DOE cover-up of WIPP site study charged

By JIM STEINBERG

A former NASA physicist charged at a public hearing in Midland Tuesday that there is a conspiracy to keep high level decision makers in the Department of Energy from having access to information showing that a proposed site for underground nuclear waste disposal in southeastern New Mexico is unfit for that purpose.

Dr. John Hyder of Albuquerque, N.M., presented Department of Energy Deputy Director John O'Leary with a geological study of the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad, N.M., which Hyder claims concludes that the site is unsafe for long-term storage of nuclear wastes.

O'Leary and other officials of the DOE held the first of three Texas public information hearings on WIPP at Midland College Tuesday.

A second hearing will be held today in Amarillo and a third one will be held Thursday in El Paso.

A longtime opponent of the proposed WIPP site near Carlsbad, N.M., Hyder said the draft, prepared by University of New Mexico geology professor Dr. Roger Y. Anderson in January of this year, was being deliberately kept from top decision makers of DOE.

O'Leary denied the conspiracy charge, adding that "even if it were so, there would be plenty of opportunity for all the information relative to WIPP to be brought forward during the lengthy public hearing sessions necessary during the licensing procedure of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission."

Wendell D. Weart of Sandia Laboratories in Albuquerque charged today that Hyder was misrepresenting a draft of Anderson's report.

"We sought Anderson out to make us aware of the problems in the Delaware Basin. Our tests are continuing. He has given us a good guide. We are urging him to publish his report when he completes it," Weart said.

"It's a shame that Hyder is doing what he is doing. Now, even in the scientific community, there will be doubts about whether or not Anderson was under some kind of pressure when he finalized his report. I can assure you there was no pressure."

Weart is head of the Waste Management Systems Department of Sandia.

Anderson's report concludes that the entire Delaware Basin, the geological formation in the WIPP site area, is geologically active, Hyder said. The report makes a strong case for the existence of a fault line which runs tangent to the WIPP site, Hyder added. But the most damaging aspect of the report, Hyder said, were Anderson's findings of collapse structures (sinks) in the WIPP site area.

Weart today denied there was a fault tangent to the WIPP site.

In the report Anderson wrote: "The potential for the formation of such collapse structures in the site area constitutes an unavoidable geological hazard that is inherent for any site selected in the basin. Studies of the statistical probability of occurrence based on known distributions and on a better understanding of the collapse process will provide estimates of the seriousness of the hazard."

Anderson also noted a long-term geological trend whereby the salt layer in which the nuclear wastes would be stored is gradually being eaten away by water.

Wrote Anderson: "The progression of deep dissolution (of the salt layer) will reach the site locality within the next few million years."

When asked privately if he intended to respond to the Anderson report, O'Leary said, "No. You know I just quipped to a colleague that the Ice Age would be here first (before water reached the WIPP site). I noticed Anderson did not choose the best location in the Delaware Basin."

Hyder, a staff scientist for the Albuquerque-based Southwest Research and Information Center, said Anderson's report seriously questioned the WIPP site's geological integrity, which he says must span a period of 250,000 years.

During the public information hearing, DOE officials explained the purpose of WIPP, a $350 to $400 billion pilot project to store low- and intermediate-level nuclear wastes at a depth of 2,100 feet and highly radioactive spent nuclear fuel rods at 2,000 feet. There will also be an underground research area for the test storage of high-level military wastes, officials said Tuesday.

DOE is conducting the hearings in Texas at the request of Attorney General John Hill. If the WIPP site is approved, much of the materials brought into it for storage will travel through Texas from a storage area at Savannah River, S.C., the hearing revealed.

James Liverman, acting assistant secretary for environment with the DOE, surprised many people at the hearing by announcing that the rail route would take the wastes into New Mexico through Amarillo. It had been thought the wastes would travel a more direct route, on the Texas and Pacific Railroad through Dallas-Fort Worth, Midland-Odessa and Kermit.

When pressed for details of the exact route, Liverman said he would have to get back to his staff in Washington, adding, "I don't know where they got Amarillo."

After the hearing, Liverman tried unsuccessfully to get the exact information from Washington.

"Watch, in Amarillo he'll say the wastes will travel through Midland-Odessa," one observer quipped.

During the 20-year period in which wastes will be brought to the site,

More than 200 victims hospitalized

By FENTON WHEELER

TARRAGONA, Spain (AP) — "It looked like a flame thrower," said a Frenchwoman who survived the holocaust when a runaway tank truck loaded with propylene gas exploded in a campsite on Spain's northeast coast.

Police estimated that between 125 and 135 persons died as a result of the Tuesday explosion at the seaside resort, 50 miles south of Barcelona.

Nine of those died in the hospital overnight, hospital officials said. More than 200 other campers were hospitalized with burns. Many were reported in critical condition.

Most of the 500 to 600 vacationers registered at the camp on the Costa Brava 50 miles south of Barcelona were from other West European countries. Many of the bodies were burned beyond recognition, and identification was slow.

The campsite "resembles hell or what we think hell is like," said one police officer working amid the charred remains of automobiles, trailers, campers and tents.

The permanent campsite is one of a score along the popular Costa Brava. The explosion blackened more than 160 acres and was heard two miles away.

Earlier reports put the death toll at near 200. Officials blamed the higher estimate on "great confusion."

Vincente Mirabet, the head of a burn treatment unit at a Valencia hospital, said 40 victims had been admitted there and most were in critical condition.

"I don't think many will survive," he said.

Police at noon put the death toll at 119 and said half a dozen persons were missing.

Police said the 38-ton single-trailer truck was loaded with 43 cubic meters of gas when it left the highway while rounding a curve, crashed through a stone fence and exploded.

Witnesses said the truck was going about 40 mph when the driver lost control.

The blast set off a chain of explosions as campers' bottled cooking gas blew up. No trace of the Spanish driver was found.

"I heard an explosion, a whoosh, and stepped out of my trailer to see flames 150 yards high," said a Dutchman who refused to give his name.

"After seconds I saw people walking out of the fire with their outer skin burned completely off. Many fell down. Some just sat down. Others ran into the sea."

Antonio Betancourt, an officer of Spain's paramilitary civil guard, said many victims were burned beyond recognition. Identification, he said, "is going to be really difficult, even for their own relatives."

The bodies were taken by helicopter to the nearby town of Tortosa until they could be moved to Barcelona.

Spanish officials said it was the worst campsite disaster ever.

"Cries came out from everywhere in the camp," said a municipal policeman who was there when the truck exploded. "I'll never be able to get rid of these horrible sights no matter how long I live."

A Madrid propylene transportation company, Cisternas Reunidas, took responsibility and said an investigation has been ordered.

Propylene is a colorless gas obtained from the petroleum refining process. It is used to make polypropylene, a light thermoplastic resin used for packaging and coating.

Vance gives Gromyko new proposal

By BARRY SCHWEID

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance today handed Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko new American proposals to limit the development of long-range Soviet missiles.

Gromyko, meeting with Vance at the opening session of a new round of SALT II talks, took the plans, put a few preliminary questions to Vance across the table at the U.S. arms office here and then called a recess to consult with Moscow.

The nuclear arms negotiations were set to resume later in the day when Vance may give Gromyko a message from President Carter expressing U.S. concern over the current trials of dissidents Alexander Ginzburg and Anatoly Shcharansky in the Soviet Union.

U.S. officials declined to characterize the first session.

Despite the U.S. opposition to the Soviet crackdown on dissidents, a U.S. spokesman said it would not be allowed to affect the arms talks. The spokesman added, however, that Vance would stress to Gromyko "the importance of dealing fairly not only with Shcharansky but all the dissidents."

The spokesman said Vance would wait until later in the talks to bring up the subject of the dissidents. He added the first session would be devoted entirely to the unresolved issues blocking conclusion of SALT II, which seeks to limit the nuclear arsenal of both superpowers.

Vance has said repeatedly the human rights issue must not interfere with the nuclear arms talks. A senior U.S. official said objections within the Carter Administration to Vance's meeting with Gromyko because of Kremlin's treatment of dissidents were dismissed because arms limitation was an "imperative" that could be delayed.

The new American proposals are aimed at breaking a deadlock over a new treaty which seeks to restrict new missile systems and high-flying strategic bombers on both sides.

The specific plan that Vance presented today would limit the modifications the Russians can make on new missiles during the life of treaty, until 1985.

At the same time, the proposal allows the United States to develop the MX mobile missile and also dig thousands of silos to hide its current arsenal of Minuteman missiles by shifting them from hole to hole in a sort of "shell game." The plan would make the Minuteman arsenal less vulnerable to attack.

Though not a winner, float portrayed history

STANTON — June Reid must have felt let down something awful. There she was, sitting business-like at the table, taking orders for the illustrated book, "A History of Martin County." It's selling for a pre-publication price of $21.50.

In the relative cool of the community building, she seemed confident about that railroad float just outside and under the blistering sun. It had been entered in the Stanton's Old Settlers Day parade, which was keyed to the theme "Songs of Yester-years."

On the mobile float were steel tracks and 13 cross-ties and the banner, "I've Been Working on the Railroad." And Mrs. Reid just knew the float, sponsored by the Martin County Historical Commission, would take top prize. (The Commission's putting out the book, too.) In the actual parade, the T&P float was adorned by hard-worked and hard-driving men dressed in the work clothes of Texas & Pacific Railroad hands.

And appropriate that was, for it was the railroad that gave rise to Stanton back in the late 1800s.

Mrs. Reid said the float was a sure-fire winner, or ought to be. She seemed to be dreaming of a first-place ribbon on the float.

"If it don't get first place, and if it don't get second (place), it ought to get third place," she said after the (Continued on Page 2A)

Postal workers protest 'pokey pace' of talks

By JEFFREY MILLS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postal workers came to Washington today to protest what they call the "pokey pace" of negotiations toward a new labor agreement.

About a thousand postal workers came to a rally near the Washington Monument before starting a march to Postal Service headquarters about a mile away for picketing there.

The Postal Service has made no pay proposal since talks began April 20, angering union leaders who accuse management of delaying tactics and of trying to take back benefits won in previous contracts.

Leaders of locals threatened walk-outs if a new contract is not negotiated by the July 20 deadline.

"Our policy is if there is no decent contract by July 20, there will be no work," said Mo Biller, head of the New York City local of the American Postal Workers Union, the largest of four unions negotiating with the Postal Service.

National leaders were more restrained in their comments about a possible work stoppage.

Emmet Andrews, national president of the APWU, was asked by reporters about the strike possibility. He replied, "Nobody knows about that. We are concentrating on trying to negotiate a contract."

He has said the talks are moving at "a pokey pace" because of management delays.

Airport changes create new problem on ground

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Construction at Midland Regional Airport continues to cause problems and this time it has to do with various modes of ground transportation.

Midland City Council at its regular meeting Tuesday approved parking spaces for a variety of companies after listening to complaints about the locations of their current parking allocations.

Col. Wilson Banks, city director of aviation, explained the spaces had been allotted to The Chauffeur, a limousine service, and three taxi companies at the south end of the airport building when the baggage terminal had been moved there. But, since the new carousel has opened at the north end of the building, the firms are requesting spaces at that location, he said.

Construction work is taking up some of that space in front of the building, while rental car agencies are allotted other spaces.

Hershel Hockman with The Chauffeur said drivers are prohibited from entering the baggage area to let passengers know the service is available. He also said the public address system was not working to announce the service. The firm's attorney, Greg Hooser of Austin, said the distance for passengers to walk from the new baggage area to the limousine service at the south end of the building takes more than three minutes for "a young healthy man." The distance brings more problems for those who are senior citizens, handicapped or with children and a large amount of luggage.

U.S. Brown, who is with an Odessa taxi company, said he has stopped his service at the airport because "of the friction out there."

The council decided to allot four spaces near the baggage area for ground transportation. The Chauffeur will get two — one for the Odessa bus and the other for Midland — and one each for the Midland and Odessa taxi companies.

A plan to provide water and sewer services to industries along Interstate Highway 10, West Highway 80 and north of the airport was presented by James Blazer of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper.

Fred Baker, city director of public utilities, explained Texas Instruments already has located in the area and Pittsburgh Plate Glass is considering a plant there. The predicted growth of the area shows the current water wells at the airport and city sewer system can not keep pace with the demand. For the area to continue development, Baker said, a water and sewer system will be needed in the future.

Blazer said plans estimate the — Repeal the state sales tax on residential gas and electricity bills and give cities the right

The Legislative Budget Board estimated the state utilities tax repeal would result in a loss of about $125 million in 1979 revenue and about $14.5 million for inheritance taxes for the same period.

The court official in Moscow gave no details of Toth's testimony, which appeared to be a protocol he signed after his interrogation by police about Shcharansky in June 1977. The official referred only to "testimony by a foreign correspondent, a witness, who was questioned during preliminary

During a public comment section of the hearing, Midland hydrologist Bill Heck said that, based on his experience with the water sources for numerous cities in West Texas and southeastern New Mexico, he agreed with government findings that WIPP posed no danger to the water supply.

At noon, Shcharansky's brother Leonid, 36, was allowed into the courtroom, although his mother, Ida Milgrom, 70, was still barred as she has been every day of the trial. She stood outside with about 15 supporters and a few Western reporters, watched by 30 uniformed policemen. About 100 supporters stood with Ginzburg's wife outside the courthouse in Kaluga.

The report also said there are key problems with using basalt, volcanic rock or anhydrite (calcium sulfate) formations as burial sites.

Back in 1881 in its westward move, the Texas & Pacific set up a little old section house named Grelton out in the middle of nowhere. Settlers came. The first to Grelton were five priests, some says monks or friars, from the Order of Carmelites. Families came, more were created, and, because of the Roman Catholic influence, the

Outstanding Jaycees

Congratulations are in order for Larry J. Bell, one of Midland's top Jaycees, businessmen and civic leaders, on bringing "home" to Midland for the first time the coveted "Clint Dunagan Memorial Award" presented at the annual U.S. Jaycee convention held recently at Atlantic City N.J.

Bell, a former president of the Midland Jaycees, won the national award as one of the "Top 20" Jaycee regional directors in the United States. The honor and the recognition for a job well done certainly are well merited.

The award is named in memory of Clint Dunagan a former outstanding young business executive and civic leader of Midland, who was killed in an airplane crash near Lampasas on Nov. 5, 1946, at age 37. He was a founder of the Midland Junior Chamber of Commerce and served as its president in 1942. He also had served a president of Texas Jaycees in 1944.

It is gratifying to have this particular award brought to Clint Dunagan's home town by another outstanding young man who is sharing his leadership qualities with Jaycees at local, state and national levels.

The Midland Jaycees, as a chapter, also scored big at Atlantic City, winning fourth place in the "Clarence Howard Memorial Award" for outstanding Jaycee units, and picking up the national extension award for starting five new chapters. A Midland Jaycee, Fred Koontz, won the National Recruitment Award for signing more than 50 new members during the year.

At the state level, Midland Jaycees also won top honors, including the "Henry Giessenbier Memorial Award," as the outstanding chapter in Texas by population division. The club also was the state's Outstanding Roadrunner Chapter. The unit also won two first place awards for activities, as did three of its members for outstanding projects.

Midland Jaycees, never static, have had another tremendous year — one of the best in the near 40-year history of the chapter.

Here we go again

Uncle Sam's heavy hand with the financial club once again shows itself — this time concerning highway speed law enforcement.

If you have driven on a major highway most anywhere recently, you know that the national 55-mile-an-hour speed limit is being widely ignored by the motoring public. And the feds are concerned.

You know also that the only justification for the national limit in the first place was the government's determination to "do something" about energy conservation. And for most vehicles a comparatively small decrease in fuel consumption does result from staying with the 55 mph limit.

Enforcement, however, is something else. And this is where the federal government again starts swinging its financial club in a most ridiculous manner.

As explained by a spokesman for the Department of Transportation at the National Conference of State Legislatures, DOT is planning what The Daily Oklahoman calls "an indiscriminate clobbering of the states."

DOT says that the percentage of drivers violating the 55 mph limit ranges from a low of 30 percent in Virginia to 77 percent in Wyoming and Connecticut. Unless the states reduce that rate to 15 percent or less within three years, DOT proposes to hold back 5 percent of their highway funds.

This is where the ridiculous aspect of the whole business surfaces. In the first place, the violation figures are only estimates, at best. Secondly, distances and driving conditions vary greatly in different regions. This particularly is true in comparing the wide open spaces and super highways of West Texas with those of other sections.

Highway law enforcement should and must remain a state responsibility. Interference from the federal crowd would be a definite handicap for all concerned.

The federal government used its financial club to whip the states into line in adopting the 55 mph speed limit. The states certainly should not give in to the feds when it comes to enforcement of the speed law.

NICK THIMMESCH

Equality is cornerstone of agreement under SALT II

(Editors Note: In a recent guest column for vacationing Nick Thimmesch, Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) addressed the issues of U.S.-Soviet relations and the SALT discussions. In today's guest column Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.), at his request, is responding to the Jackson column.)

By SEN. EDWARD M. KENNEDY

Sen. Henry Jackson, a long-time observer of national security and arms control issues, has unfortunately repeated a charge that we've heard before — that SALT II will be an "unequal deal," resulting from our failure to insist on equal numbers on each side.

