DALLAS OFFICERS SEEKING NEGRO GUNMAN

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE
with BILL MAYES

After remaining idle, as far as this column is concerned, for the past few days, partly because of the hot weather, partly through laziness and partly because of assorted pains, aches and charlie-horses in the arms, legs, and, according to some, in the brain, we start off the day today with what we claim is the best story we have heard today. But remember that this is being written early in the morning and we may hear a better one before the day is over:

A negro was walking down the street mumbling to himself, when he met his pastor.

"Parson, I wants you to splain sumpin to me. I hear de white folks talking about his here moratorium. It's a moratorium dis, and moratorium dat. What does 'ey mean?"

"I'll splain it to you. You see de King of England owes Uncle Sam a lot of money. Uncle Sam sont de King a bill, but de King tore it up. He sent him another bill and he tore it up. Uncle Sam jes kept sending de King bills and de more he sont him de more he torem."

Yesterday we had collected up enough asserted subjects to fill a column, bu tovernight we have forgotten every one of them. However, the Twilight league is batting along at 1.000 per cent, which is more than any of the players are doing, as no scheduled game has been called off because of failure of an organization to put a full team on the field.

There was some talk a while back that the Rotarians and Lions might form a merger of some kind and make one team of the two clubs, but as far as we know this plan has just about dropped through.

Of the three games so far this week only one was won by a lopsided score. That was when the Elks defeated the Legion by something like 25 to 7—we forget the exact statistics. The next day the Elks club stepped on the Times, in the last of the seventh to win 13 to 12 and yesterday the Barbers beat the Guards by a score of 5 to 2, if our information today is correct—we haven't seen the score book yet.

Incidentally the National Guards were expected to be so hot that no team in the league could come anywhere have winning a game from them. That was the pre-season dope, based chiefly on the fact that they had a large number of young men from whom they could draw. Hence the nickname "Nasty Guards" which has been stuck on them.

Those who enjoy fiddlin' as is fiddlin' (not violin playing) should be able to get their fill of music Saturday. A fiddling contest is to be staged up and down Main street, around the corners, over the side streets and wherever enough parking space can be found. It starts at 10 in the morning and continues until the same hour that night, which makes almost 12 hours of old-time music.

A couple of hours for lunch and another couple of hours for dinner—probably dinner and supper to the fiddlers—has been taken out, which leaves eight solid hours of bow sawing, if our bookkeeping department has made no mistakes and if the schedule is carried out as planned. Which makes a powerful lot of fiddlin' in any town on any day.

To break the monotony, if any, other classes of instruments can be entered in the fiddle contest, so guitars, banjos and other instruments may be entered, in addition to community bands of from three to five pieces.

Cash prizes are to be offered to nearly everyone but the judges, who will probably get their compensation from listening. As far as we know the judges have not been selected, as yet, but will be.

MANY POINTS BROUGHT OUT IN KAHN PROBE

By United Press

WASHINGTON, June 29—Senate investigation of Otto H. Kahn's 1930 avoidance of income tax revealed today that the bureau of internal revenue was "misinformed" regarding the manner of the transfer of stock from Kahn to his daughter, whereby the former established a $117,584 loss.

The amount of tax involved was $60,000, Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, said. He read into the record a report by M. C. Shield, revenue bureau field agent, containing a description of the stock transaction in conflict with Kahn's testimony and the banker said that Shield was "in error."

Other developments during the morning session were:

1. That Kahn avoided payment of income taxes in 1930-1931 and 1932 by transferring stocks to his daughter.

2. That Kahn had sold stocks to his daughter or other members of his family at the end of other tax years.

3. That Kahn believed the capital profit-loss provision of the income tax laws should be removed.

4. That federal regulation of the New York stock exchange would be desirable.

5. That in 1930, when he paid no income tax in the United States, Kahn paid $4,480.20 in Great Britain.

Motorcycle Cop Dies of Wounds

By United Press

WICHITA FALLS, June 29—C. S. Carlisle, one of two motorcycle officers wounded Tuesday night in a gun battle with a man they suspected of attempted robbery of a bakery, died today.

Carlisle's partner, Elmer McCord, was in a serious condition and doctors said death was momentary. He is suffering from loss of blood and from internal injuries.

Charges were filed in justice court against Milton Furr, 22, under five-year suspended sentence for auto theft. Furr, according to police, was seen shortly after the shooting, limping badly and apparently suffering from a bullet wound in the leg. The two officers said they believed they wounded the robber suspect, and Carlisle, in a dying statement, named Furr as the man they surprised in the act of robbing a bakery.

Cable Is Received From D. Joseph at Beymouth, Syria

A cablegram was received by the Joseph Dry Goods Company Wednesday morning from D. Joseph, who with his family is visiting in Syria. The cablegram read "Adbei," which, when decoded, reads, "Arrived all right. Pleasant passage. Advise friends."

The cablegram was sent from Beymouth, Syria, at 10:30 a. m., Wednesday morning and was received in Ranger at 8:02 o'clock the same morning.

FILM COMEDIAN DIES SUDDENLY IN NEW YORK

By United Press

NEW YORK, June 29.—Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, once one of the most celebrated personalities of motion pictures, died at about 2 a. m. today of a heart attack.

Arbuckle had been slightly ill for two weeks, but continued his work at Warner Bros. studio, where he was making two-reel comedies in a comeback attempt. He was 46 years old.

Arbuckle was well along the return road to movie popularity at the moment of his death, his manager told the United Press. The picture completed yesterday, "How You've Been," appeared so good Warner Bros. agreed to give him a long-time contract.

Last night Arbuckle and his third wife celebrated their first wedding anniversary.

Returning to their hotel at midnight, they retired immediately. At 2.30 a. m., Mrs. Arbuckle got up for water and discovered he was not breathing. She summoned the house physician who said Arbuckle had been dead half an hour.

The doctor said the specific cause of death was angina pectoris.

Tea-Testers Start Trek To Orient

By RICHARD C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO—Matrimony and tea-tasting do not go hand in hand, hence the task of sampling the world's crop of tea each year falls to masculine palates.

The annual trek of tea-tasters to the plantations of Formosa, Japan, China, Ceylon and India is under way. Most of the members of this unique profession assemble from Great Britain, France and New York in San Francisco to board liners for the Orient.

Failure of women as tea-tasters was explained by B. C. Cowan, of London, and Henri de Tourret, of Paris, both veterans of the profession.

"Cupid ensnares a large percentage of graduate nurses," said Cowan. "But the percentage of women tea-tasters who fall into the pit of matrimony is even greater. There never has been a famous women tea-taster, probably for this reason.

