Ask Us

Q. — What was the population here in 1980 and what is it now?

A. — In 1980, the count was 12,671 for Snyder. In 1985, the best estimate — provided by the school system, Texas Employment Commission and local banks — was 13,600. Regarding the summer of 1986, this number is likely down, but staffers for both the city, school and local utility companies say they have not noted a large drop in "customers."

Protest withdrawn to will benefitting WTC, city church

A protest has apparently been withdrawn to the will which names a local church and Western Texas College as beneficiaries of the estate of the late Edith Whatley McKanna.

A "motion for non-suit" has now been filed by relatives who had contested the document.

Mrs. McKanna, who died March 26 at the age of 86, indicated in her will she wished her remaining estate to be divided equally among four institutions.

These include WTC and the First Presbyterian Church of Snyder.

A protest to that will was filed in local county court this past spring by a surviving granddaughter of Mrs. McKanna, Betty Massey of La Porte.

In the latest development, attorneys for Massey filed the motion for non-suit June 27.

In addition, as part of the will's probate, a list of the assets attributed to Mrs. McKanna has been finalized.

The First National Bank of Lubbock has been named executor of the estate — which charges them with converting her tangible assets into cash, retiring all outstanding debts and honoring the guidelines of the will.

According to Doyle Justice, a Lubbock-based attorney representing the bank there, the assets of the McKanna estate have now been finalized "as far as we know."

Court documents list the estate as worth some $464,000 — approximately one-third of this involved in an income-producing oil and gas lease now valued at near $144,000.

Justice notes, however, that debts, to include medical expenses, are still to come out of this figure.

He noted, "I feel like the net figure will be whittled down pretty good."

Following the guidelines in Mrs. McKanna's will, assets remaining will be distributed in equal shares among four entities. Locally, this involves the church, of which Mrs. McKanna was a member, and the scholarship foundation at WTC.

Other institutions named include the Ranching Heritage Association at Texas Tech and the Tech Medical Foundation.

Assets of the estate listed in court documents include $287,901 in real property (to include the oil and gas lease and her Rock Ledge farm near Fluvanna with its related 8.5 acres); $157,227 in miscellaneous property (to include almost $119,000 in household goods); and $18,754 in "notes and cash."

Need cited for blood

The third blood drive of 1986 is scheduled here Tuesday from 1 until 8 p.m. in the Senior Citizens Center.

The local effort is again jointly sponsored by the advisory committee for United Blood Services of Lubbock and the Cogdell Memorial Hospital Auxiliary.

Sponsors note this effort has a particular need for 0 positive blood. The traditional incentives for donors will be given also.

Three events at rodeo gain new leaders

The Friday night performance of the 51st annual Scurry County Rodeo produced some changes in event leaders.

New top competitors were counted in the team roping, barrel racing event and calf roping.

Otherwise, leaders in the bareback, saddle bronc and bull riding remained the same with no qualified rides counted Friday.

New leaders for both first and second place did emerge in the team roping.

Now in the lead with a 5.5 second time are Stormy Pruitt and Marty Pechka. In second place with a 6.4 second time are Ralph and Wayne Carter.

Going into Friday, the leaders were Richard Lowe and Andy Anaya with a 6.9 second time. They were followed by Robert and Matt Scoggins with 7.6.

After Friday's show, the top barrel racer continues to be Kathy Phillip of Washington, Tx. with a time of 14.967.

A new second place leader was counted, however, as Lynn Schmidt of Lamesa clocked a 15.017 time. Moving to third place is Cindy Stone of Graham with 15.059.

In the tie down calf roping, a 8.1 second time recorded Wednesday by Smitty Smith of Monahans continues to be the time to beat.

Friday did produce two 8.5 second times, however. This ties second place previously held by Jimmy Hodge of Lometa.

Scoring the 8.5 Friday were James Doss of Big Spring and Kevin Newman of Stanton.

Going into Saturday, Snyder still has one rodeo competitor in College Ave. gains 34th St. extension

Construction crews began work this past week on a 300 ft. extension of 34th St. east of College Ave.

Located between McDonald's and Long John Silver's, the new street is being constructed to facilitate future development along College Ave., according to Vick Chambers, city building inspector.

Expense for the street is being borne by property owner Douglas A. Newton Jr. of Dallas. As part of the land transaction involving the new McDonald's here, Newton was required to submit and secure city approval of a plat of the area east of College between 30th and 37th Sts.

At that time, he also placed money to build the street in an escrow account with the city.

Included in that original plan was the section of 34th St. now under construction and a section of what would be Ave. R running behind Varsity Square and Kmart from 30th St. to 37th St.

This second portion of the proposed street plan is apparently not being considered for immediate construction.

Chambers said extension of 34th St. is included in the plat to not only enhance access to existing development along College Ave. but to open up more land to the east of College for business use.

He said Friday that Newton apparently decided now was the proper time to build the 34th St. extension.

United Way faces $104,000 requests

Requests in excess of $104,000 have been submitted to this year's United Way campaign, and these will be considered by the fund raising effort's budget committee during afternoon sessions now set Wednesday.

The budget hearings will begin at 1 p.m. at Snyder City Hall. Each requesting agency will be given 20 minutes for a presentation.

The requests have come from the eight agencies traditionally funded through United Way, plus an additional request from Noah Project of Snyder.

Last year, United Way honored a record setting $100,000 campaign.

This year will mark the second for a request from Noah Project, which seeks a $12,500 contribution from the local fund raising effort.

This is approximately the amount funded by United Way last year to the local haven for battered women and their children.

Directors honored last year's request from Noah Project as a special contribution.

Seven of the eight United Way agencies traditionally funded each year have also finalized this year's budget requests. These include:

A delegation from the Snyder Lions Club—including District Gov. Max von Roeder—was in New Orleans last week to attend the Lions International Convention.

Also in the local delegation were Gene Cutler, C. A. (Mac) McCown and Jack Denman. All four, being civic-minded, decided they should be on the lookout for a way to help the sluggish economy.

McCown said Snyder submitted a bid to host next summer's international convention. Since we have a few less than the required 30,000 hotel rooms, Mac is suggesting that we offer a tent city for the visitors.

Mac claims the proposal got a second, but it appears that the $4 million spent by Lion delegates will be spent somewhere else next year.

At any rate, Snyder will host the district Lions convention next April.

During the summer, WTC music instructor Jane Womack is a regular, along with husband Bob, at Louise's Coffee Shop each morning.

Jane gets stuck with the tab a large percentage of the time despite coaching from Bob, who owns True Value Hardware.

Wednesday morning, Colonial Hill Minister Miller Robinson brought his wife, Sandra, to Louise's and everyone stood when the minister's wife entered.

Jane protested, "You treat me just like one of the boys."

Someone asked Sandra, also a teacher, what she had been doing all summer. Miller answered for her.

"She's been sleeping late and staying in front of the TV all day. It's a classic case of the 'Old and the Useless' watching the 'Young and the Restless.'"

In Brief

Tax overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is offering advice to congressional negotiators on what tax overhaul legislation should accomplish, but few specifics on how the suggestions should be put into action.

Senate and House conferees heard Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III suggest Friday that middle-income Americans need lower taxes, but also warn that making up for that lost money by raising business levies could hurt the economy.

Ambush bus

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem ambushers today sprayed an American University Hospital bus with gunfire at Beirut's dividing Green Line, killing a doctor, two nurses and a hospital administrator, police said.

They said three other hospital personnel were wounded in the attack at the edge of a no-man's land at a mid-city crossing. All the victims were Lebanese Christians.

Four gunmen intercepted the white and red bus at 11:30 a.m. as it traveled from the hospital in Moslem west Beirut to Christian east Beirut, police said.

Jurors called

Prospective jurors are summoned Monday to 132nd District Court. They are asked to report to the district courtroom on the fourth floor of the Scurry County Courthouse at 9 a.m.

Scheduled for trial is the case of William Riley Bounds who was indicted for one count of sexual assault here in April.

Court agenda

County commissioners plan to release specifications for coliseum curtains during regular session Monday.

The meeting will begin at 10 a.m.

New curtains covering storage areas in Rooms A and B are needed to replace those currently in use.

Court members will also consider the quarterly treasurer's report to be presented by County Treasurer Billy Wayne Thompson.

College coed can't forget night of rape

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six weeks after she was raped, a student at Angelo State University talks in an interview about the experience and how she feels now when she reads about other sexual attacks.

By Carol Daniels
San Angelo Standard Times

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Memories of the headlines, the speculation, the questioning, had faded. So had the flashbacks and the sleepless nights.

Then the newspaper headlines and the television newscasts reappeared, describing a second, similar crime. A woman had been abducted and sexually assaulted by two masked men.

Melinda Bane (not her real name) read the newspaper accounts and watched the newscasts.

The crime was linked in news reports to the ordeal endured five weeks before by her and four friends. The woman attacked Sunday was reported to be a roommate of one of the five.

Two days later, police announced the woman had retracted her statement. She had not been abducted. She had not been raped.

Investigators asked the five victims from the previous case to take polygraph tests to reassure the public that their case was legitimate and that taxpayer money was not being wasted on another lie.

"It makes it seem like it happened this weekend instead of six weeks ago," the rape victim said in an interview this week.

Melinda said she does not know why the woman reported a fabricated assault to police. She knows it has revived the memory of a terrifying night for her, two women friends, and two men music students at Angelo State University.

Melinda and the two men had played for a wedding in an area town and decided to prolong the fun evening by visiting at a favorite haunt for high school and college students, a hill dotted with picnic tables that overlooks Twin Buttes Reservoir and Middle Concho Park. They invited two other Angelo State coeds to join them.

"We were enjoying our friendship and we were enjoying our freedom to be out there," Melinda said. "It belongs to us. It doesn't belong to them."

The slight woman's eyes darken when she discusses "them," the two men who turned a night of gaiety into a night of terror and humiliation.

The men wore ski masks and gloves and carried guns and a knife. They accosted the students in the darkness and bound them with handcuffs and rope.

The men raped two of the women and forced the women to perform oral sex on their male companions and on the assailants, Melinda said.

"Everything they did they could have done in 30 minutes, but they spent three hours just to watch us squirm," Melinda said. "It was just a power trip.

"They were saying 'Go back and tell everything you saw here, everything that happened,'" she said. "They probably got a big kick out of reading about it."

The men talked incessantly and degradingly and insulted the students' education, she said. Other than the sexual assaults, the students were physically unharmed. The greatest harm, she believes, was in the mental anguish of being in the situation for hours and having their lives threatened.

Melinda has relived the night over and over. Her emotions have ranged from anger to depression to disbelief.

It could have been worse, she said. Investigators at the sheriff's office believed their story from the first. The Rape Crisis Center had representatives at the victims' side within 30 minutes of the report. The sheriff's office has contacted the victims regularly to make sure they are all right.

"It seems the way everyone cared was very genuine," Melinda said. "Plus, of course, I have real good friends."

The episode has been talked about, and hurtful things have been said out of ignorance or insensitivity, she said.

One teacher announced to a class the reason Melinda was absent from class for a week. Some individuals have asked why they did not fight back and why they were at the park so late.

"That's the most frustrating thing to us," Melinda said. "It's as if we knew they would be there. That it's (the criminals') territory and we should have known better than to invade it.

"It's kind of primitive thinking," she said. "Years ago, people would blame the woman if she was raped. This is along the same lines."

Chile arrests 25 soldiers in death of Washington teen

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The army has arrested 25 soldiers in the fatal burning of a 19-year-old U.S. resident who died after participating in an anti-government demonstration. Witnesses have said soldiers doused him with a flammable liquid and set him on fire.

Gen. Carlos Ojeda, commander of the Santiago garrison, said Friday that three officers, five noncommissioned officers and 17 draftees were "put under arrest" and were placed at the disposition of a civilian judge investigating the case of Rodrigo Rojas de Negri.

Rojas, a free-lance photographer who was born in Chile but grew up in Washington, D.C., was visiting his homeland when he died July 6, four days after taking part in a demonstration against the 13-year-old military government headed by President Augusto Pinochet.

No charges have been filed against the detainees, who were not identified.

The army originially said no soldiers were involved in the incident, but Ojeda said Friday that "new investigations have indicated that certain army personnel may have participated."

A previous army report also claimed that Rojas and other demonstrators carried flammable liquids and set themselves on fire.

Rojas' companion, 18-year-old Carmen Gloria Quintana, also suffered serious burns during the demonstration and was listed in serious condition Friday after undergoing skin surgery for the third time, said Dr. Jorge Villegas, head of the medical team caring for her.

A Mass for Miss Quintana was held Friday at a Santiago church, after which a small group of mostly young people tried to stage a demonstration by blocking traffic on a major avenue. They were quickly dispersed by riot police using water cannons.

Lydia Quintana, a sister of the victim, said the arrests were a positive sign.

An official army report on the case, issued earlier by Ojeda's command, said a military patrol on July 2 found "a group of people causing public disorder and carrying flammable material."

"Among those people were Carmen Gloria Quintana and Rodrigo Rojas de Negri," the report said. "According to information provided by the military personnel involved, one of those people caused the inflammation of part of the material they were carrying, which burned their clothes."

Soldiers used blankets to extinguish the flames engulfing Rojas and Ms. Quintana, the report said.

"That is not true and they know it," said Lydia Quintana. "If they were carrying those flammables, why didn't the soldiers arrest them instead of letting them die?"

Rojas and his mother, Veronica de Negri, came to the United States in 1976 after she was banished by Chilean authorities. Mrs. de Negri, a supporter of the leftist government toppled by Pinochet in 1973, has said she was tortured before leaving Chile. She and her son became permanent residents of the United States.

The U.S. State Department has repeatedly demanded a thorough investigation of the circumstances leading to his death.

Odessa bank closure stuns employees, customers alike

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Andrea Martin sat behind her wooden desk, attempting to stop trembling and allow the tears to dry on her tanned face.

"I never dreamed I would lose my job," said Mrs. Martin, 24, a $16,800-a-year commercial loan secretary at Permian Bank. "I always felt fortunate because I didn't work directly in the oil business."

The bubble popped on Friday afternoon, when Mrs. Martin gathered with other employees in the Permian Bank lobby to listen to the news of the bank's closing.

Federal officials made plans to pay off more than $33 million in deposits at the bank, which was established in 1971 in the heart of the West Texas oil country.

"Permian Bank has struggled for the last four years with the consequences of liberal lending to energy-sector entities during the early 80s," state Banking Commissioner James L. Sexton said Friday.

"Despite repeated capital injections and managerial and regulatory efforts since that time, the bank could not be rehabilitated. The recent decline in oil prices proved a factor of some consequence in that outcome," Sexton said.

Permian Bank, with deposits of $33.8 million and assets of $38.8 million, is the 12th bank in Texas to close this year and the 75th nationwide, said Alan Whitney, FDIC spokesman in Washington. Eight banks failed across the country this week, Whitney said.

About 30 workers clustered on the bank's main floor — some visibly shaking and others crying openly — as Ken Gorham of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation broke the news to bank employees shortly after 3 p.m. Friday.

"You are all employees of the FDIC. I'd like to ask you all to bear with us and help us out," Gorham told his listeners."

"Does anybody have a question as to what we're doing here?" he asked. Several bank employees slowly shook their heads.

"What we're going to do — we'd like to close out the books," much like the routine on December 31, Gorham said: "Any work in progress, I'd like you to close out."

Several bank tellers and secretaries burst into tears at Gorhams words.

For others, the news didn't sink in until Gorham took the floor a second time, about 4:15 p.m., to announce that four potential bank buyers all had decided against purchasing the flounder ing lending institution.

One woman who had puffed nervously on a cigarette and listened without expression during Gorham's first speech, allowed several large tears to roll down her face during the second announcement. A second woman intently studied her nails.

Art Miller, FDIC Energy Section head, glanced around the room. "I was nervous about how this was going to come out," Miller said. "The crashing and burning will go on all weekend."

Gorham asked that merchants have patience concerning checks drawn on Permian Bank.

White promises no education cuts

HOUSTON (AP) — Gov. Mark White, after calling an Aug. 3 special legislative session to face the state's budget woes, is already trying to relieve the anxiety of key groups that their programs won't be cut.

He told Hispanic educators in Houston Friday night that he will not cut educational standards or school programs that help minorities and the poor to meet an anticipated state budget shortfall that could reach $3 billion.

But White says he still doesn't know what state programs he will recommend be cut in the special session.

He said he has discussed some plans with state legislators — including House Speaker Gib Lewis on Friday — but declined to disclose them.

Lewis said White is waiting on legislative finance committees to analyze the budget for possible cuts that could be made.

"He's doing the same thing we're all doing — trying to let the system work the way the system is structured," Lewis said.

As in his Thursday speech announcing the special session, White Friday ruled out a state income tax as a solution to the budget woes and said he will also doesn't favor raising taxes.

"We'll just cut first and see where we are," he said.

He scoffed at remarks by Bill Clements, his Republican opponent, that he should have called the special sesssion earlier.

He said if Clements had his way, White would have called five special sessions since last February — which would have wasted state money.

"We're taking care of the problem in a businesslike manner," he said.

To an appreciative audience of about 200 people at the Texas Association of Chicanos in Higher Education State Conference, White pledged Friday night to keep raising educational standards and retain teaching programs that have helped minorities and the poor.