In fact, the cornerstone of the SALT II Agreement is equal overall limits on the numbers of weapons permitted on both sides. It will restrict both the U.S. and the USSR to equal numbers of missile launchers, equal numbers of launchers or missiles with multiple warheads and equal numbers of launchers of land-based missiles with multiple warheads. Thus, SALT II is a significant change from the first SALT accord, which temporarily froze force levels and thus permitted the Soviets a greater number of missile launchers. This equality of limits in SALT II will implement Sen. Jackson's own 1972 amendment, calling on the President not to "limit the United States to levels of intercontinental strategic forces inferior to the limits provided for the Soviet Union."

In the face of equal overall limits, Sen. Jackson still makes the claim of inequality. How does he manage this?

He picks out three provisions of a draft treaty over 50 pages in length and misconstrues their effect on our national security. Let me re-state his specific charges and then comment on each.

1. The agreement is said to be unequal because it counts our B-52s, while excluding the Soviet Backfire.

Sen. Jackson is correct when he says our long-range B-52s are counted; but he fails to add that so are Soviet long-range equivalents, the Bear and Bison bombers. He is also correct when he says that the medium-range Backfire (which has only minimal ability to strike U.S. targets) is excluded; but he fails to add that our negotiators are seeking to constrain even this minimal capability. Most importantly, he fails to add that U.S. medium-range equivalents of the Backfire — our F-111 and other forward-based aircraft, on land and on aircraft carriers, which can strike Soviet targets — will be completely excluded. We have always insisted that SALT exclude these forward-based systems, in part to meet the concerns of our NATO allies. Would Sen. Jackson now have us discard this hard-won position?

2. The agreement is said to be unequal because it excludes Soviet intermediate range ballistic missiles while limiting deployment of U.S. ground-launched cruise missiles.

Soviet intermediate range ballistic missiles are excluded, but so are thousands of U.S. and NATO tactical nuclear weapons which can strike Warsaw Pact forces. Although we have chosen to focus on aircraft, cruise missiles and other theater forces instead, there is nothing in SALT II which will prevent us from deploying our own intermediate range ballistic missile. Indeed, the Senate Armed Services Committee has allocated $2 billion to begin research and development of just such a missile.

Nothing in the agreement interferes with any of our theater cruise missile programs. The limits on range are contained in a short-term protocol which will expire before deployment is scheduled to begin. Meanwhile, tough bargaining by our negotiators has insured that development and testing at full range can proceed as planned.

3. The Treaty is said to be unequal because it permits the Soviets more than 300 heavy missiles (i.e. the SS-18) and the U.S. none.

This is true as far as it goes. But it ignores that throw-weight is not the basic problem. Smaller Soviet missiles, such as the SS-19, are at least as militarily effective as the existing SS-18.

Both types are elements of the most troubling category of Soviet forces, namely large numbers of increasingly accurate, MIRVed ICBMs. In fact, SALT II will cap for the first time this category of Soviet forces, limiting them to a level considerably below what we would face without SALT. Moreover, nothing in the treaty will prevent us from maintaining our traditional advantages in missile accuracy and warhead technologies — or, for that matter, developing and deploying a new ICBM even more effective than the Soviet heavy missiles if we choose to do so.

Not only is it misleading to select only these provisions as a basis for assessing SALT II, but to do so misrepresents the strategic balance.

Why don't the critics of SALT mention, for example, that the U.S. has a strategic bomber force which is both qualitatively superior and over twice the size of the Soviets? Or that our sea-based MIRVed missile technology is superior to theirs? Or that the Soviets have no equivalent to, or effective defense against, our air-launched cruise missile?

Most important, why don't the critics of SALT mention that the U.S. has over 9,000 nuclear bombs and warheads compared to some 4,000 deployed by the Soviets? It is, after all, warheads and bombs that destroy targets and kill people.

The conclusion from all this is that neither we nor the Soviets enjoy strategic superiority — which remains an elusive and self-defeating goal. There will continue to be differences between strategic force postures: the Soviets will have some strengths; we will have others.

paid for covertly with CIA money.

In addition, the CIA had a full-time police instructor stationed in Uganda in the early days of Amin's regime, and a CIA liaison officer was posted there until the United States closed its embassy in 1973. His duty was to exchange information with the psychotic dictator's police and intelligence officials.

Shockingly, the Ugandan contingent was brought to this country and trained at Georgetown long after Amin's murderous policies were evident. His victims, indeed, included some Americans.

As far back as July, 1971, two Americans were hustled off to a Ugandan military camp from which they never returned. We traced the steps of free-lance writer Nicholas Strohm and researcher Robert Siedle, and then published an account of their last days.

According to reports, they were spread-eagled over inflammable oil drums, which were set ablaze by tracer bullets fired by Amin's executioners. Their burned bones were dumped into a river by a lieutenant who later signed an affidavit. The officers responsible for the atrocity were later promoted by Amin.

In 1974, we also reported that some of the foreign students at the police academy had written papers favoring torture tactics. The school's administrators denied, however, that torture techniques were taught.

We wrote that many of the academy's graduates later became CIA informants and operatives. We quoted from a secret letter from

ART BUCHWALD

The home appraiser gets help (?) from neighbor

WASHINGTON — In all the fuss about homeowner taxes, no one has mentioned the official tax appraiser who decides how much your house is really worth. I myself hadn't given him any thought until the other day when I saw a nicely dressed man with a pad and pencil standing on a street corner studying a house.

"You thinking of buying?" I asked him.

"No," he said, "I'm just appraising. How much do you think that house is worth?"

"I know they paid $34,000 with a GI loan in 1947."

He wrote down $34,000.

"But it's in great shape. They put a new roof on it two years ago," I told him.

He added $10,000 to his pad.

"They make any other improvements?" he asked.

"They put in air conditioning in 1962," I said, trying to be helpful.

He wrote "A.C., $5,000."

"But they're really neat people. They take care of their lawn, and they have the most beautiful rosebushes in the back."

He scribbled "Rose Bushes, $16,000."

"When was the last time they painted the house?"

"Oh, they don't have to paint. All they do is wash down the brick every four or five years."

He wrote "No painting" and next to it "$7,500."

"What's that shack back there?" he asked.

"That's where they keep their electric lawn mower. The old man's getting on in years and can no longer mow his grass manually."

"They give many parties?" he wanted to know.

"Not many, but they have a lovely patio in the back and they bought a new awning for it last year."

Another $5,000 was added for the awning.

"You're really writing fast," I said.

"The law says any home improvement has to be added to the tax appraisal."

"I feel as if I'm rattling on those nice people," I said.

"Look at it this way. You're just making sure that they're paying their fair share of their property taxes. If they don't, then you'll be burdened with more than you should pay."

"That's true. I guess you know about the barbecue pit they built. The old man laid every brick of it himself."

The appraiser wrote down "Home-built barbecue pit, $25,000."

"Isn't that a bit much for a barbecue pit?" I asked.

"Since it's home-built it's one of a kind. These things have a lot of value. Their curb seems kind of new."

"They repaired it this spring. The winter wrecked it."

He appraised the new curb for $2,000.

"I see the house next door is up for sale."

"Yes, it's the best house in the neighborhood. Has a wet bar in the cellar, an automatic sprinkling system, a chime doorbell and a gazebo in the back yard."

"How much they asking for it?" he said.

"Two hundred and eighty thousand dollars."

"Well, why didn't you say so in the first place?" the appraiser said angrily, tearing up his notes.

"Why?"

"If that house is going for $280,000, then every house on the block is worth that."

"Oh," I said. "There goes the neighborhood."

Mark Russell says

It is estimated that the federal government loses 25 billion dollars a year in fraud, theft and waste. Look at the bright side — some countries don't even know where their taxes are going.

Whether we like it or not, it's a fact this money amounts to a new 25 billion-dollar federal agency — the Department of Fraud, Theft and Waste.

An FTW efficiency award was given to a Medicare dentist charging for extracting 400 teeth from a single mouth.

And so, like alcoholism, drug addiction, or any disease, a government agency must first be acknowledged to exist — before you go about curing it.

Alternate methods of jury selection discussed

Midland County commissioners for an hour this morning discussed mechanical and electronic means for selecting jury panels but opted for neither system.

Instead, the commissioners, in a called emergency session, recessed after noting that the recommendations they were discussing had not been signed by the judges who proposed them.

"I intend to vote for whatever the three district judges tell us to do," Precinct 1 Commissioner Durward Wright said after the emergency session had run its course.

"Whatever they recommend, I'm going to go for — just like the law allows," said Wright, who had been silent throughout most of the discussion.

Prospective jurors in Midland County traditionally have been selected at random from a mechanical jury wheel located on the third floor of the courthouse. However, the three state district judges started looking into an alternate method of selecting jury panels from the county's 32,700 registered voters after irregularities in the care of the jury wheel recently were uncovered.

The new proposals, drafted by 142nd District Court Judge Perry D. Pickett, calls for storing names of registered voters by Western Data Services, Inc., of Waxahachie. Then, in the presence of the appropriate officials, a random drawing of jury panels would be made every four months.

The typed names of the three district judges — Pickett, Barbara G. Culver of the 318th court and Vann Culp of the 238th court — were on the proposals, but no signatures were affixed to the recommended jury-selection plan.

The commissioners agreed to resume the emergency session after they have the judges' signed recommendations.

Prior to recessing, the commissioners asked District Clerk Midge Wallis, who is charged with safe-keeping of the jury wheel, her preference in a jury-panel selection system.

"I would prefer that we pick the juries at random by electronic means," she said. "This is more fair to the voters and to the people of Midland... at this time."

County Judge Blake Hansen, presiding over the commissioners' court, said the per-name cost under the present jury-wheel system is "three or four cents" and that the cost under the electronic plan would be 20 cents.

Last year, approximately 9,000 names were picked from the jury wheel.

"Why don't we continue what we have always done?" asked Precinct 4

Commissioner Win Brown. Charlie Welch, commissioner of Precinct 2, said he preferred the old jury-wheel system. "I don't think there's any fairer way than the (mechanical) jury wheel," Welch said. "I don't see how a machine (computer) could be fair."

Senate signals carriers' end, asks that one more be built

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, signaling an end to the era of giant aircraft carriers, still wants one more large-deck ship built.

The Senate on Tuesday joined the House in voting for a $2 billion nuclear-powered carrier the Carter administration opposes.

But at the same time, the Senate approved a policy statement requiring that future carriers be substantially smaller and less costly than the current fleet of large nuclear- and oil-powered carriers.

While the House did not include such a statement in its bill, it did say that only one more large carrier — the nuclear-powered ship — is planned for the fleet.

The carrier issue was part of a $36 billion weapons authorization bill approved by the Senate, 87-2. The House has passed a weapons bill authorizing $38 billion in spending, and differences between the two versions will have to be ironed out by Senate and House negotiators.

The administration had requested spending authorization for $35.4 billion. The two votes against the Senate bill were cast by Republican Mark Hatfield of Oregon and Democrat William Proxmire of Wisconsin.

The major theme of the Senate debate was the future of the Navy and the type of ships it would use to carry planes at sea.

"The day of the carrier has passed," said Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., called large carriers "helpless dinosaurs in the ocean," vulnerable to attack by missiles or aircraft. Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, said the Soviet Union keeps a constant watch on the location of American carriers and the ships "may last only 10 minutes in the outbreak of war."

LCRA attorney voices opposition to Stacy Dam

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—The attorney for the proposed Stacy Reservoir on the upper Colorado River started Lower Colorado River Authority attorneys Tuesday by asserting at the beginning of a Texas Water Commission hearing that the project could legally take water away from the LCRA.

The LCRA is opposing the West Texas project because the authority asserts there is not enough unappropriated water in the river to fill the project.

Frank Booth, representing the project sponsor, the Colorado River Municipal Water District, (CRMWD) remarked in his opening statement, however, that if there were insufficient water, the sponsors would seek LCRA irrigation water for the higher priority municipal use.

Booth cited a 1931 state law known as the Wagstaff Act which holds that municipal needs could take precedence over existing water permits.

Booth also questioned the legal right of the LCRA to claim a priority for water it sells to the Gulf Coast Irrigation Company.

LCRA attorney Fred Werkinthin complained that the opening statement was the first time Booth had mentioned the Wagstaff Act and questioned the claimed municipal use of the 113,000 acre-foot Stacy project.

Werkinthin argued one of the major forces behind the project is Texas Utilities Services Inc., which plans to build a power plant to use a portion of the water. Booth said that 25,000 acre-feet would be used for industrial purposes, but Werkinthin asserted that the power plant would use 40,000 acre-feet.

In addition, Werkinthin pointed out that it is the CRMWD filing the application — not the cities served by the district, now or in the future.

These objections were echoed by other downstream protesters, including the City of Austin, which claimed the reservoir would harm the city's ability to serve its citizens.

Booth claimed, though, that there is enough water in the river to supply the project. To back his assertion he introduced two water availability studies by the Texas Department of Water Resources and by the engineering firm of Freese and Nichols, Inc. which was hired by the CRMWD.

The TDWR study predicts shortages of water with the Stacy Reservoir in place, but said municipal needs could be met.

The Freese and Nichols study concludes that there is enough water to meet current and future demands.

Booth also called Owen Ivey, general manager of the CRMWD, to testify on the need for the water in the West Texas area and the rate of growth of those needs.

Werkinthin objected, however, saying that Ivey's testimony would be mere hearsay, and that he could not say what future city needs would be.

Commission Chairman Joe C. Carter allowed the testimony to be considered as Ivey's opinion, while observing, "I haven't talked to any one yet from West Texas who didn't have the opinion they were going to run out of water next week."

Commission member Joe Carroll, of Snyder, added, "and they're generally right."

Ivey said 88 percent of the CRMWD available water is now being utilized, and that by 1990, meeting water requirements would be "nip and tuck."

The Commission planned to hear further testimony today and Thursday and the last three days of next week.

Health planning workshop set at regional airport

The Permian Basin Health Systems Agency will conduct a Health Planning Workshop starting at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the conference room of the West Texas Education Building at Midland Regional Airport.

The workshop will try to establish the direction for development of the Permian Basin Health Systems Plan for the year running from May 1978-May 1979. The two-hour session also will emphasize the responsibility of those involved in the health planning process.

Participating will be the PHSA governing body members and the planning task force members who worked in developing this year's plan.

Task forces are set up in the areas of perinatal, emergency medical services, heart, cancer, communicable diseases, drug abuse, mental health, alcoholism, mental retardation, end-stage renal disease, dental health, rehabilitation and environment.

The workshop is open to any resident of the Permian Basin who would like to work on a task force, said a spokesman. Anyone who is interested in serving on a task force may obtain further information by writing to the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency, P.O. Box 6091, Midland, or telephoning 565-1063.

Diving chamber to aid research

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Southwest Research Institute engineers are readying a new deep diving research facility, a submarine-sized chamber that can be used for simulated dives to ocean depths as great as 3,000 feet.

If you think that sounds a little deep, you're right. It's 1,000 feet deeper than a diver has ever gone in such a chamber and 2,000 feet deeper than any open-sea dive.

"It is the only man-rated civilian chamber of its depth rating in the United States, to my knowledge," said George Wille, engineer in charge of the program at SWRI.

The chamber, designed, constructed and tested by SWRI, is being installed for research at the Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C.

The facility will significantly extend hyperbaric research capabilities beyond Duke's present depth simulation limit of 1,000 feet.

Made of submarine grade HY-300 steel, the chamber consists of a sphere almost eight feet across, sitting atop an upright cylindrical "wet pot" six feet in diameter. It is designed to operate at pressures to 1,000 pounds per square inch.

Experimental divers, SWRI officials said, have reached the equivalent of about 2,000 feet in a chamber and have gone to depths of 1,000 feet in the open sea. They said 1,000-foot dives are relatively recent and most dives are to lesser depths.

But the efforts to find and develop offshore oil and natural gas resources have helped provide impetus for the study of ways divers can live and work at even greater depths.

Capabilities of the new chamber will permit investigations into many questions affecting the physical and emotional health of deep sea divers.

Researchers hope to determine safe compression and decompression procedures for very deep dives and further investigate medical disorders, such as the high pressure nervous syndrome that causes dizziness, nausea, vomiting, tremors and brain wave irregularities in divers.

Duke's F.G. Hall Laboratory for Environmental Research is widely known for its work in diving research and medical research involving the application of oxygen at low or high pressures. Duke's six-chamber hyperbaric unit went into service in 1968.

The new chamber, designed to accommodate two-man teams of divers, will be attached to the existing facility so that living quarters can be provided during protracted experimental dives.

Deep sea divers, SWRI officials explained, often spend several days in a diving bell to complete a job at great depths. They must remain at that pressure during that time, even after being brought out of the water each night, because the lengthy decompression procedure is impossible to repeat each day.

Black art adorns Texas Southern University walls

By SUSAN LINNEE

HOUSTON (AP) — Their first assignment was to brighten the walls of the one-room art department. They painted murals.

And over the past 29 years, generations of art students at Texas Southern University have covered the walls with the story of their lives and times.

Although the murals in Hannah Hall, the school's administration building, are not always in chronological sequence, they are an expression of the artistic and social consciousness of black students, many of whom came from dirt-poor rural backgrounds and had never had formal training in art.

