Army pounds Croatia

Croatian officials appeal for truce

■ In the fiercest assault yet on the republic, federal army tanks attack to the east and warplanes strike the coast.

By Alan Cowell
N.Y. Times News Service

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia — Federal army tanks battered Croatia's easternmost garrisons with shell fire and warplanes struck its Adriatic coastline on Saturday as the army launched the civil war's broadest and harshest assault against the secessionist republic.

Croatian officials appealed to the military leaders in Belgrade twice for a truce in a conflict that is threatening to escalate beyond control, but there was no public response, suggesting that the federal authorities seemed bent on expanding territorial control in a weakened Croatia.

By midevening, scattered gunfire rippled through the suburbs of Zagreb, the capital of Croatia, close to a surrounded federal army barracks, indicating that the second offer of peace had made little headway.

After a week of humiliating Croatian blockades of federal army barracks in Croatia, the federal army has apparently decided that this is the moment for a major push on several fronts before the army's ability to deploy is overtaken by difficulties in finding new conscripts, uncertain morale, and potential shortages of fuel caused by Croatia's closure of the main oil pipeline from the Adriatic coast to Belgrade.

Witnesses along the Adriatic coast said warplanes and artillery pounded the towns of Sibenik and Split. A frantic radio broadcast from Radio Split to the outside world said: "We are without water and any lights. Our ports, roads, airports are closed off. Call your ministries. Stop the war in Croatia."

Since Croatia declared independence from Yugoslavia in late June, the army and Serbian militias that RANGOON, Burma — Burma has given U.S. officials photographs of the wreckage of a World War II transport plane and the identification tags of three American servicemen, a newspaper reported Saturday. The official Working People's Daily said the photographs were of the wreckage of a U.S. C-47A transport aircraft, two damaged pistols, pieces of an Army first-aid kit, and the dog tags of three soldiers. The newspaper did not give the names on the tags. The newspaper said the wreckage was found by Burmese soldiers in rugged jungle terrain.

NEW YORK — The on-again, off-again, on-again romance of Donald Trump and Marla Maples is off again, a newspaper reports. This is the second breakup for the duo, whose two-year romance has been played out in public ever since Trump split with and divorced his wife, Ivana. After a one-week split in July, Trump gave Maples a 7.45-karat diamond engagement ring. The couple split Friday night at Maples' Manhattan apartment after a shouting match that left Maples in tears, according to the Daily News of New York in a Sunday article.

Man kills nurse, holds 9 hostages

■ Explosive-armed gunman takes over a hospital maternity wing for more than 17 hours.

Associated Press

SANDY, Utah — A man carrying dynamite and two guns shot and killed a nurse and took over a hospital maternity ward Saturday, police said. He gave up more than 17 hours later and freed nine hostages, including a baby born during the standoff.

Police said Richard L. Worthington, a 39-year-old father of eight, said he went to Alta View Hospital to kill a doctor who had operated on his wife two years ago to prevent her from becoming pregnant again.

"During initial negotiations he wanted his wife and the doctor, and he wanted to kill the doctor," said Salt Lake Police

Access open to Dead Sea Scroll photos

N.Y. Times News Service

In a move expected to shatter the wall of secrecy surrounding much research on the Dead Sea Scrolls, a major library in California has disclosed that it has a virtually complete set of photographs of the rare documents from biblical times and has decided to make them available immediately and without restriction to all researchers.

Officials of one of the largest independent libraries in the country, the Huntington Library in San Marino, Calif., decided last week to open the collection of some 3,000 master photographic negatives of the ancient Jewish manuscripts found four decades ago in caves near the Dead Sea. They said they believed that the collection consisted of all of the known scroll texts.

Farmers pray for sunshine

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The late summer rains boosted area rangeland grasses to the delight of ranchers, cowboys and their livestock.

Tall grass, after all, is money in the bank.

But farmers, who are yearning for hot, sunny days to speed up maturity of their cotton bolls, are growing weary of the prolonged rains and the low-level clouds that cool the soil and work against strong cotton production.

As always, they are grateful for the rain, which, as the old saying goes, "is

Costs put squeeze on health care

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

The pulse at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center (still known locally as MMH) is showing signs of weakening.

Despite attempts to gain control of spiraling health-care costs, Memorial, like its counterparts throughout the United States, can only guess about the future.

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, national health-care spending in 1990 totaled 12.2 percent of the country's gross national product — up from 11.9 percent a year earlier.

And the problem isn't about to get better, especially as the population at-large continues to age, and as medicine — particularly the cost of research and development — continues to escalate.

Dismiss for a second the growing millions of people who have no health care or are under-insured; and the millions more who depend on Medicare and Medicaid as means of attaining primary care.

HealthCare in the '90s
CRITICAL CROSSROADS

When it comes to providing the health-care needs of the community, it's the hospital, in the end, that must struggle with the challenges. In most cases, it's a delicate balancing act — one that dictates close scrutiny where cost is a prime concern.

Today's installment focuses on the state of health care and how it's delivered at the local level.

Consider what is occurring in the workplace, where 70 percent of all Americans receive company-paid benefits.

For years, such coverage was considered affordable — often given in lieu of wage increases and/or serving as an incentive for companies to keep workers on the job.

But much changed during the 1970s as health-care costs out-paced inflation; and even more so after Medicare's overhaul in the early 1980s, which placed controls on government reimbursement levels paid to hospitals.

Those factors, combined with skyrocketing insurance premiums, today have placed greater pressure on employers to find new and innovative ways to keep health-care costs down.

Some have shifted that burden back on their employees in the form of increased premiums and/or deductibles, while others have opted to cancel benefits, which they claim are too costly.

It is a situation that is very much out of control.

And, it is a situation that has an increasing number of Americans

Hospital stands as testimony to founders

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

For truly sick residents living in Midland before 1950, health-care options were few and far between.

"It was simple. If you needed hospital care, you went to a larger city," Kenny Jastrow said. "Back then, there just wasn't much around."

Today, Memorial Hospital and Medical Center (still known in the area as MMH) is a testimony to the men and women who were determined to provide local hospital care.

They were the founders, the board of governors who raised the necessary money needed to open the hospital's doors four decades ago.

Jastrow, who serves as president of the board, is proud of what MMH has accomplished over the years — even more proud that Midlanders receive some of the best health care that science and technology has to offer.

'Important' captives may be held until final stage

The World

BAALBEK, Lebanon (AP) — A Shiite Muslim leader with close ties to hostage-takers hinted Saturday the most "important" captives may be held until the final stages of a proposed hostage-for-prisoner swap.

Hussein Musawi also suggested only one of five Israeli servicemen missing in Lebanon may still be alive, and that two German hostages might not be part of a deal to free the Westerners.

The comments were the latest developments in efforts to arrange a comprehensive swap involving the Westerners, missing Israeli servicemen and more than 300 Arab prisoners held by Israel, including Hezbollah cleric Sheik Abdul-Karim Obeid.

Musawi, who heads a pro-Syrian faction in Hezbollah, suggested that because of their value as bargaining chips, American journalist Terry Anderson and Church of England envoy Terry Waite were unlikely to be freed until Obeid's release is negotiated.

Hezbollah is considered to be the parent group for pro-Iranian Shiite factions holding Western hostages.

"To some factions Terry Anderson could be more important than the rest, while to others Terry Waite could be more important," Musawi told The Associated Press. He did not elaborate on their status.

Anderson, 43, is the longest held Westerner. The chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press was kidnapped March 16, 1985, and is held by Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War.

Waite, 52, disappeared in Beirut on Jan. 20, 1987, during an attempt to negotiate with Islamic Jihad for the hostages' freedom. No group has claimed to hold Waite, but hostages freed by Islamic Jihad said they had seen him.

Obeid, 39, was kidnapped by Israeli commandos from south Lebanon in July 1989. His release has been a key demand of the kidnappers for freeing the Western hostages.

Musawi, while applying pressure for an early release of Obeid, suggested that preliminary swaps could continue in the meantime.

Earlier this month, Israel released 51 Lebanese prisoners and the bodies of nine Muslim guerrillas in exchange for the remains of an Israeli soldier killed in Lebanon and confirmation that another missing soldier was dead.

"If Obeid is included in the next batch of prisoners to be released by Israel, that would facilitate the whole effort. But the Israelis say he's a major card and they might keep him in custody until later," Musawi said.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization, one of the hostage-holding factions, said Thursday that Obeid's freedom should not be left until the final stage of any exchange. It also said Israel should release 20 more Arab prisoners to bring about the release of a Western captive.

Musawi dismissed as "mere talk" a statement by Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens that Israel will not free more Lebanese prisoners as a gesture toward a hostage release.

Israel seeks information about its missing servicemen, but Musawi indicated that Israeli Capt. Ron Arad, an Air Force navigator, may be the only one of the MIAs alive.

"I haven't heard anyone saying they're alive, except for the airman. No one said that he was dead. He could be alive," he said.

Arad was captured Oct. 16, 1986, after his Phantom F-4 jet was shot down over south Lebanon. He is believed to be held by a pro-Iranian faction.

Iranians get caught using secret trials

TEHRAN, Iran (NYT) — Nine members of Iran's only internal opposition party have been convicted in secret trials of seeking to undermine the Islamic republic, Iranian officials and human rights organizations say.

The fate of these men, a number of whom are elderly and infirm members of the so-called Freedom Movement, is rapidly becoming intertwined in the struggle between human rights organizations and the government of President Hashemi Rafsanjani over the pace of fundamental reforms in Iran's 12-year-old revolutionary regime, which still engages in secret arrests, trials, and executions ordered by revolutionary courts.

This struggle appears to be coming to a climactic phase as Rafsanjani seeks to end Iran's isolation from the West and from industrial nations whose capital and technology are needed to reconstruct the war-damaged economy.

An envoy of the United Nations Human Rights Commission in Geneva, Reynaldo Galindo Pohl, a Salvadoran, was granted access to Iran for human rights investigations for the first time in January 1990. But despite Iran's pledge to United Nations officials that it was willing to allow Red Cross access to its prisons, where most political executions occur, the terms of such access are still under negotiation a year later.

Last month, as Iranian officials were preparing to hold their own conference on human rights, the Geneva commission issued a special report saying it was "appalled" that the number of officially announced executions in Iran in the first seven months of the year

About 2,000 political prisoners were executed in Iran between July 1988 and January 1989, according to figures compiled by Amnesty International, the London-based human rights organization. The State Department, in its annual report on human rights, asserts that Iran also executes political prisoners under the guise of drug trafficking cases, where executions are common.

Georgian police beat up, injure opposition activists

MOSCOW (AP) — Georgian police beat up opposition activists Saturday, and the republic's embattled president appealed to supporters to defend his government, news reports and witnesses said.

At least two people were seriously injured when police tried to remove about 40 hunger strikers outside the parliament in the Georgian capital, Tbilisi, said Zurab Todua, a spokesman for the Georgian mission in Moscow.

Later, an anti-government protester set himself on fire. The man was hospitalized, but his name was not immediately available.

The Tass news agency, quoting a leader of the opposition National Democratic Party in Georgia, said dissident Irina Sarishvili was among those hospitalized with injuries.

"There were some excesses," Todua acknowledged.

Ms. Sarishvili and her husband, Georgy Chanturia, both leaders of the National Democratic Party, were detained Monday and charged with anti-social action.

She was released Thursday, but Chanturia remains in jail. The hunger strikers were demanding freedom for Chanturia and two other opposition activists detained this week, National Democratic Party members in Tbilisi told The Associated Press in telephone interviews.

One caller, Georgy Kobahidze, said crowds of women surrounded the hunger strikers, berating them for opposing President Zviad Gamsakhurdia, who won an overwhelming victory in Georgia's first direct presidential elections in June.

Police then began beating the hunger strikers, Kobahidze said. Tass said police and people in civilian clothes participated in the attack, but the report did not give details.

Rebels end cease-fire because of Aquino's position

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Communist rebels announced Saturday they were ending their cease-fire because President Corazon Aquino is campaigning to keep U.S. forces in the Philippines.

The Philippines Senate has rejected a new U.S. base agreement, but Mrs. Aquino says she wants to hold a referendum so voters can decide the issue.

A statement by the rebel National Democratic Front said the cease-fire would expire at midnight Sunday (noon EDT) and that the New People's Army would be free to attack "traitorous enemy forces."

The front, an umbrella organization for 14 Marxist groups, announced the truce Sept. 14, four days before the Senate rejected a new 10-year lease for the Subic Bay naval base.

The government never responded to the cease-fire. Instead, it said it would pursue regional peace talks.

Mrs. Aquino has vowed to organize a "people power" referendum to overturn the Senate vote. The referendum has drawn little public enthusiasm, however, and there are widespread doubts about the constitutionality of such a vote.

The United States wants to keep its 7,000 troops in the Subic base.

Activists upset by conservative appointments

HONG KONG (AP) — The government Saturday appointed 17 mostly conservative officials to the law-making Legislative Council, a move criticized by pro-democracy activists as offsetting their gains in elections a week ago.

"They are effectively destroying all the good work done at last Sunday's elections," Martin Lee, chairman of the United Democrats, told reporters.

His party and other pro-democracy organizations won 16 out of the 18 council seats in the first direct elections in 150 years of British colonial rule.

Professional groups have chosen 21 other seats on the 60-seat council, and Gov. Sir David Wilson appointed his 17 seats Saturday. The remaining four members are senior government officials.

Lee had submitted a list of prospective government appointees favored by his party. But Lee said only one name from that list had been chosen by Wilson.

Lee had hoped the election would help speed the pace of democratization in Hong Kong, controlled for decades by British colonialists and local businessmen. His party especially wants changes before the colony returns to Chinese rule in 1997.

Under a current electoral reform plan, one-third of the Legislative Council will be directly elected in 1995. Lee wants that increased to half.

Both the Chinese and Hong Kong governments oppose drastic political reform, saying such a move could disrupt Hong Kong's political and economic stability.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press

RAIN: Wet spell hurts cotton

(From 1A)

money in the bank."

But too much is too much.

"This spell hasn't done cotton any good," said Charlie Wright, manager of the Midland Farmers Cooperative. "If we were (winter) wheat farmers, we would be in hog heaven."

"This is not a good situation for the cotton farmers," Wright said. "This has been a unusually wet summer."

Summer, which began on June 21, officially ends today. The first day of autumn is Monday. Winter arrives on Dec. 22.

Though the cotton stalks may continue to grow, cotton bolls cease to mature when the temperature gets below 50 degrees, Wright noted.

The daytime temperature last week dropped to the lower 40s.

"The immature bolls on the plants, if it was around 80 degrees, would mature and make good bolls of cotton," Wright said. "But very much time below 50 degrees, the bolls cease to mature into good bolls of cotton."

Cotton thrives on heat and moisture to produce those long, strong white fibers of lint.

"We are still trying to make it this year," Wright said. "We are going to have a crop."

And they will. He's fairly sure of that. But the crop, which had promises of being a "bumper crop" before the extended rains and cloud-cover dropped daytime temperatures into the lower 40s, likely will be just fair.

"Maybe we'll have as good a crop as last year," said Wright. "Maybe, maybe not."

In 1990, the Farmers Co-op, which operates the only cotton gin in Midland County, processed 15,000 bales, a mid-range level for the Midland gin.

"Had it not been for this (wet) spell, we would have had more bales. This is a minus factor."

Next year may be better.

"That's the story of all farmers' lives," Wright said. "Maybe next year."

Moisture from the long, slow rains penetrated the sub-soil, and some of it will be stored up for 1992 when, come spring, farmers will be hoping for rains to help germinate the seed.

Rainy weather and cool temperature hamper cotton production, as the cotton bolls mature in readying for harvest in October and into the early winter.

But the late-summer rains are "really bad on the folks that grow alfalfa hay," said Wright. "It's rotting in the field."

At this time of the year, "prolonged rains are not good" for hay or cotton but are ideal for wheat and for livestock.

"And cowboys are tickled to death," said Wright. "They are growing grass and grinning."

Bobby Matthews, who is foreman of the Lazy Z Ranch north of town, is downright pleased with the rain.

"This whole (West Texas) country has its 'Sunday clothes' on," Matthews said of the greenery.

"I don't guess it could look any better or get any wetter," he said. "It's pretty wet."

It's so wet and almost swampy in places that Matthews stays on the caliche ranch roads when he's in the pickup truck. If he has to get off the roads, he goes horseback.

In slightly more than 2½ months, the rainfall has totaled 13.84 inches, which is higher than Midland's average yearly rainfall 13.70 inches.

In July, 8.5 inches officially fell here, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The normal July rainfall is 1.72 inches.

In August, the rainfall fell back to 1.58 inches. The average August rainfall here is 1.60 inches.

Now, thus far in September, the rainfall has measured 3.76 inches. The normal September rainfall is 2.08 inches.

So far this year, the National Weather Service in Midland has gauged 19.94 inches of rainfall. At mid-year, the amount was 6.10 inches, and more than half of that, 3.5 inches, fell in June.

For today, the weatherman is calling for a 20 percent chance of afternoon showers or thunderstorms and a rise in daytime temperatures — into the lower 80s. For tonight and Monday, the weatherman is forecasting a 40 percent chance of rain. The high temperature is to be in the upper 60s on Monday.

While Matthews is pleased that the rains mean abundant grasses for the cattle, particularly for cows and their calves, he laments the difficulty facing the farmers.

"I guess it's pretty hard on those cotton farmers," Matthews said. "All my farming neighbors are crying the blues, saying, they don't need any more rain. They need sunshine."

Vernon Chandler, a cotton farmer in the Warfield community, agreed.

"I don't mind the rain," he said. "It's the cold weather (that hurts the cotton). If the sun was shinning while it was raining, we would be all right. The rain doesn't hurt a thing."

Chandler, aware that "the cowboys are happy," said he has got the "biggest crop" that he has had in years despite the harm done by early-summer hail, which knocked out two batches of cotton. He replanted in June.

"The plants are loaded — lots of cotton bolls," Chandler said. "They just need a lot of sunshine."

hailed the decision, saying it would effectively end a tightly controlled research monopoly maintained by a coterie of editors since the discovery of the scrolls.

Some of the controlling editors, stunned when they were told of the library's decision, charged that the photographs of the manuscripts were stolen property. The editors questioned whether the library had the right to make the material available to scholars not approved by them.

But Dr. William A. Moffett, director of the library, said the Huntington, unlike all other institutions with photographic collections of the scrolls, was not bound by any agreement to allow the international team of editors to control access to the documents.

Moffett said that, strictly speaking, only authors retained property rights to unpublished material and so the scrolls were in the public domain.

"This move should bring an unprecedented openness into scrolls research," he said. "It will be very hard for the cartel that's controlled the scrolls to put the genie back in the bottle."

But the custodians of the scrolls insist that virtually all of the intact biblical material has always been open to reputable scholars. They say much of the material that has not been made public consists of fragments of texts that have not been pieced together. They argue that they do not want these to fall into the hands of incompetent researchers.

The library's action is expected to have a liberating influence on scroll scholarship, speeding publication of the documents and opening them to analysis by many more researchers seeking insights into the history of Judaism and the origins of Christianity.

The editors who act as custodians of the scrolls have been accused of delaying publication and withholding manuscripts from other scholars except their own students and favored colleagues.

Dr. Geza Vermes, a biblical scholar at Oxford University in England, has called the handling of the scrolls "the academic scandal par excellence of the 20th century."

"This is certainly good news for scholars," said Dr. James H. Charlesworth, professor of New Testament language and literature at the Princeton Theological Seminary in New Jersey. "The refusal to let a good scholar see a manuscript or photograph is difficult to defend. Maybe you could defend it for a year or five years, but never for decades."

One benefit of wider access to the scrolls, Charlesworth said, would be to discredit the various conspiracy theories holding that the editors were suppressing publication of documents that would cast Judaism or early Christianity in a bad light.

A book published this summer in Britain, "The Dead Sea Scrolls Deception," makes such assertions, which Charlesworth said were "absolutely untrue."

Wider access is assured, Moffett said, because the Huntington Library has a general policy against imposing restrictions on the study, publication and reproduction of its rare books, manuscripts and art objects.

Dr. Lawrence Schiffman, a professor of Hebrew and Judaic studies at New York University, said: "They may be releasing stolen property, but I'm going to use it anyway. Most will regard those who make this material available as Robin Hoods, stealing from the academically privileged to give to those hungry for the knowledge secreted in these texts."

The scrolls consist of some 800 manuscripts in Hebrew and Aramaic that were discovered from 1947 to 1956 in caves east of Jerusalem near the ruins of Qumran on the Dead Sea.

The intact scrolls, consisting of the oldest known manuscripts of books from the Old Testament, were published with little delay.

But many of the non-biblical texts have not been published, in part because they are in poor condition. These include writing that reflects the thinking of Jews during the turbulent period that saw the beginning of Rabbinic Judaism and Christianity. The scrolls have been dated from about 200 B.C. into the first century after the birth of Jesus.

The material was placed under the control of seven scholars, all Westerners and Christians. The only member of the original team still involved in the research is Dr. Frank M. Cross of the Harvard Divinity School. Others passed on their unfinished work to proteges.

The three principal editors now are Dr. Eugene Ulrich of the University of Notre Dame, Dr. Emanuel Tov of Hebrew University in Jerusalem and Dr. Emile Puech of the Ecole Biblique in Jerusalem. They operate under the overall direction of the Israeli Antiquities Authority.

Nearly all the original scrolls are housed at the Rockefeller Museum in Jerusalem, with a few others on display at the Shrine of the Book in Jerusalem. Because of the risks of damage in war, several sets of photographs of the scrolls have been made and stored under the editors' control at Harvard, Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, Oxford University and the Ancient Biblical Manuscript Center in Claremont, Calif.

In an inventory of the library soon after he became director last year, Moffett learned of the scroll material and decided that access to it should be the same as for other library holdings.

The library said it would begin immediately accepting written requests to examine the scroll photographs. Researchers would be working from images on microfilm, not from the master negatives. The microfilm will also be available, at a modest fee, for loan to other libraries.

CROATIA: Officials appeal for truce

share the central government's opposition to the independence declaration have engaged Croatian forces in bitter fighting. There were no casualty reports from the fighting on Saturday, but more than 500 people have died in the battles since June.

There were reports on Saturday from witnesses that the federal army and Serbian militia forces had forced outgunned Croatian militias to retreat from a psychologically important bridge head at Petrinja, 30 miles south of Zagreb, Croatia's capital.

Near Petrinja, Croatian militiamen watched as a black cloud of smoke hung in a sultry, late-summer sky as artillery rocked positions in the town and their colleagues fell back over the important bridge, threatening to blow it up to halt a possible federal army advance along the largely unguarded highway to Zagreb.

"They have tanks and airplanes," said a guardsman, wearing the rosary beads of the Roman Catholic Church on his camouflage tunic. "We have hearts and will."

The Croatian defense minister, Gojko Susak, said 120 federal army tanks had been deployed and 120 more were on the Serbian-Croatian border as the federal authorities, backing Serbian militias in areas of Croatia that are home to a large Serbian minority, pressed to relieve beleaguered federal army garrisons in the eastern Croatian towns of Osijek, Vinkovci, and Vukovar and to encircle Croat fighters there.

"They have thrown their best at us and we are holding them," he told reporters here after detailing an offer, transmitted to the Yugoslav Defense Ministry on Saturday afternoon, to partially lift Croatia's blockade of federal army garrisons on its soil in return for a halt on "all offensive movements on the territory of Croatia" by federal forces.

The Croatian appeal to Belgrade's military authorities was sent to the Yugoslav defense minister, Veljko Kadijevic, and signed by Croatia's president, Franjo Tudjman, after an emergency meeting of his government on Saturday. The message included a pledge to permit supplies of food, medicines, electricity, and water to the beleaguered army barracks on Croatian soil, but not a total lifting of the blockade, in return for a truce leading to negotiations on mutual matters and a disengagement.

The Croatian message — sent to Belgrade by fax via neighboring Bosnia because there are no direct communications between Zagreb and Belgrade — suggested that both sides urge their forces to heed the new cease-fire terms by 7 p.m. local time with a view to halting the fighting.

But by nightfall, there was no indication that any appeal had been made by either side. An earlier cease-fire under the auspices of the European Community came and went on Wednesday with no halt to the escalating war.

With a second column of federal troops advancing toward Croatia across Bosnia, another of Yugoslavia's six constituent republics, the nation's frail fabric, stitched together after World War II, now seems to have crumbled altogether.

"The government of Yugoslavia as such does not exist," Susak said, arguing that of the three federal instruments of power — the central government, the collective presidency, and the army — only the army remained functional. Effectively, he said, the Serb-led federal army had carried out "a coup."

Croatia has been at war with Belgrade since it declared independence from the Yugoslav federation on June 25, precipitating a conflict that has drawn on centuries-old hatreds between Serbs and Croats.

The nation's Tanyug press agency reported on Saturday that mortars had been fired from Croatia into a Serbian village in neighboring Bosnia, raising apprehension that Croatia's bloodletting could spill into Bosnia, where Muslims, Serbs, and Croats live in closely intertwined communities.

The most decisive area of conflict is in the east, where lightly armed Croat militiamen are facing the most sustained army advance.

HOSPITAL: Man threatened doctor

(From 1A)

Sgt. Don Bell, part of a team of negotiators who talked with Worthington by telephone during the standoff.

The doctor, obstetrician Glade Curtis, said Worthington had threatened him repeatedly since he performed surgery to tie the fallopian tubes of Worthington's wife, Karen. Curtis fled as the siege began.

Bell said Worthington maintained that he and his wife hadn't consented to the operation.

"He said they were all liars, they were all cheaters. He said, 'Those doctors raped my wife,' " Bell said, his voice hoarse after hours of negotiations.

In Curtis' office, near where Worthington held the hostages, police found a foot-square package of dynamite that could be detonated by remote control. It could have wiped out half a block, said Salt Lake County Sheriff Aaron Kennard.

Experts defused the dynamite, authorities said.

Kennard said officers also found a shotgun and .357-caliber Magnum handgun they believe was used to kill the nurse.

Worthington held six adults and three infants on the top floor of a maternity wing connected to the main building by an enclosed skywalk, police said.

One of the hostages gave birth about three hours into the standoff, hospital spokesman Jess Gomez said. Police said Worthington let nurses care for infants.

The siege began shortly after midnight. Dr. Brent Mabey, an emergency room physician, said a clerk ran into the hospital to say a man with a shotgun had blown out a window in the adjacent Women's Health Center.

When police arrived, they found a woman who had been shot in the hospital's parking lot, Mabey said. The victim, Karla Roth, 37, died in the emergency room.

Roth, who was married, had been hired Sept. 5 but had only worked in the emergency room for two nights, said hospital administrator Douglas Fonnesbeck.

"It's just awful," he said. "A hospital is supposed to be a safe place, isn't it?"

Worthington began negotiating by telephone with police surrounding the hospital about 15 hours into the standoff, Police Chief Gary Leonard said. He said Worthington gave himself up when authorities assured he would be safe.

The freed hostages were shuttled into an ambulance and driven away. Several hugged each other. Some wept.

Worthington told negotiators he was carrying dynamite and "would blow the place up" if police rushed the building, said police Sgt. Terry Pepper.

Gomez said the remaining 32 patients were evacuated from the 75-bed hospital.

More than 70 officers cordoned off the area and evacuated residents of three blocks east of the building in this Salt Lake City suburb. Land to the west, north and south is vacant.

Worthington's wife and the local Mormon bishop were at the scene but kept from reporters. The couple has eight children, the oldest a senior in high school and the youngest about 2.

Neighbors and friends described Worthington as a quiet man, something of a loner, with a strong work ethic and a love for his children.

"He took them everywhere, even when he went to work," said Alice Whitmore, a longtime friend who lives three doors up the street in the middle-class suburban neighborhood.

"He's just kind of an odd guy. He doesn't seem to communicate very well," said Jeff Parker, a neighbor.

Biological weapons inspectors begin work in Iraq

AP Laserphoto

Lieutenant Colonel James Knapp of Canada, Chief Inspector of the U.N. special inspection team, surveys a small portion of the destroyed Iraqi chemical bomb inventory.

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — U.N. biological weapons experts began inspecting Iraqi facilities Saturday, and Iraq's foreign minister traveled to New York to deliver Baghdad's decision on whether it would allow inspection flights.

The United Nations wants to use helicopters as part of its work to dismantle Iraq's weapons of mass destruction under the terms of the Persian Gulf War cease-fire.

Iraq has said the flights would violate its sovereignty. The United States and other nations told Iraq on Wednesday that military escorts may join the U.N. teams if Iraq does not cooperate in the search for its long-range missiles and chemical, biological or nuclear weapons.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Ahmed Hussein left Baghdad for New York on Saturday and was to deliver Baghdad's response to Security Council President Jean-Bernard Merimee of France on Sunday.

So far, 15 U.N. teams have visited Iraq. Baghdad has been accused of hindering their work by concealing weapons stocks and its capability to produce arms.

Alastair Livingston, a U.N. inspections official based in Bahrain, said Saturday the latest team was operating normally.

The 13 biological weapons experts are led by Dr. David Huxsoll, a professor from the Louisiana State University. They are investigating Iraq's biological research labs to check Iraqi claims that the work is not for military purposes.

Mexico tightens environment laws, worker safety rules

N.Y. Times News Service

When the Bush administration sought congressional approval this spring to negotiate a free trade agreement with Mexico, some of the toughest opposition came from environmentalists and labor unions concerned that American companies might move their factories south of the border to take advantage of weak environmental and worker safety rules and even weaker enforcement of what rules exist.

Since then, the Mexican government has tightened environmental rules, shut down some of the worst polluters and increased the spending of its environmental protection ministry sevenfold.

"It's a good start," said Alex A. Hittle, the international coordinator at Friends of the Earth, a Washington-based environmental group.

"One of the things propelling this is the free trade agreement, and once it is done and gone, it'll be interesting to see if this continues to go forward or sags back."

Worker safety has received less attention than the environment. "In the United States, they have goggles, safety aprons, gloves, special shoes and a yellow line on the floor that tells the worker where not to go," Aguilar admitted.

Former foreign minister faults Gorbachev's indecision

MOSCOW (AP) — Former Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze faults Mikhail S. Gorbachev for "fluctuations and indecision" but believes the Soviet president will emerge as the head of a stable central government.

"Gorbachev will enter history as a great reformer, as a great revolutionary," Shevardnadze said in a wide-ranging interview with U.S. journalists.

Shevardnadze, who announced his resignation Dec. 20 warning of "dictatorship," said he would devote his energies to the Democratic Reform Movement political party he and others founded.

Despite the collapse of Kremlin authority after the botched Aug. 18-21 hard-line coup, Shevardnadze predicted "the center will hold. I don't know which republics will be there, but the center will hold, because the republics will be interested" in maintaining economic ties.

Representatives from most of the 15 former Soviet republics, including the independent Baltic states, are discussing creation of an "economic space" similar to the European Community.

"Once an economic space is recognized, it is impossible for such a space to function without a center," he said in the Friday interview.

In addition to his political activities, Shevardnadze has founded the Foreign Policy Association, a reformist think tank. He also has written a book, "The Future Belongs to Freedom," with an epilogue devoted to his alliance with Russian republic President Boris N. Yeltsin against the failed hard-line coup.

Shevardnadze criticized Gorbachev for not seizing on his resignation last December "to make a dramatic, sharp turn toward democracy."

Instead, Gorbachev sided with hard-liners who ultimately staged the putsch. And the Soviet leader ignored repeated signs that "sooner or later the reactionaries would attack, that a threat of dictatorship was a real one since there were real rehearsals, real assaults," Shevardnadze said.

These rehearsals included the bloody crackdown on the Baltics in January, a vain attempt to ban a pro-Yeltsin demonstration March 28 and an attempt over the summer to give then-Prime Minister Valentin Pavlov executive powers rivaling those of Gorbachev.

"The threat from the right is still there and it could intensify," Shevardnadze said. "In view of the aggravation of the social and economic situation in the country, the worsening of material conditions ... right-wingers can gain a certain degree of popular support."

Shevardnadze called Gorbachev a "dear friend" but said the president paid too much attention to the short-range tactics of political survival and too little attention to the long-range strategy of reform.

Armenians vote on independence referendum

YEREVAN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Armenians voted Saturday on an independence referendum that was expected to pass overwhelmingly, paving the way for the republic to join others that have broken with the Kremlin.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin, meanwhile, sought to mediate Armenia's bloody ethnic conflict with neighboring Azerbaijan.

Saturday's referndum was expected to win easily since 90 percent of the republic's 3.3 million people are ethnic Armenians who overwhelmingly back independence.

Armenian officials said they hoped to get the two-thirds approval necessary for it to be valid under Soviet law. More than 85 percent of the 2 million eligible voters cast ballots Saturday, the electoral commission said.

Observers from more than 50 countries were invited to monitor the vote. Preliminary results were expected Sunday, and official results were to be announced in parliament on Monday.

Most of the remaining 12 Soviet republics have declared some form of independence, but the Kremlin and the international community have fully recognized only the former Baltic republics of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia.

After casting his ballot in Yerevan, the capital, President Levon Ter-Petrosian called it "a great day" for his people.

Soviet independence drives accelerated after the failed Kremlin coup and collapse of Communism.

Armenia declared its independence in 1918 as the Czarist empire crumbled, but Bolshevik troops occupied the mountainous nation and declared it a Soviet republic in December 1920.

For many, voting was itself a taste of freedom.

Health Care in the '90s CRITICAL CROSSROADS

COSTS: Americans support new health-care legislation, poll finds screaming for some type of relief — even if that relief spells what physicians dread most . . . national health-care insurance.

In a recent Wall Street Journal/NBC News national poll, a clear majority of Americans said they were dissatisfied with the health-care system in general, suggesting it might be time for the federal government to step in.

By more than a 2-1 margin, the poll found support for new legislation requiring employers of all sizes to provide health insurance for their employees, while 69 percent queried backed some type of universal, government-paid health-care system.

In Midland and Midland County, MMH officials interviewed for this series said there is no question an ever-growing amount of the cost burden is being passed onto paying patients, insurance companies and third-party payers as a means of offsetting deficits.

MMH officials, who continue to battle a growing number of taxpayers on the issue of indigent care, also said the hospital is losing millions of dollars a year on Medicare/Medicaid programs that fail to fully reimburse it for actual costs.

"One thing I feel strongly about is spreading this tax burden around," said Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, president of MMH's board of directors, following adoption of an 8 percent tax increase last month.

"I think the homeowners here are getting killed. One thing I want to do later this year is get a small sales tax going. That way, people who use the hospital, but who aren't homeowners here, are going to share in some of that cost."

MCHD is entitled to as much as one-quarter cent. But an election first must be authorized by the state Legislature before the tax can be voted on by city and county property owners.

Wiesenfeld also would like to see a lobbying effort in Austin to secure an increase in state Medicaid payments that would bring the system up to recognized federal poverty guidelines entitling the state to more matching federal dollars.

But others interviewed for this series view such strategies as stop-gap measures at best.

Local physicians claim that one sure way to save billions of dollars each year is to get attorneys away from medicine. Lawsuits play havoc with a system already straining under the weight of Wall Street America.

It is there where more and more pharmaceutical companies and other high-tech ventures are being pressed for greater returns in exchange for investment interests.

Research and development doesn't come cheaply. But that hasn't deterred Americans over the years from bantering for more, having grown accustomed to accessing the latest in products and technology.

And it's no different in Midland, where patients now make use of such technology as a Magnetic Resonance Imaging machine.

The MRI provides doctors with highly detailed internal images, thus eliminating the need to expose patients to radiation, which is commonly associated with X-rays and CATscans.

There also is the much-touted linear accelerator used at the Allison Cancer Center, which can direct precise radiated doses to specific cancer-ridden areas of the body.

MMH makes it clear just how expensive such testing and treatment is, but hospital officials note that "access" not only saves time and money, but also allows families to stay closer together, rather than being forced to travel to larger cities such as Houston or Dallas in order to be with loved ones.

Like many other hospitals, MMH also is becoming a regional facility, as an increasing number of rural hospitals are forced to shut their doors.

And that's why hospital officials here unveiled plans last month for a $18.7 million expansion project that is expected to be funded through the use of revenue bonds.

"Many of our departments now face severe space limitations," said Ray Branson, MMH's former president and chief executive officer who left the hospital in August after 11 years.

"Even though patients are staying less time in acute beds, it's clear the degrees of sicknesses have increased and that's caused a real shortage of space," he said.

During Branson's tenure, MMH's budget soared from slightly more than $12 million in 1980 to nearly $140 million in 1991 — a figure that astounds his critics, but, in fact, reflects what happens when local hospitals attempt to deal with the overall needs of their respective communities, supporters counter.

In MMH's case, much of that growth has involved the building and/or purchase of properties and/or existing businesses, particularly during the past four years.

For example, many questioned MMH's $5 million purchase of Clearview Hospital (now Memorial West), a psychiatric/chemical-dependency facility.

But, according to its own figures, in fiscal 1990, Memorial West generated total revenues of $2,359,000 and total expenses of $2,315,000, for a positive cash flow of $44,850.

For the first nine months of fiscal 1991, total revenues and expenses were $2,939,000 and $1,877,000 respectively — for a positive cash flow of $1,062,000.

Critics also charged that MMH's opening of its Urgent Care Center at the Abell-Hanger Medical Pavilion was no more than a ploy to drive other minor emergency-care centers under.

However, Dr. James Humphreys, MMH's vice president of medical affairs, disputed that. He said the initial goal was to siphon off some of the overflow from the hospital's overcrowded emergency room, which sees an estimated 33,000 patients a year.

"But what I think happened instead was, it may have tapped a new market," Humphreys said.

Some say instead of moving so fast into new service sectors, MMH should have been spending excess funds to lower the ad valorem tax rate or, if nothing else, hold the line on the current tax rate.

Edna Walger is one of those.

Mrs. Walger, president of Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse, still questions whether elected board officials are serving the public or a private agenda while being steered by MMH's board of trustees and board of governors.

The two boards were responsible for the building of MMH and its funding until 1977, when voters were asked to create a taxing district responsible for indigent care as well as bricks and mortar.

While the latter was lifted from taxpayers through the use of revenue bonds, Mrs. Walger contends that more should be done in shifting what she called "excess profits" to make up for the continual financial shortfall that plagues indigent care.

"I resent that fact that it (MMH) is a money-making thing," she said. "It should be strictly for health-care delivery. They're (board members) there to represent us and they don't do it.

"I did not set out to be an advocate against the hospital. My purpose in starting this thing (CATA) was to get people off their rear ends, go to these meetings, find out how their government works, speak out and ask questions. Now, it's beginning to work."

ed we needed a hospital. . . . We love that hospital. It's our (the community's) hospital and we want to provide the quality care that people expect."

Chartered in 1945 as a community non-profit organization, Midland Memorial Hospital opened its doors as a four-story, 75-bed facility.

Midland Memorial Foundation, which today continues to be overseen by some of its founding families, completed its first expansion in 1958, with other additions coming during the next 20 years.

"We had our ups and downs financially over those years," Jastrow said. "But any time the budget couldn't be met, the board of governors always took care of it."

During its tenure, the board of governors not only saw to it that MMH had enough funds to take care of the sick, but that the hospital had the means to expand as demands of the city and county continued to grow.

"We didn't ask the residents to contribute to this. We went to our leading citizens who were in a financial position to help the hospital when it was in need," Jastrow said.

Over time, that assistance grew to include local banks as well as oil companies that prospered in the Permian Basin.

"The leaders of this community and the banks and others worked diligently at this. And that's still the case today. . . . People continue to rally to it when it needs help."

Butler said that as the town grew, it became clear that other methods of funding were needed if MMH was to meet the growing health-care needs of its residents.

In 1976, foundation members determined that in order for the hospital to expand as well as take care of those who had no access to health care, the county had to create its own hospital taxing district.

In Austin, legislation was passed on April 6, 1977, giving Midland County the green light to pursue a new avenue of funding. A bill introduced for that purpose passed in the Senate by 31-0 margin, and in the House by a vote of 142 to 1.

"A general election was then held in September 1977 to decide whether or not to create the district and authorize it to tax up to 75 cents per $100 valuation," MMH attorney Ted Kerr said.

That same ballot also authorized the hospital to approve up to $10 million in general obligation bonds for the purpose of renovating and expanding the existing facility.

Kerr said that while there was some feeling that the money could be raised independently one last time, there was a general consensus that such an effort would cost other charitable organizations that also benefited from the community, such as the High Sky Children's Ranch and United Way of Midland.

"We just really got to the point where it was no longer feasible. . . . That's the reason it was proposed that we move toward a taxing district," Kerr said.

Following voter approval (4,774 to 2,846), the hospital foundation transferred its ownership of the physical plant to the district, which in turn paid off $815,000 in outstanding obligations.

As for the bonds — which were sold at a 4.49 percent interest rate — Kerr said they will be paid off later this decade.

In March 1978, the five-member Midland County Hospital District board entered into a management contract with Midland Memorial Foundation, which authorized a 17-member board of trustees to manage day-to-day operations. That continues to be the case today.

In the fall of 1987, MMH decided to expand the number of hospital directors from five to seven members, all of which today are elected from single-member districts.

As for the original Midland Memorial Foundation, operated by the board of governors, those numbers have grown from 25 to 40 members. They include the original members as well as their elected successors.

Since its founding, MMH also has grown, increasing in size from a 75-bed acute-care facility to 272 beds serving Midland, Midland County and surrounding areas.

And that includes expansions of in-house services such as MMH's heart-care program, inpatient rehabilitation, and a fully staffed skilled nursing unit.

In addition to the main complex, MMH operates the Abell-Hanger Medical Pavilion, which opened in 1989.

The pavilion houses the Magnetic Resonance Imaging Center, the Urgent Care Center, a minor-emergency clinic, the West Texas Pathology Laboratory, the Occupational and Physical Therapy Center, the Optifast Program and Smokenders.

Other business interests include Memorial West (formerly Clearview Hospital), a licensed 49-bed psychiatric and substance-abuse facility located west of town; the medical surgical office complex, located behind the hospital, which houses a number of physician specialists; the Community Care Clinic (located in the former Delano Senior Citizens Center) which opened Sept. 16; and property located at 2300 W. Illinois Ave., which remains abandoned.

Perhaps its most important asset is the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center, built 10 years ago and attached to the main complex. The two-level, 20,000-square-foot center remains dedicated solely to the care and support of cancer patients living in the Permian Basin.

Democrats jockey for position; open with spirit

The Nation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Democratic presidential hopefuls looked past discouraging polls and opened their party's nomination contest Saturday with spirited attacks on President Bush and a few barbs at each other as well.

