Farm Problem Still Unsolved After Five Years, Three Bills

By Joseph W. LaBine

Agriculture

Since 1933, Franklin Roosevelt's administration has enacted three major agriculture laws...

No business can live by spending alone. To match its $3,000,000,000 outlay, Farm Relief's five-year income has been only $969,258,000...

By last week it looked like this latest panacea was failing. To Henry Wallace in Washington came reports of good weather and bountiful crops...

That Henry Wallace deserved sympathy, was plain. Whether he would get it, was something else. To his office he called reporters, defending his department against charges that farm income has announcement was forthcoming, newsmen got their heads together, decided Jim Farley had urged the President to push his "purge" of Maryland's Sen. Millard E. Tydings...

In Mississippi, where Democratic nomination is tantamount to election, all seven incumbent congressmen were renominated by primary voters.

Religion

In a cabin near Merced, Calif., Mrs. Ola Irene Harwell sat reading the Bible to her husband and two small sons.

"Therefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee cut them off and cast them from thee; it is better for thee to enter life halt or maimed than having two hands or feet to be cast into everlasting fire."

She read the ninth verse: "And if thine eye offend thee pluck it out and cast it from thee; it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire."

Finishing, Mrs. Harwell picked up her scissors, walked to the woodshed and gouged out one eye, hacked off one hand. Next day at a Merced hospital physicians said she would live.

Miscellany

By seven o'clock one night last week, Chicago's mammoth Soldier field was filled with 100,000 jitterbugs come to enjoy a jam session. Outside, as police closed the gates, milled thousands of other swing addicts who could not get in to hear 20 prominent dance orchestras or watch amateur swingsters swing it.

In Rome, the Imperial Japanese empire bestowed on Benito Mussolini its highest decoration for a foreigner, the Supreme Order of the Chrysanthemum.

Foreign

To cope with military-mad Adolf Hitler has been France's biggest problem since the Nazi war leader quit the League of Nations. As Germany advanced her fortifications along the French frontier, Paris took counter steps, designed her magnificent Maginot line.

Jerking vacationing Frenchmen from their midsummer sluggishness, he suddenly proposed extending the 40-hour week to 48 hours, thereby boosting war industries, increasing general manufacturing output and aiding recovery.

If he expected radical France to take this pronouncement quietly, M. Daladier was badly mistaken. Two cabinet members quickly resigned. Next day, Socialist Leader Leon Blum, whose cabinet was overthrown last spring, threatened to withdraw government support of his party. Paris labor unions met, planning a countermove. Two hundred thousand miners threatened to strike by September 15.

By week's end a potentially dangerous situation was apparently smoothed out. Said Leon Blum's party newspaper: "We do not exploit the difficulties which Daladier himself has created. The hour is too grave for that. Next evening M. Blum and M. Daladier talked half an hour over the telephone, seeking conciliation to avoid a crisis while Germany is strutting her military strength. Still unsolved, however, was the problem of finding jobs for 340,000 unemployed now on relief—30,000 more than a year ago. Apparently a longer week would only make this number larger.

Labor

Last week American workers could look to September as the biggest month of their year. That widely observed Labor day falls in September was incidental. What promised to make news was another outbreak of the tiff between William Green's American Federation of Labor and John Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

At Atlantic City, A. F. of L.'s executive council made plans for its annual meeting in Houston. At Washington, C. I. O. thought about its first constitutional convention scheduled tentatively in September or October. That each group would lambast the other was a certainty, but the biggest lambasting could be expected not at Houston or Washington, but at Mexico City. There, on September 5, Mexican and South Central American labor unions meet under leadership of Vincente Lombardo Toledano, a Mexican labor chief, whom Mr. Green says is "either the communist or extremely radical."

Since Mr. Lewis will attend the Mexico City affair, his A. F. of L. foes decided last week that C. I. O. plans expansion into new fields, competing with the dormant Pan-American Federation of Labor, which has Mr. Green's blessing.

Only one ray of hope appeared for labor peace. To Washington's C. I. O. headquarters came David Dubinsky, whose International Ladies Garment Workers are still technically affiliated with A. F. of L. despite their suspension in August, 1936. Since the garment workers decided last May to make one more overture to close the breach between labor's two battling factions, observers thought Mr. Dubinsky and Mr. Lewis had talked of peace. If so, perhaps garment-making ladies can succeed where war-making labor leaders have failed.

War

Sweltering in 140-degree heat, Japanese troops captured Juichang for their first notable victory since the occupation of Kiuikiang on July 26. Still 110 miles from their objective, Hankow, Nipponese warriors could anticipate strong resistance from 1,000,000 soldiers and 200,000 civilians which China had reportedly mobilized.

For more than one year England has labored to perfect a 27-nation plan for withdrawal of foreign troops from war-torn Spain. Last Eastertide, the Anglo-Italian friendship pact carried an "unwritten agreement" that Benito Mussolini would co-operate in this ambitious plan. But fortnight ago Rebel Generalissimo Francisco Franco bluntly rejected the non-intervention idea, effectively shattering the Anglo-Italian pact.

At Rome one day last week, British Charge d'Affaires Sir Noel Charles paid a visit to Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister. Surprise stole across his face as Count Ciano formally announced that Rome is sending new reinforcements to Generalissimo Franco, hoping to end the war before winter.

Simultaneously, 80,000 rebels were hurled against Catalonia's western boundary, driving back eight loyalist divisions.

Aviation

At East Aurora, N. Y., Aviator Frank Hawks and Broker J. Hazard Campbell entered an airplane, delayed their takeoff while a friend gave Commander Hawks a four-leaf clover for "good luck." Minutes later their ship soared, tripped over telephone wires, crashed. At a Buffalo hospital died the man who set a non-stop Los Angeles to New York record in 1929. Later, Broker Campbell also died.