John Biggers, a young black painter influenced by the Mexican muralists, started the department in 1949. Decoration was not the main purpose of the murals, he said. Rather it was more important "to create an atmosphere and a much-needed identity" in an environment indifferent to black cultural awareness and hostile to the notion of Negro art.

"If education deals with honesty, then this experience has been one of people coming back to what had been taken away from them," Biggers said. "Many of our students had never seen anyone paint a picture before. But each has to do a mural before graduating."

One of the earliest murals depicts the development of black education. It was painted by Abraham Washington in 1952, two years before the Supreme Court decision declaring an end to school segregation.

The central figure in the mural is Booker T. Washington. On his left recently freed slaves come into contact with formal education through the Freedman's Bureau, while on his right, row upon row of black doctors and lawyers emerge from Greek-columned buildings.

Most of the murals depict civil rights themes that reflect a growing militancy and disenchantment among black students.

One, "Campus Life: Turmoil of the 60s" by Maurice Ellison, shows young blacks interposed with American flags, eagles and skulls and Richard Nixon. Two posters read: "America doesn't want her black citizens. You see it from her treatments," and

"Black people please wake up."

Harry Vital, a former student who now teaches mural painting, said the biggest difference between TSU art students today and those in the late 1950s and '60s is their lack of direct experience with nature and rural settings.

"Dr. Biggers always stressed the importance of our rural backgrounds," he said. "Now a lot of the kids have never seen a horse or a rooster."

Biggers, a noted muralist, painter and author, said increasing urbanization is having a profound effect on his students.

"Kids today are more chaotic. The whole ghetto thing is putting them out of touch with their earth and their beginnings," he said.

Art and technology came into conflict one day in 1976 when several students rushed in to tell Biggers some men with sledgehammers were knocking down the murals. School officials had decided to install a computer center, he said, and wanted to replace the wall with glass.

"Black college administrators have historically not been interested in art," he said. "They didn't see it as a way for black students to make any money."

The destruction of several murals, without the knowledge of the art department, is still a sore point at the predominantly black school. But Biggers and others took it as a sign they had to move ahead with a project to document the development of the department.

"Black Art in Houston: The Texas Southern University Experience" tells the story of the struggle to encourage students to come to terms with their heritage long before searching for roots was a popular thing to do.

Published by Texas A&M Press and sponsored by Houston art patron Susan McAshan, the book contains photographs of the murals that were destroyed and some of those remaining as well as works by Biggers and his students.

Other survivors include a sister, Amber Marie Lopez of Midland; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Trinidad Lopez and Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Podzemny, all of Amarillo; his great-grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Otto Podzemny of Amarillo, and several aunts and uncles.

Social Security
ripoffs now rare

BALTIMORE (AP) — Social Security Administration officials, smarting from criticism of the security of their files on 170 million Americans, say computer crime and ripoffs by employees have been a rarity.

The agency, which has 85,000 workers, found only 14 cases last year and 19 this year in which its employees made false claims or engaged in other frauds with Social Security computers, Don I. Workman, the acting commissioner, said Tuesday. None involved large sums, he added.

The SSA already has installed some of the safeguards in its massive computer system that the General Accounting Office said it lacked, and the agency is gearing up to add more safety features later this year, Workman said.

The agency paid out $103 billion in benefits last year to 33 million people who were retired on Social Security, disabled, on Medicare or welfare, or to their survivors.

Workman said that despite the enormity of that sum, most of the monthly benefit checks that flow out of his agency are for small amounts — $254 for the average retired worker or $284 for a poor couple receiving Supplemental Security Income benefits.

explode

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Homemade bombs exploded in Managua and several other cities during the night following three days of anti-government protests in which nine persons were killed and 41 were injured.

Four demonstrators were hurt in fist fights with soldiers in Estelí, 90 miles north of Managua, the Red Cross reported.

Troops also fired over protesters' heads and threw tear gas grenades at demonstrators in Rivas in the south and in Leon in the east, but no injuries were reported.

Federal guidelines disturb board president

By ED TODD

Trustees of the Midland Independent School District on Tuesday tabled a motion to modify the wording of a proposal, addressed to the federal government, on providing bilingual education for students with limited English-speaking abilities (LESA).

The Midland public schools already provide such services, primarily to Spanish-speaking pupils, but the mode of teaching falls short of guidelines set up by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"It disturbs me," Board President Johnny Warren said, "that the government, with nobody complaining, comes in and tells us we're not doing a satisfactory job."

The Midland school system is one of about 60 Texas independent school districts threatened with losing grants under the Emergency School Aid Act (ESAA) if they do not conform to HEW guidelines.

Grain storage subject to new federal rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor blamed business. Business blamed government. And government announced a new set of regulations as the International Symposium on Grain Elevator Explosions concluded its first day of meetings.

Since 1976, explosions have rocked 43 grain elevators in this country, killing 65 and injuring 179 others.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture P.K. "Bobby" Smith announced Tuesday the USDA will require elevator operators to submit detailed safety and maintenance plans for each facility.

"The submission and implementation of these plans will be a condition of receiving and keeping weighing and inspection services," warned Smith who added: "It is our objective that these plans be developed and implemented by mutual cooperation between the industry and USDA."

John E. Albertson, safety director of the American Federation of Government Employees which includes federal grain inspectors, lauded the USDA announcement while blasting the elevator operators.

"Just like any other business, when profits are big, safety can become a nuisance and the international grain industry is extremely profitable, to the tune of hundreds of millions of dollars," he said. "The tragic statistics — 50 injured, 50 dead, 13 of the dead federal grain inspectors, 23 explosions in a period of 20 months — bear out the fact that safety has received scant attention by the industry."

Probably all of the 89 export elevators overseen by the USDA will comply with the USDA wishes, said James Maness, one of the industry spokesmen taking part in the two-day symposium.

But government and business spokesmen differed on the future treatment of grain dust — the volatile, flammable particles of grain that haunt most elevators and are one of the chief catalysts in most explosions. In most American grain elevators, the dust is re-introduced into the grain as it travels through the elevator to maintain weight.

Industry spokesmen are split on the grain dust question, realizing the dollars that will be lost if dust is prohibited from re-entry.

The Midland school district, to operate under a $25.8-million budget in the 1978-79 school year, has applied for $325,000 under ESAA.

Trustee Ann Page expressed concern that a teacher's switching languages for the benefit of a few in a classroom would not serve to "enrich" the education of all students.

"I would think the parents in this community are going to be upset about this, and I don't blame them," she said.

However, Bill Cormack, coordinator for fine arts and migrant programs, said that the HEW guidelines allow for limited but separate facilities for those deficient in English.

"They told us that we could segregate the students for no longer than two periods" without violating their civil rights. Those periods primarily would be set aside for "language arts" instruction.

"It's not going to force Spanish on English-speaking students," Trustee Joe Dominey said of the normally integrated classroom situation.

More than 1,300 of Midland's approximately 15,000 public school students have been identified as LESA students.

"She (the bilingual teacher) is supposed to be teaching in Spanish to teach the students English as soon as possible," Cormack said.

Cormack noted that most LESA students are concentrated in the primary grades. And, concerning the bilingual classes, he seemed to address himself to Mrs. Page's concern over classroom enrichment.

"We're not going to be enriching students," he said. "We're going to be 'bilingualing'."

The school board is to act on the proposal, to be revised by Schools Superintendent Dr. James Mailey and his staff, in its July 25 meeting.

Trustee Ed Runyan, who had made the motion to table action on the bilingual plan, said the board was "under a lot of pressure to meet a nebulous situation . . . in chasing some money we might or might not get."

In other business, the trustees:

—Considered the premise, submitted by controllers of two downtown Midland banks, that the tax assessment on "monied capital" is too high.

"Monied capital is taxed differently, and it (in banks) is the only monied capital in this city that is taxes," said Bob Jones, vice president and controller of The Midland National Bank. "Savings and loans are not taxed." The board told Jones and Dan Mitchell, controller for The First National Bank, that any lowering of the taxes on monied capital should be taken up with the Midland City Council.

—Took notice of a projection by Don Furgeson, the schools' business manager, that the school district would have a $300,000 surplus at end of the 1977-78 school year.

—Approved a 10 percent cost-of-living pay increase for the system's non-professional employees, including secretaries, clerks, grounds keepers, maintenance personnel, cafeteria workers and others. "That's not much money," said Warren, as he looked over the salary and wage schedules.

—Approved pay hikes for administrators and postponed action on raising Mailey's salary. The top pay approved by the trustees ranged from raises of $29,179 to $32,097 annually each for Assistant Superintendents Douglas Brown and Garland Chapman. Low-end of the administrative pay raise was from $17,020 to $20,640 for Wilson Heidelberg, purchasing agent.

—Awarded KBAT and KCBS radio stations contracts to broadcast Midland High and Robert E. Lee High schools football games for the upcoming season.

Airlines' 'strike benefit' fund under fire

WASHINGTON (AP)

—The airline industry's 19-year-old "strike benefit" fund is under fire from lawmakers fed up with the Northwest Orient Airlines shutdown that has disrupted the nation's air traffic since April.

"We're getting awfully tired of this strike," says Sen. John Melcher, whose Montana constituents depend heavily on Northwest. "The airline has an economic crutch for extended strikes. If they can't end the strike, we ought to take away the crutch."

The "crutch" is the industry's Mutual Aid Pact, which provides an airline with a generous revenue cushion during a strike. Northwest receives 35 percent of its normal operating expenses from the fund, set up with 15 other airlines. As of today, Northwest mutual aid benefits are believed to total $76.4 million.

Tougher banking bill before House

WASHINGTON (AP) — With its progress hastened by the Bert Lance case, legislation designed to toughen regulation of banking is out of committee and before the full House.

The measure cleared the House Banking Committee on Tuesday after a year of work.

The bill deals with overdrafts and other transactions that led to government investigations of Lance, the former budget director who once headed banks in Georgia.

The measure would prohibit overdrafts by major stockholders and bank executives and limit their borrowing to 10 percent of a bank's capital. Public disclosures of loans would be required.

says that the Mutual Aid Pact "has served to prolong the strike at Northwest Airlines." Northwest officials say the pact is the industry's version of strike benefits, noting that the pilots' union runs a similar mutual aid agreement that provides strike benefits of $750 a month.

But a spokeswoman for Sen. Muriel Humphrey told a reporter that the comparison is unfair because the industry agreement allows the company to make a profit, eliminating the economic hardship on shareholders.

A strike by Northwest pilots began April 29. The company is known for its long, often bitter labor disputes, and an official at a competitive airline said Tuesday, "This one could end tomorrow, next year, or never."

shareholders. The letters to the CAB were drafted by Democratic members of the Minnesota delegation — Sens. Humphrey and Wendell Anderson and Reps. Donald Fraser and Bruce Vento.

Other signatures came from lawmakers from Alaska, California, Florida, Illinois, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Montana, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

The airlines seeking extension of the pact include the nation's largest domestic carrier, United Airlines, which operates along several of Northwest's routes.

United spokesman Jim Linse, recalling a 16-day machinists strike in 1975, says, "It's our experience that there's no way to cover all the losses" through mutual aid payments. In 1975, he said, United received payments of $48 million and incurred a loss during the month of the strike of $20.7 million.

Northwest may fare better than that, however. In 1970, the airline turned a $44 million profit despite a 160-day strike. Its mutual aid benefits totaled $47 million.

Wedding vows pledged in Ardmore ceremony

ARDMORE, Okla.—St. Phillips Episcopal Church here was the setting for the marriage at 10 a.m. July 4 of Barbara Ann Randolph and Jack Hunter Hitt. Officiating was the Rev. Daniel Leen.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Randolph of Ardmore are parents of the bride. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack L. Hitt of Edmond, formerly of Midland, Texas.

After a trip to Cozumel, Mexico, the couple will reside in Ardmore. Sally Hibbs of Oklahoma City was maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Karyn Wellhousen of Tulsa and Mandy Hitt of Edmond, the bridegroom's sister.

Spike Jackson of Norman was best man. Groomsmen were Lee Graves and Peter Graves, both of Oklahoma City.

Ushers were Charlie Hejl of Austin, Texas, the bridegroom's brother-in-law, and Jesse Davis of Fayetteville, Arkansas.

John Randolph was acolyte. Lewis Randolph and Jeffrey Randolph were candlelighters.

Music for the single ring ceremony was furnished by Shirley Rawlins, organist.

Mr. Randolph presented his daughter in marriage. She wore a princess style gown of antique white silk organza with lace trim. Her bouquet was made up of off-white cymbidium orchids and stephanotis intertwined with English ivy.

The reception was held in the Parish Hall at the church.

The bride attended the University of Oklahoma, where the bridegroom was graduated.

Engagement announced

Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Wright Jr. of 1613 N. H St. announce the engagement of their daughter, Shelley Elizabeth Wright, to Thomas Andrew Timko of Irving. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Timko of Lorain, Ohio.

The couple plans to exchange vows at 2 p.m. Aug. 26 in St. Bernard's Catholic Church in Dallas. A solemn engagement mass was held July 1 in Cistercian Abbey in Irving.

Both the bride-elect and prospective bridegroom are graduates of the University of Dallas. Miss Wright is associated with the Dallas Center for the Blind, and her fiancé is employed by Braniff Airlines. Timko plans to attend the University of Dallas for an M.A. degree in literature.

Miss Wright is the granddaughter of Mrs. Fred Wright of Dallas and Mrs. Erle Payne of Midland.

Repair cracked sidewalks for looks, safer surface

COLLEGE STATION—If small cracks in sidewalks are becoming larger or uneven surfaces dangerous, follow a few easy steps to repair them, suggests Pat Seaman, housing and home furnishings specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

To begin repairing cracks in concrete sidewalks, obtain the following:

1. Packaged ready-mixed mortar.
2. Epoxy concrete—"clear" type for narrow cracks and "gray" type for wide cracks and concrete breaks.
3. Wire brush.
4. Pointed trowel and wood float.
5. Heavy-duty paint brush.

Follow these steps to repair the cracks:

1. Caution—repair only when concrete is dry.
2. Chisel out the crack or hole wide under the surface.
3. Clean the concrete surface thoroughly with the wire brush.
4. Mix a batch of mortar according to the directions on the package. Mix in the epoxy concrete with the mortar according to the direction on the epoxy container.

5. Using the trowel, put mixture into the crack.
6. Using the wood float, smooth the mixture even with concrete surface.

7. Clean the tools immediately with paint thinner.

8. Work fast—most epoxies will harden in an hour. If the patch should harden before the operation is completed, apply a second coat and smooth the surface again.

For big cracks, spread the mixture over the full width of the crack until the level of mortar is slightly above the concrete surface.

If repairing a full break in the concrete, use the trowel to force the mortar mixture to the bottom of the break.

According to Ms. Seaman, homeowner benefits from repairing cracks in concrete sidewalks are:

1. A more attractive sidewalk.
2. Prevention of further damage.
3. A safer walking surface.

Mrs. Dale Keys

Mrs. Keyes honored at wedding shower

Mrs. Dale Keys, formerly Diane Saenger, was guest of honor at a wedding shower in the Fellowship Room of Midland Lutheran Church.

Decorations were in blue and white, the honoree's chosen colors. Daisy-mum corsages were presented to the honoree; her mother, Mrs. Albert Saenger, and Mrs. Clint Keys, the bridegroom's mother.

Hostesses were Mmes. Gus Meissner, Floyd Sharp, Kathy Liscum, O. J. Jensen, Robert Christensen, Martin Meissner, Dale Stice, James Perry and Lynn Foster.

Diane Saenger and Dale Keys were married

June 21 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Saenger of Route 3 and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clint Keys, 3706 Cedar Springs Drive.

The bride was graduated from Midland High School. Her husband attended Lee High School.

The couple will reside at 1311-B W. Holloway Ave.

Flyswatter serves as pad when prying up window

By AL CARRELL

Not long ago, we ran some hints in the column about how to unstuck a window that has been painted shut. In case you missed it: First use a knife to cut the paint seal all around, inside and out. Then if it doesn't budge, I suggested using a flat pry bar from the outside. Mrs. B.C.A.

wrote that she didn't have a pry bar, so she came up with her own idea. She did have an old Boy Scout hatchet. She placed the blade along the bottom of the window frame. Then she took a hammer and tapped the hatchet so it was forced under the window. The wedge shape of the hatchet head forced the window up slightly. Then she pulled the handle upward, and the hatchet acted as a lever to open the window. That first window suffered a little damage from the hatchet marring the wood as she pulled the handle. On the rest of the stuck windows, she placed a plastic flyswatter under the tool as a pad, and there were no more scars. Those were two good ideas for window woes.

Dear Al:

You'll like my mixing container for spackling compound. It's a plastic dustpan. It will hold about as much as I can use at one time before it starts to set up. The dustpan should be slightly tipped while mixing so the compound can't run out. Then when it's mixed, the handle of the dustpan lets you carry the mix, and the flat area gives you easy access with a putty knife. After the patching is done, you can hose out the dustpan, and it's back to normal.—S.O.D.

