Unemployment jumps but experts claim U.S. economy remains vital

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate shot up to 5.7 percent in January as job creation fell to a 12-month low. Still, the Clinton administration and many private economists contend there's plenty of vitality left in the economy.

The jobless rate, up from 5.4 percent in December, matched the level of October, the Labor Department reported Friday. At the same time, it said payrolls increased by just 134,000, the smallest rise since 101,000 jobs were created in January 1994.

But analysts said the rate moved up in part because more Americans re-entered what they perceived to be an expanding labor market than were able to find jobs. And many of the job losses were in government or due to inclement weather.

"On the surface, they are not strong figures," said Eugene Sherman, an economist with M.A. Schapiro & Co. in New York. "But one needs to probe beneath the headlines. They depict a strong economy."

Meanwhile, President Clinton proposed a 90-cent increase in the $4.25 minimum wage for workers.

Noting that 6 million new jobs have been created since he entered the White House, Clinton said he was keenly aware that "not all Americans have benefited."

"Too many Americans are still in . . . the anxious class — people who are working harder for the same or lower wages," he contended in urging an increase to $4.70 the first year after enactment and to $5.15 in the next.

The increase in the unemployment rate was the first since January 1994, when it went up 0.3 percent. But that was due to a change in measurement methods. Prior to that increase, the last time unemployment rose was June 1992, when it increased

Tragic ending

MENDOCINO, Calif. — A powerful ocean wave hit a brother and sister as they scattered their mother's ashes off the coast, battering both against jagged rocks and sweeping the sister away. Coast Guard rescuers found the body of 32-year-old Debbie Menta Friday morning, floating just off the razor-sharp rocks jutting out from the coast. Menta's father is Chargers' quarterback coach Dwain Painter. His son remained hospitalized in stable condition./9A

Group pushes linking highways in bid for I-27 extension

■ La Entrada al Pacifico would benefit whole state, supporters say.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Linking highways to form a corridor spanning from Dallas to the Pacific Mexican port of Topolobampo has been mapped out by the Midland/Odessa Transportation Alliance (MOTRAN) in its push to have the proposed extension of Interstate 27 pass through Midland/Odessa.

The corridor — termed "La Entrada al Pacifico" — is MOTRAN's latest selling point to extend I-27 from Lubbock, between Midland and Odessa down to Interstate 10.

The state recently contracted with an engineering firm to conduct a feasibility study to determine whether I-27 should be extended and if so, where. Three major routes have been suggested.

"What we have is a proposed corridor that not only benefits this part of the state but the whole state," MOTRAN chairman Charles Perry said Friday at a news conference.

"Certainly this is stronger than anything our competition has to offer," he said.

Clinton's defense fund tops $600,000 with variety of gifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's fund to defend himself against legal problems has passed $600,000, including $1,000 contributions from old Arkansas chums and Washington lobbyists, political friends such as Jimmy Carter and such celebrities as Garrison Keillor and Barbra Streisand.

In its first six months, the fund collected more than 5,000 gifts of under $200 each from sympathetic Americans in all 50 states. It paid out $321,134 to lawyers in Washington and Little Rock, Ark., defending Clinton in a sexual harassment suit and in the Whitewater land deal.

Radio personality and writer Keillor donated $1,000 — the maximum amount the fund would accept — as did Streisand and actors Sean Penn and James Garner.

Clinton's campaign consultants, James Carville and Paul Begala, gave $1,000 each, as did pollster Peter Hart, adviser Lloyd Cutler and former Secretary of State Cyrus

Seminar highlights issues of gifted, talented students

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The field of teaching gifted and talented students must change to be effective in the coming decades, according to Carolyn Callahan, a national expert in the field.

"How can we start thinking differently to make that a reality?" Ms. Callahan said.

As the featured speaker Friday evening for the third annual Permian Basin Conference on Education of the Gifted and Talented, Ms. Callahan offered some answers to a group of teachers, administrators and parents.

A professor in the Department of Educational Studies at the University of Virginia and associate director of the National Research Center on the Gifted and Talented, Ms. Callahan told educators to become the problem-solvers they urge their students to be and to make the most of current reforms in education.

'Food Patrol' visits Texas to tout healthy eating choices

By Pauline Arrillaga
Associated Press

AUSTIN (AP) — It labeled fettuccine alfredo "a heart attack on a plate" and called chile rellenos the Mexican equivalent of fettuccine alfredo.

Now the Center for Science in the Public Interest has ventured to the Tex-Mex capital of the world to answer the burning question: What's left to eat?

"You can get a healthy meal anywhere. It's really not where you're eating, it's what you eat," Jayne Hurley, the center's senior nutritionist, said Friday at an American Heart Association conference on women and heart disease.

The Washington-based watchdog group has compiled studies lambasting Chinese, Italian and Mexican food and movie theater popcorn, criticism that churned stomachs and tempers nationwide.

But healthy foods can be found amid the artery-clogging menu selections, Ms. Hurley said.

Armed with test tubes, themselves clogged with goopy melted shortening to show the fat content of certain dishes, Ms. Hurley warned that fettuccine alfredo contains more than the 65 grams of fat recommended for an entire day.

So instead of the cheese-based dish, how about a plate of spaghetti with tomato sauce? That contains 17 grams of fat, compared with the 97 grams in fettuccine alfredo, Ms. Hurley said.

OK, so that kung pao chicken you adore is loaded with fat. Try some chicken chow mein or shrimp with garlic sauce, Ms. Hurley suggests. And use chopsticks to syphon out some of that fattening oil-based sauce.

Admittedly, lower-fat Mexican dishes are not as plentiful, Ms. Hurley said.

"If you ate just the refried beans, the Mexican rice, half a basket of the tortilla chips and the guacamole and sour cream . . . you're going to end up with almost an entire day's worth of fat with your side dishes," she said.

"That's before you get to your chimichanga, your

Winners of National Young Artists Competition to display their talents

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

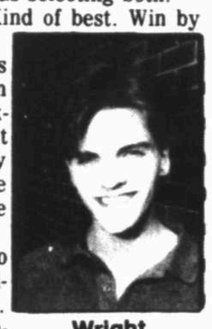
Surprise overtook Karen Johnston and Roger Wright during the 31st National Young Artists Competition held recently in Odessa. They won.

"I played early in the morning in my division, and then I listened to the others, and it was really scary," said the 20-year old Wright, who won in the Division II piano. "I think the reason I wasn't nervous was because I wasn't expecting at all that I had a shot.

Johnston

"The piano judge had callbacks, and I wasn't one of the callbacks. He called back four pianists to hear their solo pieces. As it turned out, he was selecting the second choice for the finals. I didn't know that, and I assumed he was selecting both."

He paused, then quipped, "Kind of best. Win by shock."



Wright

"I was like Roger," said Miss Johnston, 17, who won in Division I strings. "There were such excellent musicians here, and it really surprised me, especially at the finals because there were others in my division who were so talented."

Both won the opportunity to perform as soloists with the Midland-Odessa Symphony at 8 p.m. today at Odessa's Bonham Junior High School. Tickets, which may be purcased at the concert, are priced at $10 for adults, $8 for seniors and $5 for students. Music students are admitted free.

The Masterworks concert, sponsored by Chevron and KPEJ-Fox 24, also features the NYAC's third performing winner — Judith Ingolfsson, a 21-year-old student at the Cleveland School of Music. She received the award in Division II strings. Miss Ingolfsson, who won first prize in the 1994 Leopold Shopmaker Mid-America Violin Competition, will play Samuel Barber's Concerto for Violin, Opus 14.

Wright, a student at the University of Houston and the first place winner in the Texas Music Teachers' Association State Competitions in 1990, 1991 and 1994, will perform Rachmaninoff's Third Concerto for Piano, Opus 30.

"It's my favorite," Wright said. "I love it."

Miss Johnston, grand-prize winner of the 1994 Phoenix Symphony Young Artist Competition, will perform Prokofieff's Concerto No. 2 in G minor.

"I think the Prokofieff is one of the most beautiful concertos ever written," she said.

Neither has a favorite composer.

"Beethoven, Chopin or Brahms I guess, if I had to pick favorites," Wright said.

"There are so many pieces I like by different people, it's hard to pick just one or a couple," Miss Johnston added.

"They are all so great," Wright interjected. "It's really hard to choose."

Wright began playing the piano when he was 12.

"I always had an interest in music," he said. He recalled when his junior high school choir teacher approached his mother about giving him piano lessons.

"I guess in choir five minutes before the bell would ring, I would be tinkering — showing an interest in the piano without showing any skill," Wright said.

His teacher had started a program at school teaching group piano.

"My first lesson was on a keyboard no larger than a typewriter keyboard in a group of six playing 12 bar blues. I'd been in choirs. I had always loved to sing and sort of shifted gears."

Miss Johnston, who began playing when she was 4, laughed as she remembered her first instrument.

"I started out on a cake box. My teacher didn't give me a violin. She gave me a cake box with a ruler stuck on the end. I learned how to bow, where to put my feet."

Both developed an interest in pursuing music at about the same age.

"Probably when I was about 11 or 12 I started really wanting to practice more in developing talent," Miss Johnston said.

"I think by the time I was 11 or 12 I wanted a career in music," Wright said. "I didn't know the first thing about music — how to read music, basically. By the time I was 14, after a few years of piano, I decided I really wanted to push on that."

Music is the only field either is considering as their life's work.

"I take it more seriously than I do school," Wright said.

"I do, too," Miss Johnston interjected. "Sometimes some of the things I spend time doing in school do not at all pertain to what I want to do with my career. So a lot of time it's just frustrating, but I want that little piece of paper that says I graduated."

"It's funny because it's what we want to do with our careers, but it's not our full-time job," Wright said. "We have so many other commitments like school, studying academics. So many silly things. I just sort of blew off school so I could practice."

Wright graduated from a visual and performing arts high school with a grade-point average of above 4.0. Miss Johnston, who attends Highland High School in Gilbert, Ariz., is in advanced classes and has a grade point average of 4.6.

Neither is an only child. Wright has three sisters. The only other musician in his family is his uncle. Miss Johnston has three older brothers and a younger sister.

"We all play the piano," Miss Johnston said. "My brothers play wind instruments and my sister and I play violin. But, no one's really going to go any further with it. They want to make money."

Although neither Wright nor Miss Johnston has worked toward an alternate career, both had thoughts about what they might do if they weren't musicians.

"Maybe an attorney," Wright said. "My father was an attorney."

"Genetics — something on the cutting edge of technology," Miss Johnston said.

"Virtual reality," piped in Wright.

"Something with medicine," Miss Johnston added.

A career as a solo artist is a dream they share.

"I'd like to be a part of a professional chamber group," Miss Johnston said. "I'd like to maybe solo, if possible."

Teaching does interest her.

"I think probably you have to have an interest in teaching, if you are going to have a career in music," she said.

"I'm sure that's what I will end up doing," Wright said. "It's not necessarily my dream. If I could be a concert pianist, I'd have that, but the chances of that happening . . ."

"I think the reason I wasn't nervous was because I wasn't expecting at all that I had a shot.

— Roger Wright, Division II piano winner

Warm weather on tap for Midland

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high near 70 and light winds early becoming southwest to 10 to 20 mph and gusty by afternoon, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be clear with a low in the mid-30s.

Sunday is expected to be mostly sunny with a high near 70.

After an overnight low of 40, Friday's high was 63 compared with the record high for that date of 80 in 1988. The record low for today's date was 10 in 1972.

STATE

A cold front passed through Texas on Friday, dropping temperatures slightly, but conditions were still springlike across the state.

Late Friday afternoon, the cold front was just off the Texas coast. Winds across most of the state were blowing out of the north to northwest at 20 to 30 mph.

Temperatures were mild to warm during the afternoon with readings ranging from 53 degrees at Amarillo to 81 degrees at McAllen. Temperatures were as high as 87 degrees in McAllen shortly before the cold front passed through the area.

The National Weather Service said no great changes from that are expected for Saturday.

Strong northwesterly winds continued across North Texas for most of Friday afternoon. A strong surface low in the eastern United States in conjunction with a high pressure center sliding down the Midwest continued to funnel winds into North Texas at speeds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 35 mph.

The wind made temperatures seem relatively cool. Temperatures in North Texas and East Texas ranged from 58 at Greenville to 66 at Lufkin.

NATION

A winter storm strengthened in the Midwest on Friday with several inches of snow in Missouri, Indiana and Illinois and threatened more as it headed east.

Winter storm warnings and heavy snow warnings were in effect through Saturday from the Ohio Valley into the central Appalachians and the mid-Atlantic region.

By mid-afternoon Friday, 1 to 3 inches of snow had accumulated in parts of central Illinois, south-central Indiana and eastern Missouri.

As much as a foot of snow was possible in parts of Ohio and West Virginia, and the National Weather Service forecast up to 16 inches in the western Pennsylvania mountains and 6 inches in New York City.

Snow also fell Friday around the northern Plains and Great Lakes as a cold front swept south from Canada. Snow flurries combined with high wind in parts of North Dakota cut cut visibility to near zero in some places.

Winds gusted to almost 50 mph from the Red River Valley on the Minnesota-North Dakota state line into eastern Iowa and Nebraska.

High pressure dominating most of the West continued to produce hot weather from southern California across the Southwest and into the Rockies.

Friday afternoon's high temperature for the Lower 48 states was 92 at Torrance, Calif.

A cold front across the Southeast produced a threat of rain showers and thunderstorms, with a possibility of severe weather in Georgia, Florida and the Carolinas.

Elsewhere, rain persisted in the Pacific Northwest.