As they jockeyed for position in the emerging field of little-known candidates, seven of the party's declared and possible 1992 contenders brought sudden life to a campaign and party that for months have appeared moribund.

And, with the Iowa caucuses just five months away, the candidates used their back-to-back appearances before the Democratic National Committee to seek the crucial organizational support of some 400 party faithful from all 50 states gathered for the last time before next summer's nominating convention.

"Welcome to what is clearly the start of the 1992 presidential campaign," party Chairman Ronald H. Brown said in opening the meeting.

Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin was first in the parade of candidates, warming the crowd with a feisty, mocking attack on Bush and a promise not to duck the liberal label that has hurt Democrats in campaigns past.

"I don't intend to apologize to anyone for being a Democrat," Harkin said in his podium-pounding speech. "We haven't been wrong, we've been right and we ought to be proud to say so. ... It's time for us to reassert ourselves and what our values are."

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, considered to be in the first tier of the field with Harkin and Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey, presented himself as a new face to reclaim the vision John and Robert Kennedy offered the party in the 1960s.

"Our generation of Democrats can reclaim that role and keep the dream alive," Clinton said near the close of his speech, in which he tried to position himself as a moderate alternative to Harkin. "I'm not one of these soak the rich fellows," Clinton said in a thinly veiled poke at Harkin's call for higher taxes on the wealthy.

Former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas kept up the Bush bashing, while also saying as the party reaffirms its commitment to women's rights, minorities and blue-collar workers it must also adopt a pro-business approach to economics.

"George Bush, this is the first day of the end of your presidency," said Tsongas.

Even Clinton, who said he wanted to avoid Bush bashing, couldn't resist.

"The 1980s were not just a decade of greed and self seeking, they were a decade of denial and blame," Clinton said in attacking Reagan and Bush economic policies. "George Bush is more than happy to tell Israel how to behave, why won't he tell Wall Street how to behave?"

Bush came under attack again and again from the would-be presidents, with the notable exception of former California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. He launched into a biting indictment of both political parties, saying American politics has disgusted voters and become "a Stop & Shop for every greedy special interest in our country. ..There's no more democracy worthy of the name."

California's Brown wasn't the only two-time presidential candidate to address the party members. Jesse Jackson delivered a lengthy speech that was vintage Jackson, rambling at times, but spellbinding at others, conciliatory one minute, full of warnings that the party cannot ignore his constituency the next.

"Our children are being abandoned and neglected," Jackson said during a long indictment of

Cuomo will seek takeover of Medicaid costs

ALBANY, N.Y. (NYT) — In a major shift of emphasis, Gov. Mario M. Cuomo is expected to announce this week that he will support a state takeover of the hugely expensive and rapidly growing share of Medicaid costs currently paid by New York City and other local governments, Cuomo administration officials said Saturday.

To negotiate such a takeover and to push it through a politically divided Legislature will require great technical and political dexterity. But Cuomo's advisers characterized his planned announcement as a significant step intended to build momentum behind the concept.

The measure could ultimately save more than $1 billion a year for the financially troubled city, although such savings would probably not be realized until the end of the century. The savings for county governments statewide could approach $2 billion by 1999, Cuomo aides said.

In mid-July, Cuomo disappointed Mayor David N. Dinkins by saying that a state Medicaid takeover was "a projection for the removed future." While the governor never rejected the idea, city officials interpreted his pronouncement as a devastating deflation of their hopes for fiscal relief from the state.

Cuomo administration officials said the Medicaid announcement was to be the centerpiece in a pair of speeches that Cuomo would deliver in New York City on Monday night and Tuesday morning.

In the speeches, which Cuomo aides are promoting as highly important, Cuomo plans to propose a variety of legislative and administrative measures that could provide state help to the city.

In addition to the Medicaid change, Cuomo is expected to announce a number of economic development initiatives that would be bankrolled by the state and its public authorities. The proposals may include several transportation and housing construction projects.

The governor is also likely to discuss the need to reduce state-imposed requirements on local governments, a process called mandate relief, and to suggest a number of fiscal maneuvers that would create cash for the city. He did not return a telephone call to the Executive Mansion today.

Advisers to Cuomo said he would spend the weekend selecting from a menu of proposals collected by his staff in the last three months. He is to disclose his plans first in a speech to a group of business, union and civic leaders gathered at Cuomo's request by the New York City Partnership on Monday night. Reporters will be not be admitted to that speech.

The governor will then repeat his message at a breakfast sponsored by the Association for a Better New York on Tuesday morning.

Cuomo administration officials said the governor hoped to create a sense of action and recovery after a year in which the city has suffered a deficit of both cash and morale. With budget cuts taking a noticeable toll on basic services and with the violence in the Crown Heights section of Brooklyn straining race relations, the city has been seized by an almost tangible malaise.

"What's necessary is to give the city and the world the sense that things are happening, that New York's not going down the toilet," said Meyer S. Frucher, a former Cuomo aide and frequent adviser to the governor. "That's the significance. It's important that there's a sense out there that the forces are coalescing."

Because of Cuomo's delicate relationship with the Dinkins administration, the governor's task is a politically sensitive one. Aides said Cuomo knows that he must not appear to be upstaging Dinkins, a longtime friend and the first black mayor of a city where a majority of the residents are members of minority groups.

In July, shortly after the state and city had both approved excruciatingly difficult budgets, tensions between the Cuomo and Dinkins administrations reached a peak. The governor made it clear he was annoyed by a memorandum written by First Deputy Mayor Norman Steisel and later leaked to the press that suggested the city did not want the state's advice on its plans for reorganization.

1,100 pounds of marijuana found in seat belt shipment

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Authorities were just as surprised as some Ford Motor Co. assembly plant workers who found 44 bales of marijuana in a semi-truck's trailer with a shipment of seat belts.

The bales weighed in at 1,100 pounds, said St. Paul Police Sgt. Bruce Wynkoop. That would be the largest single Twin Cities drug seizure in several years, a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent said.

"It's hard to say," if any Ford employees were involved in transporting the marijuana, Wynkoop said. "Somebody was obviously supposed to pick it up along the way."

But neither the workers nor the truck drivers who delivered the sealed load and immediately left with another trailer are suspects, Wynkoop said.

Workers unloading the trailer on Friday notified plant supervisors as soon as they saw the packages, he said.

"They saw the stuff there, walked right out and called supervisors," Wynkoop said.

The shipment originated in McAllen, Texas, a city near the U.S.-Mexico border, but it was not known which route the two truck drivers used to reach Minnesota or if they made any stops along the way.

The seat belts, which Wynkoop said were not made by Ford, were picked up by the drivers at the unidentified McAllen company where they were manufactured.

The drivers, employed by Transportation Services Inc. of Romulus, Mich., unhitched the trailer about 5 a.m. Friday at the Ford plant in St. Paul, Wynkoop said. The drivers picked up another trailer and were on their way to another destination when they were told by company officials to return to Michigan.

Cuomo's challenge surprises gay group

N.Y. Times News Service

An organization of lesbian and gay law students at the State University of New York center at Buffalo expressed surprise Saturday that Gov. Mario M. Cuomo's office had challenged an order by a state human rights unit that barred military recruiters from the campus because homosexuals are not allowed to serve in the armed forces.

"I find it very surprising because Governor Cuomo has always been a supporter of gay and lesbian civil rights," said Terri Mayo, a spokeswoman for the Lesbian and Gay Law Students Organization at SUNY Buffalo.

Ms. Mayo noted, however, that her organization and the anonymous woman complainant it represents in the case assumed that an order issued on Friday by a unit of the state Division of Human Rights remained in force on campus, despite assertions by Cuomo aides saying the order was legally unenforceable.

She said that Cuomo, a potential presidential candidate who was in Canada on Friday, had not personally spoken out on the politically delicate issue, which could force him to choose between lesbian and gay civil rights advocates, on one hand, and supporters of military recruitment on the other.

A spokeswoman for Cuomo, Ann W. Crowley, said late Saturday that the governor had affirmed his longstanding opposition to discrimination against lesbians and gay men, particularly in regard to military service, but noted that his opposition did not give him the authority to ban military recruiters from campus.

Ms. Crowley also said, however, that pending a possible appeal by the State University, the governor and his aides believed that the order remained in force at the Buffalo campus.

But a spokesman for SUNY Buffalo said that the school was uncertain about whether to comply with the order or whether to file an appeal.

"We have been in contact with the State University's legal counsel and these matters are under discussion, and very serious consideration, at this point," said Ronald Stein, the vice president for university relations at the Buffalo campus.

The ultimate question, Stein said, was whether the armed forces of the United States were discriminating against lesbian and gay people by barring them from active military service. "That's the basis of the debate on university campuses across the nation," he said.

The dispute at Buffalo began on Friday, when Mitchell Netburn, the acting director of the Office of Lesbian and Gay Concerns of the State Division of Human Rights, issued an order directing the university not to let military recruiters use campus facilities.

The order cited, as its basis, executive orders issued by Cuomo in 1983 and 1987 that prohibited state agencies, like the state university, from discriminating on the basis of sexual orientation in its hiring or in the use of state resources.

The order reasoned that the armed forces, by barring gay men and lesbians from active duty, illegally discriminated against them, and that the school should not allow its campus to be used for recruitment.

By late Friday, however, the governor's counsel, Elizabeth Moore, and other aides said they reviewed the order and concluded that it was not legally enforceable because it was in conflict with a state educatin law that allows the military to recruit on any campus where recruiters for private companies are allowed.

Ms. Moore's statement was cleared by the governor, Ms. Crowley said Saturday.

The case was filed last year by a lesbian law student at the Buffalo campus who was identified as Jane Doe.

She contended that the Judge Advocate General Corps had used campus facilities to recruit lawyers for the Army, and that this violated anti-discrimination orders issued by Cuomo in 1983 and 1987.

SUNY, in a response last spring, contended that it had not discriminated against anyone and in allowing military recruiters on campus was merely complying with a section of the state education law that requires the campus to be open to military recruiters so long as it is open to private recruiters.

Small towns market themselves to retirees

N.Y. Times News Service

Using advertising, videos, toll-free hotlines and booths at recreational vehicle conventions, small towns from Idaho to Alabama are fighting decline by marketing themselves to retirees.

Many of the most aggressive towns are inland places far from the sunny retirement belt of Florida and the Southwest, like Guntersville, Ala., Hot Springs, Ark., and Chewelah, Wash.

And they are having success, luring significant numbers of older people who find traditional retirement meccas overbuilt, crime-ridden and unaffordable.

Many civic leaders say it is now far easier and more lucrative for rural towns to attract older people — with their pensions and savings — than new factories or office parks.

Companies often demand millions of dollars in tax abatements and new roads and other repairs, they say.

But retirees and their hundreds of thousands of dollars in assets are being enticed with a brochure, a tour, a handshake and a smile.

"These migrants are healthier, wealthier and better educated than most Americans," said Mark Fagan, a professor at the Center for Economic Development and Business Research at Jacksonville State University in Alabama, which is helping 94 Alabama municipalities attract older people.

On average, Fagan said, the retired couples who have settled in Alabama have annual incomes of $35,000 and assets of more than $250,000.

"They pay for their homes with cash and spend most of their income locally," Fagan added. "It is like having an export industry to bring in out-of-state dollars."

In addition, the retirees place few demands on the most expensive of local services, the public schools.

The marketing campaigns come after a decade in which many rural towns that depended on agriculture, mining and manufacturing had some of their sharpest population declines in this century, as young people moved away in search of jobs.

With 20 million Americans expected to retire in the next decade, experts say, the futures of many towns may depend on their ability to grab a piece of the retirement trade.

Most of America's 2,400 rural counties outside of metropolitan areas had sharp drops in population in the last decade.

But some 480 counties, many of which include retirement resorts, saw their populations jump by 16 percent as retirees settled in year round.

As a result, more than 200 rural communities that were losing population have tried to tap into the senior market with home-grown marketing campaigns, Fagan said, and growing numbers of other towns are inquiring about them.

Many of the established programs are now reporting significant successes.

Chewelah, a town with fewer than 2,000 residents, 45 miles south of Spokane, has attracted 35 retired couples in the last two years with ads in retirement magazines, a toll-free hot line and a video made for $750 by high school students, town officials say.

These all boast of Chewelah's nearness to golf courses, ski slopes and hospitals.

"If you had a heart attack in my office this very minute," Gloria Davidson, the town's mayor, said in a telephone interview, "you would be in Spokane in 15 minutes by helicopter."

The arrival of the seniors, Ms. Davidson says, has created jobs by spurring the opening of a new bakery, a restaurant and a beauty shop.

Other places have added a more personal pitch.

Kennewick, Richland and Pasco, Wash., together have trained 49 of their residents to act as unpaid "ambassadors" on their business trips and vacations. The ambassadors offer middle-aged people promotional literature and bumper stickers. Together with ads and a toll-free hotline, officials say, the campaign has attracted 35 retired households.

Technical flaw found could endanger bomber's future

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Until two months ago, the Air Force's Stealth bomber had an enviable record in early flight tests of its ability to elude radar: a perfect 10 for 10.

But on flight No. 11, whose results the Air Force disclosed recently, one of the three black bat-winged planes now in testing in California's Mojave Desert failed a radar trial. The Air Force suddenly faced the prospect that the B-2 bomber was not as stealthy as promised.

What Air Force officials said was a relatively minor technical flaw — a problem with the plane's secret coating that absorbs radar signals — mushroomed into a potentially fatal chain of political events. Supporters of the B-2 in Congress say they now face an uphill battle to salvage the plane.

In little more than a week, two senior Pentagon officials offered conflicting statements about the severity of the problem, an important Democrat who supports the plane in the Senate lambasted the Defense Department for the confusion and a Senate committee put off a decision on financing of four new planes until next spring.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, a West Virginia Democrat and an important swing vote, said on Friday he would vote against the B-2 when a military spending bill reaches the Senate floor.

Even proponents of the plane say its future has been put in doubt.

Sen. Jim Exon, a Nebraska Democrat who is a strong supporter of the B-2, said: "These events of the last few days have eroded support for the program and I don't know if we can save it or not." Exon criticized the Bush administration for failing to respond quickly to the recent developments.

That a small technical flaw has quickly grown to imperil the entire program, underscores both the political fragility of the B-2s, which cost $865 million each, and the enormous pressures welling up in Congress to ease budget deficits and slash military spending in light of the rapidly diminishing Soviet threat.

"The B-2 has become a symbol of conflict between large defense programs and the understandable forces that say the world has changed and defense spending should be much smaller," said Harold Brown, who was secretary of defense in the Carter administration.

But a death knell for the B-2, which is manufactured by the Northrop Corp., may not have sounded. Supporters in the Senate last month handily defeated, by a vote of 57 to 42, an attempt to cancel the program.

"In the near term, they'll weather this storm," said one Senate aide who follows the program.

Phone breakdown may end air dispute

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The long-distance telephone breakdown that tied up air traffic in the New York region last week may help untie a bureaucratic knot that has kept the Federal Aviation Administration from acquiring a new nationwide network of telephone lines, government officials say.

The incident on Tuesday night was not the first time that the failure of a single circuit had caused disruptions in air service. The aviation agency's vulnerability to telephone breakdowns has been identified as a problem for years, and is why the agency wants to upgrade its phone network.

But the latest disruptions were unusually severe, causing hundreds of flights to be cancelled and stranding tens of thousands of passengers.

The episode highlighted a lingering dispute between the FAA and the General Services Administration that has stymied the aviation agency's planned telephone modernization for several months.

Last May, the general services agency, which is the government's purchasing arm, revoked the authority of the aviation agency to lease independently telephone services from commercial carriers. That authority was granted under a special exemption from a longstanding law that makes the general services agency the sole purchaser of phone services for the government.

Instead, the purchasing agency ordered the aviation agency to use the latest standard government telecommunications network, known as FTS 2000, for its communications needs. FTS 2000's lines are leased from two phone companies, American Telephone and Telegraph and Sprint. The purchasing agency said at the time that there was no need for air traffic controllers to use a phone system that was different from that used by the rest of the government.

The aviation agency, which had just asked phone companies to bid on a vast new system of leased phone circuits called Lincs, complained that the FTS 2000 network was not reliable enough for its crucial air traffic control lines.

One of the main features of Lincs is its use of redundant circuits to prevent a failure at a single point that could cause a broad loss of radio, computer, and telephone ties, as happened last week.

All summer long, officials of the two agencies have been meeting to work out a compromise. But the negotiations have been going slowly, and aviation officials said that the impasse had not only halted progress on the Lincs program but had seriously hampered their efforts to improve individual phone circuits around the country.

On Friday, representatives of both agencies said that they were nearing agreement on a compromise that would put the project back on track. But they said essential points had yet to be negotiated.

"I think we pretty much have an agreement that FTS 2000 can satisfy a portion of Lincs," said Donald E. Scott, the associate administrator at the general services agency's telephone office. "We are trying to sort out between ourselves what proportion of Lincs should properly be supplied by FTS 2000."

Scott and other officials acknowledged that last week's events could well speed the negotiations, although they said there had been no meetings between the agency's senior officials on the issue in the past week.

"This episode tells us that the FAA needs Lincs, or something like Lincs," said Scott.

Professing himself to be "a very strong supporter of Lincs," Scott said FTS 2000 was "at least as good as any of the other services they are going to acquire."

Some members of Congress were quick to call for a resolution of the impasse, although there is a split on the issue within Congress. The Senate has just voted to include $18 million for the first year of Lincs spending, while the House has refused to spend the money in its version of the transportation appropriations bill.

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., said that he would try to add a provision to the bill insuring that the aviation agency can buy whatever phone system it wanted.

Girl slain in subway over pair of earrings

NEW YORK (NYT) — The girls who killed another teen-age girl on a subway train in Greenwich Village on Friday attacked her after she refused to be cowed at knifepoint into handing over her earrings or fleeing, a friend who was with the victim on the train said Saturday.

The girls wanted to scare Maribel Feliciano, 15, but "she was very brave," the friend, who gave her name only as Yvette, said at Ms. Feliciano's Brooklyn home Saturday.

Three girls were arrested immediately after the stabbing in the car of the C train in which Ms. Feliciano was killed in the West Fourth Street Station.

The search for the fourth — whom the police believe actually stabbed the high-school student — continued Saturday.

At Ms. Feliciano's home in the East New York section Saturday, Yvette described their ride home from Fashion Industries High School on West 24th Street in Manhttan. Both sophomores, the two made the trip together every day.

She and Ms. Feliciano were standing by the door at one end of a moderately crowded C train when four teen-age girls approached her classmate and brandished a knife.

The girls, whom they did not recognize, demanded her gold earrings, but she said no, Yvette said.

"They were showing her the knife, she kept saying no. They said she better run or they were going to stab her.

"She said no. She was very brave"

Yvette said one girl grabbed Ms. Feliciano's long black hair from the back, a second girl struck her and a third stabbed her in the back with the knife, said the friend. She herself struggled with a fourth assailant and badly scraped her knuckles.

As the girl spoke Saturday, a police car arrived to transport her to a Manhattan station house, where she was asked to identify the suspects apprehended by a transit policeman who saw the scuffle but arrived too late to prevent the stabbing.

The three suspects, all from Brooklyn, are Tanisha Thomas, 16; Latesha Kelly Smith, 14, and Tracy Devaugh, 14.

Trial turns political despite judge's efforts

MIAMI (AP) — Manuel Noriega's week-old drug trial shows signs of turning into a political black hole, dragging in governments and public figures stretching from the United States to Colombia and from Israel to the Bahamas.

The list is likely to grow. Prosecutors and defense attorneys are near an agreement to fly to Cuba to take a videotaped deposition from Fidel Castro.

And the defense has made no secret of its intention to claim top U.S. spies and Reagan administration officials were Noriega's political bed mates, especially when it came to aiding Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

The politicization has overcome the efforts of U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler, who sternly lectured jurors and attorneys before testimony began. He told them to ignore political distractions and stick with the drug charges.

"There will be nothing about this case that has anything to do with politics," the judge vowed.

That was never realistic, says Jeffrey Weiner, head of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers.

"It would be extremely naive for anyone to believe this is not a political prosecution," he said. "It involves a head of state and a U.S. invasion of Panama. Politics is part of it."

After prosecutors opened their case by calling Noriega a "small man in a general's uniform" who was "a giant in Panama," lead prosecutor Michael Sullivan called his first witness — a political scientist.

University of Wyoming professor Stephen Ropp avoided mentioning drugs, testifying instead about the military-political intrigue that brought Noriega to power.

On cross-examination, Noriega's attorney Frank Rubino made Ropp acknowledge the United States had a "protectorate status over Panama."

Then trafficker-turned-informant Max Mermelstein set off an international firestorm, ticking off a list of people the Medellin cocaine cartel had conspired with or paid off to protect drug shipments.

Political figures he named cried foul.

Top Bahamian tourism official Cordell Thompson flew to Miami to hold a news conference, angrily denying Mermelstein's testimony that he was the bagman who delivered protection money to Prime Minister Lynden Pindling. Pindling's spokesman also denied the charge. Thompson blamed the U.S. government, saying it paid Mermelstein $670,000 for his testimony.

"This is part of a longstanding campaign to discredit our citizens, discredit our leaders, and discredit people like me," complained Thompson, whose party faces a hotly contested election this year.

In Panama, a legislator identified by Mermelstein as his contact to get Noriega's protection for drug flights also protested. She said she had never even met Mermelstein and was not close to Noriega at the time.

And Colombian authorities ducked questions about Mermelstein's claims that the cartel paid the air force second-in-command $50,000 to keep his fighters on the ground during drug flights. Colombia's justice minister said only that his country wants to review all testimony in the Noriega case.

Former Noriega aide Luis del Cid brought Israel into the case, saying he and others were trained in security work in that country, and later served there with a United Nations peace-keeping force after the 1973 Arab-Israeli war.

The defense may use that opening to bring in the name of Michael Harari — a mysterious former Israeli intelligence officer who was a close adviser to Noriega, and may or may not have continued working with his old intelligence agency as well.

The defense has hinted Noriega may have had close links with Israeli secret operations in Central America.

Noriega so admired Israel that he changed the name of Panama's military to the Panamanian Defense Forces in honor of the Israeli Defense Forces, and sent his daughters to an Israeli-operated high school.

Ambler Moss, former U.S. ambassador to Panama under Presidents Carter and Reagan, and now dean of the University of Miami Graduate School of International Studies, says the politicization of the case shouldn't be surprising.

"It never made any sense to me to indict the de facto leader of a country," Moss said.

Veteran Charlie Leibrandt, signed by the Braves for $8 million over three years last winter as a free agent, kept the Dodgers in check, taking a two-hitter into the eighth.

But the Dodgers, on the brink of falling 1½ games out with two weeks left, came back with a little help from the Braves.

Rebs riddle error-prone Dons, 34-7

■ The 3-0 Midland Lee Rebels take advantage of Palo Duro's miscues to end the non-district season unfarnished.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

AMARILLO — Coaches tell you over and over that you don't win football games with statistics. Amarillo Palo Duro proved that point at Dick Bivins Stadium here Saturday afternoon in a 34-7 loss to Midland Lee.

Palo Duro had almost the identical "stat sheet" look of the Rebels in total offense, but the Dons made too many mistakes in the kicking and passing game to keep the game close.

"We may look even with Lee in the statistics, but they don't tell the whole story of the errors we made and that's a big difference in the ball game," Don coach Doug James said after the loss.

Lee did get some "cheapie" points early and used a blustery wind to force turnovers worth 14 points to open the second half.

Palo Duro fumbled on the second play of the game to set up a 45-yard Todd Meade field goal that was only three yards shy of Lee's school record. It could have been 60 yards long as Meade rode the ball high and with a gusty wind that only Amarillo can provide.

Lee quarterback Jimmy Patton then found running room on the keeper series and he rushed for 87 yards in the first half and two touchdowns of 14 and 27 yards to spark a 17-point period that also included another 25-yard Meade field goal. A key block by tight end Jeb Honeyman sprang Patton loose on the 27-yard romp.

"They just gave me an opening and it was a lot like the two scrimmages we had where I had some running room," Patton said. "Palo Duro took the run away from me and we were running off stunts and went to some wider sweeps."

Two big plays by Lee defensive back Jake Krautsch in the opening moments of the second half spelled 14 more Rebel points.

Krautsch blocked a Shot Lee punt into the end zone where linebacker Mark Seidenberger recovered for his first TD in his career. Krautsch then intercepted a Jermaine Gilbreath pass three plays later and returned it to the 16-yard line to set up a two-yard Brett Sullivan TD and a 34-0 lead.

"We knew Palo Duro was having trouble with the punting game. They had been dropping the ball a lot and we prac-

Lee spikers lose; now 0-2 in district

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Taking a cue from the music played in the pre-game warmups, Midland Lee's volleyball team tried to take its best shot at Abilene Cooper, only to have the Cougars shake it off ala Pat Benatar and win 15-11, 15-2 Saturday at the Lee gymnasium.

In other District 4-5A play, Abilene High swept Midland High 15-5, 15-7, while Odessa High defeated San Angelo.

For the Lady Rebels Saturday, it was a matter of using a single-shot derringer where an M-16 would have been more effective. Lee led only once the whole match, at 11-10 in the first game, and had to score five straight points to do it.

But after Cooper rallied with five unanswered points of its own, the Lady Cougars seemed to douse the spark in the Lady Rebs.

"Cooper did a good job. They weren't overpowering, but they were consistent while we just committed tons of unforced errors," said first-year

LUBBOCK — The trouble with the Lubbock High Westerners is their inability to go north and south, especially with the Big Spring Steers standing in their way.

The Steers limited the Westerners to 116 yards of total offense and overwhelmed the hosts 39-6 Saturday afternoon at Jones Stadium.

Big Spring sprang to a perfect 3-0 mark while sending LHS to perfection of an opposite order, 0-3.

The game had first been scheduled here for Lowrey Field, but wet grounds forced the game onto the artificial surface at Jones Stadium. But there was nothing artificial about the Steer attack, which pounded out 367 yards, including 187 through the air.

"We were worried that after last week's emotional game we'd have trouble getting re-focused," said Big Spring coach Dwight Butler, whose Steers

Mims dies at age 56

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Bill Mims, the man for whom Midland High's annual spring football game was named, died at his home Saturday. He was 56.

Mims suffered a paralyzing injury on the football field in 1953, his senior year at MHS. The injury, a transection of the spinal cord at the fifth vertebrae, confined Mims to a wheelchair for most of the remainder of his life.

After that, though, he went on to attend classes at Midland College and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, and his work with the Midland Mental Health Center and the Crisis Intervention-Suicide Prevention programs were long noted.

He and his sister Dixie owned WGM Properties, and he made a living in the Midland real estate market mostly as a property manager.

"He would've been a town leader in any town he was living," said Paul Davis, a childhood friend and MHS teammate of Mims'. "I don't know how he did it, because it was a real struggle for him to be out of bed. But he always had some sort of job going."

According to Davis, Mims was not bitter about his injury, or anything else.

"I never heard him make one negative comment about football or anything else in his life. He was a wonderful individual and could be an inspiration to many people."

As a high school athlete, Mims was an all-district end for the 1952 Bulldogs under head coach Tugboat Jones, and was even invited by Notre

Cowboys try to shake jinx

TEMPE, Ariz. — Jimmy Johnson has been at the helm of the Dallas Cowboys a little over two years, but already he's developed a healthy dislike of Sun Devil Stadium.

Johnson's two trips with the Cowboys into the home of the Phoenix Cardinals have produced 24-20 and 20-3 losses, and the bad memories go even farther back. Before he left college coaching, Johnson's Miami team was bumped out of the national championship in a 14-10 loss to Penn State in the 1987 Fiesta Bowl, played on the natural turf at Sun Devil.

"I never like to go to that place, but it's on the schedule, so I guess we'll play it," Johnson said.

■ Dallas Cowboys at Phoenix Cardinals, 7 p.m., TNT.

The Cowboys (1-2) and Cardinals (2-1), similar in their youthful look and reputation for having improved under new coaching staffs, shared similar embarrassment a week ago. Not only did both lose, they were shut out by division rivals.

The Philadelphia Eagles, victimized by the Cardinals the previous week, took out their frustrations in a 24-0 drubbing of the Cowboys, and Washington, which barely beat Dallas on Monday night, crushed the Cardinals 34-0 with six days' rest.

The Eagles sacked Troy Aikman 11 times and handed the Cowboys a futility record they'd like to forget — 90 yards in total offense. But Johnson said his team wouldn't have any trouble remembering the previous record for inefficiency. That was 100 yards gained against Phoenix in the game here a year ago.

Meanwhile, the Cardinals had anemic yardage totals of their own, picking up 165 yards against the Redskins and ranking second-to-last above only New England in the NFL with 655 for the season.

Cardinals coach Joe Bugel said he expected Johnson to go back to the run, both to protect Aikman and to exploit the ability of Emmitt Smith.

"His personality is to rush the football,

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — It was Illinois at its best and Houston nearly at its worst.

Illini coach John Mackovic had asked his football team to play at its highest level and he got it Saturday. The Illini pounded No. 21 Houston 51-10 as Jason Verduzco, not David Klingler, was the hot quarterback, throwing three touchdown passes to Gus Palma.

"We have never risen to that level in my four years here," Mackovic said. "We asked our team for a championship performance."

Klingler, Houston's record-setting passer, had four passes intercepted and was sacked four times as Illinois (2-1) handed the Cougars (1-2) a second straight embarrassing loss. Miami beat Houston 40-10 nine days ago.

"Not only did Illinois keep us off the field, but they were scoring while on the field," said Klingler. "They are a good, solid, fundamental football team."

Houston coach John Jenkins said the loss wasn't Klingler's fault.

"Total team loss today," he said. "As a start-point, old John Jenkins here, I've got to work a lot harder."

Illinois defenders pressured Klingler all day.

"Klingler is a great quarterback," said Illini linebacker Mike Poloskey. "It wasn't his fault they weren't scoring any points; it was our fault — we were getting to him."

Verduzco, who completed 16 of 22 passes for 340 yards, hit Palma with TDs of 37 yards in the first quarter, 21 in the second and 40 in the third quarter.

Kameno Bell had two 1-yard touchdowns runs. Clinton Lynch scored on a 50-yard run, Joe Muti raced 57 yards for a TD and Chris Richardson booted a 27-yard field goal for Illinois.

"Everything went well today," said Lynch. "We just came out as the underdog and played a great game."

Houston got a 23-yard field goal from Roman Anderson in the first quarter, and Klingler passed 15 yards to John Brown in the third quarter.

Florida, Georgia, Southern Cal all defeated in week of upsets

LINCOLN, Neb. — Billy Joe Hobert ran for two touchdowns and passed for one as fourth-ranked Washington rallied in the fourth quarter to beat No. 9 Nebraska Saturday night.

Washington (2-0) trailed 21-16 at the start of the final period, but took the lead on an 8-yard TD pass from Hobert to Orlando McKay with 11:20 left.

The Huskies made it 29-21 on Hobert's 3-yard scoring run with 7:26 remaining and clinched the victory when Jay Barry dashed 81 yards for a touchdown with 5:38 left.

Hobert completed 23 of 40 passes for 283 yards as the Huskies handed Nebraska (2-1) its sixth straight loss against a ranked team. Beno Bryant ran for 139 yards and one touchdown, while Barry rushed for 110 yards and one score.

Washington, which trailed 14-6 at halftime, cut it to 14-9 on Travis Hanson's 43-yard field goal midway through the third period.

But Nebraska, which averaged 65 points in its first two games, extended its lead to 21-9 on Derek Brown's 2-yard TD run with 5:32 left in the third quarter after Mike Anderson recovered a fumbled punt by Bryant on the previous play. Washington pulled to 21-16 with 19 seconds remaining in the period on a 15-yard TD run by Bryant.

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Kirby DarDar ran the opening kickoff 95 yards on a reverse play and quarterbacks Marvin Graves and Doug Womack directed a potent Syracuse running attack as the No. 18 Orangemen defeated No. 5 Florida 38-21 Saturday.

With Graves and Womack alternating, Syracuse put together an 11-play drive to go ahead 35-21. Graves completed passes of 9 and 20 yards to Qadry Ismail and Marcus Lee rushed for 30 yards on the key drive.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Andy Kelly passed 10 yards to Mark Adams with 1:50 left Saturday to rally No. 6 Tennessee to a Southeastern Conference victory over No. 23 Mississippi State.

Kelly, under pressure from a blitz, lobbed the winning pass to Adams to cap an 88-yard drive in nine plays that took just under four minutes as Tennessee (3-0 overall, 1-0 SEC) thwarted a spirited comeback by the Bulldogs (3-1, 0-1).

Mississippi State rallied from a 17-3 deficit in the second half and held a 24-17 lead before Kelly led the Vols on two scoring drives in the final 12 minutes.

Kelly completed 27 of 41 passes for 330 yards and two touchdowns. Freshman James "Little Man" Stewart gained 108 yards as the Vols piled up 516 yards against what had been the leading defense in the SEC.

Clemson (2-0) picked up where it left off in the second half, scoring on its first two possessions to drop the Owls to 0-3. The Tigers were the third straight ranked foe for Temple.

Clemson held Temple to 23 yards in the second half and 104 for the game. The Tigers, ranked No. 1 in defense last year, have allowed 188 yards in two games.

No. 11 Notre Dame 49, Michigan St. 10

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Rick Mirer passed for three touchdowns, including a 55-yarder to Derek Brown, and brothers Tony and Reggie Brooks rushed for one each as No. 11 Notre Dame beat Michigan State.

Mirer passed for 208 yards on 11 completions as Notre Dame (2-1) rolled up 650 yards and got scores from seven players.

Bret Johnson, yanked last week in Michigan State's loss to Central Michigan, returned to throw 48 yards to Courtney Hawkins for the only touchdown for the Spartans (0-2).

Notre Dame's shaky rushing defense hardened and Michigan State failed to convert any of 10 third-down situations. The Irish halted Tico Duckett, the Spartan's leading rusher, on third down four times in the first half.

The Irish kept two first-half drives alive with fourth-down conversions in Michigan State territory.

Jerome Bettis' 3-yard run on fourth down produced a first down at the Michigan State 25, setting up Reggie Brooks' 2-yard run.

After Jim DelVerne's 35-yard field goal for Michigan State, Notre Dame drove to another touchdown. Willie Clark's 6-yard run on fourth down set up Mirer's 29-yard scoring pass to Tony Smith.

Hagan, playing despite a sprained right thumb that caused him to miss practice time during the week, completed 7 of 8 passes for 162 yards and TD throws of 40 yards to Rico Smith and 30 yards to Mark Henry before giving way to backup Vance Joseph midway through the second quarter.

Mean Green routed again, 72-0

Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — Fred Gatlin passed for 291 yards and Zeke Moore added 117 rushing for Nevada as the Wolf Pack, top-ranked in Division I-AA, rolled up 612 yards total offense in a rout of North Texas.

North Texas (1-2) suffered its worst loss ever and allowed the most points in school history. The Eagles' worst previous loss was to Southern Methodist by a 68-0 score in 1927.

Nevada (3-0) got two touchdowns apiece from running backs Keith Washington and Dedric Holmes. Moore scored just once, on a 1-yard run.

Gatlin, who played about two-thirds of the game, completed 17 of 28 attempts with no interceptions. He hit Bryan Reeves on a 27-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter and ran 12 yards for a TD a few minutes later.

Reeves totaled 195 yards on 10 pass receptions in Nevada's most one-sided victory since a 75-0 decision over Sacramento State in 1977. The Wolf Pack defense, limiting the Eagles to 248 yards, registered the team's first shutout since 1983.

Texas Colleges

North Texas drove to the Nevada 15-yard line late in the first half. Eagles quarterback Wendell Mosley threw an incomplete pass and then was sacked by George Buddy as the half ended, with Nevada ahead 31-0.

Chap golfers off to A&M

Staff Report

COLLEGE STATION — Midland College golfers have their first competition of the season Monday and Tuesday at College Station.

The Chaps, boasting almost the same personnel which took second in the 1991 national junior college tournament, will get an idea of how they stand during the First Annual Junior College Tournament at Texas A&M University.

Teams will be competing on the Texas A&M Golf Course, playing 36 holes on Monday and 18 holes on Tuesday.

"We lost two of the five players who were on the NJCAA runner-up team last June, but our reserves and new recruits should take up the slack very quickly," said MC coach Delnor Poss.

Heading up the sophomore returnees is Australian Darren Eckhardt, who was a first team NJCAA All-American last spring. Also returning from the runner-up team are Shaun Bishop of San Angelo and Steven Armstrong of Scotland.

Other sophomores back from last year's squad are Darren Griff of Canada, Grant Thompson of Scotland, and Justin Jacobsen of Edmond, Okla.

Freshmen joining the team are Darren Summers of Scotland and Shane McPherson of Baird.

"We realize that we lost two fine players from last spring's team," Poss said. "It's not easy to replace Andrew Coltart, who was tournament medalist runner-up and played this summer in the British Open and also was on the British Walker Cup team which played the U.S. last month.

"We also lost freshman J.C. Hernandez, whose strong grades and golf play enabled him to transfer to Vanderbilt University this fall."

Olympic committee makes hoop picks official

Associated Press

SECAUCAS, N.J. — We now know who is on the greatest basketball team ever assembled.

The first 10 members of the U.S. basketball team that will compete in Barcelona next summer were announced Saturday by USA Basketball.

There were no surprises from the names speculated on over the past few months as NBA players are eligible for Olympic play for the first time.

The players chosen for the "Dream Team" were: Charles Barkley, Philadelphia; Larry Bird, Boston; Patrick Ewing, New York; Magic Johnson, Los Angeles Lakers; Michael Jordan, Chicago; Karl Malone, Utah; Chris Mullin, Golden State; Scottie Pippen, Chicago; David Robinson, San Antonio; and John Stockton, Utah.

Bird and Jordan were question marks pending the former's back surgery and the latter's demanding schedule. As of now, they are both on the team whose roster was debated about for the last two years since FIBA's voting body overwhelmingly decided to allow NBA players to participate.

Jordan said there was never any doubt on his part.

"It was the decision I made and I wanted to keep it low-key," he said. "I knew all along I was going to play."

The only player omission which caused some surprise was that of Isiah Thomas. His being left off the team was protested by Detroit Pistons general manager Jack McCloskey who resigned in protest from the 13-man selection committee.

There had been rumors that Thomas, the Pistons point guard, was left off the team at the insistence of Jordan as part of an ongoing feud between the two.

Jordan called that ridiculous.

"If I had anything to do with the selection, my brother and sister would be going to Barcelona," he said. "Isiah Thomas and my relationship had nothing to do with who was on this team. That was blown way out of proportion."

Barkley said this is nothing knew.

"Someone is going to be left off, it's all relative," Barkley said. "Look at all the Olympic teams, someone has always been left off who people thought should have been on."

Thomas said he wasn't mad

"I would have liked to have the opportunity to play, and I would have liked to have the opportunity to contribute to the team," he said. "I have no personal feud with anybody."

V'BALL: Grafa, Butts play well in loss

(From 1B)

Lee coach Anita Corder, who saw her troops fall to 8-9 overall and 0-2 in 4-5A with the loss.

While Cooper (8-8, 1-1) patiently waited for the right shot and led Lee 11-5 in digs, the Lady Rebs' went on the attack and recorded 15 kills. But Lee's overanxious tenacity was at times its undoing, often sending attempted spikes into the net or out of bounds.

"We did what we had to do to keep the ball in play," said Cooper coach Beth Wills. "In the first game we were not moving very well and not able to use much power, but our hitters got stronger in the second game."

Junior Tamika Wigfall paced the Coogs with four digs and a number of assists, while Misty Cole had three kills and five blocks.

Leading the Lady Rebels were seniors Tiffany Grafa and Melinda Butts.

Grafa recorded three kills and a pair of blocks, and Butts served up four aces in the match. Also, Tekeira Strambler had five kills, but Lee was never able to put together more than the one point string in the first game.

"Today's match was like the second week of the preseason. We had some individuals shining, but there just wasn't any team effort," Corder said.

REBELS: Lee gives up first TD

ticed on it this week. Coach just put on the punt block."

Of the interception, Krautsch said, "We were playing a zone and I had the flats. I was just sitting there waiting."

James felt that was the key period in the game.

"We come out in the second half needing to get something going into the wind, but we end up with a blocked punt and an interception. We never recovered."

The Dons took advantage of a Lee fumble in the final period to move 42 yards and a seven-yard TD by Tremaine Brown. It was the first touchdown of the season against Lee, coming with 4:27 left in the 12th quarter of the season.

"Other than the turnover late in the game, I thought the offense played pretty well." Lee coach Earl Miller said, but he was not as kind to his defense, which gave up 213 yards rushing. No team had even gotten 100 prior to Saturday.

"A couple of people didn't play well on defense and it hurt everyone. I think they read their press clippings and started thinking they are better than they really are."

Lee is now 3-0, heading into District 4-5A play against Midland High Friday.

"The fun is over. They all count now," said Miller.

MIMS: Life inspired him

(From 1B)

Dame coach Frank Leahy to visit the Fighting Irish sidelines when they played Texas that year.

Mims was moved to running back in his senior year, but suffered the injury in a preseason scrimmage against Big Spring.

Though Mims was injured, he left the field under his own power and in the first years of his disability was know to walk some.

"He walked to the sidelines after he was hurt," Davis recalled. "He also walked around the old Western Clinic hospital. But the injury just kept getting worse and worse."

After the injury, Mims spent two months in 1954 at Gonzales' Warm Springs Foundation rehabilitating, then returned to Midland.

Tulsa 35, Texas A&M 34

TULSA, Okla. — T.J. Rubley threw a 63-yard touchdown pass to Chris Penn with 2:47 left and the big-play running of Chris Hughley carried Tulsa to a stunning victory over No. 15 Texas A&M.

Billy Cole recovered a fumble on the ensuing kickoff and Hughley, who rushed for 231 yards, got Tulsa (3-1) a first down on a 4-yard run with a minute to go that allowed the Golden Hurricane to run out the clock.

Jeff Granger threw four touchdown passes for the Aggies (1-1), but he played like the redshirt freshman he is in the second half, throwing two interceptions and fumbling a snap for an 11-yard loss on a third-and-one play.

The Aggies led 28-10 at halftime but Tulsa scored three touchdowns in a 6-minute, 16-second span in the third quarter to lead 29-28.

Granger fumbled on the first play of the half and Hughley scored from the 10 on the next play.

Two possessions later, Hughley ran 53 yards for his third touchdown of the game. After the first of two interceptions off Granger, Mark Matheson threw a 5-yard touchdown pass to Fallon Wacasey.

