Crusade Well Underway

The Cancer Crusade is well underway in Red River County. Chairman of Bogata, Pat Jeffery, reports good progress being made in the town. Rural area chairmen include Mrs. H.C. Ward, Fulbright; Mrs. John Allen, Rugby; Mrs. Carl Childers, Lone Star; Mrs. Harvey Jeans, Johtown; Mrs. Eldon Chaloner, Rosalie; Mrs. Olen Jessee, Cuthand. They and their workers will be working through April delivering life-saving information and collecting donations. They will also be leaving a memorial envelope for every household for future memorial gifts. This year the American Cancer Society is mounting an all out attack on the six major sites of cancer with specific action programs. Everyone can participate by taking important steps to guard against cancer. More than half of all cancer cases and cancer deaths involve cancers of the breast, colon-rectum, lung, uterus, skin and oral region. BREAST CANCER: It's the leading cancer killer of American women. Practicing breast self-examination (BSE) every month can be a giant step toward early detection and effective treatment. At regular check-ups, a physician may perform mammograms, a proven X-ray technique for discovering breast cancer in its earliest stages. COLON-RECTUM CANCER: It's the site where cancer strikes most often in this country, except for common skin cancer. During regular check-ups, a doctor may use any of a number of tests—the digital exam, procto, or guaiac test for invisible blood in the stool. Now there is a home kit for guaiac testing. LUNG CANCER: The biggest cancer killer of men, and a site where cancer can be prevented far more easily than cured. Cigarette smoking is the major cause, and the ACS offers a variety of aids for quitting, such as special clinics and self-help kits. UTERINE CANCER: Getting a regular Pap test is the most effective method of detecting cervical cancer in an early and curable stage. Women at or after the menopause are at a higher risk of developing endometrial cancer—cancer of the body of the uterus. Abnormal bleeding is the main warning signal for endometrial cancer, and tissue sampling is the best method for detection for those at high risk. SKIN CANCER: It's the most widespread cancer, and fortunately one of the most curable. Common varieties are largely preventable by avoiding overexposure to the sun. Regular self inspection for skin irregularities can help not only common cancers, but also the more serious forms of melanoma. ORAL CANCER: Heavy smoking and drinking can raise a person's risk of oral cancer. It is a site that is easily inspected by a doctor or dentist and a regular check-up is everyone's best protection. Pamphlets and other information materials on all these sites are available free of charge from the American Cancer Society's local unit.

Smith County, April 27. "These organized communities will be scored on community accomplishments toward reaching their annual goals during the contest year," according to L.M. Vaughn and Mrs. Jo Etta York, district agents for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "Several of these communities have been active in the community improvements program for a number of years. Competition has always been keen in District 5." Judges for the district contest include Todd Berry, county Extension agent, Cass County; Geneice Whisenhunt and Clarence King, county Extension agents, Gregg County. One of the six communities in the district contest will be selected as the district winner and will later compete in regional judging. The district winner will receive $100. Four communities will be selected as runner-up communities and will receive $50 each. The Texas Community Improvement Program is sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and electric utility companies throughout the state.

What Did Jesus Look Like?

By Thomas Ridge, Pastor
 Bogata Church of Christ

I suppose that all of us have over the years looked at the pictures that we see depicting our Lord, and wondered if he actually looked like that. Many folks say that you can't find in the Bible any description of him in the physical sense. There is no physical description of him as such, but there is enough information in the word to let you know that those pictures that we see aren't nearly accurate.

Most folks have the idea that he was a slender man much like those pictures, and that is the reason many are not followers of Him. Now that may sound funny to you, but it is not meant to be. Many of our youth especially are influenced away by the impression delivered by these pictures. The reason is that there is no manliness transferred to their mind by those pictures... no "macho" if you please.

Let's look at the scripture for a minute and see if Jesus was a man or a mouse.

First of all we learn that he was the son of a carpenter. The son was taught the father's trade, therefore we can assume that he was somewhat tough because of that.