Dear Al:

When regular cleansers won't get stains out of porcelain bath or kitchen surfaces, here's a magic formula that will often work. Make a paste out of cream of tartar and hydrogen peroxide. Cover the stain with this. When dry, the stain will usually rinse away with the dried magic.—N.R.S.

the cans and drop the cups in place. Then cover the patio with AstroTurf, cut out around the holes, and you've got your own patio-putting green. But figure out how to cover those holes when you're going to have a few friends over for drinks. (My ankle is better now.)

Dear Al:

When we got back from our vacation, our car had black specks of tar all over the front end. The trip through the car wash didn't do anything to those spots or some of the other road dirt. My neighbor brought over a container of kerosene and had me rub the spots with this. It took all the tar, bugs and other stuff off with just one application. Maybe this will help others who are getting back from a road trip.—D.D.U.

Just remember that kerosene is a highly flammable substance and care should be used when working with it.

SHOP TALK—When my greenhanded wife, Jean, waters the hanging baskets in the house, water can run out on the rug. She puts a towel down until the dripping stops. However, I just saw a gadget that will save the rug and stop her having to run towels through the washing machine. It's a wide plastic drip pan that has wire hooks which can be attached to any size pot. It hangs under the pot and catches all the water, and then can be moved to another plant. Since it's a new product, I think I'll just make her a couple so I won't have to wait until these clever, yet simple, floor savers hit the retail market.

Local Girl Scouts to begin day camp

Midland Girl Scouts are hard at work on preparations for their day camp program, "Ramble in a Whole New World," to be held July 31 through August 4, from 8:30 a.m. until 2 p.m. The day camp site will be at the new Girl Scout Program Center, 901 W. Dengar.

Both Girl Scouts and non-Girl Scouts, ages six and over, are invited to attend.

The deadline for registration is July 21. Registration forms may be picked up at the Program Center or registration can be done in person on Friday, July 14, at the Program Center.

The fee for Girl Scouts is $6 and $7 for non-Girl Scouts. The additional dollar for non-Girl Scouts is for special insurance. The fee pays for activity supplies and a day camp patch.

"We are aiming our program at learning and improving outdoor skills," says Joan O'Grady, assistant director, "with lots of games, songs, and new experiences."

Crosby widow writing book on life with Bing

By HANK WESCH

Copley News Service Kathryn Crosby is working on a book about her 20 years of married life with Bing. Tentative title — "It Was A Very Good Round."

She may be hard pressed to come up with a better or more appropriate one.

Golf was always more than a game to Bing. To 16-year-old Nathaniel Crosby, it may become a way of life.

And Kathryn, Bing's widow and Nathaniel's mother, has found the game becoming an integral part of her existence also. Compared to the other two she's a relative newcomer to the game, and her course skills are admittedly modest.

But she's a Crosby, and there's tradition to uphold. She's doing Bing, her son, and herself proud.

Kathryn says that while her skills may not be appreciable, the game means a great deal to her.

"I feel cheated for the 18 years of my life that I didn't play."

"At that time men didn't play with women," she says. "If you're not invited to the party, you don't go. You find something else to do, but it's terrific if you get invited."

Kathryn being invited to any party seems almost inconceivable. But when it came to certain exclusive golf courses she wasn't the only one.

"I feel sorry for great women professionals like Mickey Wright," she said. "She's won 85 tournaments but never had the opportunity to play Pebble Beach in tiger condition. That's a real shame."

"Happily, much of that is changing. So much happened so quickly, I'm glad I have had an opportunity to play at some courses that women couldn't before. I'm glad Bing and I did get to play together."

They played a round last summer over one of England's most respected tracks.

"My first shot went straight to the gorse

(juniper rough)," she recalls. "Bing had a special club for getting out of it but I didn't know about the club and he didn't tell me. I was so nervous after that start I had a bad front nine, but I shot 40 on the back nine."

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RITCHER

(Thurs., July 13)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Not a good time to take any chances as your judgment is not apt to be good right now. Wait for another day to make long-range plans that pertain to your advancement and future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) The situation at home could be tiring so do what you can to clear up any misunderstandings first. Show that you are of an open mind and accept good ideas.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are confused by ideas of friends right now, but later you will comprehend them and will cooperate with them.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take care you do not invest unwisely. Get that talent working more intelligently by thought and practice. Be happy with loved ones.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A new project may be slow in starting, but later you make up for lost time. Show you are efficient.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Wait for a better time to have that talk with partners and avoid tensions. Tune up your health and get routine affairs working better.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact those persons with whom you want to have business dealings and come to a fine understanding with them. Make property more valuable by making needed repairs. Get right prices.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) Improve your health and you improve your appearance. Meet with a group of good friends and talk over mutual ideas. Something good can come of this.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21) Not a very good time for any work of an investigative nature. Meet with a good friend for a happy time together.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study your friendships and know which to cultivate and which to weed out. Make new ones, too. Join a group later where you can have the kind of recreation you like.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find a better method for handling vocational and social duties and take care of them quickly. The evening is especially good for advancing your career, when a fine opportunity presents itself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle the details of a trip you want to take and count the cost well. Get correspondence out. Take no chances in payment of bills.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You feel stymied about a bill you have to pay, but later you see your way clear to do so. Handle a business matter wisely, also. Cement better relations with loved ones.

Heart surgeon expresses belief in euthanasia

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It seems a strange subject for Christiaan Barnard, the man who held human hearts in his hands and made medical history with the renewed life he brought through transplants.

The subject is death, more specifically, Barnard's quiet, personal campaign to legalize euthanasia — mercy killing.

"It's important to realize," says Barnard, "that death is sometimes good medical treatment. Sometimes it achieves what medicine cannot achieve — it stops suffering."

He pauses. It is a sunny morning on the tree-shaded patio of a luxurious hotel. Birds sing. How can one think of death?

"We shouldn't consider death as an enemy always," Barnard says. "We should consider it as an ally."

Barnard, the brilliant South African surgeon who pioneered heart transplants, was here to talk about his novel, "In The Night Season." It is about a surgeon — and about euthanasia.

It is a different Christiaan Barnard who is speaking, not the confident medical pioneer. At 55, he weeps in recalling the moment he cut out the beating heart of an ape. His hands are crippled by arthritis.

"I've become softer as I've grown older," he confides. "Working with animals gives me tremendous emotional pain.... I don't think I could be forced to take out the heart of a chimp again."

He holds out the hands that deftly transplanted hearts and he speaks of the arthritis. "I'm never really physically well," says Barnard. "I have pain all the time. It's sapped my energy. I've lost that tremendous drive.... I've made the decision that I will stop active surgery at the end of this year."

Barnard is not the usual author-on-tour, either. "I must confess I have forgotten exactly what I wrote in the book," he says at the outset. But the book's subject is very much in mind. It is the focus of his deepest thoughts.

The protagonist of his novel is a doctor who finds that the woman he loves has breast cancer which has invaded her whole body. He decides not to tell her. Ultimately, he faces lawsuits and the moral crisis of whether to help her die.

Barnard has thought about euthanasia for years and made headlines in his native South Africa when it was learned that he and his brother have a death pact. If one brother should be incapacitated — a vegetable kept alive by machines — the other brother would kill him.

Euthanasia — another word for murder? Perhaps. "But there are degrees of murder," says Barnard.

"The primary goal of medicine is to improve the quality of life," says Barnard, "to alleviate suffering."

This, he notes, was the purpose of heart transplants.

"These operations I do are never intended just to prolong life — but to improve the quality of life for the patients."

Even those who died after a few months or years had renewed vigor in the time they survived, he says.

But the man who advocates mercy killing now regrets killing a baboon and a chimp whose hearts he implanted in two patients to aid their damaged hearts. The technique failed and Barnard has abandoned it.

"I stopped that not because I'm so convinced I'm on the wrong track," he says. "But I got emotionally involved with the chimp."

Two of the animals had been flown in from Holland for Barnard's use.

"At first I said, 'Human life is more important.' But then I went to see the two chimps. God, they were so much like human beings!"

"They told me that when one was taken away the other cried so much," he says. "His blue eyes cloud with pain. The expected cool detachment of the surgeon is absent."

"I often cry," he says. "Sometimes that is embarrassing. But I'm made that way. To me, the death of a patient is very traumatic."

Yet, he would kill in hopeless cases if it was legal.

Barnard stresses he has never practiced mercy killing because it is illegal. He believes the law will someday change and doctors will be permitted to stop treatment "when the treatment serves only one purpose — and that is to prolong the suffering of the patient."

The question arises — does Barnard's view of euthanasia encompass belief in an afterlife?

"I would like to believe in it," he says quietly. "I do believe there is some higher force or power that has created this wonderful human being and this world we live in. I do believe life is like energy. It is indestructible."

"In what form my life will continue I don't know," he says quietly. "whether I will be a cat or a tree or light. But I believe life will continue."

He stares into space for a moment, lost in thought.

"We must not think anything is impossible because a human brain cannot grasp it," he says finally. "I believe there is something like infinity — things which do not end."

Judge says man has right to 'pull plug'

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A 73-year-old physical fitness fanatic suffering from "Lou Gehrig disease" has the right to have himself disconnected from the respirator keeping him alive, a judge says.

An assistant state attorney said Tuesday's ruling, which is not to take effect for 10 days, will be appealed to the 4th District Court.

Judge John G. Ferris issued the order less than two weeks after making a bedside visit to Abe Perlmutter, who argued it was an invasion of privacy to deny him the right to order the respirator disconnected.

The former New York City cabdriver, who friends say swam, played handball and led group exercises every day at a retirement community near here, had begged doctors to allow him to die.

When he visited Perlmutter, Ferris asked if he knew the consequences of disconnecting the respirator.

"It can't be worse than what I'm going through now," Perlmutter replied.

Perlmutter was stricken two years ago by the disease that killed baseball star Lou Gehrig — amyotrophic lateral sclerosis. His lungs deteriorated and he was hospitalized at Florida Medical Center in Lauderdale Lakes in May.

The respirator was connected May 18. Doctors say he would die within an hour if it were disconnected.

Perlmutter, who has been ruled "mentally competent," jerked the respirator tube out of his windpipe soon after it was connected. An alarm summoned nurses, and his arms were strapped down after he continued to pull out the tube. Perlmutter then sued.

The state attorney's office contended that anyone unplugging the respirator would be aiding "self-murder" and would be guilty of manslaughter under Florida law.

However, Ferris ruled: "The fallacy of the state's position is that the termination of such extraordinary treatment is not homicide (and therefore not 'self-murder'), but is the result of the free exercise of the constitutional right of privacy. It naturally follows that the death that ensues is expiration of natural causes and not an unlawful homicide."

Ferris quoted liberally from the Karen Ann Quinlan case in his ruling. The comatose Miss Quinlan was disconnected from life-supporting machines after the New Jersey Supreme Court gave its approval. The young woman is still alive in a New Jersey hospital.

Perlmutter was not immediately informed of Ferris' ruling. His attorney, David Holmes, said he thinks the case is unprecedented because the patient in the suit has remained conscious.

The only other such "right-to-die" case in Florida involved a 26-year-old Jacksonville woman who lapsed into a coma after a hysterectomy. In that case, Celia Cain's brain was dead, and a judge ordered the respirator disconnected for 45 minutes. Her heart stopped beating in 13 minutes.

Bodies of three crew members recovered from hotel rubble

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) — Searchers recovered three bodies after the four-story, 65-year-old Denver Hotel collapsed during preparation for demolition and buried a work crew in bricks and concrete, but a fourth man was still missing.

After working through the night, exhausted workers early today called a halt in their search of the rubble of the landmark hotel for the missing man so they could rest.

Three bodies were taken from the ruins Tuesday evening, including that of Weldon Johnston of Webberville, owner of Johnston's Used Building Materials and Demolition, which was preparing to bulldoze the building Sunday.

Johnston headed a five-man crew that was weakening the abandoned structure's support columns when it collapsed without warning, spilling debris into an adjacent street and covering several unoccupied cars.

One worker, Roy Turner, was thrown clear of the falling debris and later helped search the jumbled heap for the bodies of his co-workers.

Johnston was killed when a huge slab of concrete crushed him. His body was found quickly. The bodies of Sylvester Castro and an unidentified man were uncovered later Tuesday night. The identity of the missing man was not released.

The four-story brick building had been closed since 1971. A Victoria bank purchased the building earlier this year and had contracted for its demolition.

"There was a rumble... just a rumble," said Manuel Villareal, who was buying some fixtures from the hotel and had left moments before it collapsed. "The... place just caved in. There was no time for the people inside to get out."

Firemen, police officers, sheriff's deputies and volunteers used front-end loaders to peel away the rubble to get at the bodies.

Immunization against polio still advised

SAN BENITO, Texas (AP) — U.S. tourists planning to cross the Rio Grande should be sure their polio immunization is still effective, a county health official here warns.

Dr. Verne Goerger of the Cameron County Health Department said an outbreak of polio in northern Mexico could cause problems for tourists.

He said reports from Mexico indicate a "considerable amount" of polio has been reported in that nation's northern sector, and has caused several deaths.

Trial begins on federal funds abuse

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors say they will show that Harlingen-based union official Don Gray received $20,000 in federal Manpower funds and divided the money with his brother and two Hidalgo County anti-poverty agency officials.

Testimony in Gray's trial begins in state district court here today before a jury that was seated Monday by Judge Harry Lewis. Lewis ordered the trial moved here from Brownsville.

Gray, one of nine Rio Grande Valley residents still under indictment for abuse of federal funds, is the first person to stand trial. Indictments earlier were dropped against seven persons.

Gray, business manager of the Harlingen-based Plumbers and Pipefitters Union Local 823, is being tried on five of 29 theft indictments returned by a grand jury following a controversial Cameron County court of inquiry December and January.

The five indictments center around two contracts Gray negotiated between the Plumbers Union and the Associated City-County Economic Development Corp. in Hidalgo County.

He is charged with stealing $20,000 in agency funds which were targeted as payment to the union for a study examining migrant worker problems in South Texas.

A source close to prosecutor Joe K. Hendley said the state would show that checks issued in $5,000 installments were cashed by Gray and divided among himself, his brother Clarence and two Hidalgo County officials.

One of the prosecution's first witnesses was expected to be Eliseo Sandoval, the former director of the anti-poverty agency who approved the contract.

Sandoval, also indicted in Brownsville, was granted state immunity in return for his testimony. Prosecutors said he will testify that he received a $5,000 kickback from Gray.

The prosecutors say Nick Ramirez, the former director of the Hidalgo County Manpower agency, is the fourth individual who received a portion of the $20,000.

Gray's brother, Clarence, is the director of the South Texas Building Trades Education Services Inc., a Harlingen trade school that received federal and state funds for on-the-job training programs.

Sandoval, who also has agreed to cooperate with federal investigators in their related cases, pleaded guilty Tuesday in U.S. District Court at Brownsville to two charges of misusing federal funds. He had been named in eight federal indictments on 40 counts.

Federal prosecutors said the remaining charges against Sandoval would be dropped if he continued to cooperate in their investigation.

After making his plea, Sandoval was returned to Corpus Christi to help state prosecutors.

Family gathers, pays tribute

POCANTICO HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Survivors of John D. Rockefeller 3rd gathered today at the family estate to pay tribute to the eldest grandson of the founder of the Rockefeller fortune.

Condolences streamed in for the 72-year-old Rockefeller, who was killed instantly near the family compound here Monday evening when a car driven by a 16-year-old student driver, David Low, of Briarcliff Manor, sideswiped one car and then crashed head-on into the car driven by Rockefeller's secretary, Monica Lesko, 38.

Low also was killed and Miss Lesko and the woman driver of the sideswiped car were injured.

Among those offering sympathy Tuesday were President Carter, Vice President Walter Mondale and West Virginia's two senators, Robert Byrd and Jennings Randolph.

Rockefeller's funeral was scheduled for Thursday in Manhattan's Riverside Church, which was built by his father, John D. Rockefeller Jr. Officiating will be the pastor of the interdenominational church, the Rev. William Sloan Coffin Jr., who gained national attention in the 1960s when, as chaplain at Yale University, he was indicted with Dr. Benjamin Spock for anti-Vietnam War activities.

One of five brothers who attained fame as nessmen or philanthropists, Rockefeller was the father of the governor of West Virginia, John D. Rockefeller 4th.

Nelson Rockefeller, former vice president and three-term governor of New York, returned Tuesday from Venezuela, where he was vacationing with his wife, Happy.

Police stations bombed in simultaneous attacks

PADUA, Italy (AP) — Terrorists carried out simultaneous bomb attacks at 1 a.m. today against 10 police stations in and around this northeast Italian city about 25 miles west of Venice, causing slight damage and no injuries, police reported.

Another bomb outside the local prison destroyed a car parked nearby, and police stations at nearby Sarmeola and Battaglia were firebombed from moving cars. Damage was described as light and no injuries were reported.

An anonymous caller told the Italian news agency ANSA the attacks were made by the Worker Communist Organization.

State board reaffirms school accreditations

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The State Board of Education has reaffirmed the accreditation of four school districts in the Midland area.

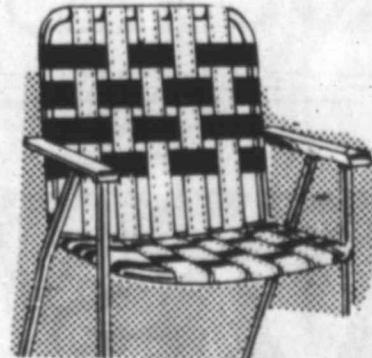

The action of the board was based upon successful completion and approval of five-year priority plans as required in the Texas Education Agency's accreditation planning process.

