CAF now 'cleared to land'

■ Mayor Carroll Thomas and Confederate Air Force officials sign the agreement to move the CAF to Midland as "warbirds" streak through the sky and area residents look forward to the CAF museum's opening in 1991.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Confederate Air Force (CAF) became "one more star in Midland's crown" on Wednesday, the nation's Independence Day, Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas said at the signing of the Midland-CAF contract, officially sealing the CAF national headquarters' move to West Texas from South Texas.

And from the viewpoint of CAF cofounder Lloyd Nolen, the ceremony represented the "single, most significant day in the history of the CAF," which is dedicated to the preservation of the increasingly rare World War II aircraft.

"You are cleared to land at Midland international Airport," the mayor told elated CAF colonels and townspeople prior to the signing by him and by CAF Executive Director Ralph Royce of Harlingen.

On Dec. 7, 1991, the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the United States' declared entry into World War II, the CAF's new home base — the "world-class museum" and headquarters of CAF Ghost Squadron of more than 140 "warbirds" — is to be dedicated at Midland International Air-

Gorbachev gives himself 2-year deadline

■ The Soviet president tells a TV interviewer that if there are no changes within two years, "this leadership must go."

By Mark J. Porubcansky

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev Wednesday gave himself and the Soviet leadership two years to improve citizens' lives or resign.

"I think that in two years, if there are no changes, this leadership must go," Gorbachev told a TV interviewer as he entered the Kremlin Palace of Congresses on the third day of the Communist Party's 28th congress.

It was the first time that the Soviet president and party leader, who is facing bitter criticism from both radical reformers and party traditionalists, has given himself and the leadership a deadline for turning around the country's political, economic and social problems.

A Western journalist who was on the scene said Gorbachev had been asked what should happen if there are no improvements in the Soviet Union in two years.

Speaking confidently in a videotaped segment shown on the nightly TV news program "Vremya," he denied that the Kremlin leadership would do anything to hold onto political power.

"No!" he said. "I will tell you, before perestroika we had more power. I don't know who had more power than the general secretary of the Central Committee."

The leadership has made mistakes, he said. But he praised its courage in starting his reform program.

He did not specify who should be covered by his self-imposed deadline, but it seemed likely that it was meant for both party and government leaders. Most important Soviet officials still hold important posts in both the Communist Party and the Soviet government.

Earlier Wednesday, Gorbachev heard more bitter criticism of his program inside the congress hall from regional party officials, who accused the leadership of cowardice and indecision in an ideological battle against growing anti-Communist sentiments.

Underscoring the mood, more than 4,600 delegates to the Communist Party's 28th Congress sat sullenly as Deputy Prime Minister Leonid A. Abalkin warned that resisting reform would lead the party to disaster.

"Our position today reminds of an army that is retreating in haste without a plan," said Nursultan Nazarbaev, party chief in the Kazakhstan republic, as he pleaded for clearer direction from the Kremlin.

But despite the criticism, speakers displayed no new ideas and no alternative to re-electing Gorbachev.

Ranches' brand of rodeo draws thousands of area western fans

Three-year-old Aaron Moyers puts his best effort forward in the children's contest to catch a calf and take a ribbon off its tail at Midland's third annual Ranch Rodeo, Midland County Rodeo Arena, Wednesday.

The dry West Texas dust got a bit unsettled on a hot-but-breezy Wednesday.

Cowboys and cowgirls brought their ranching know-how into the roping arena and to chuck-wagon campsites to help Midlanders celebrate the Fourth of July and to recognize the community's ranching heritage in the third annual Midland Ranch Rodeo.

"It kind of gets back to our roots," said Newnie W. Ellis, a native West Texan and rodeo booster. "There's a little bit of cowboy in all of us. I know there is in me."

Apparently, there were worlds of people, young and old, carrying the cowpoke spirit in their hearts, as several thousand city and country residents turned out for the rodeo just east of town.

Bill Jackson, a dancing pal of Ellis and a native East Texan, figured that he was "just a country boy who came to town, trying to learning the city ways." The citified "cowboys" and their spouses, Judy Jackson and Charlotte Ellis, are avid western-swing dancers.

MISD pleased with ruling on subdivisions

■ The Texas Supreme Court refuses to hear case of Ridgewood and Mission Dorado residents who want to send their children to Ector County schools.

By David Morris

Midland Independent School District Superintendent Joe Baressi said Wednesday he was pleased by this week's Texas Supreme Court decision preventing annexation of some Midland County subdivisions into Ector County.

"They've basically refused to hear the case and it's pretty well over now," Baressi said. "We're satisfied that this decision is in the best interest of MISD and of the students who live out there."

Ridgewood and Mission Dorado subdivision residents who send their children to Ector County schools sought the annexation for tax purposes.

'Gull-ible' pigs?

ROGERS CITY, Mich. (AP) — A passel of pigs has been pressed into service where poison and cannon have failed — to get rid of sea gulls that pose a nuisance and a health threat.

Porker Patrol

In a one-month experiment, the Porker Patrol roams the half-mile breakwall along Lake Huron at Michigan Limestone Operations Ltd.'s Calcite plant.

The swine are encouraged to eat gull eggs and chase the birds who for years have nested messily on the wall. The gull droppings combine with soil to make an ideal medium for growing histoplasma capsulatum, a fungus that can cause a lung disease when inhaled.

In 1980, 138 workers became ill after a pulley stored on the breakwall was brought into the plant, prompting officials to launch bird-ridding efforts.

Queen's favorite

LONDON (AP) — Burmese, familiar to millions as Queen Elizabeth II's favorite ceremonial horse, died after suffering a stroke, Buckingham Palace said Wednesday. The horse was 28.

Elizabeth II

The jet black mare, ridden by the monarch in 18 Trooping the Color ceremonies, died Tuesday at Windsor Palace, 22 miles west of London, and will be buried in adjacent Windsor Home Park, the palace said.

Burmese was given to the queen by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in 1969, and was featured in a postcard with the queen riding side-saddle in a scarlet Guards uniform.

The horse was retired from ceremonial duties in 1986, and the queen switched to a horse-drawn carriage for Trooping the Color, the annual military pageant marking her birthday.

CAF: Grants critical in allowing move

(From 1A)

port.

"Today," Thomas told CAF colonels and boosters who gathered about World War II warbirds, "we are especially proud that the CAF is coming to Midland."

After the signing, three flights of CAF-aligned warbirds flew over the airport to celebrate the CAF-Midland union — which includes a 50-year lease, at $1 per year — of airport property to the CAF.

The move to West Texas "wouldn't have happened without" $1-million grants each from the Abell-Hanger Foundation and the Mabee Foundation, other gifts, and the concerned efforts by Midlanders to win the CAF over to West Texas and its year-round flying weather.

Other stars in Midland's crown, the mayor suggested, are athletic championships, Kentucky Derby and Indianapolis 500 winners, the 1987 rescue of Jessica McClure from the water well and President Bush. "We are certainly proud that the president of the United States is a Midlander."

Nolen, who has been called the CAF cornerstone, alluded to the "tremendous challenge" in the CAF's move to higher plains.

"On this spot, we will build a world-class museum to commemorate the World War II years, 1939-1945 — the most important years in the history of this country since the (American) Revolution," Nolen said.

The CAF's role, which is more than "flying air shows or just operating airplanes," is "to tell how great our country is" and the fight for liberty represented by U.S. air power in World War II.

"We live in the freest, the greatest, the strongest country in the world," Nolen said. "All this was done through the free-enterprise capitalistic system."

And with a "vision of foresight," the CAF Midland facility "will become the equal of any military museum in the world — the United States, Europe or wherever," said Nolen, an aerial sprayer (crop duster) who in 1957 helped establish the CAF by joining a group of pilots who bought a North American P-51D Mustang fighter.

The CAF's squadron of fighters, bombers, transports, trainers and liaison aircraft is "operated by the largest and most professional civilian flying team in the world," he said.

And the "partnership" between the 8,000 CAF volunteers (colonels) in the United States and abroad and the Midland-Odessa area citizens "will produce outstanding results," Nolen said.

Midland's Joe Mabee, CAF chief of staff, said that without Nolen's flair for World War II airplanes, probably all of the warbirds "would have been melted into pots" by the U.S. government.

"I have never met a finer gentleman in my life," Mabee said of Nolen, who also serves on the CAF governing staff. "I call him my 'brother' now."

Joanne Langston, chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, noted the "absolutely perfect choice of a day" to wed Midland and the CAF.

Ms. Langston cited the "fierce determination, commitment and indomitable spirit" of the CAF to preserve operational samplings of U.S. air power even while the government was destroying most of the warbirds in post-war years.

"We are immensely honored that these 'rebels with a cause' chose to move to the Permian Basin," she said. "Our dry West Texas air is perfect for preserving" the mostly all-aluminum aircraft.

Lefty Gardner, an Austin pilot who joined Nolen in founding the CAF, said that it is "looking forward to running some of this dry, cool (West Texas) air through our engines. And I hope it's not quite as warm as the hospitality out here."

CAF Col. George Coombes, a former U.S. Navy aviator, said the CAF will be "able to fly these airplanes and show them off almost into perpetuity."

David Smith, executive director of the Abell-Hanger Foundation, cited the "opportunity for West Texas is to unleash the tourist potential of the Confederate Air Force.

"I am very optimistic about the benefit that the CAF will bring to West Texas over and above" the CAF's mission of preserving its "flying museum" of 1939-45 aircraft.

But for aviation enthusiast Steve Bergener, 32, of Midland, the CAF's coming to Midland will let him see, hear, smell, and touch things most dear to him.

"I was just fascinated as a little boy by airplanes," he said. "I guess it has been in my blood ever since. This is great history."

SOVIET: No new ideas apparent, just criticism

(From 1A)

The congress made a special appeal to one of most anti-Communist elements of society — disgruntled coal miners — not to strike. In a resolution, it said that a repetition of last year's walkout could "lead to a breakup of the country's economy."

Regional leaders blamed their bosses in the Kremlin for ecological disasters surrounding the Chernobyl nuclear power plant, Central Asia's shrinking Aral Sea and its overdependence on cotton production, and poor social and economic conditions that are causing an increasing number of Soviets to blame the party as the source of their problems.

Gorbachev listened quietly to the criticism, which came mainly from party leaders of some of the 15 Soviet republics, large cities, and ministers in charge of important sectors of the economy.

He heard much of the same criticism the previous day from fellow members of the party's ruling Politburo, but he appeared to remain in firm control of the congress.

The regional party leaders, echoing a poll of delegates released by the state news agency Tass, demanded that the national leadership give them clearer direction.

They heaped criticism on party ideology chief Vadim A. Medvedev, who was jeered as he spoke Monday, the first day of the congress.

Nazarbaev, the party chief in Kazakhstan, was warmly applauded when he complained that the party's opponents "heap buckets of mud on Lenin and Leninism, and the cowardly activities of our ideologists led by Medvedev demoralized our forces."

Vitaly Perov, representing a region near Moscow, accused Medvedev and Gorbachev adviser Alexander N. Yakovlev of "hiding in the trenches" while radicals from the Democratic Platform reform group seize the initiative.

Anatoly Poruchikov, director of a central Russian state farm, said in a speech that farmers are not impressed with the government's reforms.

"We are like a big cow for you, you milk us non-stop," he complained.

Study indicates sperm can't take the heat

BOSTON (AP) — A study of San Antonio men shows men produce less sperm in the summer, which may explain why fewer babies are born in the springtime, a study concludes.

Population experts have long noticed that fewer babies are born in the spring months than at any other time of the year. No one could be sure why.

Now, a study in today's New England Journal of Medicine suggests that hot weather in the summer may at least be partly to blame.

The study, directed by Dr. Richard H. Levine, was conducted on 131 men in steamy San Antonio.

The men worked outdoors at least part of the day. Researchers found their sperm concentrations were one-third lower in summer than in winter. About 18 percent of their children were born in the spring, compared with almost 30 percent in the fall.

"There can no longer be any doubt that concentration-related measures of semen quality are reduced during the summer," the researchers wrote.

The researchers, based at the Chemical Industry Institute of Toxicology in Research Triangle Park, N.C., dismissed one obvious explanation for the summertime dearth of conceptions. They said that "the available evidence" does not support the idea that it's simply too hot to have sex so often in the summer.

Instead, they decided to investigate whether men make less sperm when the weather heats up.

"Semen quality deteriorates during the summer," they concluded. "This phenomenon may account at least in part for the reduction in the birth rate during the spring in regions with warm climates."

Exactly why, however, is unclear. High temperatures interfere with the testicles' ability to make sperm.

RODEO: Ten teams competed in ranch events

(From 1A)

Focal point of the western event was the Midland County Rodeo Arena, where 10 West Texas ranch teams competed in working-ranch events — from wild-cow-milking to calf-roping and branding.

Up in the announcer's booth, Earnest Kiker kept tabs on the goings-on.

In one round, Lazy Z Ranch cowboy Bobby Kelly and his horse were given the slip by a spunky cow in the wild cow-milking contest.

"You've heard the saying, 'That cow is going to water,'" Kiker said, as Kelly's rope loop missed the runaway critter. "She's going to water." After awhile, the cowboy finally roped the cow, his horse pulled to a quick stop, and so did the cow. While the horse pulled the rope taunt, one cowpoke pulled on the cow's tail, another held the critter by the horns, and another milked her briefly — but not dry — in the timed event.

Then, along came Ralph Powell and his team, which included a swift-milking cowgirl-rancher.

About the only difference between the roping and milking in the deep-dirt arena and on the ranch is that the horse and rider "won't be jumping mesquite," Kiker noted.

In the afternoon, after the chuck-wagon cooking was judged and most people had their fill of camp-cooked food or regular fare, more rodeoing got under way.

And four 16-year-old Midland cowboy fans, girls all, watched the cowboys roping and working in the arena and other cowpokes just milling around on horseback and a'footback.

"I like horses and the shows (rodeo events) and the cowboys," said Amanda Barnett.

"I like cowboys, but I like them better," confessed Christine Gentry.

"No," countered Amanda. "I like them just as well."

"I like cows, too," Christine said in an afterthought.

"I like cowboys," simply said Darla Bowersock.

Janna Fulfer was more general. "I like people."

Amanda had something else to say: "It's a friendly atmosphere," she said of the Ranch Rodeo. "It's better than the (shopping) mall."

Out of eyesight of the cowboy admirers was Tuscola cowboy Buddy Pointer who, at 63, has been cowboying since he was 14 years old.

"Cowboys are born," he said with the sureness of an old, unflappable cowpoke. "Then, you learn how to work cattle."

"You've got to love what you are doing," he said amid a display of bits and spurs. "You can't make money cowboying. But if you love the life, to me it's the only way to live."

The old cowhand talked of the outdoors, the freedom, and the independence of cowboying.

"If you know what you are doing, the boss is not going to bother you."

Meanwhile, those cowboys and cowgirls in and out of the Rodeo Arena and about the chuck-wagon sites roped, rode and toiled.

RULING: Conflict over the subdivisions began in 1982

(From 1A)

have to pay Midland County property taxes since their children live closer to Odessa than Midland and do not attend Midland schools.

MISD, meanwhile, fought to keep the 4,186 acres in question within its taxing jurisdiction. The area has about $40 million in taxable property, 1989 appraisal figures show.

The Texas Supreme Court refused Tuesday to overturn a Third District Court of Appeals February ruling which allowed MISD to keep the property in its tax base.

Conflict over the land began in 1982, when Ector County commissioners approved subdivision residents' request to annex the area into the Ector County Independent School District.

The area had about 100 students, about 65 of whom were attending ECISD campuses. The students were not required to pay tuition.

Texas Education Agency Commissioner Bill Kirby, however, ruled in December 1988 that annexing the entire area wasn't justified because subdivision residents occupied only about 140 acres of the site.

Residents, developers and county officials appealed Kirby's decision in state court, but State District Judge Paul R. Davis Jr. upheld the TEA ruling in June 1989.

MISD officials estimate the number of students in the subdivisions at 80, about 55 of whom attend ECISD schools. Beginning this fall, those students will face an annual ECISD tuition of $378 per household.

Although some residents have argued that the tuition is a hardship, Baressi said the annexation would have been unfair to subdivision residents already sending children to Midland schools.

Protocol chief prepares for summit

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — "Protocol," explains Joseph Verner Reed, "is checking every detail. Checking it once. Checking it twice. And, do what? Checking a third time."

This is "Reed's Rule," a self-imposed edict that the U.S. chief of protocol follows dozens of times a day as he prepares for the seven-nation economic summit in Houston next week.

He has walked through the summit site at Rice University "step by step, minute by minute, foot by foot" and reviewed thousands of intricate details, ever-vigilant for a diplomatic miscue that would mar the giant international gathering in President Bush's hometown.

Reed's biggest worry is what he calls the H-and-H factor — heat and humidity. Even native Houstonians wilt under the city's sweltering midsummer heat, and the prospect of sweat-soaked foreign leaders unaccustomed to the Texas sun could become a "major, major problem," Reed said.

"I call 'H and H' the unknown factor of drama and trouble," the protocol chief said during an interview in his State Department office.

Accordingly, he said, summit planners have shortened the traditional hourslong outdoor arrival ceremony and advised participants to bring extra shirts for a quick change.

Reed, 52, was once described in People magazine as Uncle Sam's Mister Manners; and he fits the part, from his patrician background to his Savile Row suits and starched linen shirts. He is a descendant of a Mayflower Pilgrim, the grandson of oil-and-gold baron Verner Reed and a graduate of Yale.

A longtime friend of the Bush family from their days together in Connecticut, Reed became chief of protocol last year after nearly two decades at the Chase Manhattan Bank and a diplomatic stint as ambassador to Morocco and undersecretary-general at the United Nations.

Books in his office include thick volumes titled "Protocol" and "The Practice of Public Relations," and Reed's effusive demeanor suggests he has read both. He gives all visitors a high-level dose of conviviality.

As the country's official social chairman, Reed is charged with overseeing the visits of heads of state. The pomp and ceremony that often show up on the 6 o'clock news — 21-gun salutes, opulent state dinners, motorcades of black limousines — all represent Reed's handiwork.

This year, Reed has scrambled through some of his biggest challenges, including Bush's Washington summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in late May and early June and the Houston economic summit, which begins Monday and ends Wednesday.

Each visit requires Reed to know every detail of logistics, cultural customs, diplomatic sensitivities and other points to make sure every event goes without "broken crockery," his term for a mistake.

But occasionally, the crockery falls to the floor, or teeters close to the edge of the table. What he considers his worst incident occurred at the end of a state visit by Philippines President Corazon Aquino when Aquino's foreign minister missed the departing helicopter.

Reed frantically called for another helicopter and ordered the pilot of Aquino's aircraft to make an impromptu sightseeing tour to allow the minister time to catch up. Aquino apparently never learned of the mishap.

The Houston gathering — which Reed describes as "the summit in the sun" — presents a particular challenge.

It will be the largest international gathering of the year, requiring Reed and other planners to coordinate the activities of seven heads of state meeting together on U.S. soil for the first time in seven years.

The meeting will bring together Presidents Bush and Francois Mitterrand of France; Prime Ministers Margaret Thatcher of Britain, Brian Mulroney of Canada, Toshiki Kaifu of Japan and Gulio Andreotti of Italy; and Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany.

"It's not a burden; it's an adventure," Reed said. "We're talking about a Texas-sized production of having George Herbert Walker Bush, the 41st president of the United States, hosting the economic summit of the industrialized nations in his hometown of Houston."

To help prepare, he has examined all the records from the last U.S. economic summit, in Williamsburg, Va., in 1983. He also has made two comprehensive walkthroughs of the Rice University site and plans at least one more before the summit begins.

The Houston summit, Reed said, will be much more demanding than the Williamsburg gathering because of the size of the city, heat and other factors.

Drunken driving suspects crash into patrol cars

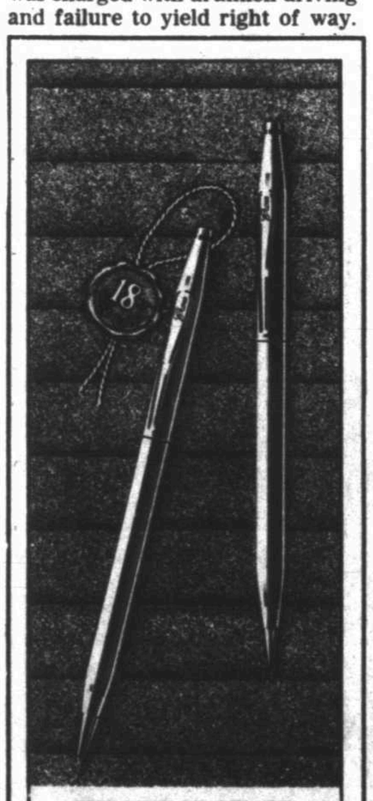

DALLAS (AP) — Police did not have to go out of their way this week to find two drunken driving suspects here: They ran into officers' squadcars.

The incidents occurred minutes apart early Tuesday, police said.

Lt. William Carter said he was in a gas station parking lot when a black Corvette jumped the curb and rammed into his unmarked car about 1:30 a.m.

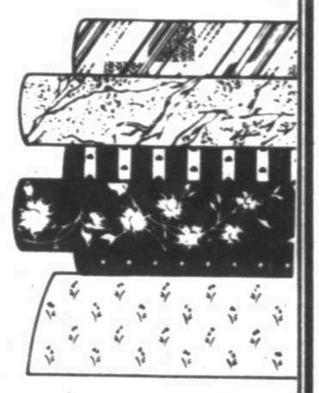

Matta Gonzalez of Mission, the Corvette's driver, has been charged with drunken driving and attempting to evade arrest, police said.

Officer Stephen Walthall told investigators that Gilbert Martinez pulled his car out of a pool hall parking space without looking. He was charged with drunken driving and failure to yield right of way.

Growth hormone shots reverse aging signs

BOSTON (AP) — Giving injections of growth hormone to old people can build up their muscles, melt away their flab and reverse the ravages of two decades of aging in just six months, a study shows.

Doctors caution that this treatment is not quite the fountain of youth, for many effects of old age, such as failing eyes and dying brain cells, are beyond its reach. And it's expensive.

But it is perhaps as close as science has come to that impossible goal. Not only did the shots stop some of the most visible consequences of the march of time, it actually turned back the clock, restoring the physiques of an age long past.

However, experts warn that considerably more research about the safety and effects of this approach will be necessary before it becomes a routine part of care for the elderly.

