Broadcast brings Cuban retaliation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Radio Marti, the United States government's radio station for communist Cuba, went on the air today, and Cuba promptly retaliated by announcing the cancellation of an immigration accord with Washington.

The Cuban announcement was Radio Marti's lead news story as it went on the air at 5:30 a.m. EDT. Radio Havana, monitored in Miami, reported the Cuban government is terminating a Dec. 14 agreement with the United States in response to the startup of Radio Marti.

"The Cuban government has decided to suspend all kinds of the proceedings relating to the execution of immigration," Radio Havana said. In addition, the broadcast said Cuban-Americans would be barred from traveling to Cuba.

The State Department had no immediate comment on the Cuban announcement.

"We're aware of the reports," said department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty.

"The Cuban reaction doesn't seem appropriate," said Charles Z. Wick, director of the United States Information Agency, which oversees Radio Marti. "We are broadcasting in a legal fashion."

Under a special section of an immigration treaty signed in December, as many as 3,000 Cuban political prisoners were expected to arrive in the United States this year. The first few immigrants from Cuba began arriving in the United States in March.

The agreement stipulates that a maximum of 20,000 Cuban immigrants can come to the United States each year if Cuba allowed the return of 2,700 "undesirable" Cubans in U.S. prisons and mental health facilities.

The "undesirables," most of whom arrived during the 1980 Mariel boatlift, began returning to Cuba in February.

Radio Havana called the debut of Radio Marti "cynical and provocative" because it began transmitting on the anniversary of Cuban independence from Spain. It also said the naming of the station for Cuban patriot Jose Marti is a "gross insult."

Commercial broadcasters in the United States have long feared that once Radio Marti began beaming news, music, religion and sports to Cuba, Castro would retaliate by interfering with their signals.

When Radio Marti was under debate in Capitol Hill two years ago, Castro beamed back music and political programs that were heard as far away as Salt Lake City. Wick told a congressional panel this year that several American stations have sought damages from the government.

The 50,000-watt signal is being beamed from a transmitter in the Florida Keys.

The station, placed under control of the Voice of America, is required by Congress to maintain balance in its news reports. The White House had wanted it to be a separate entity, similar to Radio Free Europe, beamed at Eastern Europe, and Radio Liberty, aimed at the Soviet Union.

Personal income soars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans, finally receiving their tax refund checks in significant numbers, saw their disposable personal income soar by a record 2.9 percent last month, the Commerce Department reported today.

With more money in their pockets, Americans also spent more last month, boosting personal consumption spending by 0.7 percent, the department said.

The gain in disposable income, the amount left over after paying taxes, compared to a 0.4 percent decline in March. The drop was caused by computer foul-ups at the Internal Revenue Service that delayed the processing of refund checks this year.

The delay proved to be a drag on economic growth, sending consumer spending down by 0.2 percent in March.

The economy, as measured by the gross national product, grew by only 1.3 percent in the first three months of the year, the slowest pace since the end of the 1981-82 recession.

Firefighters hoping nature will help contain wildfires

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Firefighters looked to nature for help as several major blazes that have burned about 400 homes continued to rage over more than 130,000 acres of the state today, officials said.

An estimated three-quarters of Florida's 700 fire departments, up to 5,000 firefighters, are battling wildfires which have blackened parts of nearly half the state's 67 counties, Forestry Division spokesman Paul Wills said Sunday. "Some people have been working 80 hours without stopping," Wills said. "I don't know how human flesh can do it."

The blazes have killed two firefighters since they began. They were aided Sunday by winds of 10-15 mph in most of the state, which has been parched by a six-month drought.

The largest fires were scattered along a 200-mile stretch of northeast Florida's Atlantic coast between St. Augustine and Cape Canaveral, said Josie Bohac, spokeswoman for the state Division of Forestry. In southeast Florida, blazes consumed 15,000 acres in the Everglades, 12,800 acres of grasslands on the state's southern tip and 9,000 acres in western Dade County. In the southwest part of the state, several fires totaling at least 9,000 acres burned out of control in Big Cypress Swamp.

Firefighters counted on predictions of rain in the north and central parts of the state to help dampen the flames in woods and grasslands.

Along with some rain, lighter winds, cooler temperatures, higher humidity and more cloud cover were predicted for that area today and Tuesday, said National Weather Service forecaster Ron White.

"I don't know how heavy the rain will be," White said. "If it's just a misty rain, it wouldn't have much effect."

"There'll be nothing of substance to dampen a fire" in the southeast or southwest, White said.

Officials closed parts of Alligator Alley, which links Florida's coasts between Naples and Fort Lauderdale, because of smoke hazards. The road remained closed late Sunday night.

In the northeast, firefighters battled a 28,800-acre blaze in the Tomoka area of Volusia County just north of Daytona Beach, Ms. Bohac said.

"They're trying to hold it there. It already burned nine homes Friday," she said.

The wildfires have been burning on and off for about a week, but grew to major proportions Friday.

Robbery third of month

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

An armed robber wearing a nylon stocking mask held up the Pizza Inn restaurant, 2131 Perryton Parkway, early Sunday morning, the third armed robbery here this month, police reported.

In each of the three armed robberies in May, the bandit or bandits wore nylon stockings over their heads, according to reports.

A lone Pizza Inn employee, David Patterson, 29, was preparing to close about 1:05 a.m. Sunday, when the armed assailant entered the restaurant, reports said.

The black man pointed a long-barreled revolver at the employee and ordered Patterson to open the register, police said.

"Back off, . . . back off," the robber reportedly said, according to reports.

The suspect grabbed a money bag with the day's receipts, police said. He demanded Patterson's wallet and also took about $5 from it, the employee told police.

The masked robber then ordered the employee to lie down on the restaurant's floor, police said.

He again pointed the gun at the employee "and told him that he would kill him if he moved before the suspect was out of the door," police reports said.

The black bandit was described as being about six feet tall and 170 pounds. He wore faded blue jeans, a flight jacket with a fur collar and a mask that appeared to have been made from pantihose, police said.

Chief J.J. Ryzman said investigators don't know whether the Pizza Inn robbery and the two previous armed robberies this month were related.

About 6 a.m., May 11, a black man and a white man wearing stocking masks and armed with a knife and a gun held up J-Bob's Gulf Service station, 210 E. Brown.

About 6 a.m., May 4, a white man wearing a stocking mask and armed with a gun held up the Allsup's convenience store at Hobart and Alcock.

An armed robbery earlier this year and the May robberies brought to four the total number of armed hold-ups in Pampa in 1985, one less than the five reported in all of 1984.

Since its inception in February, 1983, Pampa Crime Stoppers has been instrumental in obtaining information regarding crimes committed in Pampa through citizen involvement and a cash reward incentive offered to citizens who anonymously volunteer information.

Due to anonymous tips received through Crime Stoppers, the Pampa Police Department has been able to clear up a significant number of offenses and recover an appreciable amount of stolen and illicit drugs.

Citizens may witness all or part of a crime without being aware of what they have seen and, consequently may unknowingly possess key information that could aid the police in solving the crime. In some instances, citizens do not contact police with information out of fear of retaliation by the criminal. In most instances, citizens will not come forward unless they are provided complete anonymity. Crime Stoppers is the answer.

Cash rewards of up to $1,000 are available for information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons committing crimes in Pampa. The Board of Directors of Crime Stoppers urges citizen involvement in reporting crimes in our community. Call Crime Stoppers at 669-2222.

College funding, pay raise stall budget talks

AUSTIN (AP) — In the House-Senate conference committee on appropriations it's a matter of whom you believe: "Rudd's Right" or "Grant's Great." A third choice is "Farabee's Fair."

Conferees, staff and spectators wore their favorites' buttons in a 13-hour session Sunday that stalled over college funding and a state employee pay raise.

Rudd is Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield and chairman of the five House conferees. Grant is Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, chairman of the Senate conferees and Farabee is Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, another negotiator on the two-year state budget.

The 10-member committee quit shortly after 11 p.m. with another session scheduled today in an attempt to get a budget through the Legislature before it adjourns at midnight May 27.

The Senate version of the appropriations bill would spend $36.8 billion from all funds, the House $36.4 billion.

Rudd said, "We definitely will agree. The question is time. How fast? It may be Saturday."

There had been talk that the committee had to finish its work by Tuesday midnight, or perhaps Wednesday, to meet printing and parliamentary deadlines, but Rudd said the House would suspend any rules to vote on an appropriations bill.

Farabee told reporters, "It's no longer a matter of whether there will be a state employee pay raise. It's just how much, or whether it's for just the first year of the biennium."

Farabee said the conference committee had hit a roadblock on college funding, an area in which the Senate was more generous by $70 million in its version of the spending bill. There also are disagreements over methods of college funding.

Gary Hughes, executive director of the Texas

Public Employees Association, said House Speaker Gib Lewis and the five House conferees were "absolutely dedicated" to a House proposal to raise state employee salaries by 3 percent each of the next two years. "They're not going to give in," Hughes said.

The Senate has offered no similar proposal but Hughes said he was "very optimistic" because Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said Friday employees would get a pay raise. Hobby said, however, he was not certain where the money would come from.

Hughes said the House is so solidly behind a pay raise that it would reject unanimously any budget that did not include one.

"Even if a special session resulted?" he was asked, and he replied, "Even if a special session resulted."

He estimated the proposed House increase at $260 million over two years, and added that he did not think a special session would be needed. "I think they want to work it out," he said.

"I don't think there's any question that senators have to secure a pay raise for state employees," Hughes said.

Once work on the budget is completed, a conference committee plans to try to resolve the differences on raising a variety of state fees.

The House passed a fee bill to raise about $106 million, and the Senate version would raise approximately $225 million. The conference committee on fees has met once and agreed to bring the House bill up to about $139 million.

Farabee said the House apparently did not want to go any higher on fees, because some members viewed fees as taxes.

But Rudd said at the end of the long day Sunday, "Nobody wants a special session. Everybody wants to go home."

Wading pools being constructed

By BOB HART
 Pampa City Manager

The Clean-Up Campaign is continuing, and we will be moving out of Ward 2 and into Ward 3 this week.
 Our sanitation operators have been working extremely hard. In Ward 1, they hauled 63 loads of items to the landfill. This represents 277 manhours of work.
 Again, please remember to stack items in the alley, and stack them as neatly as possible. If the items are stacked neatly, it helps our personnel to load the items faster and - based upon the workload in Ward 1 - helps us proceed with the clean-up campaign faster.