Granger, who completed 13 of 28 passes for 255 yards, threw a 28-yard TD pass to Tony Harrison to give the Aggies a 34-29 lead heading into the fourth quarter.

Tulsa had three serious threats before scoring when it counted the most.

Hughley ran 32 yards to the Aggies' 35, but Ron Jackson fumbled on the next play. T.J. Rubley was intercepted by Kevin Smith on the next series. It was Smith's 19th career interception, setting a Southwest Conference record.

After another big run by Hughley, this one 51 yards to the Texas A&M 29, Marlo Fair caught a Rubley pass but then fumbled in the open at the 16.

The Aggies moved to midfield before the drive stalled and David Davis punted to the 4 with 3:45 left.

After two passes from Rubley to Brian Thompson, Rubley hit Penn on a crossing pattern and he outran the Aggie secondary to the end zone.

Texas A&M freshman Greg Hill, who last week set an NCAA first-game record with 212 yards, had 125 yards on 25 carries and one touchdown. He carried 10 times for 69 yards on Texas A&M's first three possessions as the Aggies took a 21-3 lead.

No. 13 Auburn 14, Texas 10

AUSTIN — No. 13-ranked Auburn scored in the first minute of the game on a 25-yard pass to tight end Victor Hall, and cornerback Corey Barlow quieted a sellout Texas crowd with a 29-yard pass interception for a touchdown as the Tigers defeated the punchless Longhorns.

Texas (0-2) had hoped to rebound in its home opener following a 13-6 loss to Mississippi State that silenced high preseason expectations, but Auburn grabbed a 14-0 lead and extended its record to 3-0.

No. 14 Baylor 47, Missouri 21

WACO — J.J. Joe directed five touchdown drives and Keith Caldwell intercepted two passes as the 14th-ranked Baylor Bears routed the Missouri Tigers.

It was the second consecutive victory over a Big Eight Conference opponent for the Southwest Conference Bears (3-0), who stunned Colorado 16-14 last week.

Missouri (1-1) downed Illinois 23-19 in its opener.

Joe hit 13 of 23 for 300 yards, including a 75-yard scoring pass to Melvin Bonner in the third period. Bonner had 149 yards receiving. Joe also ran two yards for a touchdown.

Baylor struck for a touchdown less than three minutes into the game.

After a short punt, Baylor went 27 yards in five plays with the touchdown coming on a 6-yard run by David Mims who took a perfect pitch from Joe.

Caldwell's interception of Phil Johnson at the Missouri 34 setup another touchdown drive in eight plays. Mims gained eight yards on a fourth-and-1 from the Tiger 13 and on the next play Creig Stephens scored from five yards out to make it 14-0.

Wyoming 22, Texas Tech 17

LARAMIE, Wyo. — Tom Corontzos passed for 247 yards and two scores and Terrance Hendricks ran for 100 yards and a touchdown as Wyoming beat Texas Tech in a game not as close as its score.

Wyoming dominated the Southwest Conference Red Raiders (1-2) in total yardage and possession in improving to 2-2. The Cowboys outgained Texas Tech 467 yards to 254 yards and held the ball 37:19 of the game.

Hendricks helped the Western Athletic Conference Cowboys control the game with run after run through the right side of Texas Tech's defensive line. A 5-foot-10, 200-pound redshirt freshman making his first start, Hendricks led Wyoming to its first score late in the first quarter. On the 69-yard drive the tailback ran on four of the seven plays and gained 19 yards.

Arkansas 9, SW Louisiana 7

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Todd Wright kicked three field goals, including a 35-yarder with 12:01 left in the fourth quarter, as Arkansas came from behind to beat Southwestern Louisiana.

Wright, a junior who has made 12 consecutive field-goal attempts in Razorback Stadium, also was good from 27 and 38 yards.

Southwestern Louisiana had two chances to win late.

Richie Cunningham missed a 25-yard attempt with 6:15 left. Arkansas ran three plays and Southwestern Louisiana took over at the Razorback 45 after a 19-yard punt. On second-and-1, Mick Thomas stuffed Tyjuan Hayes for a yard loss. On third down, Michael James and Ray Lee Johnson corralled Greg Laxey for a 3-yard loss. On fourth down, MacKenzie Phillips sniffed out an inside reverse and nailed Laxey for no gain.

Quarterback Jason Allen, playing in his first game since the Oklahoma high school championship game of 1989, performed adequately for Arkansas. He completed nine of 19 passes for 109 yards and carried six times for 26 yards.

The Arkansas offense has scored only one touchdown in three games. It was the first time since an 18-3 victory over Rice in 1989 that Southwestern Louisiana had held an opponent without a touchdown.

Texas Christian 24 Oklahoma St. 21

STILLWATER, Okla. — Tim Schade threw for 281 yards and Roosevelt Collins made two big goal-line tackles in the final seconds as Texas Christian hung on to beat Oklahoma State.

Schade completed 26 of 36 passes as the Horned Frogs (3-0) of the Southwest Conference dismantled Oklahoma State's secondary in building a 24-0 lead early in the third quarter.

Kenny Ford came off the bench to lead the Cowboys (0-3) of the Big Eight Conference to three second-half touchdowns and he almost pulled out a victory before they stalled on two running plays inside the 5-yard line with no time outs to work with.

Collins threw Ford for a loss back to the 4, then stopped Russell Berrien at the 1. Oklahoma State was unable to get another play off.

The victory gave the Horned Frogs their best start since a 3-0 record in 1956.

Texas Christian took a 24-0 lead in the third quarter when Rico Wesley intercepted Ford and Jeff Wilkinson Mitch Ashley kicked a 25-yard field. The Frogs looked to make it 31-0 when Schade hit Kelly Blackwell near the goal line, but Scott Harmon jarred the ball loose and Jason Gildon recovered it in the end zone.

Gildon also had three quarterback sacks in the game.

Oklahoma State then drove 80 yards, highlighted by a 48-yard pass from Ford to Dmitri Markham and finished off with his 4-yard pass to Robert Kirksey.

The Cowboys drove 61 yards on a drive marked by two Texas Christian pass interference penalties, then following a 19-yard punt into a stiff wind, Ford threw a 26-yard touchdown pass to Bert Milliner to make it 24-21.

On the final drive, Ford ran for four yards on a fourth-and-1, then completed passes to Milliner and Kirksey to put the ball at the 5.

The victory got Rice (2-0) off to its best start since 1972. The loss dropped Tulane to 0-4.

Rice held off a Tulane comeback when linebacker Joey Wheeler intercepted Billy Duncan's pass for a possible tying two-point conversion with 1:54 left.

STEERS: Snyder next up on schedule for unbeaten Big Spring

knocked off fifth-ranked Lubbock Estacado, 21-18 last week.

"There were times when that was the case, but that's part of growing up as a team."

As the Steers grew, their lead mounted. They roared out to a 21-0 advantage before coasting to victory.

Big Spring quarterback Gerald Cobos completed 10-of-20 tosses for 161 yards and a pair of touchdowns. One of those TDs went to Oscar Cervantes, who grabbed five aerials on the day for 89 yards.

"This is the first game where I've been thrown to this much and I like it," said Cervantes, who also intercepted a pass late in the game.

"I took advantage of my chances and did what I had to do," he said. "He (Cobos) did a great job today."

Big Spring scored on its first three possessions, starting with a two-yard plunge by Maurice Evans.

Cervantes hauled in a nine-yard strike from Cobos to up the lead to 14-0, and Kevin Rodgers crossed the plane untouched with the first of his two two-yard scoring jaunts to put Big Spring up 21-0 with two plays gone in the second quarter.

LHS manufactured its only scoring drive on its next possession. It was an 18-play splurge of 89 yards, capped by Lester Lawrence's one-yard dive. It was the first time in three games that District 3-5A representative LHS put points on the scoreboard.

But it was not the Westerners' day. Big Spring blocked the extra-point try, and minutes later a Pat Chavarria interception return of 32 yards set the Steers up at the LHS 35-yard line with 1:21 left in the half.

Big Spring scored with two seconds to spare in the half when Cobos hit Pat Martinez with a nine-yard pass in the end zone, but the key play of the drive came when Abel Hilario hit Nick Roberson for a 26-yard gain out of punt formation on fourth-and-15.

"What's so much better this year than last is we've got more than one guy to throw to," Butler said. "We've got six different kids that we expect to catch the ball, and either Pat Chavarria and Nick Roberson could have been a quarterback if we'd needed one.

"Last year everybody knew that we were going to throw it to (Neil) Mayfield. This sure makes it easier for us."

Roberson, who had TD catches in each of the Steers' first two games, caught four passes for 80 yards.

Darius Hill led the ground attack for Big Spring with 73 yards on 10 carries.

Dana Hopkins led the way for the Westerners with 32 yards on 10 carries.

The Steers moved 60 yards in 10 plays to start the second half, upping the lead to 33-6 on Rodgers' second TD.

Tim Pearson's two two-yard blast finalized the scoring in the fourth quarter.

Next on Big Spring's agenda is a meeting Friday with Snyder, at 8 p.m. in Big Spring.

Jays blue, Sox within ½-game

Associated Press

BOSTON — Rookie Phil Plantier hit two home runs and Jack Clark and Bob Zupcic also connected Saturday as the Boston Red Sox charged to within one-half game of AL East-leading Toronto, routing the New York Yankees 12-1.

The Red Sox and Toronto, which fell 4-0 in Oakland, each have 67 losses. The Blue Jays led Boston by 11½ games on Aug. 7.

Boston scored in every inning except the first and rapped 14 hits. The Red Sox won their fourth in a row and for the 14th time in 17 games. They are 31-10 since the All-Star break.

Joe Hesketh (11-4) reached a career high in victories. He pitched eight innings and gave up four hits, including a solo homer by Steve Sax in the third. He struck out four and walked three.

Hesketh, released by both Montreal and Atlanta in 1990, is 9-3 in 14 starts since being moved from the bullpen on July 14.

Rookie Wade Taylor (7-11), who pitched seven shutout innings in Fenway Park on June 27, was unable to stop the Red Sox this time. He allowed seven runs on seven hits, two walks and a hit batter in 3 1-3 innings.

Athletics 4, Blue Jays 0

OAKLAND, Calif. — Willie Wilson's two-out, two-run double in the eighth inning broke up a scoreless duel between Mike Moore and Jimmy Key, leading the Oakland Athletics over the slumping Toronto Blue Jays.

The AL East-leading Blue Jays lost for the fifth time in six games. They began the day with a 1½-game lead over Boston, which played New York. Toronto had played four straight extra-inning games, one short of the major league record set in 1908 by Detroit.

Moore (15-8) beat Toronto for the fourth straight time this season. He gave up four hits in eight innings, and improved to 8-2 against the Blue Jays while pitching for Oakland.

Key (15-11) had allowed only two singles through seven innings before Mike Gallego singled with one out in the eighth. Mike Bordick's sacrifice bunt made Gallego the first Oakland runner to reach second base.

Rickey Henderson was then walked intentionally before Wilson lined a 1-1 pitch into the left-center field alley, scoring both runners for a 2-0 lead. Following another intentional walk to Jose Canseco, reliever Duane Ward came on and gave up RBI singles to pinch hitter Harold Baines and Terry Steinbach.

AL Roundup

Twins 8, Rangers 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin Tapani won for the 14th time in 16 decisions and the Minnesota Twins extended their AL West lead to seven games.

Brian Harper doubled twice and drove in two runs and Kent Hrbek hit a two-run homer as the Twins, helped by second-place Chicago's loss, cut their magic number for clinching the division to seven.

After losing seven of their first 10 games to Texas and six of their previous eight games overall, the Twins have won two in a row over the Rangers. Tapani (16-8) allowed eight hits and struck out six in his fourth complete game. For the 13th time in his 32 starts, he walked none. And for the 31st time, Tapani went at least five innings.

He outpitched Jose Guzman (12-6), who had been 5-0 with a 1.44 ERA in his previous six starts. Guzman gave up 10 hits, eight runs, walked four and struck out three in 6 2-3 innings.

After Kirby Puckett singled with two out in the first, Hrbek lined his 18th homer to right. The Twins are 38-15 when Hrbek drives in a run and 12-6 when he homers.

Texas tied it in the fourth on Julio Franco's single, Rafael Palmeiro's double, Ruben Sierra's RBI single and Kevin Reimer's double-play grounder. Franco went 2-for-4, raising his major-league-leading average to .342.

Indians 10, Orioles 1

CLEVELAND — Albert Belle drove in five runs with a home run and a bases-loaded double and Greg Swindell pitched the Cleveland Indians to a victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

The win was the Indians' sixth in the last nine games.

Belle leads the Indians with 27 home runs and 90 RBIs despite missing five weeks of the season because of a suspension for hitting a fan with a baseball and a month-long stint in the minors.

Joel Skinner had three of Cleveland's 16 hits.

Swindell (9-14) struck out seven and walked none, lowering his ERA to 3.43. At home, he is 7-7 with a 2.34 ERA.

Cal Ripken spoiled Swindell's shutout with a fourth-inning home run, his 31st, giving Baltimore at least one home run in 12 straight games. The team record of 14 was set in May 1987.

Ripken reached 100 RBIs for the third time in his career, and his first since 1985.

Rookie Arthur Rhodes (0-3) allowed five runs and seven hits in 3 1-3 innings. He has lasted four innings or less in five of his six starts.

Brewers 5, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Willie Randolph drove in three runs with three hits and the Milwaukee Brewers beat Detroit, the Tigers' fifth straight loss.

Cecil Fielder hit his major league-leading 43rd home run for Detroit, but the Tigers again failed to take advantage of a loss by AL East-leading Toronto. The Blue Jays have dropped five of six, but still lead the third-place Tigers by six games.

Bill Wegman (13-7) gave up three hits and tied a career high with 10 strikeouts in eight innings. He is 7-1 in his last nine starts, and Doug Henry pitched the ninth for his 10th save.

Frank Tanana (11-12) lost his fifth straight decision. Randolph's RBI single with two outs in the ninth prevented Tanana from getting his third complete game of the year.

Randolph raised his average to .336. He has the second-best average in the league, although will not have enough plate appearances to qualify for the batting championship.

Fielder, celebrating his 28th birthday, homered in the first inning. That put him two ahead of Jose Canseco, and a large group of fans in left field began serenading him with "Happy Birthday."

Angels 4, White Sox 3

CHICAGO — A throwing error by pitcher Melido Perez allowed Dave Winfield to score from first base in the eighth inning and the California Angels beat the Chicago White Sox.

The White Sox, who took an early edge on Bo Jackson's two-run homer, began the night trailing AL West-leading Minnesota by six games.

Winfield singled with one out against Brian Drahman (2-2) in the eighth. After Perez relieved and retired Gary Gaetti on a fly ball, Luis Sojo hit a trickler in front of the plate. Perez fielded the ball cleanly, but threw it down the right-field line.

Kyle Abbott (1-2) pitched seven innings for his first major league victory. Bryan Harvey worked the ninth for his 41st save.

Jackson, who tied Friday night's game with a two-run, pinch-homer with two outs in the ninth inning, connected in the third inning for a 3-2 lead. It was his third home run of the season.

The Angels tied it at 3 in the sixth when Luis Polonia singled and later scored on a sacrifice fly by Winfield.

California scored twice in the second against Charlie Hough when Winfield walked, Dave Gallagher hit an RBI double and Sojo hit an RBI single. Ozzie Guillen single home a run in the Chicago's half of the inning.

Mariners 4, Royals 1

SEATTLE — Dave Fleming pitched five shutout innings in his first major league start and the Seattle Mariners beat the Kansas City Royals.

Fleming (1-0) allowed five hits, struck out two and walked one. He was recalled from Class AAA Calgary on Sept. 13. Mike Schooler came on in the ninth for his sixth save.

Mark Gubicza (8-11) lost his fourth consecutive decision, giving up four runs and nine hits in 3 1-3 innings. He struck out three and walked two.

Seattle took the lead in the first when Harold Reynolds singled, stole second and scored on Ken Griffey Jr.'s single. Griffey later scored on a single by Greg Briley.

Edgar Martinez hit his 14th home run of the season in the second. Reynolds doubled home Martinez in the fourth.

The Royals scored their only run in the eighth on a pinch-single by George Brett.

The Royals loaded the bases off Fleming with no outs in the fourth but could not score. Kansas City put runners at first and second with no outs in fifth, but reliever Mike Jackson retired three straight Royals to end the inning.

Thomas cheers for U.S. team

DETROIT (AP) — Isiah Thomas will cheer for the U.S. men's Olympic basketball team in Barcelona, even if he is not part of the team.

"I would have liked to have the opportunity to play, and I would have liked to have the opportunity to contribute to the team," the Detroit Pistons guard said Saturday after the first 10 members of the Olympic team were named.

"I wish them luck. I hope they win the gold medal. I'll be rooting for them."

There were no surprises as USA Basketball released the players for the "Dream Team."

"I'm sure they had some tough choices to make because there's a lot of incredible talent in the NBA," Thomas said. "There are other players that were left off the team.

"I think we all would have welcomed the opportunity to play."

Thomas' omission from the team was protested by Pistons general manager Jack McCloskey.

Pittsburgh clinches no worse than tie in East

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates clinched a tie for the NL East championship Saturday night, beating Philadelphia 7-0 on Zane Smith's six-hitter.

ther another victory over the Phillies or a loss by second-place St. Louis in New York. The Cardinals lost 5-3 to the Mets earlier in the day.

Pittsburgh is trying to become the first NL East champion to repeat since the 1977-78 Phillies. The Pirates' 13½-game lead is larger than those of the other division leaders combined.

Smith (16-10) set a career high for victories. He won his fourth straight start and, helped by three double plays, has allowed only five earned runs in his last 35 innings.

The Pirates scored three times in the third off Jose DeJesus (10-8). Orlando Merced opened the inning with a single, stole and moved to third on Jay Bell's single. A wild pitch enabled one run to score, Bobby Bonilla singled home another and Barry Bonds tripled for his 105th RBI.

In a four-run eighth, Bell tripled off reliever Steve Searcy and scored on Van Andy Slyke's single. Mike LaValliere and Jose Lind hit RBI singles.

Dodgers 2, Braves 1

LOS ANGELES — Game 2 of this weekend's NL West showdown went to the Los Angeles Dodgers, and it took a stirring comeback in the eighth and ninth innings to do it.

Juan Samuel ended an 0-for-15 slump with a game-winning double as Los Angeles moved back into a half-game lead Saturday night with a 2-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves. The teams complete the series Sunday when Atlanta ace Tom Glavine (19-10) opposes Ramon Martinez (16-11).

Los Angeles, which lost 3-0 Friday night to fall a half-game back, trailed 1-0 before Mitch Webster tied the score with a single following an error by shortstop Rafael Belliard.

Then in the ninth, Kal Daniels singled with one out off loser Mike Stanton (3-4) and Samuel hit a 1-0 pitch to right-center field, scoring Daniels from first as right fielder David Justice couldn't cut the ball off in the gap.

Roger McDowell (9-9) won in relief of Orel Hershiser, who allowed one run in six innings.

Atlanta grabbed a 1-0 lead in the fourth on Terry Pendleton's leadoff triple off the center-field fence and Justice's RBI grounder to third.

Veteran Charlie Leibrandt, signed by the Braves for $8 million over three years last winter as a free agent, kept the Dodgers in check, taking a two-hitter into the eighth.

But the Dodgers, on the brink of falling 1½ games out with two weeks left, came back with a little help from the Braves.

Samuel led off the eighth with a grounder to the left of Pendleton at third. He got in front of the ball, but let it go through his legs for an error.

Mike Scioscia sacrificed and Belliard made a low throw to first on Alfredo Griffin's grounder to shortstop, leaving runners at first and third.

Webster, a pinch hitter, then singled for the tying run and Brett Butler singled, loading the bases.

But the Dodgers couldn't get the go-ahaed run then. Leibrandt got Mike Sharperson to ground into a force at home. Stanton then relieved and struck out Darryl Strawberry, ending the inning.

Mets 5, Cardinals 3

NEW YORK — Howard Johnson hit his National League-leading 36th home run and tied a club record for RBIs in a season as the New York Mets defeated St. Louis.

The Pirates entered a night game against Philadelphia with a chance to clinch a tie for the NL East title with a victory.

Johnson drove in two runs to raise his league-leading RBI total to 108, tying Darryl Strawberry's club record set last year.

Reds 4, Astros 1

HOUSTON — Scott Scudder held the Astros to three hits through 6 2-3 innings and Chris Sabo drove in two runs as the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Houston Astros to snap a five-game losing streak.

Scudder (6-7) gave up one run on three hits while striking out six and walking three. After walking the first two batters in the second, Scudder retired 17 of the next 18 batters he faced.

Rob Dibble pitched the ninth for his 30th save, the most by a Reds' pitcher since Clay Carroll recorded 32 in 1972.

Rookie Jeff Juden (0-1) was the loser in his first major league start, going five innings and giving up three runs on six hits.

Padres 3, Giants 2

SAN DIEGO — Greg Harris continued his mastery over San Francisco and Bip Roberts had four hits and scored two runs as the San Diego Padres defeated the Giants.

Harris (7-5) entered the seventh inning with 26 1-3 consecutive scoreless innings against the Giants covering 11 outings. Mark Leonard broke the string with his second homer of the year.

National award cites Scharbauer

Since the latter 1800s when Texas was known for tall, waving grasses and distant horizons, the Scharbauer name has been associated with cattle, ranching and land interests.

In those days, Texas was a land of cattle, ranches, and horses, and today that remains true although other industries have eclipsed the state's agriculture roots.

Through the years cowboys on the Scharbauer family's nine ranches have diligently burned the "JC" and "5" brands into Scharbauer cattle and horses, bringing them into the fold of a proud ranching family known throughout the state.

That name was honored again Saturday when Clarence Scharbauer Jr. was presented The National Golden Spur Award in Lubbock. The honor was timely and underscores Scharbauer's lifetime work as a horseman, cattleman, sheepman and leader.

Scharbauer's renown derives mainly from his longtime interest in racehorses, boosted primarily by the family's ownership of Alysheba, the 1987 Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner which went on to win the Breeder's Cup in 1988 and to be named Horse of the Year.

Of course, Scharbauer's interest in raising prize horses didn't stop with Alysheba and today the Scharbauer name is known far and wide from Ruidoso, N.M., where his interest in racehorses began in the mid-1950's. Citing his impact as a quarter horse breeder, an official of the American Quarter Horse Association recently noted that "Scharbauer has contributed significantly toward the goal of raising horses with correct conformation."

That interest has also buoyed Midland's prestige among those who raise horses, appreciate good horses, and respect the finer points of developing bloodlines of quality animals. It has literally "put Midland on the map" from the standpoint of producing high-quality horses. That is a significant contribution for the community.

Congratulations are certainly in order to Clarence Scharbauer Jr. and the entire Scharbauer family for the well-deserved honor.

It's time to notice our Bill of Rights

This week the Constitution is 104 years old; the weeklong celebration also marks the bicentennial of the Bill of Rights, without which Americans would not enjoy the freedom to speak, worship and assemble, the freedom of press and petition; the protection against unreasonable searches and seizures; the freedom to keep and bear arms. It is the Bill of Rights that guaranteed our right to trial by jury, the freedom from having to testify against ourselves and the right to due process of law.

Those are the rights that slide off the tongues of miscreants just as readily as they pass unnoticed, in print, beneath the eyes of newspaper readers. We cherish them and take them for granted as if they were members of our own families — as essential as they are to our own survival.

There may not be a more critical time than the 1990s to take notice of the Bill of Rights. For instance, we ought to note the many small ways that newly freed nations write their own constitutions — showing the profound influence of our own.

Even more important, an evolving Supreme Court in the '90s means a continually evolving interpretation of our rights. It is every American's duty to be vigilant about those rights, and to understand how the direction of the court will affect their lives and the lives of their children and grandchildren after them.

Welk birthplace funds show spending outrage

The Bush administration, which has orchestrated some of the largest spending increases in history, is finally trying to show that it's getting tough about federal spending. They absolutely will not tolerate any more of this Lawrence Welk stuff.

You may recall that last year Congress earmarked $500,000 in taxpayers' money to renovate the North Dakota birthplace of bandleader Welk. The ensuing outrage was justified but a bit too widely shared. Congressmen whose careers have been little more than pork-grabs joined in the righteous indignation over Congress' frivolous, free-spending ways.

Let's be clear: The Welk appropriation was outrageous. It served briefly as a useful symbol of Congress' lack of spending discipline even in times of fiscal catastrophe.

But if it's symbols the Bush people want, they've got plenty to choose from, juicy globs of pork that pass into the budget with the administration's consent: grants to study the Hatfield-McCoy feud, for example, or to purchase the home of William McKinley's in-laws.

But the constraints aren't so constraining. For the first time since World War II, Washington spending will swallow up 25 percent of the U.S. Gross National Product this year. Even with those supposedly torturous spending caps, discretionary domestic spending next year will be at its second highest level in history — after the last budget of the Carter administration.

Against this monument of indiscipline, Lawrence Welk's birthplace looks pretty puny. The upside is that $500,000 will be saved. At this rate, the administration may balance the budget by, oh, the year 2300.

Terrorists may be unemployed

WASHINGTON — The collapse of communism could throw thousands of international terrorists out of work.

From Lisbon to Lebanon, the billion-dollar terrorism industry bankrolled by Moscow and the Eastern Bloc is in danger of going into Chapter 11 after decades of prosperity during the Cold War.

Anderson

Czechoslovakia, for example, no longer supplies plastic explosives and training to the PLO. Stasi, the notorious former East German secret police, no longer provides vital assistance and refuge to the German Red Army Faction, the Italian Red Brigade and a parade of others of that violent variety.

If international terrorism is crushed it would represent perhaps the biggest peace dividend — or windfall — to come from the wake of the Russian revolution. At least that's the hope of Western intelligence officials. Similarly, the disarming and defanging of Saddam Hussein during the Persian Gulf War has removed the terrorists' chief mentor and moneyman from the Middle East. The PLO's alliance with Saddam led to the cutoff of petrodollars that other Arab nations once gave the PLO.

Together, these two events have rolled back a threat that has bedeviled several U.S. presidents, and has threatened to plunge the world into a dark age of violence and fear.

But the victory over terrorism is far from won. During the first six months of this year alone, 55 civilians, including six Americans, were killed and 163 wounded in more than 386 terrorist incidents worldwide. In July, a suitcase bomb was intercepted in Sao Paulo, Brazil, just before being loaded onto a Japan Airlines flight bound for Los Angeles.

Some terrorism experts even believe the United States is squandering a historic opportunity by not acting more aggressively.

"The window of opportunity presented by these events, however, already is closing," according to one report prepared by the influential Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank. "The Iranian-backed Hezballah ('Party of God') terrorist network is reorganizing, and the Palestinian Islamic Jihad ('Holy War') and other groups are forming to attack Western interests globally. And Iran and some other sponsors of terrorism have emerged strengthened from the U.S. war against Iraq."

Terrorism, the poor man's weapon, can render even superpowers relatively helpless and impotent. Some experts are calling for a "hot war" against terrorism — destruction of their training bases, capture of terrorists overseas, stepped up covert action against countries that sponsor terrorism and better coordination among the 26 federal agencies that have a role in this war.

Meanwhile, several countries are moving to fill the void left by the Soviets and Eastern Bloc countries such as Bulgaria and East Germany. Cuba, Iran, Iraq, Libya, North Korea and Syria are on the State Department's 1991 list of state sponsors of terrorism.

There is also mounting concern that tomorrow's terrorist may have doomsday weapons in his arsenal, that car bombs may give way to chemical and biological weapons, even nuclear. If victory is within sight, the bottom line is there was never a greater need for vigilance. It's one reason why, despite the end of the Cold War, some believe that this is no time to consider slashing the estimated $30 billion annual intelligence budget.

GEORGE WILL

It's daunting task, but Bush can be beaten

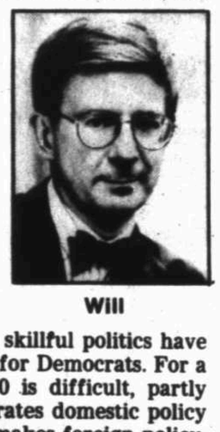
WASHINGTON — Refuting the arithmetic of fatalism is the challenge to any Democrat who would be president. It is a daunting task, but it can be done.

The arithmetic turns on two numbers, 270 and $500 billion. The former is the number of electoral votes needed to win. The latter is the size the annual deficit is approaching.



Will

By January 1993, two Republican presidents in a dozen years will have presided over the quadrupling of the national debt that existed when Reagan was inaugurated. Republicans' reckless governance and skillful politics have created today's dilemma for Democrats. For a Democrat, getting to 270 is difficult, partly because the deficit generates domestic policy paralysis. This paralysis makes foreign policy, George Bush's claim to competence, the only arena of presidential action.

Democrats' fatalism about the presidency is the result of familiar facts about electoral votes.

In the 10 elections since 1952, Republicans have won seven and lost two (1960, 1976) narrowly. Since 1952, 27 states with 274 votes have voted Republican eight or more times. In the six elections since 1968, Republicans have won five. Thirty-four states with 336 votes have voted Republican five of the six times. Twenty-one states with 191 votes have voted Republican all six times.

Since 1952, Republicans have won 69 percent of the electoral votes; since 1968, 79 percent; in the 1980s, 89 percent. In their last four victories, Republicans have won 91 percent, better than FDR's four-election average of 88.3. As population moves south and west, the Republican advantage grows. If the 1992 allocation of electoral votes had been in place in 1988, Bush's margin would have widened by 10 votes.

In 10 of the 11 former Confederate states, Dukakis failed to reach 44 percent of the popular vote. Those states, which had 138 electoral votes in 1988, now have 147. In those states, the Democrats' record in their last five defeats is: two wins, 53 losses. In the 24 contiguous states west of the Mississippi, the Democrats' record in the last five elections is: 12 wins, 108 losses.

One question about 1992 is: Which Democrat can reclaim support recently lost from Southern whites and Northern ethnics?

The South, the poorest region, is susceptible to economic liberalism, right? Evidently not. Dukakis (like McGovern and Mondale) was shut out there, and even ran behind his national average.

One of every 16 urban Americans has been robbed or mugged, so almost every urbanite at least knows people who are victims of crime, and all urbanites are afraid. A candidate who is a social liberal is apt to be mugged by these voters.

From 1952 through 1984 an average of 20 percent of voters calling themselves Democrats voted for Republican presidential candidates. In 1972, Nixon got 33 percent of those. Bush got only 10 percent, but carried 40 states. To win, a Democrat must attract lots of Republicans. Tom Harkin? Mario Cuomo? Be serious.

In 1988, a wise Democrat said the nominee should be "a combination of Horace Greeley and Ulysses Grant, someone who can both go west and capture the South." Democrats unwisely nominated a Northeastern liberal.

Fortunately for Democrats, the task of breaking the Republicans' "electoral college lock" points toward a strategy for governance. If Democrats want to go on another ideological bender, Harkin or Cuomo will do. But if Democrats want four years of power rather than four months of feckless fun, then the candidate should be someone from a long way west of Washington.

It should be omeone who understands that for millions of Americans the two great facts about government today are its failures at two primary functions — the provision of domestic tranquility and economic opportunity; he should be someone who knows that crime is not a code word for racism, it is a word for barbarism and misery; he should be omeone who knows it is a scandal when not one of 4,000-plus domestic programs is killed by a bipartisan budget deal (that of last October); he should be someone who will run right at the incumbent on the ground that it is disgusting for Americans to be dying from stray bullets, and for schools and bridges and trauma care.

Could such a candidate win? Why not?

The Berlin Wall is a million souvenirs, the Communist Party is proscribed in Russia, the Minnesota Twins have gone from last to first in a single season. But Bush losing is unimaginable? Can't Democrats comprehend how quickly a party can go from being immolated to being inaugurated?

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Casey was 'on the nose' about Soviet Union

WASHINGTON — On Nov. 10, 1982, the day Leonid Brezhnev died, as all the sages of Congress and media thumbsuckers were speculating on the Kremlin succession, Director of Central Intelligence William J. Casey sent a CIA assessment to President Reagan.

Safire

The last sentence of that memo concluded with the director's personal judgment: "As for me, I bet Andropov on the nose and Gorbachev across the board."

Horseplayers know that "on the nose" means "to win," and "across the board" is a hedged bet "to win, place and show," or to come in among the first three.

Bill Casey's intelligence judgment was sound: the KGB's Andropov won, and his protege, the little-known Gorbachev, was placed in the line of succession after Chernenko.

That's the sort of valuable prediction that we pay CIA directors for.

Casey was extraordinarily good at that, but you would never know it from the ghoulish impeachment trial now going on in the guise of Senate confirmation hearings of Robert Gates.

Looming in the background is the contemptible charge that this lifelong patriot, while running the 1980 Reagan campaign, conspired with Ayatollah Khomeini to delay the release of American hostages lest credit go to President Carter.

Casey's widow, Sophia, has shown me documents about his suspicions that Carter would pull an "October surprise."

In a Nov. 2, 1980, memo to Reagan, Casey dismissed a potential Carter ransom effort as likely to be seen as "a desperate last attempt to manipulate the hostages again for political benefit;" Casey's judgment was that "we should say very little and leave it that way."

As CIA chief, did he comprehend the Soviet threat and incipient economic rot?

Yes to both: when he reported at the outset that Moscow was behind state-sponsored terrorism, doves clucked indulgently — but now we're seeing how right Casey was.

What about the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contras from sales of arms for Iran?

I have no doubt that Bill Casey personally supervised Ollie North's illegal operation, backdated findings, wrongfully misled Congress and brought deserved shame on his agency and president.

My old friend and I had a severe falling-out about that time, but now I believe this arrogance and degeneration of judgment had much to do with a brain tumor.

In the Gates hearings, we are hearing only of the diseased, temperamental Casey, not of the healthy, insightful hard-liner who contributed so much to the victory over Communism.

Gates cannot defend his old boss and patron if he wants to be confirmed. On the contrary, he must distance himself from Casey's concluding lawlessness.

The nominee properly admits he should have known more of the illegal diversion, should have told his boss he had a need to know.

Let's assume Gates has an excellent forgetfulness and was deft enough to stay on the frayed fringe of guilty knowledge.

Assume also this frustrated careerist will keep his sworn word to resign rather than obey a presidential order to pull the wool over Senate oversight — a promise he refused to make last time up. Should he be confirmed?

Yes. He's a cold fish but he knows his stuff about economic intelligence, and if anybody's eyes have been lifted to the necessity of truth in covert action, it's Gates.

Unlike the bad Casey, he has little political backing to be arrogant about; like the good Casey, he remained vigilant toward the Soviet Union.

LETTERS

Police officer deserves thanks

I am writing this letter in regards to a certain police officer who I feel put her excellent training, experience, and concern for the public to the test on the morning of Sept. 16.

I am a paramedic firefighter on the south side of town. At 3:45 a.m., the alarm sounded. A fire was reported in our district by a police officer on patrol.

Upon arrival, we found a house filled with white smoke too thick to enter without self-contained breathing apparatus on. A grease fire was found on the stove and quickly extinguished.

After further investigation, we came to find out that police officer B.J. Land was on routine patrol and smelled smoke. Then she saw smoke coming from a house on south Johnston Street. While looking through the window, she saw a man on the floor, incapacitated, choking from all the smoke and unable to extricate himself from the house. Officer Land then broke the window, unlocked the door, and rescued the gentleman from the toxic smoke before fire personnel arrived. An ambulance was called and the patient was given medical attention. If it wasn't for officers, such as B.J. Land who carry out continued vigilance of our neighborhood streets, this gentlemen may not have seen the sunrise the following morning.

The Midland Fire Department thanks her and her department for the help given us on these emergency calls.

Sheriff, deputies showed respect

I just went through the death of a close friend. Upon going to the funeral of this friend, our honorable Sheriff Gary Painter was in attendance.

As it came time to leave the funeral home to go to the cemetery, Painter and his fellow deputies conducted traffic for the funeral procession. These fine officers stood in the street and held their hats over their hearts, as did all the officers at all the entrances. I feel this shows great respect for the family and friends who lost the loved one.

I want to thank Sheriff Gary Painter and his men. They did a fine job and made saying goodbye to a close friend much easier.

Calling groups racist is ignorant

This is in response to a letter printed in the Sept.15th Midland Reporter-Telegram.

I attended the Klan rally expecting to be among the minority in a group that supported the Klan, but was pleased to discover I was part of the majority, people who find the Klan offensive and amoral.

If the Klan had the right to assemble and spew hate and racist rhetoric through loud speakers, then the opposing group had just as much right to express vocally their anger and disgust toward the Klan. In last week's letter this behavior was labeled immoral, offensive to the religious community and to those who brought their children to hear the Klan. Is it not immoral to spread hate, to commit and support violence against human beings based on the color of their skin? Is it not irresponsible to expose impressionable children to such blatant racism?

The statement that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) are racist groups is absurd and exhibits the ignorance which allows organizations like the Ku Klux Klan to exist.

County Commissioners' taxation, budgets

Salary doesn't go up, but taxes do

Although I am sure that the new tax rate hike that the Midland County Commissioners Court proposes is needed, I can't see how the working people with low income and the senior citizens of the community can afford it.

Every time I turn around these days, the city, the county, the schools, the hospital and the state are wanting more and more revenue.

Unfortunately, my paychecks along with those of many others do not go up when new taxes are added on. We all simply absorb the new debt, cutback a little, and have to go on.

I think that maybe Midland County should try to trim back a little, and balance the budget like a working man or woman has to balance their budget.

Therefore, I have to oppose the newly proposed 27.5 percent tax rate hike that our Midland County Commissioners Court voted on Sept. 13.

Taxpayers let your voices be heard

First, thanks for publishing the county budget on Sept. 17. Examination of the budget revealed that my office was cut an additional $54,040, after I had already cut $21,937 from my 1991/92 budget. I knew of this change ONLY after reading the newspaper. Six employees are being removed from my budget with the following statement: "It is our hope that this action will persuade your office to enable the Commissioners' Court to contract with the Midland Central Appraisal District for ad valorem collections beginning in October 1992" and further "In any case, funding above the new salary line item cannot be provided."

Ten departments within the county are receiving increases, Data Processing over $30,000 and most departments aligned with the Court System. The Commissioners have "allowed" the Facilities Manager $4.9 million. He now has two new trucks, a mobile phone, a CB radio, beepers and a police scanner.

They say this is for "savings" to the taxpayer (not funding my collections), but do you see your taxes being reduced? Of course NOT! County Judge Charles "Bro" Seltzer has plans already to give one of his employees over a $4,000 raise per year. Doesn't this tell you — the taxpayers — that this money is already "planned" for use in a "favored" department? You won't see a decrease of your taxes, but you will lose another ELECTED position to an APPOINTED position!

In 1990, motor vehicle fees paid for the entire operation of my office. These fees exceeded my budget by $144,000 and were paid to the County Treasurer. In all, we paid the County Treasurer $1,352,045 of fees over my budget in 1990.

An Attorney General's opinion (JM733 — December, 1987) upheld the constitutional duty and right of the county tax assessor-collector to collect county taxes. The commissioners have gone "the extra mile" of "power" to remove the funding of this office. Why don't they give up their constitutional part-time jobs?

Taxpayers wake up, let your voices be heard. A public hearing on the tax rate will be held Monday, Sept. 23 at 5:30 p.m. in the Commissioners Courtroom. Be present, know the facts and voice your opinions!

Percentages seem irrelevant

On Tuesday, Sept. 17th, the Midland Reporter-Telegram has as a headline on Page 1B "Commissioners officially file 1992 budget."

Hidden away on the next page in very small print was the 1992 budget drafted by these commissioners.

Does the average person on the street have any idea how much a teenie little .09 million dollars is ($90,000)? Or .15 million ($150,000) or .05 million ($50,000)? These little "percentages" seem almost irrelevant, don't they?

Has anyone wondered why the total amount of increases the commissioners granted totaled $504,755 (and that a teenie little .15 million of that amount was for Judicial Department increases (not including the $80,000 plus state-paid salaries each for Midland County's three Texas state district court judges)?

And why did the county court-at-law court number two alone need a $59,236 increase (the average person could buy a house for that amount) not to mention the other county court-at-law number one with a $29,734 increase? District courts were granted a $22,207 increase; the District Attorney Department received an increase of $26,655.

Keep reading the fine print and fetch your magnifying glass to see that a Law Library was granted an increase of $22,700 while Sheriff Painter's budget was cut a teenie little .36 million ($360,000), two employment positions and 24 vehicles. Who and how are they going to get there if you should need help? I guess we could call a commissioner.

Somewhere, I'm having trouble with these numbers. Two plus two used to equal four.

The total Public Safety (are we safe yet?) budget was decreased by that little 'ole .38 million ($380,000); the Constable budget was cut by $24,138. Heaven help us! I hope the Boy Scouts aren't away at camp when we have a burglary, homicide, robbery, etc., because then we would be in REAL trouble.

Sheriff Painter is more experienced

An examination of the budget mandated by County Judge Charles Seltzer may offer some explanation of the motivation behind his unsparing attack against the sheriff's department. There is a reported $174,000 in the seized funds account under the control of Sheriff Painter. By the sheerest coincidence, the cuts demanded in the operations division budget are $196,400. This represents a devastating 39 percent cut as compared to last year's budget, but of more interest, the balance in the account and the amount of cuts are only $20,000 apart.

Judge Seltzer has decreed that one criminal investigator be left in the department that has been staffed by four officers. According to the judge, he made these changes in accordance with a 1987 law which demanded he do so. I doubt that any law would require the commissioners court to restrict the sheriff's office to one criminal investigator and leave the district attorney's office with four like positions. Several comparable Texas counties were contacted and in no instance were there more investigators in the district attorney's office than in the sheriff's office.

Is Midland County the only county in which the 1987 law to which Judge Seltzer refers to be observed? Is the judge more interested in controlling seized monies than having an effective sheriff's department?

If Judge Seltzer were to be given dominion over these funds, then he, not our elected sheriff, would decide what additional training our officers might need, what radio equipment and firearms should be available to them in patrol cars, etc.

A look at the map of Texas reveals that we sit immediately north of Big Bend, a prime target of cocaine importers. We have an international airport and a number of truck lines that provide easy access to every city in this country. Where better to locate a major crack cocaine processing and distribution center? Our geographical location suggests that Gary Painter, known statewide for being tough on drug dealers, understands the emerging drug problem better than does a man with a few months' experience as county judge.

The question we as voters and taxpayers must ask ourselves is which man is better qualified to deal with the potential of drug-related turmoil in our area?

Court can't justify budgetary cuts

How can the commissioner's court justify their budgetary cut levied upon the sheriff's department?