Forty-five per cent of the stock in China National Aviation company belongs to Pan-American Airways. One day last week, Pilot Hugh L. Woods was flying a China National liner near Canton when Japanese warplanes dove into sight, forcing him to the ground. While Pilot Woods watched, helpless, 14 Chinese passengers were machine-gunned to death. Next day Pan-American asked the United States government for protection.

People

In January, 1937, Columbia university's Roswell Magill left his academic post, became the United States treasury's chief tax expert. Last week Roswell Magill made use of his previous understanding with Franklin Roosevelt, resigning to teach law once more.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Save time with mock smoking.

IF SMOCKING seems to be time consuming, here is a short cut that saves hours. The first step is to shirr the material by machine. Loosen the tension slightly and stitch in straight rows; then pull up the bobbin thread to gather the material.

You will note in the sketch that some of the simple hand stitches are made over two rows of gathers and the others over a single row. Much of the beauty of mock smoking depends upon the spacing of the rows. The double rows of gathers in the sketch, No. 2 and 4, are 3/4-inch apart. The space between these and the single rows should be about 3/4-inch.

Another important point is the choice of colors and an interesting variety of stitches. In the arrangement shown here, rows 1, 3 and 5 are made in the darkest color by back-stitching over the gathers as in row 5 and then working loop-stitches through the back-stitches as in row 1. Row 2 is a version of plain feather stitching, and row 4 is done in the Creton stitch. Variations of all of these stitches and dozens of others that will be new to you and your friends are fully illustrated in Book 2 offered herewith.

Are you ready for birthdays; and the next church bazaar? Do you turn time into money with things to sell? Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book 2 has helped thousands of women. It is full of new ideas for things you can make in your spare time. If your home is your hobby you will also want Book 1—Sewing for the Home Decorator. Order by number enclosing 25 cents for each book. If you order both books, a leaflet on crazypatch quilts with 36 authentic stitches will be included free. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Strange Facts

Boy's Name on Coronation Chair

THE famous coronation chair in which all English kings sit for their coronation bears the name of a British school boy. The boy's name is carved in the oak seat. Tradition tells that two Westminster school boys made a bet. P. Abbot bet that he would sleep alone all night in Westminster abbey. The boy wanted to prove that he had stayed in the great dark church which contains the royal dust of Edward the Confessor, the bones of Chaucer, Sir Isaac Newton and many other famous men of Britain. In the chapel of Edward the Confessor is the oak coronation chair. In the seat is carved "P. Abbot slept in this chair January 4, 1801."

Only once has the coronation chair been taken from the abbey was during the time of Oliver Cromwell. It was moved to Westminster hall when Cromwell was installed as Lord Protector. The same famous chair was used in May when George VI was crowned in Westminster abbey.

Humor From the Soil

There is a kind of sturdy humor in the country that the city does not know. A humor that grows straight out of the soil. There may be wit in the city, but wit deals with words; humor with life.

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

Save Ironing.—If sheets are hung on the line dripping wet the weight of the water pulls them down and removes most of the wrinkles. They may then be folded neatly without ironing when dry.

Hanging Pictures.—Pictures should be hung about at the level of the eye, but since they also are to be hung in relation to the furniture groups, it is sometimes better to hang one below eye level over a low table or desk, or above eye level over a high chest.

Left-Over Juice.—Save the juice from canned pineapple and the liquid from maraschino cherries to use when making fruit punch.

Perspiration Marks.—To remove perspiration marks from white silk, mix some bicarbonate of soda to a stiff paste with cold water. Spread thickly on the parts and leave for an hour or so before washing. This will also remove scorch marks if they are not very bad.

Clean With Soda.—If there is a constant smell of burning when cooking is going on, examine gas burners. They are probably filled with sediment from "boilovers."

Economy Note.—Pieces of ribbon that come on gift boxes may be utilized in making shoulder straps for underwear. Cut them into six or eight-inch strips.

CHAPTER I

Hale settled deeper into the office chair and kept his brown eyes on Casper Kneeland's face. Kneeland had been "Uncle Cass" the last time they met. That was 18 years ago, out in the Northwest, when Hale himself had been a boy of ten. Kneeland was not "Uncle Cass" now. He was an impressive, successful, middle-aged New York business man. He had made a fortune by inventing a simple article widely known as Kneeland's Safety Catch. He was busy, preoccupied, and rather short of memory concerning ten-year-olds. He had welcomed Hale into the office suite of his factory with a handshake and a business-like smile. Now he was "making talk," and Hale resented it.

Kneeland might have forgotten a ten-year-old godchild, the caller told himself. He should not have forgotten that godchild's father. Hale Senior had been Kneeland's first partner and the closest friend of his youth. It had been a fine friendship. It had impressed the little boy. Yet here, 18 years later, was a Casper Kneeland equally vague in memory of the Hales, father and son, and talking too smugly, the young man thought, about his interests.

Listening to him, as the man sat at his handsome flat-top desk and poured out his trickle of small talk, Hale realized that "Uncle Cass" had not yet wearied of the flavor of his success. He rolled it on his tongue. He betrayed a tendency to enumerate his various possessions.

"We're at our Camp now, but of course I keep my town house open all summer," Kneeland was saying, apropos of the unseasonable June heat. "Joan, my niece, is always running into New York for a day or two, even in the hottest weather. And Hosanna (my sister, who joined my family after we came East), would live in New York 12 months a year if I'd let her. She doesn't care much for seashore life. It suits me down to the ground. I'd like nothing better than to put up at Halcyon Camp the first of June and stay there till the first of November. Can't quite manage that, of course, but I come as near it as I can."

