COCHRAN COUNTY OIL TEST TO BE SUNK

Three New Directors Are Elected For Lubbock Fair

NEW TRAFFIC SYSTEM TO BE INSTALLED HERE

BOULEVARD PLAN TO BE TRIED BY THE COMMISSION

CITY DADS DECIDE THAT NEW PLAN IS NEEDED IN LUBBOCK NOW

The "boulevard" or stop-system for the city of Lubbock has been approved by the City Commission, and will be put into effect as soon as necessary arrangements can be made to do so. It was announced here Saturday following a meeting of the Commission.

The system is designed to give more satisfactory management of traffic in both the business and residential sections of the city, and provides for the designation of certain main arteries of travel as boulevards that take priority rights over all intersecting streets or avenues in movement of traffic.

No Designation Yet

No special designation as to the streets that will be set aside as boulevards has yet been made pending official passage of an ordinance that will make the move official, but all arrangements in connection with the new traffic move will be completed as soon as possible, it was said Saturday.

Under the present system, the vehicle which first enters the street intersection is termed as having the right of way, but under the boulevard system, all vehicles must come to a complete stop before coming onto the boulevard from an intersecting street or avenue. He plan also would provide for a greater speed on the boulevard than at the present, so that traffic may be moved off more quickly.

Stop signals will be placed at each street intersection on the boulevard to warn drivers of oncoming vehicles of the impending danger should they not stop.

The new system has been found successful in many other towns and small cities, and it is believed will serve in a large measure to relieve the situation that exists here at present, officials stated.

'Jim Doesn't Get The Point' Says J. A. Kemp

WICHITA, FALLS, June 5. (AP)—Belief that Governor Ferguson has misunderstood the request of the state-wide committee for bond validation is expressed in a letter Friday J. A. Kemp, chairman of the committee, forwarded to Governor Ferguson tonight.

Kemp's letter points out that the committee agrees that an immediate session of the Legislature is impractical but that a great measure of confidence would be restored in Texas bonds if she would immediately issue a proclamation for a session of the Legislature to be convened after the primaries.

Hale Takes Stand In Osage Murders Trial

PAWBUKA, Okla., June 5. (AP)—W. K. Hale, charged by Federal officers with being the "master mind" of the Osage Indian crimes, took the witness stand today in behalf of his nephew, Ernest Burkhart.

Burkhart is on trial for the slaying of W. E. Smith, Osage County rancher, who with his Osage Indian wife and a servant girl, were killed in an explosion which wrecked their home in 1925.

The Almanac

WEST TEXAS:
Sunday fair, warmer, except in South-west portion; Monday
partly cloudy.

Today is feast day of St. Boniface, bishop and martyr, who preached among the pagans in Holland about the year 700.

The first registration day for the selective draft was June 6, 1917.

Amateur Sleuth

Trapping the "world's slickest confidence man" was just a holiday prank for W. A. Ruenzler, New York business man. He was tipped off at Atlantic City that "Baron Beaverbrook" was there with a fifth, a blonde and a Tomahawk dog. Ruenzler, flustered with every woman he met carrying a Pom until one led him to the suspect.

BUILDING HERE ROLLING ALONG

Amarillo, However, Continues to Lead Rivals in All West Texas Construction

Three permits for as many residences in the city of Lubbock have been issued from the office of City Secretary P. W. Grace since June 1, each of them for a consideration of $3,000, to bring the total permits issued for the year to date to $418,950.

In comparative reports from four leading West Texas cities brought to the Daily Journal by the Associated Press, Amarillo still leads the parade considerable distance ahead of any of the other three, with Abilene second and San Angelo third.

Amarillo Permits Large

Permits issued in Amarillo since a week ago last night amounted to $573,440, and since June 1, which was Tuesday of the past week, the issuance totals $315,250, to bring the year total to $6,174,630. This is without a doubt a record for building in any West Texas city, with each month's total issuance showing an increase over the preceding month.

Abilene, second in amount of building among the four issued a total of $46,050, during the seven days just passed, and since June 1 has issued $340,200, bringing the year's total to $1,941,850.

San Angelo, hustling Tom Green county capital, followed closely on the heels of Abilene the past week with a total of $37,615, the first part of which brought May's total to $400,290, permits issued since June 1 amounting to $32,175, and the total for the year now stands at $1,009,175.

City Will Take Over Garbage Collection

The city of Lubbock plans in the near future to take over the garbage system of the city that heretofore has been operated under individual supervision. It was announced here Saturday following a meeting of the City Commission.

The proposed plan provides for the assessment of a nominal monthly fee against each user of the public utility lines of the city, by which means funds for carrying on the work may be made available. The assessment would be made on the regular monthly statement mailed out from the city office. Such a plan, in the opinion of city officials, would provide a standardized method of collecting all garbage, both from the business and residential sections, and is considered one of the most practical steps to pursue. Definite arrangements, however, have not yet been completed.

LYNCH, DAN AND JIM ALL HEARD BY TEXAS FOLK

WHIT DADIVSON GOES ON STUMP FOR LYNCH AS AS JIM RAPS DAN

(By The Associated Press)
CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas, June 5.—A repetition of his attacks on Dan Moody, coupled with a defense of his wife's administration, especially in regard to the financial situation and Mrs. Ferguson's pardon record, characterized the address of former Governor James E. Ferguson here tonight.

Ferguson spoke to an audience which listened attentively but without heckling that marked his Houston speech.

Texas, Ferguson said, is witnessing the most peculiar campaign in the history of the state. Usually there is a strong issue and a weak candidate, or a weak issue and a strong candidate. The Governor's opposition has neither issue nor candidate, he declared.

Talks Highway Suits

The former governor dwelt at length on the American Road Company suit, which he said cost the State more than $160,000, upon Moody's wife's record and upon what he termed the "Klan" support that had been offered Moody.

"The Attorney General runs with the anti-Klanism by day and the Klanism by night," Ferguson asserted.

Moody's prosecution of the Williamson County cases, Ferguson said, was successful, "but he had the help of a judge and a jury, and three private lawyers." He charged that Moody had secretly agreed to recommend the pardon of Murray Jackson, who was sentenced to five years, after he had served one year in prison.

Defends Pardon Policy

Defending the pardon policy of Governor Ferguson, he said that numbers of pardons had nothing to do with the matter, since each pardon was issued on its merits. He challenged Moody to point out one pardon that he would not have granted had he been governor. "My wife is doing just what the governors of Texas have been doing for sixty years," Ferguson said.

He challenged Moody also to say that he did not advocate recall of the search and seizure law, which he declared would bring "a reign of terror" to Texas.

Moody Makes Talk

GREENVILLE, Texas, June 5. (AP)—Attorney General Dan Moody promised that he will "render no service to individual or corporation for reward," if he is elected governor of Texas during an address before an audience in the public square here Saturday night.

His declaration was made during a review of the administration of Governor Miram A. Ferguson, and in connection with the election.

Rio Grande Valley Has Its Best Year

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, June 5. (AP)—With more than 15,000 cars of fruit and vegetables, with an estimated value of $18,000,000, shipped from the Lower Rio Grande Valley this season, the most successful marketing period in the history of the section is drawing to a close. Probably 700 more cars will be shipped.

The shipments include 13,395 solid cartons shipped by freight, 496 solid cartons shipped by special express trains, and an estimate of 683 carloads of express forwarded in local rail shipments.

The close of the season probably will find total shipments 2,000 cars above all previous seasons and all crops have been sold at a good profit.

Leidigh To Speak At Amarillo Convention

"An Ideal Quarter Section" will be the subject of an address to be made June 21 at the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention at Amarillo by Dean A. H. Leidigh, of the school of Agriculture of the Tech.

This address will be made Monday afternoon in the District Court Room of the Potter County Court House at the Agricultural and Live Stock Meetings, to be led by R. M. Whitaker, Agricultural Manager, West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Authorities all over West Texas and other sections will address the thousands that attend the convention.

BEAN, BARR AND MAY ARE CHOSEN ON DIRECTORATE

ELECTION HELD DECIDES MEN WHO WILL DIRECT GREAT EXPOSITION

George R. Bean, I. E. Barr, and A. W. May were elected to fill the vacancies of the three retiring directors of the Panhandle South Plains Fair Association, according to a count of the ballots by the election committee who tabulated the votes Saturday afternoon.

Six candidates were appointed by a nominating committee and ballots mailed out to the stockholders of the fair association early this week.

Others Held Over
The three new directors will serve with R. W. Blair, S. E. Cone, W. A. Myrick, Jr., Norton Baker, E. L. Robinson and H. W. Stanton, in directing the work of the fair.

A large part of the attractions for the fair have already been booked and only the best to be had have been contracted for according to the board. With prospects bright for bumper crop, yields all over the Panhandle South Plains section and with the majority of the counties in this section all communities of Lubbock county interested in the fair and planning to exhibit here the agricultural exhibits are expected to be the best they have ever seen.

Interest Is Rife

Increased interest in stock, swine, and poultry production in the section will increase the interest in these departments and a number of the best breeders over West Texas have already stated they were intending to include the Panhandle South Plains Fair on their circuit.

The biggest crowds that have ever gathered here are expected to flock through the gates of the exposition September 23, 30, October 1 and 2, when the fair is held.

Woman Thought To Be Evangelist Not Her

LOS ANGELES, June 5. (AP)—Receipt by the police today of a telegram from "Inspector" Middleton of Edmonton, Alta., that Mrs. Almee Simple McPherson, evangelist, missing since May 22; when she was reported drowned, had been sighted in an Edmonton hotel. Later advices however, disclosed a Los Angeles woman, selling portraits in the Canadian city, had been mistaken for the evangelist.

Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of the evangelist and with Miss Schaeffer, now in custody of the $1,000,000 temple property, accepted the first report of her daughter's death in the surf and has adhered to her belief ever since in the face of dozens of conflicting rumors.

Rescuer Meets Man He Saved at Reunion

CHICAGO, June 5. (AP)—During the battle of Belleau Wood in June 1918, Frank J. Foster was wounded. After crawling into a shell hole, he was rescued by Frank Baker. Now, eight years later, the "Buddies" met at the annual reunion of the Second Division. It was the first time they had seen each other since the battle field rescue.

Search Denver For Missing Evangelist

DENVER, Colo., June 5. (AP)—The Sunday Rocky Mountain News will say that search for Mrs. Almee Simple McPherson, missing Los Angeles evangelist, has spread to Denver and its environs, where an intensive hunt for the woman who said to have drowned near Santa Monica villa California, is being made.

The News says that rumor persists that Mrs. McPherson was here last November undergoing treatment in a Denver hospital and that, further rumors declare that the evangelist has turned here for further treatment.

Airbanks Greets Big Arctic Plane

FAIRBANKS, Ala., June 5. (AP)—The engine monoplane Detrollet of a Detroit Arctic expedition arrived here tonight from Point Barrow where it flew May 3 for a flight into the Arctic waste.

Thrown Away

"Trilly"—Baltimore's mystery baby—was found in a sewer by boys who heard him crying. Except for a few bruises he was unharmed, and has become a favorite with nurses at the hospital where he is being kept while police seek the woman who threw him away. He is about 10 months old.

CITY TURNS TO POSTAL BOSSES

Effort to Secure Bigger And More Substantial Building Taken to Washington

The postoffice situation at Lubbock's regards more adequate quarters and equipment, is again in the hands of an inspector from the federal post-office department, according to a mail-4 communication received Saturday by Postmaster John L. Vaughan here.

The communication, written following receipt of information from the postmaster here in connection with the collapse of the roof of the building a week ago last night, states that the inspector in this division has been instructed to investigate the situation here.

This came immediately on the heels of a letter from Marvin Jones, Representative in Congress from this congressional district, stating that after a personal call by him at the Postoffice department, he could give no encouragement toward relief for the local office.

Decision Is Explained

The decision of the department is to the effect that no action will be taken now in accordance with the recommendations of a postal inspector who was here recently. Mr. Jones said in his communication, he department sets out, he said, that according to their information, the Lubbock office now has the maximum floor space per employee that is allowed under rules and regulations, and that they can see no reason for enlarged quarters for the present.

They have promised, however, the letter states, that if the city continues to grow, the situation will be taken up at a later date for a decision.

In connection with the decision, Mr. Vaughan stated that the department evidently is misinformed both as to the number of employees and the available floor space in the present quarters, for their decision was based on 28 employees and 2,600 square feet of working floor space. The local office has maintained 34 employees for the past year, and the floor space on which employees can work will not measure out 2,800 square feet, exclusive of equipment. Mr. Vaughan said, "The inspector, in whose hands the situation has been placed, is expected to arrive here within the next few days, when a thorough investigation of the quarters and equipment will be made, it was said Saturday."

H. T. ROBERTS, WHO HAS BEEN connected with the Hick Tire company, is moving to Greenville and W. Grimes is moving here from Temple to take his place. Mr. Grimes and his family will live on 19th Street.

CONTRACT MADE UP AND WORK IS SCHEDULED SOON

OLD LANDON RANCH WILL BE SCENE OF DRILLING IN THIRTY DAYS

The lease contract on 8,000 acres of land out of the old Landon ranch in Cochran county on which a test for oil will be started within thirty days was announced here Saturday by Littlefield man through State Senator W. H. Holsode, their counsel, and the announcement carried the statement that the contracts in all phases of the work assure an absolutely bonafide proposition that will be carried through to completion.

J. C. Whicker, prominent Lamb county land and oil man, J. E. Whicker, his son, and R. S. Thomas, son-in-law of the former, all of Littlefield, are principals on the contract, and while in Lubbock Mr. Whicker made the statement that he has little doubt but that oil will be found in great quantity on the tract.

Is South Of Bladeco
The tract of land lies to the south and east of Bladeco, one of the newest towns in Texas, and the terminus point of the new branch of the Santa Fe railroad, near the town of Hockley, and Cochran counties. The first test well that will be sunk will be about three and a half miles southeast of Bladeco, Mr. Whicker said.

Drilling contracts for the test already have been signed with Cornelius Brothers and Taggart, drilling contractors of Eastland, and the test well will have been spudded in within thirty days time, according to agreement.

Contract Is Defined

The drilling contract calls for a Standard 50-foot rig that is to be absolutely new and completely equipped for service throughout with the highest grade of materials. The contract provides further that the test is to go 3,500 feet unless oil or gas in paying quantity at the option of the lessee is found at a shallower depth.

It is the opinion of drillers that the test well be sunk in approximately four months from beginning of operations. The drilling contractors compose one of the oldest firms operating in Texas, and are highly recommended as trustworthy and reliable in every way.

Geologists have made a survey of the tract under lease, and have pronounced it as a very favorable and fertile field for the liquid gold. Geologists who made the survey include Dr. Leroy Patton, of the Tech College faculty.

This is the second test to be started near the New Mexico line during the past few months. One is under way now in Youkum county northwest of Brownfield, and oil sand is reported to have been struck at a depth of 300 feet, but not in sufficient quantity to stop drilling. While the soil and rock strata on the Plains are of such peculiar nature that geologists are necessarily more or less indefinite with their reports, the site of the test that is to be started in Cochran county is one of the most favorable from a geological standpoint that has been surveyed on the Plains, their report shows.

Wichita Falls Wants Man Held at Border

WICHITA FALLS, June 5. (AP)—W. C. Snow, reported arrested at El Paso, is wanted by Wichita County officers on a charge of smuggling over the value of $50. A deputy sheriff was dispatched Saturday night for El Paso to return the man to this city to face trial.

Snow was formerly in business in this city operating an advertising agency.

Journal News Reel

Oil test for Cochran county is contracted for, and drilling will be started in thirty days. George R. Bean, I. E. Barr and A. W. May elected as directors of 1926 South Plains Fair. New traffic rules will be placed in effect here, and the "boulevard" system will govern auto driving here. Lubbock postoffice problem again placed before federal officials. Lynch, Dan and Jim make speeches before Texas voters. Aron G. Carter gives $500 to Tech athletic fund. Lubbock's building program goes right along although Amarillo continues to lead West Texas parade.

COLORADO SCHOOL WINS NATIONAL MEET

Giants Win Pitchers' Battle To Beat Jess Petty, 1 to 0

COLLINS WINS TROPHY SECOND TIME STRAIGHT

MAIN AVENUE HIGH AT SANTONE IS FOURTH; VERNON FIFTH.

CHICAGO, June 5. (AP)—A little band of rugged athletes from Fort Collins, Colo., on the fringe of the Rockies, today won the national interscholastic track and field championship for the second consecutive time.

The mountaineers captured the title from a record-breaking field of 77 athletes from 190 high schools in thirty states. In two days of competition, which a world's interscholastic record was smashed and three others were established.

They won by scoring eighteen of their twenty-four points in field events.

East High, Columbus, Ohio, was second with 17; Zenn High, Chicago, third 14; Main Avenue High, San Antonio, Texas, fourth 12; Vernon, Texas, fifth, 11 and Westchester, Wash., sixth, with 10.

Forest of Dallas, Texas, got five points, and Central of Fort Worth scored 4-6-7.

Stinson of Columbus, Ohio, tied the world's record for the century, breaking the tape a stride ahead of Wilcox of West Port High, Kansas City, in 40-8-10.

The world's record-breaking performance was the work of Douglas Graydon, of Little Rock, Ark., who in the finals of the field events yesterday, tossed the javelin 159 feet 5 inches.

Trumble of Cambridge, Neb., tied the world record for the 120-yard high hurdle by leaping the barriers in 15-4-18, while Crouch of Vernon, Texas, finished fifty yards ahead of his field to tie the record for the mile run.

Crouch was the anchor man on the Vernon relay team which won the two mile event.

Gets Big Test

BENNY GERSHE

Benny Gershe of Cleveland was given the big test of his pugilistic career when he met Charley Phil Rosenbloom, bantamweight champion, in an open-air bout in Cleveland May 27.

Billy Evans Says

Knuckle Ball

Despite all legislation, baseball still has a most effective freak delivery. I have reference to the knuckle ball.

The knuckle ball is legal because it is pitched without resorting to any artificial. The peculiar break on the ball is caused by the manner in which it is held prior to delivery.

With most pitchers the knuckle ball is held in reserve. Eddie Rummel is the one exception. He really uses it more than his last one or curve.

The knuckle ball is difficult to control. A great many pitchers who use it handicap their effectiveness, rather than increase it, because failure to get the knuckle ball over keeps them in the hole.

However, the knuckle ball is a decided fad these days and every pitcher feels that he must include it in his repertoire.

When the spitball delivery was at the height of its popularity, some 15 years back, it played much the same role in the life of a pitcher as the knuckle ball does today.

The remarkable success achieved by such twirlers as Jack Chesbro, Ed Walsh and other noted twirlers of the old days caused every pitcher to feel that he must master the damp delivery.

A great many twirlers did go to the spitball strongly but, like the knuckle ball, because of lack of control, it didn't help their game.

Incidentally, the pitchers who didn't actually throw the spitball faked it by going through all the preliminary maneuvers.

Only a very limited number of spitballers are still doing business in the majors. Within five years, perhaps, it will be but a memory.

Smart Pitchers

Smart pitchers are always experimenting in an effort to increase their effectiveness. It is most surprising the breaks certain pitchers can get on the ball through the use of perfectly legitimate methods.

I have never umpired an overhand pitcher who couldn't sail his fast ball. While the opposition invariably alleges trickery, the result is achieved honestly through the manner of delivery.

When it came actually to doctoring the ball I never saw a pitcher in all my career who could make it take such uncanny dips as Eddie Cicotte.

While I was in Philadelphia recently "Kid" Gleason dropped into the dressing room for a chat and we discussed Cicotte.

"There never was or will be, anybody like Cicotte," said Gleason. "Why, he could almost make the ball talk."

"Give him some heavy oil on his glove and permit him to soil his hands and he would soon have his every low ball now enjoys."

Pitchers of the old school twirlers of the Cy Young type, used the high ball perhaps 75 per cent of the time. They kept it inside and letter high. I am positive the spitball delivery had much to do with the popularity the low ball now enjoys.

The spitball, to be effective, must be broken low, which makes the batter top the ball most of the time and hit weak grounders to the infield. Inspired by this, twirlers who didn't use the moist delivery went to the low ball, so that it is now the most-pitched ball in the game.

LOWLY BRAVES TROUNCE REDS FOR THIRD TIME

PHILLIES TAKE CELLAR LOSING DOUBLE BILL TO CARDINALS

NEW YORK, June 5. (AP)—Successful doubles by Southworth and Farrell in the ninth inning broke up a pitchers' battle today, the Giants winning by 1 to 0. Kent Greenfield allowed but three scattered hits and fanned eight batters. Jess Petty, who had downed the McGrawmen three times this season, gave eight hits. Young getting three singles, and Farrell a single along with his two bagger. The score:

Cards Win Two.
PHILADELPHIA, June 5. (AP)—Philadelphians dropped into last place in the National League today by losing a double-header to the Cardinals 4 to 0, and 7 to 4. Flint Rhem hung up his ninth win of the season by blanking the Phils with six scattered hits in the first game. Hornsby hit a home run with one on base in the first inning of the opening fray. A cluster of four runs in the fourth inning knocked Clarence Mitchell out of the box and clinched the second game.

Wachtel In Great Form And Cats Take Second Of Series From Steers; San Antonio Trounces Houston 10 To 5

DALLAS, June 5. (AP)—Another slug king, Steve Wachtel, went 4-for-4 and here Saturday as the Panthers from Fort Worth handed the herd its second straight jolt of the series by a 7 to 6 count. Paul Wachtel was in great form for six innings, holding the Steers scoreless while the Panthers were gathering five runs. The Steers started an attack in the seventh which netted two runs and followed it up with four more counters in the eighth. The Cats scored in the eighth also, however, and it was enough to win. It was the sixth straight defeat for the herd.

Waco And Beaumont Tie
BEAUMONT, June 5. (AP)—Beaumont and Waco deadlocked a 3-3 pitching game this afternoon when darkness halted play after 11 innings of beautiful twirling by Turo and Tom Hughes, recently cast adrift by Little Rock. Each allowed seven singles and a double. The exporters scored the last run of the game in the sixth inning after which time, the opposing twirlers put on the screws and there were seldom chances to score. Only four hits were made during the last five rounds. Pratt and Reagan turned in sparkling plays to cut back threatening rallies. Reagan starting two timely double plays.

MUCH of Cincinnati's early season success has been due to the timely hitting of Ray Bressler. The big fellow has been clutching the game with remarkable consistency ever since the opening gong rang. The first five weeks of the chase finds him right up with the leaders batting close to .400.

By the addition of six words to section 3 of rule 23 all chance for argument in this situation has been eliminated. The old rule said when a relief pitcher was sent in he had to pitch until the batsman was either retired or reached first.

In a certain major league game several years ago, with the bases filled and two out, the manager of the team in the field sent in a relief pitcher. After throwing one ball to the batsman he caught the runner on first napping, retiring the side.

In the next half inning the manager desired to send in a pinch-hitter for the pitcher who had retired the side by catching the runner on first napping. The opposing team contended that according to the rules he couldn't be relieved, since he had not pitched until the batsman was retired or reached first.

What change, if any, has been made by the rules committee relative to what a substitute pitcher must do before he can be removed from the game?

HUBBERS TO PLAY AT HEREFORD TODAY

The Lubbock Hubbers, undefeated to date this season, will leave here about 1 o'clock this morning for Hereford where this afternoon the champion crew will contest the meandering curves of "Wild Bill" Tate, the noted North Plains moundman who was sent to the showboaters in the fifth inning of a game here nearly a month ago.

Skipper Allen was not certain about the starter for the Hereford game today, but in all probability "Street" Ratliff will be called upon for the duty, as it is his regular turn on the hill.

Next Sunday, the Hubbers will again be away from home, and on the following Sunday also. They go to Lamesa next Sunday for one game, and will leave here the following Friday for Panhandle, oil metropolis of the North Plains for two games there Saturday and Sunday, coming from Panhandle back to Amarillo, where Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, they will furnish amusement to the thousands of visitors at the annual convention of the West Texas chamber of commerce during the three-day meeting. They will play the Amarillo Metros on this occasion.

Following this series they return home, rest one day, and then take on three battles on the local lot with Lamesa.

AMON G. CARTER GIVES $500 TO ATHLETIC FUND

REGENT LEADER AGAIN COMES TO AID OF COLLEGE

PERSONAL CHECK GIVEN TO DEPARTMENT WILL DECREASE DEFICIT

A personal check in the amount of $500 was presented Friday evening to the athletic department of the Tech College by Amon G. Carter, of Fort Worth, President of the Board of Regents, it was announced Saturday by T. M. Chittwood, Business Manager of the College.