"This is a very preliminary finding. We are not ready to recommend growth hormone for all of the aging people in the world," said Dr. Axel G. Feller of Chicago Medical School, a co-author of the study.

Twelve men took the shots in the pilot study, and nine received no treatment for comparison. The volunteers who got the shots said treatment made them look better and feel stronger, and their wives agreed.

"What we saw over six months was that several of the body composition changes (of aging) were reversed," said Dr. Daniel Rudman of the Medical College of Wisconsin, who directed the study. "These represented the reversal of one or two decades of aging with regard to these factors."

Overall, the men's lean body mass, which is mostly muscle, increased 9 percent. Their fat tissue decreased 14 percent. And their skin became 7 percent thicker.

Until now, doctors have given this treatment, known as human growth hormone, mostly to children whose growth is retarded because they don't make enough of the protein.

However, the body's production of growth hormone also slows as people reach their 30s. In about one-third of people, it virtually stops by age 60.

"The largest pool of growth hormone deficiency is in the elderly," Rudman said. "This study is an early investigation of whether it may be useful to treat this very, very large number of elderly people who have stopped secretion of human growth hormone."

Such routine treatment would be expensive. The hormone cannot be given in pill form, and in this study people received three injections a week. The size of the dose depends on the patient's weight. Treating a 155-pound man for one year would cost $13,800 in medicine alone.

Rudman's research was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Government needs environmental scientists

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is looking for a few good men and women to help clean up radioactive contamination at its nuclear weapons plants over the next 30 years.

The job is challenging, with plenty of time outdoors. And officials guarantee a career for just about any college science student.

The Department of Energy said it will take 50 percent more money and twice as many people as previously estimated to carry out a five-year cleanup plan at the waste sites.

"We've got to convince the people in the colleges to go and look at this as the career of the future... It's an exciting career, an interesting career, one that is involved with new technology," said Leo Duffy, head of DOE's cleanup office.

He said there are at least 20,000 job openings over the next 30 years in the field and an annual budget in billions of dollars.

He said the department intends to do a better job of publicizing the benefits of working as an environmental scientist, seeking better ways to contain and dispose of radioactive waste.

"Environmentally, they are going to be out there in the wide open spaces of the West... the sage brush, the rabbits and the elk and the antelope," he said.

In a typical day, he said, a scientist would "go to work in the morning in a jeep pulling a boat... go fishing for awhile, picking up samples of fish, trapping some animals and taking them back to the laboratory."

As the department tries to lure workers into the field, Duffy said it will face the same image problems it faces every day.

Americans around the country celebrate the Fourth

Associated Press

The weather was hot as a firecracker, but Americans turned out by the millions Wednesday to celebrate the birth of their nation on the Fourth of July with pyrotechnics, parades and picnics.

In California, a quarter of a million people got up early or stayed up late to watch a fireworks display over Santa Monica Bay by dawn's early light.

"America's Birthday Cake" — a giant pastry big enough to serve 25,000 people — was cut in Philadelphia, where it all began 214 years ago. Former President Carter received a medal and $100,000 award, and urged Americans to work anew for freedom and equality.

American flags, always in abundance on Independence Day, were an especially hot item this year. Flag merchants in New York and a small-town Louisiana mayor said the flag-burning issue had made showing the flag more popular.

"Some people are burning them up. We're hanging them up," said Glenmora Mayor Tyrone Dale, whose central Louisiana town of about 2,000 people flew 50 flags in a special display on Main Street.

"It's been a banner year, and that's not just a flag company joke," said Steve Sevits, vice president of sales for the Uneeda Flag company near Albany, N.Y.

Parking was patriotic at Six Flags Over Texas in Arlington, where teen-age attendants took it upon themselves to get motorists to park by color in red, white and blue lines of cars.

"The guests realized what they were doing, and got just as much enjoyment out of it as the parking lot attendants," said Six Flags spokeswoman Sherry Hatfield.

Spectators braved the baking sidewalks of Chicago's Michigan Avenue to watch a four-hour Shriners parade, while townspeople in Taylorville gathered for an Independence Day bash featuring a singing circuit judge.

It was hot, hot, hot almost everywhere. Baltimore sizzled at 100 degrees, and New York burned, where at 92 degrees it was the hottest day of the year as 800,000 people headed for the beach at Coney Island. It was 105 degrees in Enid, Okla.

High-temperature records for the date were snapped in Erie, Pa., where it was 97 degrees, Milwaukee (also 97), Syracuse, N.Y. (95) and Alpena, Mich. (93), and tied in other cities in the East and Midwest.

"I would say it's a scorcher," meteorologist Bob Laplante said in Charleston, W.Va., where the high was 92. "There's much more humidity today, too. That makes it doubly worse."

When darkness eased the heat a bit in New York City, 1.3 million people cheered Macy's annual fireworks display on the East River.

It wasn't all fun, fireworks and parades. The Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Paralyzed Veterans of America and AMVETS organized a midday rally in a park in St. Petersburg, Fla., to push for better health benefits.

At least 2,000 veterans, many in uniforms bedecked with campaign ribbons and carrying flags or wearing flag-lapel pins, attended the rally under warm, sunny skies.

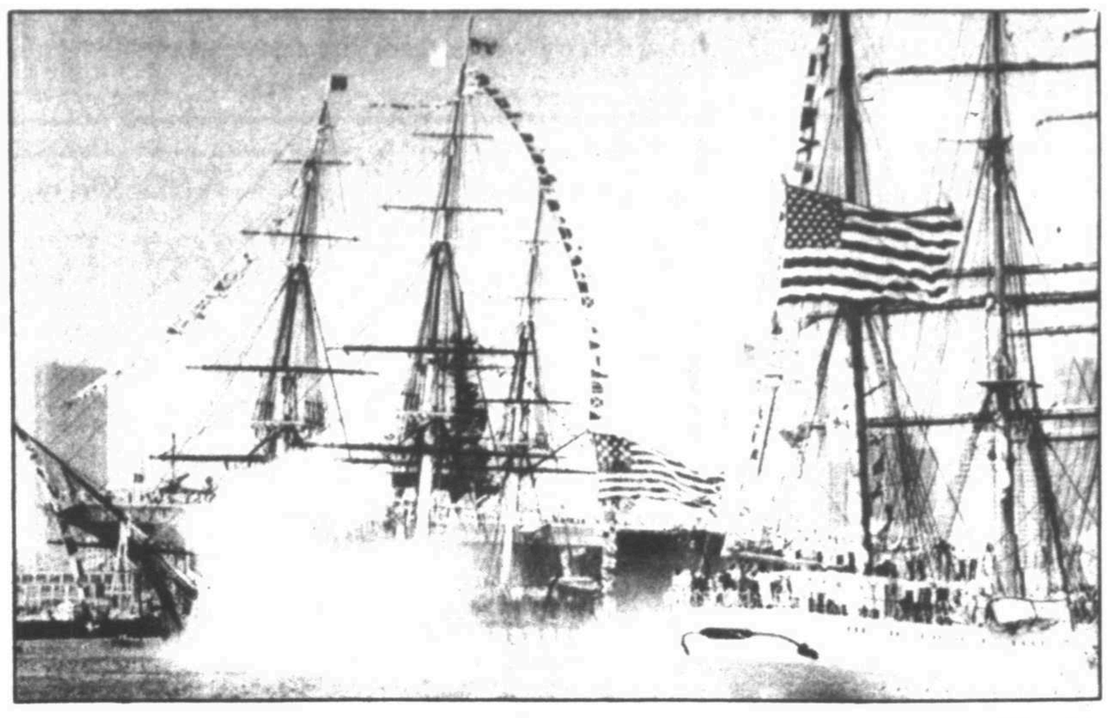

"We've had all we can stand. The system is underfunded and we're not going to take it anymore," said VFW Executive Director Larry Rivers.

At the Spirit of America Festival in Decatur, Ala., former hostage Frank Reed, who was released in April after 44 months of captivity in Lebanon, received the annual Audie Murphy Patriotism Award.

In Washington, D.C., spectators on the Mall between the White House and the Capitol were entertained by musical performances. A free concert at the Capitol was planned for the evening by the National Symphony Orchestra, followed by a fireworks display at the Washington Monument.

The estimated 250,000 people who crammed Santa Monica and adjacent beaches for the "Dawn's Early Light" fireworks display were also treated to a performance by the Los Angeles Pops Orchestra.

The display was moved from night to early morning three years ago to cut down on gang violence.

Bush departs Kennebunkport for NATO meet

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — President Bush departed Wednesday evening for the NATO summit in London after advising the Soviets anew to cut their military budget before looking to the West for economic help.

Before wrapping up a six-day respite along the rocky coast of Maine, Bush got in a final, full day of recreation.

Lax chemical law endangering U.S.

Under existing law, U.S. chemical companies can continue manufacturing pesticides that have been banned or never approved for use on food in this country because they are suspected carcinogens or pose other health dangers. The companies then ship the pesticides overseas, and all too often they come back as residues on the fruits and vegetables we import. It's all part of what called the "circle of poison."

The Senate Agriculture Committee took an important step recently toward breaking that deadly circle at two points by approving legislation that would ban the export of these chemicals as well as the importation of produce that has been treated with them.

Although similar bills have been introduced for years, this is the furthest any such proposal has gone in Congress, and much of the credit belongs to California Sen. Pete Wilson, who persuaded his Republican colleagues to drop their traditional opposition to this kind of reform. As a result, these new prohibitions have a good chance of being approved later this year as part of the national farm bill.

A crackdown is long overdue. The World Health Organization estimates that hundreds of thousands of workers exposed to these chemicals in Asia, Africa and South America become ill every year, and thousands die. U.S. farm groups support the ban because they think the use of these dangerous chemicals — which are often cheaper than the pesticides allowed here — gives growers in other countries an unfair advantage.

And consumer groups support it because the new bill's ban will do more than the existing rules to keep these poisons from turning up in American grocery stores, where fully one-fourth of the fresh fruits and vegetables come from abroad.

Even the chemical manufacturers this year are admitting there's a need for reform. But rather than shutting down production, they'd prefer just to tighten inspections on imported produce. That might be helpful for American consumers, but it reveals a deplorable lack of concern for the health and safety of the rest of the world.

Banning the export of these pesticides from the United States doesn't mean that someone else won't start making them in another country. The chemical manufacturers, in fact, could set up shop themselves somewhere else, or lease their patents to a foreign company. There's nothing that U.S. law can do to stop that. But the European Community and the United Nations are beginning to press for stronger international pesticide controls of their own. And those efforts won't be helped if the United States keeps contributing to the problem. The time has come for this country to stop participating in this shameful traffic in chemicals that we know to be unsafe.

LETTERS

CAF doesn't deserve negative viewpoint

Mr. Russell Sexton's letter in last Sunday's Reporter-Telegram showed his obvious dislike for "pompous," but missed the point, and, again, gave the CAF a negative view that is neither deserved nor needed.

The statement "Midland will give us everything we want" was taken totally out of context. The "everything" being spoken about was: 1. a dry, pleasant climate that is pleasant to ancient aircraft, 2. a hospitable, civic-minded city that offers the opportunity for the CAF to grow into the 21st century, 3. an economic atmosphere that will be good for both the CAF and the surrounding communities that support us, and 4. city governments that recognize the importance of the 'living history' the CAF represents and the need for its continued success.

There are other "everythings," as well: a supportive citizenry that becomes involved in our mission, one that welcomes an entity into our midst that is recognized as one of the four or five top tourist attractions in the United States; a climate that is conducive to flying lots of days every year, and is kind to ancient pilots and ground personnel, as well.

As to the CAF "running" the airport, Mr. Vic White, his staff and the city of Midland have done an outstanding job of "running" the airport, a job the CAF has no desire to undertake. Look at the CAF and Midland International as a 'marriage,' one that will be mutually beneficial. The investment in time, money and volunteer hours necessary to put on the two annual airshows at the CAF home base (which draw from 150,000 to 400,000 annually) creates the necessity for a 'protection' of no other airshows being held within 90 days.

Mr. Sexton, we appreciate your viewpoint but disagree with your prediction. There's one request I would make of you, however. Please join us as a CAF colonel. We need strong people who are willing to speak their mind and have the courage of their convictions.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 5, the 186th day of 1990. There are 179 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 5, 1935, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed into law the National Labor Relations Act, which provided for a National Labor Relations Board, and authorized labor to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining.

On this date:

In 1801, American naval hero David G. Farragut was born in Knoxville, Tenn.

In 1810, showman Phineas T. Barnum was born in Bethel, Conn.

In 1811, Venezuela became the first South American country to declare its independence from Spain.

In 1830, the French occupied the North African city of Algiers.

In 1865, William Booth founded the Salvation Army in London.

In 1940, 50 years ago, during World War II, diplomatic relations were broken between Britain and the Vichy government in France.

In 1946, the bikini swimsuit, designed by Louis Reard, made its debut at a fashion show in Paris.

JACK ANDERSON

What to do with all these spies?

MUNICH — So many East German spies are coming in from the cold that Western intelligence agencies are overwhelmed as they try to sort out the information from these defectors and the files they bring.

Anderson

Not that the West is complaining about the windfall — it's the espionage equivalent of stumbling onto King Solomon's mines. For the Soviet Union, whose KGB worked closely with East German spies, it's probably the greatest intelligence loss since World War II.

The Western mood is "exultant," according to one West German intelligence official. He and others are preparing for a highly secret meeting to be held here soon between top U.S. and West German intelligence officials. They'll sift through reams of information received so far from a deluge of hundreds of East German defectors.

There have already been almost daily meetings between the West German foreign intelligence service, the BND, and the Central Intelligence Agency here and in Washington since the Berlin Wall fell last November. Both CIA and BND sources describe their current cooperation on the "take" as first rate. One German source noted there's no point in hoarding data, because there's so much.

He predicted the "marvelous" cooperation would get even better in the future. One reason he gave is what he called "the internationality of issues" that will unite the CIA and the BND in their efforts.

Another, more compelling reason, he said, is both the CIA and the BND expect cuts in manpower and budget as the Soviet threat wanes and the Warsaw Pact withers. "We'll all have less personnel and fewer resources, so we'll really need to share them," the German official added.

The East German secret services came under the State Security Ministry. Defectors with the most value to the CIA and the BND come from the ministry's foreign intelligence service, or HVA, by its German initials.

They are also the hardest to get. Except for a few top-notch HVA defectors who've revealed excellent information, intelligence sources concede, no key people at the top of the service have come over. To hear a top West German counter-espionage official, they are "fanatic and ideological about communism" and unlikely to defect.

Even without their defection, the HVA has changed its tack. "Since last February," the official said, "we have no sign or information that the GDR (East Germany) is spying on us. That's when the East Germans stopped espionage and entered into secret agreements of cooperation with us."

The lion's share of defectors, so far, have come from the Stasi, the dreaded secret police that East Germany used to spy on its own people. Stasi employed 85,000 people full-time and paid a network of 109,000 citizen-informants. Some 2,100 agents' sole task was to steam open mail while another 1,052 tapped phones. Stasi had a fleet of 20,000 vehicles and an arsenal of 200,000 weapons.

Stasi's files on fellow East Germans have been measured in kilometers. Our sources estimated that the files, now in the safe hands of a 100-member citizen's committee, were kept on 5 million people. That's nearly one-third of East Germany's population of 17 million.

East German officials want to destroy the files; West Germany, while mindful of privacy issues, would first like a peek at them. They could show the West whom to trust: the thicker the file, the more likely it's on an anti-communist.

Jack Anderson's and Dale Van Atta's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Court says FCC's discrimination justified

WASHINGTON — two recent events illustrate two axioms: Almost nothing is as important as almost everything in Washington is made to seem. And a Washington event's importance is apt to be inversely proportional to the attention it receives.

Will

Last week, while overwrought politicians and media were deconstructing the president's maunderings about "tax revenue increases," little notice was given to another event, one of the most retrograde Supreme Court rulings ever.

The court bestowed, prospectively, its constitutional imprimatur on virtually any racial spoils system Congress enacts. It effectively overturned a series of precedents that had limited the proliferation of what are euphemistically called "race-conscious" policies.

The court, launching a large innovation with a slender majority, ruled 5-4 that henceforth Congress may assign special benefits to particular government-preferred minorities and Congress may do so without regard to any injury resulting from discrimination.

Reverse discrimination is now cut loose from the pretense that it's merely remedial.

During the Carter administration, the Federal Communications Commission, serving that administration's political strategy of courting the Democratic Party's most loyal constituencies, adopted reverse discrimination ("minority preference") policies. These gave minorities advantages in acquiring broadcast licenses. Later Congress mandated this.

Some injured people argued that this violated the constitutional guarantee of equal protection of the laws. Now the court has baldly asserted this: Equal protection is not violated if the injury done by reverse discrimination serves "an important government objective."

If the court adheres to this new principle, Congress will be able to allocate wealth and opportunity on the basis of skin pigmentation.

Hitherto, reverse discrimination has been regarded as constitutionally problematic and permissible only when narrowly tailored as a necessary remedy for past or present discrimination. Now Justice Brennan, joined by White, Marshall, Blackmun and Stevens, has held that the FCC's reverse discrimination is justified by the comparatively trivial objective of promoting broadcasting "diversity."

Never mind the patently meretricious, not to mention racist, assumption that minority ownership necessarily results in particular broadcasting content. And never mind the violence done to the First Amendment by the notion that Congress has the right to legislate what it considers the "correct" content of broadcasting. Justice O'Connor, joined in dissent by Rehnquist, Scalia and Kennedy, stresses the main point: This ruling is another, and huge, retreat from the Constitution's core principle, that rights inhere in individuals, not groups.

Where will the court's new tolerance of racial preferences lead? All that's needed to ratify race-based government is for the court to certify that reverse discrimination is "benign."

What, you ask, are the court's constitutional criteria of "benign"? "Constitutional"?

The five black-robed legislators casually overturned a line of precedents requiring strict scrutiny of racial classifications. Those precedents said racial classifications could not pass constitutional muster unless Congress tailored them narrowly for remedial purposes.

Now these justices must continue to legislate their political whims, bestowing or withholding the label "benign" as the spirit moves them. They must be capricious because there can be no constitutional principle that identifies "benign" disregard of equal protection.

Thirty-six years ago, the court declared school segregation unconstitutional because segregation stamped blacks with a "badge of inferiority." Today the court, and the Congress whose promiscuous use of racial preferences the court now permits, is deepening that stigma. Under "benign" reverse discrimination, blacks, particularly, are identified as permanent wards of paternalistic government.

The court is now so unprincipled, and the political temptation for Congress so strong, that a strong remedy is required. Instead of amending the Constitution to protect the flag, which does not need it, we need an amendment to protect equal protection of the laws.

PACs place all their money on incumbents

For the most part, the main congressional political battles in November will be between the incumbents and the challengers. The smart money is on the incumbents who are leading the challengers by odds of 8 to 1.

Buchwald

I visited the training camp of Sen. Sang Froid, who is up for reelection and has victory written all over him.

I talked to Artie Maytag, the senator's manager.

"Your boy looks good," I told him.

"We're taking this match seriously. We are asking every political action committee to double their contribution because we're tired of being known as the 'Filene's Basement' of the Senate."

While we were talking, a man came up and gave Artie a satchel of bills.

"The senator blesses you," Artie told him. Then he explained to me who the man was. "He represents the solid waste hub-cap industry, and they consider Sang the best friend they have on The Hill."

"Doesn't the lobbyist even get to go to a fund-raising dinner for that?" I asked.

"Dinners went out with narrow lapels. Now it's cash on the barrel, and the donor goes to the cafeteria of his choice. Frankly, even at $1,000-a-plate, the food was never that good."

A woman in a jogging suit ran by and stuck a check in Artie's pocket.

"She's from the canned halibut industry. The senator chairs all the legislation on canned fish. I'm glad she gave because that saves me having to buy her breakfast."

"Do the PACs ever distribute money to the challenger?"

"Why should they? The senator is their man — the special interests aren't going to waste their resources on an unknown rookie. This guy coming by now distributes all the funds for the fruitcake makers of America. He knows where Sang stands on fruitcake — so when he dumps his cash in that waste-paper basket over there, he's betting on Sang making fruitcake the national dessert of the country."

"The way things are going with the PACs it appears that a challenger may never win an election."

"I wouldn't know about that. My job is to make sure that those people who expect the senator to do favors for them when he gets elected, do right by him now. You remember Harry Tudoroff, the lobbyist for the bubble-gum workers of America?"

"I remember him, but I haven't seen him around," I replied.

"The reason you haven't seen him around is because he split his PAC contributions during the last election between the senator and the challenger, and we kicked him out of our Boosters' Club. From then on it was all downhill for him. When he couldn't even get his picture taken for National Bubble-Gum Day with Sang Froid, he wound up sleeping on a bench in Lafayette Park.

A Brinks truck drove by and two guards started to unload the money.

Artie said, "That's the savings & loans' contribution. They bring one over every day hoping that the senator will bail them out."

"Will he?"

"The senator has always believed that, while making a few mistakes, the S&Ls always had their hearts in the right place. They never said 'no' to us during their good times. So he's not going to turn his back on them now."

"I wish there was some way that I could help, but I really don't have any legislation I want passed."

"It doesn't matter. We take money from honest citizens, too."

WORLD

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — President Samuel Doe Wednesday met U.S. Ambassador Peter de Vos, whose government has offered to help the Liberian president flee the rebel noose around the capital.

De Vos drove under heavy U.S. Marine guard through streets of shuttered and barred shops to Doe's fortress-like mansion for about an hour of talks. Officials declined to give details of their discussion.

Soldiers at a roadblock in Monrovia said 1,000 rebels were advancing on the eastern suburb of Congo Town from Paynesville suburb, which echoed with artillery and gunfire. Firing also could be heard on the city's western outskirts. Rebel sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there were only 800 men involved in their assault on the capital.

Soldiers went on a spree of shooting and looting shops during a dusk-to-dawn curfew in Monrovia, a city of half a million people.

At least 17 bodies were found Wednesday morning at different locations, some of them shot, witnesses said.

Twelve corpses were found in Duala, a western suburb. The bodies of two men were found on a beach near the British and U.S. embassies. Residents said they saw three other bodies in the back of a truck with soldiers.

A U.S.-based rebel spokesman accused the Bush administration of breaking a promise that it would force Doe to leave. "I really believe that Doe is in the possession of the American government. They are only using his presence as leverage against the National Patriotic Front," said Thomas Woewiyu, who led the rebel delegation at last month's abortive peace talks.