In other areas, our Parks and Recreation Department is continuing the work on the new wading pools. A wading pool is under construction in Central Park, and another will be soon in Marcus Sanders Park.

The Parks and Recreation Advisory Board is working closely on this project and is providing the guidance in the placement of the pools.

I also want to remind everyone of the information available concerning meetings of the city commission. The city commission will meet in regular session on Tuesday, May 28, at 9:30 a.m. Thereafter, beginning June 11, the city commission will meet on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month at 6 p.m.

An agenda packet is placed at the Lovett Memorial Library for your review and inspection. The agenda packet is identical to the information the city commissioners receive. The packet has all of the back-up memoranda and material that the commission reviews prior to and at the meeting.

Other meetings perhaps of interest includes the Planning and Zoning Commission which meets on the third Thursday of each month at 3:30 p.m. The Board of Adjustments meets on the fourth Thursday at 1:30 p.m. The Parks and Recreation Advisory Board meets on the fourth Tuesday of each month at 4:30 p.m. The Library Board meets on the second Monday of each month at 4:30 p.m.

The Planning and Zoning Commission, Board of Adjustments and Parks and Recreation Board all meet at the City Commission Room in City Hall. The Library Board meets at Lovett Memorial Library.

Speaking on behalf of all of the employees with the city, I want to say our goal is to provide as high a quality service as possible to every citizen in Pampa. If there are any ideas, suggestions or requests that you have, please do not hesitate to contact me here at City Hall at 665-8481.

Islanders go to new home

HONOLULU (AP) - Seventy residents of an island contaminated by a nuclear test in 1954 left Rongelap Atoll today aboard the Greenpeace ship Rainbow Warrior, a spokesman for the environmental group said.

The islanders were being ferried 100 miles to Majetto Island, which also is located in the Marshall Islands, said Dick Dillman of Greenpeace, the group's San Francisco-based telecommunications arm.

The 150-foot motor-sail ship also carried the dismantled homes of the islanders, according to Dillman.

The work of dismantling the homes began Sunday following a religious service, Dillman said. While the men took the houses apart, women composed songs to help the people remember the island, he said.

Rongelap, which has about 300 residents, was contaminated March 1, 1954, by fallout from a U.S. nuclear test. Many residents were taken to Kwajalein for decontamination treatment, and returned to Rongelap in 1957.

Island leaders asked to be moved, saying continued exposure to radiation threatened the health of children.

However, a U.S. Department of Energy official said average radiation levels on the island are lower than in many areas of the United States.

New trustee to take his oath

Recently elected trustee David Robertson is scheduled to take his oath of office at the regular school board meeting for the Pampa Independent School District at 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Robertson was out of town on business at the last board meeting and requested a delay in his being administered the oath.

In other business, trustees will discuss 1985-1986 tuition rates for students who reside out of the district but want to attend Pampa schools.

Board members also will elect a delegate and alternate for the 1985 Texas Association of School Boards delegate assembly, hear a budget report, consider a leave of absence in the personnel session and approve due bills and invoices for payment.

Scouts will probe ladder stunt that killed 13-year-old, injured others

DALLAS (AP) - A 13-year-old boy was killed and seven other boys injured in a freak accident when about 20 to 30 Boy Scouts at a campout attempted to create a "human ladder."

Kenneth Krawczyk of Plano died Saturday night at Camp Wisdom, located south of Dallas, with the collapse of a "human wall," in which the boys stretched across ladders and ropes.

Boy Scout leaders said Sunday they have suspended performance of the stunt pending the outcome of investigations into the accident.

The Boy Scouts were attempting to recreate a 1934 National Boy Scout Jamboree stunt in which boys formed a "wall" across 10 20-foot aluminum ladders, scout officials said.

Pressure on Krawczyk's chest resulted in a lacerated main artery to the heart, according to the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

"We think the boys falling on each other in some way caused the problems (injuries)," said Bill Gamble, executive director of the Circle 10 Council, which governs more than 400 troops in North Central Texas.

Gamble said the scouts had earlier performed the stunt several times successfully and there was no reason to think it would be dangerous. But officials said that as the boys began climbing down, the wall leaned sideways and fell to the ground, crushing Krawczyk.

Officials said investigations will be conducted by both the health and safety division of the Boy Scouts of America and by an investigative team appointed by the Scouts' council board of directors.

The mothers of five boys injured in the accident said there was no indication of negligence or lack of supervision by Scout leaders.

"With boys in sports and boys who go on outings, there's always a chance of an accident," said one mother who asked not to be identified. "You really can't be concerned or you wouldn't let children out of your sight."

Youngsters are arsonists

Occasionally something in the untold piles of mail which crosses my desk each week catches my eye, causing me to stop and read it in its entirety.

Such was the case last week when I glanced at information which indicated that more than one-third of the 20,000 people arrested for arson in the United States during 1983 were under 18 years of age.

This was contained in information that reported an estimated 122,000 incendiary or suspicious fires were set in the U.S. in 1983 at a cost of more than $1.4 billion. According to the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) 88 percent of the 20,000 persons arrested that year were male; 76 percent were white and 38 percent were under 18.

The more I thought about this startling — for me at least — statistic, the more concerned I became about the need to stress to children the dangers of starting fires, either accidentally or on purpose.

According to information contained in the report from the American Alliance of Insurers, juvenile firesetters usually fall into one of two categories. The first and more common is accidental firesetting. The second, less frequent but more distressing, is recurrent or deliberate firesetting.

The youngsters involved in accidental firesetting are very different from those who set fires intentionally.

The association report explained the youngsters involved in accidental firesetting are usually boys between the ages of three and 10 who have an average energy level and are curious about their environment. They are of normal intelligence and have no known academic or behavioral problem in school. Their family life is relatively stable.

They often become involved in firesetting as a result of being around fire starting materials without adult supervision, the report notes, adding, once they discover they started a fire, they usually help to extinguish it.

According to the report these youth don't realize that fireplay often results in destruction. Often, they admit their involvement and feel guilty about their behavior.

Those youngsters involved in recurrent or deliberate firesetting have special personality characteristics and social behavior that demand immediate attention, according to the report.

For these youngsters, firesetting is not an isolated problem motivated by curiosity; it is instead a way to call attention to the distress and conflict that shapes their lives.

Statistics indicate many of these youngsters are boys between the ages of seven and 16. They have a high energy level and often exhibit irresponsible and impulsive behavior. The report observes that they frequently come from homes where the father is unconcerned or absent. They may have academic or behavioral problems in school. They have low self-esteem; rarely do they have positive relationships with adults.

A small percentage of these youngsters exhibit signs of mental disturbance, the report states, adding that they may let someone know about the fire, but they often do not admit their involvement.

Ironically, these deliberate firesetters attract more attention than they ever expected; fire departments, schools, insurance firms, municipalities and just plain citizens are all victims.

Not surprisingly, these diverse elements have begun banding together to teach children the dangers of firesetting and to detect and treat juvenile arsonists early in their incendiary careers.

Numerous programs have been started in cities throughout the country. In St. Paul, Minn., the various agencies have combined their efforts in a 12-week program given to eighth and ninth grade students in the public schools. The program features speakers from fire and police departments, juvenile justice systems and insurance companies who share their knowledge and experience in the classroom. Students also visit the scenes of incidents and meet with homeowners and business people victimized by crime to get a feel for life on the receiving end.

In Baltimore, Md., the fire department operates a municipal program geared to younger children. Instructors describe fire safety and prevention techniques in kindergarten through sixth grade classes. The city also has a Juvenile Firesetter Counseling Program with all requests for counseling channeled to a single department. A trained fire department counselor interviews the youngster, assesses the risk and refers the child to the appropriate agency.

One of the best known fire safety programs in the country, "Learn Not to Burn," was developed ten years ago by the NFPA, a non-profit technical and educational fire safety organization.

The main component of this program is the Learn Not to Burn curriculum, which presents 25 key fire safety behaviors. Adopted and presented on a school-by-school basis, the program incorporates visuals including subject cards, films, slides, pamphlets, books and posters.

To insure that these messages are reinforced throughout the elementary school years, the program is developed on three levels: kindergarten through second grade, third through fifth, and sixth through eighth. One of the key features of the program is the inclusion of lesson plans that allow a teacher to integrate fire safety lessons with traditional classroom subjects.

Another fire safety and prevention effort geared to grammar school students is the Junior Fire Marshal Program, in which two million children in 40,000 classrooms participated last year alone. More than 1,300 insurance agents in all 50 states serve as Junior Fire Marshal sponsors, providing educational material to schools in their communities.

Children from kindergarten through third grade receive lessons in basic fire prevention and fire safety through the program which emphasizes that children should not play with matches; practice home fire safety drills with their family; crawl under smoke to escape a burning building; and stop, drop and roll to extinguish burning clothing.

The scope and number of activities fighting the juvenile arson problem today makes it hard to believe that virtually no organized effort existed ten years ago. And it gives hope that juvenile arson may be snuffed out ten years from now.

But, parents shouldn't depend on fire departments, insurance agents and school teachers to do all the work in teaching their children the dangers involved in setting fires. Begin early stressing that they shouldn't play with matches, stoves, electric heaters and other objects which can start a fire. We should also show them how to flee their homes if a fire starts.

It seems like the "little ones" will never learn, but with enough repetition we might be able to impress upon them the hazards and thereby save their lives and our homes.

State credit head resigns

AUSTIN (AP) — John P. "Pete" Parsons, commissioner of the Texas Credit Union Department, has resigned.

The department said in a news release that Parsons, 57, submitted a letter of resignation Friday.

The department regulates 450 state-chartered credit unions in Texas with assets totaling $3.8 billion. Parsons has been commissioner since 1974.

A meeting of the Credit Union Commission has been called for June 5 to consider the resignation.

Legislature probably won't review education reform

AUSTIN (AP) — The 1984 education reform law that has sparked controversy throughout the state apparently will survive the 1985 Legislature unscathed.

Lawmakers came to town in January full of ideas on how to reform the reforms. They'll probably go home after Memorial Day without denting the school package.

"Every day it appears that way more and more," House Speaker Gib Lewis said as the session entered its last week.

Before the final gavel bangs the session to an end on May 27, lawmakers will scramble to complete the 1986-87 budget, wrap up the Blue Law repeal bill and beg, threaten and cajole to push through their pet bills.

House-Senate conferees hope to wrap up the budget early this week. The House probably will vote Tuesday to accept Senate changes in the House-approved Blue Law repeal bill. Repeal backers are confident that Gov. Mark White will sign the measure that clears the way for Sunday shopping.