Fiscal frugality is not the answer. Why may you ask? A department exists within county government that commands a significant budget, approximately $700,000. This department is the Facilities Management department, headed by Bill Decker, an individual whose qualifications in this writer's opinion are as follows: Ex-jail lieutenant under former Sheriff Dallas Smith, who more than likely has no inclination as to how a jail operates.

Why? Because he spent the majority of his time woodworking. Secondly, he is the individual who Sheriff Painter refused to rehire because he did need a carpenter. Yet the commissioners retained Decker at the expense of the sheriff's department.

Finally, isn't Decker the same individual who attempted to charge the county for a door he constructed on county time and with county material?

Well, it has been said that Decker has the commissioners in his pocket. Why?

Judge Seltzer is not supreme entity

Regarding the conflict between the Midland County judge and the commissioner's court, I would first like to say I am appalled that I voted for Charles Seltzer and Guy McCrary. They misrepresented themselves as being pro law enforcement before election and I naively believed them (my mistake) and cast my votes accordingly.

Seltzer calls himself a judge, but according to Webster a judge is defined as: (1) a person designated to determine the winner, settle a controversy; (2) a public official with authority to hear and decide cases in a court of law; (3) a person qualified to decide on the relative worth of anything. From what I have witnessed, Seltzer's prime concern and interest is having ultimate control and power over Sheriff Painter and the sheriff's department. I would like to remind Seltzer that our society is a democracy as opposed to a monarchy and he is not the all powerful, supreme entity he obviously imagines himself to be.

Seltzer and the county commissioners are so very interested in the seized forfeiture funds that the Midland County Sheriff's Department has been using to purchase vehichles and other much needed equipment that our tax dollars did not have to be used for. Why? Could it be that they want to increase their salaries, expense accounts, and vehicle allowances? A commissioner already draws a pretty hefty salary plus expenses, plus they all either own a business or are employed elsewhere. Their county salary alone is substantially greater than that of most of the deputies at the sheriff's department who put their lives on the line each day with every call they respond on.

I hope every registered voter in Midland County will take a long hard look at these elected officials next election time. The people in this county deserve the best law enforcement possible to keep this a great place to live, and I feel that Sheriff Painter and his entire department have gone above and beyond the call of duty to provide this type of law enforcement.

List of achievements under Gorbachev's leadership is long

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — One of President Bush's great achievements has been his handling of Mikhail Gorbachev.

Hearst

The bond of personal friendship he cultivated with the Soviet leader, coupled with firm insistence that Gorbachev meet his terms for American support, has brought about the most widespread cooperation in the history of our relations with the Soviet nation.

In response to Gorbachev's desperate appeals for both short- and long-term aid to avert an economic collapse and develop a free-market economy, Bush has pressured the man who ended the Cold War to do things that our leader felt were in the best interests of world peace and the future of a noncommunist-ruled Soviet Union. He exerted persuasive influence on Gorbachev both openly and in private discussions.

One of the president's conditions was that Soviet troops and their missiles be withdrawn from Cuba. On Sept. 11, following a meeting with Secretary of State James Baker in Moscow, Gorbachev announced that all 11,000 Soviet troops in Cuba would be withdrawn. The Bush-Baker team also made clear that since the Soviets are so badly in need of Western aid, Moscow should stop providing a $2 billion-a-year subsidy to Cuban dictator Fidel Castro. Gorbachev told Baker that the Soviets' future economic ties with Cuba would be based strictly on free trade and no further subsidies.

Earlier, the Bush administration pressured Moscow to stop shipping arms to Nicaragua, and Gorbachev did so. That led to an end to the civil war and free elections that ousted the anti-American Daniel Ortega dictatorship early last year.

When the freedom movement exploded in Eastern Europe, Bush urged Gorbachev not to suppress it. Gorbachev directed the Soviet supreme commander of the Warsaw Pact forces to order Eastern European military commanders not to intervene, and they did not.

Bush insisted the Baltic states must be granted independence. Gorbachev did so soon after he returned to power last month following the collapse of the Soviet military-KGB coup.

At Bush's urging, Gorbachev played a pivotal role in supporting the U.S.-led Persian Gulf War to force Saddam Hussein to end his brutal conquest of Kuwait. Gorbachev did so although Iraq was a Soviet base of operations in the Middle East. Gorbachev now is cosponsoring with Bush plans for a Middle East peace conference.

The list of achievements resulting from Soviet cooperation with the United States under Gorbachev's leadership is a long one. The cooperation has led to agreements for sharp reductions in nuclear and conventional weapons as well as air, sea and land forces. It has helped end the Afghanistan war and the civil war in Angola. It has also led to an agreement on key elements of a treaty to control and eventually ban chemical and biological weapons.

Recently, a Soviet rocket carried a U.S.-made commercial satellite into space. In medical research, there have been miraculous results: Soviet and American scientists are cooperating on the use of lasers for many types of surgery including operations on the heart and eyes. No wonder President Bush wants Gorbachev to remain in power. Never before in peace time have the superpower leaders done so much good for so many people.

It was welcome news that Bush has decided to speed up direct food supplies to the Soviet Union now that winter has started there. Gorbachev has agreed the food can be distributed by such groups as the International Red Cross. The president also is considering easier loan guarantee terms for the purchase of American agricultural products. That will help our farmers as well as hungry Soviet people.

I am sure there are many American people who would like to help provide food for Soviet people who may be on the verge of starvation this winter. My suggestion is that donations made by our people as well as by charitable foundations be tax deductible. Checks could be sent to a food for freedom committee operating in Washington under strict government supervision. Every package distributed by the American and/or International Red Cross should be stamped with the American flag.

Wyche thinks out loud

Associated Press

Onugust day in 1989, fresh off a near-Super Bowl win and a new five-year contract, Sam Wyche sat in a dormitory room in Wilmington, Ohio and reflected on life as an NFL coach at the peak of his career.

"I don't really need this," he said. "I've got two successful sporting good stores in South Carolina. I can do fine without football."

Now, after an 0-3 start in which his team has been outscored 89-34 and lost 14-13 last Sunday to Cleveland — 3-13 last year — Wyche sounds like he's ready to do without it.

"I think I've got 20 to 25 years left before I start eating soda crackers for lunch," he says. "Those 25 years aren't going to be wasted worrying about whether some editorial is written saying that we're stupid because the field goal went through the crossbar instead of outside the crossbar."

For all those Wyche-bashers in Cincinnati and elsewhere there's this to be said about him.

Outside of the Rams' John Robinson, he's one of the few NFL coaches with a perspective on life outside of football — he works with the homeless; he tries to further understanding by rooming black players with white in training camp, and even his ban on women in the locker room stemmed from his desire to protect his players.

Furthermore, (heresy to the memory of Vince Lombardi) he doesn't think football's the most important thing in the world.

"Winning's not the only thing. Making the effort to win is the only thing," he says.

The inflamed reaction to Sunday's loss to Cleveland? That there are more important things in the world besides sports in general, football in particular.

"It's not fair to us, it's not fair to our families," he says. "It's not fair to the real fans to let it be so important that the fact that the scoreboard said you didn't score enough points to win, that everybody else should be miserable for seven days."

Say it Again, Sam ...

"Baloney. Get a life, would you?

Finks hopes jinx ends for Saints today

Struggling Bengals may be cringing as Redskins come to Cincinnati

Associated Press

The New Orleans Saints don't have many fond memories of the Minnesota Vikings.

"I think our whole organization gets paralyzed when we start talking about the Minnesota Vikings," says Jim Finks, the Saints president and general manager.

Since Finks and Jim Mora took over the Saints in 1986 and transfored a team that had never had a winning record in 20 seasons into a yearly playoff contender, they've played the Vikings four times.

The result: four wins by the Vikings by a combined score of 154-33, none more painful than the 1987 playoff game at the Superdome in which 8-7 Minnesota beat 12-3 New Orleans 44-10. In that one, the Saints scored early and it went downhill from there.

"A 58-minute source of embarrassment," Finks recalls.

Sunday marks the Vikings first appearance at the Superdome since then, although in the interim, they've beaten New Orleans 45-3 and 32-3 at home.

It also comes at a time when the Saints are off to the best start in their history at 3-0 — they've never started better than 1-0 in their 25 years of existence, and then only five times.

This season's turnabout is the work of a defense that held the Rams to 75 yards Sunday night until the final meaningless offensive series and quarterback Bobby Hebert, whose year-long holdout seems to have enhanced his abilities.

The Vikings, who are 2-1, finally seem to be getting the most from their stable of stars. Herschel Walker is second in the NFC in rushing and Anthony Carter carried Minnesota to its 17-14 win over the 49ers last week.

In other games Sunday, Cleveland is at the Giants; Detroit at Indianapolis; Green Bay at Miami; Washington at Cincinnati; Houston at New England; the Raiders at Atlanta; Pittsburgh at Philadelphia; San Diego at Denver; the Rams at San Francisco; Seattle at Kansas City; Buffalo at Tampa Bay and Dallas at Phoenix.

The Jets play at Chicago Monday night.

Washington (3-0) at Cincinnati (0-3)

The Redskins probably are playing better than anyone in the NFL right now; the Bengals are playing worse than anyone but the Colts and Patriots.

Which has Joe Gibbs worried, if not panicky.

"This is exactly the kind of matchup you wouldn't want," Gibbs says. "You're 3-0 going in against a real good team that's 0-3. You know how upset they're going to be and mad they're going to be."

Actually, the maddest guy in Cincinnati is Sam Wyche — not at his team but at the fans and media deriding it.

"It's not fair to us, it's not fair to our families, it's not fair to the real fans to let it be so important that the fact that the scoreboard said you didn't score enough points to win, that everybody else should be miserable for seven days," Wyche says.

"Baloney. Get a life, would you?"

Pittsburgh (2-1) at Philadelphia (2-1)

Bubby Brister, who's been booed in Pittsburgh, is probably lucky this game's on the road against a defense that sacked Troy Aikman 11 times last week.

"I don't know why they're booing," says Brister, whose offense produced just one touchdown and 43 yards rushing against the woeful Patriots last week. "I just play football here and try to win games. I've got too much responsibility trying to get this team on the winning track and do my job. I can't worry about the other stuff."

Jim McMahon, meanwhile, has been a pleasant surprise as the replacement for Randall Cunningham. Not only has he stayed healthy behind a suspect offensive line, but he's the fourth-rated quarterback in the NFC.

Green Bay (1-2) at Miami (1-2)

This is Week 2 of Don Shula's quest for his 300th win. He was stymied in Detroit 17-13 last week and lost three more players to injury, including nose tackle Shawn Lee.

Last week's problem was miscommunication among holdouts, like guard Harry Galbreath, who pulled the wrong way on a third and goal that resulted in a 3-yard loss. This week's problem could be Bryce Paup, the guy who knocked out Cunningham and had 4½ sacks last week in the Packers' 15-13 win over Tampa Bay.

Detroit (2-1) at Indianapolis (0-3)

The first of two forays by the Lions into the land of the winless — they play Tampa Bay next week. That could leave them at — gasp! — 4-1 and put them in position to get to the playoffs for the first time since 1983.

The Colts have scored just 13 points in two games, a figure that's unlikely to improve — center Ray Donaldson broke his leg last week, leaving the already mangled offensive line in more disarray and leaving Jeff George unprotected and Eric Dickerson without holes.

Buffalo (3-0) at Tampa Bay (0-3)

If the Bills were freaked out last week when the Jets played Whitney Houston's Super Bowl rendition of the national anthem at them, think of what they'll think when they return for the first time to the scene of last January's heart-rending loss to the Giants. And think of what Scott Norwood will think the first time he lines up to kick at the north goalpost.

This may not be as easy for Buffalo as it looks. The Bills' 23-20 win over the Jets proved them human and the Bucs, despite their record, have allowed just six more points than they've scored — they've lost by three, one and two points to the Jets, Bears and Packers.

Jets (1-2) at Chicago (2-1) (Monday Night)

New York (or New Jersey) II for the Bears, who are the opposite of the Bucs — they've won three games by a total of eight points, including last week's 20-17 win over the Giants that could easily have been a loss.

"I don't know how talented we are," says Mike Ditka. "But I don't know how talented we aren't, either."

The Jets, who almost upset the Bills last week, have spent much of the week talking about that game. The biggest talker is coach Bruce Coslet, who is in a word-war with Buffalo coach Marvy Levy over grudges dating back to 1988.

Cleveland (2-1) at Giants (1-2)

Who would have guessed that Bill Belichick would have a better record coming into Giants' Stadium than the team whose defense he coached in two Super Bowls?

That's because the Giants are learning that every week's a Super Bowl for their fired-up opponents. "Everybody's up for us, we have to be up for them," says Ottis Anderson.

Belichick? He's into Coach-Speak. "Except for a couple of plays, they could be 3-0 instead of 1-2," he says of the Giants.

Except that they aren't.

Rams (1-2) at San Francisco (1-2)

"We're tied with the San Francisco 49ers and that's our standard of excellence in the division," says John Robinson, who is looking up at the Saints, the team that pounded him 24-7 last Sunday night.

San Francisco's problem is not Steve Young, who leads the NFC in passing efficiency. In part it's the defense, which allowed the Vikings to move the ball 98 yards for a touchdown last week and had trouble tackling Anthony Carter.

Raiders (2-1) at Atlanta (1-2)

This game starts with Al Davis and Jerry Glanville going three rounds at midfield to decide which team wears black.

Neither of these are great road warriors. The Raiders gave up 47 points in Houston, then just 13 in their last two games at home; the Falcons' 13-10 win in San Diego last week was its first road victory in 20 games.

In that one, the Falcons actually got some production from their running game, particularly Steve Broussard. But running plays to the strength of the Raiders, who have allowed just 113 yards rushing in their last two games, just 12 more than Broussard had last week.

Seattle (1-2) at Kansas City (1-2)

The Chiefs, who have scored just seven points all season in the first half, would have won the AFC West last year had it not been for two losses to the Seahawks. The second was in Kansas City, where Derrick Thomas sacked Dave Krieg seven times, but missed him on the eighth and Krieg threw a game-winning touchdown pass on the game's last play.

Krieg, who broke his thumb the opening week, isn't in this game. The Seattle quarterback will be Jeff Kemp, who has been adequate, if not spectacular. That description goes with Bennie Blades, who has 21 catches in three games. He could be trouble for a Kansas City secondary that remains banged up, although Albert Lewis could be back this week.

San Diego (0-3) at Denver (2-1)

A year ago, the Chargers looked like a comer. Now they've fallen into company with the Colts and the Bucs, last week going so far as to give Atlanta its first road victory in two years. John Friesz, the second-year quarterback, has completed just 48 percent of his passes.

The Broncos are methodically making up for last season with defense. For all the publicity about John Elway calling his own plays, Denver hasn't allowed more than 16 points in a game and has given up just four touchdowns.

Weight Loss Surprises Researchers

WASHINGTON --A nutrition organization was hopeful that a nutritionally complete "hi-tech" food tablet would help erase world hunger problems, until a study revealed that one of the ingredients could cause significant weight loss.

Although other studies and scientists may not agree, researchers in Europe found that the ingredient, a natural plant colloid, actually caused people to lose weight, even though specifically instructed not to alter normal eating patterns, according to one study published in the prestigious British Journal of Nutrition. Researchers in an earlier study had speculated that the weight loss was due to a decrease in the intestinal absorption of calories.

While the development of the product called Food Source One, a project of National Dietary Research, would not be used to successfully fulfill its original goal, the formula which has since been improved with other natural colloids has been a windfall for some overweight people. A Daytona Beach, Florida woman fighting a weight battle for 12 years used the product on the recommendation of her physician and lost 30 pounds. She stated, "Not only have I lost 30 pounds but my cholesterol has dropped from 232 to 143. I have two closets full of clothes which have not fit me in two years that I can now wear." In a separate report, a telephone interview revealed that a Wilmington, North Carolina pharmacist lost 14 pounds in 3 weeks on the product and was never hungry.

Food Source One tablets are part of National Dietary Research's comprehensive plan to bring a rapid end to obesity in this country. A variety of nutritionally sound diet plans, specially prepared by NDR, accompany each bottle and provide a natural, drug free alternative for confronting the problem of obesity.

Oilers careful to treat Pats like any other team

Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — It would be easy for the Houston Oilers to think the threat to their unbeaten record is no greater this Sunday when they play New England than next Sunday when they play nobody.

That assumption could leave them waving bye-bye to that perfect mark one week before the bye in their schedule.

Shortly after going to 3-0 with a 17-7 win over Kansas City last Monday night, the Oilers turned their attention to Sunday's opponent. The Patriots, 1-15 last year, are 1-2 this season with a streak of 11 quarters without a touchdown.

"We started talking about how we can't have a letdown because that just screws up everything we've done," Houston quarterback Warren Moon said. "We want to continue this thing and play consistent football."

The Oilers are off to the best start in their 32-year history, accomplishing it with wins against three playoff teams from last year.

Renowned for their productive run-and-shoot offense that is ranked second in the NFL, the Oilers also have one of the top defenses. Only Philadelphia has given up fewer than the 31 points Houston has allowed.

■ Houston Oilers at New England Patriots, noon, NBC (Cable Ch. 9).

"We've stressed getting off to a faster start, and we've stressed consistency," Oilers coach Jack Pardee said, "not having a great week and a bad week, but finding a better level.

"The key thing is to make the bye week a down week, not this week. Getting off to a 3-0 start doesn't do any good if you mess around and lose. Our players understand that."

The Patriots feel they also could be undefeated if they didn't mess up.

"We should be 3-0, and that's not blowing smoke," wide receiver Irving Fryar said. "We had our chances against Cleveland and we beat ourselves. We should have beat Pittsburgh."

After beating Indianapolis 16-7, the Patriots lost to Cleveland 20-0 and Pittsburgh 20-6. But after three quarters, they only trailed the Browns by 10-0 and were tied with the Steelers 6-6.

The Browns' final touchdown was set up by an interception, while Pittsburgh's 14 fourth-quarter points resulted from an interception and a punt that hit a New England blocker in the back.

"We've got to play 60 minutes of football, and we haven't learned how to do that yet," Patriots coach Dick MacPherson said. "We've made a lot of mistakes in the fourth quarter. We're not functioning right when we get there."

The Patriots' offensive problems extend far beyond the quarterback spot but MacPherson decided to bench Tommy Hodson, the starting quarterback in the first three games, in favor of Hugh Millen.

"We have no idea what Hugh can do in a game because we haven't given him that chance yet," MacPherson said.

If anything provides hope for a New England victory, it's the defense.

While the Patriots' three-game point total of 22 is less than the Oilers' average of more than 31 per game, New England has allowed just 47 points, fewest in the AFC East.

The Patriots are third in the AFC against the run but only 13th against the pass, which is the Oilers' strength.

"Now that we're really good against the run," MacPherson said, "we've got the run-and-shoot Houston offense coming in. They probably won't even bother to run."

The Oilers have stressed greater offensive balance and have been successful. They are averaging 126 yards rushing and 261 passing per game. Allen Pinkett is third in the AFC in rushing, and Lorenzo White, who was activated this week, is expected to play against the Patriots.

"We're running the ball a lot more than we ever have," Moon said. "It's keeping people off-balance."

By concentrating on receivers Ernest Givins, Haywood Jeffires and Drew Hill and the deep passing game, defenders are more susceptible to the run. And the stronger the run, the easier it is for Moon to complete passes.

"What we wanted to do coming into the season is not be as one-dimensional as we were last year," Moon said. "That running game is going to help us so teams can't dictate exactly what we're doing."

It also would help if Moon and his teammates treat the Patriots as a legitimate threat to send them into their off week on a negative note.

"We know that the last time we went up there we got beat" 23-13 in 1989, Moon said. "We do feel good about the start we've had and we want to continue it."

POKES: Dallas passing game needs to return

and I think exactly that," Bugel said. "We have to be prepared for that. We have to be able to stop the rush."

Smith's 44 yards on 13 carries against the Eagles were disappointing for him, but he has 268 yards on 56 tries for the season, and memories of Smith's 75-yard scoring run in the 33-31 loss to the Redskins haunt Bugel.

At the same time, the defense can't forget Aikman, who earned the accolade of "legitimate tough guy" for getting up after all the hits he took in Philadelphia, the coach said.

"He's a big, strong guy and he's got a great arm. It's just a matter of time until he's a super quarterback," Bugel said.

Smith has been Aikman's favorite target so far, with 15 catches, but wideout Michael Irvin and tight end Jay Novacek have 14 receptions each.

By comparison, Phoenix quarterback Tom Tupa has completed only 29 passes in three starts. Tupa, a reserve forced into action because of a knee injury to Timm Rosenbach, had performed capably until throwing three interceptions against the Redskins but needs a more threatening running game to buy time when he drops back.

Tupa had made only two starts before this season, both in 1989. In his first, he threw six interceptions against the Eagles; in the second, he hit Ernie Jones with a 72-yard touchdown pass with 58 seconds left to beat the Cowboys.

"Tom Tupa has thrown well against us. We'll attest to that," Johnson said.

During the preseason, the Cardinals had big plans for a two-back set combining Johnny Johnson and Anthony Thompson, a pair who gave the team 1,316 yards from the tailback position in 1990. But so far, the two have combined for 174 yards.

Bugel said he wanted his team to get back to its winning formula — the kicking game, errorless play and tough defense.

In a 24-14 defeat of the Rams, the Cardinals forced seven turnovers; in a 26-10 win over the Eagles, they forced six and went into the game in Washington leading the NFL with a plus-11 takeaway ratio.

The Cardinals still lead the NFL in takeaways with nine and have recovered 12.

After three rounds, Faxon still leads B.C. Open

PGA

Associated Press

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — No one was more surprised at where Brad Faxon's roller-coaster round stopped than he was.

"I'm really surprised," said Faxon, who needed a 6-foot birdie putt on the final hole to survive an erratic third round with a one-stroke lead at the B.C. Open.

"I didn't think shooting even par would keep me in the lead," said Faxon, of Orlando, Fla.

"It certainly brought the field closer than I'd like. But I'm not going to complain about going into Sunday with the lead," he said.

Faxon, stalking his second tour victory of the season and the $144,000 top prize, was 13-under-par 200 with 18 holes to play.

"It was an adventure," he said. "I didn't make as many putts today and I hit a bad iron to get to No. 1 that got me off to a bad start. I think I put too much pressure on my putting because I got down early."

Fred Couples, who began the day four strokes behind the leader, sank a short birdie on the 18th hole to briefly tie for the lead. He took over sole possession of second place at 201 when Blaine McCallister double bogeyed on No. 18 to drop to 9-under.

Peter Jacobsen joined McCallister at four strokes back, while Greg Whisman and David Peoples were at 8-under.

"I don't have the goal of beating Brad Faxon," Couples said. "My goal is to beat the course. You have to do it yourself. You can't wait for somebody else to do something."

The hot putting hand Faxon displayed surging to a three-stroke lead in the second round at the En-Joie Golf Club deserted him — as did his driver — and he finished the day with an even-par 71.

Faxon watched as most of his lead melted away on the first hole. McCallister made a 12-foot birdie and Faxon two-putted for bogey, reducing his lead to a single stroke.

The two matched birdies on the second and fifth holes. McCallister missed a chance to tie for the lead on No. 3 when he hit a 5-foot putt that rolled half way around the rim of the cup and froze on the edge. He also lipped out a birdie putt on No. 12.

Faxon suffered his second bogey on the par-4 sixth hole, missing a 5-foot putt for par. But McCallister missed his own short par putt and took a bogey for the hole, too.

Faxon and McCallister played par until the 14th hole, but Faxon repeatedly found himself off the fairway on his drives and in the bunkers on his approach shots.

On No. 14, he hooked his drive into the rough on the left between two sand traps. Faxon tried to chip his way onto the green, but the ball dribbled about six feet into a sand pit. Faxon had to make a 4-foot putt for bogey.

But again, Faxon's luck held. McCallister rolled a 12-foot putt wide and also took a bogey.

Faxon briefly stretched his lead back to two strokes when he birdied the 16th hole, but he suffered his fourth bogey a hole later.

Couples, a U.S. Ryder Cup team member, opened with two birdies on his first three holes, but couldn't make up anymore ground until the final four holes. He fell back to 10-under on No. 12.

Bradley staves off Dickinson at Safeco

LPGA

Associated Press

KENT, Wash. — Pat Bradley shot a par-72 Saturday and held a one-stroke lead over charging Judy Dickinson after three rounds of the Safeco Classic.

Bradley, a 28-time winner in 18 years on the LPGA Tour, was at 8-under 208 after three trips around the 6,202-yard Meridian Valley Country Club course.

Dickinson, who began the day five shots back, had a 68 and was one stroke ahead of Kris Monaghan, who shot a 67, and Mitzi Edge, who shot a 73.

Another stroke back at 211 were Rosie Jones, who shot a 71, and Deedee Lasker, who shot a 72.

Brandie Burton, a rookie who led after the first round, shot a 71 and was tied for seventh at 212 with Dotie Mochrie, who shot a 72.

Michelle Estill, another for rookie of the year contender, was next at 213 after a 67.

Bradley's main challenger throughout the day was Edge, who was playing in the last three-some. The two were tied after Bradley bogeyed the second hole, two-putting after a bad chip shot.

Edge went ahead with a birdie on the fourth hole, where she hit her 5-iron approach within six feet up the cup. Bradley fell two strokes back when she hit a bad 9-iron shot on No. 6, then three-putted from 18 feet to bogey.

Bradley birdied the eighth with an 18-foot putt, but was two strokes down again after she hit another bad 9-iron shot and two-putted on the 10th.

Edge three-putted from the front of the 11th green for a bogey, and Bradley pulled even with a birdie on No. 13, hitting her 9-iron third shot to six feet.

She regained the lead for good when she hit a 7-iron to eight feet and birdied the 14th. She bogeyed the 16th but birdied the 17th.

Dent surrenders to Coody after 2nd day

PGA Seniors

Associated Press

ALPHARETTA, Ga. — Charles Coody wasn't surprised to be leading the Nationwide Championship seniors golf tournament after Saturday's second round despite shooting a par 72.

Coody was at 139, two shots ahead of Mike Hill and Dick Hendrickson, after starting the day one stroke off Jim Dent's lead.

Dent, who had an opening 66, faltered to a 76 and 142 total over the difficult, 6,677-yard, par-72 Country Club of the South course.

Hill, the tour's second-leading money winner seeking his fourth victory this year, shot a 71 for 141. Hendrickson used an eagle-3 on the par-5, 15th hole for a 69 and a share of second place.

"I'm not surprised," Coody said after taking the lead with a round that included four birdies, two bogeys and a double bogey.

"This is a new course for us and the greens are hard to putt."

The senior tour returned to the Atlanta area after a 3-year absence this year.

"I like where I am," Coody said.

Midland recycling efforts hit market woes

■ As prices for recyclable materials fall, it becomes more difficult for recyclers to make ends meet.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midlanders are getting down in the dumps about trying to recycle in the Tall City.

Recycling efforts have operated in fits and starts, due to fluctuations in the market, according to Faye Beery, chairman of the Recycling Waste Reduction Committee for Keep Midland Beautiful.

"Local recyclers are accepting aluminum and metals — copper and scrap iron — and cardboard," Ms. Beery said.

However, newspapers, glass and plastic are not presently being accepted, but negotiations are continuing to recycle them in Midland.

"The problem is that there is no local processor of recyclables in Midland right now," said Jack Burns, assistant director of public works for the City of Midland.

"We have to stress reducing and reusing waste," he said.

Decreasing prices for recyclables have also hit recycling centers hard.

"Prices are all down," said Bill Dimler, executive director of the Time Machine Recycling Center in Odessa.

"One economic reality — that we are going to have to face — is that glass recycling is dead in West Texas," Dimler said. "Our local glass recycler just went out of business. That means that the closest glass recycler is in Waco. If we had a glass factory in Odessa things would be different."

Dimler said the expense of shipping glass, which is usually shipped by weight, makes it too costly to transport.

"Not only that, it uses about the same amount of energy to make glass from sand as it does to reuse colored glass. It doesn't save any great amount of money."

The over-supply of recyclables has glutted the market, Dimler said.

"It all begins on the demand side," he said. "There must be a demand for recycled products.

"We aren't here to make a profit," Dilmer said. "Since we take just about everything, 'The more you recycle, the more you lose' has become a truism."

Nonetheless, Dimler said, the Time Machine was never opened with making a profit in mind.

Dimler said the Odessa recycling center's ba-

'Precycling' can reduce waste

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Recycling in Midland is in a slump.

Keep Midland Beautiful (KMB) is encouraging Midlanders to reduce and reuse waste whenever possible. The League of Women Voters proposes that Midlanders "precycle" — or rather — consider how much waste is in packaging before buying a product.

"Precycling involves looking at a package before buying it and seeing if the packaging is excessive. If it is, then don't buy it," said Gayle Banschbach, a League of Women Voters board member. "Also, buy the biggest product you can and minimize what is thrown into the landfill."

When it comes to excessive packaging, the biggest offenders are convenience foods, according to Faye Beery, chairman of KMB's Recycling Waste

Beaman leads McCamey hospital back to financial strength

■ Once just another failing rural hospital, the McCamey Hospital and Convalescent Center is back in the black and the tax rate is down.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

McCAMEY — McCamey, which came close to collapsing in the health-care field two years ago, is a healthy and robust survivor in a time when many struggling rural and urban hospitals are failing.

"We did not re-invent the wheel," Frank L. Beaman, the 30-year-old administrator of McCamey Hospital & Convalescent Center, said of effective management practices. "We just greased the wheel . . . and made it work well."

Two years ago, Beaman was lured to a challenge: to salvage the 16-bed hospital and 30-bed convalescent center which were heavily in debt, low in morale, lacking in community support and confidence, and close to shutting down.

Accounting procedures were in disarray. There was no inventory control. Accounts receivable were almost a year in arrears. There was no budget. Spending was out of control. Billing was a mess.

The hospital was borrowing money just to operate and was nearing bankruptcy.

There was discontent within the medical community. The twin qualities, respect and trust, such as between the physician and the nursing staff, were lackluster.

The employee turnover rate was high.

The McCamey Hospital District's five elected board members were desperate for hospital leadership and were determined that the medical facility should either thrive or perish; not just decay and languish in mediocrity.

The new board sought out a young and aggressive administrator who was educated and experienced in finances and found Beaman on the administrative staff at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa.

Beaman praised the incredible support of his board and praised the quality of (medical) care, both in-patient and out-patient care.

"Our physician is topnotch," he said.

Rather than being boastful, Beaman said that he and his management staff, and the

New law section goes after fraud aimed at elderly

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Taking advantage of the elderly, as in this case, isn't anything new but, unfortunately, it may become even more prevalent since citizens over 60 are the fastest growing segment of the population.

An elderly woman carrying a big box of vitamins she had purchased visited the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin.

Although vitamins are essential for life functions, these were a detriment.

"She couldn't use them because of medications she was taking," said John Schmidt, president of the local BBB.

But she bought them anyway.

"They (the vendors) pushed her until she gave her credit card number over the phone," Schmidt said.

Taking advantage of the elderly, as in this case, isn't anything new but, unfortunately, it may become even more prevalent since citizens over 60 are the fastest growing segment of the population.

And in 15 years, those born at the onset of the baby boom will enter that age group, according to Ron Dusek, a spokesman for the Office of the Texas Attorney General.

"This then is the right time to be bringing more attention to offering protection and services to the elderly," Dusek said.

As a result, the Texas Attorney General recently created an Elder Law Section within the Consumer Protection Division to combat those who prey on senior citizens.

"The program is designed to focus and concentrate on prosecuting those who would abuse and take advantage of the elderly," Dusek said.

The Elder Law Section will be aimed at consumer fraud as in advertising and sale of Medigap insurance, retirement oriented investments, financial planning services, estate planning, legal services, home improvements, medical devices and other products and services targeted at seniors.

In addition, the program will look into physical abuse of the elderly at nursing homes and care homes in conjunction with the Texas Department of Health.

GARY OTT

Car dancer lightens the load of a weary motorist

It is not often that I find myself laughing out loud while driving alone in my car.

Driving is serious business to me. No, let's make that stronger. Driving is war. It is me against them. Winner take all. There can be no compromise. When I take to the road it is all business. No laughing is allowed.

Ott

Until now.

Something happened the other evening — right there on Illinois Avenue in front of the hospital — that changed all of that. I now can giggle when behind the wheel. And for that, I am eternally grateful.

Allow me to explain:

It was 5:30 p.m. on a Tuesday. Traffic was heavy, at least by Midland standards. The downtown crowd was on its way home. You had to wait through two light changes before getting onto Andrews Highway. The sun was beginning to fade in the west so the glare was becoming increasingly irritating to the eye. It had been a bad day at the office and the ol' temper was teetering on the brink, just waiting for the opportunity to explode. One wrong move on the part of any driver within a five-mile radius of my car would be reason enough for a major eruption. It was as though I wanted someone to try and cut me off. Go ahead, I snarled under my breath. I'll blow you away.

Then it happened.

In my rearview mirror I saw a scene that caused me to laugh.

A grown woman was "Car Dancing."

Car what?

Car dancing. Miami columnist Dave Barry coined the phrase.

It works like this:

You are driving down the road in your car when all of sudden "Jumpin' Jack Flash," by the Rolling Stones comes on the radio. You crank the volume all the way up and car dance, wherein you bounce your fanny rhythmically on the seat, and you sing along with Mick Jagger using the cigarette lighter as a microphone while gradually pressing down harder and harder on the accelerator, so that when you get to the part where you and Mick sing that "Jumpin' Jack Flash is a GAS GAS GAS," you are going at least 85 mph, even if you happen to be inside your own garage.

Yeah, that pretty much sums it up. Car dancing.

And, admit it, you have done it before, haven't you?

Of course, you have. We all have.

Certain songs just lend themselves to car dancing. Obviously, anything by the Rolling Stones qualifies. So do most songs by the Beach Boys, Jan and Dean, the Temptations, Sly and the Family Stone and whoever that group was that sang, "Hey, there, Little Red Riding Hood, you sure are looking good. You're everything that a big bad wolf could want."

Likewise, it only follows that other groups make lousy car dancing music. Some notable examples include Pink Floyd, Black Sabbath, Jimi Hendrix, the Grateful Dead, the Moody Blues and any other group whose music is best enjoyed in total darkness by people with nicknames like "Brain Dead" and "Purple Haze."

But, the point is, if you find the right kind of upbeat music car dancing can be an extremely fun activity. It allows you to behave in a childish manner. And, despite what others may tell you, there's not a darn thing wrong with bee-bopping down the rode with your favorite rock 'n' roll song on the radio . . . especially after a long and tedious day at the office.

Indeed, there is something truly rewarding about reliving your youth through song. And, car dancing enables you to do just that.

One oddity I have noticed, however, is that white people, in particular, seem to enjoy car dancing. When you think about it, the reason should be obvious: They are incredibly bad when on a real dance floor, so this provides them with a suitable alternative. They no longer have to worry about moving their feet in sync with the beat of the music.

That's the beauty of car dancing: You don't have to do anything with your feet. You need only scream into the cigarette lighter while swaying your upper body in a Ray Charles-like manner. If feeling particularly daring, you might even want to use your free hand to play an imaginary piano on the dashboard. Of course, that leaves only your knees for controlling the steering wheel, so it is not recommended by most driving instructors.

Then, again, most driving instructors never performed a rock 'n' roll duet with Mick Jagger.

Reduction Committee.

"These are things like single-wrapped slices of cheese and packaged single-serve items," she said.

"Disposable diapers and grass clippings from lawns also fill up the landfills," Ms. Banschbach said.

For baffled shoppers or those who just want more information on packaging, the League of Women Voters has organized an "Environmental Shopping Tour."

"We are conducting morning and evening tours at the Albertson's on Andrews Highway," Ms. Banschbach said. "We also have pamphlets on alternatives to using toxics in home. It has recipes for cleaning products using ingredients like salt, vinegar or lemon juice for regular household chores."

Ms. Banschbach said household cleaners "go right into the water supply, and then there is the disposable container (to contend with)."

"People just need to think about how products can be reused," Ms. Beery said. "The Science Center (Midland Independent School District's science warehouse) needs coffee cans and juice cans. Carver Center needs plastic containers — butter bowls, ice cream buckets, yogurt containers, egg cartons and lots of other items.

"Some gas stations accept used oil and the parks department will be turning discarded Christmas trees into mulch this year. Also, some churches accept craft items."

While many things can be reused, Ms. Banschbach noted, "If you minimize what you buy, you are better off in the first place."

The following tips, to reduce waste, were provided from several sources including Ms. Beery.

■ Take your own bags to the grocery store to bring home groceries. Most grocery stores will give patrons 5 cents per bag for each bag brought to the store. Extra bags should be returned to the store for recycling.

■ Use paper bags for trash can liners.

■ When given the choice of "paper or plastic" bags, choose plastic. Plastic takes up less space in the land fill (paper won't biodegrade without sunlight and air), doesn't waste trees, and requires less energy to produce.

■ Use a cloth to wipe up spills instead of paper and water. Use vinegar and water and newspapers to clean windows and glass instead of products in plastic bottles and paper towels.

■ Avoid one-use convenience items such as razors, cameras, plates, cups and utensils.

■ Take notes and do scratch work on the blank side of used paper.

■ Take your own coffee mug or drinking cup to work.

Check schools, churches and day care centers to find out what items they may need, such as margarine tubs, egg cartons or ice cream sticks.

■ Have a garage sale instead of throwing out items.

■ Compost yard and kitchen waste when possible. Small amounts of kitchen waste can be pureed in the blender with a little water and poured onto garden beds.

■ Encourage schools, businesses and employers to purchase recycled paper products. Increasing the demand for recycled paper will increase the paper mills' capacity to recycle newspapers.

■ Recycle motor oil, cardboard and aluminum. These products are recyclable in Midland.

■ Ask veterinarians and pet stores if they need newspaper.

To set up an appointment to attend an Environmental Shopping Tour, call 688-4139 and leave your name and phone number on the recording. Responses to requests are made within 24 hours. Tours are being conducted for groups, organizations and schools.

TRASH: Recycling becomes problem

sic purpose is to keep recyclables out of the landfill, conserve natural resources, and educate the public on ecological awareness to help out the city, the country and the world.

Burns said that the two biggest problems hampering recycling in Midland is cost of transportation to ship recyclables up to the next recycling medium up the line" and the phenomenal participation.

"There is just too much supply and not enough processing going on," he said.

So, what do Midlanders do?

"Reduce and reuse as much as possible," Burns said. "We have a mixed blessing in Midland. We have a good sanitary landfill — which should serve us about another 40 years and we have considerable space (for more landfills). But, the negative side is that it is just too easy to throw things away."

Burns said the amount of garbage taken to the landfill in Midland averages about one ton per person annually. "This is above the national average," he said.

"It's to everybody's advantage to reduce waste," Ms. Beery said. "Reducing and reusing also saves energy. About 5 percent of the population consumes ¼ of the world's energy."

"We can also use recycled products and increase the demand for them," Burns said.

Butt's Recycling in Midland is still accepting aluminum cans and cardboard as a donation to keep them out of the landfills. It is located at 21 W. Industrial Loop. For information call 687-4225.

FRAUD: Con artists target elderly

(From 1C)

"There has been an increase (in scams aimed at the elderly) and there will continue to be an increase if we don't do something about it," Dusek said.

The Elder Law Section will work out of seven regional Consumer Protection Offices in the state. The Midland/Odessa area will be covered by the Lubbock division, Dusek said.

Connie Glover, director of social services for the Community and Senior Services, addressed one common scam directed at the elderly.

"Through sales pitches, a lot of times they (the elderly) are sucked into supplemental health insurance," Ms. Glover said.

"Some will end up having six or seven supplemental health insurance policies to cover what Medicare doesn't. Then they find out after the fact that it doesn't cover it," Ms. Glover added.

And sometimes when senior citizens get tricked, they become skeptical of services that are legitimate and straightforward such as community services, Ms. Glover said.

Indeed, the elderly are becoming wiser to being a prime target for con artists and fast-talking salesmen, said Ellen Smith, senior center director for the Southeast Senior Citizen Center.

"They (seniors) tend to look out for each other more now," she said.

But like Ms. Glover, Ms. Smith has seen how a new awareness can backfire.

"We (seniors) are becoming more aware of the rip-offers out there. And some are beginning to live in fear of 'who is going to take advantage of me?' " Ms. Smith said.

Still, many senior citizens possess an inherent trust in others.

"Many view society the way they are," Ms. Smith said. "They are not going to take advantage of anyone else and they think other people are the same.

"I think they (seniors) come from a more trusting environment, a more trusting generation," she added.

Schmidt agreed that the trusting nature of the elderly can lead to being taken advantage of.

"So many of the senior citizens are very trusting and are not use to new business practices," he said.

Schmidt offered some advice against being drawn in by slick new business tactics.

"They need not make a quick decision," he said "And, they need to know who they are dealing with," Schmidt said.

When dealing with a questionable business, Schmidt suggested contacting the Better Business Bureau. When making deals with an individual, ask a family member, Schmidt added.

Collisions injure five

Staff Report

Several Midlanders were injured mid-morning Saturday in two separate traffic mishaps.

About 9:30 a.m., a northbound Midland Fire Department ambulance collided with a pickup truck carrying three Midland teen-agers at Wadley and Garfield.

The ambulance driver-paramedic, Stuart Sherman, 28, reportedly swerved to avoid hitting the pickup, driven by Sam Tipkin, 17, but still struck the eastbound pickup.

The ambulance struck and toppled a traffic-light standard on the northwest corner of the intersection, reports stated.

In the ambulance were Sherman and paramedic-passenger Charles Hare, 32. In the pickup were, Tipkin, Catharine Flowers, 15, and Kristal Lewis, 16.

About 10 minutes later, a pickup truck towing a horse trailer and Ford Explorer collided at Loop 250 and Garfield.

In the pickup were Gary Lynne Moore, 42, Joyce Moore, 37, and Sean Moore, 17.

In the Explorer, were Judy Hank, 27, Hunter Hanks, 5, and Holden Hanks, 2.

HEALTH: McCamey hospital comes back

physician, 53-year-old Ernie Lamar Sandidge, and his medical team are just doing what is appropriate.

"There's not a community out there that has a hospital that's struggling that doesn't want anything but the best in quality patient care," Beaman said.

But within many rural communities, there are barriers to quality care.

"They are too busy practicing politics and not practicing medicine," Beaman surmised.

The management techniques which Beaman brought to the hospital are not unusual — just proven and effective.

"That's not remarkable," he said. "It's just good, basic business sense in getting down to the business of providing quality patient care."

"It's remarkable that we pulled out of what we did. We were within a couple of months of total bankruptcy and closing."