Secondly, we find him asking his disciples in Matt. 16:13 who men said that he was. Now it is natural for men to look at the physical appearance of a person and make a judgement from that, as well as his actions. So we find them giving this answer, "Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some Elias; and others Jerimias, or one of the prophets."

This answer shows that they looked to the physical looks and actions for their judgements. It is certain that they had not paid any attention to his words or they would have seen that he was the Son of God just as did Peter later on in the 16th chapter of Matthew. In appearance and actions, then, we must assume that Jesus was a lot like John and Elijah. In Matthew 17:10-13 we see that John and Elijah were a lot alike in appearance. Jesus looked like them, what did they look like? Matt. 3:4 gives us a description of John. Now if he looked like Elijah, then what did Elijah look like? II Kings 1:8 describes Elijah and if you look closely you notice that he dressed the same way as did John the Baptist.

Look into this and you will see that Jesus couldn't look like the pictures we see. He was tough and probably hairy, calloused, and wrinkled besides.

Possibility Of Food Stamp Eligibility Should Go To Local Office

Persons who received notice of a possible eligibility for back benefits under the Food Stamp Program should first contact their local food stamp office, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Texas Department of Human Resources recently sent notices to welfare households of their possible eligibility for back benefits. However, these benefits are limited to just a few people with very low incomes whose food stamp applications were delayed or denied—or who contacted food stamp offices but did not apply because they thought the 1974 verification procedures would cause delays or other problems.

"We are concerned because quite a number of people have made special trips to our regional office to see if they qualify," said W.F. Warren, regional administrator for USDA's Food and Nutrition Service, Dallas, Texas. "In many cases this has caused an unnecessary hardship, since determining whether or not people qualify for back benefits must be done at the local Department of Human Resources office."

Carrier Systems

They're helping us control our costs and improve your telephone service.

It's in the best interests of all our customers for Continental to control expenses wherever it can. The reason, of course, is that expenses throughout our system affect rates throughout our system.

Importantly, however, we can't pinch pennies so tightly that we reduce the quality of your telephone service. The ideal situation is for us to control our costs and improve your service at the same time.

We sometimes have to spend money to save money.

That's why we're installing sophisticated new "carrier systems" in some of our faster-growing exchanges. These new systems let us provide a larger number of high-quality voice channels (circuits) with existing telephone lines. They eliminate the need for expensive construction of new telephone cables and poles, but help us provide improved service to more customers.

Our cost-effective carrier systems are working for your benefit wherever we install them. They are another way we're doing our best to do more for you.

We did... General Telephone. At least, that was the beginning. And, within a week, our operations were virtually back to normal.

But what a job it was! We had to get cable from Texas and compressors from Colorado...

And we brought in 550 skilled repair people from General Telephone companies, Photo courtesy of Johnstown Tribune-Democrat

Emergency Medical Services Available In Lamar

You're scared. Suddenly, without warning, you're in pain, or you can't breathe, or you feel so weak that you collapse.

You think maybe it's not so bad. It'll go away. But it doesn't. You don't know what to do.

"Call the Emergency Medical Services," says Bill Perkison, coordinator for Ark-Tex Council of Governments Emergency Medical Services (EMS) program. "That's what they're here for—so you can get help when you need it. Just dial 784-2111, and an ambulance staffed with trained people who know what to do will be there. "Anytime there's a severe, sudden or unexpected changes in how you feel or how you're able to function can be considered an emergency," says Perkison.

"It can happen to you, or to someone you love—and it's frightening. But getting help fast is the most important part of saving that life.

"Many people don't get help as quickly as they need it because they're hesitant to call an ambulance," says Dr. Clarence Temple, medical director for the Ark-Tex EMS project.

"One reason people don't call is that they're not sure if they're sick enough to need emergency care," says Dr. Temple. "they think they'll be embarrassed if the problem turns out to be minor one—and they don't want to put doctors, nurses and the ambulance attendants to a lot of trouble for nothing.

"But since prompt care is so important," he says, "it's a person's duty to himself and his loved ones to learn to recognize symptoms of emergency situations, so he can call for help."

