T-T-Tootsie, goodbye

The villain Daryl Ward revealed Tootsie as Jack Swallow at the United Way Victory Dinner Thursday night. Almost 95 percent of the campaign goal also was revealed with $1,613,579 collected as of Thursday. More money is expected to come in next week. See related story and photo, Page 1C.

New 'energy crisis' under way: Wallace

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Chairman Mack Wallace of the Railroad Commission says the United States may be worse off in energy resources than during the "energy crisis" caused by the 1973 Arab oil embargo.

"I believe we are in an equal — if not worse — situation today," Wallace told oil and gas executives Thursday. "The fact of the matter is, at this very moment we do not have enough oil and gas for our own national security."

Wallace called for a bipartisan national energy conference to "outline the steps that must be taken to help secure America's energy future."

The conference, he said, should include congressional leaders, federal energy officials, the public, and representatives from energy-producing states, major oil companies and independent producers.

Wallace said if foreign oil supplies were shut off, the 350 million barrels of oil in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve would last only 10 weeks. He said the United States has a 35-day supply of gasoline, but shortages caused by a foreign cutoff could affect motorists within three days.

Wallace also said the Reagan administration had decided to abandon the goal of energy self-sufficiency, a move Wallace called "a mistake with far-reaching consequences."

"A national consensus must be formulated and decisive action taken," Wallace said. "Our children are entitled to a future based on promise and opportunity, not regret and recrimination."

Wallace summarized at a statewide oil allowable hearing a letter he had sent to President Reagan.

Unemployment, like labor force, has seasonal surge

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

Unemployment rates are up in Midland and Odessa over last month, and over last year. But the total labor force that is available to fill jobs has grown in both cities over a month ago and over a year ago.

In September, Midland had 6.5 percent and Odessa 9.6 percent unemployment. These two cities don't have enough jobs to go around — but have basically sound economies and people still coming in to take jobs, officials of the Texas Employment Commission said. Figures were released for last month at 9 a.m. today.

Unemployment in neighboring cities was 12.6 percent in El Paso, and 5.5 percent in San Angelo.

Although the TEC doesn't have accurate demographics to profile Midland and Odessa, as they do in other parts of the state, Diane Dobie of the Austin statistical division said, "The state as a whole had higher unemployment from re-entrants: People are coming back into the labor market in September, because the unemployment rates were dramatically lower (in July and August).

"Of course, the entrance of those people into the labor market caused the rates to go back up," Ms. Dobie said.

Midland's unemployment rate, at 6.5 percent in September, is up from 5.8 percent the previous month and 4.9 percent a year ago. Total employment, considered a more reliable indicator of economic health, was 63,700 in September, down from 63,900 the previous month but up quite a bit from 60,000 a year ago.

Layoffs at Grammer-Murphey and The First National Bank of Midland add at least 100 people in Midland's unemployed, a TEC official said.

Odessa unemployment was 9.6 percent in September, up from 8.8 percent the previous month and 6.9 percent a year ago. Employment in Odessa totaled 67,600 in September, up from 67,100 the previous month but down from 68,900 last year.

Charmian Carl of the Midland TEC office said September's unemployed are a group of professionals, who may have been laid off months ago and are just now filing for benefits, and women, who have children in school, may not have had a job through the summer, and are looking for work to make Christmas money.

A great proportion of Midland-Odessa unemployment is seasonal, Ms. Carl said.

None injured in crash landing

The crash landing of a Cessna 310 twin-engine airplane on a runway at Midland Regional Airport just north of Tiger Charter this morning was blamed on a mechanical failure, according to Tommy Jones, assistant director of aviation.

Owner and pilot of the aircraft Jerry Mobley of Midland, and sole passenger Jim Todd of Odessa, were uninjured. The two said they were on their way to Lubbock.

"The nose gear didn't lock so he (Mobley) made a low approach over the control tower," Victor White, director of aviation, said. A spokesman at the control tower confirmed White's comments.

"We knew this was going to happen," White said, "and the fire trucks were en route."

No flames were reported and Midland firemen washed spilled gasoline off the runway following the incident, which occurred at 10:45 a.m.

According to White, there was no substantial damage to the plane or the runway. The plane was towed into Tiger Charter and officials from the Federal Aviation Administration are expected to investigate.

'Hoity toity' pulls chain on 17-story building

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — An overflowing commode — call it a hoity toity — has knocked out the 17-story Wells Fargo Bank Building on Fashion Island, upper-crust Newport Beach's answer to Rodeo Drive.

The flow of water, despite plumbers' efforts, short-circuited an electrical line that fed power to every floor and caused an explosion that knocked the head off a fire-prevention sprinkler.

That sent water gushing down to the fifth floor, triggering alarms that brought 14 trucks from four fire departments and causing a blackout that left 1,000 lawyers, brokers, accountants and others with nowhere to work today.

"The lobby was full of firemen and the streets were full of fire trucks," said building manager Ron Mittins. "They were ready for a major fire."

There was no fire, but the flooding and blackout that followed Wednesday's explosion left the building useless.

"I can't use my adding machine, my typewriter, I can't use anything," said attorney Frank Terreri, 60. "...I can't believe it was a toilet that started all this."

He used a flashlight to seek a file needed in a divorce case going to trial today.

Security guards turned clients away.

"You guys are making me lose my business," one tenant complained to guard Tim Farrell.

Mittins said repairmen had to find a company that could supply a 15-foot electrical buss, an enclosed shaft containing aluminum bands that conduct power. It must be flown in from the East Coast, he said. Workers hoped it would arrive today.

The nine-year-old white cement structure is owned by the Irvine Co., which leases it to Wells Fargo and about 30 other firms, including Price Waterhouse, Prudential Insurance Co. of America, Seahawk Oil International Inc., Westport Financial Corp., and the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Survey shows Americans ignorant of judicial system

Hearst Feature Service

SAN ANTONIO — Fifty percent of the American public mistakenly believe it is the responsibility of the person who is accused of a crime to prove his or her innocence.

At the same time, substantially more than half of the American public, 63 percent, think it would be good public policy to "step up" punishment of "victimless" crimes such as possession of small amounts of illegal drugs, illegal sex between consenting adults and certain juvenile offenses such as school truancy, breaking curfew and drinking.

These are among the findings in a new nationwide survey titled "The American Public, The Media and The Judicial System," sponsored by The Hearst Corporation.

A Hearst Special Report

Reporting on the survey's results here today before The National Conference of Metropolitan Courts, Frank A. Bennack Jr., president and chief executive officer of The Hearst Corporation, said, "Our effort had four objectives: (1) to measure the public's knowledge of important legal concepts; (2) to determine where Americans get their information; (3) to assess their personal experience with the judicial system; and (4) to document public opinion about certain contemporary legal issues."

"What the Hearst survey found," Bennack reported, "were startling flaws in the American people's knowledge of fundamental legal principles, a heavy reliance on the media for information, minimal public participation in the jury system and a mix of expected as well as surprising opinions."

Among the opinions expressed on a range of contemporary issues were the following:

—The majority of Americans are against plea bargaining in criminal cases, 53 percent to 35 percent.

—The vast majority of Americans favor the jury system, 89 percent to 6 percent. Yet only 16 percent have ever served on a jury.

—The majority support maintenance of confidentiality for journalists' sources, 57 percent to 36 percent.

—Americans are evenly split on the issue of cameras in the courtroom. For 45 percent. Against 48 percent.

The survey was sponsored by The Hearst Corporation and conducted by Research & Forecasts, Inc., of New York City. The findings represent the results of 983 telephone interviews conducted among a randomly generated sample of men and women cross the United States. The statistically valid results have an overall margin of error of plus or minus 3.2 percent.

In each of its four major subject areas, the Hearst survey found what Bennack termed, "information that demands the attention of our society."

Level of public knowledge

■ Poll's highlights listed — Page 2A

Americans admit they are least familiar with the judicial branch of government, according to the Hearst survey. Almost one-third (32 percent) of the general public believe that, of the three branches of government, they are best informed about Congress. Less than a third (28 percent) claim to be best informed about the presidency and cabinet and little more than one in five Americans (21 percent) say they are best informed about the courts.

This self-assessment is supported by the publics' familiarity with government figures. Sixty-six percent of the people correctly identified Tip O'Neill while only forty-one percent identified Warren E. Burger as a judge. Thirty-eight percent could not identify the chief justice at all. Forty-one percent could not identify Sandra Day O'Connor and sixty-five percent could not identify Lewis F. Powell Jr.

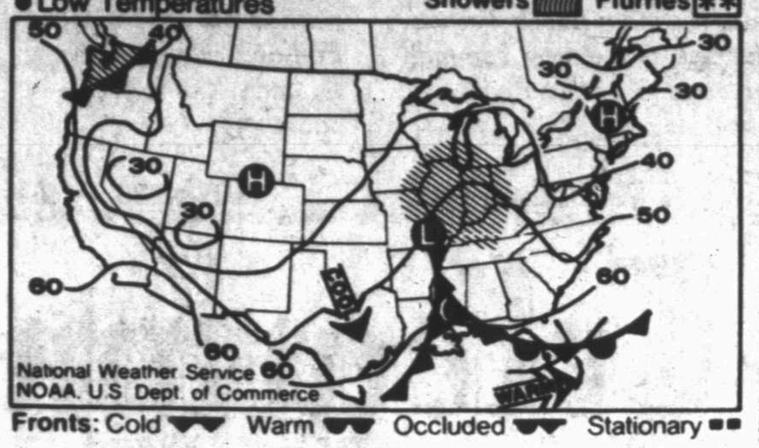

Overall, those surveyed accurately identified judicial figures less frequently than leaders of Congress or members of the cabinet.

This low level of knowledge about prominent judicial figures extends to a range of specific concepts and procedures in the judicial system itself.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, the mercury is expected to drop into the middle 40s tonight and climb into the lower 70s on Saturday.

Light and variable winds will breeze through the Tall City through Saturday.

With 4.04 inches of rain recorded this month, the yearly total rose to 7.45 inches, still some five inches less than the average for this time of the year. Only a trace of rain was recorded overnight, according to the NWS.

Thursday's high of 59 was 32 degrees below the record high of 91, set in 1979. The overnight low of 48 missed the record low for that date of 38, set in 1976, by 10 degrees.

Clean Midland ratifies nominations to board

Directors of Clean Midland, Inc. ratified nominations to the organization's board for the 1983-84 year during their Thursday meeting.

The slate of directors nominated includes Kenneth Barnes, Megan Coffield, Carlene Cristiani, Ann Goff, Michael Higgins, Gloria Hinojosa, Susie Hitchcock, Jim Leonard, Sara Newsom, Bill Schammel, Ray Vaden and Paul Williams. The new directors will be presented for approval to the full membership of the organization at the next meeting, scheduled for 4 p.m. Nov. 17 in the Midland Room of First City National Bank.

In other action, the board accepted the recommendation of executive coordinator Nancy Sharp and changed the regular meeting date to the third Thursday of each month. Ms. Sharp had indicated that scheduling seemed to present fewer conflicts.

The board also enacted a new rule regarding attendance of directors at monthly meetings. Now, any director who accumulates three unexcused absences from board meetings may be asked by the board to resign. That step was made optional at the board's discretion.

Ms. Sharp also told the board that a cleanup of the railroad tracks right-of-way adjacent to Front Street and other points in the city recently resulted in the collection of about 133 tons of refuse. She said the cleanup was conducted on a Saturday by Midland's eight Lions Clubs. On a normal Saturday at the city's landfill operation, about 35 tons of refuse are dumped, she said.

Board member Fred Baker said the cleanup operation was successful and is certainly worth conducting again in the future.

Trinity Presbyterian conducting seminar on family enrichment

Trinity Presbyterian Church, Louisiana Avenue and Andrews Highway, is offering a seminar in "Strengthening Families through Education and Enrichment" today and Saturday.

The purpose is to help individuals and couples understand the "threads" that are holding marriages together.

Seminar leader is the Rev. Norman D. Godfrey, interim pastor of the Samaritan Pastoral Counseling Center (formerly West Texas Pastoral Counseling Center, Inc.). An ordained Presbyterian minister, Godfrey has received clinical training in pastoral psychology and counseling. He has 10 years experience in working with individuals, marriages and families.

Godfrey is a graduate of Wingate College, Wingate, N.C.; Carson-Newman College, Jefferson City, Tenn.; Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, KY.; and Duke University Divinity School, Durham, N.C.

Session I, "It's a Hard Time for Lovers," is today from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

The other sessions are Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. They are "Making a No Exit Decision," 9-10:30 a.m.; "The Language of My Love," 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and continued from 1 to 3 p.m.; "Spaces in Our Togetherness," 3:30-5 p.m.; and the seminar's closing "Eden on the Promised Land," 5:15-5:30 p.m.

Lunch on Saturday is $2 per-person. Childcare is provided. Both require reservations. For reservations and information call 682-2514.

Unemployment figures increase

Economic stability of the area is indicated by increases in the labor force in both cities over a year ago. Midland grew by 5,000 to 68,100 people available for work over 63,100 a year ago. Odessa grew by 800, and had 74,800 people available for work, up from 74,000 one year ago.

"There is always a resurgence of women — and others — in the September labor force," Ms. Carl said. " 'Mommies' are going back to work. Plus there is a lag-time in unemployment figures because professional people in Midland are reluctant to file for benefits."

She noted that 3,700 more people are working in Midland over a year ago. "People who have been here for awhile know that things have been much worse," Ms Carl said. "The late 1960s were very grim. And Lord knows we've had our ups and downs."

Claims for unemployment benefits dropped roughly 20 percent in September, Ms. Carl said. Some of the drop in claims, initial and continued, can be attributed to people who ceased to qualify for benefits after being on the rolls for 14 months. "Fourteen weeks is the maximum, including federal aid," Ms. Carl said.

But the dropping claims are a good sign because some of the reduction is due to people getting jobs — although there are 200 less people working in Midland from the previous month, 500 people gained jobs in Odessa during the month.

Americans ignorant of judiciary

"The single, most startling discovery in the Hearst survey, the most striking example of public misinformation," Bennack reported, "is the revelation that fully half of the American public, exactly 50 percent, does not understand or appreciate the legal concept of innocent until proven guilty."

Age and education altered the response to this question in certain demographic groups, however. Sixty-eight percent of college graduates know it is untrue that an accused person must prove innocence, compared with 48 percent of high school graduates and only 17 percent of those with an eighth grade education or less. Sixty-one percent of those between the ages of 25 and 34 know the statement is untrue, compared with only 21 percent of those over the age of 65.

Surprisingly, 49.9 percent of those people who have served on a jury thought it true that accused persons must prove their innocence.

"Somehow, appreciation for one of our most fundamental legal principles has fallen from our public consciousness," Bennack said. "I sincerely believe that everyone concerned with educating and informing the public — the courts, the media, the schools — must take immediate remedial action to correct this grievous situation."

In other areas, while a large majority of the public (81 percent) responded correctly to questions concerning the right of convicted persons to appeal, the definition of a hung jury (87 percent) and the right of lawyers to veto prospective jurors (79 percent), erroneous beliefs were expressed about several important points of law.

Among the more serious errors in public knowledge:

—A slight majority (55 percent) incorrectly believe it is true that if someone is found innocent of a crime, the state can appeal the case. Such a belief ignores the principle of double jeopardy.

—A large majority of the public (77 percent) attribute too much power to the Supreme Court and wrongly believe it can review and reverse every decision made by a state court.

—Many Americans entertain misconceptions about the role of the district attorney. Forty-five percent wrongly believe that it is the district attorney's job to defend an accused person who cannot afford a lawyer.

In 1977, a similar survey on public knowledge of the judiciary was conducted for The National Center for State Courts by Yankelovich, Skelly and White. A comparison of the 1977 findings with the results of identical questions asked in the 1983 Hearst survey indicates that the low level of awareness about the American judicial system continues.

"Regrettably, little seems to have changed in the six years since the State Courts study," Bennack told the conference of judges from across the country. "Americans today still have a serious misunderstanding about some of our most basic legal concepts and the operations of our judicial system. Things have not gotten better."

Sources of information

The media is a much more important source of information about the courts than are lawyers, personal experience, school or libraries, according to the Hearst survey.

A large portion (54 percent) of the public say they frequently get information from TV news. Closely following, a majority (51 percent) say they frequently get this information from newspapers. Only 28 percent claim to get such information frequently from radio news.

Television drama is the frequent source of judicial information for fully 19 percent of the public. This means people are three times more likely to get information from television drama than their own juror experience (6 percent) or from other personal court experiences (6 percent).

"What we have documented, I believe, is that the media is, by far, the most important conduit of information about our judicial system," Bennack stated. "In establishing that fact, we have implicitly made a case for openness on the part of the courts and thoroughness on the part of the media."

Personal experience with the judicial system

Relatively few Americans have had first-hand experience with the judicial system, according to the Hearst survey.

The most common reason for Americans to have gone to court is a civil case. Twenty percent of the public has, at one time or another, been a party to a civil case such as divorce, child-support or a breach-of-contract.