"These tea-tasters, many of whom travel three-fourths the way around the world to select the tea leaves their fellow-countrymen will brew during the next year, are proud of their craft.

"Did you ever taste tea costing $50 a pound?" inquired M. de Tourret.

The French expert then told of an excellent grade of tea he discovered several seasons ago in Ceylon. There was a limited quantity, and he shipped it to Mincing Lane, London, where it was auctioned for $5 0a pound.

Wealthy men think little of paying from $10 upwards a pound for the choice grades found by these experts, the Frenchman said.

Russia continues to be one of the heaviest consumers of tea, despite the great increase in consumption of the Russian drink, vodka, said John Mackenzie, of London, another visiting tea-taster. Most Russian tea is purchased in China.

Swimming Prices For Adults Cut

The swimming pool committee of the Lions Club held a meeting today and voted to reduce the price on adult admissions to the pool from 20 cents to 15 cents.

This decision was made in order to make the pool more popular and to increase interest in swimming. It was decided that with the reduction in prices more people would be inclined to go in swimming in the evenings and more would benefit from the reduction.

The Willows has been proving popular with the younger set this summer, but adult admissions have not been up to expectations. It is thought that with the reduction more adults will take up swimming and the pool will get larger crowds.

Cowboys to Try For Prizes at The Cowboy Reunion

By United Press

STAMFORD, Texas. — Gaunt cowboys of Texas ranges will ride and rope for $1,455 in prizes at the fourth annual Texas Cowboy reunion here July 3, 4 and 5.

Young bronc busters and old calf ropers will share the spotlight of the arena. The old cowhands refuse to give way to the youngsters. There will be events especially for them and open events will see many of the old-timers competing.

J. H. (Jimmie) Olds of Croweil, who once wore the spurs of the old R 2 ranch, will renew acquaintance with J. Ellison Carroll of Big Lake who was world champion steer roper and tyer back in the early 1900's. Olds will rope again at the reunion here but Carroll will be one of the three rodeo judges. Scoring the contestants with Carroll will be Frank Rhoades, veteran Throckmorton cowboy and president of the old-time cowboys' organization, and a third judge yet unannounced.

There will be many a young cowhand casting an envious eye at the record hung up by Carroll at San Antonio in 1903 when he and Clay McGonigle roped and tied 28 steers apiece. Carroll won with an average time of 32 seconds. And Carroll's time of 17 2-5 seconds on one animal for a new world record isn't beaten every day.

The most unusual contest will be that for cutting-horses, an event introduced for the first time last year. It was so popular that rodeo directors expect it to bring some of the closest competition seen at the show.

Skill of the horse counts in this event. Cowboys will ride their favorite mounts—horses that have worked endless days in cutting out mavericks, nipping out cattle for the feed pens, or sorting out others for the branding chute.

Five cattle in a herd in the center of the arena will be marked to cut out and run across a line. Keepers at the line will turn each animal back twice before letting it across.

Of course, skill of the rider will count, but trained horses are more important.

Other events will include wild-cow milking, bronc-busting, steer-riding and calf-roping. An old fiddlers' contest will see Joe M. Hughes, Forney, defending his title of last year.

Legionnaires Will Discuss Vets Cases

Clint Davis, post commander of the Carl Barnes Post of the American Legion, tday urged all ex-service men to attend the meeting of the post tonight, and particularly those who have been drawing compensation and who have been cut off the compensation lists.

Discussion of veterans' affairs, and particularly presumptive service connected cases, will be discussed and the new regulations pertaining to service connected cases discussed.

Sterling's Secretary Has Model Cottage

By United Press

AUSTIN—If Major Paul Wakefield, former secretary to Governor Ross S. Sterling, can induce apple trees to flourish in Austin, he will have a perfect setting for the Normandy cottage that he has had built on the bluff overlooking the Colorado river at Austin.

From the chimney with its wheel top and stork's nest to its quaint beamed interior the cottage is patterned on those of the Normandy countryside.

The interior is furnished largely with mementoes gathered by Major Wakefield during his service abroad as a military man and as United Press correspondent.

Many of the metal war souvenirs have been imbedded in the concrete in the rock wall that surrounds the cottage.

GOVERNMENT PUSHING ITS COTTON PLAN

By United Press

WASHINGTON, June 29.—The government today put an added pressure in its campaign for destruction of a fourth of the cotton crop, warning planters that failure to eliminate the surplus "will flatten out again."

C. A. Cobb, chief of the agricultural department's cotton control factions, said reports from workers in this week's campaign indicated growers probably would accept the program. But he warned farmers of being over-optimistic and against being misled by the current rise in prices.

"The raise is based on anticipation and not realization," Cobb said in an appeal to the south.

"We still have that surplus that has all but crushed the life out of the grower."

The government is offering farmers contracts guaranteeing early payment of $6 to $20 for each acre of cotton destroyed. Farmers may elect to take part of their compensation on options on government-owned cotton at six cents a pound.

Australia Offers Wheat Acreage Reduction Plan

By United Press

LONDON, June 29.—Australia today offered to participate in a wheat acreage restriction plan, but on terms already refused by other wheat exporting nations.

The proposal left the wheat conference still in difficulty.

Hope for agreement was seen in the fact that Australia's offer was better than her last one and some delegates believed it might be modified further.

Experts of the negotiating nations, the United States, Canada, Australia and Argentina, were ordered to draw up statistics to test the practicability of the Australian plan. These were for consideration in the afternoon meeting.

Anglo-German Air Alliance Rumored

By FREDERICK KUH
United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON.—Although their belief appears to be supported by meager evidence, European governments and general staffs have been displaying interest in what they consider the dawn of Anglo-German aeronautical co-operation, in which they detect important military implications.

Britain's insistence at the arms conference, that use of military aircraft in colonial territories shall be exempted from the proposed general abolition of bombing planes, is taken to indicate that the British air ministry is determined to retail all its bombing planes. It is realized here, however, that world opinion will hold Britain responsible for blocking aerial armaments limitation.

An escape from this dilemma is seen in the collaboration of British air forces and German military aviation.

It stands to reason that Britain could afford to reduce the number of military planes at home, were she permitted to keep, or even expand, the total of bombing planes in her colonies and mandated areas.

If, in addition to this, Britain entertained an understanding with Germany, regarding the future German air force, France presumably would be outclassed.

It is known that the military facilities Soviet Russia formerly offered Germany largely were withdrawn as a result of the cooling of Russo-German political relations.

Now it is conjectured that the German government has succeeded in interesting the British air ministry. Foreign secret service agents have been using all of their resources to ascertain whether Britain is drifting towards an aeronautic alliance with Germany and, if so, what the extent and arrangements may be.

Dr. Weizmann is pictured upon his arrival.