"We're moving in the right direction, but we've got more to do," he said.

"We cannot be penny wise and pound foolish in this regard," White added. "Education is the key to Texas' economic growth and diversification, and we have many steps to go toward building the finest system of higher education in the nation."

Programs adopted in his administration such as equalization aid to poorer school districts would not be a victim of the state's economic crisis, he said.

White noted that in a national study released this week showed that Texas' first-graders scored above the national average on achievement tests.

After the short speech, White acknowledged legislators would have "difficult choices" in deciding what state programs to cut, but that the state "couldn't turn its back" on the strides made in school programs.

He remained upbeat, saying, "I'm frankly sick and tired of the news of the bad times in Texas. Bad times in Texas are still better than the good times anyplace else."

He blamed the oil crisis for causing legislators to face what White calls "the most difficult time in this state's history."

With a substantial portion of the state's income directly tied to oil and gas prices, the worldwide oil price drop has decimated the state treasury, White said.

The deficit has ballooned from $1.3 billion in mid-February to $2.3 billion in June. Comptroller Bob Bullock is expected to release another estimate around Aug. 1, and White said that well could exceed $3 billion.

House and Senate leaders have sharply different views on the best way to proceed.

House members generally have said they prefer to make up the deficit with spending cuts. Senate leaders have said they favor a combination of cuts and tax increases.

JFK's daughter is to wed

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP) — She was once the little girl that captured America's heart, but Saturday John F. Kennedy's daughter was to be the bride, walking down the aisle in a wedding the family is keeping low-profile.

A Roman Catholic ceremony was scheduled for 3 p.m. at the Church of Our Lady of Victory for the young woman whose father was the nation's only Catholic president.

The church is about five miles from the Kennedy compound where the reception for 400 guests was being staged under a white tent beig enough to accommodate a small circus.

Miss Kennedy, 28, will marry New York businessman and artist Edwin Schlossberg, 41, who spent three hours with her and other members of the wedding party Friday sailing in Nantucket Sound aboard the chartered 56-foot ketch "Spray."

When they returned to the dock of the private Hyannis Port Pier & Yacht Club, they were met by about 50 tourists, photographers and reporters. The reporters shouted out questions, but the couple simply smiled.

When she was asked what name she plans to use after the wedding, the bride said only, "Caroline."

John Kennedy Jr., Caroline's 25-year-old brother, swam to the dock from the boat to the applause of the crowd.

Ethel Kennedy, aunt of the bride, and widow of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, said all members of America's most famous political family were "very joyous. I think everybody's happy to see Caroline and Ed so happy."

Today's forecast was for cloudy, warm and humid weather.

Veterans march is on last leg

BERGENFIELD, N.J. (AP) — A week-long march from the nation's capital by Vietnam veterans seeking to draw attention to the plight of U.S. soldiers still missing in Southeast Asia culminates Saturday with a rally at Grants Tomb in New York City.

About 40 members of the group that calls itself "The Last Patrol" pitched their tents in a park here Friday to prepare for the last leg of the 269-mile march.

A ragtag squad, they were greeted at the Bergenfield Veterans Memorial park by the cheers and salutes of local veterans.

Among the marchers are veterans from northern New Jersey and their compatriots from Texas, all of whom participated in a similar march last November from Dallas to San Antonio, Texas.

Many marchers were dressed in army fatigues and some carried American flags. One veteran from Texas made the journey in a wheelchair, with his dog alternately walking beside him and pulling him.

Lawyers detail TDC hiring suit settlement

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Hispanics and blacks suing the Texas prison system over alleged discrimination in hiring have proposed a settlement that would require almost one-third minority hiring by the Texas Department of Corrections over the next five years.

Larry Daves, attorney for the plaintiffs, explained the terms of the settlement to U.S. Magistrate Judith Guthrie during a two-hour hearing Friday in the courtroom of U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

The settlement, if approved, would require that at least 17.5 percent of TDC hirings over the next five years to be black and at least 15 percent to be Hispanic.

The decree, drafted last November by Daves and Assistant Texas Attorney General Larry J. King, outlines provisions of the agreement.

King has since entered private law practice in San Francisco, and the state was represented Friday by Assistant Attorney General Carla Crisford. Also present at the hearing was TDC Personnel Director Jim Bush of Huntsville.

Several people voiced objections about the lack of any provision in the tentative agreement for retroactive salary payments to those who believe they were wrongly denied employment because of their race or ethnic origin.

Class members Richard Henry, who is now a TDC employee, Selby Sanderson and Napoleon Ward all indicated they will drop out of the settlement because of the lack of a back-pay provision.

In addition to the affirmative-action hiring provisions, the settlement calls for TDC to cease alleged discriminatory practices still existing in hiring, promotions and firing of corrections officers.

It also gives preference in future hiring to blacks and Hispanics who applied but were unfairly denied jobs between 1976 and whenever the settlement is finally approved.

In addition, Hispanics who feel they were unfairly terminated because of their national origin may appeal the firing to a three-person panel. If they do not receive a favorable result from that panel, they may refer the complaint to arbitrator Mitchell J. Green.

Guthrie asked Daves how he and TDC attorneys arrived at the selection of Green, an Austin attorney and former assistant attorney general, as the arbitrator. Daves replied that both sides agreed that Green, who has considerable Title VII experience, would be a good choice.

"It was my opinion, based upon my personal knowledge of him, that he was as fair as anyone we could get from the American Arbitration Association," Daves said.

Guthrie will issue a report concerning any objections to the tentative settlement to Justice, who must grant final approval before it can become effective.

The class-action civil rights lawsuit was filed in January 1977 by Daniel Cirilo.

Terrorist camps operate in Mexico

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — A West Texas sheriff says a four-month investigation by his office has produced hard evidence that at least five terrorist training camps are operating in Mexico.

However, Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said he is becoming frustrated at the nonchalant manner with which his information has been received by federal authorities and their failure to follow up.

One of the terrorist training camps is in the Mexican state of Chihuahua, which borders Texas from El Paso to the Big Bend, Painter said.

Painter said he traveled to Washington D.C. June 10, 11 and 12, and met with Boyden Gray, chief council to Vice-President George Bush; with John Savercool, legislative aide to Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas; and with officials of the Central Intelligence Agency, the State Department and U.S. Customs.

According to Painter, the State Department checked his information and identified a former Midland resident as a known terrorist traveling with a Lebanese passport and identification papers.

At least eight other suspected terrorists, including some Midland College students, visited the known terrorist during the two years the man lived in Midland, Painter said.

The sheriff said his information was supplied by several Mexican citizens who cooperated with his investigation.

Painter said that while he was in Washington, a State Department official assigned to the agency's anti-terrorist squad told him it was "in the vital interest of our national security" to locate the camps and he said that agency called his information "most accurate and up to date."

But Painter said that is the extent of interest federal agencies have shown.

"It's just very mind-boggling that this credible information is being ignored," Painter said. "No one has contacted us at all to try and reach our sources."

Painter said the camps are funded by Colombian drug money and contained Libyans, Cubans and Columbians being trained for future terrorist activities.

Producers discuss decision

AUSTIN (AP) — Few things raise more questions for television news producers more than turning over a live microphone to a politician. But many Texas stations did when Gov. Mark White used live television time to call a special legislative session for Aug. 6.

When White's broadcast — and another by his election opponent — ended, several news executives voiced concern over what had happened.

"We feel like our newscast was hijacked," said Mark Antonitis, a producer for KTVV-TV in Austin. The station carried White's speech and the response of former Gov. Bill Clements live and in their entirety.

"It's just a terrible thing to give a politician a live mike and say, 'Go ahead,'" Antonitis said.

White took to the air at 6:01 p.m. Thursday, a minute into the evening newscasts.

In his speech, he gave his view of the state's economic problems and the impact on the government budget. The one really new item — the date for the special session — came near the end.

The speech was offered to TV stations statewide via a live satellite link paid for by White's re-election campaign. The governor's press secretary, Ann Arnold, said 44 stations took it live and six taped it. She said the cost was between $1,500 and $1,600.

Clements put together a similar satellite hookup to offer stations his rebuttal.

Many Texas broadcasters said Thursday night was the first time they know of when Texas politicians staged such a video event.

All three Austin network affiliates carried all or part of White's message live. Two carried all or part of Clements' response.

Only one network affiliate in the Dallas-Fort Worth area carried the news live. The story of LTV Corp., a large Dallas-based company that filed for bankruptcy reorganization, was considered to be more important, WFAA-TV officials said.

News director Marty Haag said his station decided to tape White's speech and determine its newsworthiness. Together, his station and KXAS-TV gave White only about 15 seconds of their newscasts.

Doug Adams, news director of KXAS, said, "As it turned out, the LTV story made our decision easier.

"But to tell you the truth, I think if the LTV thing hadn't happened, after thinking about it all night and meetings Thursday morning, I still think we would not have carried White live at 6:01 for his entire address."

At KDFW-TV, the only Dallas network affiliate to carry the speech live, news director Wendell Harris said, "We believe we served our viewers best by covering White's statement the way we did."

He said the station decided between the first three and five minutes of White's speech to carry his address in its entirety. The LTV story, he said, had been reported throughout the day by radio, television and newspapers, but at 6 p.m., the state's economy was the top story.

But Tim Gardner, news director for Austin's KTBC-TV, pulled the plug on White after 32 seconds of his speech.

"I made the decision that while it may be important news, it was political in nature," he said. The station taped the remainder of White's speech and Clements' rebuttal and packaged them into a news story that was shown later in the newscast.

"We had other news to get on," he said.

Executive producer Bob Buckalew of KVUE-TV in Austin said he wished White had announced the date of the special session earlier in the speech but didn't regret carrying the message live.

"I felt like it was a legitimate news event," he said.

Ed Ivy, news director for Beaumont's KFDM-TV, went on the air after White and Clements spoke to say why the station had allowed the politicians live air time.

Ivy said he told viewers it was a hard decision to make, especially since it was an election year, but he decided to let the viewers themselves decide.

Central bank willing to pursue lower rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve, a week after cutting a key interest rate, gave new signals Friday that it stands willing to push rates lower still in an effort to spur a rebound in the sluggish U.S. economy.

The central bank announced that it was de-emphasizing a key money target as it works to keep alive the 42-month economic expansion.

The Fed's action came in its revelation of revised money targets for the rest of the year. The Fed plays a key role in controlling economic growth through its power over the nation's money supply.

The Fed said Friday it had decided it would not set a new target for growth of the basic measure of money, known as M-1, saying instead it would concentrate on the growth of two broader monetary aggregates, known as M-2 and M-3.

This move had been expected by economists, who said the Fed's concern over boosting economic growth would force the central bank to allow M-1 to grow far above its original target for this year.

Normally, the Fed would be worried that explosive growth in any portion of the money supply could rekindle inflationary pressures.

However, at the present time, the Fed believes that the need to boost economic growth outweighs concerns over inflation, economists said.

So far this year, M-1, which includes checking accounts and cash, has grown at an annual rate of almost 13 percent, far above the 3 percent to 8 percent target set by the Fed at the beginning of the year.

Last year, the central bank faced a similar problem with explosive growth in M-1 and decided to boost the target range. This year it has gone even further by deciding essentially to ignore M-1 growth and concentrate on the two broader measures of the money supply, which have been growing at a slower pace.

For M-2, which includes M-1 plus most types of personal savings, the Fed decided to retain the original growth target of 6 percent to 9 percent for 1986, lowering that slightly to 5.5 percent to 8.5 percent for 1987.

For M-3, an even broader measure of money which includes M-2 plus large certificates of deposit, the Fed set growth targets matching those for M-2.

Education commissioner: school reforms 'working'

AUSTIN (AP) — State Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said Friday legislative education reforms are working "by almost every measure" but the growth of the student population will create tremendous pressures on Texas' public school system.

Kirby told the Senate Finance Committee reforms adopted by the Legislature in 1984 "are the envy of the nation. Texas is by far the national leader in reform."

Academic performance has approved, as reflected by a statewide test that shows Texas students scoring over 50 percent on a national basis in math, reading and writing, except among third, seventh and 11th graders in reading, Kirby said.

"Granted, these national percentile rankings mean we're 'only' average, but being average is a definite improvement over being below average, which is where we'd always been before House Bill 72," he said.

Kirby also said that "thanks to House Bill 72 and the tax increases that financed it, our teachers are now earning more money than ever before." Texas jumped from 33rd to 21st in average teacher pay, and last year the average teacher salary was $25,160 a year.

Kirby said the Texas Education Agency could return to the general fund $135 million in savings from its current $10 billion appropriation. But he said that for the 1988-89 biennium, the TEA would seek an additional $2.3 billion.

Of that total, more than $500 million would be needed "just to keep up with a 65,000-student-per-year increase in enrollment and to address the impact that the economic recession is having on local school districts' property tax bases," Kirby said.

He said with a birth rate that has risen by 50 percent over 10 years, Texas' student population of 3.2 million will jump another million students by the mid-1990s. "It's primarily Hispanic growth," he said.

The Legislature has been called into special session Aug. 6 to deal with a projected $3 billion budget deficit. Sen. Carl Parker, chairman of the education committee, asked Kirby:

"If we choose to make substantial cuts in the funds we've allocated to public education ... would we then force local districts to choose between making substantial cuts or increasing property taxes?"

"That's true," said Kirby.

The commissioner also told the committee he would be "pretty stringent" in granting waivers to teachers who failed a literacy test required by the educational reform bill. Almost 97 percent of those who took the test already have passed. Scores are still out on those who were retested.

"Our position is only if there is absolutely a person who cannot be found (in a certain field) will we grant a waiver under the statute," Kirby said.

Parker asked if Kirby would be more lenient on waivers "where we do not require a baccalaureate degree," such as in vocational courses.

"Senator, we probably won't be any more lenient ... but because of the very nature of the shortage in that area, you will expect to see probably more waivers in the non-degree vocational teachers than in some of the other areas," Kirby said.

Parker said he would introduce a "truth in quality" bill in 1987 that would require school districts to notify parents whose children are being taught by teachers "who are not certified as qualifed in that particular field."

"Before they get too enthused about asking for so many waivers and emergency certificates, I think maybe they ought to think about having to put their name on that. If they want parental involvement, I would hope that would produce some," Parker said.

Researchers send up new Titanic pictures

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — Voyaging to the bottom of the sea to find the Titanic in its murky grave is almost like visiting a museum, says the explorer who sent back strikingly clear pictures of the rust-encrusted ship that once was called unsinkable.

The three-minute, 10-second color videotape and 12 color slides released Friday focus on a remarkably well-preserved crystal chandelier and icicle-like rust deposits dotting the luxury liner.

Robert Ballard, the expedition leader who led the group that discovered the Titanic's remains last September, narrated the videotape, taken with a special camera-equipped robot 2½ miles under the sea.

"Coming up on the side of the ship you can see these iron-sicles that hang down like giant icicles of rust," he said in a ship-to-shore radio report.

"I can see the promenade, looking into the promenade windows, and rising up to the deck above, and overhead a lifeboat davit with its block (a device to lower the lifeboat) as we disturb these rust-sicles and they fall down like a rain of iron."

The videotape focused on the port of the ship, a slightly askew chandelier inside and the coral- and rust-encrusted bow. It was almost like going to a museum," Ballard said after Friday's dive, the sixth of 12 scheduled descents in a three-man submarine from which the robot camera was controlled. "It's been transformed into another ship — It has the vestiges of the Titanic, but it's now a ship of the deep."

Officials at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute also showed reporters 12 color slides taken by the researchers and the remote-controlled robot, named Jason Jr. Many of the slides showed almost abstract shapes in vivid hues of yellowish brown and acquamarine.

The slides included shots of the bow's hull buried in the seabed; a view peering down the grand staircase Jason Jr. descended; an anchor hanging at the starboard side of the bow; and a shot looking directly down at the tear in the ship.

- Division IV: Thursday- 9:30 a.m., Merkel; 2 p.m., Sweetwater; 11 p.m., Lake View; Friday- 11 a.m., Merkel; 2 p.m., Sweetwater; 6:30 p.m., Lake View.

Saturday's action is scheduled for 8 and 11 a.m. in Division I and for 8 and 10 a.m. in divisions II, III and IV. If necessary, a final playoff game will be scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Saturday in Division I and for 2 p.m. in each of the other divisions.

American League roundup...

Detroit 'slides' past Texas

by The Associated Press

Jack Morris' decision to start throwing a slider instead of the split-fingered fastball is giving American League hitters a splitting headache.

Morris pitched a two-hitter Friday night for his third consecutive shutout, a 5-0 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Morris, 10-6, who gave up 10 homers in his first five starts and has allowed 25 for the season, attributed his turnaround to a rediscovered slider and improved control.

Morris said he quit throwing the slider two years ago when then-pitching coach Roger Craig convinced him to throw the split-fingered fastball.

The only hits he allowed were doubles by Scott Fletcher in the first inning and Don Slaught in the second. He struck out 11 Rangers and walked two.

The loss went to Mike Mason, 6-3.

Elsewhere in the AL, it was New York 8, Chicago 4; Minnesota 7, Baltimore 3; and Cleveland 3, Kansas City 2 in 10 innings; Seattle 10, Boston 4; Oakland 6, Milwaukee 1; and Toronto 2, California 0.