"I can usually get away from here Friday night and stay at the Camp till Monday," he went on, as Hale merely nodded. "And I always put in all of August there. Pines and spruces around and behind you, the whole Atlantic in front of you, good boating, fishing, swimming. We've got a modest place, but plenty of room. Say—by Jove!"

He stopped short under the impact of an idea that had just hit him, and stared at his caller. "Why don't you get out of this even and make the Camp a visit?" he rushed on after a second's hesitation. "The newspapers say this will be the hottest June we've ever had. It will do you no end of good to loaf awhile. Didn't you say you had just had a stiff bout of pneumonia in Spain?"

That pneumonia is ancient history now," young Rex assured Kneeland. "I was all right again a week before I sailed for home."

"Landed this morning, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir, and I'm hustling out to Chicago. But I once promised Dad I'd never go through New York without looking you up."

"Glad you did, my boy," Kneeland spoke absently, his mind full of the sudden idea that had come to him. "What are you going to do in Chicago?" he added in the same tone.

"Get a job, I hope."

"June is no time to make a start," Kneeland pointed out, "in Chicago or anywhere else. By the way, what's your line?"

He didn't even remember that, Rex reflected, though Hale Senior had written him about it some years before with paternal pride.

"Civil engineering," Kneeland nodded.

"No use trying to find a job now," he underlined. "It can't be done. Everything's dead—till fall, anyway. I'll tell you the thing to do. You're a big athletic chap, but you need building up. You're too thin for your six feet, and your color isn't right. Come down to Halcyon Camp and spend the summer there. It will buck you up. I call it Halcyon Camp," he added complacently, "because I want it to be a serene and happy place. I want everyone to be comfortable there."

Hale was surprised and showed it. "Oh, thanks awfully," he said, "but I couldn't do that!"

"Why not?" The question was sharply imperative. Evidently Kneeland was not a man who liked opposition.

"It's awfully kind of you, sir. It takes my breath away. But—I can't unload myself on your household. The women of your family might not like it."

"The women of my family are my sister, Hosanna, who is fifty, and my niece, Joan, who is twenty-one. They realize that I'm boss of the house. Julia, my wife, died 10 years ago. Your mother's dead, too, isn't she?" he broke off to ask.

"Yes, sir. She died very suddenly just after I entered college. I couldn't even get home in time to see her."

"Any brothers and sisters?"

"No, sir."

"I remember Rex writing that your mother was gone. It was the same year my wife died."

That, young Hale reflected, was why he remembered it. Kneeland's memory would not long hold anything not directly connected with his own interests.

"You ought to remember my wife," he brought out.

"Yes, sir, I remember her well. She was mighty good to me," Rex grinned. "She was always filling me up with cookies and a kind of raisin bread I've never forgotten."

Kneeland's round, smooth face shadowed.

"She was a fine woman," he testified. "Her last year was very tragic. I don't know whether I wrote your father about it but—she had lost her mind."

Rex shook his head.

"We didn't know that," he said sympathetically. "At least I didn't. Father may have, but he never spoke of it. He was awfully cut up by Mother's death about that time."

Kneeland sighed and dismissed both dead women from his mind with an abruptness Hale knew now was characteristic. He returned to the congenial topic of his camp.

"Hosanna and Joan both realize that the Camp is mine, not theirs," he continued, as if there had been no interruption. "I invite any friends I want to visit it. So do they. We have three house-guests there now. Joan usually has some girl friends there, but she's out of sorts this summer and doesn't seem to want them. I've plenty of servants to look after everybody." The unctuous note crept back into his voice.

"There's a cook—and a good one, if I do say it. There's a maid, a butler-valet, and a handy man. We're supposed to be living a primitive life. We're off the main line and away from the social set. But we have all the comforts—good plumbing, plenty of bathrooms, big fireplaces for cool days. You can take the 4:30 train and be there in time for dinner tonight. I can't go till Friday, or I'd drive you down."

"Thanks again. But I really don't think—"

"Besides," Kneeland interrupted, "you can make yourself useful."

"Oh, that's different. How?" Kneeland smiled at the change in the youngster's face. The smile was more likable than the first glimpse of it had been. It banished the expression of anxiety that sat so oddly on the manufacturer's round disc. He was suddenly a good-looking man in the early fifties, plump, slightly bald, pleasant-featured, human and engaging. Five minutes before he had seemed a harassed and nervous man in the sixties. Rex did not know that a similar change had wrought its miracle in his own face. He waited eagerly for his host's reply.

"In lots of ways. For one thing, I've no secretary at the Camp. My son Herbert, twenty-two now, was supposed to do that job. But he's no good this summer—always 10 miles away when I want him. He make myself useful if I can. But I won't go tonight, thanks. I'll stay over tomorrow and get a few things I'll need for camp life. Naturally, I didn't bring much in the line of clothes back from Spain."

"Then that's settled. Go any time you like. I'll telephone Hosanna that you're coming. Wait. I'll give you a check for expenses."

"Nothing doing, thank you. I'll pay my own way till I see how much bluff you're giving me about this job. I suspect that you're putting over today's good deed."

"Nothing like it. There will be work for you, all right."

The haggard look abruptly returned to Kneeland's face. For an instant he seemed old again, and very tired. There was something pathetic in the eyes he fixed on Hale. Then he suddenly recalled that the good-looking young giant before him had been a darned nice kid.

"I can't thank you enough, Mr. Kneeland," Hale got up.

"Uncle Cass," my boy. That's what it used to be a thousand years ago."

He had remembered his godson at last.

"Thank you, sir. By the way, where is the Camp?"

