Storm Heads To Charleston

COCOA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Hurricane David, the killer of at least 800 persons, churned along the Atlantic Coast today with dead aim on the 300-year-old city of Charleston, S.C., after pummeling the coast of north-central Florida.

A hurricane warning was posted from Daytona Beach, Fla., north to Cape Fear, N.C., and coastal communities of Georgia were still in peril.

Residents of coastal areas of Georgia and South Carolina were evacuated as weather officials predicted the storm packing 90 mph winds would hit land again later today.

"There's no question about it," said Dick Shenot of the National Weather Service at Charleston. "Charleston is going to get hit." He predicted that by midafternoon hurricane-force winds would sweep the historic city of 60,000 residents, home of Ft. Sumter where the Civil War began, with tides 6 to 8 feet above normal.

At 10 a.m. EDT, the hurricane was located near latitutde 30.5 north and longitude 80.8 west, or about 35 miles east of Jacksonville, Fla. Picking up speed slightly, it was moving toward the north at 12 to 15 mph.

The projected track of the storm would take it very close to the Georgia coast, weather officials said, and a slight jog to the left would cause it to hit land.

Charleston residents cut short Labor Day celebrations, canceled school today and started battening down for the storm.

"There's not a loaf of bread left in the store," said Billy Powell, a co-manager of a James Island grocery. A Charleston department store reported brisk sales of flashlights, radio batteries, cooking fuel, camp stoves, lamp oil and hurricane lamps.

Low areas of the plush resort of Hilton Head Island near the Georgia border were ordered evacuated and the two-lane bridge leading to the mainland was bumper-to-bumper with cars.

Rain and gale force winds gusting to 45 mph were already buffeting the Georgia coast off Brunswick. With the approach of the worst hurricane area to threaten the area in 32 years, the causeway linking coastal Sea Island and St. Simons Island was already closed by water.

The densely populated Miami area was spared Monday as David, one of the century's worst summer storms, hit the United States mainland after taking a heavy toll in the Caribbean.

Hurricane-spawned tornadoes snaked out ahead as it ripped through a string of coastal cities, leaving behind power outages, roofless homes, shattered windows and damaged condominiums.

Furious winds snatched refrigerators and television sets out of wrecked apartments and tossed heavy camper trailers a quarter mile.

Bids, Tax Rate On City Agenda

The Snyder City Council is scheduled to consider bids on three items and conduct a public hearing on its proposed tax rate at tonight's meeting.

The meeting is set for 6:30 p.m. in the council room at city hall.

Up for bids are the contract for a bank depository, for lease of the city's alfalfa farm adjacent to the wastewater treatment plant, and for alfalfa seed.

The city uses treated wastewater to irrigate the alfalfa field as one of the methods of disposal in compliance with antition regulations. The operation of the alfalfa farm is leased to private operators.

The prescribed hearing required by the "truth in taxation" law will be held on the city's proposal to set the tax rate at $1.85 per $100 valuation,, the same rate that has been in effect here for several years.

Also up for consideration will be a request for approval of a parade on Sept. 16 submitted by Fr. Thomas Jordan, pastor of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, consideration of a traffic signal at 37th St. and Ave. M., and a report on the Texas Electric Service Co. application for a rate increase.

Teacher Strike Continues

By The Associated Press

Thousands of teachers nationwide today were ready to join the more than 7,000 already on strike as many schools across the country attempt to open for the fall term after last-ditch bargaining.

Little progress was reported over the long Labor Day weekend in talks aimed at settling strikes, primarily over pay, that have already affected nearly 200,000 pupils in eight states.

Castro Lambasts U.S.

HAVANA (AP)-The Non-Aligned Movement's sixth summit meeting opened on a negative note, with attacks on two governments that once enjoyed places of honor in the Third World as well as on that perennial target, the United States.

In a frequently applauded address opening the five-day meeting Monday, Cuban President Fidel Castro delivered his most scathing attack in years on the United States and also criticized Egypt and China. U.S. and Chinese representatives walked out, and Egypt's foreign minister took issue publicly with his host.

Clements Ends Hungary Tour

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP)-A Texas goodwill delegation headed by Gov. Bill Clements ended a four-day visit to Hungary today "enthusiastic" about the results.

The governor, leading the three-week trip to five Eastern European countries, said, "If the rest of this trip will be as informative and fruitful as the visit to Hungary has been, I am most enthusiastic."

Geral Greene has come up with an impressive counter incident to those stories you see occasionally about inefficient postal service---you know the reports about letters being delivered months, or even years, after they were mailed from a few blocks away.

Well, Greene had a different experience the past week. He received a picture postcard (he says it was mailed by a brother-in-law, whom he did not identify) which came from Twin Falls, Idaho. It was addressed as follows: Geral Green; about 2½ blocks southeast of the city hall and courthouse, Sndr, Texas.

You will note that the name Greene is misspelled, there is no specific address, that Snyder is misspelled, and there is no Zip Code.

Incidentally, did you ever wonder why the organization that handles mail is called the "post" office? It goes back to the days of stagecoaches. The stage lines maintained "posts" at intervals along their routes where they changed horses. The roads they beat out became known as "post roads" and it was only a step farther to call the offices which handled the mail along the stage routes post offices.

George Patterson, recently departed city manager, told how he experienced one of those rare opportunities to get off a flippant quip during the waning days of his tenure here. He answered the telephone and the caller said, "I want to talk to someone who has a little influence in city hall."

"You've got the right person," said Patterson. "I've got about as little influence as anyone in town."

Midwest Electric Members To Meet

Midwest Electric Co-operative has scheduled its annual membership meet for Thursday at the Scurry County Coliseum.

Registration will begin at 6 p.m. and at 7 p.m., a catered barbecue meal will be served.

Midwest members will elect two directors at their annual meeting. The candidates are James Beaver and Glenn Toombs for Place 3 and Melvin Clements and Harold Roberts for Place 4.

Entertainment will be provided by Cindy Hataway of Snyder, and a number of prizes will be awarded during the evening.

All members of the co-op, which has its headquarters at Roby and serves members in several area counties, are being urged to attend the annual meeting.

41 Texans Die During Holiday

AUSTIN (AP)-Traffic accidents during the long Labor Day weekend killed 41 persons, the Department of Public Safety announced today.

Although the final toll was four more than the 37 estimated, DPS Col. Wilson Speir said it was still less than the 45 killed during the same holiday period last year.

Speir attributed the lower total to cooperation of drivers, special effort by law enforcement agencies, the news media and volunteer groups such as the Jaycees.

DPS spokesman Jim Robinson said 15 of the fatalities occurred in cities. The statistics include three two-fatality accidents and five hit-and-runs.

The count ran from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday.

Kurdish Rebels Vow To Keep On Fighting

MAHABAD, Iran (AP)-Kurdish rebels vowed to fight on as they withdrew into the hills from Mahabad and Ayatellah Rubollah Khomeini's forces prepared to occupy the fourth major rebel center they have conquered in northwest Iran.

A ranking official of the banned Kurdish Democratic Party said the tribal warriers were retreating to Sardasht, another mountain stronghold 50 miles south of Mahabad and close to the Iraqi border, and would deliver a "severe blow" there to government forces.

"We were hoping we could draw the army into an engagement inside Mahabad, but unfortunately they did not bite.

"Now we are going to concentrate our forces in Sardasht where they can't use their tanks so effectively," the official, who declined to be named, said.

Heavy firing could be heard into the night echoing over the rugged hills surrounding Mahabad. The Kurds were still pounding away with howitzers and recoilless rifles as they withdrew, and government tanks fired salvos back.

Observers said the government forces apparently didn't want to enter the Mahabad at night and probably would make their final push into the city at daybreak.

The attack on the city started shortly after midnight Sunday when air force Phantom jets rocketed the military garrison in Mahabad that the rebels had occupied since March in their new drive for home rule. The planes returned at dawn and again rocketed the garrison, this time setting it ablaze.

By noon Monday, the 81st Armored Division and the 64th Infantry Divisions were visible in the distance from rooftops, and the Kurds began to withdraw. Advance government units from the south, mostly tanks, arrived close to the city at nightfall, closing the ring about the citv.

Army commanders claimed their forces had entered Mahabad "victoriously" and had been welcomed by the people. But most of the 160,000 population had fled before the fighting started. There was no sigh of troops near the main square Monday night, and several armed Kurds were still moving about the Q--When school cafeteria workers went to work for the food service contractor, did they lose their retirement benefits in the school system?

A--Workers with 10 years or more in the school's retirement system had a vested interest, which means they could draw some retirement pay from that system whenever they retire. Those with less than 10 years could withdraw what they had in the school retirement program, plus interest, which, school officials report, most of them did.

Iran Disputes AP Accounts Of Battles

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)-The Iranian government ordered The Associated Press today to close its Tehran office until a new correspondent can be accredited officially through the Iranian Embassy in Washington.

Dr. Ali Behzadnia, foreign press chief of the Ministry of National Guidance, said AP reporting of fighting in western Iran between government troops and Kurdish rebels had been "basically untrue" in the previous 48 hours.

"We are unable to verify the AP reports and the government has denied them totally," he said. He also criticized the "general tone" of AP reporting but said he was not obligated to give a full explanation of the government's decision.

Ordered to leave the country within 48 hours were Nicolas B. Tatro, AP's new bureau chief in Tehran, who arrived in the country on a 15-day visa Aug. 28, and his wife, Earleen, who was also accredited to The Associated Press in Iran.

Carter Says Vacation Bolstered Confidence

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter, back at the White House after an extended rest, says his vacation travels have strengthened his confidence in America and convinced him that "the spirit of our country is still intact."

Harking back to a 1976 campaign theme, Carter said his renewed appreciation of the nation's strength is based largely on the "'great moral and spiritual strength of our people."

"I also returned with an intense awareness of their fears about the future of our nation and their longing for a sense of unified purpose," Carter said in remarks distributed to the press at a Labor Day picnic for labor leaders.

"This last long weekend is the eve of a new beginning for each of us after the rest and stock-taking of the summer," he said.

Although the president departed considerably from his prepared text, he emphasized the same themes in his brief remarks to an estimated 1,000 persons gathered on the White House lawn.

Carter called on labor leaders to back his energy program and suggested that saving energy does not have to be unpleasant.

"It can be an inspirational think." he said. "It can be an enjoyable thing. It can bring families together. It can make us proud of ourselves. It can restore patriotism.