Dr. Temple explains some of the more common emergencies and how they feel:

—Heart Attack causes severe pain, pressure or squeezing in the center of the chest. The pain may spread to the shoulder, neck, arms, jaw or back. The victim may also have shortness of breath, nausea, sweating or feelings of weakness and restlessness.

—Choking is an emergency when the person is unable to speak, breathe or swallow. The person may turn blue in the face, and/or collapse. Other respiratory difficulties cause similar symptoms—gasping, a different rate of breathing, foaming from the mouth and a blue tinge to the skin, tongue, lips and nails.

—Hemorrhage is excessive, uncontrollable bleeding, and ANY bleeding from the eyes or ears.

—Stroke causes a sudden, rapid loss of ability to move one side of the body. There's a feeling of weakness complicated by slow breathing in which the cheeks puff and the mouth sags. The victim is usually in a state of confusion, and his speech isn't clear.

—Fractures, or broken bones, are present when there is pain, tenderness, swelling and bruising. Bone ends may be exposed, or the broken part of the body, such as the arm, may be twisted in a strange manner. The patient may not be able to move or feel anything in the area of the break.

—Burns are serious enough to call an ambulance when there is a deep reddening of the skin and formation of blisters, or when the skin is whitened or charred. Other burns can be treated promptly at home or by a doctor.

—Poisoning causes a variety of symptoms, depending on what the cause is. They include nausea, vomiting and cramping; unexplained collapse, shortness of breath or change in the rate of breathing; irritation, inflammation or swelling of the skin. Dr. Temple stresses that you should look for and keep any suspected poison in its container so emergency care personnel will know how to treat the patient.

—Convulsions demand immediate attention when the patient has repeated fits or seizures without regaining consciousness. A single convulsion can be waited out, and the patient taken to a doctor afterwards.

—Allergic reactions include itching, burning skin and swelling of the face and tongue. The victim's lips may turn blue, and he may faint or have difficulty breathing.

—Unexplained sleepiness, failure to hear or respond, confusion or change in behavior can also be emergency symptoms.

"The rule of thumb is: When in doubt, call the EMS ambulance," says Dr. Temple. "Don't hesitate because you think it's not serious enough.

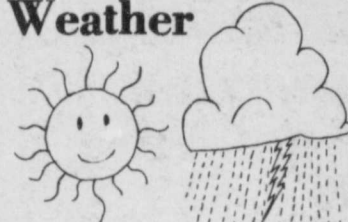

"We'd a lot rather give help to someone who could have waited a few minutes than not reach someone in time."

FORUM

you and the LAW

PRESENTED BY THE STATE BAR OF TEXAS

Q: My wife and I age getting a divorce. Is she entitled to part of my retirement income?

A: Retirement income is among property eligible to be awarded to either party, or both parties, in a divorce. Whether one spouse will be awarded all, or any portion, of the other spouse's private or military-connected retirement benefits depends on several factors. These include: the terms of the retirement plan; when employment or military service began, and how long it lasted in relation to the length of the marriage; and, the trial judge's determination of what future financial needs of each spouse must be met in the divorce decree.

Q: I got a divorce last year and I left all of the lamps, pictures, kitchen utensils, bedspreads and similar furnishings when I moved out of our home where my former husband is still living. My former husband refuses to let me have these furnishings. Is there any way I can get them back?

A: All property accumulated during a marriage is disposed of in the divorce decree. To determine whether you have a right to make a legal claim for these furnishings in the home where your former husband lives, you must look to the provisions of the court order entered in your divorce case. The attorney who represented you in your divorce should be able to advise you whether your divorce decree entitles you to these furnishings.

Q: I was divorced about a year ago, and the cost of living has gone up continually since then. Is there any way I can get an increase in the child-support my husband pays?

A: Yes. To do this you must file pleadings in the proper district court. In a hearing set by the court after proper notice is served on your "ex", you must show that a change in conditions necessitates an increase. Also, your former spouse must be financially able to pay the increase in child support.

Q: I have completed drawings and carpenter work for a home remodeling job. They seem satisfied, but they've indicated they aren't going to pay. Can I put a mechanic's lien on their property?