Reaffirmed were Buena Vista ISD, Monahan-Wickett-Pyote ISD, Pacos-Barstow-Toyal ISD, and Terrell County ISD.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Iron important to young boys, too

Dear Dr. Solomon: Does a growing boy need a lot of iron in his diet? I know that girls and women do, but I didn't think this was true for boys.—D.K.

Dear D.K.: Iron requirements are high for both girls and boys starting about age 10. Of course a girl has a special need after she begins menstruating, because of the monthly loss of blood. But a boy also needs a very good supply of iron during the period when he is growing so much—and so fast.

Interestingly, some surveys show that iron deficiency is greater among boys than girls. At any rate, the Recommended Daily Allowance for both girls and boys over 10 is 18 milligrams. It falls to 10 milligrams for boys after they reach 19. Women continue to need the 18 milligram allowance until menopause.

Good sources of iron include meat, liver, eggs, shrimp, green leafy vegetables, dried beans, nuts, and enriched bread and cereals. Getting enough iron can be a problem for anyone on a vegetarian diet—and since these seem to be popular among young people nowadays, it is something to keep in mind. Iron supplements are often advisable in such

Miniature golf tourney slated

Golfers who prefer a pint-sized golf course can try their luck when the Parks and Recreation Department sponsors a miniature golf tournament at 10 a.m. July 22 at Green Acres Miniature Golf Course on East Highway 80.

The tournament is open to youths age 13 through 17. Pre-registration is required by July 20 and may be completed at Green Acres or the Parks and Recreation Department, 300 Baldwin St.

Entry fee is 50 cents per person and covers the charge for the first two games. Subsequent games will cost 75 cents per person.

Further information about the tournament may be obtained by telephoning Elizabeth Lively, 683-4281, extension 280.

Taylor becomes medical doctor

DALLAS—Kenneth M. Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Taylor of 1610 N. J St. in Midland, recently received an M.D. degree from The University of Texas Southwestern Medical School here.

He plans to complete his internship and residency in OB-Gyn in Memphis, Tenn., and then enter private practice.

cases.

Dear Dr. Solomon: We're having a course in cardiopulmonary resuscitation at our school—for parents and faculty as well as students—and the instructor uses a mannequin to show how it is done. The program is very good, but one thing bothers me. Does a disease like hepatitis ever get spread by a number of people using the mannequin to learn the proper mouth-to-mouth resuscitation technique?—W.K.

Dear W.K.: The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta has some recommendations about precautions that should be taken to reduce any contamination risk. They include following the manufacturers' recommendations carefully; not having anyone with active sores around the mouth or on the hands take part in the demonstrations, using protective face shields and cleaning the mannequin thoroughly. Detailed guidelines can be obtained by writing the Hepatitis Laboratories Division of the Bureau of Epidemiology, CDC, 4402 N. 7th St., Phoenix, Arizona 85014.

Incidentally, the Center says it has received many queries about whether viral hepatitis B—the more serious kind—can be transmitted by the training mannequins. It says the risk seems remote, as no outbreak caused by transmission in this manner has been reported.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

UT graduates area students

AUSTIN—Seven Midland and area town students recently were graduated from The University of Texas at Austin.

Sheri Robin Campbell of Midland received a bachelor of arts degree from the College of Humanities, and Carol Clayton of Lamesa earned a master of business administration from the Graduate School of Business.

Awarded degrees from the College of Fine Arts were Raphael L. Duesing Jr. of Big Lake, bachelor of arts in art, and Rebekah Lynn Durham, bachelor of arts in music. Catherine Signe Culp, bachelor of fine arts, Margaret Anne Griffith, bachelor of fine arts, and Laura Gay Stueckler, bachelor of music with honors, all of Midland.

Proposition 13's author too busy to go to court

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — Proposition 13 author Howard Jarvis is in such demand he can't even find time to appear in court on a drunken driving charge.

The 75-year-old Jarvis arrived for his Monday trial, but was promptly excused so he would not miss a Chicago talk show engagement.

"It's not unusual," Jarvis told reporters as he left Municipal Court. "I'll be back tomorrow unless the airplane lands in Lake Michigan."

Jarvis, who left his lawyer in charge of jury selection, did find time to declare himself innocent of driving while intoxicated. He has pleaded guilty of driving without a valid driver's license.

Jarvis says the charges—which carry a maximum sentence of six months in jail and a $500 fine—have not affected his credibility.

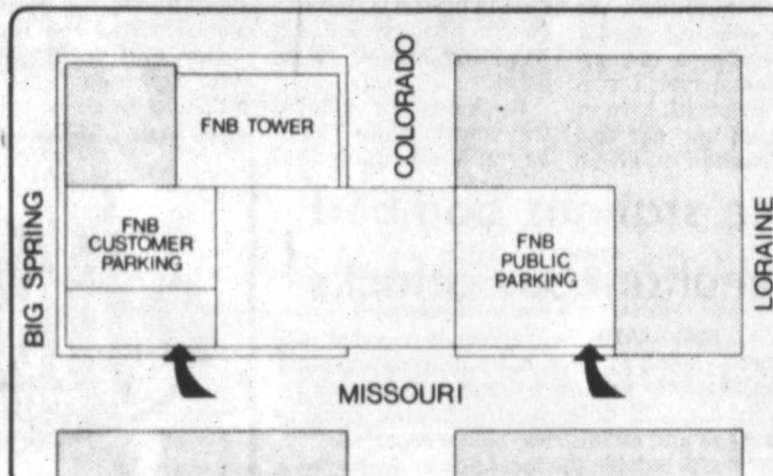

"I was in Michigan the other day," he said. "They were 30,000 signatures short (for a petition seeking a tax-cutting proposition similar to California's) and when I left they had 80,000 extra."

Chad Green ordered to continue therapy

By ABNER KATZMAN

BOSTON (AP) — The state Supreme Court has ordered chemotherapy continued for leukemia-stricken Chad Green and ruled the state can intervene when parents reject the only treatment proven effective.

The ruling Monday, the latest in a six-month court battle, upheld a Plymouth County Superior Court ruling barring Diane and Gerald Green of Scituate from treating their 2-year-old with only a natural food diet.

Claiming the drugs offer a substantial chance of cure with minimal side effects, the Superior Court also had awarded temporary custody of Chad to the Department of Public Welfare to guarantee the treatments are administered.

"While recognizing that there exists a private realm of family life which the state cannot enter," said the Supreme Court decision, "we think that family autonomy is not absolute, and may be limited where, as here, it appears that parental decisions will jeopardize the health or safety of their child."

Congress hopefuls to speak

LUBBOCK — Democratic State Sen. Kent R. Hance and Republican George W. Bush, both candidates for the 19th Congressional District seat, are expected to speak at the second annual High Plains Agribusiness Exposition Aug. 25-27 in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Hance plans to speak on water development and Bush on energy development and needs, both on the second day of the exposition, according to show director Danny J. Cunyus.

Question-and-answer sessions are scheduled to follow each talk.

The exposition will be open to the public, free of charge.

Karate show set

A free martial arts Tae Kwon Do demonstration will be sponsored by the Parks and Recreation Department at 7 p.m. July 19 in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

Demonstrator will be Lee You Sun, who has a seventh degree black belt, and his students from the Big Spring YMCA. He also operates a karate school in Midland.

The demonstration will be open to the public. Further information may be obtained by telephoning Elizabeth Liveley, 683-4281, extension 280.

Singer ill

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — Country music singer Donna Fargo is still suffering a viral illness that makes portions of her body numb. The malady has forced her to cancel a Sept. 14 appearance at the Kansas State Fair, fair secretary Bob Gottschalk said Monday.

No replacement has been named.

"Parental rights ... do not clothe parents with life and death authority over their children," said the opinion written by Chief Justice Edward Hennessey.

In appealing the lower court ruling, the Greens claimed that the chemotherapy treatment administered by Massachusetts General Hospital caused harmful emotional and physical side effects.

Attorney George Donovan of Hull said the Greens would now press a federal court suit against cancer specialist Dr. John Truman of Massachusetts General and the Welfare Department.

U.S. District Judge Edward Caffrey had delayed action on the federal suit until all state appeals were exhausted.

The family claims that forcing the treatment upon their child is a violation of their civil rights.

Medical testimony at the Superior Court trial indicated Chad's chance of survival is over 50 percent if he undergoes a three-year chemotherapy regimen.

Mrs. Green said that nutrition specialists and physicians from around the country will testify on the value of "metabolic" therapy during the federal court proceedings.

Two-year-old Chad Green seems to enjoy a wetting down at his home in Scituate, Mass., following a court decision that chemotherapy will give the child a substantial chance for a cure.

All's well that ends well

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Pawn shop owner Edward Camp got $600 in the mail Monday as payment for three pistols. Nothing unusual there — except that the pistols were stolen in 1975 by a gun-wielding, disguised bandit.

"This is to pay for three guns taken in late June or early July of 1975, for this I am truly sorry," read the note of apology the unidentified, guilt-ridden robber sent with the two $300 checks.

The two cashier checks arrived with the apologetic note. The note had no signature and the plain envelope, postmarked in Boston, Mass., had no return address, just a 15-cent stamp and Camp's address.

"That was three years ago and I still don't believe it," said the stunned Camp. "I pretty well fell through the floor when my shop manager showed me the checks. I was so astonished and bewildered at first that I thought about framing them."

Camp, who has operated the downtown pawn shop since 1941, added, "I've been here all this time and that was the one and only time I've been robbed — well, at least partially."

The former robber might not exactly remember the date, but Camp clearly remembers the June 19, 1975 stickup.

He said the bandit, wearing a stocking over his face, a long wig and false beard and mustache, walked into his shop about 10:15 a.m. while six customers were browsing.

"The guy pulled a revolver on everyone in the shop and made them lie on the floor. Then he had my manager take him to the showcases where the pistols are kept," said Camp.

"He picked up three pistols, warned everyone on the floor not to move and then he left. He was never apprehended and we never recovered the pistols."

"The man got away and now three years later I get these two $300 checks from the Mercantile Bank of Boston," he added.

Remembering the former occupation of the now honest bandit, Camp added, "These money orders could be stolen. I don't think they are. I've got my bank working on them to see if the checks are good."

At the time of the robbery, Camp said, the stolen pistols were worth a total of $450. The same pistols are valued now at $750.

"I don't care about the difference," said Camp. "And I don't believe I'd press charges against the guy. I think the man just got religious. The good book got to him — that's what I think."

Pageant to pick Little Miss Black

The Little Miss Black Midland pageant, featuring girls ages 4 to 10, will be held at 8 p.m. Saturday in Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., announced Laura McCoy, the pageant's project chairman.

The 20-member United Spiritual Singers of Midland is sponsoring the show, which will be in two divisions: La Petite for girls 4 to 6 and Little Miss Black for girls 7 to 10.

The pageant's emcee will be Gerald Badger, an Andrews minister. Former Midland disc jockey Don Clay will crown the princesses.

Girls vying for the crowns will be modeling sportswear and party dresses. Too, each will be entered in the talent phase of the pageant.

Judging the candidates will be James Ramsoure, Lizzie Cooper and Opal Wheelock.

The pageant will include the singing of "The Negro National Anthem" by the United Spiritual Singers, directed by Jonne Mayfield and Geraldine Stanford, and solo singing by Midlanders Aretha McGruter and Carolyn Jones. A play also will be performed.

Admission to the pageant will be $1.50 for children and $3 for adults.

Parents or guardians of girls interested in entering the pageant may telephone Curtis Butler, president of the United Spiritual Singers, at 682-9902, Ms. Mayfield at 684-7780 or Ms. Stanford at 682-0802.

CHECKING UTENSILS to be used to feed visitors at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church family fair Saturday and Sunday are chef Arcadio Granado and his assistant, Gloria Granado. The fair will take place on the church grounds from noon to midnight both days, and will feature game booths and entertainment as well as food.

Court weakens Laetrile ban

DENVER (AP) — Terminal cancer patients are entitled to Laetrile injections under a ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals which ordered the Food and Drug Administration to set guidelines for its use "with all due dispatch."

The court ruled Monday that "safety" and "effectiveness" as used in the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act which bans Laetrile have no meaning when considered in the context of terminally ill cancer patients.

The FDA has attempted to ban the controversial substance, extracted from the pits of apricots, for several years. Monday's ruling is considered a major blow to the administration's efforts.

The appellate court ruling came in a case appealed from Oklahoma in which a district court held that an FDA decision banning the use of Laetrile by a terminally ill cancer patient violated his constitutional right to privacy.

The appeals court didn't address itself to the constitutional issue but said an injunction against FDA issued by the lower court should remain in force.

This injunction will be "limited only to permit procurement of intravenous injections administered by a licensed medical practitioner to persons who are certified by a licensed medical practitioner to be terminally ill of cancer in some form," the Denver court said.

Water saving reported

BIG SPRING — Midland's water consumption was down 10.47 percent in June, announced the Colorado River Municipal Water District in a recent report. Other area cities that had declining consumption rates were Big Spring, which was down 1.74 percent; and Stanton, with a 4.19 percent drop.

Kansas City's George Brett gets the safe call from umpire John Pryor as he slides across home plate to score the second run for the American League during All-Star game in San Diego Tuesday night. It was one of the few bright spots for the Americans as the Nationals won for the 15th time in the last 16 meetings of the two leagues.

Nationals whoop it up

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "I do feel like an All-Star," whooped Montreal pitcher Steve Rogers. "I was really pumped up tonight."

Pumped enough to pitch two scoreless innings as the National League added insult to injury and whipped the American League 7-3 Tuesday night in the 49th edition of the mid-season All-Star game.

It was the seventh straight victory for the Nationals, their 15th win in the last 16 meetings. And it was a painful experience for the American League players, who have to endure jibes about really being the "junior circuit."

For Rogers, it was a roaring high. "I wanted to win this thing badly," he said. "Last year I thought I was going to be here and went one month without doing a thing and didn't make it."

The highlight for Rogers was holding Minnesota's superstar Rod Carew in check. Carew slammed triples in his first two at-bats for an All-Star record before Rogers cooled him down.

"I got Rod Carew out," Rogers shouted. "I've never gotten that man out in six years."

National League Manager Tommy Lasorda of the Dodgers said his players expected to score and had no worries about falling behind in early innings.

"Honestly, I thought we would score a lot," Lasorda said. "We have an outstanding bunch of offensive ballplayers and I knew they would come back."

Few players were able to explain the National League's dominance in this game, including Lasorda.

"I can't really explain it," he said. "But you never saw so much enthusiasm by our players. They wanted to win. They were pulling for each other, patting each other on the back."

Gossage suffers in defeat

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "I feel like I let a whole lot of people down," a dejected New York pitcher Rich Gossage said. "What can I say? They beat me."

Gossage's words signaled the American League players' feelings as they consoled each other following the National League's 7-3 victory Tuesday night in the 49th renewal of the mid-season All-Star clash.

Gossage had reason to moan. It was his wild pitch that scored Steve Garvey of the Dodgers in the eighth inning to send the Nationals ahead 4-3 and set up a four-run inning that turned the game into a runaway.

"It was very disappointing," said Gossage. "I just started musing the ball and I just tried to throw it too hard."

It was the 15th loss in 16 tries for the Americans, and it clearly rankled George Brett, the Kansas City third baseman who drove in two runs with two hits.

"I'm not knocking the National League," said Brett, "but I'm in the American League and I'm proud of it."

Brett blamed unfamiliar pitchers partly for the American League loss. "We faced Vida Blue before and we knew exactly what he was going to throw," he said. "They saw Gossage before, and they knew exactly what he was going to throw. But those guys in between like Rolfe Fingers of San Diego, I'd never faced him before."

Minnesota star Rod Carew, who swatted a pair of triples in four trips to the plate, was more philosophical. For him, the exercise was futile, but fun.

"I don't think the National League is superior to us," said Carew. "I don't really know why they keep winning these games, but then we get them in the World Series and we rough them up. They just got the big hits at the right times tonight."

"For me, it's fun. I just enjoy it," Carew had kind words for Billy Martin, the beleaguered Yankee manager whose own pitcher suffered the loss.

"He's just a manager," Carew philosophized. "He came out here to try and help us win."

Martin was a man of few words as he moved around the clubhouse thanking his team. Like most of the other American League players, he had no explanation for the All-Star jinx that has plagued the junior circuit for the last two decades.

"No, if I had an idea," Martin sighed, "they wouldn't have won."

If he had any doubts about using Gossage, he made no excuses. "I took Ron Guidry out because I have a lot of confidence in Gossage. I have been using Gossage a lot, but he was well rested for this game."

Sutter named player of week

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bruce Sutter, ace reliever of the Chicago Cubs, was named Player of the Week in the National League for the week ending July 9, NL President Charles Feeney announced Tuesday.

Shortly after the award was announced, Sutter pitched 1 2-3 innings in the 49th All-Star game and was the winning pitcher as the NL defeated the American League 7-3.

Sutter appeared in five games during the week and was credited with five saves. In his appearances, Sutter pitched eight innings, allowing only four hits and no runs as the Cubs won five of seven games during the week.