Mr. Carter was here Friday to preside at the regular Spring meeting of the Board of Regents, and as material evidence of his interest in every department of the school, left the check with Mr. Chittwood. He is an avowed sports fan, and is especially interested in this phase of the college program, but his gifts in the past to other departments place him as among the real benefactors of the young and more or less struggling college.

And it might be said also that his gifts of a material nature, while exceptionally large, are only secondary in his efforts for the college, for a great deal of his time and efforts have been expended on behalf of the institution. As President of the Board of Regents, he has led the college through the first year, one of the most important, in a manner befitting plans for the future, and as a result of his leadership and the co-operation of Texas citizens who are interested in the school, Tech is destined to become one of the greatest educational institutions in the Southwest.

The contribution has been delivered to athletic officials, and will be applied on the deficit under which this department is now laboring. Mr. Chittwood joins other college officials in extending thanks to Mr. Carter for his contribution.

The NUT CRACKER by Joe Williams

A reporter on the New York Times writes the first forms of life seen in the polar regions from Amundsen's alps were guils and eskimos.

This is truly incredible. . . Where was Gilda Gray? And Babe Ruth? And Babbling Over? And Lady Cathcart?

In view of what happened, it might have been less embarrassing for Coolidge if the boys had called off the Pennsylvania election on account of wet grounds.

"The just certainly is on me," chuckled Mr. O'Goofy in his big, good-natured way, as he returned from the historic Carpenters' Hall in Philadelphia the other day. "I used to think that was where the French heavy-weight trained."

While there are precise figures to show Babe Ruth is ahead of his 1921 home-run record, nobody seems to know how far he is behind his 1925 hot-dog mark.

Now that "Lefty" Grove is no longer a wild man in the box, you can't blame Connie Mack for being wild about him.

Indians probably never will become successful golfers. . . Just as they used to be negligent about replacing scalp in the frontier days, they show a positive unwillingness to replace the turf today.

George Sisler didn't know when he was well off. . . Now that he has full possession of his vision again he has to watch those awful Browns every day.

"Red" Grange has evidently become more moderate in his aspirations. . . He is to star in a movie called "The Halfback." A year ago nothing less than "The Fullback" would have suited him.

The old-fashioned June bride now has a gin-suffing daughter who can hardly wait for her July divorce.

Maybe those White House spiritualists Mr. Houdini prattles about can tell us why Bucky Harris didn't start Dutch Reuther in the world series last fall.

'Tis true that none but the brave deserve the fair but what did the good people of Boston do to deserve the Braves?

GET 7 EXTRA BASE SWATS ON 13 HITS

In a game with the Giants the other day the Pirates combed out 13 hits, seven for extra bases. Five were doubles, one a triple and the other a homer by the youthful Paul Waner. In the same fray the Giants got but one extra base clout, a double by Meusel.

JOCK HUTCHISON

HR 'Em Far

If a player wants to reduce his handicap from 15 or 20 to below 10, a longer drive is more likely to accomplish the trick than anything else. How can one obtain a longer drive, the duffer asks? It is easy enough to do and quite a cinch compared with learning the art of sinking long putts. Bad pivoting is usually the result of short driving. A player gets into the habit of swinging his arms at the ball instead of the arms.

If you will notice a golfer who does not lift his left heel from the ground, you will see a poor driver. Straight, perhaps, but no distance.

Another thing important in hitting a long ball is perfect timing. It is excellent to pivot but fatal when the body is pushed shot somewhere off to the right and no particular good.

Let the club-head get the ball away first before using the body for propelling purposes.

BYEDDIE COLLINS

In baseball the position of second baseman and the first sacker. With a base is commonly referred to as the keystone of the infield. The inference is that a majority of the plays revolve around second base, hence the naming of the position the keystone of the inner combination.

One thing that every second baseman should bear in mind is that he should always cover the bag; make it a point to go over to the base on every play on the assumption that it is not wise to take anything for granted in baseball. It is far best to be on the job able to make any play that comes up.

While the covering of the bag is most important, there are times when it is best that the duty be delegated to the shortstop.

Literally, on certain plays it would be suicide for the second baseman to do the covering, poor baseball. At such times it is up to the shortstop to cover the bag. For proper guidance the second baseman, prior to the pitch, should have a simple but obvious sign with the shortstop as to who will cover on every play.

There also must be a certain amount of co-operation between the second baseman and the first sacker. With a runner on first base and no one out, the second baseman should always be ready to cover first on a bunt.

Sensing this play, it is always best for the second baseman to move a few steps closer to first and not play as deep as usual. This makes the execution of the play much easier.

On the other hand, when there are one or more out and a runner on first, it is always well to play a trifle closer to second than is customary, unless the batter is a notorious right field hitter.

INDIANS ROUT YANKS TAKING SLUGFEST 15-3

BUCKEYE FEATURES DAY WITH FOUR HITS AND TRIPLE PLAY AID

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 5. (P)—The Yankees today sustained their worst defeat of the year, being beaten 15 to 3 by Cleveland.

The contest was replete with unusual happenings. In addition to holding New York to six hits, Buckeye made two singles, a double and a home run in four times at bat and started a triple play in the seventh inning.

The bases were filled when Koenig hit a line drive to Buckeye. The latter's throw to Lutzke caught Gazzella off the bag and Lutzke's throw to Burns found Paschal some distance away.

In the third inning, Babe Ruth made his 19th home run of the season, five days ahead of his 1921 record. There was one on at the time.

George Burns, who leads the league in doubles, made his 21st and 22nd two base hits of the year and Meusel, leading base stealer, stole his twelfth base.

Prior to today, Pennock, who was knocked off the rubber in the sixth inning, had won eight in a row. On the other hand, it was the first game started by Buckeye that he finished.

Prior to the game, Manager Tris Speaker, of Cleveland, was presented with the American League diploma honor of his having been the most valuable player in the league in 1925. In honor of the occasion, Speaker returned to the game after a week's absence and made two hits, drove in a run, scored one, stole a base and accepted eight chances in center field.

TECH REGENTS LAY PLANS WHICH WILL ENABLE COLLEGE TO GO ON IMPROVING AS THE YEARS GO BY

GLORIOUS RECORD OF FIRST YEAR TO CONTINUE, DIRECTORS BELIEVE AFTER MEETING HERE;
BUDGET WILL BE ANNOUNCED LATER

The Texas Technological College, which is now nearing the close of its first year with a record behind rarely ever achieved by any educational institution, will go forward next year and in succeeding years in keeping with expectations of the people of Texas, through whom it was established, if plans of the Board of Regents who met in formal session here Friday are allowed to take their course.

Plans for the next three years of the life of the institution were taken up by the Board in regular Spring session, and the budget, one of the most important portions of the college program, was tentatively approved. The budget, prepared by College authorities under supervision of R. M. Chittwood, Business Manager, has not yet been entirely completed. It was said in official circles Saturday.

Finished In Few Days
In the next few days, this will be done, and the next meeting of the Board of Regents will be a joint session with the State Board of Control, the date for which has not yet been set, when the completed budget will be submitted for approval of the state board.

It is the opinion of college authorities that no less than $2,000,000 will be necessary in appropriations from the next state legislature if the college is to proceed on its outlined program unhampered, and while no definite statements have been made in this connection, it is understood that college authorities will ask the legislature for not less than this amount.

More Buildings Coming
A part of it would be set aside for more buildings, including probably another wing to the administration building, and for the employment of between 15 and 20 new instructors that will be necessary with the addition of the junior year to the course of study. It is believed inevitable also that additional students to the extent of at least 500 will call for accommodations next term. Authorities are anticipating an enrollment next session of between 1,500 and 2,000.

There are so many things in connection with the operation of a plant of such magnitude as the Tech that do not even enter the minds of the average citizen, and they all call for money to handle, in the opinion of H. T. Kimbro, local member of the Board of Regents. These things, too, he said, are absolutely essential to the proper functioning of the institution.

The eyes of the entire Southwest are on the Tech, and it behooves the people of Texas to see that the college functions efficiently, and is not handicapped by the lack of funds on which to operate, Mr. Kimbro said.

but also to the fact that "Let's Get Married" calls for more robust scrambling than any picture he has made lately. Lois Wilson, who is featured, contributes her part in injecting some feminine beauty to offset all these pugnaeous men. Gregory La Cava directed for Paramount.

LYRIC

There are many interesting facts to be observed about "Soul Mates," its director, actors, etc. This picture is playing at the Lyric theatre Monday and Tuesday.

In the first place, it is the first picture produced in six months that has not had an episode in which someone did the Charleston.

Jack Conway is not the youngest director in motion pictures.

Aileen Pringle, the leading woman, is not a princess in disguise.

The picture contains no oracles or midnight bathing parties.

There is no villain, and the hero is not heroic.

The leading woman is not a "sweet young thing."

"Soul Mates" is Elinor Glyn's first comedy to reach the screen. It was produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and boasts a distinguished cast that includes in addition to Aileen Pringle and Edmund Lowe, the following players: Phillips Smalley, Elythe Chapman, Mary Hawes, Gertrude Olmsted, Lillian Littlefield, Katherine Bennett and Ned Sparks.

ACTIVITY LOOMS FOR COMMITTEES ON C. C. MEETING

EVERYTHING INCIDENTAL TO JAUNT CONFRONTS
LOCAL WORKERS

This week will be one of feverish activity for the several committees charged with arrangements for the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention delegation, which goes to Amarillo for the convention June 21, 22 and 23.

All the committees will hold meetings beginning early this week to start things moving for the banner delegation for the convention.

The steering committee composed of F. A. Norman, R. L. Robertson, Spencer Wells, H. L. Allen and H. D. Woods will be busy watching the various committees and assisting in all phases of the work, while the other committees will be working day and night setting the work done.

Lots of Work Looming

Million Beads

Miss Charlotte Pleshette of New York returns from Paris with a bag of 1,000,000 steel beads strung in the design of the famous stained window of Notre Dame Cathedral, France. It took 391 days to make and she hopes it will set a new fashion of large handbags.

Practically everything is to be accomplished in the next two weeks, according to Norman. Very little action has been taken to this time except the laying of general plans for the crusade.

The steering committee have decided upon a number of things and left them up to various committees to be worked out. These committees will get in the collar this week to accomplish this work.

Among the outstanding things that are being worked on are:

1. Lubbock is going to send the biggest delegation to Amarillo of any West Texas city, to make a fight for the 1927 convention.

2. The Lubbock High School Band will be the official band and will be arrayed in gay style for the convention.

3. The Lubbock delegation will enter the parade contest.

4. Lubbock will have a beautiful Senorita in the Spanish Fiesta.
5. Lubbock's special stunts committee will enter the contest for honors in the stunts contests.
6. June 23 is Tech day and a big delegation will attend from the Tech when special Tech stunts will be pulled.

PLANS LAID ON SUMMER SCHOOL AT TEXAS TECH

JUNE 11 IS SET AS DAY FOR REGISTRATION;
RULES ANNOUNCED

Registration plans for the summer session of the Texas Technological college have been drawn up and were announced yesterday by officials of the school. Registration will be held on Friday, June 11, from 8:30 to 11 in the morning and from 2 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The following data was issued by the college authorities:

New Students
1. Students without high school or college credits report to Registrar's office, Room 210, Administration Building.

2. Students with high school credits report to credentials committee, Rotunda, East Wing of Administration Building, then to Registrar's office.

3. Students with college credits, or those who have submitted Entrance credits in advance, may report directly to the office of the Registrar.

4. After matriculation in Registrar's office, new students will report to Advisory Committee at the head of Main Stairway, east wing of Administration Building and make schedules. Then, to Room 305 for checking courses, receiving class cards, and approval of schedules by deans. Finally to business office for payment of fees.

Students Now In School
Report to Advisory Committee third floor corridor head of Main Stairway, West Wing of Administration Building and make schedules. Then to Room 305 for checking courses, receiving class cards and approval of schedules by deans. Finally to business office for payment of fees.

TODAY'S MARKETS

Livestock Prices

FT. WORTH REPORT

FORT WORTH, June 5. (AP)—Receipts today on the livestock market here were small in every division and the market nominal except in the case of hogs where the market advanced 10 cents to 15 cents. The top hog price was $14.85, the highest figure in his branch of the market in six years. Receipts included 300 grown cattle, 300 calves, 500 hogs and 400 sheep.

Cotton Markets

COTTON GOODS

NEW YORK, June 5. (AP)—Cotton goods markets were steady in the gray goods division today. Sales of 50,000 pieces of shade cloths were made for delivery in August. Percales sold well on memorandum and new prices will be made next week on a lower basis. A better inquiry continued for export cotton goods, chiefly colored cottons. Burlaps were well bought during the week. No change was reported in the quiet small lot demand for silks and woolsens.

COTTON SEED OIL

NEW YORK, June 5. (AP)—Beyond a fair trade in the October position, in which refiners, brokers and ring traders figured, interest in cotton seed oil was light, the day's turnover being $700 barrels. Closing prices were 2 points lower for October and generally 5 to 11 net higher for other leading deliveries. Prime crude 14.00 bid; prime summer yellow spot 15.75; July closed 16.13; September 15.00; October 14.60; December 11.50; January 11.40.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, June 5. (AP)—More favorable weather news from the South was reflected by moderate declines in the cotton market today. October contracts sold off to 17.48c, or 8 points net lower and closed at that figure with the general market closing steady at net decline of six to ten points.

The opening was steady at a decline of two to five points in response to lower Liverpool cables, but offerings increased after the call, owing to confirmation of yesterday's private reports of rains in the Eastern belt. These rains were considered beneficial following recent drought complaints, and the prospect of further showers in the Eastern belt with clearing and warmer weather in the Southwest made a favorable impression on sentiment. July sold off to 18.18c and December to 17.40c, while March declined to 17.52c, making net declines of about 8 to 10 points.

The selling was by no means general or aggressive, however, and the decline was checked by covering with the market ruling steady in the late trading although the close was within a point or two of the lowest. There was considerable price fixing during the earlier trading with spot house brokers buyers of July on the decline, but otherwise the bulk of the business was attributed chiefly to the evening up of old accounts, and the demand for July was supplied by selling supposed to represent liquidation of Wall Street interests.

Private cables attributed the earlier ruling of Liverpool to hedge selling and liquidation, influenced by the weather news from the South and while a better demand for cotton cloths was reported from China, they stated that renewed riots in Calcutta were interfering with Manchester business from India. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 57,296 bales against 33,347 last year.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, June 5. (AP)—There was moderately fair trading in the cotton market during today's brief session although price fluctuations were narrow. After opening unchanged to four points down with Liverpool cables a little lower than due the market rallied a point or two in the early trading but soon commenced to ease off owing to rains in the Eastern belt where needed and the general favorable character of crop advances filtering in from the interior. At the lowest prices showed losses of four to six points and the market finally closed steady at these figures.

Following the slightly easier opening due to lower cables the market rallied slightly, July trading up to 17.62c, October to 17.11c, and December also to 17.11c, or four to five points above the opening and practically to the same levels as prevailed at yesterday's close. These prices proved to be the high of the day.

The market started to ease off when the weather map was posted showing good rains in the Eastern belt and the decline was helped by an official forecast for further showers in the Atlantic states. Prices gradually worked down to 17.58c for July, October to 17.05c and December to 17.05c or four to six points under the early highs. The close was near the bottom of most of the month's exports for the day totaled 7,918 bales.

CHICAGO REPORT

CHICAGO, June 5. (AP)—Brisks new upturns today in the value of wheat lifted the market to about six cents a bushel above prices current on Thursday. Crop reports both foreign and domestic, were disquieting. The wheat market closed strong 1 1/4 cents to 3/8 cents net higher, corn unchanged to 1/2 cent up, oats showing 1/2 cent to 3/8 cent gain, and provisions 2 cents to 3 cents advance.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat, but were held back by slowness of cash dealings, whereas good milling wheat is in keen request. Provisions reflected the strength both of grain and of hogs.

Stocks And Money

WALL STREET REPORT

NEW YORK, June 5. (AP)—Today's brief session of the stock market was called upon to absorb a fairly large volume of profit taking and bear selling, but it developed splendid resistance to pressure. Closing quotations disclosed considerable irregularity but the industrial average showed a net loss of less than 1-10th of one point, while the railroad average advanced nearly two-fifths of a point. Total sales aggregated 422,400 shares.

RETAILERS ARE TO HAVE LUNCH

Tuesday Evening Set For The Next Meeting; Busy Bee to Serve Business Men

The Retail Merchants Association will hold their regular monthly meeting for June Tuesday evening at 6:30 at the Busy Bee Cafe when the membership will enjoy a luncheon in addition to the program. The delegates who attended the Retail Merchants Association of Texas convention which met in Dallas May 17 to 19 will report on the convention and other routine matters will be disposed of.

The directors of the association voted recently to renew the luncheon practice in an effort to bring a better representative number of the membership out to the meetings. The luncheon meetings were held some time ago with good success and the directors are looking hopefully to Tuesday night for a big attendance. The meeting will begin promptly at 6:30 and will be adjourned promptly at 7:45, according to the directors, thus giving those attending a chance to fill any other engagement for the evening that they might have.

GUIDE BOOK IS RECEIVED HERE

Log of Transcontinental Road Arrives at Office of City Chamber of Commerce

The official Guide, log book of the Texas Transcontinental Trail, Fort Worth-Lubbock highway reached the Chamber of Commerce here Saturday, fresh off the press. The book is well gotten up log book containing 50 pages telling of the route from Fort Worth to Lubbock via Weatherford, Mineral Wells, Breckenridge, Stamford, Spur, Crosbyton, Ralls, Lorena, and Idalia. The mileage of the route is 428, according to measurement of Ed McBee, manager of the Tourist Bureau, of the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce. Fifty thousand of the books have been printed and will be distributed all over the eastern portion of Texas, all along the route and at many places west of Lubbock, in an effort to bring the east and west traffic in Texas over the highway.

11:30-12:30

More books will be distributed at Apartment June 10 when the association holds their next meeting.

TWILIGHT LEAGUE IS ORGANIZED IN LUBBOCK

The twilight league for the city of Lubbock was set in motion here Friday night at an organization meeting when Sled Allen, often termed the father of baseball here, was elected President, and various other matters pertaining to the functioning of the league were discussed.

F. G. Shepard, another avowed baseball fan of the city, was elected vice-President, and J. C. Sanders, stickler for any manner of clean sports, was elected secretary-treasurer. Various committees, including schedule, rules and regulations, etc., were named, and another meeting is to be held Monday night at Myrick Hardware company when final arrangements are expected to be made before the season formally gets under way Tuesday.

It is the plan of leaders in the movement to operate a spit season, with the second half to close about September 10, it which time the winner in the play-off series will be awarded a trophy cup that is being offered by Sherrod Bros.

The present plan also provides for playing two games a day, one to be played at the Merrill park, home of the Hubbers, and the other on Tech field. Play will be under way only on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays, and with a contemplated eight club circuit, each club would play two games a week.

The following teams have been accepted into the league: Bankers, Barbers, Rix-Baker, Barrier, Hardware, Poyreys, Postoffice, and Chevrolet.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE GARRETT have returned from a visit to Abilene.

Itinerant Peddler Hurls Challenge To Daily Journal; He Doesn't Know His 'Okra', City Officials Insist

During the Journal editor's publication of his letter, a man signing his name as H. S. Stuart sent an epistle to the paper Saturday in which he complained of the treatment he had received in the city.

He said that he was crippled and deaf and that after he had been granted license to sell novelties on the streets, the chief of police had forbidden him to conduct the sales. His letter was sent to the Journal as he said he was "very much intrigued" with an editorial on "Fair Play."

Investigation at police headquarters showed that there is a city ordinance prohibiting these sales within the fire limits. The police had found him within these limits and had asked him to move further out in the city. The man found a vacant store building and was unmolested in conducting his business there as he was legally entitled to do this.

His Letter Printed

The letter follows:
"I was very much intrigued in your editorial entitled 'Fair Play' in light of the experience I enjoyed in your town. I am, Sir, a crippled man with the added handicap of being totally deaf. I came into your town on Monday evening and in pursuance of my business, I applied to your tax collector for a license to sell my novelties on the streets, which he issued to me, license number 401. Before I bought this license, I asked the clerk where I could sell my goods and he said, 'Any place on the streets.' I then I went down town and went to work and worked about fifteen minutes when the chief of police says, 'that license is no good, you will have to quit.' So, as I understand it, the town of Lubbock with ambitions to be known as the educational center of West Texas is also in the business of issuing phony licenses.

Hurls Down Gauntlet

"The Chief may quote you many reasons why he would not let me work, but the real reason, which is that you people are afraid that some itinerant peddler may accidentally take $9 cents out of the town with him, neither he nor you would admit, I yesterday rented a burnt-out store and sold my goods therein so all together I left in your town about $16 instead of taking any money out. In conclusion, it looks like that Lubbock in its hurry to advance is losing sight of the Ten Commandments which plainly state 'Thou Shalt Not Steal.' If selling a stranger a license and then refusing him the right to work on that license because he is a poor man and you can get away with it is not stealing money, what is? I am, yours truly, (Signed) H. S. STUART.

P. S. I expect you will drop this in the waste paper basket. I dare you to print any part of it.

Ticket Committee of W. T. C. C. Is Decided

The ticket selling committee for the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Convention will meet early this week and begin an extensive campaign to sell every live public spirited citizen of Lubbock a pass to the biggest convention in the history of West Texas. With G. P. Kuykendall, W. W. Royalty, R. Sherrod, R. F. Rayless, Chas. H. Reed, and Prof. C. S. Mast on the committee, each a veteran salesman in his respective line, and with such a selling proposition to peddle, the steering committee rests easy in the belief that the ticket selling is going over in big style.

MISS MARJORIE LELAND HAS returned from a visit to Roswell.

POSTOFFICE HERE GETTING BACK TO NORMAL

The Lubbock postoffice, after a week of strenuous effort, is beginning to get back to its normal routine of mail distribution following the collapse of the roof a week ago last night under the heavy weight of water impounded thereon during the deluge that swept the city. It was announced Saturday by Postmaster John L. Vaughan.

The force has been doubly handicapped the past week due to the inconvenience of the roof collapse, the absence on vacation of two employees, and absence of another employee on the sick list, but the last piece of repair work on the building was set Saturday.

The building was repaired under supervision of Walker and Royalty, local contracting firm, and in a statement issued Saturday the contractors said that nothing had been overlooked that would give strength and long life to the building. The balance of the structure also was examined, the statement said, and has been pronounced in good condition, after the addition of three extra large water outlets and thorough reinforcement of the collapsed portion of the roof.

section with charges that James E. Ferguson, husband of the governor, has failed to separate public office from private enterprise. Moody charged that Ferguson, because of his political power, has been employed by a small railroad at a large salary as general attorney. Moody also attacked operations of the Ferguson Forum.

States His Views
"I am one of those," said Moody, who believes that public office should be separated absolutely from private enterprise. I promise that when I am governor, I shall obey to the letter the mandate of the constitution that I practice no profession and that I render no service to individual or corporation for reward."

Today's address was the fourth for Moody during the day. He spoke at Mount Vernon this morning. This afternoon he delivered an address at Sulphur Springs, from the same platform on which Governor Ferguson opened her campaign for re-election two weeks ago. Enroute here tonight he stopped for a brief talk at Cumbly.

Davidsons Join Forces
MARSHALL, Texas, June 5. (AP)—The two Davidsons, T. Whit and Lynch who campaigned separately for the governorship two summers ago, joined forces here today to defeat what they determine their common enemy, "Fergusonism."

"We expect united to win that victory Ferguson which we were unable to win two years ago divided."

With hand music and moving picture men on the side, and the court house filled, both Davidsons spoke in behalf of the candidacy of the Houston lumberman.

Whit Makes Speech

Whit Davidson, in welcoming Lynch, his erstwhile antagonist, said "Jim Ferguson is trying to pick his own opponent in the race. Ferguson is engaging in this personal attack on Moody in the effort to drive anti-Ferguson men into the Moody campaign to assure himself that Moody will be his opponent because he feels he can beat Moody."

Both Davidsons made short addresses to a crowd outside the court house who were unable to gain admission.

R. J. MURRAY, ACCOMPANIED BY his wife and two boys R. J. Jr. and Mike, motored down to Roosevelt, Texas, where they will spend the week end on the Concho River enjoying fishing and hunting. They are visiting at the cabin of W. E. Olive, of the Slaton State Bank, and were also joined by J. S. Edwards, of Menard.

Teacher's Poem Is Magazine's Nemesis

NEW YORK, June 5. (AP)—A poem by Hal Saunders White, an instructor in the English Department of Yale University in the May issue of the "New Masses," published in Greenwich Village, has been adjudged "lewd and obscene" by the postal authorities. An order barring this and subsequent numbers of the magazine from the mails has been issued, it became known today.

