Ask Us

Q—What are the lottery monies being used for? Wasn't it originally planned to be used for educational purposes?

A—Money taken in from the lottery goes into the state's general fund. Although legislators discussed targeting the lottery proceeds for education before the lottery was approved by voters, it was never actually made into law that the funds be used for that purpose.

Jury deliberating over murder defendant's fate

Nina Jonell Henderson lowered her head and wept as the prosecuting attorney asked a 132nd District Court jury to find her guilty of capital murder this morning.

Closing arguments in the five-day trial ended and the seven-woman, five-man jury went into deliberations at 11 o'clock.

Before sending the jury to make its decision, District Judge Gene Dulaney instructed jurors that their job would be to find Henderson guilty of capital murder, guilty of murder, or not guilty, for the death of Fast Oil Change owner Paul Milford in 1991.

In his closing statement, District Attorney Ernie Armstrong told the jury he believes Henderson and Arthur Lee Harding, who is also charged with the death of Milford, were "acting together."

"The evidence shows her complicity, her involvement and her guilt. I am asking you to find her guilty of capital murder," Armstrong said, as he pointed at Henderson.

Judge Dulaney had instructed the jury that Harding's testimony cannot be the only evidence in convicting Henderson of the crime, because Harding testified as an accomplice to the crime.

Armstrong said that evidence shows Henderson's guilt, even without the testitmony of Harding.

Defense attorney Jim Bob Darnell asked the jury to find Henderson not guilty, and followed by saying, "Nobody deserves to be railroaded into a crime that Arthur

House passes school plan

AUSTIN (AP) — A school finance reform bill that's loaded with other education issues has been given preliminary approval by the Texas House, as the clock ticks toward a June 1 court deadline.

The bill, which passed 98-44 Thursday, faces another House vote. If approved, it goes to the Senate, which earlier passed its own measure. A conference committee could be appointed to work out differences.

Although the measure touches on issues ranging from the no pass, no play rule on extracurricular activities to students skipping school, House Public Education Committee Chairwoman Libby Linebarger said lawmakers haven't lost sight of the main issue.

That's meeting the Texas Supreme Court deadline to even out funding available to school districts that have differing property wealth. If they fail, they face a court order cutting off state aid to schools. School districts rely on state aid and local property taxes.

"I think both the House and the Senate are committed to one thing, and that's to meeting the June 1 deadline and keeping the schools

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

According to the Daily-Leader in Lovington, N.M., a former Snyder resident briefly was a candidate for municipal court judge.

Sam Kitching, former minister at East Side Church of Christ in Snyder, became a candidate and then withdrew his name prior to the election. For the past nine years, Kitching has been minister of the 3rd and Central congregation in Lovington.

Russell Skiles, in the Lamesa Press-Reporter, talked about starting a "critter of the month" feature in the city's twice-weekly newspaper.

A couple of weeks ago, the editor shot a picture of a wild boar javelina near Klondike Elementary. The critter had been visiting a domestic hog farm when nabbed.

The newspaper then followed with a picture of a bobcat which a resident's dogs had treed outside his home, just east of the Lamesa airport.

Skiles said, "Those are unusual occurrences for a county which for years has had a reputation for a general lack of wildlife other than migratory fowl. Miles and miles of flat and open plowed fields don't make for good wildlife habitat."

Dog is generally considered to be man's best friend, but a resident of Amarillo believes his cat may be in the number one spot.

The Hereford Brand reported that Gus Grisham thinks his cat saved his life by waking him up one Sunday morning.

"She was laying on my chest, pawing on my face when I woke up." Grisham saw the floor furnace was on fire and the flames soon spread to the ceiling."

Endangered species are bred successfully in wildlife center

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department says a first has occurred at a private wildlife center southwest of Fort Worth.

Earlier this week, the first chicks from birds previously hatched through a captive breeding program were born at the private Fossil Rim Wildlife Center at Glen Rose, officials said Thursday.

Another 45 captive-laid eggs are in incubation at the center and will hatch between now and June, officials said.

The program's goal is to save the birds from extinction through captive breeding, then reintroduce them into the wild to supplement the declining natural population.

"The first true, captive-produced generation is very important in endangered species propagation," said Bob Smith, avian coordinator with Fossil Rim.

"Until you successfully raise captive-born chicks and they in turn produce young, you haven't established a viable captive propagation program," he said.

Historically, the prairie chicken once thrived on the expansive coastal prairie that stretched from South Texas to Louisiana.

Today, there are only about 450 prairie chickens left in four Gulf Coast counties. That's down from more than 1,100 just five years ago.

The Parks and Wildlife Department said scientists believe the birds have died in recent years because of heavy rains that wet the downy chicks, causing them to chill and die.

Fossil Rim is the only facility working with the Attwater's prairie chicken, state wildlife officials said.

Earlier this year, 12 chicks hatched from eggs gathered from the wild by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Eight of those birds have survived. Last year's hatch consisted of 42 chicks, of which six lived to form this year's breeding nucleus.

[illegible] endangered species program leader for the Parks and Wildlife Department, said the bird's prairie habitat has dwindled historically because of agriculture, cattle grazing and increased urbanization. Disturbed by such forces, prairie grasses have been crowded out by brush.

Ranchers and landowners are working with state and federal scientists to restore the bird's habitat.

