Much of Texas may escape scorching summer

NWS says West Texas expected to remain under extreme drought conditions

By Betsy Blaney
Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Spring showers that fell across Texas this year will likely spare the Lone Star State a second straight record-setting summer of heat and drought.

Texas got an estimated 8.5 inches of rain from March through May, more than three times the amount from those months in 2011 when the state endured its driest year on record. Although parts of West Texas are still battling drought, weather officials say this spring has left most of the state in position for lower temperatures and improved rainfall chances compared to last summer.

This would mean more water for thirsty crops, fewer brown lawns and less strain on a power grid that was tested last year by millions of Texans trying to escape record heat waves.

"This is just what Texas needed," National Weather Service meteorologist Victor Murphy said. "The rains will prevent another outlier event from happening again this year."

The weather service predicts a 67 percent chance of near normal to above normal rainfall for June through August. It also predicts average temperatures for the next three months statewide to hover in the low 80s — a significant change from last year when Texas recorded the second hottest summer in U.S. history with an average of 86.7 degrees.

Lack of rainfall in spring 2011 fueled a vicious feedback cycle in which the drought brought blistering heat and the heat perpetuated drought. That led to triple-digit temperatures and a dearth of rain across the state that left even the normally lush green forests of East Texas looking brown.

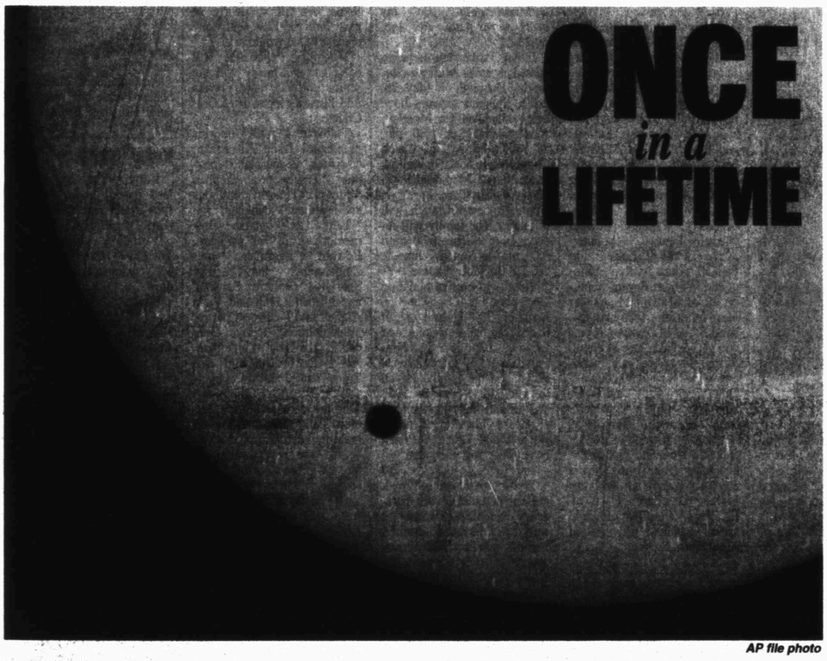

"This year we don't have that link," Murphy said.

He said the probability of an El Nino — a weather phenomenon that brings above normal rainfall — is about 50 percent starting late this summer and continuing into early 2013. It was the villainess La Nina that brought on last year's drought that plagued much of the Southwest, costing Texas' agriculture industry a record $7.6 billion in losses.

Already the spring showers have helped replenish reservoirs in parts of Texas and bring a new sense of optimism to a state that several months ago was locked in one of its worst dry spells in history. Heading into this year the state's 109 largest reservoirs held 61 percent of their storage capacity; by the end of April they were 78 percent full.

"We're pretty happy about it, of course," said Yvonne Dupre, water conservation coordinator in Dallas, where recent rains and conservation have brought many of

This June 8, 2004, file photo shows the transit of Venus, which occurs when the planet Venus passes between the Earth and the sun, pictured in Hong Kong. Venus will cross the face of the sun Tuesday, a sight that will be visible from parts of Earth. This is the last transit for more than 100 years.

Rare view of Venus happening Tuesday

It's rare to have two solar events so close together, but officials say that Tuesday's event will be even rarer than the recent solar eclipse.

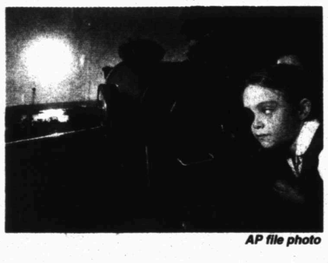

At 5:05 p.m. Tuesday, the planet Venus will pass over the face of the sun and appear as a black dot moving across the sun for almost seven hours. The last transit was in 2004; it won't occur again until 2117.

"It's a much more rare event than the solar eclipses and most folks might not get to see it again for the rest of their life," said Andrew Kerr, Blakemore Planetarium director.

The planetarium, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., will host a viewing party beginning at 4 p.m. Tuesday for those interested in the transit of Venus event.

Kerr said because of the overwhelming response the planetarium received on May 20 for the annular solar eclipse — officials estimated nearly 1,000 people attended that watch party — the planetarium has purchased 500 pairs

Kids First seeks summer volunteers

By Kathleen Petty
Staff Writer

Centers for Children and Families seeks volunteers willing to provide non-custodial parents the ability to continue fostering relationships with their kids.

Through its Kids First program, Centers uses staff and volunteers to create environments for supervised visitation that allow parents who don't have custody rights to still spend time with their children.

"The sessions are provided for the children. No matter what a parent has done, that person is still somebody's mom or dad," said Carol Taylor, parent education director who runs the Kids First program. "An approved volunteer observer must be present for the child to be able to see their non-custodial parent."

Once enrolled in the program, parents can spend Thursday nights or Saturday mornings talking, playing games, doing arts and crafts or participating in some other activity with their children. Kids First also provides exchange services for parents with shared custody. A mom or dad can drop off their child, and then Kids First volunteers will ensure they're safely picked up by the other parent.

Each Midland family is assigned a classroom at Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, and a volunteer is tasked with observing the group. Visits also occur in Odessa.

Volunteers are required to make the visits possible.

Volunteer coordinator Fran Billingsley said the court system continues to send Centers new

MIDLAND 101

Downtown building once featured hospital

The Scharbauers and Hogans received most of the press for their foresight in early 20th century Midland, but there was another man whose accomplishments also played an important role in the development of downtown, as well as the frontier of medicine in the Tall City: Dr. John B. Thomas.

Thomas came to Midland in 1905 and brought with him a hand-cranked X-ray machine. When he arrived, he immediately saw there was an inadequate number of beds for the sick and infirm. Partnering with Clarence Scharbauer in 1919, Thomas bought the Llano Hotel and located a hospital wing on the second floor. Later, in the 1920s, Thomas built the six-floor Thomas Building, which still stands today at Loraine Street and Missouri Avenue, across from the DoubleTree by Hilton.

On the top floor of the Thomas Building was a 25-bed hospital; the other floors, Thomas said in 1928, had been leased — "every square inch" — by oil companies.

In the history books, the Thomas Building may stand in the shadow of the Hogan Building, and it may have been dwarfed by the huge Scharbauer Hotel across the street, but it can boast something the other two cannot. West Texas historian Gus

Albert Joseph "Al" Brown

Albert Joseph "Al" Brown, departed this life on May 24, 2012, at his home at Primrose Retirement Community in Wasilla, Alaska. He was 87, and is survived by his wife of 65 years, Peggy; son, Mike Brown of Montrose, Colorado; and daughter, Kelley Jacobson of Anchorage. He was the proud grandfather of Zach Brown of Anchorage and Meredith Brown of Denver, Colorado. The youngest of eleven children, he was preceded in death by his parents, Anton and Anna Brown, as well as his ten brothers and sisters.

Al was born on the family farm near Rhineland, in Knox County, Texas, on July 21, 1924, and graduated from high school there in 1942. Upon graduation, he enlisted in the Army Air Corps in 1943, underwent pilot training, and served in various capacities stateside until his discharge in 1946. Following his years in the service, Al married his lifelong love, Peggy Norris of Goree, Texas, in June 1946. They would remain married until his death.

In 1949, Al entered Tulsa University in Oklahoma and graduated Summa cum Laude with a degree in Petroleum Engineering in early 1953. He then began a career with The Atlantic Refining Company, which would later become ARCO, that would last for the next 33 years. He spent many years in the Permian Basin area of West Texas, before moving to a position in senior management in Midland, Texas, and finally to Alaska in 1975, at the start up of ARCO's Prudhoe Bay project. After eventually becoming Senior Production Manager Prudhoe, he returned to the Permian Basin to finish his career as Operations Manager of the Permian District in Midland.

He and Peggy retired from the oil industry in 1986 and raised cattle on a small ranch at Melvin, Texas, before moving to San Angelo in 1999. They resided there until their recent move to Wasilla. During his life, Al enjoyed many sporting activities such as bird hunting, fishing, and golf. He was a civic minded individual as well, and served as a Director of the Permian Basin Oil Show in Odessa, Texas, and Brady Texas Hospital. During his years in Andrews, Texas, he was quite proud to have been a member of the Mesquite Burners, a local organization providing catering of Texas style outdoor cooking.

Al's greatest pleasure was spending time with his family and he especially enjoyed family gatherings with his wife, children, and grandchildren all in attendance. Al was a "big brother" to his sister-in-laws, Lynda Miller and Barbara Hogard, having taught them both to drive. He also spent many happy times teasing his mother-in-law, Gloria "Mimi" and making her pots of chili. Al was a loving husband and father and his family and friends will miss him greatly.

A brief funeral service will be held at 1:00 p.m., on Tuesday, June 5, 2012, at Ellis Funeral Chapel in Midland, Texas. The service will be preceded by a short visitation beginning at 12:00 noon. Internment will follow the service at Resthaven Memorial Park in Midland.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorials be made to Mat-Su Regional Medical Center Home Health and Hospice at 950 East Bogard, Wasilla, Alaska 99654.

Betty Whitmire Sumner

Betty Lou Whitmire Sumner was born July 28, 1939, in Midland to Harwell and Avalyn Whitmire. A third generation Midlander, her grandparents were early Midland County settlers M. W. and Mattie May Shelton Whitmire and Joseph A. and Lillis Elliott Pogue. Until the age of three, Betty's family lived on a farm at the site of the former Manning's Nursery on Golf Course Road; they then moved to the E. J. Neathery Ranch in Ector County. She graduated from Odessa High School in 1956 and from Rice University in 1960 with a degree in Economics and Business Administration. She taught elementary school in Kermit and Midland and was a secretary at The Western Company.

On April 20, 1963, she married William Ulric Sumner who grew up in Hillsboro, Texas.

She became a stay-at-home mom, combining that with a career as a community volunteer, serving on and leading numerous community boards running the gamut from fine arts to education to health to city government. Included were City of Midland Planning and Zoning Commission, the PTA, First United Methodist Church, the United Way, Midland Memorial Foundation and Trinity School. She served as President of the Junior League of Midland, Chairman of the AJL Area V Council, Chairman of the Midland Hospital Board of Trustees, Hospice Midland and the Aphasia Center of West Texas.

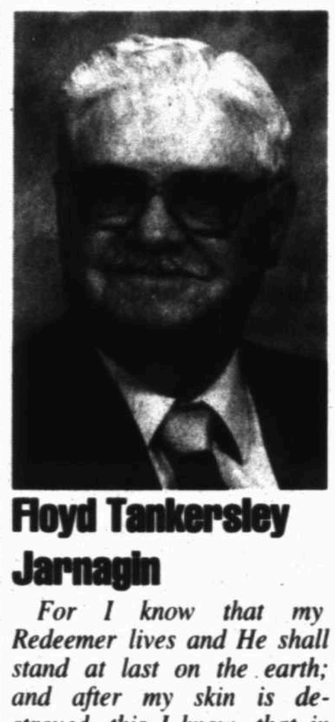

She died June 1, 2012, in Midland following a lengthy illness. She was preceded in death by her parents Harwell Callaway Whitmire and Lura Avalyn Pogue Whitmire and her brothers Col. Jack Norman Whitmire and John Perry Whitmire.

Survivors include her husband William U. Sumner of Midland, her daughter Sara Sumner Davidson of The Woodlands; her daughter Nancy Sumner Pannell and husband Jim of Midland; her son John Whitmire Sumner and wife Paige of Midland; her grandchildren Cutler William Davidson and Peter Walker Davidson, both of The Woodlands; James Callaway Pannell, Rachel Claire Pannell, Sumner Michael Pannell, Luke Elliott Pannell, Clara Avalyn Sumner and William Bryant Sumner, all of Midland; her sister Mary Whitmire Fish and husband Steve of Tempe, Arizona; Al Spinks of Midland, Texas; six nieces and nephews and several cousins. Other survivors are her beloved Lunch Bunch: Suzy Boldrick, Sara Fry, Barbara Jowell, Louan Rogers, Donnette Schwisow and Mary Jane Young. She is also survived by her honorary brother Dr. Larry Price of El Paso and her French sister, Fanchon Euverte of Kerarfourn, France.

A memorial service has been set for 12:00 p.m. on Wednesday, June 6, 2012 at First United Methodist Church in Midland with Dr. Tim Walker officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. Condolences may be offered at www.ellisfunerals.com.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorials may be directed to one of the organizations which Betty served, or to a charity of one's choice.

Floyd Tankersley Jarnagin

For I know that my Redeemer lives and He shall stand at last on the earth; and after my skin is destroyed, this I know, that in my flesh I shall see God whom I shall see for myself, and my eyes shall behold, and not another. How my heart yearns within me! Job 19:25-27

Floyd Tankersley Jarnagin passed away at Midland Memorial Hospital on May 30, 2012. Funeral services have been scheduled for Monday, June 4, 2012 at 1:00 pm at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Chapel with burial to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park. Pastor Robert Pase, Pastor of Grace Lutheran Church will officiate. The family will receive friends from 6:00 until 8:00 pm on Sunday, June 3, 2012 at the funeral home.

Floyd was born at home on December 14, 1919 in Lockney, TX. He was one of 8 children born to John and Olivette (Garnie) Jarnagin. Floyd was the sole survivor. Floyd and the family moved to Midland, Texas in 1968 and established membership at Grace Lutheran Church. He attended Grace, the best he could, for the next 44 years.

Words to describe Floyd: golfer, auditor, card shark, artist, veteran, prisoner of war, hero, husband, brother, friend, grand and great-grandfather, loyal, caring and devoted. However, mostly, Floyd was a servant of the Lord and our Dad.

Floyd served in the 103rd infantry division as Staff Sergeant during WWII and was a prisoner of war. God's grace not only protected Floyd during this terrifying and trying time, but also gave him many years to serve Him and accumulate precious memories.

Floyd's greatest joys in life, other than family, were to reunite with Charles Murray, a fellow WWII veteran who was captured with Dad by the Germans. They finally were reunited at the WWII dedication ceremony in Washington, DC. Dad said Charles was as much a brother to him as his blood brothers. Floyd's other biggest joys he carried through many, many years of his life were: meeting fellow WWII POW's, getting the honor to shake the hand of any military person he met and to tell them thank you for their service, golf, playing cards with the Hogan Park Senior golfers, Grace Lutheran's Senior bible study group led by Pastor Pase (who Dad thought was very knowledgeable), and the unimaginable bond called friendship that developed out of these.

Dad so wanted to get well to accomplish two more things; to study and understand Daniel, Chapter 10 with Pastor Pase, and to beat all the guys in one more card game. Dad knows all about Daniel now and as far as the card game goes, men he loved you all so dearly so play one for Dad (but don't cheat, as Dad would say).

Honorary Pallbearers will be, Charles Murray and the senior golfers / card players /old farts at Hogan Park Golf Course.

Pallbearers will be his grandsons, Jason Zingerman, Christian Zingerman, Jonathan Zingerman, Stephen Simmons, Timothy Simmons and Matthew Vatankhah.

Left to cherish his memories are his children, Edward Zingerman, James Zingerman and wife Sharlotte, Valerie Schlagal and husband John and Vicki Aupied and husband Charles; grandchildren, Robin Gonzales, Lyndsey Zingerman, Jason Zingerman, Christian Zingerman, Jonathan Zingerman, Stephen Simmons, Timothy Simmons and Matthew Vatankhah; and twelve great-grandchildren.

Dad, we never wanted to let you go and our hearts are so heavy, but we knew you were growing tired. You were the BEST Dad ever. Now, faithful servant, you are finally resting with the Lord. We love you Dad and we know we will see you again because it was you and Mom that taught us about Christ and the way to Heaven. Thanks Dad.

The family request that memorials be directed to Grace Lutheran Church Building Fund, 3000 W Golf Course, Midland, Texas 79703; American Ex-Prisoners of War Memorial Contribution, 3201 E Pioneer Parkway, Suite 40, Arlington, Texas 76010-5396 or a charity of your choice.

Actor, 'Family Feud' TV host Richard Dawson dies at 79

He was 79.

