million head per year, mostly to Kansas, California, Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

In 1981, Texas had a gross income of about $4 billion from its cattle and calves.

If Texas cattle were denied access to grass outside the state and were sold in Texas for slaughter at a 30 percent to 40 percent discount, the cost could be as high as $100 a head or $100 million a year, according to the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

Curtis Wigfall of Grosvenor in Brown County could barely see through his windshield after it was pummeled by hail late Sunday night. The storm, which also brought high winds and at least one tornado, swept through the county and heavily damaged areas around Lake Brownwood. Wigfall said the hail he encountered ranged from baseball- to grapefruit-sized.

Former fire chief convicted of arson

DALLAS (AP) — A former chief of the volunteer fire department in the Navarro County community of Angus faces up to 15 years in prison following his conviction on federal arson charges.

Bennie L. Hanna, 32, was found guilty Monday on charges of conspiracy and aiding and abetting of arson.

Hanna was accused of paying $500 to his cousin, Archie Travis Beldin, to set fire to a liquor store in Angus in May 1980 after the store's owners refused to fix liquor prices.

Texas woman killed in Shreveport

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Three men held the arms and legs of a Texas woman while a fourth wound an electrical cord around her neck and strangled her, detectives testified in a preliminary hearing.

When Houston salesman Melvin Chavis, apparently investigating Silvia Graham's screams, appeared and saw the woman's body, the four men pulled Chavis inside and killed him, too, detective Ralph Wilson said Monday.

Wilson said he was relating details provided by Steven Kelso of Lakewood, Colo., 34, one of the four charged in the May 10 killings. Charged with Kelso are Keith Allen Hines, 28, of Denver, Colo.; Anthony Cubruno, 26, of Princeton, Mo.; and Michael Lantzy, 28, also of Denver.

Dallas bank robber wields bomb

GARLAND (AP) — A man forced a bank teller to give him all the large bills in a cashier's tray after he pulled a bomb from his briefcase, police said.

The man fled from the American National Bank in this Dallas suburb with an undetermined amount of cash Monday, said police spokesman John Hamilton.

No one was injured in the robbery or in the removal and detonation of the explosive device, Hamilton said.

Land developers drop lawsuit

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Corpus Christi developers who went to court to challenge state laws on access to public beaches have dropped their lawsuit, according to Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Buddy Beck and Bill Etheridge, who plan to build a 20-story condominium project on Mustand Island, filed suit in April.

The original building plan would have cut into the public beach on Mustang Island and could have caused "significant damage" to sand dunes, according to Mattox.

Garland city manager staying

GARLAND (AP) — Garland City Manager Fred Greene said he has rejected an offer to become city manager of Amarillo — despite the lure of a $20,000 annual pay raise.

The Garland City Council went into executive session Monday to discuss a salary increase for Greene, but members would not divulge the amount, pending official notification of Greene.

Greene, who now makes $63,169 in salary and benefits, cited his attachment to the Garland community and "other factors" than salary as reasons for rejecting the Amarillo offer Sunday night.

Doctor said she had been warned about nurse

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Kerrville physician said under oath that as early as 1981 there were reports that Medical Center Hospital here was looking "directly" at a nurse in connection with a series of mysterious deaths at the hospital, the San Antonio Light reported.

Dr. Kathleen Holland said in a deposition that before she hired the vocational nurse Genene Jones to work in her Kerrville clinic, she had been advised not to by a physician at the San Antonio hospital.

Ms. Jones, 32, has pleaded innocent to charges in a Kerr County indictment that allege she murdered an infant and injured six other children.

Grand jurors in San Antonio have investigated a string of similar deaths that occurred at Medical Center between 1978 and 1982.

Both the doctor and the nurse are now defendants in a $7 million wrongful death suit brought by William and Petti McClellan. The McClellans' 15-month-old daughter, Chelsea, died last Sept. 17 in an ambulance after suffering a respiratory seizure in the Kerrville clinic of Dr. Holland.

THE LIGHT said it has obtained copies of depositions given by Dr. Holland and Ms. Jones in the suit.

The newspaper reported earlier that Dr. Holland said in her deposition that she fired Ms. Jones after she learned that a vial of succinylcholine, a powerful muscle relaxant, had been tampered with.

Succinylcholine can cause paralysis of the respiratory system in excessive doses and normally is used in conjunction with a respirator when injected in children.

In Ms. Jones' deposition, the Light reported, she said she had no knowledge of the properties of succinylcholine. She said she was present during only one incident in late 1981 in which the drug was administered to a child.

The Kerr County grand jury, in its May 25 indictment, alleged Ms. Jones killed the McClellan infant and injured six other children by injecting them with succinylcholine or some other unknown drug.

Dr. Holland said in her deposition, the Light reported, that a year before she opened her clinic, she was cautioned by Dr. James Robotham of San Antonio, director of Medical Center Hospital's pediatric intensive care unit, against hiring Ms. Jones.

DR. HOLLAND said in her deposition that as early as 1981 there were reports that hospital officials were looking "directly" at Ms. Jones in connection with a series of mysterious deaths.

Robotham told her he had "concerns over Genene and how she related to what had happened in the Bexar County Hospital," the newspaper quoted Dr. Holland as saying in her deposition.

Because of her appearances before the Kerr and Bexar County grand juries, Ms. Jones' attorney, William Chenault, advised her not to discuss events relating to the McClellan death or the use of succinylcholine during the questioning.

Ms. Jones, a former hairdresser, said in her deposition that she was acquainted with Robotham on both a professional and personal level, that she once babysat for him at his request, and that he had called her at home frequently and asked her to come in to help with patients.

Climber's lawyer can't understand

HOUSTON (AP) — An attorney for a man charged with criminal trespass after climbing the tallest building west of the Mississippi River says he cannot understand why the building's owners are proceeding with the trial.

"They don't care if the birds go up there and make deposits on the bank," said Jim Moriarty, who is representing Ron Broyles. "I don't know why they ought to get upset about my client climbing the building."

Testimony was to begin today in the criminal trespass trial. Broyles was arrested March 14 after reaching the top of the 75-story Texas Commerce Tower.

Broyles, who climbed in a white tuxedo and carried a portable telephone, maintained his sense of humor as jury selection proceeded Monday.

Asked the worst thing that can happen to him, Broyles replied, "Decapitation, I think." The maximum penalty for the offense is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

THE BETTER HALF

"It's the boss' idea. It's part of his employee assertiveness program!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, June 8, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: German composer Robert Schumann and legendary architect Frank Lloyd Wright were born on this date. Also sharing this birthday with you: Supreme Court Justice Byron "Whizzer" White, actors Robert Preston and James Darren, shortstop Mark Belanger, Nancy Sinatra, the very funny Jerry Stiller and comedian-impressionist George Kirby. Your powers of persuasion will be at their peak during the next six months. You are successful in obtaining the money you need for college or a new partnership. Clear up a misunderstanding with someone who loves you. Do not kid yourself! It takes hard work to make a romantic relationship last.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You cannot rely on others to see that things are done right. Do not invest in anything new until an independent investigation is concluded.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be persistent in trying to reach an influential person who is giving you the runaround. Clear up a misunderstanding with loved one before it escalates.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A friend's good news leaves you happy for her, but leads you to question your own abilities. Organize your time better at work. A supper invitation should be promptly accepted.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your fears for loved one disappear. Spend time with someone who helps you see things in a more positive light. The results of a test will be better than you anticipated.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You meet a deadline on time and get things going in your direction once again. Romance seems too good to be true. Do not jump to conclusions. Trust a friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A business partner may be backing off. Ask questions. Someone is trying to stir up trouble at work. Keep a low profile and the storm will pass by.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Learn to communicate with family members when there are problems they should help solve. Your self-confidence grows when you find out what another thinks of you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your co-workers will agree with you about a change in employment practices. Devote your spare time to your parents or a troubled teenager.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be sure you are up to date with what is happening in your industry. Staying competitive in business depends on it. People will help you if you are open and aboveboard.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make every effort to advance your private plans. You can trust those who have looked out for you in the past. Others have only recently jumped on your bandwagon.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The hard sell will be more effective than the subtle approach today. Push as hard as you can. You may have to devote more time to planning. Get together with friends this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An excellent work day. Do your research quickly but thoroughly and remember that there is no reason to be restless. Things will fall into place only if you are patient.

CBS examines future

NEW YORK (AP) — "1984 Revisited" is an appropriate title for CBS News' fascinating special program about how near or far we are to the closed world of George Orwell's "1984."

The calendar may say 1983, but 1984 already has arrived in many ways. Tonight, Walter Cronkite examines 1984's past, present and future.

When Orwell wrote "1984," it was 1948, and his native England was still removing shrapnel from World War II. In inverting the last two numbers of 1948, Orwell actually was creating a parody of his times, more than he was predicting ours, according to author Anthony Burgess.

Even so, the year 1984 has become the catchword for totalitarian assault on personal freedom, language and history itself, through the misuse of informational databanks, electronic surveillance, two-way television and behavior modification. Indeed, Big Brother has never stopped watching.

"The year, 1984," says narrator Cronkite in his dramatic tones, which give this broadcast particular weight and portent. "How close are we?" How close? How close?"

Cronkite, who's taken viewers to the moon and back and nearly everywhere in between, is the perfect tour guide for an examination of how history could possibly be undone by modern technology. Cronkite helped report and write the documentary.

Orwell's main character, Winston Smith, worked at the Ministry of Truth rewriting history, erasing "unpersons" from the face of the Earth. Historian Jonathan Sanders says on the broadcast that the Soviets have been pulling pages out of the history books for years.

After the power shift from Stalin to Khrushchev, Soviet police chief Lavrenti Beria fell out of favor. He soon lost both his life and his past. His section in the Soviet encyclopedia was replaced with an article on the Bering Sea. How alphabetically convenient.

In another case, Sanders shows before-and-after pictures, before this particular revolutionary was discredited and after his place in a group portrait was taken over by a bush. "Who controls the present controls the past," says Cronkite.

Today, citizens, whether they like it or not, are on the computer rolls for various government agencies, the phone company, banks and many other institutions.

Readers will remember this problem from April. We received some 6,000 replies, and there were about 1,000 correct entries. Some answers were eight pages long, and we often had to read all eight pages before we found out that they were wrong. There were two common mistakes. Many readers thought that South would have two entries to his hand at his six no trump contract if, after a diamond lead, he won in dummy and led the ten of hearts from the table. Not so! East simply ducked, declarer had one entry and he had to resort to the line of play we recommended. If you continued correctly with the right squeeze, you will be receiving your prize shortly.

Others found a squeeze that does not work. They won the opening lead in dummy, finessed hearts and then cashed their red suit winners to reduce the hand to this position:

They now end played West by leading ace of clubs and another. But West can counter. After winning the king of clubs he exits with the queen of spades! Now declarer is stranded with either a spade lose in hand or a diamond loser on the board.

Red tape blues

Complaints from business about required government paperwork have become so routine that they rarely rate a mention in the news. American businessmen, however, may now take some small comfort in the quandary of managers in the Soviet Union.

The Soviet central planning bureaucracy generates so much red tape that Russian workers and managers must fill out 800 billion documents a year, according to reports from Moscow. This staggering load is the equivalent of more than 7,000 documents for each Russian worker.

Some Soviet economists, in belated recognition that central planning stifles economic activity, have called for easing the paper burden. One senior Russian economist, Alexei Rumyantev, has found that nine out of 10 of the government documents are absolutely useless, having no other purpose than to justify a bureaucrat's slot.

Although Rumyantev has yet to convert to the supply side, he has concluded that less government control would spur the Soviet economy. His days of influence, though, are probably numbered. Predictably, the central planners in Moscow are calling for more controls and more paperwork as the true communist way to new heights of productivity.

Before gloating over the paperwork follies of the "people's paradise," Americans should note that Washington is no slouch in the red tape department. Federal officials say they don't keep count of the government documents Americans must fill out. They do, however, calculate appropriately named "burden hours" the paperwork requires. Federal agencies impose 1.1 billion burden hours of paperwork a year on private industry, and state and local governments. This amounts to 116 hours of paperwork a year for every American worker.

But unlike the Soviet Union, paperwork in the United States is significantly decreasing. Before enactment of the Paperwork Reduction Law in 1980, it took an additional 400 million hours a year to complete the federal forms. Continued reductions in red tape are likely under Reagan administration regulatory reforms.

The late Nikita Khrushchev sent chills down the spines of many Westerners when he proclaimed in 1956 that the Soviet system "will bury you!" Khrushchev's boast now seems hollow. Instead of burying the West, the state-run Soviet economy is burying itself.

Another View:

'A better America'

Two cases involving the FBI and civil rights demonstrators of the '60s have recently been decided by federal courts in Michigan. In the first, the children of Viola Liuzzo, who was shot to death after the Selma voting rights march, sued the government for civil damages, alleging that the FBI had not exercised proper control over its informer, Gary Thomas Rowe, who was present at the time of the killing. After an eight-day trial, Judge Charles Joiner ruled that Mr. Rowe had not been the one to fire the fatal shot and that federal agents could not have been expected to prevent the shooting. In the second case, Walter Bergman, a Freedom Rider who was severely beaten by the Klan, won a suit against the United States because Judge Richard Enslen found that the FBI had ample notice that violence would occur and failed to take action to prevent it.

These cases resulted in different verdicts because the facts were different. The Bergman case was by far the stronger indictment of FBI practice in the southern states in the early '60s. The court found that the FBI had early knowledge that the Klan was planning to beat Freedom Riders when they arrived at the bus station in Birmingham. An informer — the same Gary Thomas Rowe who was involved in the Liuzzo case — told agents that the local police would not respond immediately, but would give the Klansmen 15 minutes to assault the riders. The infamous Bull Connor was public safety commissioner in Birmingham at that time, and the FBI knew that Mr. Connor had been party to the agreement with the Klan. Mr. Rowe was advised to do nothing that would give him away and to participate in the beating if necessary to preserve his credibility. The only action taken by federal officers to prevent this crime was to notify the local police — in the person of Bull Connor.

If the government had lost the Liuzzo case, the most that could have been said against the bureau was that it failed to control an informer. In the Bergman case, however, government agents knew in advance the details, the location and the timing of a crime and failed to take reasonable steps to prevent it. The vicious and severe beatings that resulted injured dozens of law-abiding citizens and left Mr. Bergman in a wheelchair for life. Such callous indifference toward the safety and the rights of civil rights workers was, unfortunately, a hallmark of J. Edgar Hoover's leadership of the bureau. Harassment of movement leaders, refusal to place black agents in the South and an overemphasis on preserving good relations with racist sheriffs were all policies set at the top. Today, FBI policies established by Director William Webster set a different tone. As Mr. Bergman said after the ruling in his case was announced on Tuesday, "We have a better America in 1983 than we had in 1961."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history: In 1942, the World War II Battle of Midway ended with a decisive U.S. naval victory over Japan.

On this date:

In 1654, Louis XIV was crowned King of France in Rheims.

In 1769, Daniel Boone began his exploration of the Kentucky wilderness.

In 1862, the U.S. and Britain signed a treaty for the suppression of the slave trade.

And, in 1968, a grand jury in Los Angeles indicted Jordanian immigrant Sirhan Sirhan for the murder of Sen. Robert Kennedy.

Ten years ago: West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, on a visit to Israel, denounced what he called the suffering and horror of the Nazi persecution of the Jews.

Five years ago: President Jimmy Carter told the graduating class at the U.S. Naval Academy that the Soviets interpreted detente as meaning an aggressive struggle for political advantage and increased influence.

One year ago: Israeli forces continued their northward sweep in Lebanon, capturing the Palestinian stronghold of Beaufort Castle.

Today's birthdays: House Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter Rodino is 74. Pop singer Tom Jones is 43.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Files don't flatter new union boss

WASHINGTON — Jackie Presser, the beefy, street-smart, 56-year-old newly-elected president of the Teamsters Union, has promised to run "an open, honest administration." He'll be given a chance today to reveal his plans for cleaning up the mobster-infiltrated union when he testifies before Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, on proposed anti-racketeering legislation.

Jack Anderson

Justice Department files paint an unflattering, though possibly unfair, portrait of Presser. They also provide background material the senator might want to quiz the new president about. For example:

— An April 28, 1977, intelligence report titled, "Labor Racketeering in Ohio," contained a list of alleged mob-related figures, including "Jackie Presser, a well-known corrupt union labor leader (who) has continued to build his public image in the (Ohio) area. His goal is reportedly the presidency of the International."

— Another department report, "Organized Crime and the Labor Unions," written by attorneys Douglas Roller and Peter Vaira, states, "The organized crime affiliations and involvement of Presser through and independent of the Teamsters Union are well documented."

However, a source close to Presser told my associate Tony Capaccio the report provides no evidence of this supposed documentation. "You don't have even one guy saying, 'We have Presser playing golf with a known mob member,'" he said.

— According to a still-secret document, informant James "The Weasel" Fratianno told federal investigators that "through the intercession of Cleveland organized crime group members, Presser agreed to allow (Fratianno) the use of a mob financier to set up a union dental plan in Warren, Ohio."

The Presser associate said that while Presser and Fratianno's financier met briefly, "Jackie threw him out of his office," and the mobster never "received such a contract in Ohio."

— Another informant, Comillo Molinaro, a go-between for Ohio and New Jersey mob families, told New Jersey state troopers that Presser was his contact in about 1975 for arranging loans through the Teamsters' Central States Pension Fund.

Presser's associate said that no loans were made from the fund in that period.

— In March 1979, eavesdropping FBI agents heard Kansas City mob chief Nick Civella voice his desire to get Presser's approval for Roy Williams — later convicted of bribery — to succeed the union's then-president, Frank Fitzsimmons. If Presser's position was "positive," an FBI affidavit states, "Civella wanted to see him" about Williams.

Williams did in fact succeed Fitzsimmons, but Presser's associate said: "Jackie Presser has never met Nick Civella or dealt with him in his life."

— A Labor Department affidavit states that its investigators are currently looking into "allegations that Jackie Presser did embezzle the funds" of two Teamster locals by paying "no-show" employees. At least five friends of Presser were listed on the union locals' books as business agents, but had run up no expenses beyond their salaries. This is "an indication of a failure to perform work," the affidavit states.

WHAT'S IN A SURINAME?: CIA officials are still scratching their heads over a top-secret message several weeks ago that indicated Brazil was on the verge of invading its neighbor to the north, the leftist former Dutch colony of Suriname.

They've now concluded they were either the victims of some mysteriously motivated disinformation or that the Brazilians were bluffing. It was a dramatic report while it lasted, though.

The top-secret message stated that a brigade of Brazilian soldiers had crossed into Suriname and was poised in the jungles for an attack on the capital, Paramaribo. Meanwhile, the Brazilian government supposedly sent an ultimatum to Col. Desi Bouterse, the president of Suriname: His capital would be attacked in 72 hours unless he kicked out his Cuban and East German advisers.

Heady stuff, indeed. But the 72 hours came and went without incident.

In its post-mortem on the Henny Penny alarm, the CIA noted Brazil's understandable concern that Surinname seems to be turning into the first pro-Soviet country in South America. Cuban MIG-23 jets could strike 1,000 miles deep into Brazil from a U.S.-built airfield the Dutch left behind. And, in fact, a high Brazilian official had spent three days in Paramaribo reading Surinamese officials the riot act about a week before the ultimatum report.

Footnote: Some sources say CIA officials are not as puzzled as they pretend to be over the Brazilian flurry. These sources suggest that the CIA quietly encouraged Brazil to bring pressure on Suriname to oust its communist advisers.

INSIDE REPORT:

U.S.-China relations in icebox

PEKING — Determined U.S. efforts to warm relations with China by easing export controls were rejected to us by one senior Chinese leader as "petty maneuverings" in advance of the official government announcement, intensifying today's cold wind blowing from Peking to Washington.

Rowland Evans

In an interview at the Great Hall of the People, Vice Premier Yao Yillin discounted the major concession on technology transfer expected from Washington. With no agreement on the Taiwan question in sight, that means the icy Sino-American temperature will drop lower still.

Robert Novak

"There is no reason for optimism," one top official at the foreign ministry told us. Reflecting that mood, Premier Zhao Ziyang shows no inclination to pick up President Reagan's invitation to visit Washington. A Reagan trip to Peking evokes yawns here.

Actually, there seems no real expectation by the Chinese that the Americans will kowtow on either Taiwan or technology transfer so long as Ronald Reagan is president. Nor does this really portend a dramatic Chinese policy switch. While hints are dropped that ties with Japan and Western Europe will be improved at U.S. expense, there are no threats, much less any real possibility, of Peking playing the Soviet card.

But the intimacy with China sought by Alexander Haig as secretary of state is buried. Haig's notion of a U.S.-Chinese united strategic front against the Kremlin looks incapable of revival, considering the demands of the Chinese.

The last faint hope for such a resurrection was carried here two weeks ago by Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige. His message: A decision to put China in the general category of U.S. allies had been reached in Washington, over anguished protests by national security hard-liners.

The immediate official Chinese reaction constituted Peking's warmest comment about the U.S. in months, delighting foreign service officers at the U.S. embassy who have been fighting an uphill battle for the Chinese connection throughout the Reagan administration. They rejoiced too soon. By the time we arrived here, Chinese officials were in lockstep minimizing Baldrige's overture.

Aware that there can be great variations within a single U.S. category of technology transfer, the Chinese were not impressed. "What we fear is that there will be some petty manuevers on this question," said Yao Yillin. "Nominally, China will be put in the same category as Japan and the Western European countries. But there will be additional conditions on the transfer of technology to China."