The second most common reason for having been in court is jury duty, but the statistics here are disconcerting.

Only 32 percent of adult Americans report ever having been called for jury duty. And only 16 percent of adult Americans report having ever served on a jury.

"Our jury system is being supported by a very thin slice of the American public," Bennack told the judges, "and that is not right, it's not the way the system ought to work."

After the 16 percent involved in jury duty, personal experience with the judicial system declines.

About one in 10 Americans have been involved in a small claims action (13 percent), have been victims (11 percent) or have been witnesses (10 percent). About one in 20 report having been involved in a personal injury action (6 percent) or in a bankruptcy (5 percent). Only 1 percent report having been involved in a medical malpractice suit.

Victims and witnesses, the survey discovered, tend to be people with more than the average amount of experience with the judicial system and are more likely to have been involved in civil cases and personal injury cases than have the general public.

In addition, unfortunately, the roles of victim and witness are overlapping among a sector of the population. While only 10 percent of the general public reports having been a witness to a crime, four in 10 (43 percent) of witnesses also report having been a victim.

Public issues

Americans expressed firm opinions in the Hearst survey on a variety of controversial issues. Concern about crime is clearly apparent in the hardline attitude toward plea bargaining and demand for prosecution of so-called "victimless crimes." Yet on issues relating to the courts and the media, the public indicated strong support for confidentiality of journalists' sources. They were less opinionated concerning cameras in the courtroom.

Among the opinions expressed:

—More than half of the American public (53 percent) consider it good public policy that a person accused of a crime be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, even if there is a 50-50 chance or less that he will be convicted.

—More than one out of three Americans (35 percent) believe that a person accused of a crime should be able, with the consent of the prosecutor, to plead guilty to a lesser charge, ensuring that he will receive some level of punishment.

The public is less divided over the issue of punishment for those accused of victimless crimes. A clear majority (63 percent) believes the judicial system should step up enforcement and punishment of "victimless crimes."

Almost three out of every 10 people, however, (29 percent) believe that the police and the judicial system should move away from enforcement and punishment for victimless crimes. Of interest is the fact that almost the same percentage of victims of crime (30 percent) adopt the same attitude.

Traditionally journalists, in order to secure information, have had to promise confidentiality to some sources on occasion. Recently, some courts have challenged this tradition. But the press seems to have the support of the people.

Fifty-seven percent of the American public agree that journalists should have the right to maintain confidentiality. A minority, slightly more than one-third (36 percent), believe that journalists should have to identify their sources in compliance with a court order.

Belief in the confidentiality of a journalist's sources is supported by 60 percent of political independents, 61 percent of Democrats and 49 percent of the Republicans surveyed.

On the issue of whether cameras should be allowed in the courtroom, the general public expressed mixed attitudes. A slight plurality (48 percent) think cameras should not be allowed in the courtroom even though cameras are usually subject to very rigid controls. Forty-five percent think cameras should be allowed in courtrooms.

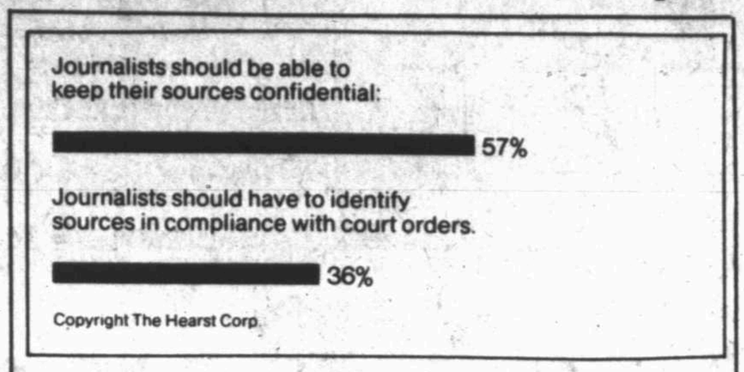

Perhaps the most satisfying finding of the nationwide survey was the fact that an overwhelming majority of the American public, fully 89 percent, support the jury system and believe that juries provide a useful service to society. Only 6 percent said that juries should be abolished.

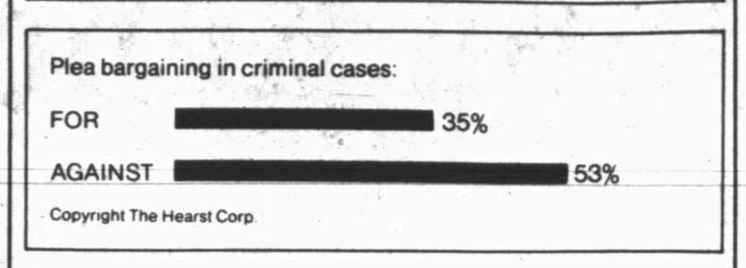

The media and the courts

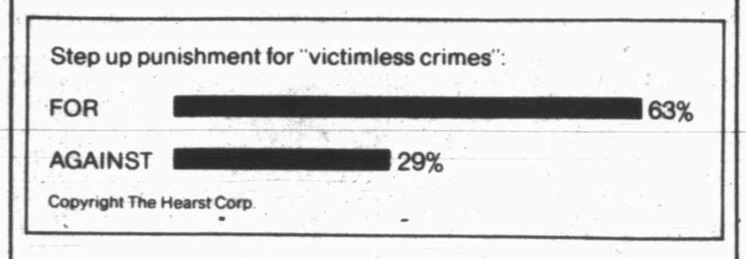

Noting that the Hearst survey documents an urgent need for a better informed public, Bennack said, "If there are increased responsibilities of journalists revealed by this Hearst survey — and I believe that to be the case — so too is there inherent in the information we've shared today, a need for increased responsiveness by the judiciary."

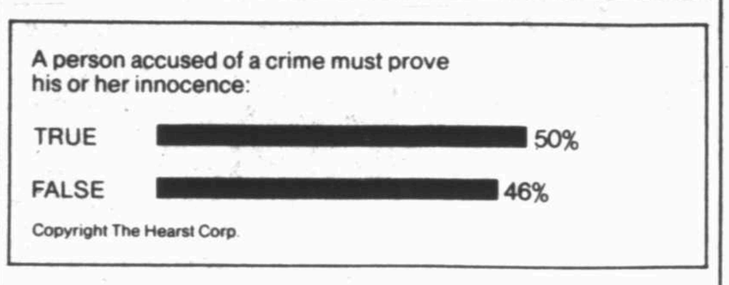

Citing the passage of shield laws in 26 states and recent Supreme Court rulings in favor of an open courtroom, he stated, "I personally sense a trend toward cooperation in the relationship between the courts and the media. Nevertheless, the media must continue to press its case because that cooperation has neither been universal nor uniform. And I am not so sure it can ever be."

"We in the press are not your adversaries," Bennack told the judges, "but we do have a 'watchdog' responsibility to perform for society as a whole. And sometimes we must wage our crusade on behalf of issues important to us, such as media access and reporters' rights."

Most believe accused must prove innocence

The American Public, the Media and the Judicial System

On familiarity with the judicial system

—Fifty percent of the American public mistakenly believe it is the responsibility of the person who is accused of a crime to prove his or her own innocence.

—Almost half of all the respondents who have served on a jury (49.9 percent) also mistakenly believe the accused person must prove his or her own innocence. And 31 percent of all college graduates hold the same erroneous opinion.

—Americans admit they are least familiar with the judicial branch of government. Almost one-third (32 percent) believe that, of the three branches, they are best informed about Congress. Less than a third (28 percent) claim to be best informed about the presidency and cabinet. A little more than one in five Americans (21 percent) say they are best informed about the courts system.

—From a list of eight government leaders, only 41 percent identified Chief Justice Warren E. Burger as a Supreme Court judge. Thirty-eight percent could not identify the Chief Justice at all, while 41 percent could not identify Sandra Day O'Connor, the Supreme Court's first woman justice. Sixty-five percent could not identify Justice Lewis F. Powell, Jr.

—A slight majority (55 percent) incorrectly believe it is true that if someone is found innocent of a crime, the state can appeal the case. This opinion ignores the principle of double jeopardy.

—A large majority of the public (77 percent) attribute too much power to the Supreme Court and wrongly believe it can review and reverse every decision made by a state court.

—Forty-five percent of Americans misunderstand the role of District Attorney and mistakenly believe it is the D.A.'s job to defend an accused person who cannot afford a lawyer.

On sources of information

—Fifty-four percent of the public say they frequently get their information about the court system from TV news.

—A majority (51 percent) say they frequently get such information from newspapers. Only 28 percent frequently get such information from radio news.

—Fully 19 percent of the public say they frequently get their information on the court system from television dramas.

On personal experience with the judicial system

—Only 32 percent of the American public say they have ever been called for jury duty.

—Only 16 percent of the American public report ever having served on a jury.

—The most common reason for Americans to have gone to court — an experience shared by 20 percent of the public — is a civil case, typically a divorce, a child-support or a breach-of-contract action.

On controversial issues

—More than half of the American public (63 percent) believe it would be good public policy to "step up" punishment for "victimless" crimes such as possession of small amounts of illegal drugs, illegal sex between consenting adults and certain juvenile offenses such as school truancy, breaking curfew and drinking.

—A majority are against plea-bargaining in criminal cases, with 53 percent opposed and 35 percent in favor of such practice.

—Most Americans (57 percent) support maintenance of confidentiality for journalists' sources. A sizeable minority of thirty-six percent (36 percent) of the general public do not.

—The American public is evenly split on the issue of allowing television cameras in the courtroom. Some 48 percent are opposed to allowing such media access to courtroom procedings, while 45 percent say they are in favor of allowing such access.

Soviets feel arms pact possible

BERLIN (AP) — Soviet bloc leaders say they are confident a U.S.-Soviet arms agreement can be reached if talks in Geneva are extended, but they insist that NATO first scrap plans to deploy new nuclear missiles in Europe.

Warsaw Pact defense ministers and 10 Soviet bloc premiers made separate but similar statements Thursday in the latest of repeated demands that NATO forgo the missile deployment that is scheduled to begin in December.

The two meetings in East Berlin of Kremlin leaders and their allies came amidst an escalated protest campaign in parts of Western Europe by anti-nuclear activists opposed to the missiles.

In Bonn, riot police dragged away some 2,000 anti-missile demonstrators who had gathered before dawn to try to block the entrances of the Defense Ministry. Several miles away, at the Economic Cooperation Ministry, helmeted police pushed back some 750 protesters who wanted to prevent workers from getting into the building.

Police appeared to outnumber protesters at both ministries. No arrests were reported, and both police and protesters said the attempted blockades were peaceful.

In London, the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament planned a mass demonstration for Saturday.

About 50,000 West Germans joined protests against the NATO missiles Thursday in West Berlin, Stuttgart, Munich, Bremen, Hamburg, Cologne and other cities.

Anti-nuclear movement spokesman Andreas Zumach told a news conference in Bonn that more than 1 million people have participated in protests this week.

"The violence-free actions have been taken up positively by the people of West Germany," she said.

But a government spokesman disputed her figure, saying "they have counted each person ten times." He said the government estimated this week's protest particpants at 100,000.

Man survives forced landing on island

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A Harlingen man said he had to wipe oil off his windshield before he guided his small, burning airplane down for a forced landing on an isolated spot on a beach about 45 miles south of Corpus Christi on Padre Island.

Gary Heavin, 28, was rescued by a Coast Guard helicopter crew Thursday after spending the night on the beach. He had been headed home from Corpus Christi, flying along Padre Island, when his engine began leaking oil and caught fire, he said.

Heavin landed his disabled craft on an isolated spot near the Laguna Madre, he said.

The trip from 6,500 feet in the air to his final landing spot in the soft sand was "an experience that kept me busy for a few minutes," Heavin said.

His problems began with a rapid oil leak that drained the engine within four to five minutes, he said. Oil spattered the plane's windshield, making it difficult to see the ground and any potential landing site.

"Then the engine threw a piston and there was this incredible vibration. I felt like it was going to disintegrate before I got in on the ground," he said. The vibrations were so intense that they knocked the magnetic compass from its metal post in the cockpit, he said.

As he was making an approach to the beach, he was forced to wipe oil from the windshield with a rag in order to see. He aborted the beach landing for a wider area further inland, he said. When he landed, the "nose wheel bent up and the wing dipped into the sand."

Once on the ground, he radioed his coordinates to Houston and put out a Mayday signal. He was told a highway patrol vehicle would pick him up.

"I waited 40 to 50 minutes and then, using wind direction and my watch, I started walking to the beach. One and a half hours later, when I still hadn't found it, I retraced my steps."

As he was walking back to his stricken aircraft, a Coast Guard helicopter flew tantalizingly above him for a brief moment.

"I knew they hadn't seen me, but I was hoping," he said. He reached the plane and stayed with it, periodically radioing for help.

He said his night in the sand was not particularly uncomfortable because "the wind was blowing 20 mph and it kept the mosquitoes away." Seeing the Coast Guard at 9 a.m. Thursday was "incredible," he said.

'Pill-popping' truck driver finally stopped by head-on collision

CANADIAN (AP) — A "pill-popping" truck driver was jailed after a bouncing chase over three Texas Panhandle counties that ended in a head-on collision between his tractor-trailer rig and a car that was taking three children to school, authorities said.

No one was killed, but two of four members of a Canadian family were injured. Karen Meek, 42, was listed in satisfactory condition at Hemphill County Hospital Thursday. Her daughter, Lisa Meek, 16, was listed in guarded condition at High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo.

Eddie Meek, 10, and Shonda Meek, 12, were treated for minor cuts and bruises and released from Hemphill County Hospital.

Ochiltree County Sheriff Joe Hataway said the Frederick, Okla., man told officers he had been taking amphetamines since Sunday. He was hauling potatoes from Colorado to Dallas.

Parents sue ride's operator

DALLAS (AP) — The parents of a 19-year-old man killed in an accident at the Texas State Fair are suing the manufacturer, owner and operator of the Enterprise amusement ride.

William W. Phillips of suburban Allen was killed when a car broke from the ride's frame Monday night. His 23-year-old brother, Marion, and a friend were seriously injured in the accident.

The federal civil suit claims that Phillips' family is entitlted to more than the $1 million in liability insurance that amusement-ride operators are required to carry in Texas.

Named as defendants in the lawsuit are the ride's manufacturer, Heinr. Wilhelm Huss & Co., also known as Huss Manufacturing Co., of West Germany; the ride's owner, Continental Park Attractions Inc. of New York and ride operator Rick Polkenton.

The suit alleges that Huss "failed to design, manufacture or market the Enterprise with the ordinary care that a reasonable person would have employed."

"In particular, Huss failed to adequately design the Enterprise to withstand the stresses which it could be expected to encounter and failed to adequately warn the owner and operators of the Enterprise how and when to inspect the ride for structural and functional safety," the suit said.

Riding the rails

In case you haven't heard, one of those high-speed trains made famous by the French and the Japanese is being put in place in California. It could revolutionize and revitalize rail transportation in this country.

The new "bullet train" will whisk travelers between Los Angeles and San Diego in 60 minutes or less. That's possible because the train will have a cruising speed of 160 miles per hour.

What that means is that one of the worst drawbacks encountered by rail travelers in this country in bygone days has been overcome. It also means that rail travel may rejoin air travel in importance in the United States.

The magazine Popular Mechanics says there may be more high-speed rail links in the United States in coming years including a Houston to Dallas line and one running from Miami, Fla., to Orlando, Fla.

We think this development is really great and a boon to public transportation. If it means new life for the American rail industry, few Americans probably will complain.

Here's a thought: With links between Los Angeles and San Diego, Houston and Dallas, and Miami and Orlando, Fla., in place next decade, wouldn't it be convenient to link the three areas with a coast-to-coast high-speed line? We think so. And where would the line be placed?

Right through the Midland-Odessa petroplex. Where else?

Supertitles tilt

Critics and fans alike are divided over a major operatic innovation offered this fall by both the New York and San Francisco Opera companies. Large subtitles, appropriately dubbed "supertitles,' have been projected above the stage for two selected operas traditionally not performed in English.

As might be expected, the experiment has helped some operagoers better understand the plots. But others have viewed supertitles as a distraction, awkwardly translated and a high-tech, 20th century perversion of a venerable art form.

Obviously, until more productions are attempted in this manner, the jury will be out on supertitles. For the moment, the only harm we can foresee is economical. The projected word will be preferable to the printed word of the libretto publishers.

Another View:

Budget discipline

The conventional wisdom on both sides of Capitol Hill is that Congress can't do anything about the federal deficit until several hundred billion more dollars in debt have piled up.

According to leading House members, the situation doesn't qualify as the sort of "crisis" that could shake Congress out of its pre-election lethargy. Here and there, however, there are still signs of life — and these deserve encouragement.

On the House side, freshman Democrats — who can still remember the public discontent that put them into office — have threatened to withhold support for "must" legislation unless Congress lives up to its deficit-reducing promises.

Members of the liberal Democratic Study Group have gotten the ball rolling on a series of tax-reform measures that could make a sizable dent in future-year deficits.