A: A mechanic's lien can be utilized to secure payment of a debt only if you obtained written permission in advance. Home improvement contractors sometimes require the homeowner to sign a contract before work is begun; these contracts may contain a provision allowing the contractor to place a mechanic's lien on the homeowner's property if the repair bill is not paid. If you started work without such a contract, the law allows you to bring a suit for damages; if the amount involved is less than $150 the case could be filed in small claims court where it is not necessary to have a lawyer represent you. If the amount involved is more than $150, you would need to employ an attorney to file a law suit.

Send your questions to "You and the Law," State Bar of Texas, P.O. Box 12487, Austin, 78711. Answers may appear in columns in hypothetical terms; personal answers not possible.

Going Strong

by Gerry Johnson

This Man's Pride Is a Driving Force

Since Beno Kramer, 77, of Galeton, Pennsylvania became chairman of the annual Woodsmen's Carnival in this northern Pennsylvania town, he has seen it grow from 18 exhibitors to 80 and attendance rise from 4,000 to 25,000 for the two day event.

"I got involved because I didn't want to see the site of the carnival moved from this area," Kramer told a writer from The National Council on the Aging.

The event attracts the major manufacturers of logging equipment and saw mill machinery, along with well-muscled lumberjacks who compete for cash prizes. Some of the contests are log rolling, tree falling and two-man crosscut sawing.

"One of the favorite spectator sports is the horse-pulling competition," Kramer said.

In this event, carefully trained teams of massive horses skid gigantic logs across the turf of an outdoor arena as they try to outdo other teams in terms of weight and distance pulled.

Originally from the Galeton area, Kramer worked at an aircraft plant in Buffalo during World War II as a tool maker and served part time as a volunteer in the Coast Guard Reserve in Buffalo Harbor.

After the war, he returned to Galeton and set up a saw mill and building supply company, which he operated until 1965 when he partially retired.

In 1952, when he assumed his duties as chairman of the Woodsmen's Carnival, preparation for the annual event was relatively simple. "Now, I work about three months getting ready," Kramer said. "I have a secretary and members of the Penn-York Lumbermen's Club, which sponsors the carnival, also pitch in and give me a lot of help."

During the time he's not involved with the carnival, Kramer is the president of the Galeton TV Cable System and belongs to numerous civic organizations.

"I also have time for my wood working shop now," Kramer said, "and I get a lot of pleasure out of making furniture. I used to like to hunt, but the hills have gotten a little too high for me. I make do with a little fishing now instead."

His preoccupation continues to be the carnival, however, proceeds of which go to the Pennsylvania Lumber Museum near Galeton. Built by the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, the Lumber Museum is the first of its kind designed to tell the story of wood, forests and the lifestyles of early lumbermen. The museum has been open to the public since 1970.

"The concept for the museum originated with the Penn-York Lumbermen's Club," Kramer said. "The club is an association of forest producers, users and landowners organized to promote conservation. The museum has grown right along with the carnival."

Benno Kramer's voice is proud as he talks of the carnival and the museum. And rightly so, for he has been the motivating force behind its growth and success for a quarter of a century. Does he contemplate a time when he'll step down from his post?

"I've never even thought about it," Kramer said. "It might be a lot of work, but I can't see a time when I won't be involved. I guess I'm like most people—I have to be involved. Life wouldn't be worth much if I wasn't."

AT A RECENT LUNCHEON, the National Council on the Aging honored television writers Hal Kanter and Gene Reynolds "for advancing the nation's understanding of the continuing capacities and strengths of older Americans."

Kanter was honored for the speech he wrote for Jack Albertson's appearance at President Carter's Inaugural Gala. Reynolds, who also produces the comedy series, was honored for the November 30, 1976 segment of M*A*S*H.