NEW YORK — Richard Dawson, the wisecracking British entertainer who was among the schemers in the 1960s sitcom "Hogan's Heroes" and a decade later began kissing thousands of female contestants as host of the game show "Family Feud" has died. He was 79.

Dawson, also known to TV fans as the Cockney POW Cpl. Peter Newkirk on "Hogan's Heroes," died Saturday night from complications related to esophageal cancer at Ronald Reagan UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles, his son Gary said.

The game show, which initially ran from 1976 to 1985, pitted families who tried to guess the most popular answers to poll questions such as "What do people give up when they go on a diet?"

He made his hearty, soaring delivery of the phrase "Survey says..." a national catchphrase among viewers.

Dawson won a daytime Emmy Award in 1978 as best game show host. Tom Shales of The Washington Post called him "the fastest, brightest and most beguilingly caustic interlocutor since the late great Groucho bantered and parried on 'You Bet Your Life.'" The show was so popular it was released as both daytime and syndicated evening versions.

His swaggering, randy style (and British accent) set him apart from other TV quizmasters. He was known for kissing each female contestant, and at the time the show bowed out in 1985, executive producer Howard Felsher estimated that Dawson had kissed "somewhere in the vicinity of 20,000."

"I kissed them for luck and love, that's all," Dawson said at the time.

One of them he kissed was Gretchen Johnson, a young contestant who appeared with members of her family in 1981. After a decade together, she and Dawson wed in 1991. They had a daughter, Shannon.

Dawson reprised his game show character in a much darker mood in the 1987 Arnold Schwarzenegger film "The Running Man," playing the host of a deadly TV show set in a totalitarian future, where convicts try to escape as their executioners stalk them. "Saturday Night Live" mocked him in the 1970s, with Bill Murray portraying him as leering and nasty, even slapping one contestant (John Belushi) for getting too fresh.

The British-born actor already had gained fame as the fast-talking Newkirk in "Hogan's Heroes," the CBS comedy that starred Bob Crane and mined laughs from a Nazi POW camp whose prisoners hoodwink their captors and run the place themselves.

Despite its unlikely premise, the show made the ratings top 10 in its first season, 1965-66, and ran until 1971.

"We ran six years," Dawson once quipped, "a year longer than Hitler."

Both "Hogan's Heroes" and "Family Feud" have had a second life in recent years, the former on DVD reissues and the latter on GSN, formerly known as the Game Show Network.

On Dawson's last "Family Feud" in 1985, the studio audience honored him with a standing ovation, and he responded: "Please sit down. I have to do at least 30 minutes of fun and laughter and you make me want to cry."

"I've had the most incredible luck in my career," he told viewers, adding, "I never dreamed I would have a job in which so many people could touch me and I could touch them." That triggered an unexpected laugh.

Producers brought out "The New Family Feud," starring comedian Ray Combs, in 1988. Six years later, Dawson replaced Combs at the helm, but that lasted only one season. Steve Harvey is the current host.

Dawson was born Colin Lionel Emm in 1932 in Gosport, England. When he was 14 he joined the Merchant Marines, serving three years.

He first got into show business as a stand-up comedian, playing clubs in London's West End including the legendary Stork Room. It was there, in the late 1950s, he met blond bombshell Diana Dors, the film star who became known as Britain's answer to Marilyn Monroe. They married in 1959 and divorced in the late 1960s.

Dawson landed roles in U.S. comedy and variety shows in the early 1960s, including "The Steve Allen Show" and "The Dick Van Dyke Show." Then his performance as a military prisoner in the 1965 film "King Rat" led to his being cast in "Hogan's Heroes," which truly made him a star to American audiences.

After that, he was a regular on "Rowan & Martin's Laugh-In" and "The New Dick Van Dyke Show."

Meanwhile, he became a frequent celebrity contestant on game shows, including both daytime and prime-time versions of "The Match Game."

While still a panelist on "The Match Game," he began hosting "Family Feud," where his popularity grew to such levels that he was mentioned as a frontrunner to win the "Tonight Show" host chair to succeed Johnny Carson, who at the time was considering retirement. Though Carson stayed put, Dawson made appearances as a guest host.

Dawson is survived by his widow, Gretchen, their daughter Shannon, two sons, Mark and Gary, from his first marriage, and four grandchildren.

'Snow White' fairest of all at box office with $56.3M

"Snow White & the Huntsman" turned out to be a fairer box-office beauty than Hollywood anticipated.

According to studio estimates Sunday, Universal Pictures' action yarn inspired by the fairy-tale princess debuted strongly at No. 1 with $56.3 million domestically. That's about $20 million higher than industry expectations.

Without the built-in business that generally goes with a sequel, "Snow White" was a question mark as a draw for young males who typically make up most of the action crowd. The movie wound up drawing a fairly even audience, with female fans accounting for 53 percent of viewers.

"Snow White" bumped Sony's "Men in Black 3" from the top spot and into second-place with $29.3 million. The Will Smith-Tommy Lee Jones sequel raised its domestic total to $112.3 million after two weekends and added $78.6 million overseas for an international take of $274.6 million and a worldwide gross of $386.9 million.

Disney's superhero sensation "The Avengers" remained strong at No. 3 with $20.3 million, lifting its domestic total to $552.7 million. "The Avengers" climbed past "The Dark Knight" at $533.3 million to become No. 3 all-time on the domestic revenue chart, behind "Avatar" at $760.5 million and "Titanic" at $658.5 million.

Police: Bank robber had to be cut from air duct

OAK LAWN — A wig-wearing man broke into a suburban Chicago bank vault and nearly made off with $100,000 but got stuck in an air duct and had to be cut out hours later, authorities said Sunday.

Charles Estell, 38, was found early Sunday hiding in an air duct in an office next to the bank, according to Oak Lawn police spokesman Michael Kaufmann.

The Chicago man had allegedly robbed the suburban bank Saturday afternoon, and pointed a gun at bank employees who confronted him in the vault, according to the FBI.

"I don't want to kill or hurt you," Estell said, according to the criminal complaint. "I just want the money."

He allegedly stuffed $100,000 in a backpack and fled. Employees told authorities it appeared he escaped through the ceiling.

Authorities spent hours searching for him and located him around 1 a.m. Sunday. But before they could cut him loose from the air duct, they had to remove a wig of long, beaded dreadlocks he was wearing.

According to the criminal complaint, Estell told investigators that he got into the vault through the ceiling.

Estell was charged Sunday with one felony count of bank robbery and could face up to 20 years in prison. He has not entered a plea, and is due back in court Tuesday. It wasn't immediately clear if he had a lawyer. A phone message left Sunday at a number listed as his wasn't immediately returned.

Zimmerman back in jail, 2 days after bond revoked

George Zimmerman, the former neighborhood watch volunteer charged with murder in the killing of Trayvon Martin, surrendered to police Sunday and was booked into a central Florida jail two days after his bond was revoked.

Zimmerman's legal team said in a tweet Sunday afternoon that he was in police custody. Circuit Judge Kenneth Lester revoked Zimmerman's bond on Friday, saying the defendant and his wife had lied to the court in April about their finances so he could obtain a lower bond.

About 40 minutes before the 2:30 p.m. Sunday deadline to surrender, the Seminole County jail website listed Zimmerman as an inmate. He was being held without bail and had $500 in his jail account, the website showed.

Seminole County Sheriff Donald Eslinger said Zimmerman turned himself in to two sheriff's office employees around 1:25 p.m. near the jail, and was then driven there. Zimmerman arrived in a white minivan and did not respond to questions from reporters as he walked inside, handcuffed and wearing blue jeans, sneakers and a button-down shirt.

Evacuation order to be lifted in ghost town

Residents and business owners will be allowed to return to the small privately run ghost town of Mogollon on Monday as fire crews battling the largest wildfire in New Mexico's recorded history continued to make progress.

The town was evacuated on May 26 as extreme wind fueled the Whitewater-Baldy Complex fire, now at 377 square miles.

The Catron County Sheriff's Office decided to lift the evacuation order on Monday because crews were able to build some containment lines on the fire's western flank, Tara Ross, a spokeswoman for crews fighting the fire, said Sunday.

The ghost town will open to the public again on Wednesday.

Ross said that milder weather on Sunday and in upcoming days should allow firefighters to increase containment.

"It isn't getting any worse at this point," Ross said. "The weather's kind of keeping it in check.

The community of Willow Creek on the fire's northern flank remained evacuated because Ross said containment lines in the area weren't as strong.

Although the more than 1,200 firefighters on the blaze were making progress, the fire remained 17 percent contained Sunday, and there is no projection for when it may be fully under control.

The Whitewater-Baldy fire has destroyed a dozen cabins while burning in the Gila National Forest. A pair of lightning-sparked fires grew together to form the massive blaze.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is monitoring two packs of endangered Mexican gray wolves that are situated to the north and east of the fire.

After gory incidents, online 'zombie' talk grows

By Vicki Smith and Tamara Lush
Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — First came Miami: the case of a naked man eating most of another man's face. Then Maryland, a college student telling police he killed a man, then ate his heart and part of his brain.

It was different in New Jersey, where a man stabbed himself 50 times and threw bits of his own intestines at police. They pepper-sprayed him, but he was not easily subdued.

He was, people started saying, acting like a zombie. And the whole discussion just kept growing, becoming a topic that the Internet couldn't seem to stop talking about.

The actual incidents are horrifying — and, if how people are talking about them is any indication, fascinating. In an America where zombie imagery is used to peddle everything from tools and weapons to garden gnomes, they all but beg the comparison.

Violence, we're used to. Cannibalism and people who should fall down but don't? That feels like something else entirely.

So many strange things have made headlines in recent days that The Daily Beast assembled a Google Map tracking "instances that may be the precursor to a zombie apocalypse." And the federal agency that tracks diseases weighed in, as well, insisting it had no evidence that any zombie-linked health crisis was unfolding.

The cases themselves are anything but funny. Each involved real people either suspected of committing unspeakable acts or having those acts visited upon them for reasons that have yet to be figured out. Maybe it's nothing new, either; people do horrible things to each other on a daily basis.

But what, then, made search terms like "zombie apocalypse" trend day after day last week in multiple corners of the Internet, fueled by discussions and postings that were often framed as humor?

"They've heard of these zombie movies, and they make a joke about it," says Lou Manza, a psychology professor at Lebanon Valley College in Pennsylvania, who learned about the whole thing at the breakfast table Friday morning when his 18-year-old son quipped that a "zombie apocalypse" was imminent.

Symbolic of both infection and evil, zombies are terrifying in a way that other horror-movie iconography isn't, says Elizabeth Bird, an anthropologist at the University of South Florida.

Zombies, after all, look like us. But they aren't. They are some baser form of us — slowly rotting and shambling along, intent on "surviving" and creating more of their kind, but with no emotional core, no conscience, no limits.

"Vampires have kind of a romantic appeal, but zombies are doomed," Bird says. "Zombies can never really become human again. There's no going back.

"That resonates in today's world, with people feeling like we're moving toward an ending," she says. "Ultimately, they are much more of a depressing figure."

The "moving toward an ending" part is especially potent. For some, the news stories fuel a lurking fear that, ultimately, humanity is doomed.

Speculation varies. It could be a virus that escapes from some secret government lab, or one that mutates on its own. Or maybe it'll be the result of a deliberate combination and weaponization of pathogens, parasites and disease.

It will, many believe, be something we've created — and therefore brought upon ourselves.

Zombies represent America's fears of bioterrorism, a fear that strengthened after the 9/11 attacks, says Patrick Hamilton, an English professor at Misericordia University in Dallas, Pa., who studies how we process comic-book narratives.

Economic anxiety around the planet doesn't help matters, either, with Greece, Italy and Spain edging closer to crisis every day. Consider some of the terms that those fears produce: zombie banks, zombie economies, zombie governments.

When people are unsettled about things beyond their control — be it the loss of a job, the high cost of housing or the depletion of a retirement account — they look to metaphors like the zombie.

"They're mindless drones following basic needs to eat," Hamilton says. "Those economic issues speak to our own lack of control."

They're also effective messengers. The Centers for Disease Control got in on the zombie action last year, using the "apocalypse" as the teaser for its emergency preparedness blog. It worked, attracting younger people who might not otherwise have read the agency's guidance on planning evacuation routes and storing water and food.

On Friday, a different message emerged. Chatter had become so rampant that CDC spokesman David Daigle sent an email to the Huffington Post, answering questions about the possibility of the undead walking among us.

"CDC does not know of a virus or condition that would reanimate the dead," he wrote, adding: "(or one that would present zombie-like symptoms.)"

Zombies have been around in our culture at least since Mary Shelley's "Frankenstein" was published in 1818, though they really took off after George Romero's nightmarish, black-and-white classic "Night of the Living Dead" hit the screen in 1968.

In the past several years, they have become both wildly popular and big business. Last fall, the financial website 24/7 Wall Street estimated that zombies pumped $5 billion into the U.S. economy.

"And if you think the financial tab has been high so far, by the end of 2012 the tab is going to be far larger," the October report read.

It goes far beyond comic books, costumes and conventions.

■ An Ace Hardware store in Nebraska features a "Zombie Preparedness Center" that includes bolts and fasteners for broken bones, glue and caulk for peeling skin, and deodorizers to freshen up decaying flesh. "Don't be scared," its website says. "Be prepared."

■ On uncrate.com, you can find everything you need to survive the apocalypse — zombie-driven or otherwise — in a single "bug-out bag." The recommended components range from a Mossberg pump-action shotgun and a Cold Kukri machete to a titanium spork for spearing all the canned goods you'll end up eating once all the fresh produce has vanished.

■ For $175 on Amazon, you can purchase a Gnombie, a gored-out zombie garden gnome.

Maybe it's that we joke about the things we fear. Laughter makes them manageable.

That's why a comedy like "Zombieland," with Woody Harrelson blasting away the undead on a roller coaster and Jesse Eisenberg stressing the importance of seatbelts is easier to watch than, say, the painful desperation and palpable apocalyptic fear of "28 Days Later" and "28 Weeks Later."

The most compelling zombie stories, after all, are not about the undead. They're about the living.

The popular AMC series "The Walking Dead" features zombies in all manner of settings. But the show is less about them and more about how far the small, battered band of humans will go to survive — whether they'll retain the better part of themselves or become hardened and heartless.

It's a familiar theme to George Romero, who told The Associated Press in 2008 that all of his zombie films have been about just that.

"The zombies, they could be anything," he said. "They could be an avalanche, they could be a hurricane. It's a disaster out there. The stories are about how people fail to respond in the proper way."

More advanced therapies are being aimed at cancer

Associated Press

CHICAGO — New research shows a sharp escalation in the weapons race against cancer, with several high-tech approaches long dreamed of but not possible or successful until now.

At a weekend conference of more than 30,000 cancer specialists, scientists reported:

■ New "smart" drugs that deliver powerful poisons directly to cancer cells while leaving healthy ones alone.

■ A new tool that helps the immune system attack a broad range of cancer types.

■ Treatments aimed at new genes and cancer pathways, plus better tests to predict which patients will benefit from them.

"I see major advances being made in big diseases" such as breast and prostate cancers, said Dr. Richard Pazdur, cancer drug chief at the federal Food and Drug Administration, which on Wednesday announced a new policy intended to speed breast cancer drugs to the market.

The field continues to move toward more precise treatments with fewer side effects and away from old-style chemotherapy that was "like dropping a bomb on the body," he said.

In fact, an emerging class of "smart bombs" was one of the most hopeful developments reported at the meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology.

Centers for Children and Families is offering the course, You are Unique, June 11-14.

The course will cover how to make and keep friends and tips on anger management. The objective of the course is to help children and teens deal with bullying. Licensed professional counselors will instruct the classes.

The course is being offered 1-3 p.m. for 9- to 12-year-olds and for 13- to 16-year-olds from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

For more information or to register call at 570-1084. Registration may also be done before the classes, which will take place at the Centers for Children & Families, 1004 N. Big Spring St., Suite 325.

Litter index results

Midland scored a 1.8 on its litter index, Keep Midland Beautiful said Friday.

A group of volunteers and staff spent part of the day Thursday grading various areas of the city based on the amount of litter they saw. A separate score also was given for overall community appearance based on the frequency of things like graffiti, outdoor storage and other items.

The score is up slightly from 2011 when Midland received a ranking of 1.7. However, volunteers said they believe Midland's litter condition has improved in recent months. There weren't nearly as many plastic bags caught in fields as there were a few months ago, they said.

The score helps Keep Midland Beautiful to identify where cleanups are necessary and also to plan for education outreaches.

Today in history

Today is Monday, June 4, the 156th day of 2012. There are 210 days left in the year.

Today's highlight:

On June 4, 1942, the World War II Battle of Midway began, resulting in a decisive American victory against Japan and marking the turning point of the war in the Pacific.

families for the program, which is part of why there's such a great need for volunteers.

Visitation sessions last two hours, and volunteers are asked to sit and observe the visit. A video camera is set up, and volunteers take notes. Training is provided to every volunteer.