The closing-week scrambles probably won't include any related to HB72, the public school reform measure approved during the 1984 summer special session.

Lewis said minor changes are needed, but he was hesitant to allow an all-out assault on HB72.

"I've never favored opening it up to let everybody take potshots at what we did in the summer session. If we make some minor changes, that's fine with me. But if it's going to expose the whole education program this late in the game, I'm very hesitant on doing that," he said.

So a Senate-approved education package appears headed for death in the House Public Education Committee.

"I've talked to the Texas Education Agency people and it seems to be OK with them too," Lewis said of the hands-off attitude in the House.

House Public Education Committee Chairman Bill Haley, D-Center, said some changes are needed now — especially in the no-pass, no-play rule and the teacher career ladder.

"The session is not over yet," he said. Action on education "depends on whether we can get the leadership of the House in position to feel like we can handle it without gutting everything."

"But time is drawing nigh," said Haley, co-sponsor of the 1984 reform bill.

The no-pass, no-play rule has drawn the attention of Texans, some of whom have gone to court to challenge the provision that bars failing students from extracurricular activities.

Haley wants a change in the mandatory six-week ineligibility period for students failing any course. He favors ineligibility only for students who fail a state-required course.

"The state's part of it should say we are going to require that you be on track for graduation and be passing all of your subjects as required by the state," he said.

"Whatever you are doing in locally allowed electives or locally required electives, that's up to the local people," he said.

The career ladder for teachers was set up by HB72 to reward good teachers. Some teachers have complained about the way it's being administered. Haley wants to postpone it for a year.

"I think we need to postpone the career ladder until we have an appraisal system and the people who are going to do the appraisals trained to do them," said the former history teacher.

"If you don't postpone the career ladder you are going to have teachers moving up on it on 1,100 different appraisal systems throughout the state, and none of that will be uniform," he said.

Haley favors a "set of basic state criteria" that would decide which teachers are rewarded.

MADD founder irate over shelving by House panel of open container bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A founder of Mothers Against Drunk Driving is going onto the home turf of lawmakers to condemn them for stalling a bill outlawing open alcoholic beverage containers in vehicles.

Two weeks ago, Marinelle Timmons, state director of MADD, appeared in Deer Park, Texas, at the First Baptist Church, whose membership includes state Rep. Ed Watson.

And last week, she was the guest on a television talk show in Victoria, Texas, hometown of Rep. Kenneth Armbrister.

The two lawmakers are members of the House Liquor Regulations Committee, where the bill has been bottled up in subcommittee headed by Armbrister, a former policeman who opposes the measure, since April 10.

Mrs. Timmons has vowed to campaign in their districts and tell their constituents how the committee is strangling the open container measure.

"Armbrister knows, (House Speaker) Gib Lewis knows, and every member of the House knows if it gets to the floor it will pass. That's why it's not coming out of committee," Mrs. Timmons said.

Mrs. Timmons started the Texas chapter of MADD after her 18-year-old son was killed in a 1981 Houston freeway crash caused by a drunken driver.

A bill sponsored by Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, banning open containers won quick approval in the Senate two months ago after it was amended to apply only to drivers. Just over half of the 150-member House confirmed their support for it, but Armbrister has pronounced the bill dead with only a week left in the session.

Sarpalius said Lewis' referral of the open container legislation to an "unfriendly" committee in the House is a classic study in how to kill a bill.

"I'm convinced that the whole purpose was once it got over in the House, Armbrister's job was to kill the bill. He was successful in doing that, and you need to give him the credit," Sarpalius said.

Forty-three states have open-container laws, and there are legislative moves in the remaining seven to adopt similar measures.

The Texas Legislature has approved tough driving while intoxicated laws in the 1980s, and Sarpalius said it makes no sense to continue to permit drinking while driving.

Armbrister, a second-term legislator, has discounted claims that the legislation has support of a majority in the House.

Because of the public pressure being applied by the anti-drunken driving group in Texas and across the nation, Armbrister and other opponents say some members would vote for the measure even though they disagree with its merits.

"Everybody is coming up to me and saying, 'You're not letting that bill out, are you? I'm not going to have to vote on it, am I?'"

Armbrister said. "It is more of a question than just good, bad, and evil, and I resent people portraying me as non-Christian and non-caring."

Lewis has denied that the game plan at the outset of the session was for the speaker to appoint a committee that would be friendly to the beer lobby and bury open-container bills.

Mrs. Timmons disagrees. She said Watson told her he was appointed to the committee because of his opposition to the open-container legislation.

The MADD group had three supporters on the panel in 1983, but ended up with just one after committee assignments were made by Lewis in January, she said.

Lewis said he appointed the committee to satisfy the anti-drunken driving group and added, "I'm sure they could find 1,000 different reasons to point fingers."

Armbrister said he did not even ask to serve on the committee.

Lucas added notoriety to jail congregation

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — When Clementine Schroeder met Henry Lee Lucas, she gave him a Bible and a warning not to use the pages for cigarette papers. Lucas heeded the warning, kept the Bible and now claims to be a born-again Christian.

Mrs. Schroeder has had a captive audience since she started delivering the gospel to inmates in the Williamson County Jail in 1980. She said she met Lucas, the jail's most notorious resident, on Dec. 24, 1983.

"I baptized him the second time I met him," said Mrs. Schroeder, a 48-year-old Catholic lay worker known as "Sister Clemmie" by jailers and inmates.

At various times, Lucas has claimed to have committed as many as 600 murders — or as few as one. Lawmen say they have corroborated about 215 of Lucas' confessions.

But Lucas recently said his confessions were lies designed to discredit law officers. Since then, the 48-year-old drifter has been moved to the jail in Waco, where a state grand jury is investigating allegations that lawmen "fed" him information for the confessions.

"He either killed everyone he says he killed, or he hasn't killed any of them," said Mrs. Schroeder, one of Lucas' few non-law enforcement visitors in Waco.

Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell said she is perhaps Lucas' closest friend. But Mrs. Schroeder said the friendship doesn't mean she can tell when Lucas is telling the truth.

"I don't think any man knows the truth about Henry, and I don't think Henry knows the truth about Henry," she told the Dallas Morning News. "But the Lord knows."

Mrs. Schroeder never expected to feel at home in the narrow catwalks and hallways of the Williamson County jail to become familiar territory.

"I thought they (inmates) were the meanest people in the whole wide world. But I called up all the ministers in town and found out nobody had a ministry in the jail," she said recently.

Born and reared on a Brahman cattle ranch in Jackson County on the Gulf Coast, she left home to study at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and Boston University.

After marrying a fellow music student in 1957, she had three children and was settled into the life of a mother, homemaker and part-time piano teacher in Georgetown, a community 25 miles north of Austin.

Now she walks through the jail briskly, saying "hello" and "The Lord loves you" to those sitting in their cells.

Mrs. Schroeder stops at nearly every cell, sitting or kneeling at the bars to talk to the inmates inside.

"You can get peace and nothing will ever be able to rob you from the peace the Lord wants to give you — no jailer, no attorney, nobody," she tells them. Again, there's a chorus of "Amen."

"What do we want to pray about today?" Mrs. Schroeder asked recently as she sat on the floor with three prisoners outside a cell in the Williamson County jail.

The men — scraggly, unshaven and dressed in white jail garb — bow their heads. Their quiet voices get lost in the din of morning TV game shows, rock 'n' roll radio and the low rumble of voices that echo off the stone and steel walls.

But one line of her prayer stands out against the noise. "Bars cannot separate us from the peace you give us," she prays. The line is greeted with a chorus of "Amen."

One of the inmates, a 32-year-old Utah native, was awaiting transfer to the Texas prison system for unlawful use of a car. Although he's going to prison for the third time, he said he knows the Lord — and Mrs. Schroeder — will be with him this time.

"She's helped me immensely," he said. "It's turned my life around. Through Sister Clemmie and through this jail ministry, we're on fire for the Lord. The biggest thing the Lord has given to me is the ability to trust again."

Save the caboose mentality a threat

A California state senator apparently wants to be remembered as the Man Who Saved the Caboose. That would enshrine his name in history, along with the Man Who Saved the Horseless Carriage, the Man Who Saved the Telegraph and the Man Who Saved the Icebox.

To the list of all those visionaries who threw themselves unselfishly in the path of progress, add the name of Sen. Alfred Alquist, who once rode cabooses as a railroad man with the Southern Pacific and is now joining forces with—you might have guessed it—the railroad unions—to save this admittedly wonderful piece of Americana.

The railroads say the caboose has long since outlived its usefulness as a safety device—the brake operator aboard keeping an eye out for overheated axles, dragging equipment and other potential problems—and has become an expensive drag on trains, which in some places are literally fighting for existence against competition with trucks and other modes of transportation. Electronic monitoring devices would suffice, the railroads say, and are much less expensive than the caboose, with its manpower requirements.

Alquist and the railroad unions—the latter, of course, denying steadfastly that their purpose is to protect featherbedders—say no electronic sensor can replace the human eye and judgment of the brakeman, and want to make it illegal for trains to operate in California without a caboose.

This attempt by the unions and Alquist to legislate protection for an outmoded technology may serve as a lesson in miniature of what the much-ballyhooed "national industrial policy" is all about.

Elements of various NIP proposals include legislation to prohibit closing of industrial plants, special tax breaks and other incentives to politically selected industries, "regional development banks" to provide subsidized loans to help declining industries modernize, even a Cabinet-level department of industry and trade to make decisions about government policy as it affects specific industries.

The premise behind such proposals is that through the political process, a rational consensus about the industrial makeup of the nation—which industries ought to survive and prosper—can be achieved and then enforced through all the many coercive devices at government's disposal.

Even given the most naive view of the political process, it is begging reality to hope that any political mechanism can duplicate in knowledge and sophistication the millions of individual decisions that drive a free economy.

The reality of the political process, furthermore, is much worse, as efforts to save the caboose suggest. National industrial police will inevitably mean that entrenched, powerful interests will attempt to strong-arm legislatures into passing laws to protect themselves against the forces of the market.

That may keep the caboose on the track, but to what end?

How the army treats toxins

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A Defense Department request, submitted to Congress last summer, sought permission to spend $14 million to construct an "Aerosol Toxin Test Laboratory" at the Army's Dugway Proving Ground near Tooele, Utah.

A second Pentagon request, forwarded to Congress last autumn, proposed spending an additional $7 million to build "Toxic Agent Test Support Facilities" at the same desolate military installation 70 miles southwest of Salt Lake City.