"There has to be a degree of harmony, a degree of cooperation," he added. "And in all the enlightened social progress for which we have struggled in the past and for which we are struggling now, none of which is easy, the labor movement has been in the forefront."

The president said he found on his vacation "a hope that our nation can be more unified" and called on Americans to be "just a little more unselfish" and forego grasping for "some special advantage."

Warning that "times are not easy," the president compared his energy program to the struggle for freedom, saying it is "Worth whatever ... it might require from us."

Carter said the nation's dependence on imported oil threatens its "basic security" and added: "It is something that kind of happened. We didn't plan it that way."

The president spoke after mingling with the guests, who were treated to games, sack races and banjo playing. The picnic was viewed as an attempt to repair strained relations between the White House and organized labor.

Noting the absence of AFL-CIO President George Meany, Carter explained that the two had spoken on the telephone and that the labor leader stayed home because of a "slight virus."

"But he is a fine man," the president added. "He was kind of reading me my report card on the telephone. He said if I wouldn't tell what was on it, he wouldn't tell either."

Then Carter joked that presidents worry about three things: national security, Congress and Meany.

production the cure

We hear it from the White House, from the pulpit, from the fat-cat politician and from the liberal, do-gooding, bleeding-heart crowd that America must lower its standard of living.

This concept is a distortion from the minds of persons of little faith in this nation.

They point out that we are in economic trouble because we consume too much.

They err.

We are in trouble because we do not produce enough and market it wisely.

We as a people have been encouraged by a deficit-spending, overgrown federal government to be dependent on it, to work less, to subdue our incentives, to quit competing and to embrace a socialistic way of life.

Our "leaders" tell us that we as a nation have reached our peak of greatness and now must relax and slip backward toward a level with the Second Rate and Third world nations.

They err, and their philosophy is one of rotten, putrified "reasoning."

Despite our current minuses, America still has many pluses, a potential for a greatness like which it has never achieved. That greatness will come with a turn-around back to a nation of super-producers producing more and being aggressively competitive in marketing more at home and abroad.

This country not only has fallen upon times or raging inflation and declining economy caused by the wild, deficit spending by government, but there are other deficits involved. We must realize that we never came to our "first in the world" greatness by simply generating and marketing our production at home. We were leaders in world trade.

But international trade involves four basic producers of wealth. They are fishing, farming, mining (oil and gas included) and manufacturing.

We have plus only in agricultural products in international trade. We have minuses - deficits, if you please - in fishing, mining and manufacturing.

We are consuming faster than we are producing. And because of this our "leaders" cry out that we must lower our standard of living.

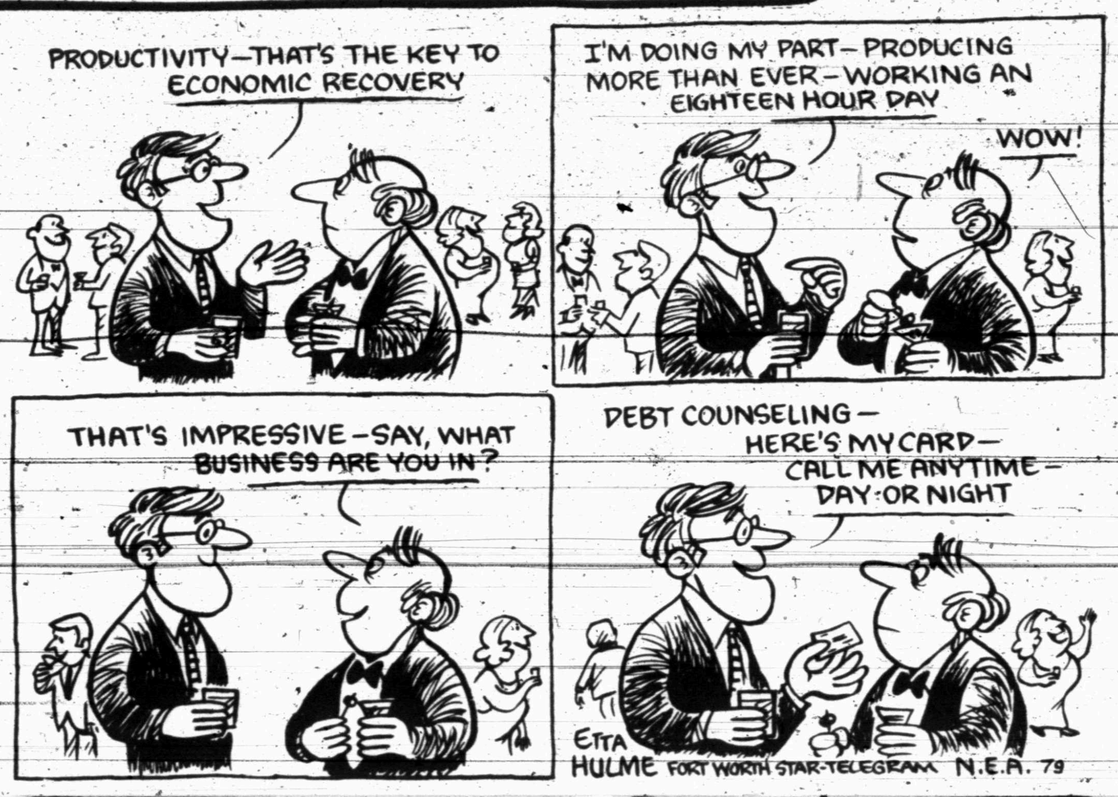

Throughout the history of the nation we have been a country of producers who also were consumers. We had pride in what we made and in what we had.

We had plenty.

Then came a time when the spoil of a nation began, with Big Labor making more and more demands on industry and with government regulations of industry becoming production barriers, until the cost of production was so great that consumers turned to buying more and more imports. The old American pride of product and work ethic became weak, and industrial incentive, also lost strength. And on the political and diplomatic fronts, the politicians, bureaucrats and other bunglers made matters worse in every approach to international trade. American industry and business was left strangled, regulated, taxed, discouraged and with little incentive left.

So now we are consuming heavily but our production is not at the same rate.

We can improve our capacity to produce, but at the same time we must increase our actual productivity. Then we could see some results, for as our volume of production would go up, the prices of our goods would remain competitive on the world market. And if our American made goods are competitive, we homefolks will buy them instead of foreign imports, if, of course, we are given the opportunity.

paul harvey

tell it like it is

My sister and I never suffered any sweat or strain in our "race relations." Our mother brought us up with the casual understanding that "God has flowers of many colors in his garden."

We accepted that as naturally as we accepted Scripture.

My son matured in the awareness that a pianist confined to either the black or white keys is limited to his own disadvantage; harmony requires both.

So I have been able now and then to offer some top-sergeant remonstrance to troublemakers of whatever color without sacrificing a mutuality of respect.

I can "tell it like it is" when any black demands special favors in the name of "rights."

I can call him what he is when a Philadelphia mayor urges voters to "vote white."

I can call it what it is when Blacks, who comprise 12.6 percent of our nation's population, comprise 28 percent of our armed forces.

And when cities 20 percent black have a prison population of 67 percent black.

Blacks, their number multiplying twice as fast as the white population, if not yet in position to lead are in a powerful position to push.

And I can call their misleaders what they are when they dare – as one did on TV the other night – to promote violence.

When unemployment nationally is 5.7 percent – but among young blacks it is 30.9 percent – despite an abundance of help-wanted ads for unskilled workers, I can challenge them to shape up.

Or when they occupy low-rent housing, then misuse it.

When white abandon cities because they refuse to share them – I can rub their upturned noses in the tenets of their own religion.

Now we come to another facet of our nation's race relations. Asians are moving in in unprecedented numbers. Their background, mores and traditions are entirely foreign to our own.

The open-arms response of politicians is understandable, especially since a news-hungry multiplicity of media is dramatizing the "boat people" as martyrs.

Some of us owe these immigrants some reminders that are shirt-sleeve honest. For example: "Don't come to this country because it is what it is and then try to change it into something which it is not."

Understand, Boat People, very many Americans don't want you here. Some because of your color or because you will take jobs or because you will not take jobs.

As the son of an immigrant, I cannot be that selfish.

Instead, I am anxious that you might resist assimilation, divide your allegiance, distort our institutions. Don't do that.

Add spice to the soup; don't spit in it. Then – as generations of immigrants who preceded you, lean, hungry, unspoiled and appreciative, you might make of yourselves better Americans than we are.

NEW YORK (AP) Few people knew it at the time, but 50 years ago this week Wall Street and the United States stood at a landmark point.

In the first week of September 1929, a runaway bull market in stocks reached its climax. Less than two months away was the crash that was too usher in the Great Depression.

"On Sept. 3, by common consent, the great bull market of the 1920s came to an end," the economist John Kenneth Galbraith wrote in his book "The Great Crash 1929."

"Economics, as always, vouchsafes us few dramatic turning points. Its events are invariably fuzzy or even indeterminate. On some days that followed - a few only - some averages were actually higher.

"However, never again did the market manifest its old confidence. The later peaks were not peaks but brief interruptions of a downward trend."

In the sock market Sept. 3, the day after Labor Day, General Electric reached 396¼, three times where it stood a year and a half before; Radio hit 101, having quintupled in 18 months, and U.S. Steel was 261¾, double its early-1928 level.

"Remember that on that day few people imagined that the peak had actually been reached," said Frederick Lewis Allen in his book "Only Yesterday."

"The enormous majority expected the Big Bull Market to go on and on. For the blood of the pioneers still ran in American veins; and if there was no longer something lost beyond the ranges, still the habit of seeing visions persisted ...

"Still the American could spin wonderful dreams - of a romantic day when he would sell his Westinghouse common at a fabulous price and live in a great house and have a fleet of shining cars and loll at ease on the sands of Palm Beach."

Two days later, on Sept. 5, there was a small forerunner of the disaster to come when the market declined sharply in what became known as the "Babson break."

Roger Babson, an economist known as something of a maverick and a perpetual prophet of gloom, declared that day in a luncheon speech to a business conference that "sooner or later a crash is coming." His forecast, however similar to ones he had made before, touched off a wave of selling.

By the next day, Friday, Sept. 6, the market had steadied. But Wall Street was still ruffled by what had happened, and Babson was roundly criticized.

The historical chart of the stock market shows a lofty, isolated peak in the late 1920s. The mountain was built out of margin - borrowed money used to finance speculation on stocks.

Once the market started to decline, it generated its own downward momentum by wiping out the value of the collateral on those loans, forcing more and more sales of stock.