The ultimate plan, officials said, is to release captive-raised birds from Fossil Rim onto land restored through these efforts.

Slain ATF officers honored at memorial in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — The four federal agents killed as they stormed the Branch Davidians' compound Feb. 28 were "the good guys just wanting to go after the bad guys," says Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen.

"We come to remember them for standing up to a violent criminal who was ready to harm anyone in his way," Bentsen said Thursday at a somber memorial service for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents.

Speaking to several hundred people gathered at the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial, Bentsen questioned the randomness of the agents' deaths.

"I'll never ever know how deep the losses have hurt you," Bentsen told the agents' families. "I'll never share your emptiness. No one can. But I'll understand when you ask over and over again, 'Why? Why did it have to happen to them?' No matter how many times you ask, I'm sorry but there'll never be an answer.

Four ATF agents and six cult members died in the gunbattle that erupted when the officers stormed the compound to search the 77-acre complex and to arrest sect leader David Koresh.

The names of slain agents Conway C. LeBleu, Todd W. McKeehan, Robert J. Williams and Steven D. Willis will be engraved next year at the officers' memorial alongside the 178 ATF agents and 13,078 other law enforcement officers who preceded them on the wall.

"In so doing, we will permanently etch their memories into the hearts and minds of all future generations to come," said Craig W. Floyd, chairman of the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Fund.

"We remember them on these walls so others will never forget," Floyd said. "Their names were their deeds."

Assistant Treasury Secretary Ronald K. Noble, who is heading the Treasury Department's investigation of the raid, assured the slain agents' families that "we will learn from our tragedies. These outstanding young men and courageous agents will not have died in vain."

Bentsen and ATF Director Stephen Higgins watched as family members walked up to four wreaths of white and yellow chrysanthemums that encircled plaques with the names and ages of the agents: Louisiana native LeBleu, 30, of the New Orleans ATF office; Tennessee native McKeehan, 28, also of the New Orleans office; Maryland native Williams, 26, of the Little Rock, Ark. office; and Texan Willis, 32, of the Houston office.

In a letter read by Bentsen, President Clinton told the families that he joined in their grief.

Dallas police end ban against homosexuals in police force

DALLAS (AP) — Effective immediately, homosexuals will be considered on an equal basis with everyone else for positions in the Dallas police department, city officials say.

Dallas has been the nation's only large city to bar gay officers, but city officials said Thursday they won't fight recent court decisions that held the city's ban to be unconstitutional.

The announcement brings to an end the city's fight for the right to ask police candidates whether they have violated Section 21.06 of the Texas Penal Code — the law that criminalizes homosexual conduct.

"We no longer inquire of applicants about whether they have violated Section 21.06 of the penal code," Sgt. Jim Chandler, a police spokesman, said Thursday.

"And, in fact, if they admit that they have violated 21.06, it will be ignored. It will not be a part of their application. It's no longer a consideration for employment."

Dallas' policy against hiring gay and lesbian officers was challenged in 1990. Mica England sued the city after being told that she could not be a police officer because as an admitted lesbian she was in violation of the state's sodomy law.

In 1992, the state's 3rd Court of Appeals declared the law unconstitutional and said Dallas could not refuse to hire Ms. England solely because she is a lesbian.

After that ruling, police removed a question from the application forms about deviant sexual practices. But they continued asking applicants the question during polygraph tests and continued to bar anyone who admitted to violation of the sodomy law, a Class A misdemeanor.

Because of a legal technicality, the Texas Supreme Court refused earlier this month to hear the city's appeal of the lower court ruling.

City Attorney Sam Lindsay recommended during a closed City Council meeting last week that because of the high court's refusal to hear the appeal, police should stop asking questions about sexual practices during job interviews.

Thursday, Ms. England said she felt vindicated by the council's turnaround and will reapply. "I'm thrilled that I won, and I knew that I would," she said. She has been working at a Dallas restaurant.

The Supreme Court is still reviewing the constitutionality of the state's sodomy statute. The legislature, meanwhile, is revising the penal code and could eliminate the prohibition.

Diagnosing, treating thyroid nodules

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What causes [illegible] what is the appropriate treatment?

DEAR READER: There are four fundamental types of thyroid nodules: cancer, benign growths, cysts and hyper-functioning nodules. No one knows why these lesions form.

Thyroid cancer often begins as a hard lump that can be felt in the thyroid gland, low in the neck. The tumor is diagnosed by needle biopsy and treated with surgery.

Benign growths also form lumps but, on biopsy, they are found to contain normal thyroid tissue. In most cases, no treatment is required — although if the lumps are large and unsightly, doctors often prescribe thyroid supplement pills to shrink them.

Cysts are fluid-filled bumps that are not a threat to health. Previously diagnosed by thyroid ultrasound examination (which shows the fluid), most authorities now recommend needle biopsy because some cancers are associated with these cysts. At the time of the biopsy, the cysts can be drained. Patients usually take thyroid supplements to prevent re-accumulation of the fluid.

Hyper-functioning nodules produce too much thyroid hormone, leading to hyperthyroidism: nervousness, weight loss and tremulousness. They are diagnosed by a radioactive thyroid scan, which documents the over-activity. These nodules are never cancerous and are treated with radioactive iodine therapy or surgical excision.

Family physicians can diagnose and treat thyroid nodules, using specialists, as needed.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach to Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 23-year-old daughter recently passed away from thrombotic thrombocytopenia purpura. What causes this and how easily is it diagnosed?

