Injection of waste approved

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The underground injection of sewage and industrial waste in Texas by cities, refineries and other industrial complexes is done in such a way that it poses no danger to drinking water sources, a federal agency says.

The approval of the Environmental Protection Agency was announced this week in the Federal Register. The endorsement, given Dec. 30, became effective Wednesday, the federal publication said.

Cities and industries in Texas have been disposing of their sewage or industrial waste by injecting it below underground sources of drinking water, but until the EPA action they had state approval only. Eddie Lee, director of the EPA's office of Public Affairs in Dallas, said Thursday.

Under the Safe Drinking Water Act, the EPA is required to screen and rule on programs in any state, so that it can "prevent underground injection which endangers drinking water sources."

Acting EPA administrator John W. Hernandez ruled that the Texas underground injection program "will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities, since this rule only approves state actions. It imposes no new requirements."

The Texas approval is the first the EPA has given, except for Oklahoma's application for underground oil and gas injection, said Dick Whittington, EPA regional administrator in Dallas.

The federal approval for Texas covers all aspects of underground injection in Texas except for that of oil, gas or geothermal resources.

Nonetheless, Lee said, the ruling is particularly important in areas of Texas where oil and gas play a major role in the economy.

"Such as Houston, all of the Beaumont-Lake Charles area, Corpus Christi, Odessa, all that West Texas area — because of the oil production and the petrochemical areas that have a lot of industrial waste," Lee said.

The reason oil and gas is not included in the EPA's approval for Texas is because the agency was acting on an application submitted by the Texas Department of Water Resources, which has no jurisdiction over oil and gas injection.

"Oil and gas is in the realm of the Texas Railroad Commission, which has made a separate request. It came in later and is still being processed," Lee said.

Oil companies — in Texas and other states — inject water and other substances underground to facilitate recovery of oil.

Under the Safe Drinking Water Act, the EPA administrator was required to list in the Federal Register each state for which he believed an underground injection control program was necessary.

Texas was listed in September 1978 and the TDWR submitted an application last July. The EPA followed with a public hearing on the plan last September in Dallas.

There are five classes of injection wells that come before the EPA for its approval. All except Class II, covering the oil and gas area, were covered in this week's announcement.

Class I covers disposal of municipal and industrial waste; Class III, wells that inject for solution mining; Class IV, wells used to inject hazardous waste into or above formations that contain underground sources of drinking water; and Class V, injection wells not covered in any of the other classes.

For Snelson, it's 'political party'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

One man called the gathering in Midland Center Thursday night a "celebration."

For W.E. "Pete" Snelson, it was a celebration, but in more ways than one. It was a celebration of Snelson's entry into the state land commissioner's race, a celebration of his past accomplishments as a state senator and a celebration of the last time he can relax until after the Democratic primary this spring.

The event was a reception for Snelson to kick off his statewide campaign for land commissioner. He announced in late December at an Austin press conference his intentions to seek the state post, an action that will pit him against Billy Clayton and Garry Mauro on the Democratic ticket.

Clayton is speaker of the house while Mauro has been executive director of the Democratic Party.

An estimated 400 Midlanders wandered in and out of Midland Center during the reception, which started at 5 p.m. During the evening, Snelson basked in the glow of warm compliments heaped on him by friends.

SNELSON GREETED each one — many of them longtime friends of both political parties — with a handshake and wide smile at the door. Meanwhile, his wife, Susan, stood a few feet away, often greeting friends with a hug or a smiling compliment.

Acting as master of ceremonies was Dr. Robert B. Smith, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, who likened the event to a celebration.

"I was so proud of what I was coming to do," he began, "that as I took a deep breath I popped the button off my coat. I've never done that for a politician before."

Dr. Smith focused his praise of Snelson and his past 18 years as a state senator on the Midlander's bi-partisanship.

That theme carried through in talks by other speakers and in comments by Republicans in the audience. Said one man, "I'm a Republican, but I'm for Pete Snelson." And another woman, alluding to the Tall City's penchant for Republicanism, noted that Snelson may draw even larger bi-partisan support outside of Midland.

"To think of Snelson is not to think of him as a Democrat or a Republican," Smith said, "but as a man who has chosen as his vocation the field of public service."

Snelson would bring to the land commissioner's office an "impeccable record" of public service.

Continuing, Smith noted that "Snelson has never allowed himself to be swallowed up by pettiness or partisan politics." Nor has Snelson been known for that political maneuver known as "hidden agendas."

"IN THE REALM of politics, finding a politician without a hidden agenda is like looking for the proverbial needle in a haystack," Smith said in his sermon-like manner.

Heaping on more praise, Smith noted that in the years Snelson has spent in the State Legislature he has become known "as a man of hard work rather than harsh words."

Rapport with the people is another of Snelson's attributes, according to Smith who claimed "there is probably not a legislator in our State Senate who has better rapport with the people than Pete Snelson."

A political campaign specialist reaffirmed Smith's feelings about Snelson's chances for the land commissioner post. George Shipley, who noted that he long ago decided he would work only for candidates he believed in, related his surprise at Snelson's early polls.

"In the areas of trust and credibility, he was off the scale. I've never seen a

New radio equipment, second municipal judge considered

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

City population growth has given rise to a sharp increase in the amount of crime reported to police, which is prompting officials to consider buying new radio equipment for the department and adding a second municipal judge to the court system.

Police received some 3,000 more calls from the public in 1981 than they did in 1980, according to Public Information Officer Christie Armentrout.

who said it takes an average of three radio transmissions per call to handle any given complaint.

As a result, officials are discussing the relative merits of upgrading the currently overburdened VHF radio system with a second console, or installing a new, higher frequency UHF system that would overcome transmission problems caused by the rapid growth of high-rise buildings in the downtown area.

"They're (officials) gathering background information and checking with Abilene to see how their UHF system is working," said Mrs. Armentrout, adding that a staff recommendation outlining cost factors and what would work best for the department will be made to the city council once the study is finished.

In addition to reducing transmission problems encountered with the present 8-year-old VHF system, modern UHF equipment allows for future growth and "interfacing" with advanced computerized police dispatching techniques, according to Mrs.

Armentrout.

Included in discussions of a new radio system is the possibility of incorporating into it a scrambling device that would prevent the public from monitoring police activity.

Abilene police used scramblers at one time in the 1970s, according to Abilene Chief of Police Warren Dodson, but did away with them after problems developed when the department switched to another brand of radio equipment.

A Midland police officer said today, however, that he doubted the city would go to the sophisticated scramblers because of their expense and "balky nature."

No changes could take place until the municipal court moves from its current location in the police station to new quarters now under construction just across the street.

The new 8,000 square-foot building cost $870,000 — paid for largely with federal revenue sharing money — will hold two courtrooms and is expected to be ready for occupancy by mid-July.

Some of the space the move frees up at the police department would be used to expand its radio and dispatch facilities, and the extra courtroom will allow for what officials say is an urgent need for an additional municipal judge.

Said Municipal Court Clerk Jean Jones, who is still in the process of compiling year-end figures: "There's been quite an increase in court activity in the past two or three years and we need the extra courtroom and judge now."

Unemployment among men sets post-World War II record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate surged to 8.9 percent in December as joblessness among adult men, historically the most stable element of the labor force, set a post-World War II record, the Labor Department reported today.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said the half-a-percentage-point jump — from 8.4 percent to 8.9 percent overall — left close to 9.5 million Americans out of work as the economy plunged into a deepening recession.

The agency said the number of "discouraged workers" rose by about 150,000 in the fourth quarter of 1981, to 1.2 million, the highest level recorded since the government began keeping those statistics in 1970. Discouraged workers are classified as those who report to government surveyors that they want to find work but have given up the search in futility.

Black unemployment reached 17.4

percent last month, another post-war record.

Department analysts said the overall jobless rate last month approached the 9 percent high in May 1975, toward the end of a months-long recession brought on by the Arab oil embargo.

If unemployment exceeds 9 percent — as many private economists predict it will this year — it will reach the highest level since the government began keeping month-to-month figures in the late 1940s.

Since July, the department said, more than 2 million Americans have been thrown out of work and the unemployment rate has shot up almost 2 full percentage points.

The highest post-Great Depression annual rate of unemployment, before monthly figures were compiled, was a 9.7 percent jobless rate in 1941, which eased substantially during World War II.

Deregulation, immigration on agenda for Clements trip

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements will journey to Washington and Mexico City in an attempt to sell his ideas of encouraging energy production and of controlling border immigrants.

Clements told a news conference Thursday he would be in Washington Monday to talk with President Reagan and in Mexico City Feb. 8-9 to talk with top officials there.

"I need to be convinced that doing away with the Department of Energy would result in less government regulation," Clements said about his planned visit to the White House Monday with Louisiana Gov. David Treen. "I do not think we will depart from the energy subject."

In Mexico City, Clements, accompanied by his wife Rita, will have separate talks with Mexican President Jose

Lopez-Portillo, U.S. Ambassador John Gavin, and Miguel de la Madrid, major candidate to succeed Lopez-Portillo.

"Immigration is certainly the most sensitive issue between Mexico and the U.S.," Clements said. "Until this issue reaches a sensible, fair and proper decision, there will be other issues that will not be solved."

Clements said in talking with President Reagan Monday he would be supporting the official position that Texas has taken for gas deregulation and against a windfalls profits tax.

"We are for immediate gas deregulation but we would be willing to accept a staged deregulation," he told reporters.

Clements said an important part of his talk with Reagan would be the announced abolishment of the Department of Energy.

Transplant may not stop disease

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Liver transplants for people with an incurable form of cirrhosis will improve the victims' lives, but the disease may spread to the recipients' new organs, researchers say.

British doctors who performed the experimental operations on people with this disease, called primary biliary cirrhosis, found that symptoms reappeared in the transplanted livers three or four years later.

The disease causes scarring that destroys the liver and usually strikes women between the ages of 35 and 55. Once considered to be rare, it is appearing with increasing frequency.

This form of cirrhosis, unlike the kind caused by alcoholism, seems to result from a defect of the body's immune system, but its exact cause is unknown.

Doctors from King's College Hospital and Medical School in London performed the operations and described their results in Wednesday's edition of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The team, led by Dr. James Neuberger, performed transplants on 11 patients with badly diseased livers. Two men and a woman were still alive as long as 4½ years later and were well enough to return to work.

But despite drugs that kept their immune systems from rejecting the new organ, the three all developed signs of recurring liver disease.

"If these abnormalities in our patients do represent a recurrence of primary biliary cirrhosis, then clearly the use of immunosuppressive agents failed to prevent redevelopment of the disease, although it is possible that such treatment slowed the rate of progression," the doctors wrote.

However, they noted the development of the disease has been very slow, and the patients continue to work as a gardener, a housewife and a mechanic.

"All three patients are feeling well," the doctors said, "and their lifestyle has considerably improved since transplantation."

They said that patients who received liver transplants for other reasons did not develop the same symptoms.

In their report, the doctors said the disease "is one of the most suitable forms of chronic liver disease for treatment by liver transplantation."

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. E. Anthony Jones of the National Institutes of Health noted that, despite the new disease, liver transplants can dramatically improve the quality of people's lives.

Jones also cautioned the three might not really have primary biliary cirrhosis. Instead, he said their symptoms might result from the body's reaction to the foreign organ.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Sexual trouble can be physical

Dear Dr. Solomon: I want to thank you for your column in which you suggested that a reader check with his doctor to find out the cause of his impotence. Too many people are ready to say that "It's all in your head" when you tell them you have such a problem. I followed your advice because I was also having a problem with impotence. My doctor cured it simply by changing the dose of a drug I was taking. Thanks again — Ron, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dear Ron: It used to be thought that as many as 90 percent of all sexual problems were psychological in nature, rather than physical, now many doctors, including Masters and Johnson, realize that this simply is not true, particularly in the case of men.

According to Dr. Masters, the most important organic cause of sexual dysfunction is the use of drugs, those that are prescribed as well as those taken illegally.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know a couple who drinks a great deal. I can't say that I've ever seen them really drunk, but they do hit the bottle pretty hard. The man recently learned that he has trouble with his liver, and his doctor told him to stop drinking if he wants to live. My question is: Why aren't women affected the same way? Do they have some immunity? — Josh, Morgan, N.C.

Dear Josh: As a matter of fact, women who drink to excess may be even more vulnerable to liver disease than men. At least this is the opinion of Dr. John B. Saunders, of the King's College Hospital and Medical School in London.

According to Dr. Saunders, women patients tend to have more severe liver disease than men, even when they consume less alcohol and over a shorter period of time. One reason may be the difference in body size between men and women, or women's greater proportion of fatty tissue.

In any event, alcoholic liver disease plays no favorites between men and women.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am very close to my grandmother, who is 85 years old. Lately, although she says that nothing is troubling her, she admits that she does not have much of an appetite and has not been sleeping well. In view of her age, and since she has no other problems, I've postponed asking her to see a doctor. Do you have any suggestions? — Audrey, Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Audrey: A checkup by a doctor would be very much in order. Loss of appetite and sleep impairment are usually symptoms of depression. This may be true in your grandmother's case even though she says that nothing is troubling her; it is not unusual for elderly persons not to sense feeling depressed, or to deny it even if they do. It is also possible that a medical problem can be causing her symptoms.

If depression is the problem, your grandmother may be helped with medication. In any event, loss of appetite and difficulty in sleeping should not be ignored. These symptoms are not a normal part of the aging process.

Congressmen say Soviets won't be affected by U.S. sanctions

By MARC ROSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Three U.S. congressmen on a private tour of the Soviet Union said today that Soviet officials expressed pessimism about U.S.-Soviet relations and were adamant that the Kremlin would not be swayed by American sanctions over Poland.

The congressmen — Reps. James M. Shannon, D-Mass., Christopher H. Smith, R-N.J., and Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn. — said they met with several middle-level Soviet officials since arriving here Tuesday.

The Americans told reporters that Soviet officials expressed wishes for success in U.S.-Soviet negotiations being held in Geneva, Switzerland, to limit medium-range nuclear missiles.

The Soviets also hoped a summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev could still be arranged, the congressmen said.

The Soviet officials were said to have insisted that the Kremlin would not "cave in" to the recent imposition of economic sanctions by Washington in response to the Dec. 13 martial law decree in Poland.

"They seemed to be saying, 'We can hunker down. We can tighten our belt three more notches if we have to. We can take more than you can take,'" said Gejdenson, a freshman lawmaker who serves on the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Added Shannon: "They suggested they will not be told what to do."

Girl's meningitis death leads to daycare center closing

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Officials closed a daycare center after a 4-year-old girl died of what physicians believe to be a highly contagious form of meningitis.

Port Arthur health department officials closed the center Thursday and urged the parents of 78 classmates to have their children vaccinated against the disease. Staff members at the Sacred Heart Children's World daycare center, along with others who might have come in contact with the infected child, also were encouraged to take the oral vaccine.

LaDawn Evans died Wednesday night, seven hours after being admitted to St. Mary's Hospital, officials said. The child was suffering from convulsions, a high fever and cold symptoms, said Carl Clark, city health administrator.

Physicians said the child died of what appeared to be Neisseria meningitidis, an infection of the central nervous system.

Clark said health officials had decided to close the school while awaiting final autopsy results.

Dr. Avila Arcala, acting director of the city health department, said physicians had not determined how the child contracted the disease.

"Children are more susceptible, especially those in daycare centers, where the rate of the disease is one case in one thousand," she added.

Concessions on auto workers' minds

By STEPHEN JONES
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Bargaining councils of the United Auto Workers are debating whether to reopen contracts in response to threats by General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. to move more jobs overseas.

Today's meetings here come hard on the heels of 1981 year-end reports from the automakers which showed sales by domestic carmakers down 5.3 percent from 1980 to their lowest levels in two decades.

And, as the industry enters its 34th consecutive month of recession, most analysts do not expect sales to improve markedly until the second half of 1982.

Ford and GM have been demanding since early 1981 that the UAW grant wage and benefit concessions before the current contracts expire in September.

The automakers say they need reductions in labor costs to compete with foreign manufacturers and have threatened to move more of their production — and more jobs — overseas unless concessions are granted.

The bargaining councils emphatically rejected the idea in March and the union stuck firmly to that position until Dec. 9, when the UAW's Executive Board lifted the ban on reopening contracts.

UAW President Douglas Fraser said each bargaining council would be allowed to decide whether to reopen talks with an individual automaker.

There is strong sentiment among some rank-and-file union members against reopening contracts, especially at GM, which is expected to report a profit for 1981. But most observers expect the bargaining councils to agree to meet with the automakers. Already the UAW has reserved rooms for negotiators at a Dearborn, Mich. motel near Ford's world headquarters.

The rooms have been reserved for an indefinite period beginning Sunday, according to a union spokesman who asked not to be identified. He said the rooms were reserved "so we'd be prepared in the event the council decides to have the bargaining committee come to Detroit."

"Sometimes it's hard to get rooms," he said. Union leaders have made it clear they will insist on strong guarantees of job security for their members before they will agree to concessions.

UAW membership has fallen to 1.2 million from about 1.5 million before the current slump began in 1979, and the five major U.S. automakers say they currently have more than 210,000 hourly employees on indefinite layoff. But that figure does not include at least 50,000 workers who have quit, retired, died or were laid off and lost recall rights and have not been replaced.

Israeli payoff draws heavy criticism from newspapers

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) —

The Israeli government's $262-million payoff to Jewish settlers in the Sinai Desert drew heavy criticism today, with newspapers calling it robbery and treasury officials warning it would fuel inflation.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin pushed the decision through his Cabinet by a narrow 5-4 vote Thursday, saying he wanted to avoid violent protests by the 3,000 settlers who are to vacate homes and farms this April under terms of the Egypt-Israel peace treaty.

"This is a time for weeping, for we have been robbed in broad daylight," wrote Dov Ganhovsky, the daily Yedioth Ahronoth's widely-read economic analyst.

Davar, journal of the opposition Labor Party, likened it to paying protection money to racketeers.

About 500 screaming fans greet supposedly incognito Manilow

LONDON (AP) — Singer Barry Manilow, beginning a sold-out, six-week concert tour of Europe, flew here under an assumed name...

Barry Manilow

Manilow was showered with roses and scarves — a personal trademark — and had to be hustled through the crowd by airport security officers.

Reporters, tipped to Manilow's arrival by publicity agents who also let word slip to some fans, discovered the teen idol was booked aboard his flight simply as "Mr. Parker."

Asked about this as he pushed through the well-wishers, Manilow said, "I don't usually travel as plain 'Mr. Parker,' but I use a lot of different names on tour to avoid crowds."

He added: "I think it's really nice that so many people want to come and see me. I can't believe I'm so popular."

He said recently that he puts on so many benefits because "that's just part and parcel of the debt you owe. We all owe something."

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Newscaster Floyd Kalber will be master of ceremonies at a champagne celebration following Saturday's special premiere here of "On Golden Pond," Henry Fonda's latest movie.