"Down on Long Island," Kneeland laughed and wrote the address for him.

Hale put in the next day shopping. The experience decreased his supply of ready cash but increasingly raised his spirits. He was not an economical young man, and even before the prospect of a camp visit he had realized that he must start his new life with a suitable American wardrobe. There were not many temptations to be sartorially dashing in Spain. There were plenty today, and he yielded to them with an abandon that endeared him to clerks. Moreover it was a pleasure to salesmen to fit him. They let him grasp their impression that he would do credit to the suits and shirts and ties and shoes and knickerbockers he was buying. His figure was excellent and his copper-colored hair and brown eyes would set off the heather mixtures he selected for outdoor wear. He would look well in his white flannels, too. He was fussy about shirts and ties, and the clerks who served him in those departments respected his knowledge. This young man knew what went with his coloring. Hale explained his satisfaction in his new purchases with an engaging grin.

"We won't talk about salary till I find out whether there's really anything for me to do. I'll go, and doesn't seem to be interested. Flocks by himself and that sort of thing. He isn't even much use to Joan. He's off on his own affairs, whatever they are. Another young man around the place will be a god-send to the girl." His smile widened. "I'll pay you a salary, of course. Just thought of it," he added candidly.

Hale shook his head.

"We won't talk about salary till I find out whether there's really anything for me to do. I'll go, and

Buda and Pest Are United by Fifth Danube Bridge; Built by Hungarians

The fifth bridge to span the Danube between Buda and Pest is open to the public, writes the Budapest correspondent of the London Sunday Observer. The bridge, which stands near the Horthy Miklos road, is a plain solid structure designed by Hungarian architects and built from Hungarian materials by Hungarian workmen. It indicates the swift development of the capital in the last 10 years, for it opens new prospects over a district which not long ago was marshy land.

The fifth bridge commemorates both the World war and the post-war period and brings the history of the city up to date. A hundred years ago the only means of crossing the Danube was a bridge made of 42 boats, which was taken apart and stored in winter. When the ice formed the citizens walked across the river from one town to the other.

The first bridge to be built was the chain bridge, below the royal palace, after Count Szechenyi had struggled for seven years to carry through the plan. The chain bridge cost 6,500,000 florins, and the toll was two farthings. It was opened in December, 1849.

Twenty-seven years later the Margaret bridge was built by a French engineer named Gouin; not by Eiffel, who was then director in the firm which employed him. The bridge was opened by the suicide of several persons who threw themselves down from its parapets, and immortalized by Arany in his ballad on the scene.

The Francis Joseph bridge was built in 1896 for the Hungarian millennium and was opened by the emperor hammering a silver nail into the construction. During the revolution this nail was lost, but was later found, and may now be seen under glass.

Weather Affects Bird Flight
Weather conditions affect the altitude of bird flight. On nights of rain and fog, birds fly close to the earth. Wind currents also are a great deterrent to bird migration, as head winds increase the labor of flight and, if at all strong, cut down the speed of flight. Moderate cross, quartering or light winds from other directions seem to offer the best air-movement conditions, according to experts in bird lore.

The party should have been gay

... but something sinister hung over this rich man's summer estate—over the owner's sister Miss Hosanna, "a pin cushion of a woman;" over his niece Joan, and his son Bert; over a young scientist, Dr. Craig; over a man named Ainsworth and over Mrs. Spencer Forbes, a neurotic, sharp-tongued, social-minded woman.

Grim and threatening mysteries develop and are shrewdly and logically solved by young Rex Hale, hired to find out what ailed these unhappy people. In doing so, he found romance and happiness himself. It's the smoothest mystery-romance you've ever read!

Will Your Child Be Ready For School?

Noted Food Authority Outlines a Correct Diet for the Growing Youngster

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

WHEN school closed last June, most parents looked forward to the long weeks ahead when their children could play in the sunshine, get plenty of rest, and build up a splendid fund of vitality to last them all through the new school year.

Some mothers resolved to do everything possible to prevent a recurrence of last season's disheartening colds.

Others planned to look into a blood-building diet that would give Mary or Johnnie more pep and rosier cheeks. Perhaps there were teeth that required attention, or a nose or throat condition to be corrected. Now, within a few weeks, the children will be returning to school, or in some cases beginning their school life. Every mother should ask herself whether she has made the most of the opportunities offered by the vacation period.

Have you put forth a conscientious effort toward making your children 100 per cent fit for school? If not, there is still time! You cannot finish the job in a few weeks, but you can make a good start. And you owe it to your children to begin at once. For whether they enjoy school or find it tedious, whether they make excellent records or lag behind their fellows, depends in large measure upon their fitness.

Every child is entitled to good health, safeguarded by high resistance. And in this age of amazing scientific discoveries, every child should enjoy these blessings.

Top health and resistance to disease are the result of an intelligently planned and carefully executed health program. It should include proper diet, adequate sleep and rest, an abundance of sunshine and fresh air, freedom from physical defects, and the avoidance of fatigue.

Diet—the Key to Health
Perhaps the most important factor of all is the carefully balanced diet. When planned to take full advantage of modern nutritional discoveries, it will insure normal growth and health, and build up high resistance that is like a protecting wall to safeguard your children.

With our present knowledge of the power of food, there should not be one ill-nourished child in our land. Yet the spectre of malnutrition rears its ugly head among children of the well-to-do as well as in homes where money is scarce. For, as a rule, it is not lack of money, but lack of knowledge of food values, or faulty eating habits which are responsible for this tragedy.

Don't Overlook Protective Foods
A child's diet should be built upon a foundation of the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables. Milk takes precedence over all of these because it is an absolute necessity if children are to develop strong, straight bones and sound teeth.

