EPIC lesson

It's 9 a.m. on Monday. While office workers are trying to pry their eyelids open by downing a second cup of coffee, an enthusiastic Anne Michaud has a group of sixth graders at Milam Elementary School working on a puzzle. This isn't just any puzzle. It's a lesson in humanity, and its interlocking pieces show how each person plays an important role just by being there. The puzzle and the lesson are part of a program called EPIC, which stands for Effective Parenting Information for Children. / 1C

Cab explodes

LONDON — The Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility Saturday for hijacking a cab and blowing it up near the prime minister's home. No one was injured in the explosion Friday night, and Prime Minister John Major was not home at 10 Downing St. The IRA said Saturday that the attack in Whitehall, on an avenue lined with government offices, "demonstrated its ability to bring home to the British government the consequences of its war in Ireland." Police said two men hired the cab in north London and ordered the driver at gunpoint to take them to Downing Street, police said. On the way, the driver asked a pedestrian for assistance, and the pedestrian warned police before the cab reached Downing Street, authorities said. The driver got out just before the bomb exploded, police said.

Trains collide

SUKKUR, Pakistan — A passenger train packed with sleeping passengers slammed into a freight train this morning, killing as many as 150 people, railway officials said. Details of the predawn accident about 130 miles north of Karachi were sketchy, said the officials. Rescue workers crawled through the twisted wreckage searching for survivors, said a spokesman for the Edhi Welfare Trust in Karachi.

Calvert expects high turnout

■ Perot says he can win if backers bring five friends to the polls.

I VOTE

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Midlanders will join Americans across the country Tuesday to vote for the next president. In addition, the local ballot will include two contested Midland County offices, the Texas Railroad Commission position and three U.S. Representative seats.

Of the approximately 51,700 registered voters in Midland County, about 75 percent are expected to vote this election, according to Bettye Calvert, Elections Administrator.

"But now I'm thinking it's going to be little higher," Ms. Calvert said on Friday, the last day of early voting.

■ Polling places/9A

During the 1988 presidential election, 75 percent of Midland registered voters voted.

Presidential elections always attract more voters, Ms. Calvert said.

A record-breaking number cast their ballots during the early voting period. There were 21,460 Midlanders who voted early.

Ms. Calvert speculated on the high turnout: "They're just becoming more aware of it and are anticipating lines at the Bill Clinton and President Bush swapped Halloween wisecracks on Saturday, then swiped at each other over the economy in a fast-paced last weekend of campaigning for the White House. Ross Perot said he could win an upset if supporters took five friends "crazy or sane" to vote with them.

Bush was dogged by fresh disclosures about the arms-for-hostages scandal of the 1980s, even though Clinton personally steered clear. "Iran-Contra haunts you" read a banner trailed by a small plane that circled a presidential rally in Wisconsin.

Daily tracking polls from ABC and CNN-USA Today reported a three-point spread for Clinton, a statistical dead heat given the surveys' margin of error, with Perot a distant third. A CBS-New York Times poll gave Clinton more breathing room: an 8-point edge over Bush with Perot way behind.

Man's family cries for justice

■ Friends, relatives of man killed by officer gather in front of Police Department.

By Darren J. Waggoner

Family members and friends of Francisco Madrid cried for justice in front of the Midland Police Department Saturday during a peaceful demonstration protesting his death.

Midland police officer Phil Partin, 22, shot Madrid three times on October 21 after Madrid ran toward him with a knife. Partin and two other officers had responded to the Madrid house after receiving a disturbance call.

When they arrived, Madrid — who had been tossing appliances and furniture into the front yard — began threatening the officers. After chasing the officers around the yard, he jumped into a police car and attempted to drive away, police said. He then got out of the car and ran toward Partin, who reportedly issued several warnings before shooting.

Partin is on routine administrative leave with pay.

At 11 a.m. Saturday, about 30 people — half of whom were small children, including nine of Madrid's children — walked in front of the police department chanting "we want

Five U.S. nuns found shot to death in Liberia

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Five American nuns were shot to death behind rebel lines on the outskirts of the besieged capital, Monrovia's archbishop said Saturday. Rebel leaders denied they were responsible.

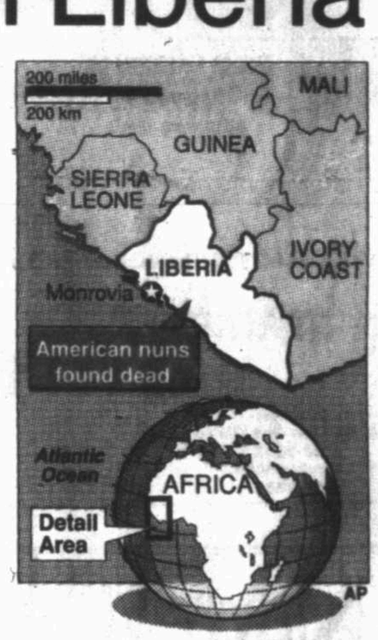

Roman Catholic Archbishop Michael Francis refused to speculate about who killed the nuns, all from Illinois and in their 50s or 60s, but said in an interview they had been "brutally murdered."

Francis had been quoted by the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano as saying four Liberian novices also were killed in the "massacre," but he told The Associated Press later Saturday that three Liberian novices were missing and none was confirmed dead.

Two of the American nuns were killed along a road and the other three in front of their convent outside Monrovia, Francis said. He did not know when they died. The nuns, members of the Adorers of the Blood of Christ order, had been missing for more than a week.

The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano called the killings a "massacre."

Meanwhile, the battle for Monrovia raged. Two jets of a seven-nation West African force defending the city screamed overhead and headed behind rebel lines, where they have been strafing roads to cut the rebels' supply route.

Clouds of smoke from West African shells rose from Gardnersville, where the American nuns' bodies still lay on the street. It was too dangerous to recover them.

Expert: U.S. aid 'essential' to Iraq's weapons program

By Ruth Sinai
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — In the debate about President Bush's Iraq policy before the Gulf War, one fact has emerged clearer than before: By design or neglect, the United States contributed significantly to Saddam Hussein's arsenal of bombs, missiles and nuclear devices — the very arsenal it set out to destroy with massive bombing strikes 22 months ago.

■ Analysis

From 1985 to 1990, U.S. companies from California to Massachusetts sold Iraq some $1.5 billion in so-called dual-use goods — items with both civilian and military applications.

It was all legal — and part lethal.

Those were the days when Iraq was considered a friend; when

Painter-commissioners' feud at a standstill

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

A chasm in a proposed settlement between Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter and the Commissioners' Court almost guarantees that the lingering dispute will go to trial in 1993.

Visiting Judge Virgil E. Mulanax from Gilmer had encouraged parties to the three-way lawsuit, which is complicated by counterclaims and the intervention of the Texas attorney general, to settle under court supervision last September.

But efforts to settle the feud failed even though the Commissioners' Court has made "every reasonable attempt to settle the dispute" through its attorney, former state judge Vann Culp of Midland.

Painter said that his lawyer's efforts to settle the case were "stonewalled" by the Commissioners' Court.

■ Chronology of events/4A

The adversaries' common focus is forfeited drug money once controlled by the sheriff.

But power plays over who controls county government, county spending and the Sheriff's Office seem to override that. The contention has evolved into how government works and doesn't work and how personalities clash.

From the sheriff's viewpoint, the dispute centers on the threatened erosion of his powers as sheriff by the five-member Commissioners' Court. By law, the court sets and monitors county budgets, including the sheriff's, and, also by statute, classifies positions in the sheriff's department, specifies duties and prescribes salaries of the sheriff's 150-plus deputies and other employees.

The sheriff, however, hires and fires whomever he pleases.

The Commissioners' Court has set the sheriff's 1993 budget at $6.02 million, which is slightly more than 30 percent of the county's $19.86 million in projected expenditures.

From the Commissioners' Court's stance, the conflict is fed by a contentious, independent sheriff who refuses to abide by budgetary guidelines laid down by the Commissioners' Court, a sheriff who balks at Commissioners' Court's controls over his employee positions, a sheriff who uses surplus vehicles as "perks" for deputies, and a politician who is trying to sabotage the fiscally conservative court by packing the court with who have besieged Monrovia for 14 days, were suspected in the slayings.

LIBERIA: Guerrillas deny killing nuns.

In Washington, the State Department called the killings a "cowardly act" and said the nuns apparently were slain several days ago in a rebel-controlled area. The United States holds Taylor's forces responsible for the safety of foreign nationals in territory they hold, the State Department said.

Barbara Brillant, from Brunswick, Maine, is one of three remaining American nuns in Liberia and said Taylor's fighters "see the CIA behind every white face." All the slain nuns were white.

Taylor's fighters have been holding suburbs around and including the nuns' convent in Gardnersville, four miles northeast of downtown Monrovia.

But in a rebel radio broadcast Saturday night, Taylor said it was not clear what happened to the nuns and insisted his forces did not control the area around the convent.

"It is really no man's land, so it is anybody's guess what has happened to those nuns," he said.

John Richardson, a spokesman for Taylor, told the British Broadcasting Corp., "I can assure you those nuns were never in our area."

Few details of the killings were available because Francis and others said they feared endangering other missionaries.

Nearly 300 missionaries remain in Liberia, including about 75 Roman Catholics. About 24 American missionaries left the country in a U.S. Embassy-organized evacuation two weeks ago.

Relief workers and others who have escaped the Gardnersville area say Taylor's fighters have forced thousands of people behind guerrilla lines. It is feared they could be used as human shields against bombing raids by the West African force, which was sent to Liberia in 1990 to halt the civil war.

Taylor, a Liberian, invaded from Ivory Coast in December 1989 to overthrow President Samuel Doe, who was later captured and slain by a rival rebel faction.

Taylor's forces have overrun all but the capital, where an interim government backed by the West African force is in power.

Francis said two of the slain nuns were last seen Oct. 20 leaving the convent to rescue a wounded child. The other three were last seen Oct. 22.

"It makes me feel very bad," Francis said. "To see them brutally murdered, one wonders what's the sense in all this killing of our people."

Francis said three novice nuns at the convent, all Liberian, were missing. He said another two were alive but he refused to say where, indicating they probably were behind Taylor's lines.

Sister Mildred Gross, mother superior of the Adorers of the Blood of Christ Convent in Ruma, Ill., identified the dead as sisters Barbara Ann Muttra, 69, of Springfield, Ill.; Mary Joel Kolmer, 58, of Waterloo, Ill.; Shirley Kolmer, 61, also of Waterloo; Kathleen McGuire, 54, of Ridgway, Ill.; and Agnes Mueller, 62, of Bartelso, Ill.

"We are consoled by the knowledge that these women wanted to be in Liberia, and to share the suffering of the people," Gross said.

In Monrovia, friends of the nuns cried at the news.

"She taught my son, she was a good person. Why God?" said one woman who knew Joel Kolmer, who had been the principal of St. Michael's School across the road from the convent.

When a reporter met Muttra last month, she was trying to persuade relief workers to let her cross their lines to get back a vehicle seized by Taylor's fighters.

"She's feisty, Barbara Ann," recalled Brillant. "They're remarkable women."

The five nuns had remained at the convent to care for the wounded, U.S. Ambassador to Liberia William Twadell said in a fax sent to the order in Illinois.

In fighting Saturday, guerrillas fired at the West African force with automatic rifles and rockets. West African troops lobbed shells at the rebels from a bridge a mile from downtown, and a Nigerian boat offshore fired rockets into swamps where the guerrillas have been hiding.

The U.N. World Health Organization said more than 50 civilians have been killed and 500 wounded since Taylor began besieging the capital.

Taylor reportedly organized the rescue Friday night of more than 1,000 orphans stranded at three orphanages near Monrovia and took them behind his lines in several buses. U.N. Children's Fund Director Carl Tinstman said the United Nations helped negotiate a temporary cease-fire to enable the evacuation.

Tinstman said UNICEF was giving $25,000 to the Children Assistance Program.

IRAQ: CIA knew of dual-use item shipment, documemts show

(From 1A)

CIA officials flew to Baghdad, their bags full of intelligence on a mutual enemy — Iran; when one-third of Iraq's food imports came from the United States; when the Commerce Department was pleading with reluctant American businessmen to trade with credit-poor Iraq.

This was all part of what President Bush now terms an effort to bring Saddam "into the family of nations."

But Bush insists U.S. efforts to moderate Saddam's behavior did not extend to aiding his ambitious defense industry. U.S. "suppliers did not contribute directly to Iraq's conventional or nonconventional weapons facilities," Bush wrote Congress in a 1991 report on high-technology sales to Iraq.

An explosion of recent information, much of it generated by pre-election Democratic politics, shows that not only did the United States contribute directly to the Iraqi arsenal — but some government agencies knew it was happening.

"The simple answer to the question of whether U.S.-produced equipment and technology has been found to be part of the Iraqi nuclear weapons program is — yes," said David Kay, who led three U.N. teams to Iraq after the Gulf War to inspect what was left of the Iraqi nuclear program.

"The volume of U.S.-produced equipment is not great when measured against" other suppliers, Kay told Congress last week, "but it was modern and essential to the Iraqi effort."

Experts who investigated the list of dual use items sold to Iraq identify about 200 of the 770 licensed exports as destined for weapons programs.

They include software used to design projectiles fired from a Super Gun — a kind of low-technology long-range missiles; an electron beam welder used in Iraq's uranium enrichment program; personal and mainframe computers found at Iraqi defense plants; rare lubricants to oil gas centrifuges for uranium enrichment; a glass fiber factory to manufacture heat resistant materials for missile casings; and more.

The Commerce Department approved these sales after an interagency review process designed to weed out militarily useful equipment — even as intelligence information was pouring in about Iraq's ambitious drive to become the region's military superpower.

"Our intelligence reports were very dire," said Brett Coulson, who served on the president's National Security Council from 1989 to 1991. "We knew Iraq was progressing on nuclear, biological and chemical weapons programs."

And yet the CIA office whose job was to monitor technology transfers was not asked to monitor export license requests to Iraq at the time the Commerce Department was approving them, said agency spokesman Peter Earnest.

That's because Iraq was considered friendly, and the Bush administration was far more concerned with what it perceived as dangers from the Soviet Union and China, said government officials familiar with U.S. policy in the first 18 months after Bush took office.

Newly released documents show that the CIA not only knew that some of the Iraqi recipients of dual use items were in fact defense industries — but that some of the U.S. exporters were Iraqi-owned front companies.

Consider this August 1989 CIA report:

"Baghdad uses aggressive covert techniques to acquire technology. The nuclear network . . . uses Iraqi public sector enterprises, front companies, foreign agents and even civilian organizations to procure technology."

Part of the CIA's information appears to have come from its closest ally — Britain's MI6 intelligence service. At a trial under way in London, British government officials described how they infiltrated an Iraqi front company selling machine tools to Iraq and obtained information about Iraq's nuclear weapons purchases.

Among the courtroom disclosures was a 1987 British intelligence document which said Iraq had secretly procured U.S. blueprints for a 1000-pound bomb.

"Britain shares its information with U.S. and Western intelligence services," Geoffrey Robertson, a defense lawyer, told the court.

The focal point for Iraq's defense buying in the United States was Matrix Churchill, a subsidiary of the company infiltrated by MI6.

FEUD: Painter-commissioners' dispute may go to trial

pro-sheriff commissioners.

Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer said in a recent report to the Midland Chamber of Commerce that the sheriff fails to appreciate "the Constitutional doctrine of Separation of Powers" and "obviously (and mistakenly)" views the county budget process "as an attempt to control his office.

"Apparently, the sheriff feels that cutting expenses and living within his budget constitutes 'bowing down' to the 'powers that be,' " said Seltzer, a former prosecutor who has been county judge, presiding officer of the Commissioners' Court, and the county's chief fiscal officer since 1991.

Painter, whom Seltzer called a "master manipulator" of the press and the broadcast news media, said that "All I want to do is to be able to do my job" and to ensure public safety.

The unanimous actions by the five members of the Commissioners' Court "are control-type actions," Painter said.

"They are trying to take control or are trying to direct" his office," Painter said. "I don't think the constitution intended that. I certainly don't think the law intended that. The budget (restraint) is more of a retaliation against me for filing a lawsuit" against the Commissioners' Court in August 1991. "Before the lawsuit and before 'Bro' came on the scene (as judge), I was always able to work with the commissioners."

The dispute, which had been brewing since 1987, entered the public arena on Aug. 20, 1991, when Painter sued Seltzer and commissioners Durward Wright, Guy McCrary, Louisa Valencia and Win Brown for trying to curtail his reverse-sting drug operations, which had taken him into other counties and states.

Painter was contesting the commissioners' Aug. 12, 1991, order to curtail out-of-county and out-of-state anti-crime operations, in order to protect the county's budget and better serve the Midland taxpayers. The policy was amended on Dec. 19.

In his zeal to help catch drug dealers and their illicit money, the sheriff since 1987 had brought into Midland County about $1 million in forfeited drug money. By law, the seized drug money was to be used in law enforcement in the war against drugs.

The $1 million has been reduced to about $245,000, including interest, following the sheriff's purchase of law-enforcement tools, such as firearms, cars, and computers, and payment of fees to informants who worked with the sheriff on stings.

Seltzer claimed that the sheriff's forfeited drug funds were "acquired through Painter's illegal out-of-county and out-of-state operations."

Painter said that Seltzer's "illegal" assessment was premature.

"There's 'Bro' acting like an attorney again — trying to convince people that him and his way is right," Painter said. A judge or jury will "make the determination of the legal or illegal aspects of the cases."

In January 1992, a Texas attorney general's opinion requested by Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman said "a sheriff has no general authority to investigate criminal activities outside of the geographical boundaries of the county for which he is elected."

In February, Mulanax upheld the Commissioners' Court's order-policy that kept the sheriff within the bounds of Midland County's 939 square miles.

In his decision, the judge also mandated that the Commissioners' Court stop "interfering in the day-to-day operations of the Sheriff's Department, including the placement of personnel in the Sheriff's Department," and not to withdraw "previously approved Vehicle Maintenance Funds" from the sheriff's budget.

More than eight months after Mulanax's Feb. 26 ruling, Painter still claims the Commissioners' Court is interfering in his day-to-day business, and may be treading close to contempt of court by allegedly trying to control his office contrary to Mulanax's order and is harassing him and his officers.

In the Sept. 12 attempt to settle the dispute, Painter said that he told his Dallas lawyer, Kenneth Mayfield, "to do whatever it took to settle" the case.

"All we were talking about was dope money," Painter said, "and if that's what the Commissioners' Court wanted, give it (the remaining $245,000) to them, 'cause I can go get some more."

Painter said his efforts to settle the case were greeted with a "stone wall."

Seltzer, however, said that Painter's settlement offers were not stonewalled and that "every reasonable attempt" was made by Culp to settle the dispute.

"It's improper for an attorney to discuss settlement negotiations while a case is pending," Culp said last week.

Painter's contention that his lawyer did "whatever it took" to settle the lawsuit ranged from a "gross misrepresentation of the facts" to a "total fabrication," Seltzer charged.

"Painter's inability or unwillingness to negotiate with the Commissioners' Court and the Attorney General's Office on any reasonable basis was the primary factor in the collapse of settlement negotiations," said Seltzer.

"However, if a settlement is to be possible," Seltzer said, "Painter must be willing to negotiate on a reasonable basis with both the Commissioners' Court and the Attorney General's Office."

Commissioner Win Brown said the Commissioners' Court bent over backward to reach a settlement with Painter and will not change "a comma or a period" in its proposed settlement. Terms of the settlement proposals were not divulged.

"He (Painter) wanted to do the grand-standing like he always has," Brown said. "We were asked by some very influential people to try to reach an agreement. Even our (Midland City) Council had suggested that we do something else, and we tried but didn't get to first base." Even so, a "settlement still is not out of the window."

Brown speculated that Painter is "not in charge" of his office, particularly in regard to making decisions on fighting the Commissioners' Court. "That's what it appears to be."

Painter, who said he runs his own office, said that the commissioners "have told me personally if I get rid of Clayton McKinney, my problems would go away.

"If that's not trying to maintain some kind of control, I don't know what is," Painter said.

McKinney, a former Texas Ranger, has been Painter's Operations Division captain since 1985 and engineered many of the sheriff's reverse-sting operations.

Attorney General Dan Morales claims that out-of-county drug money that was seized and forfeited without benefit of valid agreements between the sheriff and district attorneys and did not conform to the "forfeiture of contraband" statute belong to the state treasury and not to the sheriff or to the county.

The lawsuit, said Seltzer, could cost the Midland taxpayers about $1 million if the attorney general wins his intervention suit.

"Accordingly," Seltzer said, "Painter, and not the Commissioners' Court, must moderate his views and be willing to compromise his position rather than using each stage of the case as a platform for a media event and press release."

Seltzer said the five members of the Commissioners' Court have "always kept our fiduciary duty to the taxpayers and citizens of Midland County utmost in our minds" and "remain prepared to settle this matter on any reasonable basis in the interest of the taxpayers."

On Oct. 13, a month following the failed negotiations and more than two months prior to the lawsuit's Dec. 21 pre-trial hearing, the Commissioners' Court filed its third amended counterclaim.

The charges further complicate the dispute.

In his view, Painter said the "counterclaim," which physically is filed with his original lawsuit of Aug. 20, 1991, in Midland's 238th Texas District Court, is a lawsuit separate from his original suit.

"My lawsuit was settled in February," Painter said. "It's over with." It was contesting the Commissioners' Court order-policy of "telling me I couldn't leave the county, which is control," Painter said. "Mine was over with. It was settled. But they (commissioners) are the ones that are attacking the money. They are the ones who have brought the Attorney General's Office into this. They are the ones creating liability for the taxpayers of this county."

And "once in court, the judge will realize that it (the counterclaim) is frivolous and harassment more than anything else," Painter said.

In February, Mulanax divided Painter's original lawsuit into two parts: the policy issue and the money issue.

And by the Commissioners' Court's Oct. 13 amended counterclaim, the money issue has grown in issues and defendants.

Defendants are Painter; Clayton McKinney, captain of the sheriff's Operations Division; Jose Primera and Ed Krevit, undercover deputies; Hal Upchurch, former Ward County district attorney, and Ronald Ray Tucker, former investigator in Upchurch's District Attorney's Office and a former Painter deputy.

In the counterclaim, the Commissioners' Court is:

■ Seeking to recover $449,950, which was "seized" in Midland on Jan. 9, 1990, in the sale of 850 pounds of marijuana in Monahans in Ward County. The money was seized by Primera from a drug dealer in Midland's LaQuinta Inn, counted in the Midland County Courthouse, and driven by Painter to Monahans to be "seized" there by Tucker. Seltzer said that the money should have remained in Midland County under a binding agreement between Painter and Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre. For the sheriff's part in seizing the money, he was awarded $219,361.24 in forfeited funds from Upchurch's District Attorney's Office.

■ Alleging that the sheriff exceeded his 1992 budget of $4.49 million by $276,344.52 but that $194,665.52 of that is due to overruns caused by the forced housing of state inmates and was not the sheriff's fault. But $81,679 in overruns occurred in the sheriff's Operations Division. Of that, $20,352.96 was attributed to cost overruns in vehicle maintenance.

■ Noting that Painter has more than 150 employees and has more employees than any Texas sheriff's office — except Lubbock County's — between Fort Worth and El Paso. Further, Painter has more than 60 vehicles even though the Commissioners' Court has budgeted him for 40 vehicles. By Texas law, it is the Commissioners' Court that decides how many employees the sheriff will have and what their assignments and salaries are.

■ Claiming that Painter is not abiding by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards because he doesn't have enough jailers — one on-duty jailer for every 48 inmates.

■ Asking Mulanax to order Painter to "limit his expenditures to his budget" and not to exceed his budget in the future. Despite its protests, however, the Commissioners' Court has approved additional funding for the sheriff.

Brown is claiming that "Mr. Painter has defied state law" and is disobeying "our requests. He has defied our order. He is trying to take control of the Commissioners' Court."

The feud was already churning in 1987, when the sheriff gained national publicity through an international arms sting operation headed by Tucker and Gary Howard.

Portuguese citizen Victor Fonseca was arrested at Midland International Airport in August 1987 by sheriff's deputies for his part in an alleged scheme to buy parts for Iranian Hawk missiles.

Fonseca denied that he was an arms dealer. He was freed from jail in January 1988. No arms were uncovered and no conspiracy was proven.

"That Fonseca thing scared the hell out of us," Brown said.

Culp, who presided over Fonseca's district court hearings, prepared the October 1992 counterclaim, which, in part, states: "Indeed, it is difficult to visualize how anyone could believe that the luring of international smugglers into Midland County would solve local crimes."

As early as 1987, the Commissioners' Court was meeting in executive session to question out-of-county and out-of-state sting operations. Three members of 1987 court are still in office: Durward Wright, Guy McCrary, and Win Brown. Two have left, then-County Judge Bill Ahders and Commissioner Scott Welch. They were succeeded by Seltzer in 1991 and by Louisa Valencia in 1989.

In 1987, Welch voted to publicly air discussions with the sheriff on his sting operations. The discussions remained closed to the public in executive session.

"The sheriff is an elected official," Welch reasoned. "If people don't like what he's doing, the people can handle that."

The sheriff was re-elected in 1988 and is unopposed on Tuesday's ballot.

In mid-1991, Painter said Seltzer "made comments that they were not accusing me of anything illegal and they didn't think I had done anything illegal. And now I wonder why the shift in the wind?"

Until Seltzer took office in 1991, Painter said that he was "able to work with the commissioners, because they understood the need for the work . . . to provide money to provide public safety.

"There is a liability situation if there is not enough money provided for public safety," the sheriff said. "And I'm trying to help reduce that liability by doing the work that's required and necessary to provide public safety."

Brown, who has been on the Commissioners' Court since 1971, said that the court repeatedly has tried to get the sheriff to cut back on expenses and cut out out-of-county sting operations. "We were afraid we could be held liable" if operations went amiss.

"We tried being tactful about it and being upfront," Brown said. But Painter "finally just bowed his neck," rebelled and defied the court's entreaties to curb his operations.

Brown said the Commissioners' Court has "no problems with any of the other departments" in Midland County.

In budgetary matters, Brown said Painter "is the only one who has the attitude of 'Let's spend it if it's there.' You don't do that. He has made really no attempt in controlling the budget" and buys what pleases him.

In his report to the Chamber of Commerce, Seltzer called Painter a "master manipulator of the press and the media.

"He has the uncanny ability to reduce a complicated, hypothetical question or factual issue to a 10-, 20-, or 30-second sound bite that the press and the media adore," Seltzer said.

He said Painter has reached "folk-hero" status, in part because the press and electronic media have not thoroughly investigated and explained undercurrents in the continuing dispute.

Painter has "hand-picked" commissioner-candidates in an effort to control the Commissioners' Court, Seltzer said.

"The sheriff has no intentions of running anyone's business but his own," Painter countered. "I have never asked anyone to run for political office. How can I control how anyone votes, or how can I control who does or who does not run for political office?"

Painter received 63 percent of the vote in a four-way race for sheriff in the March Republican primary elections in which Henry Goulet defeated Durward Wright.

Goulet also is unopposed in Tuesday's general election. In that election, Republican Jo Ann Carr — the wife of Joe Carr, a sheriff's lieutenant and Democratic Party candidate for sheriff in 1980 and again in 1984 when he was a Midland police detective — is seeking to oust incumbent Lousia Valencia. Both Goulet and Mrs. Carr said that they are not pawns of the sheriff and are running on their own merits.

If the sheriff takes over the Commissioners' Court, Seltzer said in his report that "I can assure you that there is not enough money in the County Treasury to cover Sheriff Painter's ever-increasing demands for more facilities, more equipment, and more personnel."

Once in power over county government, "Boss Painter" will rescind the order curtailing out-of-county and out-of-state operations, Seltzer surmised.

And the sheriff "will be back in the 'International Reverse Sting' business." Taxes "will increase in direct proportion to what Sheriff Painter perceives (to be) the needs of his department," Seltzer said. The feud between Painter and the Commissioners' Court, Seltzer said, is a battle between representative form of government and rule by the sheriff.

Highlights of county dispute are detailed

A chronology of events in the conflict between the Commissioner's Court and the Sheriff's Department, derived from court records and other sources, follows. Highlights include:

January 1985: Sheriff Gary Painter, first elected sheriff in 1984, retains two free-lance investigators Gary Howard and Ronald Ray Tucker, to work in far-reaching drug-sting cases.

Mid-1985: Painter appoints former Texas Ranger Clayton McKinney to head the Operations Divisions and supervise reverse-sting operations to seize drug money and catch dealers.

1986: Painter uncovers information on terrorist camps in Mexico, but federal agents decline to act. Though Painter says the federal agents treated him like "an old country hick sheriff," Painter says he is bound by his oath as sheriff to "pursue it (criminal violations) wherever it takes you."

1987: The sheriff launches sting operations into other counties and states, building a cache of contraband, including 1,400 pounds of marijuana, for use in stings. Undercover deputies pose as dealers, seek out proven buyers, show them "the dope" at one location, and, at another place and time, sell the drugs, take the cash, usually in attache cases or suitcases, and seize the money. Other lawmen make arrests, including the setup arrest of the undercover "sting" agents.

August 1987: A four-month international sting operation carried out by Tucker and Howard, to catch an alleged military-arms dealer results in the arrest of Portugese national Victor Manuel Fonseca, 47, at Midland International Airport.

August 1987: County Judge Bill Ahders and Commissioner Win Brown criticize the sheriff's international sting operations and want him to concentrate on criminal cases in Midland County.

January 1988: Fonseca is released after no evidence was found to link him to international arms dealing.

September 1988: Painter and some deputies travel to Cancun, Mexico, on a trip to help victims of Hurricane Gilbert. The sheriff charges $6,832.40 in food, clothing and supplies to Midland County to take to the hurricane victims, without approval from the Commissioners' Court.

1987, 1988, 1989: Midland drug dealers, acting as informants, work with deputies to lure drug buyers to Midland from elsewhere in Texas and from out of state and to set them up for reverse stings.

Aug. 17, 1989: Burglars break into a sheriff's storage shed and remove a pick-up load of marijuana reserved for sting operations.

1987, 1988: Deputies rent a private airplane and fly a cargo of marijuana to Oklahoma for a reverse sting. Deputies haul marijuana to Sherman by airplane and to Navarro, Wilson, Ward, and Nolan counties setting up reverse stings.

Jan. 9, 1990: Midland undercover agent Jose Primera seizes $449,950 in cash in a Midland motel room in the sale of 850 pounds of marijuana 50 miles away in Ward County. Painter hauls the marijuana to Monahans on Jan. 10 for forfeiture. Tucker "seizes" the marijuana there. The sheriff's share of the forfeited funds is $219,361.24.

July 22, 1991: The Commissioners' Court in executive session tries to persuade Painter to cease his out-of-county operations.

July 23, 1991: County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer is empowered by the Commissioners' Court to direct the sheriff to "cease and desist any and all criminal investigation operations, reverse stings, and narcotic operations" which are being "conducted outside" of Midland County. Statutory exceptions, such engaging in "hot pursuit," transporting prisoners, serving warrants and honoring inter-governmental agreements are noted.

July 25, 1991: Painter rejects Seltzer's July 23 directive, which he characterizes as "ridiculous and certainly not in the best interest of the public, nor good law enforcement," and "morally (is) wrong, if not illegal." Painters says he is "willing to assist in balancing the (county's) budget." The directive has "political overtones," Painter says.

Aug. 12, 1991: The Commissioners' Court issues a formal "Resolution, Policy and Order" mandating that Painter curtail his out-of-county and out-of-state criminal investigations. The county resources are "limited." Financial risks alarm the court.

Aug. 20, 1991. Painter protests the Aug. 12 order by filing a lawsuit against the Commissioners' Court: Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer and Commissioner Durward Wright, Guy McCrary, Louisa Valencia, and Win Brown. In his petition, the sheriff is hailed as a respected "leader in the fight against illegal narcotics."

Oct. 23, 1991: Due to "budgetary considerations," the Commissioners' Court authorizes insurance, fuel and maintenance for no more than 40 of the sheriff's 60-plus vehicles.

Dec. 17, 1991: The Commissioners' Court files its amended counterclaim to Painter's lawsuit in Midland's 238th Texas District Court. The counterclaim, prepared by Vann Culp, the Commissioners' Court's lawyer, tells of "clandestine" ventures between the sheriff and free-lance lawmen, Tucker and Howard.

Dec. 19, 1991: The Commissioners' Court amends and reaffirms its "Resolution, Policy, and Order" to curtail the sheriff's out-of-county activities.

Feb. 4, 1992: Texas Attorney General Dan Morales intervenes in the lawsuit. Morales claims that forfeited money and contraband not "subject to an executed local agreement" under the state law on "Forfeiture of Contraband" belong to the Texas Treasury. Of the approximately $1 million in forfeitures to Painter, all but about $225,000 has been spent on law-enforcement tools and in paying fees to informants on sting cases.

Feb. 10, 1992: Due to the uncertainty of ownership of the drug funds, County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin turns the $225,000, including $45,000 in interest, over to safe-keeping in the 238th District Court.

Feb. 12, 1992: More than a dozen sheriff's deputies volunteer "personally" to pay for fuel in their assigned vehicles until vehicle funds are released.

Feb. 13, 1992: A Commissioners' Court's document outlines sheriff's sting operations, seizures, forfeitures, expenditures and various incidents and omissions, including the sheriff's lax record-keeping of drug caches.

Feb. 26, 1992: Judge Virgil Mulanax upholds the Commissioners' Court's order-policy on curtailing the sheriff's travels and investigations outside of Midland County. At the same time, the judge orders the Commissioners' Court not to interfere in the sheriff's "day-to-day operations," not to tamper with the placement of personnel in the Sheriff's Department, and to leave his vehicle-maintenance money alone. The sheriff is ordered to upgrade his record-keeping procedures. The judge orders a separate trial on the drug-money controversy.

Winter 1992: Painter hires Dallas lawyers Marc Richman and Kenneth Mayfield to represent him after Monahans attorney Hal Upchurch, former Ward County district attorney, is named as a witness in Painter's lawsuit.

March 10, 1992: Gary Painter attracts more than 63 percent of the vote in a four-way race for the Republican nomination for sheriff. He begins his third four-year term in January 1993.

Winter-Spring 1992: The Midland County Grand Jury makes an "inquiry" into the sheriff's handling of forfeited drug money and drugs used in reverse-sting operations. The sheriff is exonerated. An indictment for perjury — lying to the grand jury — is returned against Sheriff's Lt. Tim Rogers, but that indictment is dismissed on June 18. Ronald Ray Tucker is indicted for perjury in connection with the January 1990 seizure of $449,950 in drug money in Midland.

July 13, 1992: Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, who, as a legislator, authored the state's 1989 revised law on "Forfeiture of Contraband," says that it is "unconscionable" for Midland County to retain forfeited funds which should have been delivered to the Texas Treasury.

Sept. 12, 1991: Negotiations to settle the dispute between the sheriff and the Commissioners' Court fail.

Oct. 13, 1992: Commissioners' Court files an amended counterclaim. Defendants are the sheriff and Deputies Clayton McKinney, Jose Primera and Ed Krevit; former free-lance investigator Ronald Ray Tucker and former Ward County District Attorney Hal Upchurch. The Commissioners' Court is suing the defendants for $449,950 — the amount of drug money seized in Midland on Jan. 9, 1990, subsequently taken to Monahans for forfeiture. The Commissioners' Court claims the money should have remained in Midland. However, about half of that money is returned to Midland County in forfeiture proceedings. The Commissioners' Court says it wants the sheriff to operate within his allocated budget, to field the county's two jails with adequately staffing, to operate only 40 vehicles, and to respond to the Commissioners' Court requests to help run a fiscally efficient county government.

Rich get richer in 80s, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The richest one-half percent of American families received 55 percent of the total increase in household wealth between 1983 and 1989, according to a study released Thursday.

The study, "The Rich Get Increasingly Richer," found that while the "super-rich" enjoyed rapid growth of wealth, the bottom 60 percent of families found their wealth either stagnating or falling by 1989.

"A comparison of 1983 and 1989 data reveals a sharp increase in wealth inequality over the period," Edward Wolff, the New York University economics professor who wrote the study, asserted. "U.S. wealth concentration in 1989 was more extreme than that of any time since 1929."

The study was released by the Economic Policy Institute, which describes itself as a non-profit, nonpartisan economic think tank supported by foundations, labor unions, corporations and individuals.

Wolff found that family wealth increased from $13.6 trillion to $16.1 trillion, between 1983 and 1989. Fifty-five percent of the increase went to the top one-half percent of families.

Wolff said the richest one-half percent saw their average wealth grow from $8.5 million in 1983 to $10.7 million in 1989, or 26 percent.

At the same time, he said, the lower-middle and bottom wealth classes collectively lost $256 billion in wealth.

Wolff contends that wealth provides a more complete picture of family well-being than the typical measure using income.

Wealth, he wrote, refers to the net value of assets — such as stocks, savings accounts and housing — less debt. Income, on the other hand, refers to a flow of dollars over a set period, usually a year.

Families receiving the same income can experience different levels of economic well-being depending on their assets, such as housing and other possessions, he wrote.

Border patrol says drug seizures up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Immigration and Naturalization Service said Saturday it has begun to "regain control" of the U.S.-Mexican border, mainly through improving border security in the San Diego area.

"Just compiled fiscal year figures show that for the first time, significant progress is being made," said INS Commissioner Gene McNary. "This is not only reducing illegal border crossings, but saving lives as well."

The U.S. Border Patrol has upped security in the past year, by repairing, improving and installing new border fencing, installing lights, assigning more border patrol agents to the area and improving border roads, McNary said.

INS statistics for fiscal year 1992 show that:

■Border Patrol agents in the San Diego area seized 7,529 pounds of cocaine in 1992, compared with 682 pounds in 1991. Marijuana seizures in the area rose from 8,495 pounds in 1991 to 37,642 pounds in 1992.

■Seven illegal aliens were killed on the freeways near San Diego in 1992, down from 13 last year.

■Assaults against Border Patrol officers — a major indication of the level of violence at the border — have dropped steadily the past two years. There were 97 assaults in 1992, compared with 132 in 1991 and 217 in 1990.

With help from the Department of Defense, the Border Patrol has installed 14 miles of reinforced steel fencing, replacing and extending the tattered chain link and steel cable which did not effectively deter crossings at San Ysidro, the INS said.

Plane crash kills two in Arizona

COTTONWOOD, Ariz. (AP) — The victims of a plane crash south of this central Arizona city have been identified as a Cottonwood man and his stepfather from Texas, authorities said Saturday.

Laurie Berra, a Yavapai County Sheriff's Department spokeswoman, said the victims were Lester Allan Massey, 24, of Cottonwood, and William Charles Massey, 53, of Sunset, Texas.

Ms. Berra said the cause of the crash still was under investigation Saturday.

She said the single-engine Piper aircraft apparently crashed into the side of Mingus Mountain, four miles south of Cottonwood, and the wreckage was spotted Friday morning by a motorist traveling along a forest road on the mountain.

The plane registered to William Massey was so badly damaged that the wreckage had to be cut to free the bodies, according to Ms. Berra.

Sunset is about 70 miles northwest of Dallas.

Astronauts pack up, head for home

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The six astronauts on the space shuttle Columbia wrapped up work with a robotic vision system Saturday and stowed their gear for the return to Earth, a trip they weren't quite ready to make.

Columbia was scheduled to land at Kennedy Space Center at 8:06 a.m. today, 10 days after blasting off on the satellite delivery and research mission.

"I think all of us would like to stay up here an extra day or two because we worked hard to get here and it's a great deal of fun to be here," Canadian astronaut Steven MacLean said Saturday.

"But all of us also are anxious to see our families, our kids and our loved ones again, and so I have mixed feelings about coming home," he said.

NASA flight director Jeff Bantle said there was a possibility that fog might delay Sunday's touchdown, but the weather was expected to be fine for a second landing attempt one orbit later at 9:39 a.m.

Mission Control couldn't resist a little Halloween humor Saturday. Controllers played the song "Monster Mash" for the crew's wake-up call and included a pattern for a cut-out mask in flight plans radioed to the shuttle. The mask was of Moe of the Three Stooges.

The astronauts later got in on the act. In a videotape beamed down at the end of the crew's workday, an astronaut wearing a monster mask was seen pulling crewmate Tamara Jernigan by her feet out of camera view.

The astronauts spent their last full day in orbit testing a computerized television system designed by the Canadian Space Agency to improve the efficiency of the shuttle robot arm during satellite captures and space station construction jobs.

They released an 8-by-4-foot aluminum panel from the end of the crane and then tracked the object with the vision system as it drifted away, 130 miles above Earth.

Columbia flew in formation with the tumbling, black and white panel from a distance of 140 feet for nearly half an hour and then moved away. MacLean was able to track the panel from as far away as 1,000 feet.

Lloyd Pinkney of Canada's National Research Council said the computer and TV camera system accurately judged the distance to the panel although shuttle jet firings and sunlight hampered visibility at times.

Pinkney said the panel was expected to plunge into the atmosphere and burn up by the time Columbia headed home today.

After the vision system experiment was completed, MacLean squeezed in a few final atmospheric measurements. He aimed monitors at the rising and setting sun to record the amount of ozone, oxygen and nitrogen compounds, and aerosols in the stratosphere.

Shuttle commander James Wetherbee said it had been a relatively trouble-free mission and that his crew was able to fix the few problems with test equipment that did occur.

Real-life medicine man loses key to anti-AIDS properties

By Jeff Nesmith
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A scientist who tromped through the rainforests of Malaysia in search of natural chemicals to be used against the AIDS virus discovered a promising compound in the sap of an obscure tree — but found when he returned for additional samples that the tree had been cut down.

Now, says D. D. Soejarto, a botanist with the University of Illinois at Chicago, efforts to find the same material in similar, nearby trees have failed.

He says he will go back to Malaysia in November to try again.

The compound was tested by researchers at the National Cancer Institute (NCI), which finances Dr. Soejarto's search.

And although no one is saying the chemical could ever become an effective drug against the human immunodeficiency virus, the incident symbolizes for Dr. Soejarto the high-stakes race against deforestation, which claims 50 million acres of rainforest every year.

"If we ignore these (rainforest) plants, we will decrease our odds of discovering potentially useful drugs that these plants may offer. Once lost, they are lost forever."

The anti-AIDS compound, designated Calanolide A by NCI scientists, blocked the growth of HIV-1, the viral strain responsible for most cases of AIDS, said Dr. Michael R. Boyd, chief of NCI's Laboratory of Drug Discovery Research. It was ineffective against HIV-2, which is most common in Africa.

Dr. Boyd said Calanolide A "is a long way from being a drug, but it has attributes in terms of its mechanism of action that suggests to us that it merits continuing consideration in the research lab."

"This is not another ho-hum screening lead," said the government scientist. "It's a very intriguing development."

Calanolide A was extracted from latex sap of a rainforest tree that can attain a height of 65 feet and a diameter of eight to 12 inches, said Dr. Soejarto. Although it is too small and has too many limbs to be of value to lumbermen, it is often destroyed by loggers taking other trees, Dr. Soejarto said.

Conservatives ask Reagan for election speech

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Conservative activists marked their differences with President Bush on Friday, but endorsed him for re-election and urged Ronald Reagan to give an election-eve address to boost the ticket.

Although they backed the president, the 45 conservatives at the ad hoc gathering, organized by L. Brent Bozell, called for sweeping changes in a second Bush administration's economic team.

"It is Richard Darman and Nicholas Brady who gave America its current recession," said Bert Pines of the National Center for Public Policy Research. "America will be dancing in the streets when Darman and Brady go back to their Wall Street holes."

"There is no question but that the conservative movement has problems and will continue to have disagreements with George Bush," said Bozell, executive director of the Conservative Victory Committee. "But Bill Clinton equals a nightmare on Pennsylvania Avenue."

Bozell denied news reports that the meeting was a "funeral" recognizing Bush would lose the election. "I want to emphasize that everybody in that meeting endorsed George Bush," Bozell said.