Acting on the sensible premise that it is fairer to raise taxes from people who are not paying their fair share than from those who are, the DSG has been working from a survey of Democratic members that showed strong support for a number of loophole-closing measures.

The group is also considering reviving the House-passed plan to put a ceiling on the value of last July's tax cut — a move that they recognize would be much fairer to the lower- and middle-bracket taxpayer than repealing the indexing provisions scheduled to start next year.

Another sensible measure would delay a bundle of tax goodies passed in 1981 that still have not gone into effect.

House leaders are too worldly to hold out much hope for their success, but they have humored the freshmen and their allies by promising votes on the reforms when other important Ways and Means Committee tax proposals come to the floor.

Meanwhile, Sens. Pete Domenici, Bob Dole and Lawton Chiles are gearing up for one last strong push for Senate action — an effort that could draw encouragement from courageous action by the House.

Those members who might support these proposals on their merits, but think it's not worth the effort or risk, might want to consider that this is Congress's last real chance to keep the economy on the right track for years to come. Getting the budget back on track must be done gradually to avoid economic disruption.

If Congress waits until 1985 to act — which means no tangible results until 1986 at the earliest — the nation will have accumulated several hundred billions more in debt. Each $200 billion added means at least $20 billion a year more in interest costs.

As long as there is no relief from enormous deficits in sight, interest rates will stay high, exports will remain depressed and, ultimately, the economy will contract again.

And then — if they are still around — members will find it even harder to enact the needed tax increases and spending cuts than they do today.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Strategy in Africa questioned

WASHINGTON — Conscientious experts on U.S. global strategy have raised a burning question in the backrooms of Washington: Is the United States getting involved in a civil war in Africa, in part to protect the Chevron Oil Co.'s interests?

Jack Anderson

Even the Pentagon is concerned. A secret Defense Department cable emphasizes precautions that must be taken by an exploratory team of counterinsurgency experts in the Sudan, Africa's largest country. The concern may have been intended to calm fears at the State Department, which received a copy of the cable.

What particularly bothers congressional sources who learned about the secret mission is the Chevron connection. The American firm is involved in a major project in the southern Sudan, where oil has been discovered. It is also building a billion-dollar pipeline to the Red Sea.

The southern Sudan is seething with discontent — its black, largely tribal-and-Christian population is resentful of domination by the Arabic Moslem north. Full-scale civil war raged for years, and the uneasy truce achieved by granting the south autonomy has ruptured.

Chevron reportedly has been plagued by terrorist incidents involving its employees and is worried about threats to the facilities it is building in the southern Sudan. The secret cable seen by my associate Lucette Lagnado, makes clear that a principal purpose of the counterinsurgency team's mission is to study ways to protect Chevron's installations.

In fact, though neither Congress nor the American public were to be told of the secret mission, Chevron has been consulted closely. The cable notes that the team's tour will be "coordinated" with Chevron and an oil company representative will accompany the counterinsurgency experts on their rounds. The team members will wear civilian clothes and "there will be no public announcement of the team's mission," the cable states.

The military at least shows a sensitivity to potential criticism that the counterinsurgency team — only four persons — could be just the modest start of a far more serious U.S. intervention in Sudan's internal troubles.

The team is forbidden to "make any commitment on behalf of the U.S. government, especially regarding availability of U.S. resources in any form," the cable says reassuringly. And the Americans must not "provide any kind of independent assessment or confirmation of the threat as perceived by Sudan."

The Sudanese government must not be given any grounds for expecting sophisticated or major military aid, or U.S. assistance "in construction of airfields, camps or other military facilities." Nor is the team to raise Khartoum's hopes of "accelerated deliveries for U.S. equipment" because of the guerrilla problem.

Although there is concern over the secrecy, the Chevron connection and the long-term implications, an even more fundamental criticism has been raised by knowledgeable insiders: The administration may be seriously misjudging the entire situation.

The proposed counterinsurgency mission is based on the assumption that the southern Sudanese rebels are being aided by external forces — Libya and Ethiopia. Administration officials argue that the United States has an obligation to protect the Sudan, which is regarded as a strong ally.

This is true enough. But some experts on the region believe it is essentially an internal conflict.

Footnote: A Chevron spokesman said the firm's installations in the Sudan had suffered only "minor incidents" of harassment in recent years.

LEBANON UPDATE: More than a year ago I reported that administration officials were "wondering whether Prime Minister Menachem Begin is planning the eventual annexation of southern Lebanon."

Quoting from secret and top-secret government reports, I noted that the same pattern of Israeli occupation that had been seen in the West Bank territories "seems to be evolving in Lebanon" as the Israelis set up a military-civilian government for the occupied territory. Two months later, a Washington Post story confirmed my report under the headline: "South Lebanon Becoming Israel's North Bank."

Two weeks ago, another Post story from Lebanon reported: "The Israeli army, adopting a controversial security technique here that it says has proven effective in the West Bank, has begun demolishing houses of the families of suspected Palestinian guerrillas as a deterrent."

That type of draconian action was the prelude to Israel's de facto annexation of the West Bank.

Jack Anderson writes for United Feature Syndicate.

INSIDE REPORT:

Glenn thrust may redefine party

WASHINGTON — Having burned his bridges with the Democratic Party establishment, Sen. John H. Glenn has no plans for repair but is moving apace to his next step: questioning the character of Walter F. Mondale in his performance as vice president.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Without waiting for another face-to-face confrontation, Glenn on the campaign trail will ask how Jimmy Carter's vice president could publicly promote policies that he says he privately opposed in White House councils. Although such tactics are viewed by the party's conventional wisdom as deepening Glenn's earlier wounds, in fact they are central to the senator's basic strategy.

The past two weeks of Mondale-vs.-Glenn sparring, vicious at long range and more gentlemanly at closer quarters, have finally defined the nature of their two-man struggle for the Democratic presidential nomination. Perhaps more than any other national contest in the party's history, that struggle involves an appeal to rank-and-file voters over the heads and against the judgment of their party leaders.

To many of those leaders, Glenn's attack on the only Democratic administration since the '60s looked suicidal. One Washington super-lobbyist with a proven track record in political forecasting called it "quite clearly a disaster" for the senator. "Appalling!" snapped a previously friendly party chairman in a key primary state. On Capitol Hill, the drift toward Mondale hastened.

Having carefully constructed their campaign on gaining the support of the party's component groups, Mondale's managers feel more than ever that the nomination is theirs. What they tell newsmen is almost certainly what they believe. "The nomination is locked up — thanks to Glenn," one Mondale adviser told us.

But there is substantial contrary opinion that the last two weeks locked nothing up but, instead, guaranteed a bitter struggle at least into the early primaries. Indeed, neutral professionals who had been criticizing Glenn for not properly framing the campaign feel he has remedied that error with precious little time to spare.

What Glenn has done to change the Democratic landscape is cut himself loose irrevocably from Democratic constituency group politics and the party's recent record in office. Although even some Glenn supporters wince at his attack on the Carter administration's "failed policies" as Reaganesque, it was not a case of candidate excess. It was planned all the way, including the label of Mondale as first mate on the Titanic.

When by the luck of the draw Glenn got to ask Mondale a question in the Oct. 13 Harvard arms control debate, the focus was on Carter administration policies, including the MX missile. Mondale's response that "my voice was heard in the private councils of the administration" opposing these policies led to plans for Glenn to compare the vice president's public declarations and his claim of differing private advice.

A deliberate assault on the sort of duplicity that is commonplace in the political world is viewed with contempt by the party's establishment. But Glenn's strategy is an appeal beyond the establishment to everyday Democrats.

Everyday voters were also the target of Glenn's closing argument at Harvard. After an hour in which the Soviet menace had been ignored, Glenn declared: "We must offer a realism that acknowledges that our adversaries do not see the world as we do, that they cannot be trusted to look out for our interests...." If the party cannot show readiness "to defend our liberty ... we Democrats will undoubtedly lose," he continued.

Suggestions of Soviet responsibility for the danger of nuclear holocaust did not play well to nuclear freezers present. Glenn was trumpeting over their heads to ordinary Democrats who turned against Carter, voted for Ronald Reagan and now are wavering about the Reagan administration.

Whether these Reaganoid Democrats actually vote in party primaries is the core of the practical debate. While Glenn's strategists believe that Mondale's attacks on President Reagan go too far, Mondale will keep painting Glenn as a Reaganite.

But it makes no difference whether Mondale keeps to that course. John Glenn is not counterpunching but attempting to portray Fritz Mondale as typical of the Democratic Party's problem. That may not win him the nomination, but it is his only chance against organized labor, the school lobby and Mondale's accumulating list of big-name supporters. The struggle may determine not only what it takes to win the Democratic nomination but what kind of party it will be.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak write for Field Newspaper Syndicate.

CHARLEY REESE

College now giving education

Those of us who are dismayed at encrusted idiocy which is sometimes known as education may take heart in the drama which has occurred at Webber College in Babson Park, Fla.

Charley Reese

Trustees of this old, privately endowed college had reached a point of near desperation four years ago. The college then had 82 students and 67 members on the faculty and staff. That may sound like a wonderful student-teacher ratio but it is, for a private college, a prescription for bankruptcy. In their desperation, they hired a rational, retired industrialist and scientist as president.

Dropping G.W. (Buck) Cleven into the midst of this particular nest of academia was the equivalent of setting off a bomb. Cleven soon fired 62 of the 67 members of the faculty and staff. Here are some examples of Clevenisms:

"If it'll make you feel any better, I'll cry with you," he told one sobbing academe, "but you are going to go and you ought to thank God somebody put up with you as long as they did."

"The Lord gives all of his attention to the one black sheep and ignores the 99 good ones. A mere mortal cannot afford his generosity so my philosophy is to shoot the black sheep and devote my attention to the rest of the flock."

"Pouring money into education without first cleaning out the deadwood only gives you idiocy cubed instead of idiocy squared."

"A college faculty should not be a rehabilitation center for social misfits."

Cleven had the audacity to demand productivity from the academes. They would, he told them, show up on time, teach 15, not 9 hours a week, make themselves available to the students, and quit wasting their time publishing nonsensical articles in obscure publications nobody in their right mind will read.

One prospective professor asked Cleven to send him the money so he (and his family) could fly to Florida for an interview.

"I don't provide romance money for prospects," Cleven told him. "And interviews are a waste of time because most people lie. I'll know after one semester if you are any good and if you aren't, I'll fire you. Take it or leave it."

In his initial jousts with the old faculty, they tried the snob routine. After all, he was an industrialist, not a professional educator. "Don't try to pull that (expletive) on me," the former steel industry executive told them. "I have higher degrees from better schools with more academic honors than you do." And he does (Ph.D.; Georgetown; M.B.A., Harvard; B.A. and M.A., University of Wyoming). He also has a Distinguished Service Cross, Distinguished Flying Cross, and red hair.

The upshot has been what any rational person would expect. In four years, Webber College has gone from 82 students to nearly 500, assets have been increased by $1 million, a top-notch faculty and staff have been assembled, a school of nursing and an M.B.A. program have been added, a nationally-ranked basketball coach has been hired, and there are more projects on the drawing boards.

Furthermore, Webber, which is a business college, has acquired a restaurant, boutique, and full-service travel agency to provide income for the college, work slots for students and real life business problems for the students to study.

Cleven has provided the answer to the question: what would happen if you ran a college like a business? It would prosper and truly educate its students.

Charley Reese writes for Sun Belt Syndicate.

Electrical transformer blacks out city

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Police worked by candlelight after an electrical transformer exploded, blacking out half the city including the police and fire stations for four hours and injuring two utility workers.

Traffic signals also were knocked out by Thursday's blast at a Southern California Edison transformer in a substation, causing numerous accidents, said police Lt. Robert Thomas.

About 8,600 customers' meters were affected, but it was impossible to estimate how many of the 88,000 residents were affected because meters often serve several customers, said utility spokesman Bob Krauch. He said the two utility workers had been testing circuits when the blast occurred.

Flight canceled to Santo Domingo

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A Caribbean charter airline left a Boeing 720 jetliner sitting at Newark International Airport since Aug. 15 because too few people signed up for a scheduled return flight to the Dominican Republic, the airline's president says.

Officials of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates the airport, had been mystified by the jet, which had been towed to a spot among maintenance trucks.

Jacques Bernateau, president of Hispaniola Airways, claimed ownership Thursday. He said the 3-year-old airline has been trying since August to arrange flights on the plane between Newark and Santo Domingo beginning Nov. 24.

Prosecutor on probation for molestation

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The parents of a 10-year-old girl molested by a former New York City prosecutor agreed to the man's plea bargain for two years' probation to spare the girl "additional trauma," Nashville District Attorney General Thomas Shriver says.

Herbert Gold, who as Brooklyn district attorney helped put "Son of Sam" killer David Berkowitz behind bars, admitted in a statement Thursday that he fondled the girl Aug. 16 while attending a national district attorneys' convention in Nashville.

The charge of aggravated rape, assigned by Tennessee law to any sexual abuse case involving children under 12, will be dropped in two years if Gold, 59, obeys the probation terms, Shriver said. Gold also agreed to long-term psychiatric counseling.

Inquiry dropped on loan to governor

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A state commission has dropped its inquiry into a $100,000 loan from an Anchorage furrier to Gov. Bill Sheffield during his campaign last year after deciding Sheffield handled the loan properly.

Sheffield repaid $112,031.64, which included 18½ percent interest, in February 1983 to long-time friend Perry Green. The governor's attorney, Patrick H. Owen, told the Public Offices Commission on Wednesday that the loan had been "perfectly innocent."

No complaint had been made about the June 1982 loan, which commission counsel Pat Kennedy said had been secured and made at market interest rates and was disclosed by Sheffield.

Former aide disappointed at ruling

NEW YORK (AP) — Alger Hiss says he was "bitterly disappointed" that the U.S. Supreme Court refused last week to hear an appeal of his 1950 perjury conviction stemming from his denial that he was a Soviet spy.

But Hiss, 78, told a news conference Thursday he will seek "broader vindication" by giving Harvard University scholars 60,000 government files. He said the files would prove he was not a spy and that he did not know Whittaker Chambers, a former communist who claimed Hiss was part of a Washington espionage ring.

Hiss, a former State Department aide who was an adviser to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, spent 44 months in prison on the perjury conviction.

Autopsy to be made on mouse in soup

WOODBRIDGE, N.J. (AP) — Local health officials plan an autopsy on a 4-inch mouse found in a bowl of bean soup that sent a restaurant customer to the hospital with acute pancreatitis.

Jeffrey Odom, 26, of Rahway Township, was in satisfactory condition at Rahway Hospital on Thursday, two days after he ate the soup at a Friendly Ice Cream Corp. restaurant here, a spokeswoman said.

Township Health Director Bennie Hunter said the autopsy will show how the mouse died and will help determine how it got into the soup.

Wilson found guilty of attempted murder

Edwin Wilson

NEW YORK (AP) — Former CIA agent Edwin Wilson, already serving a 32-year sentence for selling weapons to Libya, now faces up to 25 more years in prison for attempting to murder eight people, including prosecutors and witnesses in the earlier case.

Wilson was convicted Thursday of hiring fellow inmates to murder two federal prosecutors who investigated his international weapons dealings, five witnesses who cooperated with them and a businessman he thought owed him money.

But he was acquitted of three more serious charges of conspiracy, one involving a plot to murder two federal prosecutors in Washington, because the jury found no others were involved in the scheme.

Wilson faces up to 25 years in prison for attempted murder, the most serious charge of which he was convicted. He also was found guilty of obstructing justice, tampering with and retaliating against witnesses and criminal solicitation.

According to the government's case, Wilson hired fellow inmates in an unsuccessful attempt to arrange the murders of witnesses linking him with the sale of 20 tons of explosives to Libya.

He also was charged with trying to kill a business associate who supposedly owed him $3.5 million, hoping to have the man slain after the money was collected.

According to the charges, Wilson hired his fellow prisoners to arrange murders at $50,000 to $500,000 each. Prosecutors said no one was slain because the inmates told the FBI about the plot.

The jury at U.S. District Court in Manhattan apparently voted the acquittal on conspiracy charges because it found that Wilson's son, Erik, was not involved, leaving no cohorts for a conspiracy to exist. The panel had asked the judge for a second explanation of the law on that point.

Erik Wilson was to be tried separately, but Assistant U.S. Attorney Eugene Kaplan said after the verdict was announced that the government will "seriously rethink" the case.

Edwin Wilson had his 22-year-old son pass a $9,800 down payment on the murder contracts to a "hit man" who turned out to be an undercover FBI agent, according to the government's case. But FBI tapes and trial testimony indicated that the younger Wilson did not know what the money was for.

Murder suspect waives extradition

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — A former nursing home orderly accused in the 1979 mercy killings of three elderly people and a comatose young man has waived extradition from Nebraska, police say.

A warrant charging 33-year-old Otha Harrison Hart with four murders was issued by Eugene police Wednesday night. He waived extradition from Nebraska on Thursday and could be returned to Oregon on Friday or Saturday, said a spokesman in the Lancaster County, Neb., district's attorney's office.