Jane Fonda

Fonda's daughter, Jane, also will be in Omaha for the event.

Kalber, a former newscaster on NBC's "Today Show," began his television career in Omaha.

The Omaha Community Playhouse, where both Fonda and his daughter began their acting careers, is sponsoring the event.

The 76-year-old actor, who was released Wednesday from the hospital where doctors were monitoring new treatment for his heart condition, will not attend the event.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana, who has had to cancel several appearances because of morning sickness, will carry out public engagements through March, her sixth month of pregnancy, Buckingham Palace announced.

Princess Diana

A palace spokesman said Thursday that Queen Elizabeth II will take the salute at the Trooping of the Color ceremony June 12, her official birthday, despite last year's incident in which blank shots were fired at her.

The spokesman said it was Princess Diana's "intention to do engagements for as long as she is able. We have taken on no firm commitments later than March 30, but that does not mean she will not do the odd one or two beyond that date."

The 20-year-old wife of Prince Charles canceled several appearances late last year because of morning sickness. She expects her first child in June.

The royal couple will attend a British Film Institute dinner Feb. 2 at the home of Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Geoffrey Howe. Charles is patron of the institute.

The queen, 55, will as usual take part in the annual Trooping of the Color parade and accept the salute from the royal guards regiments in June. Her actual birthday is April 21.

During last year's ceremony, a youth fired shots from a blank pistol at the queen as she rode by on horseback. Marcus Sarjeant, 17, was sentenced to five years in prison in September after he admitted violating the 1842 Treason Act that prohibits attacks intended to alarm the queen.

'Reds,' 'Ragtime' 39th Globe favorites

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Two lavish period productions, "Reds" and "Ragtime," received seven nominations each as the movie kudos season kicked off with the announcement of the contenders for the Hollywood Foreign Press Association awards.

Following closely in the 39th annual Golden Globe film nominations Thursday were "On Golden Pond" with six nominations and "Arthur" with five.

Unlike Oscars, top Golden Globes awards are given in separate drama and comedy-musical categories. But the nominations are considered an indication of how the Academy Awards race will shape up — and so far no clear favorite is in sight.

The foreign press association also honors television shows, and this year's top nominees included NBC's already Emmy-festooned "Hill Street Blues" as well as such past winners as CBS' "M-A-S-H" and "Lou Grant."

CBS shows earned 15 nominations followed by ABC with 13 and NBC with eight.

Chicago widow, 65, joins Mother Teresa

CHICAGO (AP) — A 65-year-old widow is preparing for a drastic change of lifestyle — from the comforts of her suburban Chicago home to the slums of Calcutta.

Josephine Smialek will leave by plane next week to join Mother Teresa in aiding the poor and diseased in India.

She said it took two years to persuade the Nobel Peace Prize-winning nun to accept her as a volunteer.

Mrs. Smialek, whose physician husband died three years ago, is a pediatric nurse practitioner who has had experience helping inner-city children. The couple was childless.

"I just can't pass up a chance to work with Mother Teresa," she said Thursday after completing plans to fly to Calcutta on Jan. 15. "I'm hoping for pediatrics, but if Mother Teresa assigns me to the leper colony or the dying, that's what I'll do."

She said Mother Teresa was not encouraging at first, "because she can't afford a large staff.... But she became interested when I told her I was a registered nurse and would pay my own way and expenses." Mrs. Smialek said the nun told her: "My dear child, come and see. If you stay one day, the poor will remember your love and concern. If you stay a year, we'll be that much richer."

She and her husband, John, worked a few weeks on the charity-funded vessel Hope 13 years ago, then visited India to see the Taj Mahal as a 25th wedding anniversary treat. They also saw some of the poor and sick people in Calcutta and Bangkok.

Mrs. Smialek has worked as a nurse and in inner-city Headstart programs since 1968. On the trip to the Far East, she remembered saying to her husband, "After you are retired, let's go to Calcutta. He said he didn't think he would live that long but that I should go back."

She said she waited a year after his death to be certain her decision to go to India was not made from loneliness or self-pity.

Irregular heartbeat under control; Cody's condition still listed serious

CHICAGO (AP) — Cardinal John P. Cody was listed in serious condition in a hospital's coronary-care unit today, although his irregular heart rhythm has been brought under control, a spokeswoman said.

Wednesday night after doctors found the irregular rhythm. A hospital spokeswoman who asked not to be named said Thursday the irregularity had been rectified. She said the latest report on Cody's condition came from Dr. Benjamin Lumicao, his personal physician.

The 74-year-old cardinal, spiritual leader of the 2.4 million Roman Catholics in America's largest archdiocese, was shifted to the coronary unit of Northwestern Memorial Hospital

The spokeswoman also said it was not known how long Cody would remain in the unit.

A federal grand jury has been investigating allegations that Cody diverted up to $1 million in tax-exempt church funds to enrich a lifelong friend, Helen Dolan Wilson. Cody has denied any wrongdoing.

Peter Foote, spokesman for the archdiocese, says Cody has had heartbeat irregularities since childhood and that doctors do not think Cody is dying.

Cody was hospitalized Dec. 22, released Christmas Eve and readmitted Christmas Day. Hospital officials had listed him in fair condition until his transfer to the coronary-care unit.

Polish primate criticizes government

By The Associated Press

Poland's Roman Catholic primate attacked some of the government's actions under martial law in a public sermon, and the Communist military regime tried to prevent widespread dissemination of his criticisms at home and abroad.

Uncensored reports from Warsaw said Archbishop Jozef Glemp, spiritual leader of Poland's 32 million Catholics, charged that more and more workers were being required to renounce their membership in the Solidarity labor federation to keep their jobs.

"Extraction of such declarations is unethical. There is a clear principle, also respected by our civil code, that declarations made under coercion are not valid," he told 3,000 people jammed into St. John's Cathedral in Warsaw for Mass Wednesday evening.

The archbishop also criticized conditions for those interned under martial law and expressed regret at the growing division of Polish society into "authorities which order and coerce, and subjects who are silent and who hate."

But he stressed that "revenge is the worst way of righting wrongs" and repeated his previous call to avoid bloodshed. "It is more heroic sometimes to live for the motherland than to die for it," he said, quoting his predecessor, the late Cardinal Stefan Wysinski.

Deputy Minister Boguslaw Stachura told two parliamentary committees 5,906 people had been interned under martial law, but 839 were released for "humanitarian reasons," leaving 5,067 still in detention camps around the country, Radio Warsaw reported.

Western journalists' reports of the archbishop's sermon were stopped by the censors, and there was no mention of the archbishop's remarks by the official media. But it was assumed that his words would be spread across Poland speedily by word of mouth and by clandestine leaflets circulated by Solidarity activists still at large.

Another uncensored account said Western observers reported the withdrawal of about half of the estimated 40,000 troops deployed around Warsaw after martial law was proclaimed Dec. 13.

This was interpreted as a sign of growing government confidence that order had been restored. But the government itself indicated that large-scale worker boycotts around the country were hampering production already reduced by shortages of raw materials, equipment and spare parts and severe winter weather.

Radio Warsaw reported that troops were working in factories and mines and on farms and "protecting" transportation around the country.

Wladyslaw Baka, the economic reform chief, said some enterprises would be forced to close because of "a grave deficit of raw and other materials as well as energy sources," another broadcast said.

The government radio also suggested food shortages were growing more acute, and PAP, the official news agency, said blizzards in northern Poland brought down power lines, closed the Baltic ports and disrupted rail service.

Elsewhere, the Czechoslovak news agency CTK reported that 25,000 Soviet, Hungarian and Czechoslovak troops would conduct joint military maneuvers Jan. 25-30 in western Czechoslovakia, not far from the Polish border.

Boy 'has reasonable chance' at limb use

HOUSTON (AP) — A boy whose severed right leg and left foot were reattached during a 19-hour operation has a "reasonable chance" of regaining the use of his injured limbs, surgeons say.

Eleven-year-old Kirk Sapp, who was run over by a train while playing with his school chums, rested at Hermann Hospital in stable condition, said Dr. John Burns, who directed the nine-member surgical team.

Burns said the next two weeks will be the most critical.

"However, given the boy's age, he has a reasonable chance of regaining normal function" of his limbs if the replantation is successful, the surgeon said.

The youngster and several friends in his Central Texas hometown of Hearne were climbing across the coupling of two box cars Wednesday afternoon when the accident happened.

Kirk dropped his school books and, as he tried to reach for them, the train began to move and the boy slipped under the wheels.

He was flown by Life Flight helicopter to Houston, and doctors began the delicate operation shortly before 10 p.m. The surgery was completed about 4 p.m. Thursday, said hospital spokeswoman Susan Fox.

Kirk's half sister, Chandra Bell, said the train passed over his body while his leg lay outside the tracks.

"The only time he cried was when he thought he'd died," the girl said. "He must have heard James (Sapp, his cousin) yell, 'He's dead.'"

Pope sends Poles money

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II has donated $83,000 sent to him by faithful around the world for relief efforts in his native Poland, a spokesman for the Catholic aid agency Caritas said today.

Vatican sources said a "substantial" number of faithful have been sending money to the pontiff for Polish relief since martial law was imposed in Poland on Dec. 13, 1981.

Monsignor Giovanni Nervo, the Caritas spokesman, said the money will be used mainly to buy food, including rice, sugar, wheat flour, cooking oil. The agency began aid shipments to Poland last week.

A lesson to learn

Richard V. Allen's fall from the position of national security adviser was not a failure totally of his own making. President Ronald Reagan, too, should share some of the blame, if blame is to be laid in this particular affair.

But Allen has to bear responsibility for a major error in judgement that compounded his ineffectiveness in the delicate post. He had been placed on administrative leave Nov. 29 pending the outcome of investigations into his acceptance of $1,000 from Japanese journalists and three watches from Japanese friends, and errors in his government financial disclosure forms.

Although the Justice Department cleared Allen of any wrongdoing in that episode, his problems ran deeper. He simply didn't measure up as well to his responsibilities as did other presidential appointees. And reports circulated in Washington that Allen's performance as national security adviser was not pleasing to Mr. Reagan.

Ronald Reagan is known for delegating responsibilities. He may have carried that administrative style a little too far in this instance because Allen reported directly to presidential counselor Edwin Meese III, who coordinates domestic and foreign policy, and did not enjoy the privilege of daily access to President Reagan.

That shortcoming proved insurmountable in the waning days of Allen's service. But the real test of any administration is how well it adapts to changing circumstances, how much it learns from its mistakes. President Reagan already is showing that he has recognized the "access shortcoming" in the Allen incident. He already has corrected that oversight with Allen's replacement, Deputy Secretary of State William P. Clark Jr.

Clark, whose quiet, judicial bearing already is reportedly earning respect in Washington, will have daily access to President Reagan. He also is reported to be on friendly terms with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Secretary of State Al Haig, two men with whom Allen suffered frequent disagreements.

All-in-all, this first major "personnel shake-up" for the Reagan administration appears to have done only a minimum of damage. The president's decision to replace Allen quickly was good. It was a hard-learned lesson, but an essential one that, perhaps, will not have to be repeated.

Paranoia in Peking

Communist China, which likes to be called the People's Republic of China, is a nation of well over a billion inhabitants, give or take a few Gangs of Four. The Republic of China (Taiwan) had about 17.5 million people at latest estimate.

So who's afraid of whom? Unreasonably, the Communist Peking regime is paranoid with fear of Taiwan, or so it claims. It's at the point where Peking is reported to have said that it is not afraid to stand alone against the Soviet Union, but it cannot stand for the U.S. to sell arms to Taiwan.

Former President Jimmy Carter cruelly abrogated a treaty with Taiwan to kowtow to Peking. The Reagan administration, not wanting to worsen matters, has asked Congress to approve the sale of $97 million worth of military spare parts to Taiwan but has not yet decided to Taiwan's request for sophisticated fighter jets to build up its air force.

Clearly Taiwan is no threat to Peking. The real reason Peking wants to block U.S. arms sales to Taiwan is because it casts a predatory eye on the island republic. Peking still considers Taiwan part of its territory.

The U.S. should reply emphatically to Peking that it will sell Taiwan whatever arms it considers mutually advantageous. And if the Communists don't like it, let them show their displeasure by shooting off some more verbal firecrackers.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

You must admit that 1981 was a great year for animal life — the bull weevils in Congress, the Trojan horse in David Stockman's closet — and the medflies on Jerry Brown's conscience.

We're all smarter this year. A year ago we thought the Laffer curve was a baseball term.

And, believe it or not, it was a good year for air travel. Look at the space shuttle astronauts — their flights might have been a little late but at least their luggage wasn't lost.

Consider all we learned in 1981 about the wonders of science — from the Voyager mission and Elvis's doctor.

'Indestructible Medfly' turned a leaf in his Senate race

LOS ANGELES — Q: Which of the innumerable candidates for the U.S. Senate in California this year is calling for economic growth and defending the conventional wisdom?

A: None other than Jerry Brown, who rose to national fame as the non-growth idol of the wine-and-cheese set, making sure to save the conventional wisdom whenever possible.

This is not merely another exercise of political agility by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., now eyeing Washington after eight years in Sacramento. While most Democrats are still tongue-tied after a year of Ronald Reagan, Brown again has proved his dexterity in formulating a growth-oriented Democratic alternative based on hope, not despair.

This course only bolsters the guess by California politicians of both parties that Brown's Senate race will not be won by his mishandling of the state's Medfly crisis last year. Although Brown still trails most Republicans in the polls, it is hard to find a seasoned political Republican operative who in private will predict Brown's defeat. Truly, Jerry Brown is the indestructible Medfly.

Brown's political resurrection from Medfly burial is attributed by Republicans to their own indiscipline. An untidy Republican primary in which a half-dozen or more challengers will probably do in center, 75-year-old Republican senator S.J. Hayakawa is not designed for victory.

But Brown's high hopes also derive from his own political skills and analytic talents. His game plan is based on the fact that the Republican candidate happens to be Ronald Reagan, but Brown's criticism of Reagan is not reflexive liberal sniping. Rather, unlike most California Democrats, Brown perceives a dramatic difference between Reagan's records as governor and, so far, as president.

"Reagan is practicing what he preached in his speeches before he ran for office," Brown told us over dinner at Perino's. "As governor, he followed the conventional wisdom. As president, he has defied it. He has been a polarizing force, shattering the consensus."

But hadn't Jerry Brown made his reputation by defying the conventional wisdom at every opportunity? "I was establishing the conventional wisdom for the future, not reaching back for the conventional wisdom of the past," he answered. Whatever the authenticity of that nimble reply, he is today the candidate of the dynamic consensus. Attacking Reagan for obsession

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Reports from closed meeting miffed judge

WASHINGTON — U.S. District Judge George Pratt, the ABCAM judge, doesn't like having his cozy relationship exposed, his secrets bared and his errors brought to light. He was incensed, therefore, over the publication of embarrassing excerpts from a closed hearing.

At the hearing, another federal judge lectured the Justice Department for shopping around to find a court that would overlook the prosecutors' misconduct in the ABCAM case. Angriely, Judge Curtis Meador accused the department of treating federal judges as "lackeys."

The judicial system isn't supposed to be manipulated by policemen and prosecutors, he said, so they can more easily win convictions. He was referring to the prosecutors' successful effort to maneuver the ABCAM case into Judge Pratt's court.

They allegedly misled a grand jury in New Jersey into dropping the ABCAM investigation for fear that the jurors would get out of control and begin investigating charges of entrapment and other misconduct by federal prosecutors. The case was transferred into the more malleable jurisdiction of Judge Pratt in Brooklyn.

My associate Indy Badhwar has studied the secret transcript of the hearing. It suggests that Judge Pratt was not merely more congenial toward the prosecutors, but was also susceptible to their manipulation.

He was not pleased, therefore, to read excerpts in my column. Nor was he inclined to find himself guilty of misconduct nor to withdraw from the ABCAM case. So instead of addressing himself to the misconduct charges, he ordered an investigation to find my sources.

Here are more excerpts, meanwhile, for the investigators to investigate: With controlled outrage, Judge Meador castigated the Justice Department attorneys for steering the ABCAM investigation away from the New Jersey grand jury. "You can investigate in Brooklyn, in Oshkosh, Wisconsin, in Peoria, Illinois, wherever you want," he said, "but how can you take away this investigation and close down this grand jury, the subject matter, without that grand jury's consent?"

One of the Washington attorneys ventured the suggestion that his authority came from the executive branch. This moved Judge Meador to declare: "I don't care about the executive branch. The grand jury is an arm of this court. It's an autonomous, independent and constitutionally recognized body."

The Justice Department attorneys contended that they were merely resolving a "jurisdictional catfight" between New Jersey and New York prosecutors. The attorneys offered to present evidence of the dispute to the New Jersey grand jury.

"I see no point in presenting a lot of evidence about this intramural warfare," retorted Judge Meador. "It's too me a waste of time ... I can't see you wasting the grand jury's time with a lot of nonsense."

Apparently, this was a reference to the fact that the transfer of the ABCAM investigation was intended purely to benefit the prosecution, not to resolve a jurisdictional quarrel. The dispute, if it existed at all, was merely the window dressing.

In the end, the judge could not prevent the prosecutors from bamboozling the New Jersey grand jury into giving up the ABCAM case. They made promises — never kept — that the same testimony would be presented to the Brooklyn grand jury. Thus reassured, the Jersey jury relinquished the investigation to Brooklyn where the prosecutors' friend, Judge George Pratt, held sway.

Footnote: The performance of corrupt congressmen before the FBI's hidden cameras, grabbing cash-laden briefcases and stuffing $100 bills into their pockets, was sleazy. But the American people should be even more disturbed over the conduct of the FBI agents and federal prosecutors.

They literally created the crimes and then lured members of Congress into committing them. In the case of Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., the FBI tried for 13 months to induce him to commit a crime. He turned down one criminal proposal after another while the agents raised the bait from $13 million to $190 million.

Finally, he agreed to make improper statements to a phony sheik after the FBI's undercover con man carefully coached him what to say and assured him it would be meaningless hot air. Williams was convicted essentially of blowing smoke rings. If this should be enforced as a crime, Congress would be quickly depopulated.

PENTAGON PIPELINE: Adm. Thomas Hayward, the Chief of Naval Operations, invited a few dozen friends and admirals to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, but the VIP invitations had less luster than those of previous years: The top sea dog's guests had to pay for the privilege: $12 per ticket, plus $29.75 for the roundtrip train ride from Washington. Some of the VIPs may not have known it, but a few only made the grade because someone else turned down the invitation. Hayward had several categories of "alternates" on his guest list — including "Personal Friends Alternates." I wouldn't want to spoil any friendships by revealing the names of the alternates, but they included a former governor and a former secretary of the Navy.