The penalty for breaking this fundamental rule is retarded growth, fragile, crooked bones, decayed teeth and possibly nervousness. How dare any mother inflict such punishment upon her children? A fine amount of calcium, high grade protein, and some of every known vitamin can be furnished so easily by providing children with a quart of milk daily—either as a beverage, or in soups, cream sauces, puddings, cocoa or with cereals.

For desserts, choose rice, tapioca and bread puddings; gelatine, either plain or with fruit; fresh or stewed fruit; milk sherbets or ice cream.

In planning meals for children, it is important at all times to keep the menus simple, and prepare foods so that they are appetizing and easily digestible.

Aids to Good Nutrition
It is important also to bear in mind that the most perfect diet will not provide sound nutrition unless the food is properly digested and assimilated. Adequate sleep and rest, which do away with fatigue, are therefore essential. However perfect the diet, overexertion and undue fatigue, if continued, will soon bring about a state of lowered resistance.

In planning a program of daily living that will make and keep your children fit for school, put food first. But consider also rest, fresh air and sunshine, and regular habits. It would be well, too, to check up on the child's general health before he returns to school, so that he will not be handicapped by some physical defect, such as bad teeth, diseased tonsils, faulty vision or impaired hearing—all of which hinder the ability to learn.

Never forget for a moment that a child's happiness and success are closely related to his health. All mothers should remember this, for it is no exaggeration to say that THE POWER OF A NATION DEPENDS UPON THE HEALTH OF ITS CHILDREN.

This valuable bulletin shows, in chart form, the foods that every child should have every day. Contains sample menus, and also shows how inexpensive foods may be substituted for those that are high in price to provide the same food values.

Just send your request on a postcard to C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

Eggs rank next to milk in importance, because of their protein, iron and vitamins. A child's diet should normally include one egg daily, or at least three or four weekly.

Green, leafy vegetables must not be neglected, as they supply iron and precious vitamins. Yellow vegetables, such as carrots and sweet potatoes are notable as a source of vitamin A.

Fruits, especially the citrus varieties, are important for their vitamin C, which helps to safeguard the health of teeth and gums. However, tomatoes, or tomato juice may also be used as a source of this vitamin. Bananas are an excellent fruit for children. Dried fruits furnish iron and are high in energy values. Fruits and vegetables in general are likewise an important aid to regular elimination.

As a rule, school children may have lean meat, fish, chicken or liver once a day, and a second protein food, such as cheese or legumes, is usually introduced at another meal.

Energy Foods in Abundance
There must be plenty of energy foods, such as potatoes, rice, macaroni, bread and butter, and cereals, to help prevent the physical fatigue which lowers resistance. At least one starchy food belongs in every meal.

A well-cooked cereal should be provided once daily; in warm weather a ready-to-eat cereal may be used instead. In order to provide an abundance of minerals, and vitamin B, nutritionists place emphasis upon the whole grain varieties.

For desserts, choose rice, tapioca and bread puddings; gelatine, either plain or with fruit; fresh or stewed fruit; milk sherbets or ice cream.

FEED PRICE FAVORABLE FOR MILK PRODUCTION

Austin, Texas, Aug. 29.—A substantial increase in the manufacture of American cheese in Texas occurred during July as compared with the corresponding month last year, while creamery butter production was slightly above a year ago, according to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research. Ice cream production continued the margin of decline from a year ago noted in previous reports.

Reports from representative groups of establishments show an increase in production of creamery butter of 23 per cent over July last year, while the increase in cheese production was 17 per cent. Ice cream manufacture was down 7.8 per cent.

Don't Treat Good Seed Like a Stepchild

Texas Breeder-Feeder Association By T. C. Richardson, Secretary

At this time of the year seed for fall crops demand consideration. Whether for fall garden or field crops, it is easier and usually cheaper to buy seed ahead of the main planting season. It is just too bad, with the ground all ready and the season right, the seed are not on hand and local seed stores have sold out. One or two days difference in planting under the erratic weather and soil moisture conditions of the Southwest, often means the difference between a good stand and a poor one, and a poor stand means a poor yield. In the fall, when approaching winter limits growth, planting at the proper time and under the best possible conditions, is even more important than in spring.

Getting the land ready-making a good seed-bed is (next to good seed) the best insurance of getting a good stand and giving the seedlings a healthy start in life. It is not too much to say that, of all things within the farmer's control, good seed and a good seed-bed are the most important factor in production. It is too late to materially improve the condition of the soil by tillage after the crop is growing, and seed worth planting deserve something better than the treatment of a step-child.

Different crops require different seed-bed preparation, but no preparation fit for planting can be done after planting time is upon us. Crops which need a firm seed-bed must be anticipated by plowing long enough in advance to permit the soil to settle, or else extra work must be done with cultipacker or some substitute to firm the sub-surface and pulverize the surface soil.

The fall garden is the most important piece of ground on the farm, and will amply repay all the work put into it before planting time. In a large measure the same is true of field crops, with especial emphasis on alfalfa.

sweet clover, vetch and small grass seeds which must be covered lightly by fine soil, and yet require a firm subsoil.

The Southwest is planting more oats, barley, wheat, rye grass and clovers for winter grazing than ever before, and the earlier they are sown the more grazing may be expected. Where they are grown primarily for the grain, the small grains will often pay a profit from grazing alone. In the colder sections of the Southwest wheat and rye grass, which are more resistant to cold than oats or barley, furnish most winter grazing. Rye grass is also increasing in popularity in the Gulf Coast region where rust often shortens the grazing period of oats or barley.