DEAR READER: A disease of unknown cause, TTP is an acute, serious disorder of the blood marked by a sudden drop in platelets (the tiny blood cells that are essential to clotting), destruction of red blood cells (leading to anemia), and multi-organ failure. This latter feature is associated with jaundice, renal damage and changing mental state.

TTP is diagnosed by blood tests and treated with blood transfusions and [illegible]. Untreated TTP is uniformly fatal. However, even with therapy, the prognosis is poor. Unfortunately, if the first attack isn't fatal, the patient may experience subsequent attacks that are equally life-threatening. Patients with TTP should be under the care of hematologists.

Clerics and doctors oppose new concealed weapon law

AUSTIN (AP) — Trauma doctors and religious leaders are banding together to urge lawmakers to defeat a bill that could allow Texans to carry handguns.

"The theory that more people with more guns equals more safety just doesn't wash," said Phil Strickland of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission.

"We are very deeply concerned about how to make the society less violent, not more violent. We do not believe this legislation will make our society less violent," Strickland said Thursday while standing before a list of 3,692 Texans killed by gunfire in 1991.

The group said it sides with Gov. Ann Richards, who has vowed to veto the bill if the Legislature sends it to her desk.

The House and Senate have passed differing versions of the measure. If the House accepts Senate amendments, the bill could go to the governor.

Under the bill, Texas voters would decide the gun question in a November referendum.

If approved in that election, Texans 21 or older who are registered voters, have no criminal background and are judged to be of sound mind could apply for a license to carry a handgun.

Richards reiterated her opposition Thursday, saying there is no way lawmakers can improve the bill.

"This is a bad piece of legislation. It started out bad, it's going to end up bad, I don't care what they do to it," she said.

One of its sponsors, Rep. Bill Carter, R-Haltom City, said this week that "the issue now is whether or not she (Richards) allows the people to vote on the right of self-protection. If she does veto it, she's just denying the people the right to vote."

But the religious and medical leaders said legalizing carrying of handguns isn't the way to make Texas a safer place.

"If we wrote a book on how to make this society less violent, we would have chapters on preventing child abuse. We would have chapters on early childhood education. We would have chapters on good early medical health care," Strickland said. "There wouldn't be a chapter in that book on concealed weapons."

Ira advances in diamond playoff

LUBBOCK — Ira's Bulldogs held off a seventh-inning challenge to erase Paducah from the playoffs here Thursday and claim a bi-district baseball championship, 8-7.

"The kids played a great defensive game. Everybody on the whole squad contributed. This was truly a team victory," said an enthusiastic Lynn Cauley, Ira coach.

The Bulldogs will advance to play Briscoe-Mobeetie in the Area round of the Class A playoffs at a time and place yet to be determined.

Ira had rallied from a first-inning deficit to take a commanding 8-3 lead going into the seventh. But that's when the Dragons made things interesting.

It appeared that Ira would breeze to victory after 'Dog pitcher Wyatt Webster fanned Moises Mendoza to open the final inning. But Rusty Gilbreath and Jody Adams drew walks, and a two-run double from Michael Cordoso tightened the gap to 8-5.

Next-up Michael Reynolds drew an intentional walk and Drew Davis popped out to second, leaving the Bulldogs just one out from victory. It was an out that was hard to come by, however.

Another intentional free pass to Russ Walker loaded the sacks and Joe Cordoso doubled to make it an 8-7 ballgame.

The 'Dogs put Matt Litz on with a free pass, then Webster got Mendoza to pop up to first baseman Brian Miller, ending the game.

Webster went the distance, giving up two hits and striking out eight batters. Drew Davis was the loser.

Paducah had gone up 3-0 in the first inning on a couple of Ira errors. Ira rallied for two runs on an RBI single from Webster and a wild pitch by Davis.

The Bulldogs tied the game in the second when Mike Hughes' infield single brought in Jay Nettles, who had walked and stolen second.

Ira went ahead in the fourth as Webster slapped home Hughes, who had walked aboard.

The Bulldogs then grabbed four runs in the fifth on a bases-loaded walk by Hughes, a sacrifice fly from Webster and a two-run single by Jason Hartley.

Webster was two for two with a triple and the sacrifice while Hughes also went one for two and scored twice. Coy Henderson and Toby Haynes each scored two runs and Ricky Stroud was one for two with a double.

In all, the Bulldogs managed five hits in bringing their record to 8-9.

Paducah winds up its season at 5-5.

Cauley projected that Hartley will likely start on the mound for the Bulldogs' area contest.

Grand slam foul as Rangers bow

Four pitches later, Redus struck out and the Mariners beat the Rangers 7-4 Thursday night, splitting their four-game series.

Redus had been in a classic situation: bases loaded, two outs, bottom of the ninth with his team down by three and Seattle closer Norm Charlton on the mound.

Redus thought he had the perfect response, but his drive down the left field hooked 10 feet to the left of the foul pole.

"It started way fair," Redus said. "It didn't miss by a good bit. It was gone. It was just a matter of fair or foul."

"When they get to the corner here, they really seem to hook," said Piniella, whose squad had lost five of their previous seven games.

Smith's 30 points keep Rockets alive

HOUSTON (AP) — Terry Teagle, who played only one minute, gave such good advice to Kenny Smith that it helped keep the Houston Rockets in the NBA playoffs.