The Defense Communications Agency, which I reported as overly generous with its merit raises to favored personnel, has another pay problem: Since the October 1 raises, it has been overpaying its GS-15s. Those involved were notified that future paychecks would be a bit smaller until the overage is balanced out. Office of Personnel Management officials, when asked about the DCA overpayments, said no other federal agency has had this problem.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Jan. 8, the eighth day of 1982. There are 357 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Jan. 8, 1959, Gen. Charles de Gaulle was proclaimed president of France's Fifth Republic.

On this date: In 1964, Britain challenged the U.S. blockade of Cuba by announcing the sale of 450 buses to the Castro government.

And in 1965, the Star of India sapphire and 23 other gems stolen from the American Museum of Natural History were returned to New York after being recovered from a bus station locker in Miami.

Ten years ago: East Pakistan leader Sheikh Mujibur Rahman flew to London after his release by West Pakistani authorities.

Five years ago: It was announced that Vice President-elect Walter Mondale would visit Western Europe and Japan soon after the Carter administration took office.

Today's birthdays: U.S. diplomat and businessman Thomas Watson is 68; British rock musician David Bowie is 36.

CHARLEY REESE

Judiciary establishing an oligarchy

Our forefathers once went to war over the issue of taxation without representation (among others). Let us now, in 1982, go to war over the issue of government without representation — government, to be more specific, by an unelected, life-tenured judicial oligarchy.

I don't mean go to war physically. Most federal judges, however ridiculous their rulings, are relatively well-meaning ex-politicians or campaign contributors. Regular fellows, in other words.

Charley Reese

And that is the point. A federal judge, be he district, appellate or supreme, is just a regular fellow, usually a political type, with the same brain and organs, with the same propensity to make mistakes, as the rest of us. Underneath the austere black robe squirms a plain old human being, jockey shorts and all, just like you and me.

The writers of the Constitution never intended federal judges to assume God-like powers; never intended them to amend the Constitution by interpretation; and never intended that they should substitute their own wishes for those of the elected representatives of the people.

This power now exercised by the federal judiciary is a result of usurpation. We are now being governed without our consent and that is a violation of our human rights as spelled out in the Declaration of Independence.

Thomas Jefferson, in a letter to William C. Jarvis, wrote: "You seem to consider the judges as the ultimate arbiters of all constitutional questions; a very dangerous doctrine indeed, and one which would place us under the despotism of an oligarchy. The Constitution has erected no such single tribunal."

In his first inaugural address, Abraham Lincoln said, "The candid citizen must confess that if the policy of the government upon vital questions affecting the whole people is to be irrevocably fixed by decisions of the Supreme Court...the people have ceased to be their own rulers."

And so we have. The process is simple. The judge has merely to utter the word, unconstitutional, and he may dismiss any act of any elected body whether it is or is not in fact in compliance with the Constitution. Like someone in fairyland, a judge saying so makes it so. Using the same magic word, he may actually take over and administer a purely state function, like a school system or a prison system, prescribing in minute detail how it is to be run.

To sleep on a mattress on the floor, if one is a convicted criminal, is now unconstitutional, according to federal judges. They say this is what our forefathers meant by cruel and inhuman punishment.

On the other hand, judges have ruled that a city which forbids a vagrant to sleep on a park bench is violating the vagrant's constitutional rights. In the never-never land of the federal imagination, the same First Amendment protects a girl's right to dance naked but prohibits her from leading a prayer in a public school.

The fact is plain and ugly. Our Constitution, which is in fact the supreme law of the land, has been rendered meaningless. Our democratic republic has been subverted and our vote and our legislative process made pointless. Our very freedom, for which over a million Americans have died, has been stolen by judicial activism and we are now ruled by men and women we did not elect and have no power to diselect.

We ought to make this the key issue in the 1982 elections.

Earth, wind, fire, water: Elements claim five more lives this week

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

Roofs buckled under 10 feet of snow as 3,000 people south of Lake Tahoe — some without electricity, food or water — waited for a third day in subzero temperatures today for relief crews slowly digging out roads.

Meanwhile, avalanches trapped skiers and campers in the Rockies and Sierra Nevada, as bitterly cold air swept through the Midwest. Five deaths since Tuesday have been blamed on the latest round of ice, cold and flooding.

Chilling Santa Ana winds whipped across Southern California at 80 mph, knocking out power to five counties and fanning a $1 million fire that destroyed five Malibu homes.

President Reagan declared five northern California counties disaster areas as rescue workers struggled to unearth mudslide victims and repair destruction from a storm that killed 24 people and caused an estimated $200 million damage.

Crews have been working 20-hour days since 10 feet of snow fell on the Sierra Nevada Monday and Tuesday, but had not broken through by early today to the 3,000 stranded rural residents in the Meyers, Fallen Leaf and Christmas Valley areas south of Lake Tahoe, said El Dorado County Supervisor Thomas Stewart.

The people were stranded in clusters of houses along U.S. 50 and California 89 in Toiyabe National Forest south of Lake Tahoe.

The snow was too deep for blade-type plows, so El Dorado County put out an appeal for rotary blowers. But the blowers progressed at less than 1 mph as crews dug through the snow and around abandoned cars.

Some of the stranded people were running out of food, and the roofs of two homes near Fallen Leaf Lake buckled under the snow, the Tahoe Tribune in South Lake Tahoe, Calif. reported.

Authorities said they did not know when they would be able to reach those who were stranded.

Stewart called it "a very serious situation," saying that if another storm hits the basin before the crews can get through to the stranded people, they will be "afloat without a paddle."

Sierra Pacific Power Co. crews, also slowed by the snow-clogged roads, continued restoring service to some 500 customers still without electricity Thursday. At least 8,000 customers were affected at the height of the storm.

Because of continued avalanche threats, a rescue team with dogs suspended a search for a man believed buried for nearly four days by a snowslide along Lake Tahoe's west shore. Everett I. Piner, 23, of Apple Valley, was swept over California 89 by a snow slide early Tuesday at Bliss State Park.

A companion, Keith Lawcock, 28, also of Apple Valley, was found unharmed Thursday by a power company crew.

In Reserve, Wis., an 88-year old man who apparently fell while walking Thursday was found frozen to death near a country road. One death in Colorado and Montana and two in Alabama also have been blamed on the weather.

More than 50 avalanches were reported Thursday in Colorado. Two skiers trapped by a snowslide were rescued unharmed, but one lost his life while skiing outside the perimeter of Arapahoe Basin Ski Area. His body was found Thursday.

"I can't remember when it wasn't snowing," said Joe Zimmerman, a superintendent with the Steamboat Springs Public Works Department. The city has received 125 inches of new snow since Dec. 18.

Use of water sharply curtailed in rain-soaked Santa Cruz area

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
Associated Press Writer

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Authorities pleaded with 70,000 people to use no water except for drinking and cooking in rain-soaked Santa Cruz County, one of five counties declared disaster areas by President Reagan after storms and mudslides killed 24 people.

Sheriff's Sgt. Bruce Simpson said the county health officer had declared a critical need for water after a water main for Santa Cruz and the surrounding hills ruptured Monday. A second pipe used as a bypass was leaky and the water system was shut off for three hours Thursday night while it was repaired. Some remote pockets had no water at all.

"We can't take showers," Simpson said. "We can't eat hot food."

Huge earth-moving machines attacked the mudslides after slippery, debris-laden mud proved too big a job for backhoes and hundreds of rescuers trying to dig out roads, homes and victims buried during a 2 1/2-day killer storm.

Reagan's declaration of disaster areas in Santa Cruz, Marin, Contra Costa, San Mateo and Sonoma counties makes them eligible for low-interest loans.

Damage from the storm is estimated at more than $280 million by state and local officials in those five counties and three others — Alameda, Solano and Santa Clara, which on Thursday asked Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. for emergency help.

Eleven of the 24 confirmed storm-related deaths occurred in Santa Cruz County. About 100 homes were wrecked, 300 more damaged, 1,800 people displaced and 40 roads closed or "impassable all the way through," said Dan Forbus, a Santa Cruz County supervisor. Power for 50,000 customers was out for 46 hours, and 4,000 still had no electricity late Thursday.

"People don't realize just how devastated this area is," said Carl Kent, a fire captain in the state Department of Forestry who worked Thursday in Ben Lomond's Love Creek section, where a massive mudslide crashed onto canyon homes. As many as 20 people were presumed killed when their homes were buried, but the devastation was so complete that officials estimate it may take weeks to bulldoze into the slide, clear the debris and unearth victims.

"The slide — 250 acres of mud from the ridge top to the creek — took everything in its path," Kent said. "I saw a car that had been folded in half like an envelope ... A couple of houses look like someone beat them into little tiny pieces."

California's disaster areas include San Bernardino, Riverside, Los Angeles and Ventura counties, where winds up to 60 mph knocked down power lines and trees, blew out windows and fanned a $1 million fire; and Sonoma, Marin, Contra Costa, San Mateo and Santa Cruz counties, where heavy rains earlier this week caused mudslides. Some areas are not yet cleared.

At the Love Creek slide and several others that still isolated scores of people three to four days after they had occurred, workers "had to back off with backhoes today," Forbus said Thursday. "We need heavier equipment that won't slip and slide so much in order to move that mud."

In Santa Cruz, leaks in the 22-inch emergency bypass pipe Thursday jeopardized the dwindling water supply, said City Manager Richard Wilson.

Sobbing as he goes through the rubble of a house in the Love Creek Heights area near Ben Lomond, Calif., Wednesday is Randy Rumrill. Rumrill's father is missing and presumed buried in the debris of the home, one of many crushed by mudslides following heavy rains in Northern California.

'New York Nude' as its title proclaims

By IRA J. DREYFUSS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Men's clothing designer Egon von Furstenberg posed in his birthday suit.

Porn star Annie Sprinkle posed in her working clothes.

And the other people in photographer Charles Collum's book, "New York Nude," were also as its title proclaims.

Collum's goal was to show New Yorkers as they really are: celebrities and nonentities; the glowingly happy and the lonely and jaded; the joyful and the morose, the lovely and the ... well, some will never be centerfolds in Playboy.

But "New York Nude" is not "Playboy." It's not even in flesh-toned color; it's black and white.

It is an art book. And Collum wants to be perfectly clear about that: It's his way to break away from his usual vocation — photographing for retailers' catalogs — and to do something of more lasting value.

"It's an approach to the 'Family of Man' series, in the natural state," he says. "It's every type of person you could think of."

It's also an admittedly difficult job, to capture the soul of New York City in nude portraiture.

"People are basically the same," he notes. "But I can only tell you that people that have looked at this book tell me that they are unmistakably New Yorkers."

And, he says, the viewers feel it's an "uplifting book; that they just feel good after having looked at it."

In sum, says Collum "It is very non-sexual."

Well, not absolutely non-sexual, but, Collum says, in selecting photos to be printed "it's really the overriding mood or theme of the photograph that makes the decision."

"New York Nude" is part of a project by the transplanted Texan. In 1977, he published "Dallas Nude." Now — look out, L.A. — he's seeking models for his next book, "Los Angeles Nude."

Although Collum is not averse to stopping people on the street and asking them to pose — he says he has never been slugged, by the way — he has found most of his models through the media.

A favorable notice in a Dallas magazine brought people to his studio in that city. And a local television show gained him models in New York.

Because the models were volunteers, they didn't need to be sweet-talked into posing. But Collum still had to calm their what-me-naked jitters. He had a technique.

"I have to let them know that I don't have any ulterior motives," he says. "We'll talk for a few minutes, and then I'll say, 'Well, I'm ready to start,' and then I will turn my back to them" while they undress.

Collum eased his subjects into full nudity by starting with head-shot portraits, letting them build their confidence.

"After a couple of rolls, inevitably, they calm down," he says. "And then, they begin to have the opposite feeling; they begin to enjoy themselves — it's a liberating experience."

Judging from the reports of some of his models, it seems to work.

Advertising art director Courtney St. Clement, who posed with her then-fiance, now-husband and his ex-wife, says, "It just seemed like an adventure."

Not that there was no twinge of concern.

"You think, 'Oh, my God, I'm here and all my cellulite is showing,'" she says. The reference apparently was metaphorical; her photo shows no cause for concern about cellulite.

Ellen David, who has made public appearances as Marvel Comics' Spider-Woman, is among those who posed but doesn't want to talk about it. Collum recalls that, even when she started the posing, she was "scared to death."

"It's something I did for myself, not for other people," she says.

Annie Sprinkle has a different view. Ms. Sprinkle, who's listed in the book's credits as a "call girl-dominatrix," says she has been photographed at length in pornographic movies.

"I had to fight the stereotyped sex-mag posing that I'm used to," she recalls. Also, she notes, Collum wouldn't let her pose in her leather wear — just a jewelry chain and a pair of pumps.

And Egon von Furstenberg, the clothing designer, says it's something he always wanted to do, even if it meant removing his designer clothing.

His reason: "I'm 35, and if I wait much longer, I would not have a nice picture naked."

DEAR ABBY

Encouraging dream may cause rude awakening

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY I am a 26-year-old unmarried black woman. When I was 16, I got pregnant by a 27-year-old white man. He was married with a family of his own.

The boy's father never wanted to have anything to do with the boy (I'll call him Jimmy). He's never even seen him. I thought maybe if Jimmy wrote to his daddy it might help, so I gave him his daddy's address. Jimmy wrote several letters, begging his father to come visit him, but he never got an answer. Before Christmas I wrote and told him how much his son wanted to see him, but the only response I got was a letter from his lawyer demanding that I quit "harassing" him!

Abby, every birthday and Christmas, Jimmy says, "The only present I want is a visit from my daddy." It's heartbreaking to see the child hurt this way.

Maybe it's my fault, because I never told him anything bad about his father. I've never lied to Jimmy, but I'm considering telling him his father has died so it will put an end to his praying for a dream that may never come true. What should I do? — JIMMY'S MAMA

DEAR MAMA, I know you meant well, but it's regrettable that you encouraged Jimmy to write to a father who made it clear that he wanted nothing to do with the boy. Don't lie. It's time you started telling Jimmy the truth — ugly as it is. In time, things may change. But until they do, facts must be faced, accepted and handled. God bless you and Jimmy.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the reader who couldn't go along with a female Santa Claus, I'd like to pass on what comic Robin Tyler said: "Santa Claus MUST be a woman. Who else would give so much and get so little in return?" — GLORIA ALLRED, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW

DEAR ABBY: An elderly well-to-do aunt and I were at lunch one day and she offered to buy me a "nice" winter coat for Christmas, which she could well afford but I could not. We went to a store where I have a credit card and she doesn't, bought the coat and charged it to my account.

I've worn the coat, thanked her for it, told the family it was a gift from Auntie, etc. Well, she's never mentioned paying for it after that.

Abby, my aunt is not senile, but obviously she's forgotten. How do I handle this embarrassing situation? — PERPLEXED OUT EAST

DEAR PERPLEXED: Send the bill to your aunt with a warm note thanking her for the generous gift. And enclose a stamped envelope for Auntie to ante up.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: Give someone a priceless gift. Listen.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.)

Count colors for good eating

By TRISHA YEAGER
Copley News Service

Color is a powerful energy form that plays an important role in health and beauty. How? One way is through the foods we eat.

A correlation often exists between the nutritional benefits of a food and its color. For instance, vegetables and fruits rich in Vitamin A are frequently yellow or deep green. Foods that contain the B vitamins are usually beige, neutral, or achromatic. And foods high in vitamin C have bright hues of red, yellow, green, and orange.

Colorful foods affect us psychologically as well as physically. A selection of beautifully colored foods, artfully arranged, is a boon to anyone's morale. The emotional lift aids digestion and ensures the greatest possible nutritional value from the foods we eat.

Here's a simple color-coded key to healthful eating that I call the pentacolor principle: At mealtime, try and include at least five differently colored foods. The colors must be natural; foods that are dyed or contain colored additives don't count.

Practicing this principle on a regular basis will increase your chances of consuming foods that are natural, unadulterated, varied and nutritious. Thus it is a hedge against dietary deficiencies.

glasses per day).

6. Avoid highly processed foods, refined sugar, alcohol, stimulants, and empty-calorie junk foods.

7. Apply the pentacolor principle.

Dear Trisha: I know that vitamin E is an antioxidant and it is said to retard the aging process. What color are the foods richest in this vitamin? — D.H.

Dear D.H.: Foods rich in vitamin E have warm, golden, natural colors. They include vegetable oils like soybean oil, corn oil, cottonseed oil, wheat germ oil, whole raw seeds and nuts; soybeans; rice bran; and wheat germ.

Dear Trisha: What is the function of vitamin K and which foods contain it? — T.A.

Dear T.A.: Vitamin K aids in the clotting of blood and is found in green, leafy vegetables, yogurt, milk, eggs yolks, and liver. Also, it is synthesized in the intestine.

Dear Trisha: I live in San Francisco and don't get a lot of sunshine. Is sunlight the only source of vitamin D? — R.A.S.

Dear R.A.S.: Sunlight activates a form of cholesterol, present in the skin, converting it to vitamin D. Other natural sources of vitamin D are fish-liver oils, saltwater fish, and fortified milk. Vitamin D is best utilized when accompanied by vitamin A.

Pictures need the right frame

CHICAGO (AP) — Although most people know what kind of art they like, they sometimes have difficulty choosing the right frame for a particular picture, says an expert in the field.

"A frame should be in proportion to the size and characteristics of the art — not overpowering it, yet strong enough to contain it," says Dave Klitzky, president of a chain of do-it-yourself framing stores.

"In many cases a picture's tonality will suggest the best frame," says Klitzky, who heads the Great Frame Up. "If you're working with warm tones, try a warm wood frame; cool tones would suggest a darker wood frame or metal frame."

Klitzky suggests that the visual weight of a picture can sometimes be a guide to how wide the frame should be. If the picture has strong lines and dark colors, the frame should be wider than if the picture has fine lines and light colors.

A picture with three-dimensional qualities can be enhanced by using a frame that slants into the picture, adding to the feeling of depth, he says. An action-oriented subject usually needs a larger frame to contain its motion.

"A two-dimensional graphic poster seems to frame better in a flat-faced molding," he adds.

A couple of don'ts, according to Klitzky: don't trim the picture to fit an existing frame's size; remember, the frame is subordinate to the picture and should follow its dimensions. Avoid choosing the frame to match furniture or wall coverings in the room. "You will lose the picture in a sea of harmony," he warns.

White House chef starting cooking revolution

By Phyllis C. Richman
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A quiet revolution in the White House is turning the heads of heads of state. It is being shaped by the well-kempt, fleshy hands of Roland Mesnier, first pastry chef, sugar sculptor, artist in cream, carver of chocolate.