Billingsley said some of the volunteers find the job difficult because of the situations the families are in. However, she said Centers' staff see it as a positive that the non-custodial parents are at least able to continue some relationship with their kids by being involved in the program.

Want to volunteer?

Call 570-1084 or email fbillingsley@centerswesttexas.org.

Volunteers must be 18 years or older and must pass a background check.

Some parents are assigned to the program, while other parents volunteer to take part.

"No matter what has happened in the family, that's still that child's parent," said Ann Bradford, executive director at Centers, said previously. "They still love them and want a relationship."

Typically, the families involved in Kids First face issues that stem from divorce, domestic violence, anger issues, substance abuse or a recent release from prison, among other things, according to Centers.

Volunteers don't know the specific details of the family to which they're assigned and are asked only to observe the two-hour visit.

Some families will stay with Kids First for years, while others will graduate to supervised exchanges or even independent visitation after a few months in the program.

of solar glasses that will be given to those in attendance.

Staff are requesting residents who attended the solar eclipse viewing party and who plan to attend Tuesday's party, should bring the solar glasses they received in May.

The West Texas Astronomers will have solar telescopes on display for those wanting to see the transition but Kerr said Venus will be visible as a fairly tiny dot even without any magnification.

With the telescopes, though, Kerr said a viewer will be able to see the thick atmosphere that Venus has shimmering as it passes across the sun.

The sun will be high enough when the event begins at around 5 p.m. to be viewed from the planetarium and live feeds of the event will be broadcast in the classrooms, Kerr said.

Venus is the second planet from the sun and roughly the same size as Earth. On a clear night, one might be able to view the planet as a bright star either at sunrise or sunset.

While the planet is four times larger than the moon, officials say that because it is farther away from Earth, it will block a much smaller portion of the sun's face than the moon does during a solar eclipse.

While May's annular solar eclipse could be seen only from Midland westward, all of North America will be able to view this event, officials said.

About three-fourths of the Earth will get to see the transition take place but only a few areas will be able to experience the transition for the full time. Those in Hawaii, Australia and Southeast Asia will have visibility the full six hours and 40 minutes while Venus travels across the sun.

Those in some European countries such as France and England will be able to catch the transition only for an hour or two after the sun has risen.

Audrie Palmer can be reached at apalmer@mrt.com.

Transit facts

- It will take Venus six hours and 40 minutes to travel across the sun's disk.
- The moment of greatest transit — the closest Venus will appear to the center of the sun's disk — will take place at 8:29 p.m. in Midland.
- The alignment of Earth, Venus and the sun has only occurred seven times since the invention of the telescope: In 1631, 1639, 1761, 1769, 1874, 1882 and 2004.

WEATHER

North Texas' reservoirs to near capacity. "Things were a little dicey last year."

Some of the more arid regions are still recovering.

The latest U.S. Drought Monitor map shows wee portions of far South Texas in extreme drought — the second-worst stage — while West Texas is the only region with portions under the worst stage, exceptional drought.

There has been some steady rain in Lubbock this year, but already windy conditions and high temperatures — the city set a daily record of 104 degrees April 25 — have gobbled up plenty of the moisture needed to grow cotton. Producers had enough moisture to plant but will need more through the end of July to have a shot at a good crop.

"We might luck out and get the rain just right," said cotton farmer Doug Hlavaty, who tends to irrigated and non-irrigated fields 12 miles south of Lubbock. "That would be the ideal thing."

Two hundred miles southwest, in San Angelo, the story is far different. The city is having its fifth wettest year on record after getting 12.56 inches of rain through Wednesday, almost 5 inches above the normal. Yet, the parched land has prevented any significant runoff into the depleted O.H. Ivie Reservoir, the city's main water source. Ivie is at 16 percent capacity, down from 18 percent heading into this year.

The reservoir is so depleted that San Angelo now has water left for only 19 months. Its answer is to build a $120 million pipeline from water wells 60 miles away in McCullough County. The pipeline, which will carry water pumped from the Hickory Aquifer, is scheduled to be completed in June 2013 and expected to last at least 50 years, a city spokesman said.

Man charged with arson on his home

From staff reports

A man remained in custody Sunday after allegedly starting a fire in his Midland County residence Saturday evening, according to officials.

Ernest W. Tate III, 35, was charged with arson Saturday night in connection with a structure fire that happened at 8:20 p.m. in the 5200 block of FM 715 at a residence that Midland County Fire Marshal Dale Little said belonged to the alleged arsonist.

Firefighters from both the Midland Fire Department and Greenwood Volunteer Fire Department battled the blaze, according to officials. Though the structure was not considered a total loss, Little said the house has "major" damage to it.

Tate lived in the residence with his girlfriend and her two daughters, Little said, but he was the only one in the house at the time the fire started. Tate walked away from the blaze without any injuries, he added. The fire remains under investigation, according to Little, and the Midland County Sheriff's Office Crisis Intervention Unit was called to assist Tate's girlfriend and her daughters.

Clemens calls the Thomas Building the first office building in Midland.

The Thomas Building opened on Jan. 1, 1928. It was more than a year later before the other two historically significant buildings came along. The Thomas Building was full soon after its opening and again after World War II ended and Midland's population exploded. Several years after its "No Vacancy" sign was posted in the 1950s, an additional floor would open. The sixth-floor hospital was moved after Thomas led a successful drive to establish what is now Midland Memorial Hospital.

Thomas' contribution to Midland, its downtown and its medical history, is significant.

Jimmy Patterson's book, "A History of Character: The Story of Midland, Texas," will be published in 2013.

Democratic primary, convention reveal weak party

By Chris Tomlinson
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The results of the Democratic primary race for the U.S. Senate tell the story of the party's problems in Texas.

Paul Sadler, a storied former state lawmaker, was recruited to put up a good-faith, David-versus-Goliath fight for the Senate seat that Kay Bailey Hutchison is vacating. In return, Democratic donors gave him less than $100,000, and Democratic voters gave him a runoff against a man whose only claim to politics is a shared last name with a bygone party hero.

In a place where buying a statewide television ad starts at $1.7 million, this is not the behavior of a healthy political party.

More than 11 percent of registered voters cast ballots in the Republican primary last week, but only 4.5 percent voted for Democrats. That's less than 600,000 people out of a voting-age population of 18.7 million.

Statewide, no Democrat has won a statewide election since 1994. Republicans hold a 102-48 supermajority in the Texas House and a 19-12 majority in the Senate. For all intents and purposes, Texas is a single-party state, with opposition forces struggling for relevance.

The question at this year's Texas Democratic Party convention in Houston, as with almost every convention since 1999, is what Democrats can do about it.

Party Chairman Boyd Ritchie said the key is to convince Democrats that the party can win and that their donations and votes will not go to waste.

"It's up to us to energize and educate not only our base, but also our friends and neighbors that there is a choice in this election," Ritchie said, acknowledging that Republicans have a huge financial advantage. "We have some real opportunities because it seems to be that some of the extreme positions the Republicans took to win their primaries will ultimately be responsible for us to win in November."

Ritchie acknowledged that low turnout, few funds and simple confusion probably led many Democrats to vote for Grady Yarbrough, an erstwhile Republican candidate who did not mount a campaign and has not filed any of the required campaign and personal financial disclosures. It is not the first time someone with a name similar to 1960s-era U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough won Democratic votes. Don Yarbrough was elected to the Texas Supreme Court in 1976 amid similar confusion and was forced to resign nine months later amid criminal allegations.

Sadler will be at the convention trying to clear up the confusion and said he hopes to rally support and donations for his campaign. He points out that low-turnout in the primary does not necessarily mean Democrats won't turn out in big numbers to vote for President Barack Obama. Sadler said Democratic excitement for Obama and Republican disappointment with nominee Mitt Romney could give the Democratic Senate nominee a fighting chance, if he can raise enough money to put on a competitive campaign.

"I hope that we'll be able to raise that kind of money," Sadler added. "Democratic donors have given that type of money in the past; they donated this time to candidates outside the state that would have been sufficient to do that."

Convincing them to give will not be easy.

"There is a pathology of pessimism that is entrenched right now in the Democratic Party," explained Matt Glazer, the executive director of Progress Texas, a group that promotes progressive ideas, but does not endorse candidates. "You have to give progressives something to be excited about."

Like many progressives, he argues Democrats must change the math and get out the voters who are staying home, mostly minorities and the poor. Two dozen more votes in each of the state's 8,775 precincts would add 210,000 ballots.

In the 2008 primary when Obama and Hillary Clinton spent $50 million in the state, Texas Democrats saw 2.8 million primary voters. Glazer argued that more important than the candidates back then was the amount of money spent on advertising to get the vote out. Simply put, television advertising makes all the difference in Texas elections.

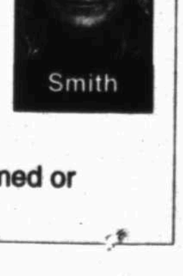

Texas Democrats are therefore caught in two chicken-and-egg dilemmas. They need money to register, educate and motivate people to vote, but the party finds it difficult to raise money when voters appear so uninterested. Candidates don't want to run unless they have the financial backing they need to win, while donors won't finance candidates who look like they can't win.

Glazer says the party has a lot of work to do and predicts the soonest Democrats will become competitive statewide again is in 2018, but only if donors and activists start laying the groundwork now.

What must be answered before future wars

■ Because it appears America will be going alone, maybe we need to rethink the process of declaring war.

Cal Thomas
Tribune Media Services

On Sunday, Sept. 2, 1945, aboard the battleship USS Missouri at the end of ceremonies marking the unconditional surrender of Japan and the formal end of World War II, Gen. Douglas MacArthur spoke for a world weary of war and hoping for peace: "Let us pray that peace be now restored to the world and that God will preserve it always."

That prayer was not answered as Korea, Vietnam, Iraq, Afghanistan and a host of regional and tribal conflicts have preserved war, not peace, as the means by which too many attempt to settle their differences.

With U.S. combat operations in Iraq effectively over and Afghanistan in the process of winding down (for us, if not for the resilient enemy) there will be little rest between wars as Iran now appears to be the next target.

Politicians start wars, generals plan strategy to wage them and soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines and Coast Guardsmen (not to mention civilians) die in them. Since the beginning of the human race, people have sought ways to prevent wars, but every attempt at bringing lasting, or even short-term peace, has failed.

At the United States Military Academy in West Point, N.Y., there are some who now are asking the hard questions about America's role in warfare. Elisabeth Bumiller of The New York Times wrote about it in a story with the headline, "West Point Asks if a War Doctrine Was Worth It."

The discussion, even debate, at West Point is first about the effectiveness of counterinsurgency in places like Afghanistan. Col. Gian P. Gentile, director of West Point's military history program, is quoted as saying that counterinsurgency could work in Afghanistan if the United States makes a multi-decade commitment: "I'm talking 70, 80, 90 years," he said. With many countries, including France, pulling out of Afghanistan (in France's case earlier than previously expected due to orders from the country's new president) and with shattered economies in need of rebuilding, including our own, this leads to a larger question: Can America afford to virtually "go it alone" in defense of the liberty of others who are not willing, or able, to bear the burden and pay the price for their own freedom?

I'm not sure there is a satisfactory answer to the question, but it is a question that needs to be debated since we always seem to be the ones who pay the highest price. "Is it worth it?" How will we measure worthiness? These are questions at the heart of the debate.

Former President George W. Bush said, "We're fighting them over there so we don't have to fight them here." But we already are fighting them here as demonstrated by Sept. 11, 2001, the Fort Hood shootings and numerous other successful and unsuccessful attacks.

Somewhere between "come home, America," which would lead to isolationism and intervention in every conflict there is a pragmatic approach to war that America should consider. This ought to be an issue in the upcoming election, but it won't be unless journalists ask the right questions and demand answers from those who have, or are seeking, the power to start or join wars and send our sons and daughters to fight and perhaps die in them.

Perhaps a return to the constitutional principle that only Congress has the power to declare war would help. That is what Rep. Ron Paul argued for during the presidential primary. He raised an important issue, one that should be discussed now, before the next war starts and American leaders decide another generation of young people should fight it.

OUR VIEW

Improvement can be seen on litter front

Keep Midland Beautiful recently sent five volunteers and two staff members on a tour of Midland to assess if the city's litter situation has improved. We were glad to hear this group thinks things have improved.

We think the group's assessment is valid because we, too, have noticed there are not as many vacant lots covered in plastic bags and other trash as there have been in the past. The city's appearance is vastly improved compared to the last couple months.

Obviously, KMB projects have helped lighten the litter problem, and we commend staff for their work. But it's also obvious that a lot of property owners and other residents have gotten the message. There have been many complaints and media attention about Midland's litter and how it has downgraded the look of our community. That message appears to have been heard.

While we praise this dramatic shift in our litter woes, we offer inducement to keep this progress going forward. We still are not as clean as other cities. There are still problem areas that need our attention. And there is still much that can be done to further enhance the look of our community that is not only beset by a huge litter problem, but a drought that has sapped our normal vegetation. That makes it all the more important to keep our litter problems corralled.

Despite improvements, Interstate 20 and Loop 250 — both highly traveled areas — continue to have litter problems. We must keep an eye out for a return of litter because residents sometimes think they already have cleaned a lot only to see it erupt again as a problem site.

Litter is a problem that is not going to go away. We must forever be focused on controlling our litter spots with realistic measures. We have done much, but there is still much to do. Let's be ever mindful of that as we go forward.

Still, we are grateful for the way Midlanders are responding to our litter situation, but we just hope that we don't lose sight of the fact that litter is an ongoing problem and it takes a lot of work to maintain the community appearance we want to have year round.

Lege needs more adults, fewer pledges

San Antonio Express-News

One of the big questions heading into the 83rd Legislature next year is what kind of influence Gov. Rick Perry will have over the legislative agenda.

The state's longest-serving chief executive used implicit and explicit veto threats to keep budget writers in line last session, limiting the Legislature's use of the rainy day fund and arresting any effort to increase revenues while slashing state spending for essential services, including education.

Since the 82nd Legislature adjourned, however, Perry ran a disastrous campaign for the GOP presidential nomination. And before the new Legislature is sworn in, an election will take place that could send plenty of new faces to Austin.

Perry has laid down a marker of sorts — a budget compact that includes a no-new-taxes pledge he wants all Texas politicians to sign. Perhaps the economy will rebound enough over the next year that state coffers will have all the revenues needed to build and maintain the infrastructure, educate the children and provide for the safety and security of one of the nation's fastest growing states. Perhaps not.

Lawmakers would be foolish — or deceitful — to sign such a pledge without knowing what the state's fiscal situation is. Sen. John Carona, R-Dallas, told the Texas Tribune's Evan Smith that while he has supported most of Perry's initiatives, he considered the pressure to sign the compact "disrespectful."

"We are all adults," Carona said. "We are elected to go in and do the right thing."

Here's hoping for more members of the 83rd Legislature thinking maturely.

Don't play politics with medals

■ Giving Dolores Huerta the honor serves a purpose for the president. It is election season after all.

Ruben Navarrette
Washington Post Writers Group

When civil rights activist Dolores Huerta recently was given the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the reaction from both the left and the right was predictable.

Liberals were proud that a prominent Latina, who co-founded what became the United Farm Workers union with labor leader Cesar Chavez, had received such an honor.

Conservatives were outraged that the honor had gone to someone affiliated with a long list of liberal organizations and causes who once blurted out that "Republicans hate Latinos."

Both emotions were misplaced. The only thing anyone should have felt in response to this event was outrage over the blatant political overtones behind it.

Not that Huerta didn't deserve the medal. The 82-year-old is as qualified for the nation's highest civilian honor as any of this year's recipients.

Huerta and I have had several run-ins in recent years over my public comments about how, in its heyday, the UFW worked hand in hand with U.S. immigration officials to deport illegal immigrant workers that the union saw as a threat — coupled with Huerta's refusal to admit that the union's history is filled with anything other than sunshine and puppy dogs. But this doesn't stop me from offering my congratulations.

The curious part is that Huerta received the medal from President Obama, about whom she has not always had a kind word and yet with whom she now seems to have a relationship based on mutual hand-washing.

Obama invites Huerta to a state dinner honoring Mexican President Felipe Calderon. Huerta signs a letter of support for administration official Cecilia Munoz when Latino activists were calling for her head in response to her coldhearted remarks about it being inevitable that families would be divided under any immigration system.

Obama and Huerta were not always this cozy. Huerta is a big fan of Bill and Hillary Clinton. And she considers herself one of the nation's leading feminists.

So it was no surprise when, during the 2008 Democratic primaries, she campaigned for Hillary in Latino neighborhoods in the Southwest. But some Democrats were shocked by how viciously Huerta attacked — with words that have come back to haunt her — Clinton's main opponent at the time: Barack Obama.

Huerta told Latino crowds in Texas and California that Clinton's connection to their community went back 35 years to when, as a young political activist, the former first lady spent some time working in the Southwest. By contrast, Huerta said, Obama was a Johnny-come-lately whose relationship with Latinos only went back about six months.

Not good enough, she said. She quoted a saying in Spanish that, translated, means: "They only come see the cactus when it has fruit." Then, referring to his 11th-hour courting of Latino voters, she said about Obama, "That's what this man is doing."