Blue Jays 2, Angels 0

Right-hander Jim Clancy pitched a two-hitter for 8 1-3 innings and won his fourth straight decision for Toronto against California, which still kept its 1½-game lead over Texas in the AL West.

The Blue Jays scored single runs off Angels starter Kirk McCaskill, 10-6, in the first and sixth innings on RBI singles by George Bell and Willie Upshaw.

Mariners 10, Red Sox 4

Seattle grabbed a 4-0 lead in the first inning with the help of two Boston errors and Danny Tartabull's three-run homer, and the Mariners went on to beat the first-place Red Sox.

Mike Moore, 6-9, went seven innings, giving up 10 hits and four runs, including Dwight Evans' 12th homer, for the victory.

Twins 7, Orioles 3

Kirby Puckett had his first two-homer game in the majors, while Gary Gaetti and Kent Hrbek also homered as visiting Minnesota clubbed Baltimore.

Puckett led off the game with his 18th homer, the fourth time this season he has done that, and Gaetti followed with his 19th five pitches later off Scott McGregor, 6-9, who also gave up an RBI double to Roy Smalley and was relieved without retiring a batter.

Bert Blyleven, 9-8, was the victor.

Yankees 8, White Sox 4

Mike Pagliarulo, hoping to prove he can hit left-handers, went 3-for-3, including a three-run homer off lefty Floyd Bannister, 5-6, and an RBI single, leading New York over visiting Chicago.

Joe Niekro, 8-6, activated from the 15-day disabled list on Thursday, pitched five innings for the victory.

Indians 3, Royals 2

Cleveland's Brett Butler tied the game in the third inning with a homer, then scored the winning run in top of the 10th on Kansas City shortstop Buddy Biancalana's throwing error.

Reliever Dan Quisenberry, 0-4, was the loser. The winner was Bryan Oelkers, 1-1, who earned his first major-league victory with two innings of hitless relief.

A's 6, Brewers 1

Oakland's Joaquin Andujar celebrated his return from injury by allowing three hits and no runs in 59-3 innings against Milwaukee.

Andujar, 5-2, won for the first time since May 7. The veteran right-hander went on the disabled list June 6 because of a pulled hamstring.

The A's knocked out Juan Nieves, 8-4, wih two runs in the fourth, one of them on Mickey Tettleton's sacrifice fly that made it 4-0.

Knepper blanks NY Mets; Astros just one game back

by The Associated Press

Bob Knepper couldn't ask for a better way to end his string of frustrations ... by frustrating the high-flying New York Mets with their first runless game of the season.

"I knew the 11th win would come sometime," Knepper, 11-7, said after beating the National League East leaders 3-0 with a three-hitter Friday night and handing the Mets their first shutout in 110 games, dating back to Sept. 11, 1985. "I don't think I've been any stronger in any outing this season than I was tonight."

Knepper's victory, his first in the last eight starts, stopped the Mets in their attempt to join the 1932 New York Yankees as the only club to go an entire year without being shut out.

In other National League action Friday night, Chicago nipped San Francisco 2-1; Cincinnati defeated Philadelphia 6-5; Pittsburgh outscored San Diego 12-7; Los Angeles beat St. Louis 4-3, and Montreal stopped Atlanta 5-4.

Astros 3, Mets 0

Knepper's victory was his first since June 10, and snapped the Mets' five-game winning streak. It was Knepper's fourth shutout and 11th complete game of the season. He struck out nine and walked only one.

Cubs 2, Giants 1

Scott Sanderson limited San Francisco to one hit, a fourth-inning double by Jeff Leonard, through seven innings and Lee Smith pitched two perfect innings in relief as Chicago beat the Giants.

Sanderson, 5-6, retired the first 11 batters before Leonard.

Sanderson was in control after the fourth, striking out nine and limiting the Giants to two walks before yielding to Smith, who struck out three in earning his 15th save.

Mike LaCoss, 9-4, was the loser.

Reds 6, Phillies 5

Dave Parker drove in four runs with a single and a three-run homer, leading Cincinnati and a resurgent Tom Browning over visiting Philadelphia.

Browning, 8-7, pitched six shutout innings to pull his record above .500 for the first time this season, getting his fifth win in his last six decisions. He faltered in the seventh, yielding to Ron Robinson.

Robinson gave up three more runs before John Franco came on for his 15th save.

Pirates 12, Padres 7

U.L. Washington's bases-loaded triple keyed a five-run fifthinning and Rick Reuschel ended a seven-game losing streak in Pittsburgh's victory over San Diego.

Washington had three hits and drove in four runs as Reuschel, ending a career record-tying losing streak, won for the first time since June 2. Reuschel, 5-11, allowed three runs and nine hits over seven innings before needing relief.

Dodgers 4, Cardinals 3

Franklin Stubbs and Len Matuszek hit two-out homers to key a three-run first inning and lead Los Angeles over St. Louis.

Los Angeles rookie Reggie Williams also hit his first major-league homer off St. Louis right-hander Danny Cox, 3-8, in support of Fernando Valenzuela, 12-6, who struck out eight and walked two in seven-plus innings.

Ken Howell relieved Valenzuela in the Cardinals' eighth, giving up Terry Pendleton's two-run single before Tom Niedenfuer came on to post his fifth save and help Valenzuela tie for the most victories by a National League pitcher.

Howser to undergo surgery

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Dick Howser, the manager of the defending world champion Kansas City Royals, will undergo surgery next week for a brain tumor, the club announced Friday.

The tumor was diagnosed at a Kansas City hospital Thursday, just two days after Howser piloted the American League to a 3-2 victory in the All Star Game.

It will not be known until after surgery if the tumor is malignant.

The 50-year-old Royals' skipper left a team practice Wednesday and was later admitted to St. Luke's Hospital complaining of a stiff neck and headaches.

"He didn't look good," said Royals' trainer Mickey Cobb.

Howser, who is in his sixth season as manager since moving to Kansas City from the New York Yankees in 1981, had complained of a stiff neck for the past couple of weeks, the club said.

"Neurosurgical consultation and a CAT scan of the head revealed a tumor of the left frontal lobe of the brain," Public Relations Director Dean Vogelaar said Friday. "Surgery is anticipated for the middle of next week."

Soviets widen lead over U.S. in race for Goodwill medals

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union continued its relentless march through the inaugural Goodwill Games Friday, collecting six of a possible seven gold medals and widening its lead over the United States in the medal race.

The games, billed as a battle between the two superpowers, has turned into a onesided affair.

After Friday's competition, the Soviets had a total of 79 golds and 178 medals, compared with the United States' 35 golds and 117 medals.

With only two days remaining in the games, the Soviets virtually had clinched the gold medal race. With 51 gold medals yet to be decided, they led the U.S. by 44 golds.

That difference of seven automatically will be erased in Saturday's boxing finals, because seven of the 12 championship bouts will be all-Soviet matches. The Soviets also have fighters in the other five weight classes, and will meet the United States in the final men's volleyball game Saturday.

The Soviets earned two gold medals in weightlifting, and one each in women's gymnastics, men's judo, men's team handball and women's team handball Friday.

The only gold they didn't win was in the snatch category in weightlifting's 100-kilogram (220-pound) class, and they didn't miss that by much.

Soviet Yuri Dandik and Romania's Nick Vlad each lifted 187.5 kilograms (413¼ pounds), but Vlad was given the gold medal, because he weighs less than Dandik.

Team handball provided the U.S. with its only medal of the day, as the men finished in a second-place tie with Czechoslovakia, each with 2-3 records.

In volleyball, the U.S. and Soviet teams set up Saturday's showdown with come-from-behind semifinal victories. The Americans beat France 14-16, 15-2, 15-13, 15-3, while the Soviets defeated Japan 11-15, 15-7, 12-15, 15-7, 15-8.

Meanwhile, Ted Turner, the American broadcasting magnate, who conceived the games, met with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev for one hour at the Kremlin. The two informally discussed this year's games and the 1990 games at Seattle, Wash., along with world peace.

"The meeting was warm, friendly and informal," Goodwill games spokesman Ken Bastian said.

"The meeting was lively and cordial," Tass, the Soviet news agency, said.

Norman sears course to lead British Open

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) - The crowd told Greg Norman something special was happening.

At the 12th hole, they started following him, growing in number as he chopped more and more strokes off par, on the way to matching the one-round record for a major golf tournament and taking the second-round lead in the British Open.

By the time he reached the 17th green Friday, Norman said, "There seemed to be 15,000 to 16,000 people" in his gallery. "They kept me going tremendously well."

Fans of golf rather than social spectators, there to see history rather than be seen, the crowd was so quiet it seemed to Norman as if the winds off the Firth of Clyde had swept away all sounds.

"As I was lining up my putt on 17, it was spooky," Norman said. "It was as if no one else was on the course."

Norman missed that eagle putt but got the next for a birdie. On the 18th he triple putted for a bogey-5, to tie the mark with a 7-under-par 63.

Only Mark Hayes in 1977 at Turnberry and Isao Aoki in 1980 at Muirfield had ever played that well in the Open's 115 editions. No one had ever shot better in any major tournament, or over Turnberry's rough-and-tumble course.

And it set the Australian two shots ahead of the field after 36 holes, with a 137 total.

England's Gordon Brand was second at 139, with a 2-under 68 for the day. Tommy Nakajima of Japan and Britain's Nick Faldo were tied for third at 141, Nakajima with a 67 that included a back-nine 30 and nine consecutive one-putt greens.

Bernhard Langer, with a second-round par 70, was next at 142, followed by a pack at 144 led by first-round leader Ian Woosnam, who went 4-over 74.

Not until 145 was an American found.

D.A. Weibring of the United States shot a double-bogey 6 on the final hole to drop into a group that included Payne Stewart, Bob Tway, Raymond Floyd, Gary Koch and Donnie Hammond of the United States; and Roger Chapman and Richard Brooks of Britain.

The cut for the final two rounds was 151, and among those just making it were some very familiar names - Jack Nicklaus (73 on Friday), Seve Ballesteros (75), Lee Trevino (71) and defending champion Sandy Lyle (73).

Among those missing the cut were Americans Tom Kite, Dan Pohl, Johnny Miller and Joey Sindlar.

More nations join boycott of Commonwealth Games

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) - The roster of nations participating in the Commonwealth Games is getting smaller every day.

Five more nations joined a boycott of the Games Friday, bringing to 14 the number of countries refusing to participate unless Britain changes its opposition to economic sanctions against South Africa.

New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange said today the boycott over Britain's rejection of sanctions against South Africa threatens the Commonwealth itself.

The state of Trinidad and Tobago and another Caribbean nation, Jamaica, announced Friday they were joining the boycott. The Games are due to open next Thursday and run for 10 days.

Zambia and Zimbabwe announced their decision to boycott the games after a meeting in Harare Friday of leaders of the so-called Frontline States, six black nations bordering or near South Africa.

The Press Trust of India said Friday that India also has opted to join the boycott but this was not officially confirmed.

The others taking part in the boycott are the Bahamas, Bangladesh, Ghana, Kenya, Malaysia, Nigeria, Papua New Guinea, Sierra Leone, Tanzania, and Uganda.

The Commonwealth is a 49-nation association of Britain and its former colonies. A total of 58 countries were originally due to participate in the games. The difference in numbers between 49 and 58 is accounted for by the fact that Britain, comprising England, Scotland and Wales, and some other Commonwealth states have component parts. Each of the components is allowed to take part in the games under its own identity.

Several other Commonwealth countries have hinted that they would follow the Frontline States' lead in a boycott. It was not immediately clear how Friday's outcome would influence those nations still considering a boycott.

The 14 nations which already indicated they will not attend would have comprised about 10 percent of the athletes expected to participate. In 1982, they accounted for 16 of the 142 gold medals awarded and won 11 percent of the total medals.

The chairman of the Frontline group, Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, said there was still time to save the games if British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher changed her stance against mandatory economic sanctions against white-led South Africa.

Lange said in Auckland, which will host the 1990 Commonwealth Games, that countries boycotting the games risk fragmenting the Commonwealth. "If the passions which have been aroused spill over into Commonwealth consultations then the question must be asked: what is the future of the Commonwealth?" he said.

Cowboy training camp...

Petersen out for 10 weeks

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - Offensive tackle Kurt Petersen will be out of commission for at least 10 weeks, but Dallas Cowboys officials say that at least they know where he is.

Strong safety Dextor Clinkscale called Friday to ask for Cowboys' President Tex Schramm, but still was a no-show at training camp.

Officials said he could show up Saturday, but they didn't know where he is or why he has been missing.

Petersen, meanwhile, underwent arthoscopic surgery in Dallas to repair a torn ligament in his right knee. He will be on crutches for about a month, and it may be at least 10 weeks before he can play.

Petersen first injured the knee last December in a 20-0 playoff loss to the Los Angeles Rams. He hurt it again on the opening day of training camp.

The Cowboys on Friday also lost free agent wide receiver Wayne Roby of Wisconsin with a knee injury. He's expected to be out for the year.

Clinkscale's absence is starting to test the patience of Coach Tom Landry.

"I guess this is the mystery training camp of 1986," Landry said. "I'm surprised he hasn't called me."

Schramm was in New York City for the United States Football League trial against the National Football League until late Friday.

Clinkscale, the union representative on the team, had yet to announce why he's missed almost a week of training camp.

But the players' collective bargaining agreement with the NFL says the deadline for reporting to camp is 15 days before the first exhibition game. In Clinkscale's case, that would be Saturday.

The Cowboys reported to training camp a week early with the permission of the NFL because of an exhibition game Aug. 2 in London against the world champion Chicago Bears.

Clinkscale is also on the option year of his contract.

"I haven't even looked into the possibility of a fine," Landry said. "There is some damage to his starting status when he's not here because everbody else is working. I'm not sure what his problem is."

Hard-hitting Bill Bates has been impressive in camp as Clinkscale's replacement.

"Dextor is a good player, but whether he is here or not I'm still going to give it my best," Bates said. "I'll play anywhere they want me, special teams, return punts, whatever. I just want to play."

Bates said one advantage to being in the starting lineup is "I definitely get more repetitions in practice with the first team."

Also among the missing was the Cowboys' top three rookie draft choices, including No. 1 pick wide receiver Mike Sherrard of UCLA.

Cigarette ad ban is proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress should ban all cigarette advertising to save lives and protect future generations of Americans from becoming nicotine addicts, a House subcommittee was told Friday.

Captain Kangaroo, Yul Brynner's daughter and the grandson of tobacco magnate R.J. Reynolds joined the medical establishment in endorsing a bill to outlaw all promotion and advertising of tobacco products — in newspapers and magazines, on billboards and as part of sales displays.

The bill also would ban any tobacco company from using a brand name in sponsoring public events such as sports tournaments.

The subcommittee did not hear from Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, a longtime foe of cigarette smoking who supports the advertising ban.

White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan reportedly killed Koop's planned testimony, but a presidential spokesman said Friday that Koop would testify before the subcommittee Aug. 1.

"We do not have a position on any legislation calling for a ban on print advertising of cigarettes," White House spokesman Edward Djerejian said. "We are in the process of studying that now."

Representatives of the tobacco and advertising industries are scheduled to testify against the proposed ban at the Aug. 1 hearing, but Friday's hearing was dominated by supporters of the bill.

Bob Keeshan, a former smoker and creator of the Captain Kangaroo television character, called tobacco use a threat to the well-being of the nation's youth.

"The future of America is alive today, in the minds, the healthy hearts and the healthy lungs of today's youngsters," Keeshan said. "I ask you, no I implore you ... to ... take steps to assure the continued health of our young people."

Victoria Brynner, a professional model who lives in Paris, showed the subcommitte a videotaped statement by her actor father before he died of lung cancer last year.

Now being aired, the segment features Brynner saying heavy smoking caused his fatal illness and urging others to stop smoking.

"Yul Brynner is dead. We all know why. I don't want to forget his suffering," Ms. Brynner said. "I don't know whether to laugh or cry when I read newspaper articles in which representatives of the tobacco industry (say) the money spent on advertising and promotion is simply done to get present users to switch to a particular brand."

She added: "It is obvious that this industry must constantly try to get new smokers to replace those who have quit or who have died."

Dr. Charles A. LeMaistre, president of the American Cancer Society, called cigarette smoking "the single most preventable cause of death in the United States."

Representatives of the American Medical Association, the American Public Health Association and the American Academy of Pediatrics also testified in support of the bill introduced last month by Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla.

They said tobacco causes over 350,000 premature deaths each year.

Reagan to oppose tougher sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, readying a speech on South Africa, will spell out no radical departures from current U.S. policy but may announce the selection of a black businessman as the next American ambassador to Pretoria, administration officials say.

The president will make the address at 2 p.m. EDT Tuesday in the East Room of the White House.

Despite pressures from Congress and elsewhere for a tougher policy toward the white-minority government, Reagan said Friday, "I am very much opposed to punitive sanctions" as a way to force South Africa to abandon apartheid.

One official familiar with the content of Reagan's address said, "We're going to put increasing pressure on them ... but there is no magic bullet."

Another administration official said Reagan would appeal to the South African government to engage in a dialogue with blacks. Both officials insisted on anonymity.