Woewiyu said the Bush administration had persuaded the rebels to delay an attack on Monrovia, saying they would persuade Doe to leave. "We get that far and nothing happens," he said.

Asked if he thought the United States was opposed to rebel leader Charles Taylor taking power, Woewiyu, said: "They are."

Doe has agreed in principle to resign under pressure from close associates and from the rebels who attacked the city for the third consecutive day Wednesday with rifle and artillery fire.

Doe asked for assurances for his own safety and those of his fellow members of the Krahn tribe. Woewiyu said: "There will not be any mass retribution. He (Doe) need not make that a bargaining point."

Washington put its naval task force, which includes 2,100 Marines, on alert off the Liberian coast. It has offered to evacuate Doe, but he has not asked to leave, the U.S. State Department said Tuesday.

A close Doe adviser, Elvin Jones, minister for presidential affairs, was the latest Cabinet member to leave the country. Jones flew to neighboring Ivory Coast on an unscheduled flight Wednesday morning. Most Cabinet ministers and senior administration officials have already gone abroad.

Liberia's army chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Henry S. Dubar, who fled last weekend, told a newspaper in neighboring Sierra Leone:

"A general should know when to retreat. After counting the casualties and assessing the supplies, arms and ammunitions, a general must be able to decide whether to continue fighting or not. I saw our people without light, and drinking unsafe water. At that point I decided to ground arms."

Monrovia has been without elecricity for a week.

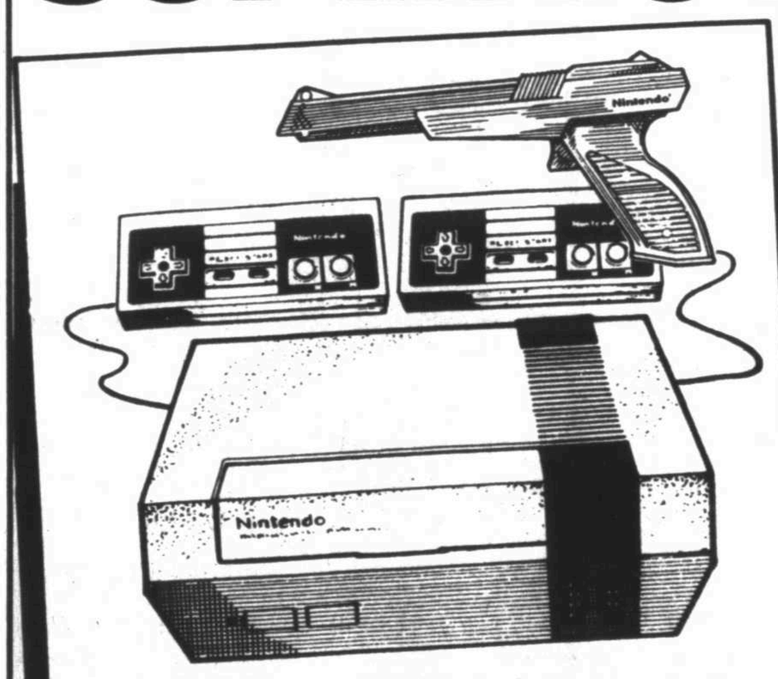

Firing erupted, meanwhile, in Congo Town with rebels moving toward the transmitter of the main state radio, which was off the air. Fighting continued to rage around the nearby 72nd army reconnaissance base.

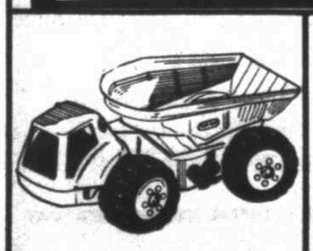

Heavy firing was heard throughout the night in the west of the city, two miles north of Monrovia port, according to residents contacted by radio.

Thieves cut paintings from frames in Paris

PARIS (AP) — In bold, daytime operations, thieves cut two paintings from their frames at two Paris museums on Wednesday, one a Renoir stolen from the Louvre, officials said.

Both paintings, Renoir's "Portrait of a Seated Woman" and Hebert's "Portrait of Monaluccia," were small format paintings. Such paintings are often chosen by thieves because they can be easily concealed.

The theft of the Renoir, which had been hanging in the Louvre's third-floor Pavillon de Flore gallery, was discovered about 2:15 p.m., officials said. The Hebert was discovered missing from the Ernest Hebert Museum, across the Seine River on the Left Bank, about an hour later. Officials said both paintings were stolen during the day, presumably after the museums had opened.

Officials noted that in both cases the paintings had been cut from their frames, but could not immediately say whether the thefts were related.

Albanians negotiating

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Albanian authorities agreed to meet Wednesday with a representative of foreign embassies sheltering more than 200 asylum-seekers who have issued one of the biggest requests for political asylum in Eastern Europe since the collapse of Communist rule.

In Vienna, an Albanian diplomat said on condition of anonymity that all foreign embassies in Tirana, the Albanian capital, were assured anyone wishing to leave would receive a passport. He indicated there would be no reprisals.

Last week, a few Albanians hoping to leave their impoverished, isolated country of 3.2 million sought political asylum at embassies. Word of their success apparently spread by word of mouth, and Monday, their numbers swelled. Truckloads crashed through embassy gates or clambered over walls.

Some Albanians were injured in their desperate attempt to gain entry. At least three were shot and wounded by agents of the feared secret police.

Jews urged to shoot

JERUSALEM (AP) — A pamphlet distributed among Jewish settlers urged them to shoot Palestinians and gave detailed instructions on how to obtain guns and avoid capture, according to media reports Wednesday.

The anonymous pamphlet, quoted by the Hebrew daily Yediot Ahronot and state radio, advises settlers to gather explosives from the army, masquerade as soldiers during attacks and leave behind misleading evidence.

The pamphlet also urges retribution against Palestinians.

Woman drowns in lake

FRANKSTON, Texas (AP) — A Palestine woman, Betty Wright, 43, drowned early Tuesday when she fell into Pinewood Lake, investigators said.

Victim's efforts identify attacker

HOUSTON (AP) — When the "snaggletoothed" man accused of raping Kim McSherry came back, she went public.

It paid off.

Eight hours after she and neighbors posted 3,500 fliers, including a drawing and a description of her assailant, a suspect was in custody.

"I had to do something," said Ms. McSherry. "My mental health absolutely depended upon it. I just don't wear victim well. It ain't a fun place to be."

Ms. McSherry, 39, was attacked at her apartment early June 7. The assailant came through an unlocked door about 2 a.m. and assaulted her at knifepoint for more than two hours, she said.

Although she reported the attack to the police, Ms. McSherry said she was afraid to leave her home and worried the assailant would be back.

On June 28, he did, leaving notes saying, "you snitched but I still love you."

"I had done nothing and my greatest fear happened — he came back," Ms. McSherry said. "So, what the hell did I have to lose?"

On Sunday, she and about 40 friends and neighbors posted fluorescent green and yellow flyers on apartments, cars, stores and utility poles throughout her neighborhood in Spring Branch, a suburb of Houston.

Eight hours later, Damon Lee Wood, 22, was arrested at his apartment, about a block from Ms. McSherry's apartment.

Wood, paroled from the Texas prison system in November after serving two years of a 10-year term for burglary, was charged with aggravated robbery and aggravated sexual assault. His bond was raised Tuesday from $40,000 to $100,000 during arraignment in district court.

Four people hurt in car accident

Staff Report

Four people were injured in a car accident early Wednesday morning at the intersection of Midland Drive and Andrews Highway, fire and hospital officials confirmed.

Edward Alvarado, age unknown, was listed in stable condition at Midland Memorial Hospital Wednesday evening following surgery, a hospital spokesperson said. She said the three other people injured in the accident were treated and released.

The accident occurred about 12:30 a.m. Wednesday and involved at least two vehicles. The "jaws of life" were required to free one victim from the wreckage, fire department reports show.

No further details were available Wednesday evening.

Man from Crane dies in accident

CRANE — A Crane man was killed Wednesday morning from injuries received in a motorcycle accident, a Department of Public Safety spokesperson said.

William Thomas Whittaker, 29, was pronounced dead at the scene of the one-vehicle accident, which occurred about eight miles north of Crane on U.S. Highway 385.

The accident occurred about 6:50 a.m. when Whittaker apparently lost control of his motorcycle, a 1982 Honda. The motorcylce tipped over and slid about 320 feet, the spokesperson said.

Grass fires keep firemen busy

Staff Report

Grass fires kept Midland Fire Department crews busy on the Fourth of July holiday Wednesday.

Officials said that between 4 p.m. and about 9:30 p.m., firefighters had responded to at least 11 grass fires, some started by fireworks.

Deputy Fire Chief Dean Williams said he expected the grass fire situation to get hotter as the evening progressed and people began shooting off fireworks in earnest.

"It just started to pick up a little bit ago," Williams said shortly after 9:30 p.m. Wednesday. "I guess we've got three (fires) going right now."

Williams said the fact that the nearest public fireworks display Wednesday was in Odessa might contribute to Midland's grass fire problem.

As of 9:30 p.m. Wednesday, fires had been reported near: Loop 250 at Dent Crest Street, 2:30 p.m.; Francis Avenue at Oliver Street, 12:23 a.m.; County Road 58 West at Farm to Market Road 1788, 12:24 a.m.; 2401 City View Road, 5:05 a.m.; the 1100 block of Chestnut Avenue, 2:05 p.m.; Interstate 20 at Coors Road, 11:51 a.m.; off State Highway 349, 30 miles north of Midland, 11:02 a.m.; 1307 E. Hamby Ave., 6:40 p.m.; 1300 E. Dormard Ave., 7:23 p.m.; 104 E. County Road 120, 8:11 p.m.; 1400 Lynn Ave., 8:46 p.m.; "C" Street at Indiana Ave., 9:50 p.m.; and Cloverdale Road at Carver Street, 9:50 p.m.

DPS counts six deaths in holiday accidents

Associated Press

At least six people have died on Texas highways over the July 4 holiday period, including a Fort Worth man who lost control of his car and slammed into a tree.

Richard D. Lynham, 48, died in the accident that occurred about 3:30 p.m. today on a Fort Worth street, said officials with the Department of Public Safety, which is conducting a holiday fatality count.

Statisticians with the DPS had predicted that 15 people will be killed in a 30-hour period that began at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

At least three of six fatalities have involved alcohol, officials said.

The DPS said Irene Reveles, 34, of Dallas was riding in a van that went off the road, hit a guard rail and overturned Tuesday night. Ms. Reveles was thrown from the vehicle in the Dallas accident at 10:56 p.m.

A Fort Hood soldier was killed and another critically injured as they raced their motorcycles on Farm-to-Market Road 3219 in Bell County. The dead soldier was identified as Brett Alan Ellis, 20. Cox said both motorcyclists were wearing helmets when their bikes collided at 11:54 p.m. Tuesday.

Daniel Luman Bradley, 35, of Wallis was killed early Wednesday when the pickup he was driving went off the road, overturned and pinned him, according to Cox.

Also on Wednesday, William Thomas Whittaker, 30, of Crane, was killed when his motorcycle skidded 320 feet on its side on U.S. 385.

Cori Lynn Bishop, 16, of Smiley, was fatally injured in an accident one minute into July 4 when a car in which she was riding was struck by another head-on near Queenie in Guadalupe County. Three other individuals were injured, but they were in stable condition Wednesday at a Seguin hospital.

Assault victim's condition stable

Staff Report

The 41-year-old Midland woman hospitalized Monday after being stabbed repeatedly during an apparent sexual assault was in stable condition Wednesday evening, a Midland Memorial Hospital spokesperson said.

The woman's condition was upgraded from serious. She was expected to be moved out of the Intensive Care Unit sometime today, the spokesperson said.

The man suspected of assaulting her, 27-year-old Jan Jerrot Allen, remained in jail Wednesday night on $50,000 bond.

Publicity costs Railey his job

DALLAS (AP) — Publicity over his pending divorce case from his comatose wife has cost former Methodist minister Walker Railey his job with a California aerospace firm, his lawyer says.

Michael Pezzulli, a Dallas lawyer who represents Railey said Tuesday the former minister lost his job as an executive assistant to the president of an aerospace parts-testing firm in Long Beach on June 15, nearly two weeks after a hearing in his divorce case.

Compound in green vegetables can help prevent breast cancer

By Jean Carper

How could eating cabbage, Brussels sprouts, broccoli or cauliflower possibly prevent breast cancer?

An exciting new discovery by scientists at the Institute for Hormone Research in New York City reveals precisely how such cruciferous vegetables could work.

Carper

It's well-known that an excess of the female hormone estrogen can encourage development of certain breast tumors. Now Dr. Jon Michnovicz and colleagues have found that a compound in cruciferous vegetables speeds up a process by which the body deactivates or disposes of the type estrogen that can promote breast cancer.

In tests on women and men the cabbage compound "turned up" the estrogen-deactivation process by about 50 percent, says Dr. Michnovicz. With less estrogen around, the chances of breast and uterine tumors drop, he says. He suspects Asian women have such low rates of breast cancer because they eat so many cruciferous vegetables, such as bok choy. The anti-cancer compound, called indole-3-carbinol, is also found in kale, mustard greens and turnips. To get the most of such compounds, eat the vegetables raw or lightly cooked.

When to watch your weight

Don't wait for middle age to become concerned about weight. So suggests a new study by researchers at the Centers for Disease Control.

They found that both men and women are most apt to have a major weight gain between the ages of 25 and 34. Women are about twice as likely as men to put on pounds in that decade. Thus, say researchers, the critical time for preventing obesity is in your early 20s.

However, dieting at very young ages could be a mistake, report French researchers. By tracking a group of kids from birth to age 21, they found that fat babies are not doomed to fat adulthood. In fact, only 41 percent of youngsters who were fat at age 1 were still fat at age 21.

The researchers noted that fat babies often lost weight after age 1. Then some began to gain weight again about age 6. After this "rebound period," most automatically slimmed down.

This means, say the researchers, that "weight-reducing measures are not reasonable very early in life." In fact, diets at young ages may impair growth and encourage eating disorders in youngsters who will spontaneously return to normal weight, they warned.

Nuts are in

It's nutty to avoid nuts, thinking they are just another high-fat junk food, says Dr. David Jenkins, professor at the University of Toronto. Just the opposite: He says there's new evidence that nuts generally are good for health.

He calls almonds in particular an excellent food "pharmaceutical" that lowers blood cholesterol and keeps insulin and blood sugar levels on an even keel, helping ward off cardiovascular disease, diabetes and possibly high blood pressure and cancer. All nuts help control blood sugar surges, he notes.

Almonds have the advantage of lots of fiber, "the right kind of fat — monounsaturated," very little saturated fat and desirable vegetable protein, which also reduces cholesterol, he says.

Other research has linked eating nuts in general to lower rates of both heart disease and Parkinson's disease.

Walnuts have high levels of anti-cancer agents and omega-3 fatty acids, tied to preventing numerous health problems, including heart disease.

However, nuts are high in total fat, and thus calories. So you should eat them instead of, not in addition to, other fats, says Dr. Jenkins. And skip the salted variety, he adds.

Jean Carper is a leading medical and nutrition writer and the author of 15 books, including "The Food Pharmacy."

Summer sun and water can cause eye irritation

N.Y. Times News Service

Wearing wrap-around glasses or goggles during outdoor activities can help to keep pollen and other irritants out of the eyes. It also helps to reduce exposure to home-based allergens, for example, by using an air-conditioner, especially in the bedroom.

Children sometimes improve if they spend the summer in a cool climate.

But for those who are severely afflicted with eye-threatening allergies, the ophthalmologist may recommend moving permanently to a cool, moist climate.

In summer, sun and water are the primary sources of irritating injuries to the eyes.

The eye is even more sensitive to ultraviolet light than the skin, and sunburn of the eyes is more than just temporarily uncomfortable. Over the years, it may cause permanent visual damage.

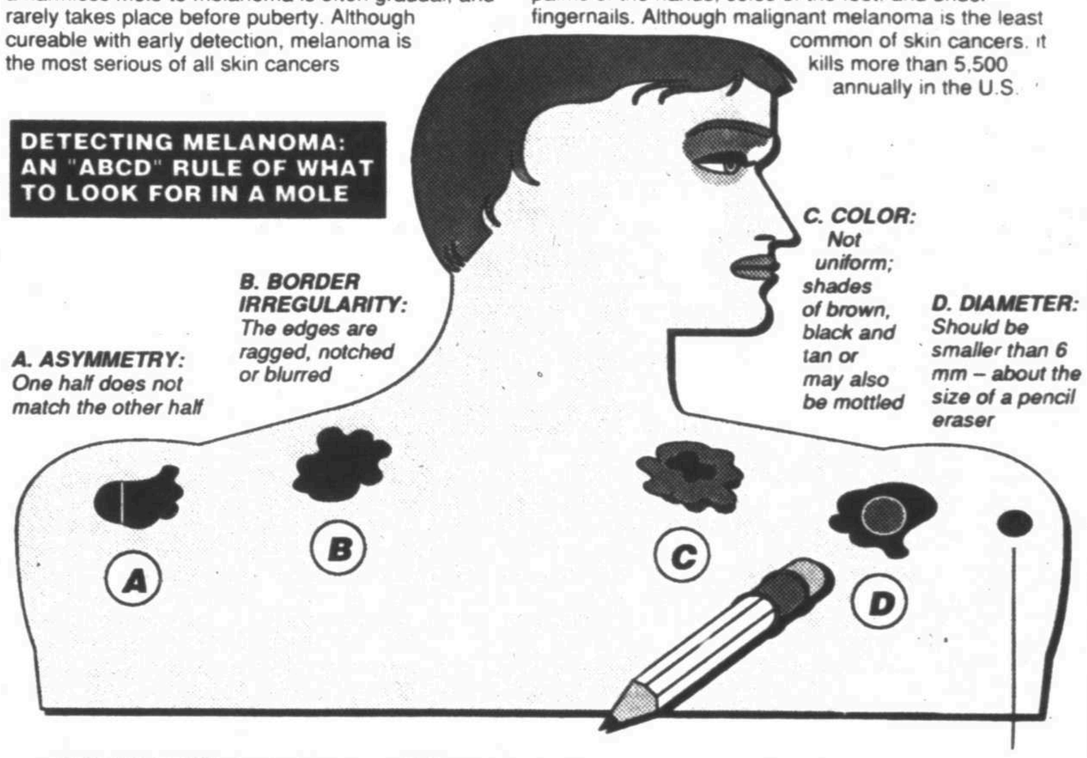

The pain of "sun blindness" typically appears the next morning and can be excruciating. The only treatment is rest.

The best protection is to wear sunglasses that block ultraviolet light.

You can also get regular clear lenses with UV-400 protection. Such glasses have the added benefit of helping to prevent sun-triggered allergic reactions and if the lenses are large enough, they can help to keep pollen and other irritants out of your eyes.

Melanoma: skin cancer that can kill

Malignant melanoma is skin cancer caused by overexposure to the sun. Melanoma is formed when the growth of the cells that produce the melanin pigment in the skin form a tumor in a mole. The transition from a harmless mole to melanoma is often gradual, and rarely takes place before puberty. Although cureable with early detection, melanoma is the most serious of all skin cancers because it can spread to other body tissues and organs at a rapid rate. Those at greatest risk are fair-skinned and tend to burn easily, but even those with brown or black skin can develop melanoma, especially on the palms of the hands, soles of the feet, and under fingernails. Although malignant melanoma is the least common of skin cancers, it kills more than 5,500 annually in the U.S.

Ectopic pregnancies increasing

ATLANTA (AP) — Ectopic pregnancies — the dangerous development of fetuses outside the womb — are increasing "at epidemic proportions," with 88,000 cases a year, federal health experts have warned.

The national Centers for Disease Control said the estimated 88,000 U.S. cases in 1987 — the latest year for which statistics are available — marks a 19 percent increase in one year and more than a doubling in a decade.

The CDC report was issued three days after a study in the Journal of the American Medical Association said women who have had chlamydia are more than twice as likely as other women to have ectopic pregnancies. The JAMA study used 1985 statistics.

Chlamydia and other sexually transmitted diseases can cause pelvic inflammatory disease in women, which is believed to be the chief cause of ectopic pregnancies.

"If a woman has an infection of the fallopian tubes, they can become blocked or scarred, and the ovum does not get transferred to the uterus — it implants outside the womb," said Dr. Hani Atrash, chief of the Pregnancy and Infant Health Branch at the CDC.

Pelvic inflammatory disease "does not explain all the increases," he said, noting other studies implicating factors such as smoking and stress.

Ectopic pregnancies have increased about fourfold since 1970, when national case surveillance began, the CDC said.

Grooming aids are for children

Sandbox set is target of new lines of personal care products

By Valli Herman
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Somewhere between the baby oil and the diaper-rash ointment, pretty pastel packages of skin-care products for upscale infants, toddlers and preteens has swept onto store shelves.

Swathed in claims of gentleness and purity, the products come in packages as appealing as penny candy.

Guilt-drenched parents seem to have readily absorbed the message that their children deserve the best in everything, even if it is their own pricey wild grape body shampoo gel.

The idea of grooming products for children has its supporters and its detractors.

Some observers decry peddling such vanity products to children, who risk being groomed into premature prima donnas if too much emphasis is given to appearance.

Yet manufacturers are not alone in singing the praises of skin-care products that instill a sense of personal pride in children. Some experts join the chorus.

"In a sense, the manufacturers are right," said Nancy Hornstein, a UCLA staff psychiatrist. "It does make kids feel special to have their own special things, and it can enhance self-esteem."

ELAINE LEADER, a teen counseling coordinator, would argue that it is pressure from peers and society that instills children with the idea to fast-forward their entrance to maturity.

"I don't think they would even know about it unless they saw the products marketed to their age group," said Leader, who is the program coordinator for Teen Line, a counseling service for teen-agers at the Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles. Leader doesn't object to the idea of special products for children, but how marketing aimed at them often pressures youngsters to demand the products from their parents.

Experts generally agree that how the parent approaches the use of skin-care or cosmetic products can swing the vote on the usefulness of the new breed of products.

"A lot of parents believe it makes you a good parent if you have the ability to provide it," said Leader. Yet parents, unwittingly or not, push their expectations onto their offspring, particularly in issues of appearance.

"You can have too much emphasis on your hair and skin being just so — and if not, panic city," said Hornstein.

Special children's products can be useful to inspire play or grown-up habits.