Hart, who worked for the past month at a nursing home in Lincoln, Neb., went to police there Tuesday and said he killed four patients in Eugene with massive injections of insulin to end their misery. He said he confessed "so it wouldn't happen again."

Three of the victims died in the Eugene Care Center, where Hart worked for about four weeks. The fourth died at his home, where Hart worked as a nurse's aide.

Ken Champion, an investigator in the Oregon medical examiner's office, said he doubted autopsies would show traces of insulin because the victims' bodies were probably embalmed.

Another march staged in Manila

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — About 2,000 students, workers, priests and nuns marched through the streets of a Manila tourist area today in another protest of President Ferdinand E. Marcos' government.

In the suburban financial district of Makati, about 1,000 office workers crowded busy streets while hundreds of others threw computer printouts, tickertape and typewriter ribbons from office buildings.

In nearby Bataan province, about 6,000 workers went on strike today to protest purported police brutality against other striking employees, and teachers in dozens of public schools here stayed away from the classes for a second day to protest salary deductions.

The march in the Ermita tourist quarter orginally was billed as an "anti-imperialism" demonstration but police refused to grant a permit for a rally on a downtown Manila square to protest U.S. military bases.

Americans top Everest from Tibet

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Three Americans have conquered Mount Everest from the Tibetan side, the first non-Chinese to do so, a Japanese mountaineer reported today.

Almost all Everest climbers approach the 29,028-foot peak, the world's highest, from the Nepalese side.Until now, Chinese climbers have been the only ones to have scaled Everest from the Tibetan side, in 1960 and in 1975.

The names of the Americans were not immediately known.

Protests continued in Bonn area

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Riot police today dragged about 2,000 anti-nuclear protesters away from the gates of the Defense Ministry and pushed back 750 demonstrators trying to block another government complex a few miles away.

At both sites, police appeared to outnumber protesters. No arrests were reported, and police and protesters said the attempted blockades were peaceful.

Demonstrators said they wanted to block entrances to the ministries to protest NATO plans to deploy new U.S.-built nuclear missiles in Western Europe. It was the ninth day in a 10-day series of demonstrations in West Germany against the missiles.

Mideast talks planned in Geneva

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The once-postponed peace talks among Lebanon's warring leaders will be held in Geneva, probably next week, if the Swiss government agrees to serve as host, Lebanese officials said today.

Peasants killed in Guatemala

From Wire Reports

A Roman Catholic church source says Guatemalan civil patrolmen killed 28 peasants, including an 8-year-old girl, who apparently were suspected of being leftist guerrillas when they could not produce identity cards.

The source, who asked not to be identified for fear of reprisal, said Thursday the victims were killed at a roadblock outside the village of Sacpulup, where they were going to buy food.

In another Central American development, leftist rebels in El Salvador ended a three-day blockade of the town of Suchitoto, located near two hydroelectric dams supplying most of the nation's electricity.

In Panama City, the foreign ministers of Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama planned to open their eighth meeting tonight to press their Contadora group peace initiative for Central America. A key section of the group's 21-point plan calls for demilitarization of Central America to avert war between Nicaragua and its neighbors.

The Guatemalan church source said victims of the mass killing included four women and an 8-year-old girl. The source they were killed Wednesday evening and buried Thursday in Sacpulup, 52 miles northwest of Guatemala City.

"They must have thought that since they came from villages close by, they wouldn't have problems," the church official said. "They must have lost their identification or just forgotten them."

The Guatamalan government had no immediate comment on the report.

Church officials and local residents have reported increasing abuses by civil patrolmen, organized by the army and given old rifles and machetes to help military patrols in their fight against leftist guerrillas.

Peasants in guerrilla-infested areas are instructed by the army to produce identity documents in order to reduce rebel infiltration. They also are told to turn over "suspicious" strangers to the local patrol corps.

Peace plan presented

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaragua's foreign minister has presented the United States with a formal set of proposals for Central American peace while denouncing President Reagan for saying the United States has a right to engage in covert activities in his country.

The House, meanwhile, voted Thursday to cut off support for CIA activity in Nicaragua against the Sandinista government.

The proposals, presented by Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto to the State Department on Thursday, caught U.S. officials by surprise since they said such documents usually emerge only after complicated negotiations.

The proposals include three draft treaties involving the United States, Nicaragua and other Central American countries that would ban support by one nation for guerrilla movements in another.

Lee's title parade starts against Steers

Rebs must come back to earth first

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

With the castle in Odessa torn to shreads, it is wondered if Midland Lee's football Rebels will return to earth before today's 8 p.m. District 4-5A Homecoming meeting with the Big Spring Steers at Memorial Stadium.

Following Lee's 20-7 upset over highly ranked Odessa Permian last weekend, the Russian Cosmonauts were shocked to see a kid with wide shoulders and spikes growing from the feet floating outside the window with a Dixie flag in hand.

ACTUALLY, the Lee players didn't get that "high", but there is a feeling that a return to earth is needed. No one knows that better than Lee coach Spike Dykes.

"Beating Permian was a big, big victory for us. There is no doubt about that, but now we have to take care of business at hand or that game won't mean a thing," Dykes said. "You just have 10 games a year and you better be ready to play all of them.

"We've got to teach our kids to be frontrunners. We've always been in the position of looking up at someone, but we have the chance now to take care of our own business. I really think our kids understand that things are not going to come easy from here on out. This is such a balanced district and you will get beat if you're not ready to play."

Coach Quinn Eudy's Steers are 1-3 in 4-5A play this year. It would appear to be a rest stop on Lee's possible playoff march. But the fact is that Big Spring could just as easily be 3-1, the same as the Rebels. The Steers dropped a fourth quarter loss to Abilene High and was seven points from victory against Midland High in a game that saw the Bulldogs rally in the second half.

It could be a rest stop where the car picks up a flat tire, and Lee needs no flats now where three more victories would vault the Rebels into their first playoff slot since 1976.

AT LEAST Eudy doesn't think this will be an easy assingment for his Steers. "Knowing Coach Dykes so well, I know that the Rebels will be ready to play hard. I hope this is a good week to catch them, but you can't expect that.

"Outside the fact that Lee is big, strong, fast and talented, the Rebels present no problems for us. They are really awesome, but our kids have played hard all year. That's not to say we haven't made mistakes, but we have played hard. A lack of depth has really hurt us. We've just got too many people going both ways."

This is also a Holy War of sorts for the Steers. They still feel like they were robbed of a victory against Lee last year. Lee won the game last year on a late fourth quarter touchdown by Walter Jones and a controversial two-point conversion.

"They will be ready for us because they still are talking about that game last year," said Lee assistant Jack Tayrien.

Even taking the Permian "high" into consideration, Lee's main problem may come from injuries. Lee paid the price for last week's win. Linebacker Michael Johnson, the team leader in tackles, is lost to a knee injury for at least two weeks. The Lee secondary is also battered and bruised, although intact, and halfback Billy Gibbs is out this week after sustaining a neck injury in a car wreck Saturday morning.

HOWEVER, Lee linebacker Reggie Ellis returns after missing three games with a knee injury. Reggie's playing time may be limited, however. Expect to see David Jackson and Scott Hicks in linebacking roles. Linebacker Thomas Manley is also a bruised player. Lee's phenominal depth has paid big dividends this year.

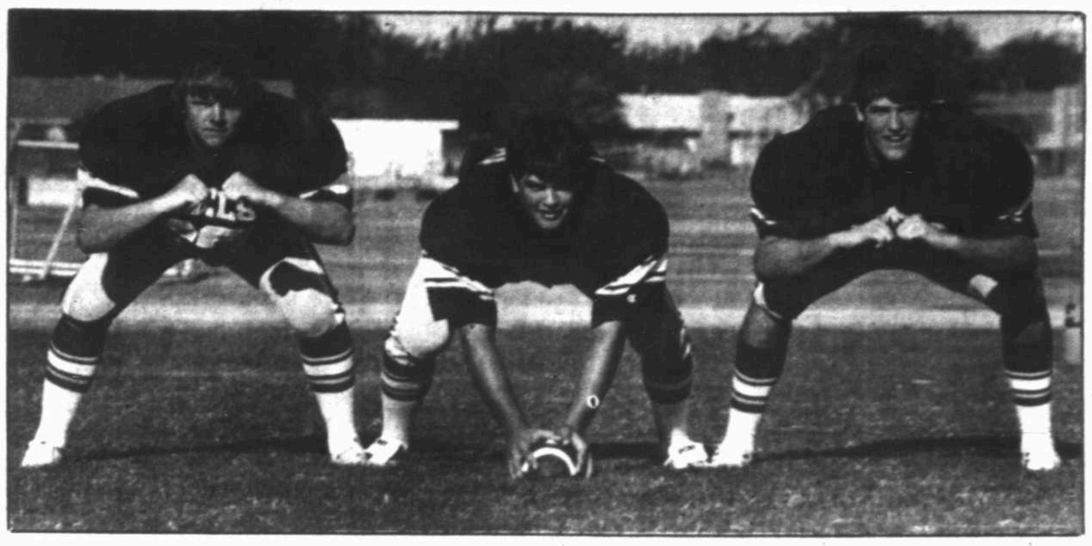

"So many of our kids have contributed this year. We've had our injuries, but someone always seems to step in and do the job. Hicks and Manley are good examples the way they stepped in against Permian last week," said Dykes.

The Rebels must stop the passing attack of Steer quarterback Mark Johnson and the running of fullback Jay Pirkle.

"Pirkle was our first back to go over 100 yards in a game this year last week against Cooper and he is getting better all the time," said Eudy. "We were able to throw and run against Cooper and that allowed us to stay with the game plan. We feel our program is on the up-swing and headed in the right direction."

The Steers got their first district win last week with a 14-11 win over Cooper in a Homecoming game for Big Spring. Now the Steers have to be the Homecoming opponent.

Lee fullback Isaac Garnett, who has scored 13 touchdowns in seven games, needs 157 yards tonight to become a 1,000 yard rusher. Garnett is averaging 120.4 yards per outing this season.

Lee fullback Isaac Garnett needs 157 yards tonight to become the first Midlander to rush for 1,000 yards in a season since MHS' Wesley Williams turned the trick in 1981. If Garnett does it, he will have these three to thank, Devoe McMillen, left, Allen Bell, center, and Coy Stewart, the middle of the Lee offensive line.

Phillies resign 'Pope' Owens

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "I did a good job, I like the job, and my people wanted me back," said Paul "Pope" Owens after signing for one more year as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies.

He will be managing the National League champions, though, with his successor beside him in the dugout.

Bill Giles, club president, in announcing Owens' re-signing Thursday, said that John Felske, manager of the Portland farm team in the Pacific Coast League, would be brought in as a coach and groomed to take over as field boss in 1985.

OWENS, AT 59 the league's oldest manager, led the Phillies to the pennant after replacing Pat Corrales on July 18 while retaining his job as general manager.

"Over the last eight years we've won more games than any other club and we've been in the World Series two of the last four year. I think the man mainly responsible for that is Paul. He told me he wants to manage again, so he's got the job," said Giles.

Owens is relinquishing his general manager's role and Tony Siegle takes over with the title, vice president baseball administration. Siegle, executive assistant to Giles, will sign players.

"I've been a little disillusioned over the general manager's job over the last six or seven years," Owens said. "The game has changed. I'm tired of the haggling with agents. You can't make deals because of complex player contracts. I'm glad to get away from all that."

Giles, however, said Owens and chief scout Hugh Alexander still would make the trades.

A NUMBER of other moves were announced by the Phillies less than one week after losing the World Series to the Baltimore Orioles.

Jim Baumer, head of the farm system, was promoted to vice president, director of player development and scouting.

Bobby Wine was dropped as a coach and coaches Claude Osteen, Dave Bristol, Deron Johnson and Mike Ryan retained. Lee Elia, fired last season as manager of the Chicago Cubs, was named successor to Felske at Portland.

Giles said Felske would have the title, dugout assistant. He said it was felt that the Portland skipper needed some experience in the National League, especially operating without the designated hitter.

When Owens steps down he will become a player talent advisor to Giles under a five year contract.

Owens said he decided he wanted to come back because, "we have a chance to repeat what we did this year. I'm confident we will put on as good a show as we did in 1983."

Owens noted, "I am real pleased that they want me to come back, and after a little bit of consideration I decided that I would like to come back.

WHEN OWENS came down from the front office to replace the fired Corrales, the Phillies were tied for first place, one game over .500.

Still, Giles and Owens were unhappy with the team's performance and fired Corrales.

"There is something wrong with this club," Giles said at the time. "Paul and I have kicked around the idea of making a change. We both felt he'd be the best person to run the club for the rest of the season. Next year he'll return to his role in the front office."

Owens instituted a platoon system unpopular with many veteran players on the club. Despite their complaints he persevered and the club caught fire in September when it won 22 games in the stretch drive, including 11 straight.

Under Owens, they were 47-30, a .610 clip, and won the NL East. They defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers in the NL championship playoff.

Owens said his biggest disappointment was the loss in the Series, and the opportunity to go all the way in 1984 was another reason for his decision to return as manager.

Owens has been in the Phillies' organization 27 years as a minor league manager, scout, farm director, general manager and now as manager.

A well placed drop kick in District 4-5A

Cold weather plagues USTA play

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Mother nature continued her noncoperation policy for the USTA Texas American Bank Masters Classic Thursday. She kept the skies cloudy and the weather dry, but cold. Not ideal for tennis.

"No one ever gets used to cold weather," said Randy Nixon, a 6-3, 4-6, 6-1 winner over Andis Luters Thursday. "Everyone wears sweaters and vests. We didn't take any breaks on change overs because it was too cold to sit down. You make the best of it. If you start worrying about the weather, you never have a chance. It's the same for both sides I guess."

Nixon is a recent graduate of the University of California-Berkley with a political science degree and has been on the satellite tour for three months. He came into the Midland stop of the circuit seeded eighth.

"I just graduated in June so It's only been about three months or so," said Nixon. "I decided to turn pro once I finished school. I wanted my degree. In tennis, you get to meet a lot of people, and if you have a degree, then doors will open up for you more than if you can only hit a tennis ball. Businesses will talk to you more.

At 22, Nixon is getting a rather late start in a sport that seems to be getting younger every year. More players are going into tournament like the U.S. Open and Wimbledon in their mid to upper teens and finding a degree of success.

"I feel pretty old to be starting out at 22," said Nixon. "We haven't seen if these guys (young players) will suffer tennis burnout like swimmers (another sport with youthful competitors). You can't compare. There are so many players coming out of junior tennis, getting them going. Borg, Lendl and others are getting players interested in Eurpoe. There are more players coming out every year."

Nixon has competed in 12 tournaments since turning pro, finishing third in the Canadian circuit where he lost in the finals in two matches. He competed in the U.S. Open qualifying this year and was eliminated in the second round.

TODAY, NIXON plays the tournament's No. 3 seed, Leif Shiras in the quarterfinals at 11 a.m. and was also in doubles quarterfinals with partner Walter Redondo against Gary Donnelly and Derek Tarr.

"I've never played him (Shiras) before but he's been playing really well," said Nixon. "He won the tournament last week and he's going to be a tough one to beat.

Other matches Friday are: Alvaro Fillol vs. Ben Testerman; Phil Lehnhoff vs. John Sevely; and Bruce Foxworth vs. John Sadri. In doubles: Jai DiLouie-Rocky Vazquez vs. Leif Shiras-David Schneider; Paul Kronk-Howard Sands vs. John Benson-Mark Pinchoff; and Gary Stansbury-Jeff Etterbeek vs. Tom Csipkay-Bud Cox.

Injured Clippers still want to play

CLAYTON, N.J. (AP) — Opponents have clobbered the Clayton Clippers high school football team pretty much at will for 23 years, rolling up a 174-33 record and this year inflicting injuries on the hapless squad that have left it with just 14 able-bodied players.

School officials now want to end the massacre by canceling tonight's game, but the teen-age Clippers — beaten but unbowed — are begging to go on.

"WINNING ISN'T the thing anymore, playing is," said John Battee, a senior offensive tackle and linebacker who, like all his teammates, plays both offense and defense.

"At least let us go out and try," said Bob Gonzales, a 5-foot-7, 180-pound junior center and nose guard. "If they beat us, they beat us. At least we can say we gave it our best shot."

But Joe Mucci, athletic director at Clayton High School, says he'd be "an idiot" to allow it. The four punishing losses this season have been "like a nightmare," he said.

Since they opened the season last month with 32 players, the Clippers have lost all of their games, scoring only eight points to their opponents' 143. They have also lost more than half their squad; several players quit the team, but most have suffered injuries ranging from bruises to broken bones.

"These kids want to play. They say, 'Tape me up. Tape me up.' We can't do that," Mucci said Wednesday. "These kids are gutsy. I respect these kids."

THERE ARE only 14 players, five with any varsity experience, who would have been healthy enough to play if Friday night's Tri-County Conference game against Woodstown had not been called off.