Both requests were buried in a list of supposedly routine, non-controversial military construction projects that the Defense Department proposed to finance by using funds unspent from earlier fiscal years and originally designated for other purposes.

That "reprogramming" procedure requires no committee hearings, no floor debates and no votes in either house of Congress. The only authorization required is the approval of two senior members on each of two subcommittees.

But one of those legislators, Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., took a close look and didn't like what he saw — an apparent attempt by the Pentagon to use subterfuge to gain congressional assent for an unprecedented expansion of the Army's biological warfare research program.

The United States, as a signatory to the Biological and Toxic Weapons Convention of 1975, has renounced all efforts to develop, produce or stockpile the virulent biological weapons that can cause death or paralysis in seconds.

The Soviet Union is also a signatory to that treaty, but Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger says there is evidence that it "has maintained its offensive biological warfare program and ... is exploring genetic engineering."

Although Pentagon officials have offered no satisfactory explanation for their surreptitious attempt to gain congressional approval of the Dugway projects, they insist that their expanded research program is for defensive purposes only.

"Our policy in this area is unequivocal," says Weinberger. "The United States does not and will not possess biological ... weapons. We will not develop such weapons nor assist others to do so."

But a number of prominent microbiologists share Sasser's anxiety about the Dugway expansion, especially because the Army insists that it must use powerful toxins instead of harmless substitutes in its research.

The scientists note that such simulants possess physical properties indistinguishable from the "substantial volumes of toxic biological aerosol agents" that pose a threat to public health and safety.

At two other biological warfare installations operated by the Defense Department — Fort Detrick in Maryland and Pine Bluff Arsenal in Arkansas — pathogenic organisms have infected hundreds of employees and, on occasion, killed those workers.

At Dugway, the improper release of nerve gas led to the deaths of 6,400 sheep in 1968. In another incident, the release of a cupful of deadly anthrax germs more than 30 years ago has produced a "permanent biocontaminated area."

The unpredictable biological toxins can be difficult to control in an uncontained environment because, unlike chemical warfare agents, they are self-reproducing.

Among the incapacitating or deadly diseases they are designed to induce are bubonic and pneumonic plague, anthrax, yellow fever, Q fever, tularemia and brucellosis.

A Washington-based public interest group, the Foundation on Economic Trends, has filed a civil suit in U.S. District Court seeking a permanent injunction against the Dugway projects on the grounds that the Defense Department has failed to provide the legally required assurances that the work does not "pose a grave hazard to public health."

Biological warfare is a highly emotional issue, but the Defense Department owes the public a fuller explanation of its intentions before it proceeds with the Dugway projects.

Americans tired of crime

All I said was, "Not all judges have gone soft." I mentioned that a Third District judge in Idaho had sentenced a child molester to 10 years.

And in passing sentence Judge Dennis Goff said, "If you had touched one of my children...I would have cut off every appendage you have!"

A dozen years ago a statement like that from a jurist would have unleashed an avalanche of demand for impeachment.

Not this time.

This time the response is unanimous applause.

Americans are not going to take it anymore. The most recent Gallup Poll reveals that three - of - four agree that "taking the law into one's own hands sometimes is justified."

Our Department of Justice reports that serious crime in the United States has declined each of the past three years, yet, despite that statistical improvement, each year one - in - three households is the victim of serious crime.

And what should be more humiliating, the Eisenhower Foundation study reveals that our nation's crime rate - compared to others of the industrialized democracies - is "astronomical."

Police services are curtailed by budget cuts and hamstrung by court - imposed restraints.

Courts are constrained by an awareness that prisons are overcrowded, inadequately supervised, that imprisonment of any duration may now constitute "cruel and inhuman treatment."

So murderers, robbers and rapists escape confinement altogether or are too soon out.

So Americans of all age, all races and all income levels have to lock themselves behind barred windows and bolted doors while the animals take over the zoo.

The newest high - rise apartments are more like "prisons" for their occupants - with elaborate security devices, electronic surveillance, infrared motion detectors, panic buttons, round - the - clock guards.

We are alarming our cars and arming ourselves; half of all American households now have guns.

The Second Amendment Foundation says that "300,000 Americans a year use handguns to defend themselves against criminals; not because they want to but because they have to."

And heinous sex crimes against underprotected children inevitably create a climate of overprotection for others. Society will suffer the impact of these years of fear for generations.

Good wars and bad wars

The coincidence that the 40th and 10th anniversaries, respectively, of the collapse of Hitler's Germany and South Vietnam are being observed within weeks of each other this spring has furnished occasion for all sorts of retrospective comments, but the level of misinformation — and disinformation — has been remarkably high.

For example, the other day I heard one radio newsmen remark that this is "the 10th anniversary of the defeat of American arms in Southeast Asia." Now, 10 years ago, there were no American forces in Vietnam and hadn't been for more than two years. The only "American arms" there were those we had given to the South Vietnamese, and Congress had long since voted to reduce even these to a trickle.

Nor can we rehabilitate the statement by referring it back to early 1973, when the last American troops left Saigon for home. Far from being defeated, they had trained and equipped the South Vietnamese to defend themselves, and the South Vietnamese did precisely that when North Vietnam violated the Paris Accords and attacked afresh that autumn. It was only Congress' refusal, in the heady partisan atmosphere of Watergate, to permit effective air retaliation for that violation and to continue supplying arms to South Vietnam that resulted in the latter's collapse two years later.

Television's retrospectives on U.S. participation in the Vietnam war have concentrated heavily on recollections of the horror of it all. One veteran I saw remembered staring at some children his unit's gunfire had just orphaned, and wondering how such inhumanity could possibly be justified. Another looked at a picture of a fellow soldier who had died at his side, and choked up as he wished he could bring his buddy back to life. There have been deeply touching scenes in the psychiatric wards of veterans' hospitals, where shattered men try vainly to come to terms with the horror of what they experienced.

World War II was different, apparently. If Allied gunfire ever orphaned any German or Italian children, no American veteran has been seen on television this spring musing on the inhumanity of the event. Presumably plenty of Americans saw their comrades lie before their eyes in the war's great battles, but precious few veterans have wept openly on camera in regret, let alone bitterness. And if there has been one single televised tour of a veterans' psychiatric ward populated with the trembling, vacant-eyed human wrecks left over from Anzio and Iwo Jima and the Battle of the Bulge, I missed it — and so, I'll bet, did you.

Every war has its "lessons," apparently, and they differ greatly. Liberal opinion enthusiastically welcomed U.S. participation in World War II, and therefore it comes across in the media as a "good" war: an occasion for parades, and gallant assaults, and heroic deaths, and triumphant returns, and a proud tear when the bugler blows taps for the last time. Vietnam, in the view of these same slick operators, was a "bad" war, and the television screen darkens appropriately. We are shown scenes of napalm attacks, and screaming children, and the rattle of inconclusive but terrifying gunfire, and the tortured faces of exhausted GIs, and shots of American corpses, and a last slow pan along the polished black surface of the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, with its thousands upon thousands of names.

Are we too dumb to realize what is being done to us? All of the pictures, of both wars, are "true": the parades, the napalm, the gallant assaults, the screaming children, the heroic deaths, the tears. It is the selection of which pictures to use, by media that know very well what emotional buttons to push, that produces the sort of political brainwashing that is being administered to us this spring.

Dear Abby

Drivers, joggers dispute each other's right-of-way

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I think it's time people recognized running as a legitimate sport, and accorded joggers and runners the same consideration given to other sportsmen. I just lost another morning of training when a motorist stopped me on my neighborhood course to ask for directions!

As a competitive runner, I time my runs, and the only way I know how much progress I'm making is to compare today's time against previous times. When somebody stops me, I lose my rhythm, pace and concentration, and all the other elements that a runner builds up to. You wouldn't drive up to a tennis court, jump out, dash up to the server and ask where Maple Street is, would you?

I hate to be rude, but I am not a traffic cop for dumb clucks who can't remember to bring a map or get directions from their friends before they leave the house. Please print this for motorists.

PALO ALTO RUNNER

DEAR RUNNER: Fair exchange. Here's a message to joggers and runners from a motorist:

DEAR ABBY: This evening I came so close to hitting a jogger, my heart is still pounding. In the first place, this idiot was jogging on a dark street at about 11 p.m. He was wearing a black sweatshirt with a hood, and nowhere did he have any reflectors or luminous tape. You can buy that stuff by the yard in any sporting goods shop and sew (or pin) it on your clothing. There are even reflecting shoelaces that light up in the dark.

People that stupid make me sick. Every day nuts like that are killed by innocent motorists, who then have to carry the unearned guilt around the rest of their lives. Print this!

STILL SHAKING IN VEGAS

DEAR ABBY: "Hurt in Albany, Ore." complained because her husband never remembered her with a gift on special occasions.

Being remembered on special occasions is no big deal; I'm not even sure it's being "remembered"—it could be a knee-jerk reaction to all the hype and advertising the merchants have built into commercializing special days.

Remember Mother on her day! Remember Dad on his day! Do your Christmas shopping early! Take the family out for Thanksgiving! Don't forget your sweetheart on Valentine's Day!

Receiving a spontaneous gift from my husband for no special occasion is much more meaningful than a gift he bought because he felt pressured to buy me "something" for a "special" occasion.

EASY TO PLEASE IN N.C.

DEAR EASY: You took the words right out of my typewriter. For years we've had a favorite saying around our house: "Every day we're together and healthy is Thanksgiving. And every night is New Year's Eve."

DEAR ABBY: One more letter about cowboys, please? Old cowboys never die—they just smell that way. (It's called "Corral No. 5.")

Editor's note: The following family history is an excerpt from the Gray County history book to be published in time for the Texas sesquicentennial celebration in 1986.

HUGHES, DICK AND RUBY LEE
Beneath the exterior of a crusty, driving executive, Richard George Hughes (1905-1969) was a shy, often uncertain dreamer who had liked drama at West Texas State University and considered the pulpit. A tornado in Oklahoma Territory had wiped out his father, Richard Cecil Hughes (c. 1884-1905) and his clan and saved his pregnant mother by hurling her into the branches of a tree. Claudia Gaddy Hughes found relatives in Texas and gave birth to Dick Hughes in a dugout near White Deer on Nov. 24, 1905.

Newly married to Ruby Lee Bennett Hughes (1904-), Dick moved to Pampa in 1927 from White Deer, where he had grown up in the home of his mother and her second husband, Will Brady, and their children, Marjorie, Lou and Ray.

The Hughes Insurance Service prospered in the boom days of the late '20s, then stagnated in the bleak years of the depression. Just before World War II, Dick turned to home building, first on a small scale, then on a large scale as defense industries and installations moved into the area; he said he had to work 18-hour days to assuage the guilt of being ineligible for active duty.