NBC, Letterman agree to short-term contract

NEW YORK (AP) — David Letterman's contract as host of NBC's "Late Night" variety show has been extended three months, under a deal that lets him "explore opportunities outside the network," both sides announced Friday.

The agreement was struck "in a good faith effort to move their negotiating process forward," the comedian and the network said in a joint statement.

Reports of Letterman's unhappiness with NBC and his purported plans to end his 10-year stint as host of the program have been grist for the entertainment media for more than two years.

His contract, which would have expired in early April, now extends until late June.

"At David's request, NBC has agreed to give him the right to explore opportunities outside of the network," the statement said. "David Letterman emphasizes that this announcement does not represent a final decision regarding his future with NBC.

"NBC reiterates its desire to continue its long-standing relationship with David Letterman and remains hopeful that it will extend his contract beyond next June," it added.

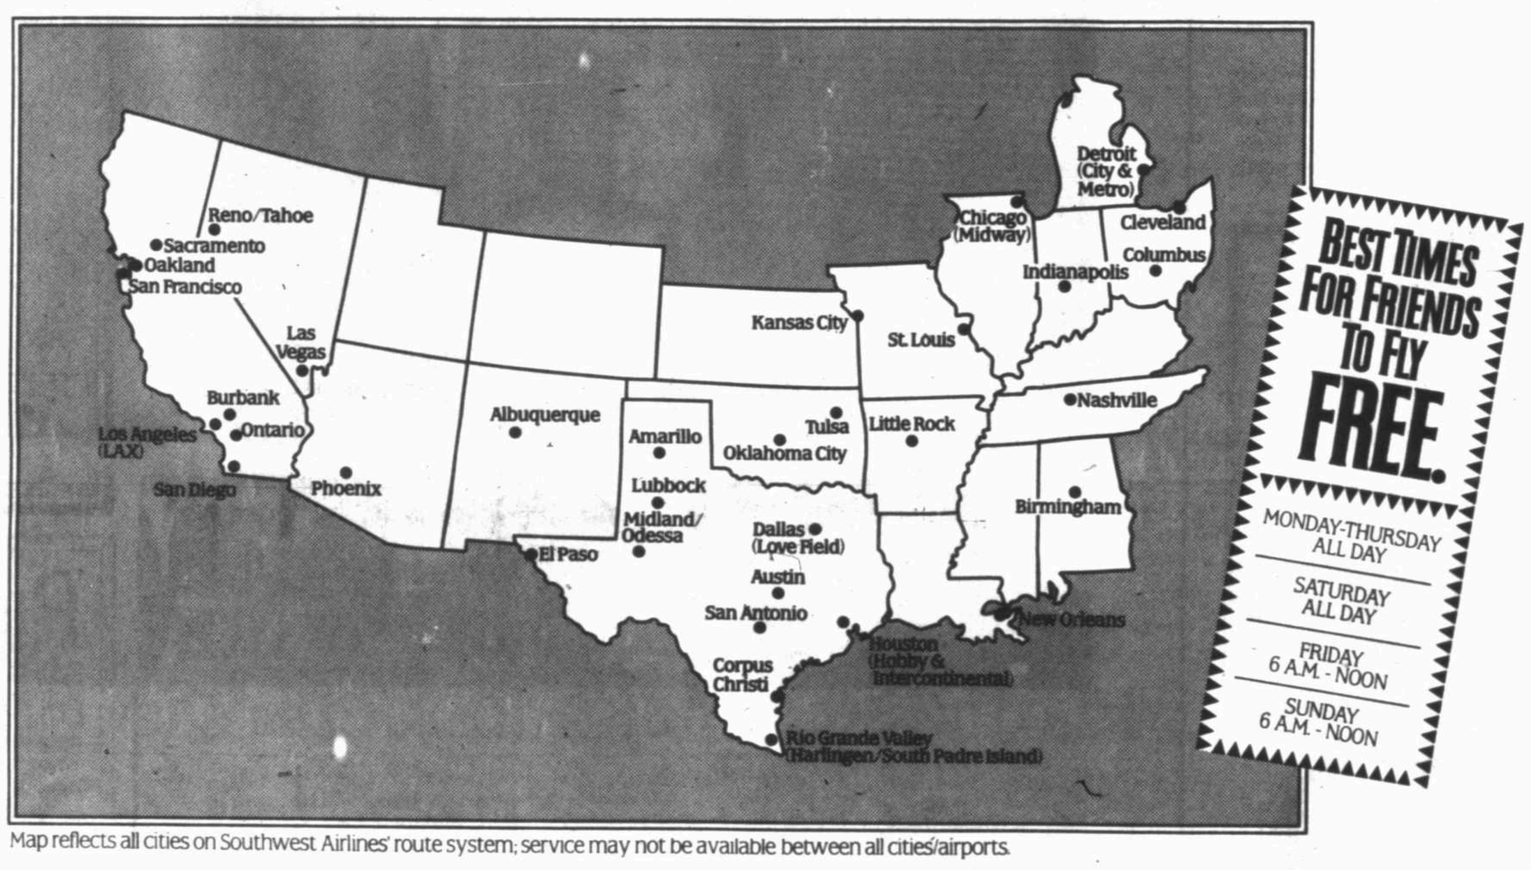

Until Friday's announcment, Letterman's contract had barred him from negotiating for work outside the network; under its terms, he still is required to let NBC match any outside offer he may receive.

Trade journals, tabloids and gossip columns long have reported Letterman's unhappiness with NBC, especially in the network's handling of its decision that comedian Jay Leno would replace "Tonight" show host Johnny Carson in May.

Letterman also was angered in 1990 when the network sold "Late Night" reruns to cable TV's Arts & Entertainment network without consulting him.

Although Letterman signed a new contract in 1990, he has retained Hollywood's powerful Creative Artists Agency, Inc., to represent him. Agency spokesman Stephen Rivers declined to comment on the negotiations.

Death raises questions of drug-raid tactics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The death of a multimillionaire recluse shot by law officers during a failed raid on his Malibu-area ranch has raised questions about police tactics in the war on drugs.

The killing of former Hollywood socialite Donald Scott marked the second time in recent weeks that drug agents in Southern California have shot a person in a raid that yielded no evidence of drugs.

Scott's attorney contends police hoped to seize his ranch under federal forfeiture laws that allow property to be confiscated before a defendant is convicted.

A similar raid in which San Diego County businessman Donald Lee Carlson was gravely wounded prompted an investigation by the U.S. attorney into whether federal agents acted improperly.

These and other questionable raids around the country have caused debate among legal scholars about the latitude given police in the war on drugs.

The concern is underscored by the U.S. Supreme Court's recent decision to review several cases involving property seizures.

"Particularly the seizure of property aspect has been a major problem," said Paul Rothstein, a Georgetown University law professor and past chair of the American Bar Association's criminal procedures committee. "It raises huge amounts of revenue for the government, so there's an incentive to do it."

Scott, heir to a European chemicals fortune, was killed Oct. 2 as members of a drug task force led by Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies burst into his rambling home in the hills above Malibu.

Roused by his wife's cries and partially blinded by a recent cataract operation, the 61-year-old Scott rushed into the living room holding a .38-caliber revolver above his head.

Deputies said that instead of dropping the weapon as ordered, Scott lowered it in the officers' direction. He was shot twice in the chest.

Attorney Nick Gutsue, a longtime friend and executor of Scott's estate, says lawmen were looking for a reason to seize the 200-acre ranch. Scott had refused to sell his property to the federal government as part of an expansion of the adjacent Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area.

"This was not about drug seizure. This was about asset seizures," he said.

Capt. Larry Waldie, who heads the Sheriff's Department narcotics bureau, strongly denied the allegation.

"To me that's an incredible statement," he said. "We do believe dope was growing there."

A week before the shooting, an air surveillance expert flew over the ranch and reported seeing about 50 marijuana plants growing in pots, Waldie said.

Suspicions also were aroused by an informant's tip that Scott's wife of three months, Frances Plant, 38, was seen in Malibu flashing $100 bills.

Agents arrived at the ranch about 8:30 a.m., knocked and identified themsevles to Mrs. Plante, who failed to open the door, Waldie said. After several minutes, officers forced the door and burst inside.

Prosecutors are investigating whether the officers should face criminal charges in the shooting.

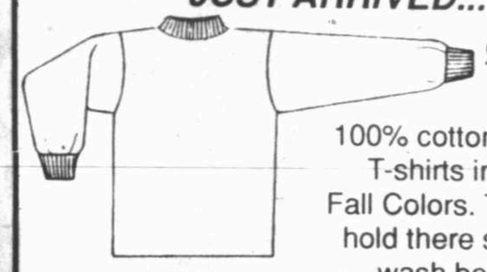

Both agencies have declined to discuss the raid, citing the U.S. attorney's investigation.

However, John Coughlin, Carlson's attorney, said agents made no attempt to check out the information before crashing through the door around midnight Aug. 26.

Military identifies the remains of newsmen

HONOLULU (AP) — Human remains brought here from Cambodia this year have been identified as those of three journalists who disappeared in 1970 while covering the war in Southeast Asia, the military said Friday.

They were identified as CBS News soundman Kojiro Saki and NBC News soundman Yoshihiko Waku and cameraman Roger Colne, said Lt. Cmdr. Kenneth R. Patterson, spokesman for the U.S. Pacific command. Saki and Waku were from Japan and Colne was from France.

Boy Scouts to look for a few good women to be scoutmasters

By James Dao
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — When Sharon Sockwell, a single mother from Brooklyn, enrolled her twin sons in the Boy Scouts, character, not camping, was her prime motivation. "I wanted them to have a positive male role model," she said.

Things have turned out almost as she had hoped. Her 11-year-olds have learned about pitching tents, surviving in the woods and black American history. And the scoutmaster for Troop 621 in Bedford-Stuyvesant is as good as they come: demanding but patient, hard-working, dedicated and, in a drill-sergeant sort of way, funny.

The scoutmaster is also a woman.

"I was a little disappointed at first," said Ms. Sockwell, 38, a clerk at an A&S department store. "But we tried to get men involved. We learned we had to do the best we could without them."

Scouting has been growing steadily in New York and other urban areas in recent years, especially among black, Hispanic and Asian boys. And as more and more join that classic American bastion of the male virtues, an increasing number of Scout troops are being organized and led by women, largely because an increasing number of Boy Scouts have no fathers.

"This is a recognition of what's going on with families and where kids are at," said Brian Archimbaud, a spokesman for the Greater New York Councils of the Boy Scouts. "Lots of households are headed by women and there are lots of instances where men aren't available."

Every year since 1988, when the Boy Scouts first allowed women to serve as scoutmasters, the number of female-headed troops has risen steadily. At the end of 1991, 35 of 459 scoutmasters in New York City were women. Nationwide, there were nearly 1,400 female scoutmasters, more than 3 percent of the total and more than double the number from the year before.

Many female scoutmasters are married. Some were involved in the Cub Scouts, which has allowed women to be cub masters since 1976, and simply graduated into being scoutmasters for the Boy Scouts. Some have taken over troops where male scoutmasters have had to quit because they work long hours or hold two jobs.

But in many cases, there simply have been no fathers available.

Clarissa Martin-Beye started Troop 621 because there were no after-school programs for her teen-age son in the Brevoort Houses of Bedford-Stuyvesant. She tried to enlist a male scoutmaster first, but no one, including her husband, wanted the job. Complicating her search was the fact that half the 15 scouts in her troop came from female-headed households.

"They know they aren't getting a male role model," said Mrs. Martin-Beye, who is 35 and has four sons. "But they know I can give them something they can't get anywhere else in the projects."

Every Friday night, in a dimly lighted basement room crisscrossed by steampipes, Mrs. Martin-Beye leads her scouts through calisthenics, first-aid drills and lessons about famous black Americans. Her style mixes the militaristic with the maternal. "Stay on the floor, we've got push-ups," she barks when the scouts finish 16 sit-ups. The boys groan. "What do I have here? Little sissies? I don't think so."

Asked whether it is better to have a male or female scoutmaster, Neil Davis, a 14-year-old who said scouting has helped keep him from mugging people, answered without hesitation: "A woman's better."

He said his father left the family seven years ago. "The men quit too early," he said. "The women stay with it."

Boy Scout officials say the growing number of female scoutmasters has not adversely affected its programs or its mandate. Female scoutmasters receive the same training as male scoutmasters.

Millions of bikes beat pollution

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Efficient, clean and cheap, the bicycle is pulling far ahead of cars as the world's leading means of transportation, researchers said Saturday.

There are now approximately 800 million bikes in the world, compared with about 460 million cars, said researchers Lester Brown and Ed Ayres of the Worldwatch Institute, a think tank concerned with environmental and natural resource issues.

"During the rest of this decade and beyond, it seems likely that bicycle production will continue to outpace that of automobiles, further establishing the bicycle as the world's dominant form of personal transportation," they said in one of a series of reports on the earth's "vital signs."

Automobile production almost overtook the world's output of new bicycles at the end of the 1960s, when 23 million cars and 25 million bikes were manufactured, they said.

However, oil shocks and growing concern about congestion and pollution in the 1970s and 1980s led to accelerated interest in bicycles.

In China, there are an estimated 300 million bicycles and only 1.2 million cars, said Ayres. In India, bikes outnumber cars, 45 million to 1.5 million.

But in the United States, there are 139 million cars and 103 million bicycles.

"While we Americans may think of the bicycle primarily in recreational terms, the vast majority of the world's bikes are used for basic transportation," Ayres said.

Meanwhile, members of a small, Boston-based development organization called Bikes — Not Bombs are working to increase the number of bicycles in Third World countries.

In addition, the organization helps local groups set up bike repair shops and trains bicycle mechanics.

Food stamp users up after summer lull

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of people using food stamps to buy groceries started rising again in August after decreasing in late spring and early summer, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

Enrollment totaled 25.86 million people in August, the last month for which figures are available. That's 139,000 more people than the approximately 25.7 million on food stamps in July, USDA said.

Participation in the program typically levels off or declines during the warm weather months principally because of seasonal employment and often increases in the fall, officials generally agree.

Dick Thaxton, deputy administrator for USDA's food and nutrition service, said the August figures show the economy is recovering even though the numbers are increasing again.

He noted that at the same time last year the number of people on food stamps shot up by 450,000 between July and August.

"It was growing faster then," he said. "It is leveling off now."

In July 1991 there were 23.2 million people on food stamps, increasing to 23.66 million in August.

This year's August figures are still below the all time high set last April when 25.88 million people were receiving food stamps.

Rod Leonard, executive director of the Community Nutrition Institute disagreed with Thaxton's reading of the figures.

Thaxton said the next set of food stamp numbers, those coming out next month for September, will be inflated because of disaster relief after the hurricanes in Hawaii, Guam, Florida and Louisiana.

polling place."

As a result of high early voting, lines are not expected at the polling places on Tuesday, Ms. Calvert said. The slowest period will be during mid-morning and mid-afternoon.

Vying for president and vice-president are: Republican candidates, President Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle; the Democratic candidates, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and U.S. Sen. Al Gore; independent candidates, Dallas billionaire Ross Perot and Admiral James Stockdale; and Libertarian candidates Andre Marrou and Nancy Lord.

Closer to home, the only two contested local races on the ballot will be for County Treasurer and County Commissioner, Precinct 3.

Running for County Treasurer are Republican Carol Baker, the incumbent, and independent candidate Mary Wilson.

For County Commissioner, Precinct 3, the incumbent, Democrat Louisa Valencia is being challenged by Republican Jo Ann Carr.

In a highly publicized race for a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission, Democrat Lena Guerrero, who resigned her position last month, is running to regain the slot against former Midlander, Republican Barry Williamson and Libertarian Richard N. Draheim Jr.

Voting hours on Tuesday will be from 7 a.m.-7 p.m. with a polling place in every precinct.

Voters are encouraged to bring their blue voter registration certificate to prevent delays in line. But having a card is not required as long as the voter is registered.

CANDIDATES: Election's main issue is economy, Gore says steady leads in more than enough states to fashion an Electoral College majority. Countered Bush's campaign chairman, Robert Teeter: "We're right where we want to be."

The presidential campaign was only the top of the Election Day ticket. Candidates to fill 35 Senate seats and create a new 435-member House were making their final campaign rounds, as were hopefuls in 12 gubernatorial elections.

The pace was intense in a presidential campaign with only three days to run. Bush battled a cold; Clinton got an early start after reaching his hotel room after 2 a.m. "They're probably both about to drop of exhaustion," guessed Senate GOP Leader Bob Dole.

Both men targeted states essential to their electoral strategy. Bush boarded the Spirit of America for several Wisconsin whistlestops, and supplemented his train tour with interviews with about two dozen reporters.

Clinton began his day with pancakes in Georgia and was ending his campaigning with a televised town hall meeting in Milwaukee. In between lay Davenport, Iowa, numerous speeches and thousands of hands to shake.

In Decatur, Ga., he noted Bush's earlier claim that the democratic ticketmates were crazy.

"I'll tell you what I think is crazy. Crazy is a president who says we ought to re-elect him with unemployment going up, incomes going down, poverty going up, one in ten Americans on food stamps, 100,000 people with no health insurance every month. Now that is crazy," Clinton said.

Speaking to a crowd numbered in the thousands, he urged supporters to look beyond the charges and counter-charges of the long campaign. "The truth is that most of the charges in this campaign don't amount to a hill of beans."

The Arkansas governor also poked at Bush for asking Americans to trust him with the economy for four more years. "That's like hiring Gen. Sherman for fire commissioner in Georgia."

Bush fought on with his message that the economy is improving, and is far better than Clinton makes it out to be.

"A lot of families are hurting," he said as he embarked on a 279-mile train trip through Wisconsin. "But the economy is moving."

Under Clinton, he said, "every day's going to be Halloween — fright and terror. ... He talks about government investing. The answer is not to have government investing by taking more of your taxes, the answer is for us to stimulate small business by tax relief, less regulation and less lawsuits that finish off a lot of these small businesses."

Bush continued his attack on Clinton's character, but it was his own truthfulness that was challenged by the disclosure of notes belonging to former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who was indicted Friday.

Bush, at a train stop in Oshkosh, dismissed the controversy as "silly little charges" he has responded to repeatedly.

Clinton did not mention the subject in his campaign speeches, and when reporters asked him about White House charges that politics were involved, he said simply, "I thought it was in an indictment."

Aides said Clinton did not want to personally involve himself further in the controversy, preferring to stress his call for economic change.

But vice presidential candidate Al Gore wasn't as reticent.

"I just think the main issue is the economy, but if the president wants to say that the main issue is trust, then the president had better be prepared to explain why he has told this story for six years that Caspar Weinberger's memo now shows is untrue," Gore told supporters in his home state of Tennessee.

Perot spoke in Tampa, Fla., and then headed for Kansas City, Mo.

In his speech in Tampa, Perot vowed to cut government red tape that he said was blocking important work on combatting AIDS.

In the manner of trailing candidates everywhere, he uttered a prediction of victory.

"All these old boys that used to make a living taking polls are going to be looking for work selling peanuts or something," he said to cheers. He can win, he said, if "my supporters can get five friends, crazy or sane" to vote with them.

justice", "we need trained cops" and "tomorrow you, Francisco today."

Children held signs reading "Unjustified death will not be tolerated", "First Rodney King then Francisco Madrid. Where is justice?" and "I'm fatherless because of city's justice."

But what "justice" the family is seeking remained unclear, although state representatives from the League of United Lat in American Citizens (LULAC) said they will conduct a full investigation of the death.

"Our biggest question is; was it a situation of excessive use of deadly force? Did the police officer involved overreact?" said Terry Meza, Texas state director for LULAC.

Willie Serna, District 5 director for LULAC, said the officers should have been able to subdue Madrid without shooting him.

"He was heavily intoxicated. Surely three officers could handle a drunk. They should be trained for that," he said.

Ms. Meza said LULAC will encourage civil rights training if an investigation determines local police are negatively biased toward Hispanics.

"There seems to be a definite perception in the Hispanic community that situations involving Hispanics are handled differently. It's important that we educate and train the officers," she said.

Officer Adolfo Baesa said he understands the family's grief.

"They're stricken, upset and hurt so they're not looking at the whole issue," he said. "They forget that we're human. If someone would approach them with a knife, they would do the same thing."

"If any one of them would ride with us and see what we face they would understand better," officer Alvin Navarrete said. "Everyday when we leave home we have one thing on our mind — to come home that night."

Eight supporters of the police countered the demonstration by silently standing in front of the Police Department holding pro-police signs.

"There is not a one of us that is not sympathetic to their loss. We just want to let others know there is more than negative words about the police," one woman said. All of the supporters declined to give their names, saying they didn't want to draw attention to themselves.

Baesa called Partin an intelligent officer and a family man.

"He's a young officer but a good officer. He's mature beyond his years. Most 22-year-olds have no idea what they are going to do with their life," he said. "We're all behind him on this."

The demonstration ended at 12:30 p.m. but Madrid's sister, Josie Espinoza, said the family plans to return next Saturday.

"This will not go away," she said.

Thousands march to demand peace accord compliance in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — More than 25,000 Salvadorans marched Saturday to demand government compliance with peace accords that ended a 12-year civil war.

The march, heavily peppered with banners of the rebel Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, wound up in front of the national cathedral, where leaders chanted for El Salvador's demilitarization and a purge of human rights violators from the army.

Saturday was to have been the deadline for compliance with all U.N.-brokered peace accords signed in Mexico City in January, including demobilization of the guerrilla forces, estimated at 8,000.

In addition to complete rebel demobilization and the purge of human rights abusers in the military, agreements between the government and the FMLN called for the government to halve its 60,000-strong armed forces.

The accords also prescribe measures intended to encourage democracy, including judicial, electoral and military reforms.

When growing delays in implementing the accords threatened to derail the peace process, the United Nations suggested postponing the deadlines until Dec. 15.

The guerrillas accepted unconditionally. President Alfredo Cristiani agreed to the date, but then said he would not proceed with any military reductions until all the rebels disarmed and disbanded.

Another 20 percent of the guerrilla forces turned in their arms to U.N. peacekeepers Friday, leaving 40 percent still armed.

Three of the government's five American-trained counterinsurgency battalions also remain intact, despite peace accord provisions that they be disbanded by Saturday.

Human rights groups blame the battalions for some of the worst human rights abuses of the war, including the El Mozote massacre in 1981, in which an estimated 1,000 peasants were killed, possibly on suspicion of being rebel sympathizers.

"We knew from the first minute that the battle to get compliance with the accords would be harder than the battle we faced in negotiations," said Schafik Handal, a member of the guerrillas' national directorate.

U.N. Undersecretary-General Alvaro De Soto and Marrick Goulding, who oversees U.N. peace efforts in El Salvador, arrived Friday to try to revive the peace process.

Handal accused Cristiani at Saturday's rally of being the president of only "a handful of assassin dogs."

"We cannot close our eyes and comply (with the accords) when the other side had decided not to comply," he said.

Cristiani earlier had said he would never agree to extend the deadline and that it was up to the rebels to demobilize by Oct. 31.

The march was organized by the Permanent Committee on National Debate, which was formed by 70 political, social and labor organizations to ensure that both sides comply with terms of the agreement.

Fischer, Spassky play to draw

By Robert Byrne
N.Y. Times News Service

Bobby Fischer tried the same type of quiet positional play Saturday in Game 27 that he had used to defeat Boris Spassky in Game 9, but this time it got him nothing. The players agreed to a draw after 46 moves of uneventful, though stubborn, maneuvering.

Fischer has nine victories in their Belgrade match, and will be awarded the winner's $3.35 million prize if he can add one more to his score. Spassky has won five, and seems headed for the loser's share, $1.65 million. Nevertheless, he seems determined not to be a pushover.

Fischer made a slight alteration from his known strategy in this game, and may have expected to harvest more from it.

Spassky's defense, however, was impeccable. In fact, it worked so well that he could reasonably entertain some small hopes of fabricating a victory out of it.

But Fischer played carefully, holding his opponent at bay, and neither player could significantly disturb the game's balance.

It is possible that Fischer was not averse to taking such a draw after having been squashed in the previous game. Licking one's wounds is considered an important part of chess generalship. Spassky would have done more if he could have.

After disappointing results using the Sicilian Defense, Spassky returned to defending the Ruy Lopez, as he had done at the beginning of the match; Fischer used the Exchange Variation, which had worked well for him in Game 9.

The thematic 4 Bc6 dc followed by 6 d4 ed 7 Nd4 exchanges a bishop for a knight to double the black c pawns and yields White a mobile pawn majority on the kingside as against a crippled black queenside pawn formation. Black's compensation is the bishop pair.

Fischer, probably anticipating well-studied improvements against his earlier 8 Nb3, now changed to the alternative 8 Ne2.

Once Spassky had gotten his knight into action with 13 ... Ne5, threatening 14 ... Nc4, Fischer gave up his last bishop to get rid of it with 14 Be5 fe. After 16 ... Bc5, Spassky had obtained useful activity for his pieces.

Once the rooks had been cleared off with 18 Rd8 Rd8 19 Rd8 Kd8, Spassky needed open lines for his bishops if he was to have any chances to win. But he did not find a way, and after 40 ... Bg4 41 Ng4 hg, the game was heading irrevocably for a draw.

Had Fischer tried any shenanigans on the queen's wing with 43 Ng7 Kf6 44 Ne8?, he would have gotten burned by 44 ... Kf7 45 Nc7 Ba3! 46 ba b4! 47 cb c3, when nothing can stop the passed c pawn from queening. But as long as Fischer kept his knight within reach of the c2 or c1 squares, this trick was unusable.

Game 28 is to be played today.

Khmer Rouge stance may doom peace talks, U.N. officials say

By Philip Shenon
N.Y. Times News Service

BANGKOK, Thailand — United Nations officials and foreign diplomats say they are uncertain how, or whether, the Cambodian peace talks can be salvaged after the Khmer Rouge, the country's most powerful guerrilla group, rejected yet another overture for it to disarm and join in free elections scheduled for next year.

Diplomats who had once talked optimistically about their chances of persuading the Khmer Rouge to rejoin the peace process now concede that the elections may have to be held without the Khmer Rouge, whose brutal rule over Cambodia ended in 1979.

If the elections go forward without the Khmer Rouge, Cambodia may face a de facto partition, with about 85 percent of the land under the control of whatever government emerges after the election and the rest in the hands of the Khmer Rouge.

On Thursday, Khmer Rouge leaders rejected a proposal from Japan and Thailand intended to entice the rebel group into disarming some of its soldiers and moving them to internationally supervised sites.

The proposal, offered at a meeting in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, was intended to appeal to the guerrillas because it would have diluted the power of the Vietnamese-installed Phnom Penh government, the government that the Khmer Rouge, the largest of three rebel factions, has sought for 13 years to overthrow.

"I think we have exhausted our efforts," said Saroj Chavanaviraj, Thailand's deputy permanent secretary for foreign affairs, after leaving the talks in Phnom Penh.

He said Thailand and Japan had "played their part" in trying to revive the peace process, but had failed. France and Indonesia have said they will now step in to continue the talks with the Khmer Rouge.

U.N. officials and diplomats stationed in Phnom Penh said in telephone interviews Friday that they are still confused about what it is that the Khmer Rouge hopes to achieve by refusing to abide by the peace treaty that its leaders signed a year ago.

"There's no shortage of possible explanations," said an Asian diplomat. "Perhaps the Khmer Rouge believes that they would be soundly beaten in the election. Perhaps they just want to delay so they can stockpile weapons and money. Perhaps they think the Phnom Penh government will collapse from corruption. I've given up trying to guess what the real answer is."

The stalemate with the Khmer Rouge began in June, when the rebels announced that they would not begin to disarm, as required under the peace treaty, until the United Nations verified that all Vietnamese troops had been withdrawn from Cambodia. The Vietnamese toppled the Khmer Rouge government in an invasion that began in late 1978.

The United Nations has said it has investigated and found no evidence of any Vietnamese forces still present in Cambodia, an answer that has not satisfied the Khmer Rouge, which has since added to the list of demands that it says must be met before it returns to the peace process.

The next round of negotiations with the Khmer Rouge is expected to be held in early November in Beijing under the sponsorship of the foreign ministers of France and Indonesia. The diplomats are working against a Nov. 15 deadline, set by the U.N. Security Council, for the Khmer Rouge to comply with the peace agreement.

If the rebels do not rejoin the peace process, the Security Council is expected to impose economic sanctions on the Khmer Rouge and to insist that Thailand cut off supply routes along the Thai-Cambodian for gems and lumber from areas of western Cambodia held by the Khmer Rouge.

Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who returned to Cambodia last year after decades in exile and is all but certain to be elected Cambodia's president if he is on the ballot, recently suggested that Cambodia could survive, in relative peace, as a divided nation.

China orders expulsion of journalist

BEIJING (NYT) — The government said Saturday it had ordered the expulsion from China of a Hong Kong journalist who has been detained for a week on charges she offered bribes in exchange for secret documents.

The journalist, Leung Wai-min, a 32-year-old reporter for The Hong Kong Express newspaper, was detained in the early hours of Oct. 25 and kept incommunicado at an unknown location. She was not allowed visits from her husband or editor or from British Embassy officials.

China said that Ms. Leung would be forced to leave "within a limited period of time," but there was no indication she had been released.

Her editors and her husband were unable to locate her and did not know her whereabouts.

By deciding to deport Ms. Leung, instead of putting her on trial, the Chinese authorities apparently were trying to calm anxieties in Hong Kong over the issue.

Ms. Leung's detention underscored the prickly relations between the Chinese government and the foreign press, and reminded Hong Kong journalists that they will be working under Communist rules after the territory reverts to China in 1997.

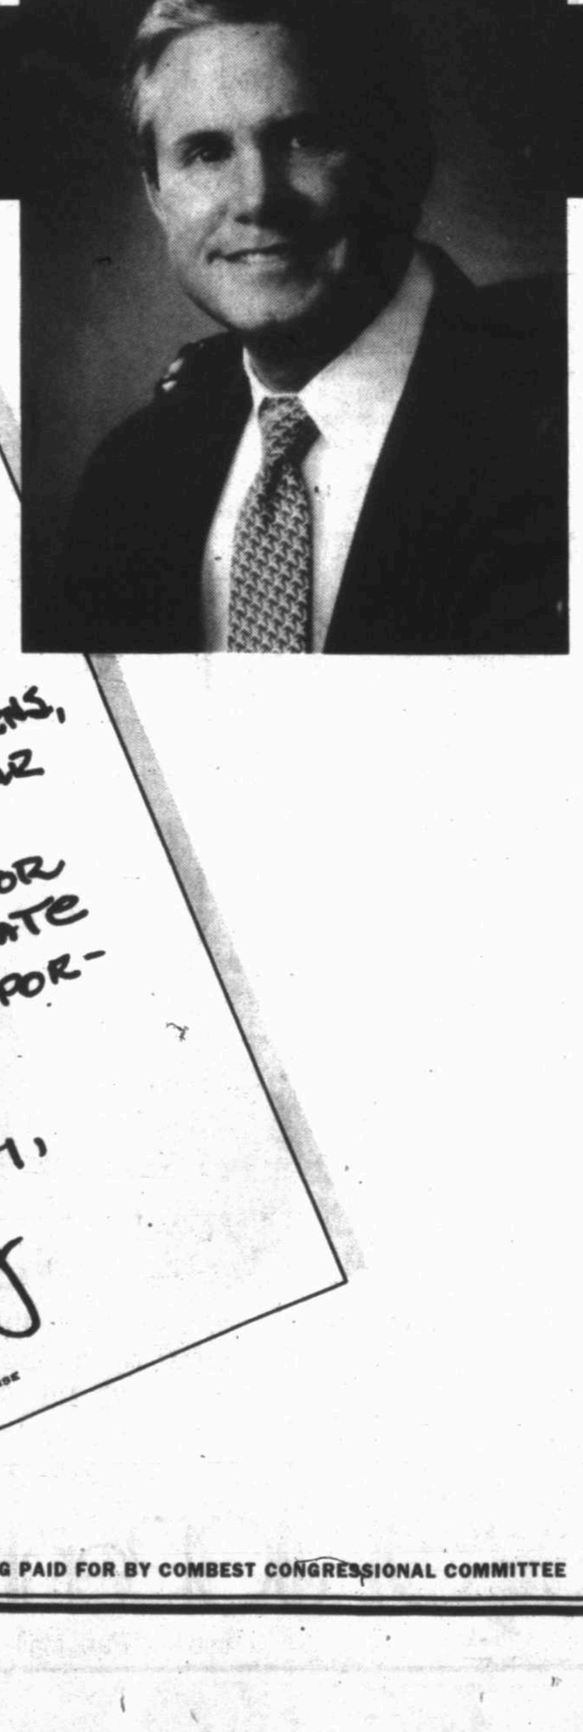

The official New China News Agency said that Ms. Leung had bribed a government employee into obtaining a "most confidential" document, a copy of which she then forwarded onto her Hong Kong headquarters.

On Oct. 5, Ms. Leung's newspaper published the entire text of the keynote speech by the Communist Party leader, Jiang Zemin. The speech was delivered at an important Communist Party Congress that was held in mid-October.

The New China News Agency said that Ms. Leung destroyed her copy of the speech by burning parts of it in her hotel room bathroom, before discarding the remains in several trash cans on the streets. The dispatch added that Ms. Leung had obtained many secrets from the government employee in exchange for a "large sum of money."

Zulus march in violence-torn province

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — About 10,000 Zulus marched through Durban on Saturday to protest a ban on tribal weapons and to demand the ANC's army be disbanded.

It was the second such march since the African National Congress and government agreed to outlaw tribal weapons at political rallies. Most marchers flouted the ban, waving spears, clubs and sticks. Police monitored the demonstration but did not intervene.

The Zulu-dominated Inkatha Freedom Party called the march but said it was a cultural rather than political rally and not subject to the weapons restrictions. But the protest clearly was aimed at Nelson Mandela's ANC, Inkatha's chief rival in a violent struggle for power among blacks.

Political violence has been the biggest obstacle to multiparty negotiations on ending white-minority rule. The negotiations halted in June when the ANC accused government security forces of taking part in a black township massacre and withdrew from the talks in protest.

President F.W. de Klerk and Mandela met in September for a one-on-one summit, and the ANC agreed to return to negotiations after the weapons ban was approved.

Buthelezi then withdrew Inkatha from negotiations in protest.

The ANC and Inkatha are the country's two main black groups, and their agreement on political issues is essential to a peaceful resolution of the country's problems.

The negotiations on ending white-minority rule will resume on Nov. 22, Mandela announced on Saturday.

"And top amongst the issues that we'll discuss is the setting of a date for the installation of an interim government of national unity," Mandela told reporters in the northern Spanish city of Oviedo.

He and de Klerk were co-winners of the Prince of Asturias Prize for International Cooperation, which was to be presented there later in the day.

"Mr. de Klerk is the leader of the party that has created formidable difficulties as far as the majority of the people are concerned, but our idea at the ANC is to let bygones be bygones," Mandela said.

Inkatha leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi led Saturday's march and carried a statement demanding the ANC be forced to disband its military wing.

No incidents were reported as the Zulus, many clad in animal skins and feathers, headed from a downtown square to City Hall.

Palestinian radicals threaten peace talks

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Radical Palestinian factions are threatening the Middle East peace talks with an increasingly strident campaign aimed at forcing negotiators to walk out until Israel is ready to discuss an independent Palestinian state.

Some PLO leaders believe that with rejectionist sentiment swelling, they may have no choice but to respond if the seventh round of talks, scheduled to end Nov. 19, fails to make meaningful progress.

Jamil Hilal, director of the PLO's Information Department, said Saturday that withdrawing from the talks "is an option which cannot be ruled out."

He said PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat had called for an emergency meeting of Palestinian leaders in Tunis, including the radicals, to review the peace talks.

There is widespread anxiety among Palestinians that the divisions could trigger violence between the radicals and the mainstream Palestine Liberation Organization.

"It would be disastrous and only the Israelis would benefit," said Daoud Talhami, politburo member of the radical, Damascus-based Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

The Israelis insist they will discuss limited autonomy, never statehood, for the 1.7 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip where the uprising against Israeli rule launched nearly five years ago is moving from stone-throwing to armed clashes.

After a year of negotiations, the Palestinian team in Washington is under pressure from other Arabs, including the influential Gulf states, to reach an agreement with Israel that falls far short of Palestinian aspirations.

The radicals, particularly the Muslim fundamentalist Hamas faction, have been making inroads into Arafat's traditional support inside the territories for some time, exploiting the frustration over the lack of progress toward achieving an independent state.

Hamas, funded by Iran and Saudi Arabia, poses the greatest challenge to the PLO's traditional leadership of the Palestinians, particularly in the occupied zones.

EC, U.S. officials meet today for trade talks

By Sally Jacobsen
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The United States and the European Community on Friday scheduled a weekend round of negotiations to try to resolve a nagging dispute over cuts in farm subsidies before the U.S. presidential election.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan will meet today in Chicago with Ray MacSharry, farm chief of the 12-nation trading bloc, to discuss the latest offers to settle the fight in international trade talks.

The negotiations appeared to be a last-ditch attempt by the Bush administration to clinch a farm deal before the presidential balloting on Tuesday. An agreement would pave the way for a world trade agreement, giving a needed boost to the weak global economy.

The dispute between the United States and the European Community has brought to the brink of collapse the Uruguay Round talks, an ambitious effort by 108 nations to revamp the world trading system. The 6-year-old bargaining is sponsored by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT.

EC officials expressed cautious optimism the Madigan-MacSharry meeting would lead to an agreement on farm subsidies.

"The fact that they are going to meet is a very good sign," EC spokesman Nico Wegter said. "We have never come so near to a solution as now."

Madigan and MacSharry were expected to meet over dinner today and continue their talks Monday morning. American officials confirmed the discussions would be held at an undisclosed site in the Chicago area.

The United States, backed by other farm-exporting nations, has pressed for deeper cuts in subsidies paid to Europe's 9 million farmers than the EC has been willing to make.

The community agreed last spring to a reform package that tightened controls over soaring production of some crops by slicing price supports and taking land out of production.

Tight security mounts over plutonium ship

BREST, France (AP) — French naval vessels guarded a Japanese freighter Friday as it took on fuel and supplies Friday ahead of its controversial voyage home with a cargo of deadly plutonium.

Industry Minister Dominique Strauss-Kahn said in Paris that the Akatsuki Maru would leave Brest tonight for the port of Cherbourg, about 150 miles east, where 1.7 tons of plutonium will be loaded into the hold.

The plutonium, the largest amount ever to be shipped, comes from spent fuel from Japanese reactors reprocessed by France's state-owned nuclear-fuel firm, COGEMA. It is the first of 30 tons to be shipped back to Japan this decade under a $4 billion contract.

Strauss-Kahn said journalists would be able to view the loading on television monitors, in a break with France's tight secrecy over the ship's movements.

The minister said the loading operation would take place over a 24-hour period, but did not specify when it would start or when the ship would leave Cherbourg. He refused to disclose the route for security reasons.

The 1,900-ton Akatsuki Maru pulled into Brest under French naval escort Thursday night, ending weeks of speculation over its whereabouts.

The voyage back to Yokohama has drawn intense protest from environmental groups and governments whose waters might be along the secret route.

Plutonium, used to make nuclear bombs, is one of the world's deadliest substances. A speck inhaled can kill a human. Fears have been raised that terrorists could attack the ship, and that an accident could kill tens of thousands of people.

Retired U.S. Adm. Stansfield Turner, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, was quoted Friday in the leftist daily Liberation as saying the ship would tempt pirates.

"There's an obvious risk about this voyage because there's been a lot of publicity about it," Turner was quoted as saying. "If someone wants to equip himself with plutonium, he's certainly had the time to prepare."

The environmental group Greenpeace says it will to track the ship to warn countries in its path. The Akatsuki Maru will be escorted by a Japanese coast guard vessel on the high seas.

French and Japanese officials say the multi-layered, stainless steel tanks holding the plutonium can withstand sea pressures up to 33,000 feet and temperatures up to 1,832 degrees for 90 minutes. The tanks are equipped with transmitters so they can be found if the ship sinks.

Japan says the plutonium is needed for a new generation of fast-breeder reactors, part of a program to cut oil imports.

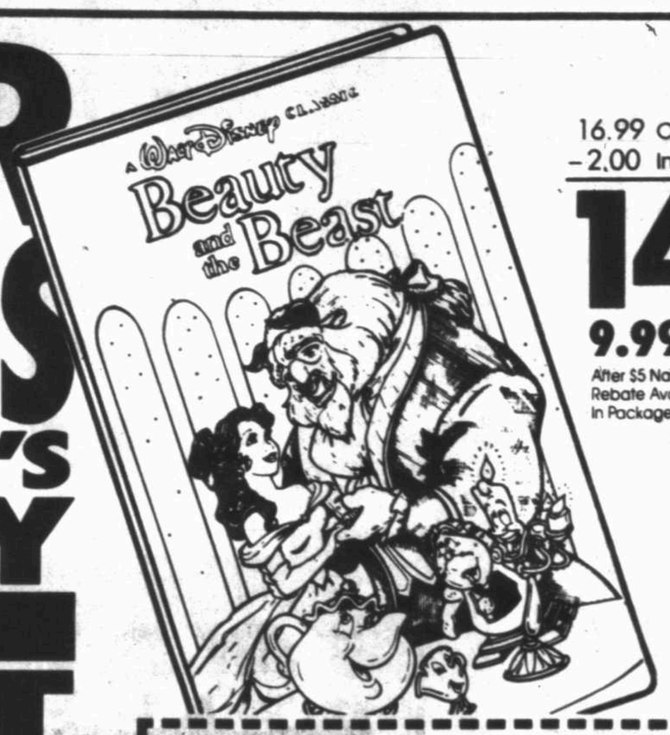

Greenpeace, which calls the Akatsuki Maru "a floating Chernobyl," claims that 120 crude nuclear devices could be fashioned from the plutonium.

French officials say the plutonium is not weapons-grade.

Heavy fighting erupts in Angola; all-out war possible

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — Rebels and government forces fought fiercely in the capital on Saturday, heightening fears that they would revive their all-out civil war.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali issued an appeal Saturday evening urging an immediate end to the hostilities.

Machine-gun fire and explosions ripped through Luanda. Portugal's TSF radio reported that several UNITA rebel soldiers lay dead in front of the downtown hotel they use as a base. State radio said at least four rebels died in an attack on the ruling party's headquarters.

There was no word on other casualties Saturday.

Diplomats in the Angolan capital said both sides were still communicating in an effort to halt the gunfire, but hopes of a peaceful solution were fading.

Tension has mounted since national elections Sept. 29-30, in which UNITA — the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola — ran second to the ruling MPLA, or Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola.

UNITA leader Jonas Savimbi accused the government of rigging the vote and threatened to fight rather than accept defeat.

The United Nations, which brokered the peace accord, said the balloting generally was fair.

Boutros-Ghali said Saturday he was "extremely distressed by the escalation of violence" in the previous 24 hours and called for both sides to continue talks.

"I strongly appeal personally to President Jose Eduardo dos Santos and Dr. Jonas M. Savimbi to withdraw immediately their forces and to return them to the barracks," the U.N. chief said.

The United States supported UNITA in the civil war, but on Friday condemned any attempt to seize power by force.

Angola gained independence from Portugal in 1975, and 16 years of civil war began almost immediately.

The southern African nation was a Cold War battleground, with Cuba and the Soviet Union arming the government, and the United States and South Africa backing the rebels.

Edmund De Jarnette, head of the U.S. liaison office in Luanda, said the fighting Saturday started shortly after the two sides halted negotiations aimed at seeking a political solution to the crisis. The United States, Russia and Portugal were helping mediate the talks.

The heaviest shooting appeared to be around the Hotel Turismo, used as a base by UNITA. Portugal's RTP television news later reported police captured the hotel.

Angolan state radio said the fighting broke out after rebels in the hotel fired on the police station. Rebels said they were defending a UNITA general who was chased into the hotel, according to Portugal's SIC television.

