Part of West Texas experiences tremor

By The Associated Press

A moderate earthquake rumbled through a large triangular area of West Texas today, with residents in San Angelo, Snyder, Abilene, Sweetwater and surrounding areas feeling the tremor.

One Scurry County rancher said it sounded like "animals on the roof."

No damage nor injuries were immediately reported.

The National Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo., placed the epicenter 20 miles north of Snyder at 6:47 a.m.

Snyder is about 120 miles of northwest of San Angelo, believed to be on the southern fringe of the quake.

Waverly Person of the earthquake service said the tremor measured between 4.75 and 5.0 on the Richter scale.

"You would expect damage from an earthquake this size in a populated area," Person said. He said earth tremors in West Texas are not uncommon.

The tremor was felt as far west as Andrews, near the New Mexico border.

San Angelo police said they received about 30 telephone calls from worried residents who reported that the floor and walls of their homes shook and some furniture moved.

One officer on the second floor of the police department said the tremor moved his typewriter across the desk.

The municipal air terminal at San Angelo said it also felt the control tower shake.

Snyder police also reported a large number of calls.

"I've had a lot of calls but no reports of injuries or damage," said Cathy Helms, the Snyder police dispatcher.

Police in Abilene, 70 miles southeast of Snyder, said they had several telephone calls.

Person said there was no indication at this time there will be more quakes.

The Richter scale indicates the energy released by an earthquake, as measured in ground motion recorded on a seismograph. Every increase of one number on the Richter scale means ground motion is 10 times greater. A quake measuring 4 on the scale can cause moderate damage, one of magnitude 5 can cause considerable damage in a populated area.

A quake of magnitude 2 is the smallest normally felt by humans. A quake of magnitude 7 is a major quake capable of causing widespread, heavy damage. The 1906 quake which devasted San Francisco hit 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Jane Neeley of Snyder said she had just gotten out of bed when the earth began shaking.

"I thought there had been an explosion of some kind. It sounded like a distant rumble of a train going by. It was weird."

A.M. Boyd of Snyder, Scurry County Chief Deputy Sheriff, said he was in bed when the tremor hit.

"My door was rattling like someone was knocking on it and my wife asked if the air conditioning was on."

The epicenter is near the Scurry County line with Kent County, which is mostly scrubby ranch land dotted with craggy mesquite, sandy sagebrush. It is also close to one of the state's leading oil producing areas. Double Mountain is also there.

Kent County Sheriff's office spokesman Purvis SoRelle said the office had several calls from ranchers. The ground only shook for a few seconds, he said.

Earthquake 'latest' in year-long series

The earthquake which jarred residents today in a large area of West Texas followed a series of smaller ones which have hit the area during the past year, researchers at Texas Tech University in Lubbock said today.

"Several months ago, we began seeing small earthquakes in this vicinity. We're not surprised to see another earthquake in this vicinity in any way, except that it was larger than before," said Dr. Deskin H. Shurbet Jr., director of the seismological observatory at Texas Tech University.

However, Dr. David Dumas, a research scientist with the Marine Science Institute at The University of Texas at Galveston said the Snyder quake surprised him.

"That's the first recorded quake in that area.... that I know of," he said.

Shurbet said there had been no quakes in the Snyder area for years until about a year ago.

"The earthquakes before have been very small. Some of them have been difficult to put on the magnitude scale," he said.

A team of geoscientists from Texas Tech has been in the Snyder area since last November in an effort to determine why there has been a significant increase in earthquakes in that area during the past year.

"I have no idea why there has been an increase in earthquakes recently in this vicinity. We initiated a study in this area last November. When we have completed that study, if we're clever, we will know, and if we're not, then we never will know," he said.

Shurbet said the observatory at Texas Tech recorded this morning's earthquake at 14.5 seconds past 6:47 a.m. Seven seconds later, the observatory recorded a second, smaller earthquake.

"The second one was aftershock," he said.

This morning's quake also was registered on seismic equipment at the McDonald Observatory, which is about 15 miles north of Fort Davis, said Jerry Wiant, an engineer there.

The first quake was recorded 10 seconds shy of 6:48 a.m., he said, and a second one was registered two hours and one minute later.

A team of seismologists, headed by Dumas from Galveston, is to fly portable seismic equipment into Snyder this afternoon or Saturday to pinpoint the epicenter of the quake.

Ed Kettenbrink, a geologist with General Crude Oil Co., said earthquakes in West Texas were not "particularly uncommon and probably not dangerous either."

Kettenbrink also said a large number of faults run through the subsurface in West Texas.

Dumas said hundreds of minor quakes, reflecting the settling of the earth, regularly occur in West Texas.

'Collectibles' found, restored, treasured

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

It's a principle by which the frugal lead comfortable lives.

After work at the office, Locke turns craftsman and leisurely restores furniture to enhance the place he and his bell-collecting and bird-watching wife Toadie call home.

"They're not really antiques," Locke said of the sometimes contrasting, but more often resplendent, furnishings in the house. "They're collectibles."

Like a prospector who knows in which mountain the gold vein is hidden, Locke finds some of his furniture at auctions and sales.

One of his latest finds, a veritable treasure, is a secretary. He picked it up for $165 at an auction.

"It's just beautiful old furniture and pretty wood, and I like it," he said.

The secretary was in his garage and, except for its age, was being readied to be returned to its original state.

"It look likes mahogany, but I'm not going to guarantee that there's not rosewood in it," Locke said of the desk bearing a bookcase and mirror.

Some time earlier, as he was closely examining the secretary, Locke came across another treasure. It was behind the mirror.

The find was an 1890-ish Michigan Buggy Co. brochure featuring surreys and other horse-drawn buggies for as low as $22. The folding "catalogue" depicted such buggies as the Phaeton, the "popular" Jackson, the Saratoga trap, the Phaetonette and the No. 52, the company's leading seller.

That old brochure brought back memories of Locke's early days in Comanche County.

"I've enjoyed that thing so much

Principal appointed

Elgin A. Mallory, principal at Roswell High School in Roswell, N.M., has been appointed the new principal at Midland High School, Midland public schools Superintendent Dr. James H. Mailey announced today.

Mallory will assume his duties as Midland High principal Aug. 1. He is replacing Audrey Gill who retired at the end of this past school year after more than 30 years of service with the school district.

"We are fortunate to have Mr. Mallory join our staff. His expertise and training in time management, administrative accountability and student competency will afford Midland High School the kind of guidance that the Board of Trustees and I feel Mr. Mallory offers," Mailey said.

Mallory is a native of New Mexico. He attended Eastern New Mexico University in Portales, N.M., and the Senate threatens gas filibuster

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government study hinting that the compromise natural gas deregulation plan could cost residential users far more than expected is generating threats of a new Senate filibuster against President Carter's energy program.

As the report began circulating Thursday on Capitol Hill three deregulation foes — Sens. James Abourezk, D-S.D., Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Wendell Anderson, D-Minn. — announced plans for the talkathon.

The Department of Energy study suggests the painstakingly crafted congressional compromise might cost residential users more by 1985 than the Senate-passed and industry-backed bill which called for quicker deregulation.

The administration had fought a strenuous battle against the Senate deregulation bill. The study is the first to suggest the Senate bill might have cost less than the House-Senate compromise accepted by Carter.

The compromise, recently approved by a conference committee after 6½ months, would lift federal price controls in January 1985, permitting a steady increase in the regulated price between now and then.

The report was called misleading by several congressional energy committee aides and by an energy department spokesman.

Jim Bishop, the department spokesman, said one problem is the study "doesn't show what would happen to prices between now and the year 1985."

Other parts of the report give conflicting and sometimes contradictory estimates of what the compromise would cost residential users by 1985, he said, claiming the Senate bill still is "much more expensive."

But tte study says:

"Although the compromise proposal results in the smallest increase in industrial prices, residential prices are projected to increase while the House and Senate bills show a decrease."

The Energy Department study said that the price of natural gas destined for residential use by 1985 would be $3.28 per 1,000 cubic feet under the compromise — compared to $2.92 under the Senate bill and $2.89 under the House-passed administration proposal. It projected a price of $3.09 per thousand under continued regulation.

Hill seeks federal probe of Ector inmate's death

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Contradictory testimony and missing material witnesses at a state inquest into the death of Ector County jail inmate Larry Lozano are two reasons for asking U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell to investigate Lozano's death, Texas Attorney General John Hill says.

Hill told the San Angelo Standard-Times on Thursday that he had sent Bell a letter asking for the investigation. Hill added that he had included a report of his special investigation in the case.

Hill, who is running for governor, made the dislcosure while on a campaign visit to San Angelo.

Hill declined to discuss his investigatory report to Bell, saying it was still confidential, but he did disclose contents of the letter.

"I recommended that he (Bell) should request Jamie Boyd, U.S. attorney for the Western District of Texas, to convene a federal grand jury to thoroughly investigate the death of Lozano, both as to whether there was a violation of his civil rights and, if there was a violation, whether it was the cause of death," he said.

Hill said he wrote Bell that "since the inquest (held in Odessa April 12) developed contradictory testimony and also since some material witnesses were not present at that inquest, and since the state process is dormant at this time" he deems it appropriate to call for a federal grand jury investigation.

Hill stepped into the case Jan. 31, the day after the FBI launched its own investigation and a week before Justice Department investigators moved into the case.

Panama waiting for Carter

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The government of Gen. Omar Torrijos laid on extraordinary security precautions and declared a national holiday for President Carter's visit today to formalize the new Panama Canal treaties.

A cordon of soldiers was ordered to seal off Tocumen International Airport 12 hours before Carter's afternoon arrival. Troops with automatic weapons surrounded the hotel where the president was to stay, and no one was admitted without special credentials.

The route Carter was to take through the city and the places he was to visit were guarded by thousands of security men and troops of the national guard, Panama's army.

The government also moved quietly to silence opponents to the visit, who want the canal turned over earlier than the year 2000 and object to the provision for U.S. military intervention to keep the canal open.

Students who had been demonstrating against the treaties and Carter's visit said they were warned the government would tolerate no further attempts to interfere. They charged some of their leaders were secretly arrested by the National Guard. Anti-Torrijos politicians said they received similar warnings from government officials.

Both groups appeared to take the warnings seriously. Two anti-Carter rallies were canceled Thursday.

The University of Panama, where two students were killed Wednesday night in a gun battle between anti-treaty and pro-government students, was closed. So was the National Institute, a high school which has been the scene of several recent anti-treaty, anti-Carter rallies.

However, Kettenbrink said the earthquake probably would not have much effect on the movement of oil.

"It would depend on what depth movement (from the earthquake) took place," he said.

Shurbet, however, said he did not believe the earthquake to be that strong.

"My records, although they're still being developed, indicate that it was not that large,', he said.

But Associated Press reports indicated that tremors were felt as far away as Andrews, more than 100 miles away.

In Snyder, Mrs. Alfred Wheeler said the earthquake woke them up.

"It was a rumbling sound, and everything seemed to shake. My husband, who has a degree in geology, said, 'but this isn't earthquake country.' Other people I talked to thought their water heaters were blowing up," she said.

Monty West said he thought the earthquake sounded more like a sonic boom.

"It made a lot of noise," he said.

Before the round of tremors recorded in West Texas during the past few months, earthquakes had occurred in West Texas at intervals of several years apart.

A tremor rippled underneath Kermit in 1974.

And in the summer of 1959, a quake hit about 22 miles northeast of Alpine and along U.S. Highway 67 leading to Fort Stockton.

Dr. W. E. Lockhart, a physician in Alpine since 1936, recalled that tremor.

"Suddenly at 4 o'clock in the afternoon," Lockhart said, the earth split as a result of a fault and formed an 18-inch wide gap across the highway. The split extended "several hundred yards" on either side of the road.

"The Fort Stockton side (of the quake) went down four inches, and the other side, presumably, stayed the same," said Lockhart, who has photographs of that split in the earth.

He said the tremor was not felt in Alpine and apparently did no damage other than to the highway and pasture land along the quake line.

"It really was quite a gap in the earth," he said.

The Texas Highway Department filled in the gap across the highway that afternoon. Erosion filled in most of the rest, he said.

Another earthquake, this one in 1934, rumbled across Alpine, he said.

"It sounded like an empty freight train coming into town," Lockhart said people living here then told him. "It didn't dislodge any rocks (on mountains) in the area."

The most severe quake in recent history to strike West Texas was in 1931 in the Valentine area, about 70 miles northwest of Alpine and in Jeff Davis County.

That quake caused "considerable damage" in Valentine and caused columns from Sawtooth Mountain to tumble.

"The geologists say that the Valentine area is a 'live area' (for earthquakes)," Lockhart said.

Settling is still taking place at Valentine, which is between "two sets of hills," he said.

"It rumbles and grumbles and settles a bit . . . all the time," said Lockhart, a former Alpine mayor.

Italy still feeling Aldo Moro death

ROME (AP) — Italy's ruling Christian Democrats, still reeling from the murder of party chief Aldo Moro, have been hit by the resignation of Italy's president, Giovanni Leone, because of accusations of corruption. Urban violence continued, meanwhile.

Leone, one of the group of Christian Democratic leaders that has run the Italian government since World War II, denied the charges of tax evasion and involvement in the Lockheed payoff scandal. But he moved out of the Quirinal Palace with no ceremony Thursday night, six and a half months before his seven-year term was to expire.

A bomb exploded early today at a city-run dairy in Rome, and others were discovered unexploded at the city's main prison, a Communist Party office and three other sites in Rome. The dairy bombing caused an estimated $33,000 in damage. There were no injuries.

In a message to the news media, a group calling itself Armed Revolutionary Nucleus claimed responsibility and said the bombing was a protest against government-approved price increases. There was no apparent connection with the Leone scandal.

In Milan today, stock prices plunged an average 2 percent in what brokers agreed was a reaction to the fall of the Italian president.

Hospital budget up for approval

ODESSA — A budget from the Medical Center Hospital board of managers will be presented for approval to Ector County Commissioners Court on Monday.

The 1978-79 operating budget that was adopted by the board is slightly more than $14.8 million and includes a request for allocation of Ector County tax funds totalling $472,375.

The MCH administration projected how the money would be put to use in 1978-79, showing what increases and decreases the hospital could expect. The greatest increase was in operating expenses in the area of security services, which is expected to escalate about 66 percent in the coming fiscal year.

Deputies arrest five

Approximately 46 pounds of a substance believed to be marijuana and one-fourth ounce of a substance believed to be heroin were confiscated early this morning by Midland County sheriff's deputies.

Five persons were arrested after the deputies, acting on information from the Odessa Police Department, received a warrant and searched a room at Mid-Continent Inn, 520 Holiday Hill Road, a spokesman for the Sheriff's Office said.

The spokesman said three persons were arrested in the motel room in which the substances were found. Two were arrested in a car, the spokesman said.

Deputies reportedly had watched the motel since Thursday night. The search warrant was served shortly after 12:30 a.m. today.

School names new principal

University of South Carolina in Columbia, S.C. He holds a bachelor of science degree in mathematics and chemistry and a master's degree in education and administration. Currently, he is working toward a doctorate in educational administration.

Before assuming his post as Roswell High principal in 1975, Mallory was principal at Silver City High School in Silver City, N.M., and a mathematics teacher with Clovis public schools in Clovis, N.M.

He is a board member of the National Association of Secondary School Principals and the National Merit Scholarship Corp. He is one of 12 educators in the nation to be appointed to the advisory council of the National Merit Scholarship Corp. and one of 60 secondary principals chosen by the secondary principals association to participate in a study on leadership supported by the Rockefeller Family Fund.

Mallory has written articles on accountability and competency. He is listed in "Who's Who in the West," "Notable Americans," "Men of Achievement" and the "Dictionary of International Biography."

The superintendent of the Roswell, N.M., Independent School District, Dr. Fred Poemroy, said Mallory's departure is a loss to the school system there. He said he regards Mallory as one of the outstanding principals in New Mexico.

Carter getting poorer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, who has been getting poorer on the job, plans nevertheless to make a $6'000 contribution to the U.S. Treasury this year.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, disclosed their 1977 federal tax return Thursday, along with financial statements that showed their net worth dropped by $27,281 last year.

The complex return put their 1977 income at about $191,000. They paid federal taxes of $48,152 and claimed a refund of $35,161.

The Carters would have had an income of $497,000 except that their properties placed in a blind trust with Atlanta attorney Charles H. Kirbo produced a loss of more than $306,000 for the year.

Robert J. Lipshutz, the White House counsel, said even the Carters cannot find out the reason for the loss because Kirbo is barred from telling them under terms of the trust. Lipshutz said much of it presumably stemmed from operations of the family's peanut warehouse.

The Carters, who are in the 50 percent tax bracket, made a $6,000 contribution to the Treasury last year but got half the money back because it was a deductible contribution.

In order to make sure the Treasury gets the full amount, press secretary Jody Powell said, they will donate the same amount this year.

Runaway car finds gusher

About 240,000 gallons of water poured into a city street this morning before city employees could shut off a valve to a damaged fire hydrant.

A Midland police said a car driven by Raymond M. Warren of the 900 block of Galiad Street was westbound in the 4100 block of Illinois Avenue when he apparently lost control of the car, which jumped a curb, spun several times and struck the fire hydrant.

City employees were working this morning to repair the hydrant.

He who hesitates can be arrested

BIG SPRING — Domingo Rosas, 46, shouldn't have waited.

Sgt. Juan Palacios with the Big Spring Police Department said Rosas, who was arrested on a misdemeanor charge Tuesday, had "bonded out" and was waiting outside the police department for a cab when police found that his fingerprints matched those of a man wanted by the FBI.

Palacios said today that Rosas, when booked on the misdemeanor charge, had given his name as Domingo Domingo Rosas. Palacios ran a routine check on Rosas.

"I run a check on everybody, and using Domingo twice for a first and middle name did not sound right."

The check showed no warrants for a Domingo Domingo Rosas, Palacios said. But in police files was a card with the name of Domingo Rosas, marked with a red tag. A red tag is a warning to watch for the person.

Palacios ran a check on Domingo Rosas and received fingerprints from the FBI.

"After I got the fingerprint classifications and compared them, I knew they were the same man. The name may not mean much, but fingerprints are definite.

"He had already bonded out and was waiting outside for a cab. I went out and told him I wanted to ask him some questions," Palacios said.

Rosas is wanted by the FBI for parole violation. He previously had been convicted for possession of illegal explosives, Palacios said.

Rosas had been in Big Spring since April and was working as a guard, according to Palacios.

Palacios said he contacted the FBI in El Paso.

"When we find somebody like this from a message sent over the teletype, we need to contact the originator. And the originator here was the FBI in El Paso," he said.

Rosas will be held for a U.S. marshal, Palacios said.

PBRPC approves housing project

The proposal which calls for 136 two- and three-bedroom duplexes and town houses for low-income families and the handicapped. The housing would be constructed on two locations in Odessa.

Odessa City Councilman Fred George, who said he supported the project, said, however, that one of the proposed locations was across the street from site of an earlier proposed housing project, which was turned downed by the the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

That south Odessa area, he said, did not meet HUD environmental standards.

That location was to be the elderly and the handicapped.

Hospital directors ponder parking garage

A multi-story parking garage and ways to finance it are being considered by the Midland County Hospital District board of directors and board of trustees.

Ed Magruder Jr., board chairman, reported to the directors in a regular meeting Thursday at Midland Memorial Hospital that hospital trustees are looking into building a multi-story parking garage. They have asked Trustee Mickey Cappadonna to ascertain whether they can proceed with the planning when property is available to them, Magruder said.

The trustees also have asked their Building Committee to seek plans for the garage and an estimate on what it would cost.

Magruder said the trustees were advised to make the garage at least three stories and capable of going to six to make the facility pay for itself.

Revenue bonds have been suggested as a way to pay for the facility, Magruder said, adding that the bonds do not need to be voted on by the public. The Finance Committee is looking into ways to pay for the garage, Magruder said.

Reports from the finance and building committees on the feasibility of such a garage will not be ready until fall, Magruder told the directors.

The auditor's report for the fiscal year ending April 3 was explained by Frank Kubica of Billingsley, Johnson, Kubica, Stewart and Co. The report covers the period ending when the hospital became a district, he said.

Kubica told the directors the hospital is in good financial condition. Accounts receivable are going up, but one reason for the increase is inflation, he explained.

Director Dr. Michael Burleson said one reason for the increase in accounts receivable is that doctors are failing to list their diagnosis when releasing a patient.

The hospital then must delay in filing the claims for insurance until the doctor has given the diagnosis. "I feel there is a paper which the doctor could fill out and list the diagnosis or say it is pending when releasing the patient," Burleson said.

Hospital Administrator Wayne Ulrich said he has had to call physicians when there is an unusual delay in listing the diagnosis.

Magruder agreed with Burleson, saying: "We set down rules for employees here that they have to be at work at certain times. Maybe we need to set down procedures for the doctors."

The board also reviewed the charge-off list. Attorney Ted Kerr said when a bill has been "charged-off" after all attempts to collect have failed, it does not mean that person is not liable any longer.

Ulrich said a file is kept on all persons who have bills "charged-off". If that person enters the hospital again and his name is in the file, the hospital makes another attempt to collect the bill.

Ulrich also said hospitals have a problem with "professional patients." They have a drug dependency and go from hospital to hospital without paying their bills. These people are experts at imitating illnesses, Burleson added. When a hospital finds they have had such a patient, Ulrich said all hospitals in the state are notified to watch out for this person.

The board also heard a report from Ulrich on the employees' current retirement plan and one proposed by Texas County and District Hospital Retirement System. In some ways it is better than the one they have under the Texas Hospitals Association, and in other ways it is not, Ulrich said. He will present a report on both plans to the directors at their next meeting.

He also said the hospital does not have to remain under the Social Security plan since it converted to the district. "We may want to drop out of it (Social Security) and put the money into a retirement plan," he said.

The directors were appointed to various liaison committees and heard a report on the emergency room from the Citizens' Advisory Committee.

The board passed a resolution to meet on the first Thursday after the regular Board of Trustees meeting each month.

since I found it," he said.

"I used to get to church on Sundays in an old surrey," he recalled. "Hooked up the mules and drove . . . to church."