As it turned out, the Dow Jones industrial average, after reaching a high of 386.1 in 1929, did not get back to that level again for 25 years.

WASHINGTON (NEA)— Does there exist anywhere a landlord whose generosity includes a provision in the standard lease agreement allowing evicted tenants to receive full compensation for all improvements made during their occupancy?

There is indeed such a benevolent soul. He's Uncle Sam, specifically the Interior Department's National Park Service, which pays millions of dollars for the honor of ridding the national parks of companies that fail to provide adequate tourist facilities.

The payments are required by a provision of a 1965 law that defines the "possessory interest" of those who are granted NPS contracts to operate concessions serving park visitors.

If NPS wants to terminate a contract because of unsatisfactry performance, the concessionaire must be compensated for the current cost of reconstruction, less depreciation, of all of its "structures, fixtures or improvements acquired or constructed" within the park.

A current case in point involves the General Host Corp., a conglomerate corporation that in 1966 was awarded NPS contracts to be the principal concessionaire at two of the country's biggest national parks.

They are Everglades National Park in Florida and Yellowstone National Park, whose territory includes portions of Wyoming, Montana and Idaho.

By 1976, NPS decided that General Host was running what one agency official describes as a "pretty miserable" operation at Everglades. But it cost $1.3 million in public funds to buy out the firm's "possessory interest" in park facilities.

At Yellowstone, General Host was operating a highly successful business. Information disclosed at a Senate hearing shows that the corporation's subsidiary in the park last year had a net worth of $13 million, retained earnings of $4 million and profits of more than $2.9 million.

But little of that money was being spent on the park. One Interior Department investigation concluded that General Host's management "cannot respond to visitor needs because the company is not oriented to service to the public but only to the the generation of profit dollars."

According to the National Parks and Conservation Association, NPS officials found "unsanitary kitchen operations, run-down buildings, shabby furnishings" and "accommodations (that) are uncomfortable, inconvenient and unsafe."

NPS has terminated General Host's role as Yellowstone concessionaire on the grounds that the firm operated "in violation of the contract" and provided "unsatisfactory service." But Congress now is being asked for a special $15 million appropriation to pay the corporation for its "possessory interest."

The park service has compounded its problems by routinely signing concession contracts for long terms - often 10, 20 or 30 years - and granting the recipients "preferential rights" to renew and provide additional services or facilities needed.

That preferential right of renewal "discourages competition" and means that "outsiders have virtually no chance to get a concession," warns the Interior Department's inspector general.

As a result, many of the country's biggest and most popular national parks are perpetually dominated by the major corporations that can afford to bid on the concession contracts.

"In certain instances, it appears that the concessionaire, not in the park service, operates the park area," a pair of House subcommittees observed in one report highly critical of NPS.

There is a better way. Visitor facilities in the parks can - and should - be financed through franchise fees, public funds or possibly a quasi-public trust fund.

Professionals could still be retained to operate the visitor facilities - but under limited management contracts drafted to prevent public parks from becoming private preserves.

On Friday a California congressman pleaded to the cigarette industry to stop all advertising that portrays smoking as fun, glamorous and sexy. He charges that the young are being seduced into thinking that smokers lead more exciting lives.

Its an old battle heating up again.

Remember when cigarette commercials graced our TV screens every 15 minutes? There was Newport with all those refreshing scenes of people splashing in the surf; Salem where it would suddenly turn to spring time; and of course the grandest of all, Marlboro with its bronze cowboy, the epitome of health, riding his fine steed over the rugged and breathtakingly beautiful countryside.

And those old slogans. How could we forget them after they spent millions of dollars pounding them into our head. Test your memory: ---- Tastes Good Like a Cigarette Should: --- ---- Means Fine Tobacco (Ismft); Move Up To ---; I Would Walk A Mile For A ----; --- --- For Particular People.

Since 1964 aiming the ads at young people has been expressly forbidden. The tobacco industry claims they are only trying to create or maintain a preference among those who already smoke. But who can miss the subliminal message: (whether its intended or not) Women who smoke are sophisticated, independent and liberated. You've come a long way baby. Men smokers are macho, suave, individualistic. They know what they want out of life and go for it.

For the young smoker, image is the whole bit. Hollywood did more than its share to perpetuate the idea that truly swashbuckling types should always have a cigarette dangling out of their mouths. Humphrey Bogart comes to mind. Even the beloved John Wayne did his share of puffing while putting scoundrels in their place. (Whatever happened to those guys anyway?)

It is in pursuit of this reckless image that the teenager lights up. He is showing the world that here is a guy who likes to live on the edge. To hell with the risks he is ready for any challenge. It is a natural and becoming attitude of the young and daring. The trouble is when they grow up and have found that challenge they are stuck with the habit.

It is not much fun to wake up just when that impossible dream is at hand and find you have run out of breath.

Marathon Means Only One Thing

NEW YORK (AP)-If you ever run or talk about a marathon, it can mean only one thing, a foot race covering 26 miles, 385 yards, notes Fred Lebow, president of the New York Road Runners.

"People incorrectly use the term 'marathon' to mean any long distance run," adds Lebow. "Any other distance is not a marathon although it may seem like one to you."

Lebow is credited with originating the term "mini marathon" seven years ago to denote a run of 6.2 miles - 10,000 meters. He said that the L'eggs Mini Marathon in Central Park this year had 4,500 women starting. The first mini he staged in 1972 had only 78 women entrants. "We begged women to run," he recalled.

Jigsaw Puzzle Enthusiasts Prefer Food

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)-Americans seem to prefer puzzles that feature illustrations of food to those with fine art prints, a recent survey by a puzzle manufacturer indicates.

Joe O'Brien, who plans the puzzle line for Hallmark here, says the firm's current best seller is a double-decker hamburger, complete with pickles, lettuce, tomatoes and a sesame-seed bun.

O'Brien admits he has no explanation for the sudden surge of interest in food puzzles, but his theory is that the appeal is due in part to the popularity of gourmet cooking classes and eating out.

Princess Juliana of the Netherlands went to Canada to stay, during the Second World War in 1940.

4-H'ers Have Busy Summer

"Activities in 4-H are not just programs constructed to help youngsters pass the time, but to mold assets," says Blanche Chisum, county agent. "4-H is the youth phase of Extension Service educational programs."

In 4-H, working together for a common goal prepares today's young people for working relationships in the business world. These community efforts also establish the brotherhood that many Americans are striving for all over the world, notes Mrs. Chisum.

The challenges 4-H youngsters face give them a chance to place new ideas into the lives of their familes and communities. They also learn through their experience and gain wisdom that will benefit them in later years.

Whether 4-H members are competing in food or livestock shows, method demonstrations, or county fairs, they are working toward the maturity they find in their adult leaders and county extension agents, says Mrs. Chisum.

Belia Rocha, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Rocha, won a blue ribbon in the district meeting dress review held in Lubbock. Martha Beavers attended the leader-lab held this summer in Levelland. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Beavers. These two outstanding 4-H'ers have many ribbons and accomplishments to their credit.

The local 4-H club participated in the Labo program this summer. Three exchange students from Japan lived with Scurry County families. A 12-year-old girl, Tomoko Nakamura, stayed with the Bob Barbee family of Ira. Kazuniko Hara, 15, was a guest in the John Reed home and Jumiaki Jujisawa stayed in the home of Gary Fox and family at Ira. The trio was here for the cultural exchange program, Labo International Exchange Foundation, from July 23 to Aug. 23.

Another highlight of summer was a trip to Carlsbad, N.M., where the group toured the Eddy County Fair in Artesia; Carlsbad Caverns, the Living Desert, and went swimming in Lake Carlsbad.

Two recently organized groups to further learning experiences are the gun club (or shooting sports) and 4-H Foods and Nutrition.

The shooting sports activity began a year ago in Scurry County and has 32 members lead by Joe Chaney and assisted by Rue Gambol and Paul Hurt.

The other relatively new segment, foods and nutrition, is to help children learn about selecting, preparation, and the nutrition of foods.

Local 4-H groups include Hermleigh, Ira, Snyder Junior and Ennis Creek.

Anyone interested in joining a 4-H should contact Blanche Chisum at the county extension office or call 573-5423.

Testimony To Begin On Bell's Rate Request

AUSTIN (AP)-Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. says Texans should accept a little inflation in their telephone bills to help Bell cope with the inflation it suffers.

Phil Ricketts, hearings director for the Texas Public Utility Commissions, opens an estimated two weeks of testimony today on Bell's request for $145.2 million in rate increases.

The PUC staff, whose recommendations carry extreme weight with the three-man commission, says Bell is entitled to $137.7 million in increases over 12 months.

Staff members were expected to pare their recommendation by $1 million and Bell was expected to cut its request by $2 million because of errors in calculation.

Bell says two-thirds of its requested increase in revenue should come from a $1.55 per month across-the-board increase in basic residential and business telephone bills.

In pre-filed testimony, N. Carlton Baker, Bell's vice-president for revenues and public affairs, said two basic reasons are behind the rate increase.

"One is inflation. The second is the continuing demand for telephone service in an inflationary environment," he said.

He said Bell's labor contract with Communications Workers of America will add $46.5 million to the telephone company's costs over the coming year. Baker said interest rates on Bell debentures are 9⅝ percent, compared with 8¾ last year.

Bell's attractiveness to investors also is a major issue.

New York stock analyst Bradford Peery said in prefiled testimony he now recommends that his clients sell their stock in American Telephone & Telegraph AT&T, Bell's parent company.

Peery said AT&T's projected total investor market return is 13.3 percent, "significantly below the 14.1 percent market return that investors require for investing in AT&T today."

This is Bell's third trip to the commission for rate increases since the commission started establishing telephone rates in 1976. In that year, Bell asked for increases totaling $298 million but received only $58 million. Bell was granted a $124.5 million increase on Aug. 2, 1978, compared with a request of $214.3 million.

Coffee Pots Posing Risk Of Scalding

WASHINGTON (AP)-Corning Glassware Inc. has agreed to ask the owners of 18.5 million coffee makers to stop using them because the handles might come off, posing a risk of scalding burns, a government official says.

John Bell, a spokesman for the Consumer Product Safety Commission said the agency planned a news conference today to announce details of the Corning plan, which was prompted by consumer complaints.

He said the action involves all 18.5 million coffee makers sold by Corning since 1960.

It is not technically a recall ordered by the commission, Bell said, but a voluntary plan worked out in negotiations between the agency and the Corning, N.Y., firm.