"It's not much different from Mr. Bubble (bubble bath for children)," said Hornstein. "Some of that is developmentally appropriate. Kids enjoy doing what mommy and daddy do. It's like wearing your mother's high-heeled shoes."

Most of the grooming aids for children are bath or body products — hair shampoo and conditioners, sunblock and moisturizing lotions, liquid soaps and after-bath powders. As they wash away dirt, some manufacturers hope children wash in a consciousness about themselves and the larger world.

ROBIN MERLO and her husband, Michael Lescander, recently launched Kidsmetics, a botanical skin-care line that uses plant extracts and costs from $8 for 8 ounces of shampoo to $16 for 4 ounces of environmental protection cream.

Merlo promotes her products not just as tools to build good hygiene, but as an extension of environmental awareness.

"When I was a young parent," said Merlo, who has a 25-year-old son, "I was trying to get my child to eat healthy food and have concern for ecology."

In intervening years, Lescander identified the void that could be filled in the children's product market.

"We looked into cosmetics, and we realized that's part of training your child, too. But we don't believe in — perfume, lipstick and that sort of thing," Merlo said. "Kids grow up fast enough as it is."

Some bath and grooming products for youngsters follow the tradition of making bath time fun time. In the vein of speckled toothpaste and cereal bowls shaped like airplanes, some children's grooming products aim to be fun. If it is entertaining, the thinking goes, children will become more careful about their appearance, said Laura Jensen, director of product development for H2O Plus, a year-old chain of stores that offers products for all ages.

'It's not much different from Mr. Bubble (bubble bath for children). Some of that is developmentally appropriate. Kids enjoy doing what mommy and daddy do. It's like wearing your mother's high-heeled shoes.'

— Nancy Hornstein
UCLA staff psychiatrist

"It's starting a healthy habit, like brushing their teeth," Jensen said. "It's visual enough that when a kid gets it, it's fun to use."

IN TYPICAL kidster fashion, the company offers flavors of bath gel (watermelon, wild grape, very cherry and green apple) and an orchard-worth of shampoos, conditioners and lip gloss.

The whimsical, fun aspect may be the strongest appeal to children.

Unlike many of the new children's grooming products, a Dallas-based firm, Bloomers, offers a full line of girls' cosmetics, including four shades each of lipstick, lip gloss and eye shadow and three shades of blusher for the cheeks. They cost from about $3 to $10 each and have been available at select Nordstrom stores.

Bloomers president Michal Tanguay said Southern California is the company's next target market.

She introduced the first products for skin and nail care a year ago this month. Many sold well during the holiday season for $12 to $20, but now the $10 and under sets of products seem the preference.

"We look at it as a personal grooming approach," Tanguay said. "It's relevant at any age. As fast as the world is turning these days, the more we can do to develop a quality sense of self esteem and the recognition that it's important to look and feel your best, then all the better."

Tanguay, who is a parent, calls herself conservative and said the color palette is consciously tame, not trendy.

"We do eyeshadow because there is a demand for it," Tanguay said. "I don't particularly find it necessary or important for them. But you do find it is especially important for the kids that are performance oriented, like for dance recitals."

DERMATOLOGISTS ARE not giving most children's cosmetic or skin-care products an overwhelming endorsement.

"Most cosmetics aren't very well regulated," said Dr. Stephen Ducatman, chief dermatologist at a major Southern California medical center. "Most are reputable and do an excellent job, though."

Ducatman would advise parents that the only truly essential skin care product for children is sunscreen.

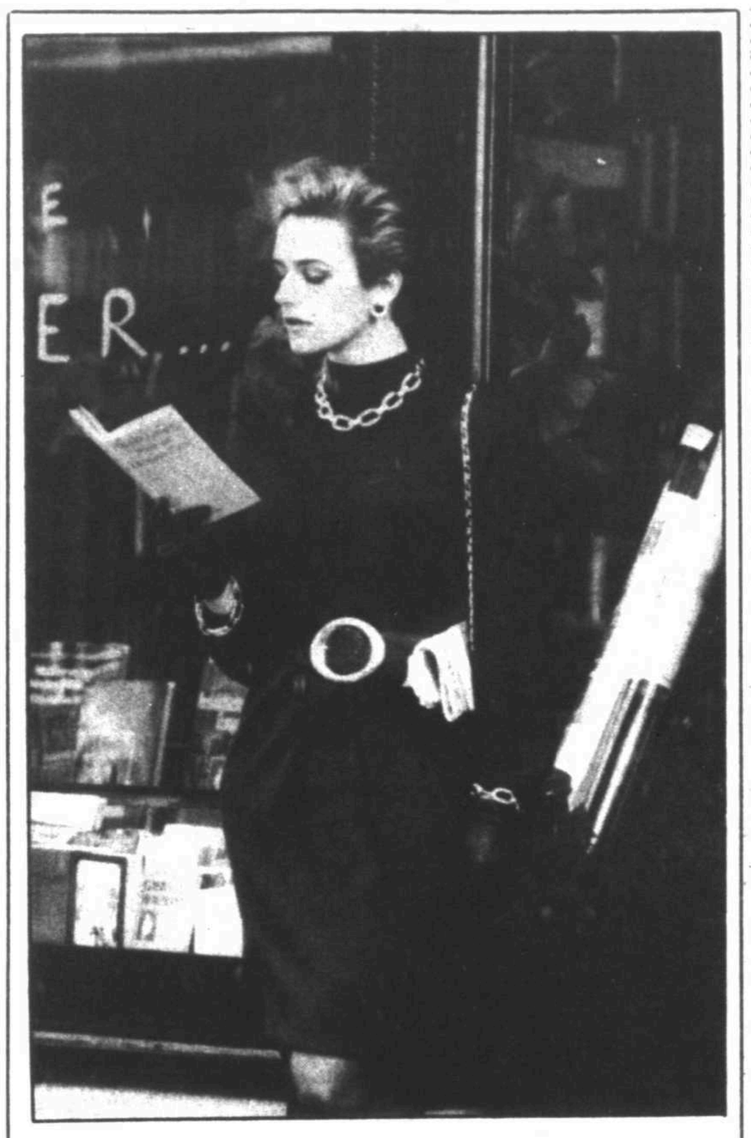

While not all of the children's skin care and cosmetic products on the market today aim deep into parents' pockets, they are bound by a common belief in the dollar potential of the children's beauty product market.

More than half of parents with children under 6 years of age are dual income earners, according to consumer research by William & Clarissa Inc., the Laguna Hills, Calif.-based makers of Kids, a premium line of grooming products for children. In information the company sends to potential vendors, it reminds that today's parents are more affluent and have fewer children — "with more money to spend per child."

William & Clarissa also point out that grandparents, with their tendency to indulge, are a secondary market.

Whether the availability of grooming products for children turns them into sweet-smelling, personally and environmentally conscious beings, or precocious consumers may take years to determine.

Jensen, of H2O, offered what may be the most compelling argument for a separate line of children's products: "It keeps their hands off of my stuff."

The style and ease of St. John Fall '90 Collection will be presented in a trunk show at Swartz, 4410 N. Midkiff in the Courtyard, July 10 and 11. DEAR ABBY

Search for Mr. Right leads to Mr. Wrong

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm slim, blond, well-groomed, take two baths a day, and everyone says I'm pretty. I come from a good, middle-class Protestant family. My mother is a retired tax consultant and my father is an engineer. I play three musical instruments and speak three languages.

Van Buren

Last year, I won a bronze medal in the county triathlon (a long-distance race consisting of swimming, bicycling and running). I don't drink liquor or use recreational drugs, nor do I frequent bars.

I am 40 years old, have no children, no health problems, and I own a nice car. I have been formally engaged twice and broke the engagements. Both men were compulsive liars. One had been married seven (yes, seven!) times. His last wife told me he was still married to her when he started dating me! I am not currently dating, deliberately, to avoid another disaster.

Why can't I have a nice, normal relationship with an honest, decent, middle-class guy where I won't be lied to, stolen from or beaten up? I have no preconceived demands such as height, looks, bank account, religion. So, how can I connect with Mr. Nice and Normal? — THOROUGHLY CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: There are con artists everywhere, so one's only protection is to check out their backgrounds with someone who has known them for a very long time.

One of the best ways to meet nice people is through other nice people — put out the word to friends and relatives that you are interested in meeting someone nice. At least that way, you will have the benefit of a little "history" regarding the person.

Also, be very wary of people who seem to have no relatives or friends who have known them from way back.

DEAR ABBY: Here's one for you. My wife and I were married over a year ago. We sent wedding invitations to a number of family members and friends. One of my cousins who lives many miles away called to say that she couldn't attend, and asked whether we would like "a this" or "a that" from a prominent store in her town.

I chose between the two items and thanked her, but now I really can't recall what the items were. It was a very cordial conversation.

Well, here it is, a year later, and neither the "this" nor the "that" has arrived. My concern: Did my cousin forget or decide not to send anything (which is fine), or did the store not send it (which isn't). And, hence, since my cousin may have thought a gift was sent and she hasn't received a "thank-you," she may be miffed.

What is the right thing to do? — PERPLEXED IN PRINCETON

DEAR PERPLEXED: Since your cousin did not attend the wedding, and you received no gift from her, I think it's safe to assume that she sent none. In any case, I would not ask her if she had sent anything. She may get the impression that you are "fishing."

"How to Be Popular" is for everyone who feels left out and wants an improved social life. It's an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Book-club selections are starting to stink

By Erma Bombeck

My husband is always accusing me of forgetting to send in my book-club cancellation forms. I don't know why he would think such a thing. I only order the books I want.

Bombeck

He handed me a statement the other day and said, "I didn't know you were interested in books on making your own potpourri."

"I was going to surprise you for dinner."

"With potpourri? Isn't that the stuff that makes a room smell good?"

"Oh, THAT potpourri," I said.

"You just ordered a volume on it that cost $19.95."

"And worth every penny," I said.

"So, when will I expect to see large baskets of homemade aromatic scents throughout the house?"

"Any day now," I said, meeting his eyes.

After he left, I attacked a stack of magazines and books that I hadn't even touched. There in the middle of all of it was the book on potpourri, still in the book-club wrapper.

This wasn't the first time he had questioned my forgetfulness. When the six volumes on World War II arrived, he said, "Why? You already know the ending."

He didn't know the half of it. I had volumes on my bookshelves on everything from lap quilting to dog horoscopes to Hebrew flower arranging. They just kept coming. At one point he suggested that maybe I was getting more books than I could possibly read, and perhaps I should get out of one or two of my book clubs.

That tells you how naive he is. Could Al Pacino leave the Corleone family? The computers would never forgive me. For the rest of my life they would send me notices of book selections and how many bonus points I had wasted.

I leafed through the potpourri book to see what I could throw together to justify $19.95. I needed frankincense, patchouli, lavender and bergamot oils and a rose garden with dead roses in it. I needed cedar wood shavings, cinnamon bark, wheat ears, juniper berries and pussy willow catkins. I needed a gift shop to buy potpourri.

When my husband came into the room a few days later, he said, "It smells like Christmas."

"It's homemade potpourri."

He opened his mouth to speak.

"If you love me, you will not ask where I got pine needles in the middle of the Arizona desert."

Keep cool at work during summer's dog days

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

"What's the point in getting all dolled up in a $2,000 Chanel suit if I schlep into court looking fried, frazzled and droopy?" asks Gabrielle Shanahan, a Los Angeles lawyer.

The point is, professional women don't have to look weather-worn — or even feel wilted — during the dog days of summer.

One way to look cool, feel cool and still dress by the rules is to wear city shorts.

"This is the first year I'm getting a lot of requests from high-powered executives for city shorts," says Susan Shebero, a personal shopper at Saks Fifth Avenue in New York. "I'm dressing vice presidents of brokerage firms in this look, not only from New York, but also from Florida to Chicago."

Natural fabrics such as linen, cotton, featherweight wool and washed silk make city shorts business-like and are cool against the body. Solid colors or traditional patterns — pinstripes, herringbone, houndstooth, small checks or plaids — maximize a favorable impression.

"Keep the shorts dark and Bermuda-length," says Susan W. Miller, a career counselor and consultant in Los Angeles. "And add a jacket for a professional look."

Chanel has a collection of city shorts in silk, cotton or linen that can be paired with a classic Chanel jacket. Or match navy silk shorts with navy and white herringbone jacket. Ranging from $500 to $800, they are sold at Chanel boutiques nationwide.

NEIMAN MARCUS has a wide selection of city shorts from designers such as Ralph Lauren, Anne Pinkerton, Max Mara, Anne Klein II and Eleanor Brenner. A best seller is Opera Linen's sage green linen and cotton blend shorts, $74, plus matching jacket, $140.

Saks' selection ranges from $170 to $300, including washable silk by Calvin Klein, seersucker by DKNY, silk by Donna Karan and gingham by Michael Kors.

A silk blouse or tailored shirt, stockings and dressy flats or low heels enhance the look.

What if your job requires a dress, no matter the temperature? Choose one that's lined to cut down on layers, says Eleanor Lambert, creator of the International Best-Dressed Poll.

"It's more comfortable to wear a dress with a sewn-in lining than a dress plus slip," she says. "For the same reason, strip off all adornments like tight belts and heavy jewelry."

Dresses should be loose in hot weather, says Helen O'Hagan, vice president and director of public relations for Saks Fifth Avenue.

"On a hot day a linen tent dress by Geoffrey Beene is a perfect solution," she says. "When I walk it moves along with me.

"And I always carry a cashmere sweater so that if it gets chilly at a business lunch I'm prepared."

If your job dictates a suit, designer Norma Kamali recommends one that glides on the body, allows you to cross your legs and doesn't wrinkle.

"I find that a lightweight gabardine wool suit is ideal for summer," she says. "And you always have the option of removing the jacket."

"THE BEST thing about a suit is that you don't have to put on your jacket until you're inside the building, which probably is air-conditioned," says Susan Miller, the Los Angeles career consultant

"Women in creative fields may be able to skip the jacket, even in an interview," she adds. "But it really depends on your particular organizational culture."

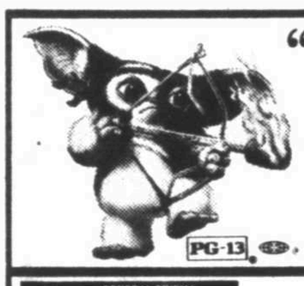

When it comes to hosiery, the key is sheer, light colored and lightweight pantyhose or thigh-high stockings. Never knee-highs.

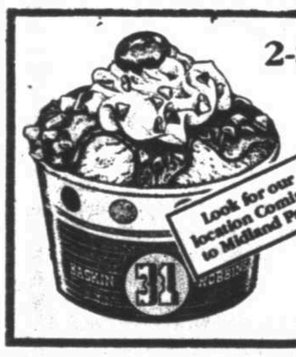

Those who dare can go bare-legged — if the office permits. But if the limbs look pasty, reach for one of the new self-tanning gels. The active ingredient is Dihydroxyacetone, not the old yellow dye No. 5 that turned the skin more orange than tan.

If you skip the stockings, consider sandals. But wear them at your own risk.

"Toes shouldn't show at work," says Miller.

Likewise, Charlotte Goldberg, a law professor in Los Angeles, cautions her students to avoid open-toe shoes when in court or on a job interview.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JULY 5, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Changing your base of operations could bring even greater business or career success in the months ahead. An old friend will make you an offer you cannot refuse in September. You need to mend some personal relationships in November. Pursue romance with zeal before it slips away. Salt away money for investment purposes in early 1991. A decision you make next March will have long-range repercussions.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: women's rights advocate Clara Zetkin, pitcher Goose Gossage, actress Katherine Helmond, showman P.T. Barnum.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Real estate ventures should be highly profitable now. Finalize contracts. Refuse to be thrown off balance by the surprise tactics of an associate. Some fortunate friends advance your plans.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Use the low-key approach when trying to sell someone on a business proposition. A secret transaction proves profitable. Postpone signing contracts; better terms will be available soon.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Work completed behind the scenes can help your friend beat the competition. If you are handling a legal matter, push for an early settlement. Health improves with regular exercise and a balanced diet.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Look for better ways to showcase an artistic talent. Cooperative endeavors bring better results than solo efforts now. Seek the advice of professionals. Romance holds few surprises but is very pleasurable.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A favorable day for visits. Offer to do a favor for someone who is pressed for time. An artistic individual offers an unexpected compliment. Act self-confident. Romance brightens your evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your confidence receives a big boost. Romantic partner is your best ally now. Do not reveal too much of your personal feelings in a work situation. Avoid intervening between two coworkers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Contact those no longer in the public eye. Influential people are inclined to grant favors and make important new concessions. Step on the gas in vital career matters and do not look back!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep your long-term objectives in mind and pay particular attention to new career opportunities. You handle a delicate matter with discretion and dispatch. Risking your savings is a bad idea.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Wait a few days before going all-out to obtain an objective. Allow yourself to be impressed by your mate's enthusiasm. Better still, join in and make helpful suggestions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Dispose of routine chores quickly. Make plans jointly with partner. Comforting words from your mate or trusted adviser boost your morale. Guard against fatigue in late afternoon; take a nap.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do your duty as those in authority see it. Insisting on having things your own way could lead to charges of usurping power. Hold your ambition in check. Close friends provide guidance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ask for a raise and collect on a debt. A good time to advertise and launch new projects. Take a raincheck on romance and stay home tonight. Get together with old friends.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are compassionate, conscientious and very sensitive to criticism. They dislike making decisions and tend to procrastinate when presented with a choice. Ridicule frightens these Cancerians and will make them clam up. Be gentle if you must criticize their efforts or ideas. Loyal and sympathetic, these children will go to great lengths to help a friend in need. They can be generous to a fault with those closest to their hearts.

The bidding:

Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠ Many contracts turn on control of the hand. To relinquish control willingly, when there is no need, can be tantamount to committing suicide, as this hand illustrates.

East's jump to three spades over the double was preemptive, although there are those, ourselves included, who might argue that East held less than the law allows! That, however, had no bearing on the final contract, which was excellent.

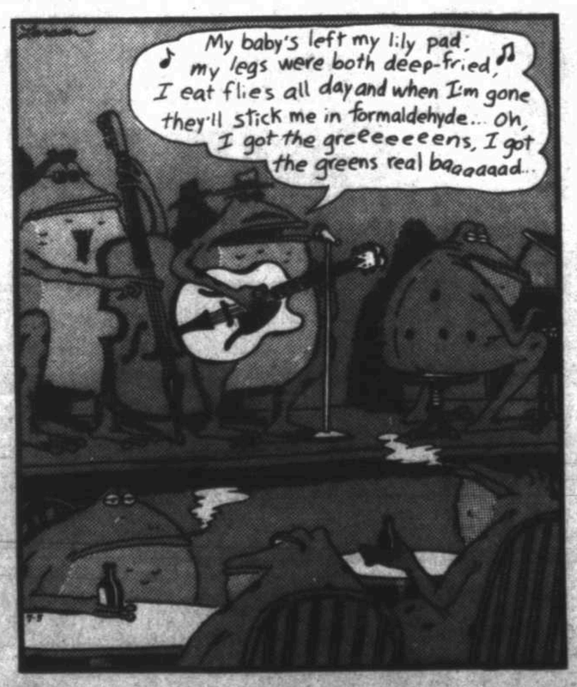

West made the normal lead of the king of spades, taken by the ace. Declarer cashed the king and ace of trumps and received the bad news. Next came three rounds of diamonds to take care of declarer's spade loser. West refused to ruff. Now declarer turned to the club suit, but West took the ace at the first opportunity, drew two rounds of trumps to exhaust all the hearts, then cashed four spade tricks to complete an undignified four-trick rout.

The 4-1 trump break was rather unfortunate, but need not have been disastrous had declarer retained command of the play. South can afford to lose two trumps and a club, which presents no problem so as long as neither defender is void in hearts.

After winning the ace of spades, declarer should draw only one round of trumps. Next come three rounds of diamonds, taking care of the spade loser, and West should refrain from ruffing. Still steering clear of trumps, declarer continues the good work by forcing out the ace of clubs. Once that card is removed, declarer simply plays clubs from hand until a defender ruffs, then cashes the remaining high trump after regaining the lead.

Klein in Manhattan hospital after being thrown from horse

NEW YORK (AP) — Designer Calvin Klein was in a Manhattan hospital Wednesday with a concussion, two broken ribs and other injuries suffered after being thrown from a horse at a Long Island riding stable.

Klein, 47, was in stable condition at New York Hospital, where he was flown by helicopter Tuesday night, said Mary Cialone, a hospital spokeswoman.

He also had a bruised lung and cuts on his head, she said. He would probably remain hospitalized for about a week.

"The doctors expect a quick and complete recovery," said Paul Wilmot, a spokesman for Klein.

He said the fashion designer was riding his horse at a stable in Bridgehampton when "something spooked the horse."

He described Klein, who has a home in nearby East Hampton, as a good rider.

Wilmot, reached at his home in Rhode Island, said he spoke Wednesday morning with Klein by telephone.

Asked if Klein mentioned riding again, Wilmot said, "I don't think you'd want to ask him that today."

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana gave Spanish tenor Jose Carreras an honorary membership in the Royal Academy of Music on Wednesday.

Carreras, who resumed his singing career two years ago after bone marrow surgery for leukemia, traveled here for the school's graduation ceremony.

Carreras

"It is a great honor because this is one of the most prestigious institutions for music in the world and it is a very special moment for me," the 44-year-old star said.

Carreras is scheduled to perform in Rome this weekend with opera stars Luciano Pavarotti and Placido Domingo as part of the World Cup soccer tournament finale.

German-born conductor Klaus Tennstedt, the conductor laureate of the London Philharmonic Orchestra, and international violinists Erich Gruenberg and Gyorgy Pauk, also were made honorary members of the academy.

NEW YORK (AP) — His friends include Marcello Mastroianni and Vanessa Redgrave. The Mayor of Rome gave him "Most Likable Person" of the year prize. From Milan to Naples to Florence, people stop him in the streets for autographs.

Not bad for a 10-year-old.

"I get letters saying to maintain my naturalness," said Salvatore "Toto" Cascio, the projectionist's invaluable assistant in "Cinema Paradiso," which won the Academy Award for best foreign film. "Everyone wants to have my picture."

"Cinema Paradiso" was Salvatore's film debut. In fact, he had never seen a movie since there was no theater in his hometown of Palermo, Sicily.