The copy on the circular spoke of the "years of practical experience" behind the styling and "substantial improvements" in the line of buggies.

The circular did a bit of touting:

"Having met with unequalled success, brought about by careful observerance as to the demands of the consumer for good, honest work . . . we have secured the success and the best wishes of every customer, which will be respected in the future as in the past."

But the part Locke got the biggest "kick" out of was printed just below the name of the hand-written addressee (Central Furniture Co. of Grand Rapids, Mich.).

It read:

"Postmaster: — If not called for please hand to the best dealer in town."

"It just takes a lot of patience and a lot of work," Locke said of the restoration process.

Except for the "early-matrimony" bedroom suit, which Locke and his bride got when they married in 1941, most of their furniture is at least second-hand and borderline antique.

"All of it is collectibles; it's old . . . not much antique (about it). Oh, I like good wood. I love it."

Gusty winds expected today

Winds were expected to be gusty today in the Midland area, causing wind warnings to be issued for all area lakes by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Otherwise, skies should be fair through Saturday with the high temperature that day reaching the upper 90s. The low temperature tonight should fall to the upper 60s.

Thursday's high temperature was 95 degrees, the weather service said. The overnight low temperature was 69 degrees.

Skies were clear and temperatures already were getting hot in area towns early today, according to reports.

Rhodesian guerrillas slaughtering missionaries

BULAWAYO, Rhodesia (AP) — It was night in the Rhodesian bush and Gunvor Pallson, a Swedish schoolmistress, was in her bungalow when the dreaded knock sounded at her door.

It was the first inkling of another guerrilla attack on another school, a death notice for two more missionary teachers.

When the 10 to 15 gunmen finished their raid, two young British women teachers were dead, caught in a single burst of automatic weapons fire. Miss Pallson, the 37-year-old vice principal of the Salvation Army's secondary school for black girls, survived with minor wounds.

The raid was the latest in a series of attacks on bush stations that left 19 white missionaries dead and closed dozens of missionary schools and hospitals since December 1976. It was then that the retired Roman Catholic bishop of Bulawayo, Adolph Schmitt, 72, and two nuns were shot to death on a lonely road — the first to die in the guerrilla campaign against white missionaries.

The Salvation Army school had been kept open after guerrilla threats or raids closed four major missions run by the Roman Catholic, Anglican and Methodist churches in the surrounding area of southwest Rhodesia.

The raids and abductions of pupils occur in areas infiltrated by guerrillas of nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo and his political ally, Robert Mugabe.

The effect of the six-year guerrilla war on the vastly more numerous schools run by the government's black councils has been even greater.

Tony Smith, in charge of the government's still-segregated black state school system, says guerrillas have forced the closing of about 800 schools, and thrown 200,000 children — a fifth of the expected enrollment — out of class. Forty-five black teachers employed by the councils have been killed.

But to the Christian churches, the attacks are a cruel and puzzling response to nine decades of spreading literacy, medical care and Christian beliefs among 6.7 million blacks. In recent years missionaries have endorsed greater rights for blacks in Rhodesia.

Some churchmen claim the raids are an outgrowth of the indoctrination they say communist countries have handed guerrillas along with arms: wipe out Christianity before making Rhodesia a black-run, Marxist state.

Others maintain that many young militants look upon missionaries as people who brought Christianity and education but tampered with tribal tradition, although well meaning, and instilled a sense of inferiority for some about Africa's past.

Hardest hit has been Rhodesia's missionary giant, the Roman Catholic Church. All but three of the slain white missionaries were Catholics. Guerrilla activity has forced the closure of nine of 38 major black Catholic secondary schools, including some of the oldest in the country.

The church pioneered biracial education in Rhodesia by desegregating its white schools about 15 years ago.

At its missionary peak, before a state ruling 10 years ago forced churches to hand over most mission primary schools to local councils, the Catholic Church controlled the education of about 200,000 children.

The Catholic hierachy also has been the most outspoken critic of the white-minority government, replaced three months ago as a prelude to black rule by a biracial interim administration, which has not been accepted by the guerrilla leaders.

In the past year and a half, 11 Catholic priests and nuns have been deported — five fewer than the number whose deaths the military blame on guerrillas.

Boy dies in third surgery

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two days before the open heart surgery, Dr. Linton Whitaker and his son sat down in the library of their home and studied medical diagrams and talked man-to-man about the operation.

The boy, who knew the odds, felt good about it all.

"I am confident," he wrote in his diary.

On Monday, Derek Whitaker died on the operating table, a victim of an illness of the heart called tetralogy of fallot.

He was 11 years old.

He had chanced death over the prospect of riding out life in a wheelchair, but his heart, damaged since birth, failed to carry on the gritty fight.

Whitaker, a plastic surgeon who practices at Children's Hospital and the University of Pennsylvania Hospital, said his son's defective heart had been shutting off blood to a lung.

Derek showed "extraordinary depth" in understanding his illness and its implications, his father said in an interview Wednesday.

"He had tremendous drive," said his mother, Renata. "He wanted to excel athletically, as well as intellectually. He never had any sense of being incapacitated. In fact, his friends at school never knew about his problem."

Not long ago he wrote in his diary, "I didn't make the baseball team. So what! I'll show them yet!"

Monday's seven-hour operation took place at the cardiac center of the University of Alabama. It was the boy's third. The first came 30 hours after he was born; the second at age 6.

Doctors gave the boy a good chance of surviving surgery. But Derek's heart would not start again when the operation was over.

Carter payoff charge lodged

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — President Carter is making a political payoff to Gov. Dolph Briscoe and the Democratic Party in Texas by refusing to turn over documents sought as evidence by the Zavala County Economic Development Corp., says the head of the agency.

Thursday's comments by Jesus Salas came in reaction to Carter's claim Wednesday of executive privilege as the reason why he had refused to turn over the nine documents.

The documents were to be used as evidence in the agency's federal court suit, filed earlier this year, seeking reinstatement of an $855,000 grant from the Community Services Administration.

The 1976 grant was blocked by Briscoe, who said it would be used to create a "Little Cuba" in the Southwest Texas county.

"We respect the president's right to meet with his advisors, but it seems a little strange that the White House acted only three days after Carter's inaugural to respond to Briscoe's pressure and suspend the grant," Salas said.

"There is no question that the White House is making a political payoff to Briscoe and the Democratic Party in Texas. We thought Carter would be more forthright," added Salas.

A lesson from Lear

William P. Lear, who died recently at the age of 75, was not the first person to prove that the legendary American success story is more than a legend.

Lear quit school after the eighth grade, joined the Navy at 16 and learned about radios. He went on to shower the electronic and aviation industries with one invention after another - making a name for himself and a small fortune.

What impresses us about Mr. Lear's career, however, is that it extended well into an era when the inventive mind is said to be a victim of something called "corporate thinking." The fields in which Mr. Lear operated are said to be dominated by corporations which squelch innovation for the sake of taking a course considered safe in the eyes of accountants, board members and stockholders.

There could be some truth in this, in isolated instances, but it didn't stop Bill Lear, who gambled his stake time and again on maverick ideas. Some of them worked and some of them didn't.

Twenty years ago, for instance, the aviation industry scoffed at his idea of producing a jet plane for the private market.

Now, with 800 Lear jets in the air, and orders still coming in, no one is laughing anymore.

We certainly would like to believe that "the system" will never defeat gutsy people like Mr. Lear.

When he died, the man who invented the car radio in 1926 was working on a number of other seemingly "far-out" ideas in the fields of aviation and electronics.

Whether or not any or all of them perform as he envisioned, he leaves a message for youths tinkering in garages and school labs today: You need more than a bright idea. You need the nerve to stick with it when everybody else is saying it'll never get off the ground.

Yes, all Americans can take a lesson from William P. Lear, who had bright ideas and who stayed with them through thick and thin until they were proven one way or the other.

It's not too late

Back in the Bicentennial Year, President Ford and the Bicentennial Commission suggested that Americans fly their flags every day between Flag Day (June 14) and Independence Day, which was the official Bicentennial observance.

It was a great and meaningful suggestion, and many persons here and across the land complied with the recommendation.

And there is no reason why the very same thing cannot and should not be repeated this year.

From all accounts the Tall City did not score too heavily in flying Old Glory from the housetops Wednesday (Flag Day). The Reporter-Telegram is partly to blame because the observance was not promoted as it might have been.

But regardless of who's to blame, we can make up for community-wide neglience in this regard by flying our flags daily between now and the 4th of July.

Midlanders purchased thousands of flags during the Bicentennial Year, and it would be well to get them out for unfurling at this particular time. It is just as important and as meaningful to fly the American flag during this particular period as it was during the Bicentennial Year. There is nothing wrong with a display of patriotism any day or any week. We respect and admire those comparatively few Midlanders who fly Old Glory from their housetops every day of the year.

We are proud of our great nation - the United States of America - and we should be just as proud of the flag which symbolizes it.

Think for a moment what the flag means to you as an individual, and then if you don't have an American flag, get one - and fly same, with pride.

Long may Old Glory wave over the land of the free and the home of the brave.

CHARLEY REESE

Passage of tax revolt termed the 'easy part'

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — Everybody is hailing the passage of Proposition 13, which slashed California property taxes by $7 billion, as the beginning of a successful tax revolt. I hope it is, but voting for Proposition 13 was the easy part.

Living with the cuts in government service which must follow will provide the real test of the revolt, whether it's going to be a short-lived or permanent victory.

The opponents — politicians who survive by spending and the bureaucracies which live off the tax dollar — will continue the fight. They've already begun one despicable tactic. Instead of cutting non-essentials, they are cutting police, fire, and education, hoping to bully the people into reversing themselves.

A tax revolt, like any war, cannot be won with a one-shot effort. Californians will have to persist and continue fighting for sensible government by destroying the political careers of those politicians who try to sabotage Proposition 13.

They also will have to reconcile themselves to a reduced level of government services. There is waste in every government, but there are limits to even waste and when you cut $7 billion out of a budget, you are cutting some services which somebody previously wanted.

What voters in other states will have to be alert for is an effort by their politicians to head off their tax rebellion by offering some political scheme that is mostly cosmetic.

You might as well keep two things in mind. Most politicians are not going to make big cuts voluntarily, and the only way to cut taxes substantially is to reduce the level of government services and programs.

The idea that government costs can be reduced by keeping the same level of services but achieving efficiency is an illusion. For one thing, government is inherently inefficient and can never achieve the same level of productivity as private enterprise. For another, the big bucks are in programs and people, not in inefficiency.

Still, I'm jubilant over Proposition 13's victory. I hope it will prove to be one more nail in the coffin of liberalism which died of failure several years ago, though its corpse remains unburied and stinks up our air.

I'm happy, too, because Proposition 13 put the attention where it belongs. Another kind of tax revolt, aimed principally at the Internal Revenue Service and involving various schemes to avoid paying federal income taxes, also has been going on.

While I'm sympathetic to the reasons which prompt people to take this route, I've decided it's the wrong road. IRS is not the problem, and by directing people's anger at IRS, these rebels divert their attention from the real problem which is the United States Congress.

Internal Revenue is only a bureaucracy trying to obey the laws written by Congress. Tax rates are set by Congress, not by IRS. Complex and stupid tax laws are written by Congress, not by IRS. The solution to the tax problem lies in the Congress, not in the IRS. Anger should be aimed at the jolly old congressmen, not the tired IRS agent.

The IRS like any other bureaucracy makes its share of mistakes and has its share of arrogant types, but on the whole, I think it has done its inherently unpleasant job in a largely commendable and courteous fashion.

But there is another reason why I oppose this form of tax revolt. Even as libertarians, we must remember that we have a duty to pay for what we get and despite my grumbling, I think we get a lot of good services from government. To not want to pay any taxes is to be a shrinker and a freeloader.

What we properly should object to is government providing more services than we want or meddling in counter-productive ways into affairs that are none of its business.

And again, the proper target is the legislative branch. Bureaucracies are born and nourished in legislatures and if any are to be aborted, there's where the operation must take place.

We've allowed our government at all levels to get so large that it now sees itself as a separate entity and views us, the people, as an enemy to be tricked, manipulated and coerced into doing its bidding.

The only way to kill this Frankenstein is the way the people in California did — with a meat axe. Perhaps after the carnage, we can rebuild a modest, responsive government we can all support with enthusiasm and pride.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Science, not fiction, stressed

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Eminent scientists are distressed over the claim that a healthy human infant has been produced by the laboratory technique of cloning. The only Frankenstein monster to come out of the cloning controversy, they assure us, is the image that has been created in the public mind.

The questionable claim was made in a book, which reputable biologists challenge. They say human cloning lies far, far in the future. But genetic discoveries over the last five years promise enormous benefits in eradicating disease and producing bumper food crops to feed a starving world.

Scientists first succeeded in cloning frogs in the 1950s. Now Yale's Dr. Clement Markert is perfecting a new cloning technique that soon could be used in larger animals. He takes a newly fertilized mouse embryo and destroys either the father's sperm nucleus or the mother's egg nucleus.

The remaining nucleus, upon exposure to certain chemicals, will divide into an exact copy of itself. Each nucleus now has the same genes from only one parent. The egg is then implanted in the womb of a mouse and develops into a female offspring. The offspring is not a clone, but all her eggs will exactly match her own genes. Thus, all of her babies will be clones that look just like her.

"No adult now living can be cloned," Markert explained to our associate Howie Kurtz. "Only their daughters could be cloned." One scientist has already produced seven cloned female mice through this method. Males cannot be cloned this way, but Markert says the cloning of mammals "should be possible very soon."

This raises the prospect of cloning prize dairy herds rapidly instead of breeding them over generations. In agriculture, meanwhile, scientists hope to clone endless copies of the healthiest and fastest-growing crops. They would reproduce strains of wheat, tobacco, soybeans and corn that are most resistant to both disease and pests.

Expensive orchids, for example, are already being cloned by the thousands for a fraction of the cost. "These techniques are revolutionizing horticulture," scientist Peter Day told us.

At the same time, scientists are experimenting with another method. Experts have spliced DNA, the building block of life, from the genes of rats, mice, chickens, frogs, rabbits and insects; the separated DNA is inserted into alien bacteria cultures for duplication. Last year, the first human protein was created by this method by Herbert Boyer at the University of California, San Francisco.

The protein, somatostatin, is secreted by the brain, and people who lack it must be treated with hormones painstakingly extracted from the brains of sheep. The new discovery could lead to the synthesis of other DNA material to treat hemophilia, hepatitis and other diseases.

Biologist William Rutter, for example, recently extracted a rat gene, injected it into bacteria and produced a small quantity of rat insulin. This is a dramatic step toward helping diabetics who must rely on cows and pigs for their insulin. "Our goal of making human insulin from a human gene is not that far away," Rutter told us.

DNA research is now rigidly supervised by the National Institutes of Health under guidelines suggested by the pioneer scientists themselves. They now believe that they overreacted to the potential dangers. Nobel laureate James Watson, the discoverer of DNA, says the idea that a scientist could create a new super-disease for nefarious use is "a lunatic scenario."

For one thing, nearly all DNA researchers are confined to using a weak strain of bacteria known as E. Coli. The bacteria have been treated so that even if they leaked out of the labs, they could not survive.

Further, federal regulators have ordered that potentially dangerous experiments be conducted only in sealed-off labs identified as "P-4" facilities. The only P-4 lab now operating in this country is located at the former Ft. Detrick biological warfare center at Frederick, Md.

The security is intense. The entire structure is kept under negative air pressure, and the temperature inside is maintained at 300 degrees centigrade. Wastes from inside are carefully screened. Scientists must don and doff immaculate surgical uniforms entering and leaving.

They must also shower on emerging. Inside, they must manipulate their gear by levers from behind a set of sealed double doors.

Two government scientists, Malcolm Martin and Wallace Rowe, are experimenting on the disease risks of DNA research. They intend to extract DNA from a virus which causes tumors in mice but not in men. The microscopic product will be injected into bacteria to grow a new, unique type of virus which then will be fed to the mice.

If the mice are infected by the new virus, the experiments would show there is real risk of the same dire thing happening to humans. "We want to see if the new virus made from DNA can be more dangerous than the original virus, "Martin explained to Kurtz.

Despite all the precautions, scientists are skeptical that government regulations can be enforced. "If someone wants to cheat, there's no way even the best biologist in the world can detect it," an insider confided.

There have been two detected violations thus far. The feds halted a Harvard scientist's government-subsidized research for failing to file a memo of explanation with the agency. At San Francisco, biologist Rutter's team used an unauthorized type of bacteria in their rat insulin experiment. They were forced to destroy the results and start again.

INSIDE REPORT:

Another damaging blow to SALT said to be in making

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — The forthcoming trial of leading Soviet dissident Anatoliy Shcharansky on charges of espionage and treason has now become a dangerous focus for worsening relations between the U.S. and the Soviet Union, with President Carter's prestige in the Kremlin squarely on the line.

The president's personal word last year that the 30-year-old Jewish computer engineer was never a Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) agent would presumably give pause to the Kremlin. To convict him of that charge, in short, would be tantamount to throwing the lie at Jimmy Carter.

In fact, however, no hint of any Soviet change of heart in the Shcharansky case has reached U.S. experts here. That points strongly to an early trial, perhaps starting this week, followed by a punitive sentence. Precisely such treatment was accorded Yuri Orlov, another leading Soviet dissident sent to jail last month for seven years, with an additional five years in exile, on the charge of anti-Soviet agitation — a meager charge compared to treason.

The Kremlin is fully aware that convicting Shcharansky will have what one top Soviet expert in the Carter administration calls a "profound impact" on U.S. public opinion. That indisputable judgment, given to us before the president's recent speech, is now heightened by Mr. Carter's words at Annapolis. In a major departure from his recent mild rhetoric on human rights, the president pulled no punches. He condemned "an abuse of human rights in their own country in violation of the agreements reached at Helsinki" that, he said, "has earned them the condemnation of people everywhere who love freedom."

But even more to Mr. Carter's point. President Leonid Brezhnev was bluntly warned that in the U.S. "public opinion is an integral factor" in the effort to reach agreement on a new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT) and that "sharp disputes" with Moscow will unquestionably damage the SALT talks.

The Shcharansky case is near the top of the list of "sharp disputes," considering Mr. Carter's personal pledge that Shcharansky has never been an agent of U.S. espionage.

So the stage is bleakly set for another damaging blow to SALT and further exacerbation of relations between the world's two superpowers. It is hard to imagine that President Carter, deeply distressed and angered by the Soviet-Cuban moves into Africa, could have bargained for anything less when he addressed the graduating class at the Naval Academy.

That the script is all but written for Shcharansky's trial has been taken for granted here for weeks, but even more ominous signals of Soviet intentions are now piling up. Vladimir Slepak, one of the longest-term and most impeccably-credentialed Jewish "refusedniks" — Soviet Jews denied emigration visas — was arrested several days ago for hanging a banner from his Moscow apartment with the legend: "Let us out to our son in Israel." He is now in jail on a charge of "malicious hooliganism" and his wife has been notified she will be similarly charged.

Both Slepaks are intimates of Shcharansky. Their arrest is presumed to be connected with the Shcharansky trial; they would be predictable troublemakers for Soviet "justice" during the course of the trial, reminding the world through the Western press corps in Moscow of the Kremlin's human rights pledges in the Helsinki agreements.

Likewise, word has seeped into Washington from dwindling remnants of the once-flourishing Soviet dissident movement that other Soviet citizens suspected of dissident sympathies - are losing the non-resident certificates needed to stay in Moscow. Clearing Moscow of potential troublemakers is standard practice before any major political trial.

Given such persuasive indications that Shcharansky's trial is now beyond recall, something in the nature of a miracle would be needed to avoid a new confrontation between Carter and Brezhnev. The record here does not yield a case in which a legal charge against a "dissident" Soviet citizen has been reduced once the trial has started, or for a finding of innocence once the judge has heard the "evidence."

On all these facts, President Carter surely must have been informed. That explains the anxiety now afflicting administration officials emotionally tied to pursuit of detente at almost any price; and the buoyancy of those who feel the time has come to draw the line.

China pulls all troops, engineers out of Laos

The Los Angeles Times

BANGKOK, Thailand — Communist China has abruptly pulled all of its troops from a big area in northern Laos where they have been building and guarding a road network for 17 years, reliable sources reported Wednesday.

The reports could not be officially confirmed although they are accepted as accurate by officials of the Thai government. The pullout would represent a significant shift in the current Indochinese power struggle involving China, Vietnam and the Soviet Union.

Over the past 17 years the Chinese have built a network of two-lane, paved roads measuring about 500 miles. When construction was at its peak some three years ago the Chinese had about 18,000 combat and engineer troops in Laos. Though the number had dropped in recent years, the Chinese force still numbered probably 10,000 or more.

The withdrawal took place last month. It evidently involved at least three Chinese engineer regiments plus support troops and the headquarters unit which had been stationed at the town of Nam Bac in the center of northern Laos. Initially the Chinese had left the headquarters unit in place — perhaps planning to keep a token force in the area — but removed it late in the month.

The withdrawal, diplomatic source said, was obviously precipitated by the growing dispute between China and Vietnam. This dispute — import on outgrowth of Vietnam's border was with Cambodia, China's ally — now is focused on Vietnam's treatment of ethnic Chinese within its borders. The underlying reason, however, is China's anger and apprehension overgrowing Soviet influence in Vietnam — and consequently in Laos, which has become a client state of Vietnam.

Diplomatic source in Bangkok said that they have been hearing recurrent reports that China has informed the motion ruling regime in Vientiane that aid to Laos will be sharply cut if not eliminated altogether.

The withdrawal leaves something of a power vacuum in much of the north and northwest. Since the roadbuilding agreement was negotiated with Laos in 1961 Chinese control tended to follow the road network.

GAO counters claims

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The General Accounting Office has dismissed as "grossly exaggerated" claims that patients of doctors receiving Medicare and Medicaid funds have saved money and have received improved hospital care.

A statement giving the views of the GAO, the investigatory arm of Congress, will be laid before the House Ways and Means oversight subcommittee, which is reviewing the controversial Professional Standards Review Organization, on Thursday.