However, Bell said, this would be the largest recall-like action involving a single product since the agency was established in 1972.

Although the commission does not expect all 18.5 million coffee makers to be returned, Bell said if just half that number is returned it would be the largest recall in the commission's history.

Corning spokesmen were not immediately available for comment.

Robert Newhouse's Mercedes Stolen

DALLAS (AP)-Thieves stole a car that belonged to fullback Robert Newhouse of the Dallas Cowboys Monday while it was parked near the front door of their home.

Mrs. Newhouse said the blue Mercedes was loaded with infant equipment such as strollers and baby car seats the Newhouses used for their 6-month-old twin girls.

Police said thieves apparently "hot-wired" the ignition.

Ancient Windmill Gets Washington's Attention

By David L. Langford
Associated Press Writer

A seventh-century Persian invention taken to China by Ghengis Khan and adopted across Europe by the returning Crusaders will enable a group of Navajo children in Arizona to attend school in their own community this year for the first time.

By the year 2,000, it is expected to provide this country with about 1.7 quadrillion British thermal units of energy a year. That would be less than 2 percent of the nation's total energy consumption, but with today's oil prices every little bit helps.

The ancient windmill thus provides some hope for the future.

"The windmills did a good job and still do a good job," said W.W. Duitsman, secretary of agriculture in Kansas, where for years the machines have been pumping water for livestock and now new ones are being built to generate electricity.

The federal government budgeted $60 million for windmill research this year - as compared with only $1 million just five years ago - and a number of private companies are involved in multi-million-dollar projects of their own.

Perched 4,420 feet high on Howard's Knob near Boone, N.C., is the Goliath of the world's operating wind turbines, a $3.5 million, 350-ton machine with blades 100 feet long. Dedicated in July, it was built by the General Electric Space Division for the U.S. Department of Energy and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Expected to supply enough energy for 300 to 500 homes when it goes into full operation this fall - that's 10 times the peak power of any existing windmill - it is controlled by NASA computers 35 miles away in Lenoir, N.C., collecting data for the Department of Energy.

With the Boone mill still in its testing stage, authorities still don't know whether it will generate as much power as expected.

"This time of year winds are slack, but that is about as we expected," said Bud Ayers, a spokesman for Blue Ridge Electric Membership Corp.

"But I don't know of any particular problem that has caused us deep concern."

Whether it works or not, the giant windmill is such an oddity that tourists come from all over to look at it. Watkuaga County plans to build a 54-acre park at the site.

When the 1,500 Navajos of the remote Birdsprings reservation 60 miles east of Flagstaff, Ariz., decided to build a school for their children, the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs insisted it must have electrical power. But the Indians discovered it would cost about $100,000 to bring in electricity from the outside and that was beyond the reach of a community dependent on sheep herding and farming.

So with the Indians supplying free labor, they built a wind system. Two windmills revolve on twin 50-foot-high towers, charging batteries that will last three to four days if necessary.

It cost $20,000.

This fall the Navajo children, many of whom were sent to schools as far as 250 miles away, will attend classes at the Little Singer School, named for a medicine man who before his death made Indian leaders promise to build their own school.

Clayton, N.M., population 2,978 claimed to be the country's first community partly powered by wind in January 1977, when a two-bladed windmill hooked into the city-owned utility system. The mill spins enough electricity for about 30 homes and is a source of community pride. A restaurant changed its name to "The Windmill Cafe" and had a mural of the mill painted on its wall.

Louis Divone, chief of the Department of Energy's Wind System Branch, said it presently costs three times more to generate electricity by wind systems than with conventional systems, mainly because of the expense of building the mills. But with mass production of mills and the rising fuel costs, wind power is expected to become cost-competitive with other systems by the mid-1980s.

But the efficiency of windmills depends on the velocity of winds and that varies from place to place.

Atop the roof of its Miami Beach test lab on the McArthur Causeway, Florida Power and Light Co. operates a 2,500-watt experimental windmill called Mariah. But over a one-year period, the windmill produced only $63 worth of electricity figured at 4 cents per kilowatt hour.

In California, there are two state agencies dealing with windmills, the Wind Energy Office, promoting big projects, and the Office of Appropriate Technology, involved in individual requests for assistance.

John Nichols, manager of wind energy, said the State Legislature has set a goal of "10 percent of electrical energy from wind power by the year 2000."

"We are mapping and surveying and determining the proper sites for windmill farms,'" Nichols said. "We're supposed to get hundreds of sites here in California."

But Arthur Blake, supervisor of load management projects at Southern California Edison, doesn't foresee much impact from wind power until windmills come down in cost.

"A fellow pays $180,000 for a unit to generate 10 kilowatts," he said. "If his electric bill is $100 a month and he cuts it to $50 a month by generating half his energy, you see what the pay-back is. Two or three hundred years?"

Nonetheless, Blake said Edison has had "hundreds of inquiries" about a program to buy excess power from "backyard" windmills.

And Edison is building a $2 million wind plant of its own at San Gorgonio Pass near Palm Springs. The 190-foot-tall windmill, with three blades in a diameter of 165 feet, is expected to generate enough electricity to supply 800 to 1,000 customers.

Very high blood pressure

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 47-year-old female. I'm 5 feet 4 and weigh 128 pounds. I have high blood pressure and take Inderal and Hydrodiuril daily.

When my high blood pressure was discovered, I had dizziness, vomiting and loss of memory. The doctor discontinued my Premarin. I had had a hysterectomy three years before that.

Now I have hot flashes that are very annoying and uncomfortable, especially at night. Is it dangerous to take hormones in my state of health and, if so, why?

DEAR READER — There are many factors related to high blood pressure. There are specific medical conditions that can cause it, but in the vast majority of cases we don't know why one person has high blood pressure and another seemingly similar person does not.

Your description suggests that you had very high blood pressure, possibly associated with accumulation of fluid in the brain (cerebral edema). The acute increases in blood pressure associated with those kinds of symptoms are sometimes called a hypertensive crisis.

I hope the medicines you are taking have controlled your blood pressure so that it's within relatively normal limits now.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 1-8, Blood Pressure, to give you a better idea of the factors that control this condition. Other readers who want the issue can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

There's no way I can tell you whether you can take hormones. Certainly you don't need to worry about cancer of the uterus since you had a hysterectomy. But the question is whether the hormones are related to your blood pressure.

There are a small number of women who develop high blood pressure with birth-control pills. After all, they too are nothing more than combinations of female hormones. It's important for these women to discontinue the birth-control pills altogether.

The only way the question can really be answered in your case now that you're on medicines to control high blood pressure is to find out if resuming the hormones will have any adverse effect. Certainly you don't want to go through the problem you had before because that's relatively dangerous. So it would have to be a very carefully controlled study in your case.

Meanwhile in the absence of that information you certainly should not take female hormones.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column about the gadgets you can get for ringing in the ears. Isn't there any medication you can take before you resort to that?

DEAR READER — Usually not, but you have to remember that ringing or noises in the ear is a symptom. Before you treat it, you need to find out if possible what's causing it.

It can be caused by taking various medicines, including common aspirin in some people. So in that case, taking medicine won't relieve the condition but stopping the medicine might.

Climbers Trapped On Mt. Rainier

LONGMIRE, Wash. (AP)—A disc jockey and two companions battled for survival high on Mount Rainier today after a suffocating blizzard halted their charity climb and helicopter rescue attempts failed.

Eight feet of snow fell on the climbers over the weekend, destroying their tent and forcing them to take refuge in sleeping bags nestled in a crevasse "bigger than a basketball gymnasium."

Four rescue flights by a Chinook helicopter from Fort Lewis failed Monday when the aircraft could not land because of fog and blowing snow, said Maj. Ralph Paduano. Flights were to resume at daybreak.

The climbers, who are unable to descend because their ice axes were buried in the deep snow and because there is a threat of an avalanche, are trapped near the summit of the 14,410 mountain.

A specially equipped and trained four-man rescue team was to set out early today from 10,000-foot Camp Muir, said Mount Ranier National Park spokesman Larry Henderson.

Disc jockey Terry MacDonald, 31, who initiated the climb to raise money for the fight against muscular dystrophy, was filing regular reports to KYYX-FM in Seattle when the trek began last Tuesday.

Spill Chokes Flow Of Padre Island Tourists

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP)—The tourist industry began assessing its losses today from an oil spill that scared away summer business and reduced Labor Day weekend revenues to a fraction of last year's income.

"It's a terrible disappointment," said Ralph Thompson of the South Padre Island Tourist Bureau.

Drizzle and cloudy skies along the Texas Coast most of Monday ended hopes for a last-minute surge of vacationers.

Thompson estimated the hotels, restaurants and shops that depend on seasonal sales lost three weeks of their peak summer business because of oil spill publicity.

The establishments have no way to make up the loss, he said.

Thompson planned to survey businesses today for an estimated percentage of their lost income. He would not put a dollar figure on anticipated losses.

Today also marked the first opportunity for operators to apply for Small Business Administration loans made available to offset effects of the Mexican oil spill.

Seven coastal counties have been designated disaster areas after either the brown crude or threats of its coming chased away tourists.

Cleanup crews had removed most traces of oil by Labor Day and there were no new sightings of oil floating offshore.

However, the seashore was almost deserted on the summer's last holiday.

"Business is pretty bad, especially for a holiday," said Bonnie Walker at the Dockside Deli.

"The only customers we've had are local people and some Coast Guard guys," she said. "I haven't seen any tourists this week."

Business annually goes into a lull between Labor Day and Christmas, when the winter season begins, Thompson said.

Larger hotels can count on corporate meetings and convention groups to tide them over.

The family-owned establishments won't be so lucky, he said.

"There isn't going to be much activity for the smaller properties," he predicted.

It may be too late to help a beleaguered tourist industry, but Environmental Protection Agency spokesman Roger Meacham said there appears to be a lull in the northward progress of oil from a crippled Mexican offshore well.

A Coast Guard surveillance flight identified scattered patches of sheen 75 miles south of Brownsville and light sheen concentrations a half a mile to a mile out to sea from Port Isabel to Corpus Christi.

However, scientists believe the sheen near the Texas beach is caused by a "reworking" of oil already on the beaches - a process they say contributes to the breakdown of the crude.

Almost 3 million barrels of oil have flowed from the well in the Bay of Campeche, 500 miles south of Corpus Christi, since it blew out June 3. The target date for capping the well is Sept. 16, but one Mexican engineer estimated it could takem until early October.