"They made the selection among 300 children," he explained Tuesday through an interpreter during an interview at a Manhattan hotel. "After this selection, myself and another boy were chosen. They then had another rehearsal and I was ultimately picked.

"I wasn't nervous. I slept very well."

Now, Salvatore is almost everywhere. He's completed five more films, appearing with Mastroianni, Redgrave and Peter Ustinov among others, and says he's seen "Cinema Paradiso" 16 times.

"Maybe I'll do another picture this summer," he said. "Then I will go on vacation."

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of women may consider talk-show host Phil Donahue to be the ideal husband, but the one who married him says he's far from perfect.

"Phil is the greatest husband in the world, and he's nothing to brag about," Marlo Thomas told the General Federation of Women's Clubs convention Tuesday.

Thomas

She says her husband shares a trait common among married men — always asking their wives where their shoes, keys and other belongings are.

"And the thing that kills me is, we know where those things are!"

Thomas also told the group at a Times Square hotel that women get a bum rap in the business world.

"A man has to be Joe McCarthy to be called ruthless," she said. "All a woman has to do is put you on hold."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former game show host Bill Cullen, whose many credits include "The Price is Right" and "To Tell The Truth," is critically ill with cancer, his manager said Wednesday.

"He has known for several months," manager George Spota said. He said Cullen's family has requested the type of cancer not be revealed, and declined to give any specifics about the illness.

Cullen, 69, is receiving round-the-clock medical care at his Los Angeles home, and has not been hospitalized for his disease, Spota said.

Bid for cup

ROME (AP) — Morocco said Wednesday it will seek to host the 1998 World Cup. If the bid is successful, it would become the first African nation to hold the premier soccer competition.

"After the participation of Egypt and Cameroon (in Italy), everyone knows the good worth of African soccer," said Abdellutif Semlali, Morocco's minister for youth. "I'm sure this will help Morocco to be accepted as a likely candidate to host the 1998 soccer World Cup."

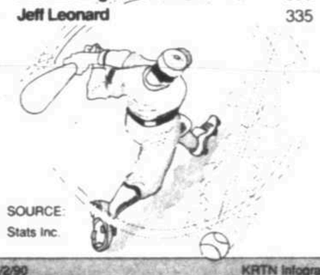

Egypt was eliminated in the first round, but tied Ireland and the Netherlands. Cameroon became the first African team to reach the quarterfinals, where it lost to England in overtime.

Hogs in limbo

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas still waits for a response from the Southeastern Conference more than two weeks after officially notifying the SEC that the Razorbacks would consider joining the league.

"We have not heard from them," said Arkansas athletic director Frank Broyles, who returned to work Tuesday after a two-week trip to the Soviet Union. "We thought we would have received some material.

But Broyles said he was not trying to rush the process and had no plans to contact the league. While Arkansas waits, it will be business as usual around the athletic department.

"I'm going to wait," Broyles said. "They (the SEC) know how important it is and as soon as they have something they want us to review, they'll send it to us."

Broyles has said it is in the interest of a school moving from one league to another to move quickly. "The speed with which the transition could be made is important. That will be a factor," he said recently.

Canseco, Sandberg top All-Stars

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Top vote-getter Jose Canseco led a parade of three Oakland Athletics on the American League starting All-Star team and Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs topped the balloting in the National League.

Canseco

Canseco led all players in fan balloting with 2,313,091 votes, the most since catcher Gary Carter received 2,785,407 in 1982 while playing for Montreal. Sandberg was next with 2,262,245 votes. The final voting was announced Wednesday by Major League Baseball.

The 61st All-Star Game is scheduled for Tuesday night at Wrigley Field in Chicago.

Canseco, who signed a 5-year, $23.5 million contract last week, has been elected twice before as an AL starter. Sandberg will be making his fifth straight start for the NL and sixth overall.

Joining Canseco in the starting AL outfield will be Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr. and Oakland's Rickey Henderson, who will be making his sixth All-Star start. Griffey is the first player in Mariners' history to be elected as an All-Star starter.

Canseco, who recently came off the disabled list, is hitting .300 with 20 home runs and 50 RBIs.

Starting in the AL infield will be third baseman Wade Boggs of Boston, shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. of Baltimore, second baseman Steve Sax of New York and first baseman Mark McGwire of Oakland.

For Boggs, who is batting .299, it's his sixth straight All-Star appearance.

Cleveland rookie Sandy Alomar was voted to start for the AL at catcher. Only two other Cleveland players — Ray Fosse in 1971 and Manny Trillo in 1983 — have been picked as starters by the fans.

Cecil Fielder of Detroit, who leads the AL with 27 homers and 70 RBIs, was runner-up to McGwire at first base with 1,151,099 votes.

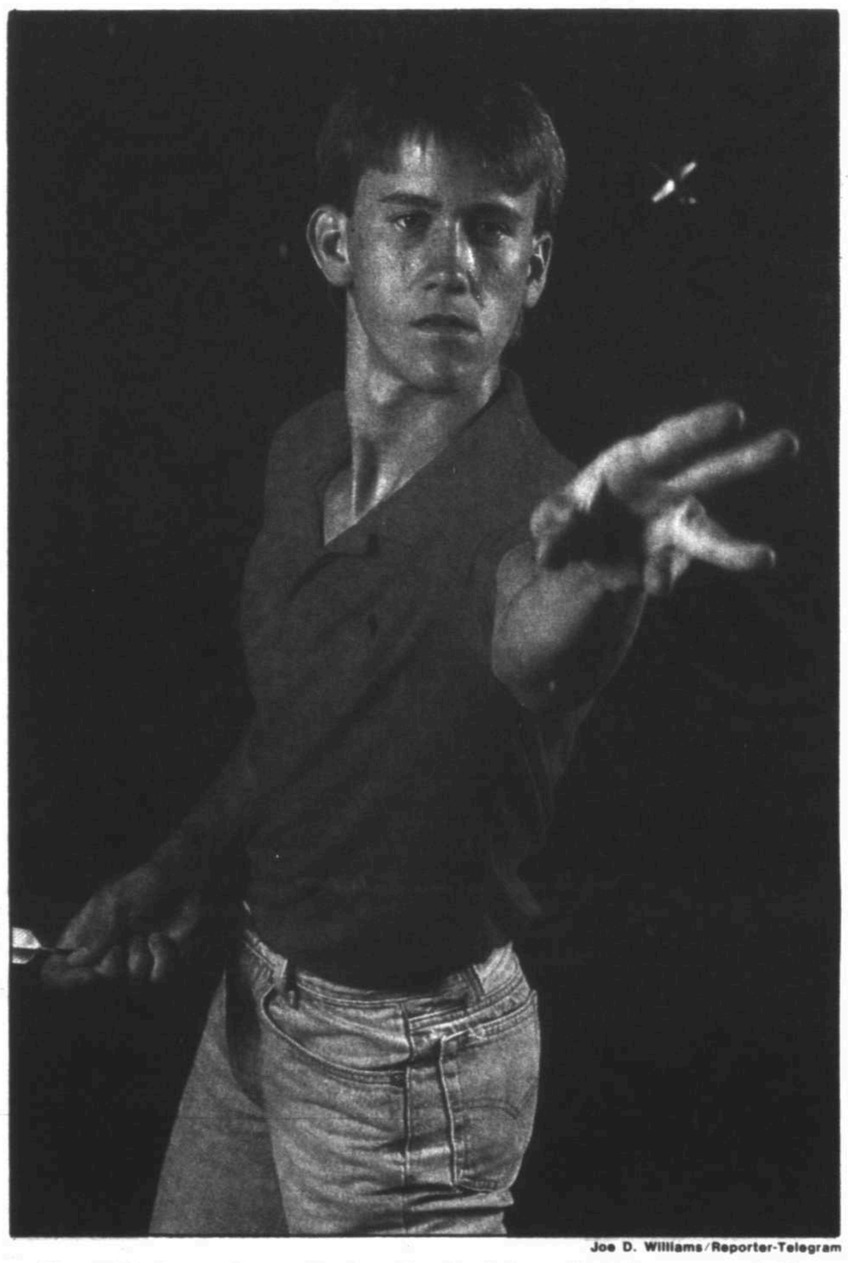

Chicago White Sox shortstop Ozzie Guillen, hitting .322, was second to Ripken with 1,054,370 votes.

Starting with Sandberg in the NL infield will be first baseman Will Clark of San Francisco, third baseman Chris Sabo of Cincinnati and Ozzie Smith of St. Louis, who will be making his eighth consecutive start at shortstop. Smith was the top-vote getter in 1987 and '88.

Sandberg hit .377 with 14 home runs and 25 RBI during June to win the NL Player of the Month award. Overall, he is hitting .344 with 24 homers and 56 RBIs. He has made only two errors and has 15

Steve Marlowe demonstrates the technique that has caused his peers to call him the best dart thrower in the Permian Basin, and one of the best in Texas.

Darts gaining ground in Basin

■ The Permian Basin Dart Association has tripled in size over the past two years, and it will host its largest tourney ever in August.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

But for a late surge by the team from Lubbock, the Dust Bowl Cup would be resting comfortably back in the Permian Basin.

The Dust Bowl Cup?

Yes, the much-sought-after plume that dart teams from Lubbock, San Angelo, Abilene and the Permian Basin Dart Association (PBDA) shoot for once every three months at alternating sites, including last Saturday in San Angelo.

It is a trophy that has occupied a place in the halls of the Midland-based PBDA twice in the last year and a half, and it is an object of pride that PBDA president Ronny Berry assures us will soon be making its way here again.

"The match was close all the way," said Berry, who is serving his second term as president of the PBDA which has grown from a meager membership of 26 when he assumed the helm in 1988 to its present 72.

"They just pulled away from us in the last event, the four-man team competition, and we finished second," he described the outing, which customarily involves the 12 best throwers from each of the four West Texas associations. "But Lubbock has about 360 members," he added. "When they take their top 12 players to the Dust Bowl, they're the team to beat.

"Still, we started league play in the PBDA last year, and our dart players have gotten better by 50 or 60 percent. We won the Dust Bowl twice in 1989, and we've got a great dart facility here, one of the best you'll find anywhere. And we've got one of the best players in Texas.

"We'll be winning that Cup again pretty soon."

Darts, a game of English origin, has its roots in pubs and taverns from Brighton to Cork. Fast becoming an American pastime of similar ardor and increasing skill, darts here are thrown under the long arm of American Darts Organization (ADO) rules and quite normally in bars.

The PBDA's league, currently made up of six teams with six players each, plays its matches every Tuesday in both Fast Freddy's and Rumors II, Midland saloons which cater to the sports-minded. However, it is not necessarily played by drinkers because it is played best by Steve Marlowe, a 19-year-old lefty who has been mentioned several times in Bull's Eye magazine for his winnings in ADO sanctioned events all over Texas.

"Steve has only been throwing for a couple of years, and I've never seen anyone get so good so fast," Berry said. "I'd definitely rate him in the Top 10 in Texas, and in the next

Penalty kicks lift West Germany into final

■ England's downfall in Wednesday's semifinal sets up a rematch between last year's finalists in the World Cup

Associated Press

ROME — West Germany and Argentina. Again.

Four years after they decided the World Cup, in Argentina's favor, the teams will meet for the soccer championship once more.

West Germany got to its third successive final and fifth overall, beating England 4-3 Tuesday night in a penalty kick shootout at Turin. The game was tied 1-1 through 120 minutes, just as it was when Argentina did its part on Tuesday night, upsetting Italy 4-3 in their shootout.

"The top four teams are so close to each other to say who really is the best," German captain Lothar Matthaeus said.

"The match was more difficult than expected," West Germany coach Franz Beckenbauer added. "We can't remember such a good and dramatic match as this one. Both teams had reached their peak for tonight."

The Germans went ahead when Andreas Brehme's shot after Lothar Matthaeus tapped a free kick to him struck defender Paul Parker and soared over goalie Peter Shilton at 59 minutes. England tied it 21 minutes later as the suddenly revitalized Gary Lineker capitalized on a defensive mistake for his fourth goal of the tournament and third in two games.

In the shootout, 23-year-old German goalkeeper Bodo Illgner, in his first World Cup, went against 40-year-old Peter Shilton, the record holder for international appearances.

Shilton just missed several of West Germany's shots, but Brehme, Matthaeus, Karlheinz Riedle and Olaf Thon were successful.

England's Lineker, Peter Beardsley and David Platt also made shots before Stuart Pearce's kick was right at Illgner, who stopped it with his feet. When Chris Waddle missed high and wide, the Germans were in their fifth final. They won in 1954 and 1974, lost in the finals of 1982 and '86.

"It was a seesaw battle and both teams deserve compliments," Beckenbauer

Bauer holds lead, Fignon drops out

Associated Press

ROUEN, France — While Canada's Steve Bauer remained the overall leader, one of his chief pursuers, Frenchman Laurent Fignon, again experienced disappointment as he dropped out of the Tour de France during Wednesday's fifth stage.

Fignon, who lost a dramatic finish to Greg LeMond in last year's event, fell victim to several mishaps that wore on him mentally and physically over the last three days

Bauer managed to keep his lead after the rain-soaked longest stage of the three-week race, 187 miles through northern France. Dutch rider Gerrit Solleveld won Wednesday's fifth leg by more than four minutes over Belgium's Johan Museeuw. Bauer again finished back in the pack, but still has a 30-second overall lead over Ronan Pensec of France, with Frans Maassen of the Netherlands dropping to third, 33 seconds back.

LeMond finished in the pack on Wednesday, leaving him more than 10 minutes off the overall lead.

The fifth stage, over a moderatlely flat route, became interesting at the 77-mile mark, when a number of riders fell and held back a larger group, including Fignon. The Frenchman was involved in another delay on Tuesday.

After a refreshment break, Fignon slowed, turned and rode against the Mets do it again

Pinch-hitter Mike Marshall's sacrifice fly snapped an eighth-inning tie and Howard Johnson followed with a two-run homer as the New York Mets beat the Houston Astros 7-4 Wednesday night for their 21st victory in 24 games.

The Astros, last in the National League West, have lost 16 of their last 17 road games.

Dwight Gooden (8-5) pitched with a blister on his right index finger and worked eight innings, allowing four runs and seven hits. John Franco retired the side in the ninth for his 15th save.

Darryl Stawberry hit a three-run homer in the first inning for New York and Johnson also drove in three runs.

The Astros rallied from a 4-0 deficit with three runs in the sixth, including Franklin Stubbs' two-run homer, and Rich Gedman's sacrifice fly in the seventh.

Pinch-hitter Keith Miller led off the Mets eighth with a single off loser Juan Agosto (4-2) and was forced at second by Mackey Sasser. Kevin Elster singled to move Sasser to third and Marshall followed with a sacrifice fly to right field. Johnson followed with his 13th homer off reliever Larry Andersen.

Giants 9, Cardinals 2

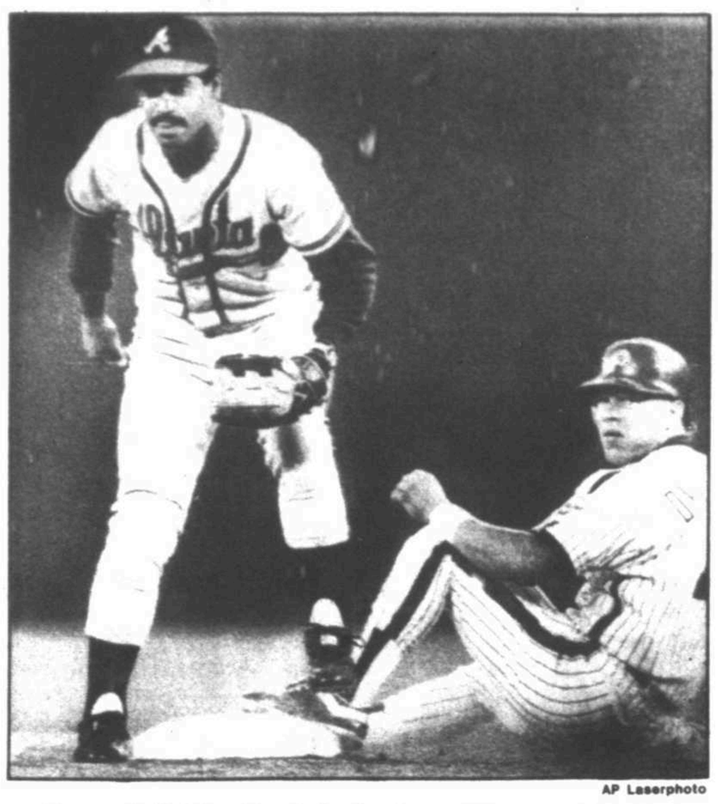

San Francisco scored eight late runs, including a two-run homer by pinch-hitter Bill Bathe in the seventh, to beat St. Louis.

The victory completed a three-game sweep for the Giants, who have won 14 of their last 18 at Candlestick Park after losing their first eight home games this season.

Trailing 2-1, the Giants rallied for four runs in the seventh and four more in the eighth.

Jose Uribe and Dave Anderson scored in the seventh when third baseman Terry Pendleton threw wild to first after fielding Brett Butler's bunt single off reliever Ken Dayley.

With Butler on second, Bathe hit an opposite-field homer to give the Giants 5-2 lead. Bathe is 3-for-9 this season as a pinch-hitter.

Braves infielder Alex Infante drops this one at his feet, and Len Dykstra of the Phillies slides safely into second base midway through Wednesday night's game.

National

Expos 5 Reds 3

Dennis Martinez pitched a five-hitter over eight innings and Mike Aldrete and Andres Galarraga had two RBIs each in a five-run first inning to lead Montreal over Cincinnati.

Martinez (6-6), who had lost his two previous starts, struck out four and walked two before yielding to Dave Schmidt, who notched his 10th save with perfect relief in the ninth.

The Expos, who had lost six of their previous seven games, took a 5-0 lead off Scott Scudder (1-2), making his first start for the Reds since being recalled from Triple-A Nashville on Saturday.

Paul O'Neill hit a two-run homer for the Reds in the eighth, his 11th of the season.

Braves 4, Phillies 1

Dale Murphy homered and knocked in two runs as the Atlanta Braves beat Philadelphia and concluded their first winning road trip since September of 1989.

The Braves, who started the night in fifth place in the National League West, 16½ games behind the front-running Cincinnati Reds, wound up their current road swing at 4-2.

With Murphy hitting his 366th career homer in the fourth and an RBI single in the eighth, it eased the way for Tom Glavine's second straight victory.

Glavine (5-5) worked 6⅔ innings, giving up six hits, striking out one and walking four, before getting help from Rick Luecken.

Padres 5, Pirates 4

Eric Show earned his first victory in more than a year and hit a two-run single Wednesday night as the San Diego Padres ended a seven-game losing streak with a 5-4 win over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Show (1-6) entered the game in the second inning and allowed one earned run over five innings to win for the first time since last June 19 when he made his next-to-last start before ending the year with a back injury.

O's Horn in on Hough

Associated Press

Designated hitter Sam Horn, recalled from the minors earlier in the week, hit a tie-breaking two-run homer to key a four-run sixth inning and the Baltimore Orioles pounded the Texas Rangers 9-4 Wednesday night.

Texas starter Charlie Hough (7-6) walked Cal Ripken with one out in the sixth and Horn, recalled from Class AAA Rochester on Tuesday, followed with his fourth homer of the season. Before the inning was over, Steve Finley hit a sacrifice fly and Bill Ripken had a run-scoring single.

Baltimore starter Dave Johnson (8-4) yielded four runs and five hits in five-plus innings and is 5-0 in eight starts following a Baltimore defeat. The Orioles had lost 14 of 19 prior to the game, which drew a season-high Arlington Stadium crowd of 41,242.

Jeff Huson's run-scoring double in the sizth chased Johnson and Rafael Palmeiro's RBI single off Kevin Hickey cut Baltimore's lead to 6-4.

The Orioles added three runs off John Barfield and Brad Arnsberg in the seventh, two unearned, to make it 9-4. Errors by shortstop Huson and right fielder Ruben Sierra helped the Orioles, who had RBI singles from Craig Worthington and Finley.

Brewers 7, Athletics 1

In his first start since his no-hitter, Oakland's Dave Stewart was battered for six runs in 2⅓ innings, including homers by Greg Vaughn, Bill Spiers and Dave Parker, and Milwaukee took the game.

The outing was Stewart's shortest ever as a starter for the A's and his shortest since he went two innings for Texas against Chicago in September 1985.

Ron Robinson (2-1), acquired in a June 9 trade from Cincinnati, scattered eight hits in pitching his first complete game in six years and blanked the A's until the eighth when Thomas Howard singled with two out and Mike Gallego doubled him home.

Robinson walked two and struck out five in his second major league complete game. His first came in 1984 with the Reds.

American

Red Sox 4, Twins 3

Dwight Evans hit a two-out, three-run home run in the ninth inning, lifting Boston to a victory over Minnesota.

Evans 10th homer of the season came after Wade Boggs led off with a check-swing single to left. After Jody Reed fouled out, Tony Pena's single moved Boggs to third.

Mariners 3, Indians 2

Randy Johnson, the AL's pitcher of the month for June, started July with his sixth straight decision as Seattle beat Cleveland.

Tracy Jones homered for the Mariners, who have won six of their last seven games.

Johnson (9-3) is 6-0 with a 2.47 ERA in seven starts since June 2; when he pitched a no-hitter against Detroit.

Blue Jays 4, Angels 2

Seldom-used utilityman Tom Lawless singled home a key run with his first hit of the season and Toronto survived a 12-hit attack and beat California.

John Cerutti (5-6) gave up nine hits in 5⅔ innings but only two runs. On Tuesday night, Toronto beat the Angels 5-2 despite 15 California hits.

Royals 13, Yankees 6

Bo Jackson's towering three-run homer keyed a seven-run seventh inning Wednesday night, leading the Kansas City Royals to a 13-6 victory over woeful New York, which lost despite a season-high 18 hits.

Jackson's 450-foot blast answered a three-run shot by New York's Bob Geren in the top of the inning that gave the Yankees a short-lived 5-4 lead.

Tigers 10, White Sox 7

Mike Heath hit a three-run homer in the 12th inning, powering Detroit to a victory over Chicago.

Scott Lusader, who earlier had hit a three-run homer, singled with one out in the 12th and took second on a single by pinch-hitter Gary Ward before Heath hit his third homer of the season off loser Ken Patterson (0-2).

Foreman on July card

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — George Foreman, hoping to earn a shot at the heavyweight title, will continue his comeback against Canadian champ Ken Lakusta July 31 in Edmonton.