Mesnier, 51, looks a solid sort and quiet except for the plaid shirts and jackets he favors. Born in Rouen, in France's Jura region, apprenticed at age 14, Mesnier has been molding and shaping doughs destined for governing bodies ever since. Paris' George V, London's Savoy, Bermuda's Princes Hotel, 16 medals and 23 years after he left home for his first kitchen, the White House called chef Albert Schaarwyler at the Homestead in Virginia, where Mesnier was working, seeking recommendations for a new pastry chef. One audition later Mesnier had the job as pastry chef and lone Frenchman in the White House kitchen, which now consists of executive chef Henry Haller (Swiss), assistant chef Hans Raffert (German) and first family chef Frank Ruda (American).

Mesnier is addicted to change. "If he served raspberry sherbet 30 days in a row," marveled Frank Ruda, "he would serve it 30 different ways." The day before, Ruda added, Mesnier had served tiny balls of chocolate mint sherbet in cookie shells in the shape of leaves, with chocolate spines, garnished with rolls of white chocolate. "Roland is inspiring," Ruda is prone to say.

"Mesnier is a genius," agrees pastry chef Ann Amernick, who has worked with him at the White House.

"It's terrific," Henry Haller says of Mesnier's flights of fancy such as pear and honey sherbet shaped into pears and set in baskets woven of pulled-sugar ropes as even as any real ones — or more so. The baskets, 17 of them, were decorated with blown-sugar pears for a state dinner for Juan Carlos, King of Spain; it took Mesnier a full day to fashion just four baskets.

"This is the administration that will appreciate it," Haller, who has been executive chef since the Johnson administration, explained. "The Reagans like desserts a lot. It's important to them."

In fact, Nancy Reagan personally previews the entire meal for each White House state dinner, critiquing the garnishes, the sauces, the cooking itself. Often the Reagans are said to praise the desserts, and to ask for seconds. Mrs. Reagan has been known to eat even the sugar decorations from her plate.

Ronald Reagan is the one with the sweet tooth, and has often asked for three pounds of Mesnier's cookies to take to Camp David. Mrs. Reagan particularly likes hot souffles, and Mesnier takes pride in inventing new ones such as his bourbon souffle. Nothing ordinary for him: "We've never even served a raspberry souffle in the White House."

"My pet peeve is chefs who don't change," insists Mesnier, using as an example those who always put everything on a bed of shredded lettuce. He loves to do research, and has invented a tool for forming sugar flowers so that cake decorators can buy them rather than make them. He plans to show his invention publicly in February at Washington's culinary arts show.

Mesnier's days and nights are pastry; after a full week at the White House he teaches a twice-weekly professional pastry course at L'Academie de Cuisine in Bethesda, Md. The course covers all the basics, the classical pastries, before moving into new-style presentations. "It is always important to know which is the classical," Mesnier tells his students.

But for Mesnier himself, original and modernized presentations occupy his imagination. Last summer, for instance, Mrs. Reagan asked for a sherbet on a fresh peach half. So he cut the peach partway through to make petals and wedged into the cuts pieces of plum, setting it then on a pool of plum sauce.

Unlike the Carters, the Reagans favor small parties — about 80 people — and give a pastry reception only about twice a month, a coffeecake reception once a month. The Carters had big parties — often for 350 people — sometimes daily. The Reagans' parties have more d'oeuvres — since they have restored hard liquor to the White House — and fewer desserts.

"All the state dinners are about the same," Haller has said. But the desserts they are a-change.

Mesnier's most ambitious presentation so far was at the dinner for King Hussein of Jordan. Each of the 17 tables was served a marron bombe of green pistachio ice cream on the outside to represent the husk of the chestnut, and chestnut mousse inside. A wedge was cut out as if it had been partly peeled. And it was placed on a ring of ice with autumn leaves, lit from underneath. But the tour de force was the fuzz on the pistachio ice cream "skin." Each chestnut was studded with 300 pieces of blown sugar the size of a pen point. That's over 5,000 matching prickles of blown sugar. It even outdid the hazelnut bombes for the state dinner for Venezuelan President Luis Herrera Campins, which were garnished with marzipan squirrels and had floating in their sauce a mosaic of paper-thin almond brittle.

The home cook, Mesnier has suggested — his being an artist with an understanding of the practical — might make chestnut fuzz with a pastry bag and whipped cream. And, except for blown sugar pears and marzipan squirrels, here are some of Mesnier's White House dessert creations.

PETIT FRIAND CHAUD (15 to 20 servings)

Marinade:
Bouquet garni: thyme, bay leaf, parsley wrapped in cheesecloth
Salt and pepper, to taste
1 small carrot, chopped
1-4 cup salad oil
2 cups dry white wine

For meat:
1 small onion
1-2 pound of lean veal
1-2 pound of lean pork
1 pound puff pastry
1 egg beaten with 1 teaspoon water

Prepare a small bouquet garni by wrapping thyme, bay leaf and parsley in cheesecloth and tying with string. Place in bowl. Add salt, pepper, carrot, oil, and dry white wine.

Dice onion. Cut meat into fine julienne, place in bowl and sprinkle with diced onion. Marinate in refrigerator for 3 days. Remove meat from marinade. Dice finely. Roll out puff pastry about 1-4-inch thick. Cut round pieces of puff pastry about 2 inches in diameter. Brush egg-water mixture on the edges. Place meat in center and top with another circle. Press edges to seal. Brush with egg-water mixture. Make a small hole through the dough using a small knife. Bake at 375 degrees for 20 minutes or until dough is golden. Serve warm as cocktail hors d'oeuvres.

HONEY AND PEAR SHERBET (4 servings)

2 No. 2 cans (1 1-4 pounds each) pears, drained and pureed
Juice of 1 lemon
4 ounces honey

Mix the above and put in an ice cream freezer for about 20 minutes or until hard.

PEPPERMINT AND BITTER CHOCOLATE SHERBET (4 servings)

2 cups of water
1 cup sugar
3 ounces unsweetened chocolate
Few drops oil of peppermint

Bring water and sugar to a boil and let cool to about 100 degrees. Stir in chocolate until melted; if necessary, return to low heat. Add a few drops of peppermint oil. Put in ice cream freezer until firm.

BOURBON SOUFFLE (6 to 8 servings)

1 1/2 cup flour
2 cups milk
14 tablespoons sugar
1/2 stick butter, melted
1/3 cup bourbon
7 egg yolks and 10 egg whites
Butter and sugar for preparing dish
Bourbon souffle sauce (recipe follows)

In a saucepan, mix together flour and milk. Add 10 tablespoons sugar and the melted butter. Bring to boil, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and allow to cool for about 5 minutes, then add bourbon. Stir in egg yolks one at a time. Beat egg whites to stiff peaks with 1/4 cup sugar and fold into the mixture. Grease the souffle dish with butter and sprinkle with sugar (just a light coating). Fill the mold 3/4 full and bake at 375 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes. Serve immediately with bourbon souffle sauce.

BOURBON SOUFFLE SAUCE (Makes 2 cups)

4 egg yolks
1/2 cup sugar
2 cups milk
3 tablespoons bourbon

Mix egg yolks with sugar. Bring milk to boil and gradually stir into egg-sugar mixture. Stir over low heat just until mixture starts to thicken enough to coat spoon, but do not allow it to boil. Add bourbon. Serve with souffle, spooning sauce over each serving.

Pastry tips

(c) 1981, The Washington Post

Pastry tips from Roland Mesnier:

— A touch of red coloring improves the appearance of chocolate desserts.

— In making pate a choux — cream puff dough — if it is too thick to slide off the spoon, add a few drops of water rather than more egg, to improve the texture of the finished puff.

— In glazing doughs with egg before baking, use just enough egg so that the brush does not stick to the dough. Tap it on with the brush rather than brushing it.

— When using a pastry bag, hold the tip high off the surface you are decorating, "so you can see where you're going." Hold bag and press with right hand, guide with left hand.

— When dipping pastries in caramel for a glazed coating, scrape excess caramel off against the edge of the bowl; most caramel coatings are too thick. Caramel must be made in dry weather, most readily in winter.

Rocker designer no conformist

By JUDY McDERMOTT
The Oregonian

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Sam Maloof, creator of the Maloof rocker, which is in the permanent collections of several prestigious museums, usually deflects what he believes is overly lavish praise with a simple, "I like to be called a woodworker."

At 65, Maloof has been practicing his craft for 34 years, guided by an unswerving dedication to craftsmanship and the belief that any design can be improved upon.

In lectures and demonstrations across the country he communicates his philosophy. "Some say I've paid my dues. I'll never feel I've paid my dues," he said in a lecture here sponsored by Contemporary Crafts Gallery and the Portland Art Museum.

At home in Alta Loma, Calif., Maloof lives with his wife, Alfreda, in a 5,000-square-foot house he has been designing and building for three decades.

Maloof says that at this point in his career, "I think I get more joy out of meeting people than anything else." He is pleased that, although he struggled in the early years, he has "probably opened doors for those who have followed."

Daily, he and his wife welcome visitors — customers, other woodworkers, the curious — to the Maloof studio, an unassuming two-story, 22-by-65-foot redwood building constructed 30 years ago. He credits his wife, a former art-school director who handles the books and some correspondence, with being an integral part of his enterprise.

To young woodworkers who come to watch him work and seek his advice, Maloof is likely to explain, "I've always followed a different drummer. I've never wanted to be a conformist, and I haven't let trends influence what I do."

Of the furniture being crafted today, Maloof considers "some very good, while some could be improved upon. I see a lot of conformity in design, a lot of woodworkers have yet to mature."

Maloof, self-taught, said he often recommended young people who ask his advice on schooling to "take that $6,000 they would spend on tuition, invest in some tools," and begin exploring their potential. Although a strong teacher can wield a positive influence, some instructors "insist on making clones of their students. And the young can't help but be influenced," he added.

The formally trained, he admitted, "tend to be aghast at the way I work. I think the result is the answer, though."

Particularly sensitive to the subtleties of chair design, Maloof said he had seen some extreme examples in recent years "that dare you to sit on them. If a chair doesn't fit you, no matter how beautifully it's made, it's not a good chair."

Maloof commands between $850 and $3,500 for chairs he once made for $40, and is astonished on occasion at the interest in his work. A Maloof rocker recently brought $8,000 at an auction and will be donated to the White House.

Maloof, whose work will be featured in an ABC documentary, "Made by Hand in America," next spring, is bothered by the person who gains notoriety by making something controversial.

Too often, young persons entering the field are impatient or anxious for instant name recognition, he thinks. "I would say that after one has worked for 10 or 20 years with some consistency of excellence in design and craftsmanship, then one could start spreading his wings a little.

"People want to know how you recognize when you've reached the pinnacle. I don't think you'd ever want to reach the pinnacle. If you thought you had, the only way to go would be down."

Maloof, who relied on hand tools in the early lean years, uses power tools sparingly today and, as he has for years, measures with his fingers rather than with calipers.

As he completes a piece, Maloof said, he promises himself the next will be better, because "once the excitement and satisfaction are gone, there is nothing left."

Poll shows U.S. youth upbeat

DALLAS, Texas (AP) — Some parents may not agree, but a group of young college students believe American optimism is alive and well these days.

This finding came out in a recent survey among nearly 150 college juniors and seniors, all around the age of 21, at a college business conference here. The collegians were upbeat about times in general and their own lives in particular. Some 74 percent thought life was either pretty good or perking along at a respectable pace. Some 94 percent said their personal situation was "OK."

The undergraduates, generally top achievers, came from 115 different colleges and universities. The survey was conducted by Emhart Corp. one of the conference sponsors.

When asked if they had any confidence that in a few years from now the country would be strong and prosperous, 64 percent expressed "some confidence," while 28 percent had "a lot of confidence." A minority, 8 percent, seemed less optimistic.

However, the majority of the students are really not sure adults "have got their act together" (64 percent). As one student commented, "It's up to the young people to get this country moving."

Most think the quality of their education is "excellent" (66 percent) and preparing them for the future (82 percent).

T. Mitchell Ford, chairman and president of Emhart, said that this sample of collegiate opinion was "encouraging."

"These young people, largely 21-year-olds, are the generation that will be running this country very soon. Their comments are realistic and reflect the kind of attitude that leads to achievement," he said.

Museum gets grant

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The Birmingham Museum of Art says it has received a grant from the Institute of Museum Services, Department of Education.

It says the $33,400 grant is for general operating support of the museum's education programs. Education Curator Claudia Esko will be responsible for implementing new programs made possible by the grant.

Howat named

NEW YORK (AP) — John K. Howat has been elected to the new post of chairman of the Metropolitan Museum of Art's Department of American Art.

Howat has been curator of American Paintings and Sculpture since 1970 and will continue to hold this responsibility.

In another move, Prudence Oliver Harper was elected curator of the Department of Ancient Near Eastern Art. She has been a curator in the department since 1973.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Make instant oatmeal

DEAR HELOISE:

My daughter and family are in the military. In one of their many moves, she lost your recipe for instant oatmeal. The children loved it.

It was something about putting oatmeal in the blender, adding sugar and cinnamon, then adding hot water. She cannot remember the proportions. Can you help please? — Mrs. Agnes Moll

Dear heart, just put old-fashioned or three-minute oatmeal into the blender. Turn it to "grind" for a second or two. Use as you would "instant" oatmeal.

For flavor variations, add brown sugar, cinnamon, small pieces of dried apples, raisins, etc., or a combination of any of these. Other flavorings to suit your taste may be substituted, if desired.

Besides the deliciousness of this oatmeal and its nutritional value, another real benefit is the cost savings over the packaged instant kind. Ounce for ounce it costs less than half and, inflation or no inflation, that's a bargain anytime. — Heloise

SHOE ON RIGHT FOOT

Dear Heloise: When my mother lost her eyesight, she had trouble telling her left shoe from her right, so I stuck a tiny piece of masking tape just in front of the heel of each of her right shoes.

She found it did the trick. Hope it helps someone else. — Mildred Stuart

NO MASHED FINGERS

Dear Heloise: I'm a new mother with a year-old daughter. We had a problem of her catching fingers in the doors when she was closing them. She loves to "walk" them open and closed.

So, I just threw my heavy household towel over the top of the bedroom door and a thick towel over the bathroom door.

Now, the doors can't mash little fingers. Plus, she doesn't get frustrated by the door's closing and not being able to open it again. — Bobbie Fuller

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise: Would like to share the way a club I belong to shares a "show and tell" after meetings. We bring an item of interest — perhaps some small antique or something we have made, etc.

Makes for a fun afternoon. We have been doing this for a long time now and everyone looks forward to it. Really works out well. — Lol Morrow

TO CLEAN DRIED FLOWERS

Dear Heloise: To give most dried flower arrangements a thorough cleaning, this is what I, as a professional florist, recommend.

Spray the bouquet lightly with a liquid glass cleaner, let set for just a moment or two, then give a quick light rinse with water from a spray bottle. Prop the arrangement upside down for draining, if possible.

This method removes any grease or smoke as well as the dust. Some straw flowers may appear to close up the moment they are sprayed, but as soon as they begin to dry, they unfold again, good as new. — Reader

IRONING BOARD COVER

Dear Heloise: When my ironing board cover begins to show wear and gets holes in it, I reinforce it with iron-on patches.

I get many more months use out of my cover. Before I have to replace it, it looks like a patchwork quilt! — G.V.S.

Another thing you can use to patch a hole in an ironing board cover is a scrap of lightweight, iron-on interfacing.

It's so smooth you'll never know the patch is there — at least by feel, anyway. — Heloise

Thought up a good way to patch a household item and make-do for a little longer? Send it to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216. She can't answer your letter personally but she will use the dandiest ideas received in her column.

More than 23,000 babies injured using baby walker, agency says

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — More than 23,000 babies were injured last year while using baby walkers, but the problem was never reported by the industry, the Consumer Product Safety Commission says.

Members of the commission were surprised at this statistic, presented Thursday by staff members, and demanded to know why the industry had not reported the problem.

Commission Chairman Nancy Harvey Steorts said she was "frankly astounded that we haven't gotten any reports from the industry on this."

Ms. Steorts ordered the staff to meet with manufacturers and report back to the commission within 30 days.

"The industry must have known about this for a decade or more," said Commissioner Stuart Stalter. "It's a sad state of affairs that it takes a government agency to tell an industry it has a problem."

Aaron Locker, counsel to the Juvenile Products Manufacturers Association, denied Stalter's charge in a telephone interview.

"We're concerned about it, too," Locker said in New York City. "I don't think the manufacturers were aware of this. We'll look into it and if any action is called for, it will be taken."

Federal law requires manufacturers to tell the agency immediately when they learn of a safety problem with their consumer products. A government-imposed safety standard, a voluntary standard by the industry or recalls of the most dangerous products are possible afterward.

In a report to the commission, the agency staff said 10,200 of the injuries with baby walkers required treatment in hospitals. The majority were falls down stairs while the baby was in a walker, while the second most common type of accident was when a walker tipped over with a baby in it.

"Most of the accidents happened when the parent or guardian looked away for a short time or was momentarily distracted," the staff report said.

"This may indicate a need for greater emphasis on increased safety precautions in areas where the walker is to be used, such as blocking off stairs and steps, and removing small rugs or other obstacles from the floor," the report said.

The CPSC staff also said high chairs, which have been under an industry safety standard since 1975, were involved in 7,300 injuries treated in emergency rooms during a recent year.

Restraint systems holding the baby in the high chair are required by the standard. "The seat belts are there but, as in cars, they may not be used," Commissioner Sam Zagoria said.

Other hazards in adult products sometimes lead to injuries to babies, the staff said.

Strings have been involved in 286 accidents in the last eight years, 261 of them fatal, the staff said. "With things like drapery chords, there may be an unawareness of the hazard. You put the crib next to a window so the child gets sunlight" and the child strangles on the chord," said CPSC staffer George Rutherford.

Plastic bags have been involved in 157 strangulation in eight years, the staff said.

San Antonian new manager

Southwestern Bell has announced the promotion of Max M. Holman to the new position of division manager-network distribution services in Midland. Approximately 700 employees will report to Holman, whose responsibilities include the engineering, construction and maintenance of outside plant for the Petroplex, along with a 90,000-square-mile region that extends westward, encompassing El Paso. With Holman's appointment, the company continues to position Midland as a key city in its West Texas operations. Just two weeks ago, Southwestern Bell named Sam Ogletree as the company's new district manager in Midland, responsible for coordinating Southwestern Bell's overall service and community concerns for West and Central Texas.

Ogletree said Holman's network distribution division operations in Midland make the Tall City one of three "division cities" in the company's corporate structure, joining El Paso and Lubbock. El Paso County officially became part of Southwestern Bell Jan. 1, having been part of Mountain Bell territory since 1920.

Holman, who formerly was district staff manager-network distribution operations in San Antonio, also will head the area's test centers, which dispatch and monitor responses to customer reports, and assignment centers, which receive new service orders. He also will have responsibilities for all residence installation and maintenance.

Among the projects under his jurisdiction is a fiberoptic transmission system that will be the first one in Texas when it becomes operational in February. Although no larger than the size of a lead pencil, the lightwave transmitter will add a maximum of 15,000 long distance circuits for Midland-Terminal-Odessa customers. In October, the service is scheduled to be extended to Monahans.