In the next 30 years, Hughes companies built thousands of homes in Pampa, Borger, Wichita Falls, Fort Worth, Albuquerque, Bartlesville and elsewhere. The family recalls a celebration for the 12,000th house completed; there were many more.

100 hour weeks. The couple had been married 42 very eventful years. Ruby Lee, "Bee" to her friends, claims she was unimpressed by the austere Panhandle Plains and the demands of a driving husband, who was often working Dick had three children, Richard Bennett (1929-), Robert Lynn (1931-) and Carol (1937-). Just as often, she has written of family, her mother Margaret or "Maggie" (d. 1939), a practical Baptist, and her father, Madison or "Matt" (1863-1927), a gentle Presbyterian merchant and educator and of her six sisters and one brother.

She remembers tales of her grandfather, once a Confederate chaplain at the siege of Vicksburg (1863). She recalls a childhood thrill of seeing Colonel Charles Goodnight, already a legend, racing a buckboard through the streets of Goodnight, Texas. She tells of Clarendon, where she grew up, met Dick Hughes, and gave birth to their first child in a medical facility owned by the JA ranch.

The day in 1927 when Dick and Ruby Lee moved to Pampa, a bank was robbed. In a later year when Dick chaired a grand jury to investigate a local gang, he called in plainclothes Texas Rangers to save the town — and his own threatened life. Remembering this unpromising frontier Pampa, Dick and Ruby Lee took pleasure in houses built, businesses recruited, the progress of education and culture, increasing population and prosperity. They thought the Hughes Building met particular community needs. In 1960 they moved reluctantly to Fort Worth to be near banks and air terminals. Their debt to Pampa was deeply felt. Wherever they traveled and lived, Pampa was home.

Family Histories

Leadership roles in the Texas and national home building industry climaxed in the presidency of the National Association of Home Builders in 1954, one of several years of endless travel, speeches, and lobbying.

Dick advised Presidents, turned down a cabinet post, crusaded for minority housing, and was installed in the select company of the Housing Hall of Fame. He believed passionately that every American family should own a home, that ownership made happier citizens and a more stable society. He pioneered residential air conditioning as a must for the Sunbelt. He presided for years over the Texas Board of Plumbing Examiners and appreciated the irony that Mr. Homebuilder couldn't drive a nail or fix a faucet. He wanted for others what he had achieved for himself — the American Dream.

Ruby Lee presided at the long deathwatch for Dick Hughes which ended June 3, 1969; cancer had wasted the body that often worked late or traveling, leaving her with the household and children. A cripple in childhood, she had retreated to books and imagination, kept diaries, written poetry. She wanted trees and mountains, books and bookish people, a quiet life.

If unvisited, she adapted. She cursed the sandstorms of the Dust Bowl which inflamed the lungs of her second son. She did community work to become Pampa's Woman of the Year. And when the children were gone in the 1950s, she lived in hotels when Dick traveled, keeping him in clean shirts, hosting social affairs, protecting his privacy and health, earning the title of the "Pink Lady" among home builders for her preference in clothes.

Now in retirement, Ruby Lee, a vital octogenarian, lives among the green hills of Lynchburg, Va., and composes prose and poetry, some published.

Always sensitive to a place, she has written stories of the harsh depression years in Pampa, when survival replaced the American Dream, and during which she and

New wing opens

Coronado Nursing Center opened a skilled care wing Wednesday in grand opening ceremonies at the center. The 18-bed wing offers intensive health care for people who do not have to be hospitalized.

"Before the state certified us to provide skilled nursing care, Pampa residents had to go at least 60 miles to receive this type of health care," said Jane Mouhot, administrator of the nursing center. "We are very proud that we were selected to provide this service and to meet an important community need."

In February, the Texas Department of Health licensed Coronado Nursing Center to use 18 of 120 beds for skilled care.

"Now we can provide intensive health care such as giving intravenous fluids, gastrostomy and nasogastric tube feedings, physical and speech therapy," Mouhot said.

The Texas Department of Health requires skilled care facilities to provide supervision and care by licensed nurses at all times. Intermediate level care nursing homes are not required to have licensed nurses on duty from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m.; however, many nursing homes choose to do so.

At Coronado Nursing Center, a registered nurse is on duty every day from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Licensed vocational nurses are present at all other times. Each resident's doctor supervises the care.

Among the professionals available to assist in the care of the residents are Dr. Steven Davis, D.O. house physician; Jim Baker, consultant pharmacist; Lorna Miller, dietician; Nancy Helmer, medical records consultant; Christa Lance, RN, director of nursing; Leda Lyon, RN and Lori Stevenson, RN.

For more information, call 665-5746 or stop by the facility at 1504 W. Kentucky.

Volunteer appreciation party planned

The board of the directors of the Pampa United Way will sponsor an appreciation party Wednesday, May 29, for volunteers and staffs of 18 local health and human services agencies.

The party, presented as a thank-you by the United Way, will be held from 4:30 to 6 p.m. at the Citizens Bank and Trust Co.

The day has been proclaimed

Pampa Volunteer Appreciation Day by Mayor Sherman Cowan.

The party will honor some 1200 volunteers and staff members for the agencies, including the 12 local Pampa United Way agencies, the Coronado Community Hospital auxiliary, the two nursing homes, Good Samaritan Christian Services, Tralee Crisis Center and the Junior Service League.

Prisoners swap confirmed

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A Syrian-backed Palestinian group has agreed to free three Israeli prisoners today in exchange for the release of 1,100 Palestinian and Lebanese prisoners held by Israel, the International Red Cross said today.

Sources in Syria say among those to be freed by Israel is a man convicted in the 1972 massacre of 26 people at Tel Aviv's Lod airport.

Red Cross spokesman Jean-Jacques Kurz said in Geneva that the three Israelis would be exchanged for about 380 Palestinians at Geneva's Cointrin airport today.

"There will be a simultaneous exchange" in the Middle East of the other prisoners, he told about 20 reporters waiting at the airport. He said the exchange would take about six hours.

It was the first official confirmation of persistent unofficial reports from Middle East capitals that the swap would take place.

The Red Cross official identified the three Israeli prisoners as Sgt. Hezi Shai, Pvt. Nissim Salem and Pvt. Yossi Groff. All three were captured after Israel's June 1982 invasion of Lebanon.

The Israeli prisoners will travel to Tel Aviv after the swap, Kurz said. He said one plane load of Palestinians — about 130 — would be flown to Libya but he did not know the destination of the others.

The exchange was to take place on the airport tarmac in an area off-limits to journalists, he said.

The sources in Syria, who all spoke on condition they were not identified, said Israel will release some prisoners at the airport in Geneva, where they will be transferred to Libya. They said

Israel will release others, mostly Palestinians, on its own soil.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafi is scheduled to meet the freed prisoners in Tripoli, the sources said.

Syrian sources told The Associated Press that one of the prisoners slated for release by the Israelis is Kozo Okamoto, 37, who was given a life sentence by an Israeli court on July 17, 1972. He was one of three Japanese in a Red Army squad that opened fire on a crowd at Lod airport, killing 26 people and wounding 72. Among those slain were 16 Puerto Ricans making a pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

The Syrian sources said another prisoner to be freed by Israel is Ziad Abu Ein, who was extradited from the United States to Israel on bombing charges.

Lobbyists spend more than members of Congress earn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lobbyists spent $42 million trying to influence Congress last year — an amount that was down slightly from 1983 but which still exceeded what U.S. taxpayers spent on salaries for their senators and representatives.

The dropoff from $43.3 million in 1983 occurred principally in the final three months of the year, when Congress was virtually shut down while members campaigned for re-election and then got ready for this year's session.

Spending by the cadre of about 6,000 registered lobbyists fell to $8.5 million in the last quarter of 1984 after averaging more than $11.1 million in the previous three quarters.

The fourth quarter outlays were the lowest of any three-month period in the two-year run of the 98th Congress, falling about $5,000 short of the money spent in the first quarter of 1983, when the new Congress was just getting organized.

On a per-member basis, lobbyists for business, trade and ideological groups spent $78,522 trying to get their messages across on Capitol Hill last year. Except for top leaders, members of Congress were paid $72,600 in 1984 — for a total of about $38.9 million.

The bulk of the spending the lobbyists report on forms filed with the House clerk and Senate secretary goes for salaries, office expenses and mass mail campaigns.

According to data published quarterly in the Congressional Record, the biggest spending last year — $2,087,586 — was done by the Natural Gas Supply Association, a consortium of big oil companies pushing for decontrol of natural gas prices.

Common Cause was the most prolific spending lobbying group for 1983, with outlays of $1,955,118. Two other groups reported spending more than $1 million lobbying Congress last year.

Woman named to lead Dallas Jaycees

DALLAS (AP) — The first woman president of the Dallas Jaycees said she has to prove she is as capable as a man of heading the formerly all-male group.

The Dallas Jaycees are part of a national civic organization that barred women from voting privileges until last August.

"I not only need to do a good job," Ms. Kimbrell said, "but also have to show that I am as equal in the post as a man."

She said the Dallas chapter earlier had passed resolutions in support of admitting women, but it had been restricted by national rules.

Ms. Kimbrell was the first female associate member in 1982, founder of the Dallas Jaycee Women and the first full-voting member to join last year. She also was named state director of the Dallas chapter last August.

"Now that women are admitted, more men also are joining," Ms. Kimbrell said. "They are following their wives and girlfriends. It's definitely a better way."

Heavy storms prowl Texas

By The Associated Press

Several severe thunderstorms pushed across North Texas last night and early today, producing large hail, lightning displays, torrential rain and several tornadoes.

The National Weather Service issued a series of severe thunderstorm warnings through the early morning hours, beginning with the Dallas-Fort Worth area and moving to the east and southeast.

By daybreak, heavy storms were still in force in East Texas and north of the Dallas - Fort Worth area.

The storms actually began in West Texas about mid-afternoon Sunday and began their easterly trek. Heavy rains were unleashed, with up to four feet of water reported across highways southwest of San Angelo. Heavy rain also flooded highways west of Abilene.

A late Sunday afternoon thunderstorm in North Central Texas spawned a tornado that was spotted west of Olney. A twister blew over a trailer home and damaged two other homes near Megargel, 10 miles west of Olney, about 10:25 p.m.

During the early evening, a thunderstorm in West Texas produced a tornado in northern Coke County, about 25 miles north of San Angelo. Hail the size of golf balls fell at Mertzon, 25 miles southwest of San Angelo.