Yao was similarly gloomy on other issues. On Chinese demands that the U.S. quickly phase out arms sales to Taiwan: "As I see it, there are no good signs for the resolution of this question." On Reagan's invitation to Zhao: "If these serious questions remain unresolved, then I don't think his visit would be fruitful." Yao showed no particular interest in a Reagan visit.

The icy mood is best reflected in the rhetoric of lesser Chinese officials. One Foreign Ministry official regarded as pro-American dilated at length about "the scar" on Sino-American relations left by U.S. support of Chiang Kai-shek's 8-million-man army in the civil war 33 years ago. Jia Shai, vice minister of foreign trade, belittled U.S. sweet talk: "We hate to see a lot of thunder without rain. The thunder is very loud, but the raindrops are very few."

Such rhetoric less reflects serious hope that the Reagan administration will meet demands than deep-seated feeling within the Chinese hierarchy that Deng Xiaoping, China's real leader, went too far in his American involvement. Certainly Deng's stress to us on our last visit here in December 1978 of a common Sino-American interest against the Russian polar bear is heard no longer.

However, Chinese exploratory talks with the Soviets have also gone badly, undermined by Soviet-controlled Outer Mongolia's ouster of Chinese residents. When Yao warned in our interview that China might have to seek out "other countries," he specified Japan, France and West Germany — but definitely not the Soviet Union.

Returning to Moscow is surely neither cause nor result of Peking's coldness to Washington. But the Chinese are still making clear that deep partnership bordering on alliance with the Americans is out of the question for now, for the duration of the Reagan administration and quite probably for years to come after that.

Visit showed city's wealth

To The Editor:

My wife and I had the good fortune to visit your city of Midland during the week of May 15th, and believe me, it was worth the 2,500 miles round trip. We always wondered how the rich people lived and we certainly found out.

We drove several days through and around Midland, visiting the various subdivisions, including Saddle Club and the Racquet Club. We have never seen such a variety of housing architecture. None of the houses were alike. And what threw us was that all of them had walls of either wood or brick around them. Is privacy that important in Midland, or is the threat of invasion that strong?

We saw the Midland Park Mall and it was the best we have seen in any city, and we have been in some big ones.

Midland is certainly spread out. It was a new experience to drive as much as a mile or more before reaching the next batch of houses and still be in the city. And 10 miles just to get to the middle of the city was nothing.

Something new was added: The Mexicans told us not to drink the water! And they had a point, the water was certainly funny tasting. Made bad coffee!

The city was clean, the buildings new as were the houses, and the apartments? We never saw so many apartments in any three cities, and they were all just too much. Very liveable! And the streets! I have never seen so many four-lane highways going every which way, as well as six-lane roads — in the boondocks and in the city itself. And I must say this for the drivers; we had no trouble with any of them. And the hospitality of the people there was very gratifying.

One sour note though, we had heard of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and wanted to visit it. So we asked at least 20 people how to get there. More than half of them had never heard of the museum. And we asked people in stores, gas stations and on the street. Those who did tell us were very vague and we got nowhere. Finally we found a black woman running an Exxon station who told us exactly where it was and how to get there. No sweat! We found it. But because my daughter, whom we were visiting had to be at work in ½ hour, we could not go in to see it. Maybe next time.

I would think that Midland, which owes its existence and good fortune to the petroleum business would be proud of the museum and all its citizens would know where it was, so yokels like us could get there and look it over. Maybe you could see that the people of Midland learned about the Permian Museum, because maybe they could also go see it and what oil did for them and Midland. Otherwise we were very happy to have been guests of Midland and see what we Tennesseans made happen!

As you know, if it weren't for the Tennesseans there would be no Texas.

Clement Canja

Take a job

To The Editor:

One wonders why Midland should pay so much unemployment benefits when you can't get anyone to work.

Since March 1 my yardman has been trying to get help in renovating and planting seed in my yard.

Even the professionals seem to be snowed under and it takes months to get things done. Nurses are needed in our hospital. Garbage is not picked up on time. Stores can't get sales people. So who are these unemployed? If it weren't for the illegal aliens, a builder told me he couldn't get any building done.

As to T.E.C., they ask if anyone in the office wants this or that job. Maybe one transient will respond. He works a day and then leaves town (after promising to return the next day).

I am for helping those, unable to work, but it's time able-bodied people should take any job, like they did in the Great Depression, rather than take unearned income.

Persecution

To The Editor:

There seems to be a lot of pros and cons anent The Superior House in Texas of the Meretricious Women of Commerce, acronym BLWHIT.

So long as the pros and cons are confined to whether one likes the performance or whether in each's individual belief it is worthy of a public presentation no harm is done. Each is entitled to his or her opinion. But when the turn takes to suppress or censor then mischief is in the making.

It is unfortunate but it seems that there are always abroad some people who think that they have been personally ordained by the Almighty to sit at their fellow man's muzzle and tell him how he shall load himself, or what he shall read or see.

Such people stand always ready to persecute some inoffensive citizen for the greater glory of God.

nation in brief

Six bodies recovered from crash

SEBASTIAN, Fla. (AP) — Authorities recovered the bodies of three men and three women from the partially submerged wreckage of a plane that crashed in the Barefoot Bay area of eastern Florida.

The single-engine plane left Fort Pierce on Florida's east coast Sunday morning, but the wreck was not found until 8:30 a.m. Monday near an island in the Indian River, said Betty Oglesby, a spokeswoman for the Brevard County Sheriff's Department.

The destination of the six victims had not been determined, Ms. Oglesby said.

Protesters block route to site

ELMA, Wash. (AP) — About 50 protesters, banging drums and chanting, tried to block a train en route to the Trident nuclear submarine base and staged a "very peaceful" demonstration in which six people were arrested, the sheriff said.

"There were no problems," Grays Harbor County Sheriff Dennis Morrisette said after the arrests Monday.

The protesters said they sat on the Burlington Northern tracks because they believed the slow-moving train was carrying missile motors to the base at Bangor. A company spokesman in St. Paul, Minn., would not disclose what was on the train.

Those arrested were charged with blocking a train, a misdemeanor.

Trapped worker critically hurt

NEW YORK (AP) — A construction worker trapped beneath rubble when a five-story building collapsed was in critical condition after 10 rescuers worked for hours to extricate him. Four other workers suffered less serious injuries.

Fire Capt. Ray Downey said Billy Warnock, 23, fell from an upper floor Monday and landed in a pile of rubble between the weakened first floor and the basement of the building on Manhattan's Lower East Side. The building collapsed after workers performing renovations apparently put too much weight on the weakened roof, one worker said.

Honor student refuses diploma

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — A former Princeton University honors student whose diploma was withheld last year as a punishment for plagiarism turned down the school's invitation to receive her degree today and denied the charge against her.

"I feel that an injustice has been done," said Gabrielle Napolitano, 22, in a telephone interview from her Stamford, Conn., home. "It's not a valid charge."

Senate staffer's drug arrest puzzles friends

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Senate Intelligence Committee staffer Eric Breindel was arrested for possessing heroin, the shock was felt in Harvard classrooms, prestigious magazine offices and the security-conscious rooms where he worked.

Those who taught him, studied under him, edited his articles and employed him wonder why a brilliant 27-year-old man would risk destroying a soaring career.

Breindel had been working at the intelligence panel for two months when he was arrested May 16, after paying an undercover Washington policeman $150 for five packs of heroin. A former Justice Department attorney was arrested with him.

Breindel pleaded guilty May 26, and sentencing is set for Aug. 8. He has remained silent on what possessed him to break the law, and he has resigned from the intelligence committee staff.

"He accomplished more in 27 years than most people accomplish in a lifetime," said Menachem Z. Rosensaft, a New York attorney who knows Breindel well.

Rosensaft wouldn't say, if he knew, what led Breindel to buy heroin. Certainly there's nothing in his working or teaching background that unravels the mystery.

At Harvard, Breindel was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and graduated magna cum laude. He was editorial chairman of the college newspaper, the Harvard Crimson, a graduate of Harvard Law School and had nearly completed a doctorate at the London School of Economics.

Barely out of college, his articles were published in numerous magazines, and his admirers included the editors-in-chief of the New Republic and Commentary.

Two of his professors considered Breindel so brilliant they hired him as a teaching assistant after he took their courses.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., who taught Breindel in a graduate seminar, hired him too — first for his personal staff and then as one of his representatives on the intelligence panel.

Moynihan is the ranking Democrat on the committee, where the staff is entrusted with many of the nation's secrets.

"We have no reason to believe that there have been any intelligence loses attributable to him," said Moynihan, who called the arrest a "personal tragedy."

There are other important aspects of Breindel's background, but no clue as to whether they had any connection to his troubles.

Breindel was in constant pain from an old wrestling injury to his wrist, resulting in partial paralysis of one hand.

Richard M. Hunt, a senior lecturer in social studies at Harvard, said he doubts that Breindel would use the injury as an excuse for commiting the crime.

"Eric is such a totally honest person he wasn't about to shift the blame to something like that," said Hunt.

Breindel's parents had escaped Nazi persecution, and Breindel was an expert on the Holocaust.

"He was sensitive to the Holocaust, and the horrible consequences of evil motivated him and had a great influence," said Rosensaft, the New York lawyer who heads the International Network of Holocaust Survivors.

Horse race broadcasting may be next bonanza

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Horse race betting has moved into Nevada's casinos, where executives hope televised races will rival slot machines in popularity.

Casino executives hope to broaden the appeal of horse wagering from a hardcore group of regulars to average gamblers who wouldn't venture from slot machines or blackjack tables.

"Now they can go to Nevada and watch races from the top tracks, top stakes races (during the day)...and spend an evening at the gaming tables," says Howard Klein, associate publisher of Gaming Business Magazine in New York.

At least one casino owner predicts simulcasting eventually could push horse wagering over dollar slot machines as the most popular game in the house.

Casinos are aggressively looking for new forms of revenue. Gross gaming revenues last year were $2.63 billion, only 3.8 percent higher than 1981, the lowest increase since the state began keeping records in 1955 and not enough to keep pace with inflation.

Already, Caesars Palace in Las Vegas has converted part of its casino into a 250-seat racing lounge with a 10-foot by 12-foot viewing screen and two computerized display boards with red, yellow and green lights featuring continuous race information.

Caesars has carried racing from Aqueduct through the New York Racing Association since March. The casino has also carried races from the association's Saratoga and Belmont tracks, said the NYRA's director of broadcast programming, Howard Giordano, providing his organization with an important new source of revenue.

IN 1981, THE HANDLE at the association's three tracks was more than $891 million for 309 days of racing, while last year, the figure exceeded $921 million for 312 days of racing, the association said.

Caesars has applied to state gaming authorities as a disseminator of the NYRA signal to other race and sports books or betting parlors.

Meanwhile, Swanson News Co., in the race reporting business for 34 years, started providing simulcasting from Pimlico, near Baltimore, Md., for about 20 casinos in April.

President Ken Swanson said he plans to simulcast racing from the Arlington Park track near Chicago this month.

While it may be new in Nevada, simulcasting has been tried in about a dozen states as a way of boosting business at tracks when their racing season is over, said NYRA Vice President Marty Lieberman.

Swanson has joined with a former rival, Chuck DiRocco of SportForm, to work on simulcast ventures.

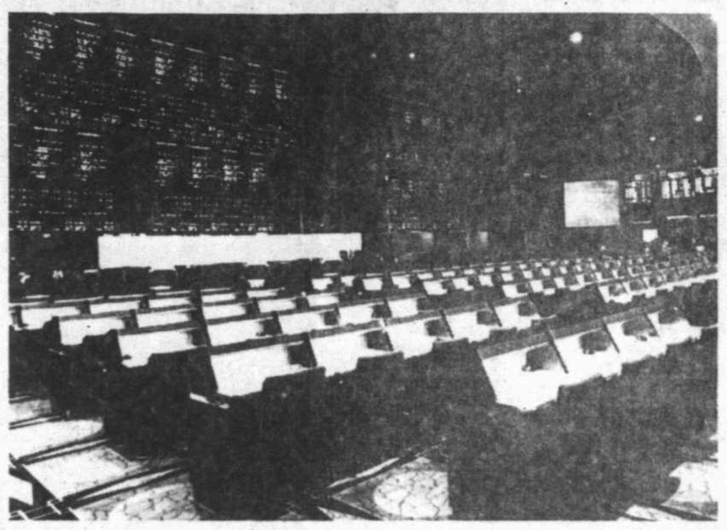

AN OPULENT off-track betting parlor in New Haven, Conn., offering simulcast NYRA racing, has been a success despite high unemployment among blue-collar workers who are a big segment of the bettors, says Klein.

While gaming executives are optimistic, they say the verdict is still out on simulcasting.

Warren Nelson, operator of the Cal-Neva Club in Reno, predicts horse racing could rival dollar slots in popularity, but adds that the technology is still in its infancy.

Horse race betting accounted for 1.2 percent, some $122.8 million, of all gambling in Nevada last year compared to an 18 percent share for dollar slots, according to the state Gaming Control Board.

Nelson bases his forecast on the "excitement" of watching races and on the vast sums bet on horses at tracks every year.

AP Laserphoto

Nevada gaming officials are hoping that simulcasts of horse racing into plush casinos such as this facility as Caesars Palace in Las Vegas will stimulate new interest in horse wagering.

CAESARS PALACE CHIEF Harry Wald says his race book has placed more bets than in the past and he expects greater success as simulcasting develops.

Rick Remington, race and sports book manager for Harrah's Club in Reno, expressed similar statements of success about Pimlico simulcasting.

"It's worked out pretty well," he explained. "It hasn't increased our business as much as some people said...but nobody really knew what to expect."

He says major races, such as the Kentucky Derby, draw big crowds and bets. For everyday racing, the California tracks are tops in popularity and aren't simulcast, he adds.

The system is secured by using conventional racing wires as a backup for checking race results. Also, signals are electronically scrambled so the race can't be received by parties other than subscribing race books.

The Gaming Control Board and its parent state Gaming Commission now have regulatory control over simulcasts as a result of changes in state law approved last month by legislators. The state regulators are keeping tabs on the simulcast tests and will come up with final regulations in September.

Survivor of slayings helps investigation

CHINO, Calif. (AP) — An 8-year-old whose throat was slashed in a brutal attack, still not told that his parents, sister and playmate were killed, used sign language to help detectives in the case, officials said.

Joshua Ryen, the only survivor of the bloodbath at his family's posh home early Sunday, has communicated with detectives from his hospital bed and provided some information, San Bernardino Sheriff Floyd Tidwell said at a news conference Monday.

The boy had been found in a bathroom of the rural Chino Hills home, slashed across the neck and beaten about the head. His slain parents, Douglas Ryen, 41, and Peggy Ann Ryen, 41, were found in a bedroom.

The bodies of Joshua's sister, Jessica, 10, and a neighbor who was spending the night, Christopher Hughes, 10, also were found in the secluded house, located about 35 miles east of Los Angeles.

Authorities have formed a 35-member task force and were seeking two prison escapees and a teen-ager for questioning, but said they had no specific evidence linking them to the murders.

Tidwell and other investigators said Sunday the boy had given them information that helped them reconstruct the path the killers had taken inside the house.

The boy had not been told about the murders, Tidwell said.

"We don't know how much he will be able to remember or how much he can give us in detail. He is only 8 years old and this has been a very traumatic experience for him," Tidwell said.

All four victims had at least 20 wounds each and died within minutes, Coroner Brian McCormick said late Monday.

Investigators were searching for two escapees from the nearby California Institution for Men, along with a 17-year-old youth from the local juvenile hall. The juvenile and one man escaped Saturday, and the third man escaped Thursday.

Tidwell identified the escapees as David Trautman, 25, Alboro Knori, 31, and Michael Fast Horse Martinez, 17, of Arizona.

Soviet ship hits rail bridge

MOSCOW (AP) — More than 100 Soviet tourists were killed when a Volga River cruise ship rammed into a railway bridge and tore its top deck off, a spokesman for the state travel agency said today.

There were unconfirmed reports the death toll was closer to 200.

The Intourist spokesman said those killed in the accident Sunday were watching a film in a hall on the upper deck when the diesel-powered Alexander Suvorov rammed the bridge at dusk.

The spokesman, who refused to be named, said the ship could carry 350 to 360 passengers, but he was not sure how many people were aboard at the time of the crash or exactly how many had died. He said the ship, which did not sink, had sailed out of the channel that would have carried the it safely under the bridge.

Taiwanese transport crashes

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A Nationalist Chinese air force transport carrying military personnel from the island of Quemoy to Taipei crashed into the sea Monday, killing about 40 people, the Defense Ministry said today.

The ministry declined to give additional details but said it would hold a news conference later today.

Military sources said the C-119 transport crashed into the sea shortly after taking off from Quemoy, a Nationalist island about 1.3 miles from mainland China's Fujian province.

Thatcher would 'press button'

LONDON (AP) — With the election two days off, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said today she wouldn't hesitate to "press the button" on British nuclear weapons if Britain or its NATO allies were attacked.

Without such willingness, nuclear weapons would have no deterrent value, she said in a television phone-in program.

"Of course if you've got a nuclear deterrent, you have to be prepared to press the button because that deters anyone else from using nuclear (weapons) and also from passing the NATO line on conventional (weapons)," she said on the British Broadcasting Corp.'s "Elec

African leaders disagree

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — A committee of African leaders, including Col. Moammar Khadafy of Libya, failed today to end a dispute over the Western Sahara that has delayed the opening of the Organization of African Unity summit.

Ethiopian police imposed extraordinary security for the committee meeting, physically barring some delegates from the session, amid jitters over heavily armed Libyan bodyguards.

"So far there has not been any breakthrough," Peter Onu, assistant OAU secretary-general, told reporters after a two-hour session of a 21-nation committee assigned to seek a compromise.

Ivory Coast's president visits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is playing host to President Felix Houphouet-Boigny of the Ivory Coast in an effort to cement relations with an African nation U.S. officials consider "tailor made" for American private investment.

On the eve of today's state visit, U.S. officials heaped praise on Houphouet-Boigny, 77, who has led his nation on West Africa's southern coast to relative prosperity since its independence from France in 1960.

The officials, who briefed reporters on the visit on the condition they not be identified by name, said that virtually the only irritant in U.S. relations with the Ivory Coast is over the pricing of cocoa, one of the Ivory Coast's principal commodity exports.

One official said the Ivory Coast feels that the United States, one of the world's largest consumers of cocoa, "should make more of an effort to arrange commodity pricing which will provide renumerative prices to the Africans," one official said.

Guatemalan general petitions president for elections

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Risking court-martial, the army's top general is urging President Efrain Rios Montt to schedule general elections and says the born-again Christian president is biased against the Roman Catholic Church.

In an open letter Monday to the military government, Gen. Jose Guillermo Echeverria Vielman called for elections "to satisfy the popular will" and "end Guatemala's international isolation."

He also said "for the first time in Guatemala's contemporary history, religious sectarianism is being practiced in the highest positions of government."

Defense Minister Gen. Oscar Humberto Victores told reporters Echeverria Vielman, as an active member of the military, could be court-martialed and discharged for making political statements.

"His document is being analyzed now," Victores said.

There was no immediate response from Rios Montt, who came to power in a March 1982 coup that overthrew the military-backed government of President Fernando Romeo Lucas Garcia, also an army general.

The coup was backed by a band of young army officers who accused Lucas Garcia's government of "dishonesty and abuses of power that exhausted the patience of the people."

In a speech on the coup's first anniversary, Rios Montt promised to call for elections for a constituent assembly to prepare for general elections. No date has been set.

But government officials have said the election of the assembly could be announced next March on the anniversary of the coup and held later in the year. General elections would not be held until after the new constitution was written.

In the letter distributed to reporters, Echeverria Vielman said "the people await a prompt return to...a legal government."

After the coup, Guatemalans were "ready for a new era, with the army's guarantee, that would signify security and free initiative for the country's political, social, economic and cultural development," the letter said.

"But as the days went by, it became evident these hopes were premature, because the new administration, far from propitiating popular consultation, was shaping up as the only deciding power in the nation."

Dispute 'docks' with ship's refitting

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — When the Cunard Countess sailed into Grand Harbor last month for a $3 million refit and reconversion job, it raised an outcry in Britain. But it aroused the hopes of many Maltese for another booming shipping era for their island nation.

The work on the Countess was seen as a key test of Malta's ability to service ships and perhaps restore the glory to Grand Harbor, once crammed ywith sleek destroyers and frigates of the British Royal Navy as its port in the Mediterranean.

The Maltese yard was given 42 days to make the 17,000-ton liner shipshape again after its stint in the South Atlantic, ferrying British troops and supplies during the war with Argentina last year over the Falkland Islands. On July 9, the Countess has to be back in San Juan, Puerto Rico, to start its Caribbean cruises.

Financially depressed shipyards in Britain raised ya storm of protest when Cunard awarded the contract to Malta Drydocks. The issue was raised even in the House of Commons where opposition Labor Party leader Michael Foot spoke yof "a sense of outrage throughout the country" yat the British government's decision to allow ythe ship to be refitted outside Britain.

If Malta Drydocks doesn't complete the job on time, the penalty is $1.6 million, but with such a long and traditional reputation to protect, the yard is making doubly sure that it meets the challenge.

For more than 160 years, Malta was Britain's naval outpost in the Mediterranean, but British forces left Malta in March 1979. Grand Harbor remains the pride of the island's 300,000 people.

Arafat continues tour of Third World nations

By The Associated Press

Embattled PLO chief Yasser Arafat, faced with a mutiny in his own guerrilla faction, today continued a fast-paced tour of Third World countries after winning a key public endorsement from Saudi Arabia's King Fahd.

Arafat flew in an executive jet today to New Delhi, India, from Saudi Arabia, where he met privately with Fahd and Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud al-Faisal.