The Texas Experiment Station (Bulletin No. 539) reports that barley furnished more fall and early winter grazing than other crops, but Italian rye grass supplied by far the greatest amount of grazing in March, April and May. The two on the same farm give a much longer grazing season than any one crop, and the rye grass is at its best after livestock must be removed from fields, which are expected to produce a grain crop.

Green winter pastures supply the all-important vitamins which dry feed lacks, and contribute greatly to the health and growth on livestock and poultry. The time is fast approaching when every good farmer will show his winter pastures as regularly as the season come around.

It is already a common practice to graze wheat, oats and barley where they are grown for grain, and if judiciously practiced, does not reduce the grain crop. In fact under some conditions the yield of grain is increased by grazing.

Dairy cows, sheep and laying hens probably respond most profitably to green winter pastures, but all kinds of livestock thrive better and cost less to produce through the use of pastures, winter or summer.

feed and price of milk continues favorable for milk production, accounting for the continued increase of cheese and butter production over a year ago," the report said. "But ice cream consumption continues on a lower level because of the decline in urban pay rolls."

BAPTIST CHURCH

Last Sunday was indeed a good day for us, great crowds came both in the Sunday School and the preaching service, the offering was good.

Our people are working together in a fine way for the advancement of the Lord's work. Our meeting was great in many ways, thank God for it all. We are going on Brother, if you don't want to get left get on Board, no time to wait, the work must be done, it's Gods work.

Something to think about. Last Sunday evening while the Crowd was gatherin, while the Children were passing to and from the Church to the Basement two of Loraine Big Business Men, I mean Big men, men that think of their own greatness, men that feel their keeping, men that you would think had an interest in their fellowman, men that must have the track clear when they start, don't matter about Church or small children, they must have a clear track.

Well, these great men passed the Church going about 50 or 60 miles an hour, 3 little Girls were just ready to cross from the Church to the Basement while one of these great men was passing going 50 miles, an hour, in a few minutes another great man came along. Better look out we have men that cant wait. Church, Children, no mater they must go.

Loraine is one of the best towns in Texas but I wonder if they have a speed law? If so it had better be enforced or, soon Loraine will bow her head in grief and go with some of your friends to the silent City of the Dead with their loved ones. School is soon to start the Streets will be full of Children. Better see these great men and ask them to be careful.

We are building a room for the nursery and it will be completed by Sunday. So bring your babies they will be taken care of.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

BY JULIAN CAPERS JR.

Austin—The free and untrammelled Democracy of Texas, unwilling to take dictation from the gubernatorial nominee or anybody else, elected, four of the six candidates who were blessed by the O'Daniel nod, defeated two others, and called it a day. They sprang some surprises, broke some precedents, and the politically minded this week turned their attention to the Democratic State convention at Beaumont for next developments in the most hectic political year in a decade in Texas. The convention meets September 11, 12, and 13th. There, first definite declarations of Governor-Nominate W. Lee O'Daniel's legislative program, and how he will finance the $30 pensions which he has declared to be the first matter to be considered, will likely be made.

SPECIAL SESSION TALK

In the wake of the election, Austin was filled with rumors and whispers. Gov Allred declared this week he will call a special session to authorize formation of a State corporation to build a $3,000,000 State office building, if the Federal Government gives a grant for approximately 45 percent, and a loan on bonds to be issued by the corporation for the balance. Rents now paid by State departments to private landlords would be used to retire the bonds, if the Legislature authorizes them. Rents total about $75,000 annually.

With the defeat of the veteran C. V. Terrell as Railroad Commissioner by Jerry Sadler, there were rumors that creation of a special oil and gas commission might be submitted also, together with legislation to take from the hands of the Attorney General the handling of confiscated oil. Previous efforts to create an oil and gas commission have uniformly met defeat, the last test coming during the closing days of "Ma" Ferguson's administration.

Another interesting report was that Ernest O. Thompson had been offered the post of president of West Texas Tech, and might resign from the Commission to accept it. Oil men throughout the State were excited over the rumor and were reported bringing pressure to bear upon Thompson to remain on the commission. Thompson is regarded as a certain candidate for Governor, either two or four years from now, and has four years yet to serve as Railroad Commissioner. The college post would take him out of public affairs, and, although he probably will be a minority member of the Commission, with Lon Smith and Sadler aligned against him after January 1, many of his closest friends believe he will remain on the Commission. Some of them think Thompson, as a minority member of the Commission, might make considerable political capital for himself for a gubernatorial race later on.

MEXICAN OIL SITUATION

Still tied up at Houston at the weekend was the 100,000 barrel of Mexican oil seized by Federal customs authorities, after the vigilance of the Railroad Commission had prevented the shipment being entered as crude oil, when an analysis showed it to be crude tops, with a 60 percent gasoline content. Crude takes a customs duty of one-half cent a gallon. Crude tops takes a duty of 2½ cents a gallon. The customs authorities had already passed the shipment, when the railroad commission called their attention to the "error" which would have lost the customs about $85,000 in duties.

Meanwhile, Texas oilmen were watching with keenest interest the effect of the latest note sent to Mexico by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, demanding arbitration of American claims for land "expropriated" by Mexico. The controversy deals with about $10,000,000 of American-owned land seized, but the same principles apply to the seizure of $150,000,000 of American oil properties seized at a later date by the Mexican. Commissioner Ernest Thompson and C. V. Terrell during the week protested vigorously against the importation of "stolen" oil into Texas from Mexico. Hull's note is said by Washington dispatches to be the strongest sent by this country to a foreign government in years. Texas' interest, of course, lies in the possibilities of a flood of Mexican seized oil being sent into Texas where production is being rigorously curtailed to prevent flooding an already over-filled market.