During the awards ceremony, Obama joked that Huerta didn't mind when he "stole" the UFW's famous slogan, "Si se puede" (Yes we can).

Actually, looking back on the 2008 campaign, it sounds like she did.

"Now they're copying our slogan," she told a reporter then. "But you cannot build a relationship no más con una palabra — just with one word."

Ouch. That's harsh. But it's also true. It turns out that Huerta is an excellent judge of character, and she got Obama's number early on. After the Illinois senator secured the nomination, and other Latino leaders got in line behind him, Huerta fell silent. But she was right to be skeptical — even if she is all smiles now.

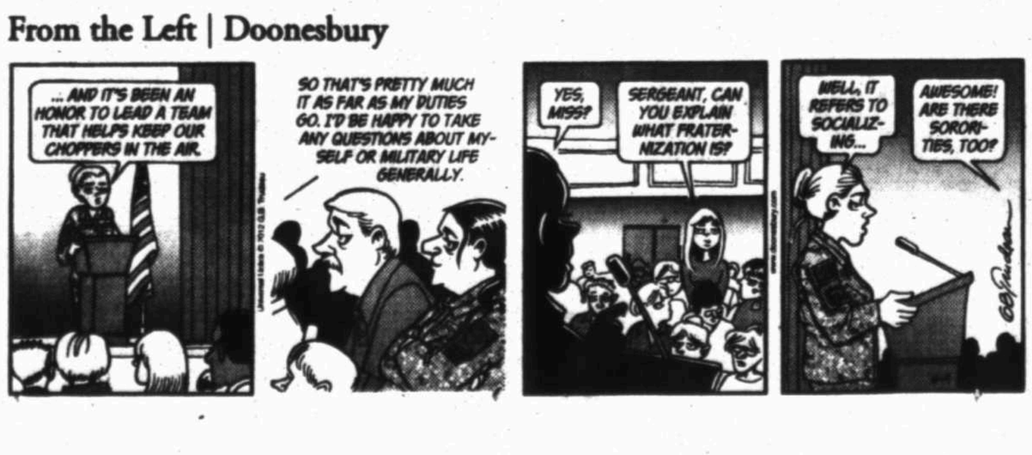

Obama seems indifferent toward Latinos. He doesn't know how to relate to them, and he doesn't appear to have any interest in learning. He lies to them about his broken promise to make immigration reform a top priority and about how his administration has broken up hundreds of thousands of immigrant families by deporting mothers and fathers. He only rediscovered the community as of late, probably after his advisers told him that he needed to shore up Latino support.

Could it be that this is what's behind the decision of the White House to award the Presidential Medal of Freedom to a Latina with such a high profile?

You bet it is. For Huerta, it's the honor of a lifetime. But for Obama, this is just another election-year gimmick to convince Latinos he's in their corner.

And thanks to his administration's exuberant deportation policies, there are now fewer of us to convince.

Is texting ruining the art of conversation?

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Anna Schiferl hadn't even rolled out of bed when she reached for her cellphone and typed a text to her mom, one recent Saturday. Mom was right downstairs in the kitchen. The text? Anna wanted cinnamon rolls for breakfast.

Soon after, the 13-year-old could hear mom's voice echoing through the house.

"Anna," Joanna Schiferl called, "if you want to talk to me, you come downstairs and see me!"

Anna laughs about it now. "I was kind of being lazy," the teen from suburban Chicago concedes. "I know that sounds -horrible."

Well, maybe not horrible, but certainly increasingly typical.

Statistics from the Pew Internet & American Life Project show that, these days, many people with cellphones prefer texting over a phone call. It's not always young people, though the data indicate that the younger you are, the more likely you are to prefer texting.

And that's creating a communication divide, of sorts — the talkers vs. the texters.

Some would argue that it's no big deal. What difference should it make how we communicate, as long as we do so?

But many experts say the most successful communicators will, of course, have the ability to do both, talk or text, and know the most appropriate times to use those skills. And they fear that more of us are losing our ability to have — or at least are avoiding — the traditional face-to-face conversations that are vital in the workplace and personal relationships.

"It is an art that's becoming as valuable as good writing," says Janet Sternberg, a professor of communication and media studies at Fordham University in New York who is also a linguist.

In the most extreme cases, she's noticed that more students don't look her in the eye and have trouble with the basics of direct conversation — habits that, she says, will not serve them well as they enter a world where many of their elders still expect an in-person conversation, or at the very least a phone call.

On today's college campuses, the dynamic is often different. Forget about things like "office hours," for instance. Many professors say they rarely see students outside of class.

"I sit in my office hours lonely now because if students have a question, they email, often late at night," says Renee Houston, an associate professor of communication studies at the University of Puget Sound in Washington state.

"And they never call, ever."

She recalls overhearing students chuckling about the way people older than them communicate.

"My parents left me a VOICEMAIL. Can you believe it?" one said, as if voicemail had gone the way of the dinosaurs.

This doesn't sound surprising or particularly troublesome to Lisa Auster-Gussman, who'll be a senior this fall at the University of Richmond in Virginia. For her, there are simply particular tools she uses to communicate, depending on the recipient.

Email is for professors, yes. Phone calls and maybe the occasional text are for parents, if the parents know how to do the latter.

"But I don't communicate much with older people. So much of my life is set up over text," says Auster-Gussman, who sends and receives an average of about 6,000 text messages a month.

Many are done as "group texts," sharing messages among eight college friends who live in the same building. The interactions are nothing more than you'd say in a casual conversation, Auster-Gussman says — but they are constant when they're not together.

Recently, for instance, she went to a movie and came out to find 50 text messages waiting for her on her phone.

Meanwhile, last summer, when she was away from her boyfriend, she went days without talking to him on the phone, but texted with him several times a day.

"You're not even really talking to him," she remembers her perplexed father saying.

"But I felt like I was talking to him all day, every day," Auster-Gussman says.

Is there some aversion to talking on the phone? Not really, she says. It's just a preference. In this day and age, it's just what you do.

As Anna, the 13-year-old in suburban Chicago, sees it: "There are people you'll text, but won't call. It's just awkward that way.

"It's not about anything important — just a way to stay in touch with each other."

MHS graduates look back at senior year

Senior year is quickly coming to a close. Memories have been made and good times have been had. As my last article for Tall City Teens, I wanted to write something that would be memorable and important to me and right now that would be the closing of my high school days and an opening of a new chapter to college. I wanted to express what senior year has been like, but in order for me to do this I wanted help from the people who experienced it, just as I did, my peers. I asked my friends to put our senior year into retrospect and these are their responses. Each of these people are seniors at Midland High School and walked the stage Saturday.

"I enjoyed witnessing everyone go after what they've always wanted. Whether it be in sports or school or friendships or whatever, everyone pursued their dreams knowing this would be the last opportunity. People said what they wanted to say and did what they wanted to do with no regret at all."

— Molly Barham, University of Texas at Austin

"It has been really neat to see and hear what everyone's future plans are. I love seeing how people's decisions and goals reflect their personalities."

— Rachel Eyler, Clemson University

"My favorite part about senior year is probably the way we all came together. I feel like this year was so different because we were all involved and we had so much fun at every event. I think that's what made this year memorable. I could not of asked for a better class."

— Lauren Rivas, Texas Tech University

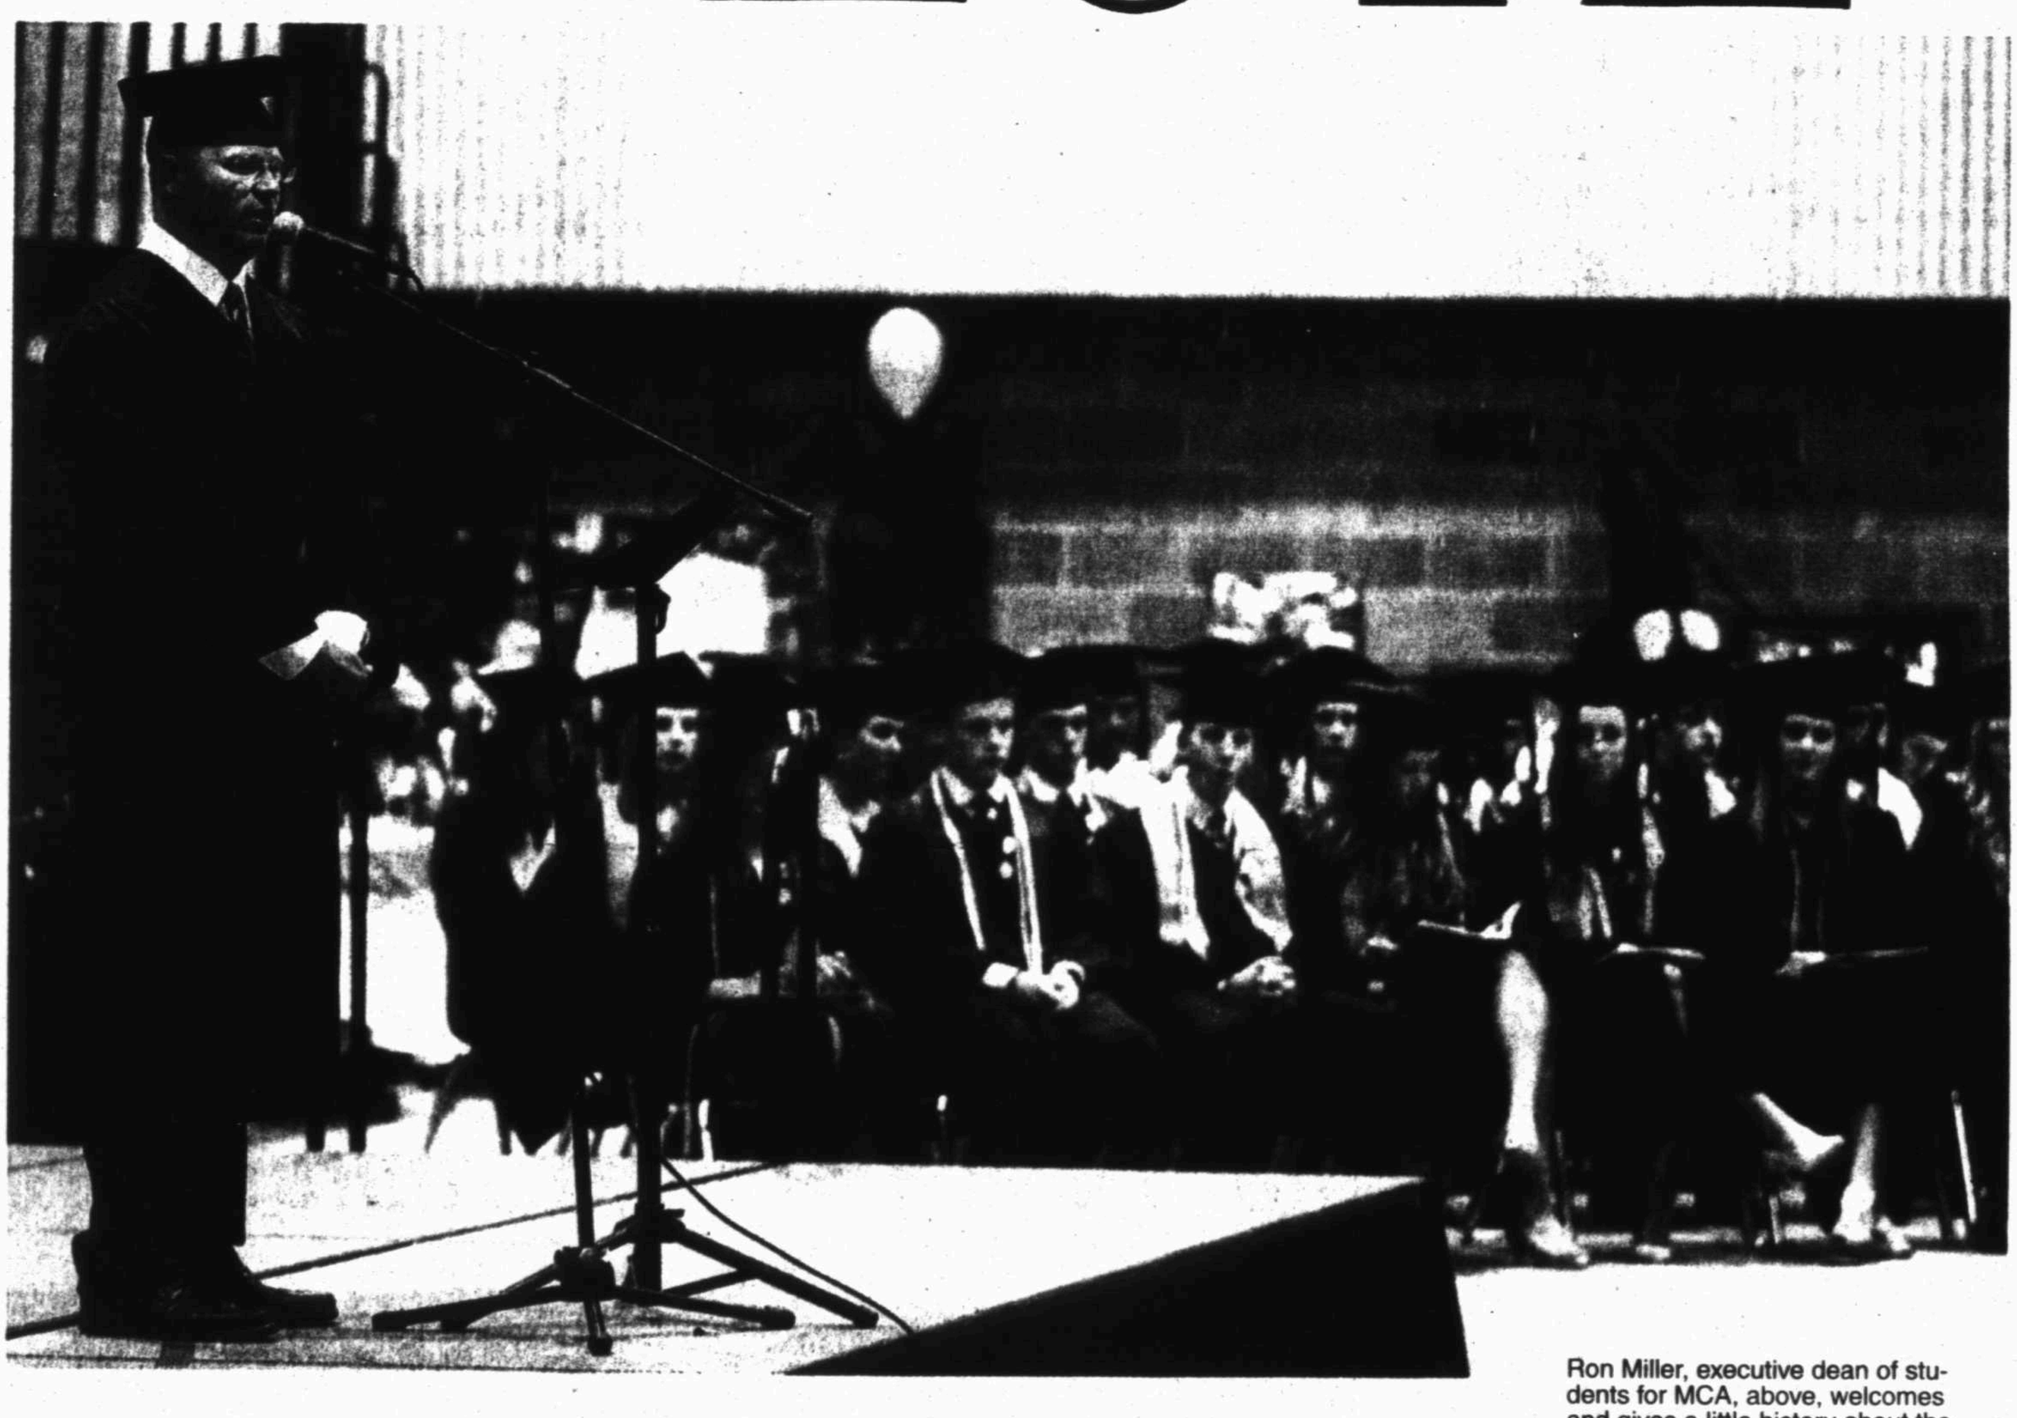

"I just like remembering things where everyone was together. Like football games, senior carnival and the talent show. Those will be things that I remember forever."