GOLD STANDARD NATIONS MEET TO FORM PLAN

By United Press

LONDON, June 29. — Gold standard nations of Europe at a secret meeting today drafted a plan for co-operation between themselves and the United States and Great Britain to eliminate speculative dollar fluctuations without interfering with President Roosevelt's price-raising program.

The new plan of the gold nations will be submitted to President Roosevelt through the U .S. delegation to the conference.

Lobby circles at the conference were engrossed with the erratic movement of the dollar which reached a high of $4.41 per pound sterling during the day but later reacted sharply to close at $4.31, and fell to $4.29½ in post-market trading at 6:35 p. m. Some ventured the opinion that when the dollar improved so sharply, the United States was beginning to worry over European threats.

During the afternoon Prof. Raymond Moley, special United States delegate, conferred for an hour with MacDonald and it was intimated he would shortly make an important stabilization announcement to the conference.

ONE OFFICER IS WOUNDED IN GUN BATTLE

Escapes Twice From Police In Wild Chase Through Alley.

By United Press

DALLAS, June 29.—Two negroes, suspected in the shooting of a Dallas patrolman early today, were held in jail as every available officer on the police force conducted a roundup of police characters in the negro district.

In the home of one of the suspects, officers found cartridges corresponding to those used in the shooting.

By United Press

DALLAS, June 29.—Officers today sought a negro gunman who critically wounded Radio Patrolman Sam G. Lansford and escaped twice from police who had him cornered.

Lansford, shot twice in the head and face and once in the breast, was given blood transfusions in an effort to save his life. His condition made an immediate operation unwise, hospital doctors said.

The policeman was wounded when he and T. J. Johnson, another radio squad officer, early today sought to stop a negro they saw disappear between two houses.

A squad of police and detectives searched the district for the negro and came upon him in an alley. Three shots fired at the fleeing negro apparently did not take effect, and he escaped a second time.

Alameda Farmers Voice Approval of Cotton Plans

At the cotton reduction meeting, held in Alameda Wednesday night, a good number of cotton farmers were present and were unanimously in favor of the government plans to reduce the cotton acreage and allow the farmers to lease the ground to the government.

Although only a few of the farmers were signed up because of lack of available contracts, the majority are ready to plow up a percentage of their cotton just as soon as arrangements can be made to do so. The cotton farms in the Alameda section are, in the most part, small, but in practically every case the farmers are in favor of the plan. No opposition was voiced at the meeting, though it had been reported that false rumors as to the cotton reduction plan had caused some to oppose it before it was fully explained to them by county and local committeemen. A similar meeting was being held in the American Legion hall today to acquaint the cotton growers with the administration plan and to secure their cooperation in making it a success.

Rifle Club Meet Was Called Off

The meeting of representatives of the Eastland, Breckenridge and Ranger rifle club members, scheduled to be held Wednesday night in the office of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce, was called off when a representative group of members failed to show up. With only three from Ranger and one from Eastland present it was decided to postpone the meeting.

The plans which were to be discussed at the meeting called for installation of a rifle range at Morton Valley, to be used by the three clubs, with shoots held every Sunday.

A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

UNFAILING STRENGTH: I will go in the strength of the Lord God: I will make mention of thy righteousness, even of thine only.—Psalm 71: 16.

DICK KLEBERG AND 'THE NOBLE EXPERIMENT'

Cong. Richard M. Kleberg has swung around the circle in his congressional district. He addressed a very large audience at Cuero in the county of DeWitt. He described national prohibition as a "colossal failure" and urged the voters of South Texas to follow the step taken by the President and the national congress in voicing disapproval of the 18th amendment by voting for repeal in the statewide election of Aug. 26. Speaking of the beer amendment the grandson of a soldier who fought at San Jacinto said of the Volstead act, "It is a law that legislates hirelings to protect our morals. It is a law that has not been backed by public opinion. It is a law that has cost us a billion dollars a year to attempt to enforce just so some people might say prohibition was being enforced."

Speaking of the alleged failure of the 18th amendment and its enforcement act, the representative from the Corpus Christi district placed this in the literature of the hour, "The mere fact that 75 million barrels of beer were manufactured by organized gangs in 1929, compared with 45 million barrels per year prior to prohibition reveals the hopelessness of prohibition enforcement." The linguistic Richard is going all the road.

In conclusion he said, "The legalization of beer in Texas will not only insure the state and national government millions of dollars in revenue but will provide employment for thousands of workmen and play an important part in relieving the economic stress of the times."

Hon. Dick is a thorough going product of the A. & M. college and the University of Texas. He is an accomplished master of the United States language, the English language, the German language the Spanish language and, when it comes to dialects, he knows how to work his way without calling into play the sign languages. Political life is a grand old game and this son of the house or Houses of Kleberg and King knows how to play the game.

TEXAS RACE MEET AT ARLINGTON DOWNS

William P. Kyne, a nationally known race track manager, may be in charge of the Arlington Downs 21 day race meet in October. He is managing director of the Riverside Park race course near Kansas City. He paid a visit to Arlington Downs with the Waggoners. He was high in praise of the plant. He declared that "only one other track in the country could touch it and that the club house had no equal." He predicted that Arlington Downs would draw the best horses of the entire nation for a meet in October "when few if any tracks will be running."

Guy Waggoner, son of the builder of Arlington Downs, made this pledge: "We plan to give the Texas breeders first call. Every Texas horse raiser will be accommodated first and after that we will accept the best horses now racing in the American world." It appears to be written in the pages of the book of destiny that the kings and queens of the turf are to be given ample recognition by Texans, "under the skies of Texas," as in bygone days of yore.

WAR MADE OBSOLETE BY SCIENCE

Robert A. Millikan, famous scientist and physician and Nobel prize winner, is a very positive individual. Addressing the Duke University Institute of International Relations he said that science was rapidly rendering war obsolete because it was more destructive and enormously more costly and for the very substantial reason that the advantages which the victors might hope to win had disappeared. Isn't science wonderful?

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

THAT a business must advertise to achieve success.

The more good advertising is used, the more valuable its service becomes.

Advertising is a courtesy due the people.

It takes new business to keep any business concern alive.

People expect courtesy just as they expect quality goods at reasonable prices.

Every business man or woman should radiate courtesy every minute of the busy day.

Modern business concerns use these modern methods, which always result in a closer tie between their customers and their business.

Job-hunting college graduates should not become discouraged. John D. Rockefeller's grandson has just succeeded in finding a job with the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

WASHINGTON DICTATORS

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Donald Hubbard Sawyer is a republican and he doesn't care who know it. He also is such an expert civil engineer that he holds the job as administrator for the Roosevelt public works program.