Witnesses said machine guns, mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and heavier weapons were being used. They said mortar shells fired from the plush Miramar district, where UNITA has a garrison, fell on downtown and into Luanda Bay.

Portugal's Lusa news agency reported that the government was using armored vehicles to force UNITA soldiers out of Miramar, where many foreign missions are situated, including the U.S. liaison office. Phone lines were down and it was not possible to reach the liaison office.

Lusa said the fighting subsided as darkness fell.

Fighting also was reported around Luanda's international airport and in other Angolan cities. The airport was closed Saturday afternoon.

Hours before the fighting started, state radio broadcast appeals for people to stay home. Heavily armed police patrolled the city and set up roadblocks.

Angolan state television showed several bands of armed civilians on Luanda's streets, offering to help government forces.

Fighting reportedly claimed dozens of lives Thursday and Friday in Luanda and Huambo, Angola's second-largest city and the rebels' stronghold.

News reports in Lisbon on Saturday said the Portuguese government had dispatched a frigate to the west African coast to prepare a possible evacuation of the estimated 40,000 Portuguese citizens in Angola.

Muslim refugees migrate South, some under fire

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serb rebels on Saturday subjected Sarajevo to the heaviest bombardment in weeks, with at least one shell crashing down every second.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, meanwhile, proposed that the republic be divided into five ethnic cantons. Under his plan, Muslims — the largest ethnic group — would get little more than three cities, and Serbs and Croats would divide the rest.

Serbs have captured about 70 percent of Bosnian territory, and Croats control most of the rest.

More than 14,000 people have died and thousands more have been driven from their homes since Serbs rebelled against a Croat-Muslim vote on Feb. 29 to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia. The Croats and Muslims were nominal allies until recently.

A Tanjug report on Friday indicated Serbs may be closing in on Tuzla in northeastern Bosnia. If the town falls, Muslims would hold virtually nothing except the center of Sarajevo.

The fall of Jajce, a stronghold of Bosnia's Muslim-led government, was a severe blow.

Thousands of refugees streamed south on Saturday from Jajce, the Serb rebels' latest prize. The city 60 miles northwest of Sarajevo fell Thursday.

Some 25,000 refugees from Jajce had arrived in Travnik, according to the U.S. State Department. Peter Kessler, spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, said they traveled the 22 miles by tractor, bus, car and foot.

About 5,000 more who were trapped by shelling near Travnik managed to escape and were beginning to arrive, and another 10,000 to 15,000 were expected, State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said in Washington.

Ethnic fighting erupts in Russian Caucasus region

MOSCOW (AP) — Ethnic fighting erupted between Ingush and Ossetians in the Russian Caucasus region Saturday, and officials imposed a curfew, news media said. President Boris Yeltsin convened his Security Council to discuss the situation.

It was one of the first open clashes between the two groups, heralding yet another bloody ethnic conflict in the former Soviet Union.

Ingush militants on Russia's southern border with Georgia clashed with police and Russian troops in North Ossetia, dominated by ethnic Ossetians, according to the ITAR-Tass and Interfax news agencies.

The Ingush are Sunni Muslims and number about 100,000. Most live in North Ossetia and in the neighboring self-declared Chechen independent republic. The Ingush were deported to Kazakhstan by the Soviet Union during World War II, but returned home in the 1950s.

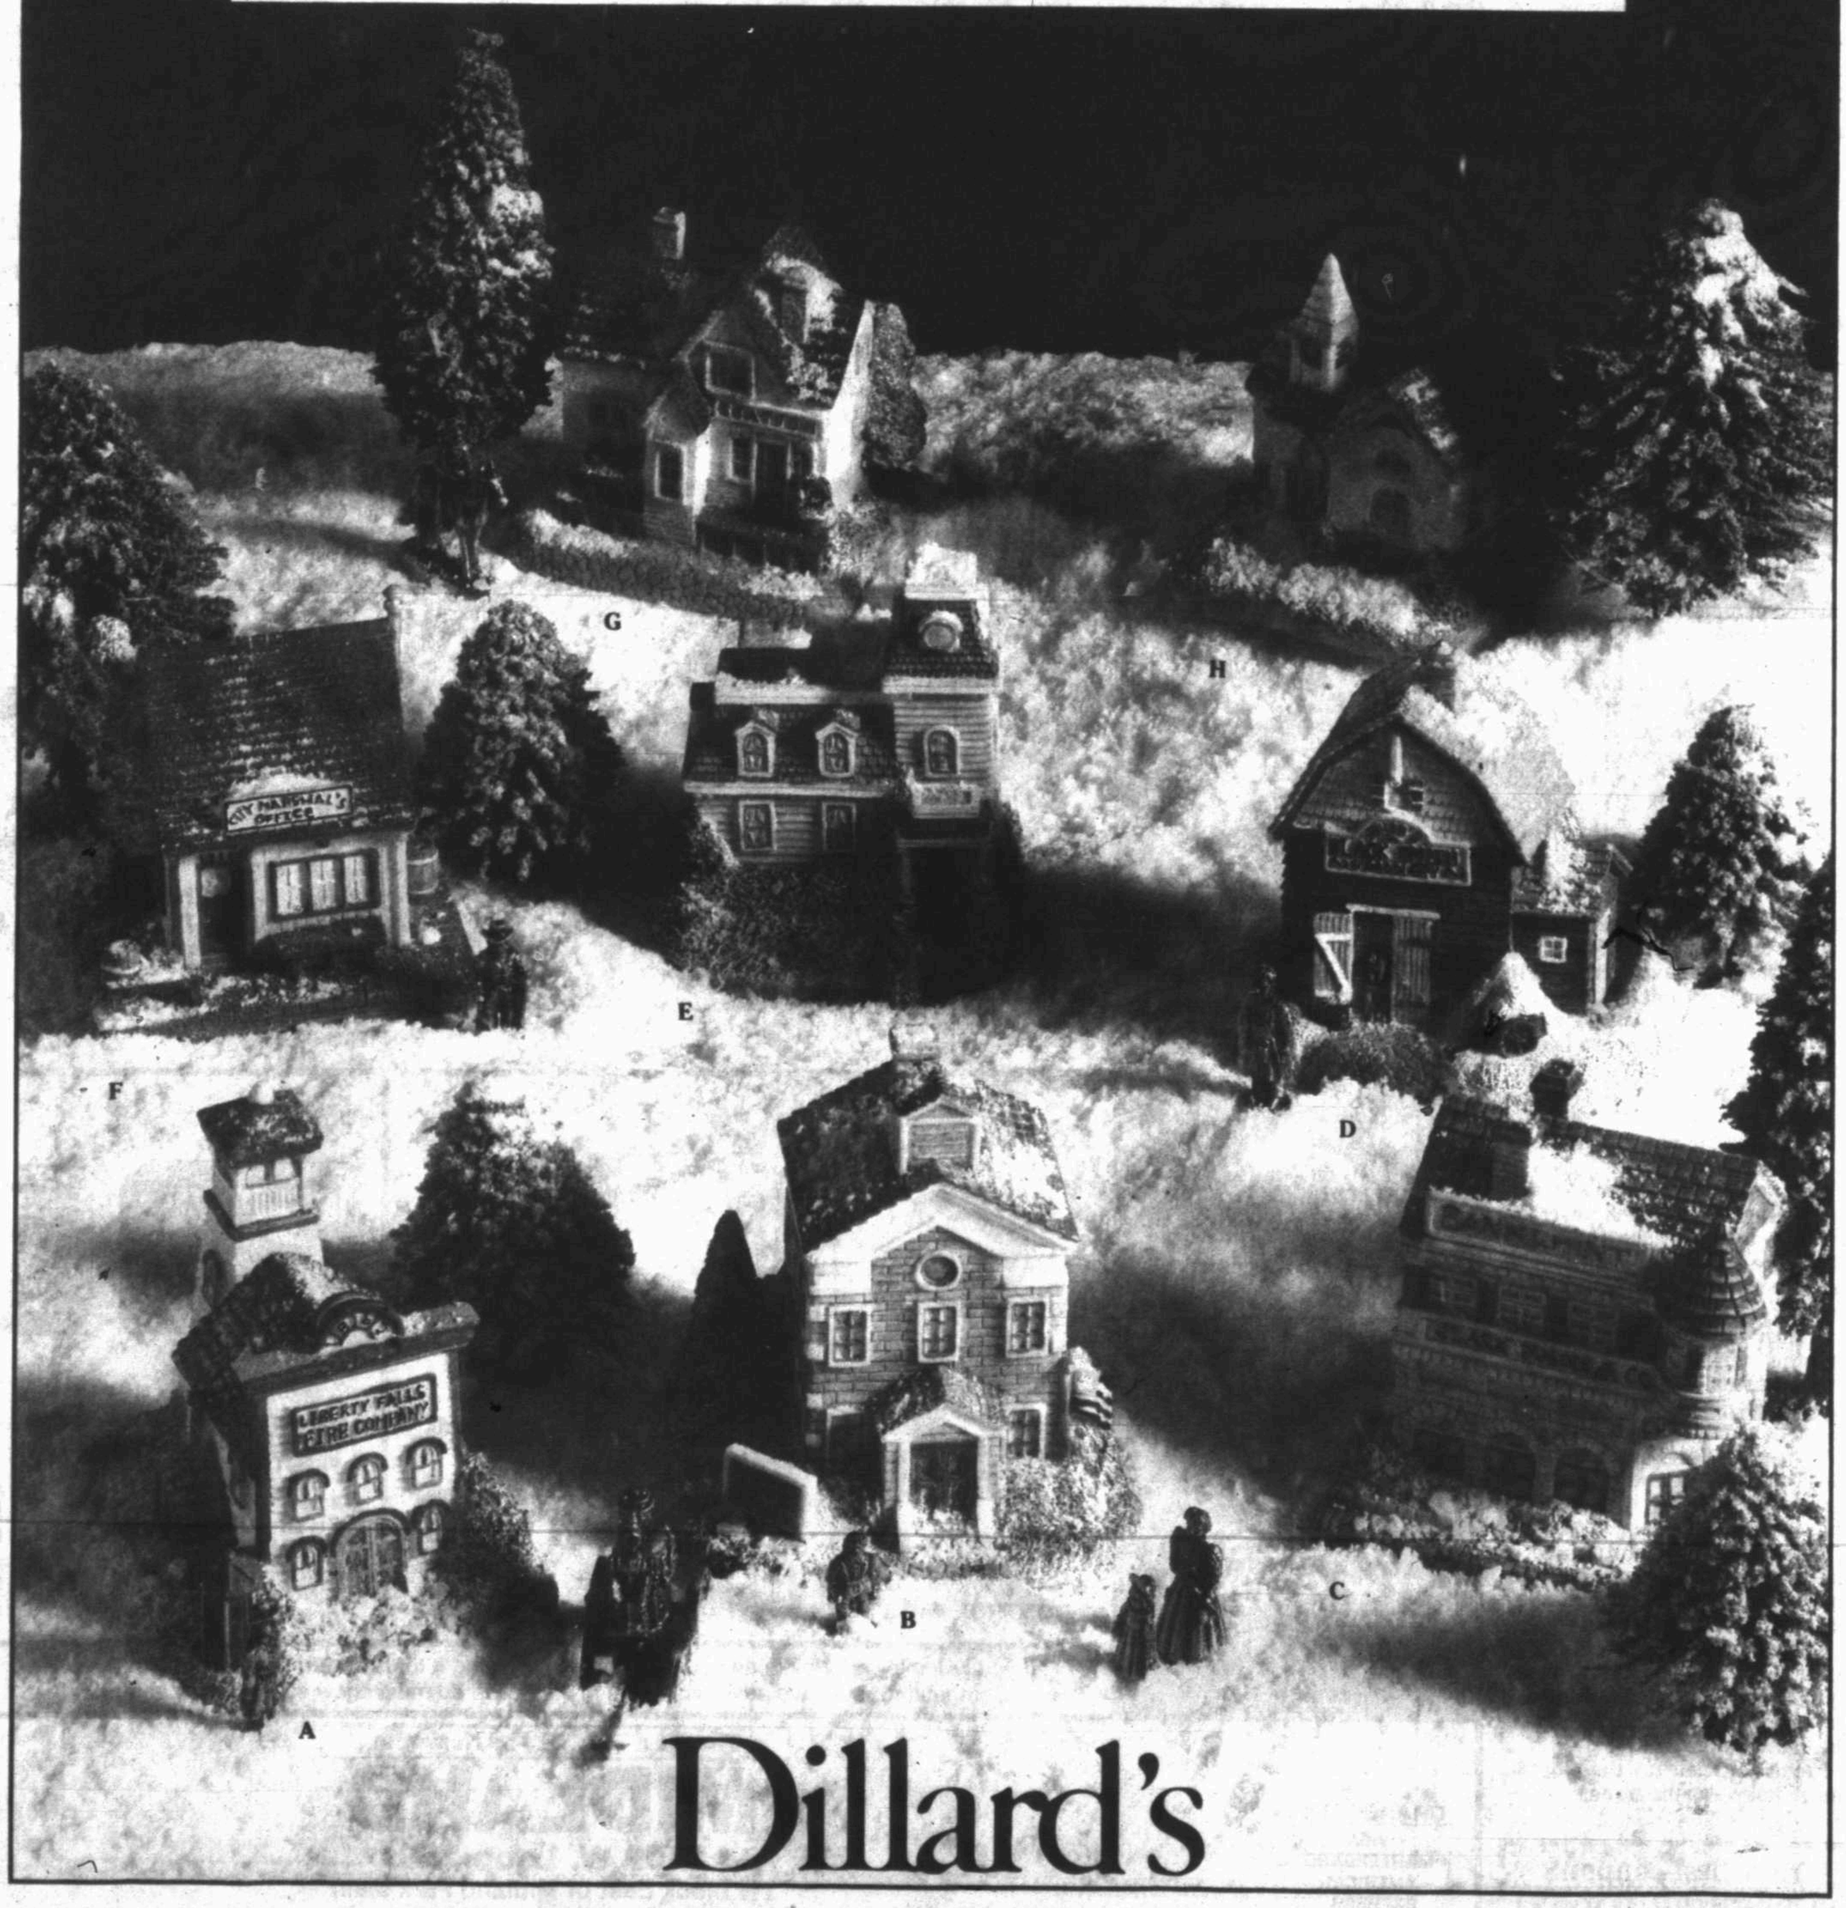

The Persian-speaking Ossetians number about 400,000 in North and South Ossetia — halves of their traditional home divided between Russia and Georgia. Most are Orthodox Christian but some also are Sunni Muslim.

Cowboys look to even score

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — It was 24 hours after the Dallas Cowboys had lost 31-7 to the Philadelphia Eagles and Emmitt Smith sat in front of his locker counting a bruise for every one of the hard-earned 67 yards rushing he had against the NFL's premier defense.

"I'm sore, real sore," he said. "They hit me early. They hit me late. They speared me. Some of that stuff wasn't tackling. Some of it wasn't sportsmanship."

That was a month ago and the Cowboys, particularly Smith, haven't forgotten the physical and verbal abuse they got in Veterans Stadium on Monday Night Football.

However, the Eagles weren't just singling out the Cowboys. They've made a habit out of stuffing opposition running games.

The Eagles have a proud record of 53 consecutive games without a runner getting 100 or more yards against them. Gerald Riggs was the last to perform the feat in 1988 for the Washington Redskins.

■ Philadelphia Eagles at Dallas Cowboys, 3 p.m., CBS (KOSA-Cable Ch. 8).

The Eagles (5-2) haven't allowed a rushing touchdown this year. Phoenix came the closest. The Cardinals has six shots inside the three-yard line last week and couldn't score.

Philadelphia has held an opponent under 100 yards rushing for 15 straight games.

"They have the best defense in the NFL," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson. "There are some Hall of Famers on that defense. They've had success against everybody, not just us. We're getting better but we're not to Philadelphia's level yet."

Smith, who led the NFL in rushing last year and is second so far this season, had 75 yards against the Eagles in 1991. That's been his best against Philadelphia.

"It's tough, real tough, getting yards on them," said Smith. "They are hard to block. There aren't many holes to hit."

Valvano returns

RALEIGH, N.C. — Former North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano, who has not been in the public eye since late spring as he battled cancer, plans to work again as television analyst for the 1992-93 college basketball season, an ESPN spokesman said.

Valvano

ESPN publicist Josh Krulewitz said Friday that Valvano was scheduled to do live commentary on at least six and perhaps as many as 10 games in addition to stints as a pregame and halftime studio host for the cable network.

"Jim is very upbeat and anxious to get back to work," Krulewitz said. "It's a good news. ... We're all very excited."

Bo: No regrets

AUBURN, Ala. — Bo Jackson says he has no regrets about his decision to play two sports.

Jackson

"If somebody would give me a load of money, I would do it again tomorrow," Jackson said Saturday as Auburn retired his No. 34 jersey at halftime of the Arkansas game.

Jackson, however, knows his football career is over after a severe injury forced him to undergo hip replacement surgery. There are doubts about whether he can return to baseball.

Still, with typical Bo bravado, Jackson insisted he will be back next season with the Chicago White Sox.

"It has been only 7½ months since the surgery," he said. "I have made more progress than anyone has made in 2½ years. I have no pain, no limp, knock on wood."

Rebels spook Jesuit

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Lee fullback Scott McLeod breaks clear for a near touchdown in the second quarter.

■ Scott McLeod tears through Dallas Jesuit with three touchdowns and 182 yards in a non-district 28-7 win for Midland Lee Saturday.

By Bill Price
Staff writer

Entering halftime trailing Dallas Jesuit 7-0, the Midland Lee Rebels were probably doing plenty of praying of their own.

But Lee overcame the first-half funk that left it a touchdown behind a private school with a losing record, as Scott McLeod rushed for 182 yards and three touchdowns to spark a 28-7 Rebel victory at Memorial Stadium.

"We just didn't come to play in the first half. We came out and played the second half, though," said McLeod, the Rebels' fullback. "It shows just how hard we're going to have to work against Abilene Cooper next week."

Maybe a letdown was expected in the non-district contest, considering a week ago Lee's 21-14 loss to Odessa Permian ended a nine-year playoff run. And Jesuit, of the Texas Christian Interscholastic League, was ready to take advantage of the situation.

Jesuit held Lee's wishbone offense to 57 yards on the ground in the first two quarters. Ranger running back Clancy Kilcoyne, who had 55 first half rushing yards, ran for an eight-yard touchdown with 6:28 to play in the second quarter to push Jesuit (3-5 for the season) on top 7-0.

Lee (6-3) came back in the third quarter, though, holding the Rangers without a first down until the last play of the period.

Meanwhile, the Rebel offense found its footing in the second half. With both teams mainly eschewing the passing game (Lee passed six times, Jesuit 11), the clock rolled constantly and the Rebels had only four second-half possessions. They scored on them all, however.

After Lee's defense stopped Jesuit cold following the second half kickoff, The Rebs took over at their own

Eddie Delahoussaye staged a double victory celebration aboard A.P. Indy in the $3 million Classic and Thirty Slews in the opening Sprint, while great English jockey Lester Piggott lay in pain in a nearby hospital.

Tech's 44-33 loss 'a gut-wrencher'

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

LUBBOCK — The new John Mackovic era at the University of Texas is much like Halloween itself, full of offensive thrills and defensive chills.

Saturday's 44-33 win over Texas Tech before 50,741, the largest crowd at Jones-Stadium since 1983, was another good example of the Mackovic-led way of doing things.

In fact, the game, broadcast regionally as the SWC's Game of the Week on Raycom-TV, was the fourth consecutive time that the Longhorns have jumped to sizeable first half leads only to end up fighting for their lives. But the bottom line is wins and Texas is now 5-2 on the season and a perfect 3-0 in SWC play while still owning a shot at the Cotton Bowl.

"You don't necessarily plan things to work out this way, but we are glad to be where we are," Mackovic said. "This is a big win no matter how you look at it or how we got it."

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Leading 22-10 at the half, Texas saw its lead dwindle to 22-20 and 29-27 as Tech back-up quarterback Jason Clemmons, playing for the injured Robert Hall, hit former Odessa Permian star Lloyd Hill for two touchdown

Privacy ever-elusive for Staubachs

Roger Staubach just wanted to watch his son play football.

Heisman Trophy Winner, Football Hall of Fame Quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys, Super Bowl MVP, Navy veteran, staunch Republican and Lone Star Legend — he has and does wear all those titles with equal aplomb.

Price

But Saturday afternoon at Midland Memorial Stadium, he just wanted to be Jeff Staubach's dad. Basking in the afternoon sun, Staubach was able to watch the first half of Midland Lee's 28-7 win over Dallas Jesuit in relative quiet.

Staubach the Younger never laid his hands on the ball because he is an offensive guard for the Rangers. But that doesn't keep Roger the Dodger from trying to keep a low profile so he can watch the game. But eventually, as has been the case in every other Jesuit game this season, the crowd found him out.

So it didn't matter that the other Jesuit parents had strategically seated themselves all around Roger, thereby blocking the path of autograph seekers. All it took was for the stadium announcer to broadcast to the estimated crowd of 2,500 at halftime that, yes indeed, Roger was in the building.

Staubach the Father took the time to also wear the mantle of Gracious Celebrity, a rare commodity in the 1990s, signing autographs and talking to the throng of youngsters who just wanted a glimpse of a Legend.

And while the Midland crowd returned the graciousness when the second half began by allowing Roger to watch the game, things have not been this way elsewhere in 1992. Jesuit fans tell of last week in Beaumont, where Beaumont Kelly downed the Rangers 14-6. The autograph hounds were so bad he had to be scurried up to the press box to watch the game.

As for Jeff, a 210-pound senior, let's just say his career lies someplace besides the football field. The Lee linemen later reported that he was one of the best blockers the Rangers have, but this is an average team in a private school league. Suffice it to say that the education he is receiving more than offsets that disadvantage.

At least by playing guard he can partially sidestep the lengthening shadow of his dad. Imagine, growing up in a house where John Heisman's famous pose is a doorstop and Pop can't decide which Super Bowl ring to wear today.

But also imagine the weight of life in the public eye, where a father can't even do simple things like watch his son play a ball game, or a son can't step onto the field without somebody expecting him to be a clone of Dear Ol' Dad.

Hopefully one Saturday in Midland was something of a respite for both. At least Roger could sit in the stands like a regular parent and Jeff's biggest worry was how to block Lee's Bernard Oldham.

It was a relative kind of peace, anyway.

Aggies silence Ponies

■ Rodney Thomas and Greg Hill combine for five touchdowns as Texas A&M retains its spotless record.

Associated Press

DALLAS — The Texas Aggies did what they do best — run the football — Saturday while remaining unblemished with a rout of Southern Methodist.

Rodney Thomas rushed for 78 yards and three touchdowns and Greg Hill ran for 138 yards and two scores as the fifth-ranked Aggies rolled to a 41-7 Southwest Conference victory.

"We didn't turn the ball over, make any mistakes and played four quarterbacks," said offensive coordinator Bob Toledo. "We ran the ball very well. That's our bread-and-butter."

The Aggies, who won their 17th consecutive regular season game and 12th straight SWC contest, improved to 8-0 overall and 4-0 in league play. SMU dropped to 3-5 and 1-4.

For Hill, who attended nearby Dallas Carter High School, it was a good homecoming. Twenty-one family members watched from the Cotton Bowl stands.

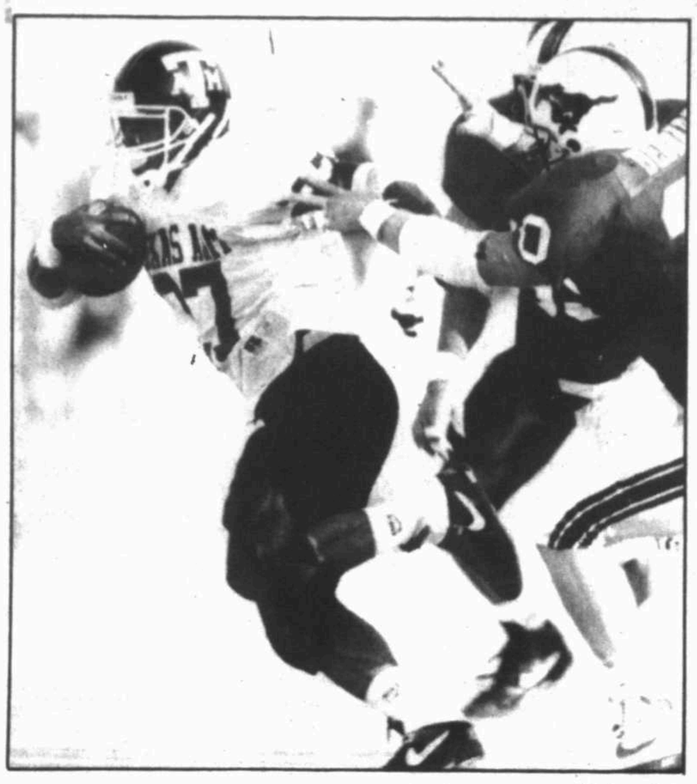

"It was great to have a big game with them in the stadium," Hill said. "I had a couple of fumbles in the Cotton Bowl last year, but that jinx is over now. I had a big game today."

SMU coach Tom Rossley said the Mustangs were overwhelmed by A&M's power.

"Texas A&M is a different level then the rest of the conference," he said. "They have great talent and a great defense. Even their backup players are tremendous."

The Aggies, 27-point favorites, built a 21-7 halftime lead on an 83-degree day with 25 mph wind gusts.

Texas A&M marched 80 yards in 16 plays on its first possession with Hill gaining 40 yards. The touchdown came through the air as Jeff Granger hit Ryan Mathews with a 6-yard strike.

Jason Wolf's 51-yard kickoff return to the A&M 36 positioned the Mustangs for an 11-yard scoring pass from Dan Freiburger to senior John DeVoss. It was the first touchdown of his career.

Granger suffered a slight concussion and was replaced by freshman quarterback Corey Pullig, who directed the Aggies to four touchdowns. Toledo said the injury was not serious.

Hill knocked Darren Lewis out of the SWC record books by going over 2,000 yards in 19 games. Lewis had previously surpassed the mark in 20 games.

43-yard line. McLeod got the ball three straight times, gaining 16 yards. Then Marlon Henry broke loose for five and 25 yards. McLeod again ran for five and Henry's four-yarder put Lee at the Ranger 1-yard line. From there, McLeod dove in, and Brian Gibson's point-after kick tied the game 7-7.

The next Lee drive started at the Jesuit 49 with 4:08 left in the third quarter. Quarterback Courtney Turner hit tight end Ryan Tucker for a 16-yard pass and McLeod broke a 13-yard run to highlight the nine-play drive. Henry's one-yard TD run put the Rebels ahead for good, 14-7 with just 16 seconds left in the quarter.

In the fourth quarter McLeod busted up the middle for a 61-yard touchdown run that made the score 21-7 with just over 10 minutes to play.

McLeod's 14-carry, 182-yard outing, giving him 748 yards and 12 touchdowns for the season, was built in large part on that long TD and a 66-yard run that ended one yard shy of a score.

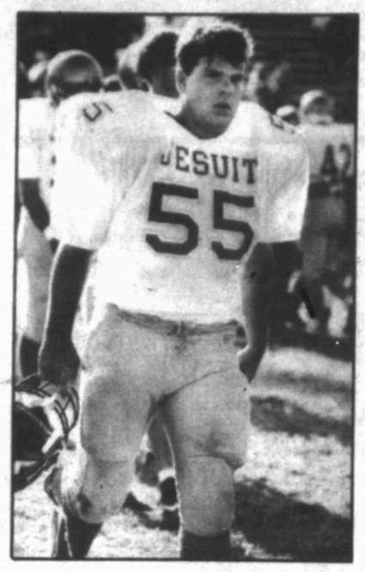

The 66-yarder came with about 2½ minutes left in the game, and though he was run down at the 1-yard line McLeod got the next carry for his final score.

"I was dead. I was so tired," McLeod said of being caught from behind.

Lee finished the game with 314 offensive yards as Henry added 72 for the Rebels. Kilcoyne ended the game leading Jesuit with 70 yards on 21 carries.

"We were fine, but then we got a couple of kids hurt and kind of got worn down there at the end," said Jesuit head coach Gary Pasqua.

The Rebels close their season against Cooper next Friday in Abilene's Shotwell Stadium. Cooper (7-2 overall, 4-1 in District 4-5A) has secured a playoff spot and can still tie for the 4-5A title of San Angelo (6-3, 4-1) can beat No. 3 Permian (7-1, 5-0). A loss would put Lee (2-3 in district) in fifth place to end the season.

UH wins despite nine turnovers

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Lamar Smith ran for three touchdowns and Jamie Mouton scored on a 78-yard punt return for the go-ahead points, as Houston overcame nine turnovers and another slow start for a 49-46 victory over Texas Christian Saturday night.

Houston (3-4, 1-3), which fell behind Texas 28-0 a week ago before losing 45-38, were victimized by their own mistakes early in the game and the Horned Frogs jumped to a 21-7 lead early in the second quarter.

Klingler, despite throwing five interceptions, rallied the Cougars to a 49-38 lead with 5:20 to play, but Lenoy Jones scooped up a Lamar Smith fumble and returned it 30 yards for a touchdown, giving Houston one last scare with 2:40 left in the game.

After falling behind 21-7, Houston narrowed the game to 21-14 at the half and took the lead for the first time in the third period on Lamar Smith's third touchdown, a 29-yard run, and Jimmy Klinlger's 14-yard touchdown pass to Ron Peter with 9:29 to go in the third quarter.

Klingler, the co-starter with injured Donald Douglas, played the entire game. The Cougars also lost five fumbles.

TCU (1-6-1, 0-3) rallied again before succumbing to the error-prone Cougars.

They tied it at 28-28 on Leon Clay's 12-yard touchdown pass to Jimmy Oliver and went ahead on Curtis Modkins' 55-yard run.

The Cougars tied it with 19 seconds left in the third period on Klinger's 24-yard touchdown pass to Sherman Smith.

Then, early in the fourth quarter, Mouton returned a punt up the middle, cut to his right and outran punter Kevin Cordsman to the end zone, goose-stepping the final few yards.

Klingler added an 11-yard touchdown pass to Sherman Smith with 5:20 to play.

TCU started taking advantage of Klingler's wildness on his fourth pass of the game when Tony Rand stepped in front of a sideline pass and ran 30 yards for a touchdown.

Houston responded with the first of two touchdown runs by Lamar Smith for a 7-7 tie but then the Horned Frog took a 21-7 lead on a 10-yard return with a blocked punt by Brashant Carter and a one-yard dive by John Oglesby with 16:08 gone in the game.

TECH: UT awaits showdown with Aggies passes. The two-point lead for Texas was early in the fourth quarter and plenty of time remained for the Red Raiders to pull the stinging upset.

But Texas always seemed to answer. At 22-20, running back Adrian Walker broke loose for a 70-yard run to set up a one-yard Phil Brown touchdown in the third quarter.

At 29-27, Texas answered with a 41-yard pass from quarterback Peter Gardere to Mike Adams to set up a Gardere two-yard TD run and a two-point conversion on Gardere's pass to Darrick Duke. That made it 37-27 Texas with 10:09 left and Tech was never the same, even though Clemmons managed to hit Hill for one more TD.

"This was a gut-wrencher. It really hurts you," said Tech coach Spike Dykes, who saw his team all but eliminated from the SWC title chase as the Red Raiders fell to 3-5 on the year and 2-2 in SWC play. "Gardere kept pulling rabbits out of hats. When we did something good, he did something better when they called his name."

Gardere, however, said, "The Tech defense gave us the running game and that set everything else up. Our offensive line won this one."

Tech had two excellent opportunities to make something big happen when the leaky Red Raider defense stopped Texas on fourth down plays twice with Texas leading 29-20, but Tech cashed in only once, always seeming to leave Texas with a small lead.

With a 37-27 margin, Tech's Jon Davis missed a 44-yard field goal with 8:24 left in the game and Texas answered with a long drive that ended on an 11-yard TD run by Gardere for a 44-27 margin. The saga ended there even though Tech would score again.

The Texas offense seems to be able to do whatever it wants when the chips are down. Walker had 155 yards rushing and Gardere passed for 212 yards.

The loss ruined another brilliant performance by Hill, who caught 10 passes for 151 yards and three touchdowns to break the 27-year Texas Tech reception record of 107 held by Donnie Anderson. Hill now has 114 catches. He also tied Rodney Blackshear's single season TD mark of nine TD catches.

"The records were the furthest thing from my mind," Hill said. "Mistakes killed us today and I dropped a few passes myself. We tried not to think about Robert being hurt and tried to give Jason some confidence early. Jason did a good job. This one hurts, but maybe I'll be able to look at the record thing later, after the season."

Clemmons, pressed into spotlight action by Hall's injury last week against SMU, passed for 327 yards.

Tech led 7-3 on an 80-yard first quarter drive after Texas' Scott Szeredy was good on one of two field goal tries before Tech ever ran an offensive play. Szeredy came back to narrow the margin to 7-6 with a 40-yard field goal and the Texas defense got a TD when Anthony Curl picked up a Tech fumble for a 13-yard score and a 13-7 lead. Texas never trailed again.

Davis hit a 41-yard field goal, the longest of his college career in the second quarter.

Texas still has three games left before its Nov. 26 meeting with Texas A&M. But Saturday's win almost insures that the contest will be for the Cotton Bowl. Texas fans are wondering, however, how much they can take of this before they get to the Aggies.

Miami, Washington continue unbeaten paces

Associated Press

MIAMI — Who's No. 1? In the Heisman Trophy race, it may be Gino Torretta.

The senior completed 28 of 40 passes for 363 yards and three touchdowns Saturday, leading the top-ranked Miami Hurricanes past West Virginia, 35-23.

To underscore the significance of the performance, Lamar Thomas struck a Heisman pose at the goal line after catching Torretta's final touchdown pass with 6:58 left for a 35-3 lead.

In the final 3:40, West Virginia's Darren Studstill threw three touchdown passes, the first two against Miami reserves.

The Hurricanes (8-0) extended the nation's longest winning streak to 26 games and earned their 50th consecutive victory at the Orange Bowl. Miami held a one-point lead in last week's rankings over No. 2 Washington, which routed No. 15 Stanford 41-7 on Saturday.

West Virginia (3-3-2) is mired in a four-game winless streak, its longest since 1986.

Torretta, sharp in recent weeks after struggling against Florida State and Penn State, completed 13 consecutive passes before Horace Copeland dropped a bomb that likely would have gone for a 64-yard touchdown.

Torretta increased his touchdown total for the season to 16 with throws covering 2 and 22 yards to Thomas and 9 yards to Kevin Williams.

No. 2 Washington 41, No. 15 Stanford 7

SEATTLE — A week after losing the No. 1 ranking, the Washington Huskies played their best game of the year Saturday.

Mark Brunell threw two touchdown passes and ran for another, James Clifford scored on a 42-yard interception return and second-ranked Washington got seven sacks in a rout of No. 15 Stanford.

The victory over Bill Walsh's team was Washington's 22nd in a row overall and ninth straight over Stanford (6-3, 3-2 Pac-10). The Huskies (8-0, 5-0) hope the win will impress voters who dropped the Huskies below Miami in last week's Associated Press poll.

Brunell scrambled to set up both TD passes — a 3-yarder to Leif Johnson in the first quarter and a 40-yarder to freshman Jason Shelley in the third period. He also scored on a 1-yard sneak that put Washington ahead for good 14-7 early in the second quarter on a cold, rainy day at Husky Stadium.

Brunell, starting his third game since replacing Billy Joe Hobert as the Huskies' No. 1 quarterback, completed 12 of 19 passes for 161 yards with two interceptions. Hobert capped the Huskies' scoring with a 50-yard TD run with 11:11 left in the game.

Top 10

Washington shredded a nationally ranked Stanford defense that was giving up only 15 points and 245 yards per game. The Huskies gained 467 yards and had their highest-scoring output of the season, topping their 35 points against California.

Washington held Stanford to 42 yards rushing, limiting star runner Glyn Milburn to 39 on 10 carries. The Huskies also held the Cardinal 16 points under their scoring average and knocked starting quarterback Steve Stenstrom out of the game in the second quarter.

No. 3 Michigan 24, Purdue 17

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — No. 3 Michigan trailed at halftime for the first time this season, but came back with two quick touchdowns to defeat Purdue and record its 18th consective Big Ten win.

The Boilermakers led 17-7 at halftime — the biggest deficit faced by a Michigan team since the 1989 Rose Bowl when they trailed Southern Cal 14-3.

But the Wolverines (7-0-1, 5-0 Big Ten) responded with a 92-yard, 10-play touchdown drive following the second-half kickoff with Elvis Grbac passing 10 yards to tight end Tony McGee for the score.

Purdue (3-5, 2-3) was stopped on three plays, and following a punt, Michigan blended the running of Jesse Johnson with two Grbac completions to move for the go-ahead score on a 76-yard, nine-play drive. Johnson, who picked up 49 yards going right on the drive's second play, plunged up the middle for the final three yards.

Michigan then caught Purdue napping, kicking the ball short. Dwayne Ware fell on the football to give Michigan the ball at the 20 and the Wolverines moved to the 5-yard line before settling for a 25-yard field goal by Pete Elezovic.

No. 6 Florida State 13, No. 23 Virginia 3

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Charlie Ward made two big plays in an otherwise mediocre performance and No. 6 Florida State clinched the Atlantic Coast Conference title with a victory over 23rd-ranked Virginia.

Ward completed just 11 of 29 passes for 128 yards and lost a pair of fourth-quarter fumbles, one of which came on the Virginia 1-yard line. But he threw for one score and scrambled for another, giving the Seminoles all the points they needed on a cold, rainy night that slowed the ACC's two highest-scoring teams.

League rookie Florida State (7-1, 7-0 ACC) won the 300th game in the school's history and the 150th in Bobby Bowden's coaching career.

The Seminoles, whose victory came in front of scouts from the Orange, Cotton and Sugar bowls, finish their league schedule next Saturday at home against Maryland. Every other ACC team has at least two losses.

Virginia (6-3, 4-3) lost its third consecutive ACC contest. The Cavaliers got another subpar outing from quarterback Bobby Goodman, who threw 19 touchdown passes in Virginia's first six games but has just one in the last three. Goodman had only 49 yards on 7-of-19 passing and was intercepted twice.

No. 20 Florida 26, No. 7 Georgia 24

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Shane Matthews threw for 301 yards and two touchdowns Saturday and Florida held Garrison Hearst to 41 yards rushing as the No. 20 Gators beat Georgia, keeping alive their hopes of repeating as Southeastern Conference champions.

The triumph before a crowd of 82,429 was the fourth in a row for Florida (5-2, 4-2), which lost two of its first three games and quickly fell behind in the SEC's Eastern Division.

Georgia (7-2, 5-2) could have clinched the East title with a victory in the annual neutral-site meeting at the Gator Bowl. It now finds itself tied with Florida in the loss column with one conference game remaining.

Florida, which built an early 16-point lead and then ran out the clock after Georgia pulled to within two, has two SEC games left. If the Gators and Bulldogs finish with the same league record, Florida would win the division title and a berth in the first SEC championship game.

Matthews threw touchdown passes of 9 yards to Jack Jackson and 14 yards to Willie Jackson and completed 28 of 45 attempts to finish with the 13th 300-yard game of his career.

No. 8 Nebraska 52, No. 8 Colorado 7

LINCOLN, Neb. — Calvin Jones ran for three first-half touchdowns and freshman quarterback Tommie Frazier threw two second-half touchdown passes to lead Nebraska past Colorado, putting to rest the label that the Cornhuskers can't win a big game.

In beating a team with which it shared the No. 8 national ranking, Nebraska (6-1, 3-0 Big Eight) beat a top 10 team for the first time since a 7-3 victory over Oklahoma in 1988. Since then, the Cornhuskers had lost seven in a row.

Colorado (6-1-1, 2-1-1) had three passes intercepted, lost a fumble and managed only 144 yards as its 25-game Big Eight unbeaten streak ended.

Jones, who had 21 carries for 101 yards, scored on runs of 3, 47 and 1 yards, the latter set up by a 16-yard "fumblerooski" run by 305-pound guard Will Shields to the Colorado 5.

Nebraska kept the pressure on Colorado freshman quarterback Koy Detmer and kept the Buffaloes out of Cornhuskers territory until the final six minutes of the half. That's when the Buffaloes went to a no-huddle offense and marched in for James Hill's 3-yard touchdown run.

Colorado's next possession ended when linebacker Travis Hill stripped Detmer of the ball and carried it to the Colorado 27, setting the stage for the TD that provided a 17-point halftime edge.

No. 10 Notre Dame 38, Navy 7

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Navy rolled the dice early against No. 10 Notre Dame, and the Middies paid when the numbers came up wrong.

Reggie Brooks ran for a touchdown and caught one of Rick Mirer's two scoring passes in a 24-point second quarter as Notre Dame defeated winless Navy for their 29th consecutive victories over the Midshipmen.

The Fighting Irish (6-1-1) scored on five of their six possessions, converted 10 of 12 third-down plays and piled up 315 yards in offense in building a 31-0 halftime lead.

Navy (0-7) didn't get on the scoreboard until Jason Van Matre hit Tom Pritchard on a 22-yard TD pass with 4:55 to play. The score, which allowed the Middies to avoid their fourth shutout of the season, came one play after defensive lineman Dave Shaw intercepted Kevin McDougal's screen pass.

The Middies, who came into the game as 38-point underdogs, tried to make something happen on the opening series of the game. With fourth and inches at its own 49, coach George Chaump elected to go for the first down.

Fullback Cleavon Smith got the call on a blast up the middle out of the wishbone but lost inches as tackle Bryant Young plugged the hole.

Notre Dame took over and eight plays later went ahead as Jeff Burris, a safety who plays tailback in goal line formations, scored from 5 yards out for his third touchdown of the year. Mirer kept the drive alive with an 18-yard pass to Lake Dawson on third and 10 from the Navy 49.

After being held on their next series, Mirer and company closed out the half with four scores, the last three coming on touchdowns.

Penn State, Tennessee victims of stunning upsets

Associated Press

PROVO, Utah — Ryan Hancock threw for three second-quarter touchdowns and BYU's unheralded running game was in high gear as the Cougars stunned 14th-ranked Penn State, 30-17.

While Hancock hit 13 of 19 passes for 220 yards, BYU's runners, averaging just 123 yards a game, racked up 241 yards against the Nittany Lions, led by Kalin Hall's 117 yards on 22 carries.

BYU's defense also sparkled, twice turning back Penn State drives inside their 10 as the Cougars improved to 5-4.

Kerry Collins, making his second start as quarterback, connected on 28 of 54 passes for 317 yards and a touchdown for the Lions (6-3).

Penn State started strong, driving to the BYU 14 midway through the first quarter on Collins' passes of 14, 16 and 15 yards to Troy Drayton. Then came the Cougars' blitz.

Looking for a pass into the end zone on second down, Collins was swamped for an 8-yard loss by BYU linebackers Shad Hansen and Todd Herget. An incomplete pass on the next play forced Penn State to settle for V.J. Muscillo's 39-yard field goal.

S. Carolina 24, No. 16 Tennessee 23

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Walk-on linebacker Hank Campbell stopped James Stewart on a 2-point conversion with 1:28 remaining to help South Carolina preserve a shocking victory over No. 16 Tennessee.

The Volunteers (5-3, 3-3 Southeastern Conference) pulled within one when Mose Phillips took a short pass from Heath Shuler and ran through eight would-be tacklers for a 39-yard touchdown.

Shuler's pass for the 2-point conversion failed when Campbell, a two-time state high school wrestling champion, smacked Stewart down short of the end zone.

The Gamecocks (3-5, 3-4) have now won three straight since the players voted earlier this month to ask coach Sparky Woods to quit. Tennessee, a 14-point favorite, lost its third straight.