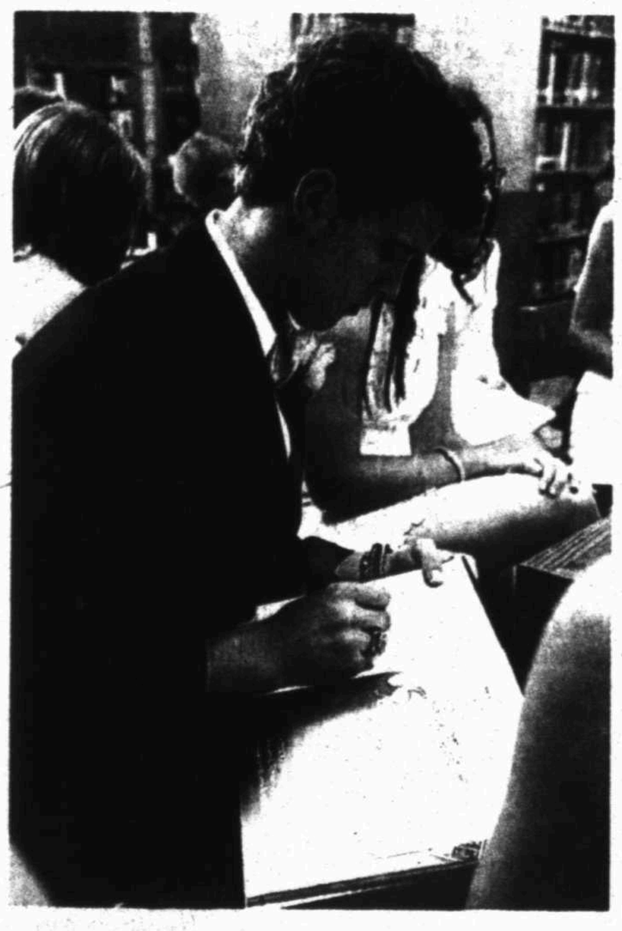

— Savannah Ross, Texas State University

Top 10 songs of summer will keep you singing until school starts

Who is ready for summer? I know I am, and to get my summer going, I love to start off with a great playlist of summer songs. Here's my top 10 playlist for this summer, a countdown of songs with some new favorites and older classics.

10. "Summertime" by My Chemical Romance. Gerard Way's beautiful voice, a catchy tune and deep lyrics make this song one of my favorite summer songs. It's fun to listen to while driving down the highway, with your hair blowing in the breeze or just while dancing in your room, celebrating your freedom

Summer is best time to prepare for college

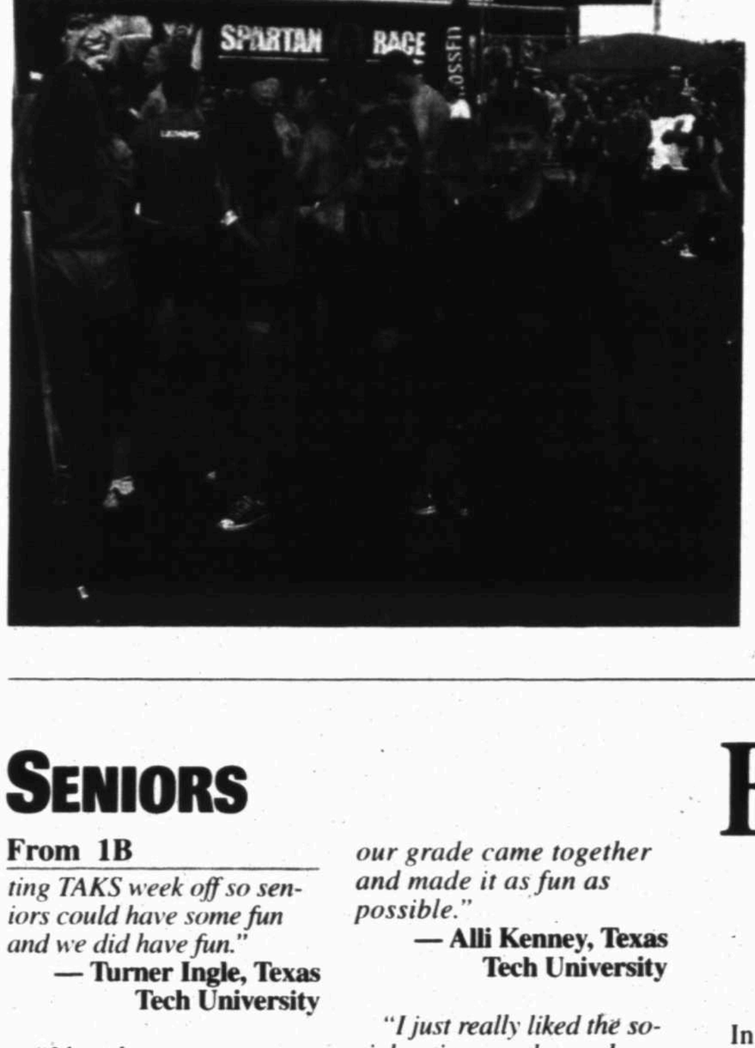

The majority of college admission information seems to be aimed at the top. For example, if you type "getting into college" on Amazon, the second result is a book that offers insider secrets to getting into Dartmouth. No, of course I do not think all college information should be limited to the select few who have the scores, grades and resources to get into the Ivy League. Yes, of course I bought the book anyway. And yet, despite the fact I am eagerly awaiting the arrival of my Dartmouth book, Midland faces a problem far greater than acceptance into truly elite colleges.

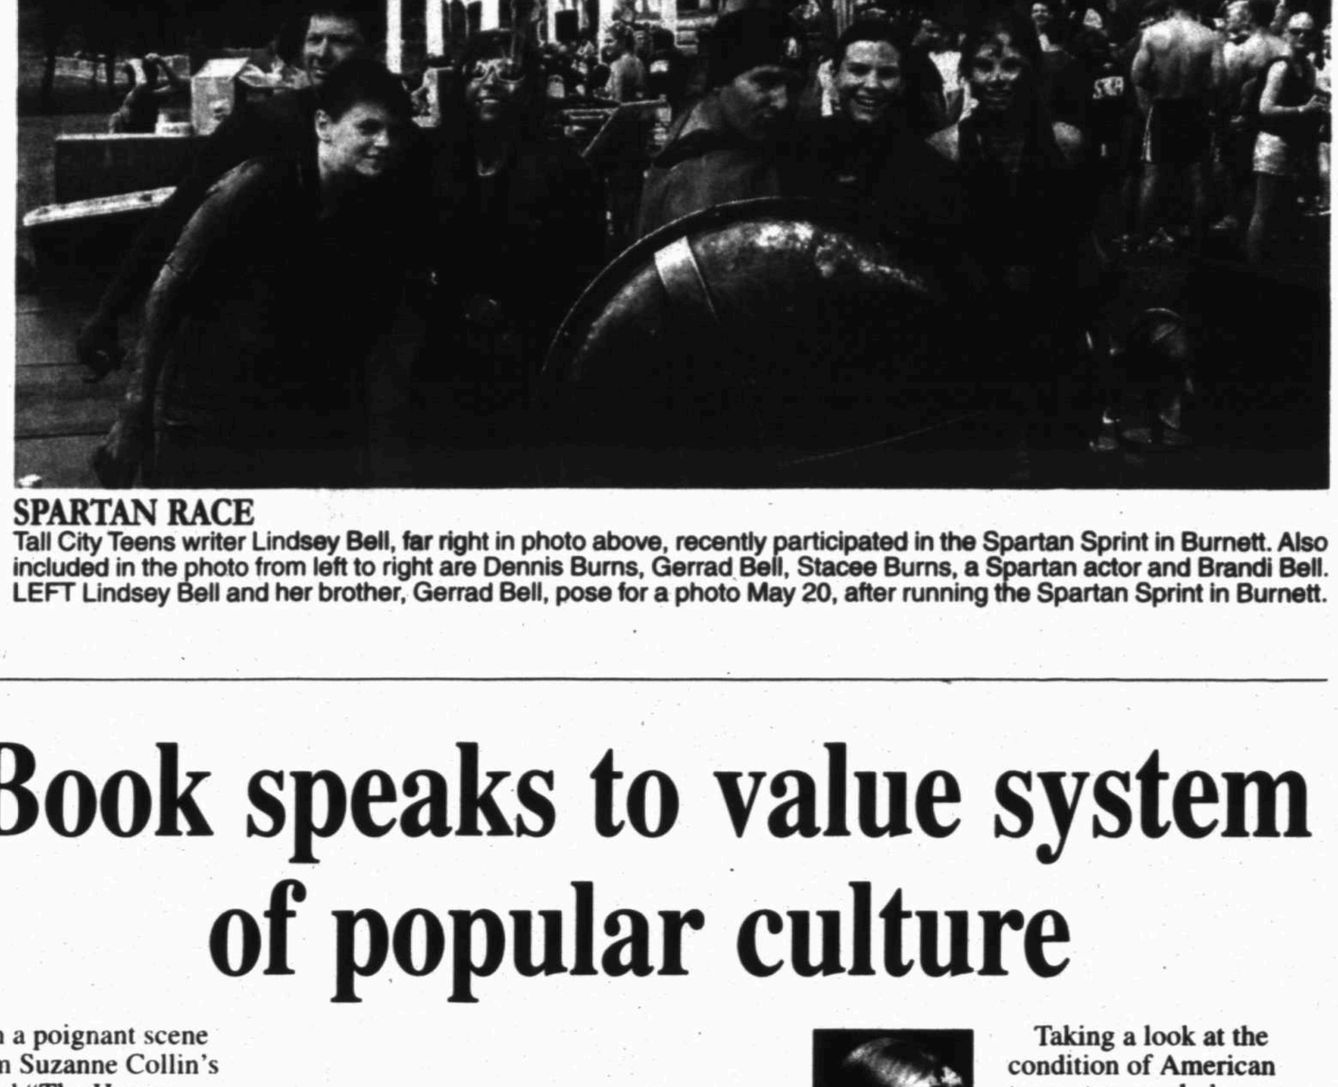

According to a shocking Reporter-Telegram article that ran May 27, fewer than 20 percent percent of MISD students have a bachelor's degree within six years of graduating. Despite the siren song of glossy books promising Ivy League secrets, the real focus needs to be on college ting TAKS week off so seniors could have some fun and we did have fun."

— Turner Ingle, Texas Tech University

"I love how everyone branched out of their normal group of friends and built other strong relationships. You really do learn who your true friends are and through them learn so much about yourself. The thing I'll miss the most is the unending laughter with the people who I have become close with this past year."
— Morgan Hannon, Midwestern State University

"I just really enjoyed how all of the different friend groups came together as one and we just had fun."
— Nick Wisniewski, University of Texas at the Permian Basin

"Our senior class really got along this year. No matter what we did we always had a good time. Hands down."
— Andrew McDonald, University of Oklahoma

"My favorite part of senior year was the playoff game at Cowboy Stadium. It was awesome to run flags on the field and to sit in the front row. The stadium was awesome and it was fun that we had big cut outs of all our players. I loved watching our team play there."
— Bailey Anderson, Texas Tech University

"Enjoying the last year with many of my friends I've had and getting to partake in the all the senior events is what is most memorable to me."
— Billie Bigelow, Texas Tech University

"Everyone put all the drama behind them and made the best of every event and opportunity. I think we all had the realization that this would be the last time we would all be together before everything was going to change."
— Kathryn Hanson, University of Texas at Austin

"Senior year was a realization that we should always cherish the moments we are living in because they truly pass by way too fast if you aren't careful."
— Emily Spencer, Texas A&M University

"I really enjoyed how laid back the school-side of senior year was. It was a carefree time."
— Clayton Smith, Texas Tech University

"Moving to Midland at the beginning of my junior year was terrifying, but I could not have asked for a more welcoming class. My favorite thing about senior year was getting to know everyone better and making life-long friendships. I've really grown to love Midland and I am so glad I got to share my senior year with everyone I have met."
— Caroline Christmann, Texas Tech University

"My favorite part of senior year is being the oldest at school."
— Michael Board, Texas Christian University

"My favorite part of my senior year is everyone in our grade came together and made it as fun as possible."
— Alli Kenney, Texas Tech University

"I just really liked the social outings on the weekend. If I could describe senior year in two words it would be: rage on."
— Quade Huckaba, Angelo State University

"I think some of my favorite nights of senior year were the ones we spent out in the country just hanging out."
— Robert McDonnold, University of Texas at Austin

"I'm going to miss the weekends the most and my favorite part would be not having to care about much of anything."
— Merv Ward, Texas Tech University

"My motto throughout senior year was: 'Who cares … I'm a senior.' I am going to miss using that excuse."
— Becca Roepke, Texas State University

"The thing I'm going to miss the most about senior year is going to all the football games with my friends, but the best part was definitely building the friendships I did. Senior year would not be the same without all my friends."
— Taylor Coker, Oklahoma State University

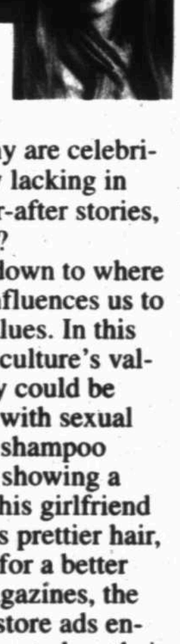

"Being the oldest ones at the school and feeling superior to all the younger kids was pretty cool."
— Tanner Culp, Texas Tech University

"Senior year in three words: Seniority, senior shenanigans and varsity sports."
— Sarah Burns, Texas A&M University

"Best part of the year was football with all the guys I've known forever and that's what I'll miss the most."
— Grant Canis, Oklahoma State University

Many things will be missed, but we have made some memories that will never be forgotten. I couldn't agree more with the people listed above and it is very bittersweet that our time in school together is ending. If I could leave one thing to say to my class it would be to never forget the good times we had, party people.

Book speaks to value system of popular culture

In a poignant scene from Suzanne Collin's novel "The Hunger Games," Katniss and Peeta gaze over the beautiful Capitol of Panem with its dazzling architecture and candy-colored streets — the city where they are fed exotic dishes of their choice at the push of a button, given unlimited wardrobes, assigned personal stylists and pampered with luxury they have never before experienced. Yet both teens passionately hate the Capitol and agree they would leave at the first opportunity, if it were only possible. Why would teens who have known nothing but poverty and hunger long for their seamy homes in the districts?

Because, like all the tributes participating in Panem's reality TV show called the Hunger Games, Katniss and Peeta are puppets used for entertainment in the Capitol. Although lavished with material things in excess, they are stripped of their identities, freedom and forced into an arena in which all honor, kindness and love must be forsaken.

For those unfamiliar with the story, "The Hunger Games" takes place in Panem, a country in North America centuries in the future. Twelve impoverished districts work to serve the Capitol, a city of gluttonous, affluent, entertainment-hungry citizens who spend their excesses of money on plastic surgery, extravagant clothes, rejuvenating skin products and weight-removal operations while children in the outlying districts collapse from starvation on the streets. Every year, a young man and woman are chosen from each of the 12 districts to experience the full glamour of celebrity life in the Capitol, then participate in a reality TV show in which the tributes fight each other to the death. One survivor only is allowed, rewarded with lifelong fame and fortune.

The Capitol is not merely the fictional contrivance of a sci-fi writer; Suzanne Collins artfully shows readers of "The Hunger Games" a new perspective of our own culture through the eyes of Katniss Everdeen. It's time for more people to face the uncomfortable parallels between the Capitol and our own culture and realize how it compels teens today to compete in a social version of the Hunger Games.

In America, we are obsessed with forming idols out of any attractive person who can sing or talk in front of a camera. Most people don't stop to think about how odd it is we like to make celebrities, fall in love with them and then expose every dirty detail of their personal lives, create scandals out of small incidents and usually end up publishing pictures and articles about them in jail, debt, broken relationships or drug addiction, despised by everyone. Then, because those people are now icons of ruin and scandal, professional celebrity finders search for new "stars," and thousands of people eagerly compete on YouTube and reality shows to fill the position of public entertainment providers.

It seems the 12 districts of Panem had a more shrewd perspective on this than we do. Few teens volunteered to participate in the Hunger Games show — most were chosen by lottery and had to be dragged sobbing from their districts.

Of course, in our society, we don't exactly pit celebrities together in a gruesome fight to the death; it is notable how many of our stars have committed suicide or emotionally wounded each other. Glancing at the cover of any tabloid, you see angry or weren't-warned-to-smile-for-the-camera people wearing lots of makeup and expensive-looking clothes next to headlines that usually include the words "break up," "cheated," "exposed secret," "it's over," or something along those lines. So why are celebrities severely lacking in happily-ever-after stories, yet idolized?

It comes down to where the media influences us to place our values. In this society, our culture's values basically could be summed up with sexual appeal. The shampoo commercial showing a guy kissing his girlfriend who now has prettier hair, the "95 tips for a better body" in magazines, the department store ads encouraging you to buy their products so you too can have a big smile and a cute date like the model in the picture — all center on physical attraction. Because the media is one of the biggest influences on Western culture, finding that same value system in everyday life is easy.

In schools, we effectively trap everyone in status boxes. At prom, everyone votes for a king and queen so the most popular two people can get official titles for their status. The football players and the cheerleaders in many schools get to wear their uniforms on game days, eat special food at special tables in the cafeteria, tend to fill up most of the yearbook with their pictures and get pep rallies so everyone knows who the "It" people are and shout their adulation. School spirit is great, but how come track team and the basketball players don't get those privileges?