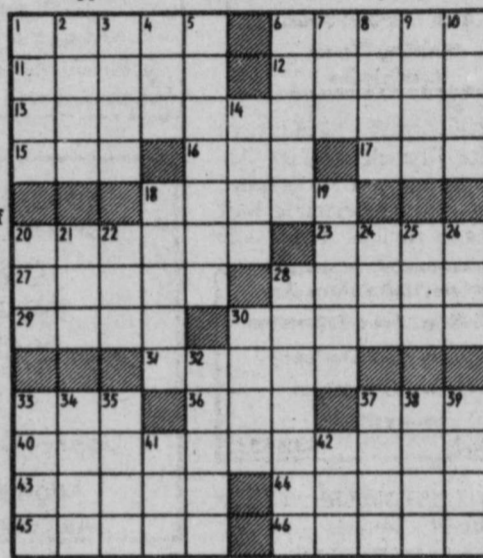

NCOA, a nonprofit organization established in 1950 to deal with the problems of aging, anticipates making similar awards in the future.

CANCER ANSWER LINE

Understanding Immunity Essential to Cancer War

An improved understanding of the body's built-in immune system may provide a key weapon against cancer in the next 5 to 10 years.

Scientists began to suspect the body had a way to identify and combat disease agents when Louis Pasteur proposed the germ theory of disease just over 100 years ago.

Today our understanding of that defense mechanism — the immune system — and how it relates to cancer is expanding rapidly.

While many important questions remain, it is known that the bone marrow produces cells called lymphocytes (lim-fō-sites) that play a major role in rejecting foreign agents in the body. The intruder might be a bacterium, virus, cancer cell or even a transplanted heart.

In simple terms, when the intruder enters the body, lymphocytes recognize the invasion by means of biochemical identification markers and sound an alarm. Every cell and microorganism is believed to have at least one identification marker.

The lymphocytes stimulate the production of antibodies, chemicals which lock on to the foreign substance and simplify the job of specialized scavenger cells from the white blood cells that actually devour the invaders.

But what happens when a cancer cell invades? Does it have a way to silence the immune system's alarm? Was the cancer patient's immune system defective in the first place? Can specific vaccines be developed to boost the patient's defense?

These are but a few of many questions researchers around the world are investigating.

Explains Dr. Jordan U. Gutterman, associate professor of medicine at M. D. Anderson Hospital, "While we have learned much in the last 10 years, I think it's going to take another 5 to 10 years to make a major impact on cancer treatment."

The advantage of using the body's immune system to destroy cancer cells, he explains, is that it is a very natural system.

Unlike other major forms of cancer therapy such as surgery, drugs and radiation, immunotherapy avoids unwanted damage to normal cells in the process of getting at deviant cancer cells.

In the future, immunotherapy may not only play a major role in controlling cancers, but actually be used to prevent cancers before they can establish themselves among healthy cells, predicts Dr. Gutterman.

POWER TALKS

by U.S. Senator for Texas JOHN TOWER

Hindsight

WASHINGTON—With the benefit of hindsight, all things become clearer. Wisdom lost seems suddenly found.

Such is the case with the Congress now, which is having second thoughts about the Social Security law it passed last year. Instead of carefully considering effective steps then to restructure Social Security and its funding, Congress resolved to shore up the sagging system in the most expedient manner in order to calm fears that Social Security was on the brink of collapse. It passed sizeable tax increases and raised the wage base both for individuals and businesses.

Without question, action was needed. But not the action Congress took and certainly not with the dispatch the House and Senate showed. In a burst of egalitarian fervor, Congress chose to prop up the system with larger chunks of taxpayer dollars—$227 billion to be exact.

In so doing, it ignored more prudent measures many of us argued would be just as effective, yet would not add to mounting inflation.

Our alternative measure had two goals. First, it would have stabilized the financial drain on the system in the short term through changes in funding formulas and a transfer of dollars among varying funds. Corrected, most importantly, would have been a technically deficient amendment written into the 1972 law, promising to wipe out all but .3% of the deficit over the next 75 years.

Second, avoiding the current crisis in this manner would provide time to consider more thoroughly Social Security's needed top-to-bottom reforms over the long term.

Congress now is thinking better of that haste. Angry taxpayers and businessmen, realizing now who will pay for the system's solvency, have registered their complaints in Washington.

With 82% of the respondents to a recent Harris Survey naming inflation as their chief economic concern, those increased taxes seem a much less satisfactory answer than before to those Members of Congress who voted for them.