"I'd be an idiot to say, 'Go out there and play your hearts out.' So we canceled the game," Mucci said.

A decision on the Clippers' four remaining games may be made Monday night at a special board of education meeting.

There were only about 90 boys in grades 9 through 12 this year and 38 tried out for the team — "more kids than we've ever had out before," Mucci said.

Only those who quit or get hurt don't make the team in this southern New Jersey community. The school is classified as Group I, the smallest of four athletic classes in New Jersey.

"Most of the people out there are capable of playing," Battee said. "I'm upset, aggravated. I want to play."

Battee is 6-foot-2, 205 pounds, the biggest player on a squad that has a 5-foot-3 sophomore as its starting tailback. The offensive line averages 160 pounds.

Gonzales has missed three of the Clippers' four games with torn ligaments in his right knee. He said he will have an operation to correct the damage once the season ends.

"The doctor said it's taking a chance, but he'll let me play," Gonzales said. "I just want to play."

Mucci said he would like to see the season continue, but head coach Nick Russo said he believes it would be best to cancel the remainder of the varsity season and play only junior varsity games.

THIS SEASON began with considerably more promise than it now holds. Ten seniors returned from last year's 2-7 squad — one of the school's best seasons in years.

But this year the team lost its first four games: 28-0, 42-8, 35-0 and 38-0.

In 1959, the year before Clayton lost students when Delsea Regional opened its doors, the Clippers fielded a team that finished 6-2-1. Their best record since then was 4-4-1 in 1977.

"I really think they should have testing three times during the year — once every three or four months. I would like nothing better than to see the drug-induced athlete get weeded out. Athletes should be there (at international meets) on their own merit and not artificially," said Steve Scott, America's premier miler. For the past six years, Scott has been the nation's top miler and holds the world's second-and fourth-fastest times in the mile. His U.S. mark of 3:47.69 in the mile is second only to the 3:47.33 world record held by Britain's Sebastian Coe.

Gabriel Rivera has brush with death

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gabriel Rivera, the highly regarded Pittsburgh Steelers' rookie defensive lineman known as "Senor Sack," escaped a brush with death in an auto accident but remained in critical condition today with severe spinal cord and internal injuries.

Steelers' publicity director Joe Gordon said he didn't know when the extent of the injuries suffered by the 22-year-old former Texas Tech star would be known. But he admitted "the possibility exists" that Rivera may suffer some paralysis.

Rivera was in surgery at Allegheny General Hospital for over three hours, beginning at 11 p.m. Thursday, as doctors tried to determine how badly injured he is, Gordon said.

The accident, which doctors said for a time threatened Rivera's life, casts a shadow of doubt over the career of one of the Steelers' most promising young defensive players in years.

"This came as a great shock to us," Gordon said. "It's hard to believe. Dan (Rooney, the Steelers' president), Franco (Harris) and Mel (Blount) came to the hospital as soon as they heard, and many other players called."

Rivera also suffered various cuts, bruises and abrasions to the head and body in the accident, which occurred on a rain-slick Ross Township road at about 9 p.m. as he was driving to his suburban North Hills home from Julian's, a restaurant-bar on the city's north side.

Rivera's car collided with a car driven by Allen Wates, 48, of Ross Township, authorities said.

Wates was treated and released from North Hills Passavant Hospital, but Rivera had to be airlifted from Passavant to Allegheny General via Lifeflight helicopter when his blood pressure dropped dramatically.

The 6-foot-3, 295-pound Rivera then was taken to surgery by a team of doctors headed by Dr. Daniel Diamond, the chief of Allegheny's trauma unit, said Fred Peterson, the head of Lifeflight.

The Steelers, 5-2 and the winners of three games in a row, will be in the Seattle Kingdome Sunday against the Seahawks. The Steelers are to leave Pittsburgh on Saturday.

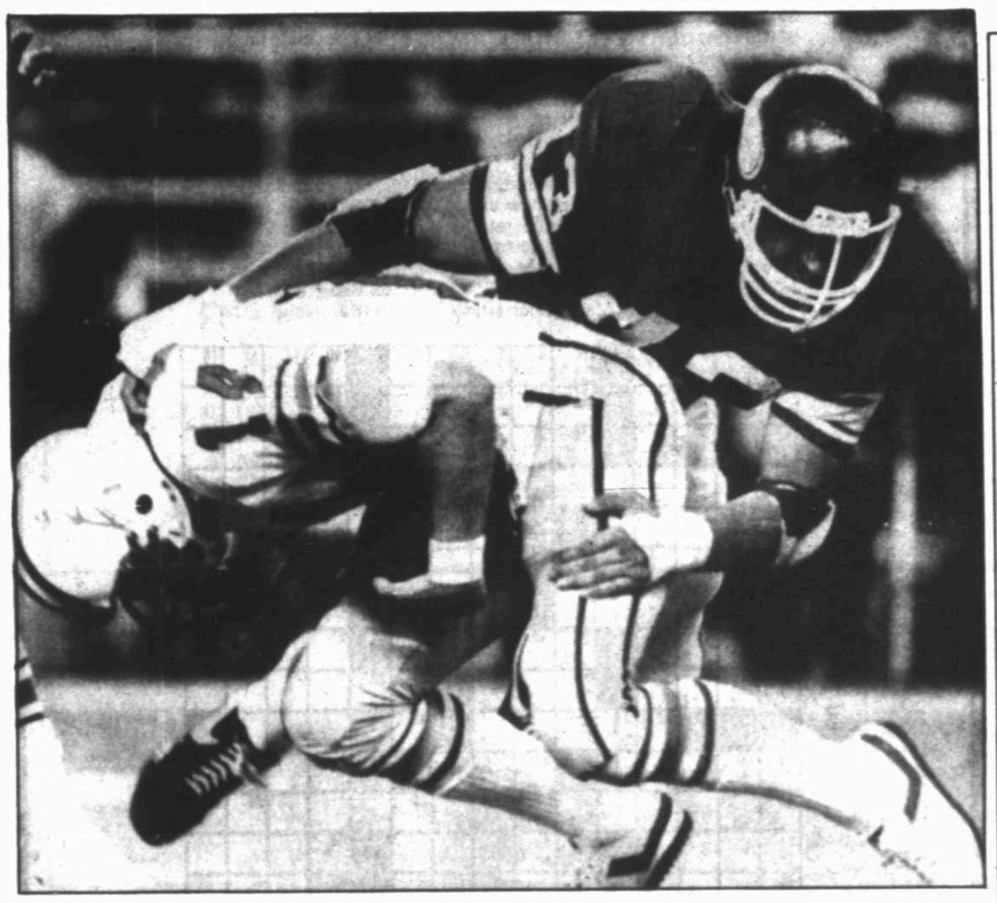

Rivera was only the third defensive lineman to be drafted by the Steelers in the first round since 1969, the others being Joe Greene (1969) and Keith Gary (1981). He was sidelined for much of the Steelers' training camp with a pulled chest muscle, but had more playing time in recent weeks.

Rivera was credited with three sacks and Steelers' coaches said he began playing better after his weight dropped from an earlier high of 305 pounds. His weight has fluctuated between 285 and 305 pounds.

The Southwest Conference defensive player of the year last season when he led Texas Tech with 105 tackles, Rivera lives in the off-season in El Paso, Texas. His father, Juan Rivera Jr., is a high school coach in San Antonio, Texas.

Rivera played at San Antonio Jefferson High School, where he was both a tight end and tackle as a 265-pound senior.

Rivera was married to the former Kim Covington last May.

Houston Oiler quarterback Gifford Nielsen is sacked for the third time by Minnesota's Neil Elshire in 34-14 loss last Sunday. Nielsen was also intercepted twice.

Studley seeks one hat

HOUSTON (AP) — Interim Houston Oilers Coach Chuck Studley hopes he can remember who he is Sunday when the Oilers host the Kansas City Chiefs in the Astrodome.

Studley was named head coach Oct. 11 replacing Ed Biles and directed the Oilers in his first game as head coach Sunday with the same results, a 34-14 loss to the Minnesota Vikings.

"There were times in the game when I completely forgot my responsibilities to the team," Studley said. "I got so wrapped up in the defense that I forgot my responsibilities to the team."

Studley is wearing two hats with the Oilers, retaining his old job as defensive coordinator and also assuming the head coaching duties. But he's not complaining.

"I must confess that I enjoyed it," Studley said. "I enjoyed being the head football coach. I did not enjoy the results but I didn't let that detract from the fact that I had reached the pinnacle of my profession."

The Oilers are far from their pinnacle. They enter Sunday's game with an 0-7 record that includes a 14-game losing string and a growing list of turnovers.

The Oilers lost five fumbles, two interceptions, had a punt blocked and their quarterback sacked six times in Studley's head coaching debut last week.

"I'm trying to capture all these moments as head coach," Studley said. "As you get older you tend to get nostalgic so I tried to remember all I could about the first game."

But it was a forgetable performance for the Oilers.

"You can't have that many turnovers and even think about having a chance to win," Studley said.

The Oilers will face the American Football Conference's top-ranked pass defense and free safety Deron Cherry, who is tied with three others for the National Football League lead with five intereptions.

Oiler quarterback Gifford Nielsen was intercepted twice by the Vikings.

Kansas City will take a 3-4 record into the game. The Chiefs are trying to find offense punch where they rank 23rd in the league in total offense and 27th in rushing.

Billy Jackson a third year runner from Rutgers, is the team's rushing leader with 241 yards on 78 carries. Quarterback Bill Kenney has hit 139 of 243 passes for 1,657 yards, eight touchdowns and nine interceptions.

Earl Campbell, who has regained his status as the Oilers' primary offensive weapon, is second in the AFC in rushing with 605 yards and is tied for the AFC lead with eight touchdowns. Campbell has surpassed 100 yards rushing in four of the six games he's played this season.

Oiler wide receiver Tim Smith ranks third in receiving with 36 catches and second in yards gained at 594.

Rebs are still alive; Bulldogs eliminated

Midland Lee's volleyball team kept its slim playoff hopes alive Thursday night with a District 4-5A victory over the Big Spring Steers, but Midland High was eliminated from the race in a loss to 4-5A leader San Angelo.

Lee defeated the Steers by a 15-4, 10-15, 15-7 margin to climb to 8-4 in district play with only two games left in the season.

Abilene Cooper, who owns the district's No. 2 playoff position right now, raised its record to 10-2 and would have to lose both of its remaining games while Lee wins its final two to force a tie for second.

San Angelo defeated Midland High by a 15-6, 15-8 margin Thursday to run its league leading record to 11-1 and ensuring a playoff berth for the Bobcats. The loss and Cooper's victory eliminated the Bulldogs from playoff hopes with a 6-6 district mark.

Lee will travel to Abilene Cooper in a key battle Tuesday, an effort the Rebels hope will keep playoff hopes burning. However, Cooper's final game will be against Abilene High, a team that has had trouble winning this year.

Midland High will host Abilene High Tuesday and will meet Lee Thursday at the Lee gym in hopes of avenging an earlier district loss to the Rebels.

In junior varsity action, the local schools came away with splits Thursday. The MHS JV won a 15-6, 15-12 victory over San Angelo to go 9-3 in conference play. The Lee JV absorbed a narrow 15-11, 10-15, 15-4 loss to Big Spring.

In 18. Lee sweeps

Midland Lee's junior varsity and sophomore teams got back on the winning track Thursday with a pair of road victories.

The Lee JV took a 20-0 decision over Big Spring while the sophomores pounded Odessa High by a 21-6 margin.

The Lee JV scored all 20 points in the first half to take its win over Big Spring.

An 11-yard run by Lawrence Medlock and a 60-yard gallop by Dirk Bergoon gave the Lee JV a 12-0 first quarter lead. The final margin came in the second period when J.B. Brown scooted 45 yards for a touchdown and quarterback Tuey Rankin ran for a two-point conversion.

Lee's junior varsity is now 5-3 on the season and will host Abilene Cooper Thursday in a 7 p.m. game at Memorial Stadium.

Lee's 7-1 sophomores, whose only loss this year was last week to Odessa Permian's junior varsity, got off to a good start against Odessa High Thursday when Rodney Sims broke off runs of 50 and 40 yards for a 14-0 first half lead.

Lee increased the margin to 21-0 in the third period when Chris Alexander scored from one-yard out and Brian Wurster added his third point after kick.

The Lee sophomores end their season next Thursday with a 5 p.m. contest against the Lamesa junior varsity at the Lee Field.

The Midland High junior varsity did not play Thursday night against San Angelo as scheduled, but will face the Bobcats Saturday at 1 p.m. at Memorial Stadium. Heavy rain forced the new date.

Sutton gains the most

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Mark McCumber had the lead and Hal Sutton may have had something more important after the first round of the $400,000 Walt Disney World Golf Classic.

"I'm playing as well as I have all year," Sutton said Thursday after he'd fired a 5-under-par 67 for a position three shots off McCumber's leading pace. "And I'm hitting my irons as well as I have at any time in my life.

"I'm thinking it's about time I had a good week. It's very important to me this week to have a good tournament, be the leading money-winner and put a lock on Player of the Year."

And he virtually clinched Player of the Year a few moments later — even though he wasn't aware of it. That occurred when Calvin Peete withdrew after shooting a 73.

A PGA spokesman in Palm Beach Gardens said that Peete was the only man with any possibility of overtaking Sutton in the complicated point standings that determine the Player of the Year and that he would have to win the final two events on the schedule — including this tournament — to do it.

With Peete's withdrawal, that possibility no longer existed. An announcement of Sutton's selection as Player of the Year was being prepared for release early next week.

"We've been trying to reach Hal to tell him, but we haven't been able to find him," the spokesman said.

Lasorda given 3-year pact

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tommy Lasorda says "1983 was a rewarding year for all of us" in the Los Angeles Dodgers' organization.

He got an unprecedented reward Thursday for his performance this season — a three-year contract with the club. It was the first multiyear contract ever given a manager by the O'Malley family, first the late Walter O'Malley and now his son, Peter.

Even Walter Alston worked his 23 managerial seasons with the Dodgers under a string of one-year agreements.

Although the financial terms of Lasorda's new contract were not announced, it is believed to include a substantial raise over the $250,000 he made this past season.

"Our policy was not set in cement," said O'Malley of the switch to a multiyear contract for the manager. "Tommy's a special, very talented man.

"He gets along well with the players, the fans, the media ... He's a gifted individual."

Lasorda guided the young and frequently troubled 1983 club to the National League West title, the fourth divisional crown in his seven years at the helm.

Lasorda said the three-year contract wasn't exactly the result of hard bargaining on his part.

He related: "I walked into Peter's office, he said, 'You did a great job and this is what we want to give you.' I said, 'Thank you.'

"He made a tremendous offer, gave me a tremendous contract."

"I'm the happiest guy in the world just to be coming back to the Dodgers," added Lasorda. "I was happy with one-year contracts. If it was good enough for Walter Alston, I figured it was good enough for me."

Almost every October in recent years, rumors have surfaced that Lasorda was considering leaving the Dodgers to take another job. This year was no different, and he made his annual denial that he had been considering other offers.

"Not true," he said. "I'm staying with the Dodgers. This is my home."

Lasorda, 56, has spent 34 years in the Dodger organization, getting the Los Angeles managing job when Alston announced his retirement in 1976.

Although the Dodgers lost to Philadelphia in the NL Championship Series this year, the job done by Lasorda may have been his best.

Despite the departure of Steve Garvey and Ron Cey, the slumps and defensive problems of the younger players, and the continuing woes of top reliever Steve Howe, Lasorda piloted the Dodgers to a 91-71 record, best in the league.

"I think 1983 was the biggest trial for Tommy," said Al Campanis, the Dodgers' executive vice-president. "He had a very young club."

"It was a year where we had some tough, tough times," said Lasorda. "We had to overcome a lot of obstacles. You look at the youngsters and it was a tremendous thing they did..."

Marcus Dupree begins new MSU era

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Marcus Dupree, attending his first day of classes at the University of Southern Mississippi Thursday, said he wanted to forget about the troubles he had as a star running back at the University of Oklahoma.

"I'm tired of talking about the past," said Dupree, who left Oklahoma last week. "You can't live in the past. I'm looking to go forward."

Earlier this week, Dupree said he was not happy playing for Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer, and said he could not take the criticism from him. Dupree also has said he wanted to play closer to his home in Philadelphia, Miss.

Dupree is taking 13 academic hours of accelerated, or "quickie," courses at Southern Mississippi. Gene Wiggins of the USM communications department said that the half-semester courses are just as tough as full-semester courses.

"He will meet the same requirements as the students in full-semester courses," Wiggins said. "He will simply go twice as many hours in a day.

"From all indications, he is a very bright young man and should do well in any program," Wiggins said.

Dupree, majoring in communications, has one communications course and four electives in the second half of this semester. Wiggins said if he passes the 13 hours he should be on pace academically with other sophomores.

The 19-year-old was followed all day by an entourage of reporters, photographers and TV cameramen.

Asked how he felt on his first day as a USM student, Dupree said "I felt fine till I got here and saw all of this" motioning to the media gathering.