A late-night shooting drill and counsel from Teagle helped Smith score 30 points Thursday night and lead the Rockets to a 103-90 victory over Seattle in The Summit.

The victory extended the Western Conference semifinal series to the seventh game, scheduled Saturday in Seattle.

The winner of Saturday's game will play the Phoenix Suns in the Western Conference finals. The Suns' eliminated the San Antonio Spurs on Thursday.

"I shoot at night all the time," Smith said. "I came in last night (Wednesday) and I realized that I'd just been taking six or seven shots. I was happy for a day off so I could go through my normal drills."

Smith felt the shooting touch return during his late-night shootaround and Teagle urged him to take more shots.

"Terry's been harping at me that I was passing up scoring opportunities," Smith said. "Having a guy like that hawking you makes a big difference."

Smith didn't miss many scoring chances against the Sonics. He hit 13 of 16 shots, including four 3-point baskets, and didn't commit a turnover in igniting the Rockets.

Although the Sonics led through most of the first half and held a 47-43 edge at intermission, Smith scored 15 points in the first half to keep the Rockets close. He added 10 more in the breakaway third period.

Vernon Maxwell, scoreless in the first half, also ended his slump with 12 points in the third quarter, when the Rockets outscored the Sonics 36-15. Maxwell finished with 15 points.

"The fans were kind of on me at the half," Maxwell said. "They were just saying 'Max, get on the scoreboard.' It was positive stuff. I knew I needed to get more into the game.

"Everybody was telling me to shoot. I already knew what I had to do. I had zero points and I can't play like that."

Maxwell swished a 44-foot basket as time expired on the 24-second clock late in the third quarter to give Houston a 70-60 lead, and that took steam from the Sonics' comeback hopes.

"I feel that was a big shot for us," Maxwell said. "It was a big three and a lucky three. I felt the momentum shifted to us and my confidence got going after that three."

"That was a heck of a shot," Karl said. "I think it was kind of the nail in the coffin."

Sam Perkins and Derrick McKey led Seattle with 14 points apiece, but Shawn Kemp, who had 19 points in Game 5, scored only 1 point, that coming with 7:07 left.

Houston center Hakeem Olajuwon was limited to 14 points and 10 rebounds.

Spurs edged from playoff

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The big reason the Phoenix Suns survived another rough playoff series was the man with the big shot — Charles Barkley.

The best regular-season NBA team, the Suns made it to the Western Conference finals when Barkley put his basketball magic to work again Thursday night. He lifted the Suns to a 102-100 victory over the San Antonio Spurs with a game-winning, top-of-the-key jumper over the outstretched arm of David Robinson with 1.8 seconds to play.

"I always expect to hit the big shot," said Barkley, who scored 28 points and had 21 rebounds. "It felt good the second it left my hand. I knew it was in."

The Suns, taking the best-of-7 series 4-2, now face the winner of the Houston-Seattle series. Game 7 of that series will be Saturday at Seattle.

For San Antonio, it was a distressing finish to an up-and-down season of coaching changes, winning streaks followed by streaks of mediocrity, then a trip to the conference semifinals for the first time since Robinson's rookie year four seasons ago.

"It was a tough way to lose, especially at home. We are all really disappointed," Robinson said. "I feel like a train that hit a wall, but my body could use the rest. Mentally I'm ready to play on."

Robinson led the Spurs with 22 points and 14 rebounds. Sean Elliott added 19 points, and J.R. Reid had 14.

Early in the fourth quarter, the Spurs looked like they were about to force a seventh game in Phoenix.

San Antonio took an 86-76 lead to start the quarter on Elliott's 3-pointer. But Phoenix immediately rallied with 12 straight points.

Krueger confident...

Judicial appointees will be confirmed

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Sen. Bob Krueger says he is confident that the Texans he has nominated for federal judgeships and other top posts will be confirmed, regardless of the outcome of his special election June 5.

"I will be extremely surprised if each individual ... is in the very position for which I have [illegible]," Krueger said. "I think it's very, very likely."

A total of 21 people have been recommended to President Clinton by Krueger, D-Texas, for positions as judges, U.S. attorneys and U.S. marshals.

"The team represents the new Texas, the Texas of diversity, the [illegible] challenge, the Texas of the future," Krueger said.

Secretary of State John Hannah, a former federal prosecutor, was among 10 people that Krueger nominated Thursday for posts as U.S. district judges.

Senate tradition allows a senator of the president's party to recommend nominees for judicial positions. If appointed by Clinton, all nominees must go through the Senate confirmation process.

The nominations were criticized by one state legislator because they included no Hispanic women.

"We would hope that since this is the new Texas and we're all striving to be inclusive of all Texans that we would have a Hispanic woman appointed to a federal judgeship. And there are qualified women out there," said Rep. Yolanda Flores, D-Houston.

But Bob Mann, communications director for Krueger's Senate office, said Krueger had nominated "the most diverse group of public officials ever appointed in Texas."

"Among the 21, 14 are black, Hispanic or women," Mann said. "Five are black. Five are Hispanic."

U.S. district judge is a lifetime appointment. The list of those nominees is:

— Eastern District judge: Hannah, who has been secretary of state for Gov. Ann Richards since 1991. He was U.S. attorney for the eastern district from 1977 to 1981 and represented East Texas in the state House from 1967 to 1973.