The only difference in the principles of managing a rural hospital and a metropolitan medical center is the number of zeroes in the accounting department.

Beaman started his work in McCamey, an oil-field and ranching community of about 2,400 people 50 miles south of Odessa, in August of 1989.

His three-point program was to:

- Maintain competitive rates. Rates at the hospital were about 25 percent too low.
- Control costs. The hospital was lacking in management of people, money, and supplies.
- Get volume up. To do that, he recruited a personable and able family physician in Dr. Sandidge from the Houston suburb of Channelview in early 1990.

"We exist for the doctor to practise medicine," Beaman said. "We don't admit. We don't discharge, and we don't order tests. The doctor does."

"My job is to practice business," Beaman said. "His job is to practice medicine. We understand that very well, and it works beautifully."

As a result, McCamey has a physician who is comfortable in his environment so he can practice medicine.

The hospital's mainstay is the typical medical-surgical business, Beaman said. "We see a lot of pneumonia, illnesses, industrial and traffic accidents." Aside from his work in the hospital, Sandidge operates a downtown family clinic and is aided by a physician's assistant.

Under Beaman's management, the hospital's daily average patient count is 4.5, up from one, and the convalescent center, once 80 percent full, is at capacity and enjoys a waiting lists.

Employee turnover rate is zilch.

Morale is soaring.

Profits, at $193,000 on a $2.5-million operating budget, are healthy.

The hospital is paying off an old $1-million loan, from a previous administration, just to keep the hospital operating in pre-Beaman-Sandidge days in the late 1980s.

"We've got cash in the bank," Beaman said. The hospital is now equipped with a new, and paid-for, computer system, and has been renovated in the two years Beaman has been in charge.

And taxes, which are essential to operating this rural hospital, dropped this year. Of the hospital's proposed $2.9-million budget in 1992, about $1.8 million comes from the tax base. The hospital board dropped the tax rate to 49.5 cents per $100 valuation from 54.5 cents.

"I wish we could do more," Beaman said. "The goal is to continue to reduce the tax rate."

"We're operating at peak performance and peak efficiency with the least amount of tax money required," Beaman said. "Rural hospitals cannot survive by themselves."

Community support of the hospital is loyal.

"I would put this community up against any in the nation with its volunteer EMT (emergency-medical technician) service" and the EMTs' high commitment level, Beaman said.

Doug Hopkins, chairman of the hospital's elected board, credited the hospital success to Beaman's management and leadership, renewed community confidence, and the best in medical service.

"We're achieving what should have been here all along," Hopkins said. "We're not bathing in splendor in what we have done. We just feel like we have started."

And Sandidge, McCamey's new physician, is one of the best things that has ever happened to McCamey, Texas, Hopkins said. "He sees lots of people, and everybody likes him."

The doctor is "just a regular guy," said Hopkins, 55. "Dr. Sandidge is just one of us, other than when he's practicing medicine. Then, he is the boss."

C.W. Brown, the 86-year-old McCamey oilman, community leader, hospital board member and West Texas booster known as "Mr. McCamey," described Sandidge as a "good ol' Joe," a term which he also applies to the respected Dr. James Gossett, neighboring physician over at Rankin about 20 miles to the east.

"You ought to run it like a business," Brown said of the tax-supported hospital. "It's taxpayers' money."

The well-being of the hospital and town's doctor are intertwined.

"I don't do well if he doesn't do well," Beaman said of Sandidge. "So, why wouldn't I help him do well?"

And Sandidge today "experiences a standard of living and a quality of life that most physicians hope to get to," Beaman said.

The doctor agreed.

"That's true. For the first time since I was discharged from the U.S. Army in 1959," Sandidge said, "I am debt free as of this year."

He has been practicing medicine since 1969.

Today, at 53, Sandidge is pleased with his station in life.

And he suggests to those nurses and people here who do gripe over age that they ought to consider this: "You've never been as wealthy. You've never been as smart. You've never had so many good friends. What do you want? You've got it all."

Sandidge said that "one of the beauties of my practicing here is that the hospital does my office business. They do the hiring and the firing and the tax payments and the vacations. I just practice medicine. That is the best of all medical worlds."

Dillard's

Dillard's and representatives from Ellen Tracy hosted a Fall '91: "A SEASON OF RICH SOPHISTICATION" fashion show on Wednesday, September 18, at Dillard's, Midland Park Mall. Linda Allard's fall '91 collection for Ellen Tracy offers a diversity of sophisticated styles in uniquely rich fabrics, textures and colors. When designing the latest Ellen Tracy collection, Linda Allard, Director of Design, has an excellent point of reference; she is very much the portrait of the Ellen Tracy customer. Like many American women, her life is an amalgam of the personal and professional. She is busy, self-assured, yet very feminine. And her style -- the fashion she creates -- becomes the common denominator. The collection features an array of tartans, tweeds and tapestries, steeply ridged twills, sensual suedes and soft souffles, bringing eye-catching appeal to the season's favored silhouettes. Colors range from a warm selection of earthy tones - eucalyptus, stone, barley, spruce and carmione - to a true autumn palette of bittersweet, honey, chocolate and slate - a soft, camel story - and, finally, a sleek take on black and shades of gray, set off by cool cobalt. Novelty buttons made of brass, jet or corozo from the South American tropics, leather and suede trims, and zippers provide finishing touches to enhance a superlative collection. The classic carmine tartan makes a snappy city suit in a long, single-breasted jacket with a slim skrit or short. Tartan check in eucalyptus, spruce and carmine teams up with a matching skirt or tops a windowpane plaid trouser or short for an unexpected play of patterns. While spruce and chocolate make a richly muted buffalo check in wool and cashmere. Cashmere pea coats pair up well with tartan bottoms for a more casually chic statement. And they're all topped off best with the season's short, cinched-waist trench in gabardine or fabulous, water-resistant microfibre. Fall also features classics reminiscent of a privileged sporting life - like the long, ridged twill riding jacket in carmine, paired with a wonderfully crisp white cotton shirt and stone stretch satin pant. A printed paisley suede zipper jacket is the perfect country-in-early-autumn piece, great with a chocolate stretch gabardine pant. And the sporting jacket - with four patch pockets and suede elbow patches - in warm country check - captures the essence of the sporting life.

The intriguing retrospective show in McCormick Gallery ends Thursday.

If you've not yet seen the work done by the late Florence Barber-Pervier, we urge you to do so. Most of the work being displayed was done while the artist was studying at the Chicago Institute of Art in the early 1900s.

A grandson, MC drafting instructor Curt Pervier, helped gather much of the material together for the show.

Located in the Allison Fine Arts Building, McCormick Gallery is open today from 1-5 p.m. and Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m.-10 p.m.

Coming next is the 14th annual Fall Juried Show of the Midland Arts Association. It opens Thursday, Oct. 3, with a reception and awards ceremony at 7 p.m., then may be viewed daily through Friday, Oct. 25.

Admission to McCormick Gallery is free.

Graduate center receives donations

Staff Report

The Permian Basin Graduate Center has recently received contributions in response to an Abell-Hanger Foundation challenge grant awarded earlier this year.

The Abell-Hanger Foundation has pledged $60,000 in a challenge-matching grant to the Graduate Center for upgrading its classroom computer equipment and software.

The SIPES Foundation recently contributed $2,500 and Exxon Co. U.S.A. $1,000 towards the match, the Graduate Center reports.

The Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists (SIPES), headquartered in Dallas, is an international organization of independent or consulting earth scientists.

SIPES works to serve the technical and professional needs of these self-employed businessmen and women scientists. Members are certified by the board of directors for their professional experience, competence and ethics.

The SIPES Foundation was created to perform the charitable, educational and scientific purposes of the Society. In addition to sponsoring seminars and publications, SIPES Foundation provides scholarships to qualified students in the earth sciences.

Debbie Daniels, employment coordinator with Exxon in Midland, presented the Graduate Center with a check for $1,000 from Exxon. Exxon made the grant as part of its Volunteer Involvement Fund Program in recognition of Ms. Daniels work on the PBGC board of directors.

This program is one of several Exxon conducts to encourage volunteerism by employees and annuitants.

Several other foundations and professional groups have also contributed to the fund. The Beal Foundation and the Davidson Family Charitable Foundation, both of Midland, have awarded grants toward the match. Grants have also been received from the West Texas Geology Foundation and the Permian Basin Section, Society of Petroleum Engineers.

"We appreciate the wide spectrum of support we've received from corporations, foundations and individuals," said Paul H. Pause', president of the center. Individuals have contributed over $6,300 to the fund. The center has until the end of the year to raise funds for this challenge.

'We appreciate the wide spectrum of support we've received from corporations, foundations and individuals.'

— Paul H. Pause'

The Graduate Center has been using first-generation laptops in its computer classes since 1985.

"Training is more important than ever, as corporations demand greater productivity from smaller staffs," Pause' said. "The availability of and opportunity to attend high-quality continuing education programs is a crucial factor in maintaining an effective work force. This can impact the economic well-being of the entire community."

Nursing examiners to meet at college

Staff Report

The Texas state board of nurse examiners begins three days of meetings Tuesday at Midland College.

The nine-member board is holding its only meeting this year outside of Austin at Midland College's Chaparral Hall, located in the Student Center.

Current President of the Board of Nurse Examiners is Dr. Eileen Piwetz, chair of Midland College's Health Sciences Division and director of the college's Associate Degree Nursing program.

"The BNE is a nine-member group appointed by the Governor to protect and promote the welfare of the people of Texas by assuring that professional nurses are competent practitioners," Piwetz said.

This meeting will comply with the Texas Open Meetings Action, Piwetz said. She invited all individuals interested in health care to attend. The Board is scheduled to be in session from 9 a.m.-noon and 1:30-5 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday.

Statute provides that the Board of Nurse Examiners is comprised of three representatives from nursing education, three from nursing practice, and three consumer members. In addition to Piwetz, nursing educator members are A. Joanna Seamans, RN, MSN, faculty of the diploma program at Baptist Memorial Hospital, San Antonio, and Mary Fenton, RN, PH.D., dean of nursing for the University of Texas Medical Branch, Galveston.

Representing consumers are: Lynn Besselman, Ph.D., Amarillo; Morris H. Parrish, Irving; and Patsy Sharpe, Fort Worth.

As an adjunct to the BNE meeting, members of District 24 of the Texas Nurses' Association will meet Friday, Sept. 27, at Chaparral Hall for a workshop on "Professional Autonomy and Accountability".

The workshop begins at 8 a.m. and concludes at 4 p.m.

A Mock Disciplinary Court will be presented from 8:30-10 a.m. by Piwetz and two professional staff members of the BNE. Participating with Piwetz will be Louise Waddill, RN, Ph.D., executive secretary of the BNE; and Joan Stewart, J.D., general counsel for the BNE.

College shuttle picks up riders

Staff Report

Midland College's new shuttle service is gaining popularity with students, but more riders are being sought.

"Despite the lack of advance notice, the shuttle service is catching on," said C.C. Dakil, dean of students. Dakil supervises campus traffic and security operations.

"We have another record enrollment, so we have more vehicles on campus during the prime morning and evening hours. Inclement weather has created problems on occasion, particularly when high water has closed the Wadley Street exit and access," he said.

Dakil noted that college and city officials currently are studying the traffic flow, giving particular attention to access and egress at 8 a.m., during class changes, at noon, and between 5-7 p.m.

The shuttle provides service from near Door I of Chaparral Center to three areas of the campus: Occupational-Technical Building, Fine Arts Building, and between the Science-Faculty Building and the Health Science Building.

A shuttle van leaves the Chaparral Center 15 minutes before the start of all morning classes. Returns are made at noon on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday and at 12:30 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday.

"Students who are driving to the campus should allow sufficient time to arrive on campus at least 20 minutes before their first class. The Wadley Street access and exit usually is less congested than those along Garfield," Dakil said.

WE KNOW someone who'll give you

$42,376 not to ROLL OVER your Jumbo CD again.

"Thank you, Mr. Jones." "No, thank YOU, Mr. Jones."

CAN YOU IMAGINE $42,376 cash back? Instantly. On the spot. Then and there.

Impossible, you may say. Who'll give you that sort of money, you may ask.

The answer is you.

The $42,376 is roughly the difference between what you currently have in your Jumbo CD, and what you'd need to invest in a Nuveen Insured Unit Trust to generate the same amount of after-tax income.

The chart below, which is based on current CD rates and Nuveen returns, clearly illustrates that.

Simply put, by shifting from your short-term taxable CD into a long-term tax-free Nuveen Insured Unit Trust, you need less capital to earn the same amount of income.

The fact is, year after year millions of investors (don't worry, you're in good company) simply roll over their short-term CD's. And suddenly, what is normally a fine short-term investment may become a rather inefficient long-term investment.

We, of course, cannot predict future interest rates, but a look at the graph at the right will demonstrate what we mean.

However, if a lump sum like $42,376 doesn't make a Nuveen tax-free investment a remarkably attractive proposition, then think about this.

Nuveen investments are designed to provide greater income earning stability than many other investment alternatives.

One reason is that each bond in a Nuveen Trust is insured‡ by the Municipal Bond Investors Assurance Corporation, which means the Trust is guaranteed to receive both the timely payment of interest and principal when it's due. Of course, net asset value of shares may vary if redeemed before maturity.

The figure we've used applies to Jumbo CD's; your case may be different.

So why not speak to your broker, personal banker or financial adviser. Or you can even call us direct at 1-800-247-4414 and we'll put you in touch with an independent financial professional who can provide you with a variety of Nuveen investments.

We've never advocated quick returns. But we do advocate sensible ones.

| | If you invest | You earn | You can save |

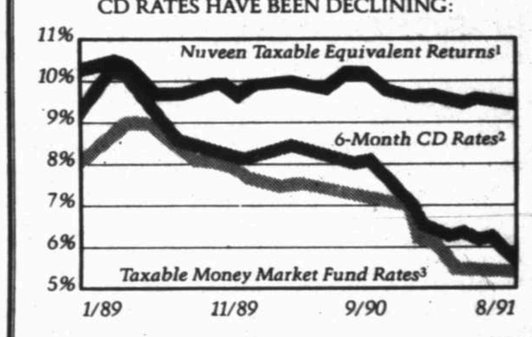
| Nuveen @ 6.49%† | $57,624 | $3,740 | $42,376 |

*This example is based on the current average rate for a 6-month CD and shows the after-tax earnings for an investor in the 31% federal income tax bracket on 8/22/91. †Estimated Current Return (ECR) shown is for a purchase of Nuveen National Insured Trust 227 on 8/22/91. The Estimated Long-term Return (ELTR) for a purchase of the Trust on the same date is 6.43%. ECR is computed by dividing net annual income, after annual expenses, by the public offering price. ELTR represents an average of the yields to maturity (or call) of the bonds in the Trust's portfolio under accepted bond practice, adjusted to reflect expenses and the Trust's maximum sales charge of 4.9% of the public offering price. ECR and ELTR calculations are based on the then current market value of the bonds in a Trust's portfolio and thus these performance measures will fluctuate with market changes or changes in the composition of the Trust's portfolio. Income may be subject to state and local taxes. Save additional taxes with Nuveen's State Trusts which are also exempt from state and local income taxes.

‡Insurance relates specifically to the bonds and not to the units or to the market value of the units which will fluctuate with changes in market conditions. The Trust is not insured by the U.S. Government and no representation is made as to the insurer's ability to meet its commitments. Terms of the insurance are more fully described in the prospectus.

CD RATES HAVE BEEN DECLINING:



1. Monthly Taxable Equivalent Estimated Current Returns as of deposit date for 83 Natl. Insured Trusts in period. Taxable Equivalent Current Return is the pre-tax return on a taxable investment that an investor in the 31% tax bracket would need to receive in order to match the return on Nuveen Insured Trusts. 2,3. Monthly averages from Federal Reserve Weekly Statistical Report and Donohue's Money Fund Report.

CD accounts, insured by an agency of the U.S. Government, are short-term investments that pay fixed principal and interest but are subject to fluctuating roll-over rates. CD's are also subject to early withdrawal penalties. The Nuveen Unit Investment Trust is a long-term investment with a fluctuating redemption value that pays a consistent stable rate. The bonds in the Trust's portfolio have an average life of 25-30 years and may be called prior to maturity.

Sometimes it's wise not to follow the crowd.

Southwestern Bell gives grants to center

Staff Report

Southwestern Bell Telephone today announced that Midland College's Business and Economic Development Center is the winner of two grants totalling $7,500 for Economic Excellence.

Linda Basham, SWBT external affairs manager, said the awards are part of a telephone company program to economic development throughout Texas.

The award checks were presented to Dr. Jerry Lee Jones, Director of the Midland College Business and Economic Development Center. A $5,000 grant will be used to support a series of ten seminars on entrepreneurship and small business development which are being conducted this fall. A $2,500 grant is to be used to design, publish, and distribute an entrepreneurial "How To" fact book on doing business with Mexico. The publication will be ready for distribution by the first quarter of 1992.

"We know how important the development of new and existing industry is for the communities we serve," Ms. Basham said. "By initating this awards program, we recognize innovative and effective programs that will help boost economic development in Texas.

"We will closely monitor the Midland College BEDC program and other Economic Excellence award winners throughout the state to determine new ways of building economic strength in Texas. By replicating local successes, we can benefit Texans statewide," she said.

Jones noted that Midland College is co-hosting a monthly series of breakfasts for minority and small business operators, will conduct a seminar on "Mexico and the Permian Basin — International Trade Opportunities" on Oct. 3, and is publishing a quarterly newsletter, Open For Business, as some of its efforts to develop local businesses. The college's BEDC also provides free consultations, computer models, and other services for new and aspiring business owners.

State fair adds some new quirks for latest run

DALLAS (AP) — It seems the older the State Fair of Texas gets, the quirkier it gets.

The 105th annual fair begins Friday at Fair Park and all the regulars will be there — Big Tex, the car show, the U.S. Marine Drum and Bugle Corps, Midway rides and livestock shows.

Plenty is new and different though.

The landmark 86-year-old Centennial Building will finally have that most Texan of conveniences, air conditioning, after a $2 million refurbishing.

Military hardware from the Persian Gulf War, including an Iraqi scud missile, will be displayed.

Professional rodeo will return during the fair's final weekend, Oct. 19-20.

And for the first time, the multitude of livestock shows will include judging for miniature potbellied pigs and, well, mice and rats.

"There's ideal men and women in the world ... There's the same thing for mice and rats," said Barney Cosner, the fair's director of agriculture and livestock.

Twenty-six rats and 48 mice have been entered in the fair by pet owners from California, Oklahoma and Texas. Cosner said the show is a way to include more animal owners in the fair and draw more people.

Only a few other fairs and expos have mice and rat judging, so there will be education and training seminars too, he said.

Livestock owners will compete for $254,550 in prize money, including nearly $67,000 in youth categories, at the fair.

The most entries are in cattle, nearly 1,300 in the open category, and swine, including 50 miniature pot-bellied pigs.

Antique cars are returning to the fair after a 20-year absence.

The North Texas division of Horseless Carriages of America will display about 25 pre-World War II cars, including a steam-driven one from 1899.

"That was the highlight of the fair to me when I was young," said Mel McDonald, a club member who helped organize the exhibit.

"I'm personally drawn to the older, older ones because they were referred as horseless carriages," he said. "They were built by people who built carriages. They just put a motor on them."

Kidnappers kept hostages moving, Texan says

By Charles Richards
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Three kidnapped Americans and two other hostages were kept on the move constantly in rugged mountains of eastern Turkey for the 22 days they were held by Kurdish rebels, a Texan told his wife Saturday.

Marvin Wilson, 49, of Garland called his wife, Renetta, at 6:30 a.m. CDT Saturday from the city of Bingol in the Turkish province of the same name. She tried to calculate what time it was in Turkey.

"It was ... oh, eight hours beyond that in Bingol. I'm so excited, I can't add," Mrs. Wilson said Saturday.

Wilson and two other Americans — Ronald Wyatt of Nashville, Tenn., and Richard M. Rives of North Carolina — were in Turkey to search Mount Ararat for what they believed was the site of Noah's Ark when they were kidnapped Aug. 30.

Gunmen from the Kurdish Labor Party, or PKK, reportedly stopped a minibus carrying the three Americans on Aug. 30 in Bingol province. Two others, Allen Roberts of Australia and Gareth Thomas of Great Britain were on the same bus and also were taken hostage.

Two soldiers hunting for the captives were killed in a guerrilla ambush on Sept. 3.

Mrs. Wilson first learned that her husband had been released when he called her about 5:15 p.m. CDT Friday (1:15 a.m. Saturday in Turkey) from Bingol to let her know he had been released and that he and the others were in good condition.

"We talked about a minute. He said he had to go and he would be calling me later. He just assured me that he and the others were in good shape," she said.

Hurriyet, a major Turkish daily newspaper, said security forces, leased by their abductors, who gave them directions on where to find authorities. He said they were released near the city of Bingol and walked about 90 minutes before reaching a military police station at Ilicalar.

Marvin Wilson of Garland and two other Americans — Ronald Wyatt of Nashville, Tenn., and Richard M. Rives of North Carolina — were in Turkey to search Mount Ararat for what they believed was the site of Noah's Ark when they were kidnapped Aug. 30.

The semi-official Anatolia news agency had reported Friday that a man claiming to speak for the outlawed Kurdish Labor Party telephoned police in the township of Malazgirt in neighboring Mus province, and said the captives would be released. The party has been fighting since 1984 for an independent Kurdish state in southeastern Turkey.

After word got out that her husband had called her with news of the release, her phone rang constantly, Mrs. Wilson said.

Each time, she thought it might be her husband again, she said. Instead, it was friends or relatives calling to share in the joy. Finally, early Saturday, her husband's voice was on the other end of the line.

"I knew the call was coming, I just didn't know when. I could handle that as long as I knew he was free," she said. They talked for about 10 minutes, she said.

"He just reassured me that he is in good shape. He said everyone else was fine also, including the two who were not in their group acting on a tip, rescued the five. Authorities were searching for the kidnappers, the newspaper said.

But Thomas said Saturday that the five former hostages were re- but just happened to be with them at the time they were taken," she said.

"He said they were on foot the entire 22 days and that they were treated well. They were on the move constantly," she said.

From her trips to Turkey with him on prior efforts to locate the ark, she said, she knew the area her husband was in "is very mountainous."

She wasn't sure where in the city of Bingol her husband was calling from, she said. "I think they were in military police control. I'm not sure if they were at the police station or under military control," she said.

A senior official of Bingol, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Americans were resting at an unspecified place.

Bignol is about 200 miles west of the Turkey-Iran border. The U.S. embassy in Ankara, 450 miles west of Bingol, dispatched a plane to pick up her husband, Wyatt and Rives, she said.

"I'm not sure if he's going to be flying home, or if I'm going over there, or what. I'm waiting to hear from Ankara. I don't know what the modus operandi is going to be," Mrs. Wilson said.

Atilla Vural, the governor of Bingol province, said the five left the city on Saturday aboard two helicopters for the Incerlik air base in southern Turkey.

Since 1977, Wyatt has been searching for the ark, which the Bible says made a landfall in eastern Turkey near Mount Ararat after a flood that followed 30 days and 30 nights of rain.

Weather halts horse racing

DALLAS (AP) — All bets were off at Trinity Meadows Raceway after weekend horse races were canceled Saturday at a rain-weakened track that jockeys said posed hazards to riders and their mounts.

Races will resume on Thursday, officials said.

The final five races of a 10-race card had been scrapped Friday after jockeys refused to saddle up for the Willow Park track's sixth race. As much as 3 inches of rain had fallen on the raceway the past week, with water standing along the inside of the rail around the track.

Track officials put road graders and other heavy equipment onto the track's oval, where crews worked through Saturday morning, trying to repair the racing surface in time for racing to resume.

Less than two hours before scheduled post time at 1 p.m. CDT Saturday, jockeys looked over the track, met privately and told Trinity Meadows officials it was still too dangerous to race.

"The jockeys felt the track was unsafe, and we have told the Racing Commission we will not be racing today or tomorrow," Mike McAbee, publicity director at the track 20 miles west of Fort Worth on Interstate 30, said Saturday.

The word got out too late for many. A number of people showed up at the track Saturday, but were turned away.

"They made quite a bit of progress on the track (Friday night), but when we looked at the track in the daylight, you could see there were some areas that were drying unevenly," McAbee said.

"The result was uneven racing surfaces, some a little harder or softer than others, which is what created the safety problems," McAbee added.

Track officials were prepared late Saturday morning to allow races to resume, but jockeys voted not to race, McAbee said.

"You pretty well have to let the jockeys take the lead on it," he said. "Jockeys will tell you that the worst thing you can do when you go out on the racetrack is to start thinking about it, wondering if a spot was going to be soft because of water.

"If you're not working on instinct, you're probably in trouble," he said.

Track officials said $178,349 had been bet when racing was stopped on Friday. With generally larger bets placed on the last five races, the track had appeared on target to have a handle of more than $400,000 on the day.

"The track was getting too unsafe. It was getting worse during the day. It's not management's fault, it's not the stewards' fault and it's not the riders fault. It's just an unsafe condition that happens sometimes," jockey Jackie Martin said.

Steward Jimmie Nichols said he thought the track was suitable for racing. But as a former rider, he said, he couldn't force the jockeys to ride.

"When we went down to the jocks' room, they felt the track had some bad spots, especially on the back side. I don't think the track was that bad, but you can't make them ride," Nichols said.

Jockeys said "holes" — hard spots and soft spots — and unevenness had developed, particularly on the backstretch, from storms earlier thas week.

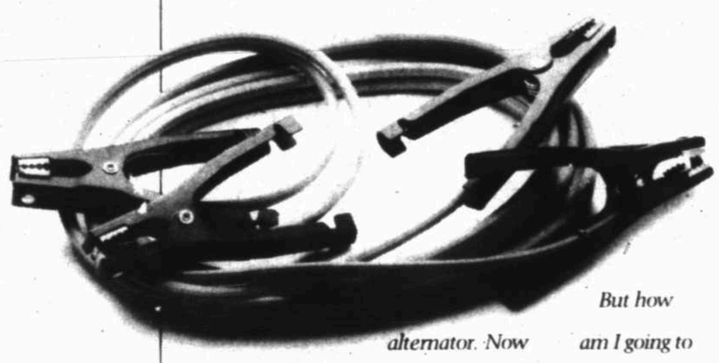
So How Do I Pay For It?

I used to think our two-seater was the perfect way to go. But not anymore. Now we need a family-size car.

And I couldn't be happier. The only question is, how do I pay for it?

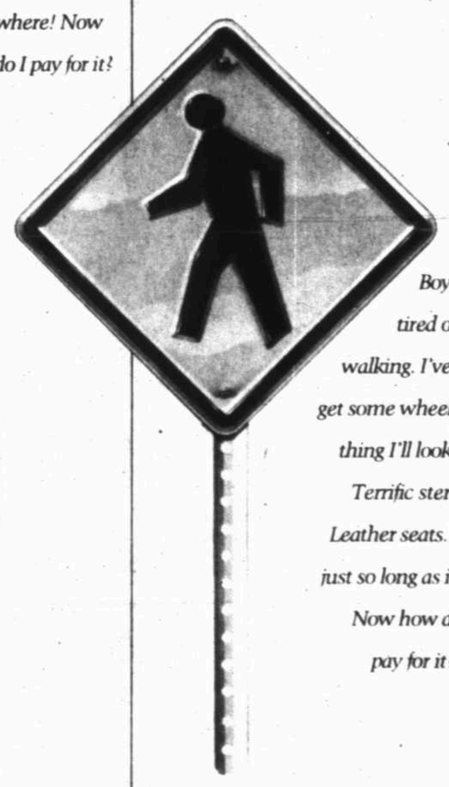
I need some adventure in my life. Maybe a four-wheel drive. I could run it down to the lake. Or go all out through the mud. Come to think of it, I could take it anywhere! Now how do I pay for it?



It's perfect. The right style. The right color. It gets great gas mileage. Has plenty of trunk space. I love it. Question is, how am I going to pay for it?

First it was an oil leak. Next came the transmission. Then the alternator. Now the battery's dead. I think it's trying to tell me something. As in 'time for a new car'?

But how am I going to pay for it?



Boy, I'm tired of walking. I've gotta get some wheels. First thing I'll look for? Terrific stereo. Leather seats. Well, just so long as it runs. Now how do I pay for it?

Just Ask.

Gibbs

But the 60-year-old actress yearns to move audiences to tears, anger and sorrow.

"My studying and my work was always for the dramatic," Gibbs said in a recent interview.

"The vehicle that I got — 'The Jeffersons' — took me into comedy, and it was not really a lot of work."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Don Knotts says the method he used acting as Barney Fife on "The Andy Griffith Show" was to think of the character as a child.

"When he was happy, he was happy all over," Knotts said. "He didn't hide anything. When he got angry, he was furious."

A hero of rerun watchers for his portrayal of deputy Fife in the 1960s' sitcom, Knotts, 67, appears this weekend with other Mayberry cast members in reunion skits at Opryland.

Knotts said his years playing Barney were "the richest experience of my life."

After five years on "The Andy Griffith Show," for which he won four Emmys and then a fifth later for a return visit, Knotts turned to family movies like "The Ghost and Mr. Chicken," "The Reluctant Astronaut" and "The Shakiest Gun in the West."

SALINA, Kan. — Joyce Carol Oates says her new novel was first inspired by the drowning of Mary Jo Kopechne 22 years ago when Sen. Edward Kennedy drove a car off a bridge in Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

Oates

But the idea lay dormant, Oates said Friday, until a nephew of the Massachusetts Democrat was accused of rape in Palm Beach, Fla. William Kennedy Smith, who is awaiting trial, denies the charge.

The result for Oates is "Black Water," to be published next spring. The book borrows heavily from the Kennedy accident, she told an audience at Kansas Wesleyan University.

While writing the novel, she imagined herself trapped in dark waters, Oates said, adding that the book addresses youthful idealism and violence against women.

"There's so much violence against women today that I wanted to write about that, also," said Oates.

SAN FRANCISCO — The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of appeals has upheld a $400,000 award granted Bette Midler after the singer sued an advertising agency that used a "sound-alike" singer for a television commercial.

Midler

"We're very pleased that the Court of Appeals has upheld the property rights which performers have in their voices," Peter Laird, Midler's attorney, said Friday.

Lawyers for the ad agency, Young & Rubicam Inc., declined comment.

A federal jury in Los Angeles found in 1988 that Young & Rubicam violated Midler's exclusive right to her vocal style by having another singer, Ula Hedwig, mimic Midler's version of the song "Do You Wanna Dance?"

According to trial testimony, the agency originally asked Midler to perform the song for a Ford commercial, then turned to Hedwig when Midler declined. Hedwig is a former backup singer for Midler.

NEW YORK — Rock guitarist Eric Clapton said he couldn't believe his 4-year-old son had been killed in a fall from a 53rd-floor apartment until he arrived on the scene and saw the paramedic equipment.

"I ran down there, and I saw paramedic equipment everywhere, and ambulances and police cars," Clapton was quoted in the Oct. 17 issue of Rolling Stone magazine. "And I thought, 'This is true.'"

Clapton's son, Conor, whose mother is actress Lori Del Santo, died March 20 in the accidental plunge from a New York City skyscraper. Clapton was in a hotel a few blocks away at the time.

Clapton, 46, says Conor's death, coming after his close friend Stevie Ray Vaughan died in a helicopter crash in August 1990, changed his view of life.

"The death of my son, the death of Stevie Ray, taught me that life is very fragile, and that if you are given another 24 hours, it's a blessing," he said.

Clapton, a founding member of Cream and Derek & the Dominos, is considered one of the world's greatest rock guitarists. He wrote and performed such rock classics as "Layla" and "Let it Rain."

Chevron, ex-Gulf employees settle pension case

HOUSTON (AP) — Chevron Corp. and former Gulf Oil Corp. employees have reached a settlement in one of the most complex class-action pension cases in U.S. history, with lawyers averting a costly appeal on nearly all issues.

The settlement provides for Chevron to pay out $95.5 million of a $160 million surplus remaining in two retirement funds to which Gulf employees contributed before Chevron formally took over Gulf in 1986.

U.S. District Judge Simeon Lake awarded the employees the payment following a seven-week trial.

The remaining $65.5 million, under the agreement, will stay in the Chevron pension plan. Chevron cannot withdraw those funds for other purposes without substantial penalty.

Lawyers said the $95.5 million will be distributed to 16,000 surviving participants in the two funds. More than 3,000 participants have died since the lawsuit was filed in 1986.

It could be several months before each pensioner's award is calculated. Pensioners can choose whether to receive a lump sum or an annuity, although most are expected to take the lump sum.

The settlement enables Gulf employees to continue their appeal of Lake's ruling that they were not entitled to a $700 million surplus in what was the primary Gulf pension fund.

Pensioners packed the courtroom for Friday's four-hour hearing, many objecting that a 60-cent return on the dollar was not a good settlement. But Lake and attorneys for the 40,000-plus former Gulf employees said it was better to take something now and avoid extending the five-year fight.

Lake, referring to a letter from a Gulf retiree who urged him to consult God in his search for justice, pointed to a Bible verse that hinted to him the value of a settlement.

"Ecclesiastes 3:17 tells us God has appointed a time for every matter and for every work," Lake said. "This is the time to settle a great majority of these claims so that the beneficiaries of the Gulf Pension Plan can now receive the benefits promised them by Gulf years ago."

Time is a big factor in the case, Lake and the employees' attorneys noted. A court-appointed actuary estimated an additional 550 participants would die annually without getting a dime if the entire case proceeded on appeal. The average surviving member's age is 68.

"There's another case not nearly as complicated as this one, and those people have been waiting 10 years for their money — and they won" at trial, plaintiffs' attorney Jo Wilson said. "We just didn't think we could leave that much money sitting on the table."

Chevron lead counsel Robert Malinak said only that he believed it was a "fair settlement" for all parties. Chevron and Gulf agreed to merge in May 1984, with the deal completed later. In 1986, Chevron merged the two companies' pension plans, prompting the Gulf workers' lawsuit.

This settlement, when combined with another pact negotiated at trial, brings to $145 million the total awarded to Gulf employees in restored benefits and attorneys' fees.

Halliburton exported illegally, informant alleges

HOUSTON (AP) — The U.S. Customs Service is investigating claims that oilfield devices that could also be used to detonate nuclear weapons were shipped out of Houston and illegally exported to Libya, a newspaper reported in its Sunday editions.

The Houston Chronicle, in a copyright story, cited an internal customs investigatory report that indicates the investigation is focused on the alleged delivery to Libya of pulse neutron generators from Welex, a Houston subsidiary of Dallas-based Halliburton Co.

The name of Welex has since been changed to Halliburton Logging Services.

Charles Harrison, acting customs special agent in charge in Houston, confirmed that the investigation is under way, but refused further comment to the Chronicle.

The May 8, 1990, Customs report outlines a confidential informant's allegations that pulse neutron generators were shipped from Houston to Libya via Italy and Germany in 1989, in violation of a 1986 presidential order.

Pulse neutron generators are used in the oil industry as a component of tools that measure the properties of geological formations where wells are drilled.

Some scientists say these generators can be used in combination with other devices to trigger nuclear weapons. The Customs report quotes a Department of Energy representative as "verifying that the (generator) does have a nuclear weapons application."

Libya is widely believed to be attempting to develop nuclear weapons.

Guy Marcus, Halliburton vice president of investor relations, said the company is aware of the investigation and is cooperating with the Customs Service. He said Halliburton "does not propose to comment further" while the investigation is ongoing.

Some scientists say (pulse neutron) generators can be used ...to trigger nuclear weapons.

The informant told Customs officials that he first became aware of the shipment to Libya just before Christmas 1989.

He said he became suspicious of shipments of thermal neutron detectors into Italy. Pulse neutron generators are components of the thermal neutron detectors.

The informant said documents accompanying the shipments indicated the detectors' final destination was Italy, but he said he knew the Italian oil company, AGIP, did not use neutron detectors.

The informant told agents the documentation was altered. The description on the documentation was changed to "pressure gauges" valued at $1,000 each, according to the investigatory report.

The shipment was then transferred to Germany, and to Libya, he said.

He estimated that 10 to 12 thermal neutron detectors were diverted to Libya in this manner since late 1989. Libyans would not need that many to conduct geophysical surveys, he said.

The Halliburton investigation comes in the midst of several congressional inquiries into the export of so-called "dual purpose technology" from the United States.

Harrison, the Houston customs official, said the Houston area has "more than a full plate" of investigatory leads pertaining to the illicit export of technology.

Rare copy of 'Mein Kampf' stolen from Athens library

ATHENS (AP) — A rare volume of "Mein Kampf" was missing Saturday from the Clint W. Murchison Memorial Library. Authorities said the book by Adolf Hitler apparently was stolen overnight.

In the place where the book had been on display under a plexiglass dome, library personnel found a hand-written note that said, "Nazi trash like this should be destroyed."

Athens, a town of about 9,000, is the seat of Henderson County, about 70 miles southeast of Dallas.

The book was donated to the library in 1974, after a journey that began in 1945. An American soldier, 1st Sgt. Glenn Jackson, reportedly discovered the copy in the castle of a Nazi party member and sent the Mein Kampf volume to his sister in Illinois.

The book later was sold to a friend of Murchison, who donated it to the library. The Defense Department later verified the book as only three of its kind known to exist.

The 18-by-24 inch volume is bound in a white calfskin cover with oak boards. It's embossed in gold with the Mein Kampf title, and Nazi swastika and eagle.

The title is German for "my struggle." In the book, Hitler gave a fanciful account of his life and set down his political ideas. He described the alleged superiority of the German people and said that the good of Germany ranked above all other values.

"Mein Kampf" laid out Hitler's ideas of "race purity" — ideas that led to World War II and the slaughter of millions of Europeans. The book was considered the guide for Nazi sympathizers in other countries.

DHS votes to increase reimbursements

AUSTIN (AP) — The board of the state Department of Human Services agreed to begin paying for all prescription medicine taken by Medicaid patients at nursing homes and to fully reimburse Texas hospitals for Medicaid recipients' bills.

The board also voted Friday to increase state payments to foster parents, and to make it easier for terminally ill patients to go home rather than stay in hospitals.

That last change could save the state money, officials said. Other changes will cost an additional $160 million this year.

"Thanks to the Legislature for giving us the money," said board member David Herndon of Austin.

Under the current prescription policy for nursing home patients, the state pays for no more than three prescriptions a month. That will change in October.

"This change will be a godsend for a lot of families and nursing homes who've had to pay for those extra prescriptions," said Tom Suehs, director of the Texas Health Care Association, a nursing home trade group.

Department of Human Services officials estimated the additional prescription cost at $28.2 million. The change will cover more than 66,000 Medicaid patients in 1,100 nursing homes, they said.

The welfare agency also will halt, at a cost of $113.4 million, a six-year-old practice in which it does not fully reimburse Texas hospitals for Medicaid patients' bills. It pays 5.5 percent less, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

"We'll now be paying the full bill, which will mean hospitals will not be stuck with those costs. This could potentially have a tremendous trickle-down effect," said Interim DHS Commissioner Burton Raiford.

The payment increases for foster care and child-custody centers will range from 25 cents a day to nearly $20, depending on the care being provided, the newspaper reported.

Another rule change will remove an obstacle that since 1987 has forced many terminally ill patients to remain in expensive hospital rooms at state expense rather than going home, officials said.

16-year-old boy kills another teen after quarrel

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 16-year-old boy, firing from about 100 yards away, shot and killed a 15-year-old boy with whom he had been feuding for a week, police said.

Treymayne Miller died at 9:40 p.m. Friday, about five hours after he was shot near an apartment complex on San Antonio's northwest side.

Miller was a freshman and the other boy a sophomore at San Antonio Lee High School, officials said. The 16-year-old was arrested and taken to a juvenile detention center.

Acquaintances said the youths pulled knives on each other several nights earlier. They were quarreling Friday afternoon while walking along a creek bank near the apartments, police were told.

At one point, the 16-year-old pulled out a .38-caliber handgun and threatened to shoot, acquaintances said.

"He would have shot, but we were in the way," one witness said. "We told Trey to leave, and he did. We were walking away and then (the 16-year-old) turned around and shot one time."

When Miller dropped to the ground and didn't get up, his friends thought he was faking.

"We ran to him and turned him over. We took his baseball cap off and the blood just started flowing out," one of Miller's friends said.

Richards encourages Louisiana women to seek office

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Texas Gov. Ann Richards encouraged more Louisiana women to run for office and join men in an equal partnership to solve the nation's problems.

Richards

"There is nothing more valuable to this country than contributory democracy. And if you're not a part of it, it will never be a true democracy," Richards said.

Richards spoke Friday at a luncheon of the Committee of 21, a statewide organization formed 10 years ago to recruit women to elective offices.

"We must recognize that those who are not a part of the existing power structure, when they are excluded, we lose an important piece of the problem-solving in this nation," Richards said. "It takes both (women and men) at the table to resolve problems."

Richards described America as a "very fast country, and we do have to run twice as fast. And, I might add, we have to be twice as good to be successful.

"I came here today because I want you to see in the living flesh that if you're willing to work hard enough for it, and you're willing to sacrifice for it, and you're willing to grow up and play the tough politics it takes to be successful, then you will be," said Richards, elected governor of Texas last year.

Richards said women should have a voice in the abortion decision, calling it "an issue of fundamental right and freedom" that is "our place and our choice." She also praised Gov. Buddy Roemer's veto this year of a strict abortion bill. The controversial measure became law, however, when the Legislature overrode his veto.

"A discussion about a woman's right to choose to bear children is a vacant and hollow exercise when women have no say and no voice," Richards said. "Men of good will can try their best ... but they cannot put themselves in our place."

Richards said she has become impatient with the phrase "women's issues."

"Taxes, law enforcement, education, retirement, decisions dealing with everything from garbage pickup to life and death on this planet are all women's issues, and we must have an equal say,"

'Men of good will can try their best ... but they cannot put themselves in our place.'

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare because as a distributor, you do not need daycare.
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

Classic Composition

Lofty beamed ceilings, a welcoming fireplace are focal points in the spacious, yet comfortable informal living area.

By Sonja Merrick

Design by Phil Huchton

The solarium presents a gracious, sunny retreat during any season of the year.

Every tasteful corner of this carefully orchestrated home reflects the expert, meticulous care its owners took in decorating and customizing it. It's an exquisite melody of color, shape and design.

A left turn from the entry hall presents a lovely view of the formal living and dining rooms. Windows in both areas are topped with custom-built cornices. Enchanting wallpaper and plush carpeting add warmth.