Holman also will supervise the addition of more than 1.5 billion conductor feet of cable in Midland-Odessa in the next six months and construction of 475,000 duct feet of underground conduit to accommodate the demand for telephones in the booming Petroplex.

A graduate of Missouri University in Columbia, Mo., Holman began his career with Southwestern Bell Feb. 5, 1957, as a staff assistant in St. Louis.

One of his major contributions has been the coordination of extensive hurricane restoration efforts along the Texas coast.

Holman and his wife, Joyce, are the parents of three children: Patricia Sue, 24; Douglas Monroe, 19; and Christy Anne, 16.

Study says U.S. should offer poor nations abortion aid

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study commissioned by the Reagan administration recommends lifting a "hypocritical" prohibition on the use of U.S. foreign aid money for abortions in Third World nations.

To the extent that the law actually discourages abortions "it imposes needless suffering on poor women in poor countries," says Harvard university researcher Nick Eberstadt, who completed the report for the State Department.

Eberstadt said between 40 million and 60 million abortions are performed worldwide each year "and most of these are performed in poor countries."

"Most of those in the poor countries are performed under unsanitary conditions and by unqualified personnel," said the report, which will cost the State Department between $3,000 and $4,000.

Around the world, Eberstadt said complications from unsanitary or unprofessional abortions are the leading cause of death for women between the ages of 15 and 35.

But women over 35 choose to end pregnancies even more frequently, he wrote, adding that "the toll of unsafe abortions on them and their families is even greater."

"Current restrictions on American funding means either that tens of millions of mothers who need help will not be able to get it from Americans, or else that U.S. funds will be furtively transferred through a complex network ... to pay for abortion services," he wrote.

While the section on abortion is only a small part of the report, it is bound to be controversial in an administration that firmly supports reversal of the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing most U.S. abortions.

In an interview, Eberstadt said he was asked to do the study by Undersecretary of State James Buckley, a longtime foe of legalized abortions in the United States and elsewhere.

Buckley, a former senator from New York, is undersecretary of state for security assistance. Efforts to reach him for comment were unsuccessful and he failed to return telephone calls to his office.

Eberstadt said his 150-page study was designed to cover the impact of government policies on poverty and overpopulation in poor nations of the world.

The Population Action Council, a private non-profit organization which urges ways of reducing worldwide overpopulation, initially provided copies of the report, which Eberstadt later discussed in detail.

In the interview, Eberstadt said other portions of the study found that poor Marxist countries tend to be the worst run and do the least to ease the misery of their poor.

In China, he said, the Peking government has imposed stringent requirements on family size, choosing to limit population rather than find ways to encourage greater food production.

The worst-managed African countries and those with the least concern for poor people are those with communist leanings or ideology, Eberstadt said.

Eberstadt, a visiting fellow at the Harvard Center for Population Studies, said, "I expect to get heat on this from both the left and the right."

Once active in Democratic politics in Cambridge, Eberstadt said he is aware of Buckley's views on abortion and the policy of the administration on the subject.

He was asked to do the study after Buckley read an article by Eberstadt on Third World poverty which appeared in Commentary Magazine.

A Jan. 18 meeting has been scheduled at the State Department to discuss the study, future U.S. policy toward overpopulation and the problems of overpopulation and hunger in underdeveloped nations.

Medicare may pay less of bill

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is considering a requirement that Medicare beneficiaries pay 10 percent of their hospital charges — up to $2,500 for stays longer than one day — its chief health spokesman acknowledged today.

Richard S. Schweiker, the secretary of health and human services, described the proposal and others under study at the White House in remarks prepared for delivery at a national policy conference on competition in health care.

The options for reducing federal health care outlays and encouraging competition in the health care field were drafted late last year by a special task force headed by Schweiker. Although there were reports about the task force's work earlier, Schweiker's speech marked the first public acknowledgement of their accuracy.

SCHWEIKER said the administration is "almost at the point of making final decisions" on a health care proposal. Final recommendations must still be submitted to President Reagan.

The proposal on Medicare hospital fees would save the government at least $500 million a year while drastically increasing out-of-pocket expenses for patients who had long illnesses. Under current law, they pay $260 as a first day payment and no further fees until the 61st day of hospitalization.

Health care costs totaled $247 billion in 1980 and accounted for 9.4 percent of the gross national product. The federal government spent $75 billion of the total. Medicare and Medicaid, the two largest federal health programs, cost $80 billion. Health care costs also have been increasing at a faster rate than inflation.

One objective is to make consumers conscious of the cost of health care by having them pick up a larger proportion of the bill than they now do.

ONE OF the options would allow Medicare beneficiaries to switch from the federal insurance program to private ones under a voucher system. The government would make a contribution equal to 95 percent of Medicare's adjusted average per capita cost.

Another option calls for limiting employers' ability to deduct the cost of insurance for their employees from their taxes. One possibility, Schweiker said, is allowing $150 per month per employee with family coverage and $80 per month per individual employee.

The task force has recommended that employers be encouraged to offer a choice of health plans to their employees.

The choices would include health maintenance organizations and a coinsurance plan where the insured party would pay 20 percent of the cost of most services.

Employers would be encouraged to offer these cost-efficient plans through tax credits. All plans would have to cover catastrophic illness and hold employees' out of pocket annual expenditures to no more than $3,800.

THE TASK force said employers should make the same monetary contribution to all insurance plans.

Analysts say sales increase won't last

By LORRAINE CICHOWSKI
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The major retailers finished the Christmas shopping season with sales increases, some of them quite substantial, but analysts say business will slip again during the coming months.

Consumers, many of them struggling with the effects of the deepening recession, caught the shopping fever briefly in December because of the holidays and plentiful bargains in the stores, analysts said Thursday after retailers released their December sales figures. But conditions are different this month.

"There's a reason for someone to spend in December," said Jeffrey Edelman, an analyst with the securities firm of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. "You've got the holidays, and there were a lot of good values out there. But January and February are cleanup months."

Said Jeffrey Feiner of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc., "The strong Christmas showing will not last."

Sears, Roebuck and Co., F.W. Woolworth Co. and J.C. Penney Co., the chains that generally cater to lower- and middle-income consumers, reported the lowest December sales gains of the eight largest retailers.

while K mart Corp., the nation's No. 2 retailer, managed to post an 18.4 percent sales gain.

Moon might be connected to health

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The full moon — a shining globe that's inspired romance, wolfmen and superstition — may have new meaning as research suggests a possible link to certain health problems.

The research, conducted at the University of Illinois Medical Center, indicates that ulcers were more likely to bleed and anginal attacks — heart pains — were more common around the full-moon period in about two-thirds of more than 100 patients studied.

Ralph Morris, a professor of pharmacology at the university's medical center, said his preliminary research of patients studied in a 5-year period is designed to "sound a warning." People who have ailments such as ulcers should be more careful, avoid stress and take their medicine during full-moon periods, he said.

Morris' findings are discussed in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Reaction to Morris' research varied, with some specialists expressing skepticism and others saying it was quite likely for lunar cycles to alter physical conditions.

Morris said Thursday the research suggested a full moon can coincide with some health crises. Increased incidences of health problems may be linked to changes in gravitational and electromagnetic fields, he said.

While no one has proven a cause-and-effect relationship, Morris said, there is a theory that magnetic interaction between the earth and the moon may affect physical or emotional processes.

Magnetic interaction would affect humans, Morris explained, because of electrical charges and metals — such as iron — in the body.

"I certainly have no qualms (believing) the moon is producing an effect on the body," he said.

Morris cited one study in which a magnetic field was induced and mice were placed inside. Their circulation was reduced or stopped.

One scientist who says a full moon could affect man is J. Allen Hynek, professor emeritus of physics and astronomy at Northwestern University. The effect of lunar cycles on humans is "just pooh-poohed as astrology," he said. "I don't think it should be."

Hynek cited studies showing increases in arson, violent crimes and strange behavior in mental hospitals when the moon is full.

Frank Brown, a professor emeritus of biological sciences at Northwestern, said all life is sensitive to electro-magnetism of the atmosphere. Humans, he said, are "just a plethora of magnetic fields."

Boys recount ordeal of Christmas Eve crash

HOUSTON (AP) — Four survivors of a wrecked airplane stranded in the Colorado mountains had no idea pilot Gary Meeks was going to stray far from the crash site when he took a walk in the sub-zero weather, his son said Thursday.

"I thought we were going to split up and look for help — for planes overhead — and then come back," said the pilot's son, Arnie Meeks, 18. He said he never saw his father again after that walk.

A search for Meeks, 42, a Dallas real estate investor, was suspended Saturday, and rescue officials in Colorado say there is little hope he could still be alive.

Arnie and the other three victims of the Christmas Eve crash — his 15-year-old brother Darren Meeks, their stepmother and a family friend — stayed in the crippled single-engine Piper Cherokee and were found alive after six days with nothing to eat but snow.

"I'll never complain of a bad meal again," Arnie said. They huddled together for warmth inside the wreckage and prayed aloud to keep their spirits up, Arnie and Darren told reporters in Methodist Hospital Thursday. All four survivors are now hospitalized in Houston, suffering from frostbite and other injuries.

"We all got 'down' at times. If one person was down we'd help that person out — grab hold of him and encourage him," said Darren. "We would huddle and pray and we read from the Bible," said Arnie. The boys tried to start a fire, but said the wind kept blowing it out.

The plane crashed-landed in the Collegiate Peaks of central Colorado while the five people aboard were flying toward Aspen to go skiing. The boys were not injured seriously, but their stepmother, Patricia Meeks, suffered a compression spinal fracture, and their father's friend, Stephen Smart, had a concussion and torn ligaments in his feet.

The Meeks brothers suffered severe frostbite on their feet. Colorado officials said the rescue effort was hampered because Meeks had apparently not filed a flight plan and no one knew they were missing. Rescue workers were finally able to find them by following a weak signal from the crashed plane's emergency radio beacon.

Arnie said he and his father left the plane shortly after the crash on what he believed was a short hike to look for planes flying over. "I had walked on ahead of him, and when I walked back, about an hour later, he was gone," Arnie said. "I didn't realize he was going to leave."

Arnie said he and his younger brother went looking for their father the next day but could find no trace of him.

"We went about a quarter of a mile, just about as far as I went the first day," Arnie said. He said he retraced his steps from the point he and his father had split up and in the area where he had last seen his father "it looked like there had been an avalanche."

The boys' were accompanied at the news conference by their mother, Margaret Alexander of Houston, who said she did not even know they were missing until after the rescue.

"I was horrified to find out they'd gone in a private plane," she said. She said she would not have allowed the trip if she had known.

Darren Meeks, 15, and brother G.A. "Arnie" Meeks, 18, talk about the plane crash they survived on Christmas Eve in the Colorado Rockies. They along with their stepmother and father's business associate were rescued six days after the crash. The boys' father, Gary Meeks, who piloted the plane, has not been found and is feared dead. Their mother, Margaret Alexander, is pictured with them.

Officer says he spotted Williams' car on bridge

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — A police stakeout officer has testified that Wayne Williams' car was barely moving when he spotted it on the bridge identified by an engineer as the most likely dumping point for the two young blacks Williams is accused of killing.

Freddie Jacobs, a member of the stakeout team that stopped Williams in the predawn hours of May 22, said Thursday that Williams' car appeared to be moving "from a parked position" when an officer under the bridge reported hearing a "big, loud splash" in the Chattahoochee River.

Under questioning by Williams' lawyers, however, Jacobs acknowledged he never saw the car stopped on the bridge.

The 23-year-old Williams is charged with murder in the slayings of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young Atlanta blacks whose deaths during a 22-month period were investigated by a special police task force.

Two days after the stakeout team encountered Williams on the Jackson Parkway bridge, Cater's body was found in the river about a mile downstream from the bridge. Payne's body had been found in the same general area a month earlier.

Prosecutors laid the groundwork for Jacobs' testimony by calling two witnesses in an effort to establish that the Jackson Parkway bridge was the most likely spot from which the bodies of Cater and Payne could have been thrown into the river.

A hydrologist with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers testified that studies of river conditions indicated that a body found where those of Payne and Cater were discovered could have entered the river at five locations.

But the specialist, Benjamin Kittle, said the studies he conducted for the prosecution found that the most likely entry point was underneath the Jackson Parkway bridge.

Later, Atlanta police Detective Frank McClure identified a series of more than 100 color photographs he had taken showing details of the banks of the Chattahoochee River from a point well above the bridge to the area downstream where the bodies were discovered.

The pictures apparently were intended to convince the jury that a body could not have been placed in the river at any point along the rugged terrain of the river's banks in that area.

McClure also testified he examined the area around three railroad bridges across the Chattahoochee north of the Jackson Parkway bridge and found it unlikely a body could have been carried onto one of those structures and dumped into the river.

Jacobs, a police recruit at the time of the May 22 stakeout, stood in front of a 10-foot scale model of the Jackson Parkway bridge as he told the jury what happened that morning.

"Pretty close to 3 o'clock in the morning I got a call on my radio from officer (Bob) Campbell," Jacobs said. "He told me to check the bridge, that he had heard a big, loud splash in the river."

"I leaned out from under the guardrail and took a look. I spotted the car. It was extremely close to the edge. I could see only one headlight," he said.

Jacobs said the car crossed the bridge as he ducked back behind the guardrail, then turned around in a liquor store parking lot and headed back onto the bridge. The car was stopped shortly afterward by police.

Jacobs said he normally knew a car was approaching the bridge because its headlights would reflect on trees behind him and its wheels would make a loud noise crossing the bridge's expansion joints. But he said he did not see Williams' car until he got the radio call.

No cars had crossed the bridge for 20 to 25 minutes before Williams' car was spotted, Jacobs testified, and he did not see another vehicle afterward until a large truck crossed the bridge about 10 minutes later.

Defense lawyer Mary Welcome asked Jacobs whether he had told two defense investigators that he did not see the Williams car until he got the radio call because he was away from his stakeout post.

Faulty cord may have started fire that killed seven

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — Fire Marshal Tommy Clements says a faulty extension cord may have started a house fire that killed a woman and six of her children.

Martha Burton, 28, and her children, Ethel, 12, Henry, 8, Adam, 3, Linda, 2, Leon, 1, and Antonio, 1, died Wednesday night when the flames jumped from a first-floor bedroom to an open stairwell and to the second floor where they were.

Clements, the city fire marshal, said Thursday that the flames "had a mushroom effect to the upstairs area."

Coroner Harold West of Miller County said the seven apparently died of smoke inhalation, but autopsies are to be performed. Authorities found Ms. Burton's body near an upstairs bedroom window. Five of the children were huddled in a corner and one child was at the top of the stairwell.

Authorities say attempts to reach the victims were thwarted by the intense heat and smoke. Public Safety Officer Charlie Davis said firefighters broke an upstairs window with an ax, but were driven back by the fire. They also could not reach the victims by using the stairwell.

The stairs were completely engulfed when we got there," Davis said. "There wasn't any way to get to them."

Public Safety Lt. Jerry Brown spotted the fire while en route to work and, along with another officer, climbed a large tree near the house, but was out of reach of the bedroom window.

Maudie Burton, Ms. Burton's mother, said she thought the department had done all it could to save her daughter and grandchildren. She said her son, Nick, couldn't reach the seven because of the fire.

Nick, Maudie Burton, Mrs. Burton's stepfather, Robert Hubbard, and a brother, Timmy, escaped uninjured.

Some neighbors disagreed that the fire department had done all it could. Ricky Riggs, a neighbor, said he tried to help, but a policeman ordered him down from a tree. Riggs said he was confident he could have reached the victims.

"I really hate I came down from the tree," he said. He said the officer did nothing but moved his car and waited on the fire department.

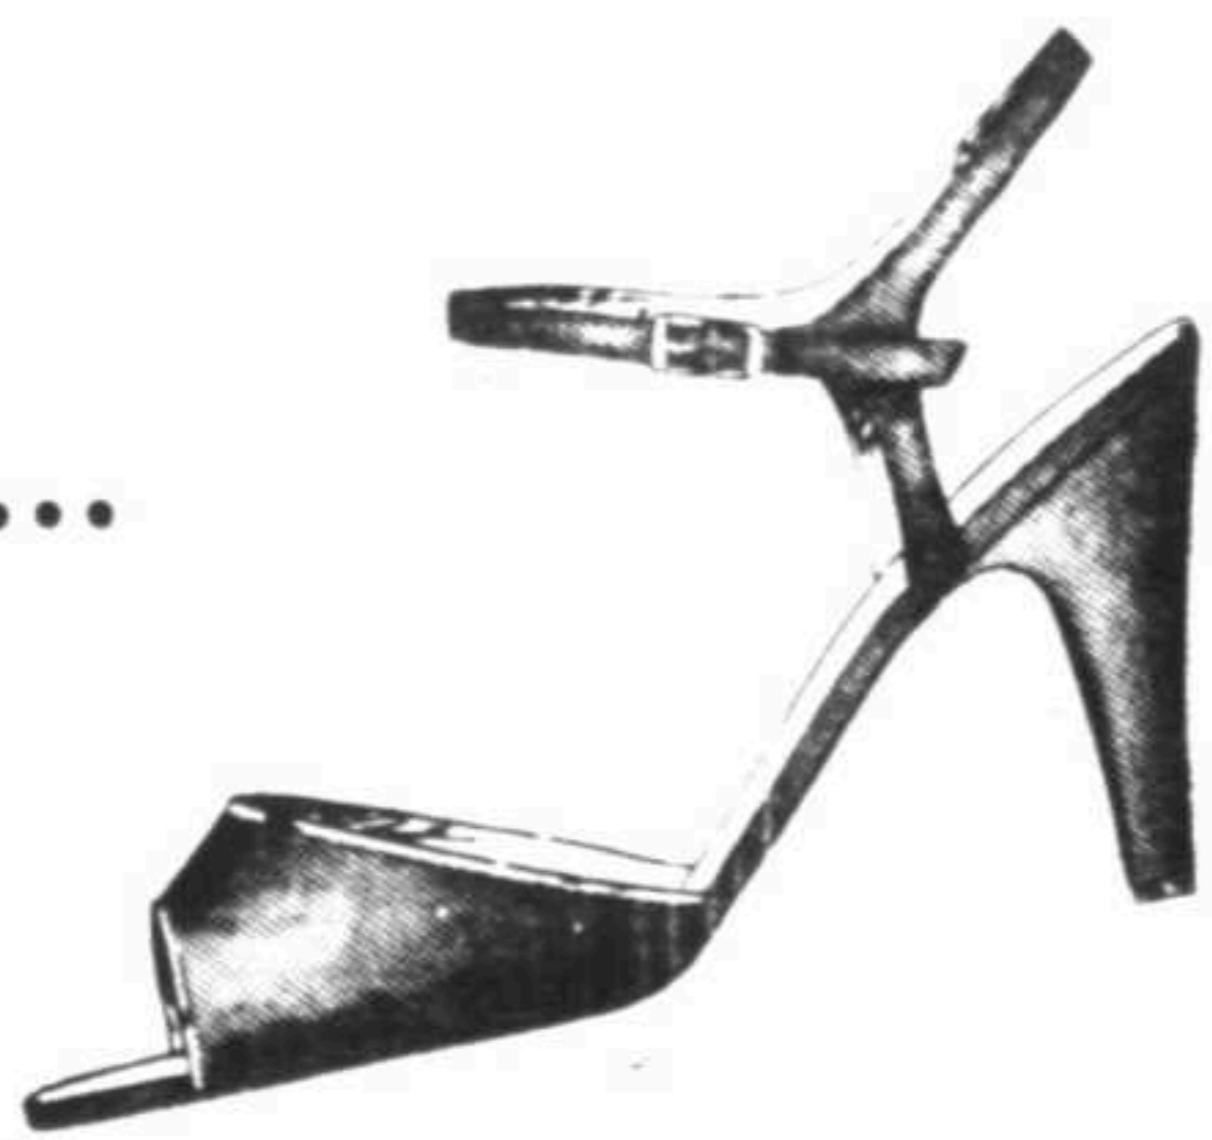

Public Safety Officer Gary Stringer said he was the first officer on the scene. "There was no one on the tree when I got there," he said.