"We are fortunate to have with us today Yasser Arafat, the leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, on whom we pin great hopes," Fahd said in a show of support at the inauguration of an airport in Jidda. "We (in Saudi Arabia) and the PLO are moving within the same framework."

The PLO chief, who came to Saudi Arabia from Algeria, had been unhappy about an apparent growing rapprochement between Saudi Arabia and Libya, according to Arab diplomatic sources.

Arafat blames Libya for inciting rebellion in Fatah, the largest of the eight PLO factions, in eastern Lebanon. The mutinous guerrillas, with some support from Syria, have complained that Arafat is pursuing a diplomatic rather than military solution to quest for Palestinian statehood.

Fahd dispatched Crown Prince Abdullah to Libya and Syria in an effort to resolve differences.

Kunkel top Texas pick in free agent draft

New Ranger may be putting own dad out of work

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Texas Rangers' decision to select shortstop Jeff Kunkel in baseball's amateur free agent draft could hasten the retirement of the Rider College star's father.

That's because Pappa Bill Kunkel is an American League umpire who has just returned to active duty following two cancer operations.

"A lot of people think my health may make me retire," the umpire said. "But that's not it. If Jeff makes it to the majors, I'm going to have a tough decision to make. I'm going to talk to the commissioner about changing leagues. If I can't, I'll quit. I won't put that type of pressure on my son."

Jeff said there need not be problem.

"Dad talked with Dick Butler, supervisor of American League umpires, and they can work out a schedule so if I play with the Rangers, my father would not officiate at those games."

Jeff said his father's battle with cancer has provided inspiration for him.

"He's instilled in me a want, a big W, which says, 'Whatever you want to do in life, you have to go after it if you really want it.' Just recently, since he's been in the hospital, he's shown that big W, the desire and comeback from cancer. It has reflected on me I guess and that's the reason why I've excelled to the point where I am."

KUNKEL BATTED .399 with six homers, 37 runs batted in and 12 stolen bases this season and was the third player chosen in Monday's draft following Minnesota's selection of fastball specialist Tim Belcher of Mr. Vernon, Ohio, Nazarene College and the Cincinnati Reds' pick of shortstop Kurt Stillwell of Thousand Oaks, Calif. High School.

The Reds immediately announced the signing of Stillwell, who decided to pass up a baseball scholarship at Stanford. Belcher, whose fastball has been clocked at 95 mph, seemed anxious to get his negotiations completed.

"They've made a very strong statement that I'm the best player in the nation," said the 6-foot-3, 210-pound junior. "Hopefully, it won't turn into a battle over money. I want to get back on the field and throw as quickly as I can. I'm sure we'll get together. Money figures are the farthest thing from my mind right now."

Belcher had a no-hitter, two one-hitters and two two-hitters in compiling a 5-4 record this season. He struck out 93 batters in 66 innings and compiled a 2.86 earned run average.

STILLWELL, WHO batted .552 and had a .704 on-base percentage in his senior year celebrated his 18th birthday Saturday.

Belcher was the first of 10 right-handed pitchers selected in the first round of the regular draft. The others were Stan Hilton of Baylor, by Oakland; Jackie Davidson of Everman, Texas, High School, by the Chicago Cubs; Darrel Akerfelds of Mesa, Colo. College, by Seattle; Joel Davis of Sandalwood High School, Jacksonville, Fla., by the Chicago White Sox; Richard Stoll of the University of Michigan and Brian Holman of North High School, Wichita, Kan., both by Montreal; Arnold Dotson of Estacado High School, Lubbock, Tex., by Detroit; Roger Clemens of the University of Texas, by Boston; and Wayne Wilson of Redondo Beach, Calif. High School, by Baltimore.

IN THE special draft to compensate teams losing Type B free agents in last winter's re-entry draft, the Mets selected Calvin Schiraldi, another right-handed pitcher, from the University of Texas, and the White Sox picked Russell Morman, an outfielder-first baseman from Wichita State University. The picks were awarded for the Mets' loss of Pete Falcone to Atlanta and the White Sox' loss of Bill Almon to Oakland.

Doughty's double gives Texas 11th inning victory

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Jamie Doughty's double scored Mike Trent with the winning run in the bottom of the 11th inning to lift top-ranked Texas to a 6-5 victory over No.3 Oklahoma State in the College World Series.

But had things happened slightly different, Doughty says he may have been playing his baseball at Oklahoma State.

"We recruited him, helped put him in junior college...we knew he's a fine ball player," said Oklahoma State Coach Gary Ward after Monday night's game.

"He put me everywhere but at Texas," Doughty said of Ward. "How close was I to going there? I had the papers in my hand. I had the pen in my hand. That was until (Texas) Coach (Cliff) Gustafson called and sent me a plane ticket. I went down and loved it."

Doughty's game-winning hit advanced Texas, 63-14, into the winners bracket finals Thursday at 7:10 p.m. against the winner of tonight's Michigan-Alabama contest.

Oklahoma State, 48-15, dropped into the losers bracket to face Arizona State, 43-23, at 5:10 p.m. Wednesday.

TRENT, WHO tied a College World Series record by scoring four runs Friday night, walked with one out and advanced to second on a wild pitch in the decisive 11th inning. He scored easily when Doughty, who replaced Brian Burrows at third base, lined a fast ball deep to right-center.

Both teams snuffed 10th-inning rallies as Oklahoma State's Robbie Wine opened the top of the inning with a double and moved to third on a groundout. But Texas reliever Kirk Killingsworth retired the side to keep the contest at 5-5.

Texas then loaded the bases with two outs in the bottom of the 10th when Mike Brumley doubled, Jose Tolentino and Jeff Hearron walked to load the bases.

Oklahoma State reliever Gary Kanwisher, 9-4, then worked the count to 3-2 on Steve Labay and fired a called third strike past the Texas outfielder to keep the game going.

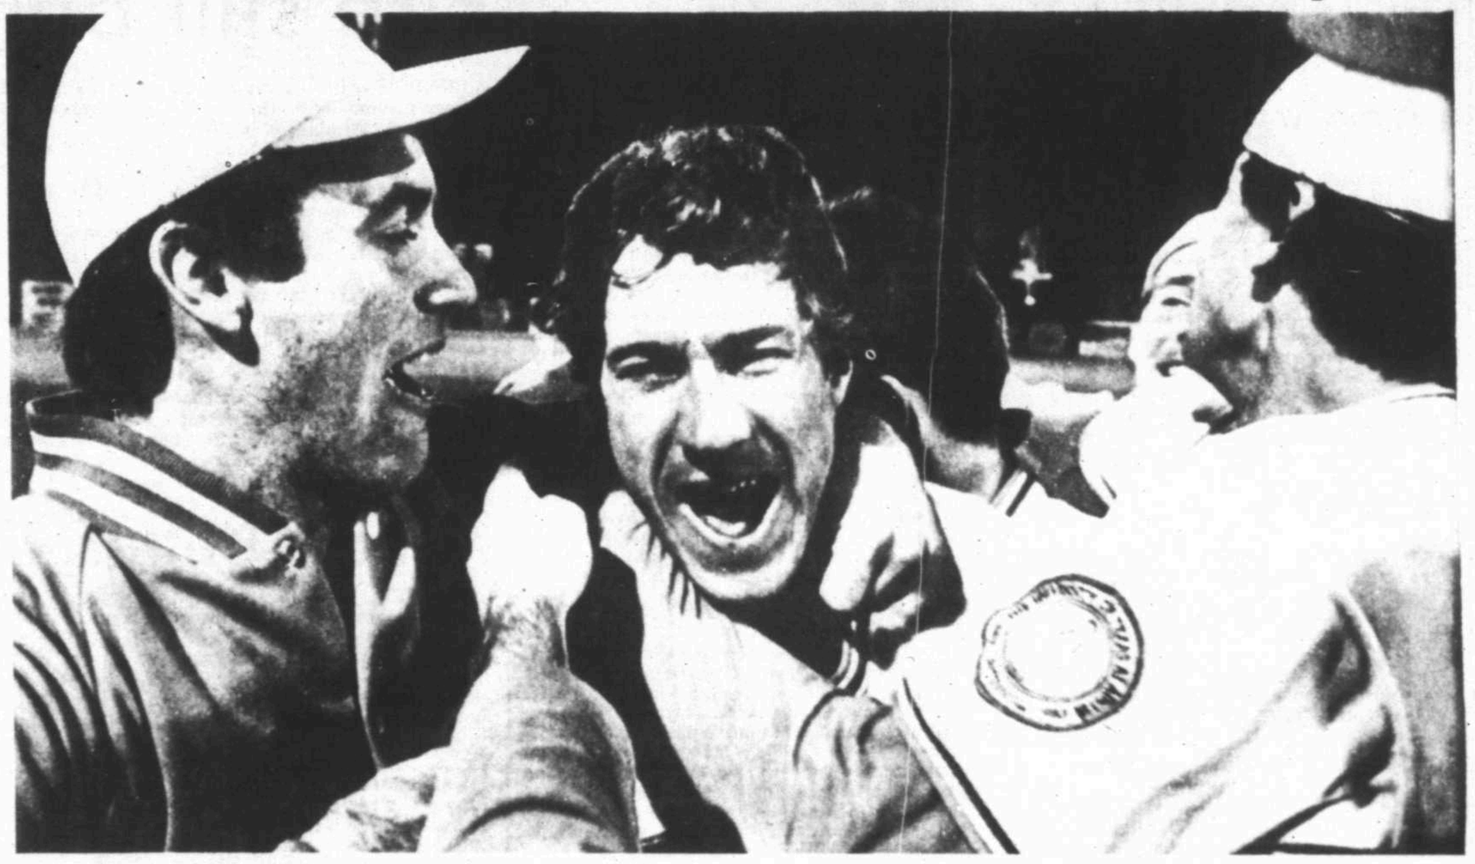

Longhorn starter Roger Clemens, who tossed a five-hitter last year against OSU in the College World Series, struck out 12 and scattered seven hits in 8 2-3 innings Monday night before being sidelined by OSU's game-tying rally in the top of the ninth.

MIKE BRUMLEY, a second-round draft pick Monday, set up a dramatic finish with a go-ahead run in the eighth inning when he scored on a wild pitch by Kanwisher.

With two down in the top of the ninth, Oklahoma State pinch hitter Kevin Jagielo and Tim Knapp singled to send Clemens, a first-round draft pick, to the bench.

Scott Wade then greeted Texas reliever Killingsworth, 12-3, with a single to score Jagielo to even the game at 5-5.

Texas gave up two runs on three errors in the third and single runs in the fifth and sixth. Trailing 4-1, Texas came up with three runs in the seventh to even the game and set the stage for the late-inning excitement.

Breakers rally in second half to beat Blitz, 21-15

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Breakers may not be crazy about their usual halftime position. By now, however, they at least should feel comfortable starting the second half with ground to make up.

For the third straight week, the Breakers trailed at intermission. And, for the third straight week, they won, overtaking the Chicago Blitz 21-15 in the United States Football League Monday night.

In those three games, Boston has outscored its opposition 19-0 in the third quarter and 30-9 in the fourth after a cumulative 37-14 deficit in the opening halves.

"When adversity strikes, we always know something good's going to come out of it," said Boston linebacker Bill Roe. "We don't panic because we know we're going to come back."

THE BREAKERS came back from a 13-0 deficit against Chicago to stretch their winning streak to four games and tie the Blitz in the battle for the league's single wild-card playoff berth. Boston is in second place in the Atlantic Division, Chicago is in second in the Central, and both have 9-5 records.

"It keeps them in the race," Chicago Coach George Allen said of the Breakers' win. "It puts our football team in the hole in our division. We're fighting for our lives."

The Blitz are one game behind Tampa Bay, which visits Chicago Sunday. Boston, which trails Philadelphia by three games, is at Birmingham Saturday night.

Chicago grabbed a 13-0 lead on field goals of 33 and 29 yards by Frank Corral and a 29-yard touchdown pass from Tim Koegel to Trumaine Johnson. Corral's 29-yarder came one play after Tim Spencer's 1-yard run into the end zone was nullified by a holding penalty against right guard Tim Norman.

The Breakers sliced the margin to 13-7 at halftime on Johnnie Walton's 10-yard bootleg after Chicago's Kevin Long fumbled and Roe recovered at the Blitz 15-yard line.

A defensive pass interference call and a 50-yard pass play from Walton to Nolan Franz on a flea flicker set up Richard Crump's 6-yard touchdown run that put Boston on top 14-13 with 6:40 left in the third quarter.

Walton hit Crump for a 9-yard touchdown on a fourth-quarter pass after Mike Brewington recovered Mack Boatner's fumble. Chicago got its last two points with three seconds left when Boston punter Joe Restic took a deliberate safety rather thank risk a blocked punt.

Boston was outgained 328 yards to 123, had just eight first downs and held the ball nearly 10 minutes less than Chicago.

The errors overshadowed the second consecutive brilliant performance by Chicago's defense, which is ranked first in the league. In a 36-11 win over Arizona the previous Monday night, Chicago allowed just 108 yards and seven first downs.

Cubs defeat Diablos, return home tonight

EL PASO—The last place Midland Cubs defeated El Paso's Diablos, 9-6, at Dudley Field Monday in a Texas League baseball game.

Randy LaVigne and A.J. Hill hit two-run homers in the seventh inning to lead the Cubs to victory.

The Diablos, who had five players with two hits each, left 12 runners on, while Midland stranded only two.

Ken Pryce, 4-0, picked up the win in 3⅓ innings of relief. El Paso starter Dave Grier, 4-4, was tagged with the loss.

Midland returns to Cubs Stadium at 7:30 p.m. tonight against Beaumont.

Lubbock Christian captures NAIA World Series crown

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Lubbock Christian did what no other NAIA team did this season — beat Lewis-Clark State — and then did it again to capture the 27th annual NAIA World Series.

David Bulls came on in relief in the seventh inning with the bases loaded and struck out the side as Lubbock Christian upset the Idaho college 12-9 in the championship game Monday night.

For the second straight night, the Warriors blew a chance to capture the crown. Lubbock Christian posted a 4-3 win Sunday night in the double-elimination tournament.

Both games marked the only two losses for Lewis-Clark against NAIA teams this season.

The Warriors loaded the bases with no outs in the seventh before Bulls came on to fan the next three batters.

Lubbock Christian took a 7-3 lead into the eighth inning when Lewis-Clark scored four runs on a double, a walk, a single and David Martinez' home run.

But Lubbock Christian rebounded in the bottom of the eighth with five runs, including a homer by Ed Jeffrey.

In the ninth, Bulls gave up a single and a walk and was replaced by Travis Walden. Walden walked the bases full, threw a wild pitch to allow a run, got Fred Quintero on an infield out and then walked another batter.

Holmes has lots of options

By The Associated Press

Larry Holmes vs. Greg Page in a mandatory defense of the World Boxing Council heavyweight title. Promoter Don King wants it.

Larry Holmes vs. Marvis Frazier, the son of former heavyweight champion Smokin' Joe Frazier. Promoter Bob Arum covets it.

Larry Holmes vs. Michael Spinks, the undisputed light heavyweight champion. Promoter Butch Lewis seeks it.

"Everybody is making noise," said the 33-year-old Holmes, who has said he will not fight after this year.

"Right now I'm in limbo."

But it's good kind of limbo Holmes finds himself in. He finds himself in the position of calling the shots, in the position of being able to take the best deal ... or of taking no deal and retiring. He does not need money, so he is able to not fight unless the money is big.

"I'm on the open market," said Holmes, who has had most of his fights promoted by King.

MICHAEL DOKES is recognized as champion by the World Boxing Association, but most boxing fans recognize Holmes as the champion. So do promoters, who know the importance of having promotional ties to the heavyweight champion.

Right now, King is the No. 1 promoter, and his strength is keyed to the heavyweight division.

King is tied Dokes, who is managed by King's son, Carl, and to Holmes through long association, even though Holmes now says he willing to fight for someone else. King also is tied to several heavyweight contenders, including Page.

So Arum and Lewis would love to promote a Holmes bout. They could wait and hope to get their foot in the door after Holmes retires, but should Frazier or Spinks upset Holmes, Arum or Lewis would be a position of real strength.

Arum announced after the 22-year-old Frazier ran his record to 10-0 with a unanimous 10-round decision over Joe Bugner last Saturday that "Holmes told me he is interested in the fight."

Arum and Lewis, who then worked for Arum, once interested Muhammad Ali in fighting a man with seven pro fights. Leon Spinks upset Ali, but Ali was then much farther downhill than Holmes is now.

"All the financing is in place, but nothing is signed," said Arum, who even announced a tentative date of Sept. 23 for Atlantic City, N.J.

HOLMES SAID he has talked to Arum, but added "the finances are not set. Arum said he offered Holmes $2.5 million and could go to $3 million, athough Holmes' figure is higher.

Then Holmes acknowledged that Lewis also is seeking his services.

"Right know they're asking me to fight Michael Spinks for $3.25 million," said Holmes.

Lewis said he had offered Holmes $3 million to fight Spinks even before the heavyweight champion defended against Tim Witherspoon May 20. Lewis said that the $3.25 million figure includes $250,000 in expenses.

Then there is Page, ranked No. 1 by the WBC, and in line for a mandatory shot at the title.

"I have signed for Page," said Holmes, "but no date has been made and no money negotiated."

Holmes reportedly has been offered $2.25 million to defend against Page.

This all leads to some interesting speculation.

Perhaps Holmes can get in a fight against Frazier or Spinks before meeting Page. Then if that fight showed he has slipped too much, he could retire without risking his unbeaten record against Page.

Page, whose attitude was poor but is improving, can match Holmes in speed and size and holds a distinct edge in right-hand punching power. He figures to be a much tougher opponent than the experienced, relatively small Frazier or Spinks, who would be an a blown-up light heavyweight.

There is also the possibility that Holmes is using Frazier and Spinks as a wedge to drive up his price for a Page fight.

IN SAYING he thought a Holmes-Frazier fight was possible, Arum said the fight would be for 15 rounds and would be sanctioned by the new United States Boxing AssociationInternational, which recently recognized Holmes as its champion.

Arum said he didn't care whether the WBC sanctioned the fight or not.

"I can't tell the WBC to go to hell," said Holmes, who obviously feels loyalty to the organization. In his last two defenses, Holmes fought at the WBC title limit of 12 rounds.

But should a Page fight fall through, Holmes might decide to fight Frazier or Spinks even without WBC sanction, then retire.

Kemp's inside the park homer makes up for error

By The Associated Press

For New York Yankees' right fielder Steve Kemp, the top of the eighth was nothing to laugh about — but he was all smiles in the bottom of the inning.

He misplayed Domingo Ramos' fly ball into a triple to help Seattle take a 2-1 lead in the top of the eighth Monday night. Then, with the score 2-2 in the bottom of the inning, he smacked a three-run, inside-the-park homer that boosted the Yanks to a 6-2 victory.

"That's what's so funny about this game," said Kemp. "You can go from being in the gutter to the top of the world. That's what's unique about this game and why you have to have a lot of confidence. You can't lose confidence or you're shot, and you have to have pride in yourself — and I have both."

Elsewhere in the American League, Milwaukee outlasted California 9-7, Detroit defeated Boston 11-6 and Baltimore beat Toronto 8-1 in a game halted by rain in the top of the sixth inning. Oakland's game at Cleveland was rained out. The National League was idle.

After Ramos' tainted triple and Dave Hendrson's tie-breaking sacrifice fly gave the Mariners a temporary lead, the Yankee Stadium crowd went to work on Kemp, booing lustily as he trotted in from right field. Then the Yanks went to work on Seattle's relief corps, which was following Gaylord Perry to the mound.

American League

Willie Randolph nailed Mike Stanton for a single. Ed Vande Berg took over and promptly threw Ken Griffey's sacrifice into center field trying for the force at second. Randolph reached third, then scored when Bill Caudill gave up a sacrifice fly to Dave Winfield.

After Oscar Gamble singled, Kemp sliced the ball to left. It caromed off the wall and skipped past rookie Ricky Nelson, and Kemp had his first Yankee Stadium homer.

"I never thought I'd get it that way," said Kemp. "I wanted to just get a base hit, to score at least one run — and then not mess up another fly."

With two away, Graig Nettles capped the five-run burst with his second solo homer of the game.

Ron Guidry, tying Toronto's Dave Stieb for the AL lead in wins with eight, fanned seven Mariners and scattered six hits en route to his fifth consecutive victory and fifth complete game. Perry pitched seven innings and slipped past Warren Spahn into fourth place on the all-time innings-pitched list with 5,246 1-3.

Brewers 9, Angels 7

Paul Molitor, his injured wrist obviously healed, went 4-for-4 with a single, two doubles and a homer and drove in three runs for Milwaukee.

"My wrist still isn't 100 percent, but my confidence is nearing 100 percent again," said Molitor.

"Getting Paul back in the leadoff spot, especially the way he's hitting, has been a real lift," added Brewers Manager Harvey Kuenn.

Jim Gantner's two-run triple and Robin Yount's two-run double contributed to the Brewers' 16-hit assault. "For a change we got a lot of hits with men on base," Molitor said. "Maybe that's a sign that things finally are going to start going our way.