The Gamecocks grabbed a 24-17 lead when freshman Steve Taneyhill hit Toby Cates with a 3-yard TD toss with 6:15 left. Cates, with Steve Session hanging on, was just able to stretch into the end zone to cap the 79-yard drive that took 6½ minutes.

It was the third long march for the Gamecocks, who also went 90 and 80 yards for scores in taking a 14-10 halftime lead.

Tennessee, meanwhile, failed to score after driving to the Gamecocks 19 on its first possession and to the 10 with 3:25 left in the game. It was the first time in 25 opportunities this season that the Volunteers had failed to score from inside the 20.

Shuler ran 15 yards untouched to give the Volunteers a 17-14 lead with 7:02 left in the third period. But South Carolina tied it on Marty Simpson's 38-yard field goal on the first play of the fourth period. The kick was set up when Shuler fumbled after being hit by Norman Greene and Eric Brown recovered at the Volunteers 31.

South Carolina grabbed a 7-0 lead when Taneyhill hooked up with wide-open Mike Reddick for a 22-yard TD pass with 2:25 left in the first period to cap a 90-yard drive, the Gamecocks' longest this year.

After Simpson missed a 44-yard field goal, John Becksvoort kicked a 31-yarder with 9:22 left in the half to cut the lead to 7-3.

Phillips' 2-yard run with 5:21 to go gave the Volunteers their lone first-half lead. The Gamecocks responded with a nine-play, 80-yard march capped by Brandon Bennett's 1-yard run with 1:28 left.

Bennett rushed for 122 yards.

Becksvoort missed a 47-yard field goal on the last play of the half. He also missed a 37-yarder on the Vols' first possession.

No. 11 Boston College 45, Temple 6

BOSTON — Chuckie Dukes rushed for 184 yards and three touchdowns and Boston College held Temple to 141 yards.

Dukes, who gained more than 100 yards for the seventh straight game, scored on runs of 70, 43 and 1 yards as he brought his season total to 1,024 yards on 172 carries.

Dwight Shirley added a 5-yard touchdown run, Justice Smith had a 1-yard scoring run and Glenn Foley threw a 14-yard touchdown pass to Clarence Cannon for Boston College (7-0-1). David Gordon had a 28-yard field goal for the Eagles.

Temple (1-7) scored on Lew Lawhorn's 94-yard return of the second-half kickoff, the first points Boston College had given up at home since early September. The Owls are 0-4 in the Big East, while the Eagles are 2-0-1 in conference play.

With officials from the Fiesta, Peach, Hancock and Hall of Fame bowls watching, Boston College manhandled the Owls in a game that had several fights late in the second quarter.

It was the first game at home for the Eagles since late September. In its previous three games before hitting the road, Boston College had shut out Northwestern, Navy and Michigan State. It began the season with a 37-20 home defeat of Rutgers.

No. 12 Syracuse 41, Pittsburgh 10

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Returns by Qadry Ismail and Shelby Hill set up two early scores and the Syracuse defense held the nation's second-most productive offense in check as the 12th-ranked Orangemen rolled over Pittsburgh.

Syracuse (7-1) continued its dominance of Big East opponents, winning its fourth straight league game this season and ninth since the conference was established last year. Pitt fell to 3-6 overall and 1-3 in the Big East by losing for the fourth time in five games.

The game was billed as a showdown between two of the nation's top quarterbacks, but Syracuse quarterback Marvin Graves won the faceoff with the Panthers' Alex Van Pelt by default when Pitt's quarterback was forced out of the game with an injury. With 8½ minutes left in the second quarter, Van Pelt left after being sacked by linebackers Glen Young and Garland Hawkins.

Van Pelt, seventh nationally in passing efficiency and the total offense leader at 312 yards a game, completed just four of nine passes for 49 yards. He was intercepted once. The Panthers were averaging 28 points and 482 yards a game.

Graves, the top-ranked quarterback in passing efficiency, completed 12 of 19 passes for 158 yards before sitting out the final quarter. He threw for one touchdown and ran 7 yards for another.

No. 18 Kansas 26, Oklahoma State 18

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Dan Eichloff kicked four field goals and set a school record for consecutive extra points as No. 18 Kansas beat Oklahoma State, its first victory over the Cowboys at home in 24 years.

Chip Hilleary, who last week became the second Big Eight quarterback ever to pass for 4,000 yards and run for 1,000, gave Kansas (7-1, 4-0 Big Eight) a 7-0 lead on the sixth play of the game with a 37-yard run.

Eichloff, an all-Big Eight selection last year as a sophomore, connected from 28 yards in the first quarter, 43 in the second and 23 and 34 in the fourth as Kansas continued its best start since its last Big Eight championship season of 1968.

Eichloff's extra point following Maurice Douglas' 1-yard touchdown run in the third period was his 54th straight, breaking a nine-year-old school record. Eichloff has hit 14 of 16 field goal attempts this year. His only two misses were blocked.

Oklahoma State (4-4, 2-2) missed three scoring opportunities in the first half and got a 47-yard field goal in the third period from Lawson Vaughn, who missed earlier from 38 and 42. On fourth and five from the 8 with less than three minutes left in the game, Gary Porter hit Shannon Culver with a touchdown pass.

No. 13 Southern Cal 23, Arizona St. 13

TEMPE, Ariz. — Curtis Conway scored the decisive touchdown on a 95-yard kickoff return as No. 13 Southern Cal took over sole possession of second place in the Pacific 10 Conference.

Conway, who scored the game's first TD on a 31-yard reception, broke loose after Mike Richey's 46-yard field goal cut the Trojans' margin to 14-10 late in the third quarter.

It took the 6-foot-2, 180-pound sprinter 16 seconds to pick up a rolling ball, move to the left sideline, fake out a tackler and veer toward the right sideline for the score.

The Trojans (5-1-1, 4-1 Pac-10) won their fourth straight and snapped a three-game win streak by Arizona State (4-4, 2-3).

No. 17 Arizona 30, NMex St. 0

TUCSON, Ariz. — No. 17 Arizona's offense and opportunistic defense combined to give New Mexico State a Halloween hobbling.

Quarterback George Malauulu threw for one touchdown and ran for another, and Charles Levy added two more on 1- and 15-yard runs as the Wildcats (5-2-1) showed a crisp, balanced offensive attack.

Arizona totaled a season-high 464 yards, rushing for 327 and passing for another 137, even though most of the Wildcats' 11 penalties, totaling 90 yards, came on offense.

Oregon 34, No. 19 Washington St. 17

PULLMAN, Wash. — Danny O'Neil hit Sean Burwell for two second-half touchdowns as Oregon upset No. 19 Washington State.

The Ducks (4-4, 2-3 Pac-10) forced Washington State (6-2, 3-2) to operate from deep in its own territory much of the game, and limited Drew Bledsoe to 165 passing yards, well below his 276-yard average.

Oregon also sacked Bledsoe six times for 48 yards and intercepted two of his passes to set up Ducks scores.

Burwell caught touchdown passes of 3 and 5 yards after halftime and combined with Ricky Whittle and Juan Shedrick to pound out 154 rushing yards. Burwell had 55 yards on 13 carries to complement the passing of O'Neil, who hit 11 of 19 attempts for 147 yards.

Tommy Thompson kicked field goals of 38, 32 and 46 yards as Oregon built a 9-3 halftime lead, then added a 34-yarder in the second half.

Chad Cota picked off a pass from Bledsoe at the Washington State 40 and returned it 39 yards before fumbling on the 1. Eric Castle fell on it in the end zone to put the Ducks up 31-3 with 10 minutes remaining in the game.

Thompson's first field goal was set up by Herman O'Berry's interception at the Washington State 38. Thompson added a 32-yarder with 2:17 remaining in the quarter after Ronnie Harris's 20-yard punt return to the Washington State 27.

Oilers, Steelers knock heads in AFC battle

Associated Press

When the Steelers beat the Oilers 29-24 on opening day, it was considered a fluke. After Pittsburgh's 27-3 demolition of Kansas City at Arrowhead last Sunday, the question about this one is why Houston opened as a favorite.

"If they didn't get respect after that game, there sure won't be a lack of it when we play them," says Houston's Lee Williams. "They dominated the Chiefs pretty good."

The key is a defense tied with Philadelphia for best in the league with 77 points allowed. The leaders are defensive backs Rod Woodson and Carnell Lake and linebacker Greg Lloyd, finally being recognized as one of the NFL's best.

"I remember when people were saying the Pittsburgh Steelers wouldn't win two games," says nose tackle Garry Howe, with the enthusiasm typical of the new Bill Cowher regime. "When we play now, the Pittsburgh Steelers expect to win."

Houston has been helped by Webster Slaughter, signed three weeks ago. But Warren Moon is never happy to see Pittsburgh — he threw five interceptions there last season and five against the Stelers opening day.

Minnesota (5-2)
at Chicago (4-3)
(Monday night)

Rematch No. 3, with the most memorable first game — when the Vikings came back from a 20-0 fourth-quarter deficit. That was when Mike Ditka threw a fit at Jim Harbaugh for calling an automatic on the play that started the comeback —Todd Scott's interception for a touchdown.

NFL This Week

Since then the Bears have won two straight although Ditka hasn't mellowed much — now he's angry at the media, maybe because Harbaugh has been close to perfect in wins over Tampa Bay and Green Bay.

The Vikings aren't a Bay team and this one is crucial for Chicago, which would trail by two games plus a tiebreaker if it loses again to Minnesota, which played impressively last week in a 15-13 loss to Washington.

"I know it's only halfway through the season," says Minnesota coach Dennis Green. "But if we get this one, they have to make up three games on us. That's not easy in this league."

Indianapolis (4-3)
at San Diego (3-4)

When was the last time both these teams had legitimate shots at the playoffs midway through the season? When Dan Fouts and Bert Jones were playing quarterback, the Colts were in Baltimore and Ted Marchibroda was the coach.

Oh yes, Marchibroda is the coach again, racing up and down the sideline cheerleading as Steve Emtman clinched last Sunday's upset win over Miami with a 90-yard interception return. But Emtman's first-round running mate, linebacker Quentin Coryatt, broke his wrist in that game and is out for a while.

Bobby Ross' Chargers are charging, with three straight wins following an 0-4 start, including a 34-14 victory in Indianapolis two weeks ago. Stan Humphries threw for 359 yards in a 24-21 win over Denver last week and Gill Byrd and Tony Blaylock short-circuited another John Elway comeback.

New York Giants (3-4)
at Washington (5-2)

Now Ray Handley's complaining about crowds at Giants Stadium, who changed their tune in his team's 23-10 win over Seattle last week — they sang "Ray must go" to the tune of the "Tomahawk Chop."

He probably won't get that at RFK, where the fans just make noise, lots of its.

The Redskins will be a little healthier this week — Joe Jacoby and Andre Collins, who both missed most of the Minnesota game, will be back. But the party line comes from Charles Mann.

"It's the Giants," he says. "We have to remember it's the Giants. Even when they're down, they're up against us."

San Francisco (6-1)
at Phoenix (1-6)

Speaking of party lines ...

"As we look at this film of Phoenix, we'll see that they are a much more formidable team than what their record might indicate," George Seifert says of the Cards, whose defense had its finest three hours in a 7-3 loss in Philadelphia. Its offense? It couldn't get in on six shots from the Eagles' 1-yard-line.

Seifert does have reason to be wary.

Four years ago, the 49ers went to Phoenix, took a 23-0 lead and lost 24-23. On the other hand, they won the Super Bowl that season.

One thing to watch: Jerry Rice is three away from Steve Largent's record of 100 career touchdown catches and the way the Cardinals' defense played before Philadelphia ...

New England (0-7)
at Buffalo (5-2)

Marv Levy is almost as upset with his fans as Ray Handley is with his. He's giving them reason — since their 41-7 rout of New England a month ago, the Bills have lost to the Dolphins and Raiders and were taken into the the final 51 seconds by the 1-6 Jets Monday night.

At leat one Patriot has an interesting approach to the team's plight.

If you linger on this, you could go 0-16," says cornerback David Pool said. "I feel like we can run a string of seven or eight games in a row, go 8-8 and maybe make the playoffs. Who knows with the division the way it is. It's not out of the picture."

Oh.

Miami (6-1)
at New York Jets (1-6)

Did the Colts take the pressure off the Dolphins by ending their unbeaten string last week? Maybe, if it relaxes the team that most people expected to start 9-0 before hitting the wall in its schedule.

One problem for the Dolphins is reverting to old habits — relying on Dan Marino and ignoring the running game. But as guard Keith Sims puts it: "You never question yourself when you're winning. Everybody questions it when you lose."

The Jets may go back to Ken O'Brien, who's had some memorable shootouts with Marino (51-45, 37-31, 44-30. 38-34. 40-33. 41-23). Browning Nagle fell victim to Bruce Smith's big foot Monday night.

Tampa Bay (3-4)
at New Orleans (5-2)

The Bucs have now lost three straight, so while they're retaining their orange pants, they're dispensing with Vinny Testaverde — for the time being. His replacement is Steve DeBerg, who broke in Testaverde five years ago after caddying for Joe Montana, John Elway, Steve Young and ...

Did anyone say Sammy Baugh?

Did anyone outside New Orleans even notice that the Saints were off last week?

They're 55-31 since 1987, but hardly a marquee team, just one that's out there each week, winning 13-7 and making the playoffs most years. Maybe that's what defense does, but Bobby Hebert had the best game of his career just before the break — except that it was against Phoenix.

Green Bay (2-5) at Detroit (2-5)

"We still have a chance to do something," Rodney Peete says of the Lions' season following its 38-7 win in Tampa. Maybe, but they'll have to do it without center Kevin Glover, who was injured last week and leaves another hole in the middle of the decimated offensive line.

The Packers are clearly one of those teams that's being built from the bottom up by Mike Holmgren. Right now, they've bottomed out.

L.A. Rams (3-4) at Atlanta (2-5)

During the Falcons' 56-17 loss in San Francisco two weeks ago, Jerry Glanville had a piece of metal called "the California trophy" at the end of the Falcons' bench. He ought to retire it quickly before he gives another California team more incentive.

Chuck Knox has quietly done an excellent job rejuvenating the Rams (as he does with every team he moves to). Even Jim Everett is starting to look again like the quarterback of the '90s rather than the bust of the '90s.

Cleveland (4-3)
at Cincinnati (2-5)

The Browns have quietly moved into contention for a playoff spot despite the loss of two quarterbacks in two weeks. That's because the defense allowed its first touchdowns in a month last week in a last-minute 19-17 win over New England.

But that victory margin also showed that Cleveland has a way to go. So does Cincinnati, which has crashed to earth after two straight victories and now has Dave Shula insisting they'll play out the season.

COWBOYS: Cunningham 8-0 against Dallas

(From 1B)

Center Mark Stepnoski said the Eagles are the toughest team to block he's ever seen.

"They've got the talent and they've got the coaching in Bud Carson," Stepnoski said. "They are great at getting off their blocks. You have to pass on them to make the running game go and that's not easy to do either. I can't think of anybody any better than they are. They're the most difficult to block for sure."

Johnson said the Cowboys (6-1) will have to be effective running against the Eagles to beat them Sunday.

"We've got to run the ball some but we've got to understand we're not going to be getting nine and 10 yards runs but three and four yards runs," Johnson said. "It will be tough but we've got to do it."

The Cowboys and Eagles tangle at 3 p.m. in Texas Stadium which has been sold out for a month as fans eagerly await the rematch. Dallas was a field goal favorite.

Eagles quarterback Randall Cunningham is 8-0 against the Cowboys while Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman has never defeated the Eagles. He's 0-6 against them and was intercepted three times in the earlier this year.

"It's hard to put a finger on why Randall has such success against the Cowboys," said Philadelphia coach Rich Kotite. "I'm just glad he does. "

The minus-75 yards was school defensive record for the Texans.

West Texas (1-7) scored its only touchdown on a 71-yard interception return by Duane Joubert.

Ugly putter lifts Azinger again

Associated Press

PINEHURST, N.C. — Paul Azinger faced a tough call.

Does he play the Ping or the Thing in the third round of the season-ending Tour Championship?

PGA

"The Thing was out of the lineup for a while this morning, but at the last minute I decided to go with it," Azinger said Saturday.

The results were mixed, but the ugly stick, which Azinger likened to a fishing lure, was efficient enough to open up a three-shot lead going into Sunday's final round of the $2 million tournament that concludes the official portion of the PGA Tour's schedule for the year.

"I'll probably go with it again tomorrow," Azinger said after a solid, 2-under-par 69 on the famed No. 2 course at Pinehurst.

But, still concerned with less-than-spectacular putting, he's far from certain he will continue to use the cigar-shaped instrument borrowed from his next-door neighbor last week.

"I'm not married to it," Azinger said.

"I've had four or five three-putts this week. I'm not putting bad, but I'm not putting great," he said.

And that's the problem as Azinger attempts to extend to six years the tour's longest current streak of at least one victory a season.

He has to win this one to do it.

"I don't think I've ever won a tournament putting mediocre. I don't think I've ever been in contention when I was just putting mediocre," he said.

And a three-stroke advantage at 205, 8-under par, against John Huston is far from secure, Azinger said.

"This is the hardest golf course I've ever played. Three strokes can go like that," he said.

And Huston, winner of the Walt Disney World a couple of weeks ago, agreed.

"On a course like this, you can play pretty good and still get on a bogey streak. It's not hard to shoot 74 or 75," Huston said after a round of 70.

Dan Forsman held third alone at 210, five shots off the pace, after a

The group at 211 included Corey Pavin, Lee Janzen, Jay Haas and South African David Frost. Pavin moved up with 69, Janzen shot 72, Haas 73 and Frost 74.

While those leaders were jockeying for position in the final round of the chase for a $360,000 first prize, Fred Couples virtually assured himself of the titles in such season-long races as the PGA Player of the Year, the Vardon Trophy (for low scoring average) and the money-winning title.

Couples, who led all three races coming into this concluding event, put an eagle-birdie-birdie finish on a round of 66 — by three strokes the best of the chilly, cloudy, windy day.

His would-be pursuers in the races for those titles failed to make a move and remained in a group with Couples well back in the field of only the top 30 money-winners of the year.

None appeared to have a chance of the victory they would need to overtake Couples in the various standings.

Stockton takes second round Kaanapali lead

KAANAPALI, Hawaii (AP) — Dave Stockton birdied four of the first six holes Saturday en route to a 7-under-par 64 for a 3-shot lead after two rounds of the $500,000 Kaanapali Classic.

Stockton started the day two shots behind after opening with a 67, but his two-round total of 11-under 131 put him three strokes ahead of Tommy Aaron (67-67), Dale Douglass (68-66) and Mike Hill (69-65), all at 134. Dick Hendrickson (70-65), Al Geiberger (69-66), George Archer (66-69) and Dick Goetz (69-66) are four back at 135.

Seniors

Stockton, who turns 51 on Monday, is playing his first full year on the Senior PGA Tour and is looking for his second victory. He trailed first-round leader Jim Albus by two shots at the start of Saturday's round, but his early birdie binge vaulted him into the lead after five holes.

He went on another tear on the back side, sinking birdies on Nos. 10-12. He gave a stroke back with a bogey at No. 14, but countered with birdies at the 15th and 17th holes before stumbling again with a bogey at No. 18.

For most of the second round, windless muggy conditions prevailed at the par-71 Kaanapali Resort North Course, making sub-par scores the order of the day. Stockton expects more of the same for Sunday's final round.

"There's no way you can rest on your laurels out here," said Stockton. "I've got to go out there and make more birdies. If I can make five or six birdies out there, I should be fine."

START-UP AMERICA!

Contrary to popular opinion, America has the oil and gas resources that the United States needs. Unfortunately, legislators have introduced a barrage of taxes, laws and regulations that have the men and women of the American oil and gas industry tied down with red tape. This has seriously impaired the United States' Oil and Gas Industry from effectively drilling and producing America's own oil and gas reserves. Contrary to popular opinion, this really hurts the American economy and this has an adverse financial effect right down to our families' financial future security.

Certain special interest groups are damaging the United States Oil and Gas Industry by receiving tens of millions of dollars monthly to effectively inhibit domestic oil and gas development. They do this under the guise that they're going to save something..."Save This, Save That." Contrary to popular opinion, they are saving very little of practical significance. They have helped cause our country to lose over 500,000 jobs in the Oil and Gas Industry alone, over the last ten years. Additionally, they have adversely impacted the timber, coal, and many other industries that have been losing jobs as a result of their lobbying and propaganda activities. Fifty billion dollars leaves this country in exchange for foreign oil every year. That represents fifty percent of the United States annual trade deficit. Let's START-UP AMERICA, and save the jobs, save the $50 billion dollars. This money could be circulating in the United States' economy rather than circulating in some foreign country's economy. I know those oil exporting countries need the money, but I think the United States would like to save that $50 billion and save the jobs that go with it.

With your help we can educate the public and politicians and let them know that it is okay with the American voters to save jobs, and save the $50 billion dollars annually that we spend for importing foreign oil. Let's let these special interest groups know that we can "save this (jobs), and save that (money)." How do the parents that have lost their jobs, explain to their children why they have to go on welfare, when Mom and Dad both have college degrees from respected schools. After they both worked for various different Oil and Gas companies for seventeen years and both were laid off work... "early retirement," because the U.S. Oil and Gas companies continue to cut back on domestic spending, and focus their exploration resources overseas to escape the barrage of taxes and regulations in the United States. Because the politicians and the public does not know how to institute a fair and responsible environmental transition, all Mom and Dad can say to their children is that there are special interest groups saying that we need to save the environment more than we need to save jobs and the U.S. economy. The children say, "But Mom and Dad, you have always taught us to be respectful of the environment." The parents respond by telling their children that "we have joined forces with a group called START-UP AMERICA, INC. with a program that recognizes that a responsible transition is needed for future enviornmental needs."

The United States of America does not need to import what we already have in abundance. For example, Alaska has approximately 1500 oil wells producing about 25% of our nation's oil. Texas has hundreds of thousands of oil wells producing about 26% of our nation's oil needs. It doesn't take a Sherlock Holmes or James Bond to figure out that if we drill more in the United States that we might not have to export jobs and wealth in exchange for foreign oil and foreign trade deficits. If the American Oil and Gas industry were not so over-taxed and over-regulated, maybe the independent and major oil and gas companies would stop this exodus from the American oil fields to help foreign countries find more oil so that the United States can stop this addiction of exporting wealth in exchange for foreign oil. We have the best oil finders in the world that are willing and able to go back to work in the oilfields of America, so that they can start-up what they do best once again. So START-UP AMERICA, let's export some congressmen and legislators that are not energy friendly. Let's export them right off the hill, instead of exporting American jobs and American wealth. So let's START-UP AMERICA, so that the United States of America can be king of the hill once again.

Finally, the newly-signed energy conservation bill was like giving one book of welfare food stamps to the entire 500,000 oil and gas unemployed men and women to satisfy their hunger and their children's nutritional needs. Unfortunately, some uninformed congressmen and senators didn't see a need or a way to put into law ways and means in which to drill for more oil in the United States, nor did they see a way or means to eliminate overburdening taxes, laws, and regulations that are destroying our domestic exploration industry. We need to find new domestic oil reserves. These certain special interest groups would have us stop all new exploration for oil in our country because they think there is a better way. When will they wake up and realize that it is not a better way to put people in the unemployment line? When will they wake up and realize that it is not a better way to add billions upon billions of dollars to the U.S. trade deficit oil? Oil imports represent approxmately 50% of our annual trade deficit. The people behind START-UP AMERICA will help them understand the need for balancing the U.S. trade deficit and putting Americans back to work. START-UP AMERICA believes that we should immediately create an energy policy aimed at stopping the transfer of American wealth to foreign petroleum exporting countries.

We need a policy that is aimed at a responsible environmental transition to better serve the employment for the people of this country as well as the environment. Tarzan never let go of one vine until he had his hands on another vine, so let's hold on to the Oil and Gas Industry until we have our hands on another way to provide America with its energy needs. It doesn't take a Sherlock Holmes or aJ ames Bond to figure this out. But it does take your help to vote out the problem on November 3rd, and re-elect those who have been fighting for you. The following senators and congressmen are among the few that have left some teeth in the recently signed energy bill. But they had to compromise substantially to get something instead of nothing. It's a good start, but the job must be finished. Americans need to applaud and support those intelligent, hard-working legislators who expended their talents and their considerable efforts to get this bill passed and signed by President George Bush. Specifically, let us acknowledge a few:

DEMOCRATIC	REPUBLICANS
Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (D-Tex.)	Sen. Frank Murkowski (R-Ak.)
Sen. Bennett Johnston (D-La.)	Sen. Ted Stevens (R-Ak.)
Rep. Bill Archer (D-Tex.)	Sen. Don Young (R-Ak.)
Rep. Jake Pickel (D-Tex.)	Sen. Malcolm Wallop (R-Wyo.)
	Sen. David Boring (R-Ok.)
	Sen. Nickels (R-Ok.)

However, this bill simply falls short of America's need for a long-term energy plan. Items such as Alaska National Wildlife Reserve (ANWR) was denied for drilling to help provide more oil and gas jobs for America's financial and energy security. Much-needed tax incentives and reduction of the barrage of regulations, these are only a few of the things certain special interest groups lobbied hard to keep out of the recently signed energy bill. START-UP AMERICA needs your help and your votes so these critical changes can be implemented in the employment friendly and energy friendly congress that Americans will vote in office on November 3rd, 1992. These issues must not be left out on the upcoming political agenda if we want more jobs and more money circulating in the United States economy. We can do this with your help, but unfortunately for those certain special interest groups are going to have to deal with less trade deficit, less taxes, and less regulations, more jobs, and more money circulating in the U.S. economy. Let's send a message to these certain special interest groups that those of us in the Oil and Gas Industry and those of us that understand the need for national energy and economic security are mad as hell and we are not going to take it anymore. START-UP AMERICA extends a piece of advice for the employed certain special interest groups. That advice is this: start producing product if you want a job rather than producing paper. This way you can remain employed.

START-UP AMERICA sends a call to arms to all Americans to help. Please indicate your willingness to rally support by sending a financial contribution, and provide us with your ideas and opinions that may help create change for the betterment of the energy and economic conditions for all Americans.

We look forward to hearing from you. We welcome your financial contributions to the extent you can afford. Just as important, we want to hear from you and learn about your opinions and ideas that could help us in the fight against certain special interest groups and the ignorance that surrounds the American energy issues:

Please make your check payable to START-UP AMERICA, INC. Also include your name and telephone number so that we may keep you informed on how your contributions are helping to stop exporting American wealth and jobs and keep them here at home, with our families. Thank you very much for any help you may provide to help us get this country back on the road to greatness.

Sincerely Yours,

Election picks vital to future

Long after it's over, the 1992 presidential election is likely to be discussed and debated as political analysts and voters attempt to determine what it all means for the future of the United States and our society.

There's no question about this election's importance. Almost everyone is in agreement that the issues facing this nation make that so — sobering domestic problems like jobs and the economy, a changing world outlook in terms of America's leadership role and historical trading advantage, the need for public servants dedicated to the public good.

There's also no question of this being an unusual presidential campaign. Campaigns featuring three viable candidates each professing a different "game plan" aren't common. Each man as president would take the nation down a different road. The one that we have chosen to embrace is that professed by President George Bush. It doesn't offer the radicalism of the plan offered by Independent candidate Ross Perot or the "tell 'em what they want to hear, but not what it costs" appeal of the Democrats' plan as sold by Bill Clinton.

What it does offer is real reform for this nation's government IF voters will also give Bush the new Congress he has asked for, one committed to pulling back spending while holding the line on taxes.

Voters should rest assured that if they want more of the same — high taxes, deficit spending, corruption in Congress, and no real commitment to solving the nation's problems — they should not give Bush that Congress because without that change, neither Bush nor anyone else can bring about the needed new direction.

Of course, the presidential election — while critically important to our future — does not present the only decision to be made by voters. They'll also be asked to decide numerous congressional races, judgeships and county officeholders. The Reporter-Telegram's recommendations in the contested races are listed below.

This is a vital election. If you haven't already done so, youshould go to the polls Tuesday.

Euthanasia issue merits close study

If voters agree to it next month, California will become the first place in the world to sanction in law what some doctors now do privately: assist terminally ill patients in ending their lives. Since the state often has been regarded as a harbinger of national trends, the controversial ballot proposition merits close attention. Depending on what Californians decide, the rest of us may be faced soon with the profound ethical and moral questions raised by the issue of doctor-assisted death.

Still, the prospect of the largest state in the union legalizing euthanasia should send chills down everyone's back. Although the California proposition is more tightly drawn than a similar proposal defeated by Washington state voters last year, it nevertheless poses troubling questions that have not been satisfactorily answered. Can doctors be sure of patients' wishes? Can they accurately predict how much time is left? Should there not be better safeguards to prevent patients from making hasty decisions?

We all are afraid of being kept alive on high-tech machines when there is not hope of meaningful survival. We all fear losing control and dying in a painful, undignified way. But before we take a step as extreme as that proposed in California, we owe it to ourselves to exhaust the alternatives. Surely, more emphasis could be placed on hospices, where the terminally ill could be comforted and where their pain could be controlled. How we ultimately respond to the dying will say a great deal about our own humanity.

Republican factions set for a civil war

WASHINGTON — Like the spotted owl of the GOP, Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, is an endangered species. He and other Republican moderates can hear the chain saws of far-right conservatives cranking up on the eve of what could be the bloodiest ideological battle since Barry Goldwater's 1964 defeat.

Anderson

Republican moderates have been out-organized, out-financed and out-hustled by the ascendant Christian Coalition and other factions of the far right. Someone is about to get booted out of the Republican Party's "big tent" because there isn't room enough for both conservatives and moderates, for pro-life and pro-choice, for "family values" and individuals' rights.

"Let me tell you what I think is going to happen," Leach told us about the post-election GOP. "You're going to have a battle, the most extraordinary, argumentative battle in recent GOP history — and the right-wing is going to be the first out of the box. They're going to say, presuming Bush loses, that Bush lost because he was a mamby-pamby moderate. Virtually all the momentum in the party is on the right."

Who owns the "momentum" is the only question that Leach and Tony Dolan agree on. Dolan served as Ronald Reagan's chief speechwriter, and continues to be an influential voice among conservatives. Ironically, both Leach and Dolan enjoy personal friendships with Bush, and are occasional advisers.

"He (Leach) was lucky to be invited to the Houston convention," Dolan says. "Consulting Jim Leach about the future of the Republican Party is like asking Dr. (Jack) Kevorkian for recommendations about elder care. Whenever the pesto sauce/BMW/blame-America-firsters among the house Democrats needed a Republican to help squelch the Nicaraguan freedom fighters, Jim Leach was front and center."

The great divide separating Dolan and Leach signifies the struggles now stirring beneath the surface. Some fear the political equivalent of an ethnic-cleansing, the kind that not only poisoned Republican politics in the 1960s, but also did the same to the Democrats after Vietnam.

Dolan calls Leach and other pro-choice Republicans "holdovers from the days of Jake Javits and Nelson Rockefeller," echoing the feeling of many conservatives.

These seemingly irreconcilable rifts are reasons why the next chairman of the Republican National Committee is "fundamentally and critically important" to the future of the GOP, and "a very clear signal as to the intent of the party," according to former RNC chairman William Brock, who is credited with having rebuilt the party in the wake of Watergate.

Brock's spadework paved the way for the Reagan Revolution by rebuilding the party apparatus from the ground up, and reconciling warring factions within the GOP.

Other people said to be in contention for the RNC job are William Bennett and former Delaware governor Pete DuPont, who has been actively campaigning for it.

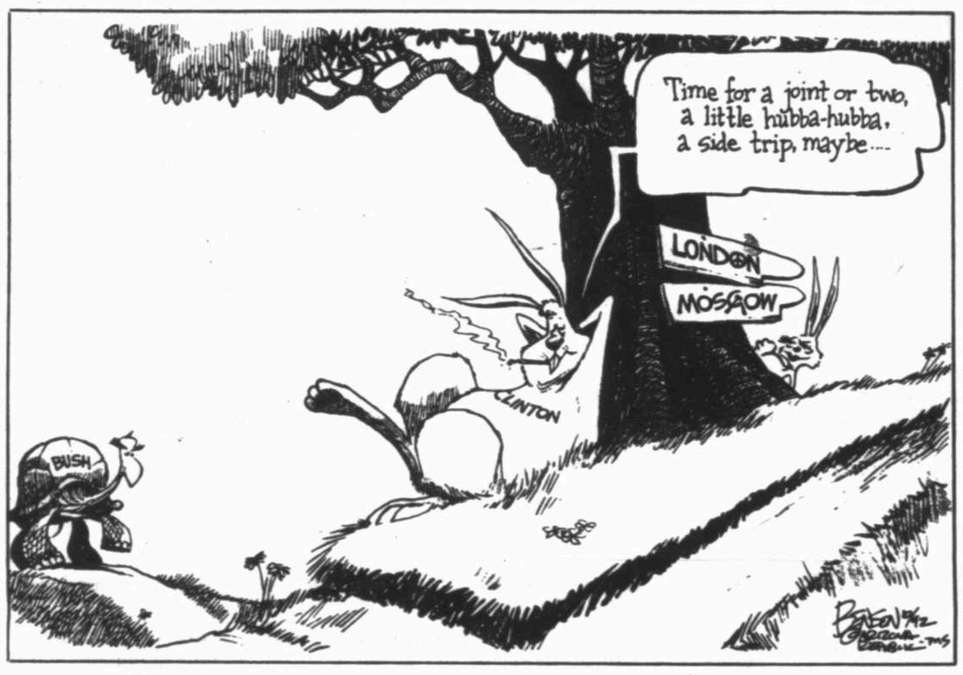

"It has not been something I had thought about until it was raised with me by some House Republicans, who are concerned about the future of the Republican Party," Weber says. "It still is not my plan, but I couldn't say I wouldn't think about it. I've had enough people talk to me in the event that Clinton wins. . . . I think whether the president wins or loses, there are lots of different fissures in the Republican Party that are going to become more apparent, a lot of issues (ranging from taxes to protectionism) that have not been resolved."

"I value my relationships with people I don't agree with, including liberal Republicans like Jim, as well as a lot of Democrats with whom I almost never agree," Weber says. "I think it's always very important to keep in mind that no matter how strongly you feel about something, if you understand that if you have a brain in your head there's at least a chance that you're wrong. And you better try to establish some relationships with people who are equally smart or smarter who don't agree with you. Jim and I have a lot of disagreements but he is a person of extraordinary ability and extraordinary integrity."

Though Leach is still a committed Republican, some of his friends believe he would consider joining a third party if the GOP was commandeered by the Christian Coalition, which already has a strangle-hold on Iowa. Leach himself seemed to leave the door open by speculating that the two-party system might be a relic. He told us:

"What Ross Perot has demonstrated to the world is that the two-party system, on both sides, is breaking down and weak. That is one of the reasons why I think, in the next election, you're very likely to have a multi-party circumstance with three, four, five or six serious candidates for president."

Observer foretells future with President Perot

What specific event triggered the downfall of President Perot? Most historians pinpoint the infamous "roundup of the thousand-dollar suits."

Older Americans may remember that in campaign debate Perot had promised to rid Washington of lobbyists in thousand-dollar suits and alligator shoes. Naturally nobody expected him to do so. Politicians in those days constantly made colorful utterances called "sound bites," which voters regarded as idle campaign guff.

Baker

Then on Jan. 28, scarcely a week after Perot's inauguration, came that astonishing news bulletin: In a two-hour sweep of Capitol Hill, Vice President Stockdale had rounded up nearly 4,000 thousand-dollar suits.

The vice president had driven them, lowing and bellowing, down Capitol Hill to the vastness of Union Station. Too late, Stockdale realized he had $8 million worth of suits packed into the station and had neglected to provide police protection.

The first suit-jackings were scarcely complete when the vice president phoned 911. The police got there fast enough to save maybe 1,500 lobbyists from appearing on the evening news wearing nothing but monogrammed shirts and alligator shoes.

The press sympathized with Stockdale. If President Perot had appointed a cabinet, as every other president had done, the suit-and-alligator-shoes roundup could have been conducted efficiently by an attorney general or a secretary of defense.

But no. The president didn't want a cabinet. Cabinets were part of the system. And he had been elected, he said, to do away with the system. Therefore, no cabinet. Case closed.

He'd had the White House closed, too. The presidency was now situated in Dallas. The Constitution said nothing about presidents having to live in a White House in Washington.

What had President Perot intended to do with the 4,000 lobbyists herded into Union Station? Since sources close to the White House no longer existed, nobody was quite sure. The only source close to the Dallas headquarters was President Perot, and all he said was, "I get under the hood and talk sense to people."

Now, big news: "The Miffed Chief," a new book about Chief Justice Rehnquist, argues that Perot's downfall began eight days before the roundup of the thousand-dollar suits, on Inauguration Day, Jan. 20, 1993.

Larry King's shirt-sleeved performance with Perot produced an irrational animus toward the new president. The result was the historic court ruling that it was unconstitutional to take people to Union Station for wearing overpriced suits and vulgar shoes.

President Perot naturally resigned at once. It was Chief Justice Rehnquist, then, who gave us the Stockdale presidency.

GEORGE WILL

Will throws long bomb with write-in vote

WASHINGTON–When Monday night with slow retreating tread departs and Election Day dawns I shall cast a write-in vote for president. Here is why, and for whom.

The primary point of voting is to influence the outcome of competition for power. Another reason for voting, even when (as is often the case) the outcome of an election is not in doubt in one's state or in the nation, is that we register consent to the outcome by participating in the process. A third and not negligible reason for voting is the catharsis of venting an opinion.

Will

One should not cast a write-in vote merely because neither party has put forward a paragon. Deciding between disappointments–picking the least inadequate–is what unenthralled adults often do, more or less cheerfully. But a write-in vote is permissible, indeed obligatory, when no candidate represents even remotely what the nation needs.

In such a case, to cast other than a write-in vote is to send a false signal of contentment about the conventional choices. That is a truly wasted vote.

What signal should a conservative of my stripe send? Not one that can be sent by voting for Perot, Bush or Clinton.

Perot has removed himself from the ranks of the plausible. The various installments of North Dallas Nutty (phantom guard dogs attacking invisible terrorists; how dare anyone ask him for verification of the doctored photo plot or the other plots?) suggests that Perot is–this is the kindest construction–someone deranged by overdoses of sycophancy.

Regarding Bush, what the New Republic says merrily, conservatives must gloomily acknowledge: "Bush has done to conservatism what no liberal opponent could have done: he has destroyed it from within." He has treated it as a mere expedient for his attainment of office. The nation always needs a healthy conservative movement to resist government's organic tendency toward aggrandizement and the suffocation of society's energies. There cannot be such a conservative movement until the Republican Party is out from under Bush's control.

Regarding Clinton, the New Republic, even while warmly endorsing him, noted that "in so many areas, Clinton's thoroughly political character makes him at times almost indistinguishable from his opponent." Clinton's assumptions about revenue gains and self-financing programs are loopy to an almost Darmanesque degree. And most of the "change" he promises would point the nation in the wrong direction. In fact, it is not real change, it is just another installment of reactionary liberalism–defense of factions strongly organized and skillfully represented in Washington.

His itch to use government to manipulate the private sector, particularly investment, reflects an overestimation of the usefulness of that blunt instrument, government; and an overestimation of the skill and niceness of the class attracted to service in government; and an underestimation of the benefits that would flow from an American society less supervised by that class wielding that instrument.

A large and growing portion of America's finite supply of entrepreneurial energy is devoted to "transfer-seeking." This energy is not devoted to generating wealth by producing goods and services. Rather, it is devoted to manipulating government to capture wealth that others produce.

Here is a harbinger: The Center for Responsive Politics divides the top business contributors to the presidential candidates into eight categories.

My vote goes to Jack Kemp.

This is not an endorsement of him for 1996. However, it is a message to the prospective Clinton administration. My patience with it is wearing thin.

Americans need to vote, respect U.S. constitution

As I understand it, in our colonial times, the punishment for treason was hanging the individual by the neck until unconscious, then disembowelment while still alive, then draw and quarter him, then cut up the body into very small pieces distributing these pieces far afield so that no grave stone, marker or other honor could be given him because no one would know the place of burial. Our forefathers had very strong feelings on the subject. Should we just ignore this treason when we see it? Or worse still, shall we allow these politicians to remain in office or even promote the offenders to some of the highest offices in the land against which they have committed treasonous acts? Many of these same individuals are on record as being against our Constitution, saying it needs to be rewritten. I, like many Americans, take the Constitution seriously. I believe that besides the Bible the Constitution is our most important document. It does not need to be rewritten; it, like the Bible, only needs to be read and followed. I further believe that politicians who do not live up to their oath of office-to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States-should be impeached and thrown out of office. Once impeached and removed from office, they are never again allowed to hold public office.

A great percentage of our government spending is done, for whatever stated reason, to reduce the U.S. to a lower economic level so that our economy will be just as bad as all the countries under communist or socialist (what's the difference?) control. This must be accomplished before the U.S. and the other countries of this world can be merged into the "New World Order," or another name for it "One World Government" under the United Nations. Much of the excessive spending for which Congress is totally responsible is unconstitutional and therefore illegal. But, because you and I let them get away with it, they will continue to do these things against us. We must do whatever is necessary to retake this country from the politicians, elected or appointed. A very good start is voting out those big spenders in Congress. Get out and vote.

Libertarian would put end to big government

Regardless of whether George Bush, Bill Clinton, or Ross Perot win the election, our government will only get bigger. Taxes, government spending, and government regulations will all increase. If you are tired of the perpetual augmentation of the federal government, don't waste your vote by voting for any of these three candidates. That will only send a message that you approve of more and more government. If you want to send the strongest possible message to Washington that you are fed up with big government, then vote for Andre Marrou, the Libertarian candidate. Libertarians believe in the American ideals of free enterprise, individual liberty, and minimal government.

Man warns of constant abuse to our candidates

For the past forty-three years I have worked, reared a family and worked in and around Midland County. Nearly all of this time has been in the employment by the public sector. I am trained both by a college degree and by many years of experience in the design and construction of bridges and highways. I believe that all citizens should be required to work in the public sector, for a period, so that they might experience the ABUSE that rains on the so called "public servants."

The last few years this problem seems to be escalating; or so it appears upon reading your Letters to the Editors. I have never seen so many sidewalks and armchair superintendents and self appointed experts that express personal, unsubstantiated complaints concerning subjects they know little or nothing about.

I suspect that some of the signers are being used by others to belittle the efforts of the public officials; as to their motive, who knows.

Any person who, in their right mind, would run for one of the elective offices must have the hide of an alligator to take this unsubstantiated ABUSE. If this continues, good qualified people to fill these positions will not be available.

Vote for Libertarian to stop business as usual

I write to inform the public that there are three candidates for the office of Railroad Commissioner. Richard Draheim, Jr. is the only candidate in the race untainted in any fashion. He will work to reduce freight rates and paper work for the transportation industry, lowering your cost of goods and providing more opportunities to get a business started for minorities.

In the political races and in the media owned and controlled by Republicans or Democrats, very little has been said about the Libertarian Party, because they know you will know the truth when it is spoken to you. To be a Libertarian you must swear to affirm only two things: that the initiation of force is wrong for public or private goals by an individual or group; that each of us is sovereign over our own body and mind and the property generated by that union.

Every Libertarian elected will stay true to this philosophy. We need your vote. Any other message to those in power and it will be business as usual.

Woman sees problems with pro-life supporters

The hypocracies of the anti-choice contingent never cease to amaze me. Many of these individuals pay lip service to being "pro-life." They offer no realistic solution for many women who face the terrible consequences of unplanned and unwanted pregnancies. Many do not adopt orphans or volunteer time with organizations which serve children but rather engage in violent and aggressive tactics to deny women their legal rights, to misinform the public, and to prevent our youth from receiving education and information that can reduce unwanted pregnancies and save lives.

However, even more worrisome to me are the hypocracies among those we send to congress to represent our interest. Again, the "pro-life" congressmen are the very same who have track records for voting against pro-children and pro-family legislation. To be genuinely pro-life, a member of congress conditions that welcome and support children and families. However, they do not.