According to the statement, the GAO has studied a number of the organization's regional review boards, including some in California, and found every claim of savings inaccurate and overstated.

The Professional Standards Review Organization, established by a 1972 amendment to the Social Security Act, has set up a network of regional boards of physicians across the country to monitor practices by their peers and determine whether Medicare and Medicaid patients receive the best available and most economical health care.

Four years ago, when the program started, the federal government spent $4,475,000 to operate the review boards.

Student taxes defined

DALLAS — Students and parents of students who are planning to work this summer may be entitled to some tax breaks, according to the Internal Revenue Service here.

The IRS said that students who expect to earn less than $2,950 in 1978 do not have to pay federal withholding taxes if they did not pay income tax for 1977.

Also, married students do not have to pay taxes if they and their spouses earn less than $3,600. To stop withholding taxes, students should ask for Form W4, available from their employers.

The IRS said parents still can claim their children as dependents regardless of how much income their children are making, so long as the children meet dependency requirements and are fulltime students for at least five months out of the year.

In a reminder to students who receive tips of $20 or more a month at work, the IRS said that such income is taxable, and the amount of these tips should be reported to employers. They suggested a daily record of tips should be kept showing the employer's name, date and amount of tips received.

Stanton request approved

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN--The Texas Water Commission has approved a request by the city of Stanton to amend its waste discharge permit from an average daily flow of 200,000 gallons to 250,000 gallons.

The amendment also changes the location of the land to be irrigated with the effluent from farmland to 25 acres of gold course fairways and approximately 15 acres of adjacent pastureland.

Harassment of Americans by Kremlin worsening

By KEVIN KLOSE
The Washington Post

MOSCOW — In the past two years, as relations between the United States and the Soviet Union have gradually deteriorated from the heyday of detente six years ago, incidents of harassment and intimidation of American diplomats, businessmen and journalists here have increased in number and ugliness.

There is no doubt in the minds of seasoned observers that the incidents constitute a rough barometer of Kremlin feelings toward Washington. In the past few days, there have been two remarkable incidents that underscore this notion.

On Monday, the Soviets accused a former woman diplomat of complicity in a Central Intelligence Agency plot to "stop detente" by espionage. The Soviets alleged that an unidentified spy in the employ of the CIA had used poison to kill a Soviet citizen. The Poison had been passed to the spy by the woman, Martha D. Peterson, the Soviet government newspaper Izvstia claimed.

The following day, it became known that Soviet police had seized American businessman F. Francis J. Crawford and dragged him from his car in downtown Moscow on a reported smuggling charge. The Soviets refused to tell the U.S. embassy for almost a day of Crawford's whereabouts or the allegation against him.

Both acts are virtually unprecedented. Never before have the Soviets directly accused the CIA of killing a Soviet citizen as part of a spy plot. And while businessmen have occasionally been searched at customs points, no one here could remember an incident of such crude intimidation.

There are more than two dozen American firms based here and the arrest of Crawford has sent shock waves through this business group. Many of them gathered at the U.S.

Analysis

embassy commercial office Wednesday for a briefing by embassy officials on the incident. "They're upset and some are scared," said one businessman.

To a degree, the two incidents must be seen as separate examples of the tensions between the two superpowers. Relations between the Carter administration and the Kremlin are in a period of extreme difficulty as the two governments attempt to find a successful way to address each other's concerns and successfully include a number of important agreements relating to strategic arms and nuclear weapons as well as conventional forces. The Peterson case is seen by many sources here as a Soviet retaliation against the revelation two weeks ago by the American embassy that it had found Soviet eavesdropping equipment in a tunnel and chimney of the embassy. The two governments have in the past sought to blunt each other's allegations of espionage activity with revelations of their own. But the seriousness of the charge in the Peterson case hints at a new ferocity in the Kremlins approach.

SIMILARLY, the Crawford incident, involving a representative from a company with tens of millions of dollars in contracts here and run by a man who is an outspoken advocate of closer trade ties between Russia and the United States evokes ghosts of the crudities of the Stalin era of the Cold War.

Not so long ago, such incidents would have been unthinkable. That was in the days when Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Nixon had found between themselves responsive notes of trust and understanding which shaped and softened Soviet-American relations from the 1972 summit through the first months of the Ford administration.

But in the spring of 1976, with Ford beginning to find political troubles with detente in the wake of the Soviet Angola venture, harrassment began anew for resident Americans here. Several U.S. diplomats were jostled and spat upon and warned that "worse could happen" if demonstrations against the Soviet Union in the United States by the Jewish Defense League did not cease. When the JDL activities ceased, the harrassment stopped.

But as events have unfolded since, the atmosphere here for American correspondents and diplomats has been marked by renewed pressures. The principal cause has been Kremlin alarm at the increased contacts between the small, scattered groups of human rights activists here and the reporters. This alarm turned to fury when President Carter made human rights a major issue of his new administration and publicly supported the dissidents.

THE KGB neutralized the embassy's specialist in human rights activities by heavy handed surveillance. The state-controlled press began denouncing several American correspondents working here at the time: George Krimsky of the Associated Press, Alfred W. Friendly of Newsweek, Christopher Wren of The New York Times, Peter Osnos of The Washington Post and Robert Toth of The Los Angeles Times. Krimsky, Friendly and Wren were accused of working for the Central Intelligence Agency, the first time in memory that journalists had been directly accused of working for the CIA. Krimsky was expelled on alleged currency irregularities and Toth was later seized and questioned allegedly for possessing confidential state documents.

The press campaign against these five has continued, although none works here any longer. Krimsky, Wren and Friendly were recently labeled as CIA agents in a half-hour television show which was a clear warning to viewers to avoid contacts with American correspondents. The Kremlin is intent upon cutting all contacts between the journalists and the dissidents. The campaign against the reporters has been combined with moves against the dissenters, including arrests, intimidation and involuntry emigration.

In the year since Toth was seized, the KGB has repeatedly stopped journalists from taking photographs during legitimate news stories, and on several occasions seized film. CBS correspondent Bernard Redmont has been interfered with three times. Another correspondent was detained almost five hours by Soviet border guards as he drove back from Poland, and many of his notes and research files were seized and not returned. A Soviet newspaper recently denounced another reporter and other similar incidents have occurred to create an atmosphere of frustration within the small community of American reporters.

The recent spate of these harassments is in part caused by the unfolding of events: A major trial of dissident leader Yuri Orlov, in which there were many incidents of harassment; a series of demonstrations by dissidents and refuseenik Jews seeking exit visas.

Italian president reveals resignation

By LOUIS B. FLEMING
The Los Angeles Times

Giovanni Leone

ROME — President Giovanni Leone resigned Thursday night under fire for alleged tax evasion and other financial improprieties, including charges of involvement in the Lockheed bribery scandal.

Leone, 69, dismissed the allegations as groundless. He said in a speech televised to the nation:

"At a time when the libelous campaign seems to have undermined the confidence of political forces, I had no other choice."

Leone's sudden departure came just 37 days after the assassination of former Premier Aldo Moro. Moro was a leading candidate to succeed Leone, whose term would have expired in December.

With Leone's resignation, Amintore Fanfani, president of the Senate, automatically became acting president. Under the constitution, Parliament must elect a new president of the nation within the next 15 days.

Charges of financial wrongdoing by Leone were first raised in the leftist newsweekly L'Espresso. Elements on both the left and the right then called on Leone to resign or defend himself publicly against the charges.

On Thursday the Communists, whose parliamentary support is vital to the Christian Democratic Party's minority government, added their voice to the call for resignation. It called on Leone to step down in order "to guarantee the stability and proper functioning of democratic institutions."

Within hours Leone met with Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti and the secretary of the Christian Democratic Party, Benigno Zaccagnini. Shortly afterward he announced his resignation.

It was only the second such resignation in the 32-year history of the Italian republic. President Antonio Segni resigned in 1964 for reasons of health. The post is largely ceremonial but can be important in times of political crisis because of the president's authority to name the prime minister.

Articles in L'Expresso accused Leone of evading taxes, of trying to help two brothers involved in the Lockheed bribery scandal of the 1960s and of claiming tax advantages to which he was not entitled on land bought in his sons' names.

Religious broadcaster battling O'Hair appeal

By SUSAN STOLER

J. G. Whitfield

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Florida religious broadcaster has intervened in atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair's appeal of her suit contesting the motto "In God We Trust" on American currency.

"My purpose in joining in this case is to assure that the opposition to her motion is fairly and completely represented," said J.G. Whitfield at a Thursday news conference.

Mrs. O'Hair filed the federal suit Sept. 1, 1977, against the U.S. Treasury Department, alleging the motto displays a statement "antithetical" to atheists' "most deeply held convictions" in violation of the First Amendment.

U.S. District Judge Jack Roberts of Austin dismissed the suit April 17. He noted the U.S. Supreme Court and the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals have ruled the motto does not infringe on First Amendment rights.

Whitfield, a long-time gospel singer and religious broadcaster from Pensacola, Fla., came to Austin to file a motion to intervene in Mrs. O'Hair's appeal of the dismissal to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. The appeals court granted his motion to intervene June 5.

"If we got rid of the motto just because it has the word 'God' on it that would actually lead toward establishing a religion of 'no God,'" Whitfield said.

The motto has "been in our history so long that it is really ceremonial and patriotic," the gospel singer said. "It has no religious significance."

It would cost taxpayers into the thousands of dollars to erase currency dies and remove the slogan from money, he asserted.

Baptists welcome Mrs. King

ATLANTA (AP) — Before an audience that had shunned civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. in his lifetime, his widow stood in the glow of lights, praise and applause from thousands of Southern Baptists.

It mirrored, in poignant personal terms, the swift march of history.

"I am grateful," Coretta Scott King told the hushed throng. She noted, without rancor, the immense change that distinguished the recent past from the present.

The difference also was graphically demonstrated in the declaration of Southern Baptists Thursday to "purge ourselves and society" of all remaining traces of racism.

But it was the appearance of Mrs. King that dramatized the reform accomplished — and paid tribute to her husband.

"It was a salute to the spirit of a man by those who would have never saluted him in his own lifetime," said James Young of Denver, editor of the Rocky Mountain Baptist.

Mrs. King mentioned the opposition of "most white churches" to her husband's movement for racial integration, some continuing into the mid-1960s. It was reflected in a 1965 Southern Baptist resolution condemning civil disobedience, a mark of King's nonviolent tactics until he was murdered in 1968.

STOP! A small fish, with the aid of the Supreme Court, successfully halted Tennessee's Tellico dam project. The high court thought better of "stamping out" the snail darter, whose home would be destroyed with completion of the project. (AP Laserphoto Cartoon by Joe Yeninas)

Little fish founders dam project

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Officials are pondering what to do with a nearly completed $119 million dam the Supreme Court says cannot be finished because it would destroy the home of a three-inch fish.

"I guess if all else fails," quipped Gov. Ray Blanton, "I'll have our Department of Tourism look into putting together a campaign of private solicitations to buy the dam for a tourist attraction. We'll promote it as the world's largest monument to the worlds smallest fish."

In a 6-3 decision, the court ruled Thursday that the Endangered Species Act prohibits the Tennessee Valley Authority from closing the gates of its Tellico Dam 25 miles southwest of Knoxville and turning the river habitat of the snail darter into a reservoir.

"There are alternatives other than scrapping the project, alternatives which may even produce better benefits for the people than the original project," TVA Chairman S. David Freeman said.

The alternatives mentioned thus far by TVA and other government officials include allowing the structure to stand as a "dry dam," knocking a hole in it or tearing it down altogether.

These would abandon the 16,500-acre lake the dam would have created and the envisioned shoreline industrial parks for easing high unemployment in the rural counties surrounding the project.

In an opinion dissenting from the court's majority, Justice Lewis Powell said he has little doubt that Congress will amend the Endangered Species Act.

"There will be little sentiment to leave this dam standing before an empty reservoir, serving no purpose other than a conversation piece for incredulous tourists," Powell said.

Chief Justice Warren Burger wrote, however, in the majority opinion that Congress' intent "was to halt and reverse the trend toward species extinction, whatever the costs."

A bill to establish a seven-member, Cabinet-level panel to review federal projects that would harm or destroy endangered species was reported out of committee and sent to the Senate floor last month.

The panel would have the authority to exempt such projects from the 1973 Endangered Species Act if it determined they were more beneficial than preserving the species involved.

The Interior Department says 11 projects were either under construction or being planned where there is such a potential conflict.

"There's no need for an amendment," said Zygmund Plater, a Wayne State University law professor who argued the court case against TVA. "There's no need for a solution to a problem that doesn't exist."

Plater has made the 3-year-old David vs. Goliath court battle between the darter's supporters and the giant government utility a cause celebre for conservationists in their fight against industrial development.

The 17-mile stretch of the Little Tennessee River is the darter's only known natural habitat and also is one of the region's few remaining unspoiled trout streams.

House defies Carter, refuses to deny water project funding

By PAUL HOUSTON
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The house, defying a veto threat by President Carter, refused Thursday to drop 36 controversial water projects from a $10.3 billion public works appropriation bill.

In fact, the House added 11 projects to the bill in a dramatic turnaround from the deep cuts it voted earlier this week in money bills for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the legislative branch.

Thursday's action showed that a hefty dose of pork-barrel politics in an election year could cool off, at least temporarily, an epidemic of cost cutting fever that had gripped the House after passage of California's Proposition 13 last week.

Many House members also were upset because the administration, which stepped on numerous toes with its handling of last year's water project "hit list," did not develop most of this year's list until after the House Appropriations Committee approved its bill.

In the key action of the day, the House defeated, 142 to 234, an effort by Rep. Robert W. Edgar, D-Pa., to strike from the bill funds for eight projects supposedly killed in a compromise last year between Carter and Congress.

Edgar called the projects "wasteful pork-barrel spending, an affront to the environment and in some cases downright dangerous to the public safety."

Although his White House-backed amendment was rejected, it picked up enough votes to indicate that a Carter veto could be sustained in the House unless Senate and House conferees came up with an acceptable compromise public works measure.

On Friday the House is expected to pass its bill making appropriations for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The Senate has yet to act.

Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., had planned to offer another Carter-backed amendment to the House bill but withdrew it after seeing that it faced certain defeat and might hurt prospects for the Edgar amendment.

It would have knocked 28 proposed new water project starts from the bill, leaving 13 new projects intact while adding to the bill 11 new projects proposed last week by the administration.

The House, by voice vote, put the 11 projects in the bill on motion by Rep. Tom Bevill, D-Ala., chairman of the public works appropriations subcommittee.

Bevil, denying Carter's assertion that the bill contains "excessive appropriations," said the legislation was $28 million under the administration's request.

Significantly, Bevill was backed up by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass. and Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Tex.

While the bill's bottom line was $28 million under Carter's proposal, its water project funds were $244 million over the administration request. Room was made in the bill for this extra funding by reducing administration requests for energy research projects.

'Conversion factor' key to weapon dispute

By WALTER PINCUS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The White House has delayed for two months a go-ahead on production of Lance missile nuclear warheads and 8-inch shells because of an internal administration dispute over a plan to convert them quickly into neutron weapons.

On April 7 President Carter sidestepped the controversial neutron weapon issue by announcing he would defer their production to see if the Soviets would make a reciprocal arms control gesture. At the same time he ordered a "modernization" of the Lance warhead and the 8-inch shell.

A significant omission in the president's announcement and his orders to the Pentagon to implement them was that "modernization" meant building the same new nuclear warheads and shells as originally planned in the neutron program but leaving out the core elements that transform them from a conventional nuclear weapon into a neutron weapon.

These core elements lower the blast and heat effects of the conventional nuclear weapon and enhance its output of radiation.

Administration sources said Thurday that the neutron components once built can easily — with some technical work — be inserted in the new Lance warheads and 8-inch shells to make them neutron weapons long after the warheads and shells had been deployed to Europe.

According to White House press secretary Jody Powell, who released Carter's April statement, "it was classified how easy it was to do," to convert the "modernized" conventional nuclear weapons into neutron weapons.

According to DOE officials, a presidential go-ahead on the "modernization" program had been expected before the end of April.

The delay, in the production go-ahead, according to informed sources, stems from bureaucratic arguments in the adminstration on whether to proceed with a two-step program or build both the nuclear weapons and the neutron core elements at the same time.

According to White House sources, the president's original intent was to go ahead with the nuclear weapons and wait 18 months before proceeding with the neutron core elements.

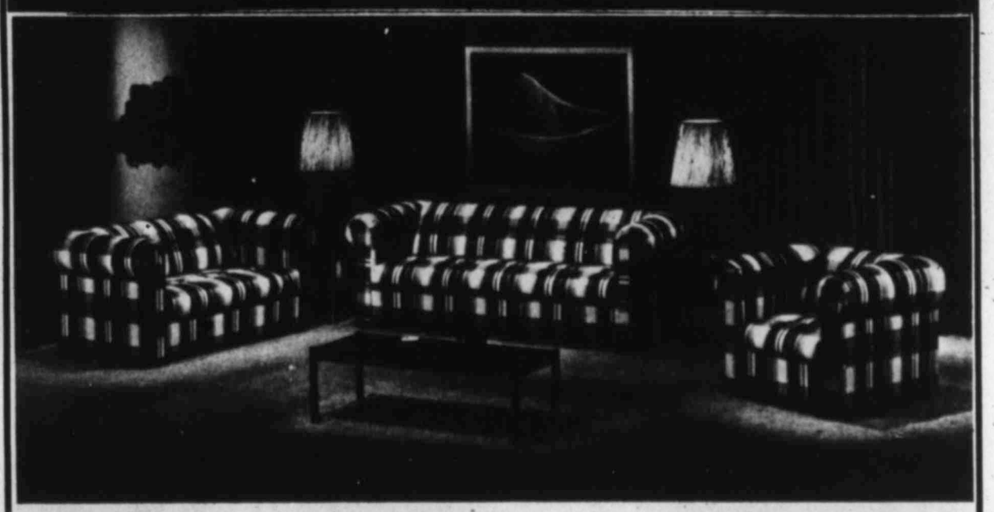

In that time, the Soviets would have an opportunity to make some response which, if deemed appropriate, would further delay or eliminate production of the neutron cores.

Outside the White House, however, pressure from neutron weapon supporters on Capitol Hill has pushed Defense and Energy Department officials to press for production of the shells and warheads along with neutron components. The latter would be stockpiled in the United States when the weapons are sent to NATO forces in Europe.

Skokie situation volatile

By LARRY GREEN
The Los Angeles Times

CHICAGO — As Jewish leaders prepared a massive counter-demonstration to a proposed march by Nazis in suburban Skokie June 25, Justice Department officials Wednesday continued to seek an alternative to the potentially volatile confrontation.

The Nazi group, which for more than a year has been trying to win approval for the march, plans to hold another demonstration in Chicago on the eve of the scheduled rally.

Skokie has a large Jewish population, including 7,000 survivors of Nazi concentration camps in World War II.

Federal officials said Wednesday that they had received a letter notifying them that the National Socialist Party of America would have between 50 and 100 demonstrators on the plaza of the federal building in Chicago the afternoon of Saturday.

It was not clear, however, whether that demonstration, in the heart of the city's busy Loop business district, would be an alternative to the Skokie demonstration or merely a preliminary event.

"It is a warmup for Skokie," said a man at the Nazis' headquarters who identified himself as Jim Karl. He added, "We could wind up doing both things."

Disclosure of the Chicago demonstration came as federal Justice Department officials negotiated with the Nazis, Skokie village officials, police and Jewish leaders seking an alternative to the march.

"There is a distinct possibility that an alternative will be found," said Richard A. Salem.

New 'spy' tradeoff brewing

Newsday

NEW YORK — East German attorney Wolfgang Vogel has suggested a possible exchange of prisoners involving the Russian-Jewish dissident Anatoly Shcharansky for two Russians arrested in New York last month as spies, it was learned Wednesday.

The offer by Vogel reportedly was passed on to State Rep. Benjamin Gilman Sunday night at a meeting at the home of Rabbi Ronnie Greenwald in upstate Monsey, N.Y.

Greenwald met with Vogel in East Germany last week, together with Shantai Kalmanowitz, an Israeli, as part of ongoing negotiations that so far have involved the exchange of three prisoners held in Mozambique, East Germany and the United States.

Kalmanowitz and Gilman were unavailable for comment about the meeting, and Greenwald declined to comment.

Gilman's administrative assistant, Bob Becker, said, "I know about the meeting, but I can't confirm that offer. All I can say is they talked over the possibilities that exist."

Shcharansky, a major figure in the group of dissidents criticizing Soviet compliance with the Helsinki human-rights accord, was arrested last year and held incommunicado, charged with being a CIA spy.

The two Russians, Valdik Enger and Rudolph Chernayev, were arrested May 20 for passing U.S. Navy secrets to the Russians, along with a third Russian, Vladimir Zinyankin. Zinyankin, an attache to the Soviet Union's United Nations mission, was named as a co-conspirator but was allowed to leave the country because he holds diplomatic immunity.

Enger and Chernayev pleaded innocent and are being held in the Metropolitan Correction Center in Manhattan on $2 million bail each.

Whether the United States would agree to such an exchange appeared questionable.

Bomb threat forces plane homeward

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A Continental Airlines plane with 151 persons aboard en route from San Antonio to Los Angeles was forced to return Thursday night to this city's International Airport because of a telephoned bomb threat.

An extensive search by bomb experts and specially-trained dogs from Lackland Air Force Base discovered no bomb, officials said.

The DC10, with 140 passengers and a crew of 11, was 18 minutes out of San Antonio when Continental's Houston office received the anonymous threat, said Rufus Powell, the airline's local station manager.

Houston authorities notified the plane's pilot, Capt. Hank Moen, and the decision was made to return to San Antonio.

The airliner landed and taxied to an isolated spot about 60 yards from the airport fire station and the passengers exited in an orderly fashion, officials said.

The baggage was unloaded and searched, authorities said.

The plane took off again after about a three-hour delay.

World's largest garage sale drawing crowds

HOUSTON (AP) — Memorabilia seekers and bargain hunters combed through the rooms of the old Rice Hotel today on the first day of what is being billed as the world's largest garage sale.