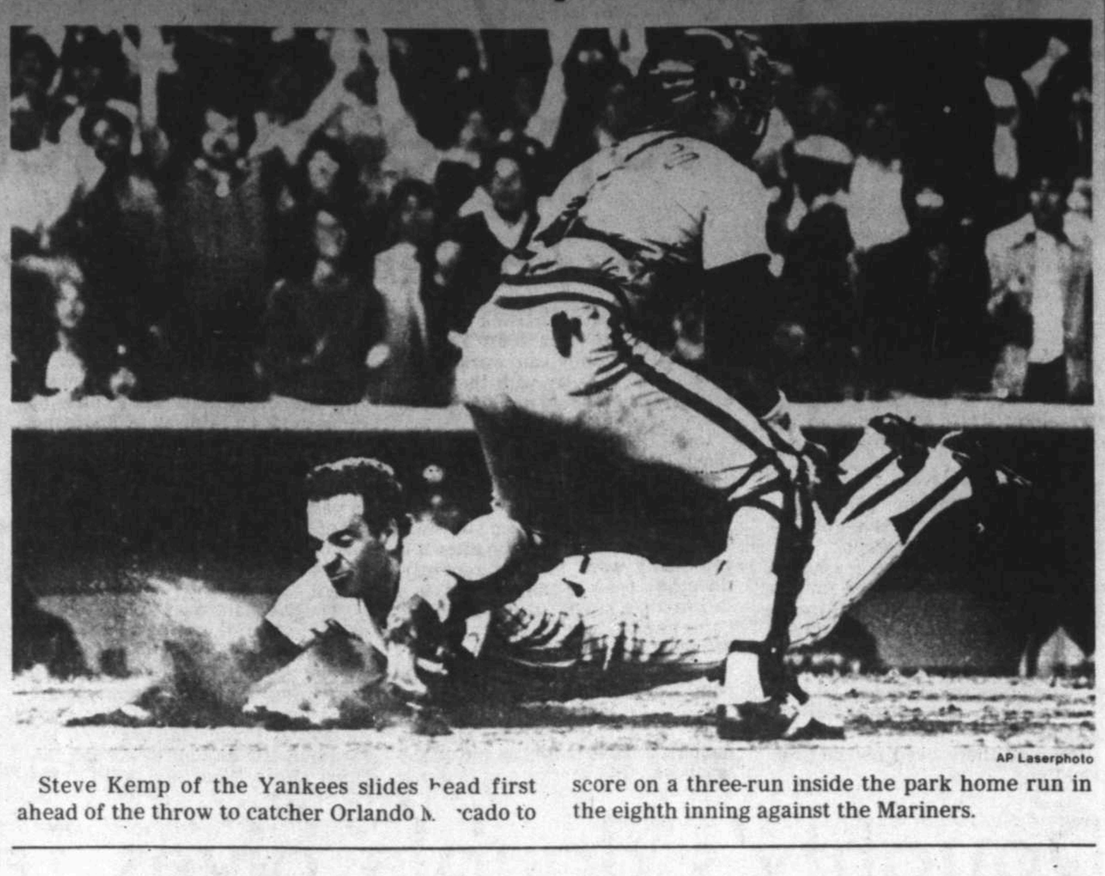

"We came back offensively," Angels Manager John McNamara said. "At least we didn't just roll over and die."

Tigers 11, Red Sox 6

Enos Cabell hit a solo homer and Lou Whitaker a two-run shot before Alan Trammell highlighted a five-run eighth inning with his three-run homer that boosted Detroit past the Red Sox. Dwight Evans and Glenn Hoffman homered for Boston.

Orioles 8, Blue Jays 1

Leo Hernandez' three-run homer and a two-run belt by Cal Ripken Jr. gave Baltimore sole possession of first place in the East, one game ahead of Toronto and Boston. Cliff Johnson homered for the Blue Jays. The game was delayed 45 minutes at the start and called after a 52-minute wait in the sixth.

Fire still burning in Connors

LONDON (AP) — Jimmy Connors explained why he is a calmer personality on the tennis courts these days than when he first won Wimbledon in 1974.

"Ten years ago I used to rant and rage and shout and jump around," the 30-year-old left-hander said.

"I don't do that now because I'm 10 years older and I need the energy for my tennis.

"But the fire is still burning, deep down there," Connors added. "Nobody should try to bring it out."

Connors won Wimbledon again last year after an eight-year lapse and will start the defense of his title in two weeks.

Monday, he made a good start to his warming up campaign by beating Lloyd Bourne 6-3, 6-3 in the opening round of the $203,000 Stella Artois Grand Prix tournament at London's Queen's Club.

This is the only tournament most of the men stars will play on grass courts before Wimbledon. For Connors, and many of the other contenders, it is a big change from the slow red clay of Roland Garros stadium in Paris, where Connors lost in the quarterfinals of the French Open last week.

"The surfaces may be different, but the French Open was good practice for me," Connors said. "I played five matches and I hit a lot of balls.

"I'm sorry I didn't win Paris. Of course I would love to win the French title. But for the moment I am just thinking of getting ready for Wimbledon."

JOHN MCENROE, the No. 2 seed, was due to start his bid with a match against Jeff Borowiak today. Ivan Lendl, the No. 3 seed, was paired against Nick Saviano.

Vitas Gerulaitis, seeded fourth, had a difficult time Monday overcoming Ramesh Krishnan of India 7-5, 6-7, 7-5.

The Indian, one day after turning 22, served for the match after breaking Gerulaitis' service for 5-3 in the final set. But Gerulaitis won the next four games for the match, and dropped only three points in the last three games.

Form was unpredictable as the players sought to get the feel of grass — many of them for the first time since last year's Wimbledon.

The first upset was scored by Sammy Giammalva, who eliminated the No. 14 seed, John Alexander of Australia.

Minors better 'than not pitching at all'

MAUMEE, Ohio (AP) — Former American League Rookie of the Year Mark "The Bird" Fidrych says pitching in the minors is better than not pitching at all.

"I'm still hyper," the lanky 28-year-old said. "If I don't stay hyper on the mound, my mind wanders. The minute you do that, they are all over you like flies."

Fidrych, who captivated the baseball-watching public in 1976 with his theatrics and his 19-9 record for the Detroit Tigers, still manicures pitching mounds and talks with the baseball for the Pawtucket Red Sox of the International League.

And if Fidrych isn't the phenom who appeared on a direct flight to fame seven years ago, he at least knows what it will take to get him back to the "bigs."

"It's going to take getting people out and that's something I just haven't been doing consistently," Fidrych said.

Pawtucket Manager Tony Torchia said Fidrych is "far from the majors right now" but the curly-haired right-hander is making strides toward regaining a major league form.

"His biggest problem right now is wildness. Mark throws the ball 86 mph at best and with that kind of speed you can't come upstairs five or six times in a major league game," Torchia said.

Fidrych pitched five innings of scoreless baseball at the Toledo Mud Hens on Sunday, but he surrendered five hits and walked five batters. He threw 110 pitches before Torchia took him out.

Brewers deal Thomas to Indians

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Outfielder Gorman Thomas, one of the most popular players in Milwaukee baseball history, was traded to Cleveland Monday as the struggling Brewers and Indians completed a five-man deal.

Thomas, relief pitcher Jamie Easterly and minor league pitcher Ernie Camacho were sent to the Indians for center fielder Rick Manning and pitcher Rick Waits.

Thomas, 32, was batting only .183 with five homers and 18 runs batted in. He shared the American League home run championship with Reggie Jackson of California last year with 39, but batted only .181 after Sept. 1. He had one hit in 15 times at bat in the AL championship series against the Angels and three hits in 26 times at bat against the St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series.

Harry Dalton, Brewers' general manager, was not immediately available for comment. Brewers President Bud Selig seemed shaken.

"Harry called me this morning and said, 'I have bad news for you,'" said Selig, who feels sincere affection for all his players and Thomas in particular.

"I would be a horrible general manager," Selig said. "I wouldn't trade anyone. But I've talked to several people today. Nobody was surprised. Not one. But Gorman was a hell of a player for us."

"The trade is a case that Milwaukee doesn't think I can play any more," Thomas said. "I don't buy that. It hurts any time you're traded, but I've got nothing against Cleveland."

Thomas, the Brewers' regular center fielder since 1978, is one of the slowest players to play that position in the major leagues. But he was able to compensate by getting an excellent jump on fly balls.

He won the affection of Brewer fans with a reckless style of play, often crashing into walls or tumbling on the ground chasing fly balls. But as his strikeouts mounted in recent weeks, fans increasingly booed him.

Easterly, 30, had a 0-1 record and 3.86 earned-run average in 12 games. He also has been booed in recent weeks.

Camacho, 27, was signed by the Brewers as a minor league free agent last winter. He had a 0-2 record and 7.40 earned-run average for the club's Vancouver farm team of the Pacific Coast League.

Manning, 28, is considered an excellent defensive outfielder. He currently has a career high 17-game hitting streak and was batting .278 in 50 games. He has a .263 average and 142 stolen bases in eight major league seasons.

The Brewers picked Manning in last fall's re-entry draft, but he re-signed with the Indians. Manning had said last year that he would like to play with the Brewers.

Waits, 31, had a 0-1 record and 4.58 ERA in eight games, all in relief, this season. A left-hander, he has allowed 23 hits and 10 earned runs in 19.2 innings.

'It's kind of like getting hit over the head,' oil man says

DALLAS (AP) — Oilmen and congressmen from petroleum states angrily decried a Supreme Court ruling they said will benefit the importers of foreign oil at the expense of already struggling domestic producers.

The high court voted 9-0 Monday to uphold the constitutionality of the 1980 tax that generates billions of dollars a year for the government by taxing oil producers.

An announcment of the ruling hushed a crowded hotel ballroom here where 500 peopler were attending the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association convention.

"It's kind of like getting hit over the head," said Kye Trout, president of an independent oil producing company in Bismarck, N.D. and chairman of a committee that represented 8,000 Independent Petroleum Association of America members in its suit against the tax.

In Texas, Oklahoma and Colorado oilmen predicted the ruling would be a setback to efforts to increase U.S. oil production and pledged to pressure congress to abolish the tax.

"It's a sad day for independent domestic producers nationwide," said Ray Potts, president of the Oklahoma Independent Oil Producers Association, who predicted another flood of imported oil.

"It's extemely bad news for the industry, but not altogether unexpected," James L. Stafford, executive director of the National Association of Royalty Owners.

Jack Swenson, executive vice president of the Rocky Mountain Oil and Gas Association, said in Denver that the comination of the recession and the tax has idled hundreds of rigs throughout the Rockies.

"This (the ruling) will contribute to keeping a lot of those rigs idle," said Swenson.

Secretary of Energy Donald Hodel, the keynote speaker at the TIPRO convention here, deviated from his speech to rally opponents of the tax.

"Unify your voice on the windfall tax." Hodel told the oil producers. "Don't let anyone sell you or Congress on it."

He told the delegates President Reagan "remains philosophically opposed" to the oil tax because the "consumer pays the increased price."

In Denver, one of the attorneys who challenged the tax before the high court, said the lawyers may mount another legal foray against the tax.

Gale Norton, a Mountain States Legal Foundation attorney in Denver, said the conservative public interest organization, which intervened in the lawsuit on behalf of the states of Texas and Louisiana, may challenge the tax on two other legal issues raised by the lower court but not addressed by the Supreme Court.

Ms. Norton said the Supreme Court did not address the issues of illegal confiscation of property and the "rationality" of the tax, both of which were raised by the lower court ruling the Supreme Court overturned.

U.S. District Judge Euing T. Kerr ruled last Nov. 4 in Cheyenne, Wyo., that the 3-year-old tax was unconstitutional because it exempts new oil produced above the Arctic Circle, with the exception of the giant Prudhoe Bay field on the North Slope of Alaska.

Kerr said the Constitution requires all federal taxes to be uniform throughout the nation.

But Justice Lewis F. Powell, in his opinion for the Supreme Court Monday, said, "Congress may take geographic considerations into account in deciding what oil to tax."

Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., vowed Monday to introduce legislation repealing the tax.

"Our only recourse is to get it repealed. That will be difficult to say the least. People in the oil states are concerned," said Nickles.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas also promised to work to kill the measure.

"...I believe this tax is unfair and counterproductive to our efforts to achieve energy independence," he said. "I will continue to work in the Congress to seek modification and the ultimate end to this tax."

Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, said he would send a letter to Reagan calling on him to keep a 1980 campaign promise to push legislation to abolish the tax.

Hance, who has introduced legislation to abolish the tax, said the administration has put off moving for abolition because of the revenue loss that would result.

Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas, echoed his Texas colleagues in his outrage against the decision.

"The heinous, irresponsible tax causes each and every one of us to pay more for less energy for a longer period of time," Loeffler said.

Lew Ward, of Enid, Okla., a member of the National Petroleum Council, said the court's decision was based purely on finances.

"There's too much income for the government to give it up. It inconceivable that they could bite the bullet and give it up," he said.

The levy produced an estimated $26 billion in revenue as of last Oct. 1 and is expected to yield over $40 billion more in the next five years. By 1990, government officials expect the tax to bring in a total of $225 billion.

"Our concern is it lays the foundation for Congress to lay whatever discriminatory tax on whatever selected industry it wants to," said Ron Smith, executive director of the Independent Petroleum Association of Mountain States.

"The windfall profits tax is not being spent in the manner in which Congress intended for it to be spent, toward development of alternate sources of energy," said Texas Railroad Commission chairman Mack Wallace, who was attending the TIPRO convention. "It's of no benefit to the consumer because the consumer ultimately pays in one way or another."

"The oilman doesn't get any of that (tax) money," said Chester Upham, former state GOP chairman and president of Upham Oil and Gas in Mineral Wells, Texas. "The domestic producer is taxed while the importer is untaxed — strange."

Court says Congress has 'wide latitude'

By MARIANNE MEANS
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court Monday ruled that the federal tax on windfall profits made by domestic crude oil producers following oil price decontrols was legally valid.

The high court held that the windfall profits tax was Constitutional, reversing a lower court decision that it violated a constitutional requirement that taxes be "uniform throughout the United States." The tax treated Alaskan oil as a special classification, exempting certain categories of oil produced in that state. Less than 20 percent of current Alaskan production is exempt, however..

The decision was unanimous; the court is in similar unanimity on only about one-third of the cases which it takes. Justice Lewis Powell, in the opinion, ruled that Congress has the right to take into account differences that exist between regions of the country to fashion legislation.

Congress, he wrote, has "wide latitude in deciding what to tax" and is not prohibited by the uniformity clause from considering geographically isolated problems.

"It (Congress) had before it ample evidence of the disproportionate costs and difficulties — the fragile ecology, the harsh environment, and the remote location — associated with extracting oil from this region," Powell said. "Nothing..suggests that Congress intended to grant Alaska an undue preference at the expense of other oil-producing states. This is especially clear because the windfall profit tax itself falls heavily on the state of Alaska."

The average cost of drilling a well in Alaska is as much as 15 times greater than that of drilling a well elsewhere in the United States. Congress therefore exempted some Alaskan oil because it feared such a tax would discourage exploration and development of reservoirs in areas of extremely harsh climate.

The federal government has continued to collect the tax while the appeal was pending. Independent oil producers and royalty owners had filed suit in the District Court for the District of Wyoming six months after the law was passed, seeking a refund on the grounds the law was unconstitutional. The Wyoming judge agreed but now the Supreme Court has reversed.

President Carter originally proposed that the windfall tax be spent on urban mass transit, aid to the poor and development of synthetic fuels. Congress, however, developed a different formula, setting aside some of the funds for income tax deducations. There have been repeated efforts in Congress to earmark the funds for various other pet projects, including aid for Social Security. Those efforts may be redoubled now that the Supreme Court has lifted the legal cloud over the law.

President Reagan criticized the tax in his 1980 campaign but two years later proposed that $16.5 billion in windfall profit revenues be set aside to help finance his "new federalism" proposal under which the states would have taken over support of the welfare program. When Congress demonstrated little interest in the proposal, the president continued to quietly count on the windfall profits tax as a means of whittling away at the massive federal deficit.

Hance goads Reagan

WASHINGTON — U. S. Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, called upon President Reagan to honor his campaign promise and actively work to kill the "so-called windfall profits tax" in light of today's Supreme Court decision.

"Now is the time for the Administation to keep its promise," said Hance, who has introduced and supported legislation to kill the tax since President Carter signed it into law in 1980. "President Reagan told Texans he would fight to kill the so-called windfall profits tax and now is the time for him to live up to that promise.

"The Supreme Court just said the law was constitutional as written," said the Texas Democrat. "The justices didn't say we couldn't vote to kill the unjust tax and with the Administration's help, we might get the momentum moving to kill it."

Hance also said the ruling is "a clear signal from the Court and the Administration that the domestic oil producer is a marked man. If the domestic producer and the more than a million royalty owners in this country take the risks required to develop more Americaan energy, then the government is going to reward you by crating a windfall profits tax that no other American individual or industry is required to pay.

"I think the Adminjstratuion and the Supreme Court has just made a number of foreign oil producers feel very safe," said Hance. "It's a shame that we have to place an unjust tax on American producers while giving the foreign producer a free ride."

Losers may mount another attack

DENVER (AP) — Attorneys who challenged the windfall profits tax on oil and lost the case in the U.S. Supreme Court on Monday may mount another legal foray against the tax approved in 1980 by Congress, one attorney says.

Gale Norton, a Mountain States Legal Foundation attorney in Denver, said the conservative public interest organization, which intervened in the lawsuit on behalf of the states of Texas and Louisiana, may challenge the tax on two other legal issues raised by the lower court but not addressed by the Supreme Court.

The issue addressed by the U.S. Supreme Court on Monday was Cheyenne, Wyo., U.S. District Judge Ewing Kerr's Nov. 4 decision that the law unconstitutionally exempted much new oil produced above the Arctic Circle from the tax. Kerr said the Constitution requires all federal taxes to be uniform nationwide.

The Supreme Court ruled Monday, however, that Congress may take geographical considerations into account when deciding to tax oil production.

Ms. Norton said the Supreme Court did not address the issues of illegal confiscation of property and the "rationality" of the tax, both of which were raised by Kerr in his ruling.

She said the illegal confiscation question is whether it is just for the government to take the property of a few for the benefit of many. The tax's rationality, said Ms. Norton, can be challenged on the basis that it was imposed "at a time Congress was trying to encourage energy production."

As expected, reaction from other industry trade groups and oil producers was negative.

Rodney Calvin, whose Calvin Petroleum Corp. of Fort Lupton brought the original lawsuit challenging the tax, was unavailable for comment on the decision, his office said.

But the executive director of the oil industry trade association whose lawyers helped Calvin prepare the lawsuit said that besides further discouraging drilling for oil, the decision "allows Congress to impose whatever taxes it chooses on whomever it chooses for whatever reason."

Ron Smith, executive director of the Independent Petroleum Association of Mountain States, said the tax for that reason is discriminatory.

"Our concern is it lays the foundation for Congress to lay whatever discriminatory tax on whatever selected industry it wants to," he said.

Smith said IPA officials will sit down with their attorneys and decide whether to challenge the tax further in court.

If the organization decides to drop the legal challenge, it probably will seek repeal of the tax. "Candidly, the odds of that are pretty narrow, considering the economic condition of the (U.S.) budget," said Smith.

Jack Swenson, executive vice president of the Rocky Mountain Oil and Gas Association, said Monday the decision "is going to hurt."

"The combination of the recession and the higher taxes — because of the windfall profits tax — has idled literally hundreds of rigs throughout the Rockies. This (the ruling) will contribute to keeping a lot of those rigs idle," said Swenson, whose trade association has about 800 members in eight Rocky Mountain-area states.

Asked whether his association would lobby for repeal of the tax, Swenson said, "There still are so many other issues — the threat of an import fee and a new production tax of some sort — that I think we are going to concentrate probably on resisting any additional taxes.

"In the long range, the excise tax is not a windfall profits tax and never has been," he said. "One reason we lost is that someone was successful in tagging it as a windfall tax and it never was one.

"We now are looking at higher prices all along the line," Swenson predicted.

Ray Brownlie, vice president of BWAB Inc., a Denver-based oil company, said he did not expect the Supreme Court to rule otherwise.

"The government needs the income," he said. "I don't see the legislation expiring in 1985 (as Congress intended)."

Ruling makes oilmens' Monday even bluer

By SARAH MCCLENDON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The unanimous opinion of the U.S. Supreme Court in ruling Monday that the Windfall Profits Tax is constitutional brought gloom to the oil industry.

The wave of depression which swept over the opponents of this tax was reflected in reaction of congressmen in Texas.

The Independent Petroleum Association of America which had sponsored the drive to knock out this tax in the Supreme Court said through a spokesman that the short 12-page opinion was in itself "a disaster".

The opinion delivered by a Nixon-appointed justice, Lewis F. Powell of Virginia, did not address the "politically inspired motives which prevailed in Congress when this bill was passed in 1980 but merely said that Congress has the power to levy taxes anyway it wishes to do," said IPAA's Washington headquarters.

The same spokesman said, "We all know that Congress can levy taxes — that was not the point, but we were hoping the court would adress the validity and justice of the Act."

Acting as spokesman for the nation's independent oil industry, the IPAA spokesman said: "Powell's decision without one dissent from his colleagues in the court now creates a precedent for Congress to single out special groups as whipping boys and impose taxes on them when they may be in an unpopular climate."

The opinion in overruling the lower court of Judge Euing T. Kerr of Cheyenne, Wyo., that the tax was unconstitutional, also said that it was all right for the Windfall Tax to be applied to 49 states and not to be applied to Alaska. The IPAA's counsel had claimed that this was inducement for investors to seek oil revenues there rather than in say, West Texas.

The Windfall Tax brings the government a vast amount of money, billions annually, which, the IPAA pointed out, "could otherwise go back into the search for new oil and gas this opinion of the Court removes the incentives and capability for oil exploration in this country and will keep the U.S. dependent on foreign oil suplies."

Sen. John G. Tower, R., Texas said "I am disappionted that the Supreme Court decision upheld the Windfall Profits tax because I believe it is an unfair and counterproductive to our efforts to achieve energy independence. "I will continue to work in Congress to seek modification and, ultimately, an end to this tax."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D., Texas was traveling in the state and could not be reached for immediate comment.