JUMPS: January unemployment hits 5.7 percent

Construction, service sectors push Texas jobless rate down

DALLAS (AP) — Growth in construction and service companies created more jobs in Texas, where the unemployment rate dipped slightly last month to 5.8 percent, the Labor Department said Friday.

With the drop, Texas' jobless rate edged closer to the November figure of 5.5 percent, the smallest in almost four years and 1994's low point.

"What we see in Texas is a very strong economy, with strong nonagricultural growth," said Bill Luker, regional economist for the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics in Dallas.

State unemployment has generally been on a downward trend since March 1994's 7.3 percent. It stood at 6 percent in December and at 6.1 percent a year ago last month.

Labor economists said the nationwide jobless rate jumped in January to 5.7 percent, its highest level in three months. December's rate was 5.4 percent.

In Texas, 545,000 residents were unemployed last month, compared with 569,000 in December.

"What we are saying is that unemployment in Texas has been relatively stable for the past few months," said Luker. "The month-to-month changes can be volatile, so we try to smooth out these changes by looking at several months at a time."

Almost 28,000 new jobs have been created each month in Texas from January to August, economists said.

"Then, in December, we recorded an increase of about 32,000 in total employment," Luker said. "That is a return, at least for one month, to the employment growth levels we had during the first, second, and third quarters of 1994."

He said another encouraging trend is the return of service job growth in the state.

"Also, we have no indication that higher interest rates are having any impact on the economy," he said. "Construction is showing no signs of slowing down."

Nine out of 10 jobs created in goods-producing jobs over the period were in construction, said Luker.

by 0.2 percent.

The number of unemployed workers rose by 343,000 in January, to 7.5 million.

Many analysts on Wall Street saw the employment report as a sign of an emerging slowdown. As a result, fears of further interest rate increases eased and both stocks and bonds were posted strong gains.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 57.87 to 3,928.64 on the higher unemployment report, posting the biggest one-day gain since Sept. 15. The blue chip index rose as much as 74 points earlier in the session before relinquishing some of its gains in the last hour of trading.

Warning against reading too much into a single month's report, Labor Secretary Robert Reich contended, "The American jobs machine continues to hum, despite a one-month uptick in the unemployment rate. The trend of solid, stable job growth continues."

While many economists also saw continued strength in the report, they acknowledged that economic growth may be slowing.

"We've gotten to the point in the expansion where we are starting to get mixed signals," said Chris Varvares of Laurence H. Meyer & Associates, a St. Louis economic forecasting firm. "Today's (report) is a good example ... and the fact that it is mixed is a sign of a slowdown," he contended.

There was no sign of a slowdown in the manufacturing sector, however.

Factory payrolls jumped by 39,000 jobs in January, even more than the 35,000 in December. And although the workweek for manufacturing workers was unchanged at a historically high 42.2 hours, factory overtime edged up 0.1 hour to a record 4.9 hours.

Overall, the average workweek lengthened by 0.3 hour in January to a seasonally adjusted 34.9 hours.

Average hourly earnings rose 7 cents in January after inching up 2 cents in December. Last month's jump was the largest since October when it shot up 8 cents.

Another government report Friday also hinted at further growth in the manufacturing sector.

The Commerce Department said orders to U.S. factories rose 1.7 percent in December and helped drive up orders for the year 10.2 percent — the biggest annual increase in 15 years.

Orders are a key barometer of manufacturing industry plans. An increase often leads to more production and jobs to meet demand.

Relatively mild temperatures in much of the nation resulted in the addition of 27,000 new jobs in the construction industry.

Vance. Clinton himself and his wife Hillary started the fund with $1,000 each, and Tipper Gore, wife of Vice President Al Gore, gave a like amount.

Business figures also dotted the list: Lew Wasserman, chairman of entertainment giant MCA, donated $1,000, as did hair-care magnate Vidal Sassoon. And Arthur Coia, president of the Laborers International Union, gave $1,000.

At least two dozen Washington lobbyists gave to the fund. The donor list showed a $1,000 donation from lobbyist Michael Berman, president of the Duberstein Group, and $500 from associate Steve Champlin; $1,000 each from John Orlando and William Cable of Timmons & Co.; and gifts totaling $4,200 from people connected with public relations firm Hill & Knowlton, where former Clinton legislative chief Howard Paster is chairman and CEO.

But many of the donations appeared to be from people like Cathy Henrie of Pettisville, Ohio, a babysitter who said she saw Clinton ask for help on television last summer and sent in $300.

"I think he's honest and deeply religious, and a lot of his problem is because he's been falsely accused," she said. "It makes me mad to see the Republicans telling all these lies about him."

met with the Interstate 35 Corridor Coalition at the Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport.

"As a result, we feel strongly we will receive their endorsement at their next regularly scheduled meeting on Feb. 17," Perry said.

Since last summer, MOTRAN has been working "diligently" with the governor's office of the state of Chihuahua, Mexico, to develop the corridor. The Mexican government strongly supports the plan, MOTRAN officials said.

The corridor would run west from Dallas/Fort Worth along Interstate 20, turn south on the proposed I-27 extension between Midland and Odessa, west on I-10, then south on Highway 67 to the border city of Presidio. Highway 67 is already scheduled to become a four-lane highway.

The Mexican side of the corridor would run from Ojinaga southwest on Federal Highway 16 to the city of Chihuahua, then on a proposed toll-road or alternative to Topolobampo. Mexican officials have suggested making improvements on Highway 16 and building a new roadway to link Chihuahua with the Pacific coast, MOTRAN officials said.

MOTRAN views the project as long-term — probably 20 years — while Mexico has planned completion of its portion in five to 10 years, local officials said.

MOTRAN, with the support of the Chihuahua governor's office and the I-35 group, plans to present the concept of La Entrada al Pacifico — or the Entrance to the Pacific — to the Texas Department of Transportation (DOT) Commission on March 30.

Local officials think the Texas DOT will look favorably on MOTRAN's proposed I-27 route in light of the corridor idea.

"They want to build roads that will augment economic development," Odessa Mayor Lorraine Perryman said. "And this broadens it to economic development across the state."

The other major contenders for the proposed I-27 extension are: Lubbock to Lamesa to Big Spring to San Angelo to I-10 at Junction; and Lubbock to near Synder to Sweetwater to Abilene to I-10 at Junction or Comfort.

SEMINAR: Annual conference continues today

(From 1A)

Some of Ms. Callahan's specific suggestions included:

■ Raise the quality of general education — because gifted students spend much of their time outside of specialized programs — and provide new challenges in programs designated for gifted students.

■ Become more sensitive to the needs of gifted youngsters. Create programs in response to needs and

■ Look at how students are assessed to make those things become important to the student.

The conference, titled "Vision 3: Face of the Future," will continue today at the Region 18 Educational Service Center. The gathering is aimed at educating teachers and parents as well as raising community awareness of gifted student programs.

More than 300 teachers, administrators and parents are scheduled to attend the conference sponsored by Region 18 Gifted and Talented Cooperative and the Midland and Ector County school districts.

In addition to Ms. Callahan, other featured speakers today will be James Delisle, director of the teacher education program in gifted child education at Kent State University, and Jeanette Covington with the Texas Education Agency.

In Midland, gifted students take part in the Gifted Education Mid- problems rather than creating programs or finding solutions first.

■ Develop the talent potential of children in general to broaden the range of those considered gifted. Some gifted youngsters may be overlooked.

■ Cease to reward ability. Instead concentrate on rewarding achievement as an incentive to work hard and excel.

■ Teach students to perform as experts and teach things that youngsters will view as useful.

and (GEM) program. Texas public schools are required to provide comprehensive programs for gifted students in kindergarten through 12th grade.

Gifted students are those who "by virtue of exceptional potential have the ability for outstanding performance," according to Patricia Maurer, coordinator for programs for gifted students in the Midland Independent School District and principal of the Carver Center.

Midland students are recognized as gifted through a variety of factors including grades, performance in aptitude tests and recommendations by teachers and coaches, Ms. Maurer said.

Gifted student programs offer a challenge appropriate to the readiness of the students and provide motivation for the youngsters to excel, Ms. Maurer said.

"If you don't you are literally putting up road blocks in front of that child," she said.

enchilada or your burrito."

The most fattening Mexican fare are chile rellenos, which along with a serving of refried beans and rice contain 96 grams of fat, she said.

There is hope, however. Fajitas got a green light — so long as they're made with chicken or shrimp and eaten without sour cream, guacamole and cheese.

Ms. Hurley acknowledges the unpopularity of the group's studies. The National Restaurant Association has criticized them as inaccurate.

But she said the research has prompted some restaurants to change their menus to include lower-fat selections.

"We've seen Chinese restaurants overhaul their menus, Mexican restaurants have overhauled their menus, movie theaters changed overnight to a healthier type of popcorn," she said.

"I've been labeled the food cop. What I really think I am is a food detective," she said. "What I'm doing is analyzing dishes. . .t. It's up to people to decide."

So who will be the group's next target? Ms. Hurley wouldn't say, but a new study is due out next month.

In the meantime, nerves may be rattling from Chicago pizzerias to Texas barbecue joints.

News leak reveals plans to renovate Sun King's palace at Versailles

By Marilyn August
Associated Press

PARIS — More than 2 million visitors a year find Versailles to be the height of grandeur — but it's about to get even grander.

The government planned to announce this spring that a 20-year project to renovate the vast palace complex would begin. In an intrigue worthy of the royals who once lived there, details of the overhaul were leaked to news media this week and the government isn't commenting.

One detail that's not known is how much the "Greater Versailles" plan will cost, although there's clearly a lot of expensive work that can be done.

The official residence of the King of France from 1682 until 1790, Versailles was envied and imitated by many foreign rulers. It's still a sumptuous place — the part visitors see.

The main chateau and formal gardens open to the public today are just a fraction of Louis XIV's estate.

Large portions of annexes that housed the 20,000-member court and 4,000 servants have fallen into disrepair.

Stables, carriage houses, and soldier's quarters met the same fate, as did huge stretches of adjacent land, which became a shooting range.

The project includes furnishing Versailles with libraries, book shops, restaurants and research centers, as well as a university specializing in the 17th and 18th century studies.

An underground parking lot, new information booths, and informative panels in the museum itself are also on the drawing board.

A priority is giving visitors more access to Versailles' priceless collections. Some 120 galleries with 6,000 paintings, sculpture and furniture have been closed for years.

Roaming through the gardens will become more pleasant, thanks to improved pathways leading to Marie Antoinette's hamlet, the Petit and Grand Trianons and numerous groves and fountains.

Some improvements seem downright mundane. According to the newspaper Le Monde, the Grand Trianon will finally get electricity, fountains will get new plumbing and the castle a new roof at an estimated cost of $2.1 million.

An annex of the main stables, targeted for demolition, instead will be turned into a tourism office and a branch office of the International Council of Museums.

Versailles will also reclaim buildings adjacent to the chateau's west wing that have served as a hospital since 1843. They will accommodate the museum's administrative offices and provide reserve space for paintings.

The Culture Ministry was hoping to keep the project under wraps until March when the palace outside Paris is to be given administrative autonomy. It currently comes under the administration of four ministries: defense, culture, education and agriculture.

Meanwhile, the candidates in May's presidential election are busy claiming credit for the project.

Premier Edouard Balladur, the frontrunner to succeed Francois Mitterrand in May, supports the project. So does Culture Minister Jacques Toubon, an ally of Balladur's archrival, Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac.

A third candidate, Philippe de Villiers, said he fought for renovations while deputy culture minister from 1986 to 1988. "I distinctly remember having discussed it with Mitterand," he was quoted Friday as saying.

Versailles is France's second biggest tourist attraction after the Louvre art museum in Paris. About 2.4 million people come to ooh and aah the gilded chateau every year, a monument to French classicism.

Versailles wasn't always so popular with the public.

It fell into ruin following the beheading of King Louis XVI in 1793. Angry-revolutionaries burned and looted what they regarded as the symbol of royal repression.

The decline was halted by Louis-Philippe, a 19th century monarch who donated money from his personal fortune to convert the palace into a museum.

Another major turning point for the palace came after World War I with a generous gift from American philanthropist John D. Rockefeller.

Israeli, Arab talks go well; leaders leave most critical decisions for later meetings

By Anthony Shadid
Associated Press

■ Analysis

CAIRO, Egypt — The first summit to bring together Israel and its Arab peace partners offered something for everyone. But critical decisions for a lasting peace were put off for another day.

Israel got a declaration on terrorism for Israel, Egypt a nod toward its goal of a nuclear-free Middle East, and the Palestinians a pledge to speed up negotiations on their future.

But ways to curb attacks on Israelis by Islamic militants, the most serious threat to peace, weren't even discussed at Thursday's summit.

"Such meetings cannot discuss specific ways and means, but to reaffirm our stand against all kinds of violence that would undermine the peace process," Egypt's foreign minister, Amr Moussa, said after the five-hour session.

It was a polite way of saying nothing concrete was done.

In the end, the summit may well have been more symbolic than practical, marking Israel's ascent as a partner in regional politics.

Israel has long resisted multilateral meetings with its Arab neighbors. But televised images of the summit — of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin casually sitting next to Jordan's King Hussein, PLO leader Yasser Arafat and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak — provided dramatic proof of the region's fast-changing landscape.

The images were even broadcast on Syrian television, and Al-Hayat, the London-based Arabic daily distributed throughout the Middle East, displayed a photograph of the four leaders on its front page.

Rabin himself was aware of the symbolism. While praising a summit statement condemning terrorism, he said the meeting as a "peace bloc" was more important than the formal declarations.