Garvey provides punch as Sutter throws darts

SAN DIEGO (AP) — National League supremacy in the annual All-Star baseball game has reached such a high point that relief pitcher Bruce Sutter could comment, "We were three runs behind and that made the game even."

He and the rest of the NL squad, including Steve Garvey, the Most Valuable Player in Tuesday night's 7-3 victory, felt confident the big guns would start booming.

Garvey drove in two of the National's three runs in the third, knotting the count 3-3, and the Los Angeles Dodgers' first baseman tripled in the eighth to ignite a four-run outburst.

The right-hander with the blacksmith arms won his second MVP award, the first coming in 1974 when he won his starting job thanks to write-in votes. No other player has twice won the honor that was started in 1970.

SO THE National League now has won seven straight, 15 out of 16 and 20 of the past 22 in the mid-summer classic.

"I thought it was gone," said Garvey of his eighth-inning triple that banged against the right field fence about five feet from the top.

That was the beginning of the end for hard-throwing Rich Gossage of the New York Yankees, the reliever who took the loss.

Garvey scored the go-ahead run on a wild pitch and the NL hit safely three more times before the inning was over.

Said winning Manager Tommy Lasorda, "We never had a doubt when we were three runs behind. Everyone felt we were going to win. And I didn't want to be the manager who lost to the American League."

THE AL jumped into a two-run lead in the first inning before a crowd of 51,549 in San Diego Stadium. Rod Carew, the majors' leading batter, blasted a leadoff triple off Vida Blue. He did it again in the third, scoring each time and becoming the only player in the 49-game history of the classic to have two triples in a single game.

And Blue failed to become the only hurler to win in each league as it was 3-3 when he left.

San Francisco's southpaw was followed in order by Steve Rogers of Montreal, Rolfe Fingers of San Diego, Bruce Sutter of the Cubs — who wound up the winner — and Phil Niekro, who pitched to the final batter.

"I just hoped that Fingers and Sutter would pitch against those guys the way they pitch against the Dodgers," said Lasorda.

FINGERS GAVE up just one hit in two innings and Sutter, who was a pitching standout for the Midland Cubs in 1976, none in 1 2-3.

Billy Martin of the Yankees, the losing All-Star manager for the second straight year, had no explanation for the NL domination.

"If I did, they wouldn't have won this one."

Garvey played with a bandage covering a chin cut suffered last Saturday that required 20 stitches. He said, "I think one of the stitches popped when I hit that triple, but if I could do it again, I'd just as soon pop another one."

The MVP recalled that in 1974 he had played after just recovering from the mumps and still collected two hits. He has now hit safely in five consecutive All-Star games, two short of Mickey Mantle's record of seven.

Gossage was naturally downcast and said, "I feel like I let a whole lot of people down. I just started musing the ball and I tried to throw it too hard."

GARVEY, DAVE Winfield, Bob Boone and Davey Lopes all hit safely in the eighth-inning uprising.

Baltimore's veteran Jim Palmer started for the AL and shut out the Nationals through two innings before running into trouble in the third when his fast balls were too high.

Larry Bowa singled to short right-center, but Palmer retired the next two batters. Then Joe Morgan and George Foster walked to load the bases. Greg Luzinski also drew a pass to force in a run. Then Garvey singled to score two more and knot the count.

That's the way it remained until the eighth.

Third baseman George Brett explained, "We had all faced Vida Blue before and we knew exactly what to expect. They saw Gossage before and they knew exactly what he was going to throw."

Blue had pitched for Oakland in the AL and Gossage for Pittsburgh in the NL.

BUT THE Cubs' Sutter was something else. The AL batters hadn't seen his split-finger fastball.

"It's my best pitch and with the score tied 3-3, I didn't want to come to the locker room and say they beat me with my second-best pitch."

"They hadn't faced me before and I had an advantage because the pitch looks like a fastball coming in and all of a sudden it drops."

Garvey was asked if his triple came off a fat pitch and answered, "When a ball comes at you 90 miles and hour, you don't know if it's fat or thin."

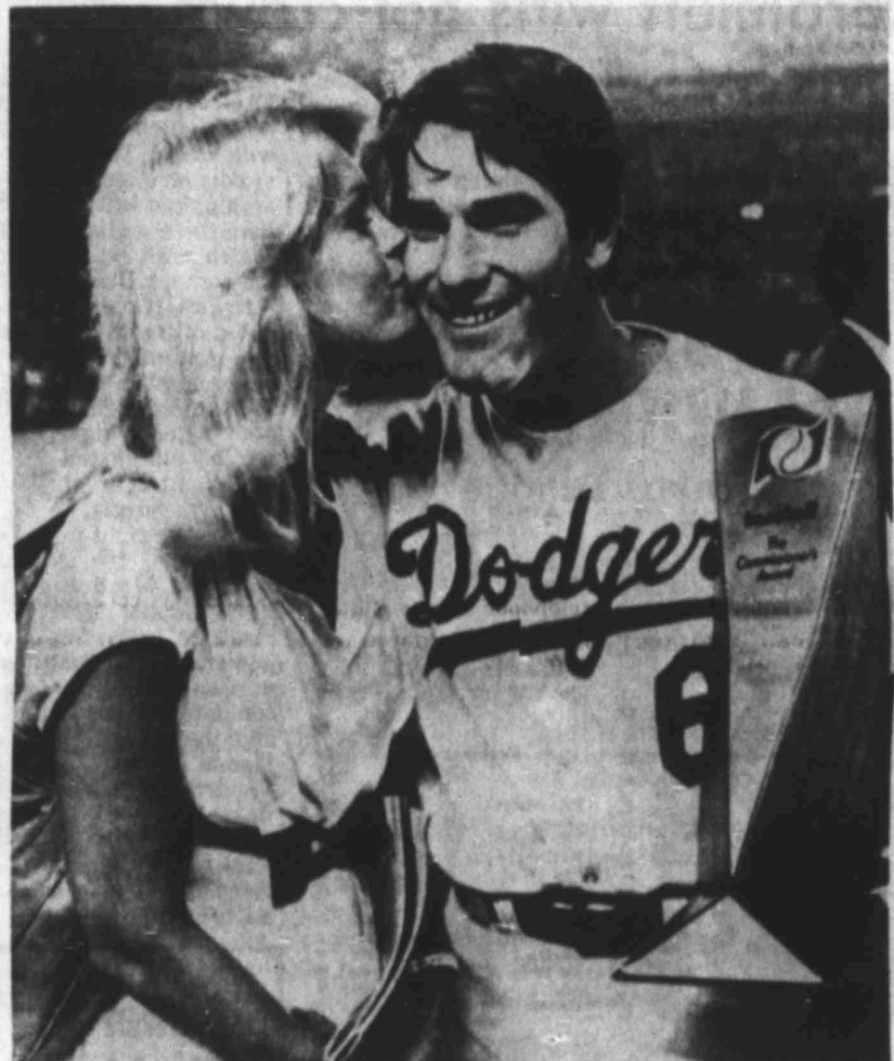

"Against Palmer, I figured he was wild and couldn't get his fastball down and probably would throw a breaking pitch. He threw a fastball first and then I got the breaking pitch."

Garvey singled home the two runs off that pitch.

"The way Gossage was throwing, I was trying to hit up the middle."

Asked about the domination, the MVP answered, "I think it's spirit and camaraderie. There is a spirit of togetherness. We get tired of breaking our heads against each other all season and this is one time to get together."

The next get-together comes at Seattle in 1979.

McCovey thinks blacks helped NL move ahead

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Acquiring black players first put the National League ahead of the American in talent, San Francisco Giants' first baseball player Willie McCovey said Tuesday.

And he says the Cincinnati Reds are so well known because they have "bigger egos."

McCovey made the remarks in a telephone interview with the San Diego Union.

The Reds are quoted more often in newspapers and praised more often publicly by their manager, Sparky Anderson, said McCovey, adding: "You've got more guys on that Reds team with bigger egos, because they are more nationally known than the players are here (in San Francisco)."

"I don't know if the National League is as dominant as the recent games indicate," McCovey said, referring to the All-Star contests, "but at one point a few years ago it was, I think."

About six or eight years ago, when (Roberto) Clemente and (Hank) Aaron and those sort of fellows were in their prime and making the All-Star team every year, I think the National League was superior. THAT superior."

"If you looked around, the National League just had that many more true superstars — and I don't mean guys they call 'superstar' today — and you couldn't find a real superstar in the American League, not since Mantle retired..."

The only good team in the American League was the Yankees and at one time you had to be lily-white to play with 'em. It was a big breakthrough when they brought up Elston Howard. So all your great black superstars went to the National League, with the Giants and with Brooklyn."

McCovey, despite a career batting average over .270 and over 500 career home runs, still wasn't listed on the preseason All-Star ballot distributed early this season.

McCovey said that omission isn't "worth complaining about" but that "anybody who has anything to do with baseball knows that a 20-year guy who's accomplished what I've accomplished, his name should be on the All-Star ballot."

"Every time I slide I have a habit of putting the heel of my hand down on the ground to brace myself a little," Driessen said, "and every time I do it I can feel the soreness return. So I really haven't been popping the bat all the time the way I should be."

Garvey wears beige badge

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Steve Garvey stuck out his stitched up chin and pointed at the bandage as though it were a beige badge of courage.

Garvey had taken 20 stitches in the chin after being popped in the jaw by a pickoff throw last Saturday in Houston, but the Los Angeles Dodgers first baseman insisted on playing in the 49th All-Star Game Tuesday.

He was named Most Valuable Player after tying the game for the National League at 3-3 with a two-out, bases-loaded single in the third inning and sparking a rally with a leadoff triple in the eighth that gave the NL a 7-3 victory.

When Garvey socked the triple off losing pitcher Rich Gossage of the New York Yankees, Garvey also ripped one of his stitches.

"When I got to third base, I could feel an ache in my chin," Garvey said after the game. "I think I popped a stitch. But I'll give a stitch for a triple any time."

It was the second MVP award for Garvey in five All-Star appearances. His first honor came in 1974 when he was write-in candidate and played in the game while recuperating from the mumps.

Garvey, meeting reporters with his wife, Cyndy, tried to explain the NL's recent dominance over its rival league in All-Star competition.

"Spirit and camaraderie," Garvey said, echoing the love-and-kisses philosophy of Dodger and All-Star Manager Tommy Lasorda. "The bench exploded when we got the lead. We got tired of beating our heads together during the season, so it's kind of nice for us to all play on the same side."

Bruce Sutter, the Chicago Cubs' bullpen ace, got the win after tossing two innings of hitless ball. Sutter was removed with two outs in the ninth inning and Atlanta Braves knuckler Phil Niekro retired the last AL batter, Darrell Porter of Kansas City.

Manager Lasorda said he pulled Sutter because "I knew 'Knucks' Niekro had never pitched in an All-Star game. He's been a credit to baseball and I wanted to make sure he got in the game."

Actually, Niekro is listed in the record books as having pitched in an All-Star game previously.

Vida Blue, who was hit for the AL's three runs, blamed his troubles on not keeping his pitches down. "The ball was up all night," Blue said, "but there was a plus — I was getting it over the plate. I haven't had a very good last two or three outings."

Garvey won MVP, Sutter won the game but perhaps the happiest member of the NL squad was Montreal Expo pitcher Steve Rogers, who pitched two scoreless innings in relief of Blue.

"Hey, I got Rod Carew out!" he said in the locker room. "Put that in your story. I haven't gotten him out in six years of spring training."

Baseball's stars wait in line to meet Ford

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Like star-struck kids waiting to see their favorite ballplayer, baseball's stars lined up for a handshake from former President Gerald R. Ford before the start of Tuesday night's All-Star Game.

The ever-ebullient Tom Lasorda, manager of the National League All-Stars, introduced the former President to his players, cracking jokes all the while.

"Yogi (New York Yankees coach Yogi Berra) gave him a membership to his racquetball club," Lasorda said to the players in introducing the former President. "It's only good on Thursdays, the ones that don't come before Fridays."

"Yeah," Ford said, "and only between 2 and 4 a.m. — yuk, yuk."

The ballplayers, who moments before were being hounded by screaming kids begging autographs, themselves waited sheepishly in line for their chance to meet Ford.

"Hello, Mr. President, it's nice to see you, sir," said Philadelphia outfielder Greg Luzinski. "You know, this is the wrong sport. It should be football."

Ford, a former University of Michigan football center, hugged Luzinski, who was then ushered away to make room for the next player.

"He's a hell of a big guy," Ford said as the burly Luzinski left.

Even the umpires wanted to get in on the show. Clutching their own baseballs, they filed past Ford for autographs.

"You guys are just like politicians," Ford told the umpires. "You're never right."

Even batting star Rod Carew was taken in by the former President's visit, shyly taking his place next to Ford as photographers and newsmen crowded by. But Los Angeles Dodgers second baseman Davey Lopes was clearly unimpressed by the visit.

Lopes, covered with sweat as he did leg stretching exercises in the center of the clubhouse floor, looked over his shoulder to see Ford bending down to shake his hand.

"Oh, hello," Lopes said. "Nice to see you here."

When Ford left, Lopes was asked if he had ever met a President before.

"Hell, no," he said. "I don't go to the White House every week, you know."

Ilie Nastase finds plenty of company

NEW YORK (AP) — For a change, Ilie Nastase wasn't the only one complaining.

To be certain, the fiery Romanian did his share — though holding back his biggest outburst for the final set of his 5-7, 7-6, 6-4 victory Tuesday over Peter Fleming. But it seemed that everyone had an axe to grind during the second day's competition at the $300,000 World Championship Tennis Invitational tournament at Forest Hills.

Everyone complained about the springiness of the balls used in the competition and everyone bemoaned the fact that this round-robin event, which offers $100,000 to the winner, began so soon after the completion of Wimbledon.

"It was very difficult," said Nastase, already fined $5,000 by Grand Prix Tennis and under a three-month suspension from their tournaments because of the outbursts of temper that seem to characterize his matches. "First, we come from Wimbledon, we're a little tired, and then we use these balls."

It was not the balls themselves but their placement on the court which enraged Nastase in the eighth game of the final set. He led 4-3 when linesman Mike Crosslin ruled one of his returns was out. Though he had made obvious efforts to control his emotion earlier, when Crosslin called a foot fault that cost him service, this seemed to be the final straw for Nastase.

Ultimately, Crosslin rose from his chair, strode deliberately to the baseline and swept his hand over the synthetic surface at the spot he ruled the ball touched down.

"I don't think I did anything wrong tonight, because I was right," said Nastase. "I called him (Crosslin) 'sir,' he gave me a foot fault and I didn't say anything. But it was like I was talking to someone who was not there. It was because I am Nastase."

Nastase stayed after winning the match to talk with umpire John Stahr, who had his hands full controlling the match, according to Fleming, the 6-foot-5 battler from Chatham, N.J.

"He (Stahr) handled the match like a champ," said Fleming, as upset by Stahr's performance as his own, which he termed, "dismal at best."

"I don't understand what their thinking is when they try to handle Nastase," continued Fleming. "They think they have to be stern with him. If they'd just explain what happened, he wouldn't have an argument."

Fleming went on to call the balls, "the most unbelievable tennis balls anyone's ever played with. I served a zillion double faults, and neither of us had the confidence to go for any shots or come to the net because we never knew where the ball might end up."

His remarks echoed those of the participants in the earlier competition. Nineteen-year-old John McEnroe, in his American debut as a professional, defeated John Newcombe — 15 years his senior — 1-6, 6-4, 7-5. Wojtek Fibak of Poland downed Billy Martin 6-2, 6-4 and Phil Dent swept fellow Australian Ken Rosewall 7-5, 6-1.

Play continued today with Fibak meeting Newcombe, Nastase

Cavalier to test NBA market value

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Veteran guard Dick Snyder was the forgotten man last winter as the Cleveland Cavaliers battled their way to the National Basketball Association playoffs for the third straight year.

Snyder, 34, spent most of his time watching the action from the bench and thinking.

"I guess I can't say I shouldn't have sat on the bench — we had lots of good ballplayers. But I think I could have helped the team," Snyder said in a telephone call from his Scottsdale, Ariz., home.

"I didn't feel like part of the team or part of the winning and losing. I just didn't have any effect on the season playing six or seven minutes a game. It was an impossible situation for me."

"During the first half of the year, I stayed in pretty good shape. But I couldn't even do that the last couple of months, when we had hardly any practices."

"Then when I would play seven or eight minutes, I'd be hurting. I know that doesn't sound like much, but when you're not in good shape you can get real tired after three, four minutes," Snyder explained.

After Cavaliers Coach Bill Fitch made it obvious Snyder was not going to be a key member of the Cavaliers in 1977-78, it was hard for the former Davidson star to get ready for the games emotionally.

"There was a lot of personal emotion involved. At first I would try to get emotionally prepared to play every game," he said. "But, after a while, I couldn't do that."

"So when I did get called on, I wasn't ready and I wouldn't play well. Then I'd try to get mentally prepared for the next game. But the next game for me would be so long in coming. It was a terrible emotional roller coaster ride all season."

Snyder, a 12-year veteran, played in only 58 games and averaged a career low 4.8 points a game. Now, after four years with the Cavaliers, Snyder's contract is expired and he is a free agent.