Rep. Tom Loeffler, R., Hunt, Texas said: "I am severely disappointed that the Supreme Court has shown no better wisdom than did Congress when it enacted the Windfall Profits Tax in 1980. This heinous, irresponsible tax causes each and every one of us to pay more for less energy for a longer period of time."

Senator pledges fight

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — U.S. Sen. Don Nickles pledged Monday to introduce legislation repealing the windfall profits tax on oil in the wake of the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling that the tax is constitutional.

"I'm very disappointed, to say the least," Nickles said in a telephone interview Monday. "Our only recourse is to get it repealed. That will be difficult to say the least. People in the oil states are concerned." Nickles, R-Okla., said he expected help from senators from other oil-producing states.

Royalty and oil officials from Oklahoma also criticized the 9-0 decision of the high court.

"It's a sad day for independent domestic producers nationwide," said Ray Potts, president of the Oklahoma Independent Oil Producers Association.

Potts predicted the action will cut back domestic production and bring another flood of imported oil into the United States.

Lew Ward, of Enid, a member of the National Petroleum Council which advises Energy Secretary James Edwards on oil issues, said the court's decision was based purely on finances.

"There's too much income for the government to give it up. It inconceivable that they could bite the bullet and give it up," he said.

NARO urges unity

ADA, Oklahoma (SWN) — A United States Supreme Court verdict Monday overturning a Wyoming court ruling that the Windfall Profits Tax is unconstitutional was termed "a black day for the oil industry, but certainly no surprise," by Jim Stafford of Ada, Oklahoma, executive director of the National Association of Royalty Owners (NARO).

He said the ruling, although a bitter "pill to swallow," should serve to unite the oil industry's Washington lobbying effort rather than to kill forever any hope of getting relief from the Windfall Profits Tax.

"Our greatest fear is that some members of the oil industry will take this Supreme Court decision as a signal to quit their fight. Our second greatest fear is that the investment community in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles will interpret this ruling as an alert that the welcome mat is now out for more and more taxes on the oil industry," he said.

"At this time oil producers desperately need outside capital to continue operations. Such negative investment community reaction could be the final nail in the coffin for many smaller oil producers and drilling fund operators. Greater solidarity from the oil and gas community would blunt this negative reaction," he said.

He said NARO, in the vanguard of the fight against the tax since 1980, will now strengthen its efforts in Congress to exempt royalty owners totally from the tax, and place more emphasis on a court case the association has pending in the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver, Colorado.

Sun supports science

AUSTIN — Sun Exploration and Production Company of Dallas has given the Department of Geological Sciences at The University of Texas at Austin a gift of $13,500.

The gift, in the form of a pledge that will be paid in $4,500 stipends over the next three years, is part of a Sun program designed to help selected universities develop and retain faculty members in key scientific disciplines.

The Sun grant may be used for salary supplements, awards or assistance to professors. It might be used toward endowment of a chair in the department, or to aid graduate students whose aim is to become petroleum or geological educators in the United States.

"Sun is pleased to show its commitment to the outstanding educators who develop and train our future geological employees," said Wesley Tiller, Sun's geoscience recruiting representative and exploration manager, Texas Gulf Coast Region.

"Continuing cooperation between industry and academia can only lead to improved relations and understanding."

Dr. Earle McBride, chairman of geological sciences who accepted the first check on May 6, said, "We are most grateful for this generous grant by the Sun Exploration and Production Company and appreciate that Sun shares our concern for retaining qualified instructors and encouraging gifted students to pursue careers in geological education."

RRC OKs mining

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission has approved an application by the Lower Colorado River Authority to mine lignite at a site northwest of Bastrop. The Commission will not issue a mining permit, however, until LCRA posts a performance bond to guarantee reclamation of the land after mining is completed.

The Commission must approve both the amount and the form of the bond before a mining permit is issued.

Although some 956 acres are included in the permit application, only 157 of those acres will actually be minded, according to LCRA.

In granting the LCRA application, Chairman Mack Wallace and Commissioner Buddy Temple aproved a motion by Commissioner James E. "Jim" Nugent adding protection in the Commission order for Bastrop fresh water sources.

To further protect the Simsboro formation in which Bastrop water wells are completed, Nugent's provision requires LCRA to notify the Commission if the impervious clay layer above the Simsboro formation is penetrated deeper than five feet. Commission staff members would check the penetration and could require backfilling of the penetrated area with impervious material if necessary to protect water quality.

Surface Mining and Reclamation Division hearings examiner Stephen Webb said hydrologic studies indicated the flow of water in the Simsboro formation is generally away from the City of Bastrop's water wells. The nearest well was far enough from the proposed mine site that it would not be affected.

Webb's presentation to the commissioners addressed several other concerns that were voiced during hearings on the LCRA application. He said surface water which might contact areas disturbed during mining would be controlled through sedimentation ponds.

Extensive testing would be done by LCRA before building the ponds to make sure they would not be located on top of any abandoned underground coal mines.

Surface water runoff would be trapped in the ponds where solids would settle out.

Monitoring wells will also be drilled and tested frequently to detect any contamination that might be present.

Half-price Sealy sale now in progress

Matlock Furniture is a name many Midland residents have grown up with. Family owned and operated for 44 years, Matlock Furniture offers the finest in name brand furniture at prices at fit any budget.

Located out of the high rent district at 805 S. Big Spring, Matlock consistently offers lower prices than most while still stocking a wide selection of quality furniture and accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. T.M. Matlock began Matlock Furniture 44 years ago. This tradition has been carried on by daughter and Vice President Ann Matlock Hopkins. T.M. Matlock's grandson, John-Bob, works part-time at the store. The Matlock's are strong believers of "continuing the 44 year-old tradition of customer service" which has been practiced by the family.

Donny Rains is acting manager of Matlock Furniture. Wife Sharon, Tommy-John and Kristy are also active participants of the home-owned usiness. Donny's nephew, Mike Norris, and "adoptee" Ken Lovelady round out the friendly staff.

Matlock Furniture is currently offering a half price sale on all Sealy Posturepedic mattresses. Ann Hopkins describes Matlock's as "the oldest Sealy distributor in West Texas."Sealy Posturepedic mattresses are top of the line in bedding.

Twin, full, queen and king sized Sealy's are now in stock. They are available in various degrees of firmness: extra firm, super firm and luxury firm.

Aside from Sealy products, Matlock Furniture offers many other fine name-brand home furnishings. Choose from such names as Broyhill, Universal, Berkline and Bench Craft.

Matlock Furniture offers free delivery in the Midland area. Catalogues of available stock are supplied by the Matlocks in order to provide home furnishings not found on the floor.

Mastercard and Visa are both acceptable, as well as bank rate financing.

Stop by Matlock Furniture at 805 S. Big Spring Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and see why a family tradition of 44 years will continue to flourish in Midland.

Enjoy homecooking at Cook's Pantry

Cook's Pantry, located at 2001 North Big Spring, offers a fresh alternative to the fast food lunch. Owners Bob and Barb Christensen serve homecooked meals six days a week. Cook's Pantry services Midland residents and visitors with ample free parking just minutes from downtown Midland.

All-you-can-eat breakfasts are served six days a week, weekdays from 6 a.m. to 10:00 a.m. and Saturdays from 6 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. The breakfast menu includes homemade biscuits, country style gravy, sausage, bacon, choice of fried or scrambled eggs, omelets prepared to specific request, pancakes, french toast, juice and coffee. The breakfast feast is available at an affordable three dollars per person.

Luncheon buffets are served weekdays from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. All-you-can-eat main entrees are changed on a daily basis. Monday's entree offers a Mexican buffet, Tuesday's entree is chicken gizzards and liver. Wednesday is reserved as an open day, serving either pork chops, BBQ brisket, meat loaf or Chinese buffet. Thursday is quiche day and Friday offers catfish flown in from the North Atlantic. Roasted chicken, mashed potatoes, gravy and vegetables are always served at lunch.

Cook's Pantry offers a special soup and salad luncheon at an affordable $1.95 per person. This light lunch is available on a self-service basis allowing for a quick yet nutritious mid-day meal.

The homemade soups change daily. The salad bar offers a 22 item selection. Refills of coffee and tea are available at no extra charge. The coffee at Cook's Pantry is always freshly brewed. Midland water is not used to prepare Cook's Pantry's coffee. The distinctive taste is due to the Culligan reverse osmosis process.

Louie Hernandez is acting chef at Cook's Pantry. His 20 years of chef's experience include cooking for some of the finer restaurants in Midland.

Bob and Barb Christensen are dedicated to serving their customers the finest of homestyle cooking six days a week. Long lines need not discourage those pressed for time. The line at Cook's Pantry always moves quickly.

For an alternative to the fast food lunch, visit Cook's Pantry for genuine homestyle meals. Cook's Pantry is located at 2001 North Big Spring.

Chef Louie Henandez prepares the luncheon buffet at Cook's Pantry. Louie has 20 years of chef experience, including some of the finer restaurants of Midland.

Bulls, bears, ghouls all find glee in gold

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

Are you bearish, bullish or ghoulish on gold?

The bears believe inflation will recede, and so will gold. The bulls believe that inflation will rise, and so will gold. The ghouls believe that nothing would be as delightfully upticky for gold as an old-fashioned international bloodbath — preferably, one that cut off the supply of an important resource, such as oil.

Happily for the ghouls, the perfect powder keg for such a scenario exists in the Mideast, and the other day it looked like the ghouls would triumph. After a Syrian ambassador declared that war between Syria and Israel is "imminent" — and the statement was dutifully dispatched to brokerage offices by the Dow Jones newswire — gold rallied smartly.

Leave it to Treasury Secretary Donald Regan to spoil the vampires' feast. He offhandedly suggested that the United States should try to maintain some monetary discipline, and immediately the precious-metals market assumed that meant higher interest rates, tighter money and less inflation.

Gold plunged $24 an ounce and by day's end was trading at $415.50 an ounce in New York.

At those levels, some of the bulls are getting interested. "When gold gets down to $400 — and it's getting very close now — I'll do some buying," said Robert O. Price of Merrill Lynch, in the first of several interviews. He likes ASA and South Vaal among the South African issues, Campbell Red Lake among those in this hemisphere and Hecla Mining in silver.

Andre Levie of La Jolla Securities is also buying at these levels: "By all means, buy on weakness." Levie likes Minorco, a Bermuda-based over-the-counter issue with extensive holdings in gold, copper and other resources.

Levie is not championing the South African golds right now: He feels they are "running ahead of the price of gold" — that is, the prices of the mining stocks are too high vis-a-vis the price of gold itself.

Price disagrees: Gold and the South African mines were out of kilter in relation to one another earlier, "and now they are at a realistic level," he said.

Mitchell Bartlett of Wall Street's E.F. Hutton said, "You will see gold averaging $475 on the year. It will be up to $500 or above it at year's end, and there will be continued steady appreciation going into the spring of next year." Reason: looming inflation.

Some analysts, seeing a long-term relationship between the price of gold and the price of oil, are afraid. Bartlett thinks that relationship has been oversold — and in any case, the oil price is "firming."

Bartlett likes Driefontein, Kloof, Western Deep Levels and Vaal Reefs among the South African golds, and says that at a gold price of $475 to $550, they will be yielding 7 or 8 percent.

Kennedy Gammage of Richland Co. believes that the horrendous growth of the U.S. money supply will be reflected in inflation within nine months to a year and a half, "and investors should have 20 to 30 percent of their portfolios in precious metals."

He likes Elandsrand and Anglo American South African "on pullbacks;" Campbell Red Lake; Callahan and Hecla Mining in silver and Montoro Gold (traded on the Vancouver Exchange) strictly as a speculation.

Gammage believes that a big bull market is coming in both gold and common stocks in general — but unfortunately, this bull market will be riding the back of inflation.

There are bears and semi-bears out there, too. Julian M. Snyder, editor and publisher of Wall Street's International Moneyline, is a long-term bull on gold: "The price of gold is going to $1,000, $2,000, perhaps $5,000. Nothing is more certain. But don't hold your breath in anticipation."

He recommends that people stay out of gold futures and merely hold onto gold they already own, as the price "seesaws."

Tosco cuts 15 heads

From Wire Reports

LOS ANGELES — Tosco Corp. said Monday that 15 top corporate executives would be laid off as part of its massive reorganization aimed at cutting more than $40 million a year from the financially troubled refining company's overhead costs.

The reorganization was first announced last week after Tosco reached an interim agreement with its lenders to restructure its debt.

Spokesman George Hobgood said that the Los Angeles-based Tosco's work force also would be reduced by a substantial number, but would not specify how many employees would lose their jobs.

The reorganization represents a dramatic retrenchment. The two Tosco operating divisions most closely identified with its abortive venture into shale-oil production have been eliminated.

Video-computer buffs may find haven in library

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Complexion of the Midland County Public Library may be changing from just a haven for book browsers to a mini-gallery for video-computer buffs.

Librarian John Deats, who for at least a year has been mildly suggesting that the Friends of the Library invest in computers, on Monday won his argument.

The Friends, a group of library supporters, agreed to spend up to $3,500 of its $72,000 on an educational micro-computer.

I think we've waited, certainly, long enough," said the librarian.

The Friends, which since the late 1960s has been raising funds via used-book sales each fall, has been holding onto and investing the funds for a proposed new library. But since the status of the new library is uncertain, the Friends is putting money into the existing 1957-vintage library.

Deats, Friends President Rob Sutphen and Friends board member Don Wambaugh have been checking into various systems, including Texas Instruments, Radio Shack, Commadore, Atari and the Apple IIe.

The initial system would consist of the central processing unit, which Deats describes as "the boss; the real brains;" disk drives and the monitor.

Deats cited the educational values of computers and the learning reinforcement qualities and versatility of the software programming.

While the library readies for its role in the Computer Age, books and periodicals are still the library's mainstay. What to do with several thousand books which the Friends of the Library has collected for this year's November book sale in the Midland County Exhibit Building is an issue virtually settled.

"The big news last month was resolved this month," said Sutphen.

The Friends, which has gone begging for a free home to store its books until the November sale, until last year had stored its books in the old American Legion Hall.

The Hall, directly behind the downtown library, became a home for old books and roosting pigeons. Prior to that, it was the seasonal home for the Midland Community Theatre's Summers Mummers.

Sometime after The First National Bank of Midland purchased the library property and the old American Legion Hall, the bank razed the Hall in its move toward constructing its envisioned Eagle Plaza expansion. But that expansion, which includes building one or two 40-story bank towers and a new public library, has been set aside until the community recovers from its economic slump which followed the boom of the late 1970s and early 1980s.

Since the hall turned to rubble, the Friends found another holding place for the shifting books in the Naomi Lancaster House, south of the Museum of the Southwest.

But the museum plans to restore the old stone Lancaster cottage with the mahogany staircase and possibly convert the home into the residence of the museum director and/or use it for "support functions," noted Jerry Porter, museum director.

The Lancaster House's woodwork is in "really good shape," noted Porter, though the wiring, plumbing, air-conditioning and heating systems, roof and walls need extensive work.

"All the basic systems are shot," he said, and the outside needs "sprucing up."

Members of the Friends will begin removing the 250 to 300 cartons of books from the Lancaster House at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday. They'll haul the books to the former U.S. Postal Service's mail-processing annex off Industrial Avenue and directly behind the library. Then, during the week of July 18, the Friends will hold its first of two major book-collecting drives in preparing for the book sale.

The old mail-processing house, which now is part of the First National Bank's property, is to be used by the bank for storage while Eagle Plaza planning continues.

"You know," said the Friends' Forrest Underwood, "we don't need a whole mob (to move the books). Just a few."

Said another Friend, E. Dale McCarter: "I might be able to con the Scouts (to help out via the community-service route)."

Videotape important, says lawyer in civil rights case

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Sowell claims he was beaten, kicked and maced following his Oct. 16, 1981, arrest on disorderly conduct and public intoxication charges...

"The most important piece of evidence we've got is the videotape," Odessa attorney David Gilles told jurors during opening statements Monday in the $1 million federal civil rights suit brought by 19-year-old Walter Sowell against five current officers and one former member of the Midland police force.

Sowell claims he was beaten, kicked and maced following his Oct. 16, 1981, arrest on disorderly conduct and public intoxication charges. A municipal court jury found him innocent of the drunk charge, and the city attorney's office dropped the disorderly conduct complaint for lack of sufficient evidence.

Two officers, Terry Lowe and Terry Garner, were suspended temporarily following an internal investigation of the booking procedure, which was videotaped by a camera above the booking desk. Lowe resigned from the force rather than accept a transfer to duty at Midland Regional Airport after completing his 12-day suspension period.

Of poor quality and abruptly shut off by booking officer Vince Castillo as a scuffle broke out, the tape — which was shown three times to jurors Monday — appears to show Lowe hitting Sowell in the head with his fist and Garner striking him in the side.

The melee erupted after Sowell brushed Garner's hand off his shoulder during a heated verbal exchange between Sowell and Lowe, who told Sowell just prior to the scuffle: "Shut up. I'm sick of your mouth."

Garner testified that he had placed his hand on Sowell's shoulder to take him to an upstairs cell because he "didn't want no problems at the booking desk."

He said he didn't hit Sowell, but had merely grabbed him around the midsection in an unsuccessful attempt "to keep the three of us from falling." Lowe was not called to the stand.

Asked why he had shut off the camera — one purpose of which, according to earlier testimony, is to counter charges of police brutality — Castillo said the booking procedure was over and that officers had Sowell by the arms and were starting upstairs to place him in a cell at that point.

The tape, however, cut off as the three men fell toward a wall. It did not appear that "the situation was under control," as Castillo had testified.

In other testimony, it was established that officers Lowe, Castillo and Ronald Keck led Sowell upstairs, where he claims he was propelled into the window of a hall door and suffered head cuts when the glass broke. Police maintain, however, that he twisted out of their grasp and fell into the door.

Sowell also contends he was beaten, kicked and sprayed with mace upstairs — allegations police deny.

Keck testified that while he was carrying a can of mace that night, he did not use it. He further testified that Sowell "was not maced in my presence."

He admitted, however, that on Jan. 10, 1981, he maced a handcuffed female prisoner. He further admitted that he hadn't made a report on that incident until after an internal investigation was launched six months later.

Mace, according to testimony by Capt. Victor Kuykendall, should not be used unless police "think they're gonna get into a fight."

Testimony was to resume at 8:30 a.m. today in Midland's federal courthouse. U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton is presiding over the trial, which is expected to conclude late this afternoon.

Top Braniff officers plan to resign

DALLAS (AP) — The two chief officers of Braniff International have announced plans to step down this week, a move they hope will spur creditors to agree to Hyatt Corp.'s efforts to get the grounded airline back in the skies.

Howard D. Putnam, who for the past year has led Braniff through a maze of financial proceedings, said Monday he is giving up his titles of president and chief executive officer, and M. Philip Guthrie is quitting as executive vice president and chief financial officer.

They will recommend replacements at a Braniff board meeting scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, Putnam said. Both men will remain on Braniff's board of directors until a reorganization plan for the airline is confirmed, and he will remain as Braniff's chairman of the board during that interim stage, Putnam said.

Afterward, Putnam said, the two will go into business together in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. The business will not be an airline, he said.

Both men had said frequently in recent months that they planned to leave Braniff some time this summer.

Braniff ceased operations May 12, 1982, and the next day sought protection from creditors under federal bankruptcy laws.

The departure of Putnam and Guthrie might put pressure on some of the airline's secured creditors to come to terms with Hyatt on its proposal to put Braniff back into the air, Putnam said.

However, he refused to criticize secured bond holders who have continued to object to proposals by the Hyatt hotel chain to put Braniff back into business with 30 planes and 2,000 employees.

Asked his opinion of negotiations, Putnam said, "I can't tell. The creditors and Hyatt have to come to an agreement."

In an effort to win approval from secured creditors, Hyatt chairman Jay Pritzker agreed in a weekend meeting to raise his price from $70,000 to $90,000 a month for lease of Braniff's remaining Boeing 727-200s, about 30.

The Wall Street Journal reported Monday that Hyatt and the secured creditors are close to an agreement.

"I'm not sure I agree with that," said Guthrie. "Nobody knows at this stage whether all creditor groups can agree. We have tried to keep negotiations going, but a lot of issues are still open."

Guthrie said a new management team may or may not be announced at Wednesday's board of directors meeting. He said a meeting was scheduled today in Dallas among Braniff's unsecured creditors who have supported Hyatt's proposals.

Putnam joined Braniff in September 1981 after three years as head of the no-frills Southwest Airlines, a regional airline operating out of Dallas. Before that, he was vice president for marketing of United Airlines in Chicago.

Guthrie jumped to Braniff with Putnam, leaving his job as chief financial officer of Southwest.

San Antonio families migrating to the Hill Country

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It's not quite the Dust Bowl rush of the 1920s, but steadily, San Antonians are heading for the hills.

San Antonio certified public accountant Bernie Bernsen wears boots to his office and has learned the difference between Wichita, Choctaw and Mohawk pecans.

Chris, their teen-age daughter, sometimes slips into the Alsatian accent of her rural neighbors.

She even raised a hog this year for the livestock show.

The Bernsens retreated to Rio Medina at the foot of the Texas Hill Country six years ago, selling their northwest San Antonio home next to a large car lot.

They are part of an exodus of San Antonio families casting off the shackles of city life and heading for the rural quietude and magical tranquility of the Hill Country.

And expatriates such as the Bernsen family are keeping their workday ties to San Antonio — they commute daily to jobs in the city.

If you ask any of them, they'll say they wouldn't trade their 50-mile, twice-a-day drives for a new condomimium in "Loopland."

"Living in an apartment complex in San Antonio gave me a complex," recalls Donna Renken, who moved to Canyon Lake 10 years ago.