One official said, "The opportunity is still there for the dialogue on national reconciliation to commence and to move away from apartheid.

"There's not going to be any radical departures" from current policy, the official added. Under the so-called constructive engagement policy, the United States has refrained from harsh economic or political sanctions while continuing to try to persuade Pretoria to ease its race laws.

Robert J. Brown, black businessman from North Carolina, has been sounded out by the administration about being the next ambassador to South Africa, and has said he is willing to serve.

Reagan wants to name Brown, and the South African government — which by diplomatic custom has veto power over the president's emissary — has not raised any objections, an official said.

The official said an FBI background investigation of Brown, which Reagan ordered to be accelerated, has not been completed.

Brown would be the first black to be American ambassador to South Africa.

However, a report in today's Washington Post said Brown's nomination has run into a hitch and that his name was removed from a draft of Reagan's speech.

The report, attributed to unidentified administration sources, said the hitch appeared to be related to rumors concerning Brown's involvement in rice sales to Nigeria.

Jury awards survivors of crash only $605,000

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A federal jury Friday awarded the widow and children of a victim of last year's crash of a Delta Air Lines jet $605,000 compensation, far less than the more than $3 million she sought.

After about two hours of deliberations, the jury announced Kathy Ann Reynolds should be paid $160,000 for the death of her husband, Paul Reynolds, said Bonnie Von Roeder, law clerk for U.S. District Judge David O. Belew.

Reynolds, 32, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was one of 137 people killed when Delta Flight 191 crashed at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport on Aug. 2.

The jury also awarded $230,000 to Reynolds' 11-month-old son, Paul Reynolds II, and $215,000 to his daughter, Jacqueline Reynolds, 2.

The lawyers argued those factors should prompt jurors to sharply limit the amount of money the Reynolds family deserved.

A defense witness testified he would have contributed only $365,000 to his family over the same 30-year period.

Man gets 2 life terms for kidnapping, abuse of six-year-old girl

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A man already convicted of exposing himself to a 5-year-old girl was sentenced to two life prison terms for kidnapping and sexually abusing a 6-year-old Abilene girl.

Heeding the urgings of a prosecutor to give Ray Hightower Jr. "a sentence that'll last every bit as long as the damage he's done," jurors took only 35 minutes Friday to set the maximum punishment.

Hightower had been convicted of four previous felony offenses and was on parole from a 1982 Dallas County conviction for exposing himself to a 5-year-old girl when he abducted the Abilene girl from her home Feb. 1.

In the only ruling favoring the 30-year-old former Tye resident, the jury said he released the girl unharmed and in a place where she would be found safe.

That finding would have made the maximum punishment on the kidnapping case 20 years in prison if Hightower did not have prior convictions, prosecutors said.

Because of his previous convictions, Hightower was sentenced as a "habitual criminal," giving jurors a range of punishment of 25 years to life.

Defense attorney Lynn Ingalsbe gave notice of appeal.

Hightower is ineligible for release on appeal bond because of the length of the sentences. He was returned to Taylor County Jail to await transportation to Huntsville.

Judge Bill Thomas said Hightower must spend 20 years in prison before he is eligible for parole.

The jury viewed prison documents showing Hightower had served time in prison for convictions on charges of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, aggravated robbery and burglary, and indecency with a child.

Assistant District Attorney Max Higgs implored the jury to give Hightower "a sentence that'll last every bit as long as the damage he's done."

Higgs said the victim "someday will realize that there were some people in Taylor County who knew she was wronged and tried to make things right. And that may make it easier for her to bear."

Committee chairman removed by Kremlin

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin removed the head of the state atomic safety committee Friday, nearly three months after the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, and a news weekly said the accident has forced a review of atomic power policy.

The magazine New Times indicated radiation still is leaking in small amounts from the crippled Chernobyl reactor, about 80 miles north of Kiev in the Soviet Ukraine.

In a one-sentence announcement, the official news agency Tass said the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the nation's nominal Parliament, had "released from his duties" Yevgeny V. Kulov, 57, chief of the State Committee for Safety in the Atomic Power Atomic Industry since 1983.

It gave no reason for the move and did not list any new assignment, indicating he was fired. It did not mention the Chernobyl accident or say who was replacing Kulov.

He is the first national atomic energy official to be removed from office since the April 26 chemical explosion and fire at the plant's No. 4 reactor, which spewed radioactivity over much of Europe.

The plant director and several other local officials have been fired or thrown out of the Communist Party because of alleged incompetency during the accident.

The New Times article did not shed any new light on what caused the disaster, which it called "the most serious one in the history of nuclear power engineering."

It also did not update the official casualty figure of 26 dead.

The magazine quoted Valery Legasov, deputy director of a state atomic energy institute, as saying Chernobyl "forced us to revise once again the concept of the development of nuclear power engineering in the country, the location of nuclear power plants, the level of technical preparedness and the skill of personnel."

Many Soviet nuclear reactors were built close to towns and even large cities, and small communities often are built next to the reactors for plant workers and support industries.

The article did not specify what new policies were being considered.

Yuri V. Sivintsev, identified as the institute's laboratory chief, was quoted as saying the thousands of tons of sand, boron, lead and other material dumped on the ruined No. 4 reactor have "practically stopped" the leakage of radiation from the reactor.

This indicated some radiation still is leaking, but Sivintsev did not give any figures.

Despite very high levels of radiation, experts in protective clothing are able to go inside the damaged reactor building to install equipment to monitor radiation and control air temperature, the magazine said.

"So far, we cannot approach closely the center of the reactor," it quoted Sivintsev as saying. He was quoted as saying the project to encase the reactor in concrete should be completed this fall.

Today's issue of the newsweekly Nedelya, meanwhile, quoted doctors as saying the local clinic ran out of blood tranfusion equipment and pajamas in the first days after the accident.

The article said the wife of Vladimir Shashenok, one of two men who died instantly or shortly after the accident, was a nurse who tended her badly burned husband during the last hours of his life.

At least one nurse and one doctor who helped treat accident victims are being treated at a Moscow hospital, it said.

Struck vehicle has no driver

A driverless vehicle was involved in a two-vehicle accident here Friday, one of three minor traffic mishaps reported in Snyder Friday.

The wreck was reported at 8:02 p.m. in the 1800 Block of 30th St.

Involved in it were a 1977 Chevrolet driven by Antonio Perez Torres of 1405 33rd St., which struck the unattended vehicle owned by Louline Collins of 1903 Coleman Ave. The Collins vehicle reportedly rolled away from a parking place.

Involved in the day's first accident — at 8:01 a.m. at the intersection of 37th St. and College Ave. — were a 1978 Mercury driven by Vena Wilson of 205 33rd St. and a 1985 Ford driven by Darla Diane Hardegree of 3726 Ave. U.

Ramon L. Herrera of 3201 42nd St. filed the day's third report at 9:04 p.m.

He told police that his 1982 Ford had apparently been struck by an unidentifed vehicle while parked outside his residence.

No injuries were reported in any of the Friday accidents.

Alexander Graham Bell demonstrated the telephone to Queen Victoria in 1878.

Freed U.S. hostage wants to rest now

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — U.S. evangelist Brian Lawrence, freed from six days captivity by a Moslem band on southern Mindanao island, flew into Manila today saying he wants "to take a rest, to get away."

The lanky, bearded Lawrence, a Madison, Wis., missionary, was freed unharmed Friday, a day after 10 Filipino Roman Catholic nuns held hostage for six days by another Moslem group were also released unharmed.

When asked if he wanted to resume his missionary work among Moslems in Lanao del Sur province where he was kidnapped July 12, Lawrence said, "God willing."

Lawrence, 30, was accompanied to Manila by his wife, Carol Ann, of Lititz, Pa., and by Moslem politician Tarhata Alonto Lucman, who is credited with negotiating the American's release.

Hours after Lawrence was released, Southern Command Chief Maj. Gen. Jose Magno ordered two Army battalions to conduct "operations" against the kidnappers.

There was no immediate report that the military action has begun. Marawi area commander Col. Raul Aquino said Friday night he had not received Magno's order, which also called for the kidnappers' arrest.

Lawrence, in a brief airport interview before he was driven to the U.S. Embassy for a meeting with Charge d'Affairs Philip Kaplan, said he understood that the Moslems who negotiated his release were asking amnesty for his kidnappers.

"There were times when I was afraid, but most of the time I was confident that I would be released," Lawrence said. "There were others who have been kidnapped in the past and they have all been released."

Lawrence said he thought the leaders of the kidnap band "had political motivation" but that most of their followers — many of them in their teens — "didn't understand politics."

Lawrence had said in a taped message during his captivity that he was instructed by his captors to say they wanted independence for Mindanao, a volatile region 500 miles south of Manila, where most of the Philippines' 5 million Moslem minority live.

A military report said the American's kidnappers were former employees of Marawi's Mindanao State University who were dismissed from their jobs in a government revamp ordered by President Corazon Aquino.

Magno said he investigated reports that some of them were followers of Moslem political kingpin Ali Dimaporo, but that the Dimaporo family denied any links to them.

Dimaporo, former Lanao del Sur governor, has allied himself to ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos whom he still recognizes as president. He was among the local officials who lost their jobs in the government reorganization.

Backs automatic fuel pass-through

AUSTIN (AP) — The automatic fuel pass-through clause that Gov. Mark White criticized as contributing to high utility bills can now be reinstated because the Public Utility Commission keeps a close eye on electric companies, the PUC chairwoman said Friday.

"Given the emphasis that's being placed on fuel and regulation in general by this commission as presently constituted, yes, we could go back to that with confidence," said Peggy Rosson, a White appointee.

Under the old system, electric companies passed fuel costs directly to customers, changing the price monthly as the price of fuel fluctuated. White complained in his 1982 campaign that the system gave no incentive to electric companies to negotiate for better fuel prices and allowed companies to pass through improper costs.

The 1983 Legislature abolished the automatic fuel adjustment clause and directed the PUC to take an active role in reviewing fuel charges.

"The problem was not the automatic pass-through, it was the fact that the commission was not exercising enough regulatory oversight to where the public felt that they were not being cheated," Ms. Rosson said. "The public had lost confidence in whether what was being passed through automatically was, in truth and fact, a good number."

But close commission review of utility company fuel costs now guarantees the number would be a good one, she said.

"I think it would be a fair system," she said. "I would not want to go back to an automatic fuel pass-through without the assurance that there is regulatory oversight and a mechanism in place for correction."

Under a temporary system now in place, utility companies must come to the commission for approval of fuel rate changes, including refunds to customers who were overcharged.

5 arrests noted

Police logged five misdemeanor arrests Friday.

Included in that total were two jailed for being intoxicated on a premises licensed to sell alcohol, one arrested for driving while intoxicated and one jailed for public intoxication.

The fifth suspect was arrested on warrants issued for unpaid Department of Public Safety traffic citations.

Rodeo results near final go the running for prize money. In the bareback riding event, Mike Carillo continues to lead with his 77 point score clocked Wednesday.

In second place — also from a ride Wednesday — is Charles Adams of Waco with 73.

Also retaining the lead in the saddle bronc riding competition is Roy Sutherland of Lubbock, who scored a 73 at Thursday's show.

Friday also marked the second night for no qualifying bull rides. Leading the event is Norman Curry of Marshall with his first night score of 80. Also still tied for second is Johnny Hoyle of Georgetown and Jimbo Hickman of Cypress scoring 71.

Saturday's show will feature the finals in the clown bullfighting competition. Startup time is 8 p.m. in the Scurry County Coliseum. Tickets are $4 for general admission and $3 for children under 12.

The final performance will be followed by a rodeo dance in the ag annex.

Producer of the rodeo this year is Smokey Davis of the Rafter 'D' Rodeo Company of Fulshear.

Albert Schweitzer, the famous scholar and humanitarian, was born in 1875.

Budget requests slated for drive

—Buffalo Trail Council of Scouts ($29,796).

—Snyder Child Day Care Center ($11,000).

—West Texas Girl Scout Council ($10,000).

—Oil Patch Foster Parents ($4,280).

—Red Cross ($2,800).

—Salvation Army ($3,000).

The West Texas Rehabilitation Center in Abilene, also granted agency status, traditionally does not ask for a specific amount. Its United Way allocation last year was $1,000.

In addition, United Way traditionally funds itself some $5,500 for its own local expenses.

For last year's campaign, the cost of completing the drive accounted for some 5 percent of the total money raised.

"Looking at it one way, that's like operating a business with a 95 percent profit margin. We can do that because United Way workers work cheap — for free," commented United Way President Donny Brown.

Brown is among an eight-member budget committee which will hear fund requests Wednesday. Other members of the committee include United Way Directors Eddie Johnson, Bob Hawes, Jack Gorman Jr., Ralph Williamson, Lee McNair, Rodger Sullenger and Don Farmer.

The following time schedule has been set aside for requests: Boys Club, 1 p.m.; Snyder Child Day Care Center, 1:20 p.m.; Girl Scouts, 1:40 p.m.; Boy Scouts, 2 p.m.; Oil Patch Foster Parents, 2:20 p.m.; Noah Project, 2:40 p.m.; Red Cross, 3 p.m.; Salvation Army, 3:20 p.m.; and West Texas Rehab, 3:40 p.m.

The budget recommendation from the budget committee will be referred to the full 25-member United Way board for final approval.

The campaign is traditionally conducted each fall.

U. S., Bolivia raid drug lab

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Drug traffickers are fleeing the remote northeastern jungles where U.S. soldiers and Blupice, in their first strike against Bolivia's cocaine industry, netted one suspect and a small airplane, a government official said.

Information Minister Herman Antelo, at a news conference hours after Friday's raid, called it a "general exodus" of traffickers.

The U.S. and Bolivian forces also confiscated barrels of chemicals employed in drug production at a thatch-roofed, log-framed lab that had the capacity to produce up to 3,300 pounds of cocaine sulfate a month, Antelo said.

"We are talking about a laboratory of great dimensions," Antelo said.

Cocaine sulfate is a chemical forerunner of the form of cocaine sold on the street.

Antelo said only one man without identity papers was caught dismantling drug processing equipment when the U.S. and Bolivian forces moved in.

Asked if the absence of any processed drugs and the presence of only one trafficker was an indication that the lab's operators were alerted to a possible raid, Antelo said, "we do not suppose that there was foreknowledge at this particular site."

"What we do suppose is that there has been a general exodus in the Beni," he said. "Those that are fleeing, we hope they flee right out of the country and don't come back."

Brazilian officials said they have stationed an additional 200 police officers along the country's 2,000-mile-long border with Bolivia to prevent an influx of drug traffickers. Authorities said no arrests or incidents have been reported along the border.

In Colombia, an anti-narcotics official predicted that the crackdown in Bolivia would lead to increased production in Colombia and Peru.

Antelo said the U.S. and Bolivian forces encountered no resistance.

It was the first raid since U.S. forces began arriving Monday from the U.S. Southern Military Command in Panama to provide logistical and communications support for Bolivian anti-narcotics police in the operation.

U.S. officials said it marked the first time American military personnel had been engaged in such actions outside the United States.

Officials refused to say when and where the next raid would take place, but acknowledged that several more were expected in the coming weeks.

Antelo and other authorities also declined to specify where the laboratory raided on Friday was located. However, they said the strike was staged from the Josuani ranch, a former cattle and farming plantation where the anti-narcotics forces have set up a staging base.

The ranch, about 140 miles northwest of the city of Trinidad, last was owned by a prosperous cocaine trafficker and was shut down by Bolivian authorities last year.

About 160 U.S. soldiers are participating in the operation, backing up about 120 members of the elite Bolivian Leopard police narcotics squad.

Marijuana plants are confiscated

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Maricopa County sheriff's deputies have confiscated $228,000 worth of marijuana plants, and in a separate incident, re-arrested three men who were released on bond last month on drug-related charges, a spokesman said Friday.

Sheriff's spokesman Cpl. Jay Ellison said 101 marijuana plants were confiscated Thursday morning from a Wittman-area home and another 51 plants were confiscated from a nearby home. The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration values marijuana at $1,500 a plant, making the total estimated value $228,000, he said.

Arrests in the case were expected, Ellison said.

In the other incident, three men arrested Thursday for investigation of possession of a narcotic drug for sale were identified as Hugh B. McCreery, 38, of Mesa, Lawrence E. Swann, 36, of Apache Junction and Sterling Beach, 27, of Mesa.

The men are accused of being involved in a seven-year operation to bring marijuana into the country from Juarez, Mexico, to El Paso, Texas, and then to Phoenix, Ellison said.

Obituaries

Bubs Gressett

FORSAN–Services were held at 3:30 p.m. Saturday for William K. (Bubs) Gressett who died Thursday at his home following a sudden illness. Burial was in Trinity Memorial Park in Big Spring.

Gressett, 50, was the brother of Don Gressett of Snyder.

Born in Big Spring, he grew up in Forsan. He was a member of the Forsan Baptist Church and was a maintenance man for the Forsan school district. He served on the Howard County Fair board and worked with the Junior Rodeo Association.

Other survivors include his wife, Mary; a son, William Gressett of Sterling City; two daughters, Ellen Henderson of San Angelo and Debbie Humphrey of Sonora; a sister, Dorothy Pye of Hobbs, N. M.; and three grandchildren.