He said he and his financial adviser, Larue Harcourt, plan to "test the waters" to see who, if anybody, wants him for next season.

"I could end up in Cleveland, or somewhere else, or nowhere," Snyder said. "Frankly, though, the possibility of me coming back to the Cavaliers isn't good unless Bill makes some changes in the backcourt. I don't think he'll carry five guards."

"Ideally, I'd like to play in a place that's warm, for a team that's a contender. But everybody wants that."

Snyder feels he can still be an asset for some NBA team, but he said: "At my age, when a coach sits you down, there's an implication that you can't play anymore. That's the way other teams look at it, so it's bound to hurt me now."

"I don't worry about life after basketball, though. As long as I can make a living doing something I enjoy, it'll be okay. If I have to do something I hate just to make money, I will miss basketball."

"Right now I'm going on the assumption I'll be playing somewhere next season. If October rolls around and I'm not on a team, I'll just have to deal with the next part of my life."

Bramlett wins net crown

Seventh-seeded Jeff Bramlett of Midland fought his way to the Boys 18 singles championship of the recent Abilene Highway 80 Tennis Tournament and then combined with Houston's Thomas Johnston to nail down the Boys 18 doubles title.

Bramlett won the singles title with a split set, 4-6, 7-6, 6-2 win over Dallas' Kevin Richardson in the championship match. Richardson, who will attend Tulane University on a tennis scholarship, had lost no more than three games in any match until he ran into the scrappy Bramlett.

Bramlett easily disposed of David Wilson of San Antonio, the tournament's number two seed, in the quarter-finals, 6-2, 6-3. After a tight first set, he eliminated Bastian Vandragar of Garland in the semi-finals, 7-5, 6-1, to earn the right to meet Richardson, the son of former United States Davis Cupper Ham Richardson, in the finals.

Bramlett and Johnston were unseeded in doubles competition, but eliminated the top seeds, Mark Mahon of Australia and Vandragar, in the semi-finals, 5-7, 7-6, 6-6. The pair then easily handled Erck and Hightower of Houston, 6-4, 6-0 for the doubles crown.

Andy Bean legend travels

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — The legend of Andy Bean has found its way across the Atlantic and the normally dour Scots of St. Andrews are thoroughly enchanted.

"Is it true, mon, that you wrestle alligators?" one native in a plaid cap asked the hulking, 25-year-old Yank from Haines City Fla.

Bean smiled broadly. "That's been exaggerated," he replied. "Maybe little ones — 6 to 10 feet long. Now, seriously, once I grabbed one by the tail and I think I woke him up. He scrambled into the water more scared than I was."

"Do you actually bite the cover off golf balls?" another queried.

"I used to," the 210-pound, 6-foot-4 relative newcomer to the golf tour answered. "I did it instead of throwing clubs when I got mad. But I'm trying to cure myself of that. Some people still come up and ask for a demonstration. I tell them okay if they can pay the price."

Bean, leading money winner on the American tour with $240,058 and three victories in the last five weeks, has turned out to be the most captivating personality in the 107th British Open golf championship, starting today over the Old Course at St. Andrews.

It is not easy to intrigue the golf-hardened populace in this old gray township beside the North Sea which has walked in the footsteps of Walter Hagen, Bob Jones, Sam Snead, Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus.

But Andy has come, seen and conquered in his first visit to the home of the Royal and Ancient Club and the cradle of golf.

He has done it with his awesomely long drives off the tee, his inherent southern charm, corn pone-and-grits earthiness and fascination among the village tykes who follow him around as if he were the Pied Piper of Hamelin.

He stands around for hours, giving autographs. He is so soft-hearted that he has found it almost impossible to withstand the pleas of the open-faced kids in their tartan socks and sweaters.

"They ask him for a souvenir and, before you know it, he has emptied his bag of golf balls," said a companion. "I saw him give away at least two dozen at one time and, when he had no more, he gave away his gloves."

In America, players on the tour refer to Bean as L'il Abner. The Scots haven't yet tacked a label on him as they did in the case of the "Wee Ice Man," Ben Hogan, who won at Carnoustie in 1953.

"He's a monstrous mon," one spectator commented admiringly after watching Bean unleash a three-wood drive to within 10 yards of the swilken burn guarding the 370-yard first hole.

"He is indeed," agreed a companion, "a mon mountain Bean."

They both laughed at the reference to a famous American wrestler of another era.

Bean and Severiano Ballesteros, the brilliant Spaniard, drew one of the day's largest galleries in their last practice round Tuesday.

"I think the winner may come from one of these two laddies," one weather-beaten spectator said, "but I would fancy Bean more if he had a caddy other than his father."

Some observers have insisted that Bean is making a tactical blunder by letting his father, Tommy, a golfing pro, carry his bags. It was the result of a bet and a promise made at the Greensboro Open last spring.

"I told him that now that he is the leading money winner he doesn't need me any more," Tommy, 52, said. "But he insisted."

"I've played with all those players," said Cowens. "They're nice guys. They're good professionals."

The Celtics, meanwhile, have undergone several changes, including a new owner, John Y. Brown of Louisville, Ky., and a six-player trade that brought Marvin Barnes, Nate Archibald and Billy Knight from the Buffalo franchise.

"I've played with all those players," said Cowens. "They're nice guys. They're good professionals."

"No doubt. He's who I'd pick," said Tway, who as a freshman was No. 5 on the Oklahoma State golf team.

Miller, the Cowboys' No. 1 player, was low amateur in the 1978 Masters and the 1977 U.S. Open. He graduated this spring, and the only reason he hasn't turned pro is because he wants one more shot at winning the U.S. Amateur.

Miller was gunning to be the medalist in this tournament, but lost those honors to the surprising Tway, who shot a 4-under par 67 Monday at Brook Hollow and an even-par 71 Tuesday at Las Colinas Country Club in nearby Irving, Texas.

His 138 was the only sub-par finish in the two days of medal play qualifying, and was 4 shots better than Gary Pinn of Winston-Salem, N.C., who shot even par both days, 71-71-142.

Miller, from nearby Fort Worth, had a 76-73-143, tied with Vince Vines of Odessa, Texas.

Doug Clarke, a Stanford University star, shot a 148. His first-day 72 at Brook Hollow was one of the best rounds fired there during the qualifying rounds. Clarke seeks a second Trans-Miss title, having won it in 1976 at Pebble Beach, Calif.

A pair of former Walker Cup players, John Grace of Fort Worth and John Farquhar, also qualified.

Brook Hollow — with its narrow fairways, high rough and small, well-trapped greens — claimed many casualties. When Tway had his 67, dozens shot in the 80s and 90s, and one player had 100.

Celtics' squabbles embarrass Cowens

COLD SPRING, Ky. (AP) — Boston Celtics center Dave Cowens welcomed the sweaty labor on his family's farm as a respite after the National Basketball Association team's miserable season and current upheavals.

"This makes basketball seem like a cinch," said the 6-foot-9, veteran 30-year-old player while digging fence post holes.

"This is my pleasure. It's a diversion from basketball," he said, refer-

Brook Hollow proves tough

DALLAS (AP) — After two days of the Trans-Miss Golf Championship, 19-year-old Bob Tway of Marietta, Ga., was the only one among 400 amateurs who played a sub-par round at Brook Hollow Golf Club, but the Oklahoma State star still doesn't consider himself the favorite.

When the match play portion of the 75th Trans-Miss tournament got underway today with 32 twosomes, he was looking over his shoulder — at Lindy Miller.

"No doubt. He's who I'd pick," said Tway, who as a freshman was No. 5 on the Oklahoma State golf team.

Miller, the Cowboys' No. 1 player, was low amateur in the 1978 Masters and the 1977 U.S. Open. He graduated this spring, and the only reason he hasn't turned pro is because he wants one more shot at winning the U.S. Amateur.

Miller was gunning to be the medalist in this tournament, but lost those honors to the surprising Tway, who shot a 4-under par 67 Monday at Brook Hollow and an even-par 71 Tuesday at Las Colinas Country Club in nearby Irving, Texas.

His 138 was the only sub-par finish in the two days of medal play qualifying, and was 4 shots better than Gary Pinn of Winston-Salem, N.C., who shot even par both days, 71-71-142.

Miller, from nearby Fort Worth, had a 76-73-143, tied with Vince Vines of Odessa, Texas.

Doug Clarke, a Stanford University star, shot a 148. His first-day 72 at Brook Hollow was one of the best rounds fired there during the qualifying rounds. Clarke seeks a second Trans-Miss title, having won it in 1976 at Pebble Beach, Calif.

A pair of former Walker Cup players, John Grace of Fort Worth and John Farquhar, also qualified.

Brook Hollow — with its narrow fairways, high rough and small, well-trapped greens — claimed many casualties. When Tway had his 67, dozens shot in the 80s and 90s, and one player had 100.

Watch out for Road Hole

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — "Watch out for the Road Hole," warned Arnold Palmer as 155 golfers set out today in the British Open.

"It's a hell of a hole. That's where the tournament is going to be won and lost. I ought to know all about it. It cost me the title in 1960."

The Old Course at St. Andrews is the most famous of all golf courses, and the 461-yard Road Hole, the 17th, is one of the world's most notorious.

For 200 years it has been ruining the cards of complacent golfers as they came in sight of the clubhouse.

If you hit through the green, by as much as a yard, your ball rolls down a hill and into the road.

That was what happened to Palmer in 1960. He had to chip back from the road for a bogey five. Kel Nagle of Australia edged one stroke ahead and won the title from Palmer by that one stroke.

St. Andrews, where the game has been played for more than four centuries, is the mecca of world golfers. When they get here they are puzzled by the undulating fairways, hidden bunkers and huge two-hole greens.

Seven of the greens contain a hole at one end on the outward nine, and another at the other end as players return home.

Palmer joined forces with Hubert Green and Hale Irwin, who both said they would chip on the green if their ball landed at the wrong end.

"There are certain occasions where you would have to chip," Palmer said. "This is probably the only course in the world where you can get a blind putt."

"Nobody would build a course like this today. But it's a fine course to play and it takes a lot of thought. The hidden bunkers and the undulations are the main problems."

The bookies made Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus, the stars of last year's dramatic British Open at Turnberry, joint favorites at 6-1. Watson edged Nicklaus by one hole in the 72-hole tournament after an exciting nip-and-tuck battle between the two men on the last day.

Lee Trevino and South Africa's Gary Player were 14-1, and Green and Spain's Severiano Ballesteros 16-1.

Watson went into the defense of his title after four practice rounds on the 6,933-yard par 36-36-72. It is his first visit to St. Andrews.

"I'm beginning to like the golf course," he said. "At first I was indifferent to it because I didn't know where to hit the ball. Now I'm learning about the fairways."

"This is typical of the natural Scottish golf courses. You have a tremendous number of bounces to contend with. The greens are the most severe and the most undulating I have ever seen."

Watson won the title in 1975 and 1977. Nicklaus won it in 1966 and 1970 and has been runner-up six times.

Sharkey tribute on wall

EPPING, N.H. (AP) — The ultimate tribute to Jack Sharkey, world heavyweight champion 1932-33, hangs in the Epping Post Office.

About 10 years ago the postmaster removed President Lyndon Johnson's photograph and replaced it with two autographed pictures of Sharkey, regarded by the townspeople as the "Squire of Epping."

Sharkey is in his third retirement. He was trying for a comeback in September 1933 — having lost the title to Primo Carnera — when Tommy Laughran stopped him.

The second retirement was administered by Joe Louis in Yankee Stadium, Aug. 18, 1936. A photograph captioned "The Kid's Last Fight," showing the former champ face down on the mat, hangs among the memorabilia at Sharkey's house.

Neither Laughran nor Louis probably knew Sharkey by his given Lithuanian name — Joseph Paul Zukauskas. Not even Dorothy, his wife, who died four years ago, knew the name until the intentions of their marriage were published in their parish.

"Of course, Jack Sharkey's been my legal name for years," he said.

Sharkey was born 75 years ago in Binghamton, N.Y., where his parents settled after leaving Lithuania before the turn of the century.

Sharkey is fiercely proud of his heritage, saying out that besides himself, other Lithuanian-Americans who have contributed to American sports include the likes of Eddie Watkins, Dick Butkus, Johnny Unitas and "that hell of a tennis player" Vitas Gerulaitis.

When Sharkey was trying to become a fighter in Boston in the 1920s he was told that the name Zukauskas would never do.

So he borrowed the first name of Jack Dempsey and the last name of Sailor Tom Sharkey, boxers he admired. "Boston was all Irish then and nobody knew the difference," he said.

Now, Sharkey spends most of his time fishing, hunting or taking cross country trips with his friend Phil Estey, the town assessor. Sharkey admits that Estey "pops in any time and we'll have a few belts."

Until about five years ago Sharkey and Ted Williams used to appear at sportsmen's shows. But Sharkey has given that up. The shows, he said, "have become too commercial, gone is the luster of the great outdoors."

Sharkey is an authority on hunting and fishing in New England. For instance, he can tell where to fish on the upper Androscoggin, and what flies, which he designs and ties himself, work best.

A great-grandfather eight times, Sharkey says that only one Sharkey, Jack Sharkey III, dabbled seriously in athletics, playing scholarship football at the University of Maryland.

Sharkey's retirement to Epping was not sudden. He began visiting the community to train and recuperate from his bouts as early as 1924. His wife "was born right here in this house."

The fans remember Sharkey, mail from around the globe finds its way to his retreat, as the Yankees say here, "downroad in the big white house with the dome on it."

He moved into the house permanently in 1952.

The boxing game has changed, he says. "It's going to become extinct. The clubs are gone, the fighters are gone."

"Imagine fighting eight fights in your life and winning the championship?" he said regarding Leon Spinks.

"It's OK, but who's he going to fight? A rematch with Clay? And then what?" Sharkey said that television and promotion of boxing has over-exposed the sport to the point where "there are no fighters left."

Muhammad Ali, Sharkey said, "is the best of what there is. He has knowledge of the game. They've been digging up the graveyards for these stiff that they give him, you know."

"The fights in Madison Square Garden used to be on constantly every Friday, but now they're far and few between because there isn't the talent," he said, adding that the fewer bouts also mean fewer get-togethers among the former champions.

Sharkey says that when asked whether he would do it over again, he says no, but he says he would miss "all the attention. It's ego, you know."

"I've had four or five Caddilacs, LaSalle's and Lincolns, but I didn't gamble. I didn't run around with broads," invested his winnings so that he can enjoy his retirement.

"It's nice to be remembered," he said. "And hell to be forgotten."

"Actually I'm pretty well fortified," Sharkey said. "Across the street is a funeral home, the church isn't far away and over there is the cemetery."

Harlan Hinds leaves OHS baseball post

ODESSA — Harlan Hinds has resigned his post as head baseball coach at Odessa High School to take a similar position at Junction High School.

Hinds, who led the Bronchos to a 24-25-2 make in his two-year tenure, will be taking the same post his brother, Gary, held at Junction.

Gary Hinds coached the Midland High Bulldogs to the state Class AAAA championship in baseball in 1973 before going to Junction.

Hinds is a graduate of OHS and led the Bronchos to a 14-13 mark in 1976 and a 10-12-2 record this past season.

Midland roster changes

The Midland Cubs' roster continues to change after a weekend of player deals by the parent Chicago Cubs.

The Cubs released popular Midland first baseman Aaron Randall Monday, and picked up righthanded pitcher Mike Allen, who was released by the Houston Astros from their Columbus, Ga., farm club.

Sunday the Cubs sent Midland pitching ace Randy Martz to the AAA Wichita Aeros along with pitcher Mike Martin, who made only one appearance with Midland after being released by San Antonio.

Martz, however, is scheduled to pitch tonight in the Texas League All-Star game, and will not report to the Aeros until Thursday.

Martz said that he may start for the Aeros Friday night. Martz went 11 innings without a decision against San Antonio Sunday. He did not know at the time that he had been called up to Wichita although the decision had already been made.

Needless to say, Martz' arm was tight Monday night, and he did not know if he could pitch in the All-Star game. If he does, it will probably be for a short stint.

Midland will get pitchers Darrell Turner and George Riley from Wichita to replace Martz and Martin. Both were with Midland last year.

Auburn accused of rule breaks

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn, which had its 1957 national championship football team barred from post-season bowl games for illegal recruiting, has been accused again of breaking the NCAA rules.

President Harry M. Philipp said Tuesday he has been notified that the National Collegiate Athletic Association is making an official investigation of alleged recruiting violations in football and basketball.

Philipp said Auburn has been given a list of the charges, going back to 1971, but he would not disclose any details or identify any of the athletes involved.

However, an Auburn trustee, R. C. "Red" Bamberg, said he is familiar with one allegation, "and it's a pretty silly one."

"It concerned one of our basketball coaches picking up a prospect at his high school in Birmingham and driving him three blocks to his home," he said.

Bamberg — a state official who heads the industry-hunting Alabama Development Office and, in private life, a Uniontown farmer — questioned whether it is possible to "completely eliminate recruiting violations."

"The NCAA's rules are too stringent," he complained. "I believe every university is guilty. Some schools are caught and some are uncaught."

Philipp said Auburn will "proceed immediately" to make its own investigation "and determine the facts." The findings will be reported to the NCAA, he said, and a hearing will be held before the association's committee on infractions committee.