A recent study conducted by Catholics for Free Choice reveals that our very own senators and representatives from Texas who claim to be pro-life do not support this position in their voting records. Phil Gramm voted poorly in environmental issues, child care, civil rights, and family and medical leave during the 101st Congress. Larry Combest voted poorly on the same issues, as well as on those pertaining to poor minority and disabled children.

Lamar Smith and Charles Stenholm hold mixed voting on various pro-life issues. Especially, disconcerting were their votes against positive policies for children, child care, civil rights, and family and medical leave legislation.

I wish I knew how these "pro-life" Congressmen justify these inconsistencies. They certainly do not embrace genuinely pro-life policies.

Author has diverged from Bush since WWII

Naturally, back in 1943 in the military service, I knew nothing of this exemplary young officer's family riches and influence when I was a Marine Corps Naval Aviator and George Bush was a Navy Naval Aviator, but I obviously convinced him, also, "to seek our fortunes in Texas" after the war.

Now, here we are, 49 years later, and President George Bush is asking this ungrammatical question, "Who do you trust?"

But what about me, you ask. Like a typical Marine, I have forged far ahead.

I am finishing an introductory "untapped frontier of non-mass science" book that I shall (grammatically) publish as "Whom Do You Trust: Einsteineanism's Archaic, Chaotic, Discordant, Erroneous, So-Called Nuclear (oxymoronic) Physics — THAT HAS BEEN NOTHING BUT A BIG MESS OF COMPUTERIZED GARBAGE — or Us?" by Miles Allen Pageler, Angela Mendez De Pageler, and Angie Omara Von Pageler.

Texas has been kind to both of us "... officers and gentlemen by the act of congress..." but we have been there (in Texas) so long that we are even beginning to talk like H. Ross Perot talks all of the time.

Valencia responds to accusations in letter

In response to Walter E. Johnson's letter to the Reporter-Telegram on Oct. 25, is this the concern of a taxpayer or an attempt to discredit an honest elected official one week before the election? The incident in question happened two months ago.

Yes, on Aug. 12 we had a horse and a calf belonging to two of our grandsons electrocuted on our property. Yes, the assistant road superintendent and another county employee did respond to a call I placed requesting the service of burying two large animals.

This request was made as a county resident, not as a commissioner! This is a service that every county resident is entitled to for a fee. This is a service that was in place when I took office.

Johnson and any other interested taxpayer is welcome to come by my office and see the canceled check and the papers signed by me as a taxpayer, agreeing to pay Midland County for services rendered.

If Johnson doesn't feel this service should be available, he is entitled to voice his opinion. He is also entitled to appear before the commissioners court and request to abolish this service.

Johnson should have also said that the animals were electrocuted in a spot where a neighbor's tree had grown to touch a high-voltage wire and also touched our barn. We requested TU Electric to trim this tree, because we were concerned for the safety of our neighbors. They agreed to trim the trees but refused to take care of the limbs. When the TU Electric representative questioned our decision to burn the limbs, I stated, "It's OK to burn them. We can do whatever we want to out in the county." Thus, Johnson stated that I think I can do whatever I want as commissioner. This was clearly taken out of context.

Also, I should mention that the very next week, TU Electric was out in the area trimming all the trees touching the wires and were hauling a mulcher to dispose of the branches, a service no made available to us.

So, I question TU Electric, is this a service available to all your customers or was the refusal to dispose of our branches a decision of Johnson as a TU Electric representative?

Man apologizes for writing false letter

I would like to make a public apology to Mrs. Louisa Valencia, county commissioner of Precinct 3, for the letter published in the Reporter-Telegram on Sunday, Oct. 25.

In my letter, I had said that Mrs. Valencia used county equipment and employees to bury some dead animals on her property. When I wrote the letter, I was not aware the county offered this service to the residents of Midland County for a fee. Mrs. Valencia presented a check to me showing she had paid for this service.

I am very sorry for not confronting Mrs. Valencia before writing the letter and giving her the opportunity to explain this to me. I now know that she IS trying to save the taxpayers' money and has done nothing wrong.

Man wonders why we should vote for Clinton

When Gov. Bill Clinton went to Moscow in 1969 during the Vietnam war, he committed treason against his nation and, by giving "aid and comfort" to our enemies, caused thousands of our men to be killed. The American "axis Sally" served 16 years in prison and "Tokyo Rose" did the same thing, i.e. protesting and undermining our World War II effort. The only difference between Slick Willie and the other two is that Vietnam was not a declared war. To me that is not excuse at all. Bill Clinton is in the same category as the "red whore of Hollywood" and who would vote for her?

Republicans turn Clinton into sympathetic figure

It is sad that, in this critical election year, the Republican party has been able to put together a national campaign that has succeeded in making Governor Clinton a sympathetic figure. Obviously the national media has helped, but I would suggest that Republican ineptitude with the so-called character issue is more the reason that Governor Clinton enjoys a lead in the polls. Governor Clinton wants to occupy the position that, above all others, requires a certain moral base. After listening to him dissemble about his experiences with the draft during the Vietnam War, I begin to feel like Marlow in Conrad's Heart of Darkness when he says "I let him run on, this papier-mache Mephistopheles, and it seemed to me that if I tried I could poke my forefinger through him, and find nothing inside but a little loose dirt, maybe." Governor Clinton was faced with a moral choice: when his country called he blinked. So did others, but they are not running for the office of President of the United States.

In 1988 Vice President Quayle's status as a member of the Indiana National Guard was ridiculed and he was termed a draft dodger who used his family's influence to get a spot in the Guard. As several hundred thousand men and women discovered during the Persian Gulf war being in the National Guard is no guarantee of avoiding combat. As anyone who has studied the Vietnam war closely can tell, it was a political decision made by President Johnson and his advisors not to activate the Guard. Had there been a commitment to seek a military solution in Vietnam the Guard would have been activated. Mr. Quayle would have served: Mr. Clinton would still have been dissembling.

This is not an issue of patriotism. This is an issue of moral authority. When one is in a position to require what could be the ultimate sacrifice of others, one should not have shirked the sacrifice himself. Governor Clinton, should he win the election, will be able to see the names of 58,000 on a wall near the White House who didn't blink.

Woman believes Baker has integrity, character

I have been an employee of Midland County for more than nine years. I have known Carol Baker to be a woman of integrity and character.

I believe her experience, honesty and genuine desire to serve the employees and citizens of Midland County make her the best choice for Midland County Treasurer.

Baker has proven to be capable, professional

The Midland County Treasurer should be a person of unquestioned honesty and professionalism. As treasurer, Carol Baker is responsible for keeping track of all of the funds of Midland County, as well as the payroll and insurance needs of all 500-county employees.

Carol has proven that she is hard working and capable of getting the job done. She is the right choice for Midland County Treasurer.

Clinton, Perot want to please man, not God

How can God bless our nation economically if we totally disregard Biblical truth?

How can Bill Clinton and Ross Perot promise special privileges to the gay/lesbians when God calls their lifestyle "an abomination?"

How can Bill Clinton and Ross Perot approve of destroying life in the womb when God is the Creator and "knows us by name BEFORE we are born?"

How can Bill Clinton and Ross Perot approve of handing out condoms to our children in public schools when God says to "flee fornication — wait for marriage." God's laws are for our protection. The condom simply is not a good substitute for God's laws. Let's have a little respect for our children, and teach them right from wrong.

Bill Clinton and Ross Perot do not honor God's word in these respects. They had rather please man than God. God does not bless a disobedient nation. The economy is not the only issue at stake, nor is it the most important.

Resident alien expresses his opinions on freedom

Two groups of people don't have a lot of say in an election year or any other year come to that, illegal aliens and resident aliens. At the moment I am in the latter category.

So, no vote but plenty of opinions. One of mine is that term limits seem against the American spirit of freedom. We don't limit lawyers, doctors, landmen, engineers, etc. Why limit the terms of people who wish to offer themselves for election to serve in government? Throw the bums out is a popular phrase at the moment. That's what democracy is — letting the people decide. I thought it was also about letting any bum run as long as he or she was of sound mind and not a convicted felon.

I am also having a problem with rules of some of the childrens' sports associations/clubs that say you can only engage in one sport. Again, not the American spirit of freedom.

Man asks if candidates are qualified for office

I know not whether it has been said publicly in the last few weeks, but I will say (or ask):

"Are any of the major candidates really the most capable and qualified for the office(s) they seek?"

Midlander: Bush is not man to be president

George Bush is not the man to be the president. He presided over the destruction of the domestic oil industry for shortsighted political gains, and has also demonstrated a lack of integrity and a cynicism for the Constitution.

Estimates put the true cost for a barrel of "cheap" middle eastern oil of between $65 to $110. These are derived by adding part of the defense budget, part of Desert Storm and part of our foreign aid to the cost of each barrel imported. By offering to defend the middle eastern sheikdoms with our money and blood the Republican administrations struck a deal that gave us oil at an artificially "cheap" price thus assuring votes from the non-oil producing regions of the country. This policy of subsidizing imported oil has not only destroyed the domestic industry but has also subsidized the manufacturing of our competitors thus adding to the demise of our own manufacturing base.

■ More letters/ 10B

Bush cynically blamed Congress for his spend and borrow policies and the budget deficit. The president proposes a budget and has an obligation at that time to lead the nation on a fiscally responsible path, the Congress has regularly passed a budget smaller than the one proposed by Bush.

Testimony given to the Senate Banking Committee has proven links between the arming of Iraq and the Bush administration. Bush says it didn't happen. His administration's refusal to cooperate with the constitutionally declared oversight responsibilities of the Congress makes a mockery of the Constitution itself. His demonstrated lack of respect for this greatest of documents is the biggest reason he should be rejected.

Man thinks things will be worse with Clinton

I saw in a recent paper where Bill Clinton said he would not hesitate to send troops overseas if needed.

Clinton has already proven he would not go overseas to protect his country. This is like working for a boss who expects you to do things he cannot or will not do himself.

In June 1942, I volunteered for the service — the same month in 1942 a kid named George Bush volunteered. Two years later in June of 1944, I waded ashore as part of the landing on Guam. George Bush, as a 20-year-old kid, according to the records, was flying a low-level cover for us at Agana Harbor. I didn't have time to look, but I think they were flying at about 500 feet. Rest assured, it was a big help to the Marines on the ground.

All the wars are not over. Rest assured that leadership, character, and backbone or guts, whatever you want to call it, sometime in the future will be needed again by the U.S.A.

There are two things I know a little about, the oil field and farming. To the oil field workers let me say this, "If you have a job, all this change people are talking about might just change you out of a job." To the farmers, "I am 77 years old. The highest cotton ever to sell, the highest grain, the highest cattle all sold under a Republican president, and you never received a disaster check under a Democrat."

Things are not good today, but they could be a hell of a lot worse.

Draft-dodger shouldn't be commander-in-chief

The presidential debate in Richmond did make one fact painfully clear: How out of touch some of the electorate are with the real issues of this campaign. Moronic questions such as, "When was our government going to get bigger and be our daddy" and I quote "When would an Afro-American or a woman be elected to presidency?" This is distressing! These are not issues germane to this election. This brings me to the question Mary Cakl alluded to: "How has the national debt personally effected each of your lives?"

The affluent-looking woman did not mention the deficit nor the recession. In fact, it was quite clear she didn't know the difference between the national debt, the deficit, and the recession and her mission was obviously trying to embarrass the president.

President Bush knows conscription was set aside years ago. "Slick Willie" knows when conscription ended as well. The issue we are really looking at here is truth and character. Why is Gov. Clinton lying to you about his draft notice? Why is he telling you that he dropped out of the Fulbright program at Oxford, toured Europe, and demonstrated against the United States AFTER his draft notice was rescinded through very questionable methods? He is a coward, that's why! As a citizen who enlisted in the United States Marines in the 1960's to fight and perhaps die for my country if needed, "Slick Willie" sickens my stomach. I do not, nor should anyone, want a draft dodger to be Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces of the United States.

Midlander wants people to look at Baker's record

Before Ms. (Carol) Baker's supporters start throwing stones at Mary Wilson's voting record, they should go take a look at Ms. Baker's. According to the elections administrator's records, Ms. Baker voted in the Democratic Primary in 1988.

At the meeting of the precinct chairman of the Republican Party where Ms. Baker was selected as the Republican candidate, Ms. Baker very clearly stated that she had voted Republican "as far back as the records go" with no hesitation. That was a false statement.

When Mary Wilson was asked the question she said she "believed" she had voted in every Republican Primary except 1990. She admitted that she had not always voted Republican. Ms. Baker not only has not always voted Republican, she didn't vote in Midland County at all until 1979.

Let's stick to the facts, OK?

Woman asks questions about office of treasurer

Why did Carol Baker's campaign people refuse to let her debate Mary Wilson? Why are the Midland County Treasurer candidates, who are involved in the only county-wide race in Midland County, not included in the KMID-TV political forum on Sunday, Nov. 1? Why is the establishment hiding Carol Baker? Why can Carol Baker not be reached at the treasurer's office during working hours? Why is Judge Pine asking people to take down their Mary Wilson signs and put up Carol Baker signs? Why did Dee Thompson take the Carol Baker signs out of her yard? What is the deal?

You can see both candidates on KOCV-TV Channel 13 on Sunday, Nov. 1, at 4 p.m.

Woman says Baker has not updated treasurer's office

Mrs. Baker has stated she has upgraded the payroll and has a new computer-generated receipt program.

Instead of handwritten receipts, the new software enables the treasurer's office to print out a three-part receipt. One copy is given to the auditor's office. The auditors code the receipt to the right department and put it in the computer. This is the same procedure that has been done for the last five years.

The update on the payroll is that the treasurer's office can print out more detail. This printout is given to the auditor's office. They manually write five checks back to payroll from the different funds.

Does this sound as if the treasurer's office is using its computer system efficiently?

Mrs. Baker met with the auditor's office and a commissioner in September. She assured everyone she could give the auditing department all the information needed to comply with all the payroll changes in the 1993 budget. As of Oct. 23, these changes have not all been made.

Friday, Oct. 23, Mrs. Baker went to the auditor's office and asked why a check they had requested had not been written. Mrs. Baker was told the information needed to write the check had not been given to them by her office. Mrs. Baker became irate, screamed at an employee and stalked out. Since Mrs. Baker worked in the auditor's office, she should be familiar with the procedure.

Mrs. Baker says the treasurer's office and auditor's office work in concert! Not so.

Some think Baker makes many problems, mistakes

Since the lack of the treasurer using the computer system has become an issue in this campaign, Carol Baker has suddenly spent $4,500 of the taxpayers' money so it would appear that she is updating the accounting system.

Nothing has changed ... same mistakes, same problems, and still no payroll general ledger.

What nonsense! What a waste!

Man believes Perot will most likely win election

Your front page lead item Sunday, Oct. 25, concerning recent "polls" could lead us into serious error.

In one Reporter-Telegram article we see poll reports which claim to be based on "scientific" methodology. The results of one poll show Clinton 26 percent, Bush 34 percent and Perot 23 percent. The other poll reported Bush 32 percent, Clinton 32 percent and Perot 30 percent.

Now, let's look at the variations in these polls and ask ourselves, "Where is the scientific basis?" of these polls which show:

	Poll #1	Poll #2	Variation %
Bush	34	32	6.2%
Clinton	36	31	16.2%
Perot	23	30	23.3%

It does not take scientists or engineers to see that no REAL scientific basis can exist in a methodology which produces such inconsistent and widely varied results. After all, in basic math two plus two should ALWAYS equal four.

By contrast, a recent nationwide TV event gives us a more accurate forecast of next Tuesday's voting results. C-Span Television Network took viewer responses during several hours following the debates. I saw a Brownsville caller report "... I carefully monitored post-debate callers throughout the entire open line periods. Of 100 plus callers — 55 percent to 45 percent men to women callers, 25 percent favored Bush, 19 percent Clinton, and 46 percent favored Perot..."

The "margin for error" analysis of the call-in shows that Perot's count would have to have been distorted by 73.4 percent to bring him down to the average value for poll #1 and #2. (30 plus 23, divided by 2 equals 26.5; then 46 minus 26.5 equals 19.5; then 19.5 divided by 26.5 equals 73.4%).

One should say that the other polls are distorting the real picture down by 73 percent!

All of you who want to vote for the most likely winner next Tuesday, must vote for Ross Perot.

Woman will keep her Mary Wilson sign up

On Saturday, Oct. 17, Judge Robert H. Pine and his wife came to visit me at my home. The judge and Mrs. Pine asked me to remove my yard sign. I am a supporter of Mary Wilson for county treasurer, and as a taxpaying citizen of Midland County it is my freedom to express my vote for the candidate of my choice. I do not appreciate this authority figure using his position in an attempt to influence my vote.

The judge also advised me that Mary Wilson has voted as a Democrat in previous elections. However, Judge Pine was a Democrat until recently. The judge also forgot to mention the fact that Mary's opponent never bothered to register to vote until 1979, and voted as a Democrat in the 1988 primaries.

Sorry, Judge Pine, my sign stays up, and my vote goes to the most qualified candidate — Mary Wilson.

We need treasurer who does good work

In regard to the letter by Geraldine Wilson in the Oct. 25th edition of the Reporter-Telegram, I am amazed at the fact Geraldine would defend the carelessness of our appointed county treasurer.

Geraldine stated that the copy that was turned in was a working copy and was turned in by accident. Is that the way our appointed county treasurer handles all her work? Does our appointed county treasurer notarize all of her working copies? Our appointed county treasurer stated in an article in the Reporter-Telegram on Oct. 18th that she double checked all her work, obviously not by the looks of her report. Don't we need someone that has the ability to add, and do work that is presentable, and legible?

Some wonder why Baker's working copy was notarized

It's interesting to me that Carol Baker would find it necessary to sign an affidavit to the correctness of a "working copy" of her Report of Candidate's Expenditures and Contributions without noticing it was the wrong copy.

Since Lynn Baggs' letter of Sunday, Oct. 25, explained that the "working copy" was accidentally filed, it would have been nice if she would have gone a little further and explained how she came to "accidentally" notarize an affidavit as to its correctness. Whether Ms. Baggs' statement as to how such a sloppy erroneous report was filed is true or false, it is irrelevent: Either way it adds up to imcompetence.

Writer responds to letter about Gulf War

I don't make a habit of wasting my time on silly remarks as made by Michael Tully about my letter of Sept. 27, but I feel I have to respond regarding the thousands of young men who lost their lives in the Persian Gulf War. I was referring to ALL, not just American boys — French, British and thousands of half-starved Iraqi troops and countless civilians.

Is Tully so lacking in compassion that he sees the young Iraqi men as less than human? The true horror, otherwise sold to the public by our military and media as clean, high-tech war, has now been estimated as 85,000 tons of non-nuclear, conventional bombs equal to five times the destructive power at Hiroshima. Tully should think that over and tell me who laid waste to the infrastructure of Kuwait!

As for Noriega's drug running, I was home wondering why Reagan and Bush were turning their heads all those years while paying Noriega large sums of money to "spy" for them. Where has Tully been as we have witnessed our country's covert activities and cover-ups, the S&L scandal and promise of more to come after the election with our banks and insurance companies, and finally, the whole financial and domestic crises facing middle America today. I guess we know.

Tully's letter is a good example of the Republican clap-trap that has entertained us for the past 12 years.

Wilson has experience for Midland's treasurer

Mary Wilson will be on the ballot Nov. 3 as an Independent candidate for Midland County Treasurer. She has the professional qualifications, the experience and the kind of dedication needed to run the Midland County Treasurer's office.

She also worked diligently to get on the ballot as an Independent candidate so the voters of Midland County would have a chance to choose their county treasurer rather than have the county commissioners and the precinct chairman of the Republican Party make that decision for them. I appreciate her efforts and I admire her determination. She has my vote.

Abortion leaves scars destructive to mother

When we talk of abortion, forget about the fact you've destroyed a new life. You destroy an existing, older life, too. The emotional scars left with the mother are destructive for the rest of her life. While other countries are struggling to preserve life, begging help from our nation to keep life from dying, we are killing life. What next, euthanasia?

For you elderly, the abortion issue should be considered strongly toward your future, too. What is allowed to be planted now will grow and grow like a weed. Or will we stoop to promote suicides (it's already happening). Why is it that we allow the murder of an innocent one who hasn't tasted life in the world, but we go to great lengths to stop suicides of those that have and choose death? Are we to be a nation bent on destruction, bent on covering our sins by killing?

Bill Clinton speaks on family issues. How can he be pro-family while condoning killing children? If the abortion issue isn't enough, what about his affairs that have been widely publicized? Is this the kind of man you want your children to look up to, to study in history books? If Clinton is elected, you won't just be crying wolf, you'll be crying for mercy.

At the finish line, Bush will finish first for the best of America if we allow him to. Eventually, he'll help to restore morality, family values and, yes, even the economy. Whatever "trickle down economics" is, if in fact it's real, I'd rather have that than "trickle down immorality and lies."

Election Day marks new era of sacrifice in America

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NORTH SALEM, N.Y. — Day after tomorrow will mark the beginning of a new era of sacrifice by most Americans to bring about economic recovery and gradual reduction of the nearly $300 billion federal deficit.

Hearst

Whether President Bush or Gov. Bill Clinton wins, government spending for many programs will be cut and local if not federal taxes will be increased.

The good news for me is that the polling gap between President Bush and the Democratic challenger is narrowing. The Associated Press reported Thursday that a major national poll showed the presidential race is a dead heat. A Gallup poll for CNN-USA Today had Clinton leading by only two points — 40 percent to 38 percent for the president. At the same time, another national poll gave Clinton a 10-point lead and a third poll gave him an 11-point lead over Bush. All of which shows that the race is volatile and many voters are undecided.

The danger is that Ross Perot, who dislikes Bush intensely because of a business row they had many years ago in Texas, might persuade his followers to give their votes to Clinton in return for a Cabinet post or some other important position. When Clinton was asked on the NBC-TV "Today" program if he would include Perot in his administration, the governor replied he would like to have Perot's "involvement in some way."

An ABC News poll last Monday-Tuesday gave Perot 20 percent of the projected presidential vote, with a 4 point margin of error. Other polls gave Perot considerably less, and one showed he had a 44 percent negative rating.

The Wall Street Journal's contributing editor, Mark Helprin, predicted Bush will win re-election. My hunch is that by the time the voting ends Tuesday, Bush will have picked up enough votes to justify Helprin's judgment. Following is a report to me from our Washington national editor, Joe Kingsbury-Smith, on some other good news:

The big break for Bush came Tuesday when the Commerce Department, in its last report before the election, announced the nation's economy grew at a surprisingly strong 2.7 percent annual rate during the third quarter of this year, surpassing its pre-recession peak for the first time. Independent economists had expected only a 1.5 percent growth rate. The higher figure may not be sustained, but the report clearly indicates the economy is showing signs of more vigor. The elated president said: "We have now had six straight quarters of growth in the United States," adding that America would "lead the world to recovery."

The Commerce Department also reported a surge in consumer spending, which jumped 3.4 percent over the second quarter. Consumer spending is the motor that drives the economy.

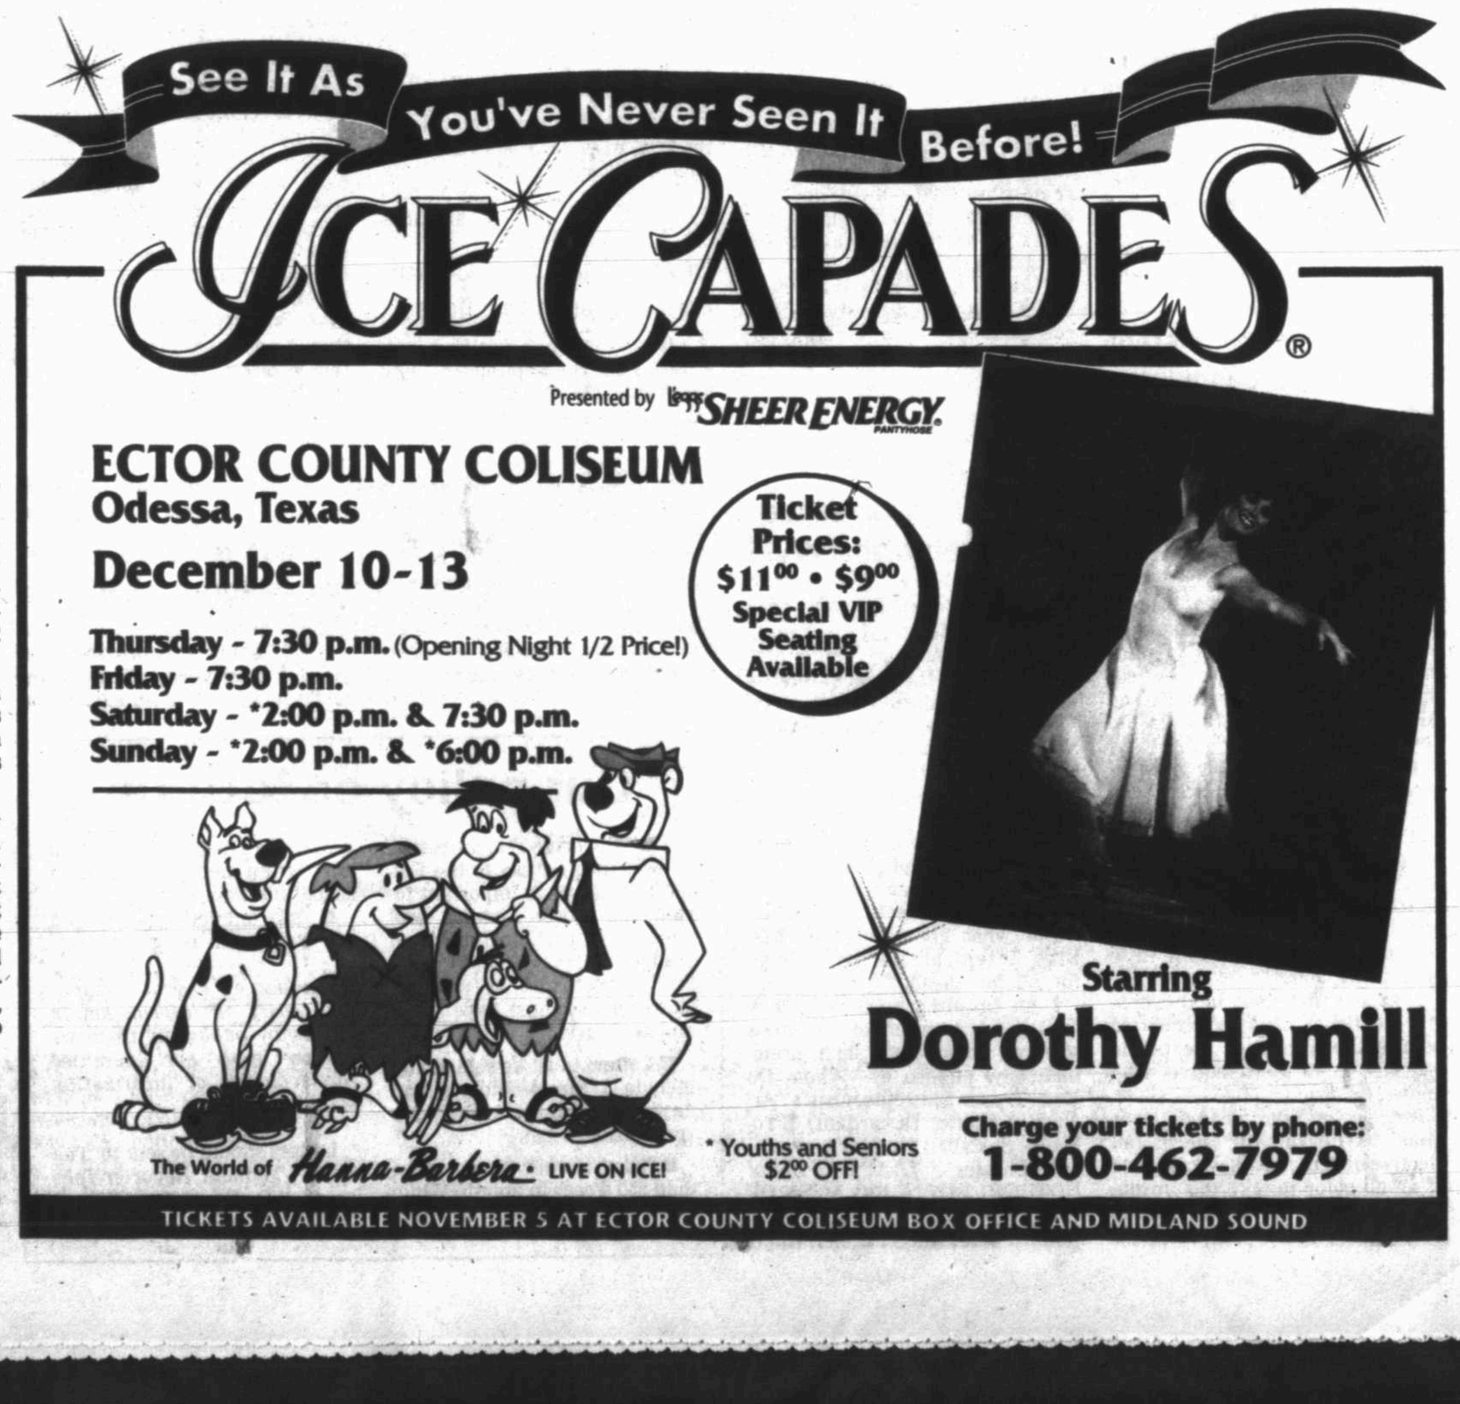

Meanwhile, Clinton's hometown newspaper declined to endorse his candidacy and, instead, wrote a scathing editorial about his years as governor.

"Bill Clinton is a master politician, but what principles, if any, inform his politics?" asked the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette last week. "Are there any steadfast principles — besides winning the next election — that he would never compromise to win popularity? Who knows? And if we don't, how can we recommend him to America as a leader?"

The newspaper continued: "Bill Clinton has proven a mediocre administrator. He's leaving the state's Department of Human Services in disarray, its medical payments slashed and programs uncertain. He had to be sued before doing anything meaningful about the scandalous disregard of abused and neglected children in this state's 'care.' His attitude toward releasing prisoners has been equally irresponsible; and constitutional reform has languished on his watch. His environmental policy adds up to little more than delay and neglect."

Understandingly scared, Clinton launched his harshest attacks on the president during the final days of the campaign. Speaking in Louisville, Ky., Wednesday, Clinton accused Bush of "trampling on the truth, lying in his promises to the nation, lying in his claims of what his administration had accomplished, and lying about the governor's record in Arkansas." Clinton was also striving to turn against the president the issue of "trust" that the Republicans have used so toughly against him. He even went so far as to suggest there might be some truth in Perot's recent accusations that somebody in the Bush campaign had plotted to disrupt his daughter's wedding and smear her reputation.

The president's response to this last-ditch Clinton campaign offensive was: "We're moving and we are going to win."

Thirty Slews (5), ridden by Eddie Delahoussaye, crosses the finish line ahead of Maefara in the first race of Saturday's Breeder's Cup Day action.

BREEDER'S: Tragedy strikes and (b) he's a serious contender for Horse of the Year," said trainer Neil Drysdale after A.P. Indy's two-length victory over Pleasant Tap in the 1¼-mile Classic.

"If I keep getting these kind of horses, I'll keep on riding," the 41-year-old Delahoussaye said. "They make you young."

It looked not only as if the 56-year-old Piggott's riding career was in jeopardy but possibly his life when Mr Brooks snapped his right foreleg and crashed to the track at the quarter pole in the Sprint.

Piggott, who has won 30 classic races in England and was seeking his second Breeders' Cup victory, went over the 5-year-old horse's head to the ground. Then Mr Brooks fell on the jockey, who was taken immediately to Memorial Hospital in nearby Hollywood.

Shortly after 5 p.m., Dr. Lawerence Lottenberg, chief of trauma services for the hospital, said Piggott would be kept under observation for 24 to 48 hours.

"He is doing fine," Lottenberg said. "There is no neurological damage."

Mr Brooks was give a lethal injection where he fell.

Delahoussaye got Thirty Slews home by a neck in front of Meafara in 1:08 1-5 for a winning mutuel payoff of $39.40.

A.P. Indy won in 2:00 1-5, equalling Sunday Silence's 1989 stakes record at Gulfstream and paid $6.20 in earning $1,560,000 for his fifth victory in seven starts this year.

Changes run rampant in NBA

Chicago looks for three-peat as season opens Friday

Associated Press

Almost everywhere you look, the NBA looks different.

Sure, Magic Johnson is back at point guard for the Lakers, but Larry Bird's back won't let him play. Charles Barkley is now a Phoenix Sun. Shaquille O'Neal is performing magic in Orlando. The New York Knicks have seven new players. And nine head coaches are pacing the sidelines with new teams.

One thing hasn't changed, however.

The Chicago Bulls are favored to win their third straight championship.

Last season, Michael Jordan became the first player in NBA history to win consecutive regular-season and postseason MVP awards. As coach Phil Jackson has said, "Michael never plays a bad game."

Scottie Pippen gives every indication that he, too, will be a consistent All-Star, and most of the rest of the cast — Horace Grant, John Paxson, Bill Cartwright, B.J. Armstrong, Stacey King — is back, although Paxson and Cartwright are coming off knee surgeries.

The newcomers are Rodney McCray, Trent Tucker and probably one rookie, replacing Cliff Levingston, Bobby Hansen and Craig Hodges.

Jackson's only worry is that the game might become too "mundane," a Jacksonism for the fear that Jordan and Pippen might get burned out and won't be able to handle the night-after-night challenge of teams wanting to knock off the champions.

Deep down, however, he believes they will respond like champions.

"This ball club works hard and is motivated — our competitive zeal is a given," Jackson said of his less-than-spartan training camp regimen for Jordan and Pippen. "Sure, we have different rules for different players. When you have guys who play 38-40 minutes a night, the important thing is getting them to produce in games and the playoffs. Training camp is more for the young players and the new players to learn the system."

The fact that no team has won three straight NBA titles since Boston captured eight consecutive championships from 1959-66 is motivation enough for Jordan.

"It won't be hard; we'll be ready to challenge," Jordan said. "We shouldn't take the attitude that we will defend our championship. We have to be aggressive to win a third. It hasn't been done in 26 years, so that's enough to drive you."

Out West, Johnson's unretirement overshadows the arrival of Barkley in Phoenix, but Barkley might have a bigger impact on the balance of power.

One of those expected to benefit most from Johnson's return is center Vlade Divac, who first began to blossom under Johnson's tutelage. But his production dropped last season because of injuries and Johnson's absence.

"Magic does a lot of things for me. He supports me and throws me the right pass at the right time," Divac said. "He makes me a better player. I'm happy he's back."

"My game is the same," said Johnson, who proved to himself and everyone else at the Olympics that he can still play on a championship level. "It's the same game it's always been — get the ball to the open man and create.

"It's good to have him around," forward A.C. Green said. "His experience and knowledge of the game is a big benefit. And to actually have him on the court is another tremendous benefit. It's a big difference, psychologically and mentally."

Barkley, after a tempestuous career in Philadelphia, was traded by the 76ers to Phoenix for Jeff Hornacek, Andrew Lang and Tim Perry.

But the Suns still have Kevin Johnson, Tom Chambers, Dan Majerle and newly acquired Danny Ainge to dance with Barkley.

"We have a versatile offensive team and we'll have a balanced team," new coach Paul Westphal said. "We have two players in Charles Barkley and Kevin Johnson that no one has demonstrated they can guard 1-on-1. We have to put players around them who can hurt the other teams if they double-team. And if they don't double-team Charles, he might get 30 shots. If they do, Chambers might get 30."

Portland, which has lost in the Finals two of the last three seasons, and Utah, defending champion in the Midwest Division, should battle the Suns and Lakers for Western Conference supremacy.

The Trail Blazers stood pat with its top six players — Clyde Drexler, Terry Porter, Buck Williams, Kevin Duckworth, Jerome Kersey and Cliff Robinson — but coach Rick Adelman will try to work veterans Rod Strickland and Mario Elie and rookies Tracy Murray and David Johnson into the mix.

Utah added Jay Humphries in order to implement a three-guard rotation with overworked John Stockton and Jeff Malone. Olympic power forward Karl Malone may have to play some at center to cover for the injured Mark Eaton.

Cleveland, which added Gerald Wilkins to give coach Lenny Wilkens more flexibility, has a strong nucleus in Brad Daugherty, Mark Price, Larry Nance and John Williams. The Cavs, along with the new-look Knicks, appear to be the most likely challengers to Chicago in the East.

Pat Riley has an entirely new cast around his inside muscle men, center Patrick Ewing and forward Charles Oakley. Rolando Blackman, Doc Rivers, Charles Smith, Tony Campbell and rookie Hubert Davis will join holdover role players John Starks and Anthony Mason to give Riley flexiblity at every position.

"I've been impressed with the play of nine or 10 guys, and eventually the process of who functions together the best will work itself out," Riley said. "I feel most comfortable with Patrick and Oak starting together, and after that we'll have to see what happens."

The selection of Reggie Lewis as captain is the clarion call for the beginning of a new era for the Boston Celtics, who edged the Knicks for the Atlantic Division title last spring.

Bird, who led the team to three NBA championships, retired when it became obvious that his back would not let him play without pain. Robert Parish and Kevin McHale, holdovers from the Bird era, picked Lewis as captain.

"Chief and McHale, they decide who becomes captain of the team," said Lewis, who led the team with a 20.8 scoring average last season and is starting his sixth NBA season. "The way the team is in a transition period, I guess they felt it would be good to let a young guy assume leadership responsibility."

McHale is still around although his health has been as tenuous as Bird's in recent years. The prospect of another pain-filled season is not attractive to him.

"If I could look into a crystal ball and know I could be healthy, I'd be excited," McHale said. "If I looked in a crystal ball and knew I wouldn't be healthy, I wouldn't play."

Orlando's O'Neal leads a trio of rookie big men that could make an impact for years to come.

Mavericks shop again as season approaches

DALLAS (AP) — The Mavericks appear to be shopping for a front court scorer in California, namely the Sacramento Kings' Wayman Tisdale, The Dallas Morning News has reported.

In Saturday editions, The News quoted unidentified league sources who said Tisdale, who never has shot lower than 50 percent in a full NBA season, is being targeted for trade discussions.

The Mavericks, who won a 107-95 exhibition victory Friday night over the Los Angeles Clippers, have previously tried to deal for Tisdale.

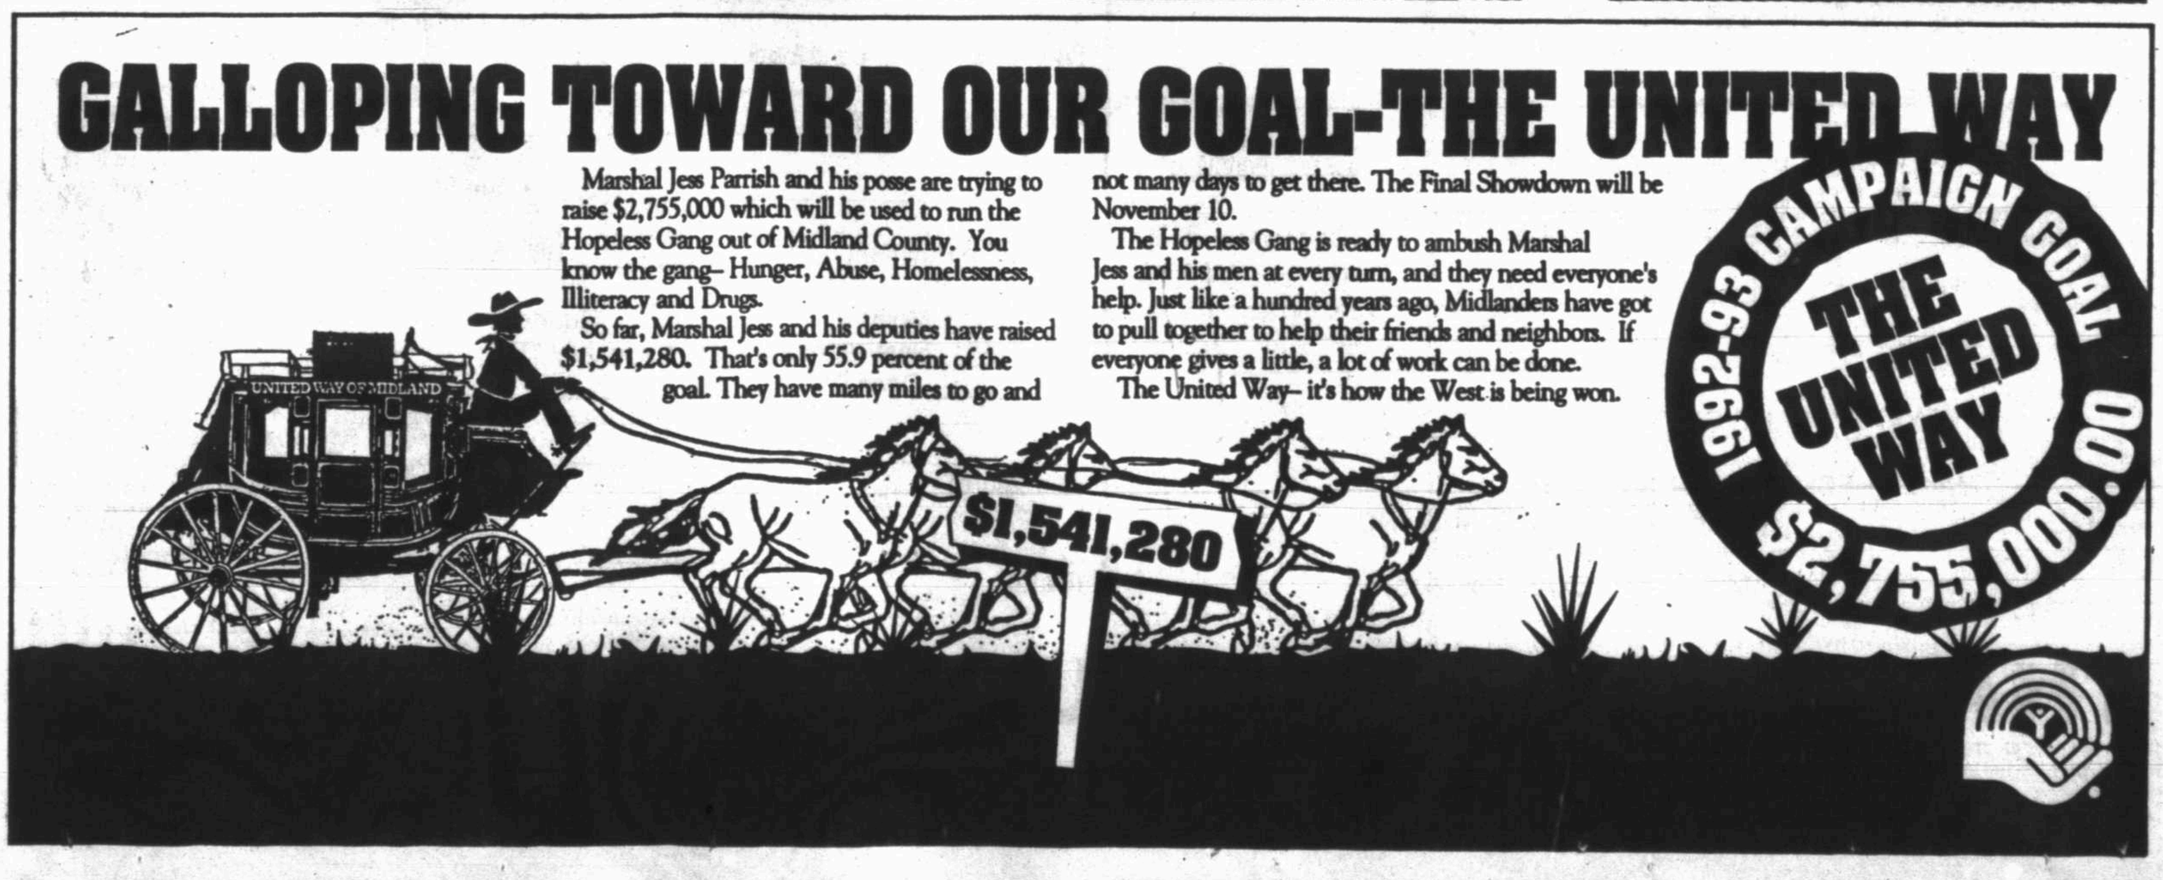

"The Mavericks are looking for a small forward who can score," said one source familiar with Dallas' trade plans. "They know they need someone who can put points on the board. Tisdale is one guy they're looking at."