And of course, everyone dates. If you haven't hooked a guy or girl, well, what are you worth? Frequently, teens decide to date for the shallow reasons (he's cute or she's a cheerleader), then someone a little more attractive comes along, and somebody gets dumped.

Taking a look at the condition of American teens, too much depression, drugs, eating disorders, suicides and pregnancies alert that something is wrong. While not every case can be blamed on the same thing, much of this problem relates to our harmful value system. If our worth is determined by our weight, tan level and clothes, then while we all gravitate toward looking identical, most of us fall short of the Hollywood ideal. So by our own society's standards, are 99 percent of us less valuable than the cheerleader who got asked out by six different guys, or the cute actor whose face appears in every issue of Seventeen magazine? Because these values are insinuated by everything we see on the media, too many teens can relate to that feeling of inferiority.

As we place more and more value externally, we become increasingly more selfish, shallow and devoid of character or intelligence. If the Capitol represents all the negative aspects of our culture, it's time for a rebellion. Like Katniss volunteering for Prim, helping Rue or taking the berries, what if we became people respected for our character and defy what the Capitol wants? After all, does it matter what Florence Nightingale or Abraham Lincoln looked like?

In the Capitol, Katniss had to forsake her real identity and become a giggling girl twirling around in a glittery dress who was madly in love with a cute guy and had a passion for fashion — just so sponsors would consider her worth a money donation to keep her alive in the Hunger Games. Peeta, to earn respect, had to look strong and prove he could win a girl. No one can blame them for longing to leave the hated Capitol. But if Katniss and Peeta traveled back in time to America today, would they want to stay here either?

Activities: West Texas Writers club, theater at Art and Soul studio, piano, art

What I like about living in Midland: I enjoy living only a relatively short distance from camping and hiking sites such as the Davis Mountains and Carlsbad Caverns. Coming from Houston, I appreciate the dry climate and cool weather in the mornings. Also, Rock the Desert is a super fun event.

COLLEGE

admission for the rest of us. And fortunately, there is no better time than summer to do that.

The most basic thing high schoolers can do during the summer months is to begin building a résumé. Holding a part-time job is an easy way show to dedication and diligence, in addition to earning a little spending money. Even teens not interested in going on to college can benefit, as employers like to see prior work experience. Additionally, most churches have charity projects and missions trips than can give a résumé a philanthropic edge. Even sophomores and freshmen, to whom graduation is a distant dream, can benefit from getting involved.

For those farther into their high school years, juniors especially, summer can be one of the best times to take the dreaded standardized tests. Like a large portion of my school, I am taking the SAT and the ACT in June. During the summer, it is possible to set aside far more time for studying than one could do in the school year, while balancing sports and schoolwork. The extra studying time is likely the only reason why I have not yet even cracked open my ACT workbook, but still am somewhat on schedule.

The most important piece of advice on how to prepare during the summer is something ignored and forgotten by every guidebook. Yes, I could advise you to plan a giant trip all over to the country to visit every single college to which you've ever considered applying, or write a dozen application essays just to find the perfect balance between narrative and commentary or enroll in an expensive course that promises a 100-point gain in SAT scores, but all of that sounds difficult and rather tiresome.

We cannot know the reasons why MISD students do not go on to pursue a degree, it no doubt varies from person to person, but a vast majority of them may simply be tired. After 12 years of school, 12 years of homework, standardized tests and draining extracurricular activities, few people are ready to be torn away from everything they've ever known and tossed into an entirely new environment filled with roommate drama, homesickness and even harder academics. And so, I offer what I think is the most helpful and useful thing to do over the summer, something every teen should do great amounts of if he or she wants to be prepared for college: relax.

'Chronicle': A 'found footage' film that is a cut above the rest

LINDSEY BELL
@tallcityteens

A new genre that is appearing a lot in films is the category found footage. These types of movies include recordings recovered from a handheld camera that create the story of the film. I have enjoyed some of the found footage movies that include "The Blair Witch Project," "Paranormal Activity," and "Cloverfield." But others have the qualities of a low budget film and shaky camera stills that I don't really enjoy. "Chronicle," however, is different from all those other films and is the movie that should be included at your next summer movie night.

"Chronicle" is a story of a socially awkward teen, Andrew, who is struggling through his high school and his home life. While he proceeds to be abused verbally and physically by his fellow peers and family, he decides it is time to do something different with his life and agrees to go to a party with his cousin, Matt. It is at that party that Andrew, Matt and a fellow classmate make a discovery that would change their lives forever.

These three high school teens discover and acquire telekinetic powers they use at first for their own self-regarding amusement. But they later learn, through consistent practice with these powers, they can't control the overwhelming authority they have been given. As all three of their lives slowly dissolve out of their reach, you learn the real problems that will ruin them. But to discover this, you must watch "Chronicle" and learn the story of these three amazing teenagers.

Don't be fooled by other found footage films that may have ruined your taste for this genre. "Chronicle" includes incredible special effects and is filmed perfectly on a handheld camera that doesn't fly all over the place. So instead of getting whiplash and being disappointed by those other movies, rent this DVD and be transformed into actually liking this genre again.

SONGS

from school.

9. "I Like It (feat. Pitbull)" by Enrique Iglesias. This song is great to get your blood pumping at a crazy summer party. Yelling it at the top of your lungs with your friends beside you helps release the tension of school. A good beat and Enrique's auto-tuned voice makes this song a must-have for summer.

8. "Summer Fling, Don't Mean A Thing" by New Found Glory. What song could be better for a summer playlist than one about a girl who loves summer romances? This catchy alternative rock tune will get stuck in your head after the second listen and leave you ready for your own summer fling!

7. "Dear Maria, Count Me In" by All Time Low. A great band for the summer all around, All Time Low provides another hit. This fast-paced ride about a couple and their time on tour is fun for parties, and might even make you know where you want to go for your first concert of the summer break.

6. "Magic (feat. Rivers Cuomo)" by B.o.b. I'm not all that into rap songs, but this one has an exciting chorus and such lighthearted sounding verses I just can't help loving it. Maybe this song will inspire you to find the magic in a new friend this summer!

5. "City Is Ours" by Big Time Rush. I will freely admit I am a huge fan of this band, and this song is great for pumping yourself up for a big trip or pool party. Boy bands and bubblegum pop are somewhat controversial, but this song has enough of a dance and rock edge, you might just have to give it a try.

4. "1985" by Bowling For Soup. This is a song that my family always sings, or yells, along to when it comes on. No one can deny this song has staying power! So maybe it will never get played in the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, but it can certainly live on in the Summer Family Vacation Hall of Fame!

3. "Summertime" by Kenny Chesney. When this song came out, I had no iPod, no computer and no phone, so to find new music, the radio was my best friend. This is one of my favorites from several years back, and has stayed with me as one of my must-have summer jams. For all the country fans out there, this one's for you!

2. "Tonight Tonight" by Hot Chelle Rae. OK, so maybe this was last year's top summer song, but haven't you ever heard of recycling? No matter what year it is, this probably always will be in the top 10 for any summer playlist, because of its danceable beat, hilarious lyrics and carefree yet kick-butt attitude. You just can't have a summer get-together without playing this song!

1. "Call Me Maybe" by Carly Rae Jepsen. Who hasn't heard this unbelievably popular tune yet? Even though it came out at least two and a half months ago, it has stayed in the top 10 most popular songs on iTunes since the YouTube video of Carly, Justin Beiber, Selena Gomez and other celebrity friends goofing around lip-syncing to the song was released. Even though Jepsen repeats the same lyrics over and over again, those lyrics are undeniably easy to get caught in your head. I guarantee you, listen to this breezy, singable track once, and it will become a must for summer. (I'm not just saying that because you will have to listen to it so much to get it out of your head!)

These songs are some of the most popular to sing to with friends while simply hanging out at a party or relaxing on vacation. Hopefully, I've provided a nice mix of rock, country, pop and hip-hop songs that will leave you singing all the way into the first day of school. Have a great summer, and happy listening!

Withrow prepares for future as MLB draft nears

Cindeka Nealy/Reporter-Telegram

By Jordan Mason
Sports Writer

Matt Withrow saw the MLB scouts at each of his starts this past season at Midland Christian.

Yet with the 2012 MLB First-Year Player Draft looming today, Withrow hasn't been sweating whether or not his name will be called in the next 72 hours. In fact, Withrow — now 10 days removed from high school graduation and 25 days removed from a state cham — spent the past weekend at a lake with friends and family.

"He's enjoying that and really enjoyed the fact that he had the opportunity to play in the state championship," his father, Mike, said.

Matt said days before the state championship that he had no reason to agonize over his draft status and that remains true.

For Mike, no matter what happens in the draft, he is happy to see a third son move on from the Mustang baseball program to play at a higher level. And

"We're extremely happy for the opportunities plus we're extremely proud for the opportunities that were given to us by Midland Christian," Mike said. "That school has been outstanding for all of my boys."

Mike said he doesn't believe his son has any expectations as far as the draft is concerned — just grateful to have two good opportunities when one includes Texas Tech, where Matt has signed to play in college.

Draft nuts, however, haven't been as unassuming regarding his draft status, as MinorLeagueBall.com has projected Matt to go 368th overall to the Philadelphia Phillies.

Mike said Matt hasn't discussed what he'll do with his family if he is indeed selected. But the Withrows do feel better prepared for handling that situation after Matt's oldest brother, Chris, was selected 20th overall in 2007 by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"Most of the time what the scouts look at is as based on ability and not necessarily whether or not they can sign you," Mike said. "They look at it that way and I understand that process.

"Understanding the process has been a huge benefit to us."

Midland Christian coach Mike Munguia said that Matt's understanding of what it takes to be successful will help him as well. Munguia said his maturity as a player is what he'll remember most when looking back on Matt's final season at Midland Christian.

"He figured out the work that

Rangers Cruz by Angels

Chris Carlson/AP

Texas' Nelson Cruz celebrates a two-run home run Sunday against the Los Angeles Angels during the seventh inning in Anaheim, Calif. The Rangers beat the Angels, 7-3.

Cruz's home run helps Rangers beat Angels

Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Texas manager Ron Washington gave Nelson Cruz the green light on 3-0, then watched the slugger put reliever Bobby Cassevah's sinker into orbit.

Cruz's tape-measure drive in the seventh inning helped Matt Harrison win his third straight start as the Rangers beat the Los Angeles Angels 7-3 on Sunday to avoid a three-game sweep.

"It's fun to see how far it goes, but the main thing the situation it came in," Cruz said. "I didn't watch where it landed, but I watched it go far enough."

Rangers	7
Angels	3

Using a 34-ounce Louisville Slugger model No. R-13 that measures 35 inches, Cruz reached the championship flag poles in left-center. The ball was estimated to have traveled 484 feet, making it the longest home run in the majors this season, according to the Angels based on information from ESPN Home Run Tracker.

But teammate Josh Hamilton was quite skeptical.

"That's not right. When we come back here, we're going to bring a rangefinder and we're going to get an accurate measurement on that ball," said Hamilton, the major leagues' home run leader. "That was the farthest ball I've ever seen hit. When you think about it, unless the wall is lying — is says 387 to the wall, and 100 feet past that is 487. But the ball went another 100 feet past that. So I can't wait to come back here."

Cassevah took it all in stride.

"Butch came out before that pitch, so we knew he was swinging," the right-hander said, referring to pitching coach Mike Butcher. "I was trying to throw a strike. But the sinker didn't sink, it was right over the middle, and he got all of it. But a home run's a home run to me, no matter how far they go. The hitter wants to see how far it goes. I don't. I just go on to the next guy."

Cruz said Washington also turned him loose on a 3-0 count his previous time up. He took the pitch out of the strike zone before a flyout to left field.

"He's capable with one swing of the bat of doing exactly what he did in the seventh inning, and he was in a good position," Washington said. "I told the team last night that I wanted us to get back to being aggressive, so I had to be aggressive, too. I just gave him the 3-0 hack and he did a good job with it."

The victory ended a four-game skid by the two-time defending AL champions, who lead the Angels by 4 1/2 games in the West. The clubs play 13 more times during the regular season.

"Two out of three is not bad against a good team like Texas because they're the champs, so you've got to be happy with it," Angels outfielder Torii Hunter said. "We know them, they know us, and it's going to be a battle all year long. Right now we're getting by. We're playing a lot better baseball than we did the first six weeks, but we're a lot better than what we've shown."

Lawrence steps down as Lee girls basketball coach

By Jonathan Hull
Sports Writer

When Rosalind Lawrence took over the Lee girls basketball program in 2009, she inherited a tough situation. The Lady Rebels won just three games in her first season as their head coach, and it was hard to imagine the program getting much lower.

However, the Lady Rebels improved by 10 games in Lawrence's second seasoh in 2010-2011 and took them to the postseason for the first time since 2008. They returned to the playoffs this past season, which turned out to be Lawrence's last at the helm of the program.

Lawrence resigned as head coach of the Lady Rebels last week after amassing a 27-64 record in three seasons. And, while the record may not show it, her peers were impressed with the significant improvement the Lady Rebels showed during her tenure patrolling the sidelines for them at Chaparral Center.

"She was the right person at the right time for us," MISD Athletic Director Todd Howey said. "She dug her heels in and really established herself. She put a lot of expectations on our girls and held our girls accountable. She built a foundation, establishing the junior high program, that should pay dividends in the near future. The job is much better after she came here. There's expectations now with this position."

Lawrence

The job was officially posted on the Lee High School website Friday. Lawrence is planning on moving to the Houston area in order to be closer to members of her family. She doesn't have another coaching job lined up yet, but has three coaching interviews scheduled in the area this week.

"I'm just trying to be closer to my family," Lawrence said. "My family always came to me in Midland; but I have nieces I want to see participate more in sports and I couldn't do that in Midland."

Lawrence said the decision didn't come easy, saying it was hard to leave behind both her athletes and teaching peers.

"The people of Midland have been so welcoming to me," Lawrence said. "The department I worked with and other coaches were hard to leave. Lee is so well ran by Ms. (Stephanie)

Drillers use two big innings to power past RockHounds

By Jordan Mason
Sports Writer

The Midland RockHounds managed to wiggle out of jam after jam early Sunday, but that didn't last for long.

The Tulsa Drillers eventually started turning hits into runs, exploding for six runs in the fifth and four in the seventh of an 11-2 victory at Citibank Ballpark.

Ben Paulsen finally opened the floodgates in the top of the fifth with a two-out triple with the bases loaded that ignited the Driller run.

"Everybody was seeing the ball well in the first part of the game," Paulsen said, "and we knew were just going to keep hitting."

Tulsa seemed poised to score in each of the first three innings, leading off with a base hit each inning. Yet despite having a runner on third in each inning, the Drillers were unable to put a run on the board before the fifth inning.

RockHounds	2

The Drillers opened the game with two base hits before Midland turned a 4-6-3 double play then got Josh Rutledge out at home after he tried to score on a wild pitch.

Tulsa stranded a runner at third in the next two innings before RockHound starter Gary Daley retired the side in order in the fourth.

"They were getting hits, but they were ground balls that just happened to get through," Midland manager Steve Scarsone said. "Gary was keeping the ball down and able to get out of those jams early, I thought maybe that was a good sign."

Scarsone

But Daley finally got into a jam he couldn't wiggle out of in the fifth, when Tulsa sandwiched two walks around a Jose Gonzalez double to load the bases with no outs.

Warren Schaeffer then blooped a first pitch to shallow left for an RBI single and the game's first run.

A Mike Mitchell sacrifice fly made it 2-0 two batters later before Daley walked the bases loaded again.

Paulsen finally made him pay when he laced a bases-clearing triple off the wall in deep left to put Tulsa up 5-0 and end Daley's day on the mound.

"It felt good — I haven't done too well this year with guys on base," Paulsen said. "So, it was one of those things where I was just trying to relax and slow my heart rate down, and I luckily caught some barrel and the ball went a pretty far way."

The hit was equally devastating for Midland, as it came with two outs in a two-run game

"(Daley) was a pitch away from maybe sneaking out with two runs," Scarsone said. "Who knows what happens after that?"

The next batter, Angelys Nina, scored Paulsen when he reached out and punched an RBI single into left for a 6-0 lead.