The 18-story structure located on the site of the first capital building of the Republic of Texas will be renovated into apartments by Portfolio Management of Texas.

An estimated 2.5 million items are on sale.

Lance Funston, Portfolio president, said he thinks the month-long sale will net about $1 million although the items have been appraised at about $3.5 million.

Funston was among those at a black-tie auction Thursday night who bid on 46 selected items. He paid $2,000 for an eight-piece place setting of gold flatware used by the President and Mrs. John F. Kennedy on the night of Nov. 21, 1963, the day before Kennedy was assasinated in Dallas.

A Steinway grand piano from the suite where the Kennedys spent several hours before their trip to Dallas fetched $3,250, the highest price of the evening.

Auction guests sweltered as they bid on a large bust of Sam Houston and the original invitation to the opening of the hotel built by Houston financier and publisher Jesse H. Jones. As on that June 5, 1913, night, there was no air conditioner.

Motion for dismissal filed

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — Defense attorneys for Gene Leroy Hart were expected to argue today there is not enough evidence to warrant continuing Hart's preliminary hearing on first-degree murder charges stemming from the 1977 slayings of three Girls Scouts.

Garvin Isaacs, chief attorney for Hart, filed a motion Wednesday calling for the dismissal of the charges against Hart and an end to the proceeding.

Isaacs also said that if dismissal of the charges is not granted, there should be a delay in the hearing to permit the court to analyze highly technical evidence entered into the record by the prosecution.

District Judge Jess Clanton was expected to rule on the dismissal motion and then decide if there should be a continuance.

Degree earned

PULLMAN, Wash. — Keith Grieneeks, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Grieneeks of 300 Pylant St. in Midland, Texas, recently was awarded a dectorate in counseling psychology at Washington State University here.

He is a 1965 graduate of Midland High School.

Soviets ready for space docking

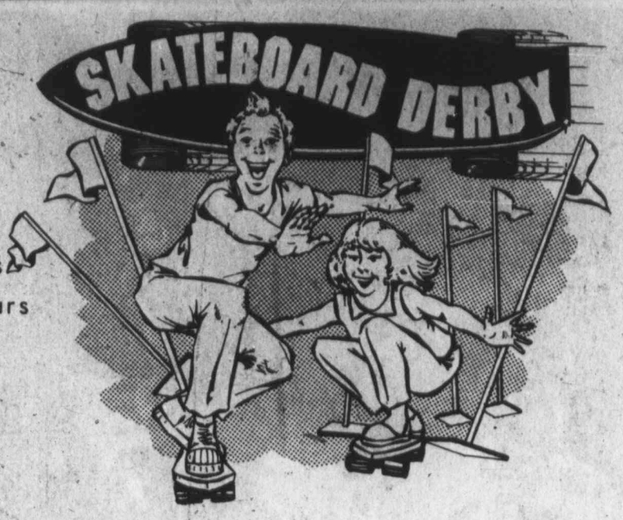

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts orbited the earth today preparing to board the Salyut 6 spaceship for new experiments and research.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the Soyuz 29 spacecraft was launched Thursday night carrying Col. Vladimir Kovalenok, 36, the pilot, and flight engineer Alexander Ivanchenkov, 38. It is Kovalenok's second space flight.

All on-board systems were "functioning normally" and the crew, feeling well, "started implementing the flight program," Tass reported.

It said they would dock with Salyut 6 and continue "explorations and experiments that began in the period of work of the crews of the Soyuz 26, Soyuz 27 and Soyuz 28 spaceships aboard the orbital Salyut 6-Soyuz complex."

Cheese toppers crown burgers

June is dairy month as well as cookout time. Why not put the two together and come out with memorable 'burgers? Then climax the event with Strawberry Milk Shakes as a special toast to her highness, the cow?

Three cheese toppers, each with a distinctively different flavor are certain to please whatever crowd you have. Blue cheese is a favorite among gourmets; it's made beautifully creamy with dairy sour cream.

Cheddar cheese is an old favorite because Cheddar slices have turned many a 'burger into cheeseburger. This one, blended with some grated onion and sour cream, is somewhat more zippy than the plain variety.

New to many will be the Provolone cheese spread. This Italian-type cheese has a smoky flavor that's right at home with chili sauce and Italian seasoning with butter added for spreadability.

Cheeseburger spreads are used in-between the two burgers as well as on top. Make certain after spreading between the two meat patties, that the edges are sealed so your "surprise" does not give itself away and dribble over the grill.

Strawberry Milk Shakes are as prettily delicious as they are nutritious. Just blend strawberries, strawberry ice cream, lemon sherbet and milk all together.

CHEESEBURGER SPREADS

Blue Cheese Spread

½ cups crumbled Blue cheese

Cheddar Cheese Spread

1¼ cups (5 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese, at room temperature
1 teaspoon grated onion
¼ cup dairy sour cream

Provolone Cheese Spread

1¼ cups (5 oz.) shredded Provolone cheese, at room temperature
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons chili sauce
½ teaspoon Italian seasoning or oregano

For Blue Cheese spread, stir Blue cheese into sour cream. For Cheddar cheese spread, beat cheese and onion together until fairly smooth. Add sour cream and beat until blended. For Provolone cheese spread, beat together all ingredients until smooth. Use to fill and top Cookout Hamburers. Yield: 1 cup of each cheese spread.

COOKOUT HAMBURGERS

2 pounds ground beef
1 can (5.33 fl. oz.) evaporated milk (2/3 cup)
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
8 sandwich buns, split, toasted, buttered

For hamburgers, combine all ingredients except buns. Shape to form 16 patties. Place 1 level teaspoonful of Blue, Cheddar or Provolone cheese spread in the center of 8 patties. Top with remaining patties; seal edges together. Grill or broil 7 minutes on one side. Turn and grill 5 minutes on second side for medium doneness. Serve on sandwich buns with additional dollops of cheese spread. 8 servings.

STRAWBERRY MILK SHAKE

1 cup sliced sweetened strawberries
1 pint strawberry ice cream
1 cup lemon sherbet
1 cup milk

Blend together all ingredients in a blender. Serve immediately with additional scoops of ice cream and strawberries for garnish, if desired. Yield: 1 quart.

SUPER HANDYMAN

No sweat for proper joint

By AL CARRELL

When properly done, the sweat-soldered joints in copper plumbing tubes and pipes can be almost as strong as the center of a solid pipe section. However, even when the job is done correctly, you may have problems if the fitting and the pipe weren't properly assembled before soldering, and if they aren't properly supported afterward. Check the alignment with a sturdy straightedege, and then support the pipe and fitting so they will stay in alignment while you're making the joint. After the soldering is done, you should be sure that each run of the tubing has support about every 4' to 6'. Remember that unlike metals in contact with each other can cause corrosion through electrolysis, so if the pipe calls for straps for support, use plastic, plastic coated or copper straps. Improper support or a poor alignment to start with may put extra stress on that joint you sweated over and cause it to break. (No, that's not why they call 'em sweat joints.)

Dear Al:

One of the biggest problems with doing sweat soldering is that the flame can cause a smoldering fire which may burst into flames hours after the job is done. One of the reasons for this is because often the work is done in cramped quarters with combustible material all around. Usually the torch carrier will watch for problems behind the pipes. However, pipes go through holes in the wall, and these holes can act as small chimneys. An updraft can suck the flame into such a hole, and it can ignite material beyond where you can't see. It's a little trouble, but I always patch around all such holes when I am going to be using a propane torch. I use an appropriate noncombustible patching compound. You don't have to wait for the patch to dry because just closing the hole will prevent the flame being drawn toward it. The little extra trouble beats even a slim possibility of a fire.--J.T.

A SUPER HINT—Valves and faucests that are sweat soldered to copper pipes or tubes are joined just like fittings. However, the heat from the torch has been known to harm the seat of washer or other innards in the valve. If you can remove the stem during the soldering, you'll be better off. At the very least, turn the handle so the valve is in the "open" position and avoid prolonged heat direclty on the valve. It's a shame to get a valve well soldered in place and then find you have to replace the darned thing. The next solder joint might not come out as great as this one.

Dear Al:

I never take a chance of starting a fire when sweat soldering. I saved several different sized scraps from an asbestos siding job. I pick out the right size and place the flame-proof asbestos shingle between the work and whatever is behind. If called for, I even tape pieces together to form a two-piece shield. We had one fire in the neighborhood after some plumbing work had been done, and I'm not taking any chances.--H.H.M.

SHOP TALK—There is a new electric soldering tool that does a flameless job of sweat soldering. It's called Lectro-Grip and plugs into the regular wall outlet. Right now, the cost is higher than the average home handyperson might want to justify, but you might ask about it at the tool rental places. It's a safe way to do a sometimes hot job.

Al Carrell welcomes all mail, especially tips from fellow Handymen which he can pass on to readers as space permits. While he cannot answer all individual letters, he will try to nail down your problem in his column whenever possible.

English history capsuled in mugs

CHESTER, Va. (AP)—English-born Mrs. Paul Pedersen has a capsule history of her native country in her collection of some 140 commemorative mugs and beakers reaching back to the beginning of Victoria's reign in 1837.

Her interest in the commemorative mugs began in her own school days in Devonshire.

"This 1935 Jubilee mug was the first one," she said, reaching for a cup honoring George V and Queen Mary in the 25th year of his reign.

Others included in the collection are a 1897 Victoria Golden Jubilee mug, a 1911 coronation cup for George V, a 1953 coronation mug for Queen Elizabeth II and a 1969 Prince Charles investiture mug.

Mrs. Bruce and her husband, Harry, discovered a 3.25 carat clear brown diamond—valued at $2,000—at the Crater of Diamonds State Park near Murfreesboro, Ark.

"They get to keep it," said a park spokesman. "People who want to hunt for diamonds here pay a fee and then keep the stones they find."

The Bruces were in Arkansas on vacation.

Special recipes presented for mothers-to-be

By JEANNETTE BRANIN
Copley News Service

In the United States, which has the highest material standard of living in the world, an estimated 35,000 newborn babies die every year because their mothers are undernourished in pregnancy, and about 120,000 babies are born malnourished every year.

"It is possible to be well-nourished without excessive weight gain, and still have room for individual choices," said Iris Crump, nutrition consultant. She prepares informational material for health professionals who work with pregnant women.

Professionals in the field understand the need of folic acid, pyridoxine, thiamine, riboflavin, other B-vitamins and vitamins C and E. "But pregnant women aren't going to find foods labeled that way," said Crump. "They need to know what foods contain them and how much of those foods they should eat.

"We can summarize, for the sake of simplicity," said Crump. "Dark green vegetables, raw. Whole grains, nuts and seeds. Peanut butter, which is a wonder food. One peanut butter sandwich on whole grain bread, eaten with a glass of milk, forms a meal as good as any expensive steak dinner, in equal quantity, and is even higher in iron content.

"Liver is a great source of iron and vitamin A. One serving of liver gives the iron and vitamin A need for an entire week: one carrot or sweet potato gives enough vitamin A for several days.

"And dried beans. That's a 'salvation food.' Beans are comparatively inexpensive, always available, popular with many cultures and the best choice from vegetable protein foods."

Continuing the summary of easily remembered and necessary foods, Crump said, "Citrus fruits, raw green vegetables, melons and tomatoes for their vitamin C content. Vitamin C is water soluble, so cooking causes the vitamin to be lost."

Everyone knows how to make a peanut butter sandwich, hopefully on whole wheat bread. Here are some other ways to use the "wonder foods" named by Crump, foods that will nourish both mother and fetus.

CHEESE BLINTZES

3 eggs at room temperature
1 cup milk
1 tsp. vanilla
2 tbsps. honey
1 tbsp. corn oil
¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
¾ cup whole wheat flour
Butter

Beat eggs lightly in a bowl. Add milk, vanilla, honey and oil. Sift salt, baking powder and flour into liquid mixture and stir just until flour lumps dissolve. Drop by the tablespoon onto a 6-inch buttered hot skillet or crepe pan and tilt pan so that the batter spreads evenly over the bottom. Cook over medium heat until light brown, then turn and cook briefly on the other side just to dry surface. Stack blitzes until ready for filling.

FILLING FOR BLINTZES

1½ cups cottage cheese, preferably small curd
2 eggs
3 tbsps. orange juice concentrate
¼ tsp. salt
2 tbsps. honey
½ tsp. cinnamon

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Blend all ingredients thoroughly in a bowl. Place 2 tablespoons of filling in center of darker side of each blintz. Roll into tube shape and turn ends under to seal. Arrange filled blintzes in a single layer in a buttered glass baking dish; brush tops with melted butter. Bake for 15 minutes or until golden brown. Serve hot with sour cream.

TUNA ROMA

1 cup egg noodles, cooked
2 cups canned tuna, drained
⅓ cup dry white wine
2 cups fresh green peas, cooked
½ cup fresh parsley, chopped
¾ cup Italian tomato sauce (recipe follows)
Salt and pepper

ITALIAN TOMATO SAUCE

¼ cup olive oil
1 cup onions, chopped
1 tsp. garlic powder
2 cans (6 ozs. each) tomato paste
2 cups tomato puree
3 tbsps. sweet basil
3 tbsps. oregano
Pepper
2 cups water

In a large saucepan saute the onions in olive oil until soft. Add garlic powder and tomato paste and stir continually until the oil is blended into the paste. Add the remaining sauce ingredients and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer 30 minutes. Note: This sauce will freeze well. Surplus sacue may be kept for lasagne, spaghetti, or other pasta dishes.

Eating for two—that's what they used to say; 50 years ago. Today, pregnancy clothing is a far cry from the voluminous disguises of yesteryear and the understanding of the nutritional needs of the pregnant woman also has changed radically.

OLD FASHIONED PEANUT BUTTER BREAD

1½ cups unisfted whole wheat flour
2 vup unsifted flour
2 tsps. baking soda
1 tsp. salt
2 containers (8 ozs. each) plain yogurt
1 cup raisins
½ cup old fashioned creamy or chunk peanut butter

Grease two loaf pans, 8½X4½X2½. In a large bowl stir together flours, baking soda and salt. Add yogurt, raisins, peanut butter and molasses; stir until well mixed. Divide batter between prepared pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 to 45 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pans on wire rack 10 minutes; turn out and cool completely on rack. Tightly wrap and store in refrigerator. Flavor improves with age. Makes 2 loaves.

AMBROSIA

⅔ cup pineapple chunks
½ cup grapefruit sections
⅔ cup bananas, sliced
½ cup apples, chopped
Two-thirds cup peaches, cut up
½ cup shredded coconut, unsweetened
Two-thirds cup orange juice

Combine all the fruit and pour juice over it. Serve chilled.

DEAR ABBY

Solicitors deserve courtesy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I make an honest living soliciting new customers for a cleaning firm by telephoning people and advising them of our special introductory offers. But, Abby, I couldn't even repeat some of the names I've been called! Not only that, but I've had people hang up on me, telling me where to go and what I can do with my offer! You wouldn't believe some of the threats and curses I've been subjected to on this job!

It wouldn't take any longer to say, "Thank you very much, but I am not interested."

Please print this to remind people that telephone solicitors are human, too, and deserve a little courtesy and consideration. Thank you.—ABUSED BY THE PUBLIC

DEAR ABUSED: I do not condone rudeness for any reason, but judging from my mail, many more people resent telephone solicitation than appreciate it. A businessman in Clackamas, Ore., wrote to the Public Utilities Commissioner in Salem, Ore., as follows:

"DEAR SIR: I, as a very busy business executive, am writing to protest being called from my work to take unsolicitied sales calls, and it is especially galling to find myself talking to a computer. We pay high telephone rates so we can use the phone in our business and have it available for legitimate calls. We very strongly resent the invasion of our premises via equipment we pay for by these sales, and especially computer calls. If I want to buy insurance or seek investment possibilities, I know how to contact the people I need.

While I would not want to restrict legitimate suppliers from being able to solicit our business via telephone, there must be some way to prohibit the invasion of our privacy by unwanted junk calls.

I am making it a practice not to buy anything from this type of call. Not only do these calls take my time and disturb my routine, but they take the secretary's time and tie up the line so that legitimate calls cannot get through.

Anything you can do to work toward the elimination of this annoyance will be greatly appreciated. Sincerely yours, GORDON S. GLEASON"

For more on the subject of telephone solicitation, read on:

DEAR ABBY: You told readers who resent being called on the telephone by someone soliciting business to say, "Because you've inconvenienced me, I'll not buy your product or service."

I, too, am a salesman (insurance) who solicits by phone for many reasons. Some salesmen are too lazy to do otherwise; however, there are also valid reasons for telephone solicitation. First, our government has asked that we conserve gasoline, and secondly, I think a phone call is less of an intrusion than ringing someone's doorbell.

Abby, people who don't want to be bothered by soliciting salesmen should request an unlisted telephone number.—INSURANCE SALESMAN

DEAR SALESMAN: It costs money to have an unlisted telephone number. Furthermore, most people have a telephone telephone number. Fur people have a telephone for their own convenience—not a salesman's. And why must a private citizen be forced to choose between being bothered by a salesman who rings his doorbell OR one who calls him on the phone?

Even experts disagree on symptoms' meaning in autistic children

By ROBERTA KYLE
Special to Newsday

NEW YORK — In obstetrician's offices throughout the land, large-bellied ladies sit waiting for their monthly examinations. Although their ages and their feelings about motherhood may vary widely, virtually all of them will at one time or another ask their doctors for assurance that the child they carry is "normal."

Like every other pregnant woman, I received the standard medical lecture on the statistical unlikelihood of my bearing anything but a healthy child. During both my pregnancies, I did my exercises, took my vitamins, and pushed that nagging little fear to the back of my mind. When my second son, William, was born in 1972, I counted his fingers and toes and put my fears, I thought, to rest forever.

My fears resurfaced two years later when William sat quietly on the floor examining the pattern of an oriental rug at an age when his older brother had banged, yelled, explored and generally driven me crazy. It grew as time went on and William still did not speak or comprehend the spoken word. It came into full flower the day, 2 1-2 years ago, that my pediatrician sent me to see a famous child psychiatrist who announced that William was "autistic." That word changed my life in a way I could never have imagined.

Autism, a mystery malady, variously theorized to be a form of childhood schizophrenia, brain damage, biochemical malfunctioning, or the result of improper neurological development, is a difficult handicap to live with from a parent's point of view. With autism you never know where you are. It is not neatly definable like Downs syndrome (the correct name for mongolism) or hemophilia. It is a catch-all, diagnostic term describing a certain set of symptoms. Even the experts disagree on precisely what these symptoms are, what causes them, and the probable outcome.

Some experts even tell you that you, the parents, are the cause — a Freudian theory I abhor because of the crippling guilt it produces in parents who I have observed to be particularly loving and patient.

The symptoms of autism have to do with the strange way in which autistic children relate (or fail to relate) to the world around them. William is a classic example. Physically, he is beautiful; sandy haired, slim and blue-eyed — with a charming, infectious smile. From a photograph, you would have no inkling of is disabilities.

After sitting in a room with him for 10 minutes, you would know something was drastically wrong. Your "hello, William" might be greeted with complete indifference and your presence not even acknowledged, or it might bring forth several happy chirps and shrieks accompanied by a stiff-legged run up and down the room and a few hand flaps in front of the eyes. On the other hand, William might return your greeting by smiling, looking directly at you, climbing into your lap and pulling your hair. He just might even whisper a barely audible "heyo" back.

Sometimes he seems to tune out the world completely. When he was younger, we thought he might be deaf. In those days, a hand clapped loudly beside his ear did not elicit so much as a blink. Yet he could hear the sound of water running on the second-floor bathroom from the other end of the house, and always came running in anticipation of a bath.

Aside from a few almost unintelligible words, he has no meaningful speech and we don't know how much he comprehends. Sometimes, he can follow quite complicated instructions. Other times he does not respond even to his own name. Because of his language difficulties, children's books and most games are things he cannot enjoy. So much is closed to him, but he is a whiz at rough and tumble, tickle an peek-a-boo. We communicate with him on this basic level because we have no other choice. He marches to a different tune and we strain to catch its melody.

During the 2 1-2 years since William was diagnosed, our family has lived in an emotional limbo — waiting for the other shoe to drop. William has definitely made progress, but will he be among the statistical 14 percent of autistic children who eventually reach normal functioning? Nobody can tell us. What specific educational or therapeutic prescriptions can help him most? The experts all have their pet theories, but none of them has the answer. We know only one thing: that whatever William is or will become, he is not a statistic, but a very human, much loved, member of our family.

On a day-to-day basis, existing with an autistic child in the family is probably about like living with any severely handicapped person. Adjustments must be made.

There are the extra, hidden expenses like the babysitters we have to hire for occasions when other families take the kids along, and we can't; the replacement costs for china and crokery broken by a 5 year old who doesn't understand the concept of verse kind of joy in trying not to let fate get the better of you.

Autism is no different from any other severe disability, too, in the way strangers or friends react to it.

Most people are uncomfortable when they are face-to-face with an imperfect human being. The ususal response is denial. Many of us feel discomfort and avert our eyes when we see a blind man or crazy lady in the street. When this attitude was extended by my son, I was astonished. From the doctor who recommended instant institutionalization (pretend it never happened) to my neighbor who suddenly stopped dropping by with her children for coffee, I perceived a need to make William mentally and emotionally, if not physically, disapper.

It's not that people are cruel or unfeeling, they just can't handle the situation, and a certain response has been programmed into them. American culture, with its emphasis on youth and success, doesn't teach people how to deal with the reality of the old, disabled and seriously ill. Our society's answer is to pretend they don't exist. The old are relegated to nursing homes, the mentally handicapped to residential human warehouses, and the physically disabled to a half-life on the outskirts of the American mainstream.

We are indoctrinated at a very young age. How many of you remember, as I do, the first time you ever saw a man on crutches? I was 5 years old, waiting in line with my mother to see a Walt Disney movie.

"Why does that man walk with those sticks," I asked. "Sh-h," said my mother. "He might hear you. I'll tell you later." In her own way, my mother was trying to make the reality of the crippled man disappear. How silly. Had I posed my question to him, he probably would not have been offended and would have given me a simple, direct answer.