However, capping efforts have cut the daily flow of oil gushing into the sea from 30,000 barrels to 10,000 barrels.

Return Bout At Hand On Gasoline Rationing

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—House and Senate energy conferees, among the scrappiest and most long-winded combatants in Washington, are staging a return bout.

The main event; an attempt to produce a compromise standby gasoline-rationing and energy conservation bill. Work gets underway within the next few days.

Participants are largely the same two groups that fumed, argued and battled their way to a compromise energy bill in 1978.

That effort began in 1977 and it was nearly a full year before the work was finished and a compromise produced.

So when congressional leaders predict a short conference, as they have been doing, few on Capitol Hill seem to be taking them seriously.

House-Senate energy conferees deadlocked and brawled so much in their last encounter it took the intervention of President Carter to cool tempers and keep the talks for collapsing entirely.

Squaring off for the new battle are the same leaders of the Senate and House teams as in 1977-78; chairmen Henry M. Jackson of the Senate Energy Committee and Harley O. Staggers of the House Commerce Committee.

Jackson, a Washington Democrat, declared from the outset that he thought the House-passed rationing bill was "riddled with loopholes" and "completely unacceptable" to either him or the Senate.

A top Jackson aide, promised anonymity, was asked several days ago how long it would take to reach agreement. "As long as it takes for the House side to agree to dump all the garbage the House put in the bill," the aide said.

Staggers, a West Virginia Democrat, also approaches the negotiations with his position clear. "I'm against all forms of gasoline rationing. It only leads to corruption," he recently told a reporter.

Another leading House Democrat on the panel said he would give his assessment of the situation if his name wasn't used.

"I'm fed up with the whole thing," he said.

Even after agreement is reached on rationing, there will be other parts of President Carter's energy bills to negotiate.

Congress is officially expected to quit for the year Oct. 20. But no one believes that, either.

"Probably, when Congress does recess around Christmas, the energy conferees will be left behind to work," one energy aide said.

That happened, too, in 1977, with dubious results.

Not only did the conferees not produce a compromise bill as a result of staying in town during the Christmas recess, but an unfortunate well-wisher dressed as Santa Claus mistakenly walked into the room where the conference committee was meeting.

He was booted out of the room by an irate Staggers.

After all, this is a tough group.

Lo-Vaca Settlement Ends 6 Year Dispute

AUSTIN (AP)—The Texas Railroad Commission approved today a settlement between Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. and its gas buyers.

A brief signing ceremony, without comment, ended six years of controversy over natural gas contracts and increasing gas rates.

Attorneys said it probably would be the end of the year before all details of the settlement were worked out.

The commission's September 1973 order authorized Lo-Vaca to recoup 100 percent of its gas costs and to charge major customers, such as cities, an extra nickel per 1,000 cubic feet of gas.

Customers sued Lo-Vaca for $1.6 billion for alleged breach of contract.

The commission voted in December 1977 to rescind the 1973 order and to require Lo-Vaca to live up to its contracts. It also ordered Lo-Vaca to refund the $1.6 billion in alleged overcharges.

Company officials said the order would cause bankruptcy.

The commission then granted additional time for Lo-Vaca and its customers to negotiate a settlement.

On Aug. 21 the commission was advised that buyers representing nearly 100 percent of Lo-Vaca's sales volume wanted the commission to approve the wording of the proposed settlement.

One in four Texans probably would be affected by the settlement since Lo-Vaca supplies virtually all of Central South Texas and sells to electric and natural gas companies serving Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and other areas.

Under the settlement plan, Lo-Vaca and several smaller pipelines owned by Lo-Vaca's parent, Coastal States Gas Corp., would be renamed Valero Energy Corp., with the headquarters moving from Houston to San Antonio.

Valero would be owned by its customers, however, not by Coastal States.

Coastal-Lo-Vaca's old contracts would be void and the $1.6 billion in suits would be dropped.

The five-cent surcharge in effect since 1973 would rise to 10 cents the first year and 15 cents the second year of the settlement, which is to go into effect before 1980.

Lo-Vaca President Bill Greehey said rates for major customers would rise by less than 1 percent. He declined to predict new rates for customers of electric or natural gas companies that buy from Lo-Vaca.

Coastal would agree to spend $180 million to $230 million over 15 years looking for gas to sell to Valero at discounted prices.

Approximately $160 million in securities would be distributed over seven years to customers who have agreed to the settlement. An estimated $40 million in Valero profits would be added to the customer trust.

Anatomy Of Miss America Charted

By PETER MATTIACE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—Who is going to be the new Miss America?

She probably won't be a short, 18-year-old baton twirler or folk singer from a big city, or from Vermont, Alaska or Maryland.

So conclude Dr. George L. Miller and Dr. Chipei P. Tseng, academians from Northern Illinois University who have studied the hard, statistical facts of the past 20 Miss America Pageants.

The economics analysts presented their 40-page academic study entitled "The Anatomy of Miss America" to a meeting of the American Statistical Association in Washington, D.C., last month.

They say Miss America is most likely to be a 20½-year-old, born in April, whose waist is 12 inches smaller than her bust and hips, and who has a plain name, plays the piano or sings and lives in a small town in California.

Not surprisingly, Miller and Tseng conclude that "the females entering the pageant are not intended to be average American females."

Miss Americas of the '60s and '70s stand an average of 5 feet 6 inches tall, weigh 119.1 pounds and have measurements of 35.6, 23.4 and 35.6.

The scientists conclude that Miss America is slowly becoming better educated, taller and less busty. Judges are paying a little less attention to feminine proportions and there is a slight, perceptible trend toward "more masculine features," the study states.

However, they say, statistics prove that "a definite bias toward swimsuit winners is obvious ... Swimsuit winners are the best bets for the crown."

They add, "Judges do seem to favor a symmetry of bust and hips with waists approximately 12 inches smaller."

Overall, pageant judges seem to gravitate toward small town women because large cities only send one contestant to state pageants. Contestants from California go further here, they say.

Opportunity For A Clean Old Man

By Abigail Van Buren
1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Who does that 62-year-old codger think he is? God's gift to virgins? He said he could marry a 22-year-old, but she wasn't a virgin. So now he's romancing a 19-year-old dancing instructor who IS a virgin but can't date him because it's against house rules.

I'm a few years older than our Casanova, but I wouldn't have him on a silver platter. I, too, would like a companion, but I know my place. I have a lot to offer. Not too bad to look at, have a comfortable home which I'd gladly share with a man willing to carry his own weight. I'm a fine cook and housekeeper, I still raise all my own vegetables, can, and do chores as though I still lived on a farm. I'm not trying to sell myself, I don't have to. I get along fine as is, but sometimes it's a lonely existence.

Once when I refused to date a married man, he said, "A woman your age can't be too choosy!" Well, I can be choosy enough never to date a man who has a wife sitting at home waiting for him!

Abby, is there a man anywhere who wants a wife, companion, helpmate, a good woman to help see him through the sunset years of life? Seems to me there would be more available men for us older women if more people would act their age.

ACTING MY AGE IN MO.

DEAR ACTING: What do you mean by "acting one's age"? It's time we abandoned those old stereotypes. Anything a man or woman is capable of doing at his or her age is an appropriate activity and should be enjoyed to the fullest without embarrassment or apologies.

You sound like a woman who would appeal to many home-loving men in your age bracket, but no man is going to break down your door to offer you companionship. Get involved in community affairs; meet people! Life need not be lonely.

DEAR ABBY: My husband went back to college to get his degree, so now I have three college "kids" on my hands—a 19-year-old daughter, a 22-year-old son, and a 50-year-old husband.

When I saw this slightly overweight, balding freshman dressed in tight jeans, tennis shoes and a UCLA T-shirt, I thought he looked ridiculous, and told him so. He didn't take it very well. In fact, he gave me an argument.

Just between us girls, Abby, do you think a man should dress for the occasion or according to his age?

BEVERLY HILLS MAMA

DEAR MAMA: A man should dress any way he wants to dress. No need to remind him that a diaper does not an infant make.

DEAR ABBY: My son is marrying a girl from England, where the marriage and reception will take place. My husband and I will be the only ones from the States to attend. We will have a reception here in Massachusetts for relatives and friends two weeks later.

My question: Would it be proper for the bride to wear her wedding gown at our reception? I've had differences of opinions from people. Some say definitely not; others say as long as they cannot attend the wedding in England, they would like to see the bride in her wedding gown.

We would appreciate your opinion.

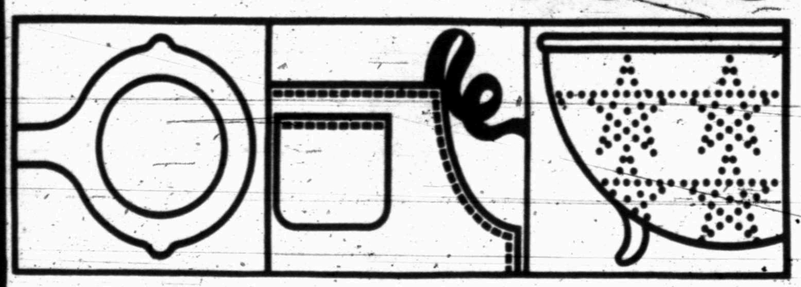

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: How does the bride feel about it? I personally find the idea charming and novel. The guests will love it, and the bride will get twice the mileage out of her bridal gown.

Jaycees Aid Weary Travelers...

High Gasoline Prices Cut Labor Day Trips

By JOHN LONG

For the wayworn there was coffee, for the weary there was a momentary road break, and for everyone there was conversation at a roadside rest station in Hermleigh along highway 84 run by Snyder Jaycees.

The local effort was part of a national work project by the Jaycees who annually work roadside rest stations during the Labor Day Weekend.

Locally, the rest station was set up at the Joe May Fina station in Hermleigh and was manned from 6 p.m. Friday to about 8 p.m. Monday.

This year, some 30 to 40 dozen cookies were consumed and they were washed down with six to seven pounds of coffee and about 600 soft drinks, and business was a little slow.

"Last year there were more people, they were traveling longer distances, and they were going to resorts," reported Mike Richards, president of the Snyder Jaycees who manned the service wagon for a shift Monday.

"This year," he said, "they're going shorter distances, they're visiting their families or going camping, things that don't cost very much."

As of noon Monday, Richards estimated 500 people had stopped at the roadside station. Conversation ran along two main lines.

"People have been telling us two things," the Jaycee president noted. "One is the cost of gas and, number two, they have a tighter budget this year than they had last year."