The order, however, failed to prevent the May and June numbers from reaching their subscribers, as it was not issued until after the magazine had been distributed.

GEORGE A. FIELD, DIVISION ENGINEER of the State highway department, left Saturday night for Austin on business. He will be gone three or four days and will visit his mother while away.

MRS. T. M. BINNION, JR., DAUGHTER of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Barham, is in the Lubbock Sanitarium with a serious throat infection following an attack of the influenza.

Possibly the interest in Dollar-Day might tempt some stores to use it for their own advantage rather than for yours. This is not our idea of Dollar Day. We aim on each of these First Mondays to arrange a list of specials that will mean profit for you rather than for ourselves, to give you values that are unusual and that will stand the test of comparison—values that will mean the building of good will. A critical study of the items listed below will bear this out—for they are not only desirable, but are standard in qualities and seasonable at this time.

Mrs E. R. Haynes, Veteran Lubbock Teachers, To Rest

AFTER 30 YEARS IN CLASSROOM BELOVED INSTRUCTOR OF 3,000
LUBBOCK PUPILS IS TO RETIRE

"I'M NOT TIRED," SHE SAYS, "AND WILL BE HERE TO HELP IF NEEDED;" SHE COMPLETES 18TH YEAR AS CITY TEACHER AND PRINCIPAL

By BLANCHE E. BEAN

Journal Staff Writer

After having taught school for 30 years, the last 18 of them in Lubbock where she has introduced approximately 3,000 local youngsters to their three R's, Mrs. E. R. Haynes has announced that she will put away her teaching implements for a year and "take a rest."

Not that she is feeling weary of teaching or has found that her pedagogical methods are beginning to become dog-eared, but because of a number of smaller reasons and because there seems to be no real need for her to teach next year, as she expressed it.

MRS. E. R. HAYNES

And Lubbock youngsters, particularly those in the George M. Hunt school, where she has taught for a number of years and where she has been principal for the last two, are experiencing pangs of regret that their "dearest" teacher will not welcome them with a kiss next fall at the opening of school. Faculty members, too, know that "Ma" Haynes is going to be sorely needed next year when they have some difficulty in teaching or some problem that must be solved with the help of an understanding and stern confessor.

Will Remain in Lubbock
But she is not leaving Lubbock. She is to remain at her home, 1629 13th Street, where children and adults, teachers, patrons of long standing and former pupils may come—and probably will come—for friendly chats, advice, inspiration and admonishments about getting married.

"I always advise my girls to get married," Mrs. Haynes says frequently, and those who have taught with her or have been associated with her can testify to this, for she believes that all young people should marry.

"Teaching is a good stepping stone to matrimony and married women make excellent teachers," she said this week. "I do not approve of girls working in offices much or of taking many places in the business world except to teach school."

Only Ill One Time
In all of her 30 years in the school room, she has never missed school but one time because of her own illness and never required the services of a doctor but one time, because of illness. "I didn't really need the doctor that time, but Mr. Haynes insisted," she smiled. This happened the second year that she taught in Lubbock, in 1898, and Miss Maud Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Burns, substituted in her place.

Mrs. Haynes never suffers any illness and her life has been exceptionally free from any kind of affliction, she said. Even now she is able to climb the school steps numberless times each day without feeling weary in the least. This may be because she has led such an active life and probably is because of the hardness of all members of her family, she explains.

Is A Born Teacher
Although Mrs. Haynes seems to have been "born a teacher," Mrs. Haynes has always worked hard at it, reading, collecting material for scrap books, studying the latest methods and ever striving to give her children the best training possible. But above all else Mrs. Haynes has loved every student whom she has taught and has received the devotion of all these youngsters.

She remembers every pupil she has ever taught as much as an entire term and can call them by name, associating them with the room in which she was teaching and the position of their desk or with some characteristic of the child. Each spring the mails bring invitations and announcements by the score from high school and college institutions in almost every state in the union for the boys and girls seldom forget the smiling face that was turned for a kiss when they were in the grades.

Kissed Them All
She long made it a habit to stand in her room or in the hall and receive a kiss from each pupil as they marched by to go home in the evening. Occasionally when she was absent because of sickness in the family or some other reason, substituting teachers have felt somewhat disconcerted at having to stoop for so many sticky kisses in one afternoon.

"There are some years in my teaching that are outstanding for because they were particularly pleasant and some pupils who are remembered because of their brilliance or mischievousness, but each year of my teaching was a pleasure," she said, "and I have not said that I will not go back."

Mrs. Haynes has long been noted for the excellent discipline she maintained in her class rooms and other teachers have frequently desired the key that they might emulate the work in their rooms.

Not All Play For Students

A niece of Mrs. Haynes, who had been a pupil of her aunt's in her youth, explained this by saying that "When Aunt Rose stuck out her chin and said for me to do something, I knew it was time to quit playing." This may explain much of her discipline, for while she loved each student into doing many things and seemed lenient, there was a limit which no child ever dared overstep more than once, and she rarely ever whipped a student.

Mrs. Haynes does not believe that the youth of today is any worse than

Countess at Races

Countess Salm von Hoogstraeten, formerly Millicent Rogers and heiress to millions, reappeared in public when New York society turned out for the opening of the Belmont Park races.

the youth of yesterday and she is not cherishing any illusions about the "poor, down-trodden young people who are never given a chance." She thinks they are good, but indifferent, that they may become reprobates because of evil associates and may be more upright because their parents have watched those with whom they have played.

"It does seem, though, that girls are not willing to settle down and make a home as they used to do and I believe this is responsible for many of the divorces and much of the unhappiness in married life," she said. "Men sometimes commit theft and other crimes just to satisfy the whims of their pampered wives, I think," she said.

Mrs. Haynes has taught every member of several Lubbock families during her experiences here and she says she feels a bond of kinship with these families as though the children were somehow part hers also. She has always advocated parent-teacher associations and invited the patrons to visit the schools in order that she might know them personally. The love of the patrons was shown to some extent when a tea was given for Mrs. Haynes at the closing of the schools this spring and hundreds of people called during the afternoon, even when special invitations had not been issued.

She came here with her husband, the late E. R. Haynes, 18 years ago when the school was situated near where the First Christian church is located now. He was superintendent of the school and Mrs. Haynes was one of the other three teachers.

Mrs. Haynes taught her first school at Franklin College, Pilot Point, where she received some schooling. She attended the Denton Normal and taught a little before her marriage. Mrs. Haynes has one son and she did not teach the first five years of his life. The son, R. E. Haynes, publisher of the Seagraves Signal and owner of the Meadow Review, has lived in Lubbock and is well known here. His daughter, Miss Juanita Haynes, stays with her grandmother and attends Lubbock schools.

"I hate to think of not teaching any more, the veteran teacher says frequently, "and I may go back. I haven't said yet that I will never teach again."

Mrs. O. D. Hargis Relates Her Experiences In Malay Peninsula At Meeting Of A. A. U. W. Chapter

Mrs. O. D. Hargis, who lived for years in the Federated Malay States, spoke to the people of these countries, the conditions in climate, customs and other features at a meeting of the American Association of University Women Saturday noon at Chari casa dormitory. Her talk was illustrated with lantern slides. This was the final spring meeting of the association. Miss Bernice Stevens and Obeta Robinson assisted Mrs. Hargis.

A business session was held, in which officers were retained for another year, with the exception of the secretary, Miss Elizabeth Stafford, who was elected to succeed Mrs. W. R. Gates, who will not return next year, in this office. Tables for the luncheon were decorated with pink and white roses.

Mrs. A. H. Leidigh was awarded first prize in a poetry writing contest on "How I Intend to Spend the Summer." These poems were submitted by members of the association and judged by a committee. Mrs. Leidigh's poem was entitled "Blossoming the Architect" and was cleverly written. Miss Elizabeth West, with a poem on "The Stay-at-Home Summer," received second place. These poems read with verses by Mrs. Mary W. Dook and Mrs. William Dinkus. Miss Hattie Anderson, of Canyon, guest of Miss Flora McGee and a member of the Amarillo A. A. U. W., was introduced.

Here East Meets West
The Malay peninsula is composed of the Federated Malay States, Straits Settlements and five native ruled states, Mrs. Hargis said. Her talk was confined to the federated group, which is inhabited by the aborigines tribes, a dwarfed people, the Malaysians, the aristocrats, Chinese, the commercial people and Indians, the jewelers. The capital city, Singapore, is the largest city and it is here that East meets West and that neither people understand the other, she said.

The Malaysians are extremely indolent and lacking in initiative, being content to live with an income from a small plot of rubber trees or tea or rice patch, she explained. Coconut tea, coffee, tobacco, rice, rubber and sugar cane are the principal products and aside from the tin mining, which is extensive as these states supply more than one-half of the world's supply, there are gold and silver mining, there, according to the speaker. The Chinese coolies do almost all the tin mining by hand.

The people of these countries are extremely earnest in their religion, stopping to look toward Mecca and pray at 6 o'clock each morning and evening, regardless of what they may be doing at the time. A man who has made the pilgrimage to Mecca is privileged to wear a special white turban and the other Mohammedans wear to him. Everyone there goes to sleep in the middle of the day and the men driving the sacred cattle to work stop them and lie down under their carts for their naps unless they are in a hurry. Otherwise, they go on to sleep in the cart ride on their journey. Traffic turns to the left there. Elephants are used for transportation in many places.

Seventeen members of the club and two visitors attended the meeting. They were Mesdames Clyde Elkins, Earl Moore, T. H. Carter, R. A. Studhalter, William J. Miller, Mary W. Dunk, J. L. Holt, A. H. Leidigh, and Misses Margaret Weeks, Elizabeth Stafford, Lila Gibson, Louise McKee, Blanche Bean, Flora McGee, Elizabeth West, Alice Jensen. Visitors were Mrs. Percy Spencer, Mrs. Hargis and Miss Hattie Anderson.

Mesdames McAfee and Spikes Are Hostesses

Mrs. Guy McAfee and Mrs. Veltos Spikes entertained with an informal buffet dinner Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. McAfee, 2006 Main Street. The Lewis-McLaughlin wedding party was to come from Dallas for the luncheon, which had been prepared in their honor, but rain prevented them from coming.

Pink roses were used as a centerpiece for the table and pink candles carried out a pink and white color scheme in the decorations. Guests included Mesdames and Mesdames Houston, Spikes, Ernest Conley, Elmer Conley, J. T. Krueger, J. B. Crisler, Walter Myrick, Mesdames B. U. Malone, of Farwell, J. B. Crisler, J. R. Germany, Misses Mary Meador, Lulu Mae Cravens, Alice Johnson, Messrs. Harold Griffith, Guy McAfee and Veltos Spikes.

J. W. Gamel Host To 6 Camp Fire Troops

J. W. Gamel was host to the six Camp Fire troops of Lubbock with a picnic at the country club Saturday afternoon. About 100 girls with their guardians, met at the First Methodist church at 4 o'clock and went on trucks to the picnic grounds. Each troop decorated a car with their symbols and a parade was made through the city. Weiners, buns, pickles, potato chips, Eskimo pies and soda pop were served.

S. S. Class Will Hold Social Meet Monday

A social meeting of the Builders' Sunday school class of the First Methodist church is to be held at the home of Mrs. Allen T. Stewart, 1901 16th Street, at 8 o'clock Monday evening. Hostesses are to be Mesdames Erna Brown, Herbert Maxwell, Otis Stewart, A. L. Schoolcraft, A. T. Stewart and Miss Annette Newell.

The Woman's Day

By ALLENE SUMNER

First Lady and Lace
A body of foreign women graduates of an Americanization class journey to the White House, says the news, bearing a spread of handmade lace to the First Lady. The lace may be very beautiful, again it may be one those atrocities of punchwork, tatting, crochet, Rose of Sharon patchwork or the Rising Sun pattern.

Beautiful or atrocious, it reminds us of the multitude of gifts which the two best occupants of the White House must be called upon to receive: Cans of maple syrup from this state and that, beds in which presidents breathed their last, first seasonal blooms from state flowers, pigs raised by Better Pig Clubs, pictures of Better Baby prize winners.

We hear little of the White House attic, but it must be a most entertaining room!

Being a Beauty

"What colors become me most?" is a question received by Cynthia Grey more frequently, perhaps, than any other. One general answer might be, according to costume authorities, "study your hair and eyes, match and contrast." The best rule is to bring out color of eyes more than any other feature. If you have bright brown or black eyes, dark hair, and high colored, wear warm flaming colors, yellow, orange, rose, henna. If your eyes are blue-grey wear cool shades of jade and dull blues and greys.

The Calling Card

Time was when calls and calling cards had a dignity and seriousness of position not accorded them in this hurry-up world when invitations to the most formal affairs are apt to be telephoned, and social letters written by typewriter. Simpler rules prevail about the calling card than in the old days when etiquette decreed a certain number of cards for various occasions, with corners turned variously to denote different times. One card sufficed for any occasion now, and corners are NEVER turned down.

Lace Shower

Lace lends itself to bridal showers. Write invitations on round lace paper doilies. Decorate with maiden hair fern on lace corsage plates. Have table favors of small corsages on lace holders. Decorate with Queen Anne's lace and have shower gifts in lace or wrapped in lace doilies.

Wives "Easy to Live With"

Qualities in a wife which make her "easy to live with," as told by husbands to Montaigne, French author, include: "knowing when and when not to ask a man to do little chores around the house," "how to stretch the money," "taking time off to play," "a sense of proportion—no making a life tragedy out of a steak spoiled because a man doesn't get home on time to dinner."

Helen Willis' Tennis Frolic

It is not too much to assume that a girl who plays tennis for championship ships as does Helen Willis, would also be the girl who knows what a tennis player should wear for comfort and style. Helen Willis' ideal tennis dress is a sleeveless, low V-necked jumper overblouse of white broadcloth or crepe worn with a color-striped skirt, pleated, very short, and very full.

Parties Are to Honor Miss Frances Hoffman

Miss Frances Hoffman, bride-elect of Richard Douglas, is to be honored at three parties this week: the first one a Military Bridge party at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Pagoda Tea house; the second, Nov. L. G. L. Kerkson and Miss Johnnie Glickerson as hostesses. Misses Clara Lane and Edith Sarter will be hostesses at a matinee party Thursday afternoon and a party will be given in Slaton Friday afternoon. Hostesses for the latter event are to be Mesdames A. E. Whitton, E. A. Whitton, Briggs Robertson and Misses Betty Reynolds and Jeanette Ramsey. The party is to be at the Slaton club house.

Epworth League Group To Attend Conference

Delegates from the Epworth League of the First Methodist church are planning to leave early tomorrow morning for Abilene where they will attend the biennial conference of the societies in the Northwest Texas conference. Rev. E. E. White, pastor of the First Methodist church, is to be one of the speakers. Those who have definitely decided to go tomorrow are Clarence Whitely, Misses Evelyn Wilson, Eva May, Oba May, Mrs. Otis Felt, R. S. Prichard and Richard Cavitt. Misses Alice and Sallie Bean went down Saturday and will visit in the home of their uncle, Rev. J. W. Hunt, until the conference opens.

Marriage Lienses Granted 7 Couples

Marriage licenses were granted to seven couples during the last week. They were as follows: Omar Amys and Miss Hazel Mudgetton; Rufus Youngs and Miss Hula St. Clair; Lawrence C. Bacon and Miss Kathryn Atkins; Irvin ones and Miss Mary Ella Denton. C. N. Carr and Miss Kathrine Long; Clarence Cardwell and Miss Florence Thornton and Junior Phillips and Miss Una May Guess.

Racing Season Brings Out Society In Wide-Brimmed Hats, With New Colors Predominating Early Summer

Katherine Brown and Mary C. Whitney with the Belmont Park race course in the back ground.

By BETSY SCHUYLER

NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, June 5.—We must hand it to the large hat. Cartwheel brims are upon us, and the smart set is won over. At the opening of the racing season at Belmont Park, society was practically under cover.

Under the widest brim at the Turf and Field clubhouse, who should I find but the Countess Salm, formerly Millicent Rogers. Above the brim was a perfectly fitting crown with a band of green ribbon held in place with an ornament of rhinestones and emeralds. Below was her piquant, beautiful face, very effectively made up in ochre powder and vermilion rouge.

Her coat was of black tulle, quilted, and below the hem I glimpsed the pleated ruffle of a black crepe de chine gown which showed white georgette at the neck and sleeves. The Countess looked thinner than she did at Palm Beach, but exceedingly interesting, as she always is.

Grace In Milan

Another society heiress whom one seldom sees over here because she spends so much time abroad was Grace Vanderbilt, sister of young Cornelius, Junior, who has figured extensively in print of late.

She was wearing a wide-brimmed Milan and one of the new silk coats with a ruffle about the hem. Grace is always being reported engaged to some English nobleman, but I believe she is still unmarried.

A charming figure was the spirited

Pifi Widener, who recently curtailed the name Lady from her visiting cards. She was very summery and picturesque in a huge leghorn hat with a velvet crown and a bunch of field flowers on the brim.

She wore a little brown velvet coat, and I was conscious of blue somewhere about her. She was more colorful than most of the spectators, but then, Pifi departs from the routine at every turn.

Mrs. Bryce Wing, whom I consider one of the most beautiful women in New York, as well as the most exquisitely groomed, was wearing a rather medium-sized hat with a velvet bow across the back, and a kasha coat very straight as to line, but with circular capes over the sleeve.

Katherine Brown and Mary C. Whitney appeared in almost identical pieces of millinery, both black Milan shapes, untrimmed.

There were two very distinctive costumes in black that interested me, one worn by Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, and the other by Mrs. George S. Salm. Salm's coat had fluffy beige colored fur at the sleeves and from the knees to the hemline on either side of the front—apparently placed where it could not possibly be considered useful. The dress was of beige colored crepe with horizontal tucks on the blouse and a finely pleated skirt.

Mrs. H. H. Rogers, mother of the Countess Salm, wore a printed silk and straight-line coat with a transparent hat. Mrs. Frank Henderson flaunted a colorful frock of printed chiffon with a silver girdle, and a coat of absolute colored wool—and the inevitable wide-brimmed hat.

There were so many of the smart set present, I can't to enumerate the costumes. But I do want to mention some of the style trends that seemed to me significant.

Never have I seen so much navy blue—almost always combined with red frock. And the amount of navy blue millinery is unprecedented. Practically every navy blue frock has its hat to match.

There is a decided vogue for fine pleating, both for entire skirts and for ruffles that often completely cover the skirt.

Black and red seems to be a most noteworthy combination—not the usual bright red, but the more dull maroon and burgundy. Chanel, the Paris designer, sponsors this, and apparently her influence is strong. The straight black coat is almost sure to reveal a red frock. And the amount of navy blue millinery is unprecedented.

Polka dots are much exploited, particularly in navy and white combinations. I saw a number of these rain-bow printed and entire coats, but on the whole, the colorful coat was not in evidence.

The most smartly dressed women in New York society are never obvious about their expenditures. They usually stick pretty close to black or beige—and this year to navy blue—for New York wear, and to white for the country.

Children of First Christian Church Will Give Program

"The Kingdom of Light," a pageant, is to be presented at the First Christian church this evening in place of the regular preaching service, by children of the intermediate, junior and primary departments of the Sunday school. Sterling Brown and Miss Frances Sander, as Things-As-They-Seem and Christian Progress, two characters, have the leading roles in the pageant, in which about 75 children appear. Following the devotional, the introduction to the pageant is to be given by Clyde Elkins, Jr.

The scenes of the pageant are set in Paraguay, where "the woman is the servant of man and the blind devotee to a faith that has little spiritual comfort and hope." The picture of the attitude of these people toward God is to be given in the prologue. A typical Paraguayan household that has no purpose and no thought of the future, is pictured in Scene 1 and the work of the Christian Sunday schools of Argentina is shown in Scene 2. Miss Ella Norine O'Neal directs this much of the pageant.

Scene 3, is directed by Ira Townsend. This sort of the play includes a typical conversation between boys in the boys' dormitory of the Colegio International, at Asuncion. The boys are keenly aware of the lack of moral and spiritual life in their country.

Mrs. F. G. Kelley and Mrs. W. P. Jennings direct Scenes 4 and 5. In this scene Things-As-They-Seem, representing a boy of Paraguay, is told that the boys and girls of America want to bring the "light" to South America. The offering that night will go into the church's fund for work in foreign fields.

Visitors Are Given Informal Reception

Honoring our guest, Miss Hattie Anderson, Canyon, and Miss Marian Evans and Mrs. Anna Glendelin, of Houston, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Evans, Miss Flora McGee invited several members of the Tech faculty to call at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Evans, 1207 10th Street, Saturday evening. The reception was informal and given in order that the visitors might meet more local people.

The Social Calendar

The Builders Sunday school class of the First Methodist church will have a social meeting at the home of Mrs. Allen T. Stewart, 1901 16th Street, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

The Junior Missionary society of the First Methodist church will give a program at a meeting of the Women's Missionary Society at the church at 3 o'clock. Mrs. M. C. Overton has charge of the juniors.

TUESDAY

Dr. Nan L. Glickerson and Miss Johnnie Glickerson will be hostesses at a bridge party at 3:30 o'clock, honoring Miss Frances Hoffman, of Slaton, at the Pagoda Tea shop.

WEDNESDAY

Mrs. E. L. Klett and Mrs. L. B. Wright will be hostesses to the Wednesday Club at 3:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Klett, 1502 Avenue M.

THURSDAY

Mrs. W. D. Cullum will entertain the Mariposa Club at 3 o'clock at her home, 1811 Avenue O.

FRIDAY

Mrs. J. F. Patterson and Mrs. Charlie Middleton will entertain the Fellowship Club at the home of Mrs. Patterson, 2019 Main Street, in the afternoon.

Saturday

A party will be given at the Slaton club house in the afternoon honoring Miss Frances Hoffman. Hostesses are to be Mesdames A. E. Whitehead, R. A. Baldwin, Briggs Robertson and Misses Betty Reynolds and Jeanette Ramsey.

Tale Of Woe, If Convincing, Is Remunerative To "Gasoline Hobo," They See America First On Booty

It's the man that lets his shaggy hair struggle into his eyes, dons a pair of ragged overalls and with a "pinched" expression, pours his tale of woe into citizens' hearts about his poor sick wife and tiny babe who are starving because fate or the elements have cheated him out of a job that carries money out of Lubbock to spend on a car and a vacation, according to Miss Mae Murfee, Red Cross secretary for the county.

These men, designated as "gasoline hobos" in the records of the charities organizations of the country, are beguiling the country out of their living and it is estimated that there are 300,000 of these people making the Western States of the union at this time, the secretary said.

Almost any citizen can think back upon the time when some poor man pleaded with tears in his eyes and a baby in her arms for a penny to buy a crust for her weeping children. Of course, she received the penny and the man went on his way thanking his lucky stars that his wife had a nice comfortable house to live in, even though she might have to wash three days in the week to earn baby's scant wardrobe last through the week, and that said baby has a father that could provide a living for him.

She Borrowed the Baby

These self-righteous thoughts might just as well have been saved along with the four bits, for the chances were that the woman after collecting some $10 or more for her few minute's effort, returned the babe to its rightful mother, from whom it had been borrowed, and retired to her hotel room to rest the remainder of the day. Or, she might have gone to the tourist park, climbed into her Rolls-Royce and commanded the chauffeur to head for the next port where history would repeat itself and she would collect another sum with another borrowed baby.

All this sounds cruel to many people who feel that the tears in the eyes of beggars they have met "just couldn't be anything except sincere" and who believe that there is no one in the world who would be willing to stoop to such means to gain a living. But there are plenty of these people and they are not getting any more scarce because automobiles make it easy for them to satisfy their desire to see America first instead of staying at home and being down a nice respectable, if poor paying, job.

They're Good Actors

And some of the greatest actors have never gone on the stage to peddle their abilities, either, most any charity worker will say, for some of the more experienced hoboes can tell a tale that will bring tears to the eyes of the most hardened heart.

Some Resolve Help

One man came through Lubbock and begged enough old clothes and other articles from the women of Lubbock to buy an automobile in a neighboring town before he was caught by the officers.

These are only a few typical cases. Professional beggars are thriving in this part of the country as well as in the city, probably better because the citizens here are not anticipating them. There are many needy people who come through and many of them fall upon the Red Cross for assistance and are given help. This is the central point from which help is given, the secretary has the means for making investigations and can send a man who needs help until they can set on their feet again are assisted and that parasites on society are made to work for their living. The deserving person does not mind an investigation of his case—and some of the professionals can continue to have a record that bears professional investigation.