But if there had been, Stringer said, he probably would have made the person get down for his own safety. "We get paid for it, they don't," he said.

Firefighter Ervin Lewis Jr. believes the people on the scene did all they could to rescue the victims. "When you find out there are people in a house and there's nothing you can do, you just feel helpless," he said.

The fire was the worst in recent Texarkana history. The worst, according to historical records, occurred July 8, 1888, when a building under construction toppled onto a saloon and fire from oil lamps broke out. Twenty-eight people died in the fire.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Among the celebrities celebrating this birthday with you are Green Bay football coach Bart Starr, actor Fernando Lamas, singer Joan Baez and actress Susannah York. Also born on this date is former President Richard Nixon. The financial picture can be substantially improved if you will continue to set aside extra income for savings and investments. Take advantage of the special opportunities available to you in February and during the summer. The outlook for love and marriage is excellent. You attract the kind of romantic partner you have always wanted! Protect your reputation. Keep the record straight as you go along.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Deal with the unexpected diplomatically and you gain new allies. Older person is sympathetic. Distractions, interruptions make it difficult to complete home projects.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Focus your attention on important partnerships and seek a compromise when differences arise. An afternoon or evening social function brightens your outlook.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Expect good news regarding a scholastic subject. Friends prove more stimulating company than in the recent past. Be adaptable when dealing with parents or other authority figures.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day for working on income tax and insurance matters. Problems with relatives lessen. Influential people sit up and take notice of you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid becoming impatient with member of opposite sex. Diplomacy will work wonders! Home and security are your preoccupations. Seek family members' cooperation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Loved one is apt to make inordinate demands on your time and energy. Speak your mind. Balance family obligations with personal pursuits. Singles find romantic possibilities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Finish up chores before making social plans. Platonic relationship takes on a deeper meaning for some. See things as they really are or you court trouble.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have unusual rapport with a member of the opposite sex. A telephone call or flattering invitation will make your day! If unattached, you ponder interesting dating prospects.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accompany a favorite companion on a shopping expedition. He/she will appreciate your advice. Keep promises made to older person. Show more interest in those confined to hospital or home.

Gentlemen:
In a recent game, East-West let North-South make five spades despite the fact that there are three top losers. West led the jack of hearts and East signaled with the seven as dummy won the ace. West won the spade lead from dummy with the ace and continued a heart. Declarer made the rest of the tricks.
We agreed to let you assess the blame.—A Regular Reader
We find that South, and he alone, did nothing wrong, although we would have opened his hand one club in order to show both suits as economically as possible. Despite the fact that North held five trumps, he has a balanced hand with only one ace, so a raise to two spades would have been adequate.
East had a chance to direct the defense to the winning path. It is obvious that South can have no more than one heart. On the opening lead, therefore, East should have played his queen of hearts.

Italian police kick in an abandoned farmhouse's door Thursday after a Red Brigades communiqué found Wednesday told them U.S. Brig. Gen. James Dozier was being held in that area. The police search failed to turn up either Dozier or any terrorists.

Ambassador says Dozier kidnapers have 'failed'

ROME (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Maxwell M. Rabb said today the Red Brigades kidnapers of U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier have "failed in their objectives." "This event has not altered in the least the closeness of relations between the United States and Italy," the envoy said in remarks prepared for a dedication ceremony at a home for the elderly near Udine in northern Italy. "It has not touched the Western alliance. I have seen no evidence that it has altered in the slightest Italy's traditional practice of liberty and democracy," he said. Rabb called the Dec. 17 abduction of the 50-year-old general "a cowardly attack by a small group which lacks the courage and the ideological substance to carry its views directly to the Italian people and have them judged democratically." Acting on tips by anonymous callers, police scoured wide areas near Pisa in central Italy for a terrorist hideout where Dozier might be held. Police also searched boats moored along Lake Garda north of Verona where Dozier was kidnapped by four men posing as plumbers. In Rome, an inter-Cabinet commission on security adopted a series of unspecified anti-terrorism measures. Government officials said the measures would be made public after being presented to the Parliament. On Thursday, a NATO spokesman predicted Dozier's kidnapping will be drawn out, as was the abduction of former Premier Aldo Moro. "We're probably are facing a long haul," NATO spokesman Col. Luciano Dalcheggio said. He based his comments on a communiqué found by reporters in Rome and Padua Wednesday night after anonymous callers told them where to find it. The communiqué, the third issued by the extreme left-wing gang since it abducted Dozier from his Verona home, made no mention of the general's fate and posed no conditions for his release. Police said the document appeared authentic, and NATO officials agreed. "There are certain biographical details (in the document) only Gen. Dozier could have known," Dalcheggio said. There appeared to be some similarities to the Red Brigades' handling of the lengthy and widely-publicized kidnapping of Moro. Kidnapped in 1978, he was subjected to a similar interrogation. He was found shot to death 56 days later. The gang sentenced him to death and killed him after the Italian government rejected the brigades' offers of his release in exchange for imprisoned terrorists.

Task force considering college stipends for military recruits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new GI education program offering youths from $8,000 to $9,000 for college in exchange for a three-year enlistment is being considered by a presidential task force, Pentagon sources say. The plan could cost about $1 billion a year but would be a good investment because it would attract high-quality volunteers to the military, according to the sources, who asked not to be identified. The program under consideration by a study group working for President Reagan's Military Manpower Task Force could be the first to offer non-contributory education benefits since the old GI Bill of Rights expired more than five years ago. Since then, the Pentagon has offered the Veterans Educational Assistance Program under which a man or woman in the service contributes $1 for each $2 in benefits received. Officials familiar with the group's work said Thursday that although details of the new plan have to be worked out, expected features include: — Benefits would be available only to young men and women who enlist after Congress enacts the necessary legislation. — A youth enlisting for three years would qualify for a stipend of possibly $8,000 to $9,000 to pay for tuition, books and other college expenses after completing the enlistment. — Service secretaries would be authorized to add a "kicker" amounting to several thousand dollars for young men who enroll in the infantry or other combat branches. The Army chronically has had trouble recruiting enough combat soldiers. Women are barred from combat assignments, and it is unclear whether they would be eligible for the extra college subsidies if they sign up for a difficult non-combat skill. — A person could use the payments up to 10 years after leaving service. The plan would include some form of "transferability" of benefits, allowing a serviceman or woman to hand off the subsidies to a child if the service person chose not to use those benefits. However, officials said, a serviceman or woman would be expected to contribute several thousand dollars of his or her own to go along with any benefits transferred to an offspring. The officials said the program would not raise defense spending immediately because it would take at least three years from enactment before the first payments were made. Reagan created the manpower task force last summer to study ways of raising and maintaining adequate armed forces strength. The Pentagon said "there has been no date set for its final report because the task force has not completed its deliberations."

Pentagon says build-up may cost more than predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon leaders have been told that the Reagan administration's five-year defense buildup plan may cost from $300 billion to $750 billion more than projected, The Washington Post said in today's editions. The newspaper said the warning was made by Pentagon planners Thursday at a secret session of the Defense Resources Board. One of the planners, Richard D. DeLauer, head of weapons research and procurement, said his "best guess" estimate of the potential cost overrun was $300 billion, according to The Post. DeLauer was quoted as also saying in a report that the overrun "could be as large as $750 billion." The administration has estimated defense authorizations for the 1984-1988 period at $1.5 trillion — $1,500 billion.

Casey may have overreached

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William J. Casey went outside formal channels to Treasury and State Department officials to seek a change in U.S. tax rulings while representing Indonesia as a private attorney in 1976, government documents show. The Justice Department's criminal division is reviewing the matter to see if Casey violated federal law by failing to register as a foreign agent. Department officials say that in the past, criminal charges have been brought only when a foreign agent tried to conceal his work. The documents show that Casey did not disclose the full extent of his lobbying for Indonesia in a revised disclosure statement filed with the Senate Intelligence Committee last September, two days before the panel ended its investigation of Casey's past business dealings. In September, Casey acknowledged having one meeting at Treasury and two meetings at the Internal Revenue Service in 1976 on behalf of Indonesia. But IRS documents obtained by The Associated Press show that Casey also contacted the State Department. And both documents and the recollection of officials who were involved with the issue indicate Casey contacted Charles M. Walker, the assistant treasury secretary for tax policy, and possibly then-Treasury Secretary William Simon. Asked about the matter, the CIA said Thursday that the law firm of "Rogers & Wells made a good faith determination in 1976 that no registration was called for. The firm continues to believe that determination was correct, and Mr. Casey concurs." On July 9, 1976, Walker wrote IRS Commissioner Donald C. Alexander that Indonesia had hired legal counsel in New York to help gain a private tax ruling called a tax letter. "I assume that, in view of the tremendous importance of this matter, the forthcoming ruling request will be expedited by your office," Walker wrote. In an interview, Alexander said, "I recall Treasury's interest in this matter, and Treasury is not normally a party to a letter ruling." IRS regulations adopted since 1976 define Treasury contacts with IRS on tax letters as "third party contacts," which the service must publicly disclose. A memo by IRS attorney Steven Haines shows he was called by Arthur Dornheim of the State Department's Indonesia Desk on Sept. 1 and 2, 1976. According to the memo, Dornheim told Haines that Casey had informed him the IRS had refused to issue the ruling. The contacts raise questions about Casey's defense for not registering as a foreign agent. Casey's defenders have said the law exempts attorneys doing legal work in established agency proceedings — such as the IRS tax letter ruling process. But the documents show the IRS ruled that its tax letter process had never even begun. According to an IRS memo, Assistant IRS Commissioner John L. Withers told Casey at a July 14, 1976 meeting that the IRS "could not express any opinion ... until ... a U.S. taxpayer requested a ruling from the service. Since neither Pertamina (the Indonesian state oil company) nor Indonesia met the later qualification, some other entity such as a U.S. oil company would have to approach the service before we could give a definitive answer." Casey and Rogers & Wells were hired by Indonesia in 1976 after the IRS ruled that payments by U.S. oil companies to Pertamina could no longer qualify for U.S. income tax credits. In a seven-page memorandum, Casey said Indonesia wanted him to "preclear" with the Treasury Department and the IRS that rewritten contracts between Indonesia and U.S. oil companies would qualify the payments for U.S. tax credits. An IRS memo says Casey supplied this document to Walker and IRS officials. A source familiar with this case said, "There was a fair amount of pressure to rule on behalf of a foreign government and that had never been done before." In interviews, Simon, Walker and Dornheim said they did not specifically recall meetings with Casey but were familiar with the case.

Death of reputed mobster leaves police, confused as to who runs Philadelphia mob

Police surround the body of reputed Philadelphia crime figure Frank "Chickie" Narducci, who was gunned down Thursday night as he was getting out of his car near his home. A police spokesman said Narducci was hit by eight bullets fired at close range.

By BRUCE DALLAS
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A reputed mobster gunned down in an "organized crime hit" hadn't said anything about being in danger, his lawyer said, and the slaying left police confused about who runs the mob in Philadelphia.

Frank "Chickie" Narducci, 49, was killed by at least 10 gunshots Thursday evening shortly after he left a federal courthouse where he was on trial with seven other men on charges of loansharking and racketeering. Jury selection began Monday.

Narducci was shot at point-blank range near his home, and there were no witnesses, police said.

"It was strictly an organized crime hit. Whoever did it was right on top of him," said Detective Michael Chitwood. He said powder burns were found in the back of Narducci's raincoat.

Narducci, who was alleged to be the king of craps and high-stakes card games in south Philadelphia, was the ninth crime figure killed in the city since the death of reputed crime boss Angelo Bruno, 69, on March 21, 1980.

Investigators said the power struggles that followed Bruno's death left Nicodemus "Little Nicky" Scarfo in charge.

Police speculated the murder might have been related to lingering struggles for power, but an official of the Pennsylvania Crime Commission, who asked not to be identified, said he doubted it.

"I just don't think Narducci was of the magnitude to be a threat to someone like Scarfo," he said. "That doesn't mean he was being phased out. He was a substantial money-maker for the family as far as gambling. He was too valuable."

Wallace Hay, the crime commission's executive director, said the murder was confusing.

"With each death, it seems to get less and less clear who's in charge," Hay said. "I think they're (Bruno's associates) losing power. It's not clear what will happen now."

Detectives said Narducci probably was shot by two gunmen sent by other organized crime figures. His body was found slumped beside his car, which was parked around the corner from his brick rowhouse in south Philadelphia, Chitwood said.

Police said Narducci was shot about 30 minutes after leaving the courthouse. Narducci's lawyer, Thomas Carroll, said his last words were, "See you tomorrow."

"There was no indication that anything like this was in the cards," said Carroll, explaining that Narducci hadn't said anything about his life being in danger.

The case against Narducci is a result of a five-year investigation of the Bruno organization.

Philip "Chicken Man" Testa, who allegedly took over the crime organization after Bruno's death, also was indicted in the gambling investigation that resulted in Narducci's trial. But Testa was killed three weeks after his indictment when a bomb exploded on his front porch March 15.

Narducci had been arrested 55 times since 1940 on charges that included gambling, loansharking and homicide, according to police records. He was acquitted on most of the charges, but served a year in prison for a 1967 gambling and conspiracy conviction.

In April, Narducci and Anthony Rossano were convicted on racketeering, gambling and conspiracy charges in connection with the operation of a high-stakes card game known as zigarette. Narducci had not yet been sentenced, pending post-trial appeals.

Cline murder, arson case turned over to jury

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A jury has been handed murder and arson charges against former busboy Philip Bruce Cline, described by his attorney as an innocent "scapegoat" in the Las Vegas Hilton hotel fire that killed eight people.

The case went to the jury after an eight-week trial and six hours of closing arguments that lasted until nearly midnight Thursday. The jury was to begin deliberating over charges against the 24-year-old defendant today.

"Somebody has to hang for this," defense attorney John Havey said of the Feb. 10, 1981 fire, which injured 200 and caused $14 million in property damage at the 3,000-room resort.

Deputy District Attorney Ray Jeffers countered that Cline set the fire because he wanted to be a hero and receive recognition by alerting guests to the blaze.

"That man wanted recognition," Jeffers said angrily, pointing his finger at the defendant. "I suggest you give it to him in the form of a conviction of arson and eight counts of murder."

Havey accused the prosecution of manipulating witnesses to assure Cline's conviction. He said two Clark County Fire Department investigators told differing stories at different times on the stand.

Havey said one of the state's key witnesses, Thomas Williams, a former cellmate of Cline, was a convicted felon who has had a robbery trial postponed three times. Havey called Williams "a disgusting snitch."

The jury was told it could find Cline either innocent or guilty on arson and eight murder charges.

Havey, who earlier in the trial accused the Hilton of fire code violations, said the "eighth through the 28th floors were a fire just waiting to happen."

The fire began in an eighth-floor elevator lobby and roared to the 29th floor. Cline has said he accidentally ignited drapes in the lobby while smoking a marijuana cigarette and having a homosexual encounter.

Havey accused investigators of failing to determine whether anyone else had set three other small fires at the hotel on the night of the fatal blaze.

"Most ignorance is defensible," Havey said. "I contend that's the state's position. They don't know because they don't want to know."

The other prosecutor in the case, Deputy District Attorney Mel Harmon, alerted security officers shortly after the blaze and the testimony of witnesses showed Cline deliberately set the fire after

Search continues for missing boy

BIG COPPITT KEY, Fla. (AP) — A three-state search continued today for a 3½-year-old boy believed abducted by a neighbor who wanted a child of her own.

As of early today, police had no clues as to the location of little Josh Lee Sultzbaugh, according to Monroe County Sheriff's Dispatcher Dick Lumb. The child disappeared from his Big Coppitt Key home early Wednesday, and a neighbor, Heidi Wolf, 20, of Wauwatosa, Wis., is being sought on false imprisonment charges in the case.

Authorities in Wisconsin, Texas and throughout Florida, as well as the FBI, have been notified to watch for Ms. Wolf and the child, Monroe Sheriff's Detective Edwin Chancellor said.

Meanwhile, a van that also vanished from the child's neighborhood here Wednesday morning was found abandoned along Interstate 95 in Palm Beach County. A gas station attendant reported seeing two women — one matching Ms. Wolf's description — and a child abandon the vehicle.

When last seen, Josh was wearing a red T-shirt, blue jeans and socks, Chancellor said. He has dark blond hair and blue eyes. Ms. Wolf was described as 5-foot-4, 120 pounds, with long, frizzy, dark blond hair.

Ms. Wolf had shown an extraordinary interest in the child during a party at his parents' home Tuesday night and, at one point, his stepfather found her hiding in a closet in Josh's bedroom, according to the detective.

When the stepfather, Robert Kobylarski, discovered Josh missing from his bedroom about 5 a.m. Wednesday, he rushed over to the home of Ms. Wolf's boyfriend, to see if she had him. Neither Ms. Wolf nor the boy were there, and the boyfriend's van, keys and wallet were also gone, Chancellor said.

The boyfriend's name was not released and he had not pressed charges as of Thursday, police said.

Ms. Wolf had told friends she might return to Galveston, Texas, after the holidays, but officials also were looking in other Texas cities.

"We feel that Heidi, from statements she recently made to friends, would like to have a child," Chancellor said. "For whatever reason, she felt Josh was the child she should have."

The family had received no ransom demands, and authorities did not believe the woman would hurt Josh.

Iowa man faces charges of illegally collecting food stamps in five states

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — An unemployed father who wrote a letter to an Iowa newspaper threatening suicide on New Year's Eve so his family would be eligible for welfare has been charged with illegally collecting food stamps in five states.