Reggie Collier, former star Southern Miss quarterback now with the Birmingham Stallions of the United States Football League, had been the most-famous athlete at the school before the arrival of Dupree.

"His days as a normal college student are over, if he ever was one, because of who he is and what he has done," Collier said Thursday. "A lot of people will be bothering him, asking football questions. Ten people will ask the same question and you'll give them the same answer. It can get on your nerves."

Although Dupree was concentrating on academics Thursday, he's hoping he will be able to play football sooner than 1985, which the NCAA rules prescribe.

Ghost persues Seymour

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gerald McRaney has a rival for Jane Seymour's affections in the NBC movie, "The Haunting Passion," but his competition is not of this world.

McRaney plays an ex-football player who moves with his wife into a seaside home and soon finds it already has another occupant. It's a spirit desperate to be reunited with his love and he mistakenly focuses his attention on Miss Seymour.

"It's a ghost story without the usual Gothic haunted house," said McRaney. "We filmed it in Vancouver, Canada, in one of the most beautiful locations I've ever seen. It's actually a very modern house built on granite overlooking the water."

"The Haunting Passion," which NBC will telecast on Monday, also stars Millie Perkins as Miss Seymour's best friend and Paul Rossilli as the spirit.

McRaney, who stars as flamboyant private eye Rick Simon in the hit CBS series, "Simon & Simon," admits that it's a different kind of role.

"I like to do different parts," he said. "Rick's a role I could easily get typecast in. (He's) kind of an outlaw. It's a good character and one of the most interesting on television."

McRaney, whose hairline has started to recede, radiates on screen a charm and sexuality that is made more interesting by an undercurrent of menace.

"The guy's an ex-football player," he said, speaking of his role in "The Haunting Passion." "He's just been cut from his position as wide receiver and gotten a job as a sportscaster in his hometown. He's impotent. I called Jameson and told him, 'I play a husband who's married to Jane Seymour and he keeps rejecting her advances.' He said, 'Mac, if you pull this one off there's an Emmy in it for you.'

"He's impotent because the guy totally identifies with his job and it's suddenly taken away from him. He's like many men whose masculinity is totally identified with their work."

The story, he said, is about the husband's impotence, the wife's desire and how they deal with it.

"When the ghost appears, you don't know whether her need for an outlet came first or whether the ghost initiated it," McRaney said. "In the beginning, it's just Jane having strange fantasies. The spirit confuses her with his lost love of 40 years ago and he wants to finish up the suicide pact so they can be together again."

McRaney and his "Simon & Simon" buddies have their own theatrical film on the backburner. He will star with Parker and Jeannie Wilson. Miss Wilson's husband, Jack Lucarelli, will produce.

To take a finesse because it's there is bad. To take it when you have been informed that it must fail is silly.

The auction was routine. North bid two spades over West's two hearts to show a minimum redouble based on spade support. South had just enough to go on to game.

West led two rounds of hearts, then shifted to a trump. Declarer drew a second round of trumps ending in dummy, then tried a club finesse. That failed, and West returned a heart. Declarer ruffed and tried the diamond finesse. Had that succeeded, declarer would have been able to get rid of one of dummy's clubs on the king of diamonds. But that also failed for down one.

Certainly, declarer was a little unlucky. However, to rely on the club finesse was naive, since it was almost bound to fail because of West's takeout double. Even without the double it was faulty technique. There was a far better line available.

Declarer should draw two rounds of trumps, ending on the table, then ruff a heart. Next, declarer cashes the ace-king of diamonds and ruffs a diamond to eliminate that suit from his hand and dummy. With the groundwork laid, declarer leads dummy's last heart and sluffs his eight of clubs.

Had there been no opposing bidding and East produces the fourth heart, declarer will have to fall back on the club finesse for his contract. But in this case, where West has bid hearts, he is known to have the long heart. He wins the trick, but he is end played. He must either yield a ruff-sluff by playing a diamond, or lead a club into declarer's tenace. In either case, ten tricks come home.

Senate backs off from permanent California drilling ban

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Senate took the unusual 11th-hour step Thursday of backing off from its own conference committee's agreement with House members to place a permanent moratorium on drilling off much of the Southern California coast.

Proponents asked for the reversal to correct what they said had been a misunderstanding in the original agreement. But critics said the move was a classic demonstration of how industry efforts can shape the legislative process.

"Once the energy industry smelled what we had gotten through (the conference committee), they went after us with a vengeance," said Otto Bos, an aide to Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif.

"It wasn't routinely handled," an industry source said in describing the oil lobby's successful campaign to get rid of the permanent ban.

On a voice vote, the Senate agreed to accept language in the original House version of this year's Interior Department appropriations bill that would place a one-year ban on drilling within 20 miles of most of the Southern California coastline. While this is stricter than the Senate's original measure, which had included no limitations on drilling, it did not go as far as House and Senate negotiators had agreed to in a conference committee last month.

At that session, the conferees had agreed to place a permanent ban on federal leasing within six miles of the coast, and a 15-month moratorium on leasing within 12 miles.

Acreage within three miles of the coast has been protected from drilling by California law. The controversy has centered on federal acreage outside the state's jurisdiction.

The oil industry, which has insisted that any moratorium on leasing will leave the nation more vulnerable to the type of oil shocks it experienced during the last decade, had found the precedent of a permanent ban particularly chilling.

Although the area covered by the legislation would have been small, "the feeling is that permanent bans may be applied elsewhere (on federal acreage) on the outer continental shelf," said Patricia Roberts, who is in Phillips Petroleum Co.'s Washington office.

Safer regulations over drilling have made the possibility of oil spills more remote, said Phil Cavanaugh, a spokesman for Chevron USA. Thus, he said, "we don't think (moratoriums) are necessary or in the best interests of the nation."

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 248 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 increased $145.1 million to $162.0 billion for the week ended October 19, 1983. The taxable funds' 7-day yield remained at 8.66% for the second week. The funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 8.71% from 8.74%. The taxable funds' average maturity increased one day to 37 days.

Money fund asset inflows may be attributed to sharp fluctuations in the stock market, causing many small investors to flee to the money market until the stock market stabilizes."

Ultra-light pilot's widow files suit for damages

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The widow of an ultra-light aircraft pilot who was killed when the "powered hang-glider" he was flying crashed on a ranch west of Midland on Nov. 17, 1981, has filed a suit for damages in federal court in Midland.

The widow, Cathy Wilkerson, is suing the aircraft's manufacturer, Weedhopper of Utah in Ogden, Utah.

She alleges that a wing tang — a bracket on the strut which gives support to the wing — "apparently broke" and allowed the wing to fail. The aircraft crashed about 5:15 p.m.

Mrs. Wilkerson is alleging that design defects in the aircraft made the craft "unreasonably dangerous for use by such persons as Mr. Wilkerson...who could reasonably expect to use and rely upon the aircraft."

Wilkerson, a 32-year-old automotive mechanic, was self-employed as a Weedhopper distributor.

The widow did not specify the amount of damages she is seeking.

The Weedhopper, which cruises at 40 mph, in 1981 cost about $3,795.

The day before Wilkerson's ultra-light aicraft plummeted from 250 feet to the ground, a similar craft flown by a 30-year-old truck driver, Tim J. Robinson, stalled and went into a power dive at Midland Air Park. He reportedly was doing low-level aerobatics when the aircraft, manufactured by Eipper-Formance of San Marcos, Calif., stalled and fell to the earth.

"We view it (an ultra-light aircraft) as a sporting vehicle, and in any sporting activity, there is a certain risk and that is the operator's choice."

— FAA spokesman, commenting in November 1981

Neither Wilkerson nor Robinson was a licensed pilot. Ultra-light aircraft, viewed as sporting vehicles by the Federal Aviation Administration, are not certified for airworthiness by the FAA. And pilots of those craft are not required to be licensed pilots. However, ultra-light pilots are to observe air-space safety rules and regulations.

"We view it as a sporting vehicle," a spokesman for the FAA's general aviation section said of the ultra-light aircraft in November 1981, "and in any sporting activity, there is a certain risk and that is the operator's choice."

"Aviation Consumer" magazine said then the ultra-light craft is "really an airplane, it really flies, and you can really die in it."

Experience with spina bifida spurs woman to organize local chapter

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

When Paula Howbert was told her newborn had spina bifida, she asked if it was a fatal or a minor condition.

When he was only 12 hours old, Chas Howbert underwent lifesaving surgery to close the gap that formed where his spine didn't develop properly.

"That's what really bothered me," Paula said, "was to hear it's the number one crippler of children and the number two birth defect — and I'd never even heard of it."

Spina bifida affects one of every 1,000 births. It occurs more frequently than muscular dystrophy, multiple sclerosis, polio and cystic fibrosis combined, according to the Spina Bifida Association of America.

The reason Paula had never heard of it was because there was no local chapter, she said. That has changed.

Chas was born last November. It took about four months to receive enough information from the national organization to start the local effort. In April, the Permian Basin Chapter of Spina Bifida Association of Texas, Inc., was formed.

"One of our projects in this organization is to get information on spina bifida into a packet so when someone has a child with it, we can take the information to them immediately," Paula said.

WHILE LARGER cities which have local groups are more familiar with the condition, little information was available anywhere before the early 1980's.

"In 1963, the death rate of kids with spina bifida was 85 percent. Today, it's only 5 percent. There's been a lot of improvement in treatment in the last 20 years."

Chas Howbert's spina bifida opened his mother Paula's eyes to one of the most common cripplers and birth defects.

Paula said no one really knew how to treat it before. "They'd mainly just send the baby home where he would die. That was like going home and having your brain open — open to infection."

When Chas was born with myelomenigocele, the most severe form of spina bifida, he had what looked like a blood blister the size of a fist on his lower back, Paula said. Surgery to cover the hole in the spine was needed immediately.

Five days after he was born, he needed another operation.

After a child's spine is surgically covered, the spinal fluid which was leaking out accumulates in the brain in 75 percent of the cases. But some children can absorb the excess fluid, Paula said.

The size of the head is monitored closely for any signs of swelling. Chas' head swelled only half a centimeter before surgery was required.

SHUNTING, IN which a shunt, or tube, is put in the child's head, diverts the excess fluid. The tube runs through Chas' head down to his abdomen.

The shunts do not eliminate all problems, Paula said. During the first three months, a child could have so much fluid that it would clog the shunt.

"That was really scary," she said. "Everytime Chas would start acting up or crying, we'd look at each other and say, 'Do you think this could be it?' "

Paula and her husband Chuck were advised the symptoms were much worse than the normal carrying on of a child.

"They said we'd know," she said, but the couple continued to check the soft spot on Chas' head for swelling.

After three months, the danger of a clogged shunt was pretty much over.

"They still have to go in every once in awhile to extend the shunt," she said, adding even when the shunt is no longer necessary, it often is left in because surgery to remove it could be dangerous.

Although Chas doesn't have any feeling in his left leg, doctors told his parents he would not be confined to a wheelchair. With the help of braces, he will be able to walk.

Kicking up their heels at the United Way Victory Dinner Thursday night were, from left, Suzanne Voltz, Belle Harris and Chris Washburn. Dan Mendell, United Way campaign chairman, announced 94.3 percent of the goal was met. As of Thursday, some $1,613,579 was raised with more money expected next week.

United Way fundraising campaign reaches 94.3 percent of 1984 goal

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

The goal wasn't quite met, but they're in the home stretch with a 94.3 percent return and more dollars promised.

In the five-week fundraising campaign United Way of Midland reached more than the $1.6 million mark. Although the agency's goal was $1,712,000, United Way volunteers raised $1,613,579.

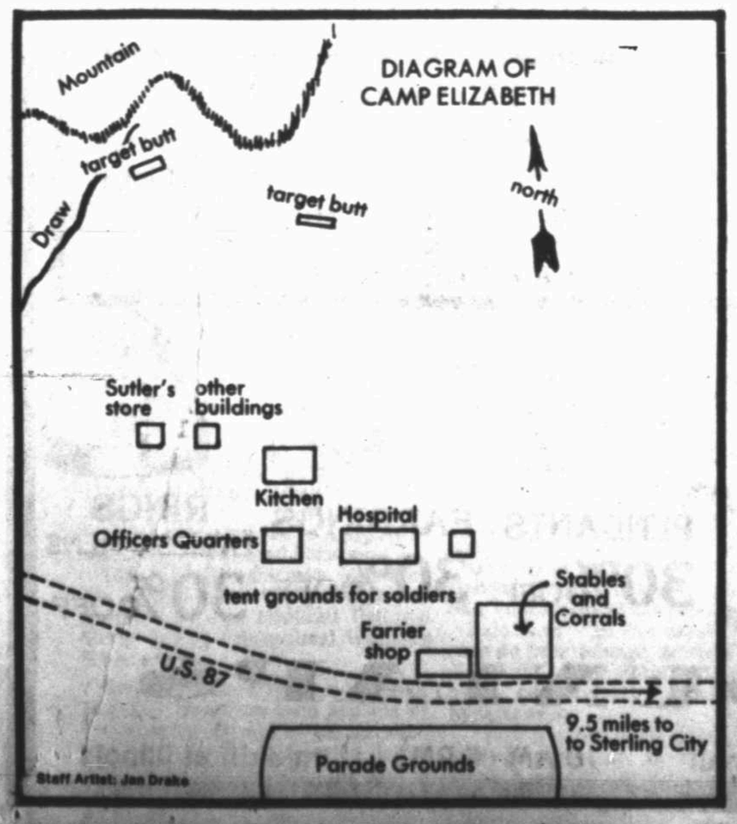

And the new Midland bank — RepublicBank First National Midland — helped the surge to the total. Although RepublicBank First's President Thomas Wageman did not announce the amount the bank contributed, United Way Executive Director Bob Cornelius said the bank gave $45,000 in corporate and employee donations.

"I'm going to give you an Oklahoman guarantee that by next Friday, we will surpass our goal," said Dan Mendell III, chairman of the United Way campaign.

"There's a few big pieces not in this (total)," he added. "Southwestern Bell, Drilco, the federal employees and some 200 businesses and oil companies have not finished their employee campaigns yet. We expect to receive their pledges next week."

Frontier outpost holds echoes of Rangers' bugles

STERLING COUNTY — Foot-sore and beleaguered, the two buffalo hunters were nearing Camp Elizabeth when they heard the first war whoop of Comanches.

Already the hunters had walked more than 30 miles, and for two days prior to the start of their desperate journey they had been besieged by Comanches at the "Big Spring" in modern-day Howard County. Even now, several other members of a buffalo hunting company were trapped at the oasis, and their only hope lay in the two men and the Camp Elizabeth soldiers whom they hoped to summon.

The two men ran, stopping only to whirl and fire at the marauders with their powerful rifles, shooting their horses out from under them. When set afoot, they knew, the Comanches were a slim threat.

At the top of a rocky hill, the two hunters decided to make their stand.

One man piled rocks as a line of defense; the other fired, and fired again. An Indian pony fell, and then another. But still they came.

One mile away at Camp Elizabeth, the sound of gunshots galvanized troops into action. Bugles blared; shod horses thundered; cavalrymen charged. And the Comanches fled before the onslaught.

BATTERED and exhausted, the two men were carried to the camp while a regiment of soldiers galloped to the "Big Spring" to rescue their comrades.

More than a century has passed since that Indian fight in the 1870s, and the names of the hunters and soldiers long since have faded into oblivion. The same fate almost has befallen Camp Elizabeth, the foundation stones of which lie piled and scattered midway between the North Concho River and a line of cedar-studded hills just off U.S. 87 9.5 miles northwest of Sterling City. Only a historical marker erected in Texas' centennial year of 1936 marks the site.

Maintained as an outpost defense by Fort Concho — situated 55 miles downstream in present-day San Angelo — Camp Elizabeth is believed by historians to pre-date its parent military post. Here, they believe, Texas Rangers came in 1853, building structures of mud mortar and native stone from the nearby bluffs as a frontier defense against Indians.

Details of most skirmishes between Rangers and Indians have been lost in time, but one account which has been preserved involved the Ranger company of Buck Berry.

WHILE THE main body of the company bivouacked at a spring near Camp Elizabeth, Ranger M.A. Harrison strayed away to hunt. A buffalo dropped to the smoking barrel of his rifle, and as he knelt to skin the animal gunshots suddenly peppered the ground at his side. He whirled about; a Comanche war party was upon him. Mounting his horse, Harrison fled across the plain, up a rocky hill, down the far slope. But his horse lost its footing and fell, throwing its rider. His leg shattered, Harrison was rescued by Rangers as they responded to the gunfire.

The crash of two pickup trucks resulted in critical injuries to 26-year-old Michael D. Godfrey, driver of one of the wrecked trucks. The mishap occurred about 7:40 p.m. Thursday on Loop 250 north of the Andrews Highway.

Separate traffic mishaps injure three in Midland

A 26-year-old Midland man was critically injured and two others were seriously hurt in three traffic mishaps reported to Midland police and to the Texas Department of Public Safety Thursday night.