Then there was my friend Susan, who stopped talking about William after he was diagnosed as autistic. She would call on the phone and ask about my everyone and everything but William. One day I asked her why. Her answer: "I don't know what to say." Once her embarrassment was confronted, it disappeared.

In fact, a few weeks ago, Susan called to ask me if I thought William would enjoy attending her daughter's fourth birthday party. "I'm sure he'd love it," I said. "He's never been to a birthday party." William went to the party and had a wonderful time. He didn't join in many of the activities, but he laughed and smiled the whole time and gorged himself on ice cream and cake. He adored the balloons, favors, and the mere presence of other children.

The children were a bit puzzled by him at first, but soon took him in stride. I overheard one little girl ask another, "Why doesn't that boy talk?" The reply: "He has a disease in his head that makes it so he can't." What a simple and accurate explanation. The flexibility and easy acceptance of a defective human being by these small children touched me deeply. It presented such a marked contrast to the attitudes of their elders.

Had William been born with one of the defects detectable in the delivery room, I might well have institutionalized him at birth and been praised by an America that fears its non-productive citizens so much that it cannot bear to look at them.

But then I would never have had the opportunity to learn what William has taught me: that humanity in all its forms deserves our respect. In simpler societies, the old and feeble are given useful work to do. The sick are cared for until they either recover or die. Even the village idiot has his place, performing small, rote tasks. These unfortuntes may be limited, but they are part of the mainstream. Their very existence is not denied.

In America, the hidden fraternity of the unifit numbers in the hundreds of thousands. You do not have to be born into it like William. You can join by going to war and coming home a paraplegic, or by losing your eyesight in an accident. You can suffer from any of the serious mental conditions euphemistically grouped under the term "nervous breakdown." Watch your friends, neighbors and medical insurance disappear when you contract a terminal illness. Or just get old and see what happens.

I do not have society's options. I cannot make William disappear. I have chosen to live with him and I cannot deny his existence or his needs. He is here, and when he smiles at me and whispers "Mama," one of the few words he uses spontaneously, I know how much I love him. I cannot protect him from our society forever, but I will not abandon him. If William cannot have the whole apple pie of American life, I will do my very best to see that he gets the biggest slice possible.

Wayne Rogers

Ted Lange

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — "M-A-S-H" may go on forever, but Wayne Rogers, formerly Trapper John in the series, isn't sorry that it's going on without him.

Rogers left the series of his own accord; tried starring in another series, "City of Angels," which didn't do too well; and, since then, has free-lanced here and there.

"If I'd stayed in 'M-A-S-H,' I couldn't have done the movie I've just finished," Rogers said recently as he was moving into a new office on the edge of Beverly Hills. "And I couldn't have done the show with Marlo (Thomas)."

The movie is "Once in Paris," a film just completed in — as you might have guessed — Paris; while the "show with Marlo" was a two and a half-hour television drama for ABC based on the Frank Capra movie, "It's a Wonderful Life."

In the Capra movie, which co-starred James Stewart and Donna Reed, Stewart played a suicidal young banker, a character interpreted by Marlo on TV.

However, Wayne won't agree that he replaced Donna in the action.

"I was half-Donna Reed and half-Jimmy Stewart," he said, "and Marlo was half-Jimmy Stewart and half-Donna Reed."

Ever since they finished the show, practically everybody has asked Wayne, "How did you get along working with Marlo?" The tones implying that they expect him to say, "It was awful."

But if that's the answer questioners have been expecting, they've been disappointed, because Roger's answer has invariably been, "It was great. In fact, we've been talking about doing another project together, though it wouldn't be a sequel.

"Marlo should be running a studio.

"All she cares about is the quality of the work, and, if you don't measure up, you might find that unsettling. But I thought working with her was terrific."

Wayne had acquired his new suite of offices as a seat from which to exercise his financial expertise recognized by the likes of Jimmy Caan, Peter Falk and other stars who regularly take his financial advice.

In fact, Falk was in Wayne's offices as he talked, beaming broadly either because he's a new bridegroom or because Wayne had told him his checkbook was in balance. He didn't say which. But he did look pleased.

"I was working in the guest house back of my home, " Wayne explained, "and I had to have more room.

"But this doesn't mean I'll spend less time acting.

Ted Lange, the bartender on "The Love Boat," is up to his ears in work and bursting with enthusiasm, directing "A Black Perspective on Shakespeare" at Los Angeles Inner City Cultural Center with the piece de resistance, an interracial treatment of "Hamlet" with Glynn Turman in the title role.

"In our production, Hamlet is black. The king is black, but Gertrude, Hamlet's mother, is white," he says. "I don't think Hamlet was crazy. I think he was a very obvious, militant man."

Ted, whose father performed at the Los Angeles Ebony Showcase, and whose mother hosts her own television show in San Francisco, comes from a creative family which always encouraged him to act — provided that was what he really wanted to do.

Ted played Romeo while he was in college; was named best actor by the Black Students' Association of San Francisco College; and won a scholarship to the University of Colorado's Shakespearean Festival. Later, after performing with the New Shakespearean Company and teaching at the University of California at Davis, he made his Broadway debut in "Hair."

He was also on Broadway in "Ain't Supposed to Die a Natural Death," and in a quartet of films before he arrived on "The Love Boat."

Dolly cancels concerts

SAN ANTONIO Texas (AP) — A light case of bronchial pneumonia has forced entertainer Dolly Parton to cancel her scheduled shows until June 24, according to her road manager.

The popular singer was scheduled to perform Wednesday night in Amarillo, Texas, and here tonight. She was examined by a doctor here Wednesday.

"The doctor told us it was mandatory for Dolly to take a minimum of seven days off. So we are following the doctor's orders," road manager Don Warden said Wednesday.

"We have been forced to cancel all shows between now and the 24th. We are hoping to reset all the canceled dates," he added.

Miss Parton left here Wednesday afternoon for her home in Tennessee, where she will recuperate, Warden said.

Today's hand should be familiar to all male bridge players. The Little Woman opens the ace and another club from the West hand, obviously looking for a club ruff. Any red-blooded masculine East has an idea worth two of that.

East switches to the ace and another diamond instead of returning a third round of clubs. Why should West get her club ruff when East wants to ruff a diamond?

This switch in plans usually works out beautifully. For South. Declarer usually manages to draw trumps quickly, and nobody gets any ruffs at all.

SWITCH MAY WORK

The switch in plans may work, however, if declarer cannot draw trumps quickly. In today's hand, East's ace of trumps tells hime that his plan will work. He must switch defenses to defeat the normal two-spade contract.

East takes the second club and leads out two rounds of diamonds. When South tries to draw trups, East steps up with the ace of spades and leads a club for West to ruff. West returns a diamond, and East's ruff defeats the contract.

This is the emotional story of two fictional families, one Nazi, one Jewish, each swept up by the war in Europe against the Jews from 1935 to 1945. The book was published to coincide with the telecast of "Holocaust," filmed entirely on location in Europe. The tragic story covers the years just before enactment of the anti-Semitic Nuremberg laws to the liberation of the infamous Auschwitz Nazi prison camp in 1945. "Holocaust" was chosen as an alternate selection of the Literary Guild and the Doubleday Book Club. Green wrote the best-selling "The Last Angry Man."

Counterfeit birth certificates readily available

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Birth certificates record life.

The counterfeiting of birth certificates has flourished, for they lead to a paper identity — driver's license and Social Security and credit cards.

Aliens, as well as criminals, are willing to pay up to several hundred dollars for the false documents.

"Counterfeit birth certificates . . . can be obtained readily and inexpensively anywhere in the United States," says Don Carroll, chief of the state health department's bureau of vital statistics.

"In this state, in other states, and in certain foreign countries," he says, "counterfeit certified copies of birth certificates are being printed which are purported to have been issued by the Texas Bureau of Vital Statistics."

Carroll gave examples in the health department publication, Texas Health Bulletin:

—The Rev. Luis Herman Acevedo-Cuevas of Houston was sentenced to eight years in prison for allegedly violating the immigration laws by making and selling $2,500 packages of "spurious documents" to illegal aliens, most of whom had been born in South America.

—Also in 1977, a Dallas couple, Domingo and Anita Rodriquez, were sentenced to prison after pleading guilty to obtaining and selling fraudulent birth certificates for $700-$800 to aliens.

"Counterfeiting is form which, "it" is becoming a more and believed, cannot be more serious problem," successfully counsays Carroll. "Some terfeited."

"It makes it almost impossible to duplicate the form," says Carroll.

The new birth certificate not only is more difficult — if not impossible — to duplicate, it costs only 9 cents apiece to print, which is cheaper than the old photostatic copies.

A Texan pays $3 for it.

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.
Copley News Service

Doctor Wallace: I am 17 and a senior in high school.

About two weeks ago a guy from school called me for a date. I told him no because he already had a steady girl. He called me every night for a week but we never talked at school because of his girlfriend.

He called a few days ago and said that he broke up with his girl and wanted to know if I would see him. That evening he tried everything he could to get me to "go all the way" with him.

I kept saying no and made him take me home. I like the guy but he hasn't called since that night.

Dear Joanne: Yes, you did the right thing. Forget this guy for good. His one-track mind could have caused you much trouble — now and months later!

Last year the after-football-game dance ended at midnight and my parents made me leave a half-hour early. This year my parents are still making me leave a half-hour early and it makes quite a difference.

When there is no dance after the game, all my friends usually go to a popular pizza place for pizza and to talk. We just have a good time.

Because I'm 15, my parents claim I'm too young. Do you have to be a certain age just to have a little fun?

I try in school and get good grades. — Naomi, San Mateo, Calif.

Dear Naomi: If you are trustworthy, I feel you should be allowed to stay at the dance until it ends and to go to the pizza place with your friends after the football game. Your parents are mistaking age with maturity.

Why not invite your parents to "see for themselves" what happens at the pizza place after a game. Hopefully, they will allow you to go and to be home at a reasonable time.

Doctor Wallace: I'm a sophomore, like to play football, and I'm a girl. I'm sure I could make it on one of the teams.

I've seen the varsity and junior varsity practice. That's why I know I could make it. I work out every day and I'm in good shape.

If I do go out and make the team, is there any way they can say I can't play because I'm a girl? — D.L., Colorado Springs, Colo.

Dear D.L.: If your school allows you to go out for the team, and you make it, then you will be allowed to play — but don't get your hopes up too high. I know of no female on the high school, college or professional level playing football.

There are a very few things that should be segregated — I believe football is one of them.

Juneteenth fest to begin today

The second annual "Juneteenth Gala Celebration" will be held today through Sunday at Washington Park, starting at 10 a.m. each day.

Juneteenth is the word used for June 19, the day Blacks in Texas recognize as their independence day.

Although they were freed under the Emancipation Proclamation issued by President Lincoln in 1863, it was on June 19, 1865 that Gen. Gordon Granger issued orders to free all slaves in Texas.

A parade at 10 a.m. begins Saturday's activities. It will start at North A Street and Illinois Avenue, continue to Front Street, Lee Street, Indiana Avenue and end at Washington Park.

Saturday events include a Battle of the Bands from the Showmobile, a talent show, style show and a disco dance.

A spiritual hour will begin at 2 p.m. Sunday. Other activities that day will be a watermelon eating contest, ring toss, shooting gallery and penny pitch.

Fire lanes designated

The Midland City Council approved the fire lanes in a council meeting.

"In the very near future, signs will be posted along each of these designated routes declaring them fire lanes," Ulrich said. "Signs have been ordered. As soon as they are installed, city police will begin patrolling the lanes. Unattended parked cars will be ticketed and cars receiving repeated citations will be towed away at owners' expense."

Ulrich explained the fire lane designation is a safety measure jointly agreed upon by directors of Midland County Hospital District, Fire Chief Raymond Lewis and City Council members.

"Parking abuse in the no parking areas has become such a problem that in the event a fire truck or other emergency equipment was needed at the hospital, it would be difficult for the firemen to reach the building. We must assure the safety of our patients, visitors and staff," Ulrich said.

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The president of Sam Houston State University, who gave $440 to state auditors to pay for work done on his house by university employes, says he thinks the auditors did a good job in their investigation into financial "irregularities" at the school.

Dr. Elliott Bowers said Thursday that he and his staff intend to comply with the applicable statutes and auditor's rules and regulations.

"It is helpful for them (the auditors) to interpret them (the rules) from time to time to keep minor problems from becoming major ones," he said.

Dr. Bowers' repayment for the expenditures, which were not authorized specifically by the university's board of regents, came as state auditors reported an investigation turned up $1,189.67 in "irregularities" for the year ended last Aug. 31.

Mike Ferguson Jr., the audit supervisor, told university officials he was satisfied that the money had been or would be repaid by those found accountable for the discrepancies.

Ferguson notified the university on Feb. 1 that auditors had found 16 irregularities involving the use of school funds, property and employes.

He said Thursday he is satisfied the university had conducted "e full investigation" and had acted in good faith.

Ferguson also said the university is following up on his recommendation that it hire an internal auditor.

No evidence on 'strangler' case suspect

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — No charges will be filed against George Shamshak, the Massachusetts convict held as a suspect in the Hillside Strangler murders, Los Angeles County District Attorney John Van de Kamp said Thursday.

"At this time there is insufficient evidence upon which to base criminal charges against Shamshak," Van de Kamp said in a prepared statement.

But he denied that the case against Shamshak, who contacted investigators last February claiming he was present at two of the murders, was dead.

Labor law filibuster still on

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The drive to break the Senate's month-long filibuster against the administration's labor law revision package stalled Thursday, casting new doubt over the fate of the union-backed measure.

Sponsors of the controversial bill picked up no new votes Thursday, and failed for the fifth time to cut off debate. The vote was 58 to 39.

After the vote, Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., heretofore a staunch filibuster foe, warned that his vote can no longer be taken for granted.

Hatfield's warning, coupled with the fact that this was the first time that the bill's supporters failed to gain ground from one vote to the next, pointed to trouble — some said deep trouble — for the entire package.

But Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., calmly ordered up another cloture vote for next Tuesday or Wednesday, and labor lobbyists continued to insist they would eventually have the votes to choke off the talkathon.

Sources on both sides indicated that, with at least four days for regrouping, handholding and armtwisting, the outcome is too close to call. But there was widespread agreement that next week's votes may be decisive and that the administration, the Senate Democratic leadership and organized labor have, as one lobbyist put it, "a helluva lot of work to do in four days."

The bill, which would generally make it easier for unions to organize workers and win contracts, for two days has been stymied two votes short of the 60 needed to invoke cloture and end the filibuster.

Wednesday's vote was 58 to 41. On each previous vote, the anti-filibuster forces had picked up votes. They had hoped to break off the debate by Wednesday, a deadline that was largely self-imposed but important in the sense that it established a yardstick for testing their strength.

The previous record for cloture votes on a single issue, substantive or procedural, was six during a debate in 1975 over a contested senatorial election in New Hampshire.

The Senate has taken up virtually no other busiuness since the labor bill debate began May 16, prompting Hatfield's unexpected assertion that he may not support cloture attempts after the sixth try.

"As one senator, I just say I'm reaching the point of diminishing returns," Hatfield told the Senate after Thursday's vote. "I, for one, do not want to be responsible for holding up the Senate ad infinitum. My support of cloture cannot be taken for granted because of other vital legislation." He said he would probably support the next cloture motion, but can't be counted on after that.

"I'm growing weary of pushing vital legislation to the end of the session and having it passed in the wee hours of the morning," he added.

Byrd said he sympathized, and suggested that cloture was the way to get on with the Senate's business.

Hatfield told a reporter that two senators told him afterward they agreed with him.

The anti-filibuster forces may have also lost ground with Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., who had been counted on to provide the 60th vote if a 59th could be found. Sources said Thursday that Sparkman's vote is now uncertain.

There was talk of major concession to pick up wavering senators but labor lobbyists reportedly objected strongly and the question was shelved at least until Monday. One widely discussed concession involves dropping a provision that would expand union access to company property during organizing drives.

"The problem is that you can't find a senator who is guaranteed to be won over by a single concession," at least one that would be palatable to organized labor, said one source.

The strategy of Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, and other filibuster leaders is to wear down the Democratic leadership to the point where it will withdraw the bill. But so far Byrd isn't budging. "I believe in the old adage (that) if you fail to succeed, try, try again," he told Sen. William L. Scott, R-Va., who suggested he withdraw the bill.

The legislation, which passed the House easily last year and then ran into a massive opposition campaign from business this year, would set deadlines for union representation elections and impose stiff penalties on employers who violate the law in trying to thwart unionizing and bargaining efforts. It is organized labor's top goal for this session of Congress.

Montana senator sticking up for woman deported for contraceptive possession

BUTTE, Mont. (AP) — A Montana senator wants immigration officials to compensate a young West German woman who was put on a return flight to her homeland when she arrived for a vacation with a six-month visa and a 10-month supply of contraceptive pills.

Heike Hagenbucher of Ubersee, West Germany, landed in Denver last week for a vacation with Lee Sampson of Butte. The couple, both 21, met when Sampson was stationed in Germany with the U.S. Army.

Sampson says a 10-month supply of contraceptive pills and school records in Miss Hagenbucher's luggage apparently made immigration officials suspicious. Sampson said his friend had no return ticket to Germany. He speculated that officials may have feared she was going to over-stay her visitor's visa, possibly using her school records to get work.

Sampson appealed to U.S. Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., who says the U.S. Naturalization and Immigration Service was high-handed:

"The service acted totally illegally," Melcher said Wednesday in Washington. "I want that girl returned here at government expense, and I want her compensated for her inconvenience."

Melcher is especially upset that Miss Hagenbucher was ordered onto a return plane without a hearing.

"Everyone is entitled to a hearing, and this girl was denied due process," Melcher said. "I want this thing straightened out soon."

But Melcher said he does not expect an answer from the immigration service in less than a week. "Nobody here (in Washington) replies to anything in less than a week," Melcher said.

Sampson said he had arranged for Miss Hagenbucher's trip to the United States and drove to Denver to meet her.

At the airport, he said, he was approached by a woman who identified herself as an employee of the Immigration Service.

"She asked me if I was waiting for a girl from Germany," Sampson recalled. "I told her I was, and she asked me if Heike and I were going to be married. I told her we had no marriage plans for the immediate future."

Sampson said the woman then told him Miss Hagenbucher was being returned to Germany and the only thing he could do was "go before a judge and if you lose she will lose her visitor's privileges for one year ...

"They would not let me talk to Heike to explain about going to court," he said.

Murder trial close expected

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Closing arguments were expected today as the capital murder trial of Gregory Ott moved closer to having the jury decide if Ott shot and killed Texas Ranger Bobby Doherty last February.

Prosecutors had rested their case earlier in the day.

Testimony in the trial began Monday before State District Judge Bob Scofield after more than a week was spent selecting a jury.

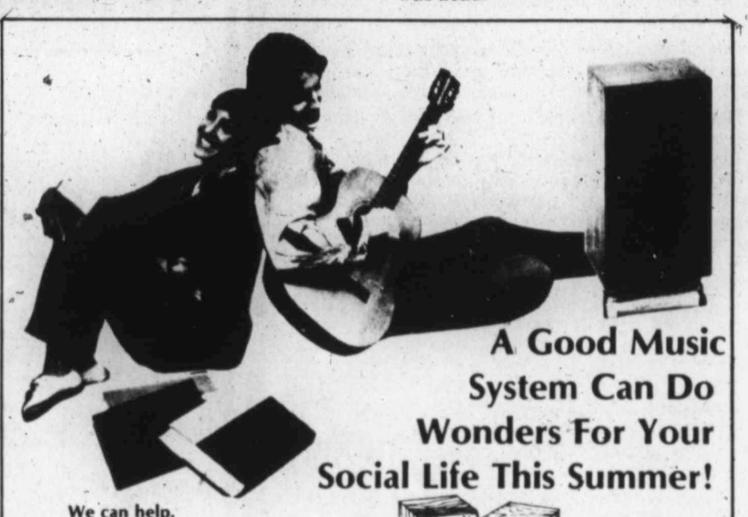

Ott did not testify in his own behalf.

Instead, his lawyers called the witnesses who were each questioned only about an initial charge of capital murder that was lodged against another man. The charge was on the Denton County jail log and had been scratched out. The log was entered into evidence.

Ott was closeted with his lawyers for about an hour before his attorneys told the court they had no further evidence or witnesses.

Outside the presence of the jury, defense lawyer Hal Jackson moved for a mistrial on grounds that notes taken by Ott at Jackson's direction had been delivered to Denton County Attorney Jerry Cobb, who refused to return the notes.

Judge Scofield, who earlier in chambers had declined to issue any order concerning the notes, denied the mistrial motion but agreed to require the notes be turned over to the court and sealed as part of the trial record.

'Junk jewelry' helps save lives

By LEW SCARR
Copley News Service

Alfred Hodder figures that if you are going to wear junk jewelry for the rest of your life, you might as well wear what he calls "junk jewelry that can save your life."

At least that advice goes for one of every five Americans — 40 million persons who have hidden or special medical problems that can kill or severely injure them if a physician providing emergency treatment is unaware of the problems.

Hodder is executive vice president of Medic Alert Foundation International, the world's oldest and largest provider of emergency medical identification service.

More than 1.2 million persons throughout the world wear bracelets or necklaces bearing the Medic Alert medical symbol.

It is estimated, according to Hodder, that 2,000 lives a year are saved because of the tags.

"But we think it really is 20 times that," Hodder said, "because those are only the verified cases. But really that is not the most important statistic," he said in an interview.

"I think the most important thing is that more than a million people can lead normal lives with the peace of knowing that if something happens to them they will be taken care of properly."

Still, Hodder and his foundation found it necessary to conduct the first National Medic Alert Week and for him to make public appearances throughout the nation.

Reason: Even though it can mean the difference between life and death, there is a great resistance to wearing Medic Alert jewelry.

"We have found that even when our program is offered to workers free as part of their fringe benefits, only 4 or 5 percent take advantage of it," Hodder said.

Many persons with health problems, for reasons of their own, don't want others to know about them. Some, such as epileptics, are discriminated against in many areas of society, especially employment.

For example, 94 percent of epileptics who are members of Medic Alert choose to wear their medical alerts on a necklace, where it is not as obvious as a wrist.