Arafat secured a pledge to speed up the negotiations on Palestinian autonomy, considered crucial if he is to salvage his authority in the Gaza Strip and West Bank city of Jericho.

The expected fruits of the 1993 Israel-PLO peace accord — jobs and independence — have not come about, and Arafat has been unable or unwilling to crack down on Islamic extremists who use terrorism to undermine the accord even more. Their latest blow was a Jan. 22 suicide bombing that killed 21 Israelis.

Israel and the PLO will resume talks next week in Cairo, and diplomats from Egypt, Israel, Jordan and the PLO will gather in Washington on Feb. 12 to discuss everything from education to a regional nuclear-free zone.

But Arafat's key demands at the summit — an end to the closure clamped on the West Bank and Gaza last week and a halt to expanding Jewish settlements — were hardly addressed, and only then peripherally.

However, the Israeli Cabinet will consider this weekend a recommendation by its security forces to ease the closure, which cuts off thousands of Palestinians from their jobs in Israel.

As expected, Arafat's opponents were quick to condemn the summit.

Islamic Jihad, which claimed responsibility for the Jan. 22 bombing, said in Al-Hayat that the meeting was meant to shore up Rabin's sagging popularity, "which is stumbling under the strikes of the crusaders."

The four summit leaders agreed to back Egypt's proposal for a "mutually verifiable Middle East zone free of weapons of mass destruction — nuclear, chemical and biological."

Egyptian officials have been adamant that if Israel refuses to sign the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, Egypt will not renew its commitment when the treaty is renegotiated in April. Israel has stayed mum about its nuclear capability, but is believed to possess about 200 warheads.

Egypt's call has drawn support from Libya, Syria and Kuwait. But it has put Egypt at a crossroads with its American patrons, who have lobbied hard to line up support for the treaty's renewal.

The statement and the promise of future talks may offer Egypt a way to sign the Non-Proliferation Treaty while pointing to Israel's commitment to work for a nuclear-free region.

Of the four leaders, Hussein had the least to gain and the least to lose.

Proceeding smoothly with its peace with Israel and facing a relatively tame opposition, Jordan gains credibility as a regional broker. It needs little more.

Renewed hostilities between political factions disrupt Zulu homeland

ULUNDI, South Africa (AP) — Nine months ago, South Africa's transformation from white rule to a black-led democracy seemed threatened by vicious fighting between black political factions.

Led by Nelson Mandela and former President F.W. de Klerk, political leaders forged deals to end the violence and hold the nation's first all-race election last April.

But assassinations and massacres have returned to the tinderbox of black political tension: the traditional Zulu homeland where the Zulu nationalist Inkatha Freedom Party faces off against Mandela's African National Congress.

With nationwide elections for local government posts scheduled for October, the renewed conflict threatens stability in the former KwaZulu black homeland, now part of KwaZulu-Natal province.

The Human Rights Committee, an independent group that monitors political violence, said 110 people were killed in KwaZulu-Natal in January compared to 71 in December. More importantly, attacks by armed groups on homes and families have started again after virtually disappearing after the April election.

At issue is whether the ANC-led national government or the Inkatha-controlled provincial government holds ultimate power over the nation's 7 million Zulus.

In one attack, assailants set fire to an Inkatha leader's house, then gunned down three of his children and two of their friends who fled outside in panic. It was unclear if ANC rivals or Inkatha loyalists angered by the leader's conciliatory stance toward the ANC were responsible.

At issue is whether the ANC-led national government or the Inkatha-controlled provincial government holds ultimate power over the nation's 7 million Zulus.

Inkatha seeks autonomy for the traditional Zulu homeland and king, claiming that the ANC wants a centralized system. It has threatened to boycott the local elections unless it gets autonomy.

The ANC believes Inkatha leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi wants to maintain the autocratic power he built up over decades as leader of KwaZulu. It wants the central government to undermine Buthelezi's support by paying the Zulu king and local chiefs annual government stipends of up to $10,590.

Inkatha "will fight this issue right up until the election because that's the way they play politics," said Mervyn Frost, a political science professor at the University of Natal in Durban.

"It is very good political strategy," Frost said. "You get a lot of attention and it doesn't cost you any money."

Inkatha used the same tactic last year, when Buthelezi threatened to boycott the April election until a week before it took place.

Political violence that had raged for years, killing thousands, virtually ceased when Inkatha ended the boycott. The group gained widespread media attention in the final days of the campaign.

Now Buthelezi is Home Affairs minister in Mandela's government, but lately he has increased his nationalist rhetoric, calling on Zulu chiefs to save the Zulu kingdom from ANC-communist oppression.

So far, the ANC has persuaded Zulu King Goodwill Zwelithini to sever ties with Buthelezi, who used to dominate his cousin by controlling the royal family's budget.

But Buthelezi is backed by about 200 of the 300 Zulu local chiefs, who threaten to block local elections unless Inkatha's political demands are met.

The local elections are considered crucial because development projects for millions of impoverished blacks need local administrators to implement them.

"If we allow elections, we will lose our land and our people," said Inkatha-aligned chief Boy Mzimela, leader of about 100,000 people in the rural Mtunzini district. "If we have elections, we will become counselors to the mayors, and even then we will be only one of many counselors."

Zibuse Mlaba, one of the few chiefs to openly back the ANC, disagreed.

"We must move with the times," Mlaba said. "We must learn democracy and mix with other ethnic groups or we will be swept away by history."

In addition, Buthelezi wants international mediators involved in the question of how much power provinces should have in the new constitution being written by the ANC-led government.

Children ride their bicycles through a flooded street alongside the Ijssel river bank in the town of Kampen, central Netherlands, Friday.

Police prevent Dutch from returning too soon

TIEL, Netherlands (AP) — The Dutch are waiting and watching. The dikes have held and the flood waters are receding. Most homes and farms are safe. Looting hasn't been a factor. So far.

But the threat from rampaging rivers coursing down through Europe to their small nation on the edge of the North Sea was not yet over Friday.

Dropping water levels and swift currents can erode dikes just as rising levels do — especially when some of those barriers date back to the Middle Ages.

With that in mind, two questions dominated Dutch thoughts: When is it going to be safe — and when can we go home?

Reversing the largest exodus in Dutch history is likely to cause as much trouble as getting it started did last Monday.

More than 1,400 police and soldiers were being deployed Friday in the southeast to prevent 250,000 evacuees from returning too early. Earlier this week, troops had to force reluctant residents in the 400-square-mile area to leave.

The provincial governments, meanwhile, planned to decide Saturday whether to allow the evacuees back into the flood-threatened "polder" areas of Gelderland Province. Polders are regions below sea level kept dry only by dikes.

But before anyone can return, emergency workers have to finish shoring up weak and soggy dikes. Wholesale renovations are now planned in the coming months and years.

The government said Friday that the major cost of this week's river flooding would be strengthening the region's 328-mile dike system.

Construction might even start within a few months, according to Gelderland Province spokeswoman Elli Willink, who set the price tag at several hundred million dollars.

"The dikes are very wet but stable," said Willink. "But we don't know yet when people can go home."

The crisis was triggered when a combination of heavy Alpine snowfall, early melting and heavy rain flooded Germany, France and Belgium. The Maas and Waal rivers drained the flood waters into the Netherlands.

At least 30 people were killed by the storms and high waters — three of them in the Netherlands.

In Tiel, a Waal River town of 33,000 that lies in the shadow of a mammoth but weakened dike, 200 policemen were called in Friday to fend off townsfolk trying to get home before the police blockade is lifted.

Virtually all of Tiel's residents left by Thursday under threat of fines and jail.

"If the authorities hadn't told people to leave, nobody would have left," said Dirk Roodbeen of nearby Casteren.

Officials on Friday were being very cautious.

"The danger of a broken dike is still present. Then water would stream in very quickly," said Tiel Mayor Ed van Tellingen.

Peru, Ecuador reach peace agreement

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Negotiators for Peru and Ecuador agreed Friday to a cease-fire in a disputed section of remote jungle, and the United States offered to monitor its enforcement.

The deal, worked out in talks in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, required approval by the presidents of the two Andean nations.

Peru and Ecuador have been fighting for eight days over a 50-mile stretch of unmarked border in a region with gold, uranium and possibly oil deposits.

The two countries fought a 1941 war over the area 220 miles southeast of Quito and 530 miles north of Lima, the Peruvian capital, and it has been the site of frequent disputes since.

"We reached an accord that was approved by everyone," Brazilian Foreign Minister Sebastiao do Rego Barros said in Rio following talks that included representatives of Brazil, Chile, Argentina and the United States.

Details of the cease-fire agreement were not released. Barros said it had been sent to the governments of Ecuador and Peru for study.

President Clinton wrote to the presidents of both nations Thursday urging an immediate cease-fire.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said in a statement the United States "is prepared to participate in a mission to observe a cease-fire once one is in place."

South American leaders meeting in Cumana, Venezuela offered to send a fact-finding mission to the border area "to determine the real situation at hand."

"There are too many different accounts of what is happening," Colombian President Ernesto Samper said after a two-day summit with the presidents of Bolivia, Panama, Venezuela and Ecuador.

Peruvian President Alberto Fujimori met Friday with top officials to consider the cease-fire proposal. Ecuadorean President Sixto Duran-Ballen cut short his trip to Venezuela to return home.

The cease-fire announcement came after Peruvian forces advanced on Ecuadorean positions Thursday and claimed to have overrun an army outpost.

Peruvian military commander Gen. Nicolas Hermoza said 49 soldiers — 43 of them Ecuadoreans — had been killed in two days of fighting. Ecuador confirmed the clashes, but said only one Ecuadorean was wounded and one was missing. Ecuador says eight of its soldiers have died since fighting began Jan. 26.

Each country has accused the other of starting the fighting by crossing into its territory.

Peru contends the border was set in a 1942 agreement confirming the outcome of its 1941 war with Ecuador. The agreement was to be guaranteed by Argentina, the United States, Chile and Brazil.

New budget includes tax cuts, deficit reductions, Clinton says

By Martin Crutsinger
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The budget President Clinton will send Congress on Monday would abolish or consolidate hundreds of federal programs to save $144 billion over five years — targeting $81 billion to reduce the deficit and the rest for middle-class tax breaks.

The White House plans to portray the budget as a spare but fair spending plan for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. But as details of the $1.6 trillion plan were emerging Friday, it was already being attacked by Republicans and some Democrats as too little, both in terms of deficit reduction and tax cuts.

The spending blueprint that the Republican-controlled Congress finally approves will almost certainly be vastly different from Clinton's plan, given what the GOP sees as its mandate from the November elections to provide far more in tax relief and the downsizing of government.

Taking his first shot, Clinton will pledge Monday to save billions "by ending more than 130 programs altogether and to provide better service to Americans by consolidating more than 270 other programs."

For the current fiscal year, the budget projects a deficit of $192.5 billion, rising to $196.6 billion in 1996 and still hovering around $190 billion through 2005, far above the zero deficit goal of the GOP for 2002.

Some details of his budget for fiscal 1996, confirmed by administration and congressional officials:

■ The deficit savings would be gained in this way: $26 billion from significant cutbacks in the departments of Energy, Transportation and Housing and Urban Development, the Office of Personnel Management and the General Services Administration; $81 billion from extending a cap on military and other discretionary spending through the year 2000; $32 billion from cutting benefit programs, and $5 billion from lower interest payments based on the deficit savings.

■ The budget proposes abolishing the Interstate Commerce Commission, transferring some functions currently performed by the National Weather Service to private meteorologists and eliminating the role of the Army Corps of Engineers in smaller projects such as controlling beach erosion and constructing recreational harbors.

■ In a direct challenge to Republicans, Clinton proposes a major increase in one of his proudest accomplishments, the national service program Americorps. He would boost the number of participants from 20,000 to 47,000 by the end of the 1996 budget year. House Speaker Newt Gingrich has criticized this program as "coerced volunteerism."

President proposes 2-year minimum wage increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton invited skeptical Republicans on Friday to join him in raising the minimum wage. Congressional Democrats seized the issue as a way to portray GOP opponents as indifferent to struggling working people.

At a Rose Garden ceremony, Clinton proposed raising the minimum wage by 90 cents an hour over two years, from $4.25 to $5.15.

"This has always been a bipartisan issue," he said, noting that the last increase was enacted in 1990 by a Republican president — George Bush — and lawmakers of both parties in a Democratic-controlled Congress.

Labor Secretary Robert Reich said a majority of Republicans — including House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas — voted for the increase the last time.

"If you did it before, why wouldn't you do it now?" Reich asked.

But, in a sign of the difficulty the proposal will face, not one GOP legislator attended the ceremony.

House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, previously has vowed to fight the increase with "every fiber of my being."

Gingrich promised Clinton "the courtesy of having some serious hearings" but said he was "personally very skeptical of it." He said he thought it would "kill jobs, particularly ... for minority teenagers" and could widen the wage gap between the United States and Mexico.

He said Republicans would explore alternatives for helping low-wage workers such as enterprise zones offering corporations zero capital gains taxes in exchange for locating factories in poor inner city and rural areas.

In the first hour of House floor action Friday, Democrats applauded and cheered one another as they delivered a series of coordinated one-minute speeches supporting Clinton and attacking Republicans.

"Democrats finally have a defining issue," said Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M.

They contrasted Republican opposition to the wage increase with the party's plans to trim welfare rolls and cut capital-gains taxes for stock and bond investors.

"The same Republican Party which reveres family values refuses a minimum wage increase to the working mother trying to help her kids," said Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill. "The same Republicans who promised welfare reform would rather build orphanages than create a minimum wage so people can lift themselves off of the dole."