The biggest conversation piece, however, was the price of gas.

The roadside rest stop is run to give motorists a break from monotony and hopefully to prevent accidents, Richards said.

"Mainly it's to stop driver fatigue and try to stop some of the traffic accidents, since there is more traffic and more miles traveled this holiday than most," he said.

The refreshments served at the rest stop are free. The Jaycees foot the bill.

One of the motorists stopping at the station was Jeff Harrop. He was going from Lubbock to his home in Irving.

"I just needed a break," he said. "I think it's a pretty good setup they have here," he said of Jaycee rest station.

Another of those making the stop was Bill Hart. He was going from Abilene to his home in Denver, Colo.

When asked why he stopped, he replied, "for a cup of coffee, mainly. Something to keep me awake."

Richards told the story of one woman who was driving down the road when she ran out of gas and literally coasted up to the Jaycee service wagon. Several Jaycees were there at that time, so one drove into Snyder and got some gasoline for her.

"She was very happy we were here," said Richards.

Holiday Wrecks Take 450

By The Associated Press

Traffic accidents took 450 lives during the Labor Day weekend, the summer's last long holiday.

The National Safety Council estimated before the holiday began that between 450 and 550 persons could be killed in traffic between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Monday.

During a three-day non-holiday weekend at this time of year, 440 highway deaths could be expected, the council said.

Last year, there were 537 traffic deaths over the Labor Day weekend. The worst such holiday was in 1968, when 688 persons were killed.

$1 Million In Jewels Stolen

CHICAGO (AP)—Jewelry and gems valued at more than $1 million were stolen by thieves who broke into a downtown building over the weekend, police said.

Investigators said the merchandise was taken from two businesses in the same building sometiem between Saturday evening and Sunday morning.

Burglars stole an estimated $1 million in gold settings from her store, Sarah Jesteadt, owner of Casmira Gems, said. Another $70,000 in stones was taken from Melbros Jewelry Co., police said.

Ashes Scattered In Storm...

Lover Of Hurricanes Receives Last Wish

MIAMI (AP)—For 20 years, William Joseph Freedman flew into eyes of hurricanes. He learned to love the serene centers of nature's greatest storms.

"When I die," he would say, "make sure you scatter my ashes in a hurricane."

His wish was granted in Hurricane David.

As the fierce storm roared toward Florida after killing at least 800 people on a string of islands across the Caribbean, Freedman's ashes fell lightly to the sea.

Freedman, a government "hurricane hunter," flew across the eyes of 400 hurricanes as a communications specialist for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Research Facilities Center at Miami. His colleagues said no one else had penetrated so many hurricanes.

"Hurricanes were Bill's whole life," said Joe Chada, a former research technician for NOAA.

Freeman died June 9, 1978, at the age of 59.

His longtime boss and friend, James McFadden, remembered Freedman's wish. McFadden, flight operations chief for the NOAA facility, kept Freedman's ashes in a box in his office. He waited - not for any hurricane, but for one big enough and strong enough for his friend.

Amelia, Cora, Ella, Greta and Kendra all passed in 1978 without being worthy. This year, Anna, Bob and Claudette failed to meet the test.

But David was something else.

Born in the far eastern Atlantic, David seemed to be the kind of storm that comes perhaps once in a century, its winds reaching speeds of 150 mph while still far out over warm, open seas.

"David was it," McFadden said.

So it was. A silver-and-white airplane flew into David's eye last Thursday as the storm marched across the Caribbean 90 miles southeast of Puerto Rico.

A small door opened and Freedman's ashes swirled into the atmosphere.

His colleagues later phoned Freedman's widow, Dorothy, with the news of his final flight into a hurricane's eye.

"I felt a great sense of relief," she said. "I knew then that nothing would hurt me, that Bill's ashes would protect me from the hurricane."

North Carolina Jaycee Chapters Have Women

HICKORY, N.C. (AP)-Three North Carolina Jaycees chapters have women members. But the state Jaycees have avoided a fight with the national men-only organization by not reporting their names.

State Jaycees president Maurice Wilson said the chapter at Catawba Valley Technical Institute in Hickory admits women. The other two coed chapters are at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and a community college at Southern Pines.

"College chapters can have a maximum of 20 members," Wilson said. "They can have 20 Jaycees, is how we look at it. The state organization doesn't have the names, just the numbers."

In 1976, the death penalty was abolished in Canada by a vote of 130-124 in the House of Commons.

'Doc' Heals Broken Rangers; Texas Pounds Mariners, 4-1

SEATTLE (AP)-When the Texas Rangers felt their bid for the American League West championship growing weak, they summoned a doctor.

George "Doc" Medich answered the call and since then has provided just what the Rangers needed on their pitching staff. Medich, 7-6 overall, has posted a 6-3 mark since being moved from the ranks of the relievers to the starting rotation in July.

He added another victory Monday night with relief assistance from Jim Kern as Texas defeated the Seattle Mariners 4-1.

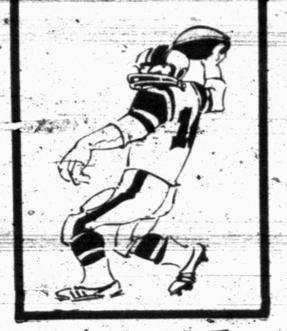

Seattle starter Floyd Bannister, 7-14, was tagged for solo home runs by Bump Wills, his fifth; Willie Montanez, his fourth since joining the Rangers from the New York Mets, and rookie catcher Greg Mahlberg, his first in the major leagues.

The triumph was the third straight for the Rangers, their first winning streak since early in August.

Wills hit his home run into the Kingdome's leftfield bleachers with one out in the first inning and went on to collect four hits in five plate appearances. The last, a single in the ninth, scored Nelson Norman, who had doubled off Seattle reliever Byron McLaughlin.

Montanez homered in the second inning and Mahlberg, catching his third game of the season, connected in the seventh.

Steelers Eek Out Overtime Victory

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — New England reveled in Matt Bahr's erratic right foot, but when they tried to rattle the rookie once too often, he just shrugged and kicked their teeth in.

"In a situation like that, the tough guys just naturally come out," said Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw, whose 21-yard touchdown pass to Sidney Thornton tied the game with 4:09 to go in regulation play Monday night and whose playcalling put Bahr in position to win it 16-13 at 5:10 of overtime with a 41-yard field goal.

"We just made up our minds and did it," added Bradshaw, who played most of the game with a painfully sprained toe but who still managed to complete 15 of 26 passes for 221 yards.

Bahr, the rookie from Penn State who started his pro career raggedly when his first extra point attempt after Thornton had scored the Steelers' first TD on a 2-yard run was just plain bad, left Pittsburgh trailing 7-6.

And his first try at a pro field goal, a 43-yarder with Pittsburgh trailing 13-6 in the third period, was equally poor, short and off line.

But when it mattered, when he had to prove that the Steelers' decision to hand Roy Gerela his walking papers was a sound one, he came through perfectly.

His kick was dead-center and easily 10 yards longer than it had to be, this despite a time-out called by the Patriots in an attempt to build the already awesome pressure.

The noise the fans created then was nothing compared to the shattering roar of a tribute they gave to Darryl Stingley in the second period.

The Patriots' former wide receiver, paralyzed in a preseason collision a year ago, returned to Schaefer Stadium for the first time since the accident and the fans stood for more than five minutes, delaying the game with their applause, shouts and chants.

Amy Caulkins Wins Pair Of Golds For 'States At Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP)-The powerful, defending champion Russians had the overall lead, but 18-year-old Amy Caulkins had a pair of gold medals and the glowing memory of "the happiest night of my life."

Amy, who has been overshadowed by the exploits of her younger sister Tracy - a multiple world record-holder - had her own moment of glory Monday night with a pair of victories in the first full day of competition in the 10th World University Games.

She won the women's 100 meter freestyle - the first gold medal awarded in the 88-nation games for college-age athletes - then swam the anchor leg on a record-setting 400-meter medley relay team.

The Americans, who sent a full delegation to the Games for only the second time since their inauguration in Italy in 1959, showed good strength, winning two of the six gold medals awarded and taking a total of four, all in swimming.

But the Russians, who scored a run-away victory in the 1977 Games in Bulgaria, had the overall lead. Bogdan Makouis led a one-two-three Soviet sweep of the men's all-around gymnastics event, the Russians took the team title in that event, added another gold in swimming, and piled up a gold-total medal count of 3-7.

Mikhail Gorelik won the men's 200-meter butterfly in 2:04.50, with a Russian teammate third and West Germany's Michael Kraus taking the silver to shut out the Americans.

Mike Bottom of Southern Cal won the American men's only swimming medal, a bronze in the 100-meter backstroke. Mark Anthony Kerry of Austria won it in a games record time of 57.05, accounting for the only other gold medal of the night.

Physicals Set For Thursday

Junior high boys will not take physicals this evening as was orginally scheduled. Rather, all junior high athletes, boys and girls, will take physicals Thursday, beginning at 7 p.m.

Eighth grade athletes will take physicals at respective (girl's and boy's) gyms at the Junior High School at 7, followed by seventh grade athletes at 7:30.

High school athletes which did not take a physical at their scheduled time are asked to take one Thursday. No student will be allowed to participate in a school-sponsored athletic event without first having had a physical.

League To Meet

There will be an organizational meeting of the Commercial Bowling League tonight at 7 at Snyder Lanes.

All interested bowlers and teams are welcome. The Commercial League will begin bowling Sept. 11.

Twitty Crowned Open Champion

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP)-Howard Twitty can only hope that his victory in the B.C. Open will do for him what it did for Gil Morgan two years ago.

Until Morgan won the 1977 B.C. Open the optometrist from Wewoka, Okla., had never won a pro golf tournament in his career. After that victory, he went on a winning spree that saw him win the World Series of Golf and more than double his income.

Twitty, who won $92,409 in 1978, already seems to be following in Morgan's path.

Twitty sank a four-foot putt for a par on the final hole to win the $275,000 tournament, after watching Doug Tewell and Tom Purtzer fail on the same 18th green.

Moments before Twitty's putt, Purtzer bogeyed the 18th to fall 1 stroke behind. Then Tewell had a double bogey to fall 2 strokes behind leaving it all up to Twitty to at least par the hole and take home the winner's purse of $49,500.

'Pie' Streaks To Futurity Crown

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP)-Dan Urschel believes his colt Pie In The Sky's victory in the $1.28 million All-American Futurity is proof that people should never give up, never quit trying.