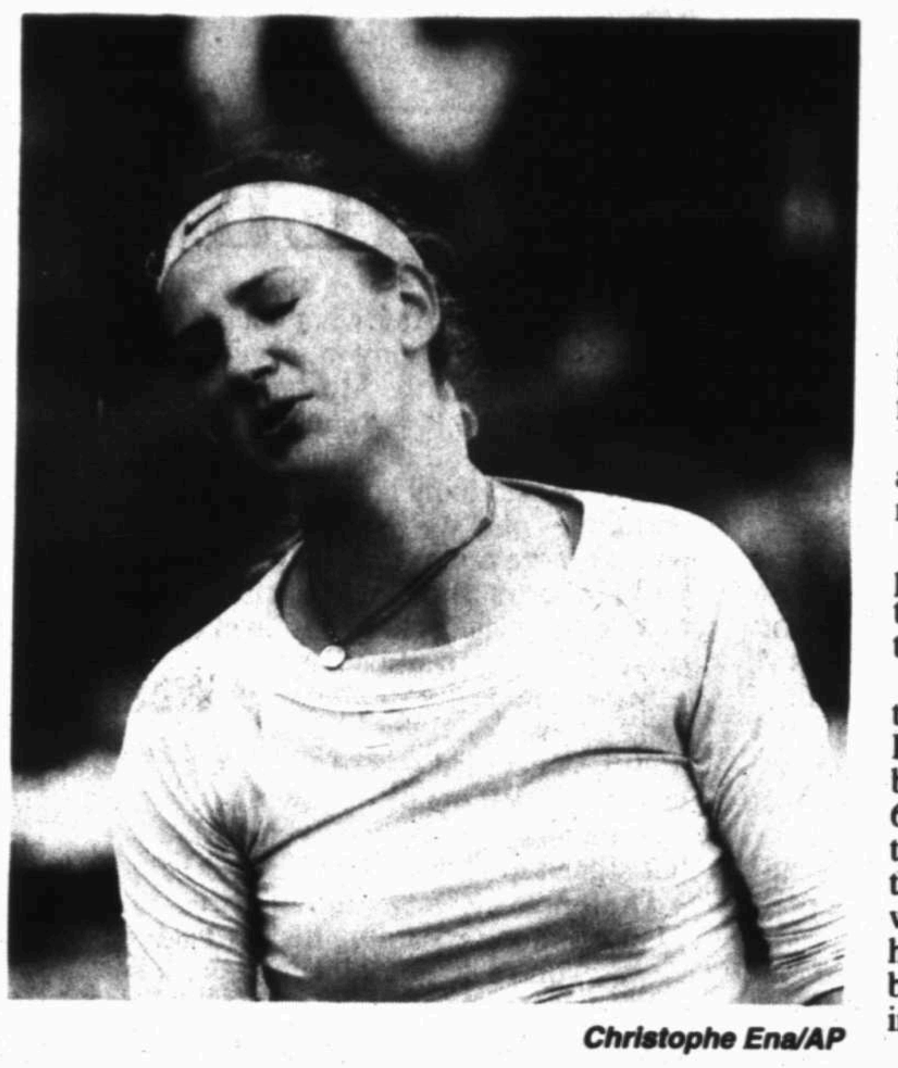

The RockHounds finally got in the board in the bottom of the sixth when Conner Crumbliss scored on a Leonardo Gil groundout, but that was all the scoring Midland got in the inning while the Drillers bats remained hot.

Paulsen knocked in his fourth run of the game in the top of seventh before Nina launched a 1-1 pitch over the left field wall for a three-run shot off Carlos Hernandez that made it 10-1.

Djokovic, Federer win, Azarenka doesn't

By Howard Fendrich

Victoria Azarenka closes her eyes after missing a return Sunday in her fourth-round match against Dominika Cibulkova at the French Open in Paris. Cibulkova won in two sets, 6-2. 7-6.

PARIS — There was a moment, a little past 4 p.m. on a dank and dreary Sunday at the French Open, when the gray sky above appeared to be falling on some of the best of the best.

A listless Novak Djokovic, looking very little like someone ranked No. 1 and bidding to become the first man in 43 years to win four consecutive Grand Slam titles, was trying to work his way out of a two-set deficit against 22nd-seeded Andreas Seppi of Italy on Court Philippe Chatrier.

Even more astonishingly, a flummoxed Roger Federer, owner of a record 16 major championships, was trudging to the sideline after dropping his first set against 109th-ranked David Goffin of Belgium, a 21-year-old kid thrilled merely to be sharing Court Suzanne Lenglen with his idol. Goffin, it must be noted, was a "lucky loser" — a player beaten in qualifying who got to make his Grand Slam debut only because someone else withdrew.

By that point, one significant upset already was complete Sunday: The No. 1-seeded woman, Australian Open champion Victoria Azarenka, was headed home after losing to No. 15 Dominika Cibulkova of Slovakia 6-2, 7-6 (4), busting a racket on the way out the door.

Asked afterward what she'll do to recover from the defeat, Azarenka replied sarcastically, "I'm going to kill myself," then added: "This tournament is over for me. What's to recover from?"

It seemed reasonable, if ever so briefly, to ask in the afternoon whether the tournament might soon be over in the fourth round for Djokovic and Federer, too. In the end, of course, the answer was no.

For quite some time, Djokovic missed shots this way and that, then shook his head or yelled at himself or spread his arms wide with palms up as if to ask, "What's going on here?" He finished with 81 unforced errors in all, exactly his total for his first three matches combined. But Seppi's not nearly as accustomed to these stages or stakes, and Djokovic pulled out a 4-6, 6-7 (5), 6-3, 7-5, 6-3 victory, his 25th in a row at a major tournament.

"One of those days where ... nothing is working," Djokovic said. "I could not get into the rhythm."

He began to turn things around by breaking serve to begin the third set, and he kept on doing that, nine times in all.

"Maybe I could have started the third set better. I could have done a little more there," Seppi said. "But he returns very well, and gets serves back almost always, which makes things difficult."

Djokovic recognized that part of his problems early on had to do with better-than-expected play by Seppi, who knocked off No. 14 Fernando Verdasco to get past the third round at a major tournament for the first time.

So after they shook hands at the net when Djokovic finally closed out the 4-hour, 18-minute win, the Serb applauded Seppi and pointed toward the Italian, telling the crowd to salute him.

The third-seeded Federer, the 2009 champion at Roland Garros, did that one better after his 5-7, 7-5, 6-2, 6-4 victory, giving Goffin a tap on the head and a pat on the backside when they were done playing, then hugging him at the crowd's behest during an on-court interview.

What a thrill for the Belgian, who unabashedly spoke earlier in the tournament about having photos and posters of Federer up in his bedroom as a child.

"I've had an extraordinary week," said the slender Goffin, who might be mistaken for a ball boy. "The icing on the cake was to play here against Roger."

Once Federer seized control in the second and third sets, the outcome never really seemed in doubt. In the last set, Goffin won one point with a touch volley, then raised his index finger — signaling No. 1 — and, to the delight of roaring spectators, bowed to all four corners of the arena.

Later, Goffin explained, it felt as though "the stadium was on fire."

Howard and it was hard telling the girls, even the ones that have already left."

Lawrence is proud of what the Lee program achieved in her final two seasons as head coach compared to where it was when she first took it over. But, she's not prepared to take all the credit for it.

"I would like to think I'm a miracle worker but that's not true," Lawrence said. "It's the parent's participation and the girls being more committed that led to that. We had eight girls on our summer team when I started. This year we have three teams. That speaks about the kids' commitment. It was a matter of exposing them to a basketball culture."

Howey said there wouldn't be a great rush in filling the position, but did admit he can't take too long due to school already being out. He said he's already had several phone calls and emails about the job from prospective candidates, but also notes an issue that seems exclusive to the Permian Basin when filling a coaching position.

"There's a lot of factors involved in Midland right now and the biggest thing is the cost of living here," Howey said. "It's hard to find people who can afford to move here. That's a big factor. I feel confident we will find a quality replacement, but this is an issue almost nobody else in the state has to factor in."

Whoever her replacement might be, Lawrence is certain of one thing — the Lady Rebels will continue to improve on the hardwood.

"I have no doubt they will continue to build on the traditions at Lee," Lawrence said. "I'm willing to say they will even win a round in the playoffs this year. Every year they got better and they never stop playing hard. That's half the battle right there."

needed to be put in on a daily basis and did it and kind of figured out what a leadership role is supposed to be," Munguia said. "When you can put yourself at that young of an age and in those kind of pressure spots you can carry that on to the next level."

Because of that maturity, not to mention his tools as a power pitcher, Munguia said he believes Matt will be successful in whatever he decides to do when the draft is over.

"He's got that opportunity, and I think if he took anything and if he's learned anything over the last few years is that the work ethic that it takes in season and off season," Munguia said. "I think he began to figure it out and if that stays with him he's got the potential to do whatever he wants."

ROCKHOUNDS

From 1C

Midland got a run in the bottom of the inning on a Ryan Ortiz RBI single, but Tulsa got it right back in the next inning when Josh Rutledge crushed a 1-2 pitch into the picnic area behind the left field bullpen for a solo shot off Hernandez. Rutledge had four hits for the second consecutive game.

Midland, meanwhile, had a hard time solving the Driller pitching for the second consecutive game, as Conner Crumbliss and Jeremy Barfield accounted for half of the RockHounds' hits.

"If we were chasing bad pitches and looking undisciplined at the plate I would say that, obviously, we need to regroup," Scarsone said. "But I think we're having good at-bats, we're not necessarily making the consistent contact, but over the course of the season you're going to see that.

The RockHounds wrap up the six-game homestand at 6:30 p.m. today looking for their first win against Tulsa in the series. And even after two disappointing losses, Scarsone said his team feels like a win is well within its grasp.

"We were even commenting in the dugout during the game, 'There's no reason why it can't be a lopsided game (today) in our favor,'" Scarsone said. "Just with a couple of little things to fall and a big inning here just like they had, and next thing you know it's the other side of the coin."

Jordan Mason can be reached at jmason@mrt.com.

'HOUND BITES: Anthony Aliotti reached base for the 22nd consecutive game with a double to left in the bottom of the seventh. Aliotti started the game with a flyout and a 4-6-3 double play before finally getting on base in his third at-bat. The designated hitter was 1-for-4 on the day. ... Michael Fabiaschi made his first appearance in this stint with the RockHounds on Sunday as a relief pitcher in the ninth. Fabiaschi retired the side in order. ... Midland missed yet another chance to move closer to Texas League South-leading Frisco as the RoughRiders fell for the second straight game to the Northwest Arkansas Naturals. The RockHounds remain four games behind Frisco in the standings.

TODAY'S PROBABLES: Dan Straily (2-4, 4.20) is expected to start the last of a six-game homestand for Midland while Parker Frazier (2-6, 3.36) is expected to start for Tulsa.

Celtics beat Heat in overtime, tie East finals

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press

Celtics	93
Heat	91 (OT)

Series tied, 2-2

BOSTON — Rajon Rondo had 15 points and 15 assists, and scored the final three points of the Boston Celtics' 93-91 overtime victory over the Miami Heat on Sunday night that evened the Eastern Conference finals at two games apiece.

Getting a huge break when LeBron James fouled out for the first time since joining the Heat, the Celtics recovered after blowing an 18-point lead in regulation and moved two games away from a third trip to the NBA finals in five years.

Kevin Garnett added 17 points and 14 rebounds for the Celtics, while Paul Pierce scored 23 points before fouling out. Ray Allen finished with 16 points.

"Stops," Rondo said when asked what was the difference in the tight game. "I think we executed offensively, came up with some lucky plays and we got stops at the end."

James had 29 points and Dwyane Wade scored 20 after another dismal start for the Heat, which host Game 5 on Tuesday.

In a game that started as a Celtics blowout and turned into a foul- and tension-filled fourth quarter, followed by the second overtime in this series, the Celtics held on when Wade missed a potential winning 3-pointer on the last possession.

"We knew they were going to Wade. I wanted to check him," Rondo said. "They set a great pick. ... We're lucky we got a stop."

Mickael Pietrus drew James' sixth foul and grabbed two huge offensive rebounds that extended consecutive possessions for the Celtics, which lost Game 4 in overtime in a second-round series against the Heat last year with a chance to tie the series.

This time, they overcame their second-half stall on the offensive end by limiting the Heat to just one basket in overtime, by Udonis Haslem.

TEXAS NCAA TOURNAMENT ROUNDUP

Waco Regional

BAYLOR 9, DALLAS BAPTIST 2

WACO — Freshman right-hander Austin Stone pitched 5 1/3 no-hit innings against red-hot Dallas Baptist and senior Dan Evatt broke the game open with a mammoth two-run home run in the third inning Sunday as Baylor won its third straight elimination game, 9-2, to reach the final of the Waco Regional.

The two teams will play again today with a berth in the Super Regional at stake.

Making only his sixth career start, Stone (3-1) used offspeed pitches to baffle the Patriots, which hit .392 and scored 21 runs in winning their first two regional games.

BAYLOR 5, ORAL ROBERTS 2

WACO — Junior Logan Vick had four hits and three RBI to help host Baylor stay alive in the Waco Regional with a 5-2 elimination game win Sunday over Oral Roberts.

Oral Roberts, which sent Baylor into the losers' bracket with a 4-2 win Friday night before an 11-8 loss to Dallas Baptist on Saturday, ends its season at 38-25.

College Station

TCU 5, MISSISSIPPI 2

COLLEGE STATION — TCU starter Brandon Finnegan stifled Mississippi on Sunday night in the Horned Frogs' 5-2 victory.

With the win TCU forced a game Monday night to decide which program will advance to a super regional.

TCU 10, TEXAS A&M 2:

COLLEGE STATION — Stefan Crichton threw a six-hitter and Derek Odell homered to lead TCU to a 10-2 victory over Texas A&M on Sunday, eliminating the College Station Regional's top seed.

Houston Regional

ARKANSAS 5, SAM HOUSTON ST. 1: At Houston, four Arkansas pitchers combined to limit Sam Houston State to one run in the Razorbacks' 5-1 victory Sunday to win the Houston Regional and advance to the super regionals.

Nolan Sanburn (4-1) threw 2 2/3 hitless innings with three strikeouts in relief of Randall Fant, who threw 4 1/3 scoreless innings, allowing four hits for Arkansas (42-19). Brandon Moore allowed a run in the eighth before Colby Suggs threw a hitless ninth.

SAM HOUSTON ST. 4, RICE 1

HOUSTON — Michael Oros allowed one run in eight solid innings, and Sam Houston State advanced to the Houston Regional championship game with a 4-1 win over Rice on Sunday.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

AMERICAN LEAGUE

YANKEES 5, TIGERS 1

DETROIT — Derek Jeter and Alex Rodriguez each homered off Justin Verlander, and Phil Hughes pitched a four-hitter to lead the New York Yankees to a 5-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers on Sunday.

Jeter homered on the first pitch of the game, and Rodriguez hit a long solo shot in the third inning. Hughes (5-5) didn't need much support in throwing his first career complete game of nine innings — last Aug. 2 he went all six innings in a rain-shortened win over the White Sox.

TWINS 5, INDIANS 3

CLEVELAND — Scott Diamond allowed three unearned runs over seven innings for Minnesota.

Joe Mauer hit an RBI single in the first off Justin Masterson (2-5). The Twins star left in the ninth with a sprained right thumb.

ROYALS 2, ATHLETICS 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Alex Gordon and Brayan Pena combined on a play at the plate to preserve a shutout for Vin Mazzaro and three Royals relievers.

BLUE JAYS 5, RED SOX 1

TORONTO — Jose Bautista hit a three-run home run and rookie Drew Hutchison won for the fourth time in five starts.

RAYS 8, ORIOLES 4

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — B.J. Upton hit a tiebreaking two-run double, Matt Moore won for the first time after losing four straight decisions and the Tampa Bay Rays beat the Baltimore Orioles 8-4 on Sunday.

WHITE SOX 4, MARINERS 2

CHICAGO — Chris Sale pitched a five-hitter for his first major league complete game and Chicago won for the 10th time in 11 games.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

ASTROS 5, REDS 3

HOUSTON — Jordan Lyles pitched seven strong innings, Justin Maxwell hit his third pinch-hit home run this season and the Houston Astros ended a season-worst eight-game losing streak by beating Cincinnati.

BRAVES 3, NATIONALS 2

WASHINGTON — Tommy Hanson shook off an agonizing start to outpitch Gio Gonzalez, and the Atlanta Braves beat the Washington Nationals 3-2 Sunday to end a six-game skid against their NL East rivals.

METS 6, CARDINALS 1

NEW YORK — Jonathon Niese struck out a career-high 10 in six scoreless innings and the Mets shut down the slumping Cardinals for the third straight game, getting a homer and three RBIs from rookie Kirk Nieuwenhuis.

GIANTS 2, CUBS 0

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Zito pitched 8 1-3 scoreless innings for his 150th career win and Joaquin Arias snapped an 18 at-bat hitless stretch with an RBI single that led the San Francisco Giants over the Chicago Cubs.

MARLINS 5, PHILLIES 1

PHILADELPHIA — Carlos Zambrano homered and pitched into the eighth inning, and Hanley Ramirez went deep, too, to lead the Miami Marlins over Philadelphia.

DIAMONDBACKS 6, PADRES 0

SAN DIEGO — Trevor Cahill threw a six-hitter and Paul Goldschmidt, Miguel Montero and Gerardo Parra homered to lead the Arizona Diamondbacks past San Diego.

ROCKIES 3, DODGERS 2

DENVER — Alex White gave the overworked Colorado bullpen some much-needed rest, pitching shutout ball into the seventh inning as the Rockies beat the Los Angeles Dodgers.

PIRATES 6, BREWERS 5

MILWAUKEE — Andrew McCutchen and Garrett Jones hit consecutive homers and James McDonald struck out eight and won for the third time in four starts when the Pittsburgh Pirates beat Milwaukee.