He said the university was asked to complete its investigation by Oct. 16 but can request more time if it is not finished by then.

Auburn will make no further statements pending the investigation, the president said, or release any information "concerning any of the persons involved."

CBS' summer lineup wins battle for TV viewer for second week

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS has won the networks' battle for the prime time TV viewer for the second week in a row with a summer lineup that included the week's two most-watched programs.

At the top of the A.C. Nielsen Co.'s ratings for the week ending July 9 were the CBS comedy hits "Alice" and "One Day at a Time." CBS also listed No. 4 "M-A-S-H" and "Barnaby Jones," tied for 10th.

The strong showing at the top contributed to CBS' rating of 14, compared with 13.3 for NBC and 13.1 for ABC. CBS had won the week before with six of the 10 most-watched shows.

The networks say the rating means in an average prime time minute, 14 percent of the homes in the country with TV were tuned to CBS.

The rating for "Alice" was 21.1, and Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 21.1 percent saw at least part of the program.

NBC's best for the week was a repeat of "Colombo," third in the ratings, and ABC's top-rated show was a rerun of "Starsky and Hutch," No. 7.

Ten of the 11 top-rated shows, in fact, were reruns. The exception was an episode of "Switch" on NBC, fifth in the ratings.

Four of the six programs at the bottom of the ratings were on ABC: "Fat Movie," a Friday movie, tied with NBC's "Chico and the Man" and by "Hardy Boys-Nancy Drew Mystery" and "Free Country." "Man from Atlantis" on NBC was last.

Here are the week's Top 10 shows:

"Alice," with a 21.1 rating representing 15.4 million homes, and "One Day at a Time," 20.4 or 14.9 million, both CBS; Big Event—"Colombo," 20.2 or 14.7 million, NBC; "M-A-S-H," 20 or 14.6 million, CBS; "Switch," 19.4 or 14.1 million; "All in the Family," 18.9 or 13.8 million; "Starsky and Hutch," 18.6 or 13.8 million, and "Fantasy Island," 18.5 or 13.5 million, both ABC; "Quincy," 18.4 or 13.4 million, and "Charlie's Angels," ABC, and "Barnaby Jones," CBS, both 18.2 or 13.3 million.

Here are the next 10 shows:

"Love Boat," ABC; "Lou Grant," CBS; "Barney Miller," ABC; "Hawaii Five-O," CBS; "Three's Company," ABC; "60 Minutes," CBS, and ABC Thursday Movie—"Ash Wednesday," tie; "Rockford Files," NBC, and "Carter Country," ABC.

Never sold a script? Try 20th Century-Fox

By JAY SHARBUTT

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Okay, so you see that wretched mess of a comedy show on TV and say, "Mercy, I can write better than that." Well, 20th Century-Fox Television is giving you just that chance.

Until July 19, it's holding a national write-in search for new comedy screenwriters. The only restriction: You must never have sold a script or story to movies or television before.

Each candidate must submit two writing samples — a teleplay and an excerpt from a screenplay or comedy sketch, complete with dialogue. Each sample should be no longer than 45 pages.

A total of 10 rookie gagsmiths will be chosen, the studio says. Each winner will be whisked here and paid $1,000 for a month in which all attend in-studio studies of the art of writing TV comedy.

When the month ends, those judged best-of-breed in the field of funny will be signed to work on a comedy pilot, provided they dig up the $400 fee required to join the Writers Guild here.

It's an unusual program, considering that when a TV mogul here just thinks of hiring writers, such materialize within seconds from garages, cafes, car washes, even the trees.

"Yes, but it seems like the same circle of people over and over again," says Lynn Roth, comedy development director for 20th-Fox TV and overseer of the studio's new comedy workshop project.

"If you live here or in New York, you have a chance to become a comedy writer. But if you live someplace in the middle of the country, chances are your work never is read."

This is because studios fear plagiarism suits and only accept scripts from writers' agents, most of whom toil here or in Fun City.

If you plan to fire off your brainwave to 20th-Fox, you'll have to sign a form absolving the studio from plagiarism suits. But after that, your epic definitely will be perused, the studio says.

Ms. Roth says she cooked up the comedy hunt with David Sontag, vice president for creative affairs at 20th-Fox, because "we're constantly looking for new, exciting material and just weren't finding it."

"We thought it (the talent search) was a very good idea. So we said, 'Let's do it.'"

The doling began with letters to college theater arts departments, minority groups and drama groups, she says, and this week the project is being announced in newspaper and trade publication ads.

"It's going to be crazy," she conceded.

Workshop address is room 111, Television Building, 20th Century-Fox, P.O. Box 900, Beverly Hills, Calif. Telephone: 213-277-7494.

'Joy of Sex' meets need for positive approach to sexuality

NEW YORK (AP) — It has spawned more printed joys than a library might bear, but the "Joy of Sex" has outdistanced them all as it approaches the sixth anniversary of its publication.

"It meets a compelling need for a positive approach to sexuality that is not exploitive," says Dr. Mary Calderone, co-founder and president of the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States. "The book is unique."

The book by Dr. Alex Comfort, a gerontologist who has written fiction, poetry and studies of the aged, has been on best-seller lists virtually since it was published in September 1972.

The hardcover version dwelt on the New York Times list for 73 weeks running, 11 of them in the top spot. Nearly a million copies of the book have been sold nationally.

But that figure pales by comparison with the 4 million copies sold of the paperback edition. It has been high on the Times list of trade paperbacks ever since it came out four years ago, a phenomenon of the publishing industry.

What's more, it's success has led to imitators including Comfort himself, whose "More Joy of Sex" has sold 400,000 hardcover copies since 1974 and 700,000 paperbacks since 1975. This is besides 200,000 sets of both books in paper.

In addition, there are 75,000 books in print of the "Joy of Gay Sex" and 50,000 copies of the "Joy of Lesbian Sex." These, of course, have had limited appeal and mixed reviews, and they never threatened Comfort's two tomes as best-sellers.

"I haven't read them," Comfort sniffs, his scorn transparent through the thickets of his English accent.

Wardell Pomeroy, co-author of the Kinsey report and academic dean of the Institute for Advanced Study of Human Sexuality, was asked to explain the "Joys" phenomenon.

"First, and this is in no particular order, they talk explicitly about sex," he said in a telephone interview from San Francisco.

"Second, they don't do it leeringly or in an off-color way — it's direct. Third, it's informative. Fourth, the pictures are, although explicit, tasteful."

Saying Comfort treated sex "in a positive way," Pomeroy added that the title was appropriate and declared: "It's a joyful experience reading it."

Comfort, who says he collects "only" 33 cents per copy sold and thus "I still work for a living," suggests that the books succeeded because "we did it sufficiently tastefully for people to feel that this was a subject which was no longer taboo."

Learn great lesson of refusing trick

Today's hand is what my father had in mind. West opens the five of spades, dummy plays the queen, and East must show that he has learned the great lesson. He must not try to win the trick.

If East foolishly plays the king of spades at the first trick, South will play low. East continues with a low spade and South wins with the ten.

Now South starts the diamonds. West takes the first diamond but cannot return a spade to continue the attack. Declarer has time to knock out the ace of diamonds while the ace of spades still stops the suit.

ENCOURAGEMENT
East should play the encouraging eight of spades at the first trick, allowing dummy's queen to get away from him.

When West takes the king of diamonds he has another spade to lead. This time East plays the jack to force out declarer's ace.

East gets in with the ace of diamonds in time to defeat the contract with the rest of the spades.

Collecting, working gold mines hobby for Wasson

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (AP) — Bob Wasson has an unusual hobby: he collects gold mines.

"All told, I own shares or controlling interest in 48 claims in Arizona, Colorado and Nevada," the Tahlequah plumber and heating contractor says.

Wasson, who turned 84 this year, still works in the mines when he gets the chance — digging, blasting and hauling tons of ore.

"I started looking for ore deposits in 1912, and I've been looking ever since," he says. "I have walked through some of the roughest country in the West, from Montana to Mexico, and I've watched it grow from a howling wilderness to a concrete paradise."

"But it's not all gone."

No, not yet! And I'm still looking."

A glance inside one of his farm buildings shows he has been around the countryside a while. One wall is lined with shelves, glittering with rare old glass bottles and kerosene lanterns.

There is a cider press, adding machine (model 1922), rolltop desk, pump organ and a stereopticon — the original 3-D viewer.

He has crammed a lot of excitement into his 84 years.

He rode with Gen. Pershing's force into Mexico in 1916 in pursuit of bandit chieftain Pancho Villa. He served in World War I — with the Rainbow Division.

He has hiked in winter across some of the most rugged mountains in Colorado and prospected for metals in all the western states.

Wasson was born in 1894 in Kansas City, Mo. "It was kind of rough, but it was a good life back then," he said. "I used to ride the street cars across Kansas City to Independence, Mo., and then walk six miles to get home to our farm. My father had a sheet metal shop in Kansas City for years."

He recalls he left home early and went to Dodge City, Kan., where he stayed with brothers.

Val Verde, Dawson, Kent gain explorers

A pair of wildcat operations have been staked in Val Verde County by Hunt Petroleum Corp. of Dallas, and single wildcats have been announced in King and Dawson counties.

Hunt will drill No. 1-2 Roland and No. 2-2 Roland as 3,000-foot explorers in Val Verde County.

No. 1-2 Roland is 760 feet from north and 1,900 feet from west lines of section 2, block Q-7, TCRS survey, abstract 2689.

The site is five miles northeast of Pandale and one mile southeast of the one-well Will O (Wolfcamp gas) pool. Ground elevation is 1,900 feet.

Hunt No. 2-2 Roland is 905 feet from north and 1,050 feet from east lines of section 2, block Q-7, TCRS survey, abstract 2689 and five miles northeast of Pandale.

It is one mile south of the Will O (Wolfcamp gas) pool.

KING EXPLORER

A 3,000-foot wildcat has been scheduled in King County by Taubert, Steed, Gunn & Medders of Fort Worth.

The project, No. N1-00 S. B. Burnett Estate is 600 feet from southwest and 1,900 feet from northwest lines of section 113, block 13, H&TC survey and 17 miles southeast of Guthrie.

The location is 1.5 miles northwest of the Tannehill reopener of the Buzzard Peak multiphase field and three miles northeast of the Big N area. It also is three miles east of the Big S (Strawn) pool.

DAWSON WILDCAT

RK Petroleum Corp. of Midland No. 1 Harris is a new 12,300-foot wildcat in Dawson County, 12 miles west of Lamesa.

The location, 1/2 mile west of the Lamesa Farms (Siluro-Devonian) pool, is 1,900 feet from north and 600 feet from east lines of section 127, block M, EL&RR survey.

UPTON PROJECT

John L. Cox of Midland No. 1-B Langford is to be drilled one mile west of Spraberry Trend Area production in Upton County, 16 miles northeast of Rankin.

The project is 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 13, block Y, GC&SF survey. It is slated for an 8,700-foot bottom.

FISHER TEST

HLH Petroleum Corp. of Dallas spotted a Strawn test in the four-well Raven Creek (Strawn) area of Fisher County, seven miles northwest of Noodle.

Scheduled for a 5,900-foot bottom, it is 467 feet from south and east lines of section 1, block 19, T&P survey.

It will be operated as No. 1 Lila M. Touchstone.

CROCKETT OUTPOST

Mitchell Energy Corp. of Houston No. 1-32 Hunt is to be drilled as a one and five-eighths mile southwest outpost to the Aldwell Ranch (Canyon gas) field of Sutton County.

The 10,000-foot test is located in Crockett County, 20 miles southwest of Sonora.

The drillsite is 541 feet north of the southwest corner of section 24, block G, GWT&P survey, then 527 feet west to location in section 32, O. A. Caruthers survey.

Second test dry

By PETER MATTIACE

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The second exploratory well in the Baltimore Canyon Trough turned out to be a "dry hole," but Shell Oil Co. says it is not finished drilling off the mid-Atlantic states.

Shell announced Monday that "no oil or gas accumulations were encountered" during the drilling of its 14,000-foot well in the Atlantic Ocean 73 miles east of this resort. The company said the well was completed on July 5.

Shell is the second oil company to announce a "dry hole" in the promising geological formations off the coasts of New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

On June 5, Continental Oil Co. also announced that its first exploratory well had found nothing. That well was drilled to a depth of 12,000 feet about 77 miles east of Atlantic City.

At least two of the five other oil companies drilling offshore are also believed to be at or near target depths on their first exploratory wells. However, the two firms, Texaco and Exxon, have made no announcements on their finds.

Oil industry experts have long warned that the chance of finding any oil or gas off the East Coast is about one in five and the chance of hitting paydirt in any given well is even slimmer.

"The drilling results (on the Shell well) were obviously disappointing," said R. L. Ferris, Shell vice president for exploration and production, "but more wells must be drilled before the potential of the Baltimore Canyon area is known."

Ferris said Shell's leased semi-submersible drilling rig, the Western Pacesetter II, would soon be moved to another promising area 50 miles south of the first well. There, Shell will drill another exploratory well to a depth of 16,000 feet.

Houston Oil & Minerals Corp., Mobil and Gulf are the other firms drilling in the Baltimore Canyon Trough, which the U.S. Geological Survey estimates may hold 1.02 billion barrels of oil and 13.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

Organizations reporting to the NEB cited these factors in their projections of slowed demand:

—Estimates of Canada's gross national product in 1980 are about nine percent lower than they were two years ago.

—Higher prices for oil and gas have prompted more conservation, improving energy-use efficiency six to seven percent over a continuation of pre-1973 trends. That is expected to rise to about 17 percent by 1985 and to 25 percent or more by 1995.

—Gas is expected to capture more of the energy market from oil.

"The oil demand and productivity projects show that a strong development program may put Canada in a position to achieve the federal government's self-reliance target," said Imperial Oil Ltd., Canada's biggest oil firm.

"With oil demand in the late 1980s of about 1.9 million barrels a day and oil production averaging 1.4 million barrels a day, the net import requirement would be 500,000 barrels a day, which is within the one-third target.

Joe McCollum

Retirement announced

Joe McCollum, senior staff assistant in Continental Oil Co.'s Midland Division, has retired after 32 years with the company.

His retirement date was June 30. He was educated in Mertzon public schools, Schreiner Institute and The University of Texas at Austin.

McCollum joined Conoco in Monument, N. M., and later worked assignments in Eunice, Denver City and Odessa. He has been a Midland resident since 1976.

He was honored with a recent retirement party attended by co-workers and friends.

Midlander appointed

J. Russell Yost of Midland has been appointed regional representative for West Texas for Energy Consumers and Producers Association.

The association is a non-profit organization devoted to filing lawsuits challenging what it considers to be oppressive and unworkable federal rules and regulations. The headquarters for the organization are in Seminole, Okla.

Yost has lived and worked in Midland the last 20 years and until 1970 owned Williamson Well Service, Inc. Since that time he has worked as a consultant to independent operators on workovers and completions.

Yost has been a resident of Midland since 1957. His vast experience in the oil industry includes working at Spindletop and High Island fields as well as the Gulf Coast and Oklahoma and Louisiana. In 1948 he was part owner of Zephyr Drilling Corp. which operated in the Permian Basin area.

The association has approximately 500 members in 15 states, most of whom are independent oil and gas producers.

Company organized

DENVER, Colo.—Premier Resources, Ltd., a Denver-based oil and gas exploration company, has announced the formation of Woodbine Petroleum, Inc., a 70 percent-owned subsidiary which will explore for oil and gas in the Gulf Coast areas including Louisiana and Texas.

The remaining 30 percent of Woodbine is owned by four officers of the new company who formerly held management positions with W. R. Grace and Co.

Kenneth I. Danneberg, president of Premier, said the initial operations of Woodbine will be financed by Premier and the new company will be involved primarily in the acquisition and brokerage of oil and gas exploration and consulting services.

The offices of the new company are in Dallas.

"L. E. Boice has been elected president of Woodbine Petroleum. He formerly was vice president of exploration for W. R. Grace and previously held positions with Shell Oil Co. and American Petrofina Exploration Co.

The other officers include Frank W. Yantis, former land manager for W. R. Grace, with previous land management positions with Hunt Oil Co. and Reserve Oil, Inc.; R. R. Williams, former chief geologist for W. R. Grace, and C. H. Elliott, former chief geophysicist for W. R. Grace.

Explosion hits plant

BORGER, Texas (AP) — A spectacular fire, touched off by an explosion at the Phillips Petroleum Corp. refinery near this Panhandle town, shot flames 200 feet in the air and cast an orange glow in the sky visible for more than 50 miles late Tuesday night.

No injuries were reported immediately.

A Phillips spokesman said the fire was touched off by an explosion about 10 p.m. in the natural gas liquids section of the refinery and that ethane gas was burning.

Jim Adams, director of public affairs at the Phillips corporate headquarters in Bartlesville, Okla., said company investigators were trying to determine what caused the explosion and fire.

"It could be several things," he said.

The refinery is located at Phillips, a community just outside Borger.

It was not immediately known whether any employees were working in the area where the blast occurred.

Ten firefighting units from Borger joined fire trucks from neighboring communities to help the two firefighting units at Phillips battle the blaze, which raged out of control.

There were no evacuations of people in surrounding communities.