Foreman told a news conference Wednesday that he would prefer to be in the ring with Mike Tyson or heavyweight champion Buster Douglas, but said they are "literally afraid of George Foreman."

After fighting Lakusta, Foreman will appear on a card with Tyson in Atlantic City Sept. 22 and then hopes to get a shot at Tyson.

Foreman, who held the heavyweight title from January 1973 to October 1974, has won 22 straight fights since returning to the ring in 1987.

Douglas won the championship with a 10th-round knockout of Tyson in Tokyo last February.

Foreman and Tyson both fought on the same card June 16 with Foreman scoring a second round knockout of Brazilian Adilson Rodrigues.

Canadians Scott Olsen and Mathew Hilton will be appearing on the undercard. Lakusta won the Canadian title from Tony Morrison in a fight in April.

Smith is having an off-year so far, hitting .224 with seven errors. But his 1,337,815 votes beat Cincinnati's Barry Larkin by 79,220. Larkin is hitting .317.

San Diego's Benito Santiago was elected for the second straight year at catcher but will not be able to play because of a broken arm. Mike Scioscia of Los Angeles was the runner-up at catcher with 571,378 votes to Santiago's 1,785,412.

The NL outfield consists of Chicago's Andre Dawson, Philadelphia's Lenny Dykstra and San Francisco's Kevin Mitchell.

Dawson will be making his sixth straight start and Mitchell (19 homers and 45 RBIs) will be starting for the second year in a row. Dykstra, the majors' leading hitter at .368, is the first Phillies' outfielder to be elected since Greg Luzinski in 1978.

Perhaps the biggest oversight by the fans was Barry Bonds' ninth-place finish in the NL outfield. Bonds is hitting .329 with 14 homers, 55 RBIs and 21 stolen bases.

Defending division champion San Francisco and Chicago each placed two players on the starting NL team.

Giants third baseman Matt Williams, who has 16 homers and 64 RBIs, finished second to Sabo (16 homers, 42 RBIs) with 812,543 votes.

The reserves and pitchers for both leagues will be announced Thursday.

said. "But we deserved to win.

"This is the result, but there also is a bit of luck."

"Both teams were so balanced," England manager Bobby Robson said. "When you get to the best four teams in the world, there is not going to be much difference.

"I prefer you play until a team scores the first goal. Someone is going to crack and a goal will be scored. ... I feel at this level, with this importance, I say we play on."

West Germany and Argentina will play on. The two most consistent nations of the last 20 years and both after their third world championships, play Sunday in Rome. Argentina attempts to match Brazil's feat of three titles in four tournaments. West Germany is the first team to make the final in three consecutive tournaments.

"Argentina is the same good team as in 1986," Beckenbauer said. "I expect it to be a very good match."

The excitement on the field was preceded by violence in two areas of Turin.

First, a clash erupted in a park where English fans had been sent to sleep. Police used tear gas to disperse hundreds of Italians, with 43 Italians arrested, said Turin police chief Antonio Beradino.

Witnesses said some Italians wore scarves in the black and white colors of the Turin soccer team Juventus. In 1985, at Heysel Stadium in Brussels, 39 people, most of them Italians, died during a European Cup championship game against the English team Liverpool.

The gates of the park were closed and guarded by police. The Italians, however, broke through the gate and attacked the sleeping English fans.

Witnesses said the English ripped down advertising stands to defend themselves. The Italians then began throwing rocks.

The British fans complained they had been locked in the park and prevented from going out. Many said they were hungry and could not go to buy food.

"We are treated worse than prisoners" said David Reeves, 28, of London. "We came here to a sports festival, but the police are very mean toward us, and cannot even defend us. When the Italian fans arrived to attack us, we had to defend ourselves."

Several hours later Wednesday, Manfred Girr, a 23-year-old German, was stabbed in the back and critically wounded when a fight broke out near the railway station. Girr underwent surgery and doctors estimated a one-month recovery period.

Some witnesses told police that Girr was attacked by four English fans. Others said the nationality of the assailants was not clear.

DART: 501 is game of choice

two years I think he'll be in the top three. The pros will be asking him to play with them."

Steve's father, Bill Marlowe, is also a PBDA member in good standing. He likes to stress the fact that bar rooms do not make the game. Rather, he says, darts are what makes darts fun.

"Steve and I don't drink, we don't smoke and we don't use drugs," says Bill. "You don't have to do those things to enjoy the art of dart throwing.

"We have a lot of non-drinking people that play darts. And darts is fast becoming one of the best growing sports there is in the United States."

"We're hoping," adds PBDA vice president Chris Yates, "that interest in the sport will grow like it has in bowling, and that purses for ADO sanctioned events will get as big as some of the purses you see in bowling.

"We want to be known as a family-oriented organization," he said. "We've started a Dust Bowl team for ladies, and we want people to know that anyone can become a member of the PBDA."

At only $10 to join, plus $2 a night for league play, the PBDA is one of life's few remaining bargains.

Fast Freddy's, a veritable storehouse of pool tables and dart boards, was the setting for one of the PBDA's Dust Bowl Cup victories in 1989 and is much appreciated by area throwers.

But Rumors II has done even more to cater to the needs of the PBDA in recent weeks as owner Tommy Gammage — a PDBA member himself — set aside an entire upstairs room dedicated soley to ADO sanctioned events. PBDA members hastened to help remodel the room with fresh paneling and stock it with all the necessary accouterments such as top-quality dart boards, scoreboards and light fixtures.

Only the darts, which can be purchased at either of the PBDA's home sites, need be supplied by the individual.

"There is a lot involved in picking the right darts. These cost me $150," said Steve Marlowe, holding out three sleek, elongated projectiles. "They're 97 percent tungsten steel, so they should last.

"It took me a long time to find just the right ones." And it took many hours of practice for Steve to reach his high level of competitive play.

"When I first got started, I'd practice nearly five hours a day," he said. "Now I'm down to just about an hour a day, but it seems to be enough to keep me going."

Steve is the ADO representative for the PBDA. He handles correspondence with the governing body and keeps track of national and regional tournaments. That he has made good his selection of darts and hours of practice is obvious, both by his wall of plaques and trophies and by his winnings, which have covered the cost of his equipment several times over.

League play in the PBDA is conducted to fulfill the players' zeal for the game, to improve their competitive level and to capture the much-desired league plaques.

But ADO-sanctioned tourneys are the payoff, and a big one is coming to Midland. The PBDA will host its biggest tournament ever, Aug. 3-5, at Rumors II with a total purse of $2,500.

"A guy can get into six different events for $10 an event, and we'll have several events for the ladies, too," Berry said. "And I expect this thing to grow.

"Dart players will be coming from all over to compete in this tournament, and when they see the facility we've got here they'll be back. A lot of ADO tournaments are played in places that use portable boards hung on metal pipe. Ours is all built in.

"I look for this tournament to top out closer to $10,000 three years from now," he said.

Ever-popular 501 and cricket are the dart player's game of choice, although 301 and 1,001 are not uncommon. The object of 501 is to start with just that many points and decrease that figure by however many points scored until you hit exactly zero and do so while hitting a double, which is the only way to "go out".

Cricket (called "Chase" by the English) uses only the 15-through-20 spaces and the bull's-eye (termed "bull" outside the U.S.) Players or teams must score three of each score being used, which is obtainable more speedily through the use of double and triple hits, then go after points by hitting the spaces their opponents have yet to complete reach their three hits.

"There is a lot of strategy in these games that people don't realize," Berry said. "But unfortunately, a lot of people are afraid to get involved because they're afraid they aren't good enough.

"The fact is, none of us were good enough to win when we got started. But getting started is the only way to get good enough. And it's not that hard."

Bill Marlowe states: "There is no such thing as a person who could not become a good dart player. There's a player in Lubbock who plays about as well as I do, and he throws from a wheelchair."

The PBDA, which boasts members from both Midland and Odessa — and even has a member from Kermit — is not all dollars and cents. The competitive spirit is kindled among the membership every Tuesday all in the name of improvement and plaques.

At their own expense, simply for temporary possession of a cup, PBDA members join in Dust Bowl play as representatives for the good honor of the Permian Basin.

And just this year, the PBDA sponsored a tournament for cancer-stricken member Mike Carlton.

"We raised $1,013 for Mike, and he cried when we handed him the check," said Berry.

BIKE: No race today

pack looking for his team car. He then got off the bike and got in the car, officially quitting the race for the third time in five years after winning in 1983 and '84.

"It's been a bad year," Cyrille Guimard, director of Fignon's Castorama team, said. "He's cursed."

In May, Fignon was hurt in a bad fall at the Tour of Italy. Since the start of the Tour de France, he was plagued on Monday by a flat tire and a minor fall. On Tuesday, he was stopped by a fall of others.

Lendl struggles, but makes semis

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Ivan Lendl's grass jaw took a pounding, his legs buckled and he stumbled into Wimbledon's semifinals Wednesday against a spunky little slugger playing the match of his life.

Lendl, the best player never to win Wimbledon, survived an uninspired effort that perfectly matched the dreary, rainy English weather and beat 120th-ranked Brad Pearce 6-4, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4 to set up a meeting with 1988 champ Stefan Edberg.

Edberg, a 6-3, 6-2, 6-4 winner over Christian Bergstrom, had as easy a time as three-time champion Boris Becker, who beat Brad Gilbert 6-4, 6-4, 6-1. Becker will next meet serve-blaster Goran Ivanisevic, who dealt out 25 aces in downing Kevin Curren 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-7 (8-10), 6-3.

Ivanisevic, the first unseeded player to reach the semis at Wimbledon since 1986, upset Becker in the first round of the French Open last month.

After a four-hour rain delay that scattered quarterfinal matches all over the All England Club, Lendl seemed as if he'd just been woken from an afternoon snooze when he took Centre Court against Pearce, then appeared to sleepwalk through much of the match.

Pearce, a 24-year-old former UCLA star who didn't get past the first round in his only other Wimbledon appearance in 1986, stood almost a head shorter than Lendl but didn't yield anything when it came to attacking the net and booming back serves.

Lendl, trying to finesse his way to victory, flicked a pair of winning lobs to open up the match and took advantage of Pearce's errors to win the first set. But the 5-foot-9 Pearce, hustling like a reincarnation of Ken Rosewall, threw a scare into Lendl by breaking him in the second game of the second set and moving to a 4-1 lead.

Lendl finally bore down, took the gift of a double-fault by Pearce in the on break point in the ninth game and held serve to complete a streak of five straight games for a 2-0 lead in sets.

Lendl buckled once more when he double-faulted at match point in his next service, but that ended the ugly affair with a service winner and forehand long by Pearce.

Edberg, the third seed and a finalist last year, put on a classic serve-and-volley show on Court 14 against Bergstrom, a fellow Swede, as officials changed the program after the rain delay to have all the matches played simultaneously.

Over 100 detained in violence

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Two people died and nearly 200 were arrested after street celebrations turned violent on Wednesday following Argentina's victory over Italy in World Cup soccer.

Thousands took to the streets of Buenos Aires and other cities across the country to celebrate Argentina's advance to the World Cup final for the second straight time.

Revelry turned chaotic, however, when several hundred youths began breaking into shops in the capital. Police said nearly 200 were arrested Tuesday night, and 165 remained in jail Wednesday.

Proposed pipeline may draw opposition

■ A proposed pipeline that would be built under the waters of Puget Sound to keep tanker traffic out is expected to be fought by environmentalists.

By Hal Spencer

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — A Canadian oil pipeline company has announced it will seek to build a pipeline under the environmentally sensitive waters of Puget Sound to keep tanker traffic out of the narrow, rocky channels.

Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd. revived an idea rejected a decade ago by environmentalists and the state after a bitter fight. Friends of the Earth Director Dave Ortman said the new proposal likely will draw the same powerful opposition.

The announcement, made in Vancouver, British Columbia, followed by hours the release of a regional oil-spill task force report that recommends serious consideration of an offshore terminal and pipeline to reduce the risk of oil spills in Puget Sound.

Trans Mountain proposes building a $500 million offshore terminal and connecting pipeline at Low Point, which is about 12 miles west of Port Angeles on the Olympic Peninsula. The company said the terminal would service 350 tankers and barges annually, allowing them to unload there instead of going into the Rosario Strait and the Strait of Georgia.

The terminal also could be used to load tankers with crude oil piped from Canada. That oil currently is hauled by tanker from the Port of Vancouver, the company said.

A new pipeline from the terminal would connect with existing pipelines to refineries in northern Puget Sound and would connect with existing pipeline at Burlington, Wash., the company said. Details were scanty, but a pipeline necessarily would run underwater for part of its route.

Trans Mountain first proposed an offshore terminal near Low Point in 1981 as part of a proposal to transport Alaska crude oil to Midwestern states. The plan finally was killed as environmentally unfeasible. Trans Mountain will use much of its earlier environmental analysis to support its new endeaver, spokesman Dick Stokes said.

Ortman, a veteran of the earlier environmental fight, said environmentalists would fight the new proposal, too. "It's time to think about not accommodating the oil industry in Puget Sound either by pipeline or tanker," he said.

But a regional task force said today that given increasing traffic of crude oil in the sound, a solid way to reduce the risk of spills may be to move crude oil by pipeline instead of tankers.

New gushers spurring more horizontal drilling

■ Emboldened by some recent gushers, companies such as Oryx Energy, Burlington Resources and Union Pacific Resources are expanding their horizontal drilling activity.

By Thomas C. Hayes
N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — In the long history of the Texas oil industry, there has rarely been a gusher as powerful as either of those that burst to the surface in the aging oil patch southwest of San Antonio last month.

In an area regarded as well past its oil-producing prime, the wells surged with 20,000 and 12,000 barrels a day, respectively, in a field where most wells produce less than 500.

The oil was found using horizontal drilling, a technique developed in the late 1970s but just now coming into its own because of improved technology.

In this process, the drill begins by heading straight down, as it would in a conventional well, then slowly curves as it descends until it is moving horizontally through a layer of what the driller has calculated to be oil-bearing rock.

Emboldened by their success in south Texas, a handful of independent oil companies, including Oryx Energy, Union Pacific Resources and Burlington Resources, are expanding their use of horizontal drilling to other regions of similar geological character.

Some large energy companies, including British Petroleum, ARCO, Texaco, Amoco and Conoco, are also adopting the technique, although to a lesser extent.

"This is a shot in the arm for the oil industry," said Rogr Abel, general manager of production engineering and research at Conoco Inc. in Houston.

"Horizontal technology has been responsible for the upsurge in land drilling in the United States."

There were 1,020 rigs active in the United States on July 2, compared with 817 in the corresponding week a year ago, according to Baker Hughes Inc., the oilfield service company.

The payoff from horizontal drilling could be at least several billion barrels of oil added to the nation's production in the next 15 or 20 years, industry experts say.

The Energy Department estimates the nation's proven, recoverable reserves at 27 billion barrels.

Horizontal drilling is especially effective in geological formations where drilling had been uneconomical: places where amounts of oil once thought too small to be worth tapping have been trapped in vertical "fractures" spread through the same layer.

One horizontal well can penetrate several of these fractures, increasing the potential for recovering large amounts of oil at a lower cost per barrel.

Indeed, drillers in south Texas have made big profits even with oil prices below $17 a barrel because horizontal drilling has slashed drilling costs to $4 a barrel from $12.

Averaging about $1 million, a horizontal well is twice as costly as a vertical well, but some production rates have been four or five times as great and drilling costs are often recovered within a year.

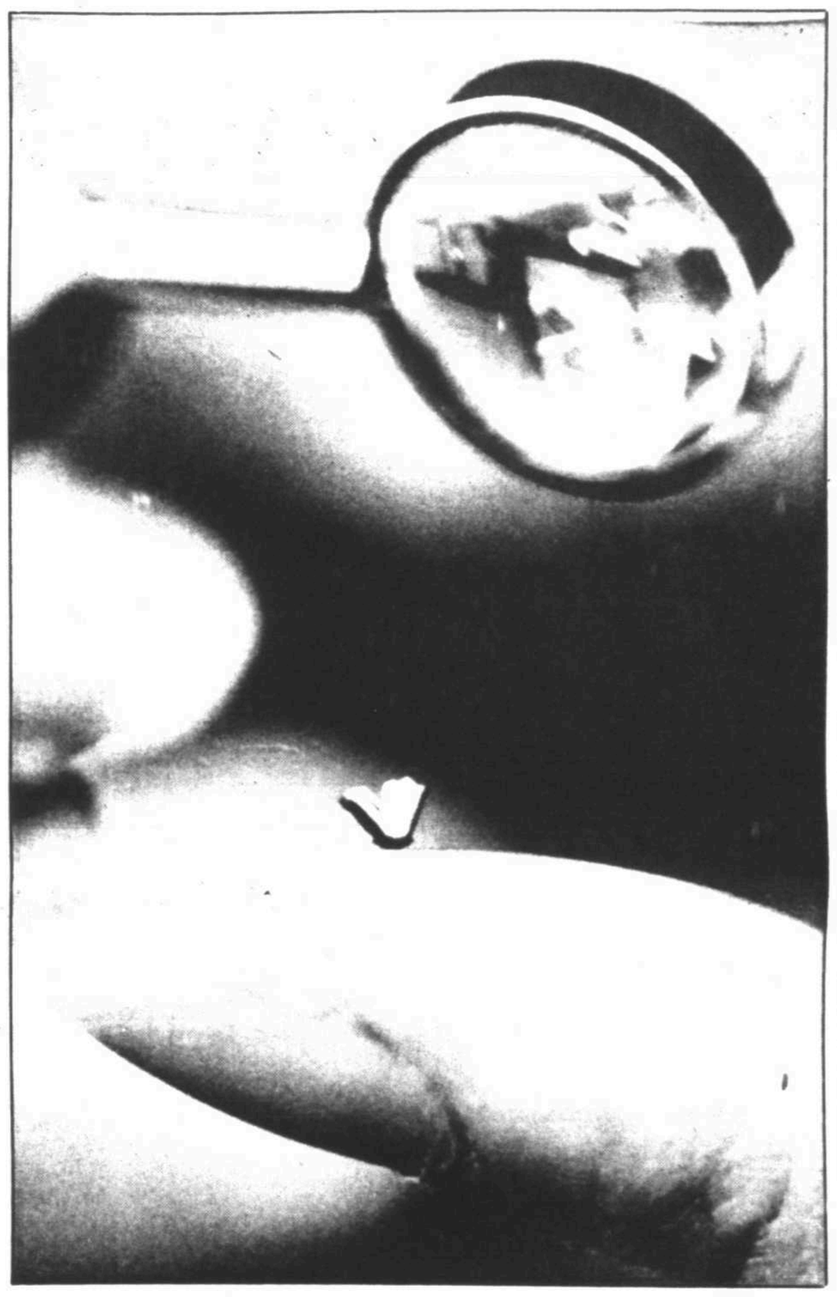

One drawback is that flow rates vary widely from well to well and in some cases have fallen off rapidly after several months.

The same technique is also being used to explore for and tap gas reserves.

Already, the market for horizontal-drilling equipment and well-completion technology has grown to perhaps $900 million this year from $50 million in 1988. said James L. Carroll, an analyst who follows the oilfield service industry for Paine Webber Inc. in New York.

Improvements in drilling technology in the last five years, as well as advances in computer imaging and seismic analysis of underground reservoirs, are vital components of the surge in horizontal drilling.

Oilfield specialists can now monitor by computer the approximate location and direction of a drill bit as it cuts into and across rock layers.

Compaq Computer opens in East German market

■ Houston-based Compaq Computer Corp. has authorized 13 new dealerships that have opened in East Germany.

HOUSTON (AP) — Compaq Computer Corp. has joined West German officials to open 13 dealerships in East Germany this week.

The Houston-based corporation authorized the new dealers Monday in its first move into the Eastern Europe market.

Later this month, Compaq will open a sales office in West Berlin to offer service and technical information to the new dealers. Compaq also has authorized four dealers in Yugoslavia to sell its complete line of machines.

Compaq officials said the East European German market holds enormous potential, with only an estimated 1 million to 2 million personal computers in place compared with 50 million in Western Europe. Compaq already has 1,500 dealerships in Western and Central Europe.

Using its European base in Munich, West Germany, Compaq jumped into the burgeoning Eastern Europe market more quickly than rivals like Apple Computer, which has a strong base in France, said Thomas Galvin, computer industry analyst with Smith Barney in New York.

While substantial sales might not come for up to five years, Galvin said "getting in early will probably lead to good economic opportunity" for Compaq, providing the Eastern European economies continue to open to Western technology.

Compaq said it is moving first into East Germany and Yugoslavia because their currencies are convertible to Western currency. The next market priorities include Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and the Soviet Union — countries more slowly converting their currencies. These countries have a combined population of more than 350 million.

'Fine-tuning' savings can make difference

By Scott Burns

Burns

Q. I am a 32 year old electrical engineer employed at a large electric utility. My salary is $4,490 a month and I am trying to make some investment decisions for the future. My main goal is to accumulate some savings and some college funds for my two small children.

Our monthly living expenses total $4,105 a month including a $900 house payment, $250 car payment, and $250 for credit cards; about $1440 a month goes to living expenses; and $340 a month goes to FICA while $700 goes to Federal Income Taxes. In addition, we save a total of $485 a month, with $200 a month in a money market account; $135 a month in the company thrift plan; and $150 a month in a cash value life insurance policy.

The thrift plan is 3 percent of my salary and the company matches it 50 percent up to 6 percent. The life insurance policy, in the amount of $275,000 builds cash value and has paid 11 percent in each of the last two years. I feel this is a good way to save for college since I can withdraw up to 80 percent of the cash value and still continue the policy during the college years.

A. Most of what I am going to suggest could be considered "fine tuning" — but I think you will be surprised at how much of a difference it will make:

■ CHECK YOUR INCOME TAX WITHHOLDING. You are having taxes withheld at the rate of $8400 a year. This implies a taxable income of about $44,370 and only about $9,500 in deductions. In fact, you have 4 personal deductions worth $8,000 and $1620 in thrift plan deductions... but you also have deductions for your house which I'd bet come to about $750 a month. What you should do is go to your employer, fill out the W-4 form, and have your income tax withholding adjusted downward.

My calculator says your taxable income should come to about $35,000 and your tax bill to $5,800 — $2,600 a year LESS than you are withholding. That's $216 a month.