The public's fear of rising inflation is well justified. Prices are scaling upward. What is more, government policies over the past 16 months have been responsible for many of the increases. The minimum wage increase, which will raise wages in steps to $3.35 by 1981, a costly government-backed labor settlement in the coal industry raising the price of energy and steel, and a collection of costly import restrictions, all mean inflation will have plenty of momentum by the end of the year.

The Administration's planned tax cuts won't help matters much. Estimates that a family earning $20,000, for example, will realize a $300 tax break are out of touch with reality. That family will actually lose about $90 in real income by 1982 because of the combined effect of inflation and increased Social Security taxes. As income increases, the loss in purchasing power increases.

In passing Social Security tax increases last year, Congress surrendered to the pressures of the moment. Wary taxpayers must wonder now what alternatives will be considered, and if solutions will be less costly or any more responsible than last year's.

Based on government's past actions taxpayers have every reason to wonder.

The Consumer Alert
 by John L. Hill
 Attorney General

AUSTIN—Almost daily, we hear reports on the spiraling costs of medical care. The prospect of hospital rooms costing $100 and more per day, of a relatively minor injury or illness resulting in medical expenses in the hundreds and perhaps the thousands of dollars, is a frightening one for all of us.

However, the intelligent consumer should not purchase medical insurance out of fear rather than real need. Attorneys in our Consumer Protection Division say that the consumer selecting a medical insurance plan from among the many offered by insurance companies in Texas should be aware that the more comprehensive the benefits provided the more expensive the program will be. But there are several considerations that may allow you to reduce insurance costs without sacrificing benefits.

If you are covered under any group insurance program provided by an employer or employee organization, avoid duplicating coverage. Limit purchases of supplemental policies to those areas not covered specifically under your group plan. Before purchasing additional insurance, know exactly what your group insurance program provides. Also, remember that many group plans provide for coverage of family members which may be less expensive when purchased under the group program than if purchased on an individual basis.

When considering the purchase of additional insurance, first analyze your own financial ability to meet some medical expenses from sources other than insurance, perhaps from savings. If you are financially able to meet some expenses of medical care in this way, you may not need additional coverage.

If you are not a member of a group insurance program and must bear the expenses of your medical insurance, the task of balancing your needs against your ability to pay is more difficult. In most cases, it is very expensive to be 100 percent insured. Initially, you should determine how much of the financial burden you can reasonably afford to bear yourself. A policy providing for a $250, $500, or even $1,000 deductible, meaning you pay that much before policy coverage begins, generally will be considerably less expensive than one providing for "first dollar" coverage.

There are many limited coverage policies available which provide coverage only for a particular disease, such as cancer. Although, this coverage may be desirable, you should be aware of the limited benefits provided under such policies.

Many insurance policies will not cover a medical condition existing prior to the purchase of the policy. When making application for insurance, be careful to answer all questions relating to age and prior medical history fully and truthfully. Failure to do so may result in denial of your claim at some later date.

A most helpful and useful source for information regarding insurance companies is the State Board of Insurance in Austin. In addition, you can contact our Insurance, Banking, and Securities Division and our Consumer Protection Division in Austin, Dallas, San Antonio, Houston, Lubbock, El Paso, or McAllen for information regarding complaints about insurance companies. If you live outside these areas, call toll-free: 1-800-252-9236.

gets seedling johnsongrass

The surface-applied soybean herbicide that adds punch to your tank-mix.

At standard rates! Now, that's punch! That's Surflan from Elanco. The herbicide that adds seedling johnsongrass control to your surface-applied tank-mix. A 1/2" rain puts Surflan to work controlling seedling johnsongrass, plus many other tough annual grasses and weeds. Surflan waits up to three weeks for rain.

But if you don't get rain, don't panic. Shallow incorporation of Surflan will see you through to combining. Talk to your farm chemical supplier about a Surflan tank-mix today. Elanco Products Company, A Division of Eli Lilly and Company, Indianapolis, IN 46206, U.S.A.

For best results, always read and follow label directions.