Coy Williams

DENVER CITY–Services were held Saturday in Denver City Church of Christ for Coy S. Williams, 61, who died Friday at his home. Burial was in Sunset Memorial Gardens in Odessa.

Born in Overton, he had been a resident of Denver City for 24 years, moving from Snyder. He worked for J. P. "Bum" Gibbens for 18 years. He owned and operated Coy's Rental Tools for nine years.

Survivors include his wife, Marianna; his mother, Lillie Williams of Andrews; two daughters, Glenda Faye Williams and Debra Ann Falkner, both of Lubbock; a sister, Lucille Cheek of Andrews; and a brother, T. L. of Sweetwater.

H&R Block ready to file amended returns

H&R Block recently announced that it would prepare free amended returns for all its clients who paid tax in 1984 on the Pac-Tel portion of their AT&T stock dividends.

The tax court recently held in favor of AT&T stockholders who were required to pay tax on part of their stock distribution when AT&T split. This means that they will be eligible to reclaim the tax they paid by filling an amended return or Form 1040X.

H&R Block will prepare these returns free for their clients and will charge a minimal fee for nonclients. "We figure it's the least we can do for our clients," said Wernette Smith, H&R Block district manager. "Many of our clients paid more tax than necessary for 1984 because of the AT&T divesture. We'd like to do the most we can to help them reclaim their money.

"We're concerned that our clients get a fair deal when it comes to paying taxes and we couldn't be more pleased with the tax court decision in their favor," Smith replied. "We'll also prepare these returns for those who aren't H&R Block clients for a nominal fee."

H&R Block clients who paid tax on AT&T dividends in 1984 should call 573-9002 to find the nearest open office or stop into their local open H&R Block office.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

"Come on, babies, come on," Eelon Harrell calls as he guides his "family" out to the front yard. "Let's go."

Life on the Harrells' nearly three-acre tract of land on the Sweetwater Highway changed dramatically when Eelon began adopting orphaned lambs several months ago. Now the 10 pets know the voice of their surrogate "mother" and follow him "just like a bunch of little puppies" as he completes gardening chores and other yard duties.

Friends say Eelon has an "unmatched compassion" for animals. That compassion led him to adopt as many as 29 lambs while working for A.W. Scrivner in Dermott.

"When the old ewes had babies, especially twins, and could only take care of one or if something happened to the ewe when a baby was born, we had to take care of the lambs. It was either bring them home or let them die," he explained as he rubbed Petunia's back.

"Petunia was my first. She was one of triplets," he added. "When a ewe delivers triplets, you usually have to take one of them off her."

By learning about sheep primarily through trial and error, Eelon saved only 10 of the original 29 lambs. "I brought home 12 in the first bunch and 17 the second time. Sometimes they were sick or just so small they couldn't make it. I think now I've learned enough I can save most of what I find."

Each morning he mixes formula purchased at a local feed store. By drilling holes in a sheet of plywood, he can bottlefeed all 10 lambs at once. "It's easier that way," he laughed. "I just pour the formula into Coke bottles, put nipples on them and stick them through the holes. The lambs usually empty them in less than a minute."

In the few months they have depended on Eelon, the animals have quickly learned to expect their 6 a.m. feeding. "The lambs stand at the gate (each morning) and watch the back door. They do okay until they see movement," his wife Odelle mused.

As soon as movement is detected from the house, the lambs bawl until they are satisfied. "One neighbor came by to ask if we had babies at our house. He said it sounded just like babies crying."

Eelon discontinued his work for the Scrivners after Odelle developed some health problems. He hopes to return to the ranch in the near future. "When her health is better, I'd like to return. I really enjoy the work and the sheep," he said.

He also plans to continue saving the babies that would otherwise die and bring them home to spoil along with "two spoiled poodles, a spoiled cat, a spoiled parakeet and three pet goats."

Raising sheep is the latest in a series of careers Eelon has pursued over the years which included flying burn patients from this area to Houston and Galveston during the mid-1950s and through the 1960s.

Based in Colorado City, he and a partner flew burn victims and other patients from Snyder, Sweetwater and Colorado City in a Cessna 175 from an airstrip he built himself.

"Most of the time we had a nurse with us. Unfortunately, so many times we had to go back and carry them home on a stretcher."

Securing his pilot's license didn't come quickly for Eelon. He spent almost 20 years washing airplanes and performing other odd jobs around the hangars in Abilene to earn flying instructions.

"When I was a kid, I lived in Merkel. I used to hitchhike to Abilene to wash planes and anything else I could do to earn an hour's instruction. Back then you didn't have any money and had to work your way out of it," he remembered.

Persistence paid off when he finally completed his training in 1957.

Eelon gave up his hospital runs to open a fishing camp on Lake Champion. "I sold bait and a few groceries to the fishermen. I used the plane to bring in minnows from Fort Worth and Abilene.

In 1972, he married Odelle and the couple moved to Snyder. From 1974-1981 he worked for the city's street and sanitation departments.

CHOCOLATE CHILLER MUCHO MOCHA MOUSSE

1 and one-half cups milk
2 teaspoons instant coffee crystals one 4-serving size instant chocolate pudding mix one 1 and one-fourth ounce envelope whipped dessert topping mix

In a large mixer bowl combine milk and coffee crystals. Let stand 5 minutes to dissolve crystals. Stir in pudding mix and topping mix. Beat with an electric mixer on low speed about 30 seconds or until moistened. Beat on high speed about 4 minutes more or until fluffy. Spoon into individual dessert dishes. Serve immediately or chill until serving time. Makes 6 servings.

Library program to be continued

The Scurry County Library will continue the "Texas Reading Trail" program through August 13. At the present time, 280 children have registered for the summer program. Children who have not yet signed up are encouraged to do so. Three youths have finished all 10 Texas Trails by reading 64 books each.

Plains, the first trail, can be finished by reading 10 books. This earns a certificate. Over 60 children have already finished this trail. Thereafter for each six books read, children travel another trail and receive a small prize.

Tomatoes require sunshine to ripen, but too much of a good thing can cause sunscald, according to Better Homes and Gardens. This malady shows up as a white or yellow papery blister on the part of the tomato that is most exposed to the sun. Although natural foliage cover usually provides the necessary protection, plants damaged by disease or insects often have insufficient leaf cover.

FEATURED THIS WEEK

LIFE IN THE OIL FIELDS. By Roger M. Olien. Much has been said about the great gushers, the notorious wildcatters, and the raucous boomtowns of oil field life, but the stories of the people who lived their lives in the shadow of the derrick have mainly gone untold. This is a fascinating look at the everyday life of oil field workers and their families told through oral recollections and 80 photographs.

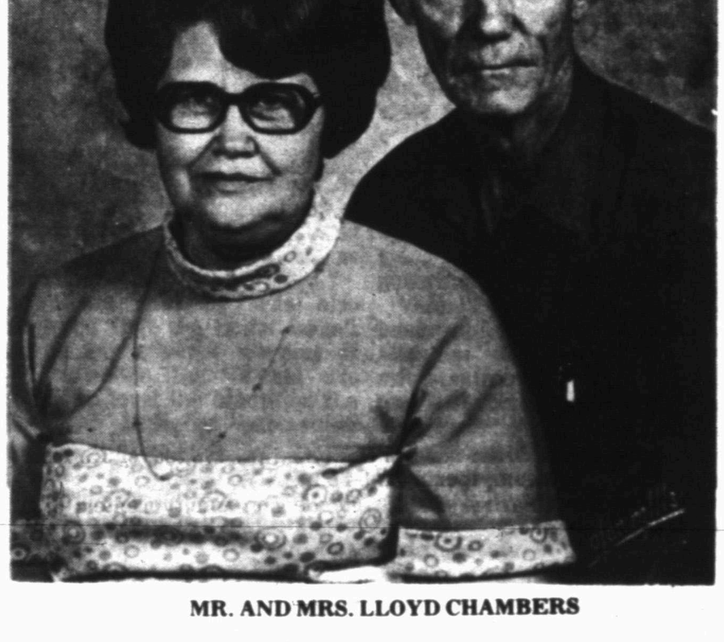
"Texas Tradition" by Ross Phares. Here is a herd of true tales of the wit, wisdom, and whimsy of Texas and Texans. Rich in legend, this recounts tales of the rugged individuals who blazed trails and pioneered the new land. Containing hundreds of swashbuckling stories of gunfights, family fueds, bravery and understatement, Texas Tradition provides a rare insight into one of America's most storied states. In many ways, it has captured once and for all, the authentic Texas spirit.

"13 Days to Glory" by Lon Tinkle. In this action-packed drama Lon Tinkle reveals the men behind our native myths–the great figures of America legend as they were at the time of their martyrdom. Completely authenticated, documented from actual records, 13 Days to Glory tells of a stirring moment in American history. Shot through with vitality and explosive action, it is a tribute to Texas in her finest hour.



MR. AND MRS. LLOYD CHAMBERS

Golden anniversary noted

Lloyd and Lura Chambers will be celebrating their 50th Wedding Anniversary July 27 from 3-5 p.m. in the Primitive Baptist Church, 2011 Avenue M.

Hosting the event will be their children Betty Norwood of Kermit; Steve Chambers of Littlefield; and Cleve Chambers and Janet Jones of Snyder.

An open invitation is extended to all friends of the couple. Your presence will be the only gift received.

The couple was married on July 25, 1936 in Scurry County where they have lived most of their married lives. Mr. Chambers is retired from Santa Fe Railroads. Mrs. Chambers is retired from Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Baby boomers declining toothpicks

VARNVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Americans are eating out in restaurants more often these days, but more of them also are passing up the toothpick as a post-dessert end to their meal.

Restaurant diners, particularly those in their 20s and 30s, are causing a drop in toothpick production in the United States, says Georgia-Pacific Corp., a wood products firm.

In fact, its says, toothpicks have been dropping in popularity since the end of World War II. Their use was at a high during the early 1900s, following the patent of the first toothpick-making machine in 1872.

Vows exchanged in garden ceremony

Shonna Jean Slaughter and Ronald Jay Butler were united in marriage on June 21 in a garden setting at the home of the groom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne N. Dodson. Officiating the double-ring ceremony was Rev. Miller Robinson.

Parents of the couple are Shirley Slaughter and Kay Dodson Butler, all of Snyder.

Vows were exchanged in a garden with a natural archway of honeysuckle. A large arrangement of pink flowers floated in the pool. Large pink satin bows marked the white bridal aisle runner that led to the white gazebo. Brass stands stood on each side of the entrance holding pink gladioli arranged in the shape of a fan. Green plants were hanging on each side of the gazebo with white wedding bells hanging from a pink satin ribbon in the center.

Musical selections were presented by Lynn Bethel and included "Say Me," "Endless Love," "Truly" and the "The Wedding Song."

Given in marriage by her brother, Tony Slaughter, the bride wore a Mendocino original gown of sheer chiffon edged with three ruffles of chantilly lace and satin. The molded bodice featured a high collar with a deep schifflie lace "V" outlined in alencon, lace and pearls. Chantilly lace ruffles adorned the shoulders. Bands of chantilly lace with pearls covered satin inserts and decorated the bottom of the sleeves. Alencon lace with pearls formed the cuffs.

The chapel-length train flowed from a fitted waist. The hemline and the train were encircled with three ruffles of chantilly lace and satin. The bride wore a bandeau headpiece of re-embroidered chantilly lace sprinkled with pearls. Flowing from the headpiece was the floor-length veil of silk illusion.

The bride carried a cascading heart shaped bouquet of pink roses, phanlaenopsis orchids, string of hearts, stephanotis and baby's breath. The bouquet was complemented with pink and white satin streamers tied in love knots.

The groom wore a white full-tail tuxedo with a pink rosebud and baby's breath boutonniere.

As the couple departed the mothers were presented with long-stemmed pink roses.

The registry table was accented with the bridal book and a basket of pink satin roses filled with rice.

The reception was held following the ceremony in the home of the groom's grandparents. The bridal table was covered with a white eyelet cloth and a white dove holding pink tapered candles rested on each end. A pink shell-shaped dish held nuts.

The cake was a three-tiered creation made by Tory Lyons. The cake's bottom layer edge was accented with tiny bows and miniature pink fresh flower bouquets adorned the cake. The top layer was shaped with two white doves joined together with a ring nestled in fresh flowers.

Serving at the bridal table was Kim Minor, the groom's sister.

The groom's table was covered with a cloth trimmed in Bottenberg lace. It held silver appointments with strawberries dipped in white chocolate, nuts in pink shells and a pink flower arrangement that matched the one on the bride's table. Serving at the groom's table was Karen Chandler, the groom's cousin.

The couple took a wedding trip to Austin, South Padre Island and Horseshoe Bay before making their home in Snyder.

The groom is employed by Wayne Dodson Consultants, Inc.

Couple united in evening service

Kimberly Denise Covington and Larry Frank Bridges were united in a candlelight ceremony June 28 at 7 p.m. in the First Baptist Church in Hermleigh. Officiating the double-ring ceremony was Rev. Rex Reynolds of Hermleigh.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Chuck Woods of Warren and Jim Bridges and the late Belma Bridges of Pyron.

Vows were exchanged before an altar of 16 crystal votive cups lining the steps of the choir loft. A table was graced with a white and red unity candle covered by a crystal globe. Single red candles in brass with greenery and red silk roses rested on each side.

MR. AND MRS. LARRY FRANK BRIDGES

Red satin bows marked the pews.

Musical selections included "To Me" and "The Rose" presented by Carol Woods, sister-in-law of the bride, as she sang and played the piano. Other music included "Truly" and "The Wedding Song."

Ushers and candlelighters were Tim Dacus and Tim Mireles, both of Hermleigh.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her brother, Mark Woods of Beaumont. She wore an ivory tea-length gown of satin and embroidered organza with scalloped neck and scooped back. The dress featured straight sleeves with a ruffle around the wrist. A satin ribbon accented the princess style waistline. She wore a wreath of baby's breath in her hair. Her bouquet was made of red and ivory silk roses with baby's breath, greenery and seed pearls. The bouquet was accented with red and ivory satin ribbons.

Keeping with tradition the bride chose cameo earrings, a gift from her grandmother, Alma Woods of Midland, as something old. Her dress served as something new and she borrowed a gold wedding band from Kathy Reynolds of Hermleigh. A blue garter with ivory and lace served as something blue.

Matron of honor was Dana Hines of Snyder. She wore a dress of red crepe with a sweetheart neckline and princess style waistline with puffed sleeves. She carried a bouquet of red and ivory silk roses with greenery and baby's breath, accented with red and ivory satin ribbons.

The groom chose a navy pinstripe suit with an ivory silk rose boutonniere.

Bill Wilkinson of Snyder served as best man. He wore a grey suit with an ivory silk rose boutonniere.

Attending the registry table was Melinda Early of Snyder. The table was covered in a red cloth with an overlay of ivory lace. Resting on the table were two brass candle holders with crystal votive cups holding red candles. The candles were accented with red ribbons.

A reception was held at the Central Baptist Church fellowship hall in Hermleigh. Serving at the bride's table were Belinda Bridges, the groom's sister from San Angelo and Nancy Myers of Snyder. The table was covered with an ivory lace cloth and in the center rested a white family Bible and the bridal bouquet.

The three-tiered wedding cake was made by Loretta Bridges, the groom's sister-in-law from Eden. It was ivory with red roses. The top tier held a bride and groom figurine enhanced by a heart with lace.

Attending the groom's table was Loretta Bridges. The groom's table was covered with an ivory lace cloth holding a three layer German chocolate cake made by Linda Roemisch of Hermleigh. The table was enhanced with a basket of red satin ribbon filled with ivory lace rice bags tied with red satin ribbon.

Bridal courtesies included a miscellaneous shower hosted by co-workers and a shower hosted by the First Baptist Church of Hermleigh members.

Cocker spaniels, for the third year in a row, top the list of America's 120 most popular breeds, according to Better Homes and Gardens. Nipping at the cockers' heels are nine other breeds, including: poodles, Labrador retrievers, German shepherds, golden retrievers, Doberman pinschers, beagles, chow chows, miniature Schnauzers and Shetland sheepdogs.

Finesse or end play?

Here is a hand from Eddie Kantar's latest book, "A New Approach to Play and Defense," which was recently commended by the American Bridge Teachers' Association. The defense begins simply enough with East taking the heart ace and returning the eight, and West makes the proper play of allowing declarer's queen to win that trick. Now you must be careful, if you are declarer, since the defenders are threatening to take three more heart tricks to defeat your contract if they regain the lead.

When you lay down the spade ace, the jack appears on your left. Since you cannot be sure the queen is not going to fall next, it is right to continue with the spade king. West shows out, discarding a low club. What next?

You should now play three rounds of diamonds ending in dummy. If West started with three diamonds or fewer, you can throw him in with the jack of hearts. He can cash his three heart winners but will then have to lead a club for you. You will make the hand regardless of the location of the club king. But if West started with four or more diamonds, then you must take the club finesse and hope for the best. For this line of play to work, you must make the assumption, based on the opening lead and the return, that West started with five hearts.

If you'd like Eddie's autograph with his book, send $9.95 to Eddie Kantar, P.O. Box 427, Venice, CA 90291-0427.