POST ELECTION NOTES

Defeat of C. V. Terrell marks the first time in history that a Texas Railroad Commissioner has failed re-election, and ends a career in which Judge Terrell has continuously held public office for over half a century. Gov. Allred probably will resign early in September, and Lt. Gov. Walter Woodul, defeated by Gerald C. Mann, of Dallas, for Attorney General, will serve out his unexpired term as the State's chief executive. In view of O'Daniel's support of Woodul, it is believed the nominee will be consulted by Woodul about matters to be submitted at the special session. Dallas County, which likes to beat its Senators after one term, sends Bill Graves, a former city commissioner, to the State Senate to replace Claude Westerfeld. The Twenty Seventh District, comprising the Valley and the Winter Garden area, replaced Jim Neal, the Miranda City ranchman, with Rogers Kelley, brilliant young district attorney of Hidalgo county. Congressman McFarlane, of Wichita Falls, who has had difficulty being re-elected almost every two years, succumbed by Ed Gossett, despite a Rooseveltian gesture in behalf of McFarlane. Lindley Beckworth House member from East Texas, outran Grady Gentry, to become a Texas congressman succeeding another Roosevelt-blessed member, Morgan Sanders. Most surprising upset of the election was the handy defeat of Bill McDonald, Land Commissioner, seeking a second term, by youthful Bascom Giles, of Austin. Giles election will restore an ancient Land Office tradition, broken but a few times in 100 years, that the Commissioner should be a man with many years of experience in the office. McDonald smashed that tradition when he beat Major William Hawkins, a man out of the "land office family" two years ago. Giles who worked 17 years in the Land Of-ice, disapproved McDonald's policy of leasing State lands on a low cash and high royalty basis. Grady Woodruff, Senator from Decatur, the third member of the Senate in a run-off, was defeated by Rep. R. C. Lanning, of Jacksboro.

POULTRY

College Station—Aims of poultrymen have probably changed more in the past 20 years than in all previous history since the fowls was domesticated, according to Geo. P. McCarthy, poultry husbandman of the Texas A. & M. Extension Service.

Poultrymen are now concerned most with number and size of the eggs and the viability of birds, he said. More attention will be paid in the next three decades to extending the productive life of the hens beyond the first laying year which now ends the commercial usefulness of most birds.

"Poultrymen will continue to consider breed standards, but more stress will be laid to the economic angles of poultry," McCarthy predicted.

Research has discovered that certain characters are associated with the various breeds, the poultryman pointed out. The hen of the future, McCarthy believes, will not only have higher productive ability but will be able to continue production longer, in addition to being able to resist diseases more readily than the present stock.

COTTON COMING IN AT FAST CLIP NOW

Cotton picking in this section got under way in earnest this week. Already more than 100 bales have been ginned with an increasing folw of cotton day by day.

Some estimate that about as much will be ginned here this year as last, others are not quite so optimistic. A month ago it looked like last years crop would be doubled.

New Taxes Sure to Come, Senator Harrison Warns

Another Federal Deficit of Four Billion Dollars Faces Country; New Sources of Revenue Sought; More Persons to Be Hit.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON. — It requires a considerable amount of courage for an active politician to talk about more taxes in an election year, and it is a hopeful sign when one tells the truth about such a politically delicate matter.

But there is another federal treasury deficit of something like $4,000,000,000 staring us in the face, and the size of it indicates that no progress has been made whatsoever in curtailing federal spending.

Thirdly, the probable deficit seems to show there was at least some merit in the assertions by Senator Harrison and others in congress last winter that some of the New Deal policies are driving the country further into a hole instead of bringing it out.

Senator Harrison's statements constitute a warning that federal taxes must dig deeper. In effect, he told the country that the government has been taxing to the point where it can not expect any increased returns from the present sources, however heavy the levies, and that the scope of taxes must be extended and expanded.

More Persons to Be Hit by Federal Taxes

What does that mean? Simply, it means that in any new tax laws that are enacted, congress will include a greater number of persons within the realm of federal tax sources; people who never have paid taxes to the federal government before are going to pay them hereafter.

The reason I say there must be additional "hidden taxes," levies that are included in the cost to the consumer such as the cigarette tax, is that Senator Harrison's own statement shows there will be insufficient revenue raised by lowering the personal exemptions under the income tax laws or by making the tax heavier on those of, say, $10,000 annual income and above.

To Search for New Tax Possibilities

Senator Harrison's committee will search through all of the various tax possibilities in the next three or four months. It will have to do that. The house committee on ways and means, which considers tax legislation in the house, will not have the courage to go as far in adding to the tax burden.

The addition of new taxes is a serious matter, yet it appears that new taxes cannot be avoided. We have had our play time, our fun. We have danced; now, the fiddler must be paid.

Waste, wreckage, nit-wit plans and programs—all have cost billions of dollars.

As everyone knows, when new taxes are added, a greater percentage of the country's voting inhabitants are included.

So, maybe the veteran Senator Harrison has a two-fold purpose in mind, and it takes courage for him to have either one of the two ideas because he is in politics. Maybe he sees the necessity for substantial curtailment of federal spending and realizes at the same time that the life of a politician who opposes spending is a hard road.

I give him praise and wish him success, for preservation of our government is of considerably more moment than a few political lives.

This Is No Joke to Bankers of Country

Some time ago, I reported the existence within administration policies of quite contradictory plans. Here is a new one, and one that to me is quite laughable. It probably is not at all humorous to the bankers of the country, whether they be big bankers or little bankers in small towns.

To have a clear understanding of the circumstance, it is necessary to line up the several developments in the order of their appearance as government or administration policy.

First, it will be remembered how President Roosevelt ordered all banks closed (and some stayed closed) at the beginning of his administration. He followed that with legislation by congress that placed new restrictions on how the banks could loan money.