In the living room, eyes rivet on the subtle elegance of a charming decorative screen. Windows are graced by unique internal storm windows — glimmering glass doors with shiny brass pulls. Come nighttime, the room is softly bathed by focusing painting lights.

Directly ahead from the entry hall lies a spacious informal living area. Lofty beamed ceilings are pitched dramatically. Gas logs glow in the fireplace. A door opens to the solarium, a sunny retreat with an Italian marble floor. The solarium has Anderson casement thermopane windows and door.

Each of the large, carpeted bedrooms have their own bath, each with ceramic tile underneath the carpeting. The master bedroom and two east bedrooms also are carpeted. Again, lovely paper adorns the walls. Floor-length draperies hang gracefully beneath custom-built cornices.

The spacious, sunny kitchen has lots of storage space, two pantries, wood cabinets, a double oven and dishwasher. A convenient, well-equipped laundry room as well as half-bath lie to the right of the kitchen.

Custom crown molding as well as picture molding trim on doors is evident throughout the home. Other amenities include custom-made draperies, 3/8-inch parquet flooring in halls and informal living area, custom-built thermal windows and rheostat light switches. Also, the kitchen and baths have wooden shutters, and Hunter fans are in each room except the master bedroom.

Security is provided by a burglar alarm and smoke detector with automatic silent dialer. For complete comfort, there's GE high-efficiency air conditioning, a water purifier, humidifier and water softener.

This home is as gracious outside as in. Full brick gables, a curved flower bed and wooden fencing are shaded by majestic, mature oak trees. To keep all that's green growing, there's a sprinkler system with bubblers in the beds. A paved alley leads to the rear-entry paneled garage, which is equipped with a power door opener and separate power cut-off switch.

And still, there's more. Thermostatic Attic Power vent fans, a fenced dog run, outside storage and a TV satellite dish. Also, generous floored attic storage, side driveway, off-street parking and night lighting shared with a neighbor.

The home is offered by Langston Realtors for $228,000.

Some new, exciting local developments

This week we added one more special reason for a seller to list their property with one of our 45 Langston agents — KIT or Keep in Touch Program. KIT is a commitment by our associates to report to you, the seller, on a monthly basis as to the new listings/sales/contracts of other properties in your area, as to showings, and response to your property, and as to what is happening in the overall Midland market.

With this current, concise and trend-indicative information, we believe that an owner will be more prepared to make prudent decisions on alterations in marketing strategies, on price changes and offers.

Most of this information is already provided to a seller by a listing agent during the marketing period. However, we've designed the KIT program to enhance the consistency, frequency and pertinence of communication between our seller and associates.

The KIT program is just one of the many "extras" we believe a seller experiences when he lists with Langstons. The "Langston Advantage" also includes innovative marketing programs, creative promotions, special Realtor incentives, and, most important of all, the largest realtor sales team in Midland — 45 Langston associates who are cooperatively committed to successfully selling your home!

Looking for a place to have a meeting? We'd like to offer our training/relocation resource rooms at our new north office, Loop 250 at Garfield, free of charge to any group or club who needs it.

The room is available most any time, has its own private entry, will accommodate up to 40 or so, and comes with scads of parking. Just call Richard Langston, 685-0400, to reserve the space — and we'll put on the coffee pot for you.

Don't miss out on all the activity and fun at the St. Ann's fair next weekend and let s hope we get the rain over with this week.

Finally, as to fun and activity, make your plans to attend all the CAF AirShow doings Oct. 10 through 13. There's a gala USO-type dance with the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra planned for Thursday, Oct. 10. Good friend Jess Ann Thomason, with the assistance of talented Ron Huse who is volunteer design director, has come up with plans for an incredible evening with lots of great music, nostalgia and fabulous food. Then there's a fascinating luncheon on Friday, Oct. 11 featuring vintage WWII to today's styles, Andy Swartz and Dale Kimsey are chairing this event. Oct. 12 and 13 will be extra exciting with 30,000 to 50,000 expected for the CAF's first AirShow in their new home. For more information, tickets or invitations to any of the events, call 685-0427. Or, drop by our north office from 1 to 5 p.m. weekdays and get a great bunch of volunteers to help you.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

ADOBE INC., REALTORS, 3303 N. Midkiff #114

Don't Sell the Furniture!

You have made the decision to move yourself, your family, two dogs and the cat to another state. It will be a big move and a real challenge.

To limit your moving expenses, you decide to sell all or part of your furniture, your washer/dryer, or other major items of personal property. Should you include them in the sale of your home, or sell them separately?

While it may seem easier to include the personal items with your home, raising the price to cover their value at a single package price, it may also limit buyers for the most important item - the house. Why?

Here are three reasons to price and sell your home by itself. First, few people have the same tastes in home furnishings. Second, those who can afford to purchase your home probably already own the items you want to include.

Third, including personal items in the price of your home clouds the picture for homebuyers. They will want to know how much of the price is for real estate, and how much is furnishings. Next, they may ask you to deduct the furnishings, then still not be satisfied with the price of the home.

By not presenting a clear picture of the home's value as real estate, buyers are encouraged to negotiate price to the seller's detriment. Full price buyer offers become more difficult to obtain.

If you must sell personal property, do it outside the scope of your real estate sale. Advertise the items separately, and be sure your real estate agent understands that they are not included in the real estate conveyance. Remove them from the home's interior, if possible, leaving no doubt in a prospective purchaser's mind that they are being sold separately.

Your real estate agent can explain which items are considered personal property, and which are part of the real estate. There is a definite difference, and you should know which is which before selling.

Notes from Norma Pine of Chaparral Realtors

Homeowners need head start on winter

Shorter days and cooler temperatures should be a signal to homeowners to start preparing their homes for the winter months ahead, says Norma Pine of Chaparral Realtors. "It's easy to put household maintenance off until a later date, but homeowners can save themseleves a lot of time — and possibly money — if they take the time to organize, inspect and fix things around the house before winter arrives," she said.

"Probably one of the best approaches to maintenance is to set a monthly schedule for inspections and upkeep. Performing a few of these tasks each month can make household upkeep much easier by stretching out jobs to be done so that they don't pile up."

Chaparral Realtors is a member of RELO/The International Relocation Network, the nation's oldest and largest referral network of independent real estate brokers. The RELO network, headquartered in Chicago, provides a wide range of relocation services to assist transferees and their families sell a house in one community and purchase a new home in the new community. The network, celebrating its 30th anniversary this year, reported more than $50 billion in total real estate sales volume from its members in 1989.

Pine suggests that homeowners start on fall projects early in the season, but recommends that they design a specific plan of action. "During October, homeowners will want to focus on performing outdoor projects. The weather is still warm enough to work outside comfortably — and serves as a prime opportunity to wash windows and screens, install weatherstripping, store patio furniture, as well as mow and rake the yard one final time," she said.

As the weather continues to cool and the days become shorter, homeowners will want to change the emphasis of their work from outdoors to inodoors," Pine said. "In the month of November, for instance, further preparations for the winter should include having the fireplace and furnace inspected to insure that they are working properly and purchasing needed items such as new snow shovels and rock salt," said Pine.

Norma Pine

With the holiday season drawing closer, she also suggested that homeowners get a head start on the season by giving the interior of their homes a thorough cleaning.

"With all the activity of summer, it's easy to let the housework slip until a later date, but now is the time to take a weekend and get things in order. Waxing floors, washing fingerprints off of walls and dusting the house from top to bottom will make the house more liveable in addition to serving as preparation for holiday decorating," Pine said.

"By starting these projects early, homeowners will have a head start on the upcoming season," Pine said. "It will eventually pay off by giving them time to relax during the holidays."

Besides providing a wide range of relocation services, the RELO network has entered into an agreement with the Dallas-based Associates Corporation of North America, allowing Chaparral Realtors and other RELO members to further help home buyers as well as sellers by offering a variety of financial services for transferees.

RELO also recently announced the formation of two new divisions providing its members with the opportunity to expand activities with both commercial and rental properties.

Chaparral Realtors' offices are at 911 North Midkiff are centrally located and easily accessible. They have been priviledged to serve Midlanders with all their real estate needs for over 13 years. For more information, call 686-7000.

BRIEFING

Rigs fall

There were fewer rigs dotting the Permian Basin landscape in the previous week, according to Baker Hughes Inc. The company reported that the Permian Basin rig count dropped five to 88 while the U.S. count plunged 40 to 758. Numbers a year ago were 128 for the Basin, 1,039 for the U.S.

Fuel contract

ABILENE — Pride Companies has been awarded a major contract for JP-8, the new fuel of choice for the armed services.

JP-8 was pushed into prominence during the recent Persian Gulf conflict a versatile furl for use in land based armaments and vehicles as well as aircraft. During the Gulf War, all branches of the American military, as well as armed forces from most participating countries, relied on the new fuel. Indication are that JP-8 is rapidly gaining popularity and most Air Force bases may convert to the fuel in the near future.

The new contract is for over 5,700,000 gallons of JP-8 annually for Fort Bliss, Texas. The new contract will take effect October 1, 1991.

Pride has also been awarded a contract to supply 30,000 gallons of JP-5 to Holloman Air Force Base in Alamogordo, New Mexico.

Pride Refining, Inc. is the managing general partner of Pride Companies, L.P., a New York Stock Exchange listed company. Pride owns and operates a petroleum refinery located at Abilene, Texas; a crude oil gathering system that gathers, transports, and resells and redelivers crude oil in the Central and West Texas and New Mexico markets; and certain integrated pipeline operations. Pride employs 550 people in the West Texas area.

Maxus sells

DALLAS — Maxus Energy Corp., will sell substantially all of its Rocky Mountain oil and gas properties for $64 million to the Energy Resource segment of Equitable Resources, Inc.

Located primarily in Wyoming, Montana, North Dakota and Utah, the properties include 400 wells and 390,000 net acres, more than two-thirds of which are undeveloped. The sale does not include Maxus' Alpha Field in the Powder River Basin of Wyoming. Maxus will continue to operate Alphan Field, a polymer-enhances oil recovery waterflood program.

The sale properties currently produce 3,500 equivalent barrels of oil per day and represent less than 10% of Maxus' U.S. assets. Maxus offered the Rocky Mountain properties for sale to further enhance its U.S. strategy of focusing its efforts on the Texas Panhandle and Gulf of Mexico areas.

Prices buffeted

Crude prices traded in a fairly narrow 20 cent range for the week, weakened by profit-taking and then boosted by President Bush's tough stance against Iraq, Boris Yeltsin's illness in the Soviet Union, and an unexpected 6 million barrel drop in U.S. crude oil stocks.

No relief for drilling slump

■ A crippling drilling slump continues to take its toll and lingers on with little prospect for improvement.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Texas Railroad Commission numbers released this week only reinforced what most in the Permian Basin already knew — that the drilling slump is getting worse.

According to TRC statistics, drilling permits for the first eight months of the year are down six percent over last year. Only 1,114 drilling permits were issued in August, compared to 1,349 in August of 1990, says TRC.

Meanwhile the U.S. rig count fell 40 last week, while the Permian Basin rig count dropped to 88.

According to Baker Hughes Inc. Texas took the biggest hit, accounting for 23 casualties in the weekly rig massacre that left only 758 rigs standing nationwide. It was within 95 of the all time low which occured in 1986, when the national rig count dropped to 663. Last year at this time the national count was 1,039 rigs working. The all time high is 4,500 which came in 1981.

"Seasonally, you ought to have a rising count," said Ike Kerridge, who maintains the rig count for Baker Hughes. "I guess people aren't drilling. There's no weather explanation, either. I'm surprised."

Most experts, however, attribute the slump to low natural gas prices, a flight of major oil company dollars overseas, and aggressive divestiture campaigns which have confused drilling plans.

The prolonged slump that shows no sign of ending soon has taken its toll on drilling contractors.

Cactus Drilling Co., founded in Hobbs in the early 40s and probably the oldest surviving drilling company, announced this week that it would cease operations, and would begin an orderly dismantling of the business as soon as present con-

Union Texas sells gas processing

■ Western Gas Resources with gas plants in the Permian Basin set to double liquids.

DENVER (AP) — Western Gas Resources will double its production capacity as a result of a $135 million purchase of Union Texas Products Corp.'s U.S. natural gas processing business.

"This is certainly a major transaction for us," Western Gas treasurer Ron Wirth said Wednesday. "We're currently operating 19 processing facilities and we're adding an additional 12 in this acquisition, so in terms of the number of plants, it's sizable."

As a result of the deal, Denver-based Western Gas will acquire plants in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. The plants process gas and also extract gas liquids, including ethane, propane, isobutane and natural gas.

The deal is expected to close in November, pending regulatory approval and other factors, said Wirth.

Besides doubling Western Gas' gas liquids production, the acquisition will raise the company's natural gas production by about one-third, to 395 million cubic feet per day, Wirth said.

Western Gas has about 175 employees locally and more than 450 nationally. Wirth said about 50 employees will be added to the company's Denver headquarters.

"This is a good (hiring) increase for us, although we would expect to add some of those number irrespective of the acquisition," said Wirth. "We could possibly pick up some people from Texas from their administrative side, but certainly a number of those people will come from the local marketplace."

Last year, Western Gas set a company record with its $255 million in revenues, up more than 40 percent. Its net income was $9.3 million, up nearly 60 percent from the previous year.

Portable incinerator will chase spills

■ A new compact, portable soil incinerator could reduce spills costs in the oilpatch.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

A highly portable incinerator which was debuted and field tested this week in the Permian Basin could have a significant effect on onshore hydrocarbon spills.

Manufactured by Veltmann Corp. of Midland the entire package is only 23-feet long and weighs 10 tons without the trailer. It fits on a single flatbed trailer and is designed to be flown to remote sites by helicopter or cargo transports. Veltmann credits new alloys for the machines compactness.

"This is truly the most compact incinerator in the industry at this point," says Clyde Veltmann, "and should find a wide range of applications in the industry. We can have it at a spill site within a matter of hours," adding that it took only two hours to set it up and make it operational.

He sees it being used in the oilpatch to remediate soil at gas plants, compressor stations, lease sites, tank farms and other applications, and notes that it will also find wide application outside the industry where chemical spills are involved.

Veltmann, is a petroleum engineer, who has also designed a number of environmental products for handling oil spills, including a skimming device for the oil spill caused by the Iraqis during the Persian Gulf war. Veltmann is currently in litigation over the device.

Called a low temperature disorbtion machine, Veltmann's design is similar to other soil incinerators in principal, but different in its portability. It cleans volatile organic compounds from soil by heating it to 750 degrees farenheit. This drives all the volatiles from the soil into a second after burner where they are combusted at 1600 degrees. The only by-products are steam and clean soil.

In its initial field test the unit was taken to a gas plant near Midkiff, where a broken valve had resulted in a spill that had contaminated approximately 150 tons of soil.

"We had been dirt farming the site since January, using bacteria for soil remediation," said Veltmann. "The soil tested 24,000 tph at the time of the spill, and remediation was supposed to take it 100 tph, but in almost eight months of bacterial remediation only the top three inches of soil had been affected and the tph was still at 14,000."

The Veltmann incinerator was able to restore the site to normal after one and a half days, even though the soil was a heavy clay and the operators were able to treat only 10 tons per hour. "We ex-

Natural gas market struggles in transition

Pitts

Don't be too quick to point a finger at Washington for dismal natural gas prices, because natural gas is a market still in transition, says two members of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

We received a letter this week from the Permian Basin's own Federal Energy Regulatory Commission members, Martin Allday and Jerry Langdon in response to my column of September 1.

In the column titled, "Sometime we forget how well it works," I pointed out how oil prices had eventually stabilized during the Gulf War, rather than going into a tailspin or soaring out of sight, because the government had finally learned to let the market work rather than jumping in with bureaucratic controls.

Chairman Allday and Langdon, both former Midlanders, wrote to agree with the column's conclusion, but also to add that the same market principals will work for natural gas in time, once the painful transition from government controls to a free market is complete.

Both say the validity of free market over controls was recognized as far back as the mid-1970s, when the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 was enacted to phase out decades of price controls, and that most FERC orders since then have been designed to "introduce competition into every segment of the industry."

More recently they point to Mega-NOPR for rulemaking on comparability, and President Bush's signing of the Wellhead Decontrol Act, which removes all price controls by 1993.

"All of these efforts," says the letter, "have had a single purpose — to transform the infra-structure of the natural gas industry from reliance on government control to an industry which is responsive to the fluctuations of a rapidly emerging North American gas market."

They go on, however, to point out that every effort has been made the transition in the least intrusive, most orderly and expeditious manner possible, because there is a multi-billion dollar price tag at stake in the industry, which requires careful and time consuming resolutions.

"It is easy to point to Washington," say the pair, "but natural gas producers should be aware of other facts:" One, the industry is in transition. Second, its infrastruture is maturing at a record pace, seeking clear economic signals. Third, supply/demand is still out of balance, and it is uncertain when balance will be restored.

One thing is certain, however, FERC has the thankless and difficult task of cleaning up a big "mess" made by decades of heavy-handed government control, that made natural gas the most regulated commodity in history. And everyone knows that it's far easier to make a mess than it is to clean one up.

In some ways FERC faces the same problem, in removing controls and installing competition into the natural gas market, that the Soviet Union faces in bringing its bureaucratically-controlled, centrally-planned economy into the free market.

Neither transition will be rapid or painless. "But stability is the reward for

SALE: Experts call buy good

(From 1E)

Greg McMichael, vice president of oil and gas research with the Denver-based brokerage Hanifen-Imhoff Inc., said that while the deal will require Western Gas to obtain some form of financing, "the company typically has been fairly conservative about its debt posture relative to its cash flow.

"They have made many very attractive acquisitions over the past three years," he said. "They are doing very, very well. This could be a really good deal."

STRUGGLES: Put problems in perspective

such painful transitions, says the commissioners.

Perhaps before too much heat is put on FERC, the problem should be put into perspective. Is there one among us who would want the awesome task of bringing the Soviet Union from communism to democracy and free enterprise, and is there one among us who would want the job of cleaning up the age old "mess" in the natural gas industry.

RELIEF: Drillers tire of low rates

tracts were fulfilled.

"We just got tired of fighting the low drilling rates, of working rigs and not making money," said Steve Tot, general manager. Cactus' decision to go out of business will take 28 rigs out of the market and could give a temporary boost to other contractors, but Tot notes that other contractors will probably follow Cactus.

While Cactus was sending out its going-out-of-business notices, another longtime drilling contractor Wilbros Drilling was selling its 12 rigs at an auction in Odessa. The firm announced earlier this year that it too would cease operations.

BURNER: Can reduce spill costs

pect to be able to treat 30-40 tons per hour in sandy situations," said Veltmann.

He estimates that soil incineration can reduce spill costs by 30-40 percent over other methods, which might include hauling the dirt to disposal sites. "You still have the liability for transportation accidents," he noted. The cost to lease the unit is approximately $5,300 per day.

Veltmann says he began working on the concept for the incinerator about two years and ago and that the actual construction was done in Minnesota by a concern that manufacturers similar units for drying hops in the brewing industry.

He said it takes about three weeks to build a unit and that he expects to have 10 in operation within a year. He notes that there is a lot of soil to be cleaned just in the Permian Basin.

Veltmann Corp. is the second soil incinerator business to open in Midland in recent months. Texas Incinerator builds a larger unit by converting asphalt burners with after burners. So far, the company has sold six of the units and is working on a seventh.

Union Pacific Fuels finals two contracts

FORT WORTH — Union Pacific Fuels, Inc., the marketing subsidiary of Union Pacific Resources of Fort Worth, Texas, has finalized two new natural gas supply contracts with Shell Western E&P, Inc. and Oildale Cogeneration Partners, L.P.

The contract with Shell, provides for the purchase of 25 million cubic feet (MMcf) per day of natural gas for an initial term of five years. Shell will primarily use the gas for its enhanced oil recovery program in Kern County, California.

Gas pipelines call for 'wetland credits' system

By Kyle Pope
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – The nation's natural gas pipeline industry is pressing for a controversial new system that would allow some companies to use "wetland credits" to build in environmentally sensitive areas.

Though the proposal is backed by the White House and most of the industry's major trade groups, environmentalists have vowed to fight the plan, saying it could further erode wetlands already suffering the scars of development.

"This is too much of an unknown," said Hope Babcock, a Georgetown University law professor who is working with the National Audubon Society on the wetlands issue. "There's a lot of thinking still to be done on this.

"This isn't the time to fool around with something we're uncertain about," Babcock said.

News of the gas industry's plan came one week after President Bush stunned environmentalists Aug. 9 with a plan to open up millions of acres of wetlands to potential development.

Despite a campaign pledge by Bush that he would not cut back on the nation's wetlands acreage, environmentalists say the administration's recent change in the definition of a protected wetland could wipe out 10 percent to 33 percent of the estimated 100 million acres of U.S. wetlands.

Wetlands provide a habitat and breeding ground for fish, birds and other animals, and they also help prevent flooding and filter wastes from water.

According to the gas industry plan currently under discussion, pipeline companies will be able to collect credits from projects that will help preserve existing wetlands or from creation of new ones. The number of credits received for the work will be determined by the amount of work performed to mitigate damage and the sensitivity of the acreage involved.

The credits then can be used by the companies as bargaining chips when it comes time to build a new pipeline across a wetland area. Under the plan, state and federal regulators will accept the credits to compensate for the damage caused by the construction of the pipeline.

In addition, the credits could be used as good-faith bonds by companies when they file plans for a new natural gas pipeline.

Mike Zagata, vice president of environmental and safety affairs for Transco Energy Co. in Houston, said the credits could speed up the time it takes companies to receive approval to build a new line.

"If a project is marginal, the time and the cost could be very important," said Zagata, formerly an Audubon Society staffer in Washington.

If enough credits are accumulated, industry officials envision a wet lands credit "bank," where companies would be able to buy and sell the credits. Under that plan, a firm wishing to build a pipeline in a wetlands area could purchase mitigation credits and reduce the cost of construction.

Eventually, officials hope the credits will be counted as company assets, along with plants, equipment, and stock. The idea, they say, is to provide an incentive for companies to protect wetlands.

"Obviously, no one is going to be able to pave over a Louisiana wet land, even with the credits," said David Friedman, manager of environmental affairs for the Interstate Natural Gas Association of America. "This provides a real incentive for restoration."

If the idea takes off, Zagata and others say they would even favor a futures market for wetlands credits, in which traders in Chicago or New York would buy and sell the credits much like oil, gold or pork bellies.

Environmentalists, though, say they are spooked by the idea of futures traders swapping wetland protection credits.

"There are some major, major problems here," said Doug Inkley, legislative representative for the National Wildlife Federation in Washington. "We think there are some real flaws in the system."

Specifically, Inkley said his group worries that the credits could short-circuit the traditional regulatory reviews of new pipeline proposals.

Zagata said he is confident Inkley's fears will be allayed once the industry plan is complete.

Even though Bush has said he supports the idea of a mitigation credit bank, no firm proposal has yet been presented.

"Anytime you don't understand something, there's the potential for a credibility problem," Zagata said. "It comes more from a lack of understanding than from a real difference."

Kuwait well fires fan interest in oil well firefighting techniques

Staff Report

LAFAYETTE, La. — The oil well fires in Kuwait have turned worldwide interest on oil well firefighting.

Robert Montgomery, USL senior consultant, USL's Technical and Innovative Center, Louisiana Productivity Center, pointed out that oil well firefighting companies have generally had little use for high-technology innovation.

"However, the oil well fires in Kuwait have turned worldwide interest to this once-specialized and elite business," Montgomery said. "In recent months, scores of new firefighting ideal have been generated from all over the world, most of which have been dismissed by the firefighters."

"The Mobile Flare Tub, a new idea that these companies may find it hard to ignore, is presently being developed at USL's Louisiana Productivity/Technological Innovation Center," he said. USL's Louisiana Productivity/Technological Innovation Center has helped inventors develop and market their innovative products for over five years now.

Montogomery said the Mobile Flare Tube is the brainchild of Wade Dubuis, who began with the basic concept of the venture tube used for years to flare gasses at oil refineries and has already been tried unsuccessfully in fighting oil well fires.

Dupuis and John Forbes, his business associate, brought his idea to Montgomery and USL petroleum engineering research professor, Dr. Asdolla Hayat Davoudi is an Iranian na[illegible] familiar with the firefighting problems peculiar to the Middle East. Their combined expertise produced the present device, the Mobile Flare Tube.

Mark Smith, technical center writer, explained that the Mobile Flare Tube is a metal tube, 48 inches in diameter and 35 feet high, which is positioned over the burning wellhead. The burning gasses and hydrocarbons are channeled through the tube and flared at some 50 feet above the wellhead. Air and natural gas, piped into the tube and through nozzles along the tube's length, combine with the burning material to create an updraft of up to 50 mph at the tube's base.

This updraft cools the wellhead and the surrounding area without the large amounts of water generally used for cooling the containing the well fires.

Smith added that it is estimated that once the tube is in place at the well, the surrounding temperature will fall to at least 10 degrees below the normal surrounding temperature within 12 to 18 hours allowing workers quick access to the well. Capping time this may be reduced from the usual four or five days down to two or three days.

Because the Mobile Flare Tube raises the flame to some 50 feet above the wellhead, the fire can be allowed to burn continuously during the assessment and capping process, eliminating the danger of an accidental recognition of the fire while workers are at the wellsite.

Smith also pointed out that the air/gas mixture piped into the tube creates a highly oxygenic and turbulent air flow that passes through the tub's afterburners, creating a very clean-burning flame that ultimately consumes 90-100 percent of the gas and hydrocarbons.

Thus, instead of the hazardous cloud of black smoke and rain of hot oil, the flare produces water which falls to the ground, aiding the updraft in reducing the temperature of the ground and wellhead.

The tube is mounted on a 40-foot skid unit and is positioned into place by the unit's hydraulically-powered arms which are maneuvered by a remote-controlled hydraulic system.

Smith explained that outriggers provide added stability to the skid unit, and the unit's pair of spray nozzles-requiring only a small amount of water-create a "water fog" that pushes the smoke and fire away from the unit during positioning.

After the seminar, a technical session will be presented at 5:30 p.m. by D'Anne McNaughton of the Odessa Audit Office of the Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts. The topic will be "Common Errors Found in Severance Tax Audits" and "Common Errors Found in Sales and Use Tax Audits."

Following dinner, the speaker will be Tom Craddick, Texas State Representative for District 76, who will give a legislative updte on redistricting, the budget and tax bills.

SPE Operations Study Group sets meeting

The Production Operations study group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet at the Midland Center Thursday from 11:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Kirk Harris of Halliburton Services in Duncan, who will speak on "Ultra-Fine Cement Applications."

Cost of the luncheon is $8 per person.

WTGS to host BEG senior research scientist

Don Bebout, senior research scientist with the Bureau of Economic Geology, will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's meeting of the West Texas Geological Society. The meeting will be at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Bebout will speak on "Reservoir-Scale Examination of Modern Carbonate Sand Bodies — Analogs for West Texas Hydrocarbon Reservoirs."

He notes that heterogeneity between wells is responsible for the low recovery efficiency of many West Texas oil reservoirs; vast volumes of recoverable mobile oil remain in the carbonate reservoirs in the Permian Basin. This inefficient recovery from domestic oil reservoirs is ascribed to between-well heterogeneity, but the styles and scales of heterogeneity remain poorly understood. In 1989, the Bureau initiated the first stage of a project to examine in detail the internal textural and structural changes in a modern wave-and-storm-dominated marine sand belt at Joulters Cays, Bahamas, in order to collect data to provide more effective models for demonstrating precisely the external geometry as well as internal variations and discontinuities within this carbonate sand body.

Cost of the luncheon is $7 per person and reservations should be made by Monday evening by calling 683-1573.

Environment topic for Trans-Pecos SPE

The Trans-Pecos section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, will host Terry L. Thoem of Conoco Inc. The meeting will be at Odessa Country Club Tuesday beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Thoem's topic will be "Protecting the Environment: An Industry Commitment." He is manager of safety, health and environment for Conoco's exploration and production group in Houston.

Cost of the luncheon is $14.

Williams, Amoco settle gas dispute

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Amoco Production Co. and Williams Natural Gas Co. have agreed in principle to settle their disputes over gas purchases in Kansas and Wyoming.

The settlement would result in a major expansion of operations in Hugoton field in southwestern Kansas, which supplies Tulsa-based Williams with most of its gas.

Amoco Production is a subsidiary of Chicago-based Amoco Corp. Williams Natural Gas is one of The Williams Companies, which operates more than 25,000 miles of pipelines and a digital telecommunications network.

Under the agreement, the companies said they will resolve all pending lawsuits and claims regarding gas purchases and make new contracts to invest in the Kansas Hugoton Field.

Also, the companies said, Amoco will continue to provide gas to Williams traditional service area in Kansas and western Missouri during the winter at market-based prices.

In return, Williams will ship Amoco gas volumes to diversified markets under a long-term agreement, Williams said in a release.

The companies declined to release further details about the settlement.

Oklahoma to review natural gas policies

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Oklahoma Corporation Commission will launch what could be its most thorough review ever of natural gas policies to define what its role may be in regulating the growing industry, the agency says.

Commissioners Bob Anthony and J.C. Watts have signed a notice of inquiry, which invites public comment on any or all of 29 issues identified in the industry, such as production, supply and transportation.

Although Commissioner Cody Graves did not sign the notice, he said in a news release this week that he supported the move.

Anthony said filing a notice of inquiry is "very much like calling for a grand jury investigation. That just shows that we are very serious about this."

"I see it as our duty to look at any and all aspects of the industry and to protect the most precious commodity in the state," Anthony said. "Natural gas is the brightest spot in the economic future of the state."

Anthony said commissioners are not trying to expand their regulatory authority, but to inform themselves about the role the state agency should take in the natural gas industry.

Anthony said the review could be the most comprehensive ever because the state agency is the only one in the nation that has regulatory power over the utility and production sides of the industry.

"We have the responsibility of gas from the wellhead to the burner tip, which is why it is incumbent that our policies not be outdated," he said.

Since the last major review of commission policy on natural gas, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission took several steps to stimulate competition in the industry.

During that time, a "bubble" of large natural gas supplies emerged, a spot and futures market for natural gas appeared and the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 generally deregulated natural gas wellhead prices.

"It is imperative that the Oklahoma Corporation Commission examine the Oklahoma natural gas industry in light of these profound changes to determine what, if any, changes are needed in the commission's regulatory oversight," Anthony and Watts said in the filing.

Anthony said the commission has no schedule for hearings and "we do not have any predetermined course of action."

He said hearings will be determined by the volume and nature of comments, which should be submitted by Nov. 12. Anthony said he was hopeful the commission could set a schedule for formal action by the first of the year.

EIA reports increase in U.S. gas reserves

Staff Report

U.S. natural gas reserves increased in 1990 for the first time since 1981. According to Dr. Calvin A. Kent, Administrator of the Energy Information Administration (EIA), the 1.3 percent increase brought dry gas reserves up to 169,346 billion cubic feet.

Proved gas reserves increased in both Alaska and the lower 48 states. Gas reserves for the lower 48 states not only increased in 1990, but are higher now than they were in 1985, Dr. Kent noted. Higher estimates of future gas requirements on the North Slope caused technically recoverable Alaskan gas to be reclassified as economically recoverable proved reserves, according to an "Advance Summary" of EIA's annual reserves report.

Reserves in coalbed methane fields increased by 1,411 billion cubic feet in 1990 while production doubled. In 1990, three-quarters of the net growth of natural gas reserves in the lower 48 States came from the increases in reserves of coalbed methane in New Mexico, Alabama, and Colorado. Over the past few years, the reserves of coalbed methane have grown from negligible quantities to 5,087 billion cubic feet or 3 percent of the U.S. total. Large incentives and an improved understanding of the underlying production technology caused the rapid growth.

U.S. total discoveries of dry gas reserves are those attributable to field extensions, new fields, and new reservoirs in old fields and result from drilling explatory wells. These total discoveries were 12,368 billion cubic feet in 1990, a 23.3 percent increase. Large total discoveries in New Mexico, the Alabama State offshore, and the Lousiana Federal offshore areas made major contributions of the overall increase in proved reserves of natural gas.

The 1990 crude oil proved reserves were 26,254 million barrels. This was a decline during 1990 of 247 million barrels, or less that 1 percent, which is close to the average annual decline of 1.2 percent over the last 10 years. The majority of the U.S. decline was accounted for by a 150 million barrel or 2.2. percent decline in Alaskan proved reserves. Lower 48 States proved reserves of crude oil declined only a half-percent, 19,730 million barrels, because some areas had increases in reserves such as Texas with 140 million barrels and the Gulf of Mexico Federal Offshore with 83 million barrels.

The net of revisions and adjustments reported for crude oil in 1990 was 1,569 million barrels, slighltly higher than in 1989. About two-thirds of the net of revisions and adjustments occured in fields in our areas: the Alaskan North Slope, west Texas, California, and the Gulf of Mexico Federal Offshore. Positive revisions to old fields sustained U.S. crudeoil proved reserves during the last decade. Dr. Kent said that even in Alaska– a frontier area– only large revisions prevented a much larger decline in 1990 crude oil proved reserves. However, Alaska still has the greatest potential for the discovery of major new oil fields in the U.S.

Seismic count

The Society of Exploration Geophysicists reports that the number of seismic land crews and marine vessels in the U.S. and U.S. waters fell in August for the second month. The land crew total fell by two to 87 and the marine crew total fell to 15, making a total decrease of three crews, to 102. This establishes a new record low since the SEG began its survey in May 1974.

BRIEFS

Clayton Williams finals 90th horizontal well

Clayton W. Williams Jr. Inc. has announced the completion of its 90th horizontal well.

The well, known as Pietsch Unit No. 1-H, is located in Fayette County in the Giddings Austin Chalk field.

The well flowed at a rate of 10,767 million cubic feet of gas per day and 1,064 barrels of condensate per day on a 22/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 3,890 psi. Absolute open flow is calculated to be 81.5 million cubic feet of gas per day. The well was drilled to a measured depth of 12,612 feet and has 2,840 feet of horizontal displacement.

"We have no plans to let up and our continued commitment to the trend is reflected by our investment in over 220,000 net acres to develop within the region in the next several years. To date, we have drilled over 335,700 feet of horizontal hole averaging about 3,800 feet of displacement per well. Our current plans are to maintain three active rigs in the Chalk," said Clayton Williams, company chairman.

The company has been active in the upper Cretaceous trend which includes the Austin Chalk since 1976 and has had a working interest in 513 Chalk wells. From the Chalk trend, the company operates approximately 12,000 barrels of crude oil per day, and 31 million cubic feet of natural gas, primarily from horizontal wells. The company was founded and is owned by Texas oilman, rancher and entrepreneur Clayton Williams.

Louisiana senator calls for energy policy

HOUMA, La. (AP) — A national energy policy that is equitable to all parts of the country is needed, says U.S. Sen. John Breaux.

Speaking at the dedication of a 750-foot offshore petroleum platform, Breaux, D-La., criticized states that refuse to allow offshore drilling along their coasts.

"I just get so sick and tired of people in California driving on 12-lane highways, three and four cars per family, yet refusing to allow any operation, any construction, any oil and gas exploration off their coasts," Breaux said.

"They ought to get down on their knees every night and say, 'Thank God for Louisiana and for Louisianians' because we are doing the job of providing the energy to make America run, to make America work," Breaux said.

The $120 million platform, built by Gulf Island Fabrication of Houma, demonstrates Texaco's commitment to deep water drilling, production and exploration, said William F. Wallace, a Texaco USA vice president.

"Right now, natural gas prices are a disaster — the lowest they've been in 10 years," Wallace said while warning that the end of the downturn may not be in sight.

The oil and gas industry does not need any new or increased taxes placed on it, Wallace said.

"The state needs to realize this is a tough, competitive business," Wallace said.

Oryx tabs new president, chief operating officer

DALLAS — Jamesrms E. McCormick, president and chief operating officer (COO) of Oryx Energy Company, will retire next year and Robert Keiser, president and chief executive officer (CEO) of Oryx U.K. Energy Company, has been elected by the Board of Directors to succeed him.

Noble Affiliates to help drill Gabon offshore well

ARDMORE — Noble Affiliates and its indirect wholly owned subsidiary, Samedan of North Africa, Inc., will participate in drilling an an exploratory well offshore of southern Gabon, in west Africa.

The Milam #1 well is planned to test a seismic anomaly at approximately 14,200 feet. The well is located on the Milanga production sharing contract area encompassing 236,499 acres offshore Gabon.

The company will receive a 12.5 percent interest in the Milanga contract area by participating in the first well. The well is presently drilling and is anticipated to cost approximately $13 million.

T. Boone Pickens concentrates on Mesa's survival

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — In the mid-1980s, T. Boone Pickens was the talk of Wall Street.

His company, Mesa Petroleum, raked in hundreds of millions of dollars in stock profits in bitter takeover battles against energy giants such as Gulf Oil and Phillips Petroleum.

Business Week listed Pickens as the nation's highest-paid corporate executive in 1984, when he racked up $22.8 million in salary, bonus and long-term compensation.

So much for those thrilling days of yesteryear.

Today, Pickens is no longer absorbed in takeover attempts. He's engrossed in fighting for the survival of his own company, now known as Mesa Limited Partnership.

Mesa, primarily a natural gas producer, has been crippled by the deep downturn in gas prices in the past five years.

The company has ceased paying quarterly cash distributions to shareholders. Its 369-employee workforce is down 60 percent from a 1982 peak of 920 employees. And Pickens hasn't drawn a paycheck from Mesa for nearly two years.

Still in fighting trim at age 63, Pickens says he isn't giving any thought to retirement — at least not as long as Mesa is bathing in red ink and its stock is selling for a trifle.

"I don't have any choice but to stay here in the trenches," said Pickens, whose ownership of 7.6 million Mesa partnership units makes him the company's largest shareholder.

For the past six years, Pickens has openly discussed running for governor of Texas. But he now says he wouldn't consider a race until after Mesa's financial health is restored.

For Mesa to rebound, gas prices must rise. And for gas prices to climb, demand for gas must increase, Pickens theorizes.

In his bid to jump-start Mesa's sputtering economic engine, Pickens therefore is pushing for both government and the private sector to dramatically escalate use of compressed natural gas, or CNG, as an alternative transportation fuel to power everything from truck fleets to the family car.

He touts CNG as cheaper and cleaner-burning than gasoline. And CNG, provided by abundant U.S. gas reserves, could help wean America from foreign oil, Pickens says.

In an interview with the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, Pickens said Mesa plans to get more directly involved in "the CNG business" than merely as a gas producer. He declined to be more specific, but hinted that further details will be forthcoming.

Mesa, with $300 million available as a result of a recent corporate refinancing, is "looking at a half-dozen deals" that could help boost the company's fortunes, Pickens said.

Electric power cogeneration plants that burn natural gas are "high on the list" of potential Mesa acquisitions, he said.

But with gas prices at a depressed level of about $1.35 per 1,000 cubic feet, it isn't worthwhile to spend money drilling exploratory gas wells, Pickens said.

"Prices are too low because you've got too much gas," he said. "So the last thing you want to do right now is develop more gas. It just compounds the problem."

Pickens forecasts that CNG will, in as little as eight to 10 years, replace gasoline as the leading transportation fuel. But he also predicts that the major oil companies — with billions invested in an infrastructure of crude oil pipelines, refineries and gasoline service stations — "will try to block natural gas" from the transportation sector.

Pickens favors converting the federal government's fleet of several hundred thousand vehicles to burn CNG. He wants to see U.S. automakers mass produce cars with natural gas-powered engines. And he wants service stations to sell CNG.

Pickens is practicing what he preaches. He has converted his 1991 Cadillac to burn CNG and has purchased a $2,500 compressor to refuel his car at home.

With gas prices having cratered, Mesa has gone from highly profitable in the mid-1980s to very unprofitable the past two years.

A common unit in the Mesa partnership — similar to a share of common stock in a corporation — sold for $18.25 in late 1986. But the common unit closed Friday at $2.125.

Mesa converted from a corporation to a partnership in late 1985 because quarterly cash distributions paid to shareholders in a partnership are largely tax-free. Mesa paid out a hefty $2 billion to its shareholders during the 1980s. But after being gutted by tumbling gas prices, the company hasn't paid any cash distributions to its holders of common units since the fourth quarter of 1989.

With partnerships having fallen out of favor on Wall Street, Mesa shareholders will vote this year on whether to convert back to a corporation.

Pickens, in his 1987 autobiography, "Boone," estimated his personal net worth at $107 million, with the bulk of that represented by his Mesa stock holdings. While declining to publicly state his present net worth, he hints that it is still somewhere in the tens of millions of dollars, but less than half what it was four years ago.

Pickens' Mesa stock is now worth only $17.1 million. His huge, luxurious University Park home — with 15,802 square feet of living, garage and basement space — is appraised at $4.3 million. He has ranches in the Texas Panhandle that encompass 47,000 acres, including a 38,000-acre Roberts County ranch with deer, turkey and quail.

Pickens bought the University Park home when Mesa moved its headquarters from Amarillo, Texas, to Dallas in 1989. He was saddled with a net loss of $3.2 million when he sold his Amarillo home, despite Mesa reimbursing him nearly $1 million for costs associated with the move, company spokesman Jay Rosser said.

If Mesa converts back to a corporation, Pickens is to receive an annual salary of $960,000. But he hasn't received a paycheck from Mesa since the fourth quarter of 1989, because partnership rules specify that he is to be paid only if the company makes cash distributions to common shareholders.

Pickens received $56.9 million in compensation from Mesa in the 1980s, making him the sixth-highest-paid executive in America during the decade, according to Business Week.

He says he isn't depressed over the declining fortunes of himself and his company.

"I'm not too much on highs or lows," he said. "When things are great, I kind of think that it isn't going to stay that way. And when things are bad, I think that things are not going to stay that bad.

"But I tell you where I've been wrong on that is the gas business. ... It's stayed bad."

Pickens contends that the major oil companies have hurt independents such as Mesa by selling gas cheaply and counting on their profits to come from such sectors as refining and gasoline marketing. But the independent companies don't have refining and gasoline marketing operations to cushion them.

"The majors can inflict tremendous harm on the independent by dumping natural gas into the market and driving the price down, which is exactly what they've been doing for the past five years," he said.

Pickens cautiously predicts that gas prices will rebound sometime between 1993 and 1997. Meanwhile, Mesa has restructured a portion of its $982 million in debt to allow it to survive for the next two to three years even if gas prices don't improve.

"I think Mesa is going to survive," said Ron Londe, an energy analyst for the A.G. Edwards & Co. securities firm in St. Louis. "The way they have restructured their debt, they have very little due between now and 1995."