Lester J. Williams, 36, of Des Moines, Iowa, was indicted Thursday and surrendered to federal authorities to face the charges.

Williams' anonymous letter, which appeared in the Des Moines Register Dec. 30, drew offers of a job and expressions of sympathy from across the nation and touched off a frantic search for him. The letter said Williams' family couldn't collect welfare under regulations scheduled to go into effect Jan. 1 because he was able-bodied and living at home.

Hours before the 11:59 p.m. New Year's Eve deadline, Williams turned himself in to a legal aid official, saying he had changed his mind about suicide.

Williams appeared before U.S. Magistrate Earl Cudd in Minneapolis to face the complaint. Cudd released him on his own recognizance after Williams said he had no money.

Williams said in court he is now working after two years of unemployment. "I have to have that job," he said. "If I stay in jail, I'll lose that job."

Williams said he started work Thursday at Cheney Carpet Mills in Plymouth, Minn. A company official said Williams is working in shipping and receiving. The company offered Williams the job after hearing of his plight.

Williams also said in court that he has seven children depending on him for support. In his suicide letter, he said he wanted to make his wife and two daughters eligible for welfare.

Robert Oberbillig, to whom Williams turned after changing his mind, said Williams told him he had four children by a previous marriage.

The federal grand jury indictment accuses Williams of 12 counts of receiving more food stamps than he was entitled to and six counts of providing false information to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which administers the food stamp program.

Oberbillig said answering the food stamp complaint is part of Williams' effort to work out his problems.

"He's very frightened about it all," said Oberbillig, director of the Legal Aid Society of Polk County, Iowa. "That was one of the things that caused him to become dependent."

The complaint alleged Williams collected food stamps in six Minnesota counties and in North Dakota, South Dakota, Wisconsin and Iowa between April and September 1981.

"He represented that neither he nor any member of his family had received food stamps," the complaint said.

Oberbillig said Williams had told him he made the applications because he was desperate.

The complaint said after Williams applied for food stamps at the Clay County, Minn., Social Services office, a check uncovered earlier applications.

Oberbillig said Williams had been "negotiating" with the USDA "trying to set up a program of restitution for whatever the amount of food stamps he should not have taken." Oberbillig said he did not know the value of the food stamps involved in the complaint.

Inmate wins round in murder rap battle

UVALDE, TEXAS (AP) — Death row humorist Fred T. Durrough has won another ruling in his seven-year legal battle against a capital murder charge.

Even before jury selection was completed in Durrough's third trial, a San Antonio district judge Thursday dismissed the latest indictment because of faulty language.

But Durrough's latest court victory was short-lived. As the indictment was being dismissed in Uvalde, a San Antonio grand jury was returning another indictment Thursday against Durrough in the same killing, meaning he will stay behind bars pending a fourth trial.

Durrough, 42, has been on and off death row since 1973, charged with the slaying of retired Col. Henry Tyler.

Tyler was shot to death on the front step of his home in the posh San Antonio suburb of Olmos Park on Aug. 11, 1973, while attempting to prevent an intruder from entering.

District Judge Preston Dial, who moved the trial to Uvalde from San Antonio on a change of venue, halted jury selection on the fourth day of trial and threw out the indictment.

Defense attorney Nick Rothe contended that the indictment did not spell out the names of the persons Durrough allegedly intended to rob or burglarize, the supporting offenses of the capital murder charge, as required by a previous court ruling.

Last September, San Antonio District Judge Pat Priest quashed a capital murder indictment against Joseph John Cannon, accused of the 1977 shooting of attorney Anne Walsh, on a similar motion.

More than 600 Uvalde County residents were summoned for the jury panel and eight had been qualified when Dial recessed the selection process.

Durrough, calling himself a "pre-trial detainee on death row," has sent several humorous letters to the judge, prosecutors and news reporters while fighting the capital murder charge. One to Dial said, "help, I am being held prisoner with a bunch of convicted murderers."

He also was a plaintiff in a federal lawsuit that is forcing Bexar County to make millions of dollars in improvements to its jail.

He first was convicted of Tyler's killing and sentenced to death in April 1975, but that conviction was overturned by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals on grounds Dial erred in not hearing a motion for a change of venue.

The appeals court overturned a 1979 conviction because of an error in jury selection.

San Angelo nips Rebs

Lee's fourth quarter rallies fall short, 69-68

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Lisa Champlin pumped in 26 points, all from a strong inside game, and then San Angelo survived a severe scare from Midland Lee late in the fourth quarter to deal Midland Lee its first District 5-5A defeat of the year Monday night as San Angelo edged the Lady Rebels 69-68 Thursday night at Chaparral Center before a very sparse crowd.

Lee tumbles to 2-1 in district with the loss while the Bobcats improved their district mark to 3-0, 12-7 overall.

San Angelo appeared to have the contest in the bag after Jeanne Bryant banged in an offensive rebound to give the Bobcats a 62-51 lead with 4:39 left in the game.

Quick-handed Loudres Duran and Yo Yo Goodley produced three straight turnovers and Yshun King, who led the Rebs with 23 points, ripped in two long-range bombs and Duran dumped in a layup to trim the lead to three with 2:47 remaining.

On the Bobcats in-bounds attempt, Suzanne McGaha knocked a pass loose and Maudie Akins grabbed the ball and laid in a basket and was fouled. She calmly drilled the charity toss to tie the contest 62-62 with 2:40 left.

San Angelo extended the lead back to seven, 69-62, on a basket by Regina Cole and free throws by Lisa Lejwiskey, Bryant and Cole with 47 seconds left.

King started the Rebs' second comeback with a jumper and after San Angelo missed a shot, Shun Harris grabbed Duran's missed shot and banged it home to trim the deficit to two with 10 seconds left.

Goodley knocked the ball free when San Angelo tried to in-bound the ball. Harris scooped up the free basketball and laid it through at the buzzer for the final margin.

A discouraged Lee coach Shirley Stephenson said, "We didn't play our best game. We played well in spurts."

On the other bench, first-year Bobcat coach Rachael Beaver said, "I thought it was a very even game. We moved the ball pretty well against their press and that made a big difference. I couldn't believe we almost let the game get away from us in the last few seconds. A seven point lead and 40 seconds to play ..."

After a nip-and-tuck first half, San Angelo took command midway through the third stanza. With the Bobcats on top 41-39, San Angelo hit the Rebs with a 14-6 blitz that gave the Bobcats a 55-45 lead heading into the final period.

During the Bobcats' third quarter streak, Lee seemed to loose track of the ball at times. Most of San Angelo's hoops came off the fast break when the Lady Rebels failed to get back on defense quickly enough.

Stephenson didn't feel her team played bad defense and said, "We had several girls playing in different positions tonight and they just weren't use to getting back in the No. 5 (deep spot) on our press. It wasn't anybody's fault."

San Angelo jumped in front 5-0 to open the game only to see the Rebels storm back to grab an 8-5 advantage. Champlin got free in the key for a couple easy buckets as the Bobcats moved ahead 17-16 at the end of the first quarter.

In the second quarter, both teams tossed in 17 points as San Angelo went to the lockerroom holding a slender 34-33 lead. Champlin was the big gun for the Cats in the second quarter also as she tallied seven points.

Bryant scored 17 points to join Champlin as the only Bobcats in double figures.

Flu strikes Charger camp

SAN DIEGO (AP)—A flu outbreak among the San Diego Chargers is making Coach Don Coryell sick with worry. Two days away from Sunday's American Football Conference battle in Cincinnati, leading rusher Chuck Muncie and all-pro guard Doug Wilkerson are "extremely sick," said Coryell. Backup quarterback Ed Luther also was out with the illness.

Muncie, San Diego's leading rusher and scorer, and Wilkerson, the Chargers' pulling guard, represent the heart of the Chargers' running game.

"My only hope is that no one else gets it. That scares you to death," said Coryell as the Chargers, champions of the AFC West, rehearsed for the showdown with the 13-4 Bengals. Cincinnati has been installed as a 4½ point favorite in the final step to Super Bowl XVI.

MUNICE, THE Chargers' first 1,000-yard rusher in seven years, worked out briefly Thursday, but Wilkerson was held out of practice.

In addition, Ed White, another all-pro offensive lineman, has developed a muscle problem in his upper back.

The only good news, Coryell said at a noon media briefing, is that starting defensive backs Willie Buchanan and Mike Williams "are in the best shape they've been in some time. Buchanan has a chronic knee problem and Williams has been hobbled by a groin pull sustained two weeks ago."

"We took them both off the injured list," said Coryell.

The Chargers, 41-38 winners over Miami in a high-scoring overtime classic last Saturday, were to fly to Cincinnati today.

Coryell held a light workout Thursday "because so many people are banged up. We're just trying to get them ready to play."

Defensive tackle Louie Kelcher, a four-time Pro Bowl selection, slipped on the stadium's muddy field Wednesday and suffered a slight strain in his upper thigh.

BUT CORYELL is confident all four in question will be able to play.

Of the sickest, Muncie and Wilkerson, he said, "it would take an awful lot to keep them off the field. They are really competitors."

Muncie, a long-striding, 6-foot-3, 233-pounder, was the No. 2 rusher in the AFC, behind Houston's Earl Campbell, with 1,114 yards and a 4.6 average in 361 carries.

He rushed for 100 yards or more in five games this year, including 120 in 24 carries against Miami's tough rushing defense. He had a season-high 161 against Cleveland in the season opener.

Danny White needs dry Candlestick for his game

DALLAS (AP)—One of Dallas quarterback Danny White's strongest features is dodging the enemy pass rush.

He just hopes that somehow Candlestick Park will dry out before Sunday's National Conference championship game against the San Francisco 49ers so his mobility won't be negated.

"I just don't like playing in the mud," White said Thursday. "I've played in it. I just like a fast track."

Your first two steps are very important getting away from the pass rush. The mud keeps you from being effective. All of sudden the defensive line-men look like they have arms eight feet long."

WHITE SAID former teammate and defensive tackle Larry Cole used to like playing in grass and mud. His theory was "it makes everybody as slow as me."

Handling the ball can be a problem, White said, but not a major one.

"They change balls every down trying to keep a dry one in there," said White. "You've just got to remember to keep two hands on it all the time."

White said "the field will be just as much trouble for the 49ers as it will for us."

Asked if he thought the 49ers would be distracted by having to practice in Anaheim, offensive tackle Pat Donovan said it would probably help them.

"Philadelphia had to go to Florida to practice for our title game last year and Coach (Tom) Landry said it was advantage for them because they were away from their wives and had no distractions ... they could concentrate harder," Donovan said.

Bulldogs, Rebs gunning for second district win tonight

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

With only one District 5-5A basketball game down the tubes, it may be too early to celebrate the fact that both Midland Lee and Midland High are riding at the top of the 5-5A standings, but that's where both were expected to be at this stage of the season and there may be a little more shouting done by the two locals after tonight's play.

Defending champion Midland High, 14-4 on the year, will host Big Spring (9-8) at 8 p.m. in Chaparral Center today after defeating Odessa Permian without scoring leader Preston Robertson. Robertson is expected to return to action and is a heavy favorite over the Steers, who lost to Abilene High last Friday.

But it's the Lee Rebels of coach Paul Stueckler, fresh from a victory over Odessa High, who would certainly like to be shouting louder after tonight's play since they appear to have the toughest task by trekking to San Angelo to face an angry and upset pack of Bobcats.

San Angelo is considered a bona-fide contender for the title this year, but last Friday in the district opener, the Bobcats fell to the 3-14 Abilene Cooper Cougars.

Chances are that the Bobcats are going to be in high gear for 12-6 Rebels in this one, but Stueckler is not putting any added necessity to this outing.

"I'm pleased that we won our first game against Odessa High. San Angelo is just another district ball game, so you can place any importance you want to on that," Stueckler said. "I know San Angelo has a good basketball team and I'm sure they didn't play their best game against Cooper."

Lee defeated OHS in a low scoring 44-30 contest in Odessa and now have to hit the road once again.

"I think both teams were very tight last Friday, but opening on the road for two games is not new to us. We've done it forever. They haven't changed the schedule in years."

Lee's Andre Van Buren leads the Rebel attack with an 18.6 per game average while Alvin Dunson is hitting at a 15.3 points per game clip. Both scored only 10 points each against OHS in the low scoring game last Friday, but both are capable of big nights. Still, the Rebels controlled the game against OHS despite the low output of 44 points.

Randy Pepper (8.6), Barry Blackwell (7.2) and Kenneth Brown (7.1) and Olen Smith (5.4) give the Rebels plenty of help. Pepper is the floor general and Brown is the top rebounder at 6-foot-5.

San Angelo's Lorand White had 16 points against Cooper and Jeff Casner had 14, but Cooper held Hercules Miller to only nine points.

The Lee-San Angelo game may be heard locally on KBAT-FM radio.

Midland High coach Jack Stephenson is not taking his home game with the Steers lightly, saying, "Big Spring is a much improved club and they will come to play. In fact, if you are not ready to play on any night in this league, you better be ready to get beat."

However, Robertson is expected to be back with the Purple Pack tonight and his 20.5 points per game average can't do anything but help.

In Robertson's absence last Friday against Permian, Jim Gunnels, who is hitting 7.8 points per game, lit up the scoreboard for 21 points, his career high. And Raymond Parker (13.2) also hit for 21 points while Don Sharnowski (13.7) hit for 16 in the 72-61 romp over Mojo.

Bobby Earl Williams paces the Big Spring attack and he led the Steers with 12 points against Abilene High last Friday. Jerald Wright still had 10 points and both are returning starters from last year. In fact, Big Spring is a veteran team and owns victories over some powers this year.

The Bulldogs are tough to defeat at the Chap, however. They have not lost a regular season game since the Tall City Tournament in 1979. Their loss to Plainview, their only loss at home this year, was at the MHS gym. They did lose to Fort Worth Dunbar last year at the Chap, but that was a playoff battle and not a regular season game.

In other 5-5A action tonight, the Abilene schools seek to keep their winning ways against the Odessa schools, both of which are already in the survival role. AHS will meet Permian while Cooper faces OHS. The Cooper-OHS matchup will be interesting because it still remains to be seen if Cooper is for real after the upset of San Angelo last Friday. AHS is heavily favored over Permian.

Big Spring hands MHS third district loss, 57-49

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Steers added to the Midland High woes Thursday night by handing the Bulldogs their third consecutive District 5-5A loss here, 57-49.

Big Spring jumped out to a 15-10 lead in the first quarter and was ahead 25-23 at the half. The Bulldogs took the advantage in the third quarter by outscoring the Steers 14-9 but were outscored 23-12 in the fourth, largely at the free throw line.

"They hit 11 free throws in the last quarter," said MHS coach Jane Young. "We had a five point lead in the last quarter but couldn't hold on to it. We outscored them on field goals 23-19.

"We made a few too many turnovers and too many fouls," she added. "When we clean up our act, we'll be pretty good."

Although none of the Bulldogs fouled out of the game, they did have some foul problems. On the night, MHS was zapped with 25 violations while Big Spring was only penalized 13 times resulting in a 19-3 scoring edge from the free throw line for the Steers.

Shelly Parker led the Bulldogs in scoring with 16 points while Missy Laramore added 10. For Big Spring, Shel Rutledge and Elise Wheat scored 14 points apiece.

The victory improved Big Spring's record to 1-2 in 5-5A play and to 10-11 overall while the Bulldogs fell to 0-3, 11-10.

On Monday, MHS will host Abilene High at Chaparral Center at 8 p.m. In junior varsity action, Midland High posted a 53-30 victory over Big Spring. Sharon Mendenhall scored 14 points, Sally Seal 13 and Shauna Stokes eight in the winning effort. Paula Spears connected for 16 and Teresa Smith 13 for Big Spring.

In other 5-5A games Thursday night, Odessa Permian needed an extra period of play to defeat Abilene High in a battle of district unbeaten, 69-66. The two teams were tied 63-63 at the end of regulation play.

Permian (3-0 in district play and tied for first with San Angelo) got double figure scoring from four players, Jana Davis with 19, Julia Wright with 12 and Debbie Hinds and Melissa Harrison with 10 each. Tracy Hubbard was unstoppable for AHS with 39 points while Sonya Roberts added 16.

Odessa High (1-2) broke into the win column of the 5-5A standings by posting a 38-36 victory over Abilene Cooper (0-3).

OHS held a 22-17 lead at the end of the half and lead by only one point after three quarters as Cooper brought the score to 28-27. The Bronchos outscored the Cougars 10-9 in the final frame to hold on for the victory.

Chaps dump Rangers

Big Spring — Midland College reopened its basketball season Thursday night on the right note as the Chaparrals defeated Ranger Junior College 72-61 in the first round of the ABC Classic at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum here.

The Chaps were able to build up big leads throughout the game, but were unable to put the game on ice until the final minutes of play.

In the first half, MC went up by 10 points midway through the period only to watch Ranger draw even. The Chaps went on another surge before halftime, taking a 36-30 lead.

That five-point lead turned into 11 early in the second half but again it disappeared as the Rangers rallied to pull within two, 54-52, with three and a half minutes left to play. The Chaps then pulled away again for the 11-point margin of victory.

In the game, freshman guard Spud Webb set a school record with 11 straight free throws and led the Chaps in scoring with 23 points. Puntos Wilson added another 17.

Big 10 up to its old tricks

By The Associated Press

College basketball's version of gangland warfare — the Big Ten Conference — is underway, and some of the top bosses already have been bumped off.

The Minnesota Gophers, ranked sixth nationally, and defending NCAA champion Indiana were the first two victims as all 10 teams played their conference openers Thursday night.

Ohio State won its seventh in a row, beating the Gophers 49-47, and Michigan State upended Indiana 65-58. In the other openers in the traditionally power-bent Big Ten, No. 7 Iowa downed Purdue 62-42, Illinois beat Northwestern 60-50 and Wisconsin defeated Michigan 65-63.

IN GAMES involving ranked teams, No. 12 Louisville defeated St. Louis 89-53, and No. 18 Idaho beat Nevada-Reno 72-66 in two overtimes.

Ohio State improved its record to 10-3 by beating Minnesota, which lost its second game in 10. Clark Kellogg, Ohio State's 6-foot-7 junior forward, provided the winning points when he hit a basket with 2:38 to play, and the Buckeyes held Minnesota scoreless after that.

Minnesota's 7-3 center, Randy Brewer, missed a short jumper with 12 seconds left that could have put the Gophers on top.

Kellogg wound up with 14 points, and Tony Campbell had 18 for Ohio State. Brewer had 16 for Minnesota but only four in the second half.

"Right now I think we can finish in the top three," Kellogg said of the conference race, "but our goal is to win the thing. The championship is not out of our reach."

Indiana lost its third in a row. Michigan State's Kevin Smith set a conference mark for free-throw shooting, hitting 19 of 19 and a career-high 29 points. Indiana, 6-4, dropped from the national rankings last week after losing to Villanova and Kansas in the ECAC Holiday Festival.