But Sacramento general manager Jerry Reynolds said Tisdale's name has not come up with Dallas.

"I can't imagine us trading Tisdale, unless it was a major sort of deal," Reynolds said. "If the Bulls offered (Michael) Jordan, I told Wayman, 'I would help you pack. Your butt's on the bus.' "

Rick Sund, team vice-president for basketball operations declined to comment on any Tisdale swap.

Open Letter to Citizens of Midland:

Only a few days remain in the United Way 1992/93 campaign and we are still far short of our goal of $2,755,000. We know times are tough out there for everyone. But if United Way doesn't reach its goal, every one of the 17 agencies will have to cut back on services. And that affects you and your neighbors.

If United Way doesn't meet its goal, that means some women and children who need a safe place won't be able to leave their abusive home life. It means rape and incest victims won't be able to get the counseling they need. It means many youngsters won't be able to join Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts or Camp Fire. It means a lot of people won't be able to get counseling to deal with their family, economic or drug problems.

The list of people who are going to be hurt would fill several pages. You probably know some of them.

We need EVERYONE'S help this year to meet that goal. If you've never given before, then your contribution will be doubled through a challenge matching grant.

It doesn't take much from everyone to meet that goal. Just $2 will provide two hot meals for a homeless person at the Salvation Army or a tutor for someone wanting to learn to read. For $10 you enable a family to attend Parents Anonymous groups at Family Services, thus keeping another family together.

United Way makes a difference in the lives of 36,000 Midlanders. Please join my posse and make a contribution. Let's keep that Midland spirit of neighbor helping neighbor alive. If you have any questions about United Way, call 682-4358.

Sincerely,

Jess Parrish

Anne Michaud and her students at Milam Elementary pose with a special puzzle that "provides a lesson in humanity."

EPIC helps encourage self-esteem

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a series of articles on local citizens who have been affected by the United Way of Midland. This year's campaign, now under way, is attempting to raise $2,755,000 for 17 agencies.

By Lana Cunningham

It's 9 a.m. on Monday. While office workers are trying to pry their eyelids open by downing a second cup of coffee, an enthusiastic Anne Michaud has a group of sixth graders at Milam Elementary School working on a puzzle.

This isn't just any puzzle. It's a lesson in humanity, and its interlocking pieces show how each person plays an important role just by being there.

On this Monday morning, the students — with their desks arranged in a U-shape so everyone faces each other — are being given a list of items to draw on their puzzle pieces that will represent them as individuals.

This list includes: your name; two or more things which describe you; a symbol that represents how you feel most of the time; an illustrate of what you fear most; a diagram of what you would like the president to do for our country; and a symbol representing your ethnic heritage.

The puzzle and the lesson are part of a program called EPIC, which stands for Effective Parenting Information for Children. It is a three-pronged program in two ways — it teaches students self-esteem, decision-making and citizenship and it is designed to help students, parents and teachers.

Ms. Michaud began using the program last year and saw the difference EPIC made in her sixth grade students. Ruben Chavez, a parent and president of Milam's Parent-Teacher Association, took the evening parenting classes and saw the changes it made in other parents. And Principal Tom Miller

Democrats join to sway electorate

By Darren J. Waggoner

ODESSA — Two Democrats embroiled in races that are expected to be close joined forces in Ector County Saturday to make last ditch efforts to sway the electorate.

U.S. Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio, and former Texas Railroad Commissioner Lena Guerrero spoke to a partisan crowd of 50 at 3 p.m. in front of the Mansion Restaurant on Highway 80. Former San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros joined Bustamante late in the day.

Both candidates believe their re-election efforts are boosted by the record high early-voting turnout across the state.

And Bustamante, while shrugging his shoulders when asked of his chances in Midland, said Odessa is a "sure thing."

"But San Antonio is the tough area for me. If I cover that, it's a wipe-out," he said.

Bustamante and his challenger, Henry Bonilla, a San Antonio television executive, have exchanged verbal jabs throughout the campaign. On Saturday, Bustamante called Bonilla a habitual liar.

"Have you seen my opponent lately? His nose is growing. He looks like Pinocchio his nose has grown so much," Bustamante said. "My opponent does not care about the people. He comes in to speak ... hitting the airports, does his thing and bang, he heads back out."

Bustamante then made fun of Bonilla's pronunciation of spanish, including the word "barrio," a place he said Bonilla claims to have been raised.

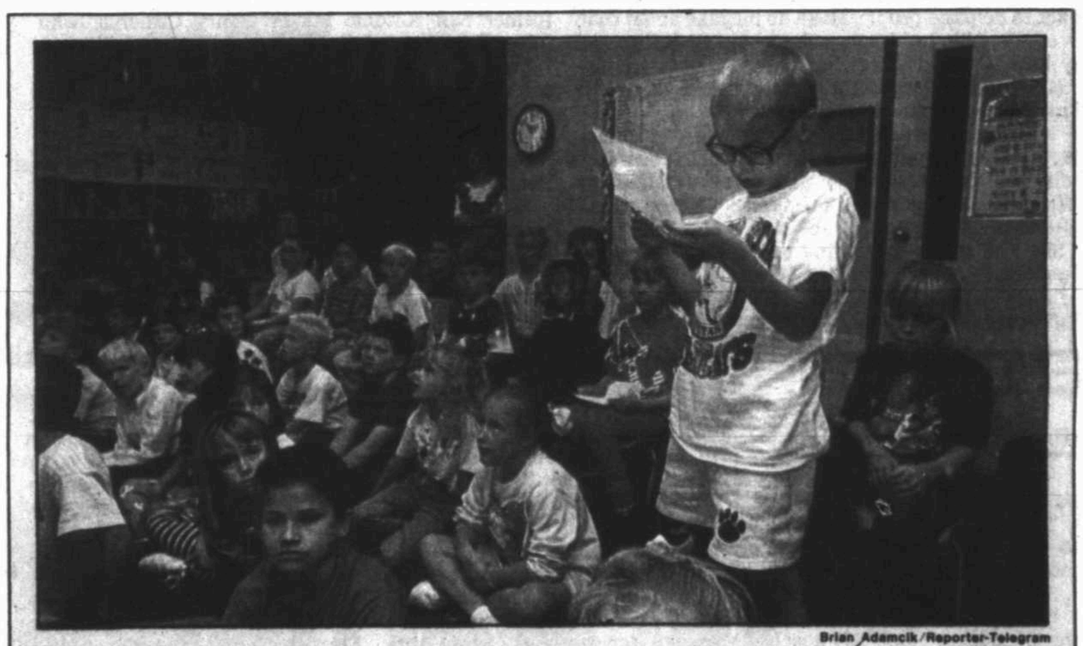

Recently, Bonilla began airing television commercials pointing out that Bustamante said he is from a family of migrant farm workers, yet lives in a luxurious house in San Antonio.

But Bustamante said he married into a wealthy family.

"It's none of his ... business anyway that I now have a nice house," he said. "What concern is that of his? I do come from a migrant background but my wife doesn't."

Golden Corral to host Thanksgiving dinner

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Those who find themselves without on Thanksgiving can still have a good dinner.

The third annual "Thanksgiving Celebration Dinner" will be conducted on Thanksgiving at the Golden Corral Family Steakhouse, 4709 N. Midkiff.

The dinner is sponsored by the restaurant and funded through community donations.

"This started off as a community project, but for the past two years, we (Golden Corral) have underwritten the whole thing," said Don Maier, program director for the dinner. "We want to wean it away from Golden Corral and get the community more involved this year."

Maier, who is the Golden Corral general manager, started the dinner three years ago as a way to give to the Midland community.

"It was started as something new and something for the people," he said. "It was a chance for me to give back to the community."

Residents who are interested in helping can get involved either by donating financially or volunteering to help serve the dinner.

"The first year, we served 1,400 and the second, 2,500," he said. "We hope to raise about $3,000 this year, but we certainly want to keep that amount open. We can use as much as we can get because we never know how many will show up."

Financial donations for the dinner can be made through the Midland American Bank.

Anyone who wants to volunteer for the dinner can sign up at the Golden Corral or one of the following locations:

- Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane
- Dellwood Senior Center, 3303 W. Illinois
- Southeast Senior Center, 1803 E. Indiana
- Midland Chamber of Commerce, 109 N. Main
- Midland Hispanic Chamber, 1410 N. Lamesa Rd.
- St. Andrews Mission, 1708 N. Fort Worth
- Salvation Army, 300 S. Baird St.

Maier said the locations all have invitations for the dinner. He added that any church, service organization or service club that was interested could contact him for information and invitations.

For more information concerning the Thanksgiving Celebration Dinner, contact Don Maier at 689-7706. Those interested in making a financial donation at the Midland American Bank should contact Jeff Hansard at 687-3013.

MISD students hold mock debate

By Myra Lee Salcedo

"I have a question for all of you. We live on a budget at home. Sometimes mom and dad tell me, 'No, you can't have that toy because there isn't money for it.' Does your candidate support the U.S. living within the budget?"

The question was a mouthful for second grader Adam Tally who bravely stood and read it before a roomful of his peers at Santa Rita Elementary School.

It was dutifully answered by representatives of Ross Perot, President George Bush, and Gov. Bill Clinton during a mock debate hosted by the second graders Friday.

"As citizens, we all can't have everything we want. There are going to have to be sacrifices to get the country's debt down," said Perot representative Bob Bailey.

Midland County Republican Party Chairman Rick Davis, said, "President Bush agrees we have got to stop spending more than we take in. He wants to sign the balanced budget amendment, making balancing the budget a law. It will say to the federal government, you have got to start living within your means."

"Your parents don't need a law to tell them to not spend more than they make," countered Midland County Democratic Chairman Chris McCormack as youngsters nodded their heads in agreement.

"We need Bill Clinton to go to Congress and say, 'This is the money we have.'

"Why did Perot drop out of the race?" second grader Natalie Neatherlin asked Bailey.

"He really didn't want to become president," Bailey said. "He wanted the other candidates to address the nation's economic problems and he had some personal considerations with his family. When he felt Mr. Bush and Mr. Clinton didn't address the economy, he got back into the race."

Reducing stress doesn't always go by 'self-help' book

Don't you just love those articles that offer "quick, easy-to-follow" tips on how to improve your life? It's really very simple, they suggest, just do this, this and this and all of a sudden, almost like magic, you will become a happy and well-rounded human being.

Ott

Yeah, right. And some day I might win the Nobel Peace Prize.

The problem is, the authors of these "self-help" columns obviously don't live in the real world, at least not the one in which you and I reside. They make everything sound so elementary.

Let me give you an example. Last Tuesday there was an article in this newspaper entitled, "Tips can help people get a handle on stress."

Sounds great, I thought. So I read on.

Here's what followed:

Tip No. 1: "Give yourself pep talks. When taking a test, making a speech, starting a job or struggling with parenthood, don't be overwhelmed by doubts and a lack of self-confidence. Instead, give yourself encouraging messages."

See what I mean? On the surface, that sounds just dandy. Tell yourself everything will turn out fine and, by golly, it will.

No it won't.

If you didn't study for that test, all the pep talks in the world won't help you pass it. That's the reality so often missing in these goody-goody "think positive" articles. They don't take into account certain harsh well-known factors, such as "if a person does not do his homework, bad things — like flunking a test — will occur."

And for a 19-year-old college sophomore whose grades are being mailed home to his parents, that causes big-time stress. It's as simple as that.

But there's more.

Here's Tip No. 5: "Set aside 15 minutes to an hour each day for internal time. Use it any way you choose — get to know yourself, write about your feelings, meditate, pray, read — anything that helps you stay in tune with yourself."

Fine. Now, let's go back to that college test you didn't study for. Tip No. 5 says we should pray. I agree. See if this founds familiar, "Dear God: If you'll just let me pass this history test I promise I'll never get drunk and blow off studying again as long as I live"?

Now, be honest. You've uttered those exact words, haven't you?

Of course you have. We all have.

Did the prayer work?

Of course not. God isn't fooled by empty promises. He is all-knowing.

Meanwhile, your stress level continues to soar.

But it doesn't stop there. More tips are available.

Let's examine No. 9, for example: It says, "Create a budget sheet of your mental and emotional expenditures. For one week, observe the amount of time you spend involved in insecurity, anxiety, depression, overcaring, poor self-image and hurt feelings. The hours of mental and emotional pain involved may surprise you and help you begin to change."

Perhaps. But then again, wallowing in self-pity isn't all bad. If done properly, it can be a delightful endeavor. Possessing the ability to whine and feel sorry for yourself is both healthy and fulfilling. Indeed, there is an art to it ... as in, yanking the bedsheets over your head and whimpering: "The whole world is against me. I wish I were dead."

Of course, you don't really want to be dead, but for a few fleeting moments the thought does have a certain "stress-free" appeal. We all get down in the dumps from time to time. It's normal and there's not a darn thing wrong with it, either. Still, these perennial upbeat do-gooders don't want us to enjoy our misery.

They are constantly saying things like, "Think positive. Feel good about yourself. Be happy."

Give me a break. We're talking about reducing stress here, and, believe me, there's no better way than hiding under the sheets and whining about the unfairness of life.

In fact, make that Tip No. 1 in my book.

STUDENTS: EPIC teaches youth to become 'We' generation supports EPIC for the positive reinforcement it gives students.

Jeannie Hunt, EPIC coordinator, explained how the program was started last year by the Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program, which receives funding from the United Way. It is being used at Milam and Bowie elementary schools.

Tests of last year's students and parents already boast the program as a success. According to Ms. Hunt, citizenship knowledge among fifth and sixth graders increased 35 percent, self-concept improved 42 percent and decision-making by 36 percent. Normally, students will show a 10 percent increase in those areas as a result of normal maturation during a school year.

The parenting workshops revealed similar increases, according to the EPIC study. Ms. Hunt said before the workshops only 34 percent of the parents rated their confidence level as high; afterward it was 86 percent. On the quality of relationships with their children, only 43 percent rated themselves high before the workshops; afterward, the number jumped to 86 percent.

In some ways, EPIC replaces the neighborhood fence, according to Ms. Hunt. Parents used to discuss child-rearing problems over the fence with their neighbor or other family members. But an increasing number of people don't have an extended family living in the same city that they can turn to for advice. Many parents work and don't have time to get to know their neighbors or to talk with them about problems.

Chavez said the parenting workshops had the parents divide into smaller groups and discuss problems. "The parents said it was nice to realize they were not alone (in their problems). Our brainstorming sessions reinforced the good things they were doing. Some parents decided they need to spend more time with their kids.

"A lot of parents out there really don't know what to do. The kids are out of control and all the parent knows to do is scream and yell."

EPIC is a program that benefits all parents, said Chavez, and especially minorities. "This is where you have two parents working and they don't have much time to spend with children," he said.

Chavez said he has learned in the parenting workshops how to talk to his son and daughter in a positive way. And when a punishment is needed, he allows his children to determine what should be done. "They are usually harder on themselves than I would be," he said. "This teaches them they are responsible for their actions. They don't realize the consequences of what they've done and how it affects others."

> "It (EPIC) addresses peer pressure. They learn they can say 'no' and not feel guilty. They need to learn to respect themselves.'
> —Anne Michaud
> teacher

"This is my first year to be around EPIC and from what I'm hearing from the teachers, it fits very well in the curriculum," Miller said. "It deals with real life situations. It teaches the kind of skills you need in every day life."

Ms. Michaud knows first-hand how EPIC deals with students' problems. Last year, she said, several of her students were grappling with divorce in their families. This year, death has become an issue for several students.

Sometimes she uses a language arts lesson in creative writing to allow students to open up and talk about their feelings. Recently, a student wanted to read a poem to the class and it was about death. That brought a lengthy discussion and a writing assignment. "They really opened up and talked. The baggage these kids are carrying ... Afterward, one student said it was good to be able to talk things out," she said.

"EPIC has given me flexibility. Because of its correlation with a subject area, if something comes up in class, I can use it throughout my lessons. EPIC gives them the tools to deal with life as capable contributors to society," she said. "Children are great problem-solvers if given the opportunity. Overprotectiveness breeds low self-esteem, thus handicapping the child in solving real life problems. Children need the opportunity to take responsibility for their mistakes, learn from them and try again."

The principal supports EPIC because it helps build self-esteem in students. There's one lesson, Miller said, where students are given a box with a mirror inside. The student is told there's a very special person inside and then told to look. EPIC also stresses a high regard for other people, "to treat others as you want to be treated."

"It's so easy to always point out the negative. It takes an extra effort to accent the positives. If you (a student) don't feel good about yourself and about life, then you don't care to learn the rest (school lessons)," he added.

EPIC is an inexpensive program, Miller said, "for the results we see."

Ms. Michaud sees EPIC giving her sixth graders the tools in self-esteem they will need when they go into seventh grade. "It addresses peer pressure. They learn they can say 'no' and not feel guilty. They need to learn to respect themselves," she said.

Overall, Miller sees EPIC as teaching youth to become the "we" generation, rather than continuing the "me" generation. Ms. Michaud's class already has bonded and is pulling together. "They're seeing man's inhumanity to man and learning that recognizing the good qualities in each other is the better path to follow."

During the celebration of Columbus Day, Ms. Michaud had another classroom play the role of the European sailors and they invaded her classroom, pushing the students out of their chairs and taking over. Her students learned more than the fact that Columbus discovered the New World in 1492.

For the first time in her 26 years of teaching, Ms. Michaud had students calling her last summer. A couple of times, she met students for lunch. "I've never had a group that stayed in contact like this."

She wrote a letter in August to Ms. Hunt. "Real-life experiences, students daring to take risks and seeing their successes based on working toward a positive attitude about their lives gave them and me a reward that could never be measured. Seeing the quiet ones helped out of their shells by the respect their more aggressive peers learned to channel was most exciting."

Ms. Michaud's current students already can detect her feelings about them. In explaining one part of the puzzle, she asked the class, "For example, what do I like?" One youngster responded, "Your students."

She smiled at the student and later admitted, "That caught me off guard."

For information about EPIC and the parenting classes, contact Jeannie Hunt with Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program, 699-2474.

a college degree, said she hopes voters consider her record.

"My opponent (Barry Williamson) cannot complain about one darn vote in my record," she said. "Because it's a good record and I'm proud to stand on it."

"Still, he will continue to focus on a mistake I made in college 12 years ago as a kid and never bring up the issues. He can't say anything about my 18 months in office," she said.

She said she is better qualified to handle Texas' energy concerns because she is an outsider.

"Don't be fooled now," she said. "My opponent wants to help himself and only himself. He doesn't want to help the people. Make no mistake about that. Every decision he would make would be influenced by how it would affect him."

Ms. Guerrero urged the supporters to vote for a straight democratic ticket Tuesday.

"The Republicans speak of trickle-down economics, but I say the only way we'll see trickle down is to pull the Democratic lever and carry us all in (to office) all the way down (the ticket). There's where you'll see trickle down," she said.

She said she is continuing to work on the issues despite the heavy campaign schedule.

"I have a plan — the State of Texas Energy Policy Partnership — that will create jobs and help people realize the Permian Basin has the opportunity to produce for another 75 years," she said. "It's a detailed plan but it will work."

She also touted the $10 million oilfield cleanup fund that she helped establish.

"We plug the wells. When there is no pumping at least we are out plugging. This is important to our water supply. This is important to our environment," she said.

Ms. Guerrero spoke for 15 minutes before catching a private plane for a campaign stop in Waco. Earlier Saturday she stumped at the Democratic headquarters in Abilene.

Bustamante's campaign swing is being backed by former San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, who joined him toward the end of Saturday's rally.

"We need to work hard for four more days so we can celebrate two more years of Albert Bustamante as your congressman and four years of a Bill Clinton presidency," Cisneros said.

Cisneros also joined in the verbal attacks on Bonilla.

"I know Henry Bonilla and he has no business running for congressman," he said. "He has never been in public office yet here he is wanting to start at the top. This is not a man who needs to be representing the people. He is only interested in representing his own concerns."

tial election?"

"How does your candidate plan to spend tax money and create more jobs?"

"What about high health costs?"

"What can children do to help the president?" and "My teacher would like to know why Perot didn't choose a woman for a running mate," were a few of the missives youngsters directed at the panel.

Friday's mock debate was just one of many activities conducted in Midland Independent School District last week. When Midland citizens line up to cast their ballots Tuesday, hundreds of Midland public students will follow suit.

A flurry of campaigning, filling out voter registration cards, debates and class discussions have ensued for students. Santa Rita pupils, after learning about candidates and issues, will vote for their presidential choice on Election Day.

Along with Santa Rita, Jones Elementary School and Alamo Junior High School students will cast ballots on Election Day. Alamo students have hosted their own debates and will broadcast their election results on Channel One.

To culminate election activities, second graders at Lamar Elementary School will present the program "The History of American Elections" during the school's Parent Teacher Association program 7 p.m. Tuesday.

And for many of the younger pupils, as Davis said, "By the time it's your bedtime, we'll probably know who wins as president."

Superior programmable hearing aid available from Audio Acoustics

Hearing is Important

One of the keys to life is good health. Today's society stresses healthy living. Of the many conditions that can affect your well being, hearing loss is one of the least understood or acted upon.

Many of lifes simple pleasures depend on hearing - birds, singing, children laughing, or a gathering with friends and family.

For hearing impaired people the balance of daily life is often disturbed. Both in terms of the sound they hear and in their circle of interpersonal relations. Stress and withdrawal from activities may result from an ignored hearing problem.

Most hearing losses occur very gradually. Too often our hearing is taken for granted and gradual changes go unnoticed or are blamed on mumbled or soft speech.

Computer Age Influences Hearing Aids

Because of recent advances in hearing aid technology there is no reason for anyone to remain isolated in a world of silence and misunderstanding. At least 90% of all hearing losses can be helped through the use of a hearing aid.

The sound quality of hearing instruments has improved significantly over the past year. Computer programmable hearing aids can be precisely adjusted to an individuals specific hearing needs.

Professionally Certified Staff

With so many choices available to improve your hearing, a highly trained individual to advise you is important. At Audio Acoustics Hearing Centers we have the best of these professionals.

* All audiologists have Master degrees in Audiology
* All audiologists are Nationally certified
* All audiologists are licensed by the state to practice audiology
* All audiologists are licensed by the state to dispense hearing aids

Major Breakthrough

After over four years of research and development the digitally programmable hearing aid has been introduced. The programmable computer chip allows individual adjustment of low, mid, and high frequency sounds. This means a more accurate prescription for your hearing loss.

The specialized circuitry does a better job of:

1. Filtering background noise without disturbing the speech signal.
2. Making soft sounds more audible while loud sounds remain comfortable.
3. Offering a more pleasing and natural sound quality.

A Hearing Aid Designed for You

No two hearing losses are the same. Each person has a unique prescription and individual preference about what they want to hear. For the first time the user can be involved in some of the fitting decisions as far as sound quality preference.

A hearing prescription will be calculated from your hearing evaluation and stated needs. The hearing aid will be programmed with your prescription via computer in our office. Through direct sound comparisons you will select the program you prefer from a number of suitable settings. The programmable chip enables these comparison to occur in the comfort of our office while you are wearing the hearing aid.

Hearing Aids Have Improved

Even if you have tried a hearing aid in the past and were not satisfied, now is the time to try again. Digitally programmable hearing aids such as ReSound, and the Siemens INFINITI have far surpassed the hearing aids of the past.

For a short time only we will be giving you the opportunity to purchase these aids at a savings of $100 per aid.

Don't wait another day to improve your hearing health and save $100. Call Audio Acoustics Hearing Center, Inc., today! 689-HEAR (4327) ext. 104. We are located at 2101 N. Midland Drive and have proudly served our community since 1977. This offer ends November 13, 1992.

INFINITI-Audio Acoustics Hearing Center in Midland has recently added the INFINITI programmable hearing aid to their line of fine hearing instruments. The canal-size aid is the smallest of its type and fits snugly and discretely into the ear.

REPUBLICANS TO RE-ELECT COUNTY COMMISSIONER LOUISA VALENCIA

Dear Fellow Voter,

We are Republicans. Most of the time we vote for Republican candidates in local elections, because we believe the Republican Party nearly always nominates the best candidate.

However, this year the very best candidate in the race for County Commissioner of Precinct 3 is Louisa Valencia, the Democratic candidate. She may not be a Republican, but she has proven to be an expert at managing Midland County's tax dollars. In her four years as County Commissioner, she has been most successful in improving our county government and making it more cost-effective.

Mrs. Valencia is a very intelligent lady, who has proven to be a completely honest, forthright, and hardworking public servant.

We hope you will join us, and vote to

One-vehicle accident kills two people, injures seven

Staff report

OZONA — Two people were killed and seven injured early Saturday morning in a one-vehicle accident on Interstate 10, 10 miles west of Ozona. None of the passengers were wearing seatbelts, Department of Public Safety officials said.

Miriam D. Vella, 21, and Blanca Gomar, 12, both of Houston, were pronounced dead at the scene at 8:58 a.m.

Rosalinda G. Perez, 23, was driving the vehicle, a 1993 Dodge van, east on the highway when she fell asleep and skidded on the gravel curb. She awoke and overcorrected to the right causing the van to turn sideways before overturning five times. All nine passengers were ejected, DPS officials said.

Ms. Perez, of Houston, is in stable condition at Iraan General Hospital with cuts and abrasions.

Also injured were Ciria Gomar, 35, listed in critical condition at Shannon Medical Center in San Angelo with internal injuries. At Iraan General Hospital Elvia Marquez, 39, Naomi Marquez, 10, and Erma Vella, 4, were listed in stable condition; Juan Marquez, 40, was in critical condition at Iraan General Hospital; and Adam Gomar, 8, who is listed in good condition. All of the passengers are from Houston.

Jury finds that Odessa hospital discriminated against employee

Staff report

A federal jury in Midland last week recommended that Claudette Keck, 54, of Odessa, be awarded $126,500 for her claim that she was wrongly fired from Medical Center Hospital because of her age.

The jury found that the Odessa-based hospital and its administrator discriminated against Ms. Keck, 54. She claimed she was fired as director of human resources in 1990 by hospital administrator J. Michael Stephans because of her age and gender.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton has the authority to double the award because jurors found that the termination was willful.

Attorney Gerald Fugit had asked the four-man, two-woman jury to award Ms. Keck more than $760,000 in back and future pay and retirement benefits.

During the two-day trial, MCH attorney Richard Bonner showed that the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission determined Ms. Keck's allegations had no merit.

Bush signs bill to clean up Texas water

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press Writer

The omnibus water bill, which authorizes dozens of water projects nationwide, was signed as Bush campaigned Friday in Wisconsin and Missouri.

WASHINGTON — President Bush has signed a bill that gives the green light to projects that would clean up a West Texas drinking water source overcome by salt pollution and halt erosion of a natural barrier protecting the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway.

The omnibus water bill, which authorizes dozens of water projects nationwide, was signed as Bush campaigned Friday in Wisconsin and Missouri.

There had been some question whether Bush would sign the legislation because of a controversial measure making major changes in the way water is distributed in California.

Although the bill does not provide money for the Texas projects, it authorizes them to go forward — allowing lawmakers to seek funding next year.

Among projects of interest to Texas in the bill are:

—A $67.8 million project to shore up Sargent Beach and thereby protect the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway and neighboring wetlands and wildlife habitat.

"This land barrier is essential to protecting the economic and environmental treasures that grace the Texas coast," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Saturday.

A breach at Sargent Beach would open up the waterway to choppy waters from the Gulf of Mexico — possibly jeopardizing the waterway's shipping traffic. About 20 percent of Texas' gross state product is shipped through the waterway each year.

—A $9 million project to halt salt pollution of Lake Meredith, which is the source of drinking water for almost half a million West Texans.

Unless the situation is remedied, the naturally occurring salt in Lake Meredith could eventually render its water useless for human consumption.

Eleven cities depend on Lake Meredith for drinking water: Lubbock, Amarillo, Plainview, Pampa, Borger, Levelland, Lamesa, Brownfield, Slaton, Tahoka and O'Donnell.

Most of the salt entering Lake Meredith originates in a shallow brine aquifer in New Mexico that is leaking into the Canadian River, which feeds the lake.

The legislation authorizes the Bureau of Reclamation to pay for design preparation and construction management, which is an estimated to be one-third of the total $9 million project.

Texas and the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority would pay the remaining two-thirds, for construction, operation and maintenance of a facility to be built near Logan, N.M.

The project involves drilling wells into the brine artesian aquifer and pumping out water to relieve the pressure and keep the aquifer's briny water from flowing into the river.

—Authorizes $6.8 million for a flood control project at Shoal Creek in Austin.

—Authorizes $300,000 in planning and assistance for water and wastewater facilities for colonias.

Authorities link man to 3 in series of rapes

HOUSTON (AP) — A 30-year-old Harris County man suspected of stalking and raping as many as eight women was in custody Saturday after authorities linked him to the victims, aged 18 to 79.

Peter Saenz, 30, a Columbian national, has been charged with three counts of aggravated sexual assault and one count of burglary. Other sexual assault charges are pending.

He was being held in the Harris County Jail in lieu of $650,000 bond.

"This guy, he stalked the victims. He knew when they came and went," Sgt. Bruce Williams said. "He would enter the residence without the victim's knowledge, and the victims were then threatened into submission."

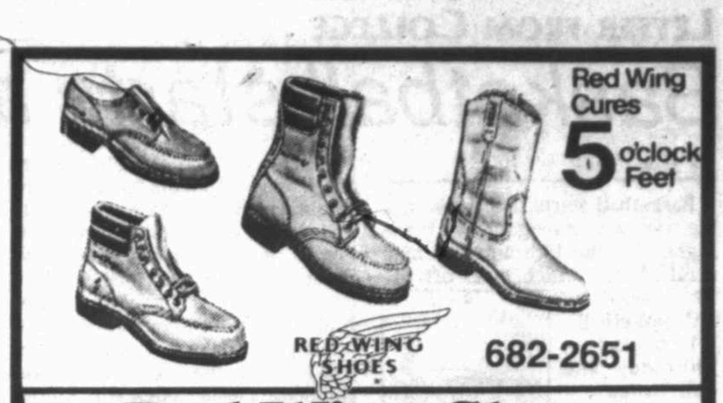

Authorities said several of the victims, all attacked in the past 11 months, lived in Saenz' apartment complex. All of them lived alone.

"I'm sure the victims are relieved now that this guy's in jail and they don't have to be fearful at night that this will possibly happen again," Williams said.

Williams said Saenz, a hardware store employee, would stalk the women for days or even weeks before breaking into their homes, sometimes through open windows, at night or early in the morning.

"With all the victims, it's basically the same thing," Williams said. "He would threaten them and assault them before he sexually assaulted them. I don't know where he picked out his victims, but he would pick one out and start watching her. It might be a month on some of them or more than a month on another, but it was the same thing."

Williams said Saenz was apprehended after fighting with a neighbor who said Saenz tried to peep inside an apartment window in the complex. The neighbor recognized Saenz as an employee at the hardware store nearby.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Basketball starts at MC with nine games in three nights

By H.A. Tuck

Basketball starts this week in a big way, with nine games in three nights. It's the 15th annual Chaparral Classic, which kicks off the 18th season of MC basketball.

Tuck

It begins on Thursday and continues through Saturday, with games at 3:30, 5:30, and 7:30 p.m. each evening. The schedule for Thursday begins with Odessa College and Alvin Junior College at 3:30, South Plains and Ranger at 5:30 p.m., with Midland and Jacksonville at 7:30 p.m.

Friday's games begin with Jacksonville and South Plains, followed by Ranger and Odessa, and Alvin and Midland.

On Saturday, South Plains plays Alvin, Odessa goes against Jacksonville, and Midland finishes against Ranger.

Just to make sure you won't forget about the Chaps, they are playing six other home games during November.

Additional home games during the month, and opponents, are: Nov. 9, Southwest Christian; Nov. 12, Pima, Arizona; Nov. 16, Grayson; Nov. 18, Cisco; Nov. 24, Lamar, Colorado; and Nov. 30, Hill.

High school juniors and seniors have discovered that a high school diploma isn't enough to get you into college. Well, you can get in but you are limited as to how many hours of courses you can take.

The hurdle is something called TASP, the Texas Academic Skills Program, a battery of tests to measure knowledge in areas such as math, English, and science. Every person entering a Texas public community college or university is required to take the TASP and pass all parts of it before enrolling for more than nine hours. This is mandated by the state to assure that college students have certain minimum skills. Those who don't are required to take remedial classes. But even after such classes, the student must pass TASP.

Now there's a chance for those high schoolers and current college students to learn "Cracking the TASP" from the folks who wrote the book. Leslie Cohen and Antoinette Falco, faculty members at Austin Community College, did write a book by that title: "Cracking The TASP".

They'll be presenting a workshop on that topic at Midland College on Saturday from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. The fee is $30 and enrollment is limited.

The authors promise to help students improve their scores by 10-15 percent, learn how to relieve apprehension, and gain information on time allocations and test sequencing.

Since the next TASP test offering is Nov. 14 at Midland College, the workshop comes at an ideal time.

Those interested should call 685-4518, the Continuing Education Office, about enrolling.

Midland College is hosting the 4th annual Child Care Providers Conference on Saturday, Nov. 7. Six hours of required annual training for caregivers and directors is provided at the conference. Registration fee of $15, which includes lunch, must be paid in advance.

The conference takes place in the Allison Fine Arts Building from 8 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Call Marian Farr at 687-1351, or Rita Stotts, director of the Midland College Child Development Center, at 685-4573 for more information.

Larry Griffin, just back from his presentation in Italy on "Walt Whitman and Rock 'n' Rock", is to read from his books on Thursday at Pages and Prints Bookstore, 40 Plaza Center. Griffin will read from "A Gathering of Samphire", short fiction, and "Airspace", poetry, from 7-9 p.m. There's no charge and coffee and tea will be served. Griffin is chair of the college's Communications and Fine Arts Division. He'll even throw in a free autograph if you'd like to buy either of his books.

Chaparral Center is one of the polling locations for Midland residents Tuesday. Signs will direct voters to the polls, with entrance through Door One. Please vote somewhere.

Due to a serious illness in her family, Kansas artist Karen Bock was not able to come last week for a planning lecture and opening of her art show at MC. But the show is now on display at McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building. Ms. Bock uses fiber and her own handmade paper as primary elements of her creations. These are large, three-dimensional objects of interesting shapes with intriguing titles.

You may view her exhibit daily through Nov. 22. There is no admission to McCormick Gallery. Hours are 1-5 p.m. Sunday, 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday, and 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday.

Closing out the fall exhibition schedule is the annual Fall Student Show, Dec. 1-13, a must-see event of some very talented people's creations. Some of the work may be purchased for unique Christmas gifts.

Many of the courses starting this week through the Continuing Education Department are aimed toward Christmas. In education, as in retailing, you have to start early!

The offerings this week include: Candy Making, Lotus Word Processing, Purse Painting, Woodcarving II, and the TASP Preparation course mentioned earlier. Two other popular holiday courses, Gift Wrap and Holiday Entertaining, already have filled up as well as a CPR course. There are some other holiday-related classes starting next week, so check into them early.

Defensive Driving is offered each week by MC. There is one class which meets for two evenings during the week and a Saturday class which meets for eight hours.

Just drop by the Continuing Education Office in the Administration Building to register. If you wish more information, call the department at 685-4518.

And remember that GED and English As A Second Language courses now are available at the South Campus. Call 685-4566 for a list of meeting times.

Since we've mentioned Christmas in the two previous items, we'll also note that the college's maintenance department has just about finished putting the lighting around the campus buildings in preparation for the MCMC (Midland College Merry Christmas) celebration on Tuesday, Dec. 1. The extra-warm weather has made conditions better than usual for installing the lights.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

Attorneys: Foster family to adopt Hispanic infant

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An Hispanic infant at the center of debate over cross-ethnic adoptions will be adopted by her white foster family, attorneys in the case have announced.

"We have entered into an agreement with the Peacock family," Assistant District Attorney Camile DuBose said during a hearing Friday before District Judge Andy Mireles.

Cheryl and Nathan Peacock will be permitted to adopt 16-month-old Annie once other details in the case are worked out, DuBose said during the hearing.

Child welfare workers still are working on an agreement that would require the Peacocks to maintain contact between Annie and her three sisters, who also are in state care.

Annie and her sisters have been in the custody of the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services because their mother was addicted to spray paint and neglected her children.

The girls' mother has since recovered from her addiction and now is working with child-welfare authorities to regain custody of some of her children.

Annie has been the center of an adoption controversy over cross-ethnic adoptions and the separation of siblings.

Texas gears up for lottery big league

AUSTIN (AP) — Multi-million dollar winnings, televised drawings and growing jackpots. On Saturday, Nov. 7, Texas moves into the lottery big leagues with the start of Lotto Texas.

Watchers of the nation's 34 state lotteries predict it won't take long for the jackpots to reach into the tens of millions of dollars.

"Everybody is expecting Texas to get off with a big bang," said Terri La Fleur, senior editor of Gaming and Wagering Business magazine. "They could be getting into pretty big jackpots early," she said.

The Texas Lottery started selling scratch-card tickets May 29, and since then has rewritten many of the lottery startup records in the nation. By Oct. 15, about $737 million worth of tickets had been sold, with $333 million paid out in prizes and $242 million going to the state's general fund. The rest, about $162 million, goes toward administering the games.

Now less than six months later, ticket sales begin in Lotto Texas, a vastly different game. But officials believe that players not familiar with lotto will quickly learn once the jackpots start soaring.

In lotto games, a player picks a set of numbers. Lotto Texas is a common 6-50 game, meaning the player picks six numbers from one to 50.

Playslips for the game will be available at 5,000 lottery retailers at first, and more each week. Each game costs $1.

The first drawing will be held one week after ticket sales start, at 9:58 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, and will be offered to television stations statewide.

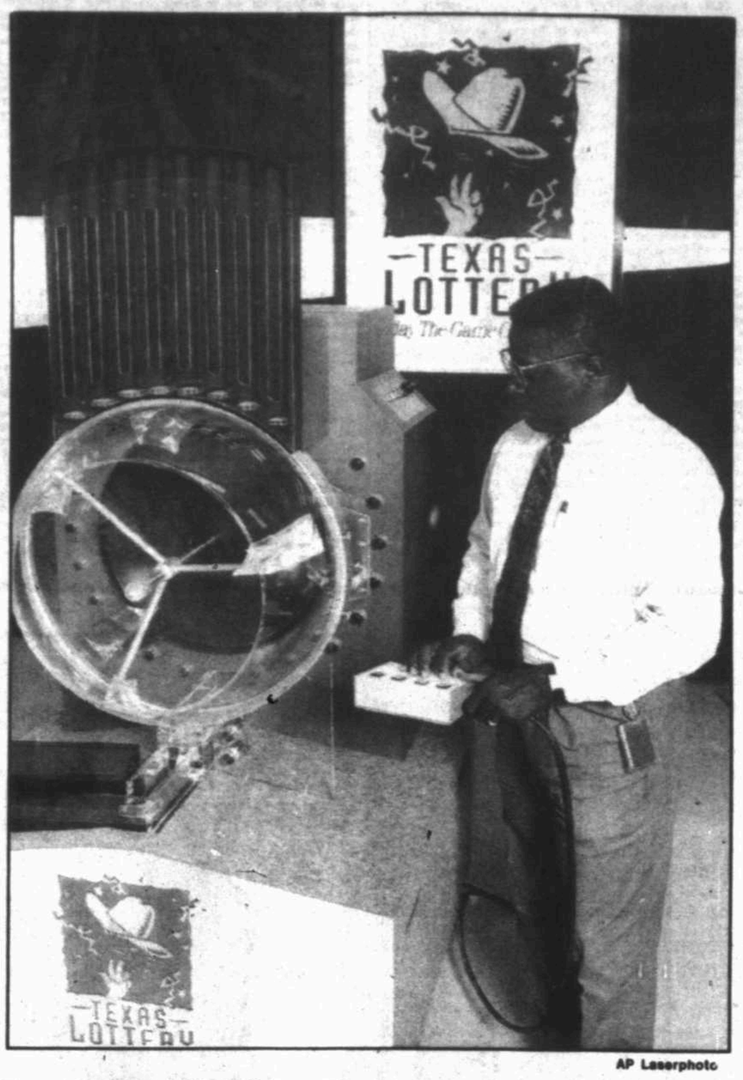

After the first Lotto Texas drawing, there will be two per week: Wednesdays and Saturdays.

State officials have guaranteed that the jackpot for the first game will be at least $2 million. It could be more depending on how much is wagered.

The odds of picking all six out of 50 numbers are 1 in 15,890,700.

Money also will be awarded to players matching five numbers, four numbers, and even matching three numbers will win a guaranteed $3.

The odds of matching five numbers are 1-in-60,192; four numbers, 1-in-1,120; and three, 1-in-60.

Texas Lottery Criminal Investigator Larry Hollie shows how the machine that mixes numbered Lotto balls works. The Lottery has two machines, five sets of balls, and stringent security measures in place for Lotto Texas, which begins Nov. 7.

By comparison, the odds of winning in Texas Lottery's scratch-card game, called Touchdown, are about 1-in-5. The biggest prize in that game is $500.

Although the odds of winning at lotto are much less than winning scratch-card games, the huge payouts entice players into the game, officials say.

That will be good for the revenue-hungry state. But higher jackpots will lure more problem gamblers and more poor people who are willing to take a chance with money they cannot afford to spend on gambling, some say.

"It is specifically with that kind of prizes that the poor, the less educated, the people with less opportunities in our society, are coaxed and manipulated into purchasing lotto tickets in order to win the big one," said Weston Ware, associate director of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission.

Sue Cox, director of the Texas Council on Problem and Compulsive Gambling, said the lotto game will increase the number of wrong toll-free calls the group gets from people who want more information on the lottery. The council's phone number is printed on all lottery tickets.

She said the game also will provide another temptation for problem gamblers. "We're in the process of making sure we are adequately staffed for that weekend," she said.

Half the money that is bet in Lotto Texas goes into the prize pool and 64 percent of that goes to the jackpot for the player or players that pick six of six numbers.

Since the odds are so great that no one will pick six out of six numbers, the jackpot sometimes carries over to the next game. This is when lotto mania hits.

In 1991, a California lotto jackpot hit $118 million.

To select the numbers, the Texas Lottery will use a machine that mixes up 50 white rubber balls, numbered 1 through 50.

The Texas Lottery has two of these machines, five sets of balls, and a security blanket around the entire drawing process.

Rubber balls were chosen over ping-pong balls because in a 1980 drawing in Pennsylvania, several men went to jail for injecting some ping-pong balls with paint, then betting on combinations of the lighter balls. Officials became suspicious when there was an usually large amount of money bet on the winning numbers.

Lottos across the country have been run into problems in the past.

In Virginia, an Australian syndicate purchased 7.1 million lottery tickets and won the jackpot. For each $2,000 investment, an investor won $400 each year for the next 20 years.

Texas lottery officials say that Lotto Texas will deter the buying of large combinations of numbers by syndicates because players must fill in the playslips in order to get a ticket that has their selected numbers on it.

Also accompanying lottos is a cottage industry that sells number selection systems and theories from determining hot numbers and due numbers to interpreting dreams to pick numbers.