Quanah, in Hardeman County about 60 miles west of Wichita Falls, reported marble-size hail and strong winds at 6:20 p.m. that caused roof damage in the town.

A funnel cloud was reported near Margaret, 20 miles south of Quanah in Foard County, a few minutes later. Shortly before 8 p.m., two tornadoes were confirmed in open country in northwestern Foard County.

Authorities in Foard County, whose seat is Crowell, reported golf ball-size hail along a seven-mile-wide swath through the central part of the county.

Winds were clocked at 63 mph at Seymour and at Lake Kemp, between Seymour and Wichita Falls, while two inches of rain fell in an hour at Lake Arrowhead, just southwest of Wichita Falls.

Golf ball-size hail was reported as the storm went through Azle, northwest of Fort Worth, and again about 1 a.m.

Pawn shop doubles as unique wedding chapel

HOUSTON (AP) — Four months ago, Ted Kipperman decided to diversify his pawn shop. So he converted a tool room in the southeast Houston business into a one-stop wedding chapel.

Kipperman, 56, says his is the only pawn shop-wedding chapel around.

"I think this chapel will become a tourist attraction," he told The Houston Post. "It's unusual and more fun than anything else. It's a place where couples can walk in sad and walk out glad."

Tucked away behind the rows of appliances, jewelry cases and television sets is a white wrought-iron arch capped with a sign reading, "Wedding Chapel."

"The painter who made that sign swears to me he didn't misspell chapel," said Kipperman, who is president of the American Pawn Brokers Association. "He tells me chapel is how it's spelled in Old English. I'll have to check on that."

The archway leads to the red-carpeted chapel, where higher-priced nuptials are performed — and videotaped — in front of a Niagra Falls mural.

Weddings start at $25, but for $250 a couple can have the deluxe ceremony, which includes use of the chapel, flowers, music, photographs, the chaplain's fee and a videotape.

Couples must have a Harris County wedding license, and no appointments are necessary.

Kipperman has plans to expand his services by offering an artificial three-tier wedding cake as a prop for wedding pictures and installing a refrigerator so he can sell fresh flowers, as well as artificial ones.

"A little wedding chapel like this is designed for people who don't have much money and want a fast wedding," said Kipperman. "I think I could get them in and out of here in 10-15 minutes."

Kipperman, a pawn broker for 25 years, also says he may start offering a post-nuptial service.

"If too many of those marriages do not work out," he says, "I plan to get a lawyer on the other end of this chapel and offer discount divorces."

Kipperman recently married one happy couple who were going to pawn jewelry so they could buy a wedding ring from him. But the pawn broker decided to lend them the ring for the ceremony and then locked it away until they could pay for it.

Holmes fighting Williams, but he's chasing Marciano

Williams yells at Holmes...

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes will continue his chase of Rocky Marciano's record tonight when he fights Carl "The Truth" Williams.

"It ain't my last fight; I might as well break the record," said Holmes, who had said that his fight against David Bey last March 15, which he won in the 10th round, would be his last.

A victory for the 35-year-old Holmes, who is a 6½-1 favorite, would give him a 48-0 record. Marciano, the only heavyweight champion never to have a lost a fight, was 49-0 when he retired at age 33 in 1956.

"He's looking at me as No. 48," said Williams, the 25-year-old challenger for the International Boxing Federation title. "What about me? I'm 16-0 (with 12 knockouts). I've got a record to protect myself."

The scheduled 15-round bout at the 12,100-seat Lawlor Events Center, which will be televised by NBC at about 6:50 p.m. PDT, will be the first heavyweight title bout in Reno since the legendary Jack Johnson-James J. Jeffries fight July 4, 1910.

That fight was at the height of the "White Hope Era," with Jeffries, who had retired as an unbeaten champion, called back by white public opinion to try to take the title from Johnson. Johnson won on a 15-round knockout.

Johnson was the one-and-only world heavyweight champion. Holmes has to share title recognition with Pinklon Thomas, the champion in the eyes of the World Boxing Council, and Tony Tubbs, who is considered champion by the World Boxing Association.

Holmes was WBC champion from June 9, 1978, when he outpointed Ken Norton, until he relinquished the title in December, 1983, rather than make a mandatory defense against Greg Page for promoter Don King. Holmes wanted more money than was offered.

But Holmes is generally considered the premier heavyweight in the world. Holmes agrees with that assessment.

When it was mentioned to him that King, who has contracts with Thomas and Tubbs, wanted to unify the title, Holmes said:

"I am the only champion. You cannot unify the title where there is only one title, and that's the IBF title, which is held by me."

Denver digs a deeper hole

DENVER (AP) — As if taking on the perennial Western Conference champion Los Angeles Lakers with your point guard coming off knee surgery wasn't bad enough, the Denver Nuggets have really dug themselves a hole now.

Down 3-1 in the best-of-seven playoff series and facing elimination in Los Angeles in Game 5 Wednesday night, the Nuggets must regroup without their leading scorer, forward Alex English.

English, who averaged 30.4 points per game in the Nuggets' previous 13 playoff games, is through for the season after suffering a broken thumb on his shooting hand in Sunday's 120-116 National Basketball Association loss here.

Nuggets' team physicians said the thumb was fractured in at least two places in a collision midway through the third quarter, and English was to undergo surgery to repair the digit.

It was the latest in a series of injuries for a Denver team that has repeatedly come off the floor this season with gutty performances. Starting forward Calvin Natt has knee; it has prevented him from practicing, and he will have surgery after the season. Center Wayne Cooper has a strained rib ligament that makes breathing difficult. Backup guard Mike Evans has a sore knee that will be X-rayed after the season. Point guard Fat Lever had arthroscopic surgery on his left knee and has only just begun to return to action. Dan Issel suffered a thigh bruise Sunday that could sideline him in Game 5.

But English's thumb, which had already been bandaged for several weeks because of a strained muscle, may be the coup de grace. "You can't lose a player like Alex and not be in some kind of trouble," said Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Abdul-Jabbar and forward James Worthy sparked the Lakers in the fourth quarter Sunday. Abdul-Jabbar, who led all scorers with 29 points, controlled the boards and handed out four assists in the final period to help LA build a 110-102 lead with 5:35 left. Worthy was the recipient of three of those feeds underneath, the final one coming on a slam dunk.

But the Nuggets battled back. "I looked around to see who we had left, and Calvin was still there," said guard Mike Evans. "When we heard Alex was hurt, it made us dig a little deeper."

Natt scored eight straight Denver points and Elston Turner and Mike Evans hit back-to-back three-pointers. Evans' basket made it 116-116 with 1:01 remaining. Worthy's tip-in basket — his 11th point of the quarter — with 20 seconds remaining proved to be the clincher, giving LA a 118-116 lead. And, after a Denver turnover, Byron Scott tacked on two free throws with five seconds to go.

But the Nuggets battled back. "I looked around to see who we had left, and Calvin was still there," said guard Mike Evans. "When we heard Alex was hurt, it made us dig a little deeper."

76ers need another miracle

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Victory in Game 4 only kept the Philadelphia 76ers alive. If there is to be any miracle comeback in their playoff against the Celtics, it will begin happening Wednesday night in Boston.

The 76ers never trailed Sunday in beating the Celtics 115-104 to close the gap in their best-of-7 National Basketball Association series to 3-1, but in their hearts, they knew it only meant they avoided being swept for the first time in franchise history.

"We're pleased with winning, but disappointed we're in this position," 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said. "But anything can happen, especially injuries, to turn things around. I don't think we've played to our capabilities, but if we can go to Boston Wednesday and win, this will be a seven-game series."

"Victory is sweet, especially after not winning three ballgames," said forward Julius Erving, who continued his horrendous shooting slump but still found other ways to help the 76ers win. "Being down 3-0 was a new experience for us and I didn't know how we'd react. Maybe we've latched on to some things that can get us back in it."

Like Cunningham, Erving was hesitant to discuss the series beyond the fourth and fifth games. "I don't want to think too much about the whole thing yet," he said.

Pressed further, however, he admitted, "I believe in miracles. There have been plenty of them through the ages. I'd like to be part of history, part of the first team to come back from a 3-0 deficit."

Error difference in hitting barrage

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer

After 20 runs and 34 hits had resulted in an even split, the Milwaukee Brewers and Kansas City Royals might have expected the game to turn on one error.

That logic was borne out Sunday as the 35th hit, a single by Milwaukee's Charlie Moore in the bottom of the ninth inning, combined with a fielding error by Kansas City's Willie Wilson to bring Paul Molitor all the way around from first base and end an 11-10 game.

Before the last play tilted the scales, each team had 10 runs, 17 hits, one error, four doubles, one triple and a homer. But Moore's line single skipped past the hard-charging Wilson on the bounce and Molitor didn't look back again.

"When I saw the ball go up the middle and Wilson coming in, I was thinking about stopping at second," Molitor said. "On a hit like that I would only have a 50-50 chance of getting to third, and I didn't want to take the chance."

"But as soon as I saw the ball go past Wilson, I didn't stop. (Third base coach) Tony Muser waved me on around."

Moore, Robin Yount and Ben Oglivie had three hits each for the Brewers; Yount had three RBI, one on his fourth homer of the season. Darryl Motley had a double and a two-run homer for Kansas City.

Elsewhere around the American League, Cleveland nipped Boston 2-1, Baltimore edged Seattle 2-1, Minnesota outscored Toronto 8-2, Chicago bopped Texas 5-1, California beat New York 4-1 and Oakland downed Detroit 9-7.

Indians 2, Red Sox 1
Joe Carter bounced a single over third baseman Wade Boggs' head with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning, snapping a 1-1 tie and giving reliever Rich Thompson his first major-league victory. Brook Jacoby singled with one out in the ninth against Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 4-3. Otis Nixon ran for Jacoby, moved to third on Mike Hargrove's single to right and scored on Carter's single.

Orioles 2, Mariners 1
Cal Ripken's sacrifice fly broke an eighth-inning tie to back Dennis Martinez's seven-hit pitching.

Rich Dauer's stop of a smash by Phil Bradley with Jack Perconte at third base, the infield in, and one out in the bottom of the eighth foiled Seattle's attempt to retie the game.

Twins 8, Blue Jays 2
Pete Filson pitched 7 2-3 innings of three-hit relief, earning himself a start. "He's had two good outings back-to-back," Twins Manager Billy Gardner said. "He changes speeds and comes after hitters. He's going to be the fifth starter."

Tom Brunansky and Tim Lincecum each homered and drove in two runs.