By comparison, Hodder said that 91 percent of diabetics in the program wear bracelets.

He said emergency professionals are trained to look at the wrists or around the neck for an alerting device.

For this reason, Hodder deplores devices worn or carried other places, such as on belt buckles.

Medic Alert charges a one-time $10 fee for lifetime membership. Hodder was asked why a person would pay $10 when for a fraction of that he can get an identification bracelet or necklace over the counter.

"First of all," he said, "we are non-profit, charitable and tax-exempt, and the world's biggest. The alerting device speaks for the wearer in an emergency when he or she can't communicate."

Information on the back of the device includes the member's identification number, a hot-line telephone number and the special medical problem.

This is backed up by a wallet card with more personal and medical information. The card is issued annually and is dated so emergency personnel know they are dealing with information that is not more than a year old.

Texas wine industry experiencing growth

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — In the next 10 to 15 years, more glasses of Texas-produced wine will be lifted as the industry experiences a "great growth," Rep. Bennie Bock, D-New Braunfels, said Thursday.

"The potential is greater than in California," said Bock, chairman of a House subcommittee appointed to study the industry.

"We need to let the people be aware of the value of their land for the industry, and to show individuals there's profits to be made in that field," he said before a subcommittee meeting.

Certain laws appear to hinder prospective wine growers who traditionally allow visitors to sample their wine, he added.

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the idea of making fuel from grain still has its advocates, the Agriculture Department is circulating reports which present a pessimistic view that large portions of the corn crop will never be used to run the family automobile.

Two publications distributed this week include items explaining gasahol — the term used to describe a fuel mixture of grain alcohol and gasoline — and the problems of developing a widely used energy source from grain.

The articles are based on a report called "Gasahol from Grain — the Economic Issues" which was prepared for the Task Force on Physical Resources of the House's budget committee. One was included in the current issue of Farm Index and the other in Agricultural Situation, both published by the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., meanwhile, said this week that he continues to support gasahol research as an alternative to conventional fossil fuel.

"Up to now, it has been uneconomical to produce gasahol because the calories used to make the alcohol exceed the amount of calories produced by the finished product," Dole said. "It also takes fossil fuels to produce the alcohol."

The USDA report noted that a mixture of 10 percent grain alcohol — also called ethanol — and 90 percent regular gasoline can be used as fuel without engine modifications.

"According to some studies, if grain alcohol is to replace 10 percent of the gasoline used for fuel, 40 percent of the total grain harvest must be diverted to ethanol production," the report said.

If this were done, it said, "such a slice out of the grain supply would mean either supplies of grains for food and feed would be very tight — resulting in higher consumer prices — or farmers would have to boost acreage substantially."

Dole and many other farmbelt Congressmen have supported gasohol research also on grounds that it could lead to a much larger, more profitable market for grain farmers.

The USDA report said that based on 1975 figures when Americans burned about 109 billion gallons of gasoline and harvested about 10 billion bushels of grain it would have taken nearly four billion bushels of grain to make a 10 percent gasahol mixture.

"Such massive use of grains for fuel, then, is not promising because of the quantity needed," the report said.

Further, because "ethanol is the same as alcohol for drinking," many federal and state laws regulating its production would be involved, including many regarding taxes.

Costs are formidable, also. The report said that a plant capable of turning out commercial quantities of ethanol would have costs of about $1.42 a gallon, compared with about 38 cents for refining gasoline.

Although grain alcohol does not appear on the horizon as a viable fuel, another agricultural possibility exists with methanol and methane gas which can be made from a variety of materials, including some barnyard wastes, crop residues and other items.

The Food and Agricultural Act of 1977 gives wusda authority to spend up to $15 million each for four pilot projects. Hearings were held recently on proposed guidelines for developing the projects and USDA now is reviewing the information before announcing the final rules.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Farm Bureau Federation says that "an unusual set of circumstances" has caused it to side with the Environmental Protection Agency on the use of a pesticide to combat fire ants.

A lawsuit by the Environmental Defense Fund, an activist group which has opposed the use of many pesticides, calls for EPA to set aside its approval granting Mississippi limited use of ferriamicide to control fire ants for one year begining July 1.

Ferriamicide is a substitute for mirex, a chemical which will be banned on June 30 of this year. Eight other states have asked or are expected to ask EPA approval of ferriamicide to control the ants.

Well loggers gather for El Paso meeting

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Beaumont Cooley is one of an elite group of specialists whose informed hunches precede the highest-stakes poker game probably every played — finding tomorrow's petroleum supply.

Cooley, 54, a kind of energy super sleuth, concedes his job — finding the world's oil and gas deposits — is "a little bit like forecasting the weather."

About 600 of these specialists are gathered in El Paso for the 19th annual Society of Professional Well Log Analysts symposium that ends today. Analysts from 15 countries, including the Soviet Union are attending.

"This is why we have specialists. It's usually the well log specialist who takes data from a well, and analyzes it to determine if the well will produce, how fast and whether it is economically feasible."

"Had the oil companies involved in that project not had the expertise that analysts offered, they likely would have not built that pipeline because it wound up costing them about $10 billion. Somebody along the line had to say there is enough oil there to warrant spending that kind of money."

Cooley who currently evaluates drilling efforts for Chevron Oil Co. from his headquarters in Spain, said his firm is presently committed to a $200 million joint exploration of the Mediterranean Sea.

The vast shale oil deposits in the mountains of Utah and Colorado are well known to producers, but Cooley said cost factors make such operations prohibitive.

With 28 years in the business, Cooley said he has become aware of the growing scarcity of crude oil. Like others in the industry, he's convinced the situation is not going to improve.

"Twenty-eight years ago, we were in a situation where we could produce more oil than we could bun," he said. "Consequently, oil was down to about $1.50 a barrel. Even today, if all the oil fields in the world were turned lose and the oil distributed evenly, we would have enough.

Administration will let U.S. export to Japan

By T. R. REID
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration said Thursday it will let U.S. refiners start exporting some domestic oil products to Japan and other buyers to reduce a glut of heavy crude oil on the West Coast.

Such export proposals have met wth emotional opposition in Congress in the past, from members who say it is absurd to export U.S. oil at the same time the country is importing so much foreign oil at great cost.

"If you've got a shortage that is the moral equivalent of war, how can you export what you're short of?" Sen. John Durkin, D-N.H., one opponent, asked Thursday night.

But major oil companies, particularly those with large new supplies flowing into the West Coast from Alaska, have pressed for permission to export as a way of reducing the glut, which has threatened to depress oil prices.

The regulations include other steps to ease the West Coast glut and a proposal to triple subsidies paid to East Coast refiners who import residual fuel oil. The subsidies are paid by refiners elsewhere in the country and are presumably passed on to those refiners' customers.

The immediate result, Schlesinger said, will be to reduce fuel prices in the East and raise them slightly — about 1-8 cent per gallon — for consumers in the rest of the country.

Schlesinger said that, over the long run, the complex set of rules announced Thursday will increase demand for, and production of, doestic oil and thus reduce imports.

But he also conceded that, to some extent, the decision to permit exports will work against that long-range goal. He said exports had to be authorized because "California has a particular problem."

Fuel oil refined from West Coast crude is hard to sell domestically because it is expensive to transport to U.S. markets and because its high sulfur content causes air pollution. Western refiners, holding excessive stocks of fuel oil they cannot sell, have slowed all refining operations, Schlesinger said, including production of gasoline and other refined products for which there is a demand.

Schlesinger said permission to export will help the firms unload 30 million barrels of residual fuel oil now in storage. Then they will step up refining operations and produce the needed gasoline, he said.

But he conceded that granting export licenses ill reduce the pressure on West Coast firms to invest in new production facilities and pipelines that wouldmake the West Coast fuel oil marketable in the eastern and midwestern United States.

New production and transport facilities, he said, are "the obvious long-term solution" to the West Coast oil glut. Exporting, he said, is "a short-term solution at best." Export licenses will be granted only on a temporary basis, Schlesinger added, but he did not say for how long.

The Carter administration has resisted the oil companies' requests for export licenses, largely because of congressional opposition. Last July, president Carter turned down Schlesinger's proposal to let oil from Alaskan fields be sold to Japan.

The export decision announced Thursday applies only to residual fuel oil, a refined product, and not to crude oil straight from the well.

In a written explanation of the new regulations, the Department of Energy said it had considered permitting exports of crude oil as well, but rejected that idea because "once oil is exported on a rgular basis, it would be difficult to later reverse that policy."

Congress was so angry at the suggestion that domestic oil might be exported that it passed legislation last winter prohibiting the export of Alaskan crude oil. Energy Department officials said the new regulations announced Thursday would not violate that ban because exports of a refined product only would be authorized.

Durkin said he would introduce legislation Monday to prohibit export of any domestic oil, crude or refined. "The president's going to look like a damn fool, letting Schlesinger do this," Durkin said.

The request will be heard following the commission's July statewide oil allowable hearing.

On 24-hour potential test it pumped 17 barrels of oil and 45 barrels of water. Gravity of the oil is 37 degrees and the gas-oil ratio is too small to measure.

Completion was through San Andrews perforations from 2,102 to 2,257 feet after 1,500 gallons of acid and an unreported amount of fracture fluid.

Amin's actions unaltered, rights group says

By BILL PETERSON
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Amnesty International Thursday charged that although Uganda President Idi Amin has declared 1978 a year of "peace and reconciliation" thepattern of arbitrary arrests, disappearances, torture and killings "persist unaltered" under his dictatorship.

The human rights monitoring group that was awarded the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize sid that from 50,000 to 300,000 persons have been arbitrarily killed in the African nation since Amin came to power in 1971.

Unless international pressure is increased on Uganda, "there is good reason to fear" that human rights violations of the same scale "could continue for a long time to come," the volunteer group said in a report to the Senate subcommittee on Foreign Economic Policy.

The report was released as the Senate was urged to bar U.S. coffee imports from Uganda in an effort to topple Amin's regime.

"I feel very strongly that this nation cannot sit idly by while genocide is being practiced in Uganda," Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said in opening three days of hearings on the matter.

"It appears that trade with the U.S. may be an important factor in maintaining the economic viability of the Amin government," the Idaho Democrat said at another point.

Coffee is Uganda's only major export. In 1977, the United States imported about one third of the coffee produced in the country. Great Britain imported about 20 percent.

On Monday, the House of Representatives approved a resolution urging the Carter administration to ban all trade with Uganda. The resolution, however, is not binding on the president and falls short of mandatory sanctions being urged by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and other members of Congress.

Both Hatfield and Church Thursday praised Procter & Gamble and Hills Brothers for deciding to stop buying Uganda coffee. Two other companies, General Foods and Nestle, have stopped buying Ugandan coffee for resale in the United States but are continuing to purchase it for foreign markets.

Hatfield criticized the Carter administraton, the United Nations and Third World countries for their reluctance to move on the Uganda government. Amin, he said, is guilty of the "most flagrant form of genocide against his own people."

"We're led to believe that a ban on coffee imports could lead to a toppling ofhis regime," Hatfield said in an interview.

Amin has declared he has turned over a new leaf, and has invited Hatfield and other to have dinner with him — an invitation the Oregon Republican has declined.

Amnesty International said it could find little evidence of any real change in Amin. Its study reported on 847 known killings since the beginning of 1977, including some as late as April.

Although there have been periods during that time when killings temporarily diminished, the group said, "The Uganda government has taken no steps to improve the human rights situation."

Every new crisis, it said, brings on a new wave of random arrests and killings. Politicians, businessmen, writers, academics, foreigners and religious leaders have been particularly singled out.

The government, it added, has "institutionalized" various forms of torture, including gouging out eyes and electric shock treatments.

Cubs nip Gold Sox in 9th

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

The Midland Cubs have a bad case of late inning hero worship lately at Cubs Stadium, and the Amarillo Gold Sox are paying the price.

Wednesday Kurt Seibert hit a 10th inning homer to beat the Sox, and Thursday Jim Buckner turned in the hero role with a bottom of the ninth, bases loaded, two-strike single up the middle to produce a 7-6 victory. Life in the Texas League is not dull these days.

The fans seem to be getting their money's worth watching these two teams lock horns, but if they continue at this pace, someone better inform the emergency room at the hospital before the two meet again today at 7:30 on two-bit beer night.

GOING INTO the ninth tied is nothing new for these two clubs or the fans, but Buckner produced what is becoming expected.

With one out, Kurt Seibert, who scored the winning run for the second night in a row, got things going with a single to center. Kevin Drury, hitless in four previous trips, then singled to left on a perfect hit and run play as Seibert easily rolled into third. Losing pitcher John Yandle then set the stage for Buckner by intentionally walking Joe Hernandez, who had bruised Sox' hurler Greg Wilkes with a towering homer to knot the score at 6-6 in the eighth.

BUCKNER THEN came to the plate and quickly got two strikes after two admittedly feeble swings, but then he caught a curve ball and sent it up the middle past the drawn in infield for the game winner. Hero No. 2 was established, and there is always tonight to look forward to.

It didn't start out all that fine for the Cubs, however. Sox starter Eric Mustad seemed to have the Bruins in his hip pocket. He flirted with a perfect game for four innings, retiring all 12 Cubs he faced in unbelieveably easy fashion. Then came the fifth. That's when Buckner ruined Mustad's day with an eye seeing base hit grounder between first and second. The way things were going then, Cub fans thought Buckner was a hero for just getting on base.

MUSTAD THEN walked Eric Grandy, and decided to leave the game when his arm stiffened. That, fortunately, opened the door for the Cubs, and before the frame was over, the Cubs held a 4-2 lead. Aaron Randall drove in one with a single to center, and Seibert got another home on a ground ball. Brian Rosinski and Randall scored on an error by Sox shortstop Steve Smith, who threw away a grounder off the bat of Javier Fierro.

Things heated up then as Amarillo tied the score at four in the sixth when Smith made up for his error with a two-run double down the left field line off of Cub starter Lee Smith. The Cubs led again, 5-4, in the bottom of the sixth when Rosinski doubled home Grandy, who had singled and stole second.

AMARILLO TOOK a 6-5 lead in the eighth when Joe Hicks and Paul O'Neill belted eventual winner Larry Groover with two booming solo fence clearing shots to left. But Hernandez, who has played only nine games for the Cubs since he broke his wrist in the first series with San Antonio to open the season, answered with his second homer of the year.

"I really feel good. I don't think I was too far behind even though I missed 2½ months with the wrist. I took a lot of BP (batting practice) and my timing has been pretty good. I was just ready to play. It's hard sitting out on the disabled list," Hernandez said.

HERNANDEZ' BLAST set the stage for the fun ninth, but the Sox refused to let Joe be the final hero after what he did in the eighth. He left it all for Buckner.

"I was really looking over my shoulder when I went up in the ninth," Buckner said lightly. "I didn't know if they were even going to let me hit or not. Seriously, I just wanted to hit a ground ball because the infield was in for a play at the plate, and it would be easy to get a ball through for a hit. I

Wallis winds up with Oakland

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

"You've been traded," Charles O. Finley said over the phone to the clubhouse. "I think you'll be happy where you're going."

"Where am I going?"

"To the New York Yankees."

That's how Gary Thomasson learned Thursday that the Oakland A's were sending him to the defending world champions of baseball for outfielder Dell Alston, infielder Mickey Klutts and "a substantial amount of cash."

Thomasson was in an Oakland uniform just ready to take batting practice before a game with the Boston Red Sox at Fenway Park when he got news of the deal, one of several last minute transactions before the major league trading deadline.

The A's were among the busiest of teams before the midnight EDT deadline, also shipping catcher Gary Alexander to Cleveland for former Midland Cubs outfielder Joe Wallis, who himself had been acquired only a few hours earlier by the Indians from the Chicago Cubs.

The Indians made three deals, adding some offensive clout with the addition of Alexander and Bernie Carbo from Boston in a late cash acquisition that beat the final gun by minutes. Earlier, Cleveland's wheeler-dealers had sent Mike Vail to Chicago for Wallis before completing the deal for Alexander.

The Cubs, meanwhile, also made a deal with San Francisco, acquiring pitcher Lynn McGlothen for outfielder Hector "Heity" Cruz and a player to be named later in lieu of cash.

Infielder Roger Metzger and outfielder Jim Dwyer also became

Crenshaw's 8, Kite's 7 typical of Open disasters

DENVER (AP) — Ben Crenshaw's 8 on the par-4 16th hole was testimony to it. So were Tom Kite's 7 on the par-4 18th, and the pair of double-bogeys that stung defending champion Hubert Green.

"I thought the golf course certainly had the upper hand on most of the fellows today," said Jack Nicklaus, whose 2- over-par 73 put him 4 strokes back of first-round leader Hale Irwin at the 78th U.S. Open golf championship.

"If these conditions continue, 290 might win," said Nicklaus, who earlier in the week had predicted the winner would need a four-round total of less than 280.

Only four players bettered par, led by Irwin's conservatively played 69. Andy North, J.C. Snead and 18-year-old amateur Bob Clampett carded 1-under 70s.

"This country club golf course that I heard someone call it earlier in the week has turned into something more than that," said Arnold Palmer, who was commissioned to toughen up the layout for this year's event. "This course is playing very difficult."

PALMER, WHOSE only Open title came at Cherry Hills in 1960, suffered a double-bogey 5 in a bout with the rough at No. 15 and finished at 76.

It could have been worse. PGA titlist Lanny Wadkins had a 77, as did Tom Weiskopf. Crenshaw, 1973 Open winner Johnny Miller and 1975 champion Lou Graham took 78s. Carding 79s were Steve Melnyk, Rik Massengale and Gil Morgan. Fuzzy Zoeller took an 80.

Then there was Bob Impaglia, a 25-year-old from Auburn, N.Y., who qualified for his tour card just last week. Impaglia's problems weren't as directly related to the course as to officials of the U.S. Golf Association.

He had been cruising along with a 1-over 36 on the front nine when the USGA socked him with a 2-stroke penalty for slow play — the first such penalty ever leveled against a player in an Open. Impaglia promptly came apart, ballooning to a 47 on the back side for an 83.

IT WASN'T the highest score of the day, however. That honor went to Jeff Coston, who shot 89.

Billy Casper, a two-time Open winner who was given a special exemption to play here, summed up the difficulty of the course as well as anyone. "I feel shell-shocked," he said. "It was difficult to get the ball close to the hole. It was even difficult to get the ball close to the hole. It was difficult to chip it."

The portly Casper finished with a respectable 71, thanks to a miracle shot on the 17th hole when his wedge to the green was short and landed in water — but hit a rock and bounced up beside the green. He sank the 18-foot putt for a birdie. "I feel very fortunate," he said.

IRWIN WAS saddled with his lone bogey at the first hole, where, he said, he was a little nervous "and got a little greedy. I had no reason to go at the hole. I did and I paid for it."

After that lesson, the bespectacled Irwin settled into his cautious game plan. "I was trying to make birdies but I was trying from the safe side of the hole. I wanted to give myself a chance to safely make par. The pin positions were very near bunkers or the rough. It was very difficult to chip out of the rough, and I wanted to avoid that."

"I didn't play all that well," said the 6-foot-4 North, whose only tour victory came last year in the Westchester Classic. "I hit some bad irons off the tees. Some of my poor shots wound up all right, though. I hit it close a few times and made a few birdies."

Rudi breaks slump

Joe Rudi, who came into the game with a .185 batting average and 13 RBI, finally broke out of his slump, driving in two runs with a single in the first to help Frank Tanana to his 10th victory against three losses. The victory broke the Orioles' 13-game winning streak.

Tanana allowed a solo homer by Rich Dauer in the first and pitched out of a no-out, basesloaded jam in the second en route to a five-hitter.

"I thought I had gone nine innings, and I'd only gone five," said Tanana, who is 10-3 lifetime against the Orioles.

Rice Smacks No. 21

Jim Rice slammed a two-run homer in the seventh that tied it up, then drove in the winning runs with a triple in the eighth, making right-hander Mike Torrez a 10-game winner. Torrez, who has lost twice, joined New York's Ron Guidry and Tanana as American League pitchers at that plateau despite allowing 12 hits.

The homer was Rice's 21st, and he now has 61 RBI. Carl Yastrzemski also homered for the fifth time this season for Boston.

"I've been in a slump," said Rice, who has three homers this month after hitting 13 in May. "I've been pressing, swinging too much at bad pitches. But the team has been playing good ball, and I'd rather have a bad stretch now than later."

Yanks slug Mariners

Mickey Rivers and Graig Nettles homered, providing enough runs to give sore-shouldered Don Gullett his first victory of the season. Gullett, who had gone only 51-3 innings in his first two starts this season, pitched six scoreless innings, giving up four singles. He was relieved by Rich Gossage in the seventh and Sparky Lyle pitched the ninth for his seventh save. Nettles hit a three-run homer, his 12th of the year, in the seventh, and Rivers' solo homer came in the fifth.

White sparks Royals

Kansas City completed a sweep of its two-game series with Detroit as Frank White drove in two runs and scored once. Dennis Leonard, 6-9, scattered 10 hits for the win.

Detroit forged a 2-2 tie in the fourth on RBI singles by Milt May and Mickey Stanley, but the Royals went back ahead in the bottom of the inning when White doubled home Fred Patek.

KC's Patek takes over lead in AL

NEW YORK (AP) — Fred Patek of the Kansas City Royals has taken over the lead in the wide-open race for shortstop and battles for starting spots at third base and in the outfield continue to heat up in American League voting for baseball's All-Star Game.

Patek, who played in the 1976 game but has never been elected a starter, joins seven second-week leaders in the tentative lineup that includes defending batting champion Rod Carew of Minnesota at first base.

Along with Patek and Carew, All-Star voting tabulations announced today by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn show Boston's Carlton Fisk in front in the race for catcher, New York's Willie Randolph at second base and Kansas City's George Brett at third. The outfielders include Boston's Jim Rice and Carl Yastrzemski and Reggie Jackson of New York.

Patek, frequently ranked high even though he has not started, is in a far-from-comfortable lead at shortstop after trailing the leader, Boston's Rick Burleson, a week ago. The Royals' standout currently holds about a 60,000-vote edge over Bert Campaneris of Texas, 367,316 to 307,375. Burleson is a close third at 296,466.