House Minority Whip David Bonior, D-Mich., seized on Gingrich's comments on the gap between U.S. and Mexican wages.

"Does the speaker and the Republican Party really believe we should tie American wages to Mexican wages, that the standard of living of American working families should be driven down to the standard of a living wage in Mexico?" he asked.

Nicole's sister begins testimony, breaks down on witness stand

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nicole Brown Simpson's sister burst into sobs on the witness stand Friday as she described how a raging O.J. Simpson threw his wife out of his house and once grabbed her crotch in a crowded bar, declaring: "This belongs to me."

Denise Brown, who has stated publicly she believes Simpson killed her sister, had just begun to recite a litany of violent and humiliating acts when she was overcome by tears, and the judge recessed court for the day.

The last thing the jurors heard before they returned to their hotel for the weekend was the sound of her sobs and her words, "It's just so hard."

Her testimony, the centerpiece of the prosecution's domestic violence accusations against Simpson, is to continue Monday.

Outside court, defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. suggested the timing of her appearance was calculated for dramatic effect.

"I saw it coming, and we kept trying to say it's not fair," Cochran said.

Brown, questioned by Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden and interrupted frequently by defense objections, told of two incidents from the 1980s — one in which Simpson grabbed his wife's crotch, and another when he hurled Ms. Simpson against a wall and threw her and others out of his mansion.

■ SIMPSON UPDATE: Call Cityline 560-2400, enter 6202.

The defense objected repeatedly to Brown's injecting her opinions with such remarks as "he loved the attention" and "he has a big ego." The jurors were told to disregard such comments.

During a break in questioning, Simpson looked across the room at Brown and shook his head with a disgusted look. He appeared to try to catch her eye several times, but she stared straight ahead.

The 37-year-old Brown, who bears a striking resemblance to her younger sister, has become a spokeswoman for the family, telling her story on talk shows long before she testified.

She wore black on the witness stand, with a large cross around her neck and golden angel pins and earrings. The family has adopted angel jewelry as a symbol of Ms. Simpson.

She bit her lip and shifted in her chair as she testified.

Darden tried to start his narrative of the Simpsons' relationship with instances of abuse dating to 1977, when Simpson, still married to his first wife, invited Nicole, her sisters and some friends to see him play football for the Buffalo Bills in New York.

Brown said Simpson got upset at a post-game party and "started screaming at Nicole." The judge stopped the account, ruling it too remote in time to be relevant.

Instead, the story jumped ahead to 1985, when the Simpsons were married, and on to the late 1980s, when Brown recalled a gathering at a restaurant and bar with Simpson, his wife and assorted friends. The restaurant was crowded, and Simpson was instantly recognized and treated to drinks by admirers.

"We were all drinking and goofing around and being loud and dancing," Brown said. "At one point, O.J. grabbed Nicole's crotch and said, 'This is where babies come from and this belongs to me.'"

She said Ms. Simpson seemed used to such treatment.

Denise Brown's testimony, the centerpiece of the prosecution's domestic violence accusations against Simpson, is to continue Monday.

"I thought it was humiliating," Brown said.

Another time, she said, she and her boyfriend dined with the Simpsons at a Mexican restaurant and ended up at Simpson's estate, where they were drinking at his bar.

"I told him he took Nicole for granted, and he blew up," Brown said.

"He started yelling — 'Me? I don't take her for granted. I do everything for her. I give her everything,'" Brown said.

"And then a whole fight broke out. And pictures started flying off the walls. Clothes started flying. He ran upstairs, got clothes — started flying down the stairs, and um, grabbed Nicole, told her to get out of his house, wanted us all out of his house, picked her up, threw her against a wall," Brown said.

At that point, she choked out the rest of her description through tears: Simpson "picked (Nicole) up, threw her out of the house, she ended up on her — she ended up falling, she ended up on her elbows and on her butt. Then he threw Ed McCabe out. We were all sitting there screaming and crying and he grabbed me and threw me out of the house."

Jurors' were riveted by the testimony, and some looked over at Simpson as the witness spoke. They watched as Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark placed an arm around Brown and escorted her from the witness stand.

Simpson is charged in the June 12 slashing murders of Ms. Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. Prosecutors are seeking to show he was an obsessed, jealous man who abused his wife during their marriage, stalked her after they split and killed her in a rage.

Earlier Friday, two of Ms. Simpson's former next-door neighbors said that Simpson once parked around the corner from her house late at night and stood outside, seemingly trying to peer into the window. They called the police.

"I didn't recognize him. I said to myself, what is a man of this description doing outside at this time?" Carl Colby said of his 911 call in April 1992, months after Ms. Simpson had moved out on her husband.

But moments after Colby called police, he got a closer look and realized it was Simpson, who frequently visited his children at his wife's house.

"I was embarrassed that I'd called 911 because I didn't feel Mr. Simpson was a threat to me or anyone else in the neighborhood," Colby said.

Colby said that Simpson "seemed to be hesitant and to be attempting to perhaps observe something that may have been occurring inside the house." But he said Simpson never stepped onto the property.

Discovery's jet leak minor, NASA says

By Marcia Dunn
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Icy propellant trickled from a leaking jet aboard Discovery on Friday as the shuttle chased a Russian space station around Earth for a historic rendezvous early next week.

Mission Control assured the five Americans and one Russian aboard Discovery that the leak was minor and, if it did not worsen, would have no impact on Monday's close encounter between the shuttle and the orbiting Mir station.

If the leakage increases, the crew will have to go to the extreme measure of shutting off all three jets in that section. Discovery still would rendezvous with Mir, but would have to stay at least 1,000 feet away instead of coming within 35 feet.

"We're hopeful that the leak will resolve itself and stop," Mission Control told the astronauts as they wrapped up their first workday in space. "Right now, it does not affect your rendezvous."

The steering jet failed and began leaking nitrogen tetroxide shortly after Discovery reached orbit early Friday.

Commander James Wetherbee and pilot Eileen Collins, the first woman to pilot a U.S. spaceship, turned the seeping jet toward the sun to melt any frozen fuel that might be preventing the thruster valve from closing. This has always stopped leaks before.

After several hours, Wetherbee still could see propellant scattering in all directions.

"As we look at the darkness of space, you can see the snow coming out of the aft end, that continues to come like a very, very small leak," he said.

The jet was losing 2 pounds to 3 pounds of propellant per hour, considered a manageable rate of seepage, NASA said. It posed no safety hazard to the shuttle or crew.

Discovery's crew was instructed to keep the leaking jet above 40 degrees Fahrenheit. The temperature of the thruster was in the high 50s Friday afternoon.

The leaking thruster is one of two that failed. They are among 38 large steering jets on Discovery.

Daughter dies as she scatters mother's ashes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The daughter of a San Diego Chargers coach was swept to her death by a powerful wave as she and her brother stood on the rocky Mendocino coastline to scatter the ashes of their mother, who had killed herself last month.

Coast Guard rescuers found the body of 32-year-old Debbie Menta Friday morning, floating just off the razor-sharp rocks jutting out from the coast. Menta's father is Chargers' quarterback coach Dwain Painter.

Painter's 23-year-old son, Doug, was battered and gashed trying to rescue his sister, but pulled himself to safety and was in stable condition Friday. Hospital officials said he was likely to be released Saturday.

The two were scattering the ashes of their mother, Diane Painter, who committed suicide hours after San Diego won the American Football Conference championship Jan. 15.

Friends said Mrs. Painter, who was divorced from her husband, was upset she would not be going to the Super Bowl with him. She started her car in the garage of their home in Bellevue, Pa., and died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

"It's just a series of family tragedies," said Leo Menta, father of Menta's husband, Mark, who lives in the San Francisco suburb of Foster City. The couple have an 18-month-old son, Taylor. He said Dwain Painter was on his way to Mendocino to be with his son.

"You can imagine the pain he is going through," said Chargers spokesman Bill Johnston.

The brother and sister were scattering the ashes at the site because Mrs. Painter had often visited Mendocino with her daughter.

"It's one of the favorite spots for the mother and her," Leo Menta said. "When the mother came out they always went up together."

On Thursday, Doug Painter was found by artist Joy Verner staggering naked along the Mendocino Headlands about 120 miles north of San Francisco, "bloody from top to bottom," she said.

Doug Painter told authorities he and his sister had stood on a high rock above the ocean in the late afternoon Thursday to scatter the ashes of their mother.

The area isn't dangerous in mild weather, but on Thursday it was pounded by 10 foot to 15 foot waves that were funneled through rocks and in some spots built to 25 feet, said Mendocino firefighter Ed O'Brien.

Police ban on unwelcome shoppers brings racism charges

By A.J. Hostetler
Associated Press

UNION POINT, Ga. — Merchants and police figured they could prevent shoplifting by banning 21 likely suspects — all of them black — from their stores.

The police chief says race has nothing to do with it. But the Justice Department has been asked to look into the matter and a lawsuit seeks to overturn the ban.

"They're branding all young black people as criminals in Union Point," Samuel Atkins, the lawyer representing some of the banned shoppers, said Friday.

City officials in this town about 80 miles east of Atlanta wouldn't answer reporters' questions Friday.

One banned shopper was eager to tell his side of the story.

"I work for a living. I don't have to steal," said Reginald Howard, 31, of nearby Woodville.

Howard said he works as a carpenter and has never been arrested, and was shocked to learn that his name had been posted at Union Point businesses as an unwelcome shopper.

Howard and others who gathered Friday at the Jack of Trades game room and pool hall said young blacks have felt harassed by police. They said they've been accused of loitering but actually have little to do except talk on street corners in a town where the game room is the only entertainment.

Dexter Jackson, a black man who owns the Jack of Trades, said he was approached about the ban but told the police chief he would exclude only people who had stolen from his game room.

"If I banned everybody on that list, I'd be out of business," he said.

He said the list has left young blacks upset. "If something's not done, it's going to blow up," he said.

Union Point's business district lies mostly along two parallel streets. Logging trucks roar through regularly. A point of pride is a park and fountain behind City Hall.

The biggest employer is the Chipman Union Corp., a hosiery plant in operation since 1884. The 1990 Census counted 995 white residents and 757 blacks.

By Friday, lists of the unwelcome shoppers were not visible in stores. But there was no indication that the ban, which took effect Dec. 7, had been revoked.

Rep. Cynthia McKinney, a black Democrat whose district includes Union Point, issued a statement saying she had asked the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division to investigate because "we might have a classic case of segregation-era discrimination on our hands."

Ozell Sutton, director of the Justice Department's Community Relations Service in Atlanta, said a representative was sent to town Friday. He would not disclose details.

Valencia Randolph, who is black, said she disagreed with the ban but supports a merchant's right to expel shoppers "as long as they're disobeying the rules."

Mayor Ben Stewart told The Herald Journal, a weekly newspaper in Greensboro, that he initiated the ban because of a rising crime rate, especially among juveniles. He wouldn't comment on Friday.

KGEE on top, but country slides

■ For the 3rd-straight rating period, KGEE retains its No. 1 spot, but country loses a 10 percent of its overall audience.

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff Writer

For the third consecutive ratings period, KGEE-100 (99.9 FM) has held onto the top spot in the local radio market, according to figures released this week by The Arbitron Company, New York.

KGEE's audience share measured in at 13.3, four percentage points in front of second-place KNFM (92.3), which logged 9.3 percent of the local listeners.

Although the top two stations in the market are country, the musical format's hold slipped dramatically and has, in fact, fallen for the fourth consecutive book.

The three local country stations , KGEE, KNFM and KCRS-FM,combined to account for 24.3 percent of the local radio audience, down almost a full 10 percentage points from the Spring 1994 rating book.

The fall ratings book measured the listening habits of persons 12 and older from Sept. 22-Dec. 24, 1994.

The combined FM country share by the three stations was 33.1 percent in the Spring 1994 book; 33.6 in the Fall of 1993 ratings period, and 33.7 in the Spring of 1993. In the Fall of 1992, several months after the latest country music surge began, the three stations combined to account for a whopping 34.2 percent share of the local audience.

Speculation by radio insiders in the Permian Basin is that four stations, KODM, KCDQ, KIOL and KCHX were the primary beneficiaries of the recessed numbers at the country stations.

Adult contemporary station KODM (97.9 FM) ,a prominent local player in the radio wars during the 1980s, gained over two percent of the listening audience and finished in the No. 3 slot; KCHX (106.7 FM) bounced back from lackluster spring 1994 numbers to finish with in third place with nine percent of the local audience. KCDQ logged in with a six share and in the No. 6 spot, a significant rise for the classic rock station. And KIOL (100.3 FM) improved two percentage points to finish with a 3.7 share and in 11th place.

Combined, the four stations upped the local contemporary and classic market listenerships by 9.9 percent.

KGEE's audience share of 13.3 was its lowest share since before it wrested the top spot in the local market in the Spring of 1993.

Smash sit-com celebrates its 100th episode

By Frazier Moore
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — After you blow your nose, do you look down at your handkerchief? And is it just a stolen glance, or do you consider the scene at some length? In other words: Are you a glancer or a dweller?

This isn't an issue actually raised on "Seinfeld" (at least, I don't think so). But a hundred others like it have been pondered the past five years on the sitcom, devoted to the rigorous probing of the meaningless.

In an effort to bring order to a chaotic world, life on "Seinfeld" is organized into a series of impromptu principles ("A chef who doesn't wash is like a cop who steals — it's a cry for help").

Such miniaturist mania has caught on, but big. Indeed, the sitcom that proudly professes to be "about nothing" last week bulled itself into first place in the season-to-date rankings, tied with — holy Toledo! — the powerhouse "Home Improvement."