— Northern District judge: Eric Moye, Dallas, a state district judge. A former columnist for the Dallas Times Herald, Moye is an adjunct professor of history at [illegible] and active in the Dallas Civil Liberties Union. He would be the first black appointed to a federal judgeship for North Texas.

— Western District judges: Fred Biery, David Briones, Orlando Garcia, Royal Furgeson.

Biery has served on the 4th Court of Appeals in San Antonio since 1989, was a county court-at-law judge from 1979 to 1982, and was a state district judge from 1983 to 1988.

Briones has presided over an El Paso county court-at-law since 1991.

Garcia has been a justice on the 4th Court of Appeals since 1991 and served in the Texas House from 1983 to 1991.

Furgeson, an El Paso lawyer, is a Vietnam veteran who clerked for U.S. District Judge Halbert Woodward.

— Southern District judges: Vanessa Gilmore, Janis Graham Jack, Alice Oliver-Parrott, Mario Ramirez.

Ms. Gilmore, Houston, is an attorney and was the first black appointed by Richards to the Texas Department of Commerce policy board, which she chairs.

Ms. Jack, Corpus Christi, is an attorney who holds degrees in both law and nursing and is legal counsel for Planned Parenthood of South Texas.

Judge Oliver-Parrott is chief justice of the 1st Court of Appeals in Houston and was a district judge before that.

Ramirez is a district judge in McAllen, a post he has held since 1983. He also was a district judge and a county court-at-law judge in Hidalgo County.

How do you view chance? We hear stories about people being incredibly lucky: for example, someone who wins a multi-million-dollar lottery. But someone else loses 20 straight bets at the race track.

In bridge, you will sometimes feel that your contract has no chance of making. But you shouldn't just shrug your shoulders and accept defeat as inevitable. Hunt assiduously for a lie of the cards that allows you to sneak home, turning apparent bad luck into veritable good luck.

Without peeking at the East-West cards, decide how lucky you feel in four spades. West leads the heart queen: three, seven, two. He continues with the heart four: eight, king, nine. East now plays the heart five. How do you continue?

Things look grim. All the evidence — East's overcall and West's lead with the heart jack in the dummy — points to West's having started with a doubleton heart. And if West has the spade queen, he will overruff at this trick. Then later someone, presumably East, will take the spade ace to defeat your game. So start by assuming that East has the spade queen. But does that really help? They still rate to collect two spade tricks.

There is one faint chance. Ruff the third heart with the spade jack. Let's assume west defends well by discarding. Now lead a low spade and call for dummy's king.

If it is your lucky day, East will drop the queen. Then you return to hand in a minor and play a spade toward dummy's 10.

Don't overlook any chance, however remote, to make your contract.

Pryor receives Hollywood star

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An ailing Richard Pryor got a lift when he joined hundreds of fans for the unveiling of his star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

"You made a cloudy day sunny and you made my heart sing, and I appreciate it very much," a teary-eyed Pryor told the crowd Thursday.

The 52-year-old comedian — whose scalding brand of comedy influenced such comics as Robin Williams and Eddie Murphy — has been in poor health in recent years. He underwent heart surgery in 1991 and suffers from multiple sclerosis.

"Everyone can take his money, they can take his cars, girlfriends will come and go, but this star and this honor will stay," said Pryor's daughter, actress Rain Pryor.

In 1985, 35 people were killed and hundreds injured in rioting that erupted between British and Italian spectators at the European Cup soccer final in Brussels, Belgium.

Immigration staff reportedly questioned woman's daughter

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — U.S. immigration inspectors questioned a 5-year-old girl for an hour and accused the mother trying to cross the border with a stolen child, the mother says.

Carmen Martinez, 21, was reunited Thursday with her daughter, Elaine, after the confusion forced a weeklong delay in her plans to bring the child into the United States.

"It hurt me a lot for them to tell me that she was not mine, because I suffered a lot to have her," Mrs. Martinez said.

Mrs. Martinez claims Elaine cried while Immigration and Naturalization officials questioned the girl during a late-night border crossing on May 11.

The inspectors said they did not believe Elaine was the same child described in her Brownsville birth certificate, and told Mrs. Martinez to take Elaine back to Mexico, she said.

Mrs. Martinez, a native of Mexico and a legal U.S. resident, said she moved about nine months ago to Florida, where she is living with her new husband.

She said she now wants to take her two daughters, who had been staying with their grandmother in Matamoros, to Florida.

"An official told me to tell the truth, that they knew I was lying," Mrs. Martinez said. "I said, 'What truth do you want me to tell you? If you want to see the scars from when I had her, I can show you.'"

Mrs. Martinez said she received a new copy of Elaine's birth certificate at Brownsville City Hall. She returned to Matamoros on Thursday — this time with a reporter from The Brownsville Herald — and crossed back with Elaine without any problems.

Richards blasts insurance bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A House-passed bill to continue operation of the Texas Department of Insurance would make insurance more affordable and available to consumers, industry officials say.

But Gov. Ann Richards says the bill contains certain "trash" provisions that would gut pro-consumer reforms made during the 1991 legislative session.

Richards told the Senate Economic Development Committee Thursday that the Department of Insurance would be abolished if those provisions aren't removed from the legislation.