Michael D. Godfrey, 26, of 4906 San Antonio Drive, was critically injured when the pickup truck he was driving collided with another pickup driven by Richard A. Blenkner, 26, of 1601 Idlewilde Drive. The mishap was reported about 7:40 p.m. on Loop 250 about one-half mile north of the Andrews Highway, Midland police said. The Blenkner pickup, which had its hazard lights flashing, was following another vehicle in the inside lane when the crash occurred, police said.

Godfrey was hospitalized in Midland Memorial Hospital.

In another early-evening mishap, Scott Wayne Bryant, 20, of 3603 Imperial Ave. suffered injuries which led to his admission to the hospital. He was listed in serious condition. Bryant was injured when the car he was driving was in collision with a car driven by George B. Lara, 17, of 209 E. Dormand Ave. at Godfrey Street and Shanon Avenue about 7:20 p.m.

In a third mishap, Barbara Werner, 20, of Route 6 and her two children, Rita, 2, and Regina, 4, were injured when the compact car she was driving went out of control and rolled over 3½ times about 7:10 p.m. on County Road 1270 South of Interstate 20 in west Midland County, officers said.

Ms. Werner was listed in serious condition in the hospital. Her two daughters were treated and released.

United Way close to goal

Mendell, the last speaker at the three-hour victory dinner at the Paragon Atrium Thursday night, said he had one regret.

"I wish there was a representative from the Wall Street Journal here tonight," Mendell said. "The Journal termed one of Midland's organization as 'strong as garlic.' I found three more organizations which are strong as garlic — the contributors to the United Way, the United Way staff and this group which has been working in the campaign."

Cornelius, a newcomer to Midland, said he "never spent a more innovative, rewarding six months." He thanked everyone from "bank presidents to floor sweepers. You're all wonderful people. Thank you."

Entertainment for the night, included an impersonation of Dorothy Michaels from the movie "Tootsie."

Nicknamed Tootsie, Dorothy Michaels, who was crowned Miss United Way at the onset of the campaign, revealed her/his real identity.

Independent oilman Jack Swallow has been in drag during three of the five weeks of the campaign. Swallow, or Tootsie, and her/his "buddy," Snideley Cheapskate (Daryl Ward) entertained the crowd, as did Midland magician "Great Scott," the Roadrunner band, and the Summer Mummers Olio Dancers.

Rival campaigners — Jane Wolf, chairman of the public/professional unit, and Larry Bell, chairman of the special support unit — came in the stretch neck and neck and ended in a tie. Both collected 106 percent of their goals. But Bell said he wasn't finished yet.

"I have to tell you, these past few weeks Jane and I have been working tooth and toe nail, but you ain't seen nothing yet," Bell said.

Ms. Wolf attributed the success of the campaign to the people of Midland.

"The greatest resource in Midland isn't oil, it's people like you who have made this possible," she said.

The division contributions that made the United Way successful are: special support, $481,907, or 106 percent of its $454,629 goal; industry/commerce, $371,542, or 70 percent of its $521,226 goal; oil, $549,156, or 102 percent of its $536,205 goal; and public/professional, $210,974, or 106 percent of its $199,956 goal.

To date the following division chairmen raised:

— special gifts, $397,299, Jack Steele, chairman.
— independent oil, $69,325, Byne O'Neill, chairman.
— residential, $15,283, Bill Collyns, chairman.
— major firms, $394,174, Bob Elliott, chairman.
— pacesetters, $567,264, Richard McAlpin, chairman.
— major oil, $349,308, Bob Scott, chairman.
— intermediate oil, $128,074, Jeff Noble, chairman.
— service companies, $61,179, Clarence Cardwell, chairman.
— drilling companies, $10,595, Charles Coffman, chairman.
— education, $69,104, Joe Baressi, chairman.
— government/services, $46,627, Wally Craig, chairman.
— professional, $95,243, Tom Madonna, chairman.

Camp Elizabeth holds echoes of the past

Upon the reoccupation of Texas by the U.S. Army following the Civil War, federal troops assumed many of the frontier duties of the Rangers. Fort Concho was established in 1867 at present-day San Angelo, and Camp Elizabeth became its outpost hospital seven years later.

There, on a grassy plain sentineled by a fortification of grayish hills, the "buffalo soldiers" were to tent and survey the rugged frontier they were charged with guarding. They were Negroes, so-named "buffalo soldiers" by Indians because their curly hair resembled the tufts of the buffalo. Their white officers quartered in a structure 20 by 30 feet in size, while the central building — the hospital — measured 20 by 50 feet.

ADDITIONAL structures included a farrier shop, stable, rock corrals, and sutler's store. Two target butts lay near the base of the bluffs north of the camp, one for close-range shooting and the other for long-distance weaponry. Riding techniques were fostered in a parade ground between the camp and the river.

Potable water, always a vital concern in West Texas, lay only a few hundred yards distant in a North Concho spring, while a sutler provided troops with necessary supplies.

By the 1870s, cattle kings began taking advantage of the stirrup-high grasses in the region, with the U Ranch being established near Camp Elizabeth by D.A. Earnest and W.H. Holland in 1876. Despite the presence of nearby troops, Indians were still a menace, and in that very year a skirmish occurred between Comanches and a contingent of Texas Rangers and cowboys only two miles upstream of the camp. Several Indians were felled, while the white men escaped casualty until they overtook the marauders two days' ride westward. There, near the present site of Midland, a cowhand was fatally shot when he dismounted to pick up a beaded moccasin.

UNTIL 1886, the camp continued safeguarding buffalo hunters, Southern Pacific Railroad Company surveyors and the area's first permanent settlers. But with the threat of Indian depredations finally ending, the rock edifices of the post were abandoned.

Absorbed into the rangeland of the U Ranch, the buildings became a hangout for drifters and a hideout for desperados — a development which led ranch owners to destroy the roofs and allow pioneer settler J.N. Kellis use of the rocks. Kellis hauled the stones to a site on the North Concho River eight miles northwest of Sterling City and constructed a dam, evidence of which still remains.

Meanwhile, the wind and its dust-laden currents slowly are burying the original foundations and artifacts of the historic outpost. No longer do bugles blare and cavalry troops thunder here; the only sounds to be heard are the bleating of sheep and the roaring of passing traffic. Like the buffalo soldiers and the Indian war parties with whom they tangled, Camp Elizabeth has been swallowed by the ages.

Reye's group to sponsor booth

The Midland Chapter of the National Reye's Syndrome Foundation is sponsoring its first annual Halloween booth at Midland Park Mall.

Midlanders may get their photographs taken with E.T. and Darth Vadar from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, the last day for the booth.

Adults are welcome and all proceeds are used for research into the cause and cure for Reye's Syndrome and for public awareness.

Spina bifida chapter formed in Midland

"HE'LL PROBABLY be a little slower in sitting up because his muscles are weak," Paula said. "They are usually three to six months later in developing than normal children."

However, with the help of older sister Heather, 2½, he may be even slower, Paula admitted with a laugh. "He's a little less motivated because if he drops a toy or something, she's right there to pick it up."

Because it is necessary for a spina bifida victim to have X-rays periodically to detect any malfunctions of the kidney or bladder, Paula said information on the condition is important to all people.

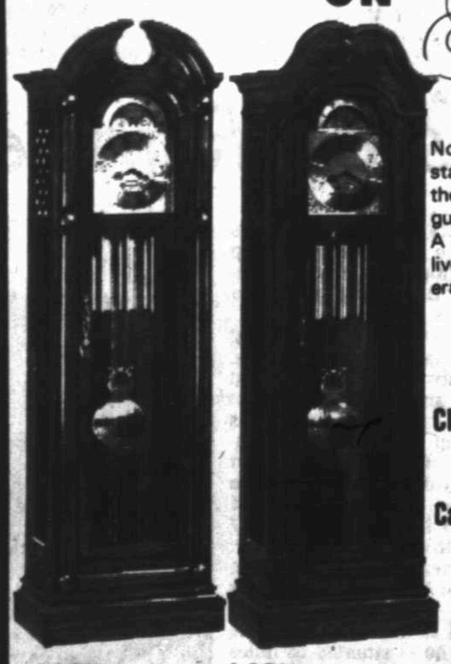

There is no known cause for spina bifida although it has been linked to genetic and environmental factors. Once a woman has a child with spina bifida, the risks of her next child having it increase slightly.

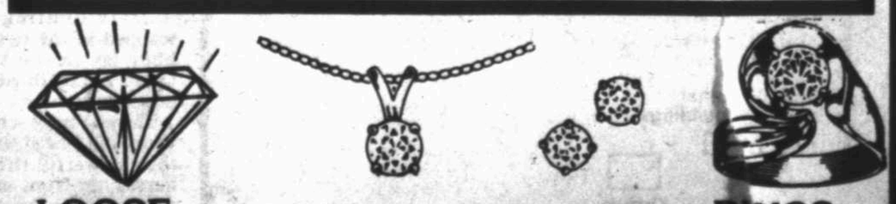

Chas has therapy at the Cerebral Palsy Center three times a week and daily movement exercises are conducted at home. His parents also have planned a second visit to a spina bifida clinic in Houston.

"But some can't afford going to clinics," Paula said, "so one of our major projects is to bring the education to them."

Lou Duarte, who holds the title of Senior Mr. California, admits he has used drugs to enhance his physique.

Chemicals muscle way into sports

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Was he just flexing his imagination? Or were Lou Duarte's muscles really swelling like Popeye's forearms after a spinach fix? And why was that smug grin on his lips, that chortle in his throat?

Duarte looked at the disclaimer on the bottle of steroids from which he had just taken a hit — the line that says, "Anabolic steroids do not enhance athletic performance" — and laughed.

Sure, he said to himself, and you can walk on hot coals without burning your feet. Or inhale 10 chocolate sundaes without gaining an ounce. Or grow into an Arnold Schwarzenegger overnight by overdosing on spinach. Ha!

Steroids? They make you bigger, they make you stronger, right? So why not?

Duarte, a professional bodybuilder who holds the title of Senior Mr. California for competitors 40 and older, began taking performance-enhancing prescription drugs five years ago, he says, to take up where Mother Nature left off.

"The first time I took one, a tablet of Dianabol, I could have sworn I gained 10 pounds in an hour.

"I'm not saying they make monsters out of you, but they do help you reach your own optimum level."

Duarte's opinion apparently is shared by an untold number of athletes, professional and amateur, in the United States and abroad seeking that extra edge through steroids despite a litany of negative side effects. And despite the fact the drugs have been banned in most international and some national athletic competitions.

It has been estimated that 70 percent of world-class track and field athletes take some form of steroids during their training, most of them in the strength and weight events. Weight lifters and bodybuilders, it is said, are even more heavily into them.

And few are the football teams — both college and pro — that are unfamiliar with the drugs.

Only recently, when sophisticated new detection methods surfaced at the Pan-American Games in Caracas, Venezuela, did drugs taken to enhance muscle mass and strength make national headlines.

Eleven weight lifters were disqualified for using steroids or testosterone (a male hormone said to increase strength). And eight U.S. male track-and-field athletes — mindful, perhaps, of detection capabilities that could uncover drug usage as much as a year before — elected not to compete rather than face a one-year suspension from international competition.

The upshot: a growing curiosity about such drugs, their dangers and availability and their use — if at all — on levels lower than world class.

Although tests have not been conducted for the megadoses many athletes are said to take, and the long-range damages have yet to be determined, medical science has documented the following possible side effects of anabolic steroids:

— Liver damage.
— Prostate cancer.
— Shrinking testicles and sterility.
— Premature heart disease.

Because the drugs are various synthetic derivatives of the male hormone testosterone — developed through the years by the pharmaceutical industry for the treatment of debilitating illnesses which involve the breakdown of body protein — they can have a masculinizing effect on women. Some manifestations: deepened voice, facial hair, aggressiveness, body fat reduction and menstrual problems that can jeopardize the capacity to bear children.

Yet there are several physicians in the Los Angeles area — and reportedly at least one in San Diego — who dispense such drugs to athletes and monitor the body chemistry of the users.

One is Dr. Robert Kerr of San Gabriel, Calif., who numbers his athletic clients among the thousands.

Said Kerr: "In my cases, I have seen no liver damage, no sterility, no shrinking of the testes. I have seen acne, swollen nipples and mild hypertension.

"You'll find most athletes in power sports feel they (steroids) serve a useful purpose regarding strength, size, power and speed.

Women may use steroids

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Her progress was by leaps and pounds — more repetitions, heavier weights, and a more muscular, sculptured body.

But how could this woman in her mid-30s, who pumped iron at the local fitness center, accomplish so much so quickly, wondered her male counterparts.

Was she on anabolic steroids?

Linda Howard, who has attained the title of Ms. Physique USA in bodybuilding circles, listened and laughed.

"That's where I draw the line," said Howard. "Once I saw a list of warnings about steroids for men and women. The list of side effects for women was two times longer.

"After reading that, I don't know how anybody in their right mind would want to mess with 'em — male or female."

DEAR ABBY

Star needs light in her life

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I've read your column for years, but never thought I would write a "Dear Abby" letter.

I have had more than my share of fame and fortune over the years, having enjoyed a very successful career on the stage and in films. I'm not young, but I'm still considered a very attractive woman. I've been married and divorced. I was a singer and dancer in my teens, worked hard, made a fortune and lived well. I still live reasonably well, but like everyone else who writes to you, I have a problem.

I'm lonely. I have a few good friends, but I would like to get around more. Men are afraid to call me because they assume I am too busy, too popular or I must be going with someone. I'm not. I sit home alone night after night, watching TV or reading. I would love to have a nice gentleman to spend time with.

Abby, please print this for lonely gentlemen, 50 and older: Do not assume that all women who were once rich and famous are too busy or too important to approach. They're not. I'm sure there are other women who were also big stars in the '50s who are as lonely as I am. Abby, if you printed my name, nobody would believe it, so sign me ... DON'T GET AROUND MUCH ANYMORE

DEAR DON'T: Ask a few of your "friends" to get the word out that you are (a) lonely and (b) available, and when the word gets out, you'll need police protection. Trust me.

DEAR ABBY: My son is 6, and ever since he was in day-care at the age of 3 he has been stealing.

He hasn't stolen from a store yet, only from children at school, but I'm worried. I have tried to explain that it's wrong to take things that belong to other people, but I don't seem to be getting through to him. I have punished him in different ways and even made him return the stolen articles to their owners. So far, he's taken little things like dice, plastic toy soldiers, cheap key chains, etc. Abby, he has plenty of toys and doesn't want for anything.

What should I do? — CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED: Punishment won't help, but learning why he steals will. Ask your pediatrician or family physician to recommend a therapist who can find out why your child steals. Children usually take things because they feel deprived of something they lack — attention, love, friends, etc.

Toxic shock research continues

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers have isolated the bacterial gene that produces a toxin widely believed to cause toxic shock syndrome, and say the discovery could speed the search for a toxic shock vaccine or a test to determine who is susceptible.

The researchers also said they have been unable to confirm a report earlier this year that toxic shock might be caused by bacteria that have themselves been infected by viruses.

The isolation of the gene for toxic shock syndrome exotoxin, or TSSE, will let researchers prepare large amounts of purified toxin for research, said Dr. Richard Novick, director of the Public Health Research Institute in New York, the leader of the research team.

"One purpose was to enable other people to verify or confirm that this protein is implicated in toxic shock syndrome," Novick said in a telephone interview.

In addition, he said, "we will be able to use the cloned (isolated) gene to make large quantities of the material (the toxin) for two purposes, one of which is to be used in a susceptibility test and the other is to produce a vaccine."

The findings will be published in Nature magazine.

As of June 15, toxic shock syndrome had struck 2,204 people, according to the Centers for Disease Control. Of the 2,107 of those cases in which the outcome was reported to the CDC, 103 resulted in death.

The syndrome is associated with a common bacterium called Staphylococcus aureus, which normally does not cause disease. But some strains of the bacteria apparently produce toxins that result in a rapidly progressing illness characterized by fever, rash and a collapse of blood pressure.

Novick and two collaborators, Patrick Schlievert of the University of Wisconsin and Merlin Bergdoll of the University of Minnesota, believe that the toxin they call TSSE is the one responsible for the disease.

The toxin has been isolated in strains of Staphylococcus aureus taken from toxic shock patients.

But Novick acknowledges that "the role of the toxin in toxic shock is not absolutely clear."

Book for would-be farmers

Hand-painted signs by the roadside produce stand beckon on an early fall Sunday. The city folk park by the pickup where the family of farmers display their bounty.

"Wouldn't it be nice," the city folks often say, "just to own some land in the country and have a little farm."

By Monday, most of the city dwellers are back at work and for most the farm in the country is a forgotten fantasy. But a few keep on dreaming.

For those few, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has a basic booklet for the would-be farmer, "Getting Started in Farming on a Small Scale," which is available by sending $3.25 to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 237L, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Painting gets mixed reviews at U.N.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The latest addition to the United Nations' hodgepodge of art is a huge painting depicting, among other things, two lurking condors, a scorpion and a pussycat. It has turned delegates and U.N. staffers into instant art critics and has some of them looking for hidden political meaning.