Clements leaves post at multinational firm

DALLAS (AP) — Former Gov. Bill Clements recently resigned from a multinational corporation several Texas oilmen say is trying to drive Texas firms out of business by drastically undercutting prices, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

Clements resignation from the board of directors of Schlumberger Ltd., a multinational corporation and the world's largest oil well service company, was submitted in a letter mailed six weeks ago to the company's executive committee, Clements' campaign press secretary Reggie Bashur said.

"He resigned because of the campaign," Bashur said. "It's just too hectic a schedule and he was too busy. He couldn't make the board meetings and the rest of it."

Clements, a Republican, is campaigning to recapture the governorship he lost to Democratic Gov. Mark White in 1982.

A number of Texas oil and gas service companies hit hard by plunging oil and gas prices have complained that Schlumberger, with $4 billion in capital, is trying to drive them out of business by underbidding them on the few jobs available in the state.

Members of a major Texas-based oil service company that competes with Schlumberger have met with White campaign aides and with Attorney General Jim Mattox to air the complaint, the News reported.

"Their main concern was that Schlumberger had a huge slush fund and was using it to drive those (Texas) companies out of business," Dwayne Holman, manager of White's re-election campaign, said Thursday. He declined to name the service company that made the complaint.

Two members of White's staff have been assigned to check out the accusations, Holman said.

If true, the allegations "could be very damaging" to Clements' campaign, he said.

Bashur said Clements knew nothing of the complaints. He quoted Clements as saying that White is just looking for votes.

Clements joined the board of directors of Schlumberger shortly after the company acquired his firm, Sedco Inc., in a multimillion-dollar merger in December 1984. Clements founded Sedco, an oil well drilling firm, and ran it until his election as governor in 1978.

According to a proxy statement issued by Schlumberger last March, Clements also served on the company's six-member executive committee and owned 1.76 million shares of company stock, including 106,390 shares held by a trust that he controls, the News reported.

LTV could spell problems for fed

CLEVELAND (AP) — LTV Corp.'s filing for reorganization under the federal bankruptcy code has national implications because it puts a billion dollar strain on the federal agency created to protect retiree rights to pensions.

Royal S. Dellinger, deputy executive director for the Pension Benefit Guarantee Corp., said Thursday the agency will be able to handle the LTV bankruptcy in the short term.

"But if we don't find the solution to the long-term problems, we could be put in a very precarious situation," he said. "Presently we have adequate assets to cover the benefits well into the 1990s. But somebody will have to pay for our deficit eventually."

United Steelworkers of America District 28 President Frank Valenta said Thursday the union will go to court to insure pension rights of members are protected, but he also expressed worries about the pension agency.

"It could realistically bankrupt the Pension Benefit Guarantee Corp.," Valenta said.

"If LTV were to terminate its pension plans, it would result in the largest claim ever faced by the PBGC," said Kathleen Utgoff, the agency's executive director. "The underfunding of the plans would mean an enormous financial burden for an already troubled agency."

The PBGC already has $1.7 billion in unfunded liabilities.

LTV owes $1 billion to $1.5 billion in pension payments to 78,500 retirees, an LTV spokesman said. And those benefits — mostly to be paid in the future — are only partially funded, the spokesman added.

The pension guarantee fund will probably take over LTV's pension plan if it is terminated in U.S. Bankruptcy Court, Dellinger said. However, extra early retirement pensions may not be completely covered, he said.

Wife Knows Husband's Great Gift to Her Was Steady Love

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: For the 20 years of our marriage, "Ted" avoided showing emotion. He never gave gifts or learned how to accept one. (He said it made him feel uncomfortable.) I was never able to unlock the safe where he hid his feelings.

Last year, a few days before Ted's birthday, I read a letter in your column that described our marriage perfectly. It was from a wife signed, "Loved in Montana." I clipped it out and saved it. I had bought Ted a much-needed bathrobe for his birthday, but I didn't have it gift-wrapped because I knew he'd never open the box, so I hung it in his closet with the letter signed "Loved in Montana" pinned to the robe.

When Ted discovered it, he came to me and hugged me with the clipping in his hand and tears in his eyes.

Eleven days later, with no previous symptoms, Ted suffered a massive heart attack; four hours later he was dead.

I want to thank "Loved in Montana" for writing that letter, and you, Abby, for printing it. Sign me ...

LOVED IN NEW MEXICO

DEAR LOVED: For readers who want to know what "Loved in Montana's" letter contained, here's a recap: It was a very touching message from a woman whose husband never remembered her on special occasions. She said she nearly lost her wonderful man by her childish insistence that he give her a gift or send a card. She wrote: "A gift that's begged for is really not a gift." She then went on to enumerate the many loving and thoughtful things he did for her every day, which were more proof of his love than a gift on special occasions. She ended her letter with, "Now, after 24 years, I don't need cards or flowers or 'things' because I have precious memories that are always with me. Only a very insecure person like I once was needs tangible reminders. I am thankful that I am secure in his love. That's the greatest gift of all."

• • •

DEAR ABBY: A friend who I hang out with doesn't just "flash" — she wears miniskirts and sits cross-legged. If it's warm outside, she fans herself with her skirt. I don't know if she's trying to be outrageous or trying to attract guys or what, but it really nauses me out.

Abby, it's not like she's 12 years old. She's 22! Is this some form of exhibitionism? I know she's aware she's doing it.

Is it none of my business? Should I just look away when she is spread-eagled in a skirt? I've never thought of myself as old-fashioned, but this is too much.

EMBARRASSED IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR EMBARRASSED: For goodness sakes, tell this friend what you have told me. Regardless of whether her exhibitionism is unconscious or not, the view is the same and so is the impression she's making.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to "Fat and Sassy" was unacceptable. She asked you what to say to a stranger who walks up to an overweight woman and says, "My but you have a pretty face." You replied, "Say, 'Thank you.'"

Thank an insensitive stranger for minding your own business by suggesting that although your face is pretty, the rest of you leaves a lot to be desired? Never!

I can't tell you how many times friends, relatives — and strangers — have come up to me with a comment like this: "You would be beautiful if you'd just lose a little weight." They feel it's their job to startle me with this wonderful revelation. After having told me that they actually think I am ugly, they pause, obviously expecting thanks for the insult.

Well, the day I thank them for making me feel lousy about myself will be the day after never.

You may sign me with the reply I would like to make to such people.

'Twilight Zone' trial to begin soon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nearly four years after the accident occurred, film director John Landis and four co-defendants will go on trial Monday for the deaths of three "Twilight Zone" movie actors.

Superior Court Judge Roger Boren set the date Thursday, and said he has ordered a panel of 200 prospective jurors. Pretrial motions will take up most of the Monday and Tuesday sessions, with jury selection expected to begin late Tuesday or Wednesday, Boren said.

CRMWD sets agenda items

Directors of the Colorado River Municipal Water District will face a busy schedule July 22 when they have a 10 a.m. meeting in Big Spring. Among items will be reports on the Stacy reservoir project, problems with a natural lake west of Big Spring, and water sales contracts.

General Manager O.H. Ivie will brief the board on progress of plans for the Stacy Dam, plus problems including a public hearing Aug. 5 in Ballinger on a proposed draft of a U.S. Corps of Engineers environmental impact statement. Decisions on a source of materials for Stacy may be considered, also on some equipment replacement.

Directors also will consider ratification of expenditures for cutting an emergency spillway around the natural dam that currently impounds upwards of $30,000 ac. ft. of water on Sulphur Draw. The Natural Dam is being raised five feet to provide freeboard should any excess water be diverted around the structure.

A modification of water intake at Lake J.B. Thomas will be presented. Extensions will be asked of water sales contracts with (Gulf) Chevron, and El Paso Natural Gas, along with a new 5,000-bbls. per day sale of Mobil out of non-potable sources. Also, clarification will be asked of the 1985 San Angelo supplemental contract, plus representation at the 70th legislative session.

CRMWD revenues 'right on target'

Colorado River Municipal District finances continue solidly on the plus side through the first half of 1986. Revenues are right on target, and expenditures are well under projections.

Water sales of $6,371,791 are within $3,000 of estimates, and total revenues of $6,481,827 are 1.55 per cent over budget estimates.

Operating expenses for the first six months stood at $3,139,575, or $450,770 under projections, 12.56 per cent less. This, however, included $172,135 fuel adjustment rebates on electric energy for the first half. Power costs of $1,961,173 were 73 per cent of the operations and maintenance expense.

During the first six months, the district sold 9,667,445,108 gallons. Of this 1,031,512,200 gallons came from wells, of 10.70 per cent; 8,695,041,850 gallons came from lakes. This was 79.60 per cent, and the two accounted for 8.7 billion gallons of potable water, or nine out of every 10 gallons delivered. The 940,882,860 gallons of diverted non-potable water was sold to oil companies. Lakes J.B. Thomas (29,520) and Lake E.V. Spence (221,900) had 251,470 ac. ft. in storage, or 36.30 per cent of capacity. They had a net gain of 37,260 ac. ft. for June.

Company drops Cash from label

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Columbia Records has decided to drop Johnny Cash, who spent 28 years recording country music for the label.

"This is the hardest decision that I've ever had to make in my life," said Rick Blackburn, head of Columbia-Epic-CBS Nashville.

Cash, 54, has not had a solo Top-10 hit since "The Baron" in 1981. His earlier hits include "Ring Of Fire" and "I Walk The Line."

Gene Autry falls, breaks right hip

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Gene Autry, the original singing cowboy and owner of the California Angels baseball team, fractured his right hip when he bumped into someone and fell outside a courtroom.

Autry, 78, was in stable condition Thursday evening at St. Joseph's Hospital in Orange, Angels spokesman John Sevano said. He was to be transferred to St. Joseph's Hospital in Burbank, where he was to undergo surgery today.

Autry is expected to be hospitalized a week, Sevano said.

He was leaving the Orange County Superior Court building, where his lawsuit against the city of Anaheim was being heard, when the accident occurred, said Angels attorney Donald D. Morrow.

Crime figure is nearly freed

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Authorities say convicted murderer Tom Lester Pugh should be on his way to Oklahoma in the next seven days after signing a waiver of extradition.

Hugh A. Manning, extradition coordinator for the state, said the waiver signed Thursday by Pugh ended an intensive last-minute effort by the office of Oklahoma Attorney General Mike Turpen to prevent Pugh's release on parole from a Texas prison.

Apparently clerical errors had erased any record of Pugh's conviction in Oklahoma, as well as requests to transfer him to three other states in which he has been convicted of crimes.

Pugh owes a life sentence in Oklahoma for his conviction in the death of Arles Delbert Self, a one-time cohort who once testified against him. He also has sentences pending in New Mexico, Arizona and Kentucky.

Authorities said they did not want to reveal the exact date of Pugh's transfer for security reasons. After being processed at the Lexington Assessment and Reception Center, Pugh will begin serving his life sentence.

Manning said he intends to notify other states and arrange to have holds put on Pugh to avoid a repeat of what happened in Texas.

Mike Roach, spokesman for the Texas parole board, said Pugh was approved last month for parole after serving nine years of his sentence of life plus 10 years in the robbery of an Irving, Texas, couple.

He was scheduled to go to a halfway house in El Paso for 90 days on July 10, Roach said. No other agency was notified that Pugh was about to be released.

S.O. Woods Jr. director of records at the Texas maximum security prison in Huntsville, said requests to transfer Pugh into the custody of prison officials in other states apparently were lost due to clerical error.

Tulsa County Sheriff Frank Thurman and district attorney investigator Buddy Maybee learned of Pugh's impending release and notified former Tulsa District Attorney S.M. Fallis Jr., who now is in private practice in Tulsa, The Tulsa Tribune reported Thursday.

Fallis called Turpen, who turned the case over to Manning.

Manning said he was told by Texas officials, including Woods, that a clerk had misread records sent from Oklahoma to Texas.

He said the records showed Pugh was sent to Oklahoma for trial on three cases and the records came back reading "acquittal, acquittal, conviction."

"The clerk only read the first two lines and thought he (Pugh) had been acquitted on all Oklahoma cases," Manning said he was told.

Texas officials received Manning's official request that Pugh be detained on July 8, Manning said, the day before Pugh's son arrived at the prison asking for his father's release.

Pugh and Albert McDonald were charged in Tulsa with placing a bomb in the station wagon of Tulsa District Judge Fred Nelson on Aug. 25, 1970. Nelson was critically injured by the explosion.

A grand jury investigating the bombing called Self and Cleo Epps to testify. Epps disappeared a short time later and was found dead in a cistern, shot in the head.

McDonald, convicted in the Epps killing, died when his throat was slashed in a prison yard at Oklahoma State Penitentiary in April 1978.

Fallis agreed to dismiss the charges accusing Pugh in the Nelson bombing and the Epps murder because of the number of sentences awaiting Pugh in other states and because of McDonald's death.

Pugh was shifted from an Arizona prison to a Missouri prison in 1974 after guards found two loaded pistols in his cell. In the Missouri prison, Pugh was stabbed five times during a fight. He was transferred to a Kentucky prison to serve sentences for convictions there.

Tests recommended for college freshmen

AUSTIN (AP) — Freshmen in Texas public colleges and universities will have to pass a basic reading, writing and math test if the state agency overseeing the institutions approves a unanimous recommendation from a special study committee.

A 15-member committee of the Texas College Coordinating Board reported Thursday that almost one-third of students entering Texas' colleges cannot pass a test on material that should have been mastered in the 10th grade.

The committee asked the coordinating board to require that every public college freshman be required to take a basic skills test covering mathematics, reading and writing.

"These students represent a generation of failure in the state's educational system — a failure that can no longer be ignored," said Robert Hardesty, president of Southwest Texas State University and head of the study group.

The coordinating board was to consider the recommendation at its meeting today.

"My recommendation to the board will be that we adopt the committee's report and ask the Legislature to fund it," board chairman Larry Temple said.

Temple also is chairman of the Select Committee on Higher Education, which was named by legislative leaders to recommend steps to improve the quality of Texas' public colleges.

Hardesty said his committee had considered the testing issue for 10 months and held five public hearings.

"This is a blueprint which will help reverse this generation of failure," Hardesty said.

The committee study showed that out of 110,000 freshmen that enter Texas public colleges and universities, "at least 30,000 cannot read, communicate, or compute at levels needed to perform effectively in higher education," Hardesty said.

Hardesty said the committee was unanimous in its recommendations.

"I sincerely hope that the state of Texas is prepared for this report and is prepared to act on it, because its findings are going to be difficult to ignore," he said. "If we are not prepared to act, we would have been better off without the report."

The committee's recommendations included:

— All freshmen entering public colleges should be tested in reading, writing and math beginning in the fall of 1989. The tests would be given after students qualify for admission.

— All components of the test must be passed before completion of 60 semester hours of credit.

— Each college must report annually to the coordinating board on its testing results.

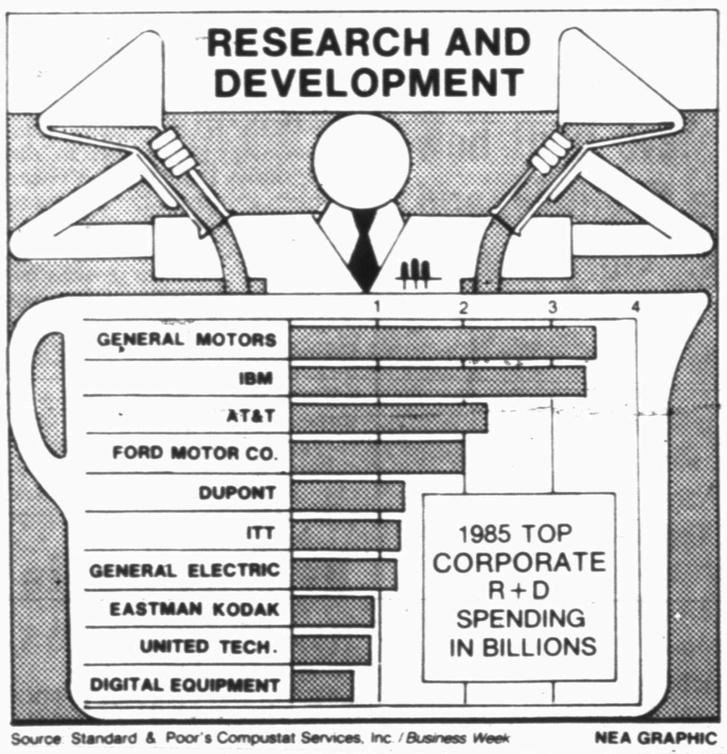
— College and university faculty members should help develop the test.

— The Legislature should provide funds to prepare and administer the tests.

— Each institution should be required to offer remedial instruction to students needing assistance.

— Colleges and universities should advise students on selection of courses early in the degree program.

Hardesty said the committee had estimated the cost of developing the test at $500,000 and an annual cost of $3 million to administer it.



U.S. business accounts for 48 percent of the nation's $122 billion in research spending — and the top five R&D companies alone account for more than 10 percent of the U.S. total.

AIDS fear is turning some on to cocaine

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Fear of catching AIDS is turning heavy drug users from heroin to cocaine, a top official of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services says.