The bill, which was left pending before the committee, won House approval earlier this month after lawmakers added several pro-insurance industry amendments.

"If you decide to pass that bill out with all that trash on it, there isn't going to be an insurance agency in the state of Texas," Richards warned senators.

However, Richards did not pledge a veto of the measure if the provisions remain in the bill.

One of those would allow insurance industry organizations to provide the data that the State Board of Insurance uses to set rates.

Richards said that measure would repeal reforms passed by the 1991 legislative session to phase out those organizations from rate proceedings.

"What is happening is we are saying not only are we going to continue a practice to have the fox guard the henhouse, but we are going to invite the fox to roost with the hens," she said.

"It is time that we get serious about what we mean when we talk about rate setting in insurance," she said.

But insurance officials defended the legislation.

"Our purpose in proposing the amendments was to allow insurers a chance to operate their business ses more efficiently and pass those cost-savings along to the policyholders," said Jerry Johns, of the Southwestern Insurance Information Service.

Rick Gentry, of the Insurance Information Institute, said he was surprised the governor would suggest abolishing the Department of Insurance. He said such a move would hurt both consumers and insurance companies.

"Even the insurance industry recognizes the need for strong, evenhanded insurance regulation," he said. "I hope we can find some common ground."

Tensions ease between Muslims, Croats

MOSTAR, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Muslim and Croat leaders were struggling to shore up a truce in central Bosnia, while top American and Russian diplomats hammer out a plan they hope will bring peace throughout the republic.

Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher and Russian Foreign Minister Andrei V. Kozyrev met Thursday in Washington, and Kozyrev said they agreed on "basic political principles."

Clinton administration sources said they discussed a French plan to set up safe havens to protect displaced civilians.

Christopher and Kozyrev spoke with French Foreign Minister Alain Juppe by telephone and, as an indication of their progress toward an agreement, Juppe is coming to Washington to see Christopher on Saturday.

The New York Times reported today that the United States and Russia have agreed on a strategy that would essentially allow the Bosnian Serbs to keep the territory they have seized.

This would mean backing away from a U.N.-backed peace plan, which requires Serbs to give back nearly half the land they hold. They control 70 percent of Bosnian territory, and have rejected the plan.

Muslims and Croats, onetime allies who have clashed recently, have accepted the U.N. plan.

Gen. Sefer Halilovic, the commander of Bosnia's Muslim-led government troops, and Gen. Milevoj Petkovic, his Bosnian Croat counterpart, worked Thursday to secure compliance with a cease-fire that calls for gradual implementation of the U.N. plan.

One provision of Tuesday's pact was the release of 1,000 of the 1,800 Muslims rounded up last week in Mostar.

Tensions in Mostar eased Thursday with the release and a lull in hostilities. But Croat and Muslim fighters did not give up their battle for positions around central Bosnia.

Halilovic tried to get his troops to pull back from the village of Virc and allow 300 trapped Croat civilians and soldiers to leave. But snipers continued to target civilians in Mostar, and smoke from sporadic mortar explosions rose from Muslim quarters in the southern city.

A Muslim woman was killed by Croatian snipers. Mostar Muslims said they were not responding in hopes a cease-fire could be established.

U.N. officials have accused Croats of repeated incidents of "ethnic cleansing" over the last few weeks as they try to push Muslims out of territories they would control under the peace plan.

Lee Harding committed."

Harding, a Fast Oil Change employee at the time of the killing, had given two statements prior to the trial. In the first, he admitted killing Milford; in the second he said he shot his employer once after Henderson had already shot him twice. In testimony this week, Harding said that Henderson actually had committed the murder and he had lied to protect her.

Darnell pointed out the discrepancies, and said Harding had a motive for the killing. He noted that Harding was on parole, and risked going back to prison because of forged checks on Milford's business. He said Henderson did not have a motive.

Darnell also questioned the credibility of Harding's testimony, along with that of state's witness Jerry Wayne Smith.

Smith had testified that he had seen Henderson in Oklahoma, where she bragged about killing a man.

Darnell said Harding was a con man and it was easy for him to get on the stand and lie. "It does not bother him at all," Darnell, pointing to the witness chair Harding sat in while testifing.

The jury was still out as of 12:30 p.m.

open," said Ms. Linebarger, D-Manchaca.

Under the House bill, the wealthiest school districts would be consolidated with one or more of their poorer neighbors — unless a district instead chose among the following options:

— Merging its tax base with one or more poorer school districts;

— Sending money to the state to pay for educating other students in poorer districts;

— Contracting to educate students in other districts;

— Consolidating voluntarily with one or more other school districts; or — Moving some taxable property to another district's tax rolls.

For the first three options, local voter approval would be required.

Under the plan earlier passed by the Senate, the state would shift some business property from the tax rolls of the richest districts to poorer ones.

22 million households tune in for final episode of 'Cheers'

NEW YORK (AP) — Sam's bar didn't burn down. He didn't marry anyone. He didn't wake up to find that Cheers and its patrons were nothing but a dream.

After all the buildup for Thursday night's finale, "Cheers" came to an end in the only way it could and still be true to itself: by simply pledging to go on.

One burning question was answered for all time: As tens of millions of viewers looked on, Sam and his long-absent ex, Diane, called it quits after one final rendezvous.