Sawyer's appointment is temporary, contingent upon the administration being able to find a democrat who can do the job as well as he does. Indications are, however, that he will go down as the only republican official in this democratic regime.

That is because he is one of the most eminently well fitted men in the nation for the spending of $3,300,000,000 on public building projects.

He has built traction systems, skyscrapers and army camps. He has laid out cities and mapped roads. He is as much at home behind a surveyor's triod as he is behind a mahogany desk.

In his new office at the interior department he has no vast expanse of mahogany before him. He uses a second hand desk retrieved from a clerk who moved out when he moved in. He has two small rooms. He works in one of them. A pair of stenographers in the other try vainly to steer a horde of job and loan seekers away from their chief. Between times the stenographers answer the one telephone, which rings constantly.

Sawyer is tall, lean and tanned. He looks like the handsome engineer in the movies, except that he has a curl of whitening hair which dangles over his left eye. He brushes back the curl every now and again but it always returns.

He speaks slowly, deliberately and politely. That takes time because there are scores of daily visitors which the twin stenographers can't head off. Sawyer thus works usually from 8:30 a. m. to 10:30 p. m.

Recently he issued an appeal for delegations of state and municipal dignitaries to stay at home instead of coming to see him for loans he can't grant. He explained that under the law such loans must be first approved by two engineers and one administrator to be appointed in each state. The latter still have not been named. Sawyer said he hoped the statement would keep some visitors away.

A recent one was headed by Mayor Dickmann of St. Louis who wanted $40,000,000 for road building and city improvements. Sawyer received the mayor and his retinue courteously and assured them that their request would be given the fullest possible consideration.

Sawyer is a considerate and affable man. If he were a bit less kindly to callers he might have more time to spend at home with his wife in the evenings.

Those noiseless street cars that Chicago is getting ready to introduce should certainly mark an important step in that city's war on rackets.

Washington Circus

WASHINGTON.—President Roosevelt did his best to get Congress out of Washington before the London Economic Conference opened, but Congress balked at the idea of placing its O. K. on the administration's special legislation without examining it carefully.

The veterans' cuts had something to do with the delay, for none of the solons wanted to go back home before placing themselves on record as being opposed to the heavy slashing of compensation. Many Democrats are on the horn of a dilemma; they want to support the administration but they won't jeopardize their jobs, and that is what they figured they would be doing if they failed to vote on the Steiwer-Cutting amendment to the independent offices bill modifying the cuts in veterans' awards.

Roosevelt's acceptance of a partial payment of $10,000,000 of the June 15 installment of $75,950,000 due the United States from Great Britain furnished a leverage for a lot of political fireworks. Progressive Republicans who supported Roosevelt last fall turned away from him with a bitter comment that it was no time to be taking partial payments from our European debtors and at the same time slashing the vets.

The President's willingness to take the brickbats, the Congressmen figure isn't calculated to help them. They have fences that must be kept mended. Hence the last-minute pyrotechnics. From now on Mr. Roosevelt is not going to have things all his own way.

Fourteen consecutive States have voted to repeal the 18th Amendment, and before the end of June five more will have balloted. Between then and Nov. 30 at least 15 additional states will have acted.

They vote in the following order: California and West Virginia, June 27; Oklahoma, July 11; Arkansas, and Alabama, July 18; Tennessee, July 20; Oregon, July 21; Texas, Aug. 26; Washington, Aug. 29; Vermont, Sept. 5; Maine, Sept. 11; Maryland, and Minnesota, Sept. 12; New Mexico, Sept. 19; Ohio, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and South Carolina, Nov. 7. In the meantime, State legislatures still in session may set dates for repeal conventions, and other legislatures which have thus far failed to act may be called in special session to take action.

The Dry strategy is to concentrate on what the Prohibitionists consider to be dry or doubtful States. The plan now is to work on the 10 States of the Solid South. If these can be held in line, the Dry leaders are confident that three additional States can be picked up in the North or Middle West—sufficient number to block repeal.

Washington is guessing just what was the purpose of the broadcasting company in offering Vice President Garner $52,000 a year for making a weekly talk on politics over a nation-wide hook-up. Garner turned the offer down, with the comment that he didn't think any public officeholder had any business accepting such employment.

The wise ones here make no bones about saying that the broadcasters are courting popularity among members of Congress, with a view to blocking pending legislation for reorganization of the entire broadcasting structure. That little stunt of bringing the microphones into the House and Senate chambers the night it was expected Congress would adjourn, and inviting the members to "speak to our public" was regarded as a studied piece of business with long-range calculation. The radio boys are already up to their necks in politics. And they are playing for big stakes. They are getting ready to prevent passage of any legislation aimed to reorganize broadcasting or to take any of their privileges away from them.

Boxing Law To Let Promoters Put On Real Contests

By W. WINSTON COPELAND
United Press Staff Correspondent

FORT WORTH.—The greatest effect of the new prize-fighting law in this state will be its giving promoters a chance to come out in the open with their fights and to establish boxing on a healthy financial basis.

This is the general opinion of informed fight fans.

The new law will allow promoters to remove all the shambles of exhibitionism from fights, forced on them because prize-fighting was illegal.

Instead of putting an array of glove flippers in the ring under a false banner of "exhibition," promoters will advertise their fights as professional engagements, as such they are and have been.

Promoters welcome the new air. Although prize-fighting has been banned for more than three decades, fans have gone night after night to see their favorite put cauliflower ears on a foe or take one on the chin himself. These matches were "exhibitions," but the bloody-noses and wet towels were the same as in prize-fights.

There are vast differences, however, in prize-fights and exhibitions that were prize-fights—except for the camouflage.

John Fan will readily notice the difference.

Under the prize-fight ban in Texas, no charges were allowed for admission to bouts. It required no Sherlock Holmes to tell that boxing matches can not be held without some cost.

Promoters met this handicap subtly, but within the law. They gave "passes" to all fans, on which the fan was admitted by paying a "handling charge" of some 10 to 25 cents.

Under the new law admission charges are permitted. Mr. Fan will dig down in his jeans—the bigger the fight, the deeper he will dig.

For this larger sum, however, he will see a fight where prizes are awarded and titles are fought for. Under the old law, no prize, not even so much as a medal cut from the bottom of a rusty tomato can, could be issued. Even a decision could not be rendered.

Mr. Fan's extra contribution should assure a beter fight in all respects. It will enable a promoter to pay fighters "on the level." Fighters before were not supposed to receive a thin dime for their fisticuffs. They supposedly did it for the love of the game.