Dr. Donald I. McDonald told more than 250 law enforcement officers, educators, and medical personnel Thursday at a drug conference that more than half of all needle-using drug addicts in New York are infected with AIDS.

Many other addicts, both with and without AIDS, are trying to find other ways to satisfy their craving, McDonald said. One of the highest risk groups for AIDS are those who use needles to inject drugs into their system.

McDonald, acting assistant secretary of Health and Human Services, said drug addicts in New York are "becoming afraid of the needle."

"That's causing a lot of people to seek help for their drug dependency. It's also causing a lot of them to turn to "crack' or snorting cocaine to get their high," he said.

Bexar County Medical Examiner Vincent DiMaio said such a strong fear of the needle hasn't existed in San Antonio because syringes can be bought over the counter, as opposed to large cities in the Northeast, where prescriptions are necessary.

Intravenous drug users who turn to cocaine — or crack, a popular crystalized form of cocaine that can be smoked — may be in for a shock if they try to quit, because cocaine is more addictive than many people have believed, McDonald said. He called cocaine the most addictive drug in America.

"The addiction potential is much greater than with heroin," McDonald said. explained. He called crack a form of cocaine that can be smoked and which provides an immediate high that many users say is even quicker than an injection of any drug.

While physical withdrawal symptoms are less from cocaine than from some other drugs, an addict's need for the drug is much worse, McDonald said.

"People who are addicted literally scream for cocaine. We have them calling up and saying they are having seizures and want to know if it will help to take barbituates to stop the seizures so they can keep using cocaine. That's real addiction. They can know they are dying and still seek cocaine," he said.

Seizures similar to epileptic attacks often accompany cocaine use and often lead to death, he said.

"The three things (cocaine) does that can kill are: (1) raise blood pressure, (2) increase heart rate and (3) close the arteries," he said.

Treasury prepares money needs data

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Treasury Secretary Gustavo Petricioli said Mexico is preparing a detailed report for the international financial community that will outline how much money it needs this year and next.

Petricioli, in a cable to foreign bankers released late Wednesday, said that once the report is completed, the government will resume talks with bankers on a new multi-billion-dollar financial aid package.

"Mexico and the international banking community have achieved much together and I want to take advantage of this opportunity to confirm our intentions in this process of negotiation that will permit us to achieve a constructive and mutually beneficial agreement," he said.

Angel Gurrian the nation's chief debt negotiator, met with Mexico's 13-member bank advisory committee in New York on Wednesday.

A separate statement released by the Treasury Department, said Gurria told the bankers that Mexico plans to begin discussions with the bankers as soon as it reaches agreement with the International Monetary Fund on "a new solution for that country."

Petricioli had earlier in the week held talks with U.S. officials and officials of the International Monetary Fund.

Mexico and the IMF have reportedly agreed to general terms of a package that would give Mexico about $6 billion in new loans. It also would, according to U.S. press reports, provide an arrangement for partially cushioning Mexico against fresh oil price shocks.

The nation's economy has been badly battered this year by the collapse of prices on the world oil market.

In his letter to bankers, Petricioli acknowledged that it had taken the government longer than expected to come up with the "necessary modifications in our original economic program and its objectives for 1986, but now I can tell you that the result toward which we have directed our work is positive."

"We are in the process of preparing a detailed report to the international banking community with relation to the economic policy measures introduced in 1986, as well as about our negotiations with the IMF and the World Bank and the external financial support that Mexico will require for this year and 1987," he said.

"As soon as these are concluded and those carried out with the IBD (Inter-American Development Bank), we will transmit to you this report, resuming our substantive discussions with the bank advisory group," he said.

A separate Treasury statement said details of the recent talks with the IMF and other agencies would likely be released to the public in the coming days.

The program tentatively worked out with the IMF would require Mexico to take additional steps to restructure its economy and restore it to health. It would reduce further government spending by trimming back subsidies and shedding some of the hundreds of state-owned firms. It also would maintain a tight monetary policy and expand its commerce with foreign nations.

In exchange, the IMF reportedly has agreed to back a Mexican plan that calls for foreign bankers to commit themselves in principle to making additional new loans through 1989.

Mexico in the past has depended on oil sales for 70 percent of its foreign revenues, which are used to pay interest on the $97.6 billion foreign debt and buy imports.

With the fall in prices, Mexico is expected to earn between $6 billion and $8 billion this year, compared to $13.3 billion in 1985.

Weatherization assistance applications dates revealed

Applications for weatherization assistance for low-income persons will be taken for residents of Scurry County. This announcement comes from the Community Service Center located at 301 West Arkansas Street in Sweetwater.

The purpose of this program is to assist low-income persons by helping reduce utility bills on a long term basis. Priority will be given to senior citizens and handicapped persons.

The program will address only those items dealing strictly with energy conservation such as insulating the attic, weather stripping, replacing broken window panes, etc. The program does not include roof replacement, plumbing or electrical work. There is no charge for this service to those individuals qualifying for assistance.

Those interested in applying must be income eligible according to income guidelines as issued by the secretary of planning and evaluation. Applicants should be prepared to furnish proof of residency and citizenship, proof of income, social security number etc. at the time the application is submitted.

Applications will be taken in Snyder July 22, 23 and 24 at the Senior Citizens Center, 2603 Avenue M, from 9:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. each day.

Energy crisis program applications dates given

Applications for the Energy Crisis Program will be taken for residents of Scurry County. This announcement comes from the Community Service Center located at 301 West Arkansas Street in Sweetwater.

The purpose of this program is to assist low-income households when a crisis situation exists. For instance, situations that have depleted financial resources and/or created problems in meeting basic household expenses, particularly bills for energy so as to constitute a threat to the health or well-being of the household particularly the elderly, handicapped and AFDC recipients.

There is no charge for these services to those individuals qualifying for assistance. Those interested in applying must have a household income which is 11 per cent or less of the Office of Mangement and Budget (OMB) established proverty income guideline adjusted for family size.

Applicants must bring copies of check stubs, award letters, employer statements or other similar documents along with social security cards and proof of citizenship at the time the application is submitted.

Applications will be taken in Snyder July 22, 23 and 24 at the Senior Citizens Center, 2603 Avenue M, from 9:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m.

Drama classes slated at WTC

Registration is underway for two children's drama classes set to begin July 28 at Western Texas College.

Creative Dramatics for Children, designed for students who have completed grades 2, 3 and 4, will meet from 9 a.m. to 12 noon July 28-31 and Aug. 4-7. Children in this group will be exposed to the performing arts through theatre games and exercises intended to enlarge their creative expression.

A Drama Workshop for Young People who have completed grades 5-7 will meet from 1-4 p.m. July 28-31 and Aug. 4-7. Activities in the workshop are designed to build theatre foundations in speech, movement, creative dramatics, improvisation and audition techniques. Students in the workshop will present "Theatre Is" at the conclusion of the sessions.

Jim Rambo, associate professor of speech and drama at WTC, will direct both drama classes.

Fees are $35 for either class and are to be paid at registration immediately preceding the first class meeting. Students are to be pre-registered by calling the Continuing Education Office at 573-8511, extension 240, by July 24.

Workers vow to keep going

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Reporters and editors at El Popular, an anti-corruption tabloid in this border city, were used to harassments and threats.

In fact, they expected it because of what they printed: Names and charges of corrupt government officials, drug traffickers and murderers.

Up until two months ago, publisher Ernesto Flores Torrijos had a body guard traveling behind his 1985 Ford Bronco to deter harassments.

Assignments editor Norma Moreno Figueroa's daily column, "Looking for Roads," criticized officials in the name of the people who could not fight for themselves.

Early Thursday, Flores Torrijos, 47, and Ms. Moreno Figueroa, 24, who lived in the same apartment complex, went to work together as they frequently did. As they stepped from Flores Torrijos' vehicle, they were met with a barrage of 45-caliber and 9mm bullets.

No one really saw who fired the more than 26 rounds of bullets. Witnesses questioned later were unable to give police much information, other than two joggers were seen fleeing on foot."

"The police know, but they aren't going to do anything," Torrijos' wife, Amelia Gil Zaragoza de Flores, said as she held back tears shortly after the shootings.

"The whole world threatened him because he told the truth, but a lot of people also loved him," she said. "The people of Matamoros know what he has done for this city. That's why they're out there. That's why they're dead because they were valiant."

The slayings came a month after another Mexican border town newspaper publisher was killed. On June 17, 46-year-old Dr. Jorge Brenes — an allergy specialist, chairman of the board of a university in Reynosa and publisher of El Rio in Rio Bravo and Frontera in Reynosa — was attacked by an assailant in a motorcycle helmet.

A policeman investigating the slaying was killed and police have yet to make an arrest in the Brenes slaying. Some police officials believe the newspapers' stance against corruption led to Brenes' shooting at his home on June 17. Newspaper editors, who were with Brenes when he was shot, have vowed to continue publishing his border newspapers.

Meanwhile, El Popular, with its 9,000 to 10,000 street circulation, among the largest in Matamoros, about 60 miles east of Reynosa, published on Thursday afternoon.

It carried an article on the slayings, pictures of the publisher and editor and condolences from their families. There was a blank column with a black box on Page 3 where Ms. Moreno Figueroa's column usually appeared.

There also was a message to organized crime in Matamoros under a headline, "You won't shut us up, friends."

"We don't have any idea who did it and why," said editor Jose Anjel Leal Rivera. "It could have been a politician, a narcotics trafficker, a police officer.

"It could be anybody who was mentioned or attacked in our newspaper. There are many people angry at El Popular," said Leal Rivera, who about three months ago escaped being kidnapped at gunpoint.

Basketball would be better defense

FRENCH LICK, Ind. (AP) — Larry Bird says a basketball would be better self-defense against intruding tourists than any tactics he has tried so far.

"There's been a steady flow of out-of-towners coming by the house," Bird said. "They've been pulling in my driveway and running over Mom's flowers.

Voted the most valuable player for the past three seasons in the National Basketball Association, Bird said residents respect his privacy, particularly when he walks the country roads of this small rural town.

"The hometown people don't bother me no more," the Boston Celtics star told participants in a basketball camp last week in Marshall County, Ky.

Mob moving into gas tax invasion

AUSTIN (AP) — Mob infiltration of the gasoline industry may have cost Texas $74 million last year as part of a possible national loss of $1 billion in unpaid taxes, says Federal Highway Administrator Ray Barnhart.

Barnhart, a former Texas House member and member of the state highway commission, said, "If we had an additional billion dollars last year, which we believe was the minimum that was not paid by the mob, it would have meant another $74 million for the state of Texas."

Barnhart told a Thursday news conference there had been recent testimony in Washington, D.C., that "the mob infiltration into the distribution of gasoline is now into some 12 to 14 states ..."

"When you look at the federal and state gasoline taxes in some states, depending on what the state tax is, the price of the product, over 30 percent of it is taxes, so the mob has an ideal opportunity to move in there and make some big bucks."

He said Congress needed to revise collection methods to prevent the loss of gasoline taxes.

Barnhart described highways as "the foundation of our economy — 97 percent of everything we eat, wear, use or produce moves on the nation's highways ... highway funding is essential and probably the best buy for their tax dollar the American people have ever had."

Asked about a move by some western states to change the 55 mph speed limit, Barnhart said, "As part of the (Reagan) administration, we are obligated to enforce it and we will. ... The law, I believe, should be changed."

In response to a question about whether the 55 mph limit saved lives, Barnhart said, "I suspect that it does but not to the extent that some people allege that it does ..."

"How many fatalities are involved in speeds in excess of 55? Really, quite few ... On the other hand, how many fatalities are involved with drinking drivers? Over 50 percent. And what we are doing as a government is forcing law enforcement to misdirect their efforts to look for speeders, instead of drinkers," he said.

Your Birthday

July 20, 1986

The year ahead has more good times in store for you than last. Several new friends will enter your life and bring their sunshine with them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today you will reap what you sow. Do not think in petty terms, because small thoughts will yield only meager rewards. Major changes are ahead for Cancer in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do what you can to help those who need you today. The greater your self-sacrifice, the greater the benefits you'll later derive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Persons who you see today will respect you for your sincerity. You'll be charming and tactful, and completely guileless.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If your inner stirrings give you feelings of luck today, do not disregard them. Approach all of your challenges with a winner's attitude.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You require some type of active social engagements today. If there are no plans on the boards, dream up something yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Lady Luck continues to favor you where your material interests are concerned. Today, she may use members of your family to provide you with valuable information.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're lucky at this time with large-scope ideas. However, in order to benefit from them you must begin talking to the right people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A beneficial turnabout is in store for you today. Go out of your way to be helpful because you'll start out as the giver, but end up as the receiver.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) An enterprising friend who has been lucky for you in the past has just begun a promising new venture. He might invite you in.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your chances for progress in an important endeavor continue to look promising. Seek capable supporters who have something to contribute.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Lucky things could happen for you today with friends, especially those who belong to the same club or organization as you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Changes that others may find disturbing will work out for your ultimate benefit today. Don't get uptight if you plans get shifted around.

July 21, 1986

In the year ahead you may become involved with two projects that will be a trifle sluggish getting started. However, if you're patient and persistent, the results will please you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be absolutely certain you know what you're talking about today or else you may further complicate a friend's already-complicated problem with bad advice. Major changes are ahead for Cancer in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Decisions you make under pressure today are not likely to be examples of your best judgment. Analyze every issue.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually you're a very methodical person, and the good results of your efforts bear this out. Today, however, these splendid qualities won't be evident in your work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Strive to be a keen manager of your resources today, or else you could go over your budget and might later have to borrow from others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Keep domestic disruptions in proper perspective today. A member of your family might do something you dislike and you could overreact.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Being resentful or holding grudges will work against your best interests today. If you can't forgive others, don't expect them to forgive you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is one of those days when it may pay to be a little extra security-conscious. Take sensible measures to protect your property.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try not to advance your business aims today by asking for favors from social contacts. Conduct business within a business environment.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) 'Fess up to problems of your own making today, instead of trying to blame them on others. Associates will help you out if you're forthright, but they'll hinder you if you're not.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you have contact with people who are normally peripheral in your life today, think carefully before you speak. When they later report what you said, it could be distorted.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In order to achieve your objectives today, they must be clearly defined. You can't hit the bull's-eye by taking scattered shots.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Unless you have something kind to say about others today, it's best to say nothing. Caustic comments could jeopardize vital relationships.

Editorials-Columns-Cartoons-Kid Stuff-Look Back-Letters

Of a sudden, everyone and their dad gum dogs are trying to sell us columns.

We're not talking about local folks, we're talking about state and nation-wide folks — flooding the U.S. Postal Service with inquiries, rates, camera-ready mug shots (most shot in half light so they don't look like pasty-faced whimps) and glowing reviews praising their previous work.

Also, when you get to the end of their letter, you find out they are very, very cheap, most going for $5 to $10 per column.

The majority of these fellows — and the occasional lady, although menfolk still seem to have the market cornered on column writing — want to provide their insightful brainstorms approximately once a week.

We can identify with this type thinking, and it also makes a total annual bill in the $260 to $520 range. Cheap by most newspaper standards.

So how come we're not jumping to add the best and the brightest, one might wonder? A shot at Pulitzer Prize-winning scribbling which we could deliver right to our reader's doorstep.

Let us first say a personal word about columnists, then a note about columns.

Most of what we refer to is of the "opinion column" category. Lineage that is designed to provide "insight into the world around us." Heavy stuff.

With this premise, we'll admit that we believe writers of this category spend a lot of time crafting out their little string of words — linking each in front of the other like steps on a tightrope.

Now consider the ego required to maintain the stance of "writer." You can bet the personal opinion of personal work is, to put it mildly, prideful.

When it's done, the fellow writing it has become so involved in the creation, he has literally lost the concept of its worth. In other words, he can't tell if the fragrance it gives forth is of the rose or the gut wagon.

Because of this, a lot of people are figuring there has to be a market for personal brillance.

Having said this about opinion columnists, we'll point to opinion columns. The truth is, with only a few exceptions, most of them are unread.

There is a hardcore group of readers who do plow through them, but they're pretty much the same bunch that reads a newspaper cover to cover anyway.

God bless them every one, but we still figure they're a relatively minor group in the Big Picture.

Most readers — and this is no criticism — like nice hometown columns that talk about Ralph and Fred, Nancy and Jane...folks they recognize.

In another vein, they like to be reassured that other people have the same basic problems — in-laws, husbands, wives, creditors, neighbors, children, bosses and that infrequent rattle in your chest which you hope doesn't mean congestive heart failure.

To boil it down, readers basically want information from newspapers.

As for opinions and opinion columns, the good ones stand alone on a foundation of information. And then there are those that float harmlessly away, borne by self-generated hot air.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

The August issue of "Success" Magazine has an article called "Dress for Success: Lessons in Leisure Wear." The subtitle says, "Don't Be Too Casual About Dressing for Those Informal Business Affairs."

At first, I wasn't going to read it, because it was illustrated with several full-color pages depicting suitcases open and spilling out men's clothes, which let me know right away just how successful this magazine thinks women can be. But I decided that I could probably use some lessons in leisure wear.

Just the other day I went into the newspaper office to turn in my column, wearing my favorite "Dallas Police Deparment" tee shirt, and one of the guys who works on staff, (I won't mention his name), said, "What is that, Mills, your town shirt?"