"Seinfeld" observed its first 100 episodes with a one-hour retrospective Thursday. If you're a fan, you knew just what to expect. Indeed, you can probably even

Seinfeld shrugs off show's naysayers

By Ray Richmond
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Jerry Seinfeld has heard the rumblings about how "Seinfeld" just doesn't have it anymore, that its milieu of nothingness has finally flown back into the show's face and caused it to start slipping.

His respectful reply: horse pucky.

"It's normal for people to get used to a show, and I think that's what has happened to us," said Seinfeld, 40, in a telephone chat last week.

"That is unfortunately the nature of television or anything people have a lot of. I know in my heart that we are every bit as funny as we have always been. There are episodes from this season that I'd put up against anything we've ever done. We have not started to dip, believe me. And we'll be gone before we do."

Midland setting for spy novel

■ Former California tennis pro Al Benson chooses Midland as "middle-America" setting of book about Kuwait.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Before and after Desert Storm rumors persisted that the U.S. knew well in advance that Iraq was going to invade Kuwait and that the Bush administration has given the go-ahead wink.

Now a new novel, in which a geologist couple from Midland are the central characters, explores that scenario.

Vortex of Fear is written by Al Benson, a former California tennis pro, who says he thought about having the main characters reside in Bakersfield, California or Midland, but decided on Midland, because it was Middle America and offered the opportunity to add Texas-style to the characters.

The main characters, George Donovan, a laid off geologist, and his wife Harriet Donovan, are in the oil business in Midland and get caught up in the international intrigue of the Kuwait invasion, when a friend in New Orleans offers him a job in Mexico.

In Mexico the plot thickens, when George Donovan is offered another job — in Kuwait. In short time a Mr. Potter, a professional fixer and the CIA, enter the picture and the Donovan's find themselves fighting not only for their lives but for their moral convictions as well.

Action jumps from Midland to New Orleans, Mexico, Kuwait, Crete, Cuba and Europe and the plot unfolds. Even the assisination of JFK becomes entwined in the whole affair of the amateur spy couple from Midland, who are grandparents and worry about the family oil business between action-packed thrill scenes.

Benson says he talked to Bruce Partain at the Midland Chamber of Commerce to get much of the background for the novel, and doesn't discount the notion that the spy characters from Midland may make another novel appearance or end up in a movie.

He notes that Tommy Lee Jones might make a ideal choice for a movie lead since he has a Midland connection. He said about 10 percent of the action takes place in Midland.

'We Are the World' 10 years later

Ten years after it was first recorded, it remains a powerful, stirring song. Artists who took part in the benefit project were told to "check their egos at the door." They did so. And the result was an unprecedented relief effort that would eventually net almost $60.5 million in food and supplies to the starving people of Africa.

Patterson

Ken Kragen and Harry Belafonte, the brains behind "We Are the World," organized what quite possibly was the greatest assemblage of musical talent ever on the stage.

It is interesting to look back on the event a decade later, thanks to a documentary-style special this month on The Disney Channel, and consider what has become of the talent gathered on that stage.

Most of the news is good. The artists brought in for the recording, as evidenced by where most are today, remain big-name, talented vocalists. Most who took part were enjoying the primes of their careers. Both Kenny Loggins and Steve Perry, for instance, had been around the music industry for years but were in the midst of burgeoning solo careers.

But first, the bad news: Three of the biggest names involved in the project were Michael Jackson, Lionel Richie and Kenny Rogers. We all know what has become of The Gloved One; Richie and Rogers have had instances of marital discord splashed about on supermarket tabloids and on the highly-respected tabloid TV shows.

LaToya Jackson was at the taping, and she is, to say the least, not just a real big influence in the world of music show-biz.

Dionne Warwick had a line in the song. She is now a guru at the Psychic Friends Network .

Some of the stars have simply, yet inexplicably, fizzled out. Darryl Hall, along with partner John Oates are but a memory of the '80s, which is a tad surprising. The "blue-eyed" soul singers surrounded themselves with highly respected studio players, including bassist Norton Buffalo and guitarist G.E. Smith.

Al Jarreau has all but vanished; a shame since his vocal abilities are downright astonishing.

Perhaps the biggest career waste among those at the recording is the virtual disappearance of Cyndi Lauper.

Both Lauper and Madonna emerged on the musical landscape at almost the same instant and I recall boasting all-knowingly to someone, "Cyndi Lauper will be around for years; Madonna is a flash-in-the-pan." What a know-it-all I used to be. In any event, Lauper, who was almost the very definition of "overnight success" with her "Girls Just Want to Have Fun" is just gone. Poof. She had probably the most unique female singing voice of the '80s, she recorded more than decent material and she has one of the most emotional bits in the "We Are the World" video. Now, like Darryl Hall, she's hardly more than a memory from the decade of excess.

Please see PATTERSON/2B

PATTERSON: Other projects can thank USA for Africa

(From 1B)

Others in the video have seen their success go consistently downhill, but remain on the music scene. Loggins, Perry, Huey Lewis, Billy Joel and Bruce Springsteen will likely never again achieve the success they enjoyed in the '80s, but they will likely all be around recording something for years.

Bette Midler and Dan Aykroyd were part of the project and they have gone on to decent film careers.

Then there are those involved in the project who were major musical forces long before USA for Africa, and who will remain significant parts of our musical heritage. Stevie Wonder, an incredible talent; Smokey Robinson, who helped shape Motown; Ray Charles, Bob Dylan, Willie Nelson, Waylon Jennings and Paul Simon, who, with his entrance into the world music scene, has enjoyed a musical career that has gone through at least three successful and creative phases.

There have been other relief efforts emerge since "We Are The World." With the exception of Willie Nelson's Farm Aid, which benefits the American farmer, and Comic Relief, whose proceeds go to benefit the homeless, there have been no other group relief efforts to enjoy as much success as USA For Africa.

The project made a difference., Not only to the hungry in Ethiopia, but to farmers in America and homeless across the country.

Big name projects such as these owe at least some of their success to Kragens and "We Are the World."

Jimmy Patterson writers about radio, television and music for the Reporter-Telegram.

JERRY: Creating show 'tremendous work, pressure'

(From 1B)

when you set the kind of spectacularly high standard that "Seinfeld" has achieved.

"Seinfeld" fans have come to learn during the show's six seasons on NBC that this is a show often "about nothing" — with plot lines so minimalist they are often nonexistent.

"We've really managed to have an awful lot of success for having so little in the way of conventional comedy," Seinfeld said. "But whatever it is we do, it's still working. Audiences don't laugh on reputation. It's an involuntary response.

"So I suppose what I'm trying to tell you is, people really have no choice. They must laugh."

It's easy to forget now, but "Seinfeld" started out life as a single-episode summer afterthought called "The Seinfeld Chronicles" back in July '89. It then came back the following summer for a longer run, then in January '91 for yet another trial.

The show teetered on the edge of cancellation until 1992, when NBC finally moved it into the post-"Cheers" time slot on Thursdays, where it instantly zoomed up the ratings charts and became something of an "overnight" sensation.

"Seinfeld" has been a top five show ever since and actually has been generating its best ratings ever during the past few weeks, which Seinfeld understands "isn't supposed to happen."

Of course, everything about "Seinfeld" wasn't really supposed to happen. A show about four quirky, single New York City friends that made light of their unique perspectives on life and love in the '90s sounded on paper to be anything but a smash-hot formula.

But Seinfeld and co-creator/producer/collaborator Larry David knew that if they made the show their way, it would somehow click.

"Castle Rock (the show's production company) deserves the credit for this show sticking around even more than NBC," Seinfeld said. "They footed the bill. They ran interference to prevent people from meddling with us."

However, even Seinfeld admits today, "The success we've had with this is beyond anything I ever imagined I could do. If I stopped and thought about it, I'm sure it would overwhelm me. That's why I never do.

"Every once in a while, I'll see a ladder on the set that says 'Seinfeld' on it, and I think that's just amazing. We have this stencil that spray-paints 'Seinfeld' onto everything we own — trucks, ladders, garbage cans, cameras. It's weird to see that Seinfeld isn't my name anymore. It's a brand."

And while Seinfeld the man continues to revel in the "unbelievable creative position" where he finds himself — which he calls "the stuff of dreams" — his work on "Seinfeld" the show keeps him working pretty much nonstop in a pressure cooker.

"You start out with an idea, and you have an idea, and then the idea has you," he said of the show's unique format.

"It's a tremendous amount of work, and the pressure never really leaves. Just because the audience loves you doesn't make comedy any easier. You never feel like you've got it wired. Being famous only makes it more embarrassing when you stumble."

Seinfeld admits to having "no free time," which is why you don't see him doing feature films during the show's brief hiatus period. He's simply too drained from having such an active hand in every aspect of the show's production.

"I won't want to live like this for the rest of my life," Seinfeld said. "It's an exhausting show to do. But if people say I'm a workaholic, I just kind of laugh."

Seinfeld also seems to understand that "Seinfeld" is probably the best thing he will ever do, no matter how many movies he stars in once this thing is over.

"I'm sure Jackie Gleason never thought that 'The Honeymooners' was going to be it for him, but it really was," he said. "I think about that a lot. But I don't worry about it, because I feel like the glow of this show is going to stay with me for quite a while after it's over."

MASTERS: Stand-ups downfall of each show

sum it up in Seinfeld Code, such as: mulva; nip; puffy shirt; pick; and, of course, master of your domain. If you don't know what these mean (and especially if you do), watch tonight.

Otherwise, let the following suffice:

"Seinfeld" is about Jerry Seinfeld, a standup comic (played by standup comic Jerry Seinfeld), along with neurotic George (Jason Alexander), bizarre Kramer (Michael Richards), and Jerry's adorable though high-strung ex-girlfriend, Elaine (Julia Louis-Dreyfus). More co-dependents than pals, they all live in Manhattan, where they spin their wheels in existential potholes.

Like every other sitcom, "Seinfeld" is about stumbling into a situation, then stumbling back out. Doing, then undoing.

But what makes it different from and better than most sitcoms is the studied triviality of the dilemmas.

Jerry gets a label-maker from a former boyfriend of Elaine, who indignantly wonders if it's the same label-maker that she gave him. Exhaustively, Jerry and Elaine explore what all this means: Is the label-maker a recycled gift? Or did the boyfriend like it so much he bought another one for Jerry?

"What are you gonna do about it?" Jerry asks Elaine.

Why do they have to do anything at all? Why? Because they just can't help themselves. On "Seinfeld," it's nothing ventured, nothing gained.

But nothing is imperfect. While all too pleased with itself for its hipness, "Seinfeld" isn't above stooping to the lowest of sitcom schtick. Junior Mints accidently dropped into a surgical incision, or diarrhea jokes — is this Manhattan Island or Gilligan's Island?

And there's that matter of Jerry's front door. When he's at home, Jerry keeps his apartment door unlocked. Obviously, this is done to facilitate the entrance of characters, especially Kramer, who bursts in with zany, galumphing flair.

But it's a big, fat lie. No one in New York keeps their apartment door unlocked. No one. And least of all (logic argues) Jerry, so obsessive in all things, who has no fewer than five locks on his door, including a chain.

The character of Jerry is a hard one to get a finger on, anyway. He serves as straight man, with his shrill, whiny voice that passes for the voice of reason. But he's as unevolved and scattered as his buddies.

Meanwhile, his skill as a standup is open to doubt. Each episode is laced with Jerry in a nightclub doing moments from his routine. These are the least funny portions of the show.

"Tennis," Seinfeld begins in a typical observance, "is the only sport where the uniform is what you would wear under your clothes in any other sport. You're actually out there in your underwear!"

Hey, Jerry, ever heard of basketball? So your joke is neither particularly clever, nor is it grounded in truth.

But it reflects this funny show's shortcoming: Sometimes "Seinfeld" is about not just nothing, but about know-nothings.

And it doesn't seem to know it.

'Boys on the Side' enchanting

By Dolores Barclay
AP Arts Editor

There's something strangely endearing about "Boys on the Side." Perhaps it's the basic humanity woven into the movie's story, or the boundless optimism at its very heart.

Whatever the reason, Herbert Ross' film is a refreshingly funny, poignant portrait of friendship and endless possibilities. It's a movie that will enchant you from start to finish, despite its quest to cram in as many au courant issues as possible, from AIDS to spousal abuse to homosexuality.

Jane DeLuca (Whoopi Goldberg) is a second-rate singer who finds herself without a job. Her girlfriend has just dumped her, and she thinks she might as well leave New York and head for California and riper opportunities.

She answers an ad to share a ride to San Diego with a failed real-estate agent, Robin Nickerson (Mary-Louise Parker), a somewhat repressed and compulsive yuppie who is the complete opposite of Jane.

Along the way, they stop in Pittsburgh to visit Jane's friend, Holly (Drew Barrymore), an irresponsible, immature and somewhat ditzy young woman who also is battered by her boyfriend.

Jane arrives in time for a fight between the two. Robin intervenes with pragmatic but off-the-wall advice, Holly whacks the guy with a bat and the three women decide to tie him up. They steal his drug money and split.

The only problem is that the boyfriend somehow ends up dead; Holly's now a fugitive.

As they travel cross-country, their three lives intertwine, and by the time they reach Arizona, their destinies are forever changed.

Holly meets a cop (amusingly named Abe Lincoln) and falls in love, and Jane has fallen for Robin, who is fighting for her life.

Ross directs with a certain lightness, considering the weightiness of his subject matter. This is probably one of the first mainstream movies to deal with a female yuppie heterosexual who has AIDS, and Ross tackles the subject head on. He even weaves in a sex scene.