It is no deep, dark secret, however, that fighters did not fight for nothing. Few fighters are wealthy. Only a few of them follow other pursuits. Most of them, except for periods of leanness, had the necessary pesos for their steaks and hair cuts, although the steaks at times may have been thin. Draw your own conclusions.

Inability to charge worked a hardship on promoters. They had continuous difficulty in paying fighters out of only a "handling charge" and still make a living out of the game. Few of them made anything more.

They advised her to try planning her buying through the ads in the Home Town Daily. She took their advice . . . the result was a balanced budget with a comfortable margin left over for saving.

Business Activity For Past Twelve Weeks Are Very Encouraging

AUSTIN, Tex.—Vigorous improvement in a broadening circle of industrial and commercial activities characterized the month of May and the first three weeks of June, Dr. F. A. Buechel, University of Texas economist, pointed out in his monthly survey of general business conditions for the University Bureau of Business Research.

"Twelve weeks of sharply mounting business activity have elapsed since the low point of mid-March was reached, with no indication of immediate slackening, although normally business enters its summer decline at a much earlier date than the present," Dr. Buechel said. "Eucouraging also is the fact that, although part of the current business stimulus doubtless comes from the abandonment of the gold standard and to inflationary psychology, there is no concrete evidence that much of the improvement will contribute to permanent recovery.

"Of great significance will be the success attained in Washington by the Administration during the coming months, in detecting and fostering those elements in the economic situation out of which will develop cumulative business improvement. It may be necessary to restrain those measures which promise immediate relief but which obviously hold a menace of future dangerous repercussions. Most commentators agree that up to the present time extraordinary discernment has been exercised in the management of the legislative program by the Washington Administration and that at the present juncture the unusual powers held by the President is to be regarded with satisfaction rather than concern.

"Under pressure of the executive department, congress has passed during the special session a number of measure of epoch making possibilities. Among them are the highly constructive laws relating to banking, transportation, and modification of the Sherman antit-rust law. The more rarical legislation, however, such as provisions for crop destruction, acreage reduction, and processing taxes, huge expenditures for public works, and the debasement of currency, have caught public attention and for the time being, at least, have all but eclipsed measures designed to regenerate our basic economic institutions. It is to be hoped that business improvement will progress rapidly enough to absorb and neutralize any possible ill effects which may accompany some of the radical economic expenditures now being put into effect.

"The daily press constantly calls attention to the conflict between national and international policies as they are being reflected in the London conference. Senator Couzens, delegate to the London conference, is quoted as having remarked: 'Nationalism seems to overshadow internaonalism at the conference and American domestic policy militates against any international agreements at this time.' The urgent need for a higher standard of living the world over perhaps furnishes the best ground for at least a measure of optomism for a favorable outcome of the London conference.

"In the long run, a rising standard of living can be attained only by developing closer economic relations among nations. Texas and the gulf southwest especially need foreign markets for their surplus cotton, oil, and animal products. Other regions of the United States may have somewhat less pressing need for foreign outlets for their products than the gulf southwest, but all parts of the country will fail to realize full and permanent business recovery until international trade rises substantially above its present low level.

"In common with all sections of the country, Texas business as a whole has been showing a marked revival during the past few weeks. However, on account of the wide range of resources in the state, the comparative localization of production of many commodities and variation in the rate at which prices of the different raw materials have been rising, all areas of the state have not shared in business improvement to an equal extent. The wool and mohair producing region and local areas devoted to the intensive production of certain kinds of vegetables, notably tomatoes, have had a material rise in income.

"This situation is already being reflected in expanding retail business as indicated in reports to the Bureau of Business Research of automobile registrations and department store sales. As the new cotton crop comes on the market and progress is made in raising the price of oil, a wider field of retail distribution should feel the stimulating effects of rising prices. Livestock and livestock products are moving to market in greater volume than a year ago which together with gradually rising prices is increasing the farm and ranch income over practically the entire state. There is good ground for believing therefore that employment conditions and retail sales in Texas will continue to improve with the upward trend of commodity prices which apparently is definitely under way."

By MARLEN PEW

Contact! Four thousand miles, in 30 hours of flying, leaves this department air-minded, if not actually balmy, this week. Cloud voyaging revives youth, restores courage to a faint heart, scatters petty griefs and energizes the soul. Also it makes the patriotic nerve tingle. As the early summer jigsaw panorama unfolds in majestic, almost unreal beauty, on the flight from New York to the Gulf of Mexico, one gains a new and finer concept of the great American institution. In the air view trees do not conceal the forests and perverse man is wiped out of the picture, leaving only the spectacle of his works upon the land.

* * * *

We run along the ground and leap 2000 feet into the air. Below lies Babylon, fringed by the grey-blue waters of the Hudson, New York bay, Long Island sound. We dash across the Pennslyvania line and while scaling the Allegheny peaks encounter a sudden storm—torked lightning, a solid wall of surging clouds, swift changing air currents which flop us about like a leaf in a September gale, and then, almost as suddenly, we emerge through a hole in the sky into the calm of a summer evening, sailing on an even keel westward to Lake Erie.

* * * *

A cloud of smoke high in the air announces Cleveland. I look proudly down on my native city, now expanding from the lake shore like a giant spider web. Recent years have wrought miraculous changes in the contour of the Forest City, so-called for its elms, now perhaps for its massed skyscrapers and factory tack. As a young reporter I wrote stories about the smoke nuisance, but today in this plane I am grateful for the smell of smoke which means pounding engines, whizzing machines, payrolls and happiness after a long and dismal pause.

Akron, also scene of early journalistic endeavors, rises from the rooling surface to meet our ship. It also is smoky, thank heaven. Its growth is astonishing. I look for the house in which I once boarded, while working for $8 per week as advertising solicitor, subscription peddler, reporter and chalkplate artist on the old Beacon. The retail distric has gobbled up my former residence. Columbus suddenly bobs up, with familiar domes, twisty river and magnificent reaches of metropolitan development. I have two views of Cincinnati, one by day and another gorgeous night view . . Queen City wearing two strings of sparkling diamonds about her neck, where bridges cross the Ohio, and many millions of electric spangles on her hilly sides and on the 30-mile river hem of her skirt. Memories! This city was one of my best reporter playgrounds.

Rushing through space at from 110 to 140 miles per hour, sometimes at altitudes of 10,000 feet, but usually only 3,000 feet, we glide over many cities. All seem like old friends. I want to sail down and grab some old newspaper colleague by the hand and talk shop. Our plane makes but few stops, for we are on a time schedule. Louisville looms up on the right. As we near the tree tops, approaching the airport, one sees parks of beautiful homes, set in the rich green velvet of the suburbs, with an occasional stately, ancient frame house, scene of fabled Kentucky hospitality. The countryside is an agricultural mosaic in designs which would dazzle my grandmother who made silk quilts out of old neckties, dress-cuttings and store remnants. Even at high altitudes one can pick out the tobacco fields, planted with the symmetry of high art. Nashville, Memphis, Little Rock, rise in order on our path, their glittering towers waving friendly hands, but we glide along.