White Sox 5, Rangers 1
Darryl Boston hit his first major league home run in the seventh inning to break a tie and Greg Walker added a three-run shot in the eighth to break the game open. Boston's homer broke an 0-for-17 slump.

Angels 4, Yankees 1
Two-run homers by Brian Downing and Ruppert Jones backed the combined six-hit pitching of Jim Slaton and Donnie Moore.

A's 9, Tigers 7
Doubles by Bruce Bochte and Dave Kingman triggered a five-run fourth inning and were the only two of Oakland's 12 hits that went for extra bases. The A's took a 9-3 lead and held on from there.

The winner, Chris Codiroli, is 5-1.

Shorter fences boost for Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Moving in the fences at the Astrodome has moved the Houston Astros' power statistics up significantly in the last two weeks.

In the off season, Houston management shortened the distances by 10 feet down each line and 12 feet in the power alleys to increase the power production in the spacious dome.

The Astros have left their mark on the National League by hitting 18 home runs in their last 18 games, including three round-trippers in Sunday's 7-3 win over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Enos Cabell, Alan Ashby and Jim Pankovits each hit solo shots as the Astros won the weekend series over the Cardinals two games to one.

Houston, 20-16, has won eight of its last 12 games while the 16-19 Cardinals went 5-5 on their just concluded 10-game road trip.

The Astros, however, only collected five homers in their first 17 games this season.

"When you look at our record on home run production, we're near the top on the road," said Houston manager Bob Lillis. "And now with the fences a reasonable distance here, we can get some more here."

Cabell slashed his first homer of the year into right field in the first inning, and reserve infielder Pankovits hit an opposite field home run in the seventh inning over the right center field wall for his second home run in his brief two-year major league career.

Pankovits went 4-for-5 to improve his limited duty average to .391.

Houston winner Ron Mathis, 3-1, worked six innings giving up five hits and three runs and reliever Bill Dawley wrapped up the final three innings for his second save.

Mathis and Pankovits each came to the major leagues the hard way, laboring five and eight years respectively in Houston's minor league chain.

"I hope this opens some eyes and I'll get some more opportunities," Pankovits said. "I'm definitely not a home run hitter, I'm a line drive hitter and I felt real confident up here."

Mathis, also a realist, said "as long as I'm helping the team I feel good. I don't feel I'm a catalyst like Nolan Ryan and Joe Niekro. The key is what I do with my starts. It's a lot easier to pitch when we're swinging the bat they way we are."

Ashby chipped in his second homer of the year, and Craig Reynolds contributed a two-run single at the expense of St. Louis loser John Tudor, 1-6.

"My middle state is bad and its getting worse," a despondent Tudor said. "I made bad pitches to Reynolds and Ashby."

Arkansas track team wins SWC title

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas' Roddie Haley said he knew he ran a fast race in the finals of the 400-meters at the Southwest Conference track and field championships, but he had no idea it was the fastest in the world this year.

"It felt fast; it felt like the fastest race I've ever run," Haley said after winning the finals of the 400 Saturday. "but I thought it was more like a 45.1."

Haley ran the fastest 400 by a SWC athlete, 44.67, and the fifth-fastest 400 by a college runner. His run erases the SWC meet record of 44.86 set by Zeke Jefferson of Baylor in 1981.

Arkansas won its fourth straight SWC outdoor title with a scoring barrage led by Haley and Olympic silver medalist Mike Conley. Arkansas piled up 167 points to Texas' 80, Houston's 75, Baylor's 60, Texas A&M's 48, SMU's 44, Rice's 43, Texas Tech's 33 and TCU's 32.

Conley set meet records in the triple jump and long jump, two of 18 new SWC marks established in the competition. He finished second in the 200-meter dash and ran the third leg of Arkansas' winning 400 relay team Saturday.

Texas' Julie Cuthbert helped the Longhorn women to their first track and field title by running a leg on the winning 1,500 and 400 relay teams and setting records in the 100 and 200. Texas took the women's title with 182 points, followed by Houston with 173, Rice 90, Arkansas 55, TCU 34, Texas Tech 14 and Baylor 10. Texas A&M did not score.

Conley leaped 56-3/4 on his first try in the triple jump, beating the meet record of 56-2 3/4 set by Keith Conner of SMU in 1982. Conley had said Friday he probably couldn't surpass the American triple jump record after running the relay and the 200.

"That was the furthest opening jump of my career," Conley said. He fell trying to nip Houston's Kirk Baptiste in the 200. "There was no way I was going to triple jump anything good after that 200," he said.

Baptiste's 20.18 in the 200 — short of his SWC meet record of 20.16 set in 1984 — went along with his other victory — a 10.14 in the 100. He breezed in the 100, he said.

"Oh, sure, I won it!" Baptiste said. "I pretty much knew I had it all along."

With Conley speeding through the turn on the third leg, Arkansas took the 4x100 in 38.81, a meet record and the fastest 400 relay in the United States in 1985.

Arkansas ran the 4x100 without a true sprinter, lowering the meet record of 39.38 set by Baylor in 1981.

Baylor's Todd Cooper and David Hodge each jumped 18-3 1/2 in the pole vault, a meet record. Cooper won the event on fewer misses.

Arkansas' Paul Donovan said his meet-record 3:40.31 in the 1,500, which broke the record of 3:42.53 set by Todd Harbour of Baylor in 1978, was smooth.

Corey Pavin burns field at Colonial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — With the finesse and daring of a cat burglar, he seduced one of golf's grand old dames and escaped with the crown jewels and the Colonial National Invitation championship.

He led from start to finish, coolly gunned down a handful of minor challengers, scuttled the tournament record and when they asked him Sunday how he felt, young Corey Pavin said:

"Massive relief."

Massive relief, indeed.

Tournament fathers should be relieved he didn't torch the clubhouse as he fled town with a trophy, a plaid jacket, $90,000 and the only records that count.

"To win the Colonial is something I will cherish for the rest of my life," said Pavin, 25, after firing a closing 2-under-par 68 to win his second PGA title by four strokes over runner-up Bob Murphy.

He called it a "dream tournament."

The slender Los Angeles pro carded rounds of 66, 64, 68 and 68 and his 14-under-par 266 beat Lee Trevino's tournament record by two shots on a course made famous by Ben Hogan, who won the Colonial five times but never with a score better than 279.

That's a 13-shot swing, Bubba. "This is definitely the best I have ever played," said Pavin, whose only previous victory in two years on the American tour came last year at Houston.

However, he spent a fruitful 1983 winning the South African PGA, the German Open and the Calberson Classic in France.

The triumph hiked his 1985 earnings to $205,385, making him No. 8 on the money list, and did wonders for his confidence.

"It's a feeling I want to hang on to," he said.

Pavin started the final round with a 5-stroke cushion over Murphy, Bill Glasson and Scott Hoch and no one but Murphy, Hoch and Mark O'Meara ever got within three strokes of the lead.

O'Meara birdied the first four holes to go 9 under par but bogeys at the fifth and sixth holes ended his romance with victory. Hoch bogeyed the same two holes to squelch his bid.

Murphy, on the other hand, never mounted a serious threat, but did keep a subtle pressure on with a 33 on the front side and never succumbed to a bogey.

"I saw Mark's name pop up on the leader board and I knew he had birdied a few holes," Pavin said.

Razorbacks finally win baseball crown

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — The Arkansas Razorbacks, after eight unsuccessful tries, have finally won a Southwest Conference baseball championship.

The perennial runnerup Razorbacks hung on for a 10-6 win over Texas Sunday night before a record 3,480 fans to go undefeated through the double-elimination tournament and claim the title. The Razorbacks also earned the league's automatic berth in the NCAA tournament.

Earlier Sunday, Texas scored in each of the first five innings to eliminate Houston, 14-6, to advance.

Arkansas is the only team to qualify for all nine SWC post-season tournaments, but reached the finals through the winners' bracket for the first time. The Razorbacks never had won two straight to open the tournament, and never had won the championship.

The 11th-ranked Razorbacks raised their record to 45-13, including a 35-5 record at home.

Arkansas banged out 11 hits and had a tournament-record 12 walks off Texas starter Daniel Pena (6-4) and relievers Curt Krippner and Lanny Hengst.

The top-ranked Horns, already assured of a host spot in the Central Regional even before the SWC Tournament began, fell to 56-12 for the year.

Relying on their formula that got them this far, the 11th-ranked Hogs (45-13) scored runs and held the opponent at bay.

Howard Hilton (6-1), a senior right-hander from Oxnard, Calif., had a 1-0 SWC record with an 11.25 ERA, but he beat ninth-ranked Oral Roberts a week ago. Against Texas, he yielded eight hits and five runs in only his third start of the season but generally kept the Horns at bay.

In losing to Arkansas for the fourth time in five meetings this season — all here — and the first time ever in five finals, Texas enters this week's regional after suffering two defeats in its last three games. Even though the Hogs hold a big edge in head-to-head meetings, Texas has outscored Arkansas, 30-29.

Arkansas jumped on Pena for seven runs, five of them earned, in his 3-2-3 innings although the sophomore left-hander from Bay City had not started a game since April 9 and had thrown just 21 innings in the last 40 days.

Recovering from tendinitis, Pena actually had a creditable performance. He lost in a three-hitter to Arkansas in the second SWC game of the season but had trouble controlling his breaking stuff Sunday.

For the second straight night, Arkansas scored two runs in the first, this time on Jeff King's RBI double and a wild pitch. Texas trimmed it to 2-1 in the third on Byers' first double and Bill Bates' run-scoring infield single.

Loggins' two-run single off Krippner keyed the four-run fifth although another Pena wild pitch scored a run as did Doyle Wilson's scratch single through the right side.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Actress and fitness guru Jane Fonda says exercise instructors should avoid encouraging "the cult of thinness" and help their students accept their imperfections.

"We cannot constantly discuss eating and dieting and skininess with our students," Miss Fonda told more than 1,300 aerobic exercise instructors attending a convention Saturday.

Miss Fonda, 47, who owns a chain of aerobic dance centers and has a best-selling aerobic-dance video tape and exercise book, also denied promoting an exercise philosophy of "no pain, no gain."

"My motto is, 'Go for the burn,'" she said, referring to the burning sensation in muscles after strenuous exercise.

NEW YORK (AP) — Archbishop John J. O'Connor says he would be disappointed if he is changed by his new status as cardinal, an office he officially takes this week.

"The same fellow will be shaving me who has been shaving me for every day for all my life," O'Connor, 64, said Sunday as he boarded a flight for Rome, where Pope John Paul II will confer the office on him and Archbishop Bernard Law of Boston.