Texas wins NCAA men's golf title

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Texas won its third NCAA men's golf championship defeating Alabama on a 20-foot birdie putt by senior Dylan Frittelli on Sunday at Rivera.

With the match tied at two, Frittelli, who is from South Africa, came to the 18th hole all square with Cory Whitsett. After Whitsett's birdie chip came up well short, Frittelli drained his birdie opportunity.

Alabama took the first two of the five matches. Hunter Hamrick defeated Julio Vegas 6 and 5, while Bobby Wyatt knocked in a 30-foot chip from behind the green to down Toni Hakula, 1 up.

Texas then won the next two matches. Jordan Spieth closed out fellow freshman, Justin Thomas, 3 and 2, while Cody Gribble went 3-0 in match play, defeating Scott Strohmeyer, 2 and 1, leaving Frittelli to earn the Longhorn's third championship.

Texas also won NCAA Championships in 1971 and 1972, when PGA Tour golfers and major championship winners, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite were on the team.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

PGA

MEMORIAL: At Dublin, Ohio, with a remarkable rally even by his standards, Tiger Woods birdied three of his last four holes to win the Memorial on Sunday and match tournament host Jack Nicklaus with his 73rd title on the PGA Tour.

Woods was one shot behind and looking at probable bogey in deep rough behind the 16th green when he chipped in from 50 feet for birdie to tie for the lead. In the group behind him, Rory Sabbatini made bogey from the bunker on the 16th hole and never caught up.

Woods closed with a 5-under 67, matching the best score of the final round. He won the Memorial for the fifth time. Woods and Nicklaus are tied for second place in career wins on tour, trailing Sam Snead at 82.

PGA European

WALES OPEN: At Newport, Wales, Thailand's Thongchai Jaidee survived a poor start to win the Wales Open by 1 stroke on Sunday, with a final round 1-over 72 in wet conditions.

The 42-year-old Jaidee, who was the leader through three rounds, holed four birdies on the back nine at Celtic Manor, after bogeying the fourth and double-bogeying the par-five ninth, where he went out of bounds before finding a bunker.

Jaidee finished 6-under 278 for his fifth European Tour title and his first in mainland Europe.

The Netherlands' Jooist Luiten (72) and Denmark's Thomas Bjorn (68) shared second place with Spain's Gonzalo Fernandez-Castano (67) and South Africa's Richard Sterne (68) at 5-under.

Tony Dejak/AP

Tiger Woods holds up the trophy after winning the Memorial on Sunday at the Muirfield Village Golf Club in Dublin, Ohio. Woods finished at 9-under par.

Champions

PRINCIPAL CHARITY CLASSIC: At West Des Moines, Iowa, Jay Haas finished with a 16-under 197 total to win the Principal Charity Classic by five strokes on Sunday, becoming the first golfer to win the Champions Tour event in Iowa three times.

Haas, the winner at Glen Oaks Country Club in 2007 and 2008, led by three shots heading into Sunday and made it stand up with a final round 5-under 66.

Nationwide

REX OPEN: At Raleigh, N.C., James Hahn earned his first Nationwide Tour victory Sunday by beating Scott Parel on the second hole of a playoff at the Rex Hospital Open.

Hahn shot a 4-under 67 and joined Parel at 13-under 271. Both players had pars on the par-4 No. 18, and Hahn birdied the par-5 No. 9 while Parel had a par on the second playoff hole.

AUTORACING

FROM WIRE REPORTS

JOHNSON WINS FOR 7TH TIME AT DOVER: At Dover, Del., Jimmie Johnson dominated again and has won for the seventh time at Dover International Speedway on Sunday.

Johnson matches Richard Petty and Bobby Allison for most career victories on the 1-mile concrete track. Johnson also stretches the Hendrick Motorsports' winning streak to three. Johnson won at Darlington Raceway and Kasey Kahne won the Coca Cola 600.

Johnson also won the non-points All-Star race during that span as the No. 48 Chevrolet is heating up as he chases a sixth Cup championship.

Kevin Harvick, Matt Kenseth, Dale Earnhardt Jr., and Clint Bowyer round out the top five.

SCOTT DIXON WINS SHORTENED DETROIT GRAND PRIX: AT Detroit, Scott Dixon has won IndyCar's Detroit Grand Prix that was marred because poor track conditions stopped the race for a little more than 2 hours.

A red flag halted the event Sunday 45 laps into a race that was scheduled for 90 laps and shortened to 60.

TORRENCE WINS TOP FUEL AT NHRA SUPERNATIONALS: At Englishtown, N.J., Steve Torrence earned his second Top Fuel victory of the season on Sunday, beating Brandon Bernstein in the final round at NHRA Supernationals.

Torrence eliminated Tony Schumacher and Spencer Massey in earlier rounds before using a horsepower advantage to edge Bernstein for the title. Torrence's dragster finished in 3.800 seconds at 323.66 mph while Bernstein posted a time of 3.807 seconds at 321.04 mph.

Johnny Gray (Funny Car), Greg Anderson (Pro Stock) and Eddie Krawiec (Pro Stock Motorcycle) also were winners at the Full Throttle Drag Racing Series event at Old Bridge Township Raceway Park.

Gray beat teammate Ron Capps for his first victory of the season and second of his career. Capps was making his fifth consecutive final round appearance.

Nigel Kinrade/AP

Jimmie Johnson poses with the trophy in victory lane after winning the FedEx 400 at Dover International Speedway on Sunday in Dover, Del.

LOCAL FORECAST

Expect a 40 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms after 1 p.m. today. Look for mostly sunny skies with a high around 101 and south winds becoming northeast between 5 and 10 mph. Tonight's forecast calls for a 40 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms and partly cloudy conditions with a low around 71 and north winds becoming southeast between 5 and 10 mph.

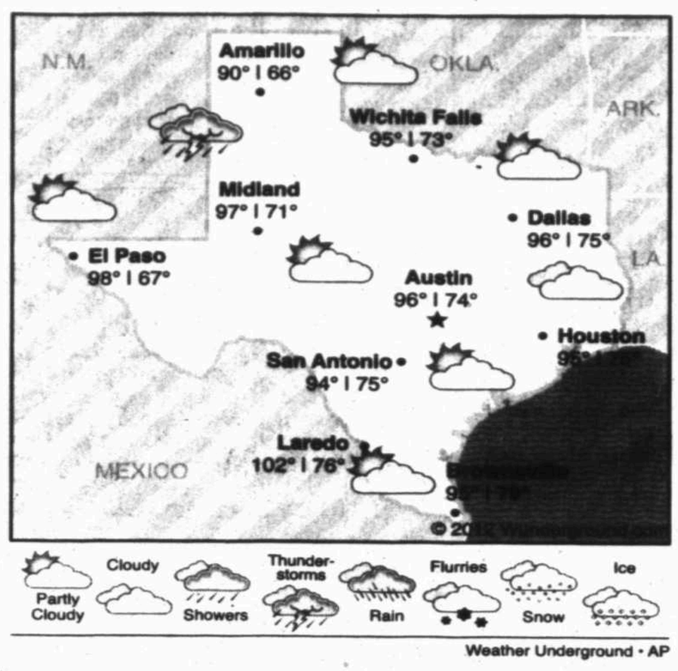

Tuesday, look for a 20 percent chance of isolated showers and thunderstorms after 1 p.m. with a high around 91, a low around 69 and north winds becoming southeast between 5 and 15 mph.

Wednesday, look for a 20 percent chance of isolated showers and thunderstorms with a high around 91 and a low around 71.

The high on Sunday reached 96 while the low dropped to 71. The record high for June 3 is 111 set in 1998. The record low is 47 set in 1947.

As a storm system churns offshore, a steady stream of cool, damp air will flow into the Northeast today. That will lead to a dreary day for New England with clouds, cool winds and some rain. Fog will also cover the coastline. A couple of showers and thunderstorms will dot the rest of the Northeast.

Woman searches for recourse to ex-husband's public abuse

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I'm divorced with a young son. My ex-husband and I share joint custody, and for the most part it has worked well. My problem is that my ex is very bitter about our divorce and the fact I have moved on with my life. He constantly makes derogatory comments to me in front of our son and others.

It is bad enough that my son must witness this, but my ex has taken it a step further. He is the editor of a small newspaper and is now making disparaging comments about me in his column. He is trying to improve his image at my expense; however, I am unable to respond because he won't print a rebuttal in his paper.

The abuse continues despite the divorce, but now the audience is wider. Is this ethical journalism, and how can I put a stop to it? — FRUSTRATED EX

DEAR FRUSTRATED EX: Using a newspaper column to continue a personal vendetta over a failed marriage is not ethical journalism, although it may make for titillating reading. You do not have to tolerate his public sniping. Take the offensive clippings to your lawyer and ask him or her to write a strong letter to the publisher of the newspaper — because THAT'S who will be liable if there are grounds for a lawsuit.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I attended a wedding in September of last year. We purchased expensive crystal for the bride and groom, which cost us nearly $600. This was separate from the bridal shower gift we gave them in May. We have not received thank-you notes for either of these gifts.

My husband told me that you have said it's appropriate to send thank-you notes up to one year after the wedding. My mother taught me to send them as quickly as possible.

My sister had her wedding thank-you notes out in three weeks, and I had mine out in two weeks. My sister and I both worked and were setting up new households with our husbands, but we felt it was a priority. We wanted to ensure that our family and friends knew how much their thoughtfulness was appreciated.

Can you please clarify thank-you note etiquette? I am tired of wondering if my gifts were received and appreciated. — DISGUSTED IN DELAWARE

DEAR DISGUSTED: I have said in the past that a thank-you note anytime is better than none at all. However, good manners dictate that thank-you notes should follow within three months at the latest, and preferably within one month -- regardless of whether the giver has been thanked verbally.

DEAR ABBY: I work in the medical field and have recently learned about a campaign that was launched in England. It urges people to store the word "ICE" (In Case of Emergency) in their cellphone address book, along with the phone number of the person you would want contacted.

It's such a simple idea, but it could be extremely helpful in an emergency situation. It would save ambulance crews and hospital staff precious time and ensure that a patient's loved ones are contacted as quickly as possible.

If you agree the idea is worthwhile, please mention it in your column and help to get this initiated in the United States. — TANYA F., MIAMI

DEAR TANYA: The idea is certainly worth considering; however, I would offer a minor adjustment. I would recommend that it be indexed under "Emergency Contact" rather than an obscure heading such as "ICE."

Bidding Quiz

Q 1 — Both vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ A K 7 6 ♡ A K 10 6 ◇ 8 ♣ A K 9 7
What is your opening bid?
A — You might make slam opposite the right Yarborough, but that does not mean you should open two clubs — you might not be able to handle the subsequent auction. Bid one club and see what develops.

Q 2 — Both vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ K 10 3 ♡ A J 9 7 6 ◇ 8 5 3 ♣ 9 4
The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♣	1♠	?

What action do you take?
A — You would like to show your goodish five-card major but you are not strong enough to take any forcing action. For the moment, all you can do is bid one no-trump — you might be able to show your hearts later.

Q 3 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠ 9 7 2 ♡ A Q 8 ◇ K 8 ♣ K J 10 6 2
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A — What's the problem — a two-club bid now is forcing? Your hand is loaded with tenace positions, and it seems right for you to become declarer. Jump to two no-trump.

Q 4 — Both vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ 9 6 5 2 ♡ K Q 10 5 ◇ 8 4 ♣ 9 6 5
The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1◇	Pass	1♡	Pass
3♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A — The last bid you wanted to hear. You can't raise clubs, you have no support for diamonds, your hearts are not rebiddable and your spades are not good enough for three no-trump, but you must bid something. All you can do is take a false preference to three diamonds!

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, June 4, 2012:

This year you often feel as if you are combustible, but you need to remember to stay calm and easy. People, including you, are impulsive and could have short fuses. Be smart — process your feelings and have control over your words. Pick appropriate times to have serious conversations with others. If you are single, you will be unusually popular this year. If you are attached, focus on working with your sweetie in disagreements. SAGITTARIUS also is putting emphasis on communication.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Misplaced frustration or anger, when coupled with a lunar eclipse, could cause a problem to amplify. If you find that you become irritated, choose to say little and work through it within. If someone else appears to be out of kilter, try not to react. Demonstrate your wisdom in interpersonal relationships. Tonight: Listen to several friends' war stories of the day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ You are a sign known to handle money well, and usually you do. Right now, you need to be very careful with your personal funds. You might be lacking self-discipline, and that makes an error possible. Play it conservatively, and you will be left smiling. Postpone your desire to talk through a problem with a loved one. Tonight: Note the hectic pace around you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ With the lunar eclipse directly impacting your sign, stay level when dealing with others. Play it cool, and you will be a lot happier. Recognize that others are under similar pressure. Keep your focus, and handle what you must. If you decide to head in a new direction or make a resolution, give it a day. Tonight: Once more, you are in a social whirlwind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ Stay focused, whether you are doing something difficult or something very simple. As a child of the Moon, lunar eclipses can hit you very hard. You might feel a little down. Know that this, too, will pass. Give yourself the gift of not reacting. Tonight: Vanish while you can. Do something you've secretively wanted to do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Despite the eclipse, you are on a roll and have no intention of stopping. Your sense of humor emerges in situations involving confusion. Realize that someone might very well be upset. You need to be sensitive to this person. You cannot ignore his or her vulnerability. Tonight: Use your creativity when making plans.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ Pressure builds and forces you to do something in order to let off some steam. The biggest mistake you could make would be doing nothing and holding everything in. It's as if you have to juggle two opposing interests. Tonight: Happily head home, lock the door and screen your calls.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ No one can predict when his or her popularity or insecurity will soar; however, today you will experience one or the other. You might be juggling more than you would like. Avoid becoming overly serious. Attempt to stay tuned in to your needs, as well as those of someone who is active in your daily life. Tonight: Say "yes" to the right offer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ You could be so overwhelmed that you might not be sure of yourself and your decisions. You offer a lot, but often find the behavior of key people in your life to be confusing. Do not take risks with your finances. Tonight: Balance your checkbook first.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★ You could get hot under the collar when dealing with a boss or someone you need to answer to. You might be acting out in response to this person's feelings. Stop. Stay cool, calm and collected if possible. Tonight: Beam in your desires.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ Take your time handling a personal matter. You might be picking up on something, or realize that some fact is out of sync. You seem to go way overboard when discussing a situation with people, but when the facts finally get sorted out, others will feel better — and so will you. Tonight: Play it low-key.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You mean well, but no matter what you do, you seem to be out of sync. Your feelings are intense, and you might have difficulty understanding why a loved one is being so difficult right now. You are so devoted to your friends that perhaps this person is jealous. Tonight: Only where the gang is.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Somehow, no matter which way you turn, you encounter a problem. Be clear about what you want from a child or loved one. Receiving a clear message could be as challenging as sending one, as a haze seems to surround you. Tonight: A late night.

Legal & Public Notices

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR FLUID INJECTION WELL PERMIT

Linn Operating, Inc., 600 Travis, Suite 5100, Houston, TX, 77002, is applying to the Railroad Commission of Texas for a permit to inject fluid into a formation which is productive of oil and gas.

The applicant proposes to inject fluid into the San Andres formation, Nobles Lease, Well Number 30. The proposed disposal well is located 2.4 miles Southwest of Midland, in the Spraberry (Trend Area) Field, in Midland County. Fluid will be injected into strata in the subsurface depth interval from 4,900' 5,100'.

LEGAL AUTHORITY: Chapter 27 of the Texas Water Code, as amended, Title 3 of the Texas Natural Resources Code, as amended, and the Statewide Rules of the Oil and Gas Division of the Railroad Commission of Texas.

Requests for a public hearing from persons who can show they are adversely affected or requests for further information concerning any aspect of the application should be submitted in writing, within fifteen days of publication, to the Environmental Services Section, Oil and Gas Division, Railroad Commission of Texas, P.O. Box 12967, Austin, Texas 78711 (Telephone 512/463-6792).

PROPOSED CITY COUNCIL CONSIDERATION at BEAL PARK

Pursuant to Title 3, Chapter 26 of the Parks and Wildlife Code of Texas, the City Council of the City of Midland will hold a public hearing at 10:42 a.m. on June 12, 2012 in the City Council Chamber, 300 N. Loraine Street to consider a request to establish a storm water detention basin on a portion of Beal Park for the purpose of storing storm water and any improvements, appurtenances or structures run-off resulting from the construction of a residential subdivision to be known as Floyd Acres. (Generally located at the east side of Beal Parkway, approximately 1,000 feet north of Wall Street.)

The meeting facility is accessible to disabled persons. A wheelchair entry ramp is located at the southeast entrance to City Hall. A parking space designated for use by disabled persons is available near the southeast entrance doors. Any disabled person needing special accommodations or hearing impaired persons wishing to have an interpreter should request services through the Administrative Services Department at least 48 hours prior to the scheduled meeting by contacting the City of Midland, at (432) 685-7247. If communication via TDD is required, please call 1-800-735-2989.