The U.N. declared a moratorium on art gifts in recent years for fear the headquarters might end up looking like an "Old Curiosity Shop." But now that some expansion is completed, the lid is off and new gifts have begun to come in.

The latest — donated by Colombia — has had mixed reviews.

"I like the colors, but not the subject," remarked a top Asian diplomat. "I don't like the condors because they are birds of prey."

Like some other viewers he saw the two condors confronting each other across the peaks of the Andes as representing the United States and the Soviet Union.

The painting by Alejandro Obregon, entitled "Sunrise in the Andes," was presented by Colombian President Belisario Betancur. He then went before the General Assembly to complain of foreign intervention in Latin America and other regions of the world, criticizing the two superpowers of pursuing their "own, sometimes warped interests" and confronting the world with the specter of nuclear destruction.

The 14-by-18-foot painting — in brilliant oranges, yellows, greens and blues — hits delegates directly in the eye as they enter their main lounge and bar.

The cat in the painting huddles amid rain forest greenery while a scorpion crawls along a leaf.

"Thought-provoking," "disturbing," and "visually jarring" were among the comments after the unveiling.

A U.N. staffer who works within sight of the painting said it was the talk of the lounge. Asked what the trend of the comments was, she replied with a grimace, "I think you can guess. I'm glad it wasn't given by my country."

Thouvenel String Quartet, Romania orchestra open season brilliantly

Classical music lovers were doubly blessed this week. Midland's Thouvenel String Quartet opened its 1983-84 season last Saturday and on Monday Midland Community Concerts presented the Constanza Orchestra of Romania during its debut tour of the United States.

Both were excellent.

However, the feeling of anticipation so evident at last year's Thouvenel opening performance was not there Saturday night. This audience knew what to expect from Eugene Purdue, violin; Jeffrey Levenson, cello; Sally Chisholm, viola; and Edmund Stein, violin.

A year ago that was not true.

The Thouvenel had lost Teresa Fream the spring before, and Stein was taking her place. Although Stein had performed locally with the Thouvenel when the group was being filmed for the Houston-based "Eyes of Texas" television program, the opening performance marked his Midland debut with the quartet.

No one knew how the evening would go, not even the players. And they played brilliantly.

This year the feeling of opening night was one of old friends getting together again. For those who return each season, the Thouvenel opening concert is one of the cultural events in town which marks the end of the summer season and the beginning of fall-winter. Thouvenel fans have come to expect what they receive, an outstanding evening.

The Constanza Orchestra of Romania, directed by Paul Staicu, plays Mozart's Divertimento in D major, K. 136, during this week's Midland Community Concert performance.

Sometimes during the season, however, the programming may leave audience members with mixed feelings. Such was the case Saturday.

Included on the program, tucked between Haydn's Quartet in D minor, Opus 42, and Beethoven's Quartet in F Major, Opus 59 No. 1, was a 12-tone selection — Lyric Suite for String Quartet by Austrian composer Alban Berg (1885-1935).

Berg, a student of one of the most revolutionary composers of the 1900s — Arnold Schonberg (1874-1951), adopted his teacher's 12-tone scale. All Berg's music after 1925 made use of the 12-tone rows, usually in a free, individual style. It's hard to discern much on the first hearing but dissonant sounds.

Levenson introduced the work, beginning his comments on a humorous note, "We hope you enjoyed the beautiful Haydn quartet we just played. If not, you can catch the high wire act next door (the Shrine Circus was at Chaparral Center)."

Then he explained that Berg had a 10-year love affair (both were married to someone else) and the woman provided the inspiration for this work.

A Review

It was then possible to feel in the movements the emotions Levenson spoke of, especially the first movement which expresses, he said, "The electricity they feel between each other. I'm sure most of you know that feeling."

The last movement moves from bursts of energy to a much slower pace before building to a frenzied close. It gave the Thouvenel a workout; one the players handled well.

The piece was the topic of conversation for many during intermission. But it was the Beethoven selection, which begins with a brief cello solo, that really spoke to the heart.

When Beethoven (1770-1827) first visited Vienna in 1778, Wolfgang Mozart, after hearing him play, said, "He will give the world something worth listening to." It would be hard to find anyone today who disagreed.

Beethoven was a master of classical forms, but he departed from them whenever he felt it necessary to achieve the romantic spirit, thereby greatly expanding and changing the traditional music forms of his day. (He belongs to both the classical, late 1700s, and romantic, early 1800s, eras of music history.)

The force and strength of many of his works confused some critics, who found those compositions impossible to understand. For example, his third symphony the "Erotica," was not at first understood by his audiences.

Many of the works of his third period demanded new qualities of sound from the string quartet and piano. These works had a vital influence on composers of the 1900s, notably Schonberg (just as Haydn had an influence on Beethoven's early work).

When viewed in this historical perspective, future generations may be able to easily hear such composers as Berg and Krenek (whose works the Thouvenel have played often). Then again, they may not.

However, one thing is certain. We are, as Jerry Fullinwider, chairman of the Midland Symphony-Quartet Committee, said, "fortunate to have these young people residing in Midland. It's almost a miracle to have them here."

Equally as well executed was the Constanza Orchestra of Romania's presentation of a program which contained selections from four centuries of music. (Twenty-three players from the 70-member orchestra are on a three-month tour of the United States.)

The performance began with "Sarabande, Gigue and Badinerie" by one of the first great players of the violin, Italian composer Arcangelo Corelli, 1653-1713, and closed with Simple Symphony for String Orchestra by British composer Benjamin Britten, 1913-1976.

Included in it were works by Romanian composers Constantinescu, 1909-1963; Alfred Alessandrescu, 1893-1959; and Castaldi, 1874-1942, an Italian who moved to Romania when he was 18 and eventually became a Romanian citizen.

THOUVENEL String Quartet
1982 - 1983 SEASON

Balancing out the programming was Mozart's Divertimento in D Major, K. 136 and Bach's "B-minor Suite." (A master of baroque music, Bach's compositions were nonetheless regarded by the people of his time as too elaborate. It was not until almost 80 years after his death, when the German composer Felix Mendelssohn revived his "Passion According to St. Matthew," that Bach's reputation as a composer was firmly established.)

Directed by Paul Staicu, the orchestra played a seemingly flawless performance. Guest artistry by flautist Liviu Christian in the Bach piece was particularly inspiring.

When viewed from the balcony, the orchestra and conductor presented all of a piece, with the entire ensemble moving as one. Staicu conducts without a musical score, and his style was a delight to watch.

After two encores, the Constanza Orchestra of Romania was gone, but certainly not forgotton by those who were there.

Under supervision, narcotic addiction small

Neil Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you tell me what the chances are of a person becoming addicted to narcotics if he is given them to relieve pain? — Edith, Detroit

Dear Edith: When narcotis are used under proper medical supervision for the relief of pain, the possibility of addiction is small. Most patients can stop taking the narcotic once their pain is no longer a problem

Patients for whom narcotics are prescribed for pain relief should not be concerned about the possibility of addiction.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was surprised to hear on a radio program that older people may do better in fighting some forms of cancer than younger people. I had always thought that younger people were stronger and therefore had more resistance. What's the story? — Kay, Seattle, Wash.

Dear Kay: Older patients do tend to do better with certain kinds of cancer. For example, older women with breast cancer may respond to treatment with hormones and have a better chance of long-term survival.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My niece gave birth prematurely and the baby had an undescended testicle. Is this common in premature babies? — Ms. L.D., Lexington, Kentucy

Dear Ms. D.: The incidence of cryptorchidism (undescended testes) is about 20 percent in infants born premeturely, compared with an incidence of 2.7 percent in those carried to term. According to Dr. Peter A. Lee, of the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, by one uyear of age the incidence has decreased to 0.2 percent, the same as with adults.

For Grant, Rochester, New York: An ulcer can be diagnosed on an utpatient basis, either by x-ray or by ue of an endoscope, a lighted tube that shows the upper gastrointestinal tract. The number of operations for ulcers has decreased

105-year-old wrecks tricycle

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A 105-year-old Chinese immigrant who peddles tamales from the back of his tricycle is eager to get back to work while recovering from injuries suffered in a collision with a motorcycle, relatives say.

Manuel Lee, who left China for Cuba in 1909 and came to Florida when Fidel Castro rose to power, needed 15 stitches over his eye and suffered a 3-inch gash on his leg when his three-wheeler tangled with a motorbike at an intersection Tuesday.

Police said he apparently strayed into the motorcycle's path and was hurled to the pavement.

"I feel so sorry for him.... With his leg hurt, he can't ride for a while," his 18-year-old granddaughter, Caridad Lee, said Thursday from the modest West Tampa home where Lee lives with the family of his son, Hilario.

"He wants to be out on the streets. He loves to be out there. Everybody knows him. And seeing him lying there doesn't make any of us happy," she added.

Lee has a modest income from Social Security but insists on working, the family said. He began selling tamales at age 92.

Celebrities describe influence their moms had on their lives

NEW YORK (AP) — It seemed like Mother's Day when Walter Cronkite, John Ritter and Phil Donahue were asked to described the influence their moms had on their lives.

"Besides being particularly pretty, a superb dancer and a marvelous companion, she inculcated in me a sense of honesty, integrity and social responsibility," Cronkite, the longtime CBS news anchor, said of his mother, Helen. "At every moment of crisis when such qualities are strained, I have felt her hand on my shoulder."

"My mom is the one everyone turns to when they're in trouble," recalled "Three's Company" star Ritter, of his mother, Dorothy. "She's the one who's there with the shoulder to lean on, the food, the comfort. And she's a good listener."

Donahue, the talk show host, said of his mother, Catherine: "The big gift from Mom was encouragement to try a lot of things, with what behaviorists today would call 'positive reinforcement.'... My mom raised me good. She raised me real good."

Cronkite, who will be 67 next month, Ritter, 35, and the 47-year-old Donahue give their views in the November edition of Good Housekeeping magazine.

M.T. Moore

NEW YORK (AP) — Wedding bells won't be ringing right away for actress Mary Tyler Moore — at least not until late next month, her spokeswoman said in response to reports that Miss Moore, 45, is about to get hitched for a third time.

The city clerk's office stayed open late Tuesday night so she and her husband-to-be, cardiologist S. Robert Levine, could pick up their license. However, the wedding date has yet to be set, spokeswoman Jackie Becher said Thursday.

Levine works at Mount Sinai Hospital and the Bronx Veterans Administration Hospital.

Miss Moore's most recent marriage was to Grant Tinker, now head of NBC, from whom she was divorced last year. Together they founded MTM Enterprises, which produced the "Mary Tyler Moore Show."

LONDON (AP) — Former King Constantine of Greece gave a kiss on the cheek and hand to Queen Elizabeth II as she arrived at a Greek Orthodox cathedral in west London for the christening of his fourth child.

The child, 4-month-old Theodora, fell asleep soon after the ceremony Thursday as a host of European monarchs looked on.

Constantine, 43, is godfather of the queen's grandson Prince William, the 16-month-old son of Britain's Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

Theodora's godparents include Queen Elizabeth, former Queen Anne-Marie's sister Queen Margaret the II of Denmark and Constantine's sister Queen Sophia of Spain, who was accompanied at the ceremony by her son Prince Philippe. Other guests included the former Greek queen's mother Ingrid — Queen Mother of Denmark — and members of the former Romanian and Yugoslav royal families.

Mayor Koch

NEW YORK (AP) — In this city of concrete, Mayor Edward I. Koch got a piece of a rock which he described as "the biggest diamond I've ever owned" — but actually it wasn't worth much.

The mayor, 58, was given a plaque at the Diamond Dealers Club in the heart of the city's diamond district. It contained a rock made of kimberlite, the diamond-bearing ore, which is practically worthless.

About 300 diamond dealers honored Koch on Thursday for "putting the sparkle back into every facet of city life."

Flip Wilson

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Comedian Flip Wilson expressed "great satisfaction" over a California Supreme Court ruling that he was illegally detained when a 1981 search at Los Angeles International Airport turned up narcotics in his briefcase, his lawyer says.

Small amounts of cocaine and hashish oil were found, but the tribunal said Thursday that they were seized illegally and must be suppressed as evidence.

Officials had no objective reason to detain the 49-year-old comedian, the court said.

"I'm delighted that we won," said Wilson's lawyer, Paul F. Moore II. Wilson had no comment other than "an expression of great satisfaction," the lawyer said.

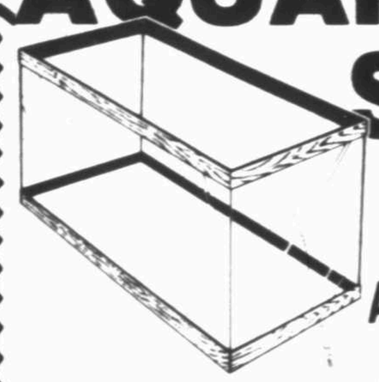

The case had not come to trial pending arguments over the evidence.

Burger holds first TV interview in 12 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interviewed on television for the first time in 12 years, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger repeated his plea for better prisons, which he called the weakest link in the criminal justice system.

"The system is no stronger than the worst part of it, and the worst part of our administration of justice is the correctional system, the penal system," Burger told Cable News Network in an interview to be broadcast Saturday.

Leading a demonstration in St. George's, Grenada, Saturday is Industry Minister Kenrick Radix, second from left. He and others marched in support of Prime Minister Maurice Bishop. Scattered gunfire broke out in Grenada Thursday after army personnel killed Bishop and as many as 10 others in a coup.

Caribbean leaders considering sanctions

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — Angry Caribbean leaders today considered sanctions against Grenada's new military regime, which seized power after its soldiers killed Prime Minister Maurice Bishop in a bloodbath.

Army Gen. Hudson Austin, heading a military council, took over the island nation Thursday, a day after soldiers killed the prime minister and several his top supporters in the Marxist-led government.

Jamaica led Caribbean nations in expressing revulsion over the killings by breaking off diplomatic relations Thursday night. Jamaican Prime Minister Edward Seaga proposed a trade embargo on Grenada and said heads of government from the English-speaking Caribbean would discuss the situation at an emergency meeting in Barbados this weekend.

People remained indoors today in Grenada after Austin threatened that soldiers would shoot anyone who violated a 24-hour curfew in effect until Monday.

Bishop was killed Wednesday after he arrived at army headquarters with a crowd of supporters who had freed him from a week of house arrest. He had been confined during a power struggle within the governing Marxist party that began last week.

Three Cabinet members were slain along with Bishop. Austin dismissed the surviving Cabinet members, dissolved the People's Revolution Government that had come to power in a coup in 1979 and seized "full executive and legislative powers."

The prime minister of Barbados, Tom Adams, said Thursday that Grenada's army executed Bishop after taking him captive during the showdown Wednesday.

"He was shot, perhaps slightly wounded, taken prisoner and executed. I don't think there is any doubt about it," Adams told an interviewer on ABC television's Nightline show.

Other sources claim eyewitnesses saw Bishop raise his hands over his head in surrender before the troops opened fire. These sources, who asked anonymity, said Bishop and the other government leaders were wounded, but instead of being taken to the nearby hospital were executed at Fort Rupert.

Radio Free Grenada, the official broadcast station, carried a military statement which said Bishop was going to execute the officers at Fort Rupert.

The broadcast said a soldier died from wounds suffered at the showdown, bringing to four the number of troops killed at Fort Rupert.

Austin earlier had reported only two soldiers were killed, as well as "many others," including Bishop, Foreign Minister Unison Whiteman, Housing Minister Norris Bain, Education Minister Jacqueline Creft and union leaders Vincent Noel and Fitzroy Bain.

In Washington, State Department officials said Thursday "there were suspicions" but no evidence that Cuba played a role in the upheaval.

But Adams rejected that speculation, saying Thursday that "we see no evidence that the Cubans have taken any hand in the events of the past seven days."

Bishop was friendly toward Cuba. Even more Marxist in his politics was Bishop's deputy, Bernard Coard, who was among Grenadan government leaders who gomplained Bishop was moving too slowly in implementing socialist policies. Coard resigned last week, saying he wanted to squash rumors he was plotting Bishop's assassination, and has not been heard from since.

Austin said Sunday that Bishop had been voted out of the government by the central committee of the ruling New Jewel Party for refusing to share power with Coard.

Seaga said Jamaica would seek a suspension of trade with Grenada by all members of the Caribbean Community and Common Market and petition the Inter-American Commission for Human Rights to send an investigation team to Grenada.

Seaga, who often demanded that Bishop hold elections, also said diplomatic relations would not be resumed by Jamaica "until constitutional government has been restored in Grenada or we are satisfied that bonafide steps have been taken to do so."

Michael Manley, Jamaica's former socialist prime minister, said Thursday his opposition People's National Party would recommend that Grenada's New Jewel Movement be expelled from the Socialist International.

"We formally sever all relations with the New Jewel Movement in its present guise," said Manley, who was a friend of Bishop and supporter of the Grenada revolution. "We demand the lifting of martial law, that the executions cease and the rights of free movement and individual liberty be fully respected."