"With all the hats I wear, I don't expect to feel any change," he said. However, "you have to feel a little bit trepidatious, little bit hesitant," on becoming a cardinal, he said.

O'Connor and Law are the only two Americans among 28 new cardinals who will formally don their red caps at a Vatican ceremony on Saturday, raising the number holding the office to 152.

NEW YORK (AP) — Feminist author Susan Brownmiller says she is afraid Cathleen Crowell Webb's recantation of her rape charges against Gary Dotson will hurt the credibility of other women who are raped.

"I worry a great deal that, for the next six months or the next year, women who report a rape will be viewed with more suspicion than they were last year," said Ms. Brownmiller, 50, author of "Against Our Will: Men, Women and Rape."

"One of the myths that we had to counter at the beginning of the '70s was that women tend to lie," she said, that "they falsely accuse men; they have hysterical fantasies; they shouldn't be believed."

Studies indicate that rape is falsely reported no more than other felonious crimes, she said in an interview televised Sunday on the Independent Network News program "The Editor's Desk."

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter and his wife, Rosalyn, joined Willie Nelson and about 7,000 toe-tapping country music fans in a 100th birthday celebration for the town that was once the White House away from Washington.

The Carters sat on stage in their hometown with Nelson as the bearded singer belted out the songs that made him one of the nation's top Country and Western singers.

When Nelson launched into his rendition of "Georgia on My Mind," the crowd roared enthusiastically and many shoved their fists into the air.

Earlier in the day, The Carters greeted well-wishers while serving as grand marshals in a parade honoring the birthday of the rural community that gained world-wide attention during his presidency.

Organizers said up to 30,000 people are expected in Plains during the town's three-day celebration.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

Group threatened to burn neighborhood, Goode says

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The police raid on MOVE headquarters, called by one congressman the "most violent eviction notice" ever, came after the radical group threatened to burn up the neighborhood and themselves, Mayor W. Wilson Goode says.

The assault and the fire that followed last week left 11 people dead and destroyed or seriously damaged 61 houses. Goode on Sunday released a letter signed by a MOVE leader in which the group threatened to fight police with "smoke, gas, fire and bullets."

Meanwhile, the search of the rubble of the MOVE rowhouse for more bodies and weapons appeared near an end, and demolition of what remained of the 53 destroyed houses was slated to begin today.

The city also planned to begin giving each affected family a $2,500 cash advance today against the eventual settlement of their claim. The fire left 270 people homeless.

The operation that led to the fire was "the most violent eviction notice that's ever been given in history," said U.S. Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., chairman of the House Subcommittee on Criminal Justice. Conyers is scheduled to arrive in America's fifth-largest city today to meet the mayor and discuss the police tactics.

"We (the black community) are totally outraged," Conyers said Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation" program with Goode and Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl Gates.

Conyers said his panel would investigate the incident because of what he called constitutional questions.

"The group was bent on absolute destruction," the mayor said in releasing a hand-printed, four-page letter signed by Ramona Africa, who called herself MOVE's minister of communication.

In the letter, she threatened that any effort to force the self-styled revolutionary group from its fortified rowhouse in west Philadelphia would "be a mess."

"We gone burn 'em (with) smoke, gas, fire and bullets," the letter said. "Before we let you ... make an example of us, we will burn this ... house down and burn you up with us."

"It's gone be a mess. If MOVE go down, not only will everybody in this block go down, the knee joints of America will break and the body of America will soon fall and we mean it," the letter read.

Ms. Africa was the only known adult member of MOVE to survive the firestorm. A 13-year-old boy, Birdie Africa, also survived the fire.

Goode said his release of the letter was not intended as evidence that MOVE started the fire.

Police Commissioner Gregore Sambor has said he believed MOVE members may have "started or assisted" the fire because of what he said was a 15-minute delay between the dropping of the bomb on the roof by police and the sighting of the first flames.

30 killed in West Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem militiamen and Palestinian guerrillas fought fierce street battles in west Beirut today. Police said at least 30 people were killed and more than 80 wounded.

A hospital and a nursing home reportedly were hit by shellfire during the fighting, which took place on the first day of Ramadan, the Moslem holy month of fasting. The Palestinians are overwhelmingly Moslem.

Hospitals issued urgent radio appeals for blood donations. Ambulances with sirens wailing ran a gauntlet of shellfire in the Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital to carry casualties to hospitals.

Police described the fighting as "the heaviest armed collision ever" between Amal, the dominant Shiite militia, and the Palestinians.

The fighting was heaviest in the refugee camps of Sabra, Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh. Sabra and Chatilla, where hundreds of Palestinians and Lebanese Moslems were massacred by Christian militiamen in 1982, are in west Beirut. Bourj el-Barajneh is located on the city's southern edge near the airport.

A home for the aged was hit by shellfire in Sabra. The police statement said inmates were safely evacuated to bomb shelters.

A shell crashed into the fourth floor of Makassed Hospital in the Tarik Jedida neighborhood. Another salvo set a fire in an apartment building block near the Gaza Hospital in the Chatilla Palestinian refugee camp, the statement said. It did not elaborate.

Pope calls for 'noble war' against social injustice

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Pope John Paul II has called for a "noble war" against social injustice and condemned racism, totalitarian regimes and profit-dominated economic systems.

The pontiff made the comments to Christian trade union members in Belgium on Sunday.

Today, the next to the last day of his 11-day tour of the Netherlands, Luxembourg and Belgium, the pope says Mass before a crowd of 500 in a small Brussels church for artists, then meets with government officials and later with officials at the headquarters of the Common Market.

"A noble war should be waged for social justice," he told several thousand workers Sunday. "Let us unceasingly read the Gospel ... To wage an original war against whatever enslaves mankind."

He cited the need for "solidarity" among workers worldwide in the fight against injustice.

"No to the scandal of unemployment which deprives workers of their major right, the right of all to earn their daily bread by work," John Paul went on. "No to all kinds of totalitarian systems, whether imposed by nations, by the power of money or by ideologies. No to racism and xenophobia." Xenophobia is the fear or hatred of foreigners.

In his address to the Christian trade union movement, the largest in this overwhelmingly Roman Catholic nation of 10 million, he also said, "You are aware of the dangers of a national and international economy which is only concerned with profit."

John Paul has frequently called employment a basic human right, and condemned discrimination based on sex, religion, race and national origin as a violation of fundamental rights.

Earlier Sunday, at an outdoor Mass attended by 100,000, the pope reiterated the Roman Catholic church's strict teachings on sex and marriage, saying those positions wouldn't change to suit "contemporary states of mind."

During a stop in Luxembourg last Wednesday, John Paul called on the European Community, also known as the Common Market, to donate more surplus food to famine-plagued areas, including Africa.

Chinese riot after soccer match

PEKING (AP) — At least 10,000 screaming fans ran through the streets of Peking, hurling bottles, smashing windows and spitting on foreigners after their soccer team lost to Hong Kong, witnesses said.

Chinese newspapers today decried the Sunday night riot, put down by three truckloads of unarmed police, but said only a small number of "black sheep" were involved.

Today's reports did not mention injuries or attacks on foreigners.

"A small number of black sheep seriously violated order on the playing field and should be seriously dealt with," the Peking Daily (Beijing Ribao) said.

Reporters who witnessed the melee said the fans lobbed bottles and garbage at the Hong Kong team, forcing officials to usher the victors into a VIP lounge for an hour. Flying glass injured one Hong Kong player.

Outside the stadium, foreign witnesses said youths spit at them and smashed car windows with rocks. Roads adjoining the 80,000-seat Workers' Stadium today sparkled with shattered glass.

A Hong Kong Chinese reporter covering the game said he was frightened to leave the stadium until the fracas was over.

The British colony's squad won 2-1, knocking China out of the East Asian zone qualifying round for the World Cup, to be played in Mexico next year.

Were rights of elderly ignored in doctor's nursing home drug tests?

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It was intended as a simple comparison test of two drugs already prescribed for the elderly, to determine which might have more effect on people suffering from Alzheimer's disease.

When it ended a year later, at the demand of the Food and Drug Administration, 12 of the 47 elderly nursing home residents who participated were dead. The FDA determined, however, that the deaths were not related to the drugs.

The record of the study was a tangle of misleading or improperly signed consent forms, missing documents and lack of oversight.

And the FDA said the doctor in charge "repeatedly or deliberately violated regulations pertaining to the proper conduct of a clinical study."

The study at the Chester Extended Care Center in Chester, Pa., in 1978-79 was one of eight case studies released last week by the National Council of Senior Citizens as examples of abuse of elderly nursing home residents in drug testing. A House subcommittee chairman already has announced plans for congressional hearings on the council's report.

The cases involved different drugs, different states, different doctors. But, said the council, they all contained a common thread: a lack of respect for the rights of the elderly to be informed of tests and to be given the chance to accept or decline the risks.

The report cited affidavits by nurses in another Pennsylvania case that they had guided the hands of senile, confused patients in making an 'X' on consent forms. Others told of patients who neither spoke nor read English being marked as understanding and accepting technical medical explanations.

In Minnesota, an elderly woman who refused to take part in a study was fed an experimental drug in her applesauce. In Arizona, an elderly man had an experimental drug slipped into his ice cream.

The Chester case was upsetting, said council investigator Benjamin Gordon, because the FDA, despite its strong language, ultimately took no action against the doctor in charge. The FDA instead accepted a promise that regulations would be followed in the future.

But the physician involved said he carries "very bitter memories" of three years of trying to clear his reputation. He said the FDA, while focusing on the deaths in the study, seldom mentions that the people involved were old and sick before the study and that the deaths were not linked to the drug investigation.

Federal reserve lowers loan rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board is lowering its lending rate today to banks and other financial institutions to 7.5 percent, the lowest level in more than six years, in an attempt to stimulate a sluggish economy.

Minutes after the Fed's announcement on Friday, Citibank in New York, the nation's second largest commercial bank, lowered its prime lending rate to 10 percent from 10.5 percent. Chase Manhattan Bank, the third largest bank, soon followed suit.

Others may follow this week. The prime rate reduction had been initiated on Wednesday by eighth-ranked Bankers Trust Co. in New York. It stood alone for two days.

The one-half percentage point drop in the discount rate — the interest it charges for loans to banks — was expected by many analysts to accelerate a trend toward lower interest rates throughout the economy.

The U.S. economy turned in an anemic growth rate of 1.3 percent during the first three months of this year, the slowest pace since the end of the last recession.