For the time being, "they're in a kind of limp-along mode at the mercy of gas prices," he said.

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

The Permian Basin is an oil and gas producing empire of 100,000 square miles with an oil well for every square mile. Comprised of 54 counties in Southeast New Mexico and West Texas, this far flung industry accounts for roughly 20 percent of the nation's total oil production.

Yet, a long standing problem has been the lack of a single newspaper to serve the thousands of companies and over 40,000 workers involved in exploration, land, production, drilling, oilfield service and supply, pipelines and construction, refining, and transportation.

But now, the Permian Basin Oil Report, published weekly by the Midland Reporter-Telegram, has become the information source for the Permian Basin oil industry.

Packed with information and articles about oil and gas people, products, companies, issues, events, drilling, exploration, and production, the Oil Report appears each Sunday as a section of the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Additionally, it is mailed to every producer, operator and oilfield service company throughout the Permian Basin.

If the Permian Basin is your target market, the Permian Basin Oil Report is the way to reach it.

Junanne Brock takes over as director of the Arts Assembly of Midland.

By Georgia Temple Todd

Junanne Brock, the new director for the Arts Assembly of Midland, grew up in a world filled with music.

"My mother, June, was a singer, and when I was young, I remember her telling me stories of how she used to sit by the window and look outside and dream of being on a stage as she listened to radio programs from the Met," said Ms. Brock.

"She did go on to study voice and earned a master's in vocal performance. Some of my earliest memories involved hearing her sing around the house. I can remember as she would vocalize and practice to sing for community events or the church, I would dance around the room. I remember thinking how beautiful it was and how good it made me feel."

Taking after her mother, Ms. Brock, a Snyder native, studied piano, art, dance and voice when she was growing up.

"Not because my parents told me to, but because they presented that as an option and it was something that I wanted to do," she said, adding that her father, Ben Brock, was also supportive and involved in the arts. In addition to his position as executive vice president of Western Texas College, he was president of Community Concerts Association in Snyder.

"The arts were very important in my family. My brother and I were always given opportunities to go to concerts and participate in fine arts activities that came to town. They took us to Dallas and San Antonio and Lubbock whenever touring companies were coming through so that we would have opportunities to experience the arts. This instilled a real love for music and theater and art in me."

At Snyder High School, Ms. Brock was actively involved with the drama department. When she was a junior and senior, she received the best actress award in the UIL One Act Play Competition at the district, regional and state level.

"The drama department at Snyder High School would be to fine arts in Texas high schools what Permian High football is to Texas high school sports," said Ms. Brock, who identified Jerry Worsham, the director of the high school drama department, as a great inspiration to her. "The department received a $10,000 award from the Rockefeller Foundation for excellence in high school theater."

It was during her last two years in high school that Ms. Brock said she realized "I needed to be involved with the arts for the rest of my life." This awareness led her to decide on a career in professional theater.

"As I majored in theater in college, I started to question that decision." Yet, she auditioned for and was accepted into the training program at the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco.

"I was 20-years-old. It was the most

Assembly gives Midland artistic vitality

Junanne Brock will be Midland's newest Arts Assembly director. She joined the assembly this summer following the resignation of Kathy Schorr. Mrs. Schorr resigned to raise the newest member of her family, Hanna Kathryn, but will be working part-time as a consultant for the Arts Assembly.

"I'm happy that Kathy is going to be working with us as a consultant," Ms. Brock said. "Her experience will be very helpful to us."

According to Ms. Brock her job will include directing the programs and services of the arts assembly, which encompasses developing the budget with assistance from the treasurer and the board's executive committee. She will also be responsible for pursuing funding opportunities, including writing grant proposals.

"I'll be serving as an arts resource person in the community supporting the efforts of area arts organizations. I also hope to be very involved in arts advocacy on a local as well as state level."

Ms Brock cited efforts this past year to change the Texas Commission on the Arts (TCA) as an example of the importance of arts advocacy.

"Unless our legislators know what we need and what we want, they are not able to make informed decisions. This past spring, the arts councils from all over the state of Texas played a very important role in saving the TCA."

After months of lobbying and special sessions, Ms. Brock said, "The Texas Commission on the Arts escaped a 40 percent cut in funding as originally proposed by the legislative budget board. A bill to totally eliminate the Texas Commission on the Arts as an agency was defeated. A bill to consolidate the Texas Commission on the Arts with other state agencies also was defeated.

"As it turned out, the TCA received only a 5 percent reduction in funding. At the August Commission meeting, the TCA announced that it would be able to fund 18.5 percent of funds requested."

All too often, Ms. Brock said, people do not realize where the "money to support the arts comes from. One of the largest sources of funding is the TCA."

ART: New director has best of both worlds

(From 1F)

exciting thing I had ever done."

When she looks back on her time spent in San Francisco, she recalls the day she muffed her lines in front of an up-and-coming young actor. The scene still makes her laugh.

"One day in class at the conservatory, Harry Hamlin," later of L.A. Law fame who was then studying there, "walked into observe our class. There wasn't a female in the entire conservatory who didn't think he was extremely handsome.

"I was doing a scene from 'Barefoot in the Park,' and one of my lines was 'Oh, Paul. You know I love you.'

"Instead, I heard myself say, 'Oh, Harry. You know I love you.'

"Everyone burst out laughing including Harry."

During her time in San Francisco, Ms. Brock reevaluated her decision to pursue professional acting.

"As I studied acting and voice and dance and the history of theater, I realized that there were thousands of other talented people that would be auditioning for the same parts that I wanted, and that they needed to make a living as badly as I did. I also noticed that my classes were full of people who would be recognized because of their parents — Larry Hagman's daughter, Bing Crosby's daughter, Joel Grey's daughter.

"It was a hard decision to make, but after agonizing over it for a few months, I decided that what I really wanted was more of a normal life. I never wanted to be a star. I just wanted to be the best performer that I could be.

"I also knew that I didn't want to live in New York City or Los Angeles so I moved back to Texas and studied counseling and psychology at Tech (Texas Tech University).

"I remember someone asking me why I decided to go in that direction and leave theater behind. My answer then was, 'Either way I could still work with some really interesting people.' "

Ms. Brock said she would make the same choice today.

"If I had it to do all over again, I would make exactly the same decision. There was a time after I left theater behind me that it was very painful to go to a play or musical, but that's no longer true. In the past several years, I've gone back to performing as a volunteer, and I know that this is a part of my life that's very important to who I am.

"Now, I feel I have the best of both worlds. I live in a small city, but I still have a wide variety of arts experiences available to me."

Ms. Brock's professional background includes jobs outside the performing arena. She spent three years as a secretary for the vice presidents in the trust department of what was then First National Bank. In addition, when she lived in Denver, for five years, she owned a business.

"I was an educational consultant in educational toys and books and learned a lot about sales and marketing and public relations and promotions. I pretty much did it all."

When she returned to Midland she was hired as the coordinator of volunteers for Midland Community Theatre. From that position she moved to director of public relations and promotions for Foxy 106.

"I got laid off due to cutbacks in the budget, and luckily this position was available. Now I feel that I'm at a wonderful place in my life. I can combine my professional abilities with my personal talents, and that's why I'm so excited to be the director of the arts assembly."

Assembly designates National Arts Week

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

The week of Sept. 22 through 28 has been designated National Arts Week by the National Assembly of Local Arts Agencies.

In celebration of the special designation, the local umbrella organization for the arts, the Arts Assembly of Midland, is holding its annual meeting and volunteer of the year awards presentation Monday.

"We'll have a brief business meeting followed by the volunteer awards," said Junanne Brock, the organization's new director. "Our member organizations have already named their winners who will be honored that evening."

Each organization chooses a member it feels has made the greatest volunteer contribution for the year.

ASSEMBLY: Arts gives city cultural background

(From 1F)

On the local level, the Arts Assembly is involved in a sub-granting program.

"With the funds that we have available from the TCA and from our allocation of the City of Midland hotel-motel tax, we are able to assist our member organizations with their special projects," Ms. Brock said.

The sub-granting process is underway at the present time with 11 area arts organizations having applied to the Arts Assembly for their 1992 projects.

Funding the arts is an area which, Ms. Brock said, "People who simply enjoy going to the theater or the symphony or the museum may not realize. That's why arts councils such as the Arts Assembly are vital."

In addition to providing event information to the public through the Midland Marquee, which runs in the Sunday Arts & Entertainment Section of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, the Arts Assembly presents Gourmet Midland, set this year for Feb. 27 at Midland Center, and an annual arts festival the first weekend in May.

"I am really looking forward to helping plan Celebration of the Arts (COA) because I think it's one of the most unique and fun events that Midland has to offer," Ms. Brock said. Planning on the ninth annual COA begins in October.

"One of the purposes of COA is to serve as the Arts Assembly's main vehicle to promote Midland as a cultural center in the Southwest," Ms. Brock said.

"Another goal is to expose people of all ages and cultural backgrounds to the arts. We also work to increase tourism and be of economic benefit to Midland. Through COA, we hope to attract the participation of quality visual and performing artists from the Southwest, maintaining a balance between local and non-local artists."

The cost of staging the annual event is around $100,000, Ms. Brock said. The Assembly netted around $20,000 this past year which was placed into the organization's general fund.

"Making a great deal of money off of Celebration of the Arts is not the main purpose of the event," Ms. Brock said. "The arts are so important to Midland. Having a wide variety of arts experiences available is very appealing and makes Midland a more enjoyable place to live."

Hearst writes first insider's account of colorful family

With "THE HEARSTS: Father and Son," William Randolph Hearst, Jr., has written the first insider's account of his colorful and often controversial family.

Their personal memoir, with over 100 never-before-published photos, offers a revealing look at a family whose media dynasty has impacted American life for more than a century. "THE HEARSTS: Father and Son" was published by Roberts Rinehart, Inc., on Sept. 20 to coincide with the 40th anniversary year of Hearst, Sr.'s death.

Writing of his own life and the lives of his brothers, Hearst, Jr., also chronicles his father's gradual acquisition of one of America's most extensive media empires. He details the building of the magnificent Hearst Castle at San Simeon, his memories of living there in extraordinary splendor, and provides a first-hand observation of Hearst, St.'s 33-year relationship with his mistress, actress Marion Davies.

Hearst, Sr.'s interests extended well beyond his publishing domain, and he soon became an influential force in the national political arena. From 1903-07, he served as a member of the House of Representatives, making his mark as a defender of the common man. Hearst, Sr., boldly attacked New York's corrupt tammany Hall when others feared to do so, created international incidents by assailing foreign governments, challenged America's entry into both World War I and II, and came out strongly against communism.

Hearst, Sr.'s public persona enabled him a private lifestyle that was no less spectacular. In the opening chapter, his son reflects on the building of the opulent Hearst Castle, which became known for its star-studded parties, hosting such celebrities as Clark Gable, Charlie Chaplin, Howard Hughes, Carole Lombard and many others.

Hearst, Jr., goes on to trace the rise of his own publishing career, and the failure of some of his brothers. Beginning with his first job in 1928 as a reporter for the New York American, he talks about the top stories of the day, from New York City's flamboyant Mayor Jimmy Walker to the Lindbergh baby kidnapping. He also includes fascinating behind-the-scenes details of his famous 1955 mission to Moscow, which resulted in his winning the Pulitzer Prize for a series of extraordinary interviews with Nikita Khrushchev and other Soviet leaders.

THE HEARSTS: Father and Son, by William Randolph Hearst Jr., with Jack Casserly Roberts Rinehart Inc. Publication date: September 20, 1991, $29.95; 450 pages, with over 100 photographs.

Angelov to be guest performer at opening symphony

Bulgarian pianist Lyudmil Angelov is the guest artist for the opening concerts of the Midland-Odessa Symphony's 1991-92 season.

The concerts are set for Tuesday at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave., and Thursday at Odessa's Bonham Junior High. Both will begin at 8 p.m.

Angelov was born into a family of musicians in Varna in 1961. He began his first piano lessons at the age of 6 and was soon appearing on the concert podium. A pupil of Konstantin Stankovich, Angelov is a graduate of the Bulgarian State Conseryatoire and a winner of the Pancho Vladiguerov Scholarship.

He has appeared at international competitions and won diplomas and prizes at, among others, the 1972 Svetoslav Obretenov Competition, Provadia, Bulgaria; 1973 Usty na Labe, Czechoslovakia; 1976 Sinigalia, Italy; 1979 Rimini 'Afterforum,' Italy; 1984 Leeds, Great Britain; 1986 the P.I. Tchaikovsky Competition, Moscow.

In 1985, he took part in the 11th International Chopin Competition in Warsaw and became the first Bulgarian to receive a prize and distinction at this competition. As a result, Bulgarian, Polish and French televisions devoted special films to him.

He has made numerous recordings for the Bulgarian and Hungarian radios. He has given recitals and played as a soloist with numerous orchestras throughout West and East Europe as well as orchestras in Great Britain, South Korea, Israel and Russia.

On the program for the MOS performances are Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, Wagner's Rienzi Overture and Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1.

Also planned for the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale's season are pops concerts, additional classical performances and chorale renditions.

In October, country star Michael Martin Murphy, perhaps best known for his song "Wildfire," will salute "A Night in the American West" at Midland College's Chaparral Center. The concert date is Oct. 26.

For more information on Angelov's performances or the season call the symphony office, 563-0921. Season and single admission tickets may be purchased at the door.

Lorrie Morgan performs songs from heart

Lorrie Morgan performs Oct. 5 at Ector County Coliseum.

Ms. Morgan has spent a lifetime in the presence of country music's greats, appearing on the Grand Ole Opry for the first time at age 13. But while being the daughter of country star George Morgan made her a part of the Opry family early on and opened a few doors, there was a down side as well.

"It was hard to get taken seriously because I was around so much," Ms. Morgan said. "I was always 'George's little girl.' I guess that's what happens when everybody knows you while you're growing up."

She toured with her father until his death in 1975, then did a number of years of road dates on her own, a period that had more than its share of hard times.

"I drove thousands of miles with just me and my mom or me and one musician," Ms. Morgan said. "There were times I couldn't get through a show without literally crying because the band was so bad. But I think there's a reason why I did all that. It makes me appreciate what a good band I have now and what good management and label support. It's hard to appreciate the good things you have unless you've been without them."

Beginning at 18, she spent two seasons as part of the shows at Nashville's Opryland. She also spent two years touring with George Jones. During that period, she would open the show with a few songs then sing backup and join him in duets.

"He taught me an awful lot about singing and performing," she said.

She learned about singing from the heart from husband, Keith Whitley, who died of an alcohol-overdose in May of 1990.

Tickets, paid with cash only and priced at $20, may be purchased at Endless Horizons, Midland. Available tickets are in the balcony.

Opening lead: Two of ♡

Perhaps the most dramatic deal in world championship history was this, the last and most decisive of the 1975 World Team Championship between Italy and the U.S. The match was almost even, and the U.S. North-South pair had already finished, having bid and made six no trump on this board. North-South for Italy were Benito Garozzo and Giorgio Belladonna respectively, who conducted a typically lengthy and, in this case, atypically off-target auction to reach a terrible grand slam.

The American West, sitting behind the original club bidder with the king of trumps, thought that, at long last, he was going to become a world champion. Imagine how he felt when, after the heart opening lead, dummy came down with the ace-queen of clubs. The play was soon over. Declarer ruffed the opening lead, finessed the queen of trumps and cashed the ace. All was well when the king came tumbling down.

West was so thunderstruck by the club honors in dummy that the best defense was overlooked. When declarer led a trump at trick two, West should have played the king! That would have given declarer an alternative line—to play East for four trumps to the ten and attempt a trump coup, a line that would have required East to hold three spades. Since East held just two, the grand slam would have suffered a one-trick set.

Would Belladonna have gone for the coup? We asked him some years later. He was non-committal, but flashing a boyish grin, he did remark: "The trump coup is such a pretty play!"

AHA Food Festival scheduled

Staff Report

Food Festival 1991, sponsored by American Heart Association Midland County Division, will be today through Saturday. Themed "Those In the Know — Keep It Low," the event encourages consumers to be "in the know" about good nutrition and heart-healthy foods.

"Eating foods low in cholesterol and saturated fat is an important part of controlling the risk of cardiovascular disease," said Jennie House, R.D., L.D., chairman of the Food Festival. "By reading labels and making proper food selections, you can keep your risk for cardiovascular disease low."

Consumers should learn about their choices. "When choosing food products, choose those which contain polyunsaturated or monounsaturatead fats and avoid products containing saturated fats and cholesterol," Ms. House added.

In order to make informed choices, consumers should remember these definitions:

- Cholesterol: A soft fat-like substance found in animal products, such as meat, fish and poultry, and especially in egg yolks and organ meats.
- Saturated fats: Fats that usually harden at room temperature and are found in animal products and some vegetable products such as coconut oil, cocoa butter, palm oil and palm kernel oil.
- Polyunsaturated fats: Oils from vegetable products such as safflower and sunflower seeds, corn and soybeans. They help lower blood cholesterol.
- Monounsaturatead fats: Liquid vegetable oils such as canola and olive oils. New research shows they may also help reduce blood cholesterol.

Sodium also should be monitored closely to prevent excessive intake of table salt and other high-sodium products which can lead to high blood pressure, a risk factor for heart attacks and strokes.

During Food Festival, AHA has many events planned:

- Monday: Food Festival Kick-Off Luncheon at the Plaza Club. Dr. Michael Miller will be speaker. This invitation-only event is for media and health professionals.
- Tuesday: Breakfast, provided by Bless Your Heart, will be given to several disc jockies of local radio stations. Lunch, by Subway Sandwich Shop, will be given to local television personalities. Members of Southeast Senior Center will entertain children at Travis Elementary School at 9:30 a.m. and 1:15 p.m. Members of Dellwood Senior Center will join in the 1:15 p.m. performance.
- Wednesday: Midland dieticians will give inservices for nurses at various offices. Members of Southeast Senior Center will perform 10 a.m. at Washington Elementary School.
- Thursday: National Heart Healthy Day. Southeast Senior Center members will be at De Zavala Elementary School at 10 a.m., 10:20 a.m. and 1:40 p.m. Dellwood Senior Center members will perform 2 p.m. and 2:40 p.m. at Anson Jones Elementary School.

Gayle Banschbach leads an Environmental Shopping Tour.

To the market, to the market

If, as the old saying goes, the longest journey starts with a single step, then the move toward a more Earth-friendly lifestyle can start with a single purchase.

The Midland League of Women Voters and Keep Midland Beautiful are offering Environmental Shopping Tours through a local supermarket in an effort to help consumers learn which products are more environmentally sound.

On a recent tour through one of the local Albertson's supermarkets, Gayle Banschbach of the Midland League of Women Voters guided several interested shoppers through the store, pointing out how to determine which products and product's packaging are more friendly to the environment.

"The purpose of these tours is to educate consumers on different ways of 'pre-cycling,' " Mrs. Banschbach said, or "thinking about what to buy before you buy it."

Because recycling programs in Midland are currently limited to aluminum cans, Mrs. Banschbach said, the shopping program works to "encourage consumers to think about what to buy before it gets to the landfill. ... If it goes into the landfill, it won't decompose."

Environmentally sound shopping also is practical, Mrs. Banschbach said, because it involves buying in bulk whenever possible and buying products with a minimum of packaging.

The classic "Three Rs" might be "reading, writing and 'rithmetic," but for environmental shoppers the "Four Rs" are "reduce, reuse, recycle and reject," she said.

Reducing involves shopping for products with a minimum of packaging and avoiding single-serving portions; buying in bulk; and avoiding disposal and single-use products.

Reusing includes keeping paper bags from the supermarket and bringing them back to be used for carry-out again; using envelopes and boxes more than once; and recirculating magazines.

Recycling is limited in Midland, Mrs. Banschbach said, so shoppers can look for packages labeled "recycled," not "recycleable," since even packages that can be recycled in other parts of the country probably are going to end up in the local landfills.

Reject means not buying products that may be harmful to the environment. "Reject products with unnecessary packaging" that may be harmful to the water or the air, Mrs. Banschbach said.

Another "R" for consumers is "react," she said. "If there's something you don't like about a product, write to the manufacturer." Consumers' voices really do make a difference, she added.

Some of the advice from Mrs. Banschbach included:

- Buy items such as cheese and lunch meats in bulk whenever possible. Individually sliced and wrapped cheese can cost as much as $2 per pound more than bulk cheese, and is essentially the same product. Lunch meats sliced and wrapped at the supermarket's deli counter can be less expensive than name brand lunch meats.
- When buying pudding and gelatin mixes,

Club celebrates 50th anniversary

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

In 1941, a group of 10 young Midland women met to organize a study club to further cultural knowledge and to aid in the development of the community.

McKnight-Harrison

To celebrate its 50th anniversary, the Progressive Study Club invited former members to a tea, which was held the afternoon of Sept. 11 at the home of Charlene (Mrs. John) Younger.

Hostesses with Charlene were Lorena (Mrs. Poosty) Jones, who has been a member since the first year, and Frances (Mrs. John) Thomas, Nell Kimball, Carolyn (Mrs. H.C.) Jons and Jenna (Mrs. Harold) Welch, who all have been members since the 1940s or early '50s.

Traveling the farthest distance to attend was Geneva Cox Oswald from the Chicago, Ill., suburb of Oakbrook.

The club was organized under the auspices of venerable clubwoman, the late Mrs. Howard (Veda) Hodge, a past president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. One of the initial groups to become a shareholding club of the Midland Woman's Club, it continues to support the Woman's Club's projects and activities. Charlene Younger and Billie Hunt are the only charter members, who still reside in Midland.

In visiting wth historian Jenna Welch, it was fun to hear about the club's early-day activities, which included assisting on the homefront with various World War II efforts. Among post-war activities was hosting one of Midland's first club-sponsored benefits, a bridge party held in the ballroom of the Scharbauer Hotel. The proceeds went to Midland Memorial Hospital's Building Fund. The group also was instrumental in organizing a Teen Canteen, the forerunner of Midland High School Youth Center.

Aida Dunlap is the current president, and Helen (Mrs. John) Reid is vice president and program chairman.

DR. VELMA SCOTT, longtime Midland chiropractor, will be honored on her 85th birthday with an open house at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Mary and J. Dow Scott, from 2 to 4 p.m. this coming Saturday. Her family invites her friends to come by for the celebration.

Dr. Scott has spent her retirement years traveling. She has made her home in Jackson, Miss., the past three years.

TO LAUNCH the fall season at the Midland Woman's Club, an open house was held recently for members and additional guests. It was given in lieu of the club's regular September luncheon meeting.

Friends enjoyed visiting with one another after the summer hiatus while they partook of the delicious teatime refreshments. Striking arangements of mixed fall flowers decorated the serving tables.

Among those seen in the throng were Mary (Mrs. Richard) Anderson, Betty (Mrs. Clark) Matthews, Thelma (Mrs. Bill) Bolch, Ava Lee (Mrs. A.D.) Fultz, Stella Maye Lanham, Alyne Gray, Helena Gaston, Lynn Mashburn and Dalys (Mrs. Jerry) Atkinson.

The hostesses included Dollie N. Ballenger, Allis Chapman, Christine Clements, Clyde Cross, Dimple Curry, Minnie German, Virginia Gilbert, Mae Hendrickson, Hilda Hinds, Mable Humphrey, Cleo Johns, Lucile McCree.

Also, Gladys Mitchell, Ferne Moore, Martha Moore, Dorothy Perkins, Mary K. Rattan, Beverly Riley, Dell Shettle, Hazel Smith, Madge Wallis, Jane Ward, Lydia Wilkinson and Jean Wilson.

AMY LAMBERT, daughter of former Midlanders Gloria and LaDoyce Lambert of Odessa, was presented at the Austin Symphony Guild's Jewel Ball on Sept. 7. A sophomore at the University of Texas-Austin, she represented the Midland-Odessa Symphony.

The event, held at the Palmer Auditorium in Austin, was accompanied by a number of other festivities for the girls and their parents. Amy, who represented the emerald, was one of 10 visiting jewels from various cities across Texas.

Amy's grandmother, Monette Hicks, and her aunt and uncle, Jann and Vincent Bash, all of Midland, were on hand for the event.

The West Texans enjoyed visiting with Jeanie and Coley Cowden of Austin and formerly of Midland. Their son, Duke, a senior at UT-Austin, was one of the escorts for the ball, which had as its theme, "A Salute to Monaco."

THE THREE FOUNDERS of "The Midlander" magazine, Mary Maude Hickman of Midland, Mary Gray of San Angelo and Geneva Cox Oswald of Oakbrook, Ill., had a fun reunion recently at Mary Maude's home.

According to our reports, the threesome arose early each morning to resume visiting and reminiscing about the magazine's early days and their efforts to get it off the ground. Originated in 1960, the magazine chronicled Midland's civic and social life for over a quarter century.

"It (the magazine) was a way to get us out of the kitchen and away from the bridge table to find out what others were doing," says Mary Maude.

Besides the three editors, the original staff included a hometown girl, June Haslip McMahon, now of Libby, Mont., as associate editor, and artist Doug Atwill, who was responsible for the magazine's design. Doug now has a studio in Santa Fe and is featured in the current issue of Southwest magazine.

After Geneva and Mary moved from Midland, Maxine McCullough assisted Mary Maude as editor. The now-defunct magazine was sold to former Midlander Lois McHargue of Kerrville in the late 1960s.

A highlight of their reunion was the Progressive Study Club's 50th anniversary tea. All three are former members.

The longtime friends have pledged to get together again in Midland before a year has passed, stating they did not have time to see everyone they wished to nor accomplish everything on their agenda.

MARKET: Shop with environment in mind

stick with the powdered kind. Premade, pre-packaged pudding and gelatin in individual-serving cups is more expensive than the kind made from a powdered mix, and comes in little plastic cups that can't be recycled.

■ Purchase butter and margarine in the largest tubs that are economically possible. These tubs can always be reused.

■ Eggs in cardboard containers are a more environmentally wise purchase than eggs in stryofoam containers, but consumers who choose to buy eggs in styrofoam cartons can save the cartons for children's crafts projects.

■ Nearly any product in a single-serving container will be more expensive than a multi-serving container of the same products, and single-serving containers are more likely to have too much packaging.

■ Glass packaging is preferable, but consumers who prefer the convenience of plastic squeeze bottles for such items as ketchup and mustard, are advised to use their squeeze bottles until they run out, and then refill them from glass containers.

■ Many paper products go "through a bleaching process that contributes to water polution," Mrs. Banschbach said, so consumers may prefer to buy unbleached paper products, such as coffee filters.

■ Buying flour in larger sacks is more economical and more ecologically sound than buying smaller sacks of flour. Consumers who don't use flour that often can store the excess in the freezer until it is needed.

■ Buy snack foods, such as cookies, crackers and chips "in the biggest bag you can that is economical for you," Mrs. Banschbach said. And be aware that many kinds of cookies are marketed in excessive packaging, which not only is environmentally hazardous but is too costly and may make consumers think they are getting more cookies than they actually are.

■ Rechargeable batteries may be more expensive, initially, than ordinary batteries, but "you get a lot more use out of them," said Mrs. Banschbach, because they can be recharged and used five or six times longer than ordinary batteries.

■ Cleaning products that contain low or no phosphates are best for the environment.

Also, homemade cleaning products made with such items as vinegar, lemon juice, baking soda and hydrogen peroxide can replace the more expensive — and more toxic — commercially available home cleaning products.

"Pre-cycling is all about informed choices," said Mrs. Banschbach. And while even environmentally-aware shoppers probably will still make some non-ecologically sound purchases, "if you do, make trade-offs," she suggested. "Minimize your use of pesticides, herbicides and lawn fertilizers" that will eventually seep into the water system. "Recycle whatever you can.

"Any little bit helps."

Each consumer, she said, "has to make their own choices."

In autumn, store summer toys for winter

By John Warde
N.Y. Times News Service

Now that summer is all but over, you may be scratching your head about where to stash all that outdoor equipment — the lawn mower, barbecue, deck furniture, gardening supplies, pool toys, bicycles and other paraphernalia.

Somehow, each year these possessions mysteriously accumulate beyond the storage capacity of the garage and other areas where everything seemed to fit so nicely the year before. The answer may be an outdoor storage shed that you can put together yourself.

Most large home centers and catalog stores carry them. Kits for wooden and metal sheds have been around for decades; this year a kit for a shed made of vinyl of the kind used for siding is also available.

Prices for wooden and metal shed kits, in a market dominated by only a few manufacturers, are reasonably uniform for sheds of the same dimensions and material.

Metal sheds in the most popular sizes — 8x6 feet and on up to 10x13 feet — cost $200 to $600. Wooden sheds with about the same dimensions cost $350 to $800. The vinyl shed, which is 10x9 feet, costs about $1,000.

METAL SHEDS, because they are the least expensive, would seem to be the best buy and often are. Erecting them usually involves only fastening together the nuts and bolts that join the wall and roof panels; no special skills are required and typical assembly time is about a day. (An electric drill with a Phillips screwdriver is an essential time- and labor-saving tool for erecting a metal shed. Constructing any shed usually requires at least two people because of the weight and awkwardness of the components.)

Maintaining metal sheds is easy, too. Most are made of steel coated with rustproof enamel or vinyl (models come in a choice of subdued, matte-finish colors). They need little attention other than touching up with paint if they become scratched, and keeping the roof, the perimeter of the base and the door tracks free of debris, which traps moisture. The best metal sheds carry a five-year warranty against perforation by rust.

But metal sheds cannot be relied on to last more than 7 to 10 years even if properly maintained and, more important to most homeowners, their appearance often does not blend well with their surroundings.

Wooden sheds, though more expensive, and somewhat more difficult and time-consuming to assemble, offer possibilities for decoration and even alteration that metal sheds lack.

Most wooden sheds consist of precut plywood or waferboard panels, often with doors attached, that must be screwed and nailed together. Guide blocks and predrilled holes simplify the task, but many steps require measuring, sawing and drilling besides installing fasteners.

Kits for wooden sheds seldom include shingles to finish the roofing. These you must buy and install; you must also buy paint or whatever finish you select for the shed's exterior.

THE VINYL shed is easier to assemble than either a metal or a wooden shed. It consists of lightweight narrow panels that interlock edge to edge without the need for tools. The panels are assembled to form walls; these are then screwed to predrilled brackets on the floor. Roofing is included and the panels are colored with pigment that is part of the plastic. The vinyl shed requires no maintenance because it cannot rust or rot.

A major stage in the construction of all sheds — and one that most manufacturers do not emphasize — is preparing the site and building a floor.

All sheds, whether of metal, wood or vinyl, must be built on level, well-drained ground that has been stripped of sod. Clearing such a patch of yard can be more physically demanding than erecting some sheds and take nearly as much time.

After the site is prepared, a floor must be built for the contents of the shed to stand on. The floor helps keep the shed's corners square during construction; it also anchors the shed, preventing it from being twisted or blown about by wind.

Components for a shed floor generally must be bought at a lumberyard or building supply store. Instructions that come with the kits specify what is needed: for a wooden floor (the easiest type to build) you will have to get several lengths of preservative-treated 2-by-4 lumber to nail together in a grid, and also at least two sheets of exterior grade plywood five-eighths of an inch thick. The plywood will become the floor.

KITS FOR wooden floors containing lumber and plywood are available from some manufacturers, but buying the components locally is often less expensive because of the saving on shipping charges.

Before buying a shed kit it is also important to consult your local building code office and, in some communities, neighborhood committees overseeing new construction. In windy areas particularly, code requirements often specify that storage sheds must have additional anchors.

Makers of shed kits listed

N.Y. Times News Service

Here are the three major American manufacturers of shed kits. None of the manufacturers listed handle individual orders; all sell their products through major home centers and will tell callers where they can make a purchase.

Metal sheds: Arrow Group Industries, 100 Alexander Ave., Pompton Plains, N.J. 07444; (201) 835-5500.

Wooden sheds: Handy Home Products, P.O. Box 548, Walled Lake, Mich. 48390; (800) 221-1849.

Vinyl sheds: Suncast Corp., 701 North Kirk Road, Batavia, Ill. 60510; (708) 879-2050.

Ex-Cowboys Cheerleaders' new book tells it like it was

By Chip Brown

LUBBOCK (AP) — In a state where making a cheerleading squad can be a matter of life or death, three sisters and former Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders have written a bittersweet tale of pompoms and pageantry on the sidelines in Texas Stadium.

Suzette, Stephanie and Sheri Scholz, who cheered the likes of Roger Staubach and Tony Dorsett during the late 1970s and early 80s, say life as a Cowboys cheerleader was not always as glamorous as the posters and made-for-television movies might indicate.

Their book "Deep in the Heart of Texas" talks about drug abuse, mind control and abnormal dieting in order to fit into the skimpy blue halters and star-spangled white shorts that made the cheerleaders famous worldwide.

The book describes Suzanne Mitchell, who directed the cheerleaders for 14 years before the team was sold in 1989, as a control-crazy sergeant who rarely handed out praise and often humiliated the women on the squad to maintain the upper hand.

DEEP IN THE Heart of Texas, which is based on more than 100 interviews with former cheerleaders, was not authorized by the Dallas Cowboys nor the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders Inc.

Kelli McGonagill, current director of the Cheerleaders, said the organization would have no comment on the book. Ms. Mitchell did not respond to requests for comments.

All three of the Scholz sisters grew up in Lubbock, obsessed with pom-poms and beauty pageants and the dream of being a Cowboys cheerleader.

"Nobody outside the state can quite understand just how big of a deal it is to be a cheerleader in Texas," the sisters write. "Oh, it's an honor to be a cheerleader in Boise or Tallahassee or Kennebunkport all right, but in Texas it's nearly life or death."

The book's release this month came on the heels of the conviction of a woman in Houston accused of hiring a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's chief rival for a high school cheerleading spot.

The sisters write that being selected to the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders is "right up there with your wedding day. Depending on who you marry, it might be even bigger."

Beautiful, buxom women dancing up and down the sidelines at Texas Stadium was the brainchild of former Cowboys president Tex Schramm.

DALLAS WAS the first NFL team to use its cheerleaders as a marketing tool. And the success of the cheerleaders paralleled the meteoric rise of the oil-rich Texas economy in the late 1970s and early 80s.

The sisters claims many of the women on the squad were courted and showered with jewelry, trips and cars by big spenders now under indictment in the state's massive savings and loan scandal.

But for some of the cheerleaders, the fame, which included appearances on episodes of "Love Boat," "Real People" and two of their own made-for-television movies, was simply too much.

Two chapters tell of a Cowboys cheerleader who fell in with a high-class drug dealer and nearly committed suicide after years of cocaine abuse.

Several cheerleaders used cocaine to ease the stress of week-long work schedules, nightly practice sessions, Sunday performances and countless public appearances, according to the book.

"In the end, a few of the girls found the best answer was stronger and stronger drugs," the Scholz sisters write. "That inevitably meant cocaine, the Cadillac of speed. The girls who were the heaviest into cocaine were among the thinnest girls on the squad."

They use pseudonyms for others mentioned, saying they wanted to protect their privacy.

Staying "scary-thin" was a mandate driven into the psyche of the cheerleaders by Mitchell, who the sisters say once told a squad member, "You are not (yourself). You are a Dallas Cowboys Cheerleader. You can't act or think any way you choose."

"Suzanne herself was thin," the sisters write. "...She looked at fat like a Baptist preacher looks at sex. It was evil. ...If you were scary-thin, Suzanne liked you.

"THE EMPHASIS on an anorexic body was so high, the praise was heaped so heavily on us when we were in that emaciated condition, that we all wanted to look that way."

Several cheerleaders turned to diet pills, diuretics, cellulite cream and fasting to make weight during weekly weigh-ins, the sisters claim.

"Every ripple or bulge will show," the book quotes Mitchell telling the squad after Suzette's and Stephanie's first practice. "You have to earn the right to wear one of those uniforms.

"It's as recognizable as the American flag and I will not let you disgrace it. Unless I see you continually at your best, you'll be put on probation for one game, and then cut if the problem is not resolved. Period."

Most of the cheerleaders were willing to put up with the never-ending demand for a perfect physical appearance and meager pay of $15 a game for the notoriety that came with being on the squad, the sisters say.

The sisters say their book is not intended to trash the image of the cheerleaders, although they know that many current and former cheerleaders will dispute their claims.

"There will be those in the organization who will not appreciate this book, but it was not intended as an expose," Suzette said in an interview. It's simply "a story that had never been told and we feel the book shows all sides, the pros and cons, of being a Cowboys cheerleader."

Suzette, 33, and Stephanie, 31, retired from the squad after the 1981-82 season having cheered for four years and three years respectively.

SUZETTE AND Stephanie cheered for the Cowboys' victorious 1977 Super Bowl team, appeared in the cheerleaders' best-selling poster the same year and made several trips overseas to perform benefits for the armed services.

Sheri, 24, joined the Cowboys cheerleaders in 1985 and quit the same year after a falling out with Mitchell.

"I did not quit because I felt bad about my self-esteem or because I couldn't handle the pressure," Sheri said in interview. "I quit because I had been a leader all my life and being a Cowboys cheerleader did not allow me to be an individual."

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Before landscaping, consider locations

By Deborah A. Benge

We are approaching one of the best times of the year to plant trees, shurbs and many other landscape plants. Since woody trees and shrubs are an intregal part of your landscape, avoid making mistakes that may not become apparent for several years by doing a landscape evaluation before planting.

Benge

Landscaping is very important in that it: increases the property values, adds beauty, individuality, serenity and reduces energy costs. Whether you have a brand new home without any landscaping or the older home needing a landscape face-lift, review and evaluate the site first.

First off you may want to check on property lines and know exactly what your boundaries are. Surveyor's stakes can be found in one corner as an iron stake or a concrete marker. You should also be familar with the city and utility easements so you don't plant where you may loose a valuable plant later on. In Midland, the average city easement is 11½ feet from the curb and the public alley is 10 feet from the center of the alley. Landscaping being done in the city easement needs to be done using plants less than 30 inches tall or trees 8 or more feet tall. If you have any questions about restrictions in the easement be sure to call the City of Midland, Traffic and Engineering office.

Locate utility lines that enter your home. Some trees and garden construction should be avoided or planned around when planning the landscape. Some trees have a very shallow invasive root system and should not be used around sewer and water lines.

It's a good idea to consider the site with respect to surface water run-off, soil drainage, possible soil compaction due to construction and foot traffic, existing structures and plants. Construction debris can have an adverse effect on how trees and shrubs perform, especially if left over mortar and lime are dumped in the soil. Compacted soils can occur due to: heavy equipment, foot traffic, or vehicle traffic all of which can compact the soil. Compacting soils destroys the soil structure, killing off soil microbes, driving out available water and oxygen, killing tree roots and causing drainage problems. If identified and corrected before landscaping, you will be ahead of the game.

One of the most important considerations in site analysis with home landscaping is exposure. Permian Basin weather conditions can be so harsh and landscaping can have a big bearing altering the outdoor living areas and the heating and cooling of our homes. Trees planted strategically on the south and west sides of our homes can help drastically with cooling.

Knowing the different exposures of your home can help you when it comes to plant choice. Nothern exposures will require plants that tolerate shady conditions and southern exposures will require plants that can withstand extreme heat and sunlight. Doing a site analysis before planting this fall can save you some serious mistakes in the future.

Married? You must be miserable

By Erma Bombeck

"Familiarity breeds contempt." — Aesop

"Familiarity breeds contempt — and children." — Mark Twain

"Though familiarity may not breed contempt, it takes off the edge of admiration." — William Hazlitt

Actually, in a marriage, all three are right. If there is another institution in the world that causes people to vacillate between love and hate in a single second, I don't know what it is.

Bombeck

The first time I noted this ambivalence was when I read a story about a bride who shot her husband in the foot at the wedding reception. Talk about a love gone sour.

In Oklahoma, a man became enraged that his Thanksgiving turkey was not defrosted. The police reported that as his wife prepared to escape with their child, he hurled the frozen bird into a parking lot, where it hit the windshield of their car. He then grabbed his wife and threatened to assault her with the turkey.

In another tale of cooled passion, it took six policemen to subdue a lovelorn junkyard owner who was rejected by his girlfriend. He used a freight truck to bulldoze her home and wrecked a total of 50 cars surrounding it before he was restrained.

I am impressed by the energy and the elaborate plans married people go through to show how miserable they are. A husband in Paris shot his wife as she slept because he was bored with her. She awoke the next morning with a colossal headache until she realized she had a .22-caliber bullet in her head and had it removed.

Another unhappy marital camper stabbed her husband to use the insurance money to pay her bingo debts. She never heard of a credit union?

Perhaps the most bizarre story was a jealous husband who found his wife with another man and held them at gunpoint while he glued them together with a permanent cement.

There are no two polls on marriage that agree. I read one that reported 88 percent of married women would definitely marry their husbands over again. Another one said only half of them would choose the same husband. That's not important. The figure I'd like to see is how many married men or women would turn their backs on their spouses during a major argument.

I thought so.

Coping with wedding stress can help couple's marriage

Associated Press

Preparing for a wedding can generate stress.

But the lessons a couple learns in coping with stress can prepare them for a successful marriage, says Dr. Barbara Gordon, a psychiatrist at NYU Medical Center.

"The three main sources of this stress are issues of control, the forming of a working relationship with your future spouse, and becoming a part of a new family," Gordon observed.

There are the numerous decisions to be considered in planning the wedding which contribute to stress. Where will it be held? Who will pay for it? Should there be a prenuptial agreement? And the hardest for an interfaith marriage: Who will perform the ceremony?

Then there are the smaller decisions which require inordinate time and care: What should the menu be? What flowers should be used? Where should people be seated? These decisions are enough to make any couple crazy.

In Gordon's opinion, the way a couple approaches the planning and completion of wedding details often predicts how they will handle future joint ventures like marriage.

A successful marriage depends on a dialogue between the partners to communicate to each other their needs and wishes. Too often the bride or groom come from divorced or disfunctional families where argument or silence rather than negotiation and discussion is the normal exchange.

SOMETIMES IT IS TEMPTING for the groom to sit back and tell the bride to do whatever she wants, but Gordon said the groom should stay involved.

For many couples, like it or not, the families become involved with their own expectations of what they think the marriage should be. At times, it seems impossible to make everyone happy.

"What starts at the engagement is not just two people involved with each other, but the two people involved with a myriad of other people, family and friends," Gordon explained.

She advises couples to independently write down how they picture their wedding to be. This helps prepare them to go through the process step by step.

"The most important way to deal with the others is to learn how to compromise. You must realize that you can no longer have your own way all of the time."

SHE SUGGESTED THAT A couple try to identify the future issues they need to face and discuss together.

"You must listen to someone else and try to integrate your own needs with those of your fiance, your family, and sometimes your friends.