On top of this law, some 10 or 12 months later, Mr. Roosevelt lambasted the bankers for not making loans to business. He charged them with locking their vaults, called them cowards and what-nots, trying to force money out into the channels of trade when there were few business men doing enough business to pay interest on the money they were using.

Then, the urge came for deposit insurance. Mr. Roosevelt was not enthusiastic about any federal deposit insurance scheme, but Senator Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, had developed a terrible desire to have it.

Another Depression Was the Result

There came the time when Mr. Roosevelt's policies failed to work any better than those under President Hoover, and we had another depression on our hands. Mr. Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, either of his own volition or by White House urging, made several speeches and statements to the bankers as the depression got really bad.

Then came the climax, the peak, and the laugh. Hardly had Mr. Jones concluded his series of lectures to the bankers (who, according to the Jones picture, really did not want to make money) when another government agency gets into the play.

Said Mr. Crowley, in substance: Bankers, the FDIC insures your deposits up to $5,000 per depositor; thus they are protected. But that does not mean you can take a chance on unsound loans. You can't take any greater risk than you would if there was no insurance of the deposits.

Lesson for September 4

SAMUEL: SPIRITUAL REVIVAL

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 7:3-13. GOLDEN TEXT—Prepare your hearts unto the Lord, and serve him only. 1 Samuel 7:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Samuel Was Old. JUNIOR TOPIC—When Samuel Grew Old. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Putting God First. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Price Spiritual Revival?

"Revolutions are costly. The spiritual awakening which our country so much needs must begin with a spiritual deepening which the church so much needs. There is a price to be paid. . . . Strange gods must be put away, gods of worldly pleasure, worldly ambition, love of ease and self-gratification. It is the unwillingness to pay the price that keeps us from the richness and power of the full spiritual life" (Prof. L. M. Lowell).

Israel had come to the place where the people recognized that they were on the brink of national disaster. They knew they had come to the end of the trail, and were ready to do something about it.

I. Return Unto the Lord (v. 3). Samuel appears in his first public ministry to call on his people to return to the Lord. Back of that public act is the history of a godly life and devoted service to the Lord and to His nation.

The response of the people was wholehearted. They were thoroughly sick of their sin and separation from the favor of God. The earnest of their sincerity was their obedience to the admonition of Samuel that they turn from idolatry.

II. Put Away False Gods (vv. 3, 4). Israel had learned from their heathen neighbors to worship their false gods. These they must put away if God was to be able to bless them. The same prerequisite to spiritual revival exists today. But some may say, we do not worship heathen gods. Perhaps not, and yet one is astonished at the close similarity between the ritual and worship of some secret cults and orders and the ancient religions of heathendom.

The fact is that we have set up many new gods—money, fashion, social position, and what not. The command needs to go out again through God's messengers, "Put away the foreign gods."

III. Gather Together and Pray (vv. 5, 6).

Spiritual life thrives on the gathering together of God's people. The crisis in Israel was met by a great convocation of the people. We need to revive the great soul-stirring religious gatherings of a generation ago.

"I will pray," said Samuel. He was a great intercessor. (See I Sam. 15:11; Ps. 99:6; Jer. 15:1.) Revival never comes without a history of faithful intercession on the part of those whose hearts are really burdened. Ask yourself, How much have I really prayed for a revival in my church, my community, and my nation? If I should begin to pray in earnest, would not God hear me and answer?

IV. God Will Save Us (v. 8).

"Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save, neither is his ear heavy that it cannot hear" (Isa. 59:1). "Thus saith the Lord, I have I no power to deliver" (Isa. 50:1, 2). God saved Israel and delivered them out of the hands of their enemies. The Philistines, seeing them gathered together to pray, assumed that they were preparing to fight and attacked. In the previous battle at that very spot (I Sam. 4:1-10) Israel had fought with the weapons of men and been disgracefully defeated. Now they fought with the weapon of prayer and faith in God, and great was the victory.

America is valiantly battling against the social and economic problems of these distressing days but one fears that all too often the weapons are those of the arm of flesh which will fail us. Let us look up instead of to one another. "God will save us" (v. 8).

V. Ebenezer (v. 12). Our forefathers, familiar with the truth of Scripture, used biblical words in naming their children. The present generation all too often know the names simply as the strange signatures on old letters.

The word "Ebenezer" might well merit a bit of a revival itself. Here Israel had met a disastrous defeat. They were broken by it and had become an almost hopeless people. Now God had given them victory in the very same spot and they raised a stone of remembrance of God's help. The word "Ebenezer" means "stone of help," but also carries with it the meaning of Samuel's word, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us" (v. 12).

There is an inspiring word of hope here for every troubled soul. You may, like Israel, have fallen into sin. Your life may be defeated. You may be utterly discouraged. Return to the Lord, put away sin, gather with God's people, pray, and God will give you victory, even at the very point of former defeat.

Becoming, Practical Frocks

THE shops are full of beautiful new fabrics just crying to be made up in smart new fashions—and these patterns make it very easy to do your own sewing. When you do, of course, you can have many more clothes because it's so inexpensive to buy your own, fine quality fabrics—and then your clothes, and your daughter's, too, will have that distinctly made-to-order, well-fitted look that's more flattering and smart than anything else.

For Large Women.

This afternoon dress is carefully designed to look well on large figures. The v-neck, cut in one with the shoulders, makes your face look less full. The short, rippling sleeves minimize the size of your forearm—and they're so pretty and graceful, too. The skirt is smooth over the hips, and the bodice has necessary bust fullness. Here's a dress that will be your favorite, when you make it up in the prettiest silk crepe, georgette or sheer wool that you can find.