Her Story

It was when a train left Lubbock about 11:30 o'clock in the morning going South. Just before train time one morning a girl about 16 hurried into the office and plead for some help. She said that her mother was dying in Post City and that she had sent her last cent to a brother in Pennsylvania to help defray railroad expenses in order that he might come to the mother also. She had been working in a Lubbock county home, according to her story, which was dampened with tears. She answered questions readily about her mother and other circumstances. And all the time, she was peering anxiously toward the depot, saying that she must catch that train out.

The secretary, realizing that there was little time, and feeling that the girl was telling the truth, because her story was so well told, rushed over to the bank after enough money to get her to Post. Just as they returned to the court house, however, the train whistled and left the city.

Some women from Slaton were in the rest room and had heard all the story so they offered to take the girl that with them and possibly on to Post if they could find no one going that way. The girl left.

That night the sheriff's department got on the trail, phoned the secretary, described the girl and her shabby clothing exactly and said that she had run away from home.

Begging a Profession
Girls and boys are not the only ones who want money from the public and many people haven't the motive that that girl had in seeking more pleasant surroundings. Begging is their profession and they follow it consistently.

A man came into Lubbock two or three years ago and left with considerably more money than he entered with. The suspicions of some business men and the Red Cross were aroused and an investigation was made. It was learned that 13 years ago he had asked a prominent Texas preacher and a business man of good standing each to write him a character recommendation, saying that he was moving to California. With these recommendations, he started in begging, going from town to town and approaching men with a hard luck story, usually asking for $5 to tide him over. Several men here advanced the money and one lent him to the Red Cross.

When the secretary asked him questions—he said he was 70 years of age and deaf—he became extremely indignant, and answered some of her questions without remembering to write them down.

When the secretary was called from the room a moment, he left in a hurry and did not return to Lubbock.

Have Their Own Methods
Charity organizations in towns work together, wiring ahead when it is thought that some beggar is working the country and warning the secretaries to beware of these people when they arrive. They do not advance help unless it is proven that the people really need assistance. Records and descriptions are kept of the people and the workers have their own methods of investigating the cases.

One day a woman breezed into the Red Cross headquarters here with a baby astride one hip and holding a tawdry little bouquet of wild flowers in the other hand. She said her husband was ill in the tourist park, that she wanted work, but that she needed some money to buy supplies until she was paid. The secretary knew of a hotel that needed help and told the woman to go see about the place while she found a way to get some funds. The woman was assured that her husband would be cared for, which is part of the work of that organization.

The woman did not go to the hotel and returned to the office saying that they did not need help. She was told of another place, and again she did not call but returned saying that no help was needed. She was reluctant about answering questions and it was decided to investigate her case.

Another Borrowed Baby
She left the court house and went directly to the tourist park where she put the baby down and it toddled up to another woman who was sitting some food in a basket. This woman picked up the baby, patted it lovingly and, talking with it, went right on stirring the food. Her actions left little doubt that she was the mother.

The woman who had called at the office flounced into a large car with several other people and, with their expensive luggage securely tied on, the group left for the next town.

A similar incident occurred here several years ago. A woman and several dirty children were on the street, the mother, blind, was playing a little organ and singing in a pitifully high pitched voice while the children received the contributions of the public. Two men passed and "dropped in some coins. Then out of idle curiosity one of them asked one of the children where his father was.

"Oh, he's up in the hotel asleep," came the ready answer before the mother could intervene, and the children received the contributions of the public.

One man came through Lubbock and begged enough old clothes and other articles from the women of Lubbock to buy an automobile in a neighboring town before he was caught by the officers.

These are only a few typical cases. Professional beggars are thriving in this part of the country as well as in the city, probably better because the citizens here are not anticipating them. There are many needy people who come through and many of them fall upon the Red Cross for assistance and are given help. This is the central point from which help is given, the secretary has the means for making investigations and can send a man who needs help until they can set on their feet again are assisted and that parasites on society are made to work for their living. The deserving person does not mind an investigation of his case—and some of the professionals can continue to have a record that bears professional investigation.

Her Story
It was when a train left Lubbock about 11:30 o'clock in the morning going South. Just before train time one morning a girl about 16 hurried into the office and plead for some help. She said that her mother was dying in Post City and that she had sent her last cent to a brother in Pennsylvania to help defray railroad expenses in order that he might come to the mother also. She had been working in a Lubbock county home, according to her story, which was dampened with tears. She answered questions readily about her mother and other circumstances. And all the time, she was peering anxiously toward the depot, saying that she must catch that train out.

The secretary, realizing that there was little time, and feeling that the girl was telling the truth, because her story was so well told, rushed over to the bank after enough money to get her to Post. Just as they returned to the court house, however, the train whistled and left the city.

Some women from Slaton were in the rest room and had heard all the story so they offered to take the girl that with them and possibly on to Post if they could find no one going that way. The girl left.

That night the sheriff's department got on the trail, phoned the secretary, described the girl and her shabby clothing exactly and said that she had run away from home.

Begging a Profession
Girls and boys are not the only ones who want money from the public and many people haven't the motive that that girl had in seeking more pleasant surroundings. Begging is their profession and they follow it consistently.

A man came into Lubbock two or three years ago and left with considerably more money than he entered with. The suspicions of some business men and the Red Cross were aroused and an investigation was made. It was learned that 13 years ago he had asked a prominent Texas preacher and a business man of good standing each to write him a character recommendation, saying that he was moving to California. With these recommendations, he started in begging, going from town to town and approaching men with a hard luck story, usually asking for $5 to tide him over. Several men here advanced the money and one lent him to the Red Cross.

When the secretary asked him questions—he said he was 70 years of age and deaf—he became extremely indignant, and answered some of her questions without remembering to write them down.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Corner 14th and Ave. N.
REV. JACK M. LEWIS, Pastor

Sunday School begins at 9:45. Today is being observed as Children's Day in the Sunday School. A special program has been arranged for the opening exercises and no one will care to miss this special feature of the Sunday School. Be present and on time.

Morning worship begins at 11:00 at which time the pastor will use as his subject "A Sublime Duty That Resolves Itself Into a Glorious Privilege." The choir will render a special anthem number entitled "Holy Spirit, Faithful Guide."

The Senior Christian Endeavor Society will have their regular meeting this evening at 7:30. All of the young people of the church are cordially invited to be present and have part in this young people's service.

The evening service begins at 8:30. We are happy to announce that Mrs. Von Tungen will sing "The Lord's Prayer" as a solo number. The pastor will use as his sermon subject "The Dynamic of the Golden Rule." The members of the church and friends will receive a cordial welcome at or all of these services.

MEN'S BIBLE STUDY CLASS First Baptist Church

The Bible teaches very plainly that the tendencies to apostasy are ever present in the church and a final falling away is everywhere indicated. This final apostasy is the great apostasy when the heaven of unbelief leaves almost the whole tenet of the Christian faith and what is left is the bare shell of real Christianity. No one who reads the literature of the day—special, political, social, industrial, or cultural, can fail to see the anti-Christian tendencies throughout modern thought. There is a subtle tendency to ignore the fact of sin, to bring Jesus Christ down to the level of a man, and to discard the supernatural element in all thinking. The student of the Bible sees all such tendencies clearly foretold in that Book and is not disturbed. He knows the outcome will be the smothering of new schemes at the visible appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ on the earth, the setting up of his Kingdom, and his rule of righteousness. But before he comes, the man of sin will appear, the embodiment of all the world's evils. The lesson for next Sunday takes up the teaching of the Bible regarding this Man of Sin and the Anti-Christ. If you want to know the tendencies in modern thought, you will enjoy this lesson.

Her Own Way

A Story of a Girl of Today

A MISTAKE

"I cannot come to dinner tonight, Mr. Robinson," I said glibly, for he had asked me with an air that made me realize that he did not think I could possibly refuse him. "I have an engagement."

The man bent toward me: "With Mr. Hathaway?" he murmured, and his voice and expression implied anything that I might make of it.

I smiled inwardly as I bowed my head, knowing that the man before me thought I was going with Mr. Hathaway, Senior, instead of Jerry.

I let him think so, not realizing that I would have reason to regret it some time later.

"Perhaps you will go with me some other evening," he suggested.

"Perhaps,"

"You certainly know how to do it," he said softly as he moved away.

"Do what?" I asked innocently.

"You know how to lead a man on, my dear. No wonder Hathaway is in love with you."

I felt the eyes of all the girls upon me as I moved away from the end of the counter where I had been talking with Mr. Robinson. The glance of one of them, who had charge of the hostess department right across from me, seemed particularly malignant. If looks could have scared I would have been blushed.

"Look at Sarah Smith," whispered Angie Horton as she took down some boxes of handkerchiefs behind me.

"How she does hate you."

"Why should she hate me?" I asked quietly, as she went past to her customer.

"Because the boss has been rather nice to her lately and I think she had an idea she was going to be Miss Cleaver's successor," explained Angie. "But you see I called the turn. You're elected, my dear. You're elected."

I could not answer back for the pretty girl who had bought the handkerchiefs of me in the morning was standing on the other side of the counter in front of me.

This time she was embarrassed and blushing. For the life of me I could see no reason.

"I've got to have another dozen of those handkerchiefs," she said.

"Have you? I'm glad. That means business for me, you know."

"You see I didn't give them to Bud after all," she confessed. "I gave them to someone else."

I smiled at her and said nothing.

In fact I opened my mouth to say that it wasn't the place of a something, but fortunately I remembered person to appear too curious.

Menus for the Family

By Sister Mary

Breakfast—Stewed dried apricots, cereal, thin cream, breakfast spinach and bacon, rye muffins, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Casserole of meat and macaroni, stewed tomatoes, bran bread, drop cookies, milk, tea.

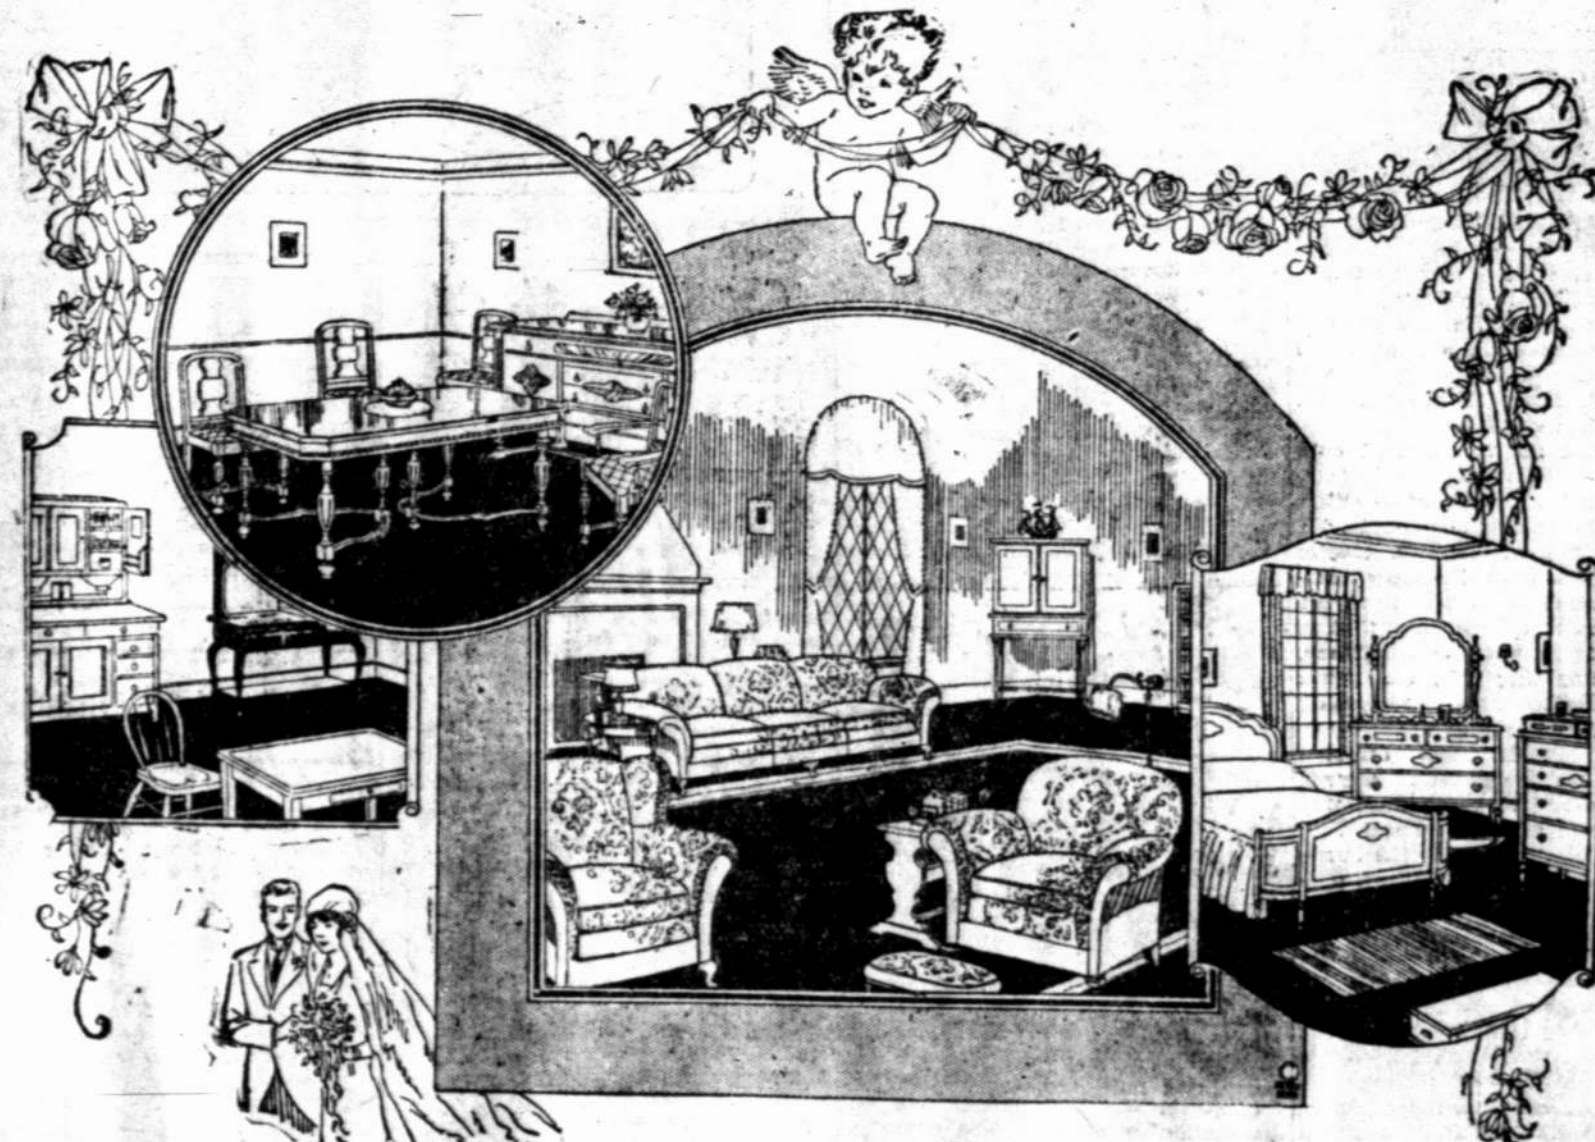

Dinner—Creole bouillabaisse, head lettuce with French dressing, pineapple sherbet, sponge cake, whole wheat bread, milk, coffee.

A "bouillabaisse" is a delicious fish dish that is neither a soup nor a ragout but which combines the excellent qualities of both. It makes a delightful main course for a hot weather dinner or a substantial luncheon dish any time of the year.

Casserole of Meat and Macaroni

One cup macaroni broken into inch pieces, 4 eggs, 1 cup cream, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1 1/2 cups cold diced chicken, 4 tablespoons grated cheese, 4 tablespoons buttered bread crumbs.

Cook macaroni in 2 quarts boiling water to which 2 teaspoons salt have been added, for 10 minutes or until tender. Drain and blanch. Beat yolks of eggs until thick and lemon colored. Add cream and whites of two eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Fold in prepared macaroni and season with salt and pepper. Add chicken, ham and cheese and turn into a well buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve at once.

RIX'S Headquarters for June Brides

We are proud of the fact that most brides think of RIX'S when they begin planning their homes.

It has taken TWENTY-ONE YEARS to build the business that gives us this prestige and we value it so highly that we do not consider any transaction closed until the customer is perfectly satisfied.

When visiting our store you will be surprised to find how nicely you can furnish your home with a few hundred dollars.

Here are four suggestions that are exceptionally good values:

|                              |       |
|------------------------------|-------|
| An 8-piece dining room suite | $120 |
| A 3-piece living room suite  | $120 |
| A 5-piece bedroom suite      | $125 |
| All three suites for         | $330 |

This is a saving of $35. A cash payment of $50 will bring these suites to your home. You can have twelve months to pay the balance.

APPLESAUCE
Well, if it's not one thing it's two.
Here we are, sitting pretty, ready for a great crop year, future weather conditions not prohibiting, and the howlers are already busy.
"Too much rain," they're weeping.
"Why will be flooded out!"
Thunder and mud! Assorted cuss words!

Every year it's something - either too much rain or not enough rain. No matter how the wind blows, they're singing - and it's getting mighty monotoneous to those of us who have the presence of mind to remember that in spite of adverse weather conditions, politics or anything else, the South Plains of Texas have been progressing and will continue to progress.

What we need is more common sense and less pessimism. Anyone who will stop and look backward will see the wisdom in these remarks.
Don't pay any attention to the howlers. They're just like the poor - they'll be with us always. Look to the future, with an opinion based on the past, and forget the weeping and wailing of those who choose because of an inferiority complex, to look on the dark side of things.

Lubbock and the South Plains are growing - improving - becoming better every day, cries to the contrary notwithstanding. Let well enough alone and we'll come out on top, as usual.

WE'LL BE HAPPY

Several days ago The Journal printed an editorial expressing the wish that Earl Carroll, of fatbub fame, would be made to "pay through the nose" for his infamous party.

In the same article The Journal expressed the opinion that Carroll, if the past could be taken as a criterion, would go scot free, due to the ability of his lawyers to pick a flaw in the legal status of the case.

Carroll was found guilty and sentenced to two terms of one year and one day each, in the penitentiary, and a fine of $1,000 in each of the two cases charged was levied. The two last terms, the court ruled, were to run concurrently, or, in other words, the theatrical magnate was sentenced to pay $2,000 and to serve one year and one day in prison.

Now his lawyers have appealed the case, as was expected, and Carroll, the man who caused a seventeen-year-old girl to make a spectacle of her nudity for money, "is confident that he can beat the case in the higher courts."
Just wait and see. Carroll will probably beat the case because the laws of our land make such action possible.
He and the girl will gain financially, from the whole business - and when they do a great country will forget.
It is the way of today.

Although his wishes are to the contrary, The Journal will bet money, mayhies or chalk that Earl Carroll will never be "sitting on the inside, looking on the outside," as the result of his immorality.

And this is a case where The Journal will be most happy to admit that it was wrong - if it turns out so.

KEEPING FAITH

The first full year's work at the Texas Technological college is drawing to a close.

Lubbock has kept faith with the college, its newest civic undertaking, and can well be granted the time and opportunity to "pat itself on the back."
If there is any one thing that the college wished that Lubbock has not made, possible The Journal does not recollect it. We have risen to the occasion and will continue to do so.
As far as the first year is concerned
"we have run a good race," and there are no regrets.

May we always keep faith with Texas Tech as we have during the first year of its existence.

Only one big new attraction at Coney this year...A new "thrill ride"...
They call it "Bob's coaster"...It covers a square block and is "bigger and better" in figure eights and dizzy drops
...Or something like that...Just below it, another novelty...The amusement department store where you can walk right into the structure and find almost every available park amusement, from merry-go-round to freaks.

Oh, yes, there's a "Charleston Palace"...At last a place big enough to house all the Charleston hounds in New York...Devoted exclusively to the art of Charleston, "reads a dodger."
...But then, I never did claim to be an artist...

"Frozen Custard" will be the um-resort dish and get rich!

All Coney Island isn't boardwalk!
Just one block north and a very sizeable town makes its appearance...
A year round population commutes to New York, but makes the healthiest part of its income in summer...
Just now dollars are being turned upside down to rent at all sorts of fancy figures during the hot months...families that in winter occupy five-room flats somehow crowd into a single room and make a nest egg for the winter by renting the "other four"...

Many housewives who live within a stone's throw of the attractions that bring millions find no time to see them
...There is a tale of one woman who has been trying for several years to break away from summer boarders long enough to see Coney, but just when she finds time the season is over.

By Earl Carroll

PLAY SAFE
When yer feelin' kinda groggy, and yer pop begins to droop, an' the path ya tread is soggy, an' ya just don't give a hoop, ya just don't give a hoop, ya just don't better pay attention to yer system.
Listen here, you will pardon if I mention that there's somethin' doin' gear.

It ain't natural for a fella to go stuffed through the day, and it ain't because he's yella, 'cause most men 'er not that way. If, in anything yer doin', it is tough to go along, breshin' yer step, there's somethin' breshin' an' that sum-thin', frankly, wrong.

Now and then we all get lazy.
Feel like loafin' as we please, but when every outlook's hazy—well, yer flirtin' with disease. Maybe overwork and little play. When a fella's once begun, comes the time when he must play.

After all, the road to travel is the one of go-between. Mix yer work with play—unravel brain that might grow over-keen.
Undergoing, over-doing, always at your own expense. Breakdown is the thing that's brewing. Why not use common sense?

No one minds a person with a mind that minds its own business.

The reason so many people never get better is because "there" is a fella who always wins they were, no matter where they are.

A wife can usually tell a husband where he is going to say he has been—and it isn't because she knows where he is.

"I'll trim up last year's hat," said
mom,
"And be that much ahead."
But, after while, she changed her mind.
And dad was trimmed instead.

The man who doesn't know where he is going, but is on his way, is the fella who is just learning to drive a machine.

We don't need to worry, any more, about that famous riddle: "Why does a chicken cross the street?" because, in these days of autos, it doesn't.

The only way the summer is short is in connection with skirts and hosiery.

WASHINGTON
LETTER

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Some time ago I had occasion to remark that Ralph Weaver, Strasburger of Norristown, Pa., looked to me like a coming man in politics.

The Republican senatorial primary in Pennsylvania clinched the matter.
Strasburger may not be very well known outside his own state now but he will be.

Strasburger unquestionably meant to be a candidate for the nomination Bill Vare got. His issue would have been the same issue as Bill's—the prohibition issue. His program is the attainment of temperance by the light wine and beer route.

If Strasburger had run, Vare probably would have stayed out.

But Strasburger was detained in France, where his serious illness, and his only son's serious illness, and to attend to the necessary preliminaries to launching his candidacy.

Lacking Strasburger, the wet Republicans needed a champion, and Bill Vare offered himself—was glad of the chance, no doubt.

Strasburger did get home in time to support Bill personally and through his newspaper, the Norristown Times-Herald, I'm prepared to believe he was a lot of help.

So Vare will come to the Senate—a Republican nomination being equivalent to an election in Pennsylvania—under deep obligations to Strasburger.
They speak of Vare's victory as having given him the leadership of Keystone State Republicanism, but my guess is that Strasburger will have about as much to say as anybody.

At any rate, what he wants he'll be pretty apt to get, either by taking it for himself or asking Vare for it.

And Strasburger wants quite a lot.
It will be recalled that he wanted the Republican vice presidential nomination in 1924. He didn't get that but it's pretty certain he could have had this last senatorial nomination if he'd been in the country.

Now, what will Strasburger want in 1928? Well, there's another Pennsylvania senator to be nominated then and there's also a national ticket, and the man who goes into a Republican convention with the backing of a state like Pennsylvania goes in with some backing.

Strasburger has some other advantages, too.
He has lots of money, a perfectly clean record, no previous political affiliations to embarrass him and a career to be proud of, as a naval officer, diplomat and financier.

His foreign-sounding name may be some little disadvantage to him, but he's an American of many generations' standing, the descendant of an old reformed church family which settled in Pennsylvania before the Revolution.

One way to be popular is to do a lot of listening and applauding and mighty little talking.

There is no finer quality in man than the admiration of fine qualities in others.

A peculiarity of humanity is that people are always eager to elucidate things they do not understand, but are very reticent when it comes to explaining things they really know about. When there is anything the matter with your health, all your friends will tell you just what to do, but a physician wants money for his suggestions.

There is a movement to revive the old songs under their original names instead of under new names.

In New York, a pianist drowned in her bath tub, this being the first casualty reported in the spring rush.