Since then her husband, Bobby Renken, has commuted to work at Big State Electric Co.

"It's two cups of coffee to work and three beers coming back," Mrs. Renken jokingly says.

"It gives Bobby a chance to unwind for 45 minutes or so, but it's nothing unusual. Nearly all of our friends out here commute to San Antonio or Austin."

That's true, says New Braunfels Realtor Gaz Green, who estimates 25 percent of New Braunfels' population commutes to San Antonio.

They come from all walks of life.

Some work at the Bexar County Hospital District and the military bases.

Others are San Antonio police officers and firefighters.

Many of the transplants are citing the city's growing population and traffic congestion — "another Houston," they say — for fleeing to communities such as Mico, Sattler, Startzville, Bulverde, Pipe Creek and Rio Medina.

But part of it is a desire to return to basics.

"There's only a post office and a beer joint in Rio Medina," said Bernsen, a CPA in San Antonio for 18 years.

From his northwest side office, Bernsen can be home in approximately 30 minutes, a short jaunt to what seems like the other side of the world.

Skunks, opossums, snakes, tree mites and coyotes have made life in Medina County interesting for the Bernsens, who are remodeling a turn-of-the-century ranch house.

"The first winter here, we had to buy longjohns for everybody," Bernsen recalls, noting he was forced to install insulation.

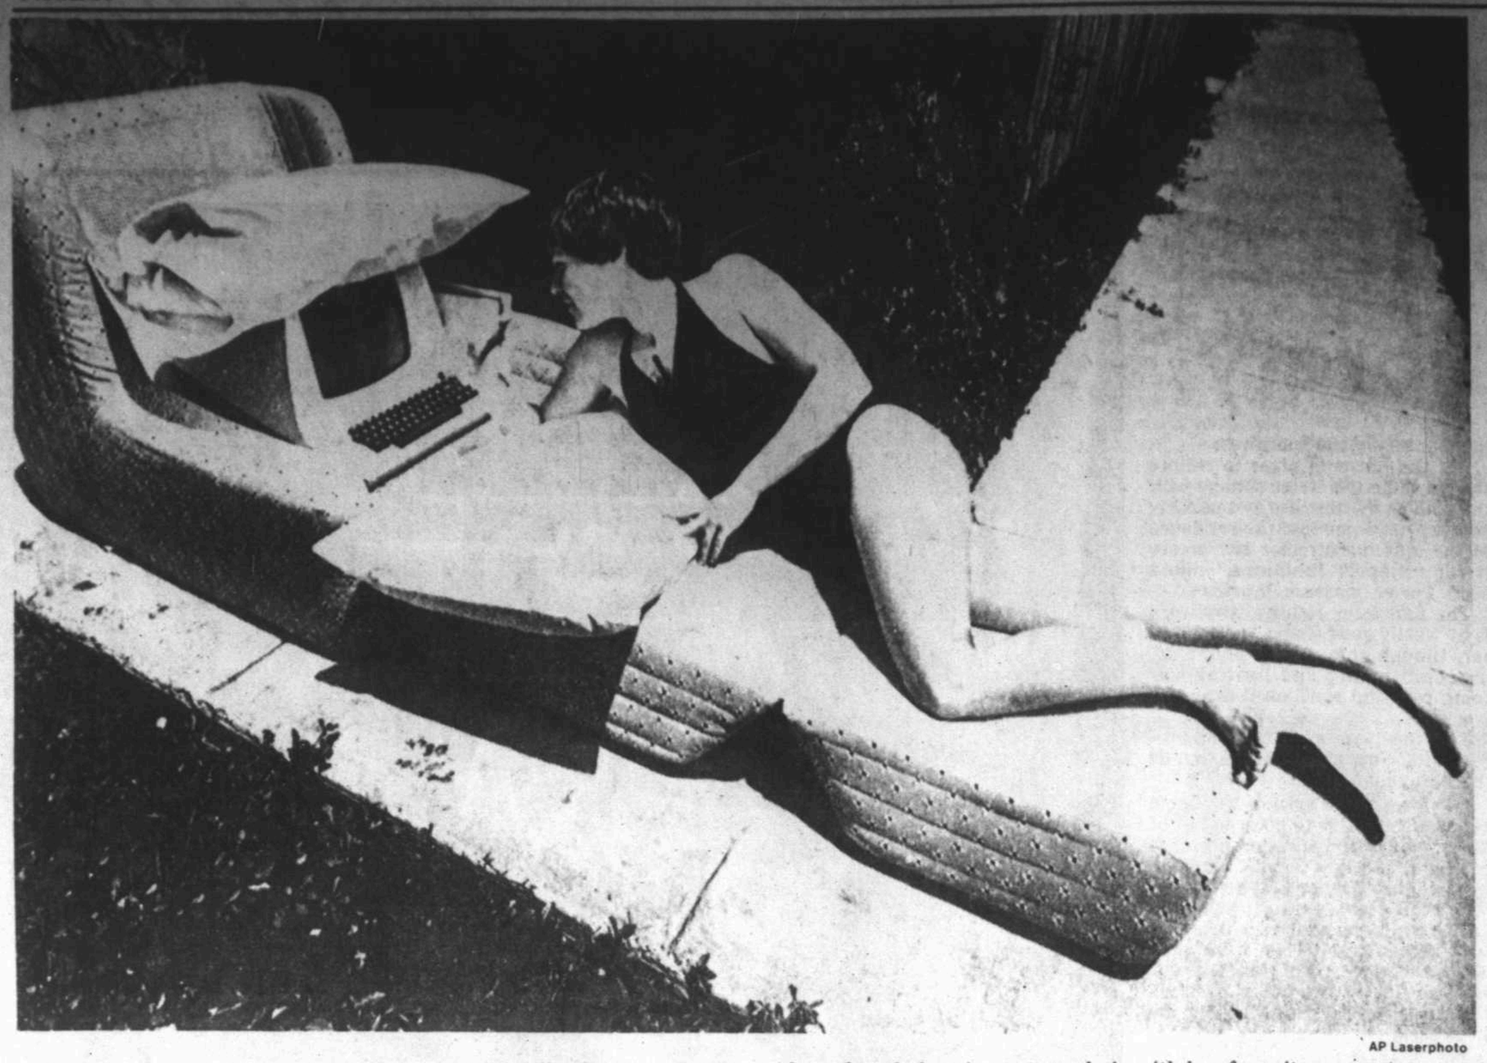

"But, I like living in a kind of place where you don't have to have any drapes."

Bernsen's wife taught school in San Antonio but now teaches in Castroville to be near her children — Ray, 17; Christine, 16; John, 13; and Jim, 11.

Her children, she said, will benefit from the smaller enrollment of the Medina Valley School District.

"The longer we are out here, the less we miss the city. But for the first couple of months we thought we had made a mistake," O.A. said.

Rex Tackett, sales manager for radio station WOAI, moved to the Bulverde Hills subdivision along U.S. 281 North and takes just 27 minutes to get to his office.

Judge promises jurors 'memorable time'

ODESSA (AP) — A 53-year-old man accused of planting a bomb that killed a former employee sat quietly at the defense table as a state district judge promised prospective jurors a memorable time.

Jury selection opened Monday in the capital murder trial of John C. Skelton, accused of the April 24, 1982, slaying of Joe Lee Neal, 46. Neal died when his pickup was demolished by explosives.

The explosion occurred in a shopping center parking lot about 80 feet from Neal's home.

Skelton, a former Odessa oil field businessman, was Neal's employer for most of 1979 and 1980 at an Odessa cleaning establishment.

District Judge R.L. Kim said the 12 jurors selected to hear the case will undergo "an experience you'll probably remember for the rest of your life.

"You may not enjoy it, but you're not going to be bored," McKim said.

The process of selecting 12 jurors and two alternates could last up to three weeks, court officials said.

The defendant, dressed in a gray business suit, sat quietly at the defense table Monday. Skelton stood and nodded at the prospective jurors when introduced by McKim.

According to documents used by Odessa police in obtaining the arrest warrant for Skelton, Department of Public Safety chemists determined that magnets and dynamite residue found in the wreckage of Neal's pickup truck were "the same type" as materials in the possession of the defendant prior to the explosion.

McKim denied a defense request to move the trial from Odessa because of extensive publicity. The judge said he would renew the motion later if efforts to find an impartial jury proved difficult.

DEATHS

Alton Jones

Mrs. Anderson died Sunday in a Midland hospital.

Pallbearers were to be Ray Ball, Clyde Gartin, Nick Dragisic, Maurice Kennedy, Bill Newkirk and Pat O'Bryan.

Company reports theft of tools

Midland police are investigating several burglaries and robberies reported Monday, including the burglary of equipment valued at more than $1,400 from Onda-Lay Pipe & Rental Inc.

According to police reports, a generator and tools valued at $1,435 were stolen from the company, at 2309 Garden City Highway, sometime between 2 p.m. Sunday and 8:30 a.m. Monday.

In other police activity, Tom Shelton, an employee of Contractors and Equipment Co. of El Paso, reported the theft of a generator valued at $1,000 from the site of a parking garage under construction at the Atrium Center, 100 W. Kansas Ave. The theft occurred sometime between Saturday and Monday.

Rosa Ramirez, of 204 E. Pecan Ave., reported the theft Sunday of three pairs of shoes and two television sets, valued at $1,070, from her home. Entry was reportedly gained by breaking a kitchen window.

Three or four black men reportedly used force to rob Jerry Lee Wells, Route 2, Box 198, No. 15, of $150 early Monday. The robbery occurred at Red's Drive Inn, 1807 E. Front St., about 1:30 a.m. Monday.

Ganado lawmaker worth more than $3 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a congressional delegation where wealth is commonplace, Rep. Bill Patman, D-Texas, may be the wealthiest of all — the delegation's only $3 million man.

Patman, of Ganado, listed assets of from $3.83 million to possibly more than $6.7 million in his financial disclosure form for 1982, released Monday by the House clerk's office.

Patman thus became the seventh member of the 29-member Texas congressional delegation to report minimum assets of more than $1 million in 1982. But he was the only one to report minimum assets of over $3 million.

It is not possible from the forms to determine the exact worth or income of members of Congress, since they are required only to report a range of assets and income and the upper range is open-ended.

But on the basis of their minimum assets, others who qualified as millionaires were Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, with a minimum $2.4 million, and Reps. Sam B. Hall of Marshall, $1.56 million; Ralph M. Hall of Rockwall, $2.14 million; Jack Brooks of Beaumont, $1.69 million; Marvin Leath of Marlin, $1.16 million and Tom Vandergriff of Arlington, $1.52 million. All are Democrats.

The others reported their assets in mid-May, when the forms were due, but Patman obtained an extension for filing his.

Coloradoans to be tried separately for extortion

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has ordered that four Colorado residents be tried separately, one of them in two separate proceedings, on charges they attempted to extort $15 million by bombing a Gulf Oil Co. refinery.

U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald ruled Monday that the trial of John McBride, 46, begin June 13. Trials of other defendants will follow, she said.

Ms. McDonald ordered two separate trials for Michael Worth, 34. He is to face six counts each time.

Worth's lawyer, Mac Secrest, said the decision will allow his client to argue that he was once part of the plot, but had to be forced to carry the scheme to its conclusion.

Secrest said Worth wanted to back out of the plan "a day or two before he was arrested" but McBride would not let him. Worth and Theodore McKinney, 45, were arrested in Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 1.

Worth will testify for McBride's common-law wife, Jill Renee Bird, and for McKinney, Secrest said.

Five Durango, Colo., residents were indicted on 12 counts of conspiracy to extort, attempted extortion, illegal use of explosives, illegal transportation of explosives across state lines, mailing a threatening letter and threatening to damage a facility.

Gulf's Cedar Bayou plant, about 30 miles east of Houston, was shut down for about a week in late September and early October because of the bombing. Searchers found five bombs, one of which exploded harmlessly.

Timothy K. Justice, 30, pleaded guilty to two charges and is expected to testify for the government.

Houston has foster home shortage

HOUSTON (AP) — A shortage of foster homes is compounding problems for child welfare workers in Houston, where parents abandon about between 30 and 35 children each month, a county official says.

Judy Hay, spokeswoman for the Harris County Child Welfare Department, said her agency's 270 approved foster homes falls about 60 short of what is needed.

"We have the same number of foster homes they have in Dayton, Ohio," she said. Dayton has slightly more than 200,000 residents. Houston has more than 1.5 million.

"We have children who go off to school in morning and when they come home in the afternoon the family is gone," Ms. Hay said.

Of the 30 to 35 children deserted her each month, Ms. Hay estimated one-third were infants or pre-school children, one third ages 6 to 12 and one-third teen-agers.

A woman left her children, aged 1, 2 and 3, at a north Houston motel Saturday.

"Take them. I can't raise them. Do the best you can," the 33-year-old mother told the clerk and then vanished.

Ms. Hay said the woman contacted a child welfare worker Monday and told her she has serious medical and marital problems. The children, meanwhile, are in separate foster homes, but Ms. Hay said welfare workers are trying to find a foster home where the three children can be together.

Dallas designers introduce fall collections

Heather Morgan

Dallas designer Heather Morgan uses chameuse, llama cloth, wool crepe, angora and a georgette plaid to capture the lights and excitement of the French Riviera in Mediterranean colors and sculpts an array of silhouettes in her late Fall II/Holiday Collection called, none other than "Riviera Nights."

"I see now, more than ever, the importance of an interchangeable collection," says the Dallas designer.

The flow of her Riviera brights in charmeuse is interpreted in a variety of moods, ranging from half slips to padded tuxedo smoking jackets. Emphasizing detail, camisoles glitter with beaded strappings or whisper with subtle shell stitching, while skirts drop to longer, tuxedo tailed hems or soft pleatings.

The elegant wool Casino crepe ensemble employs the Heather Morgan signature technique of multi-needle shearing in dirndl skirts, a short bellman's jacket and side button trousers.

Especially new is Morgan's capsule collection of suede accent pieces in braided belts, sashes, T-tops and skirts inspired by dramatic leather piping on her signature lab coat.

The Mediterranean georgette plaid contrasts the Holiday bouquet of fuchsia, electric blue, white and jade with black geometric blocking. Cording, accent bow-ties, asymmertric closures and knife pleatings maintain the Heather Morgan attitude of simplicity and comfort.

These poly crepe plaid duos by Heather Morgan are featured in black with electric blue, fuchsia or jade in her Fall/Holiday collection.

Chris Van Wyk

In the tradition of great thoroguhbreds comes Chris Van Wyk, a Texas-based designer whose first major collection has just been introduced.

Influenced by the late great designer Coco Chanel, Van Wyk brings to the world of American fashion attention to detail and workmanship in silhouettes designed to withstand the test of time.

Luxurious imported leathers, suedes, cashmere and silks have been selected for this premier collection for Fall/Holiday '83. Silhouettes reflect her keen fashion eye and acute understanding of the need for versatility in the well-traveled woman's wardrobe.

Her first collection includes a soutache-embellished militaire style jacket with double slit slim skirt, both of black cashmere; a black cashmere knit sweater with bright blue leather strips that slip nonchalantly over a matching blue leather slim skirt; and exquisitely designed cocktail dresses of moire totally lined in China silk.

Her black cashmere sheath with black charmeuse shoulder accents and cuffed sleeves is intended to be the little black dress of the season, and her flowing black silk gown with rhinestone flowerettes creates a romantic nostalgic mood.

From daytime suitings to elegant after-five and black-tie creations, Van Wyk's designs feature special touches such as beading, onyx back ties, lapis and pearl trims.

A looser, longer jacket, left, paired with double-slit skirt, both of black cashmere and a black soutache-embellished jacket matched with a full striped silk organza skirt are a part of the Chris Van Wyk collection, which premiered in Dallas in May.

Choose contacts carefully

By SHARON A. HILLIS
Midland County Extension Agent
Home Economics

With several types of contact lenses now available, more people than ever are able to wear them successfully. Before buying, however, shop around to find an eyecare specialist who best fits your needs and your budget.

Only opthamologists and optometrists may prescribe contact lenses.

Opthamologists have medical degrees (M.D.) and specialize in eye diseases and eye surgery. They can also prescribe and sell eyewear.

Optometrists, or doctors of optometry (O.D.), are trained to detect eye diseases. They too prescribe and sell eyewear.

A third type of eye specialist, the optician, can fill eyewear prescriptions, but can not examine eyes or prescribe lenses.

Under the "Eyeglass Rule" set by the Federal Trade Commission an eye doctor must provide you with a copy of your eyeglass prescription after an exam. This gives you the choice of where to have the prescription filled.

Eye doctors are not required to provide you with a copy of your contact lens prescription, so you may have to pay for another lens fitting exam if you wish to buy your lenses from a different specialist.

Before you decide on an eyecare specialist, you should ask him or her the following questions:

— "What do you charge for lenses, fitting adjustments, a lens care kit and follow-up visits?" These services may be priced individually or sold as part of a special package. In some cases, the individual charges may add up to less than the "bargain package." Make sure you know if the actual eye exam is included in the price.

— "What is your refund policy?" Not everyone can adapt to wearing contact lenses. With a good refund policy, you won't lose your entire investment if you are unable to wear them.

— "How many types and brands of contacts do you sell?" A large selection of contact lenses can increase the chances of finding the kind of contact lens that fits and is best for you.

— "How much do you charge for replacement lenses?" Contact lenses are easily lost or damaged. Find out what you will be charged and how long you will have to wait if you need a lens replaced. Ask about replacement insurance, which will cut the cost of a replacement lens considerably.

— "Will you give me a copy of my complete prescription for eyeglasses and contact lenses?" Comparison shopping is extremely difficult without a copy of your complete prescription. If you plan on shopping elsewhere for initial or replacement lenses, ask about the doctor's policy in advance.

Investigate thoroughly to find the eye care specialist who offers you the products, services and policies that are best for you. This will require sone time, but may save you money and eliminate difficulties.

For more information contact the Federal Trade Commission, 6th and Pennsylvania, N.W., Washington, D.C., 20580, or call (202) 523-3428.

Cotton best bet for vacation-wear

It's time to hit the road again for summer vacations to the beach, mountains or just picnicing in the park. And, according to the June issue of Seventeen magazine, the perfect traveling companions are cool comfortable clothes with free and easy styling.

Airy cottons in the prettiest most summery colors will be making fashion news this summer, report the fashion editors of the magazine. Fruit colors of bright cherry, lemon yellow and strawberry pink — in solids and stipes — will mix and match for a sensational color-blocking effect.

Full, swingy skirts make traveling a breeze, because they combine cool comfort with great fashion versatility. One great skirt to try is a strawberry pink cotton broadcloth dirndl featuring patch pockets. Team it with a grape-and-white striped short-sleeved camp shirt and a pair of sporty canvas espadrilles for an outfit that's sure to take you places.

The new shorter-length skirts also afford great options for keeping cool on the road this summer. Jean skirts and culottes cropped at mid-thigh are great fashion pieces for any traveling wardrobe. Pair a sporty turquoise cotton twill jean skirt with a turquoise-and-white striped cotton knit polo for a clean casual look. For final flair, add a brown leather braided belt and bright white canvas sneakers. Or combine the ease of a skirt with the practicality of shorts in a bright red mini-culotte, worn with a royal blue polo shirt for a super color combination. A bright red belt made of cotton webbing and strappy dark brown leather sandles are snappy extras.

Stripes and plaids in fresh brights create variety in this year's summer fashions — and they'll make you a fashion stand-out. For a duo that's sure to beat the heat, try a bright cotton camp shirt in an orange, yellow and blue plaid with a pair of orange sherbert-colored cotton camp shorts. For sturdy strolling, complete the outfit with pale pink anklets and brown leather mocassins.

One piece outfits in the season's newest colors add extra mileage to any traveling wardrobe, and with minimum effort. A one-piece cotton romper featuring mid-thigh shorts and cap sleeves is just right for a casual outing. Made of cool cotton and sporting fruit-toned pink, purple, blue and yellow vertical stripes, all you need to add pizazz is a lavender-tinted plastic belt and a lavender purse to sling over a shoulder. For a dressier look, pack a bright red-and-white candy-striped halter dress in your suitcase. Accessorize it with an apple-red cotton webbing belt and cool white leather flats for a sharp contrast.

No matter where you summer travels take you, these cool comfortable cotton clothes will help you travel in style.