One is struck by the constantly expanding size of agricultural domans. Little, closepacked farms in the denselypopulated East spread into 100 to 500-acre farms in the mid-west, but now come vast plantations, ranches and ranges . . one set of buildings to each one thousand or more acres of land. In Tex-on March 4 remains unbroken, as I learn of ar anch of a million acres . . indeed meet the proprietor of that royal estate and find him to be no baron, but a plain, democratic fellow who thinks as I do that 95 per cent of our people have had a rotten deal at the hand of the dominating five per cent. The air view makes one conscious of the fact that more than 40 per cent of our people live on farms or in rural communities and I marvel anew at the audacity, limiting crops to create a higher price level. From the air one would call it an impossible task, but Secretary Wallace seems to have his feet on the ground.

Texarkana just ahead and . . . Texas! The sun beats on the dry earth, but along the river beds crops and blue bonnets are waving and there is a refreshing element in the air which makes the midsumer heat less oppressive than on a New York pavement with the thermometer down 15 or 20 points. Two hours more and Dallas rears her stately head. Just beyond lies Ft. Worth. Twins of the Texas prairie, with civic rivalry always at boiling point, but it is a Gol. 2 Eastern Editor . . . . . reckless outsider who speaks ill of either sister in the presence of the other. We have but a moment on our schedule and wing on to Houston, this week festive on accoint of the 54th annual assembly of the Texas Press Assiciation, attracting some 500 members from all parts of Sam Houston's well-known republic. Tomorrow we sail again to Galveston, out over the waters of the gulf to see more clearly the stanuch seawall protecting this gay island resort, treasured by all Texans. Along the peninsula there are a million head of steers grazing, oil well derricks are thick as fence pickets, endloss rice fields shimmer in the sun and a coastal ship canal runs for hundreds of miles through Port Arthur and on to Beaumont. The sky is greenish d o m e, frescoed by billowing clouds.The earth is a soft green blanket, laid down smoothly for men and beast to lay their tired bodies upon, while soft cool trade winds sweep in at intervals from the gulf to bathe the fevered scene. Our plane taxies in a cloud of dust across theBeaumont airport. A couple of reporter friends run out on the field to say hello. One is lugging a dripping package . . six bottles of home brew in cracked ice. Here's how, Texas! We shall not see your rich Rio Grande valley this time, nor your magic Panhandle, exotic El Paso or legendary San Antonio. In a couple of days we shall fly home again, over the 2,000 miles in 14 or 15 hours, with time out for sleep in hotel beds.

* * * *

Texas is emerging from the great slump! She wasn't hit as hard as many another state, tho the price levels for oil cotton, beef, rice, minerals, fruits and other state products have been devastatingly low. However, Texans have not been lined up at soup kitchens nor have they wanted for a place to lay their heads. I find optimism in the air, here. People seem to think the New Deal will work. Farmers will plough in surplus cotton already planted, if Uncle Sam says the word, and do what is necessary to restrict production and gain inflated prices. I have even heard it said the 5 per cent of independent oil men who have long stood against cooperation or conservation of any sort may be induced to play ball to make oil price recovery possible. Crude sells at 15 cents a barrel today . . which makes the eastern automobilist weep, especially when he considers that a barrel of crude refines into a barrel and a half of "gas", worth 18 cents a gallon in my town.

All along the line of travel our plane has been supplied with newspapers, fresh from the press. Great newspapers these days! Realistic, interpretative, carrying n e w s worth reading, not so much tittle-tattle and nonsense as heretofore. These newspapers breathe optimism. I find in them no element of political partisanship which inhibits the frank recital of the industrial recovery movement. Editorial comment indicates that the solid wall of newspaper support which greeted the new President on March 4 remains unbroken.

New Yorker May Win Pirates Flag

By United Press

By BERNARD J. NILLES
United Press Staff Correspondent

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The hope of Pittsburgh baseball fans for a National league pennant this year rests on the shoulders of a New Yorker, who never dreamed of becoming a major league baseball magnate, and two former ball stars who had retired from the game years ago.

William Edward Benswanger, who became president of the Pirates after the death of his father-in-law, Barney Dreyfuss, has opened the purse strings and has done much to revive baseball interest here.

His first year saw the team rise from a second division outfit to a strong pennant contender under the leadership of George Gibson, who was signed to a contract by Drefuss during the winter of 1931.

During his first term, Benswanger inaugurated a 'ladies' day at Forbes field. Later he allowed boys under 12 to see the game once a week during the vacation period.

Not entirely satisffied with his team, Benswanger purchased several high priced rookie pitchers. He obtained Freddie Lindstrom through a three cornered deal with New York and Philadelphia.

He later signed Honus Wagner (The Flying Hutchman) to a contract as coach. If any of his moves proved popular with Pittsburgh and National league fans, this one did.

Honus, who had been out of organized baseball since 1917 was honored in two special "Wagner days," at Brooklyn and Pittsburgh. He was the toast of baseball fans during the Pirates stay on the Pacific coast and along the entire exhibition game route.

Gibson, who became a brilliant catcher for the Pirates after they purchased him from Montreal, then in the Eastern league, piloted the Pirates to near the top of the National league last season after he came from a six-year retirement to re-enter baseball.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

As the thermometer mounts, refreshing drinks made with fruit juices become most welcome. The very tinkle of ice against glass has a cooling effect even before the beverage is served.

More than this, any drink made with fruit has a definite place in the diet. We all recognize the importance of eating fruit for its mineral content and vitamins, and we should remember those necessary six daily glasses of water. In a fruit punch, we find these essentials combined in a pleasing fashion.

Scientists tell us that "water has the property of absorbing more heat and being less affected by that heat than any other substance. It will absorb the heat from your body, and in passing off in the form of perspiration the evaporation cools you; hence there is a good reason for sipping a cooling beverage not only in the immediate cooling effect but in the ultimate effect."

Charged Drinks Healthful

It is also interesting to know that ginger ale and innumerable other bottled beverages made with "charged" or "carbonated" water are healthful drinks, according to the Chemical Research of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. These beverages are of some food value due to the sugar used in their making, while the fruit juices, acids and extracts and other flavors from aromatic herbs and roots as well as the carbon dioxide gas present act as a tonic and mild stimulant.

Tomorrow's Menu

LUNCHEON: Stuffed tomato salad, rye bread and butter sandwiches, cherry cup puddings, milk, tea.