The overnight Nielsen ratings from 29 major markets indicated that 46.7 percent of television homes in those cities — or 22 million households — tuned in. Not surprisingly, the rating in Boston was high at 54.1. The markets include about half the nation's television viewers.

If the numbers held up, the "Cheers" finale would edge into the Top 10 most-watched broadcasts ever, falling far short, however, of the most-watched show ever, the 1983 wrapup of "M-A-S-H," which drew 60.2 percent of all TV households in the final ratings.

In these and other satisfying ways, "Cheers" episode No. 275 re-stated what the series stood for during 11 laugh-filled seasons: You do the best you can, and you do it with friends.

"You look exactly the way I remembered you," said Diane, returning to Cheers after six years.

"If it ain't broke, don't fix it," replied Cliff, on his customary barstool.

In the final scene, which NBC kept secret until airtime, the usual "Cheers" laughs mostly subsided as the regulars took stock of themselves.

"What is the point of life?" Sam asked sadly.

"I've got the solution," said the fatuous Cliff. "Comfortable shoes."

"The point of life is having kids," said waitress Carla, who has eight.

"You want to know what I love?" said Norm, as always, the last one to go. "I love that stool. If there's a heaven, I don't want to go there unless my stool is waiting for me."

Then Norm left, and Sam finally got it.

"I'm the luckiest son of a bitch on earth," he told himself, all alone, in the poignant closing moments. Then, from the street, the camera caught a lingering last look at the bar he'll always love.

Instead of saying goodbye, Thursday's "Cheers" reasserted the right to stand firm. Far from over, the show remains a fixture on TV. Reruns air daily on 197 U.S. stations and in 37 countries. But the ground has shifted.

Thursday may have brought to a close a dynasty of great and timeless sitcoms that began with "I Love Lucy" and "The Honeymooners" four decades ago.

In the unruly new TV world where scores of channels scrap for the viewer's affection, no broadcast series may ever again win the wide and long-term favor "Cheers" did.

And its departure from NBC's Thursday nights finishes that network's legendary lineup that once boasted "Cosby," "Family Ties," "Night Court" and "Hill Street Blues."

It was at Boston's Hampshire House restaurant that most of the "Cheers" cast watched the last episode, which was followed by Jay Leno broadcasting the "Tonight" show live from the Bull & Finch Bar downstairs. That's the tavern that inspired the fictional Cheers.

In his monologue, Leno targeted NBC, which he said would miss the series more than its fans.

The Scurry County Board of the American Cancer Society hosted a reception for 1992-1993 volunteers Monday at Cogdell Memorial Hospital. Several received certificates for notable assistance in the [illegible].

Jay Cumbie, business drive chairman, received a certificate. Receipts of $3,000 have been deposited from that part of the crusade. Other business drive workers cited were Donald Gressett, Jackie Kidd, Jackie Buckland and Shawn Ragland.

Shirley Stewart, crusade chairman, reported that the community crusade "Lights On Blitz" had been quite successful with several areas worked this year that had not been in the past.

Educational materials were distributed and discussed with a vast number of local residents by local crusaders. Thus far, deposits have exceeded $6,500 from the door-to-door campaign. Mrs. Stewart lauded all her workers and presented a certificate to the Senior Citizens Center for organizing the crusade materials.

H.W. Cargile, memorial chairman, reported donations of $535 for the month of April increasing the unit's fiscal year total for donations to $4,550. He presented Sheila McCormack a plaque for her work in the memorial program over the past several years.

Cogdell Memorial Hospital Auxiliary was commended for their assistance with the Christmas Ornament Project and HealthFest participation. The auxiliary was presented a plaque by ACS president, Helen Hatter.

Wayne Monroney received recognition for the Willie Bigham Memorial Golf Tournament. Barbara Bigham reported that the event's receipts exceeded $1,665. Special awards were presented to Cara Belcher, Camey Belcher and Opal Stout for assistance with the tournament.

Doris and Ford Spikes, co-chairmen, and hosts Pam and Billy Ray Browning, received cetificates of appreciation for their work with the annual Scoot-a-Boot Dance.

Following the reception, the unit board convened for the regular monthly meeting.

Officers elected for the 1993-1994 year were Barbara Bigham, president; Jay Cumbie, vice president; Martha Schiebel, secretary; and H.W. Cargile, treasurer.

Mother of murder victim asks why violence continues

VETSCHAU, Germany (AP) — One of Gerda Zerna's most cherished keepsakes is a 1983 snapshot showing her son Mike, holding his baby brother Oliver.

The two boys were always buddies, until Mike's recent murder by a neo-Nazi mob.

Mike was only 22. Extremists bludgeoned him outside an east German bar and then toppled a one-and-a-half-ton van onto his broken body — just because he had long hair.

Gerda Zerna contends most Germans and the authorities don't want to admit the magnitude of the far-right threat.

"Reality is being ignored. The leaders of these (neo-Nazi) groups are loose on the streets, telling younger kids that violence is a good thing," said Mrs. Zerna.

In February, Interior Minister Rudolf Seiters claimed that "state measures ... are working" against neo-Nazi violence, and many believed him.

Federal authorities point out that attacks against foreigners and other far-right crimes have declined from a peak of 536 last September to a monthly average of about 150 so far this year.

The Interior Ministry attributes the drop to bans on four neo-Nazi organizations, other new anti-extremist measures, and grass-roots protests.