Texans vote early in record numbers

DALLAS (AP) — Voters spurred by a three-way presidential race and hoping to beat long lines on Election Day instead swelled early balloting to record levels, county officials across Texas said.

Leading the state's early voting was Dallas County, where a record 204,290 people — or about one-third of the area's expected voter turnout — cast ballots. In Harris County, officials said 179,336 people voted early.

Preliminary totals in Tarrant County showed that 152,095 of the Fort Worth area's 600,000 registered voters turned out in the period between Oct. 14 and Friday, said Gayle Hamilton, assistant county elections administrator.

"This sets a record by far," she said.

Voters who waited in lines for more than three hours in some cases said too many other people took advantage of the 2½-week-long early balloting.

County Elections Administrator Bruce Sherbet said voters simply waited until the final days of the early period to act.

Peaceful Living

Produced by Advertising Services

Enjoy peaceful living in a charming country style home nestled between the cotton fields in Greenwood. Set on one acre of land, this lovely custom built brick home combines the charm of the country with some of the luxuries of the city.

An elegant, solid wood door with leaded glass welcomes you into a home that is beautifully decorated and has been maintained to perfection. The tiled foyer leads in two different directions.To the right, a spacious living room brilliantly accented with a decorative brick fireplace and wood mantel provides the perfect environment for entertaining guests.

Morie taffeta custom draperies with coordinating valences adorn the enormous picture windows of the adjoining living and dining room for an inviting setting. The exquisite braised antique Tiffany style chandelier is both elegant and charming and sets the tone for the perfect evening meal.

The graceful charm that emerges from the carefully selected wallpaper reflects a country theme that is predominant throughout the house. Decorators will delight in the many color selections and country variations in the custom window treatments as well as the wallpaper designs.

Through separating doors, take a peek in the country style kitchen that is both colorful and comfortable. A gleaming tiled floorway stretches into a breakfast nook with a vaulted beamed ceiling, providing vast open spaces while cooking or enjoying a family meal.

Bold colored countertops perfectly complement the bountiful oak cabinetry.

A left turn leads to an open and airy room for the family to relax in. The focal point is a lovely brick fireplace with natural wood mantel that rises to a vaulted beam ceiling complete with decorator ceiling fan.

Though the French door, enjoy a magnificent view of downtown Midland.

Another turn through the family room leads to identically proportioned bedrooms with matchless country decor. A full bath with oversized shower separates the two bedrooms, not to mention the laundry room that has been insulated to this portion of the house for less distractions.

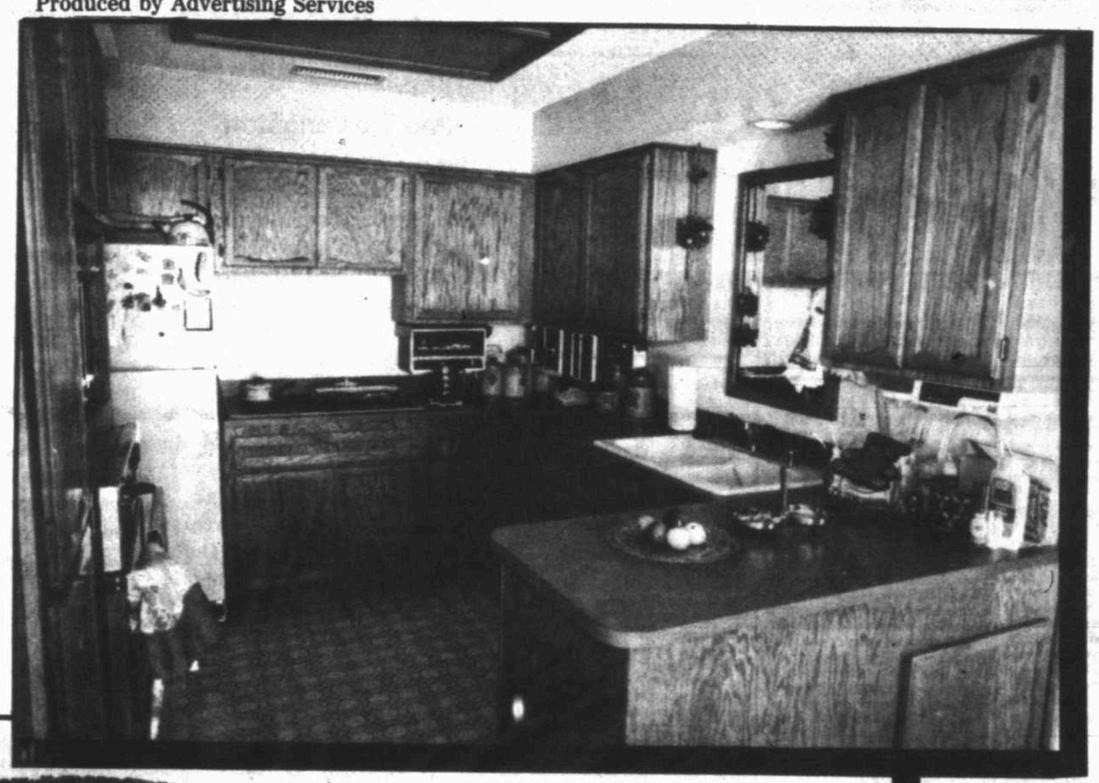

A return through the formal living room leads to a sequestered master suite with adjoining full bath.

Step into a luxurious master bath that is lit up with hollywood lights overlooking a stunning marble counter with separate marble sinks. Luxuriate in a delightful garden tub or shower in an oversized tiled shower. A skylight and brick planter add further dimensions while the walk-in closet provides a convenient design for ample storage.

A two car garage is useful, but easily converted into a room for a growing family's needs.

This three bedroom, two bath home is a perfect family home or a country seclusion. Other amenities included with the house are a water well, satellite dish with accompaniments, sprinkler and outside storage.

The home is being offered by Century 21 Realtors for $89,500.

Want to change the world? You can!

How to be a hometown hero

Ask almost any child who his or her hero is and prepare to cringe; Hulk Hogan, Madonna, Heroes on a half shell.

But wait a few years and ask the same children as young adults and they may be telling you about their Little League coach or scout leader. Some may have chosen their career path based on the time a community professional spent talking to their class at school.

They may not realize it now, but you can make a positive difference in their lives. There are several more immediate rewards to serving the youth of our community, but too often they are torpedoed by the long list of excuses to let someone else do it.

"The kids are great. It's the parents i can't deal with."

"Maybe once we get past year-end at the office."

"I'm not a young as I used to be. I couldn't keep up."

"There are not enough hours in the day."

True, not everyone is cut out to sing around the campfire or try to teach lay-ups to three-footers, but what you do have to share is invaluable.

You may not be able to judge a "free" from a "fly" but your neighborhood swim team probably has plenty of open positions for place judges, concession stand workers and hugs for soggy polliwog finishers.

In today's scouting programs, Ozzie is as likely to be helping with the local Brownie Troop as Harriet is to be a Cub Pack leader.

In large and small communities across Texas, would-be campers, crafters and athletes are turned away because of a shortage of adult volunteers. Don't let that happen here.

There is also a great need for volunteers in local Senior Citizens programs. There is a child in all of us no matter what age we are. A hug, a smile or even a phone call can make a difference in their lives. There is no greater love than that of a grandparent...adopt one today!

Langston Realtors talk about...
Escalating Mortgage Rates

Joanne Langston

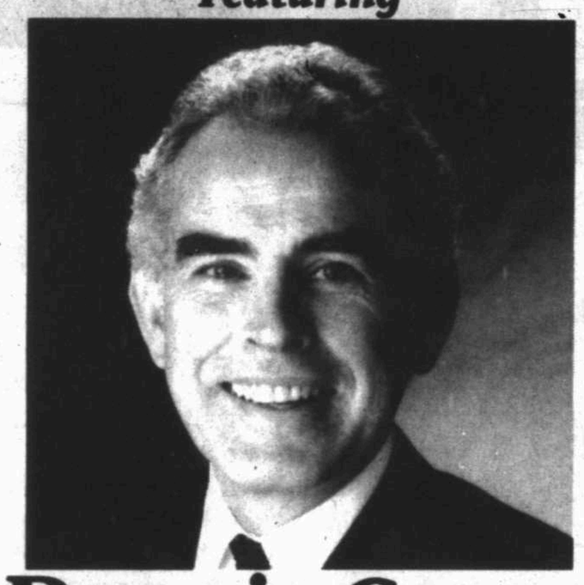

The rise in interest rates over the past 10 to 15 days may not have been unexpected but the timing certainly was. This was the feeling of most Realtors and Mortgage people as rates escalated last week to 8 1/4% after this summers' steady decline to 20 year lows.

Historically, interest rates in presidential election years, go up after the election, not before! Most professionals anticipated the same scenario this fall; that is why the interest increases of the past weeks were a surprise to most of us. Our only explanation, whether right or wrong, is that the interest market reacted prematurely because of feelings that the results of the election were already a known factor.

Those would-be-home buyers or mortgage refinancers who missed August and September's enticingly low 7 1/2%, 0 orgination and 1 point rates are now facing 8 1/4%, or an approximate $50 a month increase in monthly payments on a $100,000 loan. According to Karla McIntosh of HNB Mortgage, "another window of opportunity may be open for borrowers after the emotions of the election, but probably the opportunity will be short lived and the rates will not reach the previous lower levels."

Most Realtors and Mortgage officers are offering would-be home buyers the same encouragement: today's rates in the 8% range are still attractive, afford good tax advantages and are a "known" rather than "unknown" entity. Only those persons who can successfully read a crystal ball should make decisions based on expectation of a return to the low rates of late summer. It probably won't happen and delays could result in mortgage costs even higher than today's.

Thanksgiving

is a time of remembering people and events that have touched us throughout the year. Often in the rush of day to day business we don't take time to thank those special clients and customers who have helped us achieve our real estate success. This Thanksgiving we would like the community of Midland to know how very thankful we are for the friendship, goodwill, and business you have extended to RE/MAX of Midland.

Oil & Gas Activity/4-7E
Activity Indicators/6E

Serving 54 counties in West Texas and New Mexico

BRIEFING

Prices slump

A workover rig with Midland in the background. Oil prices have weakened over the past two weeks, largely on reports from the American Petroleum Institute that the nation's crude supplies have shown stronger growth than expected.

Toward the end of this week, the futures price for West Texas Intermediate for December delivery was around $21.12. The posted price was $19.75.

Natural gas prices were holding around $2.30 per thousand cubic feet.

Rig count

The Permian Basin and U.S. rig counts continue to show strength, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The company reported that, for the week ended October 23, the Basin rig count was up six to 124, well above the year-ago figure of 96.

Nationwide, the U.S. count surged 27 to 830, above 801 for a year ago

CNG age

Roswell, N.M. will host a compressed natural gas conference, "CNG Comes of Age" Nov. 11-13.

The conference opens Nov. 12 with a general session that gets underway at 8:30 a.m.

Talks will be given on topics ranging from an overview of CNG as an alternate fuel to New Mexico's commitment to CNG to the environment and the Clean Air Act.

The luncheon speaker is tentatively set to be Sen. Jeff Bingaman.

Following the luncheon, there will be three panel discussions. The first will discuss market impact and legislation. The second will cover NGV technology, alternative fuels and analysis. And the third on transit and school busses will cover conversions, dedicated vehicles and economics.

The evening will conclude with a dinner featuring a keynote address by Linda Stuntz, deputy secretary of energy.

Additional talks are scheduled for the second day, on topics ranging from fuel stations and infrastructure for CNG to technology development to training.

The conference will conclude with tours of Pecos Trails Transit, Transportation Manufacturign Corp. and the Oilfield Training Center at Eastern New Mexico University.

In addition to the talks, there will be exhibits on the uses of CNG, including state-of-the-art equipment and techniques.

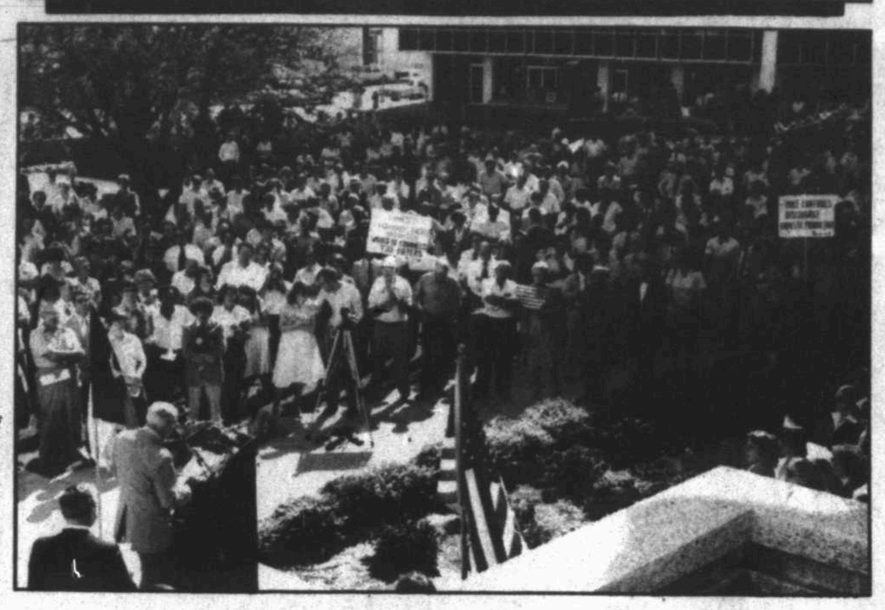

Knight fight

The U.S. partners in White Knights, a pioneering joint venture in western Siberia with a Russian oil and gas production company, have "stopped funding, for the moment," because of a dispute over taxation, according to an executive of one of the U.S. partners, Phibro Energy.

But another company, Occidental Petroleum, announced Wednesday that it had begun exporting oil from Russia as part of another joint venture, also in western Siberia.

At Phibro, a subsidiary of Salomon Brothers, Michael N. Castellano, vice president and controller, said that work was continuing using internally generated cash but that further development was proceeding at a very slow pace.

PBPA 1992 ANNUAL MEETING

This pro-oil rally in 1979 was sponsored by both the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and the West Texas Geological Society to counter anti-oil demonstrations. Both groups are hosting major meetings this week.

U.S. Senator Pete Domenici of New Mexico will be the keynote speaker at the Annual Meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association Friday.

The meeting will also mark the association's 30th anniversary.

In conjunction with the annual meeting, the PBPA will present its third annual environmental seminar, Thursday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center.

All annual meeting events will be held at the Petroleum Club with the exception of the Icebreaker/registration on Thursday, which will be held at the Plaza Club in the Texas National Bank building, Big Spring and Wadley.

Domenici will be the keynote speaker at Friday's President's Banquet from 7 to 9 p.m. The banquet will also include the posthumous presentation of the Top Hand award to B.J. "Joe" Pevehouse with help from Dr. Robert W. Lawless, president of Texas Tech University, friends and family.

The annual meeting gets underway Friday morning at 7:30 a.m. with the Kickoff Breakfast where the keynote speaker will be Gene Ames, chairman of the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

WTGS SYMPOSIUM AND FIELD TRIP

WTGS presents annual symposium, field trip

■ WTGS symposium features new exploration, production strategies.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Developing exploration and production strategies will be the name of the game when the West Texas Geological Society meets for its "Fall Symposium and Field Trip" Thursday through Sunday.

The symposium will be held Thursday and Friday at the Midland Center with a field trip getting underway Friday evening through Sunday evening.

This year's symposium will offer participants an opportunity to learn the latest in sequence stratigraphy and reservoir characterization.

The focus will be the current synthesis of regional sequence stratigraphy developed in the Guadalupe Mountains and the extension of these ideas to exploration. From the outcrop to the subsurface, field studies will address the application of reservoir characterization to production strategies.

As the value of oil and gas properties is evaluated, reservoir characterization may be the difference between the purchase, development or sale of oil and gas properties.

Also at the symposium, the McKittrick Canyon Trail Guide and Associated Guides to the Permian Geology of the Guadalupe Mountains National Park will be available for the first time in Midland.

Keynote speaker Howell Pardue, vice president, Dawson Geophysical, will discuss reservoir characterization and delineation using 3-D seismic surveys beginning at 8:45 a.m. Thursday.

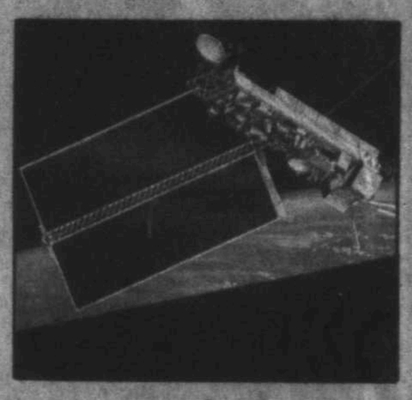

This year's symposium has both an oral and a poster presentation format that includes 16 papers and seven invited posters from national American Association of Petroleum Geologists convention. There is also an exhibits hall.

The data acquisition center for the U.S. Geological Survey above contains the world's largest selection of images of the earth, which are used extensively in geology. Right satellites like this one, transmit thousands of images back to earth to help geologists qualify prospects.

Earth images play role in exploration

■ Earth's picture album helps geologists find oil and gas.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

When the West Texas Geological Society meets this week, chances are someone will discuss a prospect, project or concept that incorporates data from the Earth Resources Observation Systems (EROS) Data Center in Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Established in early 1970s, the facility, which rests in the flat fields of South Dakota in the center of the United States, is actually the earth's picture album.

Containing over 2 million satellite images and 8 million aerial photographs dating from the early thirties, it is imagery that geologists from around the world use to helping solve Earth science problems. In the oilpatch the most commonly used data is Landsat photos which are used as a broad research tool to examine very large areas for prospective drilling sites.

"I use EROS frequently, simply because it is our national archives of earth imagery," says Midland geologist Randall Anderson. "I use their aerial photography frequently to get detailed views of areas after I have looked at using Landsat photos."

Anderson, who works mostly for large oil companies evaluating overseas acreage, said that EROS maintains aerial photos taken of the same region at different times of the year and that gives geoligists new clues.

"The seasons and lack of or presence of vegetation reveal different information about vegetation, different types of stratigraphy and rock formations. Seasonal data is very critical." He said a winter sun, at a low angle, will create shadows that highlight topography.

And while Earth Observation Satellite Corp. (EOS) at Lanham, Maryland owns the newer higher resolution Landsat images, EROS is still the national library of affordable satellite images. The center is permitted to keep and retain two-year old, multispecter data which may sell for as low as $200. The more sophisticated, up-to-date, seven band, TM version at EOS would go for about $4,700.

"A lot of the older Landsat, at EROS is perfectly good for making large regional studies," said Anderson, who says he has used much of the EROS data as a lead-in tool to developing oil and gas prospects. "We have definitely found some oil and gas as a result of the data," he said. To help geologists EROS has approximately 800,000 Landsat multispectral scanner scenes.

Operating under the U.S. Geological Survey's National Mapping Division, the Center works closely with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in the collecting, interpretation and distribution of geological data.

Each year the center receives over 60,000 requests per year and distributes over 250,000 products to scientists all over the world.

The data center also maintains a multidisciplinary scientific staff in geology, hydrology, cartography, geography, agronomy, soils science, forestry, meterorology and climatology to help geologists with clues.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Can it get worse for oil? Ask Bill Clinton

Pitts

What will happen to the oil industry if Bill Clinton is elected? That's a question asked often these days in Midland.

One can never be certain what deeds lurk behind political rhetoric, but if Clinton is elected and his performance on energy is as half-baked as his answers to a recent energy policy questionaire, those oilmen that thought it couldn't get worse may not have seen anything yet.

In September, People for an Energy Policy (PEP), a Houston-based oil group, presented a list of energy questions to both Clinton and Bush in an effort to determine their views on the oil and gas industry, but the results of the questionaire were never widely distributed by the press.

While Bush's views have been throughly publicized with the National Energy Strategy, but Clinton's energy views for the most part are an unknown commodity.

Oilmen who have read the questionaire say that Clinton's responses are clearly those of a man who has far more sympathy for environmental regulation than an ailing industry.

They also note that Clinton lacks a general lack of understanding and vision on energy problems, and that too many of his responses were relegated to bashing Bush and not constructive recommendations.

In his responses, Clinton offers no clear plan to make things better for an industry that has lost 400,000 jobs other than to say he would "get the economy moving again," and on five critical questions he pleaded "no comment."

Here's how he responded to questions on a variety of key issues:

Foreign Oil: Both Bush and Clinton agree that we import too much oil and are dependent upon foreign oil. Clinton, however, basically blames Bush and Reagan for the condition.

Expanding Production: To expand U.S. oil and gas production Clinton would increase the use of natural gas. He would also let producers continue to produce in the present offshore fields, but would prohibit further expansion of offshore drilling (whatever that means.) To expand U.S. production, he says he would simply restart the American economy.

Oil Price Ceilings: Clinton totally dodges the issue of a price ceiling on oil prices with oblique, non-related answers. In three paragraphs, he does not come close to answering the question.

SPR: On additions to the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, Clinton says SPR is a good idea and we should steadily add to it. That's all — no ideas about fill rates, supply sources for SPR oil, or when it should be used.

Dependency: What other policies would he execute to reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil? Clinton, without explaining, once again says only that he would create market-based incentives to encourage domestic production and that he would "get the economy moving again." He also stresses energy conservation and increased use of natural gas.

DOE: When questioned about the role and effectiveness of the Department of Energy, he launches into a political put down of the Bush Administration.

Environmental seminar set for PBPA meeting

By Melia McEwen
Staff writer

In conjunction with its annual meeting, the Permian Basin Petroleum Association will hold its third annual environmental seminar Thursday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center.

Entitled "Production, Protection and Preservation Balance," the seminar will get underway with registration from 7:30 to 8:20 a.m.

At 8:30 a.m., Midland Mayor J.D. Faircloth will welcome participants, followed by the keynote address by Dr. Margaret Maxey, director, the Clint Murchison Sr. Chair of Free Enterprise at the University of Texas, Austin.

A freatured presentation of the seminar will be John Sherman, wildlife management biologist with the Bureau of Land Management who will discuss the Laguna Quatro Playa Lake incident, in which the Environmental Protection Agency tried to fine 38 oil producing companies in the Permian Basin a total of $4 million for disposing brine water in dry playa lakes in southeast New Mexico.

The seminar will conclude with an exhibit display "Solutions to Everday Problems: Using Everyday Tools."

Dr. Maxey, who received her doctorate in in Christian ethics from Union Theological Seminary, uses 35 millimeter slides to challenge charges that the Earth is rapidly becoming a death trap for all forms of life and extremes must be taken to preserve life on Earth.

In addition to serving as director of the Clint W. Murchison Chair of Free Enterprise, she is professor of bioethics in the biomedical engineering program of the College of Engineering at the University of Texas.

Cost of the seminar is $30 per person.

Mesa restructures debt

DALLAS (AP) — Mesa Inc. says it will restructure $600 million in debt to meet cash requirements through 1996.

The natural gas exploration company, led by Boone Pickens, announced a new series of subordinated notes that will be less costly.

It is the latest step in a financial reordering that began two years ago and resulted in the sale of assets and conversion from a partnership to a corporation.

"Mesa believes that it currently has limited access to traditional equity or debt financing due to its negative cash flows and the resulting financial risk resulting from its leveraged capital structure," the company said in a statement Monday.

On June 30, Mesa had total debt of $1.3 billion, cash and securities of $206 million and negative cash flow. At current production levels and prices, Mesa's cash flow is only enough to pay interest expenses, said Sidney Tassin, a financial officer in the company. Other expenses are being met from cash reserves.

The company plans to offer 12 percent senior subordinated discount notes due August 1998 to holders of Mesa's $300 million in notes due in August 1996 and $300 million of 13½ percent notes due May 1999.

"If we can get at least half to exchange, that would be a savings of $38 million a year," Tassin said. The company now pays $75 million a year in interest on the notes.

Mesa can pay interest on the old 12 percent notes due in 1996 with either cash or stock, and that decision will be made on a quarter-to-quarter basis.

While natural prices have improved significantly in recent weeks, Mesa leaders believe they must take further action to improve the company's financial position.

Phillips cancels stock offer

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. has canceled plans to sell common stock of its Phillips Gas Co., which could have brought in as much as $403.9 million.

Instead, Phillips has filed a statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission to issue $200 million of preferred stock.

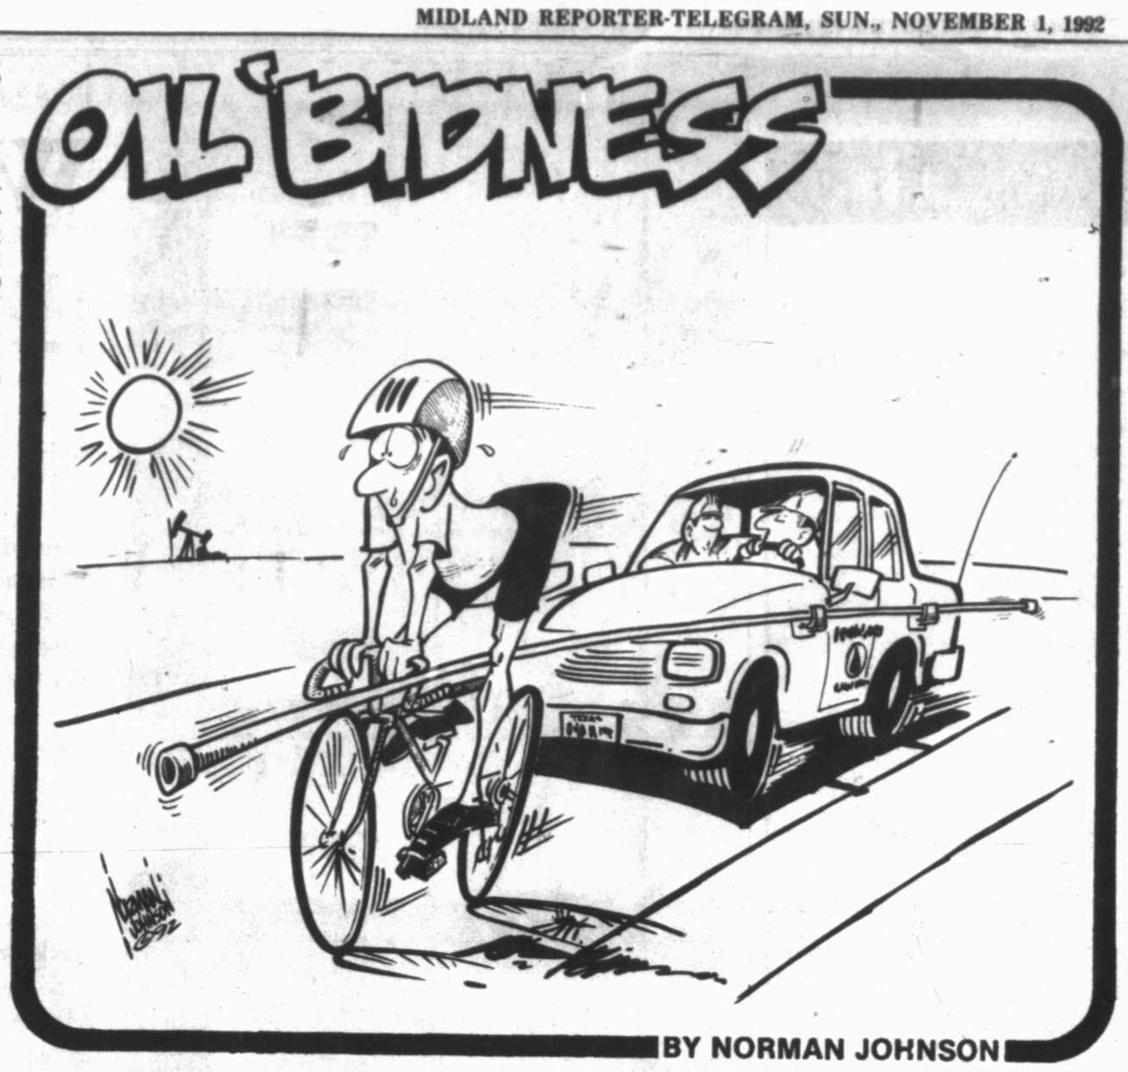

It said the proceeds will be used to help reduce $4.2 billion in long-term debt.

"By providing significant equity capital, this offering helps us accelerate our program of strengthening the balance sheet," said C.J. Silas, chairman and chief executive officer

Phillips Gas Co. was organized in February and owns GPM Gas Corp., its principal operating subsidiary.

Phillips had proposed offering 51 percent of Phillips Gas Co. common stock, or about 18.3 million shares, spokesman George Minter said. The company considered a fair market value at $22 per share, he said.

"With a common stock offering of that size, we couldn't accomplish it in the current market," Minter said. "We postponed that offering because the market didn't allow us to get the right value."

We stack the deck in your favor.

By developing and patenting our Continuous Mix Gel (CMG) System, Smith Energy Services created the industry standard for liquid fracturing gel systems.

This saves you time and money by improving well performance and delivering high quality gel "on-the-fly" with no wasted materrials or disposal problems.

And there is no tank-to-tank viscosity or pH variance as with batch-mixed gels.

We have a full range of products including refined guar, HPG and CMHPG which have been formulated to yield maximum hydration in a minimum amount of time, even at lower temperatures.

The dynamics of our system allow tapered gel loadings with flexible viscosity at the highest rate in the industry. And with the in-line viscometer and mass flowmeter for exact measurements, it is the best monitored and most easily controlled fracturing gel system.

So when you want uniform, high quality gel mixed "on-the'fly," without paying for unused materials, try our CMG System. It's all part of our commitment to excellence.

And you'll have the ace in the hole.

Smith Energy Services. We work best under pressure.

EXPECTATIONS 1993

1992 reflects 30 years of PBPA service to the Permian Basin Petroleum industry. In the past three decades we have enjoyed numerous achievements, met difficult challenges successfully but sadly, lost some battles in the Association's plight to enhance the domestic petroleum industry and to defend our members from the unjust legislation which has dismantled the industry.

Many of the problems of the past remain the challenges of today. Perhaps the most demanding challenge is the increased concern for a balance between energy production, and the protection and preservation of the environment. There are many opportunities for industry expansion in 1993 and we look forward for industry revitalization and for a return to enhanced times. Please make early reservations so that we may better serve you.

PITTS: Clinton on oil

(From 1E)

States Rights: Asked very directly if the states that carry the bulk of U.S. energy demand are receiving equitable compensation for depletion of their non-renewable resources, Clinton offered a simple: "No comment."

He gave another "no comment" answer, when he was asked if states should have the right to establish oil and gas proration.

Tax Incentives: Clinton also gave the same answer when asked if he would create a special set of incentives for producers to prevent the premature abandonment of marginal oil wells — in other words "no comment" to stripper well incentives.

Asked what new tax incentives he would provide to increase domestic production, he quickly fell back on his pat answer that he would resolve the problem by getting the economy on the move.

Floor Prices: On the position of floor prices, Clinton answered that all options, including floor prices on crude oil, should be considered in tackling the problem of energy dependence.

Environment: Clinton says he does not favor the opening of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to exploration under any circumstances, and would not favor it even if oil companies demonstrate they could safely explore and develop it without environmental damage.

His answer about a proposed carbon tax on gasoline and other hydrocarbons was qualified. He said he does not favor a carbon tax "AT THIS TIME." Which in political lingo means, "I probably will later."

Asked if he favored a tax credit for environmental remediation by oil companies he provided another "no comments."

The People For An Energy Policy is made up of both democrats and republicans and attempts to remain neutral on their assessment of each candidates answers, but when asked to respond to the views of each candidate, there was obvious concern over Clinton's responses.

"It appears the democrats are going to have to think harder about this industry," said Lester D. Mallory, Jr., chairman of People For An Energy Policy, who mitigated Clinton's "no response" answers by saying that he probably had a lack of qualified oilpatch advisors.

As an oilman Mallory said he was also concerned about Clinton's lack of a full explanation on expanding offshore drilling. "Both Clinton and Bush want to use natural gas to drive the economy and natural gas comes from offshore."

Mallory said he was also concerned about his environmental responses: "The last thing an industry that is trying to find secure footing needs is a liberal interpretation of environmental regulations. I see the responses as cause for concern, and something the industry should start asking more questions about."

Kurt Abraham, international editor for World Oil, an industry trade magazine, is secretary of PEP, but is not as concerned about Clinton's responses. "Except for ANWAR and dependency on foreign oil, we saw little difference on the answers."

About Clinton's "no comment" answers, Abraham pointed out that each side had been given more than enough time to respond to the questions and extra time to fine tune their answers.

He noted that the Bush side had not taken the questions serious until pressure was applied through White House aide Henson Moore, Rob Mosbacher and congressman Jack Field of Texas, and that the Clinton team was visibily annoyed with the questions.

Pennzoil to sell Purolator Products unit

■ Pennzoil will use proceeds from the sale of the filter company sale to pay down debt.

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co. said Tuesday it will sell its filtration products subsidiary, Purolator Products Co., in a public stock offering.

Pennzoil expects to make about $210 million in proceeds from the sale of 8.5 million shares of common stock in Purolator and the repayment of debts owed by Purolator.

Purolator also will sell 1.5 million shares of its stock, bringing the total offering to 10 million shares. Of the shares, 8 million will be offered in the United States and 2 million will be offered overseas.

Pennzoil said it will use the proceeds of its transactions to reduce its debts. Purolator will not receive any proceeds from the sale.

Pennzoil President James L. Pate said the change "represents another step in our efforts to focus the company on those areas that we consider strategic to future business operations."

Purolator President Roman E. Boruta, who has led the Tulsa-based subsidiary for two years, will assume the additional title of chairman of the board.

Purolator is a leading international designer, manufacturer, marketer and distributor of filtration products and systems. Among its produce are automotive oil, air and fuel filters; residential and commercial heating, ventilation and air conditioning filters; and high-technology liquid filtration products for aerospace, marine, environmental, refinery, petrochemical, and military applications.

Scrap that Book

While many Americans place their treasured photos in scrapbooks for safekeeping, they may be doing more damage than good. Many scrapbooks and adhesives contain photo-damaging peroxides or PVC (polyvinyl chloride) which cause premature deterioration and yellowing of photos and pages.

Photographs and Memories:

From Boxes To Books

The old adage says "A picture is worth a thousand words," but if you can't remember who is in the photo, or when or where it was taken, then a few words might be worth a lot.

With over 90 percent of all U.S. households owning a camera and more than 40 million photos taken nationwide each day, it's no surprise that people have boxes of photos stashed away in attics, basements and closets.

"When you move, you find out just how many pictures you have tucked away," said Narda Poe, a consultant for Creative Memories Shoebox to Showcase program — a photo-preservation program — who recently moved to Midland from Denver.

But rather than tossing your photos in a box or drawer, Mrs. Poe offers a means to display your photos attractively, and more importantly, in a way that will protect them from premature deterioration.

There are many reasons for creating a photo album. With a family album, it helps create an understanding of family heritage, develops a sense of belonging and self-esteem in children, and preserves a family history. If carefully put together, it identifies each person in each of the photos so that years — or even generations — later when the photos resurface, you will be able to remember who's who.

There are several tips that can help even those who believe they don't have a creative bone in their body put together an attractive album. The scrapbook photo album allows the greatest flexibility and creativity, and allows you to document the photos right on the same page, as well as include other mementos with the photos.

It is recommended that photos be developed as soon as possible for best quality. Although glossy finishes are nice, matte finishes are preferred by many because the surface is more scratch resistant.

Before working with photos, it is best to wash your hands thoroughly and to keep them clean while working. Keep your work area clean and avoid eating, drinking or smoking in the area where you are working with your photos. It only takes one mistake to ruin a photo, and it might be one that cannot be replaced.

There are so many ideas for scrapbooks, that creativity is limited only by the imagination. Some people keep a photo album for each child and present it to them as they leave home as a treasured keepsake. Others create Christmas albums with the annual family picture and Christmas letter.

As another idea, "You can start an album with a few photos of a grandchild as a gift, and each year add a page to it for grandparents," Mrs. Poe said. "Grandma can only put so many 5x7 or 8x10 photos on the piano before frames take over the furniture. An album of each grandchild provides a nice way to display the photos without having big frames covering the piano."

Many people don't believe they have the talent or creativity to make a family album, but Mrs. Poe said it can be as elaborate or simple as you like. In Creative Memories' Shoebox to Showcase program, tips are offered for making a photo album interesting and easy with acid-free stickers and colored paper, photo-safe writing pens and creative cropping.

Some tips from Creative Memories for organizing and displaying your photos are:

With the holidays just around the corner, it seems a good time to get out all of the old photo albums or shoeboxes full of pictures and enjoy a stroll down memory lane with family and friends.

Unfortunately, many of you who have carefully placed your photos in scrapbooks may find you've done more damage to your treasured memories than your counterparts who carelessly tossed their photos into a shoebox or drawer. You may notice that the colors in the photos have faded and some are cracking, and that the album's pages have become fragile and yellowed.

Photo albums are supposed to be designed to store and protect the memories of many of the nation's 64 million families. However, in many albums, often just the opposite happens. The materials and construction of the books create a harsh environment for the exact treasures they are meant to protect.

The reason is this: the paper and adhesives used in making many scrapbooks and albums — particularly those which are imported — contain photo-damaging peroxides or PVC (polyvinyl chloride) which research has shown prematurely destroys photos and memorabilia.

The worst type of album to use is also the most popular, the magnetic album. These albums contain cardboard-like pages that grip the photo with sticky adhesive strips covered by a layer of plastic that is peeled back to position the photos then placed over the top of the photos once in place.

These can be harmful for permanent photo storage because of the caustic glues, inferior cardboard and damaging plastic that many use. According to the October 1988 issue of Consumer Research, "Conservators warn that (magnetic) albums can severely damage photographs because of the cheaply made adhesives and cardboard backing."

"The cheap-quality cardboard gives off peroxides that cause yellow staining in the whites of the prints in both black and whites and color prints," according to James M. Reilly, director of the Image Permanence Institute of the Rochester Institute of Technology in The New York Times.

The plastic covering compiles the problem because it not only locks the photograph with the cardboard, but it also gives off gases that attack the images.

"I've had experience with that," said Jody Slaydon, reporter and historian for the Midland Genealogical Society. "It seems real neat when you have them (magnetic albums) because you can just stick the photos in, it so quick and easy. But they ruined some of my pictures. I had some books that stayed closed for a while and when we tried to open them, they were all stuck together."

"My advice is, if you have any photos in a magnetic album, get them out as soon as possible. Over time, it will damage the photos, their colors will change," said Narda Poe, a consultant for Creative Memories Shoebox to Showcase program.

While more simple to use, the adhesives in magnetic albums contain photo-damaging peroxides or PVC (Polyvinyl Chloride). "These chemicals are what cause your photos to yellow," said Mrs. Poe said. "And the plastic cover you lay over the photos often sticks to them. Also, the adhesive is sometimes so strong that if you did need to remove a picture for any reason, you would have to cut it out of the book."

While no product can preserve photos forever, they can be protected against accelerated deterioration by choosing the proper supplies.

Mrs. Poe advises people to look for albums with buffered, acid-free, lignin-free pages. A high acid content in paper is detrimental to any photo or document. Lignin, a by-product of wood pulp is what causes paper to turn yellow or brown and is in all paper products unless specifically removed.

She also warns against mounting material which contain damaging chemicals. Photos should be placed in pockets or mounting with corners made of safe plastics — their trade names are Mylar and Melenex, and are otherwise know as polyethylene, polypropylene, polyestyrene, triacetate and Tyvek.

If you prefer to paste photos in albums, use paper cement. Be careful not to use rubber cement, as it has chemicals that will damage photos.

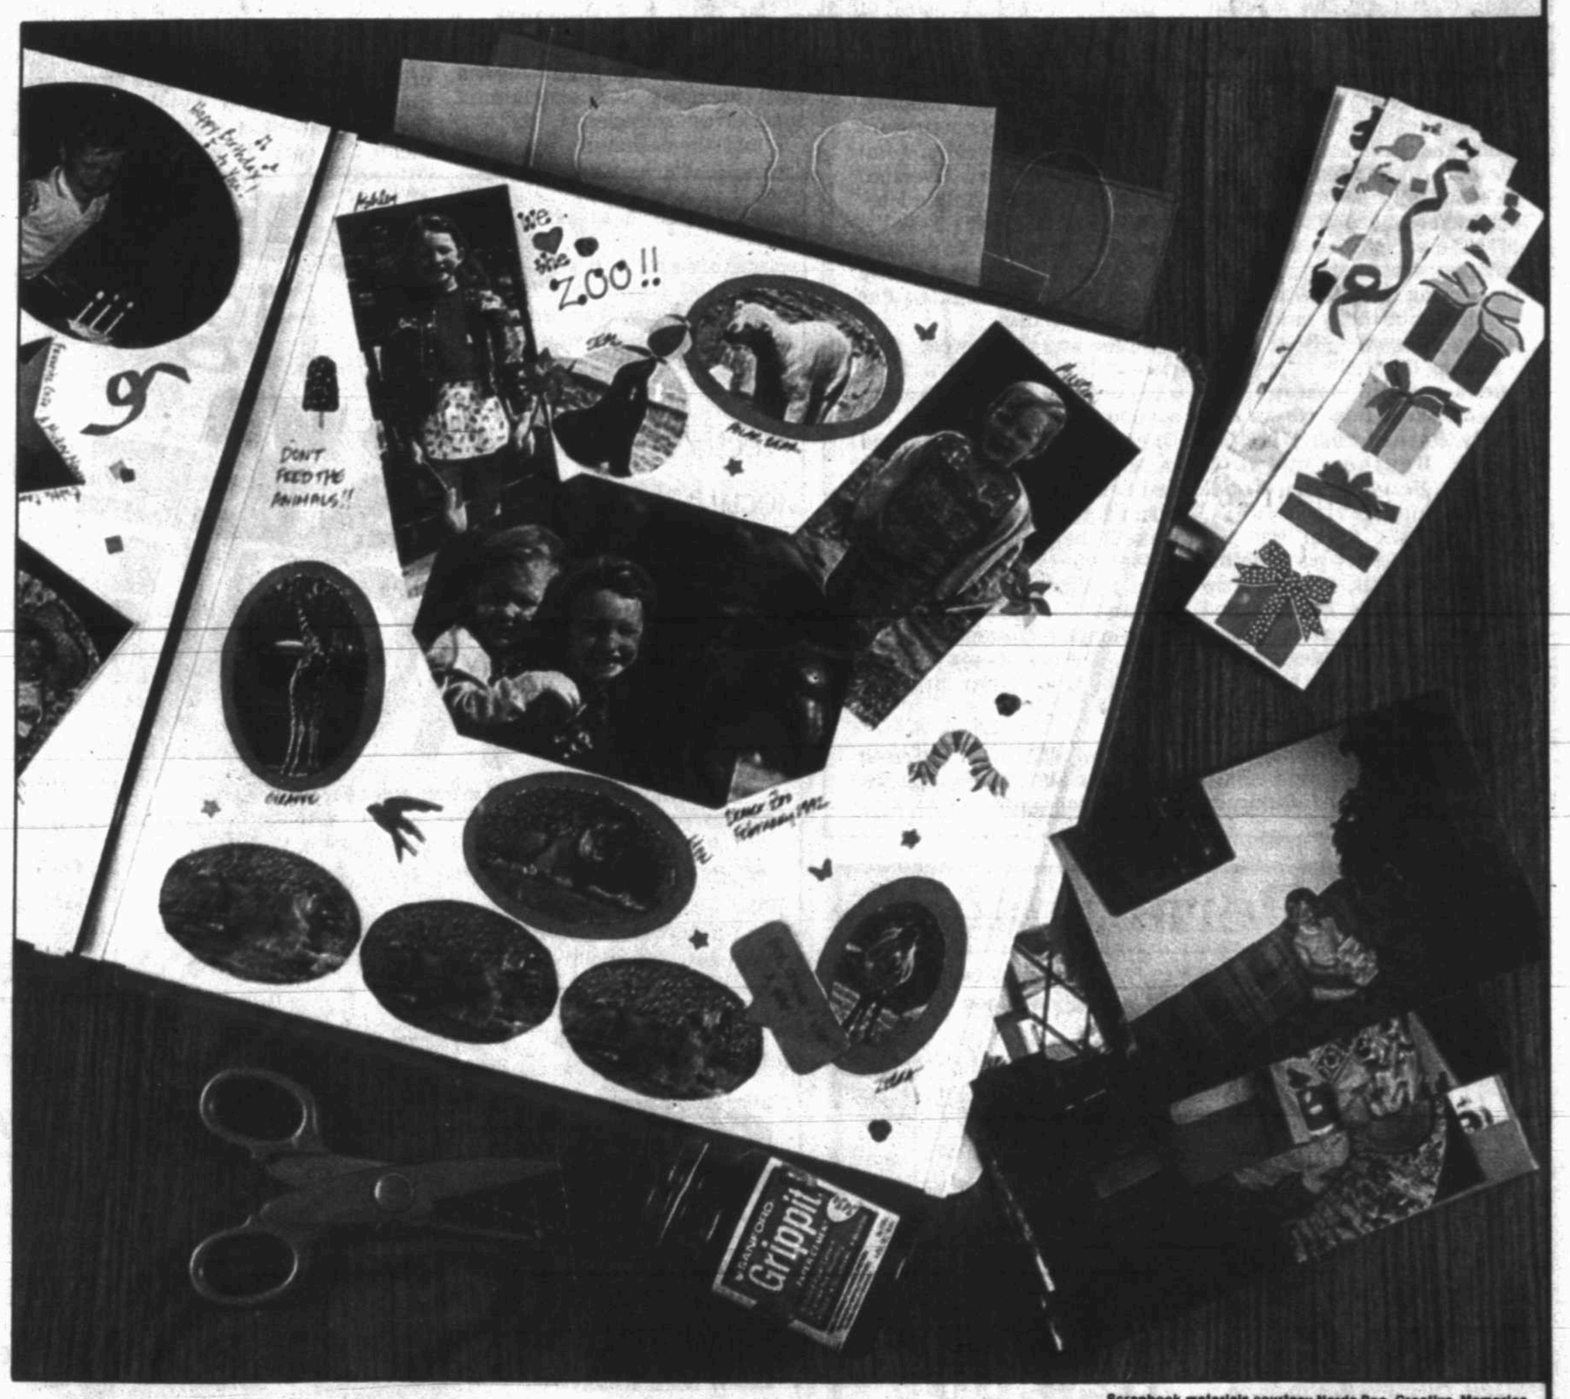

With paper cement, it is important to work quickly (as it dries fast), covering all edges of the photo with cement and add a quick swipe down the middle. When the paper cement is dry, you can use a pick-up square to remove excess paper cement by dabbing on the photo and rubbing around the photo.