But the real surprise is the chemistry between the three actresses.

Despite age and cultural differences, the women have a wonderful and easy rapport. It might seem a stretch to imagine Goldberg being good buds with Barrymore, but the relationship works.

All three performances are solid, and Barrymore, who once again hones her skills at portraying white trash, proves herself to be emerging as a competent and engaging actress.

David Newman's soundtrack adds much to the story without distracting. Ross directed from an admirable screenplay by Don Roos, who also served as executive producer with Patricia Karlan.

"Boys on the Side" is a Warner Bros. release, produced by Arnon Milchan, Steven Reuther and Herbert Ross. It is rated R.

'Piano Lesson' excellent adaptation

By Lynn Elber
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — "The Piano Lesson" is television's version of a night at the theater with a Pulitzer Prize-winning play. Actor Charles S. Dutton hopes none of that shooes away potential viewers.

Dutton, who re-creates his stage role in the August Wilson drama, says theater buffs will see a faithful adaptation. And TV viewers unfamiliar with the play will enjoy a heartfelt good time, vows the former star of Fox's "Roc."

"I don't want the perception to be, 'This is a heavy drama; brace yourself,'" Dutton says. "This thing has music, it's entertaining as heck, it's extremely funny."

The "Hallmark Hall of Fame Presentation" airs Sunday night on CBS.

"Piano Lesson" co-stars Alfre Woodard, Carl Gordon, Lou Myers, Tommy Hollis, Rosalyn Coleman — and an elaborately carved piano that is both an heirloom and the heart of a family clash.

The piano, a longtime Charles family treasure, has been stored in the attic of Berniece Charles' (Woodard) Pittsburgh home. Then Boy Willie (Dutton) blows in with a dream: to sell the piano and buy the Mississippi land his family worked as slaves.

To Berniece, the piano is the family's heritage; to Boy Willie, it's the chance for a future.

"Piano Lesson" is the first of Wilson's plays (which also include "Fences," another Pulitzer-winner) to be filmed. The work has been "opened up" visually for film but retains the richness of Wilson's language and the energy of his characters. Dutton says.

Boy Willie is the same man he portrayed on stage — "a human cyclone," the actor says, with the energy contained a bit for the camera.

"I didn't concern myself with trying to discover him anew to fit television," Dutton says "I knew I had something solid in the (stage) portrayal and I didn't want to mess around and try to experiment.

"You can't take it back and say, 'I'll get it right at the matinee.'"

RADIO: AM news, talk stations drop

(From 1B)

KMND, the local bearer of conservative talk-show host Rush Limbaugh, dipped for the third consecutive rating period. The sister station to KNFM grabbed a 6.0 share and fell a notch from fifth to sixth. KMND peaked at No. 3 a year ago when the station finished with a 10.2 share and in third place.

KCRS-AM's first ratings period as the area's first all-news station, finished with a 1.0 share.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will find yourself wielding a lot more authority than in the recent past. Make business and career matters a top priority from now until April 15. Your finances will show big improvement this summer. Overseas travel proves well worth the cost. Reconciling with a family member helps you let go of old regrets. Give mate your full support.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: aviator Charles Lindbergh, rocker Alice Cooper, director Ida Lupino, feminist Betty Friedan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Ideas spring to mind that can be used to boost business. If concerned about changes at work, investigate going back to school. Your intensity may be too much for certain people; give them more space.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If starting a new hobby, keep a record of expenses. Contacting a long-lost friend will answer a question once and for all. Issue and accept more social invitations. Your love life gradually accelerates.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance is a source of joy. Climb down from cloud nine and deal with the real world. A candid chat with family members will help solve a financial problem. Write to someone who lives overseas.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day to visit your local library or view a special exhibit. On returning home, look for misplaced items in pants pockets and behind the furniture. If someone offers an apology, accept it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your personal magnetism is operating full force today. Acquaintances are eager to help you. Trust your hunches over cold logic. Attending a social event will add glamour to your weekend. New romance is possible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An unexpected invitation will make this a red-letter day. You feel at peace with the whole world! Be especially generous to your loved ones. Work out frequently to keep yourself in tip-top shape.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Solitude holds special appeal now. Try to forget any financial worries and enjoy what you have. Some ideas come only once in a lifetime; write them down for future use. Authorize overdue repairs.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone may imply that your romantic overtures lack finesse. Let the other party make the first move! Using your credit cards too often will leave you with sizable bills. Polish your writing or speaking skills.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Forge ahead with a bold plan. Enlightened co-workers will gladly follow your lead. When entertaining at home, choose your guests with care. Think twice about inviting someone who monopolizes every conversation. Nurture a blossoming romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If planning to purchase furniture, wait until top-quality merchandise goes on sale. A new painting or print for your living room could make a big difference. Discuss your emotional needs with loved ones.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Too much heavy-duty analysis of an intimate relationship could prove counter-productive. Get in touch with old friends or former neighbors. An out-of-town visitor brings welcome news. Roll out the red carpet.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You need a day to relax and unwind. Good luck graces your efforts when you focus on long-term goals. Your attraction to a newcomer could blow you away. Avoid doing anything indiscreet.

Bo Jackson discovers he has two left feet — in line dancing

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Bo Jackson finally met his match: line dancing.

"I learned how to line dance ... after about two hours of falling off the stage and tumbling about," Jackson said. "I'm a very hard person to teach."

Jackson, a professional football and baseball player, tripped about 15 times trying to learn the steps for the video of the country group Dallas County Line's "Honk, If You Love to Honky."

Wearing cowboy hat and boots, Jackson discovered his two left feet while filming on Thursday with Neil Diamond.

Jackson played for the Kansas City Royals baseball team and the Los Angeles Raiders in football. He is now with the California Angels.

LOS ANGELES — There are footprints, handprints, paw prints, hoof prints and nose prints in the concrete in front of Mann's Chinese Theatre. Now, thanks to Whoopi Goldberg, there are hair prints.

Whoopi leaves hair prints in concrete in front of Mann's.

Goldberg pressed a bouquet of braids cut from her own hair into wet cement during ceremonies Thursday at the Hollywood tourist mecca. She also left imprints of her hands and feet.

Goldberg won a supporting actress Oscar for "Ghost" in 1990 and earned an Academy Award nomination for "The Color Purple" in 1985. Her latest movie, "Boys on the Side," opened Friday.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Gloria Vanderbilt won a $1.79 million judgment against the estate of the lawyer who was found by a disciplinary panel to have stolen millions from her.

Vanderbilt, the railroad heiress who earned a bundle on sales of her eponymous jeans, had sued her former lawyer, Thomas Andrews, claiming he misappropriated her money.

No charges were ever filed, but Andrews was barred from practicing law in New York.

He died in 1993, three weeks before a judge ordered him to pay Vanderbilt $1.3 million.

That same year, a disciplinary panel found that Andrews and Vanderbilt's former psychiatrist had looted the socialite's bank accounts of several million dollars.

Vanderbilt won her judgment Jan. 25 after filing a claim in Florida against Andrews' estate.

SYDNEY, Australia — Marlon Brando as a mad doctor who grafts together humans and animals in bizarre experiments on a tropical island?

The Australian newspaper reported Friday that Brando is interested in playing the lead in the remake of the classic H.G. Wells story, "The Island of Dr. Moreau."

A previous movie version of the same name starred Burt Lancaster in 1977. Charles Laughton played the part in a 1933 original entitled "Island of Lost Souls."

The latest effort would reportedly be shot in the rain forest off Australia's Great Barrier Reef and produced by New Line, which brought Brando and Johnny Depp together for the upcoming "Don Juan and the Centerfold."

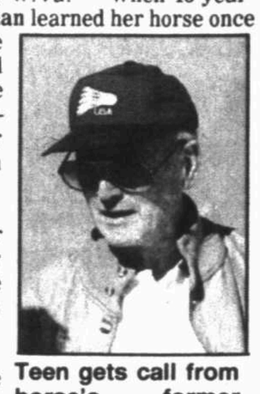
CHARLESTON, W.Va. — When 13-year-old Jennifer Shuman learned her horse once belonged to some guy named Paul Newman, she didn't have an inkling the former owner might be an Oscar-winning actor.



Teen gets call from horse's former owner — Newman.

So Jennifer wrote to him after seeing his name on her new horse's registration papers.

"Are you the salad dressing guy or just somebody with the same name?" she asked.

Three days later, he called.

"Here I am knee-deep in laundry and Paul Newman's on the phone," said her mother, Becky Shuman.

Mrs. Shuman said Jennifer spent several minutes talking with Newman on Thursday about the horse he called Top View and she calls Charlie.

Newman, who also has his own line of food products, won an Oscar in 1986 for "The Color of Money."

Jennifer had only heard of his current film, "Nobody's Fool." But she has no plans to see it. "I'm not allowed. It's rated R," she said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — It's another case of life imitating talk shows for Oprah Winfrey.

The television host defended her father against allegations from a 28-year-old student that he exposed himself and asked for oral sex in exchange for financial help.

Andree Rosen, left, and Evelyn Gould prepare a display of traditional Jewish ritual items including Sabbath candles, challah — egg bread — and a Haudalah set — kiddush cup, braided candle and spice box. The two are preparing for the Sisterhood of Temple Beth El's annual Brotherhood Dinner set for 5 p.m. Feb. 20 at 1501 N. Grandview in Odessa.

Jewish sisterhood to host commemorative dinner

Staff Report

ODESSA — The Sisterhood of Temple Beth El will hold its 28th annual dinner to commemorate Brotherhood Week Feb. 20.

The public is invited to share in the day with the Sisterhood by attending the dinner to be served from 5 to 7 p.m. at 1501 N. Grandview. Cost of the dinner is $6.50.

The menu is cabbage rolls, noodle kugel — a noodle pudding that is a potato substitute — carrot tsimmes, green beans, homemade rolls that are miniature challah and mandel bread for dessert. Take out plates are available for those who are unable to eat at the synagogue.

Tours will be given of the synagogue to explain many of the ritual items used in the home during the various holidays, as well as the religious items to be found in the sanctuary.

"Following the traditions and rituals of Judaism is an integral part of our religion," said Sisterhood member Picce (Pixie) Glast of Odessa. "Much time is spent sharing these traditions and handing them down to the next generation."

One such is the celebration of Shabbat that occurs every Friday evening by lighting the Sabbath candles to welcome the Sabbath, blessing the wine that is drunk before the meal and blessing the challah — the traditional braided egg bread eaten before the meal, Ms. Glast said.

President of the sisterhood is Andree Rosen. Evelyn Gould is in charge of ticket sales. Both are from Midland.

Tickets for the Feb. 20 dinner may be purchased from Ms. Gould, 694-1880, Ms. Glast, 1-915-362-3474 or 550-4618, or any Sisterhood member. Advance purchase is suggested.

'Firebrand' priest bids New York congregation farewell

By Karen Matthews
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Inside St. Brigid's Church on the Lower East Side, parishioners wept as "Padre Jorge" preached his farewell sermon.

Across the street in Tompkins Square Park, the site of frequent clashes between police and demonstrators, leather-jacketed anarchists said they, too, would miss the Rev. George Kuhn.

"He's been out here with us. He's gotten arrested with us," said Frank Morales, who described himself as an activist in the fight to stop gentrification.

"He has been a moral and spiritual light for this community," said Norman Siegel, executive director of the New York Civil Liberties Union. "I'm not confident that we'll ever have another one like him."

Kuhn, a Roman Catholic priest, spent his eight years at St. Brigid's feeding squatters, championing a proposed shelter for people with AIDS and generally making himself unpopular with authorities.

For a man dubbed "firebrand cleric" in a tabloid headline, he seemed mild-mannered as he celebrated his final Mass there on Jan. 15.

Wearing thick glasses and green vestments, the 56-year-old priest came down from the lectern and delivered his homily in the aisle, in Spanish, surrounded by worshipers.

He noted that it was the birthday of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., "a prophet of the Lord."

Kuhn said that King preached against "militarism, materialism and racism" and that "his message still has force today."

He said the church is not immune from racism: "The most segregated hour of the week is 11 a.m. on Sunday, because everyone goes to their own church."

This did not appear to be true at St. Brigid's, where black and Puerto Rican parishioners mingled with a sprinkling of orange-haired punks.

Most stayed after the service to kiss Kuhn goodbye.

"No queremos que se vaya," said a tearful Clelia Perez. "We don't want him to leave."

Crossing the street into Tompkins Square Park, Kuhn thanked people there for the lessons he said they had taught him.

"Without agitation, without tension, there is no growth," he said.

When Kuhn came to St. Brigid's in 1986, he already had four arrests — for anti-war and anti-nuclear protests — under his clerical collar. Once there, he was arrested several more times for crossing a police barricade to feed squatters who had taken over an abandoned school.

Someone asked Kuhn about his boss, Cardinal John O'Connor, who had turned 75 that day and offered his resignation — routine in such cases, and not immediately accepted — to the Vatican.

"Every time I've been arrested down here, he's called and said, 'Right on.'" Kuhn said.

O'Connor's spokesman, Joseph Zwilling, confirmed that "the cardinal has been very supportive of Father Kuhn and all of his priests and their causes, as long as they do not contradict church teachings."

Not everyone has been so supportive: Parks Commissioner Henry Stern said Kuhn's departure "is definitely an event to celebrate."

"The Rev. Kuhn, who is a fine man, always allied himself with the homeless and drug users and other people who were trying to take over Tompkins Square Park," Stern said. "I suspect he'll do fine work elsewhere, where there's not an urban park."