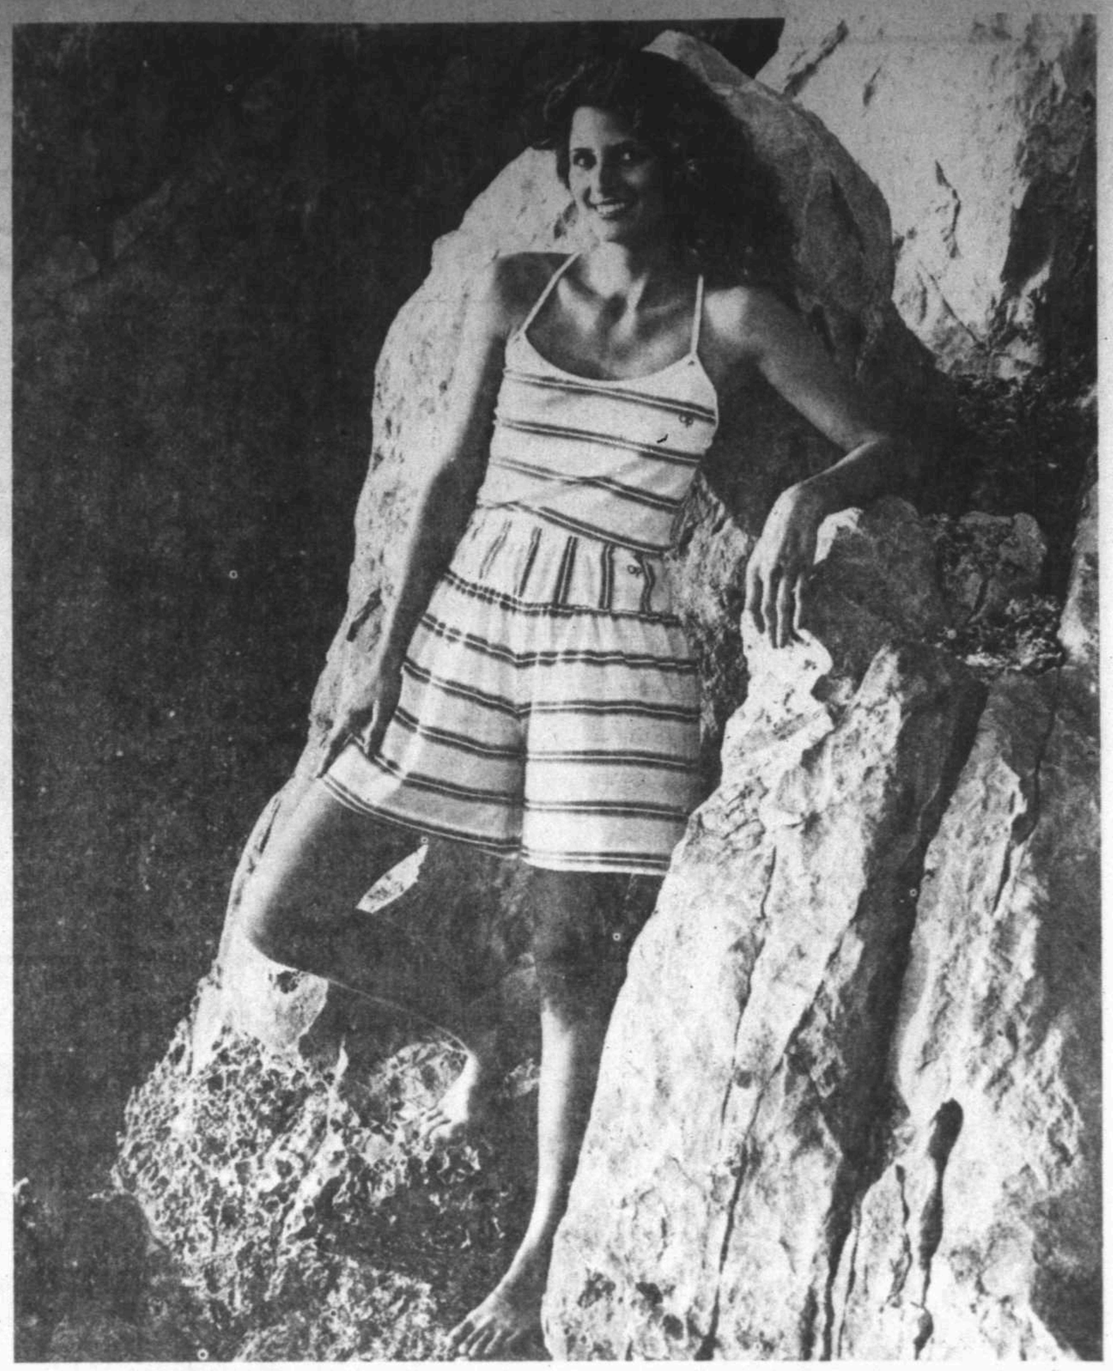

This red and shite striped camp shirt can be worn with skirts, shorts and slacks on most any vacation outing. Tie it all together with a buckle belt or sash and an unlimited amount of looks are possible, with minimal packing.

LAT Photo

These striped mini-dresses with pouch pockets can be worn alone or with pants as a tunic top. Either way, they are for summer fun. The dresses are designed by Willi Smith.

The season's latest "fruit colors" are featured in endless stripe combinations. This cotton mini-culotte can be matched with a halter top for trips to warm places, or mixed with a sleeved shirt for cooler climates.

Only seamstress can name price

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

DEAR BETTY: I read your article about your experience with the silk blouse. I do hope you were paid well for all the headaches.

What is a French seam? I don't believe I have heard the term used before.

I have been interested in starting my own home sewing for others. I have had many compliments on my sewing and feel that I do sew well. Several friends have approached me about sewing for them. I want to do it but am afraid of taking on the responsibility.

Can you please tell me how I could get started and what I should charge. — Kaye Rost, Murchisen, Texas.

O-h-h-h, boy, Kaye! I really need three columns to answer your letter, but will try to squeeze it into one.

A French seam is one in which the raw edges are completely enclosed. This gives you a neat, unfraying seam for sheers, laces and similar fabrics. Place fabric pieces WRONG sides together and stitch in a ⅜-inch seam. Trim raw edges down to less than ¼ inch. Press. Turn fabric, placing RIGHT sides together. Stitch again, this time in a ¼-inch seam. This will enclose the raw edges.

If you sew well, have time to devote, have patience to endure and can take criticism, by all means start your own custom sewing business.

To get started all you have tb do is make garments for one or two people and let them spread the word. This will start your business slowly, preventing you from being overwhelmed until you have your feet on the ground.

If you work at home, with no noticeable overhead, every dollar you make will be profit. You can even deduct a percentage of your household expenses on your income tax (please check with your tax expert).

How much to charge? There is no definitive price list. So much is involved. Is your work good or high quality? Do you want to cater to those who want high-fashion, time-consuming garments, or would you rather work with the quicker fashions? Are you in a high-income or middle-income area? Do you wish to work full time or just part time?

Only you can decide what your time is worth.

Questions may be addressed to Mrs. Betty Kinser, 1307 Indian Lane, Independence, MO 64056.

Buy A Carrier Now. The Price Is Right 'Cause The Time Is Wrong.

O.K., we admit it. Things are pretty quiet for us right now. Even quieter than our Carrier Universal Round One central air conditioner. The Universal Round One really sells in the summer. That's because it has high efficiency ratings. It's super compact. All top quality for real reliability. It's a great value at its regular summer price. But because things are so quiet now, you can buy it for just $695

That's for the 24,000 Btuh size, model 38EB024. Other sizes comparably low. Installation labor, parts and accessories not included.

10 YEAR NO SWEAT WARRANTY

If Air Conditioning doesn't have it here it probably doesn't have it.

Gas Air Conditioning Has It!

No other air conditioner has a warranty like a gas air conditioner because no other air conditioner is built like a gas air conditioner.

Gas air conditioning has fewer moving parts and no compressor to wear out or break down. This means less wear and tear and lower maintenance costs.

That's why gas air conditioning is so dependable and why it has a warranty that's twice as long as other types of units . . . a full 10 years!

Find out more about the air conditioning that's backed by the best warranty available. Call Energas today for a free cooling survey and cost estimate. There's no obligation.

Remember, all air conditioning was not created equal. And we have the paper to prove it!

Manufacturer's limited warranty covers all defects in materials and workmanship on the sealed refrigeration unit for ten years from the date of installation of the air conditioner when it is installed in a single family residence. All other parts are warranted for one year from date of installation.

AT WIT'S END

Advice to travelers

By ERMA BOMBECK

Every year, in the name of fun, millions of Americans pack their entire homes in suitcases and head out for a good time.

Ignoring the advice of seasoned travelers who warn you to "pack light," you still see tote bags that double the body weight of the carrier, and little old ladies dragging along suitcases on wheels like they're on their way to building a pyramid.

It's amazing what some people think they cannot live without for two weeks. With some, it's shoes. God forbid someone should see you in Rome wearing a grey pair of shoes with a tan skirt.

I've seen back-packers carrying sawed-off lawn chairs, Boy Scouts "roughing it" with 35 cassettes for their stereos, and a lone hiker with a stove and a tent for five strapped to his back.

With my husband, it's a tripod for his camera which he has carried all around the world and used only on one occasion: to fish his hat out of the water when it blew off his head while he was riding in a canoe at Disneyland.

Most of us are overprepared because we were taught at a young age to consider every contingency.

The year my firstborn went to camp, we received three mimeographed sheets (single-spaced) from the counselor telling him what to bring. It was amazing to me that he functioned in a rather active society at home, yet he did not have enough clothes for camp. It took us two weeks and $400 to upgrade him to living in a godforsaken field in a mildewed tent with 20 other kids who looked and smelled like they had been raised by wolves.

Their main concern was dry feet and required no less than three pairs of shoes. You cannot know how astounded I was to discover he was not living in trenches.

I watched a family the other day at the airport clutching their "security blankets." The younger daughter carried a baton (that she would leave in an airport restroom in Kansas City), the older daughter lugged around a five-pound mound of hot rollers for her hair, the mother carried a bag containing an unfinished afghan and the father carried an attache case of newsletters and annual reports which would put his teeth to sleep in 10 minutes.

What fools! None of them had remembered to bring a coffee pot, cord, cup and coffee that was stuffed in my tote bag. They don't have coffee everywhere, you know.

DEAR ABBY

'Write' word prompts letters

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Empty Mailbox in Yorba Linda" enlisted your help to get sons and daughters who are far from home in the military service to write home. All the parents wanted was an occasional note assuring them that their children were alive and well.

Your "To Whom It May Concern" message, addressed to those in the military, was fine, but I submit some additional advice:

Parents not receiving mail from their sons or daughters in the military may write to the command chaplain or commanding officer at the military member's address. The chaplain will "unofficially" counsel the serviceman or woman regarding family responsibilities and encourage him/her to write the parents. The commanding officer will "officially" counsel the member and "strongly" encourage family correspondence.

Writing these officers will not result in any trouble for the service member, unless he or she persistently refuses to follow the counsel given. -- A CHAPLAIN ON OKINAWA

DEAR CHAPLAIN: I cannot imagine a more effective way to "encourage" our men and women in the military to write home. One "official" counseling session with the commanding officer should be sufficient.

Now let's hear it from a chaplain in Korea:

DEAR ABBY: I sympathize with "Empty Mailbox in Yorba Linda," but what's wrong with the parents? Abby, soldiers have told me that their parents didn't even send them a Christmas card, but their pen pals came through!

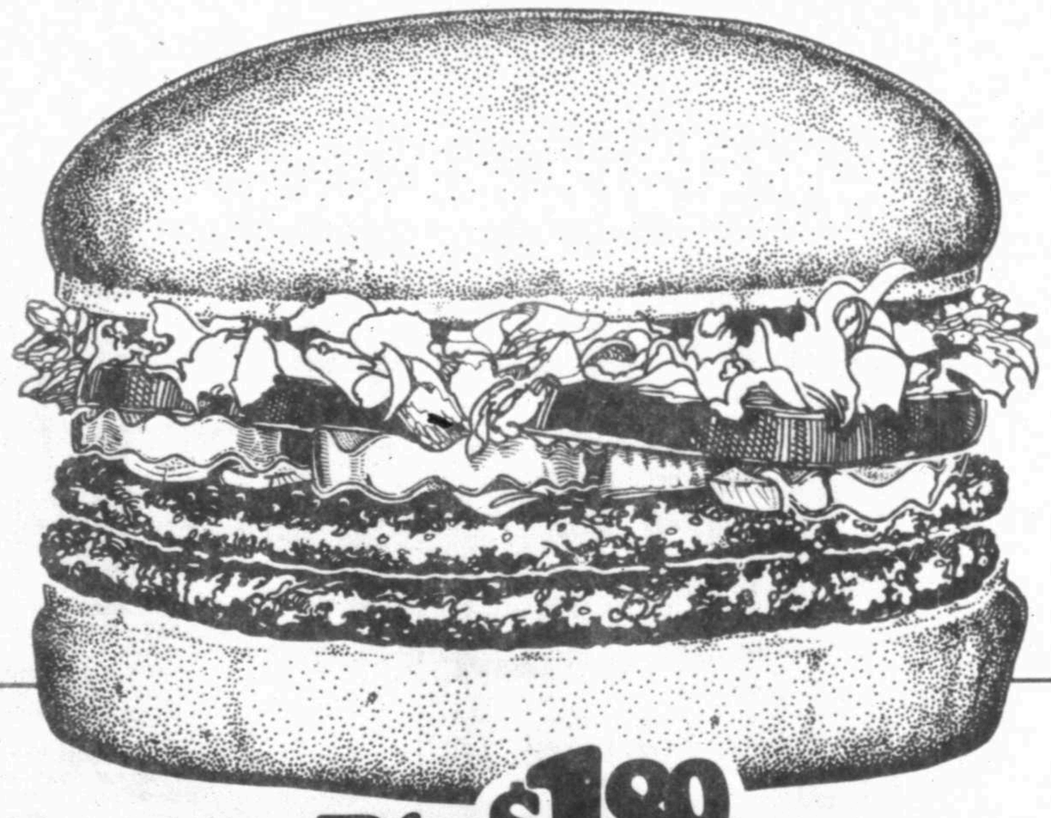

Tell Mom and Dad that their child away from home needs their letters even though the young men and women in the service don't write home much. Being away from home is a new experience for most of them. Their days are often boring and monotonous; there isn't much to write about because they've said it all in the previous letter.

So, have a heart, you folks at home, and write anyway. -- HUBERT WADE JR., CHAPLAIN, KOREA

Directors rate TV's top stars

John Forsythe

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Alan Alda is "the consummate actor," Carroll O'Conner a "super craftsman," Larry Hagman "multitalented," and John Forsythe a "skilled actor with great range," says a panel of casting directors asked to pick the best actors on television.

Television actors and actresses were rated by Jane Feinberg and Mike Fenton, who cast for TV movies and miniseries; Bobby Hoffman of Paramount Television; Jane Murray of Embassy Television and Tandem Productions; Joyce Robinson, an independent agent who originally cast "M-A-S-H"; and NBC's vice president of talent, Joel Thurm.

Their findings will be reported in the June 11 edition of TV Guide.

Despite some glowing praise, two stars got mixed reviews. The panelists said it might be too early to forecast the career of Farrah Fawcett, who gained fame in "Charlie's Angels."

"Farrah has some depth. She's come a long way and has a long way to go," said one. Another panelist called her "the dullest actress I've ever seen ... but I love her look."

Linda Evans, who plays Forsythe's wife on "Dynasty," is limiting herself by playing a nighttime soap opera role, one casting director said. But another said of Miss Evans, "There is something about that lady that is so wonderful she can keep doing it forever and ever."

Liza Minnelli

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana and Prince Charles joined a host of celebrities, including actress Liza Minnelli and tennis star John McEnroe, for the charity premiere of the new James Bond movie, "Octopussy."

The 21-year-old princess wore a slinky white silk dress with one shoulder bare that has obviously become a favorite with her — it was the gown's third outing in three months. She created a sensation when she first wore it at a ball in Melbourne during the royal couple's tour of Australia last March, and she wore it a second time at a private ball Saturday night.

A crowd of several thousand outside the Odeon Cinema in Leicester Square cheered Monday night as Charles and Diana and the other guests arrived.

After the showing, the royal couple met Roger Moore, 56, who plays secret agent James Bond, leading lady Maud Adams, who plays the title role of Octopussy, and other members of the cast including the traditional Bond beauties.

John Kennedy

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — John F. Kennedy Jr., a far cry from the boy in shorts and knee socks who clutched a tiny flag at his father's funeral in 1963, has graduated from Brown University.

Kennedy, 22, received a bachelor of arts degree in history at the ceremony Monday on the university's picturesque green. A plane circling over the crowd of 14,500 trailed a red banner with the words "Happy Graduation and Good Gluck John."

The misspelled message overhead drew smiles from Kennedy's mother, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, who sat on a folding chair under a small tree with her daughter Caroline and family friends.

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Choreographer Paul Taylor, founder of the Paul Taylor Dance Company, has been chosen to receive the 1983 Samuel H. Scripps-American Dance Festival Award.

Former Gov. Terry Sanford, president of Duke University, will present the $25,000 award to the 52-year-old Taylor in a ceremony at Duke June 12.

The award was created in 1981 to honor choreographers who have made a lifetime contribution to American modern dance.

* * *

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The show will go on, with actress Terry Moore taking the place of Zsa Zsa Gabor — who was fired from a dinner theater production after a controversy involving handicapped people.

Ms. Moore recently recently received a settlement from the estate of the late billionaire Howard Hughes after claiming she was his widow. She agreed to take the starring role in "Forty Carats" at the request of longtime friend Mickey Rooney, a part owner of the theater, public relations spokesman Charles Volpe said Monday.

Miss Gabor was fired Thursday and the show was closed following reports that she had asked to have mentally handicapped people moved from front-row seats during an evening performance.

Rather than move in the crowded theater, the group of handicapped left.

Miss Gabor denied she ordered the handicapped to move, and blamed the management of the theater for the uproar.

The production will resume Friday, Volpe said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ivan Tors, 66, the Hungarian-born producer of nature films and such television series as "Sea Hunt," "Flipper" and "Gentle Ben," died in Brazil over the weekend of an apparent heart attack, his attorney says.

Born Ivan Lawrence Tors in Budapest and raised and educated in the same city, Tors came to New York in 1939 and later moved to Hollywood, where in 1941 he joined Columbia Pictures as a screenwriter. James E. * * *

SEATTLE (AP) — James E. Casey, 95, a founder and former chief executive officer of the United Parcel Service, died in a hospital Monday. In 1907, he helped found the American Messenger Co., a Seattle-based messenger service that soon added package deliveries to its services. By 1919, the company had evolved into United Parcel Service with Casey as one of its four founders.

LONDON (AP) — Sir Anthony Lewis, the British musicologist and conductor who successfully revived neglected works by Handel, Purcell and Rameau, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack at age 68.

Lewis was principal of the Royal College of Music in London from 1968 to 1982. He conducted and recorded such works as Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas," edited scholarly volumes on early music and in 1946 helped to found the British Broadcasting Corp.'s classical music radio network.

The country group Alabama accepts its vocal group of the year award Monday night at the 17th Annual Music City News Country Awards show in Nashville.

Marty Robbins receives three awards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The late Marty Robbins "really loved his fans," and they reciprocated by voting him the winner of three posthumous Music City News Country Awards, including top male vocalist.

Robbins, who died of heart failure last December at age 57, was chosen male vocalist of the year and won album of the year for "Come Back To Me" at the 17th annual Music City News Country Awards on Monday night. He also earned single record of the year for "Some Memories Just Won't Die."

The winners were chosen by 20,000 subscribers to Music City News, a monthly country music publication.

"He loved his fans and they really came through for him," Robbins' wife, Marizona, said afterwards.

The four-piece band Alabama won two awards, vocal group of the year and top band, at ceremonies at the Grand Ole Opry House that were syndicated to television stations across the country.

The full house of 4,400 included most of the major country stars.

The other double winners were Ricky Skaggs for the star of tomorrow award and top bluegrass act, and the syndicated television show "Hee Haw," which won top country music television series and whose gospel quartet was chosen gospel act of the year. The gospel quartet consists of Roy Clark, Buck Owens, Grandpa Jones and Kenny Price.

Roy Acuff, the 79-year-old "king of country music," won the first living-legend award as a tribute to his 50 years in the country music business.

"I've been in this town 45 years and it's the first award I've received that I've come on stage to accept," Acuff said after receiving a standing ovation. "I think they created this so maybe I'd win something."

Janie Fricke was voted top female vocalist, dethroning Barbara Mandrell who had won the honor the past two years.

"I'm going to accept this on behalf of the fans," Miss Fricke said, echoing the acceptance remarks of most winners.

It was the first time since 1980 that Miss Mandrell had not won at least one award in these presentations.

"It's not fun not to win," Miss Mandrell said after the show. "But you can be happy because it is a friend" who won. Miss Fricke was a backup vocalist on many of Miss Mandrell's records.

Other winners included David Frizzell and Shelly West, duet of the year; "Conway Twitty on the Mississippi," country music television special of the year; and the Statlers, comedy act of the year.

CBS win in slander suit a victory for free press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Attorneys for Dan Rather, CBS and the top-rated show "60 Minutes" claimed a victory for a free press after successfully defending a $30 million slander suit filed by a California doctor.

"We're just very pleased," said CBS lawyer William Vaughn, who called the 10-2 jury verdict Monday "a moment that strikes a blow for the First Amendment."

Dr. Carl Galloway, who claimed he was unjustly accused in a "60 Minutes" report on insurance fraud, said that during the trial he felt "like David up against Goliath. I don't have my own network."

In New York, CBS issued a statement saying, "From the outset, we were convinced that a dispassionate examination of the evidence would demonstrate clearly that the broadcast was fair and accurate."

Roone Arledge, president of competing ABC News, hailed the verdict in a statement issued from New York, saying the decision "was both appropriate and pleasing to those of us concerned with the vitality of investigative reporting."

Rather could not be reached for comment Monday; his phone number in New York is unlisted and a CBS-TV editor said Rather could not be contacted. He was at his regular post as anchorman of the CBS evening news Monday, night, and introduced a brief report on the verdict in his own case.

The disputed report, titled "It's No Accident," was broadcast Dec. 9, 1979. It told of insurance fraud schemes in Los Angeles' black community and pinpointed the Manchester West doctors' office as one clinic which allegedly churned out phony medical reports for bogus accident claims.

Galloway, 35, admitted he had worked at the clinic part-time but said he left two months before the "60 Minutes" crew arrived.

The doctor said that when he saw legal instructions that would be given to jurors before they deliberated, he began to suspect that "we were in a heap of trouble."

To find in Galloway's favor, jurors would have had to determine that Rather and his producer, Steven Glauber, "entertained serious doubts" about the truth of their report at the time they filmed it and that they acted "in reckless disregard for the truth."

One juror, Betty Riordan, said that instruction made the verdict for CBS inevitable.