"No one can be completely happy with a compromise because it involves giving something up, but you may be happier than if you do things at the expense of hurting other people's feelings," Gordon said.

"That hurt doesn't go away after the wedding, nor do the family and friends."

Many people worry about what being married will be like, especially when so many couples have experienced divorce.

She suggested that an engaged couple can gain from talking to married friends to learn from their experiences. If problems arise, the couple may also want to seek counseling from a psychiatrist or religious leader.

"Remember, marriage is a working relationship. We all assume that it happens automatically. The sooner you make a conscious effort to work on it, the better it will be," Gordon added.

Paying for a wedding is a family affair

N.Y. Times News Service

Gone are the days when only the father of the bride picked up the wedding tab. In these tight economic times, splitting the wedding bill is very much a family affair.

"It's no longer shameful to say you're having financial difficulties, and very often the parents of the bride will let that be known," said Marcy Blum, a wedding consultant in New York.

Although they lack hard numbers, wedding planners say the recession has led to an increase in the number of "pooled weddings," which are paid for by a number of people, including friends who chip in for parties and even the honeymoon.

For many families, however, a pooled wedding often leads to strained relations or even disputes during what is supposed to be a sweet season of celebration.

Nearly everyone who pays a share of a wedding wants a say in what goes on.

"Asking both sides of your families to contribute to your wedding is a very touchy issue," said Barbara E. Kirby, 37.

Ms. Kirby, an interior designer, and her fiance, Ford V. Swick, 35, a real-estate developer, are unemployed.

"In the beginning, lots of family members were willing to help, but the reality is that no one hands you a blank check," said Ms. Kirby, who plans to dip into her dwindling savings to pay for a third of the wedding costs.

HER FATHER AND her fiance's family plan to contribute an equal amount.

"The whole thing was such a strain, with both of us unemployed, that we almost called the wedding off; our family convinced us not to cancel," said Ms. Kirby, who will have 150 guests, six bridesmaids and a buffet dinner at her wedding. "We started planning at a time when we assumed we'd get jobs."

Lavish weddings remain popular, said Cele Lalli, editor of Modern Bride magazine, and for couples who want them, trimming costs or getting financial help from family members or friends is often a necessity.

Earlier this year, 20 friends of a Manhattan couple paid for their honeymoon, a night in a suite at the Royalton Hotel on West 44th Street.

Regan M. Botts, a wedding consultant in Washington, said 75 percent of the couples she works with finance their own weddings because of shifting family relationships and finances.

Many parents have divorced and remarried, and many fathers of the bride, now with new families, cannot afford a large wedding.

Since engaged couples today tend to be older, with established careers, Ms. Botts said, "it doesn't make sense to ask Dad to dole out all the money."

THE MEDIAN AGE of first-time brides and grooms has risen from 20 and 22, respectively, in 1965, to 24 and 26 years old last year. More working couples have been paying for all or part of their weddings in recent years, but their ranks have been low until now, wedding planners said.

Ms. Blum said that about 65 percent of the couples she sees share the wedding expenses.

According to Modern Bride, the average wedding and reception cost about $16,000. In its next market survey, the magazine will ask how couples split the bill, Ms. Lalli said.

Where traditional etiquette reigns, the groom's family pays for the rehearsal dinner, flowers at the ceremony, clothes for the groom's attendants and sometimes for the alcohol at the reception. But for many couples and their families, that tradition is far from practical.

Sheryl Nance, 30, a reporter for The New York Law Journal, was torn between a quick jaunt to City Hall and a large wedding in her hometown of Oakland, Calif.

"Our major consideration was price," said Ms. Nance, who opted for a small ceremony at a chapel in Brooklyn. "My original budget was completely unrealistic: $3,500. We came in at about $6,000, which is cheap!"

Ms. Nance and her husband, Collin Nash, 46, a newspaper reporter, who had a combined income of about $50,000 when they started planning the wedding, had to limit their guest list to 75 for the wedding and a reception at a friend's house.

TWO FRIENDS GAVE them a $500 cocktail party as a wedding gift.

"So many of their friends couldn't come to the wedding that we thought a party would replace the reception," said Kris Oser, a friend of the couple.

Gale Lance, 26, a marketing assistant in Redondo Beach, Calif., is very organized. One week after Jeff H. Gould, 26, a marine superintendent for a shipping company in San Pedro, Calif., proposed to her, she opened a separate bank account and had $250 deducted from her paycheck each week and placed in the account.

"We didn't want to go into debt, especially during a recession," said Ms. Lance, who cut costs by planning a wedding brunch instead of a large reception.

Ms. Lance's father paid for the invitations, her mother bought the wedding dress and her future in-laws are paying for the liquor and the disk jockey at the reception.

Centenarian artist 'paints American'

By Philip I. Rosenbaum

NEW YORK (AP) — Some 80 years ago, Theresa Bernstein's art school instructor stopped at her easel to examine a sketch she worked on for six weeks.

He took one look at it, raised his charcoal pencil and drew a big X across the paper. Then he threw it in the wastebasket.

The teacher's reverse psychology worked; Bernstein rebelled and fought even harder to turn her artistic promise into great talent.

"Some of the kids would be so upset they'd go out in the hall to wipe their tears. I would say, 'Damn him, I'm going do it again,' and I'd do it over," she said.

"I wasn't so easily pained. If you're not tough you can't succeed in any given profession."

Bernstein's just as adamant about keeping her age a secret.

She tells close friends that she fears people don't want to see old people's art. She tells journalists she doesn't know the precise year she was born. After much gentle prodding, she conceded her age falls somewhere between 101 and 105.

AP LaserPhoto

Artist Theresa Bernstein stands in front of her painting titled "Rhapsody in Blue," done in 1925 and showing George Gershwin conducting an orchestra at Carnegie Hall. Bernstein is secretive about her age, but one exhibition catalogue says she turned 101 last March.

AT ONE OF Bernstein's exhibits in Gloucester, Mass., the late artist Georgia O'Keeffe once told Bernstein her paintings depict the dead while Bernstein's capture the living.

"She was right," Bernstein told a friend years later at an O'Keeffe exhibit in Los Angeles.

"Human nature has been my greatest book," Bernstein said during a recent interview in her Manhattan loft, a cavernous, cluttered space that serves as her studio and looks like an old museum where the works have yet to be hung.

"I got a great enjoyment out of people and most artists resent intrusions of other elements in their life."

But publicity and fame have never been her driving forces. Even now, in the twilight of her career, she values her privacy.

Despite four cataract operations, she still paints watercolor floral arrangements and sketches studies of a painting she did in 1917, "Waiting Room — Employment Office," which depicts immigrants awaiting their first opportunity to work in the United States.

"The new citizens of this country were really an inspiration for me," she said. "I felt these people were strangers in a strange land and they used to call them greenhorns.

"And I felt that the greenhorns were the ones that made the pillars of America stand up."

SEVERAL OTHER themes surfaced in her early works. Bernstein's suffrage parade studies of 1912 culminated in a series of works from 1916 to 1919 that document the patriotic displays prompted by World War I.

Her paintings widened the range of topics often associated with The Ashcan School, a group of men, including artist John Sloan, who painted realism in everyday American street life.

A settlement house kindergarten teacher, immigrant women seeking domestic work, and milliners plying their trade were among the subjects of Bernstein's New York Realism.

"Whenever a thing was compositionally right for a certain space I had to give it my best effort, my most brilliant technique, everything I could muster to make that space important," Bernstein said.

She still attends gallery exhibits, where collectors put her works on sale for well into the five-figure mark. At a recent Madison Avenue show, she greeted a visitor with a personal sales pitch.

"What's that book you're holding?" she asked him. "Why isn't it mine?"

When her husband, artist William Meyerowitz, died in 1981, Bernstein began to write his biography, "The Artist Speaks." She later wrote "The Poetic Canvas," a collection of her poetry, which she cheerfully recites from memory. Her own memoirs are soon to be published.

EARLIER THIS year, the Museum of the City of New York held a four-month exhibition featuring 41 of her works from the first two decades of this century.

Born in Philadelphia, Bernstein was the only child of European immigrants. In 1907, she enrolled at the Philadelphia School of Design for Women and graduated in 1911.

Bernstein recalled in animated detail an experience that shaped the artist she would become. She was chosen to participate in a competition at her art school. The prize: three years of study in England or France.

"Being ambitious and stupid, I simply chose the greatest subject of them all: Adam and Eve being expelled from the Garden of Eden by the Angel of the Lord."

After 5½ weeks, she finished the painting and left it in the studio to dry. "I come back the next morning, no painting. From that day to this I never found that painting."

Bernstein offered a reward even though she had nothing to give.

"After a day of ruminating and asking everybody and everybody putting their innocent eyes up and saying, 'Oh, I have no idea,' I said to myself, 'This is a plot. They don't want me to win the competition so they took away my entry. I'm going to fool them.'"

Bernstein found another canvas and, without eating or sleeping for two days, painted the whole thing from memory in a "fever of expression."

She won the competition.

A FEW DAYS later the donor who sponsored the competition for the last 25 years had just died, and she learned he made no provision for the money in his will.

"I made up my mind then that fate had decreed that I do not study abroad, and I never did," she said."This way I made up my mind that I was going to paint American and nothing else."

Banjo-picking pioneer stays true to mountains

By Allen G. Breed

BIG STONE GAP, Va. (AP) — When Wade Mainer laid down his banjo and took a 20-year hiatus from the stage, he went from being a household word to having to convince people he wasn't dead.

Well, the 84-year-old musician is still alive and picking in Flint, Mich. And he's still playing the traditional mountain music that commercial America has all but forgotten.

"This is the only kind of music there is that's good listening and tells a story," said Mainer. His own story may be worthy of song as well.

A country music pioneer, Mainer is credited with inventing the two-finger banjo picking style that paved the way for the Bluegrass era.

Mainer was born near Asheville, N.C., the second-youngest of 18 children. He began playing banjo at age 12 during breaks at square dances. By 14, he'd replaced the regular picker in his brother-in-law's band.

As a member of late brother J.E. Mainer's Mountaineers, one of the most popular sibling duos of the 1930s, Mainer traveled all over the South. The brothers played in schoolhouses, halls, lodges and any other place they could get a gig.

"We rode in a T-model Ford until we finally got rich enough to get us an A-model," he said. "We were booked solid ... two or three months in advance."

HIS FIRST recording was for RCA in 1935. Later contracts followed with King, Montgomery Ward, Bluebird and others.

Disappointed with the recording quality he's had lately, Mainer returned to the mountains recently to record a collection of classics.

June Appal Records, run by the award-winning Appalshop cultural workshop in Whitesburg, Ky., produced a 14-song compact disc with Mainer. The tracks for the record, released in June, were recorded at the Maggard Sound Studio in Big Stone Gap.

Mainer praises many of today's country stars, but he considers the electrified sounds of Nashville more like rock 'n' roll. "It's not pure, all of that electric stuff," he said.

It was "that electric stuff" that prompted Mainer to leave the stage in 1953. "Country music was a'dying down in those times," he said. "Those rock 'n' roll fellows were coming in, putting on the pressure."

IT WAS ALSO the year that Mainer "got religion." He moved to Flint, went to work for General Motors Corp. and played only in church.

Mainer eventually stopped playing altogether. His instrument lay under his bed for four years before another musician convinced Mainer that he could use his talent to honor God.

Mainer got back on the circuit in the 1970s, after country-western star Tex Ritter happened to bump into one of Mainer's sons. "Ritter said, 'He's been dead for 15 years, ain't he?' " Mainer remembers his son reporting. "A lot of people thought I was dead."

According to Mainer, Ritter spread the word and inquiries started pouring in. Now, Mainer and his wife make about 40 appearances a year.

Ronnie Pugh, reference chief for the Country Music Foundation in Nashville, said it is Mainer's tenacity in sticking with the mountain style that has made him "really legendary."

"Purists and scholars, as well as some fans have always admired that, the historical continuity of the Wade Mainer style, their fidelity to tradition," Pugh said. "They do it now the way they did it 50 years ago."

DEAR ABBY

Check-up is real eye-opener

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I had my eyes examined by an ophthalmologist who should have had his head examined. I am considering sending HIM a bill for services inadvertently rendered. Let me explain:

Van Buren

Dr. Toad (not his real name) must think that his female patients are so preoccupied with their eyes that they will not notice that the doctor's knee, arm, chest or whatever is pressing against them with more than ordinary pressure in this dark and very quiet examining room. (Actually, my knee was being sexually assaulted.)

Had I said anything, he would have feigned unawareness of any undue familiarity and accused me of having a dirty mind. So, I decided to handle this in my own way. From now on, anyone who treats me like a lady for hire will get my bill in the mail.

Any comment? — RUBBED THE WRONG WAY

DEAR RUBBED: Yes. Anyone, male or female, who feels that a professional is behaving unprofessionally should speak out immediately on arriving at that conclusion.

And should it happen a second time, a letter of complaint should be addressed to the county medical association.

DEAR ABBY: That snob who wrote to you, fearing that her uneducated in-laws might corrupt her son's English, was abominable. There are many more important things in life than correct grammar.

My late father, the son of Jewish immigrants, had to quit school at 14 to go to work. He and my late mother went on to become very successful businesspeople who sweated blood to educate their children.

I have always felt that what my parents achieved with very little education is far more impressive than what I have achieved.

My father's grammar may not have been as good as mine, but he was by far the better man. He was also highly respected in his community.

That snob who wrote to you, fearing that her uneducated in-laws might corrupt her son's English, should get off her high horse. Self-made people like her uneducated in-laws — and my parents — have a lot more to offer than some people who collect diplomas and degrees.

I would give everything I own if I could hear my parents talk in their poor English for only one more hour.

You may definitely use my name. — CHARLES S. LIPTON, M.D., BOXBORO, MASS.

DEAR ABBY: Just a note to thank you for publishing information on how to find a long-lost relative through the Salvation Army.

I did just that, and they found my brother — not in this country, but in Scotland! He and our mother had a reunion after 39 years! Abby, it's all because of your column. How can I thank you? — LOU FARTHING IN WASHINGTON

DEAR LOU: You just did.

By popular request, Abby shares more of her favorite prize-winning, easy-to-prepare recipes. # Company creates lasagna masterpiece

FREMONT, Neb. (AP) — How does a pasta company get ready for an assault on the world record for the largest lasagna?

It prepares a much smaller one — 13 feet long, 7 feet wide and with enough cottage cheese to please Garfield, the pasta-devouring cartoon cat.

Workers at Shade Pasta Inc. in Fremont, 30 miles west of Omaha, spent two hours and 45 minutes putting together their experimental pan of lasagna Monday.

It contained 120 pounds of ground beef, 100 pounds of cottage cheese, 72 pounds of mozzarella and 14 pounds of Parmesan cheese. It also had 32 sheets of precooked lasagna and more than 360 pounds of pasta sauce.

The company aims to make the largest-ever lasagna on Oct. 26. Cornell University students in Ithaca, N.Y., will prepare one measuring 7½ feet by 63½ feet that could feed 5,000 people, said Barbara Berry, the company's director of special projects.

A 5-foot by 50-foot pan of lasagna made in Dublin, Ireland, in May is listed in the Guinness Book of Records.

Tammy Bennett compared sprinkling the precooked hamburger to a farmer tossing feed to his chickens. She and other workers later plunged their hands into cold plastic tubs of cottage cheese and scattered it in the pan.

Wearing bright red shirts that read "No Toil ... With No Boil," a handful of employees spread thick tomato sauce across the pan, then added 67-by-40-inch sheets of precooked noodles.

It took 18 layers of meat, cheese, noodles and sauce before the lasagna was finished on an outdoor grill. Workers then had to battle a stiff wind as they placed heavy-duty aluminum foil over the top of the pan and barbecued the lasagna.

More than 20 employees took home 9-by-13-inch, double-layer pans of pasta. Four other pans went to the needy.

Retirement not top priority for some

By Evan Ramstad

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Twelve weeks ago, Jerry Hare stayed active in retirement by taking three-mile hikes on the plains near his West Texas home.

If he passes flight attendant school this week, the 63-year-old Korean War veteran will be walking the planes of American Airlines instead.

Hare is American's oldest flight attendant trainee and the pride of its young program to recruit men and women over 40 for its most visible cadre of workers.

"I think like young people. My wife says that's what's wrong with me," Hare joked before going down an evacuation chute as part of his 5½-week training.

American's recruiters are trying to build the company's employment reputation among 40- to 65-year-olds to get a jump on the demographic shift that will place the bulk of the population in that range within a decade.

Besides luring new workers, the program could generate good will — and extra business — among older travelers. That could be especially helpful now, as American and other airlines try to increase ridership after months of low bookings caused by the recession and the Persian Gulf War.

AMERICAN'S PROGRAM took off after a mention in the magazine of the American Association of Retired Persons this spring. More than 1,000 people sent letters of inquiry, 300 applied and several dozen have been or are now in training, said Frank Campagna, manager of flight attendant recruiting.

"We got a tremendous response," Campagna said. "People were saying, 'I thought the maximum age was 40. I had no idea that you could do this. I thought there was a legal age limit.'"

The airline's only mandatory retirement is for pilots: age 60, as required by the government. Its oldest flight attendant, Juanita Carmichael of Margate Shores, Fla., turns 70 this fall. She joined the company in 1944.

American is actually one of a growing number of businesses to target older job candidates, said Emory Bullis, senior program specialist for AARP's worker equity program.

One of the most visible is McDonald's Corp., which featured an older worker in a TV commercial two years ago. McDonald's now averages two to four older employees in each of its 8,600 U.S. outlets, McDonald's spokeswoman Jane Maxwell said.

The former Piedmont Airlines, which merged with USAir two years ago, recruited older flight attendants for a short time with ads for "empty nesters," or parents whose children had grown up and left home.

American's largest competitors, United Airlines and Delta Air Lines, said they don't have similar recruitment programs but welcome flight attendant candidates of all ages.

AMERICAN SEES several benefits in its program. Patte Moore, manager of flight attendant training, said older candidates often inspire their younger classmates.

"They help the other students by keeping their morale up and telling them they can do it," Ms. Moore said.

Older folks are also a natural target as demographics change.

"We started doing analyses," Campagna said. "From 1989 to 1991, we saw a doubling of the number of people in the mature candidate range, which we categorize as 40-plus."

American says it gets about 54,000 applications for the 1,000 to 2,500 flight attendant jobs that open each year.

"We don't have a problem of people applying to American Airlines," Campagna said. "But we have very high standards that we want these individuals to carry through into the aircraft with our customers.

"Whenever you have high standards, you're going to have a higher rejection rate. We don't want to be in the position six or seven years from now, when the demographics of our labor market changes, and say, 'We should have thought about this.'"

American acknowledges some monetary advantages to its plan. A 55-year-old won't accrue as much in pension benefits as a 22-year-old recruit who spends 40 years with the company.

But the average attendant stays with the airline seven years, and each year only a few workers retire with more than 30 years experience. More typical are those who leave after 20 years, taking a package of insurance, pension and travel benefits.

THE OLDER RECRUITS, like all first-year attendants, get a salary and expense package of $18,300 a year. They're also eligible for American's health plan and fly stand-by for free on days off. Pensions kick in after five years, as with all American flight attendants.

Training is also the same. Each must meet height and weight standards, and pass a physical and the training course. Housed in dormitories on American's corporate campus near Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, trainees are drilled in safety, service and appearance standards.

"Training has been more intense than I ever dreamed possible. I think that's true with everybody," Hare said as he waited to practice evacuations from a mock DC-10.

"You put in 15, 16, 17 hours a day studying. We are using computer-assisted instruction, laser discs. That helps. A picture is worth a thousand words to me."

For Bridget Richmond, a 53-year-old former hotel services manager from San Diego, the program ended "30 years of hoping and praying that one day I'd be up there."

HER HUSBAND spotted the AARP magazine article. "He said, 'That's you. Go for it.' And I went for it," said the mother of six and grandmother of five.

"I don't think my wife took it quite serious in the beginning. But she came right through now. She's for traveling," Hare said, noting that free travel perk.

Hare, a father of two and grandfather of three, joined the training program two years after retiring in San Angelo, Texas. Before that, he'd spent 40 years in military and civilian posts with U.S. defense agencies, and was a mechanic and instructor for the Air Force in the Korean War.

It will be five years before he qualifies for an American pension. But retirement is the last thing on his mind.

"My father died at 94. My mother's 93 and still alive," he said. "I stay active. They say, keep your wheels in motion."

Instructor J.E. Jeanes, center, counts to three as prospective flight attendants Gail Alexander, 45, and Jerry Hare, 63, leap to an evacuation chute in August at the American Airlines training center in Fort Worth. # Temporary arrangements are touchy for children

By Lawrence M. Kutner
N.Y. Times News Service

When their cousin needed some time to recover from an automobile accident this summer, Susan and Dave Rozakis offered to care for her 9-year-old daughter. Their own 6-year-old daughter seemed excited about the upcoming visit.

"I expected my niece to have some problems fitting in, and my daughter to be fine," said Ms. Rozakis, a civil engineer in San Carlos, Calif., a suburb of San Francisco.

"Instead, the opposite happened," Ms. Rozakis recalled. "Sibling rivalry hit like a bolt out of the blue. She wanted to be with her cousin, but she also felt that her position in the family as the only daughter was being usurped."

Parents who try to care for other people's children find it takes more than a warm heart and welcoming arms to make the temporary arrangement work.

The degree of animosity some children feel when another child, even their closest friend or favorite relative, stays at their home for more than a few days can quickly upset the emotional balance of a family at a time when they need that balance more than ever.

"Parents often aren't realistic in their expectations of harmony," said Dr. Carl Mumpower, a clinical psychologist in Asheville, N.C., who has worked with families in this situation. "That leaves them disappointed, which in turn may lead to additional conflict."

The child who must temporarily share his home often feels jealous and wonders if he is being replaced, either figuratively or literally. He may look for ways of getting the visiting child into trouble or may complain about minor things the visitor is doing. It is his way of protecting his position in the family.

"It's especially difficult for children who don't have siblings," said Dr. Josephine P. Beebe, the president of the division of family psychology of the American Psychological Association. "All of a sudden they have to share a lot more."

Visiting children can also be upset by staying with a new family, especially if they are there because their own parents cannot care for them.

Suddenly the household rules are different. They may not be sure what is expected of them or which of their normal habits and expectations will be rebuffed.

"The visiting child's initial excitement is often followed by panic or depression," Mumpower said. "How many changes will she have to make, such as going to a new school, forming new friendships or not having her own bed?"

These children will often respond by testing limits to see how much the rules have changed and how easily they can be bent. They are looking for the reassurance of structure and stability in their lives.

Psychologists advise parents against indulging the visiting child by not expecting him to participate in family chores or by not setting limits on activities like watching television.

Discipline is often a major concern during these visits. Parents feel much less comfortable disciplining someone else's child than their own.

"The big issue is what kind of parental authority you have," said Dr. James H. Bray, a clinical psychologist and an associate professor of family medicine at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. "Ideally, the biological parents should make it clear to their children that they have to obey the adults they're staying with."

Caving in to a visiting child's demands is the opposite of what the child needs, especially if she is visiting because her own parents are going through a crisis.

"It gives the child the idea that even you can't handle the reasons behind the child's visit," said Dr. Darwin Dorr, the director of clinical psychology at Highland Hospital in Asheville, N.C., and a consulting professor of medical psychology at Duke University.

He tells parents that they can make a visitor more comfortable by calmly stating the family's rules and expectations as soon as the child arrives.

Downtown sights fascinate those with sense of adventure

By Robert Reinhold
N.Y. Times News Service

Most visitors to Los Angeles do as Angelenos do: they avoid downtown.

For them, downtown is an ungainly clutter of buildings viewed from a car on the freeway. But here, confined in this massive noose of highways, is the historic heart and soul of what is now the second largest city in America.

A walking tour of downtown is essential to any traveler willing to explore the Los Angeles beyond palms, beaches, swimming pools and Hollywood lore.

It was here 210 years ago that Los Angeles was founded by 44 Spanish settlers in what was then a verdant valley of cottonwoods and wild vineyards.

Today one finds remnants of that settlement among the still-vital centers of some of the city's main immigrant groups, the Mexicans, Chinese and Japanese. There are also the country's largest collection of pre-World War II movie palaces, many in bad repair but still magnificent, and splendid Art Deco office buildings.

And it was here that the nefarious plots to wrest control of California's water were hatched, schemes that allowed a vast metropolis to be built at the expense of other areas.

MOST OF THESE sites are in the eastern half of downtown. This former financial and retail heart began decaying in the 60s, after a 1957 ordinance repealing the city's 13-story height limit on new construction. This change allowed a new, austere center of glass and steel to emerge just to the west.

Even in the eastern confines of downtown, the distances are such that walking can be exhausting. In his superb guide to the city's architecture and landscapes, "The City Observed: Los Angeles," the architect Charles Moore offers this good advice on seeing the attractions of historic Los Angeles:

"Since there are some bleak no man's lands between and around these wonders, walking is for the hardy. You'll pick up the city's rhythms better at the wheel of your car, as the natives do. But from the car you'll also miss many gratifying details, so it's best to brave it and walk as much as you can bear."

A convenient way to start, therefore, is to leave the car at Union Station (800 North Alameda Street), where parking is a bargain; $5.50 for all day.

Completed in 1939, this serene structure was the terminus of the transcontinental railroad line and remains a functioning terminal long after the grand stations of many other cities have been closed.

The station marries Spanish Colonial and Streamline Moderne styles under a tall clock tower. A courtyard outside welcomes the visitor with a profusion of fig trees, fan palms, hibiscus and petunias.

By just crossing Alameda Street one wanders back two centuries, into El Pueblo de Los Angeles Historic Monument, where the city was founded on Sept. 4, 1781.

Now a state park — and a bit of a tourist trap — the area contains 27 historic buildings that were saved from demolition several times over the years. They surround a pleasant central plaza shaded by huge fig trees.

ON ONE SIDE is the city's oldest church, La Iglesia de Nuestra Senora la Reina de Los Angeles de Porciuncula, completed in 1822 by the Franciscans and now an activist Roman Catholic church ministering to the city's huge Mexican-American population.

Just north of the plaza is Olvera Street, a pedestrian mall lined with shops selling Mexican baskets, hats and other curios, as well as a couple of small cafes, like Rodolfo's, serving tacos and enchiladas.

On the right side is the oldest house in the city, the Avila Adobe, built in 1818 but heavily damaged in the 1971 earthquake. Now rebuilt and restored, the building is furnished as a 19th-century home with excellent relics of Spanish and Mexican culture of the period.

Across the street in the Sepulveda House is the visitors' center. Just south of the plaza is the city's first firehouse, an 1884 structure that now serves as a delightful museum of 19th-century firefighting. All are open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, to 4:30 p.m. on weekends. Admission free. Free guided tours of El Pueblo are available Tuesdays through Saturdays hourly from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., starting at the firehouse. Call (213) 628-1274 for information and reservations.

From El Pueblo walk down North Main Street and cross the bridge over the roaring Hollywood Freeway into downtown proper.

ON THE LEFT is a pleasant diversion for families traveling with children, the Los Angeles Children's Museum, crammed with hands-on exhibits for youngsters, at 310 North Main Street, (213) 687-8801. Continue down Main Street to City Hall, the 28-story tower that will be familiar to viewers of the television series "Dragnet."

Completed in 1928, it remained the tallest building in Los Angeles, and the only one taller than 150 feet, until 1957, when the height restrictions were lifted. An eclectic mix of styles, it resembles an ancient temple topped by a tower with sloping roof. Detour inside to examine its Byzantine rotunda, and tour the grounds planted with palms and birds of paradise.

At the corner of First Street, turn left (east) to Little Tokyo, the compact neighborhood of shops and apartments that was the center of the original Japanese settlement. It is now mostly modern shops, hotels, noodle shops and sushi bars.

A pleasing downtown oasis is the serene Japanese garden on the third floor of the New Otani Hotel at 120 South Los Angeles Street. From the garden, exit directly into the adjoining Weller Court, at Second and San Pedro Streets, where the six-table Okonomiyaki restaurant provides a good place for lunch. Its specialty — and namesake — is an unusual Japanese fritter of vegetables, shrimp and spices fried on a griddle at the table (about $7; telephone 213-267-8819).

The century-old Japanese contribution to California agriculture, fishing and other enterprises will soon be celebrated in a new museum, the Japanese-American National Museum, being built in an old Buddhist temple at First Street and Central Avenue. For information on opening and exhibits call (213) 625-0414.

BY TURNING around on First Street and heading back west, past Spring Street, and turning left (south) on Broadway, visitors will enter a zone that two generations ago was the heart of sophisticated life in Los Angeles.

Spring Street was the Wall Street of the city, Seventh Street at Broadway the Fifth Avenue and Broadway was, well, Broadway. Today those streets are dominated by the Mexican newcomers, and the shops have turned into a cacophony of Mexican sights, sounds and smells, flowing onto the streets with racks of blouses, shoes, handbags, stands of burritos and quesadillas, and loud music.

Some will find a walk down Broadway a fascinating glimpse into a foreign culture; others may react negatively. Either way, the history buff cannot avoid Broadway, lined with ancient movie palaces and superb old office buildings.

The corner of Broadway and Third Street is particularly impressive. At first, one is likely to miss the unprepossessing, five-story brick building on the southeast corner, the Bradbury Building (1893).

But inside awaits, in the architect Charles Moore's words, "one of the most thrilling spaces on the North American continent." Topped by a skylight, the interior court is an exquisite array of elaborate wrought-iron staircases, railings and open-elevator cages. The thrill of entering the building, a National Historic Landmark, will not be diminished by its familiarity: it has been used as a set for many movies, including the final fight scene in the apocalyptic "Blade Runner." A developer, Ira Yellin, has restored the Bradbury Building, which is scheduled to reopen to visitors in early November.

A FEW DOORS south of the Bradbury, enter a vest-pocket park next to the McDonald's at No. 330 South Broadway, which contains a monument to Biddy Mason, a freed black slave and midwife who was the first black woman to own property in Los Angeles. Bas-relief scenes from her life are installed on a wall at the rear of the small park.

Across the street from the Bradbury is the Million Dollar Theater building. On the south wall near the top, fading letters read: the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California Building.

Few Angelenos realize it, but this site had more to do with their prosperity than any place in this desert metropolis. It was here that city leaders hatched the nefarious plots, semi-fictionalized in the film "Chinatown," to grab control of water in the now-devastated Owens Valley of California on the eastern slope of the High Sierra and channel it south to the fast-growing city.

Given the current drought, the building stands as enduring testimony to Los Angeles's wisdom in stealing all the water it could before someone else did.

The movie theater itself was one of the first built in the United States, dating to 1917, before talkies. Its facade is grandly overdecorated with stone carvings of cattle skulls, bison heads and other images, now marred by a garish red-and-white marquee advertising Spanish-language feature films like "Federal de Narcoticos."

Like most of the giddy parade of movie houses on Broadway, its interior can only be seen by buying a ticket.

JUST DOWN the block is the fabulous Grand Central Market, the cavernous 74-year-old European-style market under great overhead fans. Catering now to the Hispanic community, its aisles overflow with exotic foods like oxtails, pig heads, barracuda, cactus ears, Guatamalan and Salvadoran cheeses. Stop at one of the cafes and try a plate of quesadillas for $2.25. (Open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.)

Just one block east, paralleling Broadway, is Spring Street, the former financial center, now in sad decay. An effort to turn it into a Soho-like arts center has faltered.

A linchpin of the redevelopment effort, the Los Angeles Theater Center, which occupies the former Security Pacific Bank, a Greek Revival building at 514 South Spring, is on the brink of financial collapse.

Back on South Broadway at No. 615 South is the once-lavish Los Angeles Theater, built in 1931 to offer temporary surcease from the Depression with its rococo ornamentation and Corinthian columns. The other Broadway movie palaces are the Palace (at 630), the State (703), the Tower, now shuttered (802) the Orpheum (842) and the United Artists, now the University Cathedral (933).

In the middle of all this at 648 South Broadway is one of the oddest and most enduring of Los Angeles landmarks, Clifton's Brookdale Cafeteria, dressed out like a virgin redwood forest.

TWO BLOCKS south at 849 South Broadway is the Eastern Columbia Building (1930), a premier example of the Moderne-Art Deco style with its elaborately decorated exterior of blue and green terra-cotta tiles.

A remodeling has placed a mall of small restaurants in its lobby. And then two more blocks to the 1914 Los Angeles Herald-Examiner Building at 1111 South Broadway. This enormous Mission Revival landmark was designed for William Randolph Hearst by Julia Morgan, the same architect who created his castle at San Simeon. The newspaper folded in 1989, and now the Hearst Corp. is threatening to have the structure torn down.

Now walk over to Hill Street and turn right, to the 1927 Mayan Theater at 1040 South Hill Street, with its elaborate pre-Columbian motifs, exterior and interior, which give it the feel of an ancient temple.

Craftsman J. Brown of Weatherford puts the finishing touches on a full-size stagecoach which will be on exhibit at Six Flags Over Texas' second annual Texas Heritage Crafts Festival.

Six Flags' crafts festival underway

ARLINGTON — More than 200 craftsmen will take part in the second annual Texas Heritage Crafts Festival this weekend and Sept. 28-29 at Six Flags Over Texas.

Handmade items running the gamut from a full-size stagecoach to tiny corn husk dolls will be offered for sale during the event. Fifteen of the top artists in Texas, members of the so-called "Texas Wild Bunch," will exhibit their work.

The event also features more than 50 wood carvers representing three Texas carvers' guilds.

The festival's Christmas Barn will deal exclusively in specialized Christmas crafts including carvings, ornaments, music boxes and other holiday items.

A blacksmith, potters and knife, toy, broom, barrel and lye soap makers will demonstrate and sell their crafts. On exhibit during the festival will be a mule-powered hay baler, grist mill and steam tractor. All of these will be in operation.

Festival finger foods will be available from stands on the streets of Six Flags.

Eight bands performing traditional folk music can be heard on the park's streets. In the Crazy Horse Saloon, Western singer Rod Steagall and his band will present several shows each day.

The festival will be staged 10 a.m.-10 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m.-8 p.m. Sunday. The park's regular rides and shows will be in operation during the event.

Laughs roll off assembly line in new laugh factory

By Jody Leader
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — A new Laugh Factory comedy club will open in Santa Barbara this fall and plans for a new Comedy Store are in the works.

These announcements come despite a drop in comedy club attendance, largely due to the recession, say club owners.

But it was only a few weeks ago that two other comedy clubs opened locally. Catch a Rising Star, which also has clubs in New York and Las Vegas, opened at Universal Studios June 28. Rodney's Place opened (and closed, for lack of proper permits) on June 27. It opened again in August.

Jamie Masada, who owns the 11-year-old Laugh Factory in Hollywood and a 7-month-old Laugh Factory in Chicago, sees an open niche in Santa Barbara, where there are no permanent comedy clubs. Masada was impressed by a Santa Barbara radio survey, which asked its listeners what sort of entertainment they thought the city was lacking. Comedy clubs were ranked No. 1.

"I love Santa Barbara," Masada said. "They have the beauty. The only thing they don't have is the laughter."

The 299-seat club will open at 409 State St. with shows nightly. It is jointly owned by Masada, producer-director Neil Israel ("Police Academy") , manager-producer Eric Gold ("In Living Color") and Frank Brell, former ABC executive and former head of Caesar's World Entertainment.

Mike Becker, owner Mitzi Shore's assistant at the Laugh Factory, said Shore was planning to open a new club soon, but not in Santa Barbara. Details are pending.

In the past, Shore has had a hard time expanding. She opened a club at the Sheraton-Universal in 1987 that lasted less than a year. Her Westwood club, which ran from 1976 to 1984, was successful until the landlord tripled the rent.

For more information about the new Santa Barbara Laugh Factory, call (805) 564-1011.

Smelling history is possible in Fort Worth's Parfumelle

By Anjetta McQueen
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — In some museums, you can see history in faded print on dusty tomes. In others, you can feel history through cold, faded medieval armor and smooth, polished dinosaur bones.

In a small museum tucked in a Fort Worth perfume store, you can smell history.

At least most of it, said Fares LaHoud, owner of Parfumelle, home of possibly the country's only perfume museum. Many fragrances fade over time but some fragrances can last forever, said LaHoud as he stood amid the neat rows of bottles in glass cases in a corner of his store.

According to the American Association of Museums in Washington, D.C., and the Texas Association of Museums in Austin, there are no perfume museums on record, public or private. LaHoud said he is fairly sure his museum is the only one, except for a couple of mobile museums. But he is not exactly shy about saying it would be the best.

His prize is an empty 17-inch blue Lalique glass bottle that once held a 1950s fragrance called Je Reviens ("I will return") from an old French perfume house, or company, called Worth. A slight floral odor lingers in the bottle, while other bottles still contain perfume. Some of his collection dates to 1912. And there is a bottle designed by Spanish painter Salvador Dali from the early 1980s. Also in his museum, which he always permeates with an odor du jour, is a working perfume distillery from Italy.

THE VALUE OF such pieces is more historical than monetary, he said, declining to disclose any exact figures.

"There's a lot of history in these perfumes," he said. "Many fragrances today wouldn't be here if these didn't exist."

He compared the lineage of perfumes to a person's family tree.

"You wouldn't be here if your grandmother hadn't (been born)."

And like your ancestors, every bottle has at least one story to tell. The small, curvy bottle that once held Shocking, French designer Elsa Schiaparelli's popular scent, was born out of the designer's trans-Atlantic tiff with Mae West, LaHoud said. Schiaparelli refused to come to the United States to measure West for a movie wardrobe, and West refused to go to Europe. The compromise was a bust with West's measurements, which was shipped to Schiaparelli for fitting. Thus the bottle that held this 1930s "grandmother of modern fragrance" has an hourglass figure draped in "shocking" pink satin, LaHoud said.

This story and others unearthed along with the antique bottles are told on small white cards in each bottle's glass case. LaHoud says he is known as the Sherlock Holmes of the industry, literally sniffing out fresh prospects for his collection, which gained momentum after he opened his store in 1984.

HE DISCOVERED most of the 90-odd pieces on display in the store in dusty thrift shops and antique stores. But he also gets phone-call tips from friends in the business and donations from prominent, as well as ordinary, citizens.

But he doesn't go to shows for his collection. There's a lot of selling and trading, and LaHoud doesn't accept monetary offers for his pieces.

"Sometimes I will trade for an important piece," said LaHoud, 42, whose world travels led him into the perfume business. "I go more for the name."

For his store and museum, LaHoud is looking to make some history himself with the revival of a porcelain bottle, which he has commissioned Fort Worth artist Bob Hogsed to design. There would be no particular fragrance. It would be more of a store mascot.

Porcelain bottles, once rather popular, are rare today because they are very fragile and too expensive to be made for a mass market, LaHoud said. So the perfume houses usually use glass bottles.

And even though it seems as if every designer and actress in the world has his or her own perfume, there are actually fewer perfumes now than in 1950. Today, there are only about 1,000 fragrances among dozens of companies, he said.

"Just in the house of Caron, there were more than 150 fragrances," LaHoud said. "Guerlain had 200. You would keep your same bottle and take it in for refills."

On the other hand, Oscar de la Renta has just two fragrances — Ruffles and Oscar, he said.

WHAT'S INSIDE the bottles and packages also has changed, LaHoud said. The Food and Drug Administration has outlawed many natural ingredients, such as glands from the civet cat and other animals, so manufacturers must use synthetic versions. But there are cheap synthetics and top-of-the-line synthetics, he said.

"Really, no one is doing it the old way," LaHoud said.

Also, back in perfume's heyday, there were more single-note fragrances, or perfumes with just jasmine or just carnations. Now there are "multiple-face" perfumes that 50 people could wear and it would smell 50 different ways, LaHoud said.

LaHoud said all of the changes in perfume production have lowered prices so that an ounce of good perfume does not cost half a week's salary. Despite the $600-a-bottle price tag on the well-known Joy, there's really no such thing as the most expensive perfume or a fragrance of the stars.

"The highest you can go is to have a fragrance made for you," he said.

A perfumer will design the right smell for a lot of money, use the best materials and furnish it in a crystal or other fine-glass bottle. LaHoud said he is one of those perfumers.

And what does a perfume historian and connoisseur wear?

"I will not wear the same scent every day," he said. "I would not be able to teach myself to give advice to others."

EDUCATING PEOPLE about fragrances is what inspired LaHoud to open a museum.

"People have not really seen anything today that is not from the past," he said. But customers might not always realize that.

He urges visitors to browse and ask questions while in the store.

LaHoud's store and museum attract admirers from Dallas, New York and Europe.

"Well, the department stores know about us," he said. And one customer will tell 10 friends. And even if only one of those 10 comes in, that person will tell 10 more, he added.

Mexico's Pacific coast offers most promising new resorts

By Robin and Patricia Harris
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — If you're thinking about going to Mexico, you might consider Ixtapa and Zihuatenejo along the Pacific shoreline of Mexico.

Experts in the travel industry say the area represents Mexico's most promising new resort. Although quite different, the sites encompassing about 1½ miles of shoreline are linked by scenery and climate.

Ixtapa, which is much younger, is the fancier of the two. It has 10 excellent hotels (including the Dorado Pacific, the Holiday Inn, the Omni, the Krystal and the Stouffer President) and an outstanding 18-hole golf course designed by Robert Trent Jones.

Colorful Zihuatenejo's streets are paved with decorative bricks and municipal construction codes limiting all buildings to the same height as the palm trees. Life gears up about mid-morning when fishermen return with their catches.

Zihuatenejo's hotels are not as fancy, although one, the Puerto Mio, is a five star. The hotels, with a capacity of about 8,000, are usually filled up, but two more hotels will be available soon and furnished rooms generally aren't hard to find.

One of the area's main attractions is the fishing. An ardent angler can walk on the piers, charter a fully equipped boat for as little as $100 a day and sail out on the wide bay for marlin, sailfish, wahoo or dorado bonito. More luxurious craft for eight or 10 people can be hired for about $250 a day.

Golf in Ixtapa is another big draw, and hunting licenses are available for game.

But the real reason to come to this locale is, of course, the beach — "La Ropa," or "the clothes." It was so named when a ship sank in a storm many years ago, strewing piles of clothing along the shore that were cleaned up by the locals.

The father of the resort area is, in a sense, German Helmot Leins, the owner of a Dusseldorf engineering firm who fell in love with the place during a vacation almost 20 years ago.

He decided he was tired of freezing winters, so he sold his business, returned to Mexico and opened a six-room hotel. Today his property includes 25 rooms and 18 condominiums, with a bar and a restaurant and lighted tennis courts. "You can also just sit in a hammock and read," he said.