Tech drops opener

TEMPE, Ariz. — Travis Flowers' two-run triple led Arizona State's eighth-inning explosion as the Sun Devils defeated Texas Tech 6-3 Friday in the season opener for the visitors.

Flowers was 3-for-4, including the triple which scored Robbie Kent and Damon Lembi. Flowers added the inning's third point on Ricky Leon's sacrifice fly.

Texas Tech picked up its last two runs in the ninth when Sun Devil reliever Ryan Bradley allowed two singles and a double while throwing two wild pitches, but Kaipo Spenser picked up a save by retiring three in a row.

Billy Neal, his eligibility restored only a day earlier, picked up the win in his first start while allowing six hits through seven and two-thirds innings. Travis Smith (0-1) took the loss.

The teams meet again Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Playoff seeding a long shot

■ NFL commissioner Paul Taglibue says seeding playoff teams in an attempt to get a better Super Bowl matchup would be overreacting.

By Ken Peters
AP Sports Writer

HONOLULU — A Super Bowl matchup of the NFL's top two teams, the San Francisco 49ers and Dallas Cowboys? Or the San Diego Chargers and Pittsburgh Steelers playing for the NFL championship?

Not completely out of the question, but certainly not on the horizon.

In the wake of the NFC's dominance of the Super Bowl, with the 49ers' 49-26 humiliation of the Chargers the latest of 11 consecutive, mostly lopsided losses by the NFC champion, there have been some suggestions that the NFL abandon the NFC-AFC format.

One alternative would be to go to a system where the division champions and six other teams with the best records — using tie-breakers in the case of identical records — are seeded into the playoffs regardless of their conference.

NFL commissioner Paul Taglibue, in Hawaii for Sunday's Pro Bowl, said he sees no reason to tinker with the status quo, although he doesn't rule out the possibility of change at some point.

"The first thing is that we don't want to overreact," Tagliabue said. "The current overall playoff system works well. We of course will look at just about any idea, but it's premature to say that there's any postseason plan under consideration."

Pittsburgh Steelers president Dan Rooney doesn't believe a change is probable, saying, "I think it would take a lot of convincing to get any new postseason system accomplished."

Numerous obstacles would appear to stand in the way of such a change.

The biggest hurdle might be gaining the approval of the owners of AFC teams, who certainly wouldn't relish the thought of a Super Bowl without one of their teams in it.

Lady Rebs smash drought

■ Midland Lee's girls end a two-season playoff absence by clinching a postseason berth with a win over San Angelo.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

Perhaps it was appropriate that the Midland Lee girls assured themselves a playoff berth in full view of the banner that proclaims the Lady Rebels' history of fine play in District 4-5A basketball.

The Lady Rebels, by way of an anticlimactic 55-39 win over last-place San Angelo Central Friday night at the Lee gym, worked their way back into the state playoffs after a two-year drought.

"I guess we kind of knew we had to win this one because it's harder on the road," said Lee's 6-foot-2 senior post Krissy Woodard. "The last few games made us get our minds right and we just went out there and did it."

But perhaps more importantly, Lee coach Elise Kail and three-year starter Woodard got the playoff monkeys off their backs. Kail, who garnered a runner-up spot in 1992, has yet to make the playoffs since then and Woodard, who started as a sophomore during Kail's second year, has never been to the playoffs despite being considered one of the top players in the district during her entire career.

"The last two years has had a lot to do with my motivation this season,"

Texas farmer survives debut

■ Azle cattle farmer Robert Landers shoots a 75 to tie for 62nd on his first day of the PGA Senior Tour.

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — Cattle farmer Robert Landers walked to the 17th tee, his new sneakers still spotless but his first senior tour scorecard tarnished by bogeys.

Someone in the gallery shouted, "Clear the cart path, please! Players coming through!"

Landers looked back in alarm and scrambled out of the way.

That was the only time the 51-year-old Texan seemed rattled Friday by his role in an American dream come true.

Making his rookie debut in the first round of the Royal Caribbean Classic, the self-taught golfer with the homemade clubs shot a 4-over-par 75 — hardly spectacular, but remarkable given his background and the attention he has attracted.

Landers found himself tied for 62nd place, nine shots behind leader Bob Murphy.

"Just tell everybody I survived," Landers said. "It's been kind of crazy."

Until recently, Landers and his wife, Freddie, struggled to make a living on their 73-acre farm near Azle, a town of 6,000

It's official: cap is out

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Baseball owners, found to have illegally imposed a salary cap in December, scrapped the whole system Friday and removed the major obstacle blocking talks toward settling the six-month-old strike.

With President Clinton pressing for an agreement by Monday, the National Labor Relations Board unexpectedly sped up its process and told owners it would file an unfair labor practice charge against them. Owners immediately backed down and said they would restore baseball's old business rules.

"It's putting pressure to clear the decks and get a deal done," Colorado Rockies chairman Jerry McMorris said.

Earlier this week, owners made a proposal that didn't contain a salary cap. But legally, the system in place still was the one they implemented Dec.

MHS girls go for first league win

■ Midland High's girls try to duplicate their earlier defeat of Odessa High today in district play.

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

The inter-cities rivalries between Midland and Odessa hit round two on the soccer fields today as Midland High and Odessa High square off in District 5-5A action as well Midland Lee and Odessa Permian.

■ 5-5A Soccer

In Midland, the MHS girls battle OHS at Midland High while the Midland Lee boys host Odessa Permian at the Lee soccer field. In Odessa, the Lee girls go up against Permian and the MHS boys travel to OHS. All games are slated for a 2 p.m. starts.

The MHS girls, 1-3 and 0-3, have already beaten the 0-6 and 0-4 Lady Bronchos this season in a 1-0 non-district win at OHS. However, with both teams looking for a first league win, MHS coach Scott Hodkinson knows beating OHS will not be easy.

"They are the only team that has it going tougher than we do," Hodkinson said. "Looking for that first win should be motivation enough. We're going to want that first win."

The Lady Bulldogs are coming off last week's painful 2-1 loss to Permian. A goal with six minutes to play gave MHS its third consecutive loss — all against teams now in the top three slots in district.

The Lee Rebels, 4-4 on the season and 2-2 in district, are coming off a loss to San Angelo and will take on a Permian team, 4-4 and 1-2, fresh off a 3-2 win over Abilene Cooper.

The Rebels, tied for third with Abilene High, will welcome back their leading scorer Hendrik Madsen to the team. Madsen, a forward who has eight goals this year, missed Tuesday's game after receiving his third yellow card last Saturday.

The MHS boys are taking their undefeated district mark up against a 4-4 and 1-2 Permian team. The 5-1 Bulldogs, alone in first place in district at 3-0, will

Bobcats place Lee on playoff hold

SAN ANGELO — San Angelo's Bobcats put some major pressure on the Midland Lee Rebels here Friday night with a key 57-53 District 4-5A basketball victory.

Lee saw its third consecutive playoff berth placed on hold as the Rebels fell to 6-4 in the league race while San Angelo, battling the Rebs for that third playoff spot, climbed to 5-4. Lee has only Odessa Permian and Abilene Cooper left to play while San Angelo has Cooper, Permian and Midland High left on the schedule.

"We missed a layup with the game tied at 53 and then failed to block out on a free throw for them to go up by four," Lee coach Jon House said. "We had a chance to win it, but didn't finish like we have been. I still feel good about our situation. If we can beat Permian Tuesday, I think we will be in."

Micah Echeberger led San Angelo with 16 points while Frank Nunez had 15 and Bobby Townsend 14. Lee's only player in double figures was Mark Holly with 11 points. Lee was down by six points at the half and down by 10 at the end of the third period before rallying back to pull even late, but San Angelo held on to the win and its hopes for a playoff berth.

Lee will travel to Odessa Permian Tuesday in a key game.

Robinson, Rodman take 20, top Mavs

■ NBA Roundup

DALLAS — David Robinson had 20 points and Dennis Rodman got 20 rebounds to lead the San Antonio Spurs to their sixth straight victory, 114-103 over the Dallas Mavericks Friday night.

Sean Elliott, Vinny Del Negro and J.R. Reid scored 16 points each for the Spurs, who had seven double-figure scorers.

Avery Johnson contributed 12 points and 14 assists for San Antonio, which has won 21 of its last 26.

Jim Jackson's 22 points and Jamal Mashburn's 21 paced the Mavericks, who fell for the ninth time in their last 10 tries and dropped their seventh in a row at home. Tony Dumas gave Dallas a career-high 16 points off the bench.

The Mavericks had won the first two meetings between the teams, both in San Antonio, but with Robinson and Rodman dominating inside, the outmuscled Mavericks had little chance. And when the Mavericks double-teamed Robinson, he kicked the ball out to Elliott and Del Negro.

San Antonio put the game away with a 14-7 third-quarter run finished by Willie Anderson's layup for a 78-58 advantage. The Spurs closed out the third quarter with seven unanswered points.

Heat 105, Bullets 95

LANDOVER, Md. — Billy Owens scored 30 points, matching his career high, and the Miami Heat spoiled Chris Webber's return to the Washington lineup by beating the Bullets.

Matt Geiger had 21 points and 12 rebounds for Miami, which won for just the fifth time on the road. Owens also had 12 rebounds.

Webber, back after missing 19 games with a separated shoulder, had 17 points and nine rebounds in 41 minutes. Rex Chapman led the Bullets with 20 points.

Washington led 68-67 with five minutes left in the third quarter before Owens made a follow to start a 13-0 run that put the Heat ahead to stay. Owens scored four points in the run, while Glen Rice and Keith Askins had three.

Knicks 106, 76ers 86

PHILADELPHIA — Patrick Ewing had 30 points and 15 rebounds as New York held off Philadelphia.

In his 12th straight game with double-digit points and rebounds, Ewing hit 12 of 14 from the field as the Knicks won their third straight and ninth in 10 games. He also had five assists.

The game was close until the final quarter. Dana Barros, who had 16 points for the 76ers, hit a 3-pointer to bring Philadelphia to 73-72 with 11:05 left in the game.

Pacers 118, Magic 106

INDIANAPOLIS — Rik Smits had 27 points as Indiana dealt Orlando their second straight loss.

Matched against Orlando center Shaquille O'Neal, Smits came out the winner, hiting 10 of 16 from the field. O'Neal, who entered the game averaging a league-high 29.9 points, finished with 20 points on 7-for-18 shooting.

Dennis Scott came off the bench to lead Orlando with a season-high 35 as the Magic, who lost to Seattle 106-103 Thursday night, dropped back-to-back games for the first time this season.

Trail Blazers 112, Timberwolves 97

MINNEAPOLIS — Clifford Robinson scored 12 of his 22 points in the third quarter and Clyde Drexler made up for an otherwise poor game with 11 third-quarter points as Portland beat Minnesota.

The Blazers snapped their two-game losing streak and improved their record at the Target Center to 11-0.

Drexler finished with 16 points on 4-of-13 shooting and became the 36th player in NBA history and the eighth active player to top 18,000 points.

Hornets 117, Bucks 98

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Muggsy Bogues scored 23 points and Scott Burrell added 20 as Charlotte ran their winning streak to five games with a victory over Milwaukee.

The Hornets, off to their best start ever, won without a lot of offense from their big two, Larry Johnson and Alonzo Mourning. Johnson fought off double teams all night, but managed 10 points and 10 assists. Mourning was saddled with three fouls in the first half and scored 12 points off a 4-for-9 shooting night.

Sonics 121, Hawks 98

ATLANTA — Gary Payton scored 22 points and Seattle hit a season-high 13 3-point baskets as the Sonics won their team-record ninth straight on the road, defeating Atlanta.

It was the 13th victory in 15 games for the Sonics, who won in Atlanta for only the second time in their last 14 games.

Win could restart Rockets

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets started the season with a 9-game winning streak. They started the second half as streak breakers.

The Rockets are pointing to Thursday's impressive 121-101 victory over the Utah Jazz as a launch point for a return to a high spot in the playoffs after struggling the first half of the season.

"Utah and San Antonio, too, caught up with us last season," coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "This year, we've got to catch them and we've got to start right now, one step at a time."

The Rockets, trailing Utah and San Antonio in the Midwest Division, have picked up some bruises trying to defending their title.

They were embarrassed at Minnesota, among the worst teams in the NBA, on Jan. 16 and played a dreadful game in losing at Chicago on Jan. 22.

Tomjanovich expects more on this road trip, beginning Sunday at Phoenix.

"Psychologically, I think we're better now," Tomjanovich said. "We've sorted things out since the Milwaukee game (115-99 victory on Jan. 24) and I feel we're on the right track."

TCU faces Raiders after six-day layoff

■ More Sports/8C

Associated Press

Texas Christians' six-day break to prepare for a crucial three-game road trip, beginning Saturday at Texas Tech, has been an unwelcome delay for coach Billy Tubbs.

"I'd rather keep playing, although we can use the practice in a way," Tubbs said. "We have areas to improve but once we start conference play, I like to play twice a week right on through."

The Southwest Conference standings took on a new form following Wednesday's game. The Red Raiders (10-7, 4-2 in SWC games) held off Rice's late shooting for a 66-63 victory. Then Houston shocked league favorite Texas 105-93.

■ Rice at Texas, 2 p.m., FOX TV

In other games Saturday, Rice (9-8, 4-2) , whose rally fell short against the Red Raiders on Wednesday plays at humbled Texas (12-5, 4-2) and Baylor (6-12, 1-5) plays at Texas A&M (10-11, 3-3).

The Raiders headache will be TCU's Kurt Thomas, who has blossomed in Tubbs' open style offense.