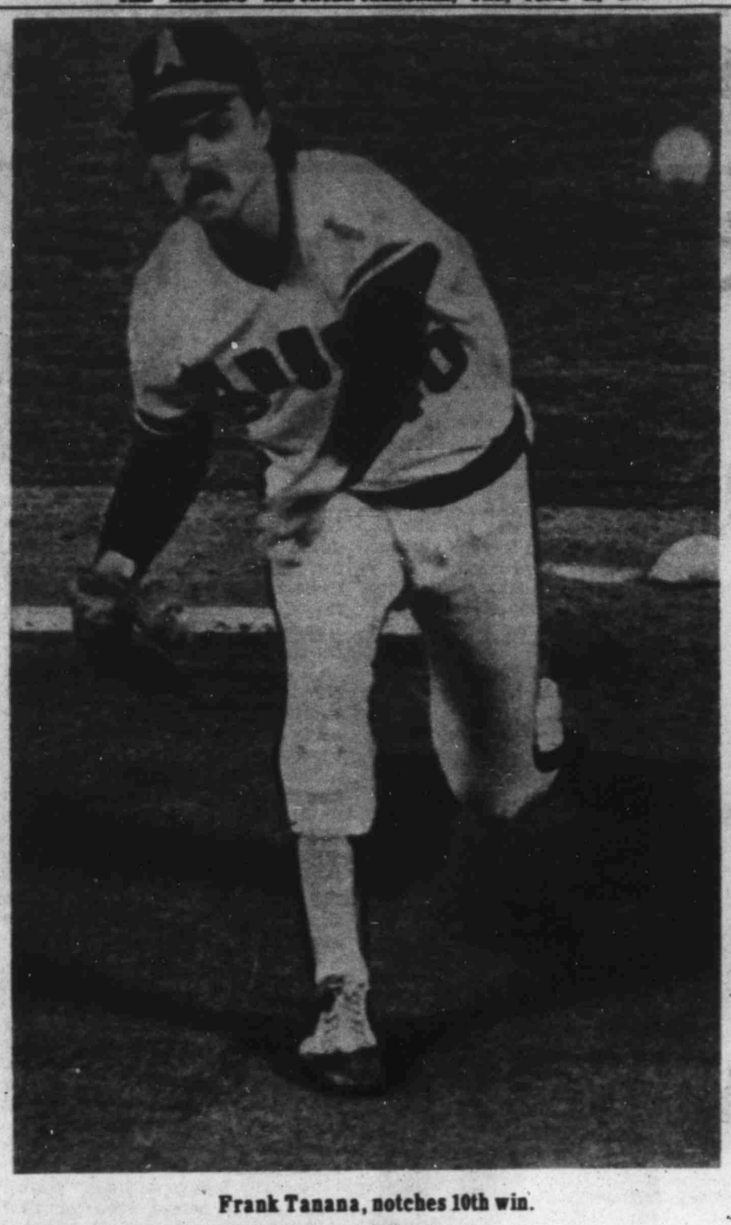

Another race to watch is the battle at third between Brett and New York's Graig Nettles. Brett, with 388,683 votes, is shooting for his third straight start at third. He figures to be pressed throughout the balloting by Nettles (327,857), who was the AL starter in 1975.

Carew, the top vote-getter in 1977 with 4,292,740 votes, has taken over the league lead in votes thus far in 1978. His 683,427 leads overall and dominates the first-base voting.

The competition for the outfield spots is still pretty much up for grabs, although Rice has 655,410 votes and a hefty lead in the balloting for the three positions. Jackson has collected 470,761 votes and Yastrzemski 422,905 and are being pressed by Boston's Fred Lynn (374,016), and Texas' Richie Zisk (364,172) and Al Oliver (257,820).

El Paso defeats Dodgers

By The Associated Press

In Texas League action Thursday, Jackson edged Shreveport, 6-5, Tulsa blasted Arkansas, 10-2, and El Paso edged San Antonio, 5-4.

Bob Healy's single in the eighth inning broke a 5-5 tie and gave Jackson the one-run edge.

The Tulsa Drillers rode the strikeout pitching of Dave Rithetti and the slugging of Blair Stouffer and Marty Scott in an easy 10-2 victory.

Pitchers rule National League

By The Associated Press

Ross Grimsley, John Montefusco and Rick Rhoden all pitched strongly Thursday in leading their teams to National League victories on the West Coast. Surprisingly, Montefusco was not the most outspoken of the trio.

Despite pitching a complete game and striking out 11 in San Francsco's 6-1 victory over Philadelphia, the Giants' "Count" was out-talked by Grimsley several hundred miles down the California coast. The Montreal left-hander beat San Diego 3-1 for his 11th triumph of the year, tops in the majors, then spoke his piece regarding the club he signed with as a free agent last winter.

"EVEN THOUGH our hitters have been in a slump lately," said Grimsley, 11-3. "I still had confidence they would get me enough runs to win just like they've been doing all season.

"This team is better than the Orioles," he added, referring to his team last year. "If we had this outfield in Baltimore last year, we could have won the pennant."

That outfield consists of Andre Dawson, Warren Cromartie and Ellis Valentine, who smashed his eighth homer of the season to support Grimsley Thursday.

"If they keep playing like this behind me, and they keep seoring runs, I could win 30 games," Grimsley added.

San Diego Manager Roger Craig, a former major league hurler, thinks Grimsley has become a winner because of a secret weapon.

"GRIMSLEY WAS doctoring the ball," said Craig. "But more power to him. The umpires aren't checking any more.

"He's a completely different pitcher now than when he was with Cincinnati," added Craig of Grimsley, who was traded by the Reds to Baltimore following the 1973 season. "He was a power pitcher then; now he changes speeds and has about six pitches he can get over for strikes."

In the only other National League contest, the Dodgers' Rhoden and Charlie Hough combined on a five-hit 3-0 shutout of the New York Mets.

"I shouldn't have won five in a row," said Montefusco, 6-2. "The other guys carried me for a while, they were saving me. I was giving up five runs a game and still winning or getting no decision.

"Maybe I can carry them for awhile."

Larry Herndon's two-run triple in a four-run first inning and Jack Clark's two-run double in the second carried the Giants to the triumph and a 2½ game lead in the NL West over idle Cincinnati.

Rhoden blanks Mets

Rhoden, who pitched with soreness in his arm and had to come out in the eighth inning, had been having problems on the mound recently and was rumored to be on the trading block.

"I tried to make jokes about it," said Rhoden of his shaky stature with the Dodgers. "This is my home now, I'm playing for one of the best teams, and I'm playing in the best city in baseball. I tried not to think about it, but, yes, it was on my mind."

Despite '78 disappointment, Hillin plans Indy return

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Everyone knows by now that Midland's Jim Hall is the world's king of racing owners after winning the Indianapolis 500 in his very first try, but he was not the first Midlander to run in the Indy show.

It shouldn't be forgotten that Bobby Hillin's Longhorn Racing Team had the first Midland entry in the Indy 500. In fact, he had the first two.

You may have to jog your memory a bit, but Hillin had two cars in America's feature event in 1977 with George Snider and Bubby Jones, a Indy rookie, behind the wheels of the offy-powered Wildcat and Eagle racers. Jones finished 21st out of the 33-car field while Snider was 24th. That was really Midland's first start at Indy.

HILLIN MISSED the 1978 Indy feature, but it was not without a gallant effort. He tried to qualify his Wildcat again this year, but handling problems during the two days of qualification kept the Longhorn crew on the outside looking in. The car had produced laps of 192 miles per hour during the early test runs at the Mor-Motor Speedway, and that was fast enough to get into the field. The Longhorns even had the last qualifying shot, but the car just didn't respond. It was just one of those unfortunate things.

Still, Hillin has not given up on the Indy 500. He says he will be back in 1979 with a car that will compete.

HILLIN, WHO was on pit row on Indy Sunday in 1977, had to endure this year's race with his car sitting in a garage on Gasoline Alley. He had to endure the many questions of friends, writers and onlookers while others were preparing for the race. He never said a sour word. He never hung his head. He was disappointed at not being in the "big show", as he put it, but there was not a more congenial host in town.

Hillin could have packed his bag and come home. He didn't have to face anyone race week. It was his choice to stay because he had invited friends to the race. He faced them all, and to me at least, that was one of the biggest victories produced on Indy Sunday.

HILLIN WAS never locked into a defeatest attitude. He used Indy week to reflect on his racing program with the future in mind, and not the past. He is now working toward 1979. After all, there will be other Indys.

"It really hurt when we didn't get in the show this year," Hillin said. "But I've been here two years now, and I've seen what it takes to win here. We're just going to have to put those lessons to work. I'll be back in 1979 with a car that will compete. I want everyone to know that we will be running right up there with Jim (Hall)."

Hillin is in the process of making that run right now. He knows there are some changes to be made, and he says he will find a way to make them.

CURRENTLY, HILLIN is in the process of getting a new car. He wants to sell his Wildcat and purchase another with a Cosworth engine. The Cosworth is a V-8 while the Offy is a four cylinder model. Hall's car was the first to win Indy with a Cosworth, and the Offy may be almost obsolete next year. That is the new move now.

The Longhorn Racing Team has been a national ranking power the past three years in the sprint car and chanpionship dirt division of the USAC racing circuit, but Hillin is going to get out of that type of racing and concentrate totally on the Indy circuit. He is selling all his equipment in those two areas.

THE LONGHORNS made their last sprint car race two days before this year's Indy 500 in the Hoosier Sprints in Indianapolis. Hillin's car made the feature race, but a clogged intake valve halted the effort after only six laps. In a way that was a fitting finish since this year has not been a good one for Hillin in the race world. However, it offered the team a chance to reflect and regear for another assualt.

It appears that one setback has not stopped the Longhorn Racing Team. And it's possible that when the checkered flag goes up in 1979, two Midland cars will be racing for the finish.

At any rate, Hall and Hillin have brought sonething new to West Texas, and it's a refreshing change. There may never be a whoosh-mobile on every block in Midland, but there could be enough Indy 500 titles to go around.

WHEN CALIFORNIA Angels fans call Jackson No. 1, they don't mean Reggie, as banner explains. Anaheim fans think Ron Jackson, former Texas League star, is cream of the crop. Ron has been among the American League batting leaders for most of the season and recently hit two doubles to give the Angels a win over New York and the other Jackson.

Holmes-Norton proves artistic TV hit

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

ABC's telecast of the Ken Norton-Larry Holmes heavy-weight fight was a success aristically — and it was a marvelous fight — and also in the ratings — which is what really counts.

The bout did not have the giant publicity buildup that heavyweight championships usually get. Muhammad Ali was not involved. Norton is not a particularly colorful figure. And who knew about Holmes?

But it did sell. It sold enough to make Friday night ABC's biggest night of the week in the ratings. Norton-Holmes outdrew such network mainstays as The Fonz, Laverne and Shirley and Charlie's Angels.

And it completely overwhelmed the entertainment competition on the other networks. Norton-Holmes pulled a 19.7 rating, meaning 19.7 percent of homes with TVs were watching, and a 40 share, meaning 40 percent of the TV sets in use were tuned to ABC between 8-11 p.m. EDT. Both CBS and NBC, with a lineup of situation comedies, adventure and detective shows, averaged about a 23 share each.

During the final hour, when the Norton-Holmes bout was in progress, ABC drew a 26 rating and a whopping 47 share. That means that almost half the people in the country who were watching TV were tuned in to the fight. ABC estimates that 45 million people saw some portion of the broadcast.

Those numbers do not approach the records set by Ali's fight with Earnie Shavers and Richard Dunn, but they are awfully impressive nonetheless. And if Norton-Holmes did well, wait till Ali's rematch with Leon Spinks in September.

SOMETIMES — not very often — a network will invest time and money in a project without expecting a big return in the ratings. Such is the case this week with ABC's unprecedented coverage of the U.S. Open Golf Tournament.

Last year, for the first time, ABC televised four hours of the closing round, covering all 18 holes. The ratings were not very good. You have to be a pretty fanatic golf fan to sit through four hours of putts and playbacks.

But this year the network has increased its coverage to an all-time high — four hours Saturday, four hours Sunday and a couple of late-night wrapups Thursday and Friday.

ABC has invaded the Cherry Hills Country Club near Denver with 29 full-size cameras, three portable cameras, four mobile units, 75,000 feet of cable and a small army of technicians and commentators.

ABC will not have any gaudy ratings to flash around after the tournament but, in this case, that is not the prime concern. The U.S. Open is a prestige item. It's good for the image. ABC executives can point with pride and wow the affiliates with their exclusive coverage. Also the demographics — the makeup of the audience — are good. Rich people, those who buy big cars and take vacations to Hawaii, watch golf.

ABC will have the U.S. Open for a while, having extended its contract with the U.S. Golf Association through 1980.

NBC MAY provide ABC some competition for the golf audience this weekend. NBC has made arrangements to cover Nancy Lopez's bid for an unprecedented fifth straight victory on the women's golf tour.

Major league market

members of the Giants. Metzger went to San Francisco from the Houston Astros for either a player to be named later or cash and the Giants bought Dwyer's contract in the completion of an earlier deal.

In another move, the Atlanta Braves traded discontented right-hander Dick Ruthven to the Philadelphia Phillies for reliever Gene Garber and an undisclosed amount of cash.

Asked if that meant anyone over the major league minimum of $20,000, Thomasson said: "Yes."

Thomasson had been traded by San Francisco earlier this year as part of the deal that brought Vida Blue to the Giants from Oakland. In 47 games with Oakland, Thomasson hit .201 with five home runs and 16 RBI. Klutts played in one game for the Yankees before he fractured his thumb on April 22.

Open only sport where they load deck against you

The Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Look at it this way: in Baseball, the left field fence might vary but the pitcher is always 60 feet 6 inches away when he busts a fastball in on you. They don't suddenly make first base 60 yards away.

In Football, they don't suddenly lengthen the yard markers so a first down is now 15 years. And the last five of them are sand. They don't make part of the gridiron uphill or hang a tree over the 50-yard line so you can't throw a high pass.

In Tennis, the net isn't suddenly 10 feet high. They don't let Dempsey load up the gloves with a railroad spike on you. They don't put a partial lid on the basket in Basketball.

When you play cards, you get a full deck to fill your flush. When you throw the dice and your point is 8, they don't tell you to make it with one die. Or three.

If you're Mark Spitz, they don't dump a load of piranha fish in the pool. They don't put a water hole in the 100-yard dash and then compare your time to Jesse Owens'. They don't melt the ice in part of the rink in hockey. Or put ice on the runway in the pole vault.

THEY DO all of these terrible things in a U.S. Open — load the dice, mark the deck, block the shot, grow the rough, hide the green, change the distance from first to third, so to speak, move the fences, change the routes, to say nothing of the rules. If they could ice the greens, move the mountains or raise the tides, they would.

If there's anything the USGA hates, it's a 63. Johnny Miller shot due in 1973 and you would have thought they caught him writing on the walls of the Sistine Chapel, or stoning orphanages.

If the U.S. Golf Association were running the Dempsey-Tunney fight they would have let Dempsey fight him with a hammer. They might have let lefty Grove throw two baseballs at Babe Ruth.

First of all, they take a perfectly good golf course, one that has stood the test of time. I mean, it is already Ruth, Dempsey, Tilden, Red Grange. And then they booby-trap it. It's like giving Black Bart a Gatling gun, giving Hitler another whip, Jimmy Carter more teeth, a lion more fangs.

Cherry Hills in Denver has always been able to defend itself. I mean, like if you found it in Central Park, you'd call the cops. It's 7083 yards of Rocky Mountain real estate no one was going to shoot 63 on even if they took out all the trees or widened the greens. This is no doddering old outlaw nodding in the sunshine recalling past stage robberies. This cowboy is armed and dangerous. The Sundance Kid. Hide the money. Ride shotgun when he's around. Get him dead or alive.

THEY'VE PLAYED the Open here twice before. The ball carries up here in the Rockies but nobody broke the Open record, In fact, nobody broke 280. Cherry Hills didn't need a hammer, a gun, a bodyguard like a new tree or trap. Cherry Hills could take care of itself. Cherry Hills could High-Noon it with anyone in the territory. It was a Wyatt earp of a golf course, Marshal Dillon.

The old No. 1 hole here was a two-gun character in a black hat nobody messed with much. Until this new gunslinger came to town with his hair in his eyes, his shirt sticking out and his shoes full of mud and his irons smoking in the opken in 1960. Arnold Palmer scorned the 3-wood layup, the 1-iron safety off this tee and he flew right at its throat with a driver. He drove the green, almost made the putt, shot 30 on the front nine and won the tournament. In the best traditions of the Old West. The fastest gun in Denver. Or, at least, the longest. He didn't dry-gulch it, he walked it down on Main Street.

So, know what they did to this hole this year? They added 53 yards to it. They moved the tee, they put a large trap in the driver landing area. Nobody, by God, is going to get the drop on this hole ever again.

THAT'S NOT the worst of it. Know whom they tapped to rough up this hole? The Kid. Or the Ex-Kid. Arnold Palmer himself. They got the fox to shore up the hen house. They got Willie Sutton to button up the bank.

What a shame" What a needless tampering with history. What do they do next — carpet Westminister Abbey? Wallpaper the Sistine? Turn the White House over the Marrott? Make Gettysburg into an amusement park?

I thoroughly agree with Golfer Tom Weiskopf who came in to the room to deplore this ravishment of one of the shrines of golf. Tommy's point is that the Mona Lisa may be cross-eyed or not as pretty as Farrah Fawcett but what do you do — make her blond? Put her in a Bikini? Put sunglasses on her?

Weiskopf's point is, why tamper with a monument. The Russians are supposed to remaking history, not Americans. "Why can't we get a shot at driving the hole like Arnold did?" What's wrong with a little front-nine 30, is Weiskopf's plaint. "You don't take a Frank Lloyd Wright house and re-do the attic," he challenges. You don't do flood-control work on Niagara falls."

No. 1 at Cherry Hills is not exactly Lincoln's log cabin. Washington never slept there. But, in the little world of golf, it is a historic artifact like Fort Sumter or Little Big Horn. Now, it's just another, so to speak, hot dog stand. They should put up a McDonald's. A car wash.

THE USGA is not interested in history, just bogeys. Arnold's reputation is secure. Like Lindbergh, he's still the first to do it. They shouldn't go around destroying all the airplanes to make sure he's the only one. Where's the harm ifWeiskopf drives the first green? All week long? No Johnny One-Putt is going to do it. The hole, after all, was 346 yards long. I don't know about you but that's a drive and a 4-wood and a 7-iron and a wedge and three putts for me. If Palmer can almost make a 2 on it that's O.K. with me.

But why not let Watson try it? Nicklaus? Player? Heck, Victor Regalado. Morris Hatalsky. James H. Dolan III, whoever he is.

What do you think these guys are going to do next — make Fulton's first steamboat into a restaurant? Make Camille into a happy ending? If you see any of these guys around Grant's Tomb with a match, ring up the arson squad. If you see them looking over the Tuileries, make sure they don't turn it into a parking lot. They're messing with tradition, history. Why, if they find that plague in the sand trap at Lytham where Bobby Jones holed out to win the British Open, they may want to make it out-of-bounds.

I'm a big fan of bogeys, too. Also of Arnold Palmer, But from what I've seen, Cherry Hills doesn't need a posse or a faithful old Indian companion. Shucks, it doesn't even need Butch Cassidy. Cherry Hills looks to me like a desperado it would be hard to keep in jail, much less string up. Just the way it was, it didn't look like anything you'd want to draw on.

I can just picture it saying to the volunteers helping it from behind the fences in the shoot-out. "I don't need any of you guys. Just stay out of the line of fire and get ready to haul this guy to Boot Hill as soon as he's finished firing. And if he makes it, put a statue up because it'll stand the test of history, you can believe me. Now, go for your best shot, sucker:"

Have Cowboys created monster?

Almost all over the National Football League, teams are holding tryouts, not for 6-foo-6, 260-pound linemen, fleet backs or pass catchers. The teams are looking for flashy backfields, and the measurements in vogue are 38-24-36.

Would you believe that 450 self-styled sirens turned out, including one man? The Eagles chose 31 of the eyefuls with the help of judges from the media, the same media Coach Dick Vermeil sometimes indicates doesn't know a football from anything else.

This bare midriff craze has extended to Baltimore, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Miami, Chicago, Los Angeles, Denver, Tampa and Houston.

Now, we have the Cowgirls, the Eaglettes, Buffalo Jills, Cincinnati Ben-Gals, Chicago Honey Bears, Denver's Pony Express, Los Angeles' Embraceable Ewes and Tampa Bay's Swashbucklers.

If Jacob Minsky were alive, we'd almost certainly have the New York Strippers. And how about Flo Ziegfeld's Fannies.

But forget sex appeal for a minute. Have NFL owners considered the future? Now they have the Players Association to deal with. Soon, it may be the Cheerleading Cuties.

Can't they see the opening of the season delayed while the NFL Management Council tries to forestall a strike because the Cuties object to the style of the latest uniforms — what there are of them?

A strike of the Cowgirls, Eaglettes, Jills, Honey Bears, BenGals, Pony Express, Embraceable Ewes and Swashbucklers might draw more fans to the picket line outside the stadium than the players would inside.

Can't you see the season ticket advertisements? "We can't run, pass or punt, but we can shake with the best."

And when a team lines up its cheerleaders before the season it could discover it is overloaded with blondes, or has four with the same measurements and needs more balance.

The general manager would rush frantically to the telephone.

"Gee, I'd love to help you," Landry might purr, "but all our red-haired lasses have nocut contracts, and our only 44-24-36 is shaking out her option."

Vermeil could then inform reporters that the Eagles will have to wait for the 1988 cheerleading draft before the Eaglettes are again competitive.

Big 8, NCAA to probe OSU

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — The president of Oklahoma State University said Thursday he had been informed the Big Eight Conference and the NCAA will investigate new allegations of football recruiting irregularities at the school, including reports of a slush fund used to bankroll athletes.

L.L. Boger, in a lengthy statement, also denied he had ever been given specific information about the North Central Oklahoma Businessman's Association Club, Inc., apparently a dummy corporation set up to make the payments.