Jack Pickford, movie actor, claims he recently saw his wife, Marilyn Miller, and had dinner with her.

And it's spring in Kansas City, where a woman of 59 has had a permanent wave put in her hair.

In Japan they published a novel in 106 volumes, but many of our novels seem much longer.

Washington wants to reduce the size of our money. Already, something has reduced the amount.

A Peoria (Ill.) girl has had three husbands in three months, so she wins the loving cup.

People with gimlet eyes usually are great bores.

Lima Beans says the puzzle that bothers him is how women can listen to a soprano over the radio without knowing how she is dressed.—Toledo Blade.

Patriotism is the ability to believe that one would pay less for one's automobile tires if the rubber monopoly were owned in the United States instead of in England.—Arkansas Gazette.

The term "bacteria" includes a large number of different species or kinds of microscopic single-celled plants.

They appear characteristically as short, straight or spiral, rod-like structures or as small spheres, varying greatly in size as regards both the different species and the individuals of the same species.

The largest bacillus recorded is about 1-509 of an inch long and 1-5009 of an inch wide, while the smallest known form has an average size of about 1-50,000 of an inch by 1-125-990. Some of these organisms are so small, however, that they are invisible even under the highest magnification that we now possess.

Lord Dunsany writes his fantasies and plays with a plain old quill pen.
Any number of authors refuse to exchange their fountain pens and pencils for typewriter.

Hilaire Belloc, we are told, was the very first author to use a typewriter for his work, and received a lot of criticism from authors of the older school who opined that no true artist could dabble with crass machinery.

We rather like this clinging to the old—this gesture of disdain for the new—but it would be interesting to know how much, if any, market existed for the product of these disdain-ful author's pens, if all the world rejected the progress of this modern day.

"We are doing a bigger business now than we were this time last year. In fact our business for 1926 thus far shows an increase over the first five months of 1925."

That was the statement made to the Journal recently by an official of one of the largest retail businesses on the Plains—and it's a good one to hear.

Lubbock need not be surprised at the statement nor is there contained in it one element of doubt.
It is only logical to believe that on each successive year Lubbock will show bigger and better business no matter what parts of the calendar are held up for comparison. If you don't believe it clip out this editorial, save it until June, 1927, bring it to the Journal and we'll prove it to you to your complete satisfaction!

HE'S RIGHT
Rudyard Kipling is an original man.
Further than that he's a great man in his line, which, as we all know, happens to be poetry.
In his poem "If," with which we are all more or less familiar, he has included a line which reads, "Let all men count with you, but none too much."
That advice is golden.
The fact that to "err is human" holds good today, just the same as it did in days gone by.
And those of us in Lubbock who have placed some individual on a pedestal will do well to remember Mr.
Kipling's words of advice.
tourists for their foreign vacations each year, she offers some stuff with a real kick and nonpoison as an inducement.—Florida Times-Union.
Still it would be hard to convince any American who ever has tried to keep warm in a London hotel that the British can't get along without coal.
They always have.—Kansas City Times.
Pennsylvania's new dry head will go after the "big fish," he says which indicates that the minnows will continue unmolested.—Wilmington Evening Star.
As a rule the more a man can afford to be generous, the more of a tightwad he becomes.

With that he reached into his pocket for his ticket. But behold, no matter how much of it he pulled out, always some stayed in. It was like taking hold of the end of a spool of thread.
He kept pulling and pulling and pulling until he had quite ten yards and a half of pink ticket in his hands, with dear knows how much more to come.
Nancy reached into her pocket for her ticket, too, but Nick stopped her.
"You'd better not," he said, "I don't know what to do with all I have now.
It must be made of Grade A Number
One rubber like the streets."
"Silly! Of course I'm not," said a voice suddenly, and to the Twins amusement the ticket grew a head that curled itself around and looked at them with great pink eyes. "If you would just read what it says on me you could see that I am merely doing my duty. Look at the sixth line below the dashes!"
The printing on the ticket seemed to grow bigger all at once like printing tomorrow.

The Twins stood on the corner in Shut-Eye Town for quite a while, watching all the queer people go so stently by.

"No wonder the Fairy Queen said that Inco probably came here," said Nick to Nancy. "An elephant with pink roses all over him isn't half as queer as eggs that bend, and daisies in silk hats, and gentlemen that turn into lobsters and snap their fingers at you."

"I should say not," said Nancy. "I wonder where the Forty Winks went!"
That reminded Nick of the pink tickets. "We'd better be using these," he remarked. "They won't be any good on a page when you hold a magnifying glass over it. The sixth line said,
"This ticket will take the owner to any place in Drowsy Land."
"Well, what of it," said Nick. "What has that got to do with you stretching out so long I can't hold you in my two hands."
"Look," said the ticket. "Let me go, and then see what happens. I can't take you any place, say I, if you're going to hold onto me so tight.
Where should you like to go?"
"Just any place at all," said Nick thoughtlessly, never dreaming what his words meant.
"That's three stations off," said the pink ticket. "Lay me down, on the ground and see what happens."
So Nick let go the ticket, and instantly it spread itself along the ground in a straight line and turned into a railroad track. And Nancy and Nick found themselves in a neat little car, rolling smoothly along on two long black lines that had turned into tracks.

"I see now why they say that tickets take you places," said Nancy. "Isn't this fine!"
Soon Shut-Eye Town was far behind with all its queer people. And the Twins forgot to wonder about the foolish things they had seen. They kept looking to the right and left this way and that for some sign of Inco and Flops. They passed an orchard where dreams were growing and a snore factory, and a yawning cave.
And they also passed a sandy hill marked, "Private! Keep off! Sandman."
"It is," said the ticket. "But here we are. This is your station. It is called Any Place At All! Hop out!" With that it curled itself up and jumped into Nick's pocket.

TECH STUDENTS CAST 'WET' BALLOT IN RECENT ELECTION TO DETERMINE PROHIBITION STATUS AMONG STUDENTS

"Move over, you're wet" is a familiar college expression. And it can be literally said of a majority of students in the political science classes of Dr. Jackson, if one is to judge from the votes cast in a recent election when ballots were cast in these classes. The election was nationwide among colleges, and was sponsored for the purpose of determining the attitude of college students toward prohibition, hoping that the pulse of the nation might be felt in this manner.

Out of 245 votes cast, slightly more than half of them favored the repeal of the Volstead Act entirely, or modification of the prohibition laws, or a least light wines and beer. However, this situation is not amazingly strange inasmuch as a similar situation was found to exist among faculty members of Yale.

The election also had as its purpose the demonstration of the preferential ballot and the results were convincing that the use of this ballot assures minority representation in proportion to the minority vote cast. Nineteen names were submitted along with the amendments, with instructions to vote for seven members of a committee to regulate national prohibition, giving preference down the entire list. Those elected were H. C. Hoover, W. G. McAdoo, Jane Adams, Al Smith, Volstead, Darrow, and vice-president Davies.

Generally speaking, the voting was consistent in naming the several choices. If the voter favored repeal of the prohibition laws, he usually voted for the candidates known to be "wet."

There is no very great surprise that Tech students voted for light wines and beer. That they believe as they voted will be confirmed if one will listen in on a conversation as some of the fellows tell when the next "batch" is coming off, and relate their experiences in getting the proper combination of malt, sugar, etc. It is undoubtedly the greatest topic of conversation on the campus today.

But in warm weather, a young man's fancy lightly turns to thought of bygone days when he gulped down the contents of a bubbling glass without fear of being censured or criticised.

HEMPHILL WINS CHAMPIONSHIPS IN TENNIS SINGLES

In the all-college tennis tournament held this week, Kenneth Hemphill of Littlefield won the singles over a field of seventeen contestants, and is now Tech singles champion for 1926. He will defend his title next year. He played a smashing game all through the matches and won in his superiority in returning, gaining advantage in several of the matches with his service. He was a member of the doubles team which won the Great Plains Meet which was held at Canyon during this term.

Seventeen men opened the tournament and gave the winner a tight race for his title. In the preliminaries, Hemphill won over Webb, 6-2, 6-0. Hitt defeated Painter, 13-11, 6-2. Dow won from Wisdom, 6-1, 6-2. McDonald lost to Grinke, 6-4, 6-4. Boyd defeated Jordan, 6-2, 6-2. Dalton won over Winston, 6-3, 6-4. Dalton defeated Brady, 6-3, 9-7. Lahm smashed Coleman, 6-0, 6-1, and Bond won from Whitlow by default.

In the doubles the finals have not yet been played. Seven teams entered. Lahm and Dow defeated Brady and Jordan, 6-4, 6-4. Grinke and Wisdom defeated Hitt and Pruitt, 6-2, 6-2. Boyd and Hemphill won from Dalton and Cooke, 6-1, 6-2 and Winston and

SENATE TAKES UP FRENCH DEBT FUNDING OFFER

BITTER FIGHT AGAINST RATIFICATION IS IN PROSPECT

WASHINGTON, June 5. (AP)—The $1,547,574,000 French debt funding agreement is now up to the Senate, with a bitter fight against ratification in prospect.

Without waiting for action by the French parliament, the House late yesterday approved the settlement by a vote of 236 to 112. Previously it had refused, 202 to 40, to send it back to the ways and means committee pending action at Paris.

Regarded as one of the administration's pet measures, the bill of ratification is expected in many quarters to add a number of days to the current session of Congress, despite efforts of leaders to expedite adjournment. This and farm relief appear to be the major barriers to the desire of many members who are up for re-election to get home to take personal charge of their campaigns.

Opponents of the agreement fought it vigorously during the two days it was before the House.

As in the House, Senate opponents are expected to base their objections on the liberality of the terms, which spread the payments over 62 years in annual installments graduating upward from $20,000,000 until the full amount, which includes interest, is

Prespects Good For Big Cotton Crop At Slaton

(To The Lubbock Journal)

SLATON, June 5.—The prospects for a bumper cotton crop are better through the Slaton territory than ever before, since cotton has been grown on the Plains, according to the unanimous opinion of farmers who have been interviewed. They say that they have had the best of seasons in the ground before the cotton was planted and that the recent rains, have caused the cotton to come up and start its growth in a very short time. Without another drop of rain from this time until the fall of the year, the cotton crop would be a fairly good one, they say, but with an occasional shower, they will make an enormous amount of cotton.

D. F. Eaton, Lubbock County Agent, was in Slaton today and he affirmed the growers' statements. He said that he had the finest of prospects, and that he expected the greatest cotton crop ever seen on the Plains for this year.

SENATE ASKS HALT IN ACTION OVER DRY ARGUMENT

WASHINGTON, June 5. (AP)—Indefinite postponement of all proposals for modification of the dry laws and for a national prohibition referendum was recommended Friday by the Senate prohibition committee.

This action still is subject to approval by the judiciary committee of which the prohibition committee is a part, but it is expected to concur.

The report of the committee, drawn by Chairman Means, said the eighteenth amendment was ratified according to a proclamation of the Secretary of State and "we believe this amendment a morally right and economically wise."

"The advocates of modification of the present prohibition laws propose to weaken the same. They seek to directly or indirectly authorize the manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages. This is contrary to the spirit and intent of the eighteenth amendment."

The committee's decision did surprise the modificationists. In anticipation of it they already have introduced several of their bills as amendments to the administration measure for lightening enforcement, now on the Senate calendar.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN and FAY MILBURN, to whom a baby girl has just been born, buy a home of their own when the advertising agency, in which John is a partner and copy writer, lands an important contract.

Previous chapters told how John, while Fay was in the hospital, met NELL ORME at a party and was attracted by her beauty and puzzled to hear from PAT FORBES that Nell was having trouble with her husband. Forbes, who has a wife and three children, hints to John that he is dissatisfied with his own marriage.

DR. DICK MENEFFEE, who is John's best friend, gets married to MARGARET WAYNE, and CLARA WAYNE, Margaret's younger sister, runs away and marries CLIFTON LANE, whom John cordially dislikes.

Working late one evening, John encounters ELEANOR MASON, an acquaintance, on his way to dinner, and invites her to come along. FAY learns about it through MRS. HENRY BLODGETT, a neighbor, who had seen John and Eleanor together, and there is a quarrel.

Christmas Eve arrives and John and Fay decorate a little tree for Judith. Both are lonely at the thought of spending Christmas away from their people in Houston.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

(The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XVIII

John took hold of her hand and squeezed it. "Yes," he asked.

"I think I know how you feel," said Fay. "John, do you feel the same way I do—as if you haven't a friend in the world?"

"That's just the way I feel, honey," he answered. "I wonder why it is that Christmas always makes me so lonesome."

"It makes me homesick, John."

"I guess," he said, staring into the distance. "We're all little children inside."

We want the old spirit of Christmas, the carefree, happy spirit. I guess we're still longing for the childhood days, and Santa Claus."

Fay snuggled up closer to him.

"It would be nice if we lived a little closer to our folks. But never mind, John, we have each other, and we love Judith."

"I guess that's plenty, isn't it?" he said, patting her hand.

The next morning they were awake bright and early with Judith, and they hurried downstairs with the baby to let her drink in the wonders of the beautiful little tree.

But if Judith was impressed, she gave little outward sign of it. To her there were many other wonderful things in the world besides Christmas trees, John's rings, and tiny little pieces of lint that occasionally gathered on the rug, and specks of dirt. All these things were something to speculate on and investigate.

She looked unblinkingly at the tree for a minute or two and then turned her head away and grabbed John's hair.

"Well, can you beat that?" he exclaimed. He moved up closer to the tree and held Judith up to it. She reached out a tiny hand and got hold of a piece of tinsel. There was an ominous rattling of fragile ornaments and John quickly unclasped the strong little fingers.

"Of course," he scolded her, "you'd like to get your hands on it and smash things up. Why can't you look at it and be satisfied?"

Judith answered him by kicking violently and squirming.

"Put her down," said Fay. "She doesn't like to be held." And John laid her in her little wheeled crib.

Shortly before noon there was a loud commotion at the front door and John, going to investigate, was greeted by a bombardment of "Merry Christmases."

It was Dick and Margaret Menefee, and Clara Clifton Lane, John noted, was not alone.

Fay kissed Margaret and Clara, and Dick, holding out his own lips mockingly, was surprised to get one himself.

"You're under the mistletoe, Dick," Fay exclaimed, laughing, as young Dr. Menefee reddened in confusion.

John made a bee-line for the spot himself and stood under the mistletoe expectantly. "Here I am, girls," he announced. "Don't crowd me at a time."

Laughing, Clara moved over to him and pressed cool lips to his. Margaret, blushing a little and giggling, followed suit.

"There you are, Dick," said John. "I'm even. My honor has been satisfied."

"Seems to me you still owe me something," retorted Menefee. "You got two for one. However, let it pass."

"Let me have your things," Fay said to the girls, but they protested that they had only a short while to stay.

"Well, we'd better improve each shining minute," said John, or shining minute, then, said John. "I've got a little cheer."

He hustled out to the kitchen and returned a little later with a tray and five cocktails. They helped themselves and Clara, holding up her glass, said, "Well, here's to a short life and a furious one."

Fay, laughing, said, "Clara, you shock me. What's come over you lately?" and John asked, "Where is your hubby, Clara? Was he too proud to come out and call on the lovely Milburns?"

A frown flickered across Clara's face. "Oh," she answered, "I left him in Tulsa. He was too busy to come down and spend the holidays here."

"Anyway," put in Margaret, "it's just as well. His people live there, you know, and he'll spend Christmas at home while Clara's doing the same thing here."

"That's the stuff," said John. "Give 'em a rest from each other," but Margaret switched the topic.

"We're going to move, Fay," she said. "We're leaving our apartment and taking a house. More in keeping with a doctor's dignity, you know," she laughed. "We're moving the first of the year."

John observed drily, "Well, how have things been coming with you and Dick, Margaret, since I put the hindoo curse on you at your wedding?"

"As far as our experience goes," Dick laughed, "it was a charm rather than a curse," and he added, "John, I wish you'd forget that incident about the ring. Nobody remembers it but you."

"Anyway," put in Clara, "we all know how it happened now. An upchuck of mine told us later that he saw the pillow slip in the little page's hands."

"No, no," protested John. "Don't go blaming it on the poor little kid. It was I." Nevertheless, he was pleased and a little relieved.

Dick growled, "Oh, shut up, you blamed old idiot," and doubled his fist threateningly.

"What does that mean?" laughed John in mock fright, "that you want nother drink?" He rustled off to the kitchen again, pattering across the floor in his leather bedroom slippers that were constantly coming off at the heel.

"Hear about Paul Davidson, John?" Dick asked, holding his glass.

"No. What have I been missing?"

"Got pinched the other night for speeding. The cop that stopped him smelled liquor on his breath and charged him with driving while intoxicated. Had to pay a pretty stiff fine. Lucky, I guess, that he didn't get sent to jail."

Margaret spoke up. "He had a girl with him," she said.

"Who?" asked Fay.

"You'd never guess—Eleanor Mason."

Fay shot John a swift look, but he saw it coming and started interested, at his glass.

"Was she—had she been drinking, too?" Fay asked.

"What a useless question—in connection with Eleanor Mason," observed Clara Lane. "Why not ask whether a fish swims?"

"Being a lawyer himself," Dick went on to explain, "Paul got off with a fine and managed to keep the thing out of the papers."

"Poor old Paul," said John, shaking his head. "Always getting his foot in it." He raised his glass and drained it. "Oh, well," he murmured softly, "those who dance have to pay the piper."

After they had gone, Fay gazed wistfully at them out of the window, said, "It's pretty nice to live in the same town with your parents and not to be tied down with a baby when you want to go somewhere."

"Pretty soft," agreed John. "Well, they'll be having babies themselves pretty soon."

"Yes," said Fay, rather hotly, "and letting their parents take care of them when they want to do something."

She got to her feet and left the room in a huff. John could hear her in the kitchen, preparing dinner.

He joined her. "Help you any?" he asked, anxious to restore her good humor. But she paid no attention to his question. Instead, she said, "I suppose you bought Eleanor Mason a drink when you ate with her that evening."

"Fay!" he said sharply, and eyed her reproachfully.

She said nothing, and he continued to gaze at her. Contritely, she moved over to him and kissed him on the forehead. "Tie up the turkey for me," he ordered.

After dinner, which was far from being the gala event they had planned, they took Judith out in her carriage and walked up and down the quiet little street for an hour or more.

Coming up the walk to the house, they were hailed by a voice from a large sedan that was drawing up to a stop.

"It's the Vaughnans," said Fay. "Tell them to come in."

John went down the walk. "Hello, Don," he greeted the man at the wheel. "Hello, Helen. Come on in."

Donald Vaughan, a tall, angular man with blond hair, pulled a vacuum bottle from his overcoat pocket.

"Brought over a little egg-nogg I made myself. Here you are. It's still warm."

"Come on in," invited John. "and we'll drink it."

"My, what a cute baby!" exclaimed Helen Vaughan, standing in front of Judith's carriage. "Hasn't she grown, though?"

Donald leaned over and wagged a finger at Judith. "By golly," he said, "she's getting to be a regular little lady. Here," he handed Judith a little package, and she grabbed it firmly.

"What is it?" asked John, and began to unwrap it. It was a rattle, with a teething ring on its end.

The Vaughnans went in the house and John and Donald spent a merry half hour over the egg-nogg, exchanging good-natured banter.

When they had gone, John said to Fay, "Now there's more or less of a tragedy."

"What do you mean?"

"Well," the Vaughnans haven't any children and, according to Don, they can't have any."

"Why, you never told me that before, John."

"Didn't I," he said carelessly. "Well, I mean to."

"And all this time," she reproved him, "I thought they just didn't want any children."

"Nope. Can't have any. Darn shame too. Don's just beginning to make real money. If anybody ought to have kids it's those two. Both of them just crazy about them."

Hewalked over to Judith, who lay asleep in her crib.

"You're a lot of trouble, Judy," he said, softly, "but I guess you're worth it." He felt Fay's hand on his shoulder.

24 LETTERS ARE GIVEN IN BASE BALL AND TRACK

TOTAL OF 55 LETTERS ARE PRESENTED IN ATHLETICS

At a recent meeting of the Athletic committee, 24 letters were announced to be given to the members of the baseball squad and track team. These are the final letters for the year bringing the total during the first year up to 55. Twenty-three of these were given in football, eight in basket ball, 11 in baseball and 13 in track.

It is the plan of the committee to give letters for other sports next year. Tennis will be included in this and probably wrestling, tumbling and boxing.

Only a few men lettered in baseball because of their scholastic standing. Several good players were out a major part of the season because their grades did not meet the standards set by the committee. Only one man was unable to participate in track because of his scholastic standing.

Out of the fifty-five letters given this year, ten men made two letters each. Nine of these men lettered in football and either baseball or track. The following men earned two letters: Football and track, Carpenter, Reed, Woodward, Wooldridge; Football and basketball, White, Dennison, football and baseball, Nicklaus, Hamilton and Hill, track and basketball, Walker.

No man in school made three letters this year—due to the fact that every sport was overcrowded and conditions kept some of them down. There were one or two men who probably would have made three letters or more had they been in school the entire year or kept their grades above par.

The following men were announced as lettermen in baseball: Curtis, catcher, Amarillo; infielders, Hayden, McKinney, Nicklaus, Amarillo, pitcher, Amarillo, Rigney, Lubbock, Hamilton, ers, Hill, Milford and Walter, pitcher, outfielders, Hardwick, Eufeleo, Oklahoma, Marshall, Lubbock, Blackburn, Shamrock and Watkins, Ralls.

Lubbock Daily Journal

The results from the opening of our new home here, which was advertised to the public exclusively through the columns of your valuable publication, have exceeded our fondest hopes.

I wish to take this opportunity to thank the Journal for the excellent manner in which our formal opening publicity was handled and upon the crowd secured for this occasion.

Following your special section on the West Texas Motor Company in your issue of Sunday, May 23, we have received dozens of letters of commendation on the manner in which this opening was handled. Typical of the letters received is the following from Mr. A. E. Thomas, vice president of the Continental National Bank of Fort Worth:

"I appreciate your sending me the Lubbock Daily Journal giving an extensive write up on your new home and opening, and want to congratulate both yourselves and The Journal on the excellent publicity in that issue for the Hupmobile and the West Texas Motor Co., also yourself and associates. Hoping to see you down this way again soon, and with kindest personal regards and best wishes, I am,

Yours truly, A. E. THOMAS"

We were truly impressed with the results from Journal advertising. Thanking you for your splendid cooperation, I am,

AUTOMOBILE DEALERS MEET MONDAY NIGHT

JOE HILTON, CHRYSLER DEALER WILL BE HOST AT SESSION OF SOUTH PLAINS MOTOR MAGNETSTECH CAFE IS SCENE OF MEETING WHICH OPENS PROMPTLY AT 9 O'CLOCK; SECOND MILE
STONE OF ORGANIZATION LOOMING

The members of the South Plains Automobile Association will be guests of Joe Hilton, of the Joe Hilton Company in regular monthly meeting Monday night June 7, and it was announced here Saturday that the meeting will begin at 9 o'clock at the Tech cafe.

Something different to the usual line of procedure had been planned by Mr. Hilton, but due to unavoidable circumstances, his original plans cannot be carried out, he said Saturday. He lauded the assurance, however, that those who attend the session will be well repaid for their trouble in coming to this meeting, and he urged that every member attend.

Is Successful Organization
The Association, now opening its second year, has done a great deal to establish the automobile industry on the South Plains, and to bring about a closer spirit of fellowship and friendly relations among the dealers. New officers were elected and took over their official places at the last regular meeting, and under the leadership of Walter W. Royalty, of the Royalty Motor Company, who was elected president, the organization the coming year bids fair to far eclipse the good record hung up last year.

There is possibly no other industry in the world that directly affects so many people as does the industry which in this section centers around the automobile. It is the industry of the future, and it is the industry of the present. It is the industry which is the backbone of the South Plains, and it is the industry which is the backbone of the future.

Several matters of business in connection with the future of the association will be up for discussion at the Monday night meeting. It was said Saturday, and every member is urged to be present on time.

LUBBOCK PLANS HARD FIGHT FOR
W. T. C. C. MEETFOUR CORNERED FIGHT TO BE HOTTEST IN HISTORY

AMARILLO, June 5. — Keen competition for the honor of entertaining the 1927 convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce is foreseen during the annual convention here June 21-22-23, according to convention officials. With Wichita Falls, San Antonio and El Paso already committed to a scrap for the privilege, a new hat has been thrown definitely into the ring, making four aspirants in all. Lubbock, home of the Texas Tech, has served notice on convention officials that that city is preparing to come after the 1927 convention with a show that will open the eyes of convention visitors. Committees from the South Plains city are energetically at work upon arrangements for a special train, stunts and other matters pertaining to the visit of the delegation here. The delegation is not only coming after the 1927 meeting, but after the delegation prize also, Lubbock citizens declare.