Only a few short months ago, Urschel believed his hopes for winning "the world's richest horse race" rode with Easy Dimple.

The Canadian, Texas, rancher and his wife, Jolene, had returned to racing after being out of the business since 1973 by buying the filly for $160,000 as a yearling last year. And in Easy Dimple, he felt he had a great runner - the kind it takes to win the All-American.

But his dreams were shattered this past May when the filly broke down in her first out.

"When that happened to her, it was the end to everything," said Urschel in describing how he had felt.

He decided, however, he would not quit. He began searching for another speedster.

Urschel and his trainer Leo Wood, of Lubbock, kept searching, and finally in June were able to buy Pie In The Sky from Joe McDermott of Houston.

His perserverance returned big dividends Monday when the colt bolted down the straightaway at Ruidoso Downs.

SHS Hosts Volleyball '79 Preview, 7 p.m.

Coach Joyce Elrod can't guarantee the public will be watching the next District 3-3A champions tonight, but with 1976, 77 and 78 trophies already in the case it's certainly something to ponder over.

Elrod, who led the Tigers to a state championship last year, welcomes Snyder High School sports fans to an educational and entertaining "exhibition" at 7 o'clock tonight in the high school gymnasium.

Fans will be treated to a display of fast-action power volleyball and will be introduced to varsity, JV and freshmen teams of 1979. Elrod will also go over rule changes and answer any questions about the game for spectators.

Snyderites are urged to attend the preview, which will give them a better understanding of the game. No admission will be charged.

O'Meara Collects Amateur Victory

CLEVELAND (AP)-The two golfers who emerged on top in the recently completed U.S. Amateur tournament in Cleveland now face the decision of either entering the pro ranks or remaining amateurs for the time being.

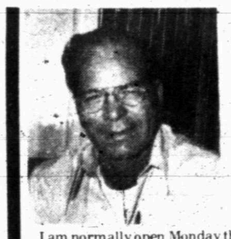

Mark O'Meara, the 22-year-old new champ, is also a three-time All-America at Long Beach State, and John Cook, last year's amateur champ, is a senior at Ohio State.

Both say the big money in the pro game is tempting, but both also say they want to complete school.

The two friends battled in match play Sunday at Canterbury Golf Club to decide the 1979 amateur champ.

O'Meara, the current California amateur champion, aborted Cook's attempt to win a second straight U.S. Amateur golf crown, overwhelming Cook 8 and 7 in a scheduled 36-hole finale.

'Doc' Heals Broken Rangers; Texas Pounds Mariners, 4-1

SEATTLE (AP) When the Texas Rangers felt their bid for the American League West championship growing weak, they summoned a doctor.

George "Doc" Medich answered the call and since then has provided just what the Rangers needed on their pitching staff. Medich, 7-6 overall, has posted a 6-3 mark since being moved from the ranks of the relievers to the starting rotation in July.

He added another victory Monday night with relief assistance from Jim Kern as Texas defeated the Seattle Mariners 4-1.

Seattle starter Floyd Bannister, 7-14, was tagged for solo home runs by Bump Wills, his fifth, Willie Montanez, his fourth since joining the Rangers from the New York Mets, and rookie catcher Greg Mahlberg, his first in the major leagues.

The triumph was the third straight for the Rangers, their first winning streak since early in August.

Wills hit his home run into the Kingdome's left field bleachers with one out in the first inning and went on to collect four hits in five plate appearances. The last, a single in the ninth, scored Nelson Norman who had doubled off Seattle reliever Byron McLaughlin.

Montanez homered in the second inning and Mahlberg, catching his third game of the season, connected in the seventh.

Amy Caulkins Wins Pair Of Golds For 'States At Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) The powerful, defending champion Russians had the overall lead, but 18-year-old Amy Caulkins had a pair of gold medals and the glowing memory of "the happiest night of my life."

Amy, who has been overshadowed by the exploits of her younger sister Tracy - a multiple world record-holder - had her own moment of glory Monday night with a pair of victories in the first full day of competition in the 10th World University Games.

She won the women's 100 meter freestyle, the first gold medal awarded in the 88-nation games for college-age athletes, then swam the anchor leg on a record-setting 400-meter medley relay team.

The Americans, who sent a full delegation to the Games for only the second time since their inauguration in Italy in 1959, showed good strength, winning two of the six gold medals awarded and taking a total of four, all in swimming.

But the Russians, who scored a run-away victory in the 1977 Games in Bulgaria, had the overall lead. Bogdan Makouis led a one-two-three Soviet sweep of the men's all-around gymnastics event, the Russians took the team title in that event, added another gold in swimming, and piled up a gold total medal count of 3-7.

Mikhail Gorelik won the men's 200-meter butterfly in 2:04.50, with a Russian teammate third and West Germany's Michael Kraus taking the silver to shut out the Americans.

Mike Bottom of Southern Cal won the American men's only swimming medal, a bronze in the 100-meter backstroke. Mark Anthony Kerry of Austria won it in a games record time of 57.05, accounting for the only other gold medal of the night.

Physicals Set For Thursday

Junior high boys will not take physicals this evening as was orginally scheduled. Rather, all junior high athletes, boys and girls, will take physicals Thursday, beginning at 7 p.m.

Eighth grade athletes will take physicals at respective (girl's and boy's) gyms at the Junior High School at 7, followed by seventh grade athletes at 7:30.

High school athletes which did not take a physical at their scheduled time are asked to take one Thursday. No student will be allowed to participate in a school-sponsored athletic event without first having had a physical.

League To Meet

There will be an organizational meeting of the Commercial Bowling League tonight at 7 at Snyder Lanes.

All interested bowlers and teams are welcome. The Commercial League will begin bowling Sept. 11.

Vilas Defeated; Borg Hangs On

NEW YORK (AP) Four-time Wimbledon champion Bjorn Borg had to struggle for the first time in the 1979 U.S. Open tennis championships, but still advanced to the quarter-finals with a 6-4, 1-6, 7-6, 7-5 victory over Dick Stockton.

Eddie Dibbs upset 1977 Open champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-3, 5-7, 7-5, 6-1; fourth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis, beat 10th seeded Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina 7-6, 6-32, 6-2, and, unranked Johan Kriek of South Africa, a 6-3, 3-6, 4-6, 1-6, 6-4 defeated 19-year-old Yannick Noah of France.

Among the women: second-seeded Martina Navratilova beat No. 10 Greer Stevens of South Africa 6-2, 6-2; No. 4 Virginia Wade of Britain advanced when 12th-seeded Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia had to retire during the opening game of their match because of a twisted ankle; No. 5 Evonne Goolagong-Cawley defeated Jeanne DuVall 6-3, 3-6, 6-0, and Billie Jean King beat Kathy May Teacher 6-3, 6-0.

Twitty Crowned Open Champion

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) Howard Twitty can only hope that his victory in the B.C. Open will do for him what it did for Gil Morgan two years ago.

Until Morgan won the 1977 B.C. Open the optometrist from Wewoka, Okla. had never won a pro golf tournament in his career. After that victory, he went on a winning spree that saw him win the World Series of Golf and more than double his income.

Twitty, who won $92,409 in 1978, already seems to be following in Morgan's path.

Twitty sank a four-foot putt for a par on the final hole to win the $275,000 tournament, after watching Doug Tewell and Tom Purtzer fail on the same 18th green.

Moments before Twitty's putt, Purtzer bogeyed the 18th to fall 1 stroke behind. Then Tewell had a double bogey to fall 2 strokes behind, leaving it all up to Twitty to at least par the hole and take home the winner's purse of $49,500.

O'Meara Collects Amateur Victory

CLEVELAND (AP) The two golfers who emerged on top in the recently completed U.S. Amateur tournament in Cleveland now face the decision of either entering the pro ranks or remaining amateurs for the time being.

Mark O'Meara, the 22-year old new champ, is also a three-time All-America at Long Beach State, and John Cook, last year's amateur champ, is a senior at Ohio State.

Both say the big money in the pro game is tempting, but both also say they want to complete school.

The two friends battled in match play Sunday at Canterbury Golf Club to decide the 1979 amateur champ.

Steelers Eek Out Overtime Victory

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) New England reveled in Matt Bahr's erratic right foot, but when they tried to rattle the rookie once too often, he just shrugged and kicked their teeth in.

"In a situation like that, the tough guys just naturally come out," said Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw, whose 21-yard touchdown pass to Sidney Thornton tied the game with 4:09 to go in regulation play Monday night and whose playcalling put Bahr in position to win it 16-13 at 5:10 of overtime with a 41-yard field goal.

"We just made up our minds and did it," added Bradshaw, who played most of the game with a painfully sprained toe but who still managed to complete 15 of 26 passes for 221 yards.

Bahr, the rookie from Penn State who started his pro career raggedly when his first extra point attempt after Thornton had scored the Steelers' first TD on a 2-yard run was just plain bad, left Pittsburgh trailing 7-6.

And his first try at a pro field goal, a 43-yarder with Pittsburgh trailing 13-6 in the third period, was equally poor, short and off line.

But when it mattered, when he had to prove that the Steelers' decision to hand Roy Gerela his walking papers was a sound one, he came through perfectly.

His kick was dead center and easily 10 yards longer than it had to be, this despite a time-out called by the Patriots in an attempt to build the already awesome pressure.

The noise the fans created then was nothing compared to the shattering roar of a tribute they gave to Darryl Stingley in the second period.

The Patriots' former wide receiver, paralyzed in a preseason collision a year ago, returned to Schaefer Stadium for the first time since the accident and the fans stood for more than five minutes, delaying the game with their applause, shouts and chants.

SHS Hosts Volleyball '79 Preview, 7 p.m.

Coach Joyce Elrod can't guarantee the public will be watching the next District 3-3A champions tonight, but with 1976, 77 and 78 trophies already in the case it's certainly something to ponder over.

Elrod, who led the Tigers to a state championship last year, welcomes Snyder High School sports fans to an educational and entertaining "exhibition" at 7 o'clock tonight in the high school gymnasium.

Fans will be treated to a display of fast-action power volleyball and will be introduced to varsity, JV and freshmen teams of 1979. Elrod will also go over rule changes and answer any questions about the game for spectators.

Snyderites are urged to attend the preview, which will give them a better understanding of the game. No admission will be charged.

'Pie' Streaks To Futurity Crown

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) Dan Urschel believes his colt Pie In The Sky's victory in the $1.28 million All-American Futurity is proof that people should never give up, never quit trying.

Only a few short months ago, Urschel believed his hopes for winning "the world's richest horse race" rode with Easy Dimple.