DINNER: Planked salmon with potato marbles and spinach timbales, jellied fruit salad, vanilla ice cream with strawberry sauce, milk, coffee.

In making drinks for summer refreshment, take care not to make them too sweet. A sugar syrup is better than plain sugar for sweetening. The flavor of the finished drink is more bland and smooth. However, it should be remembered that the syrup acts also as a dilutent as well as a sweetener and must be considered when water is added.

Fruit Juices Are Handy

Ginger ale adds sparkle and pep to a fruit punch. Carbonated water gives a tang, while tea distinctly changes the flavor. These all give character to a mild punch whereas plain water merely lessens the fruity taste and increases the quantity.

Don't hesitate to combine fruit juices. The excessive juice left from the canning of small fruits can always be used to advantage in summer drinks.

Lemon or lime juice give a pleasant tartness to all fruit punches and should always be added if at all possible.

Peggy Points an Accusing Finger

It was a dramatic moment in the kidnaping trial at Barnstable, Mass., when 10-year-old Peggy McMath, from the witness stand as pictured here, pointed to Cyril Buck as one of the men in the automobile in which she was reunited with her father after having been held prisoner for three days. Cyril and his brother, Kenneth, are charged with the kidnaping.

Healthy nerves are essential if a player is going to be successful in maintaining his speed, endurance, and the psychology of victory. As a steady smoker, I find that cigarettes vary a lot in their effect upon the nerves. I have tried all the other popular brands, but for years I have smoked Camels. BARRETT COLVIN, back in New York after years abroad, falls in love with 20-year-old ELINOR STAFFORD. Barrett is 35, wealthy, and has made a name for himself as an archeologist.

LIDA STAFFORD, Elinor's beautiful mother, has kept the girl in the background, wanting attention for herself. Lida is carrying on a flirtation with VANCE CARTER and constantly scheming to keep in the good graces of rich MISS ELLA SEXTON, her husband's aunt, in order to inherit a share of the Sexton fortune.

Years before Barrett shielded his half-sister, MARCIA, when a youthful romance ended disastrously. Marcia had a son whom Barrett adopted. She tells Barrett that if her husband ever learns of the affair he will never forgive her.

Elinor's mother goes to Miami for three weeks. When she returns she deliberately tries to break up the romance between Barrett and Elinor and succeeds. The girl is heart-broken because she does not hear from him.

Barrett and Elinor meet unexpectedly at Miss Ella Sexton's. He offers Lida a cigaret and she refuses, declaring she does not smoke. Rebellious at her mother's hypocrisy, Elinor takes a cigaret, thereby offending her aunt who once more decides to revise her will.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI

ELINOR had never had such a session with her mother as that on the drive home from Miss Ella's. She said again and again, "Mother, people are staring—!" but it made no impression.

The chauffeur's face reddened from the stares of men and women in the cars they passed. Lida's voice was so loud and high-pitched it could be heard through the glass. "I pity that girl!" the chauffeur thought. The thought was an old one that frequently became a chant when the servants were together.

Now Lida was laughing—a shrill, sneering, hysterical laugh. So far as the chauffeur could hear there had been no reply at all from Miss Elinor.

He sympathized with the girl even more deeply as he opened the door of the car a little later. Lida swept into the building, brittle and strong from her flaming anger. Elinor crept after her, her face paper-white.

"For a moment," the cheuffeur told the butler later, "I thought she was going to fall—poor kid!"

Elinor's reactions were divided. In one way she was glad that she had done what she had. For another reason she deeply regretted it. Lida had said, eyes narrowing and glittering, "Think of your father! The way he has slaved all his life. And now you—with a cigaret!—have burned every chance he ever had for rest and independence!"

Elinor would even have lied to give her father all that he deserved. She would have lied gladly and as well as she could. But it was too late.

Barrett Colvin had not once looked at her. This realization crept between every separate recollection of the afternoon. She had stolen side glances at him, unable to help it. Each time he had seemed coldly composed, entirely unaware of her.

Two long days and longer nights stretched ahead. Elinor could not seem to sleep. On the morning following the second night Lida awoke to find the girl standing by her bed.

"Well, what is it?" Lida flung petulantly. She loathed being disturbed so early.

"Aunt Ella's gone—" Elinor said. Lida sat up. She laughed shrilly. "A pretty time you chose—!" she began. It was the old story Elinor had heard so often during those two dreary days. A story of her having ruined her parents' future.

Lida punctuated her diatribe with questions. "And you knew perfectly well how she felt—who telephoned?"

"Craven. Miss Smythe is prostrated—"

"Miss Smythe prostrated! How delicious! Your father can't go to the office? He knows that?"

"Yes."

"He'll probably be cut off without a cent—as you know. And of course you know why too but, even though he gets nothing, he must keep up appearances. I haven't a decent black dress. Has Bessie telephoned?"

"No."

"That's odd. I suppose she thinks since they will be the heirs that we are beneath notice. No doubt she's heard of your part in what happened. Hand me my negligee! Another thing—"

Celeste, whom Lida had summoned a moment before, appeared then and Lida exclaimed, "I've been waiting 10 minutes, Celeste!"

Elinor went to her own, much smaller room. She sat on the edge of her narrow bed and stared at a worn rug. Perhaps she had—ruined all hope of rest for her father.

She heard her mother leaving, heard angry orders flung across a shoulder. Then there was quiet. She must dress, she knew, but delayed, sickened by the thought of what she might have done to her father by smoking that one cigaret. He deserved some of her aunt's vast fortune. He had worked hard all his life, driven by Lida's never-ending needs.

Elinor twisted her hands in misery. Celeste appeared, her eyes pitying. Ah—she with all the rest knew the story!

Mademoiselle must eat, Celeste reminded. For a second she forgot she was a servant to remember that Elinor was young and suffering and alone. She laid a hand on Elinor's shoulder.

"Thank you, Celeste!"

Elinor tried, because of Celeste and her anxiety, to eat as much as she could of "the little breakfast." The rest of the day passed slowly. She played chess with her father, wondering if she were really as guilty as her mother said. Memories of Barrett Colvin sitting stiff and cold in Miss Ella's drawing room haunted the girl.

There followed another sleepless night; another day of much the same drear pattern. The third day was perhaps the most miserable, with Lida, nervous and flaring up angrily or becoming sullenly morbid. Everyone knew that at four they would go into the late Miss Sexton's drawing room and there a little later the will would be read.

At length the long stretch was ended.