On Wednesday, Tulsa businessman James Treat sent a telegram to Big Eight Commissioner Charles M. Neinas, saying he had informed Boger of the club's activities and the alleged slush fund some time ago, but that Boger did not respond.

Earlier in the day, the Tulsa World quoted three former members as saying the club had dealings with Oklahoma State Coach Jim Stanley.

Stanley, who was not available for comment, had previously denied knowledge of the booster club.

The Oklahoma State football program was placed on a twoyear probations by the NCAA earlier this year. The penalties included bans on television and bowl appearances, plus a loss of scholarships.

A story in the Tulsa Tribune Thursday quoted an unnamed Oklahoma State football player as saying nearly every player on the 1976 team drew monthly salaries from the alleged slush fund ranging from $50 to $100 each.

"Nearly every starter made at least $100," the player was quoted as saying.

"Each month a payday would be held in the office of one of the OSU coaches, complete with a payroll list and a tall stack of bills," the ex-player was quoted as saying.

The father of another unnnamed ex-player said his son asked Stanley about the payments when he and some other players were dismissed from the team for disciplinary reasons.

The father said after the players were informed of their dismissal by Stanley, his son asked: "Does this mean we no longer get our $110 a month?"

The father, who also was not named, said his son told him Stanley replied: "I don't handle that. That comes from somewhere else."

Boger confirmed he met with Treat on April 11 and that Treat "made some statements about possible infractions in the football program as related to the North Central Oklahoma Businessman's Association Club."

But Boger said Treat "offered me no details — activities,participants, events, places, occurrences."

Boger said Treat told him he could call him if he needed specific information. He said he told Treat, "Just assume I need it now."

"No specifics were provided," Boger continued. "As he (Treat) left oy office, I reminded him again he could call me personally at any time he was prepared to give me specific information. That has been my last contact with Mr. Treat until I received a telegram (from Treat) on June 13."

In that telegram, Treat told Boger he was informing Neinas about the allegations.

Boger said that on May 31, another person from Tulsa, who said he had been a member of the board of directors of the club, came to his office and advised him the organization "was no longer in operation."

The university president said that after he received Treat's telegram, he called Neinas and "related information to him about the matter and read him the telegram from Mr. Treat."

NBA again grapples with zone

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — The National Basketball Association has grappled once again with the sticky problem of the "illegal" zone defense, coming up with new wording of the rule that prohibits zones and provides stricter penalties for violations.

Whether this will help on the basketball floor remains to be seen.

"Wording is something you use to describe what is happening, and in basketball that can sometimes be very difficult," said Jack Ramsay, the erudite coach of the Portland Trail Blazers. "One man's zone, which is illegal, is another man's press, which is legal. This is something we hope to work out thoroughly with the referees before the start of next season."

The NBA Board of Governors, at its annual summer meeting that ended Thursday, voted to accept the recommendation of the league's Competition and Rules Committee and "put some teeth into the zone rule," according to committee Chairman Joe Axelson, president of the Kansas City Kings.

The key change in the rule in question, Rule 12A, Secton 1, is a note that states, "When a ball has passed center court, no defensive player can guard an area of the court instead of guarding an opponent."

Wary Arizona, Arizona State approach first Pac10 season

By MARK PURDY
The Los Angeles Times

TEMPE, Ariz. — Frank Kush has coached football at Arizona State for 20 years. He has lived through the pressure of last-second victories and defeats and bowl games. But never has he had to take medicine to calm his stomach.

Until now.

"I'm eating Gelusil pills, and I didn't have to do that before," he said recently while sorting through a stack of telephone messages on his desk. "Look at this calendar. I've got a Sunday free and a Thursday free this month. That's all. It didn't use to be that way. You've got to be careful not to let all of this drown you."

Nevertheless, the waves keep breaking across his desk. The expansion of the Pacific athletic conference to include Arizona State and Arizona this fall has meant a number of things to Kush and Arizona coach Tony Mason, but at the moment, the messages on their desks and their full calendars are the most visible manifestations of their schools' new status.

Football success in the Pac-10 is the prime concern of the Arizona schools, and indications are it will not come easily. In basketball and baseball, and some of the so-called minor sports, however, they have long been national powers and should do well in their new conference.

Kush said of the football situation:

"It's like we've been on a treadmill. Our success in the Pac-10 comes down to one factor — making damn sure we do a fantastic job of recruiting."

AND SO Kush and his assistants have been making scores of courtesy calls on high school coaches around the nation, checking out prospects not for next season but for the season after that and the season after that. They did this before, but did not call on so many coaches or do it so systematically.

The key to the Arizona schools' success in the Pac-10, Mason and Kush agree, will be depth. In their former league, the Western Athletic Conference, they could get by with fewer good players. Their 22 starters should be able to compete right away in the Pac-10, most observers agree, but it's the next 22 players that will be crucial.

"I am not a good enough coach to beat teams that have better people, and more of them," said Mason, who completed his first season at Arizona last fall with a 5-7 record. "People ask me how we'll do in the Pac-10. I tell them that last year Oregon State, which finished last in the Pac-8, should have beat Arizona State (OSU lost, 33-31). And I tell them that Oregon State did beat Brigham Young (24-19). And Arizona State and Brigham Young were the two best teams in the WAC last year. So where does that put me?"

KUSH'S TEAM should make the conference race interesting, though. Last season the Sun Devils won their seventh WAC championship since 1969, going 9-2 before losing to Penn State, 42-30, in the Fiesta Bowl. Half of the Sun Devil starters are back, including 6-5, 230-pound defensive end Al Harris, a second team All-American.

In addition, Kush is college football's third-winningest active coach in percentage (.767), and is 5-2 against Pac-8 schools in the last five seasons, beating Oregon, Washington State, Washington and Oregon State (twice) while losing to UCLA and Cal.

Often billed as "the meanest coach in college football," Kush is known as an unforgiving taskmaster. He is also known for straightforward statement like one on how he has avoided racial problems: "I treat everyone alike — terrible."

The tough-guy approach seems to work, drawing recruits who respond to the same kind of sales pitch used by the U.S. Marines: We're looking For A Few Good Men. When coveted running back prospect Willie Gittens signed an ASU letter of intent last fall, he said he picked the school because he thought Kush would b able to drive him hard and get him to produce to the maximum.

KUSH OPPOSED Arizona State joining the Pac-8, figuring his program had nothing to gain except perhaps prestige, which he dismissed by saying, "I'm not at the age where I live on newspaper clippings."

Gradually, however, he has come to accept his fate, describing his attitude as, "We're going to throw our hat in the door and hope someone doesn't throw it back."

"It's the continuity of competition in the PAC-10 that creates the problems," Kush said. "We could get away before with playing a USC-type team once a season, but to play teams like USC and Stanford and Washington week after week after week, you need depth. We're working hard to get it."

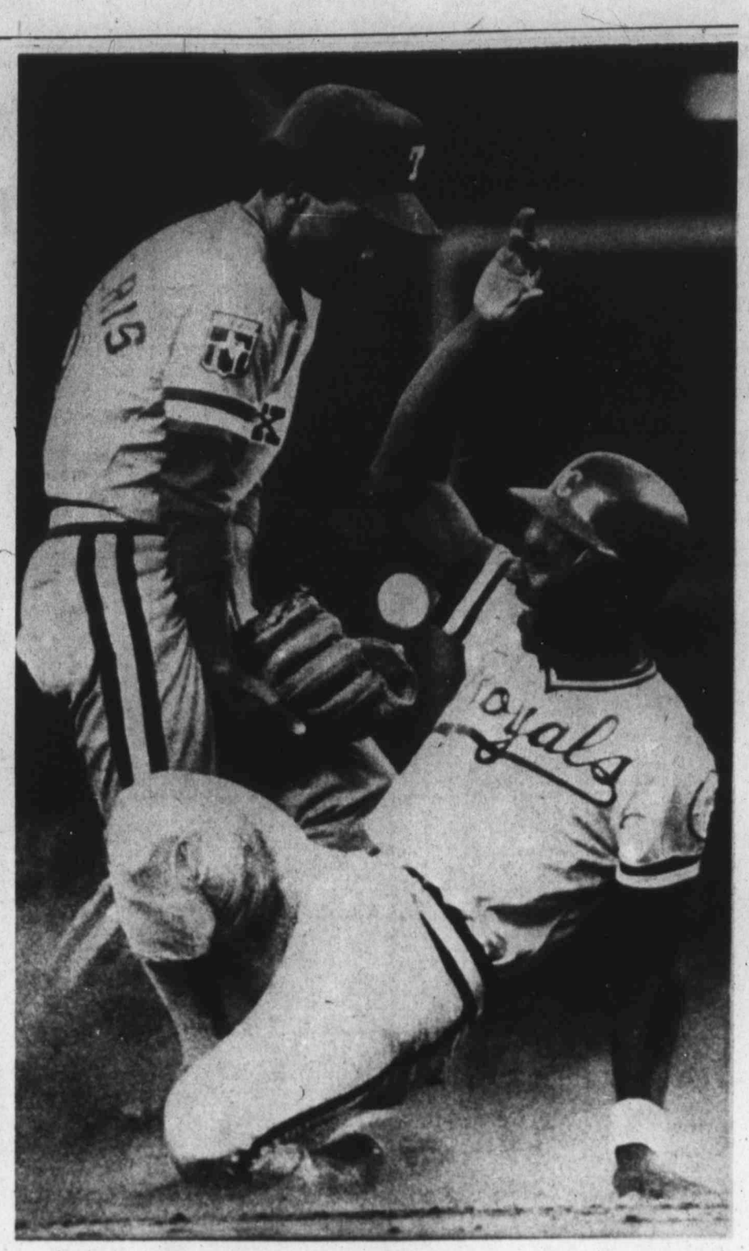

The Sun Devils did not do too badly last fall. Besides Gittens, they signed Bruce Branch, a 6-5, 245-pound offensive tackle from New Jersey who runs the 40-yard dash in 4.9 seconds, and Gittens' teammate at Fountain Valley, Calif, 6-5, 220-pound defensive end Bryan Caldwell.

ARIZONA'S MASON also had a good year, focusing mainly on junior colege transfers in an effort to make the Wildcats competitive immediately. Among the eight JC transfers are 6-5, 250-pound defensive lineman John Stemmer of Golden West College, Calif., and 6-2, 245-pound Norm Katnik of Saddleback College, Calif. Mason alsowill have four transfers from the University of Cincinnati, where he coached before coming to Tucson. He will also have man-mountain Cleveland Crosby, a 6-5, 255-pound transfer from Purdue who will probably start at defensive tackle.

As much a stand-up comedian as football coach, Mason has been downplaying his team's chances next season, although he will admit that a first-division finish isn't out of the question. The best guess is that Arizona will be very competitive against the likes of Oregon and Washington State but will have a hard time beating the big California Schools.

Cubs whip Sox in 9th

have to admit he (Yandle) had me worried when he threw me those first two hammers (curve balls), but he gave me another one on the outside and I just went with it for the hit."

AMARILLO OUT hit the Cubs, 11-9, and out homered the Bruins, 3-1. It was another one of those screaming days for the Sox. Jim Beswick homered in the fourth, a one-out blast to left off Smith, and O'Neill and Hicks touched Groover for the long ball in the eighth. Somehow it just wasn't enough.

Cub catcher Greg Keatley threw out two Sox stealers to keep the base paths a dangerous place to play, and Amarillo stranded Tim Derryberry at third in the top of the ninth to miss another golden scoring opportunity.

Derryberry led off the ninth with a walk and Beswick moved him to second with a sacrifice bunt. However, Groover got Barry Evans on a pop to second and KOed Dane Ilertsen on strikes after a wild pitch had moved Derryberry to third.

Seibert was also flawless in the field, and made three long distance phone calls to gun down runners at first with some spectacular throws. Things were going right, needless to say.

Brazilian coach discovers secret

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Claudio Coutinho, coach of the Brazilian soccer team, has decided that one way to win the World Cup is to keep his players away from Rosario as long as possible.

Rosario is an Argentine industrial town where soccer madness has gone through the roof. The whole place is in an uproar as Argentina plays its th ee second-round games there in a bid to reach the final.

Brazil has to face Argentina at Rosario next Sunday in one of the most vital games of the championships.

"We shall go there as late as possible Saturday," a team spokesman said. "I don't want my players to spend too much time in that atmosphere. We shall stay where we are at Mendoza. It's quieter and more restful for the team."

Argentina downed Poland 2-0 at Rosario Wednesady, and Polish Coach Jacek Gmoch said the fervor of the crowd was worth two or three extra players to the home team.

"You won't find soccer fans like these anywhere else in the world," he said. "They know how to destroy opponents.

"Many of the people in the crowd have whistles, like the referee. every time we got the ball the fans blew their whistles, and our players hestitated because they thought they were offside."

Rosarinos, as the people of Rosario call themselves, claim to be the most ardent soccer fans in Argentina. They don't merely erupt at the games themselves. The wildness starts in the streets hours before the kickoff.

Brazil suffered a major blow with the news that Roberto, powerful striker in the forward line, is out of the Rosario game with a knee injury. Some team sources fear he will not play in the rest of the championships.

The Brazilians have also lost Rivellino, one of the personalities in the 1974 World Cup, a moustachioed midfielder who can bend free-kicks like bananas. He also has a knee injury and is unlikely to take any further part in the tournament.

West Germany, after being held up in Buenos Aires for 24 hours by fog and torrential rain, was considering asking for a postponement of its game against Holland, scheduled for Sunday at Cordoba. The players lost a day's training — and that is serious when teams have only three days between matches.

Chief's Podolak calls it a career in NFL

Podolak's most notable accomplishment during his National Football League career was gaining a total of 350 yards in the longest professional football game ever played.

"There's some sadness because I'm leaving a part of my life behind me," said the nine-year veteran. "But every athlete has to recognize that their day of retirement at an early age is a reality."

His career yardage of 4,451 is exceeded by only three active American Football Conference players. Among all active NFL players, Podolak ranks 11th. He accounted for 8,253 yards rushing, receiving and on returns.

On Dec. 25, 1971, he enjoyed one of the best games in NFL playoff history in the Chiefs' 27-24 loss to the Miami Dolphins. He rushed for 85 yards, totaled 110 yards receiving and 155 yards on kick returns—the most total yardage by an individual in an NFL post-season game.

TENNIS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Bjorn Borg defeated Zeljko Franulovic 6-2, 6-2, 9-7 in the final singles match to clinch Sweden's Davis Cup quarter-final victory over Yugoslavia.

Earlier, Zoltan Ilin of Yugoslavia had defeated Sweden's Benny Svensson 4-6, 6-4, 3-6, 60, 6-3 to tie the match at 2-2.

BIRMINGHAM, England — Brian Gottfried advanced to the quarter-finals of the John Player tennis classic with a 9-7, 6-2 victory over fellow American Hank Pfister.

BOWLING

RENO, Nev. — Dennis Lane vaulted from 12th place to the lead in the the $100,000 Professional Bowlers Association tournament.

Lane, who averaged 247, had an eight-game total of 1,976 and held a 16-pin lead over Boysie Huber.

Partners charge Roy Boe

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the minority partners of the New York Islanders hockey team charged Thursday in State Supreme Court that the team's president, Roy Boe, had attempted to buy out three other partners to keep them from "revealing Boe's wrongs."

The allegation was made by Thomas J. Thornton in papers submitted to Justice Douglas Young in connection with a suit Thornton has pending against Boe.

Thornton, who owns 2.25 per cent of the National Hockey League team, produced documents showing that Boe paid the three partners more than twice their purchase price at a time the club was in financial straits.

Kathy betting on Lopez

"I'm betting on her not to fold," Whitworth said of Lopez's bid for a fifth straight victory this week, unparalleled in the LPGA's 28 years.

If she wins the $75,000 tournament that began today at Locust Hill Country Club, Lopez would break the tie with Mickey Wright, Shirley Englehorn and Whitworth as winners of four in a row.

"YOU KNOW," she said through a sheepish grin, "I can't remember anything. I don't even know where it was. That's terrible."

"She'll probably just wear out," she said of Lopez. Whitworth is the game's alltime money winner with $750,000 in two decades.

"But Nancy already has shown us she's one of a kind. She's young and smart enough to take time off. She will have to rest some."

In Kansas City suburb, things could be verse

I dream about this blissful bit of suburbia all the time, its orderly lawns indented by driveways in their metered poetic flow, the two-car garages repeated in tasteful couplets, here and there a development of 14 mock-Tudor mansions for the sonneteers and three rows of tiny Japanese-style condominiums, 17 in all, grouped together on Haiku Heights, as the Realtor so charmingly named it.

In my mind's eye I have been there a thousand times. I can recognize most of the neighbors on sight, gathered about the frozen rhyme counter at the supermarkets, swapping cheerful stanzas on the street corners, chuckling over a bit of X-rated birthday verse.

Like the stage manager in Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," I sometimes imagine myself leading strangers around this unique Poets Corner on the outskirts of Kansas City.

There in that cute red and green house on the corner with the iron reindeer on the roof and the peppermint stick holding the mail box live the Christmas card laureates, a whole rollicking jolly family of them straight out of Dickens. The door chime tolls the first eight notes of "White Christmas." All year long the tall Norwegian pine on the lawn blinks with colored lights, and most days the parcel post van drops off bag loads of gaily decorated packages.

Mulligan's Stew

"Season's greetings, buen natale and a cool Yule," sings out the cherubic little man riding up the driveway in his motorized snowplow in the hot June sunshine. He trips an electric eye and the garage door swings open to reveal an enchanting miniature train layout.

That scholarly looking chap in the cap and gown, heading off to the supermarket with his grocery list furled in a blue ribbon, has got to be the valedictorian versifier. And the thatched cottage over yonder with the shamrocks carved in the shutter, begorrah, must belong to the bard of St. Patrick's Day.

Down at the bottom of Lover's Lane that ivy-covered cottage where the roses are always red and the violets always blue belongs to you know who: old lover boy himself, the poet laureate of St. Valentine's Day.

Can't you tell by the cupid on the weathervane and the greyhaired couple on the porch swing harmonizing to the ukelele thump of "Let Me Call You Sweetheart"?

The Only "For Sale" in the whole happy suburb is on the house that belonged to the fellow who wrote those overdue and remittance cards for the local bank.

Neighbors are getting together to send him a card. There's got to be one that covers the situation so it rhymes with elation. Or maybe station? Nation? Ration? Land sakes and creation, they'll think of something. Or they'll foreclose on the whole town. Things could be verse around here.

Woman finally accepts 33-year-old proposal

CHICAGO (AP) — In 1944, Irving Signer asked Joan Harris to marry him. She said no. Thirty-three years later he proposed again. She said yes.

They got their marriage license this week at City Hall after Joan flew in from Sydney, Australia. The wedding date is yet to be set.

It was in Australia that Signer, then a Army Air Force lieutenant on a month's furlough from a New Guinea B-24 bomber base, first met the "shy" Australian woman.

Although she married an Australian Army captain and had two daughters, Joan kept a picture of the uniformed Signer throughout the years. And he carried her picture.

Joan, now 54, eventually was divorced. Signer, 61, never married. He said he had a sick brother and took care of him, and later cared for his aging parents.

The pair first met in Sydney at the boarding house of Annie Townrow, who always welcomed American soldiers. One night while everyone gathered around the piano and sang "Waltzing Matilda," young Signer met the beauty shop worker who had temporarily given up her rented room when Signer and three other officers arrived for their furlough.

"She was a good-looking little doll," he said. "A shy thing from the country. I liked her the first time I saw her."

They dated, but then it was time for Signer to return to duty. He called her from the airport to say goodbye. "I promised him I'd write. And I did," she said.

The war ended. Signer returned to Chicago, still thinking about the Australian woman, still keeping her picture, but knowing she had married. He did not know she had kept his picture, too.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: You read so much these days about how getting more fiber into our diet would be a good health measure. I would like to know if this might be helpful for a diabetic regimen.--Whitney T.

DEAR WHITNEY: An article that appeared in the "Journal of the American Medical Assn." a short time ago noted that a higher-fiber diet has had a beneficial effect for a number of diabetic patients in the United States and Britain. Results have included lessened dependence on insulin and lower blood sugar levels. Some of the patients were on insulin; others were not. The fiber was provided either by raw fruits, vegetables and nuts or by supplements. The article suggested that increased fiber intake could be tried by doctors for patients whose blood sugar levels needed to be lowered after meals—and perhaps at other times as well.

It is worth noting that the typical diabetic diet recommended in the American Diabetes Assn.'s latest book for doctors contains more fiber than the regimen favored a generation ago. The older diets were high in fat and low in carbohydrates. The current one is fairly low in fat (25 to 35 percent of total calories in place of the average American 42 percent) but liberal in carbohydrates—mostly starches but also some sugars from natural sources (40 to 55 percent). And it is from unrefined carbohydrate food—vegetables, fruits and whole grains—that we get dietary fiber.

If you are a diabetic, you should of course check with your doctor before making any changes in your diet.

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: I am supposed to follow a pretty strict low-salt diet because I have hypertension. I try to be careful about what I eat at restaurants or other people's houses, and I do not use any salt in preparing food. I avoid things like potato chips and smoked meats and pickles. I am also careful about canned foods. Is there anything else that I should be aware of or try to do?--M.V.

DEAR M.V.: The American Heart Assn. has a very thorough program for low-salt diets based on seven groups of food. You should be able to get a copy of this from your local AHA chapter.

There is also a practical little pamphlet called "Sodium in Food, Medicine and Water." This can be had by sending 50 cents to the Water Quality Assn., 477 Butterfield Road, Lombard, Illinois 60148.

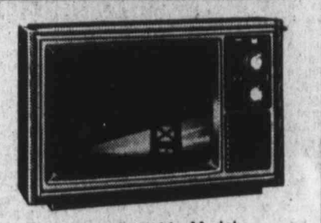

If a good cookbook would help, try "Salt-Free Cooking With Herbs and Spices" by June Roth. It is published by the Henry Regnery Company and cost $8.95. I think you could find it in most book stores—or, perhaps, your branch of the library has a copy.