Abilene is also sending a big delegation. R. W. Haynie, candidate for president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, during 1927, is authority for the statement that this city is sending two of the "most beautiful girls in the world" to represent Abilene as Senora and Senorita in the Spanish Fiesta to be given here during the convention.

San Antonio is not lagging in its preparations for attending the convention. At a recent banquet of the Chamber of Commerce in that city, at which O. C. Goodwin, Manager of the Amarillo Chamber, was the principal speaker, definite decision to attend the convention in a special train was made amid great enthusiasm. The special will not only visit Amarillo but will make a tour of the Panhandle and Plains country in so far as it is possible, while with the delegation will come the famous Boy Scout band of that city.

Stamford is also sending a large delegation while Sweetwater, Snyder, Hamlin and other cities are preparing to send large numbers of their citizens to swell a gathering that already assumes awe inspiring proportions. It is declared. Not only West Texas, but the entire Southwest will gather at the capital of the Panhandle during June 21-22-23. It becomes apparent as the dates for the big gathering draw near.

BILL IS TURNED DOWN

WASHINGTON, June 5. (AP) — The House refused today, 195 to 197 to send the Tamm and Harbois bill back to committee with instructions to eliminate the Illinois river and Cape Cod Canal projects.

Sixty Bees Being Prepared for Banquet

AMARILLO, June 5. — Sixty bees and sixty muttons requiring two carloads of dried oak wood to cook, will be prepared for the giant barbecue that is to be made ready for the thousands of visitors who will be here during the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Convention to be held June 21-22-23.

The barbecue is in charge of a number of local cattlemen who promise one of those old-time western affairs that are so hard to imitate when taken out of true western environment.

Tom Green Bonds To

NEW YORK, June 5. (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court on application of Tom Green County for a mandamus to compel Attorney General Dan Moody to approve a $500,000 county-wide bond issue is expected before the court adjourns June 25 for three months.

Senoritas Named
For Spanish Fiesta

AMARILLO, June 5. — Among those who have already selected Senoritas for the Spanish Fiesta, which will be presented under the direction of Hal C. Worth, premier pageant and fiesta director of the Southwest, are Memphis, San Antonio, Littlefield, Charleston and Fort Worth, while each mail brings an increasing number of announcements that appointments have been made. In all about 100 cities are expected to take part in the Fiesta, it is stated.

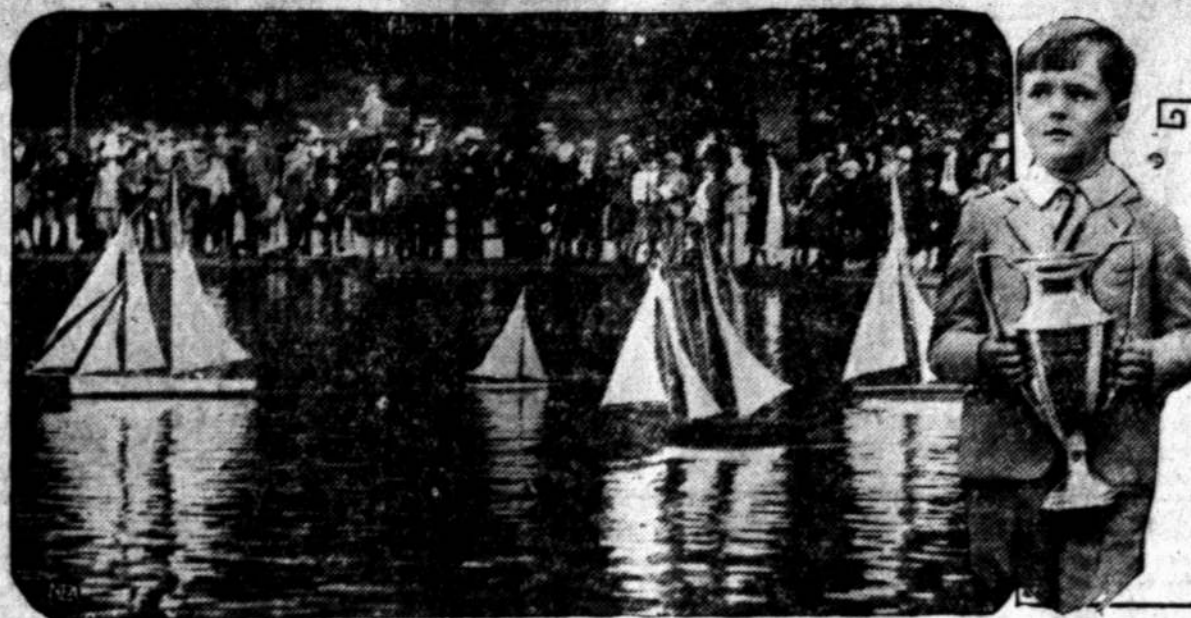

Midland Is Planning
Surprise for Parade

AMARILLO, June 5. — Midland is preparing a surprise stunt for the mammoth delegation parade which will be one of the features of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Convention here during June 21-22-23, according to Paul T. Vickers, who writes Martin Jarrett, chairman of the parade and declares, "This stunt will remain a secret till it is pulled, but it will be there with a punch and will add to the life of the party."

Texas Ruling Goes

Australian Motor Expert Asserts American Light Car Is On Way In Citing Smaller Motors As Needed

(Editor's note—F. Z. Eager, whose statement is printed here is a member of the Motor Traders Association of Queensland and New South Wales and is engaged in the distribution of automobiles for Australia with headquarters in Sydney.)

"Word of the interest being taken in the United States in the European type of small, light car, reached me in Sydney just before I left for the United States a little over a month ago. At that time I learned that the Peugeot Bros. were here and that Citroen of France was also looking over the American market with idea of possible tie-up with American manufacturing companies to secure an outlet for a part of his large production.

Australia Similar to U. S.
"This was interesting in the extreme for Australia faces many of the conditions which face the motoring public in the United States with this exception, we have by no means the fine roads which you have here. The great bulk of importation of cars into Australia is from the United States and American built cars are in the majority in all of our cities. What developments are made here are, for that reason, of great importance to us.

"Such cars as Overland, Ford, Chevrolet, Dodge, Hudson, Willys-Knight and others make up the great proportion of our registrations. We have been closely in touch with the European trend toward smaller cars but have not been in accord with the narrow trends and restricted body room of the average English or French car of small motor dimensions.

"We have liked their speed, for when we get a chance at a good stretch of road we like to travel and road racing is very popular in our country. But we want the room of the American car in which feature, present cheaper cars present very distinct advantages over the much higher priced small car of the European makers.

Want Light Car With Speed
"We have often wondered why your engineers, with their well known tendencies in advanced motor construction, have not developed the light car to incorporate in its design, the high motor speed features, low fuel consumption and good road speed capacities which are possessed by the European small cars. In fact your development in the small car field has not been at all in line with what you have done in your larger cars, as we look at it.

"Flat, of Italy, develops a motor of 95 cubic inch displacement which develops 300 horse-power at 3000 rpm, but the average small car of Europe, of course this is going to the extreme, develops 30 horsepower from a rated capacity of 12 hp. to 15 hp. American small cars do not meet these standards and will not until they have taken on some of the features of European small car motor designs. You will require different lubrication, more efficient

HUPMOBILE SUPREMACY

HUPMOBILE has always been a name to compare with in the automobile world, and has always enjoyed the confidence of the public. Nearly nineteen years of honest standards of manufacture have inspired and retained public esteem.

THE HUPMOBILE STRAIGHT EIGHT was first offered to the public on January 3, 1925, and by the following September its brilliant performance had won for it the unchallenged rank of the largest selling straight eight in the world, which record it still retains.

THE HUPMOBILE SIX announcement late last October resulted in shipments for the following six months of 21,751 cars. This greatly exceeds the previous first six months' sales record for a new automobile.

IN LUBBOCK COUNTY according to list taken from the records of the Tax Collector's office, new car registrations show from the time we delivered our first new Hupmobile Six Sedan on Mar. 9, 1926, to May 25, 1926, as follows:

CHRYSLER USED BY PAPER MAN IN SPEEDY RUN

Get that story?

As Mr. A. Citizen picks up the daily newspaper, and settles back in his easy chair to read the current history of the world, little does he dream of the story behind the story which engages his attention.

Like the famous police who have a reputation for always getting their story whether it be in words or pictures.

The word story can be flashed over the telegraph wires with the speed of light, but pictures are not so easily transported. They must literally be carried from the scene where they are taken to the engraving room of the newspaper in which they appear. The fastest available means of transportation is, of course, engaged for this purpose in order that readers may have the news while it still is news.

The automobile has proved indispensable in such cases and many are the record runs that have been made by newspaper men rushing to deliver pictures before the forms close.

One very interesting run of this kind was made just the other night, when C. J. Burnell, staff photographer of The Tennessean, raced from Louisville to Nashville in a Chrysler "68", carrying pictures of the Derby race to be published in his paper the following morning.

A record run of more than 200 miles, over roads of all kinds, brought the pictures to The Tennessean office shortly after eleven o'clock that evening. There they were quickly developed and turned over to the engraving staff, which rushed them through in time for Mr. A. Citizen to see them in his morning "Tennessean" as he sipped his coffee.

Mr. Burnell, in telling of the race he drove after the Derby race had been run—his race against time—declared that, in spite of heavy rains that had turned some of the Kentucky roads into rivers of mud, he did not stop except for gas.

The Chrysler "68" car which he piloted was one of the new models just announced a few days before by the Chrysler Corporation, but it stood the severe test to which it was subjected and proved itself a worthy member of the famous Chrysler group of six-cylinder cars.

This was no surprise to Mr. Burnell of course, because he had made similar runs in Chrysler cars on previous occasions. Last autumn, for example, he drove from Birmingham, Alabama, to Nashville, a distance of 226 miles, in five hours and twenty-one minutes, to get pictures of the Vanderbilt-Auburn football game to his paper in time for the edition of the following morning.

WILLYS-OVERLAND EARNINGS SET NEW RECORD

Exceeding by more than $100,000 the most optimistic estimate of President John N. Willys, April earnings of Willys-Overland company before taxes amounted to $2,112,187.11, the company's balance sheet announced Thursday, reveals.

This is nearly $1,000,000 more than the first quarter and started the second quarter off on a stride that promises to be the greatest in Willys-Overland history.

Based on his estimate on current sales and production, with last minute reports from dealers as of Thursday, Willys states that earnings for May will exceed $2,500,000.

If June continues this high average or near it, second quarter earnings will exceed $7,000,000 if not close to $8,000,000.

Production of Willys-Knight and Overland six cars for May continues to make new records.

Retail sales of Overland six models as shown by dealer's reports on May 20 exceeds the total sales for the entire month of April.

Willys-Knight production exceeds 400 cars per day. Retail sales continue to exceed production, Willys said.

The unusual showing of the company holds it in the front rank of the industry which was gained last year by a phenomenal come-back in earnings. The introduction of new models this year has enhanced its command of the field, and Willys is confident that the company will hold its leadership during the second half.

Joy and Sorrow Merge AND THE WORLD GOES ON

In New York Each Day

NEW YORK, June 4. (AP)—Life and death, tears and smiles crowd one another in pageantry of the unusual in a great city.

Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus viewing the pulsating life and skyline gorgeousness of Manhattan from the Palisade, spoke of "The most beautiful architectural sight I ever saw." He added that it reminded him of Stockholm. At the same time George Kashoka, tired of big city glitter was attempting suicide by hanging himself from a clothesline 3 stories above the ground. A neighbor spied him, cut the rope and Kashoka fell to the ground and fractured his skull. Back to life again, this time the new life of Mr. and Mrs. James Stillman, just back from Europe from their second honeymoon. They have purchased a $600,000 house with 18 rooms at Seventy-Ninth street and Park avenue for their new home.

Miles out at the other end of the island, that place of quiet death in the midst of the city's turbulent life—old Trinity church is reported threatened with damage because of blasting for skyscrapers and the rumble of traffic on Wall street. Trinity church parish was chartered in 1670 and most of the graves in the quaint church yard bear dates in the 1700's.

Diversified life! While police raid cabarets in the "Roaring Forties" fifty clergymen, attending a church work conference, visit socialist, communist, I. W. W. and anarchist headquarters "to acquire a better understanding of labor and industrial conditions."

AUTOISTS TOLD TO TEST LIGHTS

Headlights Should Be In Good Condition Before Starting On Vacation, Stated

Lubbock motorists should have their headlights for automobiles tested before and after long summer vacation trips, according to C. R. Granberry, engineer, automobile headlights division of the Texas State Highway Department who has written the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, urging that organization to call the people's attention to this small detail in order that lights on Texas highways this summer may be in good condition.

The letter reads: "Every summer a large number of Texas motorists spend their vacations in their cars, traveling over the state and frequently to other states, and they form a large portion of the heavy traffic so in evidence on our principal highways, especially at night.

"We are writing to request you to call the attention of your local motorists to the necessity of having their headlights properly adjusted before starting on cross country trips. Certainly after a long trip they should be inspected and readjusted if necessary. "Such matters need only to be called to the attention of the large majority of motorists, and in this way you can be of service to your local motorists and others in various parts of the state."

Latest Lingerie of Paris

Paris lingerie is perfection. Of beautiful material in subtle shades, always hand made and perfect in line, it is as irresistible and as distinctive as Paris frocks. Here we have two samples. One is a combination outfit of orchid colored crepe, embroidered in white with a tracery of black, and bound with fine net. Perfectly flat knife pleats alternate with plain sections and take care of every bit of necessary fullness. The other is a smoking outfit of novelty silk in shades of blue and white, trimmed with wide ruchings of blue taffeta silk. The loose coat fits over a tailored pajama suit.

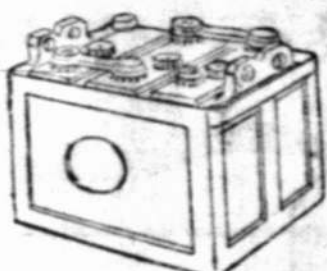

during the summer months when school branch libraries are closed.

The visits of the "circulating branch" are eagerly awaited by hundreds of children and adults in scores of communities near Evanston, according to Miss Ida F. Wright, librarian of Evanston, and is one of the most popular extension services ever inaugurated by the institution. Patrons wait on the streets for the arrival of the car, forming in orderly queues, to make their selection of books from the open shelves of the car. Withdrawal cards are stamped by one of the young men assigned to drive the car and act as librarians en route, and the library then proceeds to its next destination.

For ten weeks during the summer months the Chevrolet is used in this suburban distribution until the school branches open for the winter. It is then returned to headquarters to serve as a utility car for the main library. Evanston is the home of Vice-President Dawes and the location of the Northwestern University.

The Chevrolet has given exceptional mechanical service. Library officials say, and it has never been found nec-

Overwork Causes Tuberculosis, Said

HOUSTON, June 5. (AP)—Overwork, it kept up, will lower bodily resistance and cause development of active tuberculosis. Dr. J. W. Laws of El Paso told a sectional meeting of the State Medical association of Texas here recently. He spoke on the prevention of tuberculosis.

"The prevention of adult tuberculosis lies in preventing the resistance from being lowered," he declared. "Mental stress, sleeping cough, pneumonia, typhoid fever, diabetes and all depressing diseases should be followed with longer periods of rest and keeping the nutrition of the patient up to the highest possible standard, otherwise tuberculosis is apt to follow in the wake of lowered resistance."

Petition Asks That Davidson Quit Race

LAMPASAS, Texas, June 5. (AP)—A petition to Lynah Davidson requesting his withdrawal from the governor's race to assure the victory of Dan Moody was made public here today. It is signed by 75 voters who supported Davidson in his 1924 campaign for Governor, including Mayor W. D. Francis, and prominent business and professional men of Lampasas. "We believe your withdrawal" from the race would secure the overthrow of Ferguson rule as nothing else would," says the petition.

Today's Chrysler "70"—changed in no way except new lower prices which save you $50 to $200—is more than ever the car of public preference.

Long lived; characteristic Chrysler beauty; compact to meet today's traffic needs; roomy for comfort and luxury; easiest to handle on any road; flashing pick-up; 70 miles an hour plus; safe—little wonder that none of its more than hundred thousand of owners who have driven their cars thousands upon thousands of miles, will ever willingly go back to the less modern type of cars.

And now with its savings of $50 to $200, Chrysler "70"—the identical car in every single respect that has won such universal enthusiastic admiration—is beyond all doubt the best motor car investment in its class.

We are eager to demonstrate its outstanding superiorities.

Leaves Fastest Train Far Behind

Leaving the swiftest railroad train far behind and establishing the fastest overland travel record ever accomplished between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City, a Studebaker "Sheriff" automobile recently made the upgrade from the Pacific to the Utah plateau in 17 hours, 17 minutes.

Only the air mail planes, which know hills, no turns, no muddy roads, have beaten that time.

Abb Jenkins of Salt Lake City established the record, which is 8 hours, 29 minutes faster than the previous record and 3 hours, 45 minutes faster than the fastest time made by the two fastest cars on the reverse trip, which has the advantage of being from the plateau down to sea level. The new time is also 8 hours, 8 minutes faster than the fastest railroad schedule.

The car had gone only 1,000 miles before the 765-mile run. Its average

SOONER COTTON MEN IN BATTLE

Oklahomans Protest Against Rates Which Would Hurt Own Concentration

(By the Associated Press)
DALLAS, June 5. (AP) — Oklahoma cotton interests entered the Texas cotton rate hearing Friday with a protest against any rate construction that would force concentration of Oklahoma cotton at points outside that state.

The hearing is an adjourned session of the recent hearings at Galveston and Houston, and involving an application of Galveston and other interests for a change from the present two rate plan to a one-rate plan on cotton shipments for exports. Examiner John Money of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the full personnel of the Texas Railroad Commission, presided.

The Oklahoma testimony was offered by J. M. Locke, cotton merchant of Muskogee, and a director in the Oklahoma State Cotton Exchange. He described a condition of serious injury which he said would befall his state's cotton business if the two-rate plan is continued. The fight centers upon the efforts of certain Houston cotton interests, joined by New Orleans, the Texas farm cotton association and others, to maintain two separate rates on cotton shipped to Houston, an 8 1/2 cent export rate and an 80 local rate.

The Farm Labor Union of America through W. J. Jolly of Aviley View, and J. L. Smithwick of Krum, protested against "any freight rate adjustment that would deprive the organization of the use of present facilities."

Mr. Smithwick said he appeared for the members of the union residing in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Western Louisiana, numbering about 75,000 members and representing about 200,000 bales of cotton a year.

IOWA PRIMARY IS UNDER PROBE OF POSTAL HEADS

WASHINGTON, June 5. (AP) — The heated Iowa primary campaign in which former Senator Brookhart, republican insurgent, is opposing Senator Cummins for re-nomination on the republican ticket, is engaging the attention of the postoffice department and is producing charges and counter-charges which probably will be weighed by the special campaign investigating committee.

The postoffice department is concerned with the insertion of Brookhart literature in franked envelopes with a speech made by Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, opposing the unseating of Brookhart recently in favor of Daniel F. Steck, democrat, which were mailed to Iowa voters. Responsibility for this incident has been denied by Reed, Brookhart and the latter's campaign manager, who has offered to assist in the effort to find out who put the improper matter in the envelopes.

Brookhart, meanwhile, in a message to Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, author of the resolution under which the special investigating committee, of which he is a member, will operate, has requested that it investigate not only the franking charge but inquire into campaign expenditures on behalf of Cummins and others in the primary race. Since the primary takes place Monday and no funds have yet been provided for the investigating committee, however, no inquiry is likely until afterwards.

Hereford Breeder Presents Tech With Purebred Heifers

Dean A. H. Lelidigh of the School of Agriculture and Mr. R. H. Gist of the Department of Animal Husbandry visited Odessa, Texas, last week where they made a selection of two purebred heifers. The animals were presented to the Tech by Mr. John Gist, and were selected from his herd at Odessa. They will be used as foundation animals of the college herd of Hereford cattle, and will also be used in judging cattle of the beef type. The animals will be brought to the college by Mr. Gist next week.

Mr. Gist is one of the prominent breeders of Hereford cattle in Texas, and maintains herds at Odessa, and Midland.

Cattle Breeders Visit Agg School

The School of Agriculture has had several prominent visitors this week. A party composed of Mr. W. B. Mitchell and son of Marfa, Texas, John C. Burns of Fort Worth, T. C. Ivy of Lubbock and J. W. Elliot of Kress visited the College Tuesday and were shown around the campus. The party was very much interested in the equipment of the Department of Animal Husbandry.

Mr. Mitchell and son are representatives of the Highland Hereford Breeders Association. Mr. Burns who was formerly head of the Department of Animal Husbandry of the A. & M. College of Texas, is connected with the American Hereford Breeders Association. Mr. Elliot is a breeder of Shorthorn cattle and came to the Tech with a view to selling the Tech its foundation stock of Shorthorns.

The easiest way of getting into the habit of doing wrong, is to get into the habit of doing nothing.

LA VENTANAS TO BE DISTRIBUTED NEXT MONDAY

YEAR BOOK IS STRIKING VOLUME OF QUALITY AND BEAUTY

The first shipment of La Ventanas, including 500 copies of Tech's first year book, arrived Friday afternoon and will be ready for distribution early Monday, according to Keys and Biggers, managers of the annual. The first copies off the press were received earlier in the week for the approval of the editors.

The year book is a striking volume in beauty and design. It contains 260 pages, 670 individual photos, and approximately 1,000 pieces of photography. It is the history of Tech's first year, told largely by pictures. Every club and organization in the institution is represented, most of the faculty members and more than 600 of the students are photographed within the beautiful cover. There are fifteen pages of color inserts and full-page photos of the Tech beauties. The volume is artistically arranged in sections bearing Spanish titles in keeping with the name of the book.

The quality of the book is striking and the total expense amounts to approximately $5,700. The cost has not been entirely met, but there are 250 of the books for sale at this time and every effort is being made to raise the needed amount. A part of the convocation Saturday morning will be devoted to the annual benefit, at which time the students who have not bought annuals will be appealed to by members of the student body.

During the past several weeks a number of events, social and otherwise, have been sponsored by the annual in an effort to raise funds. Wednesday night of this week was declared Tech night at the Palace Theatre and a part of the proceeds went to the annual benefit. The picture program was accompanied by musical and vocal numbers from a quartet of saxophones and the male quartet, all students.

Thursday night, the management of the year book sponsored a public dance at the Elk's Club hall. Tonight the home-going college dance will be given at Cheri Casa, and a large attendance is expected. It will probably conclude student social activities for the year, inasmuch as finals start Monday.

The only time most folks do any thinking is when there is nobody to talk to.

THREE HOUSTON POLICE FIRED

Employment of Negroes Cause Of Trouble; Chief Says He "Walked With Them"

(By the Associated Press)
HOUSTON, June 5.—Summary dismissal of three policemen Thursday by Chief of Police Tom Goodson because they refused to march up town with two negro officers, has attracted great interest here.

"Hints of another dismissal, perhaps some resignations and charges of 'injustice' and 'politics' were frequently heard today."

J. H. Alford, A. O. Authur, and J. A. Porter, discharged policemen, cannot appeal to a civil service hearing as they have been in the police department only six months.

"After dismissing them, Chief Goodson went into the officers' assembly and told them what he had done."

"I have just fired three men for refusing to walk up the street with a negro," he said. "When I was on a beat 14 years ago, I walked up the street many a time with a negro. I understand that some more of you are objecting to this. If you are, don't talk about it on the outside—just come in and see me."

"The negro policemen were hired Wednesday."

SCOUTS READY TO DO ODD JOBS IN CITY

In an effort of Boy Scout leaders not only to have the organization be of assistance in a civic way, but as citizenship training for individual members of the various troops, what might be termed an employment office has been opened in the headquarters office in the city hall, and an appeal has gone out from the leaders that the citizenship of the city take advantage of the opportunities offered.

Odd jobs about the home, such as mowing the lawn, cutting weeds, running messages, or anything else of this nature that is in the capacity of a boy are things included in the program, and it is pointed out by leaders in the movement that in this manner the employer may be assured that the scout will absolutely have to live contract so far as efficient and diligent performance of the assigned task is concerned.

A Scout, it was said in this connection, is put on his honor before being assigned by officials to the task, and will absolutely carry out his part of the agreement. Leaders also brought out the fact that the annual camp out for the scouts is nearing, and that Scouts are eager to increase as much as possible their financial holdings before this time.