The funeral was gloomily correct. No one wept except Craven, who was old, and Bessie Thrope, looking a little more bedraggled than usual in her shabby black. Lida was aware of the smartness of her own black attire. She studied Barrett Colvin who was staring at his hands, gripped between knees. It was amazing, Lida thought, to realize how easily he had been managed. She supposed she was in for a bad half hour with Vance Carter who would remind her of that promise to divorce Bentwell—a thing she intended to do in time but only when the right man appeared. How white Elinor was! And how stuffy Bentwell looked. Sentimental fool—he was actually blinking!

What a perfect old dodo the clergyman was! Well, Lida knew her share wouldn't be diminished by him, who, despite Miss Ella's stern disapproval, had had candles placed upon the altar.

The clergyman was droning. "We brought nothing into this world and it is certain we carry nothing out. The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away!"

Lida looked extremely pensive because she wanted to smile. So terribly apt, that remark!

Just an hour or two more and they'd all hear the will. Thank God, that suspense would be over! She had heard Mr. Grotner speak to Barrett Colvin before the opening of the service to ask him to stay for the reading of the will.

The drive to the burial ground was long and cold, despite the heat in the cars. The snow that had lain for several days had a coating of soot. The open grave and the damp earth was depressing. Even Lida felt the dreariness in such passing. She saw Elinor and saw Barrett Colvin's anxious eyes on the girl.

Then the coffin was lowered. There was the thud of earth on its lid—and the gloomy affair was over.

An hour later Mr. Grotner stood, long fingers tapping the chenille cover of the library table. They were all there before him—Bessie, Jim, Bentwell, Lida, Barrett Colvin, Miss Smythe, and the servants.

Lida, assured and half-smiling, was thinking that she might take a house at Cannes for the remainder of the winter with her share. Bessie was hoping there would be enough to make things easier for Jim. Jim was considering a house with more room around it. The children needed space in which to play. Barrett Colvin thought of nothing but the fact that he must not show what he felt, must not even look at Elinor, sitting beside her father who reeked of Scotch and swayed a little, walking.

Mr. Grotner cleared his throat. The rustling and motion ceased; tension was in the air. Mr. Grotner began reading a long preamble in which Miss Ella rendered to God her gratitude for being all that she had been.

Then the servants were mentioned. "So stuffy!" Lida decided, twisting her gloves which she had taken off, knowing how her hands looked against the black she wore. She heard the amounts which had been left the servants with growing resentment. So pointless, Lida reflected. Such people were happier working. Imagine $20,000 for Craven! And the interest from a soundly invested $100,000 for Miss Smythe for life. It was amazing.

Camels Launch New Ad Series As Sales Show An Increase

Pointing again to the special advantages enjoyed by Camel smokers because of Camel's costlier tobaccos, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company release a new advertising campaign today.

With the caption "It Takes Steady Nerves to Play Like Tilden!" the first advertisement is built around the fact that the famous tennis player, a Camel smoker for years, after trying many other brands found that Camels do not tire his taste, or get on his nerves.

The famous Camel "magic campaign," with its slogan, "It's fun to be fooled . . . it's more fun to know" is recalled in a prominent heading which reiterates that "It is more fun to know—" and continues:

"Camels are made from finer, more expensive tobaccos than any other popular brand. You will find Camels rich in flavor and delightfully mild."

Operations in the factories of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company which are concentrated in Winston-Salem, and which comprise the enormous area of 129 acres of floor space, have had to be stepped up repeatedly to meet the increaser demand for Camel cigarettes, Prince Albert smoking tobacco and other well known Reynolds' brands. The Reynolds' payrolls have mounted steadily in recent weeks as hundreds of additional workers have been employed and working hours have been increased. The Reynolds company is one of the few industrial plants in the country which did not reduce its wage scale during the depression. The output of Camel cigarettes has had to be so heavily increased during recent weeks that it was necessary to add night shifts.

It is understood that the production of Camels is about double that of a few months ago. The Reynolds company has been following an aggressive advertising policy in newspapers and other media.

Large Crowd Hears "Big Jim" Kramer

"Are You for Uncle Sam?" was the subject of Dr. Kramer's sermon on Wednesday night. The First Baptist auditorium was well filled and the evangelist praised the people of Ranger and vicinity for their faithfulness to the meeting even though the weather is extremely hot.

Anyone hearing Dr. Kramer's sermon praising the "Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave" could not help but feel that they love our glorious land of liberty more than before. The choir and audience sang patriotic numbers as well as some of the songs made popular during the World war.

This revival has attracted more than passing notice as there were visitors present from various places outside of Ranger. The spiritual benefits are not confined to a few but are enjoyed by members of every church in our city. Dr. Kramer is a very plain-spoken man but he boasts that he insults no man, regardless of creed.

The subject for tonight is "The Unpardonable Sin." Dr. Kramer promises some new thoughts on this old subject. Come and learn for yourself if you have committed the unpardonable sin.

West Texans Can Visit World'r Fair At Low Cost

ABILENE.—West Texans can attend the world's fair, see the really important exhibits there, see all of Chicago and purchase their meals at a total expenditure of less than $20 in addition to their railway tickets and Pullman.

Unbelievable as it sounds it has been done and on an extensive scale in connection with the first West Texas special train section, a duplicate of which is scheduled to head out Sunday over the Texas & Pacific under the sponsorship of G. B. Sandefer, manager of the Simmons University Cowboy Band, with Chicago and four days and nights at the World's Fair as its goal.

Authority for the statement that $20 is ample with which to taake in the fair and Chicago is Mrs. Paul Vickers of Midland whose husband is manager of the chamber of commerce there. Nineteen persons from Midland made the trip on the train section which left June 11. Members of the party pooled their money each day, selected Mrs. Vickers as treasurer, and let her take care of all arrangements. When they had reached Midland again they found their expenditures in addition to transportation had been slightly less than $20.

"It takes management—but we succeeded," said Mrs. Vickers. "And we saw Chicago from taxicabs and not busses. We chartered them by the hour—and there wasn't a worthwhile sight we missed."

The train section leaves Sunday morning as part of the Sunshine Special and will be under the direction of Sandefer. The fare, which includes railway ticket nad berth to and from Chicago and the four nights there, scales downward from $35.95 for lower berth single from Eastland and $35.75 from Ranger. All reservations must be made through Sandefer at Abilene.

A CONVENT GARDEN

Lovely, peaceful garden,
Enclosed by convent wall,
Edged with brilliant hollylock,
Sentries, stately tall.
Let me gaze upon your beauty,
I'd not dare to tread
Your white-tiled paths, in velvet grass,
Where evening prayers are said.

I think a tiny touch of heaven
Is found in such as this,
A lovely, peaceful garden,
By sun and moonbeans kissed,
With each fresh dew, I hope anew,
That some day I shall tread
Your white-tiled paths, in velvet green,
When evening prayers are said.