It is best if the album pages lie flat, to keep from bending or cracking.

As with plastics and adhesives, high-acid content in paper for album pages and colored-paper for matting also can be dangerous to photos. High acid content accelerates fading of photos, as well as slow deterioration of the page itself causing pages to become too fragile for viewing by future generations.

Heavy duty, low acid paper pages are available at some craft and hobby stores and through Creative Memories. The low acid pages will not speed fading of photos nor chemically react with photos. Pages from Creative Memories also has a jeeped (reenforced) edge to prevent wear

By carefully selecting acid-free products, a scrapbook photo album can creatively display treasured photos and memorabilia that can be passed down for generations.

■ Be sure that selected albums and adhesives are photo-safe. Scrapbooks with acid-free pages are best, as acid will destroy your photos. Also, look for albums that allow the pages to lie as flat as possible to keep the photographs from bending or cracking.

■ If you have accumulated a lot of photos and memorabilia to place into scrapbooks, don't let the task overwhelm you. Start with the more recent items and add new items as your receive them, which will keep you from getting further behind. Then — as your time permits — work through photos by decades and then by approximate years and place them in albums.

■ Document all photos. It's important to write names, dates and events

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Opera fans enjoy recent performance

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Patron members of the Midland Opera Theater were treated to a lovely buffet dinner last weekend prior to the Midland performance of Puccini's classic "La Boheme."

McKnight-Harrison

Cocktails preceded the six o'clock dinner, which was held at the home of Janet and Tony Sam. Guests dined on Venetian Chicken, Almond Rice Pilaf, Spinach Salad with Prosciutto Dressing, Garlic Basil Toast and finger desserts of Lemon Tarts with Berries and Chocolate Turtle Tarts.

Among those enjoying the dinner party were Lee Harley, MOT president, with her husband, George; Sue and Bill Marshall, Paula and Frank Cahoon, Jean and George Donnelly, Charlene (Mrs. John) Waddill, Lexey Fender, Betty Jo (Mrs. George) Moberly, Carolyn Roden and Lynn Durham.

There was no lingering over coffee as patrons had to rush to Midland High School to join other operagoers for the eight o'clock curtain.

Set in the romantic environment of bohemian Paris, "La Boheme" contains Puccini's most beloved music and remains one of the most popular operas in the world. It was performed here in English and with a full orchestra by Western Opera Theater, the touring company of the San Francisco Opera Center.

The large crowd in attendance enjoyed visiting over coffee during intermission in the Commons Area of the high school, in agreement that it was a magnificent evening of entertainment.

AT A SURPRISE birthday party recently, longtime Midland resident Ann Semple was honored on what was dubbed her "Fabulous 50."

A host of friends gathered at the home of Greg Dove for the event, which included a jazz rendition of "The Birthday Song," arranged especially for the occasion by the Midland-Odessa Symphony's Chorale director Rob Hunt and sung by a quartet from Midland College's new pops group, Vocal Point.

Masses of multi-colored balloons and streamers and twinkle lights decorated the home. A beautifully decorated birthday cake, topped with a bottle of champagne and a balloon bouquet, was the focal point of the serving table. Guests signed a gigantic birthday card hanging on one wall.

Among the well-wishers were Sheila and Bill Morrow, Nancy and Skeet Doss, Susan and Kelly Barnes and daughter, Julie; Douthea and Bill Shaner, Betty Barnes, Frank Petty and Kevin Oyenik, whose artistic talent was evident in the festive party decor.

Born in Texas, Ann grew up in Massachusetts, but returned to her native state after college. A teacher at Henderson Elementary School, she has resided in Midland since the fall of 1963. She has been a longtime Midland Community Theatre volunteer and is immediate past president of Summer Mummers. She also was president of the French Heels Club, a social organization for single women, in her early days here.

Belated birthday wishes to Ann, whose birthdate is Oct. 29.

MEMBERS OF MIDLAND Country Club Ladies Association and their guests enjoyed a delightful program of Broadway music during the association's October luncheon meeting.

Dallasites Dave Tanner, who plays the piano, teams up with Linda Wilcox to sing songs from the Great White Way. Their breezy patter and interaction is fun to observe, but also serves to inform. In their fast-paced program, they tell the stories behind the songs.

Their recent performance included tales about the music greats of an earlier era, including George M. Cohen, Irving Berlin, George Gershwin, Jerome Kern and the team of Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein, all part of the Golden Age of Broadway.

Dave also entertained with piano music while the ladies enjoyed a luncheon of Halloween Crepes and Goblin Pie. Tables were decorated with clever Halloween arrangements, which were later awarded as door prizes.

Hostesses for the social hour preceding lunch were Sue (Mrs. Sam) Conner, Jan (Mrs. Robert) Hover and Ricki (Mrs. Charles) Perry.

Among those seen in the crowd were Deloris (Mrs. Buddy) Sipes, Donna (Mrs. Mark) Martin, Mitzi (Mrs. Byrne) O'Neill, Sarah (Mrs. Lowell) Branum, Ginger (Mrs. Jimmy) Floyd and Marie (Mrs. Granville) Hahn.

BORN OCT. 28, 1992, in New York City, Dottie Fox celebrated her Big "Seven-Oh" this past week.

To mark the milestone occasion, a festive party was held last weekend at Ranchland Hills Country Club. Her husband, Jack; twin daughters, Cindy Warburton of Bartlesville, Okla., and Cissy Fox of Midland, along with Gene Carlson, hosted the event. Missing from the family circle was Cindy's husband, John Michael, who remained in Bartlesville for business reasons.

Guests enjoyed an array of mouth-watering delicacies and a delicious birthday cake while reminiscing about their various associations with the honoree.

Among the many guests were Bebe Fisher, Dean (Mrs. Tom) Kelly, Thelma (Mrs. Overton) Black, Golda and ArDee Morgan, Katie (Mrs. V.V.) McGrew, Beulah Ray (Mrs. Raymond) Leggett and Ginny Ketter with her daughter, Pat Snyder of Dallas.

Dottie and Jack were married in 1945 in Brooklyn, N.Y., and moved to Austin soon after, so that Jack could attend the University of Texas. They lived in Midland, Levelland, Kermit and Seminole, Okla., before returning to Midland in 1955 to make it their permanent home.

Over the years, Dottie has been a loyal volunteer at the Midland Community Theatre and Summer Mummers. In addition, she has always taken a big role in activities involving the girls.

on all photos, but many also like to include feelings, humorous captions or quotes. This helps to pass on day-to-day life events to future generations. This can be done with a number 2 pencil on the back of each photo.

■ To improve the look of photos and provide the best use of space in a scrapbook, use creative cropping. Trim pictures with too much sky or dead space. Photos trimmed into shapes create an interest. Using cookie cutters or templates as patterns is good way to shape photos. However, if you are using Polaroid photos, do not cut them. Exposing the print's chemistry to the air could cause the image to deteriorate and the alkaline developing gel can irritate skin and eyes.

■ You don't have to save and mount every photo. Pick the best, most representative photos of an event and mount only those.

■ While photos are wonderful keepsakes, you should also include special mementos with your photos, like a child's first lock of hair, brochures and postcards from your vacation, cards from special occasions.

■ Newspaper clippings are wonderful information items to include in a photo album; however, newsprint is high in acid content and can "migrate" to harm photos on the same or facing pages. It is suggested that high quality photocopies of the news clippings be made for inclusion, and have the originals stored in a cool, dry, dark, safe place.

■ Because black and white photos outlast color photos, it is advised that one roll of black and white film be taken per year.

■ Do not store your negatives in your album or in the same place as the album. If something happens to the album, it would also destroy the negatives stored in or nearby it. Store them in marked white envelopes in a safe, cool, dry place. A fireproof box is best.

■ Albums should be stored in an upright position, not stacked which causes abrasion problems. Also, don't put them in a hot attic or damp basement. The best place to keep them is in an area where you live — in a temperature range of 65-70 degrees and low humidity.

'Each photo you take documents only 1/100 of a second of your life. If you have 3,000 photos, then only 30 seconds have been documented.'

— Creative Memories

To ensure their treasurers are kept intact for future generations, some people even go so far to keep what they call "today" and "tomorrow" albums. Because exposure to sunlight and fingerprints can shorten a photo's lifespan, the today album is to look at and enjoy now and the tomorrow album is for posterity.

Consultants for Creative Memories have become popular speakers for organizations, teaching how to preserve and display family photos. The seminars are educational as well as hands-on. Anyone interested in hosting or attending a workshop should call Mrs. Poe at 520-6540. Also, she will be teaching a Continuing Education Course at Midland College this spring.

One of the biggest tasks in creating a photo scrapbook is avoiding procrastination. But Mrs. Poe said if you keep supplies on hand, all together in the same place, it makes the task easier. Some people prefer to decorate the album as they go, while others prefer to get the photos and captions in place, then add finishing touches as they have time.

The important thing is to find a system that works best for you and your time schedule, and then stick to it.

And just to emphasize the importance of keeping a scrapbook, Creative Memories information offers this thought to ponder: "Each photo you take documents only 1/100 of a second of your life. If you have 3,000 photos, then only 30 seconds have been documented. When you look at this fact, you understand the need to embellish your family album with careful labeling and photo-journalism. Without this, you have only 30 seconds of memories... valuable only to those who can remember them. With the added details, you have a lifetime of memories valuable to you, your family, friends and your future generations."

ALBUMS: Protect your memories and tear from use and the books are designed so that pages lay flat when opened, preventing photos from bending and cracking.

When decorating your scrapbook, be sure to use acid-free pens to document your photos, as other types of inks will fade with time. Be careful not to press down when writing on the backs of photos and do so only with a pencil, as ball points have a tendency to break the photos' emulsion and ink pens have a tendency to smear.

While the products which are safe for your photos may be harder to find and a little more expensive, you must remember that you're saving an important part of your family's history. As a consultant for Creative Memories, Mrs. Poe has products which are safe for photos available, or with a little careful searching, most safe products can be found at craft or hobby stores.

A special product — called Wei T'o — is available by special order from Creative memories that is used to treat memorabilia such as report cards, newsprint, postcards, brochures, etc. which you might also like to include in your scrape book. This product neutralizes all acids and preserves paper for at least 100 years. (But it is not for use on photos.)

"It's important to be selective about the types of materials used in putting together a family album," Mrs. Poe warned. She offers workshops and demonstrations to aid those who are interested in protecting their favorite photos. She also will be teaching a Continuing Education Course at Midland College in spring. For information or to set up a workshop, Mrs. Poe can be reached at 520-6540.

AT WIT'S END

Jury is still out on issue of sound, silence

By Erma Bombeck

Ever since my kids were right about the war in Vietnam they have seen fit to challenge every decision I have ever made.

Bombeck

When I told them it was medically proven that if they went to bed with wet hair, they would be dead by morning, they not only laughed, they washed their hair before climbing into bed and appeared at the table the next morning and proclaimed themselves "miracles."

I told them that if they were stupid enough to buy old "classic" cars with 200,000 miles on them, they'd lose their shirts. I was with one of them the day a car pulled up to my son's car at a traffic light and the driver offered him twice for the car what he paid for it. I hate it when that happens.

One of my better sermons was, "You can't possibly concentrate on what you're reading with that loud music blaring in your ears." Now it seems that theory has also bitten the dust.

Someone did a poll of nearly 700 adults, 18 years or older, and discovered excessive noise is not a problem for 55 percent of workers in the marketplace. In fact, many of them said they are more productive surrounded by decibels than they are in a quiet environment. Get outta here.

You can't tell me that when you're surrounded by music that cracks plaster, your brain is capable of comprehending written words on a page. My kids are so "into music" they can't even comprehend what I'M saying.

I get very nervous when I'm driving in traffic and I hear music from a pick-up truck before I can even see the truck. As it pulls alongside me at the light, I get a glimpse of the driver who is clenching a paper cup between his teeth (looking for the world like Porky Pig) and drumming with his hands on the steering wheel with his head swaying back and forth. This person isn't concentrating on driving. He barely knows what planet he is on.

I am a person who thinks funeral homes are too noisy. Bubbles coming up from a water cooler after it has been used make me lose my train of thought. Maybe it's me, but if noise is compatible with concentration, then how come librarians tolerate nothing above a whisper? Why do we have people complaining when someone behind them in a theater chews ice?

I've caved in to a lot of new theories during my child-raising years. I'm willing to admit that maybe you can kiss a dog on the lips and not end up in the hospital. But this business of being able to concentrate with your ears being detonated by noise ... I don't think so.

Seeds for Thought

Dried flowers easy to make

By Deborah A. Benge

You can collect treasures from your garden to adorn your home year around by making permanent dried arrangements. The same colorful flowers from your garden can be dried for use in bouquets, wreaths, baskets and various other ways.

Benge

Drying flowers is an old practice. For hundreds of years gardeners have preserved flowers by drying.

The so-called everlasting types, such as strawflowers, have been among the most popular, but grandmother and great-grandmother probably tried their hands at drying many other garden flowers as well.

Today dried flowers have become increasingly popular for interior decoration.

A dried or permanent arrangement can be a year around bright spot in any home, and drying flowers can be both easy and fun.

There are many summer flowering annuals which are excellent for drying. Globe amaranth, celosia, marigold, salvia, cosmos, larkspur, zinna, coreopsis and gloriosa daisy are among the most popular, though roses, ageratum, dahlia, calendula, cornflower, chrysanthemum, dianthus, aster and daisies also make fine dried specimens.

Drying flowers is such a rewarding experience because it is easy to to, the flowers usually dry remarkably well and they last for many years.

Flowers can be preserved by hanging, pressing or treatment with various drying agents.

If you would like to dry your own bouquets, cut the blossoms when their color is at its peak. Remove the leaves, the try one of the following methods:

■ Hanging. My favorite method of drying is air-drying or hanging. It is easy and you don't need any special materials.

As a general rule, flowers need only to have the leaves removed and to be hung upside down in a warm, dry, dark place until the moisture content is evaporated.

Attics, closets or pantries are good places to hang flowers for drying.

■ Pressing. Pressed flowers are easy and quick, though the contour is lost and flowers are flat.

For pressing use unglazed paper, such as newsprint or an old telephone book. Place the flowers so that they do not overlap between several thicknesses of the paper. Weight down with a heavy object.

The time required for drying can be anywhere from two to four weeks.

■ Drying agents. Flowers can be dried by burying them in materials such as sand, borax, cornmeal or combinations of any two. These materials are successful for certain flowers, but undependable for others.

Silica gel is the most commonly used drying agent and does a wonderful job. This compound has the capacity to absorb large quantities of moisture and can quickly dehydrate cut flowers.

Flowers minus leaves are buried in the gel in a closed container and left for about a week.

Silica gel an be used over and over by redrying the gel in a warm oven.

■ Microwave oven. The versatile microwave oven, which has proven itself so useful to the chef, also has the capacity for drying your favorite flowers.

Combined with some of the drying agents we spoke of above, flowers can be dried in no time.

After you've dried your flowers, put a strand of No. 2 florist's wire through each flower's head, securing the wire by bending it into a hook at the flower-head end.

The final step is to wrap all wire with green floral tape and presto, you're ready to do something creative.

Have real flowers in your home year round by drying gifts from the garden. Don't miss the beautiful flowers of fall for drying.

Dear Abby

World changing, but reader's not

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Who changed everything when I wasn't looking? I've noticed lately that everything is farther away than it used to be. It's even twice as far to the corner — and they have added a hill!

Van Buren

I've given up running for the bus; it leaves earlier than it used to. It seems to me they are making the stairs steeper than in the old days, and have you noticed the smaller print the newspapers are now using? And there's no sense in asking anyone to read aloud anymore, as everyone speaks in such a low voice, I can hardly hear them.

The material in dresses is so skimpy now — especially around the waist and hips — it's almost impossible to reach one's shoelaces! Also, the sizes don't run the way they used to. The 12's and 14's are so much smaller.

Even people are changing. They are so much younger than they used to be when I was their age. On the other hand, people my own age are so much older than I am. I ran into an old classmate of mine the other day, and she had aged so much, she didn't recognize me!

I got to thinking about my poor dear friend while I was combing my hair this morning, and in so doing, I glanced at my own reflection.

Really now — they don't even make good mirrors like they used to! — ROSE LA MONICA, PHILLIPSBURG, N.J.

DEAR ROSE: Beautiful! It's healthy to accept with good humor the fact that we can't kid Mother Nature — nor can we fool Father Time.

DEAR ABBY: Our unmarried 23-year-old daughter had a routine physical that included a PAP test. We were shocked to learn it revealed cervical cancer. It was frightening, but Sara was treated, and her checkups since then show no recurrence.

Abby, she was fortunate! Many women do not have PAP tests, because they think they are "too young" or are not sexually active — but they do need a PAP test. If Sara had not had this test, I shudder to think what would have become of her.

Please, Abby, urge young women to have PAP tests regularly. — A KENTUCKY READER

DEAR READER: Your message is well worth space in my column. A PAP test should be a routine part of a gynecological examination. A woman's physical examination is incomplete without it.

DEAR ABBY: We hear about how terrible teen-agers are, but I want to share what I saw this afternoon.

While looking for some greeting cards, I noticed two boys about 14 or 15 going through the "cards for all occasions." One boy asked his friend, "What kind of card are you looking for?" The friend replied, "I want to get a card for my mom."

The first boy asked, "How come? It's not Mother's Day." "My mom is having a bad day," his friend replied, "and I want to find something to cheer her up."

Abby, I could have hugged that kid! He must have been raised by someone very special to have turned out that way. — A.L. REEVES, BRIGHTON, MICH.

DEAR A.L.: What a heartwarming scene you observed. You're right; children learn compassion and sensitivity at their mother's (or father's) knee.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Hotline offered during National Diabetes Month

More than 14 million Americans have diabetes. People who are overweight and have a family history of diabetes are at high risk for developing both type I and type II diabetes. The disease also appears to be more prevalent among certain segments of the population, affecting an estimated 3 million black Americans, 2.5 million Hispanic Americans and almost 2 million American Indians.

Diet modification is one of the most important components of diabetes management. During November, National Diabetes Month, consumers can call the Sweet 'N Low® Toll-free Hotline at 1-880-221-1763 for advice on making traditional recipes suitable for the diabetic diet. The hotline, which is staffed by nutritionists, will offer many suggestions on how to reduce or eliminate sugar, sodium, fat and cholesterol without sacrificing taste in a favorite recipe.

Consumers can call the hotline 8 a.m.-4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Callers will receive a free copy of "Healthy Holiday Recipes," and "Diabetes: Understanding Your Diet," containing information about healthy eating.

Blast from past: Troll dolls make popular comeback

Associated Press

After going into hiding for 25 years, troll dolls are back.

The elflike creatures with wild hair that defies styling are being snapped up by children whose parents — and sometimes grandparents — once collected them.

And they're still ugly.

"They're so ugly, they're cute," says Karen Parkison, assistant manager of Mr. Bulky's in Northpark Mall in Joplin, Mo. "Everybody is buying them. Young kids, older people, even teen-age boys."

Trolls were first introduced in the United States around 1960. (Thomas Dam of Denmark produced "Dam" dolls, which several competitors copied.) Trolls were popular until the mid-'960s. Though the fad faded, trolls remained on the market without much success — until recently.

Russ Berrie and Co. of Oakland, N.J., one of the biggest troll makers, expects to do nearly $150 million in sales in trolls this year, nearly 40 percent of its project overall sales of $400 million. The company has more than 500 troll or troll-related items in its lines.

"One little girl walked in and bought two $20 trolls," said Mr. Bulky's manager Patricia Roerig. "I sold three to one lady. People will pay $30 and not bat an eye."

Roerig says some Mr. Bulky franchises in bigger cities are selling $15,000 to $20,000 in trolls each month. Trolls account for 5 percent to 15 percent of the shops' total sales, she said.

The new breed of trolls comes in a variety of sizes and styles — foreign trolls, professional trolls and holiday trolls. Some are scented. Some carry signs or wear banners. Some stick out their tongues.

Know a new bride? A wedding party of trolls is on the market. Troll lovers can also choose from witch trolls, farmer trolls and rock 'n' roll trolls. They can buy 1-inch trolls and trolls that are more than a foot tall. Prices range from about $1 to $85.

Word common in November

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The 15th century was the first time the word "vote" was noted in print in its modern meaning, according to etymology authorities. "Vote," from the Latin word for vow or wish, was used in this sense primarily in Scotland prior to the 1500s when its present meaning came into general use.

Today, "vote" means a formal expression of opinion in response to a proposed decision. "Voter" came into English use in 1578, and "voteless" (having no vote) appeared in 1672. "Suffrage," the right to vote, became part of language in the 14th century and is ultimately from a Latin word meaning vote or political support.

Cholesterol Discovery Passes Mom's Test

WASHINGTON -- The mother of a research scientist recently lowered her cholesterol more than 20% without changing her eating habits.

After a visit to her doctor, a Florida woman learned that her cholesterol level was an elevated 308 and she was encouraged to change her eating habits. When she returned 10 weeks later, the doctor was astounded that her cholesterol level had dropped to 243. Asked if she achieved the amazing results just by dieting she replied, "No I didn't diet at all, in fact I ate the things I shouldn't eat like bacon, sausage and ice cream. The only thing I did different was take some tablets my son gave me."

The woman's son is Dr. William Morris, director of research and development at National Dietary Research, an organization that seeks nutritional solutions to health problems. Dr. Morris admits that the tablets called Vancol 5000 were designed as a dietary supplement to be used with a low fat diet plan. "She just wanted to put the tablets to the test," says Dr. Morris. "Of course I was pleased with the results she achieved, but now were working on reducing some of the fat in her diet to lower her cholesterol even further."

Vancol 5000 is a chewable food tablet that contains extracts from foods known to lower cholesterol. According to the exclusive distributor for Vancol 5000, inquiries about the new discovery are being received from all over the country and has peaked the interest of doctors used to prescribing expensive cholesterol lowering drugs. A 30 day supply of the Vancol 5000 Chloesterol Lowering Plan is only $29.98.

Collection of modern art forms

For Exxon engineer Mike Andrews, photography is a serious hobby.

"I've been in over 60 shows around the United States," Andrews said. "I don't earn much money from it, but I do a lot of it."

Andrews, of Midland, is among the artists whose work was accepted in the Texas Fine Arts Association's "New American Talent: The Seventh Exhibition."

More than 1,250 artists from across the nation entered this all-media exhibition that was juried by Richard Marshall, curator of exhibitions at the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York City.

From the original 59 artists whose work was shown at Austin's Laguna Gloria Art Museum last May, the TFAA — the oldest and largest statewide visual arts service organization — selected works by 46 of the artists to tour the state under TFAA's Art on Tour Program.

Marshall said the exhibition reflects "the spectrum of current attitudes about aesthetics, culture, politics and sexuality that pervade contemporary society."

Part of the art tour, titled "Selections from Texas Fine Arts Association's New American Talent: The Seventh Exhibition," is on display at Gallery 1114.

The exhibition will be at the gallery, 1114 N. Big Spring St., through Dec. 3. Hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday through Sunday. The Midland showing was made possible by the Arts Assembly of Midland.

"This is a very selective show," said Andrews, indicating he was surprised to have his work accepted since he is a photographer.

"Some jurors have a bias against photography. I was pleasantly surprised to find that this juror accepted quite a few photographs into this show."

Andrews disagrees with what he calls "a bias against fine art photography being an art form."

"I've got a bumper sticker that says, 'Art is in the artist regardless of the medium.' So I think many things would qualify as art if it's practiced at a high level."

For Andrews, another one of his bumper stickers reflects his feeling about the artist's role in society: "The artist's place is at the growing edge of consciousness."

Unlike many artists whose interest in their medium dates back to childhood, Andrews first developed an interest in photography 20 years ago when he was attending an engineering conference in Vancouver, British Columbia.

"I bought a camera and a couple of lenses," recalled Andrews, 47, who was living in Idaho at the time. "I wanted to take pictures in Idaho and Washington and Canada. I had always had an appreciation of nature so it was easy to make the transition to recording what I saw."

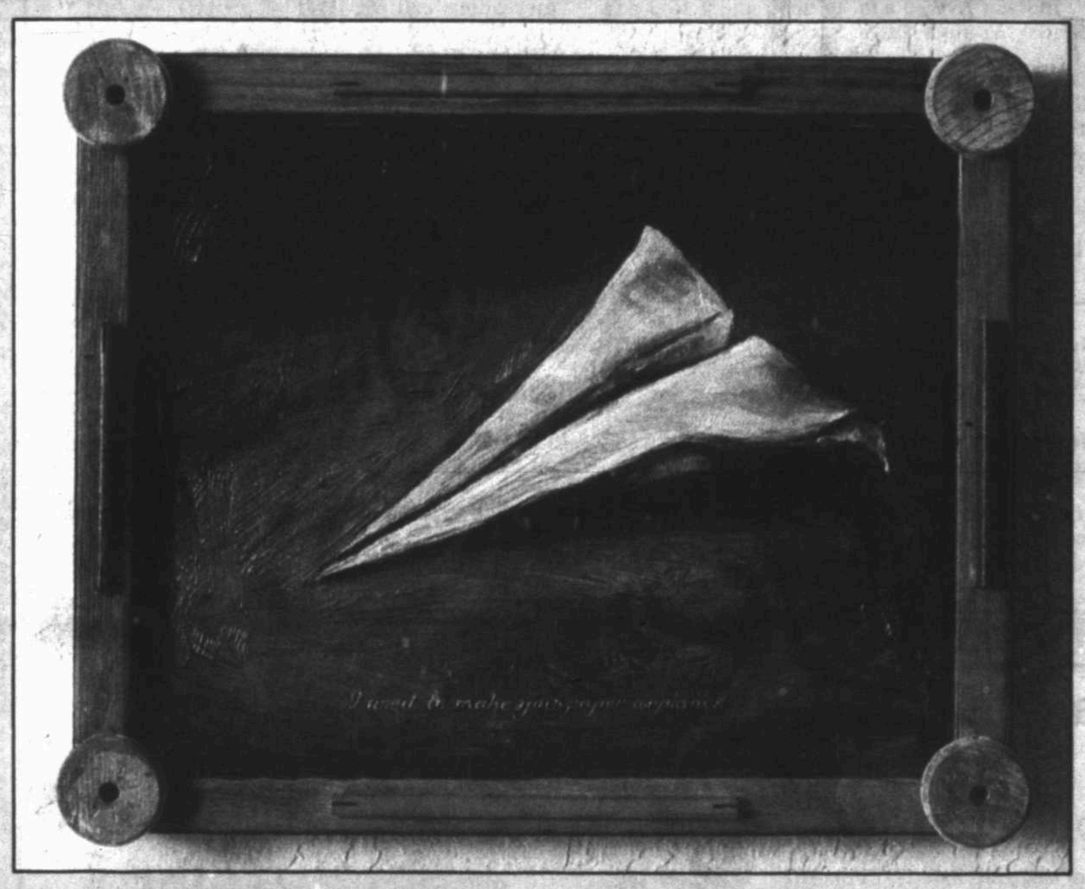

Andrews began his "serious hobby" by shooting color slides of scenery. In the late 1970s, he was living in Washington state where he worked for Exxon's nuclear affiliate and also took photographs for a studio specializing in weddings and parties.

When he enrolled in several photography courses at a junior college there, Andrews developed "a serious interest in fine art photography." During these courses, he became interested in black and white photographs and in developing and printing his own photographs.

In 1981 when Andrews switched to the oil and gas industry, Exxon transferred him to Midland. He has been "fairly active photographically since then," he said.

In addition to his photograph in the TFAA's exhibition, Andrews currently has a one-man show at Odessa College featuring 30 photographs.

"The photograph in the Texas Fine Arts' 'New American Talent' show was made by photographing through a piece of glass that was painted on," Andrews said. "I've now extended the concept of painting on glass to painting on (color) photographs using watercolors. The show at OC will be the first show of this work."

Midlander Mike Andrews, top right, stands in front of his cibachrome print "Past and Future Contemplate the Tree of Life." The photograph was chosen to be in the Texas Fine Arts Association's "New American Talent: The Seventh Exhibition." Gary F. Smith's acrylic on canvas, "Interior View," top left, greets those viewing the TFAA's exhibition" at Gallery 1114, 1114 N. Big Spring St. Another piece of artwork that is part of the exhibition is the oil painting on canvas, "I Used to Make You Paper Airplanes," above, by Eilene Houston-Carver.

Starting Jan. 9, a showing of Andrews' work will be on display at Midland College's McCormick Gallery.

In creating his work, Andrews focuses on the art rather than the craft.

"In photography, the craft is how you make the thing that goes on the wall, and the art is the vision or the seeing of things — seeing the potential of the image.

"I'm actually not very involved in much of the crafts because I have an allergy to darkroom chemicals. I have had to limit myself to printing black and white, but I have to be careful. So, I don't have a great deal of interest in darkroom work. Most of my photographs are made in the camera and don't

"The Swivel Gun" by Tom Lovell

NationsBank to display art

Staff report

NationsBank Midland will be displaying 50 to 60 pieces of art Wednesday through Friday.

The artwork represents artists from three galleries including Altermann and Morris Galleries, Dallas and Houston; Canyon Art Gallery, Canyon; and Rice Fine Art, Amarillo.

Of special interest will be 10 original works by Tom Lovell. Lovell was commissioned by the Abell-Hanger Foundation to do a series of 14 historical paintings that now hang in the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum. Four of the original works to be shown are studies of the paintings in the Petroleum Museum.

Lovell is a member of the Cowboy Artists of America and the National Academy of Western artists. He is the only painter to have won the Prix de West award twice at the National Cowboy Hall of Fame. A major retrospective of his works was held this spring at the Cowboy Hall of Fame. He also was named to the Society of Illustrators' Hall of Fame. A major book on his works is to be published next year.

Original works from Frank G. McCarthy, Paul Calle, A.D. Greer, John Leone, Robert Wood, G. Harvey, John Paul Strain and William Whitaker also will be in the show.

Banking hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday.

Prices of the artwork range from $200 to around $25,000.

Other local shows that Andrews has participated in this fall include the Midland Arts Association's Fall Juried Show at MC and the In Focus exhibition at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin.

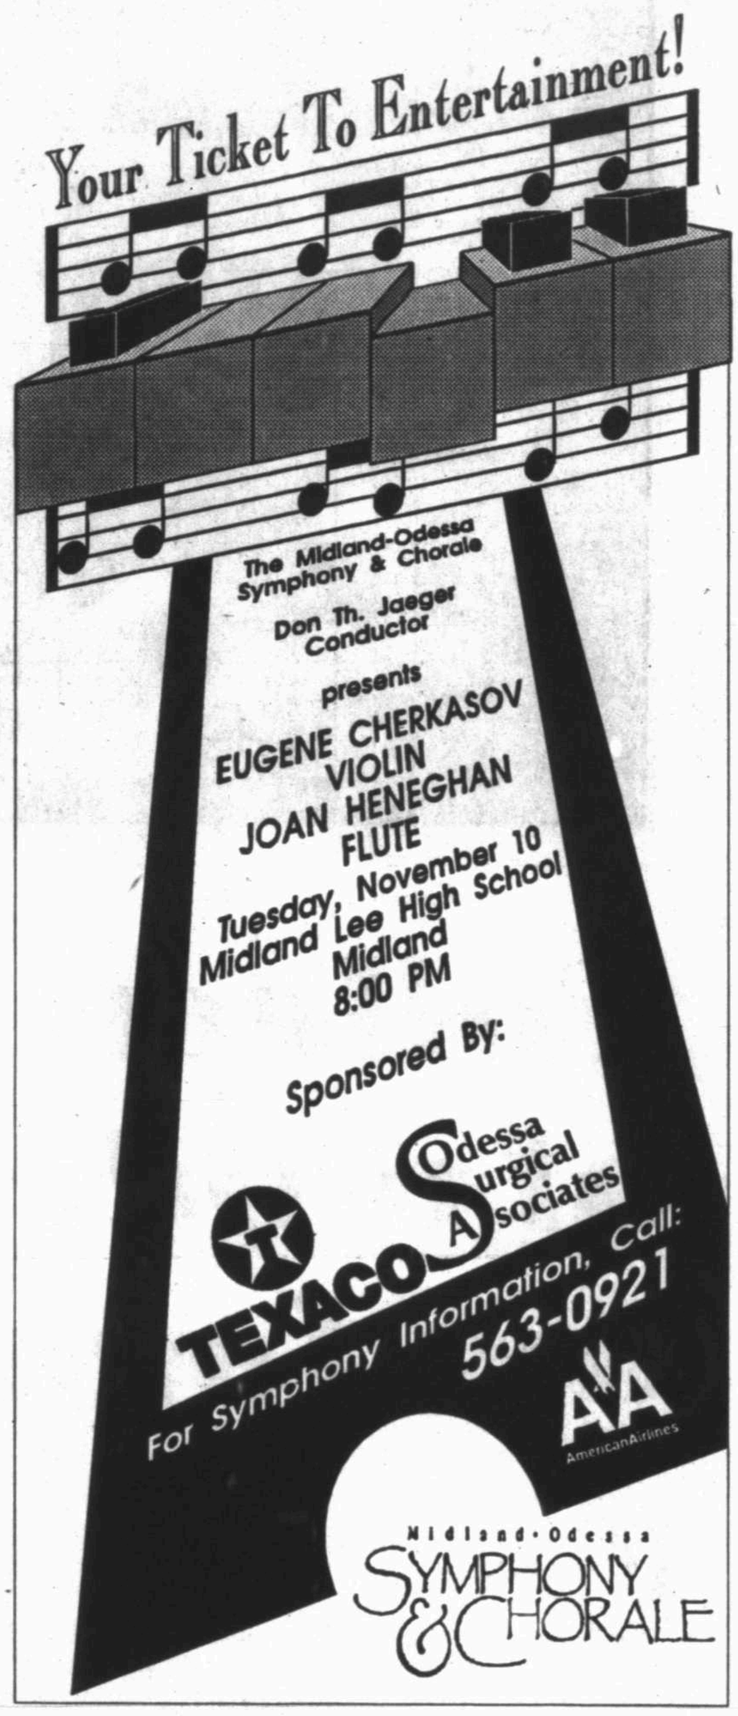

Andrews said it has been very helpful being a member of In Focus, a non-profit organization for photographers.

"In Focus has brought me together with my peers for critiques and for group shows. I think the interaction between the members has been very useful for me both in meeting other photographers and in helping to have my work shown."

An engineer by profession, Andrews said he is not someone who sees photography as a full-time business, although he has long-term goals in photography.

"I'd like to continue taking photographs and continue to grow in my viewing and making of images," he said. "I'm probably in personality not like most engineers.

"I can shift into that mode, but I probably have more of a non-numerical, non-rational bias. If you look at the right brain/left brain, I'm balancing the left-brain engineer with the right-brain artist."

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: columnist James J. Kilpatrick, actresses Betsy Palmer and Marcia Wallace, golfer Gary Player.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Those who love to gamble for high stakes will be tempted to take a plunge today. Chances are you will not be that successful. Romance is a much better bet!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your thoughts center on your material assets, and ways to make them grow. Concentrate on saving rather than spending now. Recreation is the name of the game this afternoon.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be considering a move to a nearby city or a whole new career. If married, talk with mate before making any employment overtures. A once-in-a-lifetime opportunity could be yours.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The time will fly by today. An always-good relationship is especially harmonious now. If married, take your spouse on a special outing. Discussing your long-term goals draws you closer together.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A powerful esprit de corps is the foundation for success. You truly will reap what you sow. Avoid the untrod path once the sun sets. Your dreams tend to be prophetic. Write them down.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Expect some jolts and bumps where a friendship or romance is concerned. A footloose and fancy-free partner can cost you your peace of mind. Avoid acting jealous.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good things happen when you socialize with friends or co-workers today. Put your best foot forward socially. Dress to impress when you know you will be in the presence of VIPs.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone tosses you a challenge you cannot ignore. Stand up for your rights in a confrontation, but be tactful when calling attention to someone else's shortcomings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You should be elated over a recent turnaround in your personal affairs. Your attitude and productivity take a dramatic turn for the better. You have energy to burn!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You get what you asked for; a long-term goal moves within reach. Focus on organizing a family gathering. The more confident you are, the easier it will be to overcome an obstacle.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There is not much you can do about another person's jealousy except ignore it. Things are going your way, so enjoy the attention you receive. A contemplative mood prevails this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A new business enterprise or financial idea has the fresh scent of prosperity about it. Share your expertise with those who will appreciate it. Get agreements in writing to prevent future litigation.

"Flying fingers" is a disease that afflicts many bridge players. Its symptom is playing to the first trick before thoroughly mapping out the campaign.

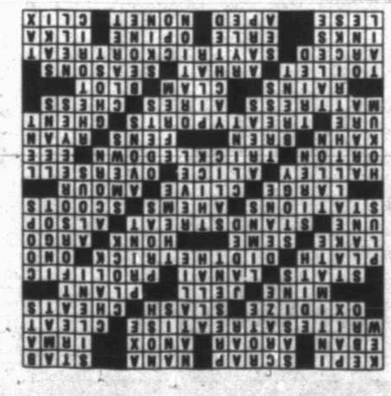

In days of yore, North's free raise to two hearts on a balanced hand containing two kings would have been frowned upon in the best circles. These days, any hand containing four-card support for opener's major and a smattering of points is virtually a compulsory raise, both in and out of competition. South was full value for a jump to game.

West led the queen of spades and, quick as a flash, South covered an honor with an honor. East won and returned a spade, and eventually declarer had to rely on the diamond finesse for the contract. Unfortunately, that failed and declarer conceded two diamond tricks and one in each black suit.

Naturally, declarer squandered a priceless asset at trick one. West surely was not leading the queen of spades from a holding that included the A Q, especially on this auction. By playing low instead of going up with the king, declarer would have had an extra chance for the contract.

Let's suppose West switches to a club. Declarer ducks the first club and wins the continuation. (If East switches to a diamond instead, declarer finesses.) Now declarer can draw trumps by using dummy's high trumps, each time returning to hand by ruffing a spade. When the ace of spades drops on the third round of the suit, declarer can ruff a club in dummy, discard a diamond on the king of spades, then try the diamond finesse for an overtrick.

Jazz pianist Dick Hyman to give concert

Staff report

The West Texas Jazz Society is hosting pianist Dick Hyman at the Midland Petroleum Club at 8 p.m. Nov. 17.

The concert is free for society members, $15 for non-members; reserved seats are $10 extra.

Throughout his musical career that began in the early 1950s, Hyman has performed as pianist, organist, arranger, conductor and composer. He has investigated the earliest periods of jazz and ragtime and has recorded the music of Scott Joplin, Jelly Roll Morton, James. P. Johnson, Zez Confrey, Eubie Blake and Fats Waller.

He has performed with his own quintet, with cornetist Ruby Braff and in duo-piano appearances with Derek Smith, Roger Kellaway and the late Dick Wellstood.

In 1975, Hyman conducted the New York Jazz Repertory Company on a tour of the Soviet Union, sponsored by the U.S. State Department, which featured the music of Louis Armstrong.

In addition to his activities in the jazz and concert worlds, Hyman has had a prolific career in New York as a studio musician and has won six Most Valuable Player awards from the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

He was the orchestrator of the hit musical "Sugar Babies" and the composer of the Woody Allen films "Zelig" and "The Purple Rose of Cairo."

He worked with Allen additionally as composer/arranger/conductor/pianist for "Broadway Danny Rose," "Stardust Memories," "Hannah and Her Sisters" and "Radio Days." Other film scores have included "Moonstruck," "Scott Joplin, King of Ragtime," "The Lemon Sisters" and "Alan and Naomi."

His period arrangements are heard in "Billy Bathgate."

In the dance world, Hyman composed and performed the score for the Cleveland Ballet's "Piano Man" and for Twyla Tharp's "The Bum's Rush" with the American Ballet Theatre.

4½-foot-tall man can be heard in cartoons

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dick Beals is only 4½ feet tall, but he says thinking big landed him parts in thousands of commercials and cartoons.

Beals was the voice of the boyish Speedy Alka-Seltzer in 225 television commercials starting in 1953. He sang "Oh, I'd love to be an Oscar Meyer Wiener," and played the Campbell Soup Kids.

Pull the string on a Mattel Inc. doll and you might hear his voice. He plays children and small animals in cartoons including the "Jetsons," "Flintstones" and "The Addams Family."

"I enjoy everything I'm asked to do," he said. "I enjoy the challenge day in and day out."

Beals, still a spokesman for Miles Inc., the maker of Alka-Seltzer, lives in southern California and owns an ad agency. He was in Pittsburgh recently to speak to Miles employees and other groups.

The message he brings in his speeches is "Think Big."

"Set goals, set lofty dreams," he said. "Surround them with positive thoughts and you'll soon be living those dreams."

Beals, 65, got his break in 1952 when he won the part of Speedy Alka-Seltzer. The television and radio ads ran continuously until 1968 and returned several times in the 1970s. The ads ran again last year in some markets for Alka-Seltzer's 60th anniversary.

He says he originally dreamed of being a sports announcer, but in 1945 a radio station manager advised him to seek children's parts.

Of his career, Beals says it's better to be heard than seen.

"I could sit here for three days and no one's going to come up and say, 'Hey didn't you do Speedy or the Campbell Soup Kids?' " he said in an interview. "I enjoy the anonymity."