Boys will be available at any time through the headquarters office, and may be reached by telephoning 1104.

NEW PLATING FOR OLDSMOBILE IS PERFECTED

A brilliant blue-white plating that is unaffected by climatic conditions and is practically rust and wear proof has been perfected by Olds Motor Works in cooperation with the General Motors Corporation, and now is being used on all Oldsmobile Six automobiles. This new plating is considered the most forward step in enhancing the appearance of a car and lengthening the life of its beauty since the development of Duco finish, which also was pioneered by General Motors.

Chromid, one of the hardest metals known, is used instead of nickel for plating such parts of Oldsmobiles as radiator shells and caps, bumpers, gear shift levers, crankshafts, caps, instrument board fittings, etc. It coats these parts with a metal covering approximately as hard as a sapphire and one that has high resistance powers against any kind of rust or corrosion.

From the automobile owner's viewpoint, the outstanding advantages of durability; non corrosive qualities; its brighter luster, and the fact that it never requires polishing. The only care required during the life of a car is an occasional washing to remove dust or mud.

The idea of plating with chromid is not new, but heretofore no method has been developed that would lend itself to industrial application. In fact its status was more theoretical than practical until slightly more than a year ago when development work was started by W. M. Phillips, a member of the staff of the works managers committee of the General Motors Corporation. He was assisted by experts of the General Motors Research Laboratories and the Oldsmobile organization, and the experiments were conducted in the Oldsmobile metallurgical laboratory and plating department.

Slaton Preparing To Harvest Its Greatest Table Crop In History As Result Of Diversification Plan

Slaton, June 5.—Slaton is preparing to harvest one of the greatest table crops in the history of the country. Every man, woman and child preached the doctrine of diversification, "grow more gardens, more poultry, and more of every diversified crop for the upkeep and maintenance of home." Now the harvest is here with every living and breathing being every living evidence to prove as a living witness that diversification, to that extent of home supply and demand is the salvation of every home within its midst.

The Commercial Club, of Slaton, together with the farming interests of the country, began early in the season to preach that safe sound doctrine of "grow your living at home." This test and sermon found its way into the hearts and homes of every farmer in Slaton's territory. The fruits and labor of this program is now ready for the harvest.

There are two crops ready and waiting the harvest. These two crops have been and are multiplied in abundance and are now ready, not only for the market, but for the table for the men that preached the sermon and did the work.

It matters but little to the man that has this abundant crop of garden vegetables and those big, fat, luscious yellow-legged fryers as to the market price. Is it not a fact that these products are worth at all times, whether the market is high or low, exactly what you would have to pay for such products in the event that you had neither? Though our big fryers should demand a high market price, they are worth at all times, to the man who has them, exactly what you would have to pay for the choice meats from the markets of our country, which range, at the present time, from thirty-five to sixty cents per pound. This means bacon and ham, and who would compare a dish of fried chicken or a big chicken pie to a skillet of old, fat, bacon, shipped from Chicago?

In the harvesting of such a crop the farming interests of Slaton's trade territory are today in a position to reduce their credit in the purchase of both vegetables and meats, fifty per cent, and thereby making a saving or declaring a dividend of fifty per cent from the commercial crop that will be harvested in the fall. This has not only proved to be one of the greatest and outstanding programs in the history of the country, but the evidence is outstanding that Slaton and the South Plains is and can be made, a diversified farm section to the extent of the maintaining the home.

Value
This program alone represents a gross production in the various communities surrounding Slaton of some fifty thousand frying chickens, allowing the price to be only twenty-five cents per pound, the average weight per fryer, two pounds, this shows a gross earning to the rural districts of twenty-five thousand dollars. This amount will possibly not be put into circulation, but an absolute fact, they will save the purchasing of other meats of like nature in the amount of twenty-five thousand.

The gardens that are today ready for harvesting, and are daily supplying the table, show a gross value to the upkeep and maintenance of home, to the amount of some thirty or forty thousand dollars. So the farming interests surrounding Slaton's trade territory, is now harvesting some sixty or seventy thousand dollars, in gardens and egg production, which will mean that both the farmer and merchant will have this amount of real cash for the exchange in the local market in the harvesting of their heavier or commercial crop.

Big Meetings
This crop not only proves the salvation of the home and country, but goes a long way in maintaining the big meetings during the summer months and we have been made to feel and especially among the old-time shouting Methodists, that our biggest meetings are always held in the heavier poultry section. This being the case, Slaton will enjoy the greatest meetings in the history of our country. Already our local preachers are feeling good, and laying plans for great meetings. Sure, it is a pity after having such a harvest of frying chickens, that other dominations have not cultivated the taste of this delicious dish. Any preacher desiring to hold a meeting, we fully believe that there is no better field for a real success than in the communities surrounding Slaton.

Proof of the Program.
One of the local banks of the city of Slaton makes the statement that up to this time in 1925, there were $150,000.00 loaned for the purchase of feed. Money loaned for feed for the same time of 1926, under a general diversified farm program, shows absolutely none, which shows that the More Feed campaign, that was inaugurated and put over in 1925, has brought increased production or a net saving to the agricultural interests of $150,000.00.

Now with the more general diversified farm program of 1926, which stands at the present time with a strong margin of garden vegetables, poultry and eggs, as an increase of $75,000.00, making a total of $225,000 of added wealth through the co-operative work of an extensive diversified farm program. This program of increased production, today is stimulating every avenue of both commercial and productive life.

There has been placed through this program new life and new blood into every interest and vocation of life, throughout the trade territory. It has awakened the people to that realization of grow your living at home, which guarantees both protection and security.

FIVE LUBBOCK MEN TO ATTEND STATE FIREMEN'S MEET

At least 37 firemen from the 24th state district, of which Lubbock is a part will represent the district at the annual state firemen's convention which convenes next Tuesday at Harlingen for a four day session. It was stated here Saturday by Fire Chief W. E. Twitty, who with four other local firemen, will attend the meeting.

Fifteen towns are under state rules and regulations in this district, with water supply systems and active fire departments, and at least twelve of these towns will have representation at the state sessions, Mr. Twitty said. Others probably may go.

W. C. Bryan, Earl Martin, E. H. White and Lee Price will accompany Mr. Twitty as representatives of the Lubbock department. Delegates from throughout the state will make the trip complimentary of the railroad system of the state, all of which have offered free transportation to official delegates. The Lubbock delegation left here Saturday night via the Santa Fe.

Mother Abandoned These Twins

Little Gloria and Norma Bucco, 4-year-old twins of Newark, N. J., whose mother, Mrs. Antoinette Bucco, was arrested on a charge of abandoning them. The reason, say the police, is that she had four children to care for and funds were short. The twins were found at different points and taken to the children's ward of the city hospital. Their exact similarity of appearance and their joy at meeting identified them as sisters.

After Four Years of Training At Annapolis Lad GETS DIPLOMA BUT IS NOT ALLOWED COMMISSION

Refuses To Take American Allegiance Oaths

(By the Associated Press)
ANAPOLIS, Md., June 5.—As a result of his refusal to take the oath of allegiance to the United States and accept an ensign's commission, Earl B. Zirkle, of Garden City, Kansas, graduated yesterday from the naval academy, Friday was aboard the battleship New York, still a midshipman, and under orders to participate in the annual cruise of the lower classmen. Meanwhile, his 445 classmates, now officers in the navy or marine corps, have scattered about the country on leave of absence before taking up their duties.

Zirkle's refusal of his commission, an act unprecedented in the naval academy's history, was due, he said, to an increasing distaste for naval life. Three times during the past few months he had tendered his resignation from the academy, but all were refused. A navy department ruling precludes resignations during the first term and requires two years' service after graduation. One of these resignations was submitted just prior to the commencement exercises yesterday.

Met with another refusal, Zirkle next

STRAIGHT 8 HUPP Japanese Leader LIKED BY BOTH YOUNG AND OLD

Here's a jaunty sport roadster, all trimmed up pretty, ready to go. It is a Hupmobile straight eight and although its "official" passenger rating is four, you Jack or sister Sue can crowd in the whole gang when they take off for a spin in the country, without any strain to anyone's comfort or good nature, according to Mr. L. E. Davis, Hupmobile representative in this section.

The popularity of the roadster, however, is not limited to the more youthful drivers as might be presumed, continued Mr. Davis. "It appeals as well to middle aged and veteran drivers who want something of the swank and swager that goes with this car. It is the ideal companion for the business man who has a fondness for golf. With this speedy sport car he can be on time for all those important afternoon business appointments that are best kept in the open preferably on a golf course.

"We are very enthusiastic in expressing our praise for this car. Its flare of bright colors and nickel trimmings will command respect whether speeding along the highway or pulling up to the porte-cochere of the most fashionable country club.

It is built in response to the many requests we have had for the powerful straight eight Hupmobile motor in a sport model. Its proved performance in smoothness, power, pickup and speed makes the motor especially suited to withstand the excessive wear and tear that comes to a car of this type.

"Mounted on the 125 inch wheelbase chassis, this car is long and low with a sprightly array of colors and striping to accentuate its sportive lines. The body is finished in two shades of light green with darker green striping and belt line. Standard equipment includes 5 steel wheels and balloon tires and it lists at $2,045. F. O. B. Detroit.

"This car leaves nothing to be desired even by the most fastidious buyer. The list of equipment is especially suited to meet the needs of the sportsman. It includes removable California Khaki top with natural wood bows and nickel plated supporting rods; the car's colorful appearance is further embellished with a generous selection of nickel plating on all lamps, windshield supports and windshield wiper. Adequate carrying space is provided in rumble compartment and the seat cushions may be easily removed if greater space is required. Locker space in the rear deck is also reached by convenient door on the right side."

Japanese Leader Heartily Endorses World News Agency

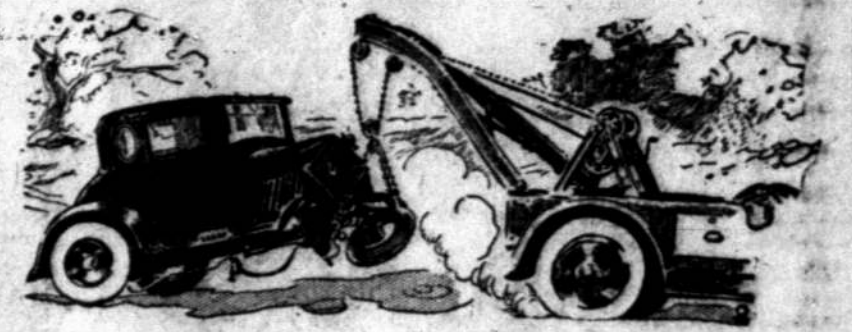

TOKYO, June 5. (AP)—Co-operative enterprise of newspapers in gathering and disseminating unbiased news of the world has received the cordial endorsement of Premier Hattori Wakatsuki of Japan. Speaking at a banquet celebrating the inauguration of the Associated Press of Japan, or "Rengoe" as it is known in Japanese, the Premier referred to the enterprise as deserving praise "not only from the viewpoint of the Japanese nation but also from the international standpoint. Rengoe which came into being last month as successor to the Kokusai News Agency, long the leader in the news association field in Japan, with which were combined other agencies and the leading newspapers of the empire, is patterned after the Associated Press of America, of which it is an ally.

Premier Wakatsuki predicted the new organization would "play a significant part in promoting international understanding."

"The interests of the public," he continued, "can best be served in the news field by a non-profit making organization," which "can best bring to perfection its foreign news service and at the same time maintaining its independence." He referred to the combination as "a splendid demonstration of the spirit of cooperation."

Orpheum Headliners To Open 1926 Redpath Premier Chautauqua Here On Thursday; Program Outstanding

The Alamo Serenaders at Premier Chautauqua Program.

A varied program of music and reading, direct from the footlights of the Orpheum circuit, will open the 1926 Premier circuit of the Redpath-Horner chautauqua here in the personages of members of the Alamo Serenaders, on Thursday afternoon of this week. Lubbock amusement lovers are anxiously awaiting the appearance of the chautauqua which comes heralded as the best program available during the past five years.

The Serenaders are seven in number, four girls and three men, and will afford their hearers of an entire program in the afternoon and the proceeds in the evening. All of them are experienced performers and have already completed two seasons on the Orpheum stage in addition to vaudeville experience. Music of the Spanish type embellished with costumes of old Spain, adds greatly to the bewitching background of their original program.

Everett Kemp Coming
According to Miss Mary Skandlen Skandlen, advance agent, Everett Kemp, an old time favorite to chautauqua fans, will augment the Serenaders' program in the evening and the man with the million dollar smile is better this year than ever before. His reading of "Thank you" has been greeted with unanimous approval in each of the previous appearances of the Premier circuit this year.

The program this year presents all types of entertainment. Miss Skandlen states, including all kinds of music, theatrical productions, lectures and readings. Rev. Walter P. Jennings, pastor of the First Christian church, is president of the chautauqua association here.

After all bills incidental to the chautauqua are paid and the remainder of the receipts are given over to the local organization this money will be applied on the Boy Scout fund, now being raised for the carrying on of boys' work on the Plains. Money available for the scouts, however, will be taken from the total raised in the selling of season tickets, officials pointed out.

Season tickets are now on sale at a number of different places, and will cost but $2.55 each. Individual entrance prices, however, totaled, would amount to $7.25, it was stated. A large attendance is forecast for the program here this year. The tent will be located at the corner of Broadway and Avenue L.

AUSTRALIAN SAYS LIGHT CAR IS NEEDED

coasting and higher speed motors. "The ideal small car for Australia and I shall say this would be true of the ideal small car for this country, would have a wheel base in line with your present light, four-cylinder cars. It would have a standard "54" tread to meet your road requirements and this would permit of your standard body specifications as they relate to interior dimensions.

Lower Bodies Necessary
"If you go in for European speed standards in the light car class, you will have to adopt lower bodies in their overall dimensions but expert fitting of the body to the chassis will permit this and it is not stretching the imagination to believe that you may have cars as low as 5 feet, 8 inches from roof to ground, which would give real stability over the road at good speeds.

"Tire sizes will also come down and I understand that there are certain tire makers in this country who are all ready to go ahead on balloon tires fully three inches less in diameter than your present small balloon sizes. These would aid materially in keeping the body height down. There have been some striking reductions in the height of American built cars during the past two or three years but this has not as yet extended into your light car production. When it comes it will bring with it a pronounced change for the better in appearance.

"It is entirely likely that the entrance of the European type light, low car, adapted to American methods of design and construction and made for use on American roads will sound a field of sales that will be quite different from the field now occupied by your lighter cars.

Be Taken As Second Car.

"If it hits at the same class of buyers that the European light car reaches it will be accepted by your owners of large cars as a second car to use for city driving and for service at country clubs and other runs of this nature. This does not mean that it will not reach your big field of buyers of low priced cars. It will appeal to them for the very features of construction which will make it immediately acceptable to the buyers of higher priced cars.

"To utilize the European principles of design will require the use of the finest materials, the most advanced engineering construction, and the finest mechanical operations for the European small motor is a highly organized and highly efficient power plant. These will mean things not common to your present car of the dimensions which will characterize the new type of low, light, fast motor car. prices around $1200 to $2000 in a hotly competitive field. Here they will have to sell below the $1000 mark but with American manufacturing method it should be comparatively easy for some large, well organized maker to produce an automobile along European lines, adapted to American service, and of the highest quality that can be associated with a motor car, for a price within the three figures limit."

WOLFFARTH TO HAVE COMMUNITY CLUB IN ACTION

TECH COLLEGE MAN IS PRINCIPAL SPEAKER AT ORGANIZATION

Farmers and their families gathered for miles around Friday night when the Wolffarth Community Club was organized at Wolffarth southwest of Lubbock on the Santa Fe railway branch from Lubbock to Seagraves. Enthusiasm ran high among the audience while Dean A. H. Leidich, of the School of Agriculture of the Texas Technological College told of the advantages that an agricultural section can derive from a community club. The club can be used to build up the social life of the community, to schools, and better health through out gain publicity, to promote better the community. Leidich told the audience. All things which will make for the betterment of the community can best be had through cooperation of the section as a body. Leidich said. The community club was urged to get behind the Farm Contest which is being staged by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce. The club should encourage as many Wolffarth farmers to enter the contest in order to gain the publicity and to better farm conditions in the community. Leidich said. The community club working together should send a winning exhibit to the Panhandle South Plains Fair this fall, he stated. First grow the products, then show them and advertise your section was Leidich's advice.

W. A. Fincher, manager of the Whaley Lumber Company at Wolffarth was chairman, opening the meeting with a god talk outlining the needs of such a club in the community. Other local speakers were J. E. Carter, new owner to this section from Honey Grove, W. D. Leard and others.

The school board composed of J. B. Cole, W. A. Fincher, and H. B. Newton were present and reported on the question of a summer session of the school. The gathering voted to have a two month summer session beginning August 2 and then recess two months during the cotton picking season.

Following the business session members of the student body of the school and other local men presented a play entitled "From Pumpkin Ridge" in which W. A. Fincher played a leading part. J. C. Cole, J. E. Carter and H. B.

Newton were appointed as a committee to make nominations for officers of the community club and to draw up by-laws and a constitution for the club and to make their report when the community meets again next Friday evening.

QUEER QUIRKS NATURE

Anyone who has walked by the banks of a brook in spring or summer has seen these shiny black beetles darting swiftly about on the surface of the water, chasing or cutting circles about one another.

Sometimes they crawl out and bask in the sun on sticks or stones, exactly as turtles do. If we disturb them too much they dive beneath the surface, carrying with them bubbles of air held under the tips of their wing-covers for the purpose of breathing while submerged.

Though they seldom are seen to open their wings, they fly well when they desire, first climbing out of the water to get a flying start, and traveling swiftly from one pool to another. The two hinder pairs of legs are developed as short paddles, while the long powerful front pair apparently assists them in their gyrations.

The food of the whirligig consists chiefly of small insects which fall into the water. In the pursuit of these, and probably also in all its activities, it is aided by the peculiar structure of its eyes. These are divided at the water surface into two parts, the lower apparently constructed for use in water, and the upper for air vision, a development which parallels the condition found in the eyes of certain surface swimming fishes.

The eggs of this beetle are deposited on the stems of water plants and the young larvae are long and slender with a many-segmented body, each segment with a pair of legs.

It transforms to the adult state in a paper-like cocoon which it spins on some object outside of the water, and after reposing in this about a month, emerges as an adult.

They winter deep in the water, but as they seem to bask in this wasted time, only a little mild weather will entice them out for a few dances.

If a man were not capable of over-estimating his importance there would be times when he would just feel obliged to go fishing.

AMERICAN JURIST, SUSPECTED AS WAR SPY, IS GIVEN THIRD DEGREE

A SECRET chapter of the war-time spy mania in London is revealed in this dramatic article by an American jurist, Judge Henry Neil, widely known as "the father of mothers' pensions." He titles his manuscript "How Sir Basil Thomson Put Me Through the Third Degree," and tells of the odd climax to his historic campaign for child welfare in Britain, begun at the invitation of Lord Lytton, but which Scotland Yard misinterpreted as a spying maneuver.

By Judge Henry Neil
"Father of Mothers' Pensions"

THE British government has just enacted a mother's pension system, after a strange campaign on behalf of the welfare of fatherless children which began during the war in 1917 and in which I had the privilege of playing an exciting part.

The other day I read two news dispatches which have determined me to reveal now a secret chapter of that campaign: It is an amazing example of the hidebound antagonism of British bureaucracy toward new ideas, and an extraordinary instance of the vagaries of the historic spy mania in London during the war.

One of the recent news dispatches related that under the new mothers' pension system in England, going into effect this year for the first time, 120,000 mothers and 165,000 children would receive public allowances amounting to $15,000,000 a year, in order that their homes might be kept together in the same way that the homes of 130,000 American children have been preserved by mother's pensions in the United States.

Positions Reversed

The second dispatch told how Sir Basil Thomson, internationally famous chief of Scotland Yard, had been trapped by his own police in the fashionable purlieu of Hyde Park and hailed like a common vagrant before a police court magistrate to answer the charge of an act of public indecency in the park.

Sir Basil's photograph was published in the papers beside this news item. When I looked at it, it brought before me a weird recollection of myself, sitting under those keen, relentless eyes, in a secret iron-barred chamber of Scotland Yard, where I was bombarded by the hour with a stinging hail of eternal questions, while two stenographers took down my every word and police officers stood guard at the locked door.

From this photograph, published in 1926, I learned surely for the first time who that mysterious chief inquisitor had been when I was given Scotland Yard's terrible variety of the third degree in 1917. My sole crime had been an honest interest in the health and happiness of England's war orphans.

It all began when Lord Lytton, on behalf of the British State Children's Association, invited me to come to England to describe the mother's pension system, for which I had been one of the successful campaigners in the United States. I sailed from New York eleven days after the United States entered the war, and our ship, having successfully dodged by a few yards more than one U-boat torpedo, reached Liverpool while the English were still rejoicing in the new help that was to come to them from across the Atlantic.

As a public speaker of some experience, I was promptly pounced upon to address large audiences on this subject of America's forthcoming effort. I traveled all over England and Scotland at public expense, and I took every occasion to stir my hearers by word pictures of the sufferings of their destitute children.

Campaign for Children

I told them how, for instance, I had seen famished little ones scavenging the garbage cans in the great market at Covent Garden, London, for a few scraps of delectable food, I added for dramatic contrast that because the region of Covent Garden had been granted by an English king centuries before to a noble family for brave deeds in war the descendants of

Exhausting Efforts

The emotional power of this message that I brought to England from the United States was so great that even in those black days of the war, when in London we were being bombarded almost nightly from the air by Zeppelins and Gothas, people turned out in throngs to mass meetings called to discuss the subject.

Often I spoke several times a day and would return to my hotel in the Strand, late at night, utterly exhausted by the mental and emotional strain of swaying large audiences by the sheer projection of my own innermost feelings. The common British pastime of heckling a public speaker added to the ordeal of these public meetings.

I welcomed the heckling, for it showed I was getting under people's skins, and gave me a chance to fight back in as dramatic fashion as I could. But only those who have gone through similar experiences on a public platform can realize how soul-trying it is to keep always intensely alert to reply instantly to an obstreperous interruption from the audience, and to reply in such a way as invariably to win the audience's sympathy and turn the laugh on the heckler.

Still, the campaign went on with gathering momentum, and many of the most distinguished persons in England became interested and invited me to discuss the mother's pension project at smaller gatherings in their homes.

Met Many Notables

Thus I met Lady Asquith, Lord Rhonda, the then Duchess of Marlborough (formerly Consuelo Vanderbilt), the Duchess of Westminster, Mrs. Lloyd George (wife of the war premier), Sir Thomas Lipton, Sir Hall Caine, George Bernard Shaw, Marie Corelli, Lady Scott (widow of the Antarctic explorer), Lord and Lady Beatty, Sir Robert Hadfield (the munitions maker) and many others of equal note in every walk of life.

I was called upon to speak to peers in the House of Lords, to a banquet of the lord mayor of London and to countless other assemblages in every important city of the United Kingdom, where, even in wartime, lavish entertainment for the visiting American was provided.

Under Surveillance

ALL THIS TIME I WAS BEING SHADOWED BY PLAIN-CLOTHED MEN FROM SCOTLAND YARD.

When I first became aware of the fact that my every move was being watched, I was stunned. Here I was, accepted and encouraged by the leading personages of England. The government itself, through a special fund appropriated by act of Parliament to finance morale propaganda, was defraying the expense of many of my trips.

And yet, when I went about the darkened streets of London, I first felt and then knew that I was being shadowed. The same mysterious figures were always at my heels. And when I sat at tea in the palm room of my hotel, I would feel a cold eye watching me from beside some pillar, or would see a mysterious figure behind one of the palms taking note of all persons with whom I conversed. Returning to my room, I would find it had been surreptitiously searched.

The eerie mystery of all this—the baffling contrast between my public reception and this secret shadowing—got on my nerves, but I tried to conceal my knowledge of what was up and to keep my brain clear for the blow when it should fall.

Meanwhile, among the acquaintances I talked with in the hotel was a certain Danish gentleman—a polished, educated, ingratiating person who had an unaccountable hatred for England. He was forever turning up at my table, or dropping into a chair beside me in the lounge, and recounting the iniquities of British foreign policy, past and present.

He sought my own views on the matter most subtly, trying to find out whether I didn't think the English had been worse in burning Joan of Arc than the Germans had been in shooting Edith Cavell. He declared the British were getting their just deserts from the U-boat blockade, because in Queen Victoria's time they had refused to live up to their guarantee to Denmark and stop the German aggression in Schleswig-Holstein, which had made possible Germany's construction of the Kiel canal, whence the U-boats now were issuing.