The Canadian, Texas, rancher and his wife, Jolene, had returned to racing after being out of the business since 1973 by buying the filly for $160,000 as a yearling last year. And in Easy Dimple, he felt he had a great runner - the kind it takes to win the All-American.

But his dreams were shattered this past May when the filly broke down in her first out.

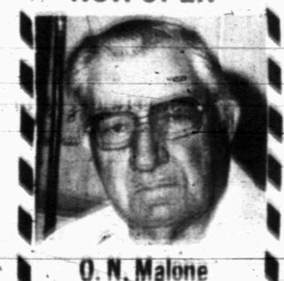

"When that happened to her, it was the end to everything," said Urschel in describing how he had felt.

He decided, however, he would not quit. He began searching for another speedster.

Urschel and his trainer Leo Wood, of Lubbock, kept searching, and finally in June were able to buy Pie In The Sky from Joe McDermott of Houston.

His perserverance returned big dividends Monday when the colt bolted down the straightaway at Ruidoso Downs.

Launch Formal Inquiry Into Tanker Blast

HOUSTON (AP)—A formal inquiry into the cause of a tanker explosion that killed two men and left another missing begins today in Houston.

A Port of Houston fireboat crew found the body of a second man Monday floating alongside the battered hulk of the Chevron Hawaii, an 870-foot tanker that exploded and burned Saturday.

The blast, believed caused by a bolt of lightning during a heavy thunderstorm that hit the area in the wake of Tropical Storm Elena, shattered the middle of the tanker leaving the bow and stern connected by twisted metal at the water line.

Coast Guard inspectors found the body Sunday of Daniel W. Beemer, 32, of Houston on the port side of the main deck. Beemer had been working at the time of the blast with David E. Strout, 28, of Houston, on the ship's radar.

The Harris County medical examiner's office said they were withholding the identity of the body found Monday until the next of kin could be notified.

Wheat Farmers Holding On To Crops In Storage

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)-Latest figures show that most wheat farmers recently have been holding onto grain they have in the government's three-year reserve program, despite a cutoff on June 30 of federal storage payments.

Agriculture Department officials say that for many of the farmers with wheat in storage, no other choice exists because of transportation snarls caused by strikes and a backlog of shipping orders to help move the oncoming fall harvest of corn and soybeans.

William T. Cherry of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service said many farmers also "are just waiting to see" whether market prices will improve later on.

"But in some areas like the upper Midwest it's a matter of getting transportation to move the grain," Cherry said.

"That's also true of other grain in the reserve that they might like to unload."

At its peak, the reserve program included about 732 million bushels of corn; 413 million bushels of wheat and much lesser amounts of barley oats and sorghum.

The concept involves a farmer agreeing to put grain in storage under federal price-support loan for up to three years to keep it off the market and help boost prices. If market prices go up to specified trigger levels, however, the producer has the option of repaying the loan, redeeming his grain and then selling it as he chooses.

Prices of all the reserve commodities have been at or above the trigger or "release" levels for some time.

As of Aug. 24, after 10 weeks of being in release status, wheat farmers had redeemed about 149.4 million bushels, about 36.2 percent of the 413 million they originally had in the program.

Corn producers had redeemed by then about 163.6 million bushels, 22.4 percent of the 732 million they had in storage.

Thus, wheat farmers - although they had much less total grain in the program than corn producers - have redeemed a larger share of their grain for sale on the market.

The release price for wheat was set at $3.29 a bushel. It hit that mark in May and for a time climbed further, reaching a five-day "moving average" of $4.08 a bushel on June 27.

On July 2, USDA announced wheat would continue in release status at least through July 31 at which time, under the rules, farmers would cease earning federal storage payments.

The payments, made at the rate of 25 cents a bushel for an entire year, were made to farmers in advance when they signed up in the reserve program.

Most of the contracts date from early 1978, meaning that those will expire - even if the wheat is not redeemed - early in 1981.

If a farmer signed up in the reserve last Oct. 1, for example, he collected an entire year's federal storage payment in advance. But with the cutoff on July 31, that means the farmer "earned" only 10 months of the payments.

Free On Bond

Charged with a felony count of driving while intoxicated, Robert Lee Anderson has been released from Custody after posting a $1,500 bond.

He was arrested Aug. 26 by troopers of the Department of Public Safety.

Old Man, Horse In The Money

PATASKALA, Ohio (AP)-Take a 9-year-old horse one hoof away from the dog food mill, an 88-year-old nearly blind farmer who hates rocking chairs and what you get is a racing team that gives the young bucks fits on the local trotting circuit.

Ten years ago, when everybody expected C.A. "Happy" Orndorff to retire, he swapped his faithful team of work horses and a place in the sun for a brown mare and headed for the county fair racing circuit.

The two gained a respectable reputation on the tracks in Marysville, Fredrictown, Cambridge and Mount Vernon until last year when Orndorff traded for Victor Painter.

"The first week I had him I took him to Marysville and went out and won two straight heats," Orndorff recollected.

"The next week I won first and second." Since last summer, Orndorff says, he has placed in all but about four or five of these pleasure races.

And almost every week during the summer they are "in the money."

Gray Hears Tape Today In Cullen Davis Trial

FORT WORTH (AP)-On a tape recording played today in court, Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis told David McCrory to "do the judge."

On the 25-minute, Aug. 18, 1978, recording, Davis and McCrory discussed "hits" on at least three people.

"Do the judge, and then his wife, and that would be it," Davis said. Prosecutors contend he was referring to District Judge Joe Eidson, who was presiding over the Davis' divorce at the time.

The tapes were played for District Judge Gordon Gray, who was asked to rule on their admissibility. The jury was not present when the tape was played.

Davis is on trial a second time on charges he master-minded an unsuccesful plot to have Eidson killed. The first trial ended in January when a Houston jury deadlocked 8-4 for conviction.

Ending his second day on the stand Friday, McCrory testified he didn't think FBI agent Ron Jannings believed his story at first. McCrory said he went home after meeting with Jannings and stayed up all night, planning his next move.

"My first option was to move, to pack up Martha and the kids and take off," McCrory said. "Second was to wait and see what happened with the FBI. I didn't think he (Jannings) believed me.

"Third to try and give Cullen back his money and if that didn't work...kill him."

McCrory said Jannings called him the morning of Aug. 18, but McCrory returned the call from a nearby pay phone because "I thought my phone was probably tapped."

The two arranged a midmorning meeting where McCrory said he repeated his story to Jannings and other agents, who questioned him in detail.

McCrory said Davis first approached him in January of 1978 about doing some investigative work in return for a job.

He said his role later changed to locating a killer to eliminate about 15 persons on an alleged "hit list." McCrory said the subject was discussed many times at meetings and phone conversations through the spring and summer of 1978.

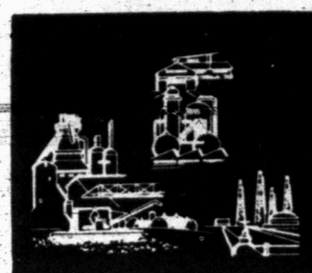

"I know I was telling him a lot of lies about working hard about what he wanted me to get done," McCrory said of those conversations.

McCrory said he quit going to his job with the Davis-based company the week before Davis' Aug. 20 arrest because "I had more important things to do."

Beautiful, Thoughtful Gifts At Snyder Book Store And Gift Shop

Not all stores go out of their way to make things extra special for their customers, but Snyder Book Store and Gift Shop is one that does.

For the reader, owner Donna Gray stocks a large variety of books including paperbacks, religious and inspirational, best sellers, school books and helps, and children's books.

For the gift-giver, Snyder Book Store and Gift Shop has the most beautiful and thoughtful gifts to make anyone "ooh" and "aah" over.

Items they carry include picture wallets, cut glass, ceramics, scented room fresheners, shell jewelry cases, sewing baskets, wooden cross clocks, gift books, and metal sculpture.

In addition they have cards for all occasions, a large selection of Bibles, pen and pencil sets, money clips, key chains, picture albums, wall plaques, wallet size picture frames, wooden letters and numbers, and smurfs.

Religious tapes and records are in stock at the gift and book shop, and in the line of jewelry, they exclusively handle Bob Siemon Christian Jewelry. They also have tie tacs, pewter necklaces, and a variety of other jewelry you would just have to see to appreciate.

And for the very special bride, Snyder Book Store and Gift Shop has a very special Bride's Room, complete with every item the bride will need.

The selections begin with planning books for weddings that a bride may use to insure that she doesn't forget a single step in planning her very important wedding.

The bride can also order wedding invitations, announcements, thank you notes, and napkins from four different companies at Snyder Book Store and Gift Shop.

Bride's books, albums, guest books, memory books, and Bibles are available to the bride, as are cake tops, cake servers and knives, and bride's cake mitts. Available for rent are silver forks and spoons, a silver coffee service, a punch bowl, and crystal cups and plates.

Plume pens, garters, ring pillows, flower girl baskets, and scrolls complete the bride's wedding shopping.

All in all, Snyder Book Store and Gift Shop has very special items in a very special store for very special people -- their customers.

Go by Snyder Book Store and Gift Shop, 3902 College Ave., and meet Donna Gray and her staff and you'll find out just how special they are.

No-Roach Easy To Use, Clean And Will Not Harm Your Pets

Winterize your home with No-Roach. We are fast approaching the "inside" time of the year. No more outdoor cooking ... no more beach ... it's time to settle back and watch the new Fall shows on TV.

The home is a wonderful place for people at this time of the year but it is also the target for all those crawling pests who have spent the summer outside ... they want to be warm and cozy, too!

You can protect your home against all crawling insects with Johnston's No-Roach.

No-Roach is an insecticide that is easy to use; has no insecticide odor; has no powder or dust or mess; and stays effective for months.

Furr's, Safeway and other supermarkets. Dist. by Kimbell.

Parrot Recovered

CHICAGO (AP)—Arturo appeared upset, mumbling in Spanish between bites of scrambled egg, rice and potatoes. But everyone was sympathetic. After all, police said the 4-year-old parrot had been birdnapped.

Arturo, who can squawk in English, Spanish, Italian and German, is back with his owner, Robert Fox, today after he vanished from Fox's apartment Aug. 27.

"He prefers these over bird seed," Fox said of the human fare. "He is doing a lot of mumbling in Spanish. He looks like he's upset."

Police said an informant tipped them to the bird's whereabouts. A neighbor woman was arrested and charged with burglary.