■ DOUBLE YOUR THRIFT PLAN COMMITMENT TO $270 A MONTH. This is the best place to save since the company is supplementing your efforts. It will give you an effective personal savings rate of 9 percent. It will also reduce your tax bill at 28 cents on the dollar.

■ ASK YOUR COMPANY ABOUT PROVISIONS THEY MAY HAVE FOR BORROWING FROM THE THRIFT PLAN. If it is possible, this might be as useful as being able to draw from a cash value life insurance policy.

■ TAKE THE REMAINDER OF YOUR INCREASED CASH FLOW AND ACCELERATE YOUR MORTGAGE PAYMENTS. Increasing your mortgage payment by about $100 a month will reduce the term of your mortgage from

Foreign drilling

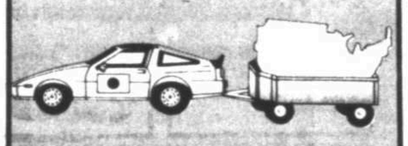

HOUSTON (AP) — Many oil companies are expanding their emphasis on foreign exploration and development and increasing their overseas energy reserves, said an annual survey on the industry released Tuesday.

The 1990 Arthur Andersen Oil & Gas Reserve Disclosures survey noted that U.S. oil and gas industry indicators improved last year and passed milestones in foreign operations.

For the first time last year, the survey companies' foreign oil reserves exceeded domestic reserves, oil production from foreign sources surpassed domestic oil production and total exploration and production expenditures outside the U.S. outdistanced domestic exploration and development spending.

"The broad conclusion we can draw from this year's study is that the world oil industry is entering a new era, and U.S. exploration and production companies are successfully adapting to the changing environment," said Victor A. Burk, managing director of oil and gas industry services for Arthur Andersen.

The 11th annual study is a review and analysis of substantially all the reserve quantity, value, cost and other financial data filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission by 236 public companies for the five years from 1985 through 1989.

Japan dominates

DETROIT (AP) — The owners of Japanese cars found the fewest problems with their 1990 vehicles, according to a survey by J.D. Power and Associates.

The only U.S. nameplate in the top five of the list released Monday was General Motors Corp.'s Buick Division, according to the Agoura Hills, Calif., research company.

Power said 26,000 new-vehicle owners responded to the initial quality study, which looks at their evaluations of the 1990 models after three months of ownership.

Toyota's year-old Lexus division topped the list, with reports of 82 problems per 100 vehicles. Following were Mercedes with 84, Toyota with 89, Infiniti with 99 and Buick with 113.

Those rankings compared all cars bearing the same brand name. In Power's separate ranking of individual models, the Buick LeSabre was the only domestic car among the 10 most trouble-free, ranking sixth.

Housing in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rising incomes and falling mortgage rates and prices boosted the typical American family's ability to buy an existing single-family home in May, a real estate trade group said Monday.

The National Association of Realtors said its housing affordability index was 105.6 in May, up from 104.3 the previous month.

That means a family earning the national median income of $34,142 had 105.6 percent of the income needed to qualify for conventional financing covering 80 percent of the median-priced home costing $94,800.

The median income means of half the families earned more and half less. The median price means half of the homes cost more, half less.

Because the national median income in May exceeded the qualifying income, a family earning $34,142 could purchase a home priced at $100,300.

The median price of a home declined $800 in May, while incomes rose $110. Mortgage rates edged downward from 10.15 percent to 10.14 percent.

Oil lease sales ban could help Oklahoma

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma-produced compressed natural gas is an increasingly attractive option as a motor fuel, now that the country's trying to limit oil drilling off its shores, Oklahoma energy researchers say.

President Bush recently banned new oil lease sales off the coasts of California, Florida, Washington and Oregon. The United States relies on foreign countries to supply half its oil, and Charles Mankin, director of the Oklahoma Geological Survey at the University of Oklahoma, says that dependence will increase because of the ban.

A U.S. Department of Energy study shows Oklahoma has more than 16 trillion cubic feet of proven natural gas reserve, which Mankin estimated would be worth $22 billion to $25 billion at today's wellhead prices.

The development was reported in Sunday's Tulsa World.

The University of Oklahoma is converting its campus buses to compressed natural gas. By the start of fall classes, the university will have four 44-passenger buses, two 15-passenger mini-vans and seven trucks or service cars converted.

More vehicles will bywitched to CNG later and a $34,000 fast-fill natural gas station has been installed at the campus motor pool.

The bus experiment is just one of many OU natural gas research projects having an annual budget of more than $1 million, Mankin said.

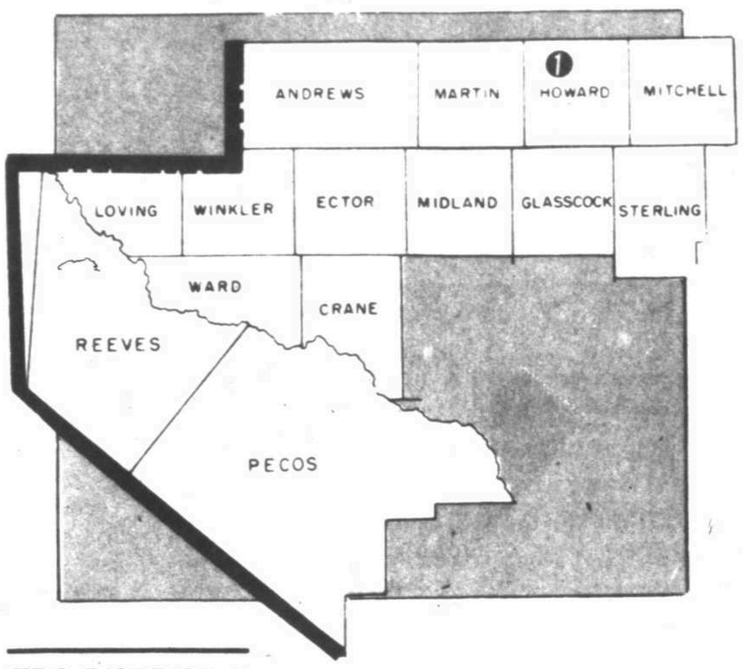

There are 97 CNG vehicles being operated by Tulsa and Enid public schools, the city of Tulsa and the state of Oklahoma. Oklahoma City's mass transit system recently put seven vehicles into operation.

Oklahoma Natural Gas has a fleet of 165 CNG vehicles, said Joe Tucker, ONG marketing projects manager.

Thomas James, director of OU's Science and Public Policy Program, said 700,000 vehicles worldwide run on CNG. Counting the 13 units at OU, 282 CNG fleet vehicles are operating in Oklahoma, including some that have been in use for two years.

Compressed natural gas burns cleaner than gasoline, thus contributing less to urban air pollution and global warming, James said.

Oil glut doesn't drop gas prices

By Matthew L. Wald
N.Y. Times News Service

Crude oil prices are 20 percent lower than they were at this time last year, but the price of gasoline at the pump has not dropped.

The main reason is a bottleneck at the nation's refineries, which are producing all the gasoline they can. Because the oil companies have been unable to produce any extra gasoline and demand has remained more or less constant, gasoline prices are not falling, and refinery profits are soaring.

In other industries, a long-term shortage of production capacity would induce companies to build new plants to make more of their product. But no new refineries are on the drawing boards because of public opposition and strict rules on new pollution sources.

"While everyone agrees they want cheap gas, nobody wants a refinery in their backyard," said Peter C. Beutel, an oil expert at Merrill Lynch Futures.

Given the shortage of refinery capacity, the crude price has been nearly irrelevant lately.

"I don't care where crude prices go," said George Babikian, president of ARCO Products Co. of Los Angeles. "They could drop $3 a barrel, and it won't make any difference."

The reason, he said, is "the market is short here, and you can't buy a lot of gasoline for immediate delivery."

The situation leaves drivers paying an average of $1.08 a gallon for self-serve unleaded fuel, and more for higher grades.

The companies that own refineries are, at least for now, making large profits in a business where prices are no longer regulated.

And a generation of consumers who learned in the 1970s that gasoline prices surged when the supply of crude oil was reduced are learning a new and difficult lesson: a glut of oil does not a price drop make.

"Whenever oil prices fall, there is always this stickiness in gasoline prices on the way down," said Ed Rothschild, an energy expert at Citizen Action, a Washington-based consumer organization. "You never see this stickiness on the way up."

Oil industry analysts agree that the problem is a shortage of refining capacity, but some say the industry has carefully maneuvered itself into this situation.

"One of the things refiners have done to get to this stage is to promote high-octane gasoline, which requires more crude oil and produces less gasoline," Rothschild said.

Total gasoline production in the week ended June 22, the latest period available, was 7.1 million barrels a day.

Demand is now so strong for high-octane premium gasoline that prices have been rising even as prices for lower-octane fuels have been stable. Even within the oil industry, many experts acknowledge that motorists are paying more for higher-octane gas that gives them little additional benefit.

Octane is a measure of gasoline's ability to withstand knocking, or premature detonation in the cylinders; while higher-octane gas is required in high-performance engines, it is of little benefit in most engines.

Eventually, analysts expect refining of all grades of gasoline, to gradually catch up with demand, and foreign refiners, seeing high prices here, will ship additional supplies.

So if the price of crude does not increase significantly, the price of gasoline will probably fall.

In recent weeks, the price of gasoline has been rising slightly as it often does at the start of the summer driving season when demand increases.

The American Automobile Association reported Thursday that prices were up 3.1 cents a gallon since Memorial Day.

As a result of the surplus of crude oil and the limited amount of finished gasoline, California refiners can now buy a barrel of crude oil for about $12, and sell the gasoline to the distributor or service station for $33 a barrel, said William D. Hyler, who monitors refinery stocks at Oppenheimer & Co. He called that profit margin incredible.

During the days of refinery overcapacity, he said, gasoline sold at best for $2 a barrel more than crude, and sometimes for $2 less.

Before the recent decline in the price of crude, he said, gasoline had been selling for $6 or $7 more than crude.

Nationwide, the margin, or difference between the cost of the raw material and the wholesale price of the product, is typically about $3.50 a barrel, and the average for June is usually about $5.35, said Robert Boslego, a Boston-based oil analyst.

But recently it has been more than $10 a barrel, which he said was a record.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Mortgage pay down can be accelarated

By Bill Doyle

Q. We recently obtained a 10-year, 10 percent $55,000 mortgage on our home. I want to accelerate the mortgage retirement by paying additional principal payments. Where can I get a formula or table to determine how much more to pay on the mortgage each month?

Doyle

A. Before you make any additional payments, be sure there is no prepayment penalty clause in your mortgage contract. Some mortgages have such penalties, resulting in heavy charges when mortgage payments are accelerated or the whole thing is paid off in a lump sum.

Assuming no prepayment penalty applies, a number of methods can be used to pay down on a mortgage and retire it early. There's no perfect formula, but one popular method goes as follows.

With every scheduled monthly mortgage payment, send along enough more to meet the principal payment due the next month. That way, your first payment covers the first month's interest and principal and the second month's principal; your second payment covers the third month's interest and principal and the fourth month's principal, and so on down the line.

To use that method, you will need a copy of your mortgage's amortization schedule listing the interest and principal portions of each month's mortgage payment.

An easier way is to add whatever amounts you can afford to your monthly payments on a steady or occasional basis.

Most important, make sure the additional payments you make are used to reduce your mortgage principal, thereby reducing the balance you owe, the amounts of future interest payments and the length of your mortgage.

Check that out with your mortgage lender.

Q. We have a balance of $44,000 on our 10 percent, fixed-rate mortgage. My husband is 66. I am 63. We want to use $5,000 from a recently matured certificate of deposit to pay down on the mortgage — not to shorten the length of the mortgage but to reduce the monthly payments, so that we will have more money to play with.

The bank holding the mortgage would charge us $200 for this "privilege." Should we do it, or should we put the money in another CD or U.S. Treasury note?

A. In your shoes, I would use the $5,000 to reduce the mortgage's term, so that you would own your home free and clear in your senior years.

However, if having more cash available each month is more important to you, go along with the bank's plan. In effect, you will be refinancing your mortgage. And $200 is a low charge for mortgage refinancing.

But here is a most important point. Make sure the mortgage interest rate is not increased in the refinancing process. If the bank comes up with a proposal to raise the mortgage interest above your present 10 percent, respond with a resounding NO.

Pickens plans to increase his stake in Koito

N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — Dallas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr., scorned and rejected at Koito Manufacturing Co.'s annual stockholders' meeting last week, says he plans to throw more money at a problem that to date has cost him $1 billion.

Pickens announced that he will move as quickly as possible to raise his stake in the Tokyo-based auto parts giant from 26 percent to 33 percent even though last week the company's stockholders soundly rejected his request for four seats on Koito's board of directors.

Koito's stock sells at about $20 per share, so beefing up his investment could cost as much as $160 million, Pickens said in a telephone interview.

"They just can't stand to have me in over there," Pickens said, just back from the Koito annual meeting in Tokyo. "They are just not going to allow any Americans to be involved in corporate Japan — it's that simple. We're going to try and change that."

Pickens and Koito have been battling the past 16 months. The oilman — the company's largest shareholder — has demanded seats on its board, and other stipulations, while Koito has said he's only interested in "greenmail" and points to his reputation as a corporate raider in rejecting him.

Pickens bought most of his shares last year from a Japanese stock speculator, Kitaro Watanabe, and owns them through Boone Co., a Dallas investment firm not connected to his oil company, Mesa Limited Partnership.

The Texan's visit to Tokyo was not an endearing one. Koito had to make special seating arrangements for Pickens to keep him separated from hecklers and hired additional security to protect him from Japanese shareholders who yelled angrily at Pickens and his entourage throughout the meeting.

"When I walked in the door the first thing I heard was 'Yankee go home,' " Pickens said.

Pickens ended up storming out of the meeting, blasting Koito for ignoring his requests. But he denied speculation that he was setting the stage for an exit from the investment.

"I've always felt that if you're on the right side of an issue and have the staying power that you eventually will be successful," he said. "That's kind of where I am."

By boosting his investment in Koito to 33 percent, Pickens said he would, under Japanese law, be allowed to take part in some decisions made by Koito management.

"If liberally interpreted, you find yourself in a position where you could stop some things if you wanted to," Pickens said.

"That strategy hasn't been worked out, but the last thing you would want to do is anything that would hurt the profitability of a company. You would not do anything in a spiteful way or anything like that."

Pickens has said since the beginning of his investment that Koito management is biased against foreigners and participates in a system that links that country's auto suppliers and car makers to one another financially.

It's a system in which the automakers carry so much clout that they can literally demand refunds from parts suppliers at year-end to enhance their own profitability.

Pickens said he believes that Toyota Motor Co., which is Koito's second-largest stockholder, has played a major role behind the scenes in keeping him and his representatives off the company's board.

Toyota, he said, doesn't want an American to gain an inside view of why Tokyo has been able to upset Detroit by competing with a $1,500 advantage in manufacturing costs.

Koito last week rejected Boone Co.'s request for the board seats, an increase in the annual dividend, a prohibition on greenmail, shareholder approval of directors' pay and a ban on price fixing, among other items.

Pickens wasn't surprised at the snub, but says he will be back at next year's annual meeting to ask again.

"Our strategy is that we'll keep asking for the same things we've asked for before," he said. "I've been out in front on issues before and they were tougher than this one."

Ingersoll sells control of papers

By Tom Buerkle

Ingersoll

NEW YORK (AP) — Publisher Ralph Ingersoll II has agreed to sell a controlling stake in his U.S. newspaper chains to investment partners after failing to make an interest payment on high-risk junk bonds.

The announcement made Ingersoll the latest entrepreneur who built an empire in the 1980s with junk-bond financing only to lose it because of his inability to pay interest on the high-risk securities.

It followed months of attempts by Ingersoll to buy back his companies' junk bonds at steep discounts to alleviate a heavy debt burden.

Ingersoll's announcement also comes a little more than two months after he folded the St. Louis Sun, a tabloid launched last September that Ingersoll had claimed would revolutionize the slumping newspaper market by using new technology and marketing strategies.

Under the agreement, Ingersoll is relinquishing his stake in three companies that publish dozens of daily and weekly newspapers to the New York investment firm E.M. Warburg, Pincus & Co. The two had been joint owners, although Ingersoll exercised voting control.

Warburg, Pincus gains full control of Ingersoll Newspapers Inc., which publishes nine dailies and 53 weeklies; New Haven Acquisition Co., publisher of the New Haven Register; and Community Newspapers Inc., which has newspapers mostly in Ohio and on New York's Long Island.

BURNS: Long-term equities investments often outperform savings

(From 5C)

30 years to about 15 to 18. In other words, you can have it paid off by the time your children are entering college.

At a multiple of five years of income your life insurance is verging on excessive because I'm sure you also have life insurance through your employer. At your age, you could get the same amount of coverage for less than 1/10 of your current payment if you bought term insurance. Of course, the cost of the term coverage would rise, year by year — but it will be ages before it would substantially reduce the surplus available for saving. If that money was applied to your thrift plan it would grow tax deferred and reduce your federal income tax bill.

This is NOT a recommendation to dump the policy; you need that amount of protection; it IS building cash value; and some amount of it will be useful when you retire even if you don't die. It will allow you, for instance, to take the "one life"" option on your corporate pension instead of the joint survivor option — the result will be a higher retirement income.

Q. I am 26, married, and have one child. My wife and I earn an annual income of $75,000. We have a $90,000 home mortgage at 9 percent; an $8,000 car loan; and an $8,000 student loan.

We want to 1) build an adequate level of liquid savings for emergency situations; 2) provide for college education in 17 years; and 3) save for retirement. We have $10,000 in savings now. We invest $150 a month in whole life insurance because we intend to use some of the cash value for college expenses.

I am contributing 4 percent of my salary in a 401k plan to which my employer contributes 6 percent as profit sharing. I put 25 percent in an equity fund and 75 percent in Guaranteed Insurance Contracts. My wife contributes 6 percent of her salary to her company's plan which the company matches 4 percent. She has 50 percent of her account in an equity fund and 50 percent in a fixed income fund.

I want to invest another $300-$500 a month. Should I invest it through my 401k plan, increase my house payments, or some other alternative. Should we be putting a larger portion of our funds into equities? — J.A., Carrollton Tex.

A. As I demonstrated in a recent column, long term investment in equities will outperform saving in interest bearing investments by a substantial margin. At your age you can afford to be nearly 100 percent committed to equities. If this makes you nervous, you could keep 60 to 70 percent in equities as the typical pension fund does.

With two paychecks, your current cash savings are almost enough. If both of you feel secure in your jobs, you could slow down that saving and concentrate on maximizing your 401k participation to the limit of your employer contribution. After you have done that, accelerate your mortgage payments.

You can probably do both for less than $300 a month.

Gourmet trends in line with contemporary life

By Susan Perkins

Gone are the days when gourmet shows only referred to the kitchen and the products in it. Today, gourmet is everywhere. It's defined as a wide range of well-designed, quality products associated with today's contemporary lifestyles.

Here are some trends featured at the San Francisco/Fancy Food market. We all have some ideas to remodel or spruce up our kitchens.

■ The popularity of spatter paint and marbleized treatment has made quite an impact in the housewares industry. Boston Warehouse has introduced a complete line of paper products that feature these special effects.

■ European and ethnic influence is here to stay. Colorful, handpainted fish have inspired complete lines of dinnerware and giftware accessories.

■ Victorian designs are reminiscent of antique botanical prints. Items feature fruits, vegetables, whimsical animals and mint-green foliage of early spring. Coordinating aprons, towels, oven mitts and table linens provide the finishing touch to any setting. Detail makes the difference.

■ Mr. Coffee unveiled an array of colors on its coffee maker line — an assortment of bright hues and shady pastels. Housewares will continue to feature more Victorian colors, lavenders and lilacs. Don't be surprised to see products in jade green, school bus yellow, bright red, oyster and acid orange stocking the shelves.

■ Organizers continue to grow, organizing our lives through our closets, drawers and cabinets.

■ Television trays. Having meals before the television is as popular as ever. Published reports state that nineteen percent of the public watches television while eating breakfast and fifty percent have the television on during dinner.

■ Organically grown and environmentally safe products are influencing the food industry. Especially popular are products that are harvested and benefit people located in tropical rain forests.

■ Health conscious consumers will enjoy the new lines of all natural spices, herbs and seasonings. Liven up the flavor of foods without adding salt, sugar or preservatives. Each container is labeled with ingredients, calorie weight and information about the origin and usage of the spice.

■ Savor the flavor of the Southwest. Numerous products are offered to satisfy Americans' taste for authentic Southwest cuisine. Products range from chili sauces to blue corn chips. The El Paso Chili Company incorporated gift packets along with their typical line of sauces and salsa. Their gift boxes are beautifully packaged in brown crates with pale shades of green, yellow, orange and brown. It gives you an authentic feeling of the Southwest.

■ Mason jars with blue and white checkered lids represent the country lines. In gift packets, the mason jars are in baskets and/or crates with wood shavings.

■ Manufacturers are committed to the environment. From recycled materials used in packaging to the non-toxic inks used in printing labels, even the recycled, unbleached papar that it is written on. Manufacturers are trying to give retailers the most environmentally safe product they can.

Lagerfeld Chanel-like look steals summer spotlight

N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS — Calm, dependable Philippe Venet was supposed to provide the curtain raiser for the blockbuster summer couture collections.

But it did not quite work out that way. Venet emerged with vigor from his unprepossessing mood. Emanuel Ungaro, after his recent marriage to Laura Fanfani, did not give up his sexy clothes but toned them down considerably.

The hero of the day turned out to be Karl Lagerfeld, who has thoroughly assimilated the message of Chanel and put it into play for the contemporary world. The Chanel look is flourishing.

Lagerfeld wreaks havoc with that icon of fashion for the past 60 years, Chanel's famous suit. Would she recognize it? Just barely. Her skirts always covered the knees.

His clear them by more than a few inches. Her jackets had a casual, boxy swagger. His fit like a second skin, turning each wearer into her own hourglass.

But he still likes to use rough woolens, especally monotone tweeds. And the edges of the jackets still have defined borders even though raffia replaces wool braid.

These are just the rough outlines. He likes to make skirts out of wisps of chiffon which can dip to the back or be set in an asymmetric line.

He has tried this combination of soft, translucent fabric with the bulk of tweed in other seasons, but it works especially well for warm weather. The suits have a light, insouciant air which should carry them into summer.

The colors help, for Mr. Lagerfeld focuses on what he calls flesh tones, which is translated into white, pink and magnolia or beige tones.