"I felt at the time the show was filmed, they not only didn't have serious doubts, I don't think they had any doubts at all about it," Mrs. Riordan said.

Superior Court Judge Jack Swink earlier ruled there was no malicious intent behind the broadcast and told jurors they could not consider punitive damages.

It took the jury 10 hours of deliberations over three days to decide that Galloway was not slandered by the "60 Minutes" segment.

Galloway's attorney, Bruce Friedman, said he would file a motion for new trial within 30 days but had not decided yet whether to appeal. "We're thinking about it," Galloway said.

At the show's behest, a woman named Rosa Bravo visited the medical clinic and obtained a phony report.

Insurance money dead giveaway

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A man has been indicted for allegedly reporting 67 phony dog deaths to collect $3,500 from several insurance companies.

The indictment involving the dogs was among 26 insurance fraud charges and four charges of conspiracy handed down by a Guilford County Grand Jury against Jimmy Lee Crawford, 26, of Greensboro, on Monday, authorities said.

Crawford was listed in fair condition at Moses Cone Hospital with a collapsed lung due to a stab wound Monday, a hospital spokeswoman said. Viola Isaiah, 28, who lived at the same address as Crawford, was charged with assault with a deadly weapon, police said.

The indictment said that Crawford reported as many as eight dogs at a time had been run over by cars. He collected payments from companies insuring the cars he said had killed the animals, according to the indictment.

Other indictments alleged that Crawford staged bogus traffic accidents or reported and collected insurance money for accidents that never happened.

State Bureau of Investigation Agent Dan Stone said the indictments were part of a three-month investigation that examined 59 auto-related accidents, 44 directly involving Crawford.

Stone said that in 1981 and 1982, $32,800 was paid out on the claims from the 59 accidents with Crawford getting more than $20,000.

Woman must repay flushed money

ST. JOSEPH, Mich. (AP) — A woman who said she flushed $7,000 of her son's money down a toilet out of love and anger has been sentenced to five years' probation and ordered to repay her son.

Berrien County Circuit Judge Chester Byrns said he imposed the lengthy probation Monday to make sure the money is repaid.

He said Sally Ann Mourer, 44, of Lincoln Township, may be released from probation in less than five years if the debt is repaid early or if the son forgives the debt.

"It is not natural for a mother to so hurt a child, no matter how upset the parent is," Byrns told Mrs. Mourer. "There will always be the suspicion that you didn't destroy the money, and I must admit, I have a problem with that, too.

"They say love can conquer anything, and I hope that's true in your case," the judge said.

Mrs. Mourer, who pleaded no contest to the charge last April, had told police that she flushed the cash down a toilet last September out of anger at her son, Kenneth Mourer, for marrying without her permission. Her son had placed the money in her savings account.

She claimed she was "emotionally and mentally drained" when she took the money, and acted irrationally.

"I love him and I know he loves me," Mrs. Mourer said at her sentencing for attempted larceny by conversion over $100.

"He's all I ever had," she said. "For 18 years, I raised him — raised him on my own. He tells me he loves me, and, God only knows, I love him."

Byrns said he did not send Mrs. Mourer to jail because he believed she regretted her actions and already had suffered enough.

Beaches may wash out with sands of time

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post New Service

The storms that battered California in late January left scars along nearly all of the state's coastline and there is growing concern among scientists that the beaches may have reached a major turning point.

Damage from the storms was estimated by the state Office of Emergency Services at about $100 million, which much of that loss occurring along the coast. Many beaches were left bereft of sand, several harbors were closed by sand bars, beach facilities were destroyed and more than 3,000 homes and 900 businesses were damaged.

Not only is it unclear whether the beaches will be restored by this summer, scientists at Scrippss Institution of Oceanography in La Jolla, Calif., fear that the devastation along the coastline is a serious long-term omen.

Douglas L. Inman, director of the institution's Center for Coastal Studies, is convinced that California faces a very difficult decade and that many will pay a very high price.

"People will experience many more problems," Inman said, emphasizing that the recent storms should be regarded as the norm, not the exception.

Inman, a physical oceanographer who has spent 15 years analyzing the California coastline, bases his prediction on several factors:

CALIFORNIA APPEARS to be nearing the end of a 30-year period of extraordinarily mild weather, meaning that severe storms should occur more frequently during coming years.

Most of the development along the coastline occurred during that 30-year lull, and people "built closer (to the water) than they should have."

During that same period, dams have been built on the rivers that supply most of the sand to California's beaches, thus reducing the amount of sand flowing into coastal waters. That inevitably will lead to greater erosion along the coast.

To underscore the potential for damage, Inman cites a bit of history. Offshore structures, such as oil-drilling platforms, must be engineered to withstand the biggest ocean wave that can be expected to hit the area — the so-called design wave.

In Southern California, the biggest waves are generated by tropical storms, and the design wave for that area is based upon a tropical storm in 1939. The storm "didn't even get here," Inman said, but the ocean waves that it created "lifted 40-ton blocks off the Los Angeles breakwater."

California has not had waves such as that since 1939, Inman said, and nearly all of the construction along the coast has been built since that time.

A TOUR OF THE California coastline offers a graphic illustration of the vulnerability of both man-made and natural coastal structures.

A month after the storms, the state's coastline reflects the storms' impact, especially between San Francisco and San Diego. Many beaches have been stripped of their sand while others have been buried beneath debris and sand. Recreational facilities, including restrooms and picnic tables were destroyed by the pounding surf. In some cases it is hard to tell where the park had been.

Cabrillo Beach near the mouth of Los Angeles Harbor has been transformed from a sandy playground to a rocky coastline. Lifeguard towers that once stood on the sand now stand on exposed rocks.

The beach level dropped about four feet in the Venice area, exposing old pier pilings and leaving a restroom standing on poles.

Nearly all the sand has been pulled off the beaches in San Diego County, leaving some of Southern California's most popular playgrounds barren.

Much of the sand lost during the winter storms will be replenished by nature before summer brings its beach crowds, if history repeats itself, but not everyone is sure the beaches will return entirely to their former condition.

"There is a net loss of sand every year," said Bill O'Sullivan, director of beaches for Los Angeles County. "It could be pretty tough getting a full replenishment (of sand) by mother nature this year, especially in the Redondo Pier area."

STRONG STORMS SUCH as those that hit the California coastline in late January can also haunt the area for months because of subtle changes on the ocean floor. The shifting sands offshore will cause different types of local currents, possibly surprising some swimmers and boaters, O'Sullivan said.

The sands will also leave "inshore holes" that could pose serious hazards for people who are not expecting a sudden change in the depth of water.

"Joe Tourist is walking along in the surf and one step is good, but the next one is over his head," O'Sullivan said.

The loss of sand along the coastline is one of the main worries of oceanographer Inman.

"The source of best protection for any area is the beach itself," he said. A storm will pull sand offshore, causing the waves to break farther out to sea, thus reducing coastal impact.

"That's the best protection you can have," Inman said.

Some sand will return to the beaches by summertime — the winter storms take it away and the summer storms bring it back — but if Inman is right, each year now the amount returning could be less.

Inman's track record as a prognosticator is not without its blemishes, however.

If all of his past predictions had come true, nearly all of the sand along the California coastline would already have been gone. He is painfully aware of the inaccuracy.

"I've been accused of 'crying wolf' too often," he said. "People have said 'you kept telling us all this was going to happen, and nothing happened.'"

INMAN SAYS TODAY that his predictions were right but his timing was wrong.

When he began his work in the early 1960s, he did not realize that California's weather would not follow its past patterns. Extraordinarily mild weather had left more sand along the coast than expected, he said.

But he also did not anticipate the boom in small boat harbors along the California coast. Sand has been dredged from those harbors and dumped offshore.

Inman said it has been estimated that 50 million cubic yards of sand has been dumped along the coastline between San Diego and Los Angeles, and that roughly equals the amount of sand that would have been placed there by nature if the rivers had not been dammed.

But they are not building any more small boat harbors along the coast, and while some dredging will continue it will not come close to replacing the sand lost from the rivers.

Normally, sand migrates south along the California coast, carried by the tides.

Storms stripped the sand from Leucadia State Beach in Encinatas, Calif. Some experts say that a mild cycle in California weather is ending and the beaches will face some tough weather in the next few years.

Maryland's Ocean City 'leaves' alot to be desired

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post New Service

OCEAN CITY, Md. — The sun beats down on a soggy 100-acre clearing in the flat Maryland woods a few miles southwest of Ocean City, Md. Spring rains have left stagnant puddles in the tire ruts, and the bare dirt hummocks sink sickeningly under your boots. Giant windrows of brush, trees and debris 12 feet high have been bulldozed all the way to the scrub woods a quarter-mile away. It looks like World War I.

Everything is muddy: the tree planting crew of 14, their foreman, the four dogs who travel with this nomadic group, the pickup trucks and vans and Jeeps they live in, their water bottles, their soft drink cans, their sandwiches.

It is noon, and everyone is glad to take a break. They have been planting loblolly pine seedlings since sunup, separate and silent, lost in thought as they rhythmically swung their way down the long rows. Now they sit around munching the food they have fetched from their trucks, parked at the field's edge.

Mostly they wear jeans and T-shirts. Some are bare-chested in the heat. A beard here, a ponytail there, the accents of Texas, Florida and Ohio, the deep country, the city, the university. Someone has found a seven-inch leech and shows it around, as it stretches itself with ugly menace in a quart juice bottle covered with muddy fingerprints.

"That does it. I'm quitting," a woman worker says, staring at the leech. Everyone laughs. For these are the survivors, the cool hands who have made it through the five-month season of contract tree planting, and these veterans aren't about to quit until they have made the money they need to take off for the rest of the year. You get a bonus for finishing the gig.

"It's a special kind of person," Dave Timby says. He is a crew foreman for Superior Forestry Services of Leslie, Ark., probably the biggest tree-planting contractor in the East, operating from Maine and Florida to Minnesota and Texas. He stands, arms akimbo, blond ponytail sticking out from under his mud-spattered Superior plastic-billed cap, his worn L.L. Bean Maine Hunting Shoes ("I run through a pair a year; it's the toes that go") planted with grand indifference, the right one on a dirt-crusted hillock, the left one up to its instep in a soupy puddle of yellow water.

"A lot of 'em are here because of the recession, maybe half. But we have people who left other jobs to do this. Nurses. A nurse could work anywhere. We get steelworkers, carpenters, teachers, a foreign service graduate from Georgetown — he worked for Bobby Kennedy — a bar owner who sold his bar in Cincinnati to come along. Salesmen. Mechanics. A paper chemist. A helicopter pilot."

Timby, 34, who lives in the Florida Panhandle, has a master's degree in rehabilitation administration from Southern Illinois University. Two of his people are themselves experienced foremen who signed on as crewmen for extra bucks in this unusually long rain-delayed season. Timby keeps a light touch in his complicated role as coach, referee, quality control chief, salesman and big brother.

WORKING A SIX—DAY week during the season from late November through April, a person averages $6,000, on up to $10,000. There is a bonus of $600 to $2,500 for making it through the whole five months.

"You wouldn't believe the turnover," Timby says. "Last year I kept one in five through the season. This year it's one in two. I went through 11 people since Christmas."

Some can't hack it at all. "One guy did 11 trees ... and he was gone. I gave him some Triscuits and a ride out to the road."

No one is quite sure how much it has to do with the unemployment situation, how much it's a rerun of the back-to-nature '60s. One planter from Colorado advertised he was starting an independent subcontracting firm. He got 600 applicants, accepted 100, had 60 show for work and wound up with 15 planters.

"They start in the South in winter and move north, lining up work as they come," says Sam Dyke, district manager for Glatfelter Pulp Wood Co., a customer for the planters on Maryland's Eastern Shore. "They camp on the property they're planting, or in a state campground. Men and women, all ages, 18 to 50. Some of them have kids. It's hard. You have to love to travel."

When people still had life styles, you would have called it that. Now it's just a way of getting to do what you want for half the year.

The hoedad looks like an ancient mattock except that it has a shaped ax handle and that its rounded blade, 8 inches long and 3 inches wide, is aluminum.

You lift it over your head and let it swing down, the blade driving deep into the ground. You pull a little, push a little and drop the tree seedling into the hole. Then you tamp it down with one foot while the other is already striding on to the next spot six feet away, and the hoedad is rising for another swack.

THE WHOLE THING takes about six seconds. In a typical 10-hour day a practiced tree planter can install 3,000 seedlings. A really good one can do 5,000, working sometimes in the car headlights, sometimes 18 days nonstop, in the rain, in winter cold that freezes your fingers, in bottomless mud that sucks your boots off.

You get 3 cents a tree.

It sounds crazy, but tree planting by hand has replaced machines to some degree. Years ago, the T-shaped two-handled dibble bar was used in a laborious process something like taking out miniature earth core samples. A machine with a crew of two could do the work of eight dibble-bar planters. Then in the '40s the Civilian Conservation Corps developed the hoedad and the rhythmic one-handed technique. Tree planting contractors like Superior have been on the scene only about 10 years. Last year it put 50 million seedlings into 80,000 acres.

Prince Talal ibn Abdulazia al Saud estimates his own weatlh at between $200 million and $300 million, far less than the $1 billion estimated by other sources. The prince has traveled extensively, raising million for UNICEF.

Prince Saud...just how rich is he?

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

PAEONIAN SPRINGS, Va. — How rich is he?

Prince Talal ibn Abdulaziz al Saud, the half brother of Saudi Arabian King Fahd, contemplated the question at his gold-appointed, red acrylic desk on his 2,000-acre farm 50 miles from Washington.

While other super-wealthy Saudis let their opulent life styles do their talking for them, Talal has opened the floodgates to questions such as:

How many camels do you have?

How many wives do you have?

How many homes do you have?

And, for those who have a way of getting to the point:

How many billions do you have?

The prince picked up the telephone and asked someone to bring him a cold glass of water. He sat, surrounded by a half-dozen Arab functionaries, two of his Washington public-relations people and a reporter. An oil portrait of his father, King Abdulaziz ibn Saud, the founder of modern Saudi Arabia, seemed to be presiding from a throne on the off-white, fabric-covered wall behind the prince, who is Saud's 23rd son.

TALAL DOES NOT have any billions, he says, despite a Washington magazine story, which apparently mislabeled him the richest man in town, earning $1 million an hour and weighing in at $6 billion.

"I estimate myself $200 to $300 million," said the prince, who often fights a losing battle in his attempt to direct questions away from his money and toward the United Nations International Childrens Emergency Fund. He devotes much of his time to the fund and has raised $48 million for it, making him one of the world's champion fund-raisers.

Known as the Rebel Prince for his years in exile two decades ago in then-enemy Egypt, Talal continues to march to his own beat.

He has traveled extensively in his 727 jet, helping UNICEF and sprucing up the Saudis' image — an undertaking which, by itself, separates him from all other royalty in the world. He also has broken with Saudi practices and made himself uncommonly accessible to an inquisitive press and public.

AS FOR HIS WEALTH, a source close to the Saudi royal family who asked not to be named estimated that $300 million "would be a minimum and $1 billion the maximum" of Talal's financial empire.

And if Prince Talal is not the richest property owner in the Washington area, he is in the hunt. (Candy man Forrest Mars Sr. may have him beat if the Forbes magazine figure of more than $1 billion is correct. But Talal can hang right in there with the likes of Paul Mellon, Jack Kent Cooke and the Kennedys, bunched together at about $500 million.)

Besides his estate in Virginia hunt country, which he bought and renovated for about $10 million, the 49-year-old Talal has a palace in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, a country house in Cannes, France, apartments in London and Paris and various dwellings in Saudi Arabia, all of which he shares with his extended family as well as his fourth wife, 22-year-old Princess Majdha, and his nine children, who range in age from 2 to 25 years. The prince points out with a chuckle that his two youngest children have American blood because Princess Majdha's mother is from Chico, Calif.

Talal's Virginia estate, previously owned by the late Arthur Godfrey, has a striking new redwood and glass mansion designed almost entirely by the princess and filled with marble, art, pastel furniture and panoramic views of the rolling hills and trees of Virginia. A game preserve of more than 500 acres allows the prince to see buffalo and hunt pheasant and deer with his sons. There also are corn, cattle, a skeet range, tennis court, swimming pool, heliport, satellite dish, ham radio, several houses, armed guards and a blue Rolls-Royce on the grounds.

Talal's un-Saudilike style, which includes employing Gray & Co., one of Washington's top public-relations firms, is nothing new for him. Talal spent several years in exile in Nasser-ruled Egypt in the 1960s, lambasting his homeland in radio broadcasts emanating from the country that was then Arabia's most-feared enemy. The former finance minister was forgiven his sins and welcomed back, but has not held another government post since.

IN THE LAST THREE years, serving as special envoy to UNICEF, he has been a literal gold mine. The first non-entertainer to take the post, Talal has been by far the most visible and successful fund-raiser the organization has had, gaining access to world leaders such as the pope, Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, Spain's King Juan Carlos, Great Britain's Queen Elizabeth and many more. It is Talal who is responsible for an anonymous, $6 million donation to UNICEF by a Saudi family, the biggest private contribution in the organization's 37-year history. Before Talal's involvement, the entire country of Saudi Arabia had donated only $1 million a year.

Talal can rattle off facts and figures of how many children die each year of dysentery, and will focus his upcoming efforts on attempting to raise funds for technical advances such as oral rehydration. According to UNICEF, dehydration caused by diarrhea kills one-third of the children in developing countries. Oral rehydration, a method that involves swallowing a substance, would take the place of the expensive and impractical treatment of intravenous feedings.

Yet, the happy marriage between Talal and UNICEF was not love at first sight.

Talal recalled that it was only after "a big argument" with UNICEF Executive Director James Grant that UNICEF "finally ... accepted in a very careful way," Talal's offer to fill the post.

"We were looking for the right person and he was looking for a public cause," said Grant. "Obviously, we had to make careful explorations, because UNICEF is a very trusted agency."

The regulations provide for a transitional stage in which qualified State program can be granted Interim Authorization. The Interim Authorization program is being implemented in two phases corresponding to the two stages in which the underlying Federal program will take effect.

The State of Texas received Interim Authorization for Phase I on December 24, 1980.

In the January 26, 1981 Federal Register (46 FR 7965), the Environmental Protection Agency announced the availability of portions or components of Phase II of Interim Authorization. Component A, published in the Federal Register January 12, 1981, (46 FR 2802), contains standards for permitting containers, tanks, surface impoundments and waste piles. Component B, published in the Federal Register January 23, 1981 (46 FR 7666), contains standards for permitting hazardous waste incinerators.

The State of Texas received Interim Authorization for Phase II, Components A and B, on March 23, 1982.

In the July 26, 1982 Federal Register (47 FR 32378), the Environmental Protection Agency announced that states with qualified programs can be authorized for Phase II Interim Authorization, Component C. Component C published published in the Federal Register includes standardsfor permitting of land disposal facilities.

A full description of the requirements and procedures for State Interim Authorization is included in 40 CFR Part 271, Subpart F (45 FR 33479).

As noted in the May 19, 1980 Federal Register, copies of complete state submittals for Phase II Interim Authorization are to be made available for public inspection and comment. In addition, if significant public interest is expressed a public hearing is to be held on the submittal.

Today EPA is announcing the availability for public review of the Texas application for Phase II, Component C, Interim Authorization, Hazardous Waste Management Program, inviting public comment, and giving notice that if significant public interest is expressed, EPA will hold a public hearing on the application.

DATE: If significant public interest is expressed in holding a hearing, a public hearing is scheduled for July 14, 1983 at 7:00 p.m. EPA reserves the right to cancel the public hearing if significant public interest in holding a hearing is not communicated to EPA by telephone or in writing by July 7, 1983. EPA will determine by July 11, 1983, whether there is significant interest to hold the public hearing. All written comments on the Texas Interim Authorization application must be received by the close of business on July 7, 1983.

ADDRESSES: If significant public interest is expressed, EPA will hold a public hearing on Texas' application for Interim Authorization on July 14, 1983, at 7:00 p.m., at the Stephen F. Austin State Office Building, Room 118, 1700 N. Congress Avenue, Austin, Texas.

Written comments on the application and written or telephoned communication of interest in EPA's holding a public hearing on the Texas application must be sent to:

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Region VI, Air and Waste Management Division, Attn: H. J. Parr, Hazardous Materials Branch, 1201 Elm Street, Dallas, Texas 75270, (214) 767-2645.

If you wish to find out whether or not EPA will hold a public hearing on the Texas application based upon EPA's decision that there was significant public interest in such a hearing, write or telephone after July 11, 1983. The EPA contact person listed below or telephone: Dan Eden, Texas Department of Water Resources, P. O. Box 13087, Capitol Station, Austin, Texas, Telephone (512) 475-2041.

Copies of the Texas Interim Authorization application for Phase II, Component C, are available during normal business hours at the following addresses for inspection and copying:

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals, addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for the furnishing and installation of approximately 550 lineal feet of concrete curb and gutter and 36,550 square yards of 2-½" HMAC will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:30 p.m. on the 20th day of June, 1983, and publicly opened and read aloud at 3:00 p.m. on the same day.

Any bid received after closing time as stated above will be returned unopened.

Bid envelops shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Project No. 229".

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the City Engineer, City Hall, Midland, Texas, and may be secured upon a deposit for FIFTY DOLLARS ($.50) for each set as a guaranty of safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned to the contractor on submission of bid on the work, with such plans and specifications; or upon return of the plans and specifications immediately after the examination of same and advising the City Engineer that no bid will be submitted; otherwise the deposit for same shall be forfeited.

A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performace and payment bonds.

If a bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The City of Midland, Texas, reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalities, and to make any investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, to award this bid by items and to accept what in the judgment of the Mayor and City Council is the most advantageous bid.