The Dane dwelt upon countless cases of British tyranny in Egypt, in India, in Ireland. Sometimes after our talks I would see him busy with pen and paper in writing room.

"My business correspondence is heavy," he told me when I confronted him there one night. But thereafter I was more careful than ever not to agree with his views.

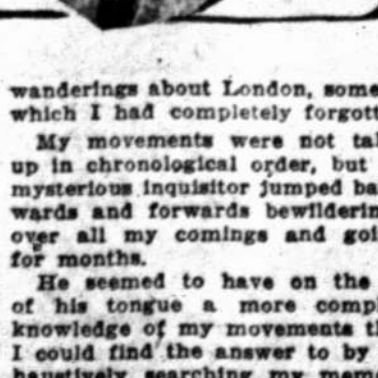

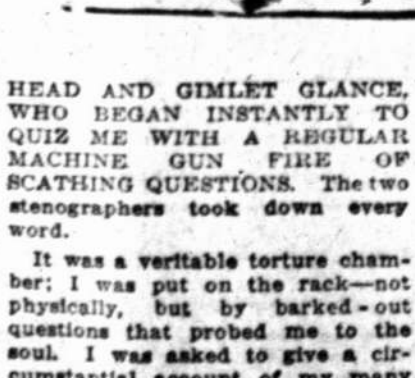

One day I received an invitation from the Foreign Office to visit the British front at a future date. Meanwhile I spoke in Ireland and met members there of all factions, including De Valera and other Sinn Féin leaders. When I returned to London I found a curt note from the Foreign Office saying the invitation to the front had been canceled.

The blow I had been dreading fell shortly thereafter. One day, while I was being entertained at luncheon with a distinguished group of guests at the home of Lord Blythe, the butler came to me quietly and told me that a man at the door wished to see me.

I went into the hall, with a cold premonition in my heart, and found there two men. One of them I recognized as having been frequently on my trail in recent months.

THEY TOLD ME THAT I WAS WANTED AT SCOTLAND YARD, and that I was to get my coat and hat and come along quietly. I was allowed to speak to none of the guests, nor to communicate with any of my friends.

Half an hour later I found myself held incommunicado in a hot, close, dimly lit chamber, behind a barred door, and surrounded by police officers. I WAS GIVEN NO INKLING OF THE NAME OR AUTHORITY OF THE SHARP-EYED, DOMINEERING MAN, WITH BROAD WHITE FORE-

He hardly ever referred to the great dossier of papers that he had before him and in which, I suspected, the detailed reports of my indefatigable shadowers were filed.

Bombarded With Questions

Whenever, through my growing fatigue in this airless chamber under those relentless eyes, I made the slightest slip of memory, I was figuratively caught up and shaken as a terrier shakes a rat.

A few of the questions ran thus:—

"Why are you intimate with Kerensky? Are you a revolutionist, like him? What were you doing at his home near Regent's Park ten days ago?"

"To whom did you report your observations at the French front? How did you impose on the French government to invite you there? Why are you stirring up public discontent by speeches about the Covent Garden tax? How do you explain your interview with De Valera? To whom did you send the report of ordinance secrets you learned while at lunch on Admiral Beatty's flagship, the Lion, in the Firth of Forth?"

I Explain My Actions

I said that Lady Beatty was the daughter of Marshall Field of Chicago, and that Chicago was my home, and that Lady Beatty had been present during that luncheon. "How does it happen that you are frequently in the close vicinity of the points where the air raids do the most horrible damage to life and property?"

I said it was coincidence—I would have preferred to be anywhere else.

"Why are you frequently out in the streets and the slums so late at night?"

I said I did not always sleep well, and that I was intensely interested in all the problems of poverty.

"What is the weight upon your soul that prevents your sleeping well? Who are the foreign women huddled in dark doorways with whom you talk on your solitary excursions?"

I said they were starving, homeless mothers whose troubles I was learning at first hand because would have been saved for useful work in catching real spies.

Released With Apology

As soon as all my purloined papers had been examined and my bona-fide relationships with the actual leaders of Sir Basil Thomson's own government were verified, I was released with an apology.

And then, upon inquiry, I learned the crowning idiocy of the proceeding.

The Dane, representing the Military Intelligence, had been separately on my trail, while Scotland Yard men had also been shadowing me "on their own"—and neither agency seemed aware of what the other was doing!

Just before they arrested me, Scotland Yard had checked up on what the Intelligence people might have against me, and found the complete—and utterly false—report turned in by my friend, the Dane.

Scotland Yard's Error

Thus were two branches of the English secret service brought independently to bear against an American citizen simply because he was interested in the welfare of pauper children. With the inherent stupidity of bureaucrats, of old-fashioned military men and of government police officials, they assumed that because I wanted to abolish child poverty I was a revolutionist, a Sinn Féiner, a Bolshevik—and consequently a German spy!

Scotland Yard was, of course, familiar with my association with the leaders of the English government. It must have assumed that I was duping all those highly placed, intelligent people. I suppose Scotland Yard was afraid that I might stir up a revolution, make myself dictator, confiscate the sacred property of the nobility and capitalists and then surrender abjectly to the Kaiser as Trotsky had done in Russia.

I felt highly honored by their suspicion of my powers; but I have felt much more honored since, when this year I received word that by orderly process of legislation England had finally enacted the mother's pension system for which I was campaigning at the time of my arrest and continued to

"Why do you call so frequently upon George Bernard Shaw?"

Thus the questions were heaped upon me, endlessly, remorselessly, growing harder to answer as they grew siller. And finally, ALL THE REMARKS THAT MY HOTEL ACQUAINTANCE, THE DAPPER DANE, HAD MADE TO ME WERE FLUNG IN MY FACE AS HAVING BEEN MADE BY ME TO HIM!

At last, late at night, utterly drained of the power to think, I was taken back to my hotel, and kept there under surveillance for three days, while all my papers were confiscated and taken off to Scotland Yard.

If Sir Basil Thomson or his agents had only had the sense to break into my trunk months before and read my personal papers as carefully as they had read the other papers that they had found about my room during my absence, the whole farce would have been obviated and a number of good detectives and a lot of valuable police time and energy campaign despite the dark suspicions of Scotland Yard.

Bernard Shaw once told me that the present duty of policemen seemed to be chiefly to prevent starving children from getting food.

In this hitherto undisclosed adventure of mine I had ample confirmation of his statement.

Elements of Danger

The organized defenders of things as they are will go to the most preposterous extremes of police persecution to prevent a liberal new idea from gaining foothold. Sometimes their opposition results merely in silly fiascos like my Scotland Yard experience.

But remember that often blind opposition to the legal repair of social wrongs such as children suffered before the mother's pension system was universally enacted may result actually in arousing the very forces of discontent or of revolution that it is supposed to prevent.

Amazing New Plan to Manufacture Human Life

Left: John F. Mazur, the Ohio Bacteriologist Who Claims He Has Created Living Animal and Plant Life in His Chemical Laboratory.

Revolutionary Claims of an Ohio Scientist Who Says He Can Produce Plants and Animals Artificially.

Left: An Enlarged View of One of the Hundreds of Small Snails that Mr. Mazur Has "Manufactured" from Common Organic Substances.

By FRANK MALOY.

IN a tiny laboratory in Lorain, Ohio, John F. Mazur, a young and obscure bacteriologist, claims to have done what most scientists say cannot be done—created animal and plant life by artificial means.

As proof of his claim he offers several thousand tiny land snails, specimens of an unidentified species of weed and 16 varieties of living cells, all of which he says he has made in his laboratory with chemicals and sunlight.

Mazur asserts that his discoveries prove that life is nothing more than a problem in chemistry and mechanics and that the various forms of plants and animals can be reduced to formulae and created in the laboratory at will. This, he said, would include man himself, and the fantastic drama, "R. U. R.," written by Carol Kapek, in which the plot involved the chemical manufacture of animate beings for commercial purposes, might one day be enacted in real life.

He further contends that his findings destroy the doctrine of evolution by breaking down the basic principle of the theory upon which all modern biology is based—that life can come only from life.

Most scientists when informed of Mazur's claims denounced them as impossible. Prof. Francis H. Herrick, head of the Biology Department of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, and one of the leading scientists of the country, scoffs at the Lorain man's discoveries. "I am convinced," he says, "that any life Mazur has brought forth is the result of contaminated apparatus, as has been the case with many other bacteriologists who thought they had made similar discoveries."

Mazur expresses no surprise at the skeptical attitude of science. "It is no more than I expected," he explains. "I know that I would have scoffed at such claims as mine coming from someone else five years ago. My findings appear as impossible to a biologist trained along traditional lines as perpetual motion to a mechanic."

"My discoveries revive the long dead theory of spontaneous generation, which, if accepted, would scrap many of the traditional tenets of science. Tons of text books would have to be thrown away and scientists unlearn many of the things they have been taught in the last 50 years."

A few biologists and chemists, however, have offered to give Mazur's experiments a test. To these Mazur says he will send several of his formulae for making living cells, together with instructions on how to use them. He refused to give the names of these scientists, however, saying that one was a well-known biologist in a Government laboratory in Virginia and another a biologist employed by the Standard Oil Company.

By spontaneous generation, the Lorain scientist says, he means that present forms of life are not the result of a process of evolution, as modern science contends, but were generated spontaneously out of the earth. Most scientists admit, says Mazur, that in the beginning the first living cell rose spontaneously out of the earth. That happened when the cooling globe had reached a temperature at which chemical and physical conditions were exactly right for the formation of tiny wiggling bits of life in the waters which covered the earth.

Evolutionists say these conditions can never exist again. Mazur says they can. In fact, he contends that they can be produced in the laboratory. Further, he asserts that instead of the first tiny bits of life being the original parents of modern man and present day plants and animals, that, as the earth changed and new chemicals and new physical conditions developed, new forms of life were generated. In other words, he believes that each form of life is the result of some particular combination of chemical and physical conditions in nature. From this point it is just a step to his contention that by duplicating these various combinations in the laboratory any given form of life can be artificially created. It was by reproducing the conditions under which the first snail and the first of various forms of cells came into being that he has been able to create snails and artificial cells, he asserts.

ture. These, if provided with proper food compounds will grow and reproduce. He says he has kept such cells under observation for three days, during which they reproduced themselves by fission division up to 26 generations.

If either sunlight, the piece of iron or ice is absent, the experiment will not be successful, says Mazur. In case different elements are used failure will result or cells of a different nature will be obtained. "Some of the materials used in the penicillium experiment include sodium, tannic acid and ordinary glue."

He states that an accident was responsible for his creation of living cells. "I accidentally obtained cells while analyzing sputum in a disease case in 1920," he relates. "I did not know how they had been produced and it took me a year to find out. Since

For instance, he says he makes penicillium cells—the tiny organisms found on rotten apples and in damp cellars—by boiling 14 elements for three hours and then cooling the mixture on ice in the presence of a piece of cast iron. Sunlight must bathe the container during the cooling process. Mazur claims the penicillium cells are found in crystals precipitated out of the cooling mixthen I have made 15 other varieties, but only recently have I been able to produce snails and plant life."

Mazur says that his discoveries are the result of six years of experiments during which he has lived and worked in every part of the United States.

He believes that if science accepts his discoveries and others go on from where he has left off, the time will come when practically all known and even some unknown forms of life will be "manufactured" in laboratories. It will be even possible to reproduce the animal and plant life of a million years ago and to beat nature to it in producing new plants and animals best fitted for use under the complex conditions of today and tomorrow.

"Do you believe it will ever be possible to create human life?" Mazur was asked.

"Yes," he replied. "If scientists can bring the cells of human life together under proper chemical and mechanical conditions, there is no reason I know of why human life cannot be produced in laboratories."

Mazur's spontaneous generation explanation of the origin of life is not original. As he admits, he has merely revived a theory which became obsolete when Darwin and Huxley advanced the theory of evolution. Anaximenes and Aristotle taught spontaneous generation more than 2,000 years ago. Bacon, Harvey and Von Helmont, noted scientists of several centuries back, were advocates of the theory and experimented endlessly in an effort to prove it.

The creation of snails, a low order of life but much more complicated than ordinary cells, is Mazur's latest achievement. He says he has produced 5,000 of them in three experiments. He has hundreds of the tiny horned creatures in his laboratory where they can be seen crawling around on potted plants upon which they feed. While small, they appear no different from natural snails.

"My snails," states Mazur, "are natural in every respect, even to reproducing themselves. They assimilate food, grow, reproduce and die like all animal life. They can be poisoned and killed in the same manner as ordinary snails."

He explained the steps that led up to his latest discovery. "As an experiment," he said, "I crushed some natural snail eggs and mixed them with calcium crystals, forming an emulsion. Three weeks later, I found living snails in the mixture."

The calcium crystals, which Mazur characterizes as inanimate eggs or groups of cells, are obtained, he says, by boiling chemicals and other substances, including lime, oxalic acid and glue. The crystals are precipitated out of the mixture when cooled.

Following his experiments with the crushed eggs, Mazur tried incubating the crystals for several weeks, inoculating albumin with the incubated crystals and injecting the mixture into soil around a plant in a flower pot. Two months later, the pot was full of baby snails, according to Mazur.

Mazur's experiments with artificial plant life have not been altogether successful. "I have produced an unidentified species of weed," he says, "which grows to a height of a few inches, but dies before reaching maturity and without propagating itself. Probably, I have been trying to make the plant grow in soil under conditions to which it is not suited."

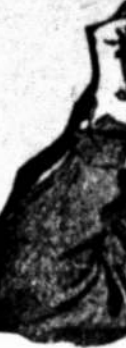

The bacteriologist explains that the process of making the weed is quite complicated and takes several months to complete. He says he obtains a seed by bringing calcium crystals and sawdust together in the presence of other chemicals. He plants the seed in soil.

Mazur does not claim his plant experiment is an example of artificially created life. Instead, he says that he has developed a new form of life from the apparently dead dust of other plants.

Mazur gives every indication of sincerity. He appears to believe absolutely in his contentions. He takes little interest in any subject but his work and cares little for social pleasures.

Chief Albert G. Dreyfous, of the New York Fire Department, Makes Motion Pictures of the City's Conflagrations with His Amateur Camera.

By MAURICE CAMPBELL.

THE rookies of one of New York's crack fire stations found themselves one recent evening with absolutely nothing to do. All the chores incident to the latest big fire three days previously had been done. The brass was polished. The clanging bells glistened.

"I'd just about like to go to a movie," growled one fireman.

"There ain't a chance in the world," snapped back the station chief.

"Who said movies?"

This came from Albert G. Dreyfous, official photographer of the New York Fire Department, who suddenly appeared in the doorway of the station house and set down a small object which resembled a cross between a handbag and medicine kit.

"We did," chorused the firemen. "But we gotta sit here and wait for the fire."

"I'm not going to bring 'em; I've brought 'em," replied Chief Dreyfous, pointing to the little satchel.

Incredibly was suddenly written all over the faces of his audience. But the short of it is that the thing happened. Dreyfous began to undo the fasteners on his little kit. "Remember that Fort Washington fire the other day?" he continued talking as he took out and unfolded one little "gadjet" after another. "Well, some of you guys did some pretty fine work during that fire. Jim, remember the baby you brought down the ladder from the twelfth floor? Thought maybe you'd like to see how you did it."

Chief Dreyfous had now come to his screen, and as he unrolled it the erstwhile incredulity was lost in utter open-mouthed amazement.

Then the firemen rearranged their stools and cracker boxes facing the station house wall where their unexpected visitor already had hung his silver screen. Then he attached the little projector to an electric light plug and focused its lens on the screen. In a trice the firemen began to see themselves bounding down the avenue in speed-crazed fire engines, while traffic scurried to the sidewalk. They saw themselves madly unrolling snake-like coils of hose which a mo-made non-inflammable. With Chief Dreyfous fire movies are a hobby followed wholly on his own hook, just to amuse himself and the firemen.

In fact, Chief Dreyfous is a typical amateur movie fan. He happens to be interested in fires and in fire prevention, though his business is on a quite different line. The same thing is true of thousands of other fans throughout the country.

I could tell you of an editor who has specialized on recording the life of his grandchildren—he wrote a fairy story and cast his seven grandchildren for the characters. I could tell you of engineers, brokers, automobile men, bank presidents, builders, department store magnates and factory foremen who, by the aid of the portable motion picture camera, have lifted the hobby of amateur movies to a place where it may be said to have "arrived."

To public people like Mme. Galli-Curci the little camera that makes movies is a good companion for days of travel. The famous singer brought back lively films she made in Australia. Quite naturally travelers like Capt. John Noel, F.R.G.S., of the British Army, carried a handy movie machine on his Mount Everest expeditions. We do not need to be told that such records give a new "kick" to climbing.

It was announced recently that members of the White House Photographers' Association were invited by Postmaster-General New to see at Edgemoor, a suburb of Washington, motion pictures made by Mrs. New. Mrs. New is regarded as one of the most enthusiastic and expert amateur cinematographers at the national capital. Her specialty is bird life. Other movie amateurs in Washington specialize on a great variety of subjects, but all enjoy "home movies" of children and friends.

"Who's Who" among amateur movie fans would unfold an interesting social list. In New York the family of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., finds spirited entertainment in its little purring camera. Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney must be enrolled. Other amateurs I happen to know of are Laurence H. Armour and John T. McCutcheon, of Chicago; Henry Hornblower, of Boston; Mrs. H. E. Dodge, Jr., of Detroit; W. W. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, and Hiram Percy Maxim, of Hartford, Conn. Thorn Donnelly, football coach, of Lake Forest, Ill., sees in his dramatic associations, and by amateurs who are individually interested in the drama. Even Hollywood might look with respect on some of the effects produced on country lawns. Fortunately sunlight is as generous to the amateur as to the professional. Rooms, simulated by papered screens, can be erected anywhere in the open, with trick windows, etc., and the sunlight is easily enlisted to look like electric light shed from the invisible chandeliers or lamps.

When it comes to the "premiere," projecting machines as portable as the new cameras "shoot" the records upon portable silver screens. This amounts to a "showdown" that is sometimes exciting for both the amateur photographer and his subjects. Often enough there are surprises may sit in unconsciousness of pending jokes. Lucian Bernhard, famous on both sides of the Atlantic for his whimsical silhouettes, recently exhibited at the Art Center in New York a satire on the newest social enthusiasm called "Movies at Home." The home projector is shown with its home audience, the littlest in front.

Just as the amateur awaits prints from negatives made with an ordinary camera, the movie amateur awaits the revelations of the screen. The size of his screen picture is deter-camera work as an amateur means of studying the technique of the football game, but the human phase of his films is doubtless the happiest result of his experiments. Society likes the amateur movie. Obviously the portable camera has added much of merriment to many a country house party. It is unobtrusive in a car on tour. I have known it even to be adjusted to a horse saddle, and home movies are provided with a personal interest not to be rivaled by the most gorgeous of screen spectacles.

Naturally, too, full-fledged amateur plays have been a peculiarly happy result of the development. Many amateur dramas have been worked out on professional lines. The Women's Athletic Club of Evanston, Ill., has a club camera. Club cameras are owned by individuals interested in the drama. Even Hollywood might look with respect on some of the effects produced on country lawns. Fortunately sunlight is as generous to the amateur as to the professional. Rooms, simulated by papered screens, can be erected anywhere in the open, with trick windows, etc., and the sunlight is easily enlisted to look like electric light shed from the invisible chandeliers or lamps.

ment later began shooting streams of gushing water from their nozzles. Jim, with an expression of self-conscious pride, saw himself leaping up a ladder, up and up, through clouds of angry smoke, and appear a few moments later bearing in his arms a bundle wrapped in swaddling clothes.

In short, the rookies relived all the thrills of the Fort Washington fire and had their craving for the movies more than gratified.

Their evening's entertainment was due to Chief Dreyfous's recently developed interest in taking amateur movies. He has been official photographer for the Fire Department for more than thirty years, but his activities until recently have been confined to taking "stills," largely for record purposes.

When professional movie cameras were developed Chief Dreyfous began trying to get motion pictures of fires, but he found they were too heavy to lug up ladders to be of practical use. They couldn't be operated successfully without a tripod, and tripods couldn't be set up on cornices of buildings several stories high. But with the recent appearance of motion picture cameras no larger than an ordinary kodak his problems were solved. He could now hang over dangerous precipices and "shoot" his best action scenes merely by pressing a button to start the little motor running. The bulkiness of cameras has been reduced by the evolution of films only 16 millimeters wide, and there is no danger in projecting them anywhere, because films have been

of Fashions

THE PROBLEM of the Summer coat becomes an uppermost one with the beginning of warm weather. My clients who have acquired a smart cloth coat for street wear during the Spring, or a sports coat if they were provided with the former, usually come in about this time of year for a coat that will serve for the dress affairs of late afternoon and informal evening occasions—and the answer is invariably a silk coat. The smartly simple coat of some lovely silk, whether it be crepe, satin, grosgrain or moire, is the ideal solution of the Summer coat problem. Such a coat can be worn over any soft chiffon or colorful crepe frock. The vogue for flowered chiffon for afternoon is in perfect accord with the silk coat fashion, for any coat of neutral tone, or black or navy, goes well over a gaily-flowered chiffon frock. Many women work out their own ensemble ideas, in choosing a frock and separate coat that harmonize, rather than ordering a frock and coat that are designed to go together. Thus they are able to make more varied combinations. For instance, a flowered chiffon of green and blue on a cream ground may be chosen, with a coat of rather dark blue silk to accent the blue in the flowered pattern. Then the other dress frocks of the wardrobe may be selected with an eye to color harmony, so that all of them will go perfectly under the blue silk coat.

Fashion Forecast

Flowered chiffon handkerchiefs, scarfs or handkerchiefs to match are being "suggested" to wear with simple crepe street costumes is worn

Fifty-sixth St.,
New York

A glance at the coats sketched here will show that smart favor is about equally divided between fur collars and collars of material. Where the latter are used, they invariably take the form of some jaunty little scarf or tied collar, imparting a decided air of youth and gaiety to the costume. Most of my very young clients prefer such collars to the ones of fur. But many women, who realize that nothing is softer or more flattering than a becoming bit of fur, cling to these collars which lend softness to the face and make the skin appear more lovely.

At the upper left, beige crepe makes a simple coat which would be infinitely becoming to any age. It is lined with brown and has a soft jabot that falls at the right side. The little fold of fur which finishes the neckline is of sable fox, matching the lining in color.

Just to the right of this is another youthful coat which illustrates the jaunty-ness of the coat with a scarf collar. The color is gray, the gray with quite a decided beige tint which is the smartest at the moment, and the material is grosgrain silk. The coat is stitched with silver and lined with black satin. The sleeves flare, likewise the narrow scarf, which is finished with two widened ends at the right shoulder.

The favored combination of black satin and ermine is featured in the flared coat sketched second from right. There is a wide band of ermine at the hemline, and the high collar fits close about the neck.

Silk serge in navy is the very smart material employed for the coat at the extreme right. The black satin insets and collar add further distinction to a model which may be worn over practically any type of Summer frock.

These are all coats designed to serve an intermediate use that comes in between the sports coat and the coat for real evening wear. Most of my clients spend their Summers on Long Island or in the mountains, where coats that may be worn over simple chiffon frocks are indispensable on the evenings when formal costumes are not necessary

There are numbers of these in my latest designs, which space does not permit me to show. For instance, I have a most charming sand-colored crepe roma, which is shirred from top to bottom, and is made on perfectly straight lines, with simply a plain scarf of the material, shirred at the ends. Then there is a charming wool crepe, of the new deep wine shade which is favored for Summer. This is untrimmed, save for seams of the material which are spaced at three-inch intervals all over the coat, and curve up at the back to meet in points at the center-back.

Hats are of interest wherever a coat is the garment being selected. Hat types vary more this year than for many seasons past. Before, it was always the small felt which held first place. Now, opinion is more or less divided on the felt. It is still worn everywhere, but the most exclusive milliners are simply leaving felt out of their latest hat showings, and concentrating on grosgrain hats and straw in the lighter weight weaves. The felt, they say, is now settling in the realm of hats for sportswear only, where it really belongs. It is true that some of the small street hats for Summer wear have straw crowns and tiny brims of the finest weight of Summer felt, and these are quite soft and becoming in effect. The larger hat is coming into strong favor, and now all the smart shops are full of quite big hats in hair, straw and ballbunt.

It will be noticed that the smaller hats I am showing with the coats sketched here have rather high crowns, without being too severe. In my opinion, the very high crowns favored by the French are more smart than pretty. This type is not quite suitable to the American woman, who is more often prettier than the Frenchwoman, and less able to wear severe effects, which accentuate smartness at the cost of becomingness.