"If we can hold Kurt Thomas under his average, we'll be all right," Tech's Lance Hughes said. "We really have to guard him. He's capable of scoring 40 points and getting 25 rebounds against anybody.

"I hope we can have a better showing than we did against Texas. They were the first really run and gun team we played."

Beating Rice on the road was good for the Raiders confidence.

"We hadn't seemed to get anything going on the road," Hughes said. "But we got a big lead against a good team like Rice on the road and we made the big plays at the end."

The Red Raiders are 7-0 in Municipal Coliseum this season. But that's not too comforting for coach James Dickey.

"Billy has done such a good job with their program and they are playing with a lot of confidence right now," Dickey said. "Kurt Thomas is one of the premier players in the country and we'll need to be ready to play as well as we possibly can on Saturday to win."

Rice coach Willis Wilson expects more intensity from his Owls than he saw against Texas Tech.

"Maybe we need to be a little cocky and a little bit more arrogant and start believing in ourselves as a basketball team," Wilson said.

After appearing headed for the SWC cellar with an 0-4 start in league games, the Cougars have rebounded to three straight victories.

Before playing the Longhorns on Wednesday, coach Alvin Brooks said "We've stepped it up a notch, now we've got to take the next step."

They took it on Wednesday.

"It's (Texas) a big win," Brooks said. "It puts us back in the race. Before, we were just looking for a win."

It hasn't been a good week for the Longhorns so far, especially for coach Tom Penders.

After returning home from the upset loss to Houston late Wednesday, Penders had a tooth extracted on Thursday and missed practice along with Roderick Anderson, who suffered a severely sprained right thumb against the Cougars.

Anderson hopes to play against the Owls with a protective brace on his thumb.

It's enough to make Penders wonder what will happen next.

"It looks as though Rice is peaking at the right time," Penders said. "They've really played well in conference games. I expect it to be a tough, grinded out kind of game. They always seem to give us trouble."

LEE: Woodard's 22 points pace Rebels

said Woodard, who scored a game-high 22 points to break out of a mild shooting slump. "At the beginning of the season I said I wanted to do everthing I can to get this team together and make it to the playoffs."

"It does feel good," Kail added. "It would feel better if we beat (Odessa) Permian (on Tuesday to finish 4-5A play)...She (Woodard) and I had a little one-on-one this week. She just needed a little confidence-builder. Everybody has a slump at least once during the season."

The Lady Rebels' long history of success in this district dates back to the very beginning when they won the first district championship during the 1977-78 season. Lee won the first three titles outright and was either champion or co-champion from 1980 to 1984. Since 1983, the first year in which two teams advanced to the playoffs, the Lady Rebels have seen playoff action six times and they will get another crack in two weeks after 4-5A action wraps up.

The Lady Rebels improved to 17-9 overall and 8-3 in league action and are still in third place after Abilene High's win over Permian on Friday. But, if Lee pulls off a four-game sweep of the Odessa schools with a win Tuesday over Permian, the Lady Rebels would be tied with Abilene (9-3) as the Lady Eagles wrapped up their district slate and will be idle Tuesday. San Angelo fell to 0-11 and 5-21.

Lee got the win on a 50 percent shooting performance in the first quarter, which boosted them to a 16-10 lead, and by outrebounding the smaller Lady Bobcats by a margin of 40 to 27 for the game. Woodard led the way with eight boards but it was truly a team effort as Claire Wright and Michelle Benson had six each and Jamie Rhoads and Farrah Fisher had five each.

The killing blow came during the final 2:30 of the second quarter when Kail ordered her troops into a fullcourt press for the first and only time during the game. Lee had already pushed its lead to 27-14 as it crashed the offensive boards for four consecutive offensive putbacks when the press caused two quick turnovers and the Lady Rebels converted them into four points and a 31-14 lead. The Lady Rebels converted 10 of San Angelo's 25 turnovers — 19 in the first half — into points.

In other action, the Lee sophomores defeated Central 53-31 with 15 points from Lasaundra Christian and 14 from Susan York. Lee improved to 12-9 and 4-3. The Lee junior varsity fell to Central 32-24. Andrea Neal had 10 points as the Lady Rebels fell to 9-17, 3-8.

SOCCER: Lady Rebs in crucial league contest

(From 1C)

take their high-power attack against a Permian team that defeated Abilene High 2-1 on Tuesday.

The Lee girls, 6-2 and 3-1, go up against the Lady Panthers in what may be the area's best game. Lee is in second place in district one-half game ahead of Permian and San Angelo.

"Anytime Lee and Permian match up in any sport its going to be a big game," Lee girl's soccer coach Van Gravitt said.

Lee will have a few players out of the lineup for today's game. Lee will be without sweeper Crystal Zachry, who received a red card in Tuesday's 2-1 shootout loss to San Angelo. Lee will also be without the services of forward Stephanie Smith, who is out with what appears to be torn knee cartilage. Also missing will be starting goalkeeper Jamie Calhoun who is out for two weeks with a sprained knee. Gina Callender, Calhoun's replacement, had seven saves against San Angelo.

"The injuries hurt us depth-wise," Gravitt said. "We'll start one senior. It will give us a look at what things will be like next year."

Permian suffered a set back on Tuesday as well, losing to Abilene High 3-2.

Moon wants chance to come back

HONOLULU — Quarterback Warren Moon wants to bury the hatchet with the Houston Oilers, but not in owner Bud Adams' back.

Moon revealed this week that he wants to reconcile with the Oilers and would like to have a chance to end his career in Houston after he is free of his obligation to the Minnesota Vikings.

Moon has one year left on his Minnesota contract plus an option year in 1996. If the Vikings do not exercise the option and Adams is interested, Moon could play the 1996 season with the Oilers and retire wearing Columbia blue.

"I want to stress that all of my attention is focused on doing everything I can to help the Vikings win a championship, but it would be great to finish my career there (Houston)," Moon said as he prepared for Sunday's Pro Bowl. "I think it would be the right thing to do, considering I spent 10 years of my career with the Oilers."

When he disclosed his change of heart about the Oilers this week, Moon was sitting on the beach behind the players' resort hotel on a tip of Oahu about 25 miles from Honolulu. Houston was several thousand miles away, but the Oilers were on his mind.

Moon criticized the Oilers after being traded last year, but he insists he has overcome the bitterness. But it is obvious he hurts from being forced to leave a team that was such a big part of his life.

"I'm trying to be more of a man about it," Moon said. "I'm trying to be more understanding about what happened and why it happened. They probably realize they made a mistake, and at some point, I'd like to bury the hatchet.

"When I saw what happened to them, it really let me know how valuable I was to the offense. When they got rid of me, it made me think I really wasn't that important to the team. I think they learned something, too. I was gone for the first time in 10 years, and they finally saw how valuable I was."

Because of tampering rules, general manager Floyd Reese can't comment on the possibility of Moon's ending his career with the Oilers but said: "Warren was a great player for us for 10 years, and he meant a lot to the organization. We didn't want to trade him, but (salary-cap) circumstances at the time forced us."

Moon watched the Oilers closely, attending a game in the Astrodome and watching their nationally televised games. Because he traveled to Houston often to work for the Crescent Moon Foundation, he was able to get a better view of what was happening to his former team.

"There were times when I wished I could have been there to help them," he said. "When I saw the players' and coaches' faces on the sideline, I knew exactly how they felt."

Courier gets Davis Cup team on track

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Jim Courier, relaxed but determined, got the United States Davis Cup team back on track against France.

"I went out there very calm," the 12th-ranked Courier said Friday after dominating Guy Forget in straight sets to even the first-round series 1-1.

"The biggest thing in Davis Cup, I think, is to not get too excited. ... I have a job to do out there, and if I'm calm and thinking clearly, that is when I usually do the best job."

Courier's 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 victory offset the promising start Cedric Pioline gave the French with a 7-5, 6-2, 6-4 upset of American Todd Martin.

Americans Jared Palmer and Richey Reneberg will face Forget and Oliver Delaitre in doubles on Saturday. The best-of-five series at the Bayfront Center concludes Sunday with singles matches pairing Forget against Martin and Pioline against Courier.

"It has kind of been shortened to the best of three now," said U.S. Davis Cup captain Tom Gullikson. "Obviously, the doubles is a swing point. If we win, we'll have two chances to clinch it. If we lose, then our backs will be on the wall twice."

Courier, taking advantage of an indoor carpet surface that suits his game, needed 92 minutes to finish Forget, who at No. 37 is the highest-ranked player on the French team.

He won 14 points in a row during one streak and faced only two break points — both of which he held — during the match. The left-handed Forget, meanwhile struggled with his serve and produced no backhand winners.

U.S. team member Jim Courier returns the ball to France's Guy Forget.

"Jim was just way too good," said Yannick Noah, the French Davis Cup captain. "The first two sets were just unbelievable. He didn't miss anything."

Pioline, ranked 50th, broke down Martin after a slow start and gradually took control when the favored American's confidence began to waver.

Martin is ranked 13th but is 0-4 against Pioline.

"This first set he was serving very good. I was just looking at the ball," Pioline said. "When he started to miss, I tried to attack more to make him feel his serve was going away."

Pioline broke Martin for a 6-5 advantage in the first set and the American never really recovered. The Frenchman closed out the set with an ace, then broke Martin again in two of the next three games on his way to a 3-1 lead.

Stars and Stripes take all-women America3

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Backed by a huge wind shift, Dennis Conner sailed Stars & Stripes to its fifth straight victory in the America's Cup defender trials on Friday, beating America3's all-women team by 4 minutes, 45 seconds.

The race was relatively close until the windward fifth leg, when the wind shifted to the left side of the course and Stars & Stripes shot from 40 seconds ahead to a margin of 2 minutes, 50 seconds.

■ America's Cup

"On the third beat, the wind got a little waffling, and Stars & Stripes was in a good position to take advantage of the waffles in the wind," Conner said.

Stars & Stripes continued to gain on the final spinnaker run, almost doubling its lead.

"The margin expanded, but we just basically covered the women on the way to the finish line," Conner said.

The northwesterly wind ranged from 6 to 10 knots, the first time since Tuesday that there was enough wind to race on the defenders' course. Races on Wednesday and Thursday were postponed.

Stars & Stripes also beat America3 on Tuesday, by 1:29.

America3, steered by Leslie Egnot, won the start, although both yachts had to perform 270-degree penalty turns for rules violations. Conner took the lead in a tacking duel on the first leg of the six-leg, 18.55-mile Pacific Ocean course and led by eight seconds.

STRIKE: Union appeared to be delaying at table

(From 1C)

23, a plan that would have forced teams to sharply lower their payrolls.

"What was imposed is rescinded; it is as if it had never been," union head Donald Fehr said.

Spring training is to start Feb. 16, and owners have been signing replacement players to be strikebreakers. Management lawyer Chuck O'Connor said Friday's developments wouldn't change those plans.

But most everything else in baseball was sent into limbo. Some players don't know if they'll be free agents or wind up with their old clubs in salary arbitration. Small-market teams don't know if they'll get revenue-sharing money from their large-city rivals.

Players and owners will be back at the table Saturday, with the union expected to make a counter-proposal to the luxury-tax plan owners presented on Wednesday.

Before the big events, the union had been stalling. Then the NLRB summoned owners to its office Friday afternoon and general counsel Fred Feinstein told them the agency was prepared to rule against them for declaring an impasse in talks when none existed. Feinstein also said the NLRB was contemplating seeking a court order to stop the cap.

Owners, who have lost a string of legal cases during the past two decades, capitulated on the cap and said baseball's old rules would be restored, effective Monday — coincidentally the 100th anniversary of Babe Ruth's birth.

"All of the demands that were imposed are withdrawn," NLRB spokesman Dave Parker said. "They're back to bargaining."

The NLRB's finding and the owners' retreat was a major victory for the union, which declared all along that the implementation was illegal.

When owners put the cap in place, they changed many of the major rules that had governed the game since 1976. They eliminated salary arbitration, created a new class of restricted free agents and gave themselves the right to release players at any time for any reason.

Among the 38 restricted free agents were Marquis Grissom and Ken Hill of the Montreal Expos, both of whom had worked out tentative deals with the Florida Marlins. The restricted free agents — those with between four and six seasons in the majors — had the right to sign offer sheets until Feb. 6, and their current clubs had 10 days to match any offers.

NFL: AFC had its day

its expensive contract with the NFL, probably wouldn't want to lose its chance to televise NFC playoff games between teams in bigger markets, such as the Chicago Bears and the New York Giants, or the opportunity to carry another Cowboys-49ers showdown.

Over the years, the pendulum has swung both ways in the Super Bowl. After Joe Namath led the American Football League's New York Jets to a 16-7 upset of the NFL's Baltimore Colts in 1969, the AFL's Kansas Chiefs beat Minnesota 23-7 in the next title game. Then, after the current AFC-NFC setup was instituted the following year, the AFC won nine of the next 11 Super Bowls.

Like the 49ers and Dallas Cowboys in recent years, the AFC's Miami Dolphins and Pittsburgh Steelers were the dominant teams of the 1970s. The Dolphins won the Super Bowl in 1973 and 1974. The Steelers won 1975 and 1976, and again in 1979 before starting the new decade with another title in 1980.

One difference in the current NFC streak, however, is the magnitude of its champions' domination — winning 11 Super Bowls by an average of 22½ points over the AFC champions.

That flies in the face of the parity of the conferences during the regular season. The AFC teams have had an edge over the NFC in interconference games in four of those 11 seasons, the NFC teams won more in four seasons.

Even the all-stars in Honolulu for the Pro Bowl have divergent views on the playoff setup.