He thinks of the fluffy little skirts as clouds, he says, and to soften the line of demarcation he adds panty hose in a matching pale shade.

"I'm not so crazy about black stockings, except with black skirts," he says, "and strong colors are not so good for summer."

He has taken the suit one step further. As a dress revival hovers at the edge of fashion, he has created the suit dress. Not the coat dress, he insists. The suit dress. This simply involves making the suit jacket a little longer so it is not necessary to add a skirt, even a translucent one. It may be more a matter of terminology than a major style revision, but the suit dress looks practical, and many fashions have had a more ephemeral start.

With their hats set on the backs of their heads, the models looked like very young girls who had left their hoops at home. Mr. Lagerfeld has given a saucy, snippy look to the venerable Chanel tradition.

He retains some signatures, like the camellia. But there is no musty smell of the archives. The designer has turned Chanel into a contemporary adventuress.

With a chamber music group playing on stage, Emanuel Ungaro turned his fashion show into a stately pavane. The colors were, for him, pretty subdued. The mad clashes of patterns were gone. Instead there were blocks of color, stunningly arranged.

Subdued for this designer means a wine-colored suit with a navy blouse or a red suit with a purple blouse.

Still there were such painterly assemblages as a wine jacket with salmon sleeves and a purple border, combined with a green skirt edged in purple. These were combinations of solid colors, not prints, and the effect was almost soothing.

Except for coats of swirling fullness, Ungaro does drape his clothes close to the body, but not so close that the wearer looks mummy-wrapped.

Fall fashion trends heavy on accessories

By Susan Perkins

Details, details, details. Isn't that what fashion is all about? Details on shirts, skirts, shoes, hair and accessories — it's the little things that count. Here's a summary of the small stylish details designers have selected for fall previews from USA Today.

■ The thigh's the limit. Thigh-high boots strutted down runways for Ralph Lauren, Calvin Klein, Adrienne Vittadini and Rebecca Moses. Your best bet: brown or black boots in soft suede or sturdy leather. Visit Connie Shoes, Baker's or Butler's for back to school and fall ideas.

■ Low boots. The opposite end of the boots trend is short, cowboy shoe-booties from Norma Kamali or high-heeled suede ankle shorties. Wear these with ski pants and jumpsuits. Boots are a West Texas tradition — designers need to visit the Permian Basin. Boots for the whole family can be found at Kinney's or Payless Shoes.

■ Poncho viva. Cuddle up in a blanket-sized poncho day or night. Wrap it around a jumpsuit, gaucho skirt or jeans. Toss it over bare shoulders like Bill Blass. Fling it atop a swingy suit like Calvin Klein or Louis Dell-'Olio for Anne Klein. Plaid is the fad and fringed is the finest. A trip to the mall may find a warm and wooly style.

■ Shoulder-duster earrings. Long, longer, longest is the rage, just as it was in Paris. Rhinestones and jewels for night; plain chains for day. If you're a trend-setter, wear just one. Claire's Boutique, Wanda & Tina's and our apparel stores may have the right one for you.

■ Get tassled. Tassles on belts and earrings. You'll be on the fashion fringe with a tassle here or there.

■ Quilt while you're ahead. Buy something, anything quilted. Quilt on slacks, short coats and jackets.

■ Deluxe touch. Evening fabrics come out for day. But don't make it an everyday event. Do it in small doses. Experiment with moss or wine velvet swatches over a plaid suit or embroidered jacket. Imagine yourself in a tres chic outfit from J. Harris, Peck & Peck, Margo's and our many fine stores.

■ Sweater whirls. You've worn sweats and weekend garb like this. Now take the look to work and to parties. Knot sweaters over pinstripe or plaid strapless dresses. Donna Karan wraps 'em round jumpsuited hips. Lauren loved his on shoulders and hips, too. Sweaters galore will be fashioned on the walls at Foxmoor and Lane Bryant for your sweater statement.

■ Sparkle plenty. Sequins dazzled on T-shirt dresses in slip-shapes from Calvin Klein, Betsey Johnson's short shorts, even sequined leggings from Karan. Trendy T's may have a T-shirt dress for you to dazzle up!

■ French twists. Fall hair must be upswept in tres French twists, stray strands falling sexily into eyes. It's the hottest hairdo of the season, even if Ivana did wear it all week. Great Expectations, Regis and Mastercuts can help you with a new twist for fall.

■ Hoods up. Gangs of hooded skim dresses, swing coats, tunic jackets and jumpsuits are everywhere. Got a big hooded gray sweatshirt in your closet? Wear it with a silver sequined short skirt. Lerners, Hit or Miss or NetWorks may have the style you're looking for.

Summer fun: Take the drag out of jet lag

Los Angeles Times Syndicate

More and more families are winging their way to the far corners of the nation – and finding themselves saddled with an unwelcome partner: jet lag. Although you can't eliminate jet lag altogether, you can minimize its effect on you and your vacation, according to Dr. Jean-Paul Spire, University of Chicago Medical School, Department of Neurology.

To make sure everyone is raring to go the day you arrive, Spire recommends the following:

Grab some extra rest before departure. Even napping on the plane is helpful. (Hint for families with infants: Reserve your seats extra early and ask for a bulkhead seat with an infant cot.) While en route, order plenty of beverages – but none with alcohol or caffeine. Bring fruit, or order it with your ticket. Avoid fat-laden airline fare.

For trips shorter than four days, stick to your at-home routine (even if it means eating dinner at 2 p.m.). For longer vacations: eat light, avoid alcohol and caffeine, and catch up on sleep before or right after arrival.

Signing up with a medical data service can make traveling with chronic health problems less worrisome.

MEDIC ALERT INTERNATIONAL is the most recognized name in medical registration. Medic Alert offers engraved bracelets or necklaces that alert emergency personnel to drug allergies or chronic illnesses like diabetes or heart troubles.

Another service, MED-FAX, is offered through HMOs and health insurers. Patients put identifying stickers on driver's licenses, credit cards, or on the linings of children'sshoes. A phone call connects care givers with a computer whose synthesized voice relays lifesaving information in emergency situations.

For more information, contact Medic Alert 800/432-5378, or Med-Fax 213/821-1984.

Are you allergic to cigarette smoke? Then check out your hotel before your check in. Many innkeepers now offer nonsmokers rooms that have been specially cleaned, refurbished, or have never been smoked in.

Holiday Inns (800-HOLIDAY) and Regal 8 Inn (800/851-8889) both set aside rooms for nonsmokers.

Quality International offer a special reservation system for smoke-free rooms. They make a $2 donation to the American or Canadian Lung Association for each reservation placed on the special line (800/228-LUNG).

Many other hotel chains offer rooms free of smoke odors. Ask about availability when you reserve your room.

Here's what to pack in your family's portable medicine chest:

- bandages, adhesive tape
- tweezers
- medications: aspirin (plus other painkillers if someone in your family is aspirin sensitive), antacid, diarrhea medicine, cold remedy, antiseptic
- alcohol-soaked cotton swabs
- thermometer
- sunscreen, bug repellent and poison ivy remedy (on trips to the woods)
- 'HELP' sign (if you'll be driving)

Don't forget an adequate supply of prescription medicines. (Note: Some U.S. prescription drugs are not available overseas. Check before you go.)

Picnicking on a mountain meadow is a romantic dream for some, and a heightmare for anyone susceptible to altitude sickness. Even heights as relatively low as 8,200 feet – common throughout the Western states – can produce altitude sickness. Symptoms include headache, nausea, fatigue, shortness of breath, and insomnia.

"We see altitude sickness most often in people who go quickly from sea level to high altitude," says Dr. Stan Worley, M.D., a Denver critical care physician. Taking part in strenuous physical activity within the first few days of arrival greatly increases your risk of developing the problem.

Most altitude sickness is easily cured by descending to a lower altitude and, if needed, getting oxygen. Severe cases, however, can become life threatening. Avoiding the illness is fairly easy: go slow on your first day at higher altitudes, stay away from alcohol, avoid strenuous climbing or hiking, and, at the first signs of fatigue, take a break.

Few crises are more frightening than a serious illness in a foreign country. The International Association for Medical Assistance to Travelers (IAMAT) publishes a worldwide directory of English-speaking doctors who trained in the U.S., Canada or Great Britain. Listed doctors offer special fess to IAMAT members: $20 for office visits; $30 for house calls.

Membership in IAMAT is free, the nonprofit organization depends on donations. For membership information, contact IAMAT, 417 Center St., Lewiston, N.Y. 14092 (716/754-4883).

American embassies also can provide travelers with lists of English-speaking doctors near embassy areas. In general, these lists indicate only English language services; embassies do not endorse individual physicians.

Although traditionally associated with Mexico, travelers' diarrhea is no longer a problem at most of the newer resort hotels, thanks to up-to-date water systems. Places without water treatment systems pose the worst threat. In general, eating foods that have been boiled, baked, or peeled will keep your family safe.

"Avoid fresh vegetable salads, which can't be disinfected," says R. Bradley Sack, Johns Hopkins Hospital International Traveler Clinic. Water and other beverages are safe only if they are "boiled, bottled or chlorinated."

Pepto-Bismol tablets taken during your vacation may help prevent the problem. But if the dread discomfort does strike, rehydrate yourself with safe liquids. Prescription drugs from your doctor may also ease pain.

Decade's style setters named

N.Y. Times News Service

Be prepared for a scare. If a poll of the nation's fashion writers has any predictive value, we are going to look like a motley crew in the next decade.

The poll, sponsored by Swatch, came up with 90 style setters. Judging by the range in the selections, it seems there is little consensus, except for the list of the top 10. They are:

Mennonites keep to old faith

Seminole provides safe harbor for four Mennonite groups

EDITOR'S NOTE: Thirteen years ago several hundred Mennonites came to the Seminole area from Mexican and Canadian colonies hoping to practice their fundamental Anabaptist beliefs and rural, conservative lifestyle. They have become a part of Seminole while clinging to their own way of life.

By Elizabeth Kaufman
Associated Press

SEMINOLE — It is as though Frank Wiebe is shuffling the cards of memory, plucking out his ace.

"Feb. 22, 1977," Wiebe recites in soft, German-accented English.

That was the date when Wiebe, one of about 500 Old Colony Mennonites, moved his family from Canada to Seminole.

Other Mennonites came from Mexico that same year, amid highly publicized chaos of possible deportation and lost money in a convoluted farmland purchase.

At the time, Wiebe told a "People" magazine reporter, "We wanted to live here where the laws are good, and we could make one big family and educate our children in the way we believe is right. ... All we want to do is work and be citizens of this country. If they let us stay, this will be a new land. It is nothing but dust now; but someday you will see."

Impressions made by Wiebe and his fellow Mennonites, who today are estimated to number as many as 3,000 in West Texas, are tractor marks in the 320 acres of farmland owned by cotton farmer John Froese. Imprints also run across other fields where Mennonites work as farmhands.

Wiebe, one of several elected pastors of his church, has joined the small but growing group leaving farming for other work. He and his wife, Susan, install siding for a New Mexico-based construction company. He said a few Mennonites work on oil rigs. Others drive trucks or repair cars.

In the Raymond Restaurant, Mennonites meet for morning coffee and converse in their traditional dialect of Low German. Families sometimes eat at Little Gomez restaurant, which serves Mexican-style food.

Many of the Gaines County Mennonites came from Mexico. They paid $2.6 million for 6,400 acres in West Texas, mistakenly believing that land ownership would make them eligible for permanent residence. Their land was repossessed when they ran into financial difficulties, but many remained in the Seminole area. Members of the Texas Congressional delegation sponsored special legislation to allow them to stay in the country.

WIEBE'S OLD Colony congregation, also known as the Gaines County Mennonite Church, was joined by three other churches in the late '70s: The Evangelical Mennonite Conference Church (EMC) or the Seminole Mennonites, the Reinlander Church, and the Gospel Mennonite, or Evangelical Mennonite Mission Conference (EMMC) church. A fifth church, The German Church of God, is composed of former Mennonites.

Both the EMC and Old Colony recently have replaced weathered, small buildings with spacious, modern frame structures, and the EMMC church is building a new facility.

The Mennonite movement, which is named for pioneer Menno Simons and is called Anabaptist for its adult baptisms, began in 1525 in two branches. The Swiss-South Germans migrated to North America. The Dutch-Germans went to Prussia, then moved to the Ukraine and eventually split between the midwestern United States and Manitoba, Canada. Colonies also exist in South and Central America.

"We preach about drugs, drinking and smoking. We believe in salvation through grace. Your life has to show what you believe in," said Wiebe, 38.

So the women — who say they are following Scriptures — aren't supposed to cut their hair and, once baptized, are to keep their heads covered. Clothing is dark, at least among congregations like Wiebe's and Bishop Henry Reimer's Reinlander Church, which are considered conservative.

Rempel's Gospel Mennonite church is considered more "modern" than Wiebe's or Reimer's church.

"We have been named 'liberal' by some," Rempel said. He countered that label by contending that, "We want to live a simple lifestyle. We don't encourage gaudy dress. When the inner man is not that important, the outer becomes that much more important."

Unlike EMC, Reinlander and Old Colony, Rempel's church does not have its own school.

Private schoolteachers are noncertified congregation members. In the Reinlander and Old Colony churches, children aged 6 to 13 or 14 learn basic math, Low German, reading and spelling. The EMC church uses a more expanded lesson plan devised by a Christian education company.

"OUR BACKGROUND is that you aim to earn a living and you don't necessarily need schooling to do that. Once the old fear of becoming swallowed up and the attempt to remain isolated is changed, it's a whole different thing," said Rempel, who has a partial high school education and a Bible school degree.

Froese, who also moved to Seminole in 1977, said the town is completely different from his colony in Mexico, where he had no chance to get home electricity. Froese said he prefers the life he has here.

The Mexican-reared Wiebe, who rode his first bicycle and spoke on his first telephone at 20, said he is far more modern now.

"In Old Mexico, there are some that like their women barefooted and pregnant. I don t believe in that. In our house, if there is a big decision to make, Susan and I make it together.

"You're supposed to live for God, but if you do nothing else but just think of him, that is not good either.

"I read the newspaper. Our kids are great music lovers, gospel, country music. No hard rock. I don't like it."

Wiebe thinks such music leads to drinking and dancing.

"For the convenience of it, a computer would be nice, but there has to be a stopping point someplace. One thing leads to another. A telephone led to an answering machine, which led to a microwave oven, which led to a deep freezer.

"I used to have television. I'm sort of sorry I did; if I hadn't maybe I would know the Bible better for teaching," he said, laughing wryly.

"I'm still not against public schools," he added. "But after they took the prayer out of the school, that was it. We try to accomplish, when the kids come out of school, that they will know how to read, write and know what's right and wrong. I went to school until the third grade, and I'm making more money than some people who went to college."

Wiebe said he would not stop any of his four children from choosing to attend high school and college.

Most Mennonites here live in two outer pockets of town, along winding, unpaved roads called villages. Often two mobile homes on a bare stretch of land house two generations of a family.

Wiebe admits there has been some drug abuse in his community. He said the troubled ones generally are 24 or 25 years old, and don't have parents in the area.

NIGHT ADULT education teacher Wilma Stanley has seen few changes in Mennonites since she began working with them 12 years ago.

"They live within their clan, and they don't get out," she said. Students' ages range from 18 to 45, reflecting those of the general Mennonite population, but most students are in their 20s.

The South Plains Health District Maternity Clinic for low-income pregnant women brought prenatal care and hospital deliveries for Mennonites who traditionally have had their children at home.

Of the 319 clients, 83 have been Mennonites. The oldest was 40. Mennonites said the tradition of having as many children as you can has been downgraded.

Still, an extended family is found under the umbrella name Mennonite — members of each congregation attest that every settlement contains many churches. A recent Mennonite's funeral brought 600 mourners.

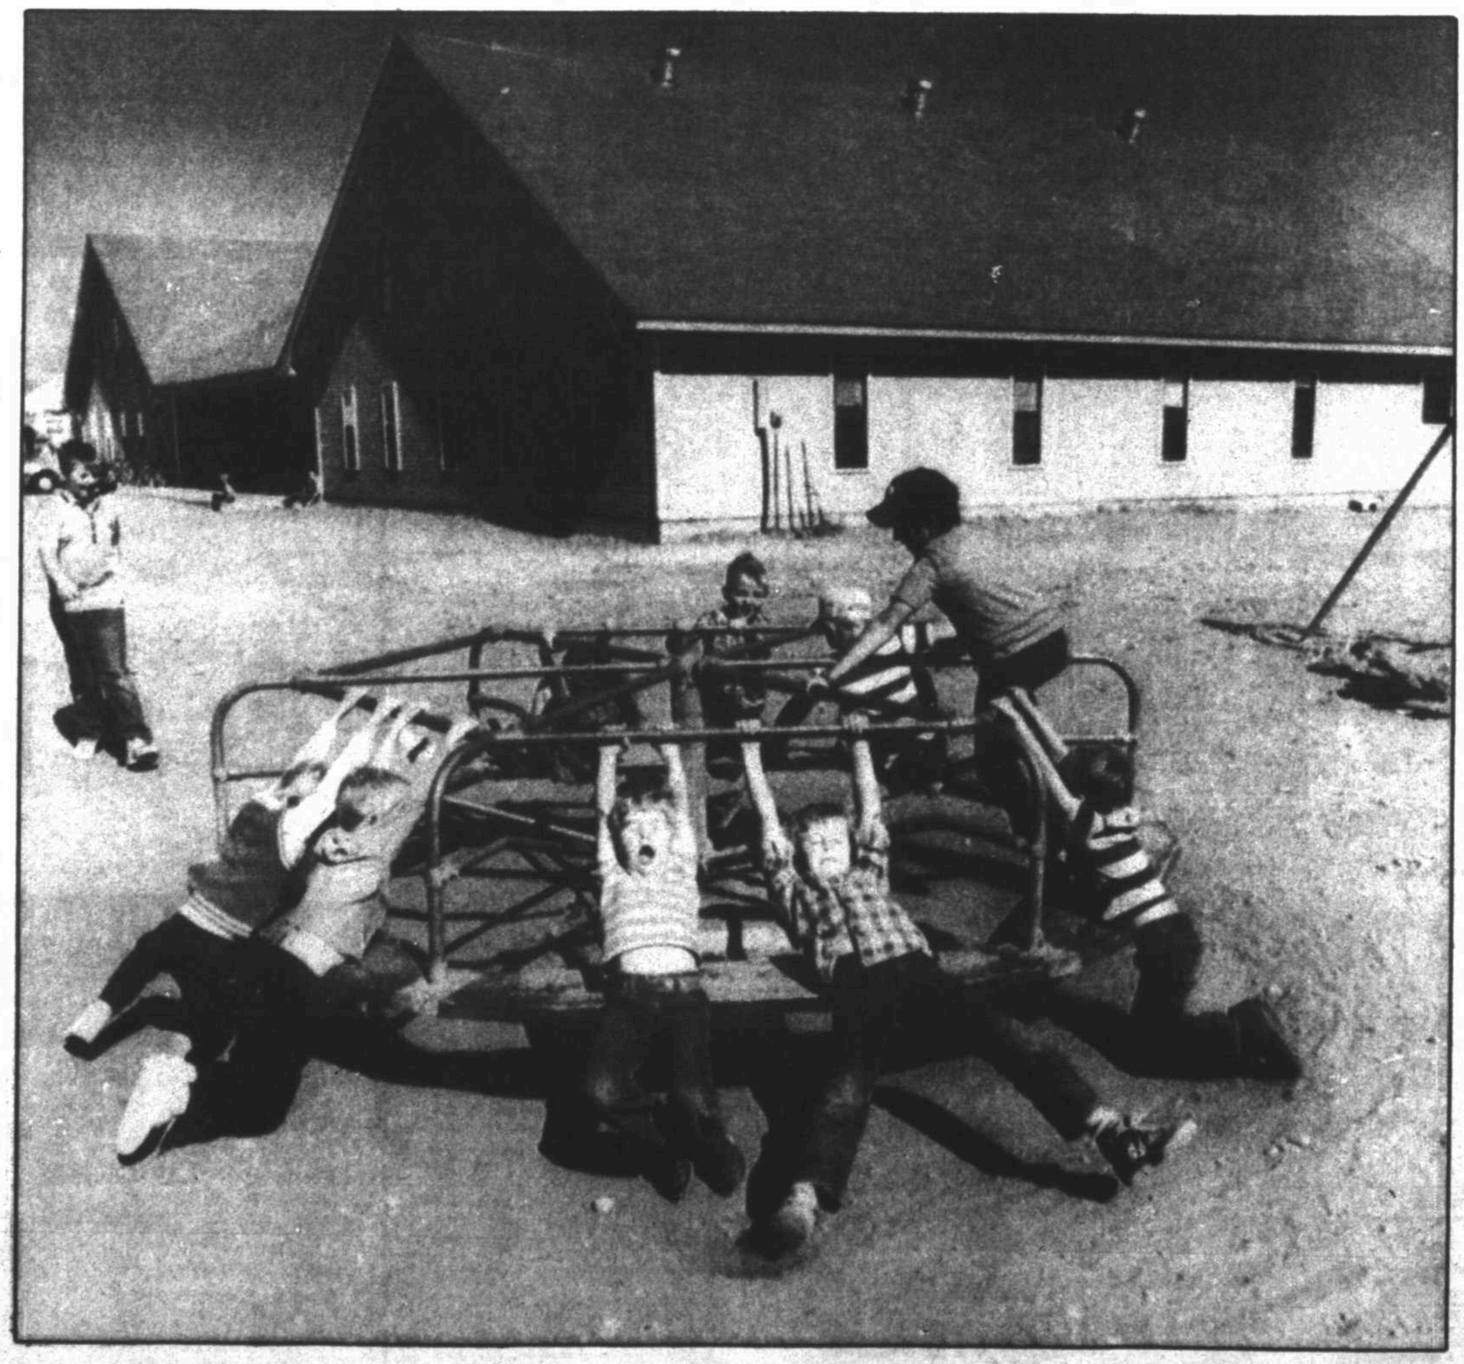

When Wiebe says, "The Mennonites have no homeland," he is referring to the 400 past nomadic years. Wiebe, the American citizen, personally feels differently.

"In 1985, we came back from a trip to Canada. We were driving up the road to our house. I told Susan, 'I feel like we're home.' She said, 'We've been coming here for years.' But somehow, that time, for the first time, it really felt like I was coming home."