But, while far-right crimes have indeed dropped since last fall, the count for the first four months of 1993 has actually outpaced the number for the same period last year: about 600, compared with 472.

That works out to five such crimes a day for the start of this year, about one-fifth of them arson attacks on asylum shelters.

Neo-Nazi crimes appear to be a seasonal phenomenon in Germany, with the greatest surge occurring in summer and autumn. That was the case in 1991 and again last year.

Even if that doesn't happen this year, the final hate-crime tally for 1993 could surpass last year's record 2,285 at the current pace.

There were 17 killings last year and 2,200 injuries. A Turk and two Germans have died so far this year, and 300 people are known to have been injured.

Known membership in extreme-right groups is up, according to the Federal Office for the Protection of the Constitution, which monitors extremists: from about 39,800 in 1991 to 42,700 at the end of last year.

Neo-Nazi organizations have easily circumvented the federal ban by changing their names.

But the government insists it has not been trying to play down the far-right threat. Interior Ministry spokesman Detlev Bouke said the new law enforcement measures have made neo-Nazis more hesitant to attack.

"But that doesn't mean it's time to give the all-clear," he said.

No one needs to tell that to families of neo-Nazis' victims.

Hate crimes bill 'watered down'

AUSTIN (AP) — A hate crimes bill sparked by the probation sentence given a white supremacist in a Fort Worth drive-by shooting has been seriously weakened and appears stalled in the House.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Thursday that the measure, designed to enhance prison time for people convicted of hate crimes, was changed by a House committee to require only that a criminal perform volunteer work in the community he victimized.

Funds approved

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission has voted to approve the last $500,000 needed to buy land for Government Canyon State Park near San Antonio.

The acquisition will protect a scenic and ecologically sensitive area and provide a new recreational park for central Texas, commissioners said Thursday.

Dear Abby

Wife's Shotgun Wedding Still Ringing in Her Ears

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1993 Unviersal Press Syndciate

DEAR ABBY: Something has been on my mind for several years. When I was 18, I was in love with "Jim," who was 19. We started having sex, so I went on a birth control pill because he was in no position to get married. Well, I did a terrible thing: I purposely stopped taking the pill without telling Jim, because I wanted to get pregnant so he would marry me.

I got pregnant right away and went through all the motions of acting "shocked." To make a long story short, he married me and we had a beautiful baby girl. Two years later we had a little boy. Abby, I know what I did was selfish and underhanded, but I don't regret it.

My problem is whether to tell Jim that I tricked him into marrying me. He is a very understanding man, and we have a fantastic marriage, but I don't know how he would react. I'm also afraid if I tell him, I will have to tell my family and his.

What is the right thing to do?

FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING GUILTY: Since this has been on your mind for several years, you may feel relieved if you were to tell him.

It's history now, and you say you have a fantastic marriage. True confession may be good for the soul, but it can be bad for the marriage. But why you think it's necessary to tell your family and his is a mystery to me.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My wonderful mother had surgery three weeks ago and was diagnosed with cancer, with a life expectancy of three to six months. This is the most devastating thing I've ever had to face. I hope you and/or your readers can answer some of these questions.

My co-workers are naturally interested and concerned, but they ask me daily, "How is your mother?" I appreciate their concern, but I really don't want to talk about my mother's health because it is progressively worse.

Almost everyone asks, "How old is she?" I finally got tired of answering that question, so I asked, "Why do you want to know?"

The reply, "I just wondered if she has had a full life." Abby, although my mother is in her mid-70s, she's too young to die. I wouldn't want to lose her if she were 100. How can I answer that question without being rude?

WEARY

DEAR WEARY: When asked a question you don't want to answer, simply say, "Thank you for your interest, but I'd rather not talk about it."

P.S. And thank you, "Weary," for suggesting that the "How-old-is-she (or he)" question should not be asked when the loved one is terminally ill. It's entirely irrelevant to most family members.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I couldn't resist commenting on the letter in your recent column about whether a man could father children if he had only one testicle.

My husband had a shriveled testicle due to having had the mumps "go down on him" during his college years. But we had two children, a boy and a girl. I recall one time when he had consulted with a urologist, and the doctor asked him if he had children. He replied, "Yes, a son and a daughter." "Well," the doctor replied, "that blows the theory that perhaps one side produces males and the other females!"

MOTHER OF TWO, CANYONVILLE, ORE.

Facts About The BIBLE
BY JOHN LEHTI

HOW THE BIBLE VIEWS OLD AGE

WHEREVER ONE COMES ACROSS A MENTION OF OLD AGE IN THE BIBLE, IT IS TREATED WITH GREAT RESPECT. TO BIBLICAL PEOPLE, ADVANCED AGE MEANT THE GAINING OF WISDOM "...ASK THY FATHER AND HE WILL SHOW THEE, THY ELDERS AND THEY WILL TELL THEE." (DEUT. 32:7). TO THESE PEOPLE AGE WAS ALSO CONSIDERED BEAUTIFUL," THE BEAUTY OF OLD MEN IS THEIR GRAY HEAD." (PROV. 20:29) AND OF COURSE....

...MOSES HIMSELF THUNDERED DOWN FROM THE MOUNT, THUS SAID THE LORD... "HONOR THY FATHER AND THY MOTHER THAT THY DAYS MAY BE LONG IN THE LAND WHICH THE LORD THY GOD GIVETH THEE."