MICHAEL PAYNE and Mark Gannon led a second-half burst that carried Iowa over Purdue as the Hawkeyes avoided the Big Ten gauntlet to go 9-1. The pair combined for 13 points in the first nine minutes after intermission, when the score was tied 28-26, and the Iowa defense held Purdue to just 14 points in the second half.

Payne finished with 16 points, and Kenny Arnold topped the Hawkeyes with 18. Russell Cross had 14 for Purdue.

Perry Range and Craig Tucker scored 18 points apiece in Illinois' victory over Northwestern. Freshman Scott Roth's 20-footer at the jumper gave Wisconsin its victory over Michigan.

The Top Twenty

Derek Smith scored 18 points to lead a balanced Louisville offense past St. Louis in the Billikens in a Metro Conference contest. St. Louis fell behind 18-1 in the opening six minutes.

Louisville, 3-0 in the Metro and 9-2 overall, also got 12 points each from Lancaster Gordon, Milt Wagner and Charles Jones. LaTodd Johnson paced St. Louis with 13.

IDAHO FOREARD Gordie Herbert scored six points in the second overtime period to lift the Vandals over Nevada-Reno in the Big Sky Conference opener for both clubs. The game was tied at 59 at the end of regulation and 63 at the end of the first overtime.

In the second overtime, Herbert, who finished with a team-leading 18 points, scored two baskets and two free throws to preserve undefeated Idaho's 12-game winning streak.

Unranked Teams

IN A MATCHUP of last season's Western Athletic Conference co-champions,

Wyoming prevailed, 75-49, over Utah as Cowboys forward Bill Garnett scored 26 points and grabbed 15 rebounds. Eddie Hughes scored 15 points, and Colorado State upset Brigham Young 50-40 in another WAC contest.

In the Southern Conference, Charles Jones grabbed an offensive rebound and scored with two seconds left to give Marshall a 67-65 victory over Davidson. John Fitch hit two free throws with four seconds left to preserve Appalachian State's 64-61 victory over Furman.

Daryl Stovall and Michael Johnson scored 18 points apiece as Creighton won only its fourth game in 11 for Coach Willis Reed, beating Southern Illinois 77-59 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Cousineau agent to talk with Cleveland Browns

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Tom Cousineau, the former All-American linebacker at Ohio State who was the No. 1 pick in the 1979 college draft, says his agent will meet with the National Football League's Cleveland Browns next week.

Cousineau, the Buffalo Bills first-round pick in 1979, signed instead with the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League. The Alouettes reportedly put up $275,000 a year while the Bills offered only $225,000.

COUSINEAU IS in the option year of a five-year contract with the Alouettes and has said publicly that he wants to play in the NFL. A spokesman for the Alouettes, Richard Prieur, said Cousineau still belongs to Montreal.

"I know that my agent, Jimmy Walsh, will be in Cleveland on Monday to set up a timetable for our negotiations with the Browns," Cousineau told a reporter for the Rochester Democrat & Chronicle.

Cleveland owner Art Modell acknowledged that he will meet with Walsh, but he said signing Cousineau will not be discussed. Discussions at this stage could violate NFL rules regarding the signing of players from other leagues.

"None of the teams in the NFL can talk to Cousineau or anyone representing him," said Jan Van Duser, NFL director of operations. "If they do, it would be considered tampering."

"I know he (Walsh) is coming to Cleveland and I'm hoping to meet with him on other business either Monday or Tuesday," Modell said. "We will not talk about Cousineau."

Modell said, however, the Browns are "very interested" in the former Ohio State star.

BUFFALO'S TWO-year exclusive negotiating rights to Cousineau expired last May, Van Duser said. The Bills retain the right of first refusal, however, and could claim Cousineau by matching the highest bid, Van Duser said.

The Bills aren't entitled to any compensation if Cousineau signs with another team, Van Duser said.

Cousineau, whose agent said $500,000 was "a little low," said he'll play for the team that offers him the most money.

"I don't want to break the bank," Cousineau said. "All I want is what's fair, whether it's from Buffalo, Cleveland, San Francisco or wherever." "I'm confident something can be worked out to satisfy Tom Cousineau and the team I eventually play for."

Temper costs in tennis meet

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — Second-seeded Australian Kim Warwick was fined $750 Friday for abusing an umpire after losing to countryman Rod Flavelly in the $75,000 South Australian Open tennis tournament.

Flavelly took the quarterfinal match by winning tiebreakers for 7-6 victories in the second and third sets. He dropped the first set 3-6.

Warwick was fined under the Grand Prix code of conduct for verbal abuse of an official. His actions came after a number of close calls went against him in the final set.

ALSO ADVANCING to the semifinals were Americans Lloyd Bourne and Steve Krulvitz and Australian John Janes.

Bourne was a 6-3, 6-3 winner over 16-year-old Aussie Pat Cash, who had upset top-seeded countryman Mark Edmondson on Thursday. Krulvitz beat Tim Mayotte of the U.S., 2-6, 7-5, 6-2, and James took Aussie David Carter, 6-4, 6-2.

Martina Navratilova strains to reach for a shot during a match against Joanne Russell in the Avon Tennis Championships of Washington. The second-seeded Navratilova beat Russel 7-5, 6-2.

nis Championships of Washington. The second-seeded Navratilova beat Russel 7-5, 6-2.

Navratilova leads Avon net winners

WASHINGTON (AP) — Martina Navratilova leads a parade of seeded players into the quarterfinals of a $200,000 women's tennis tournament that is returning to normal after its top-ranked player was ousted in a preliminary match.

Joining Navratilova in the victory column Thursday were three other seeded players — Sylvia Hanika, Andrea Jaeger and Barbara Potter.

Top-seeded Tracy Austin had been eliminated from contention for the $40,000 title Wednesday night by Anne Smith.

Navratilova, seeded No. 2 and the defending tournament champion, put her game into high gear in the second set as she downed JoAnne Russell 7-5, 6-2.

"My timing was off early," Navratilova complained. "In the second set, I settled down and made some good shots."

Jaeger, the No. 3 seed, spent the evening trying to place passing shots out of the reach of 5-foot-11 Leslie Allen. She made enough to come away with a 6-2, 6-2 victory.

"Her size and the speed of the ball on the carpet make it extremely hard to play Leslie," Jaeger said. "Her reach makes it almost impossible to lob it over her head."

Hanika, who is playing in her first tournament since injuring her knee in an auto accident two months ago, overpowered 14-year-old Kathy Rinaldi.

Hanika, who has not dropped a set in the tournament, advances to the quarterfinal round where she will play surprising Bonnie Gadusek. Gadusek will be gunning for her third upset having notched victories over eighth-seeded Sue Barker and Sharon Walsh.

Today's quarterfinal matches send Hanika against Gadusek, fifth-seeded Pam Shriver against Smith, Potter against Jaeger and Navratilova against sixth-seeded Bettina Bunge.

The eight-day Avon Tennis Championships, held to date in the Smith Center in downtown Washington, moves to the more spacious Capital Centre for Saturday's semifinals.

Tasker wins 800th game

ALTUS, Okla. (AP) — The unbeaten Hobbs Eagles presented legendary Coach Ralph Tasker with his 800th career victory Thursday night with a 99-68 win over Altus, Okla.

Hobbs also kept intact its winning streak that now totals 49 straight victories. The streak dates back to the 1979-80 season. The Eagles are just four games short of tying their own record of 53-straight wins which they set during the 1966 and 1967 high school basketball seasons.

Hobbs, now 12-0 for the season, was again led by the trio of Timmy Smith, Wayne Brewer and Tony Benford in the win over Altus.

Anderson, Taylor garner NFL awards

NEW YORK (AP)— Quarterback Ken Anderson, the National Football League passing champion for the third time and driving force behind Cincinnati's resurgence, was named Thursday The Associated Press Offensive Player of the Year for the 1981 season, while sensational New York Giants line-backer Lawrence Taylor was honored as Defensive Player of the Year.

It was the second AP honor bestowed upon the 11-year veteran this week. Earlier, the 11-year veteran out of Augustana College in Illinois was named The Associated Press Most Valuable Player.

The soft-spoken Anderson prefers to focus the attention elsewhere, primarily upon his coaches, receivers and offensive linemen. "It's a little tough to give an individual award in a team sport," he said. "Those awards come because everybody has been playing well."

STILL, HE received the lion's share of the attention from the nationwide panel of 84 sports writers and broadcasters, getting 40 votes to 21 by Tony Dorsett, the Dallas Cowboys' running back.

Joe Montana, quarterback of the San Francisco 49ers, was third with eight votes, followed by rookie running back George Rogers of the New Orleans Saints with four.

A year ago, when a young and still-developing offensive line couldn't protect him properly, and when a series of injuries kept him off the field nearly half the season, Anderson threw for just 1,778 yards and six touchdowns and was intercepted 13 times.

THIS SEASON, though, the line protected him like the crown jewel and he remained almost totally healthy from first game to last. He broke the Bengals' records (which he'd already held) for pass attempts (479), completions (300), yards (3,754), and touchdowns (29), and threw only 10 interceptions.

His completion percentage of 62.6 was the AFC's highest and his interception rate of 2.1 percent was the league's lowest. But precision has always been his trademark. He holds the NFL record for the best passing percentage in a single game, 90.91 (completions on 20 of 22 passes) against Pittsburgh in 1974.

Taylor became the first rookie ever to be named The Associated Press Defensive Player of the Year in the NFL.

THE HONOR comes just 24 hours after the 6-foot-3, 237-pounder from North Carolina was made the overwhelming choice as the NFL Defensive Rookie of the Year for the 1981 season. Earlier this week he was named to The AP All-Pro team.

Taylor was named on 22 of 84 ballots cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters while defensive end Joe Klecko of the New York Jets was named on 20.

Tackle Randy White of Dallas and end Mark Gastineau of the Jets tied for third with 10 votes apiece and end Fred Dean, San Francisco's pass-rushing specialist, received nine. Ed "Too Tall" Jones off Dallas received three votes.

West squad loaded with offensive ammo for Hula

HONOLULU (AP)— Brigham Young University Coach Lavell Edwards will have some surprisingly powerful ammunition to take into football combat when his West All-Stars face the East in Saturday's 36th annual Hula Bowl.

Edwards, blessed during the regular season with the services of quarterback Jim McMahon, will have the all-time NCAA passing leader at his disposal for the seniors' post-season classic as well.

And should he want to augment McMahon's aerial artistry with something a little more down to earth, there's 1981 Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen, who logged 2,342 yards rushing this season for Southern California.

Among McMahon's targets, no doubt, will be UCLA All-American tight end Tim Wrightman, along with Robert Hubble of Rice University and wide receivers Lonnel Phea of Houston and Darryl Mason of Arkansas.

Of course, under the tradition of letting all stars shine here on nationwide television, Edwards will be giving

Nevada-Las Vegas quarterback Sam King some time at the helm.

Over on the East squad, coach Earle Bruce of Ohio State has no intention of giving McMahon, Allen, and accomplices unlimited freedom.

The East defensive squad, bolstered by All-American Andre Tippett of Iowa, Bob Crable of Notre Dame and Johnnie Cooks of Mississippi State, didn't get invited here by leaving a lot of holes unplugged.

Among those in the East defensive backfield are Matt Bradley of Penn State, Pappy Thomas of Pittsburgh, and Tim Seneff of Purdue, all hoping to play havoc with McMahon's passing game.

The East offensive will be called by quarterback Art Schlichter of Ohio State and John Fourcade of Mississippi, who will have backfield help from Butch Woolfolk of Michigan, Charlie Wysocki of Maryland, Eddie Meyers of Navy, Dave Mohapp of Wisconsin and Lindsay Scott of Georgia.

On the line for the East offense will be All-American Kurt Becker.

Longhorn swimmer honored

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)— Olympic gold medal swimmer Jill Sterkel of the University of Texas-Austin was named Thursday night as the winner of the Broderick Cup, given by the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women to the outstanding woman collegiate athlete of the year.

Sterkel was selected from a field of 16 athletes, each designated by the Broderick committee as the outstanding woman collegiate athlete in her chosen sport.

In 1980, as a freshman, the native of Hacienda Heights, Calif., won four events — setting four ALAW and four American records — at the 1980 ALAW

National Swimming and Diving Championships. She later was named Broderick Award winner for her sport that year.

This past season, Sterkel won all five events she entered in the AIAW nationals, leading Texas-Austin to the team title. She now holds the AIAW and American records for the 50-yard freestyle, 100 freestyle, 50 butterfly, 100 butterfly and 200 butterfly.

The Broderick Cup is awarded not only for achievement in sport, but "also embodies the ideals of team contribution, scholastic endeavor, school and community involvement and those personal characteristics that are reflected in the philosophy of the AIAW."

Sterkel, while still in high school, swam on the gold-winning 400-meter freestyle U.S. relay team in the 1976 Olympics at Montreal, won three gold medals and a silver at the 1979 Pan American Games in San Juan, Puerto Rico, and was selected as a member of the 1980 U.S. Olympic Team.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies and Chicago Cubs are attempting to complete a trade in which they would swap shortstops — the Phillies' Larry Bowa for the Cubs' Ivan DeJesus.

A source close to the Phillies conceded that Phillies' General Manager Paul Owens and Cubs' Vice President Dallas Green, the former Phillies' manager, had talked about the deal Thursday.

Other players from both teams would be involved, the Associated Press learned.

Names prominently mentioned were Chicago pitcher Bill Caudill and Phillies' utility infielder Luis Aguayo. There could be others.

Bowa, who has been the Phillies' regular shortstop since 1970, has asked the club for a three-year contract in excess of $400,000 a year.

Robert Goss, left, president of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union announced at a news conference in Denver on Thursday that he was extending the OCAW contract for a 48-hour period beyond the midnight Thursday deadline. At right is OCAW vice-president Joseph Misbrenner. Some 55,000 OCAW union members are affected by the contract.

Wage demand issued after contract extension

DENVER (AP) — The Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union called for a two-year, 27 percent pay hike for refinery workers after withdrawing a deadline for a nationwide strike.

But in Port Arthur, Texas, OCAW pickets were posted early today outside the biggest Texaco plant in the nation after the local ignored the union agreement and went on strike.

"We're on strike," said a union official in Port Arthur who refused to give his name.

Texaco officials could not be reached for comment after the picket line was set up. A recorded announcement informed callers that the company spokesman was out of the office and would return later.

The national OCAW proposal asks for 13.5 percent pay raise each year for the 55,000 union members. OCAW spokesman Jerry Archuleta said the union represents about 60 percent of the nation's refinery workers.

Hours before the Thursday midnight deadline, the union agreed to extend its strike deadline and softened its stand on key contract issues. At the same time, the union said it wanted the 27 percent pay raise, which would increase the average oil workers' hourly pay from $11.66 to about $15 in 1983.

Two refiners, Shell Oil Co. and Gulf Oil Corp., said they had no immediate comment on the latest OCAW proposal.

Contracts covering OCAW-represented workers at about 400 plants owned by 98 oil companies were set to expire at midnight Thursday, and lack of progress at the bargaining table created "an automatic strike situation," union President Robert Goss said.

But at the request of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, OCAW agreed to extend the deadline "subject to 48-hour notice of termination," Goss said. That meant a strike could not begin before midnight Saturday, he said.

"We have made major changes in our proposal in an effort to arrive at a solution," Goss told a news conference in union headquarters here. "Our action, we hope, will initiate meaningful discussions."

However, Goss noted that OCAW called its longest strike — a 12-week walkout in 1980 — over the refiners' refusal to institute dental insurance, and said, "I won't turn over and play dead."

Goss declined to predict whether there would be a nationwide strike.

In Port Arthur, officials of Local 423 of the union had said some 4,000 workers at Texaco's main plant and refinery there would strike at 12:01 a.m. today after company officials refused to extend their contracts beyond midnight.

Pickets posted at Texaco, American Petrofina plants

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — About 4,000 Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers union members at the nation's largest Texaco plant and another 500 at the American Petrofina Co. refinery here ignored an international union agreement and went on strike today.

Union officials of Local 423 in Port Arthur, which represents about 3,000 of the plants 5,000 employees, said about the workers at the Texaco refinery struck after company officials refused to extend their contract and talks broke down.

Negotiators met for an hour Thursday afternoon but talks reached an impasse over pension rights, union spokesman R.C. Graffagnino said.

Charles Rentz, a Texaco spokesman agreed, saying pensions were the main point of contention.

"This issue is so important, the company could not consider continuing a labor agreement subject to any further such misrepresentation of pension rights," Rentz said.

Operations at the Texaco plant would continue "as usual," despite the strike, with supervisory and technical personnel working in three shifts around the clock, Rentz said.

National union leaders, seeking to end a two-month stalemate over contracts for 55,000 oil refinery workers, agreed in Denver Thursday to extend their strike deadline and softened their stand on key contract demands.

James Saxon, spokesman for the OCAW local, had said earlier the picket line would be established early today "unless something drastic happens."

"We proposed the (contract) extension to the company and they refused," Saxon said. "They refused to extend the contract, as requested (by union leaders)."

Union president Robert Goss said contracts covering OCAW-represented workers at about 400 plants owned by 98 oil companies were to expire at midnight Thursday and lack of progress at the bargaining table created "an automatic strike situation."

Texaco officials refused union demands and local OCAW negotiators walked away from the bargaining table Thursday afternoon. He said local union representatives and company officials were working out an "orderly shutdown" late Thursday night, Saxon said.

Union leaders in Denver who had requested the extension were "disappointed" when they heard of Texaco's refusal, Saxon said.

"We were bargaining in good faith," he said.

Negotiators for Shell Oil Co. and OCAW local 4-367 in Deer Park and Gulf Oil Co. and Local 4-23 in Port Arthur have agreed to the contract extension.

Court delays restart of undamaged TMI nuclear unit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The undamaged reactor at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant cannot be restarted until the psychological impact on nearby residents and their communities is assessed, an appeals court panel says.

The U.S. Court of Appeals panel split 2-1 in the decision Thursday, with the dissenting judge saying a delay in restarting the reactor will "mean a colder winter" for customers of the Middletown, Pa., facility.

The ruling nullified a decision of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which said that it would not consider arguments on potential psychological stress in determining when to restart the reactor.

The NRC had not set a date for restarting the Unit One reactor, which has remained shut down since its sister unit was involved in the nation's worst nuclear accident on March 28, 1979.

The panel majority, Circuit Judges J. Skelly Wright and Carl McGowan, ordered the NRC to "prepare an environmental assessment regarding the effects of the proposed restart of the nuclear facility at Three Mile Island Unit One on the psychological health of neighboring residents and on the well being of the surrounding communities."

"The commission shall then determine on the basis of this environmental assessment, whether the National Environmental Policy Act requires preparation of a full environmental impact statement," the two judges said.

They also told the commission to explain its reasons for determining that psychological health would not be part of its consideration in restarting the reactor.