And I said, "Noble, you know I just grab whatever's in the drawer."

Then I discovered this article, which lists eight "Rules" for casual dressing. Here are some of them.

Rule Three: "Avoid wearing purple, orange, green, gold, or baby blue. Colors for sports wear that are almost always safe are navy blue, white, maroon, khaki, and beige."

The key to understanding this rule is realizing that it was made up by a bunch of retired Pentagon officials who have gone into corporate business. (At least one of them was an Aggie.) The reason these colors are "safe" is because that guy over there wearing purple is probably Communist. Easier to spot that way.

Rule Four: "Choose garments made of high-quality fabrics. Synthetic material can identify the wearer as a polyester peasant."

You don't want to be "identified" as any kind of peasant, and personally, I lie awake nights worrying about being caught out as a polyester peasant.

Rule Seven: The author tells a little story here about a guy walking into a resort hotel wearing "baggy white pants and white silk jacket. He looked as if he were auditioning for 'Miami Vice'." According to the man's companion, "The only way that guy would make six figures in business is if he had a string of girls."

Well, I can certainly understand. I've been wanting Don Johnson to shave for months. Not only that, but who could live on $99,000 a year? That "string of girls" crack is a little unclear to me. How could a scout troop earn a man six figures? Those cookies aren't that expensive.

The author does give women advice on how to dress for the golf course, wearing "tailored skirts and tops. I call this the 'preppy golf look,'" he says, "and it's really the feminine version of the old-money look."

Obviously it is far more desirable to look like a preppy then a polyester peasant.

His last suggestion has to do with what to wear on the company yacht. I know I worry about that a lot. "The navy-jacket-with-brass-buttons-and-ascot look died some time ago," he cautions, "You'll see it occasionally in 1930's movies, but if you show up dressed that way, most executives will look upon you as either a gigolo or a buffoon."

I would definitely not want to look like a gigolo, and as for the other, well, beauty is in the eye of the beholder, and as far as I'm concerned, a lot of the clothes spilling out of those suitcases looked pretty buffoony to me.

Not that I don't try. Once, when I gave a speech, I tried to snazz up my act. I wore a white Miami Vice blazer (so much for a six-figure income), white slacks and blouse, and a black belt and beads. I even fixed my hair and everything.

Four people asked if I was a nurse.

It wouldn't be so bad except that I was afraid somebody would have a heart attack and expect me to save them.

Then I went in to buy new glasses. I get them every 10 years whether I need them or not. I told the lady that I knew exactly what I wanted: aviator frames.

"Oh, they don't make those for ladies."

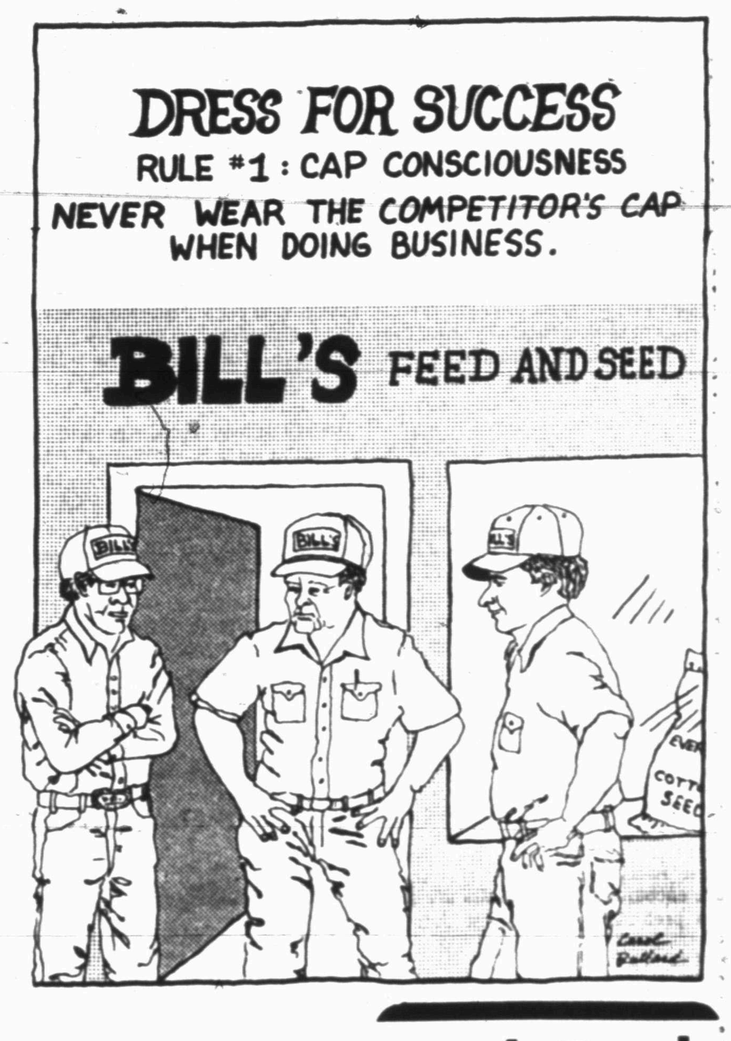
"What do you mean? Glasses are glasses."

"Why don't you try some of these," she said, gesturing with a manicured hand toward a rack of 200 plastic frames in pukey "fashion" colors.

I went to the "men's" table, where there were about 15 frames, picked up some aviators, put them on, and said, "I want these."

"But, those are MEN'S glasses." She held out some purple plastic frames. "This preppy look is all the rage now."

As I walked out of the store, wearing my "men's" glasses, I thought, "She probably works undercover for 'Success' Magazine."



SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
July 13

A sagging oil economy was reflected in bank deposits for the second quarter of 1986, it was reported Sunday.

At mid-year, deposits in three Snyder banks totaled $183.6 million compared to $186.5 million at the same time last year–a drop of $2.9 million.

When compared to the first quarter of 1986, deposits in the three financial institutions were down by $9.4 million.

Seven individuals indicted in March on drug trafficing charges here have been sentenced in 132nd District Court after entering guilty pleas to those charges, it was reported Sunday.

Five of these suspects will receive jail time while two others were granted probated sentences.

The seven were arrested at the conclusion of a four-month undercover investigation conducted by the Scurry County sheriff's office.

MONDAY
July 14

For the second month in a row, Snyder's sales tax return has shown a decline — but a stronger showing earlier in the year was again sufficient to keep the year-to-date figure at a plus 8.4 percent, it was reported Monday.

Figures indicate consumer spending was down some 14 percent during May and some 11 percent during April. This downward trend was sufficient to drop the year-to-date figure from its high of a plus 15.6 percent to the current level of plus 8.4 percent.

A feature story related to "what scares you" was included in Monday's SDN.

Featured was a Big Spring licensed professional counselor who has recently opened a local office offering group therapy to individuals affilicted with phobias.

Individuals attending trial proceedings in either county court or district court will no longer be allowed to smoke or bring food and drink items into the hallways outside the courtrooms effective Monday.

County commissioners approved the ban on both smoking and eating and drinking during the regular weekly court session.

TUESDAY
July 15

Dr. Robert L. Clinton, who served Western Texas College as its first college president for 11 years, has accepted a temporary assignment as interim president of Amarillo College, it was reported Tuesday.

Clinton accepted the appointment only some three months after his retirement as executive director for the Austin-based Texas Public Community Junior College Association, a post he assumed upon leaving WTC in 1981.

Immediate plans to landscape the grounds around the Snyder Chamber of Commerce building were tabled Tuesday afternoon during the regular July meeting of the board.

Plans included widening the sidewalk in the back of the building, removing the gravel from the lawn, leveling the yard, reseeding the lawn, installing a sprinkler system and removing the shrubs. Cost of the project was targeted at $4,000.

With the benefit of a tax base which increased slightly while other county taxing entities suffered drastic losses, the City of Snyder unveiled a 12-month operating estimate Tuesday which includes no projected increase in either city taxes or services.

And in reaction to the recent projected downturn in the local economy sparked by a corresponding drop in the price of oil, the budget also features no plans for major capital improvement projects or additional pay raises for city employees.

WEDNESDAY
July 16

Only four individuals with questions related to oil property values appeared before the three-member review board for the Scurry County Appraisal District during the first day of hearings Wednesday.

The traditional downtown parade kicked-off four days of rodeo performances here Wednesday as the 51st annual Scurry County Rodeo began.

THURSDAY
July 17

Boll worms and fleahoppers are now being found in county cotton fields at levels where farmers should begin to consider treatment, it was reported Thursday.

Deanna Myers, county entomologist, notes that the infestations vary from field to field. To aid farmers in checking their fields, "turn row" meetings are now scheduled next Wednesday and Thursday.

The Scurry County board of review recessed after two days of hearings Thursday, finishing up with meetings related to real estate values.

While value adjustments are not yet finalized, Ray Peveler, chief appraiser for the district, noted the oil property changes may entail from $2 to $3 million in value.

Look Back

By Noble B. Young

FIVE YEARS AGO

Snyder representatives at the 1981 Boy Scout Jamboree at Fort A.P. Hill, Va. this week were scouts Victor Bruns, Billy Overhulser, John Hamlett, Brad Gambrell and scout leader Joel Hamlett.

Scurry County commissioners this morning — July 21 — approved the hiring of Linda Haygood of Quitman as the county home extension agent effective Sept. 1. Haygood will replace Blanche Chisum, who has resigned the position effective Aug. 31.

10 YEARS AGO

The official opening of the 1976 Scurry County Rodeo began this morning — July 21 — with a cattle drive through town. Organized by drovers Bill Herring, Ray Herring, Arthur Sego, Frank Beaver and Marvin Key, some 100 to 150 head of cattle from the OS Ranch in Garza County were driven through the city to the Scurry County Coliseum from the Hays Ranch west of town.

15 YEARS AGO

Appointments announced at Western Texas College today — July 14 — included Leslie O. Albin to the position of assistant professor of science. Albin comes to Snyder from Houston where he has been employed as a research associate at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute.

Other college faculty hirings reported this week included former Snyder ISD physical education director Bob O'Day to the position of golf coach; and Velma Clay to the position of director of the licensed vocational nursing program to be instituted in January, 1972.

Pre-registration for the first-ever fall term at Western Texas College opened this week and will continue with daily and evening sessions. The first student to complete registration procedures for the new college was 18-year-old Jimmy Tartt of Loraine.

Medication can ease migraines

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 31, average height and weight, married with two children (my husband had a vasectomy). I occasionally get anxiety attacks and have mitral valve prolapse. My problem is that every time I have an orgasm, I get a rotten migraine headache that lasts for two days, complete with nausea and flashing lights. I have seen four doctors, and all look at me as if I'm from outer space. What do you think?

DEAR READER — I think that your doctors are from outer space. Sexual excitement and orgasm can trigger migraine headaches in susceptible individuals. Find a doctor who is an earthling and ask for a prescription for the beta-blocker propanalol (Inderal). Twenty milligrams three or four times a day, during the times you are sexually active, may prevent the migraines from developing.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What causes constantly chapped lips?

DEAR READER — Chapped lips usually result from loss of natural oils from the skin. Frequent lip licking, cold weather and exposure to sun or wind can deplete the lips' lubrication. A lanolin-containing cream will replace the oils; a petroleum-base lip balm wil help protect from further injury.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am concerned about my 9-month-old grandson's feet. His toes point straight out to the sides, instead of towards the front. The doctor says they will correct themselves. What do you think?

DEAR READER — Your doctor is probably right. Once children start to walk, their feet usually straighten out. If you are really worried, ask the pediatrician to refer you for another opinion to an orthopedic surgeon who specializes in children's bone problems.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Will masturbation make me sterile?

DEAR READER — No way.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I read that Alzheimer's disease may be hereditary. What can a genetics laboratory do to locate the defective gene?

DEAR READER — Many research facilities are investigating the likelihood that Alzheimer's disease (and other similar conditions) have a genetic basis. Although early reports are encouraging, the results are still too preliminary to permit definite conclusions to be drawn.

The techniques used by these laboratories involve the meticulous separation and identification of tissue genes obtained from Alzheimer's patients. These genes than have to be photographed and, like fingerprints, compared to the genes from normal patients. It's exacting and exciting work. You have to wonder what the scientists will do with the results if, in fact, there is a genetic cause for the disease. Then the work will really begin.

Trepanners are holier-than-thou

People sometimes do weird things to themselves. I'm not referring to the vanilla-variety of self-abuse with drugs, alcohol and cigarettes; I'm talking about the more bizarre and unusual — putting a hole in your head, for example.

Amanda Feilding lives in London. She is a mother, a painter and political activist. Recently she ran for Parliament. The major plank in her platform was that trepanning operations should be made available and paid for by National Health, the subsidized health program run by the government of England.

Trepanning is an ancient form of surgery in which a hole is bored in the victim's head through the bone of the skull. The founder of the trepanning movement is a Dutch academician, Dr. Bart Huges. He believes — and Mrs. Feilding agrees — that's one's state of consciousness is related to the volume of blood in the brain. Ever since humans stood upright, gravity has forced the flow of blood out of the brain, according to Dr. Huges. This unfortunate biological heritage has convinced the trepanners that modern men and women lack sufficient circulation to achieve a condition of raised consciousness.

Although Dr. Huges claims that this lack of balance can be temporarily altered by standing on one's head or using drugs, he urges citizens to adopt a more permanent soluton. By making a hole in his skull with an electric drill, the Dutch savant claims to have been freed from neurosis and egoism.

Wacky, you say? That's not all: Trepanners believe that once an infant's "soft spot" grows over, the skull inhibits blood pulsations to the brain, and this causes adults to lose touch wtih dreams, imagination and intense perceptions.

Amanda Feilding bought the whole ball of wax. After repeatedly helping her boyfriend put a hole in his own head (because he seemed to have difficulty getting the knack of it), she performed her own trepanation. The entire event was carefully recorded on movie film.

First she shaved part of her hair; next, she made an incision with a blade on her scalp. Finally, dressed in a blood-splattered white robe, she attacked her own head with an electric drill. As blood spurted from her wound, the scene faded out with Amanda triumphantly smiling and advancing toward the camera. The film is called "Heartbeat in the Brain," and it has been shown to audiences of doctors and interested spectators.

Just the descripton of it gives me the willies. According to an article in the medical magazine MD, viewers in London were "dropping off their seats one by one, like ripe plums." For her part, Ms. Feilding said she reached a state of mental freedom and serenity that has persisted since her self-mutilation.

I don't know about you, but the whole perforated-head doctrine strikes me as being 22 degrees south of preposterous. Nonetheless, these weirdos have lectured widely in Europe and America. Amanda Feilding garnered 139 votes in Chelsea during her attempt at a Parliament seat. Perhaps this is what voters want; ((Instead)) instead of bonehead politicians, citizens prefer politicians with holes in their heads. There is a certain irony in this news, given the recent pronouncements by world leaders with respect to nuclear war, terrorism and defense initiatives.

If one hole confers serenity, wouldn't two holes ensure total harmony? Three holes could produce a lackadaisical euphoria. Eventually, people would be walking around with skulls like eggcrates, pumping potential voters' hands, smiling with a silly sense of emotional prosperity. Valium, Librium, gin and joints would become passe ... if trepanning worked.

Until we're certain about trepanation, you'd better carefully feel your political candidate's cranium to check for defects, especially if he appears too happy or whimsical. And by all means, stay out of Chelsea, England. The zaniness might be catching.

Troubles are not over in steel

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Problems in steelmaking that helped push LTV Corp. into Chapter 11 will not soon disappear, and another bankruptcy filing in the steel industry is not out of the question, analysts say.

"I think Bethlehem is probably the 'next weakest,'" Donald Barnett, an independent analyst, said Thursday after LTV, parent of Cleveland-based LTV Steel Co., filed for reorganization.

Bethlehem Steel Corp., third-largest U.S. steelmaker behind USX Corp. and LTV, has lost more than $2 billion since 1982. Dallas-based LTV entered bankruptcy court with losses of $1.5 billion since 1982.

A Chapter 11 filing by Bethlehem "certainly is a possibility," Barnett said.

"There's a 50-50 chance now after '86 that Bethlehem will go bankrupt. After Bethlehem, Armco's in jeopardy," Wall Street analyst Peter Marcus of Paine Webber told NBC news.

Another analyst, speaking on condition he not be named, said he also considered Bethlehem a potential candidate for Chapter 11.

"Bethlehem has no plan to take a similar course of action," said company spokesman Gary Graham.

Financial conditions have improved significantly in recent months through the sale of assets, cost-cutting and modernization of its steel plants, he said.

The next weakest after Bethlehem is probably No. 5 Armco Inc., Barnett added. The company has lost $1.2 billion since 1982.

"Armco's cash position is healthy. I do not consider Armco in jeopardy," said Armco Chairman Robert E. Boni.

Bethlehem called the LTV filing "a clear indication of the major difficulties still being faced by the steel industry in this country."

Following a Chapter 11 filing by seventh-ranked Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. in April 1985, LTV becomes the largest steelmaker to enter bankruptcy court in modern times.

"They've been identified as the firm most at risk for some time. But I believe this is sooner than people thought likely," said Walter Carter, an industry analyst for Data Resources Inc. of Carnbridge, Mass.

Both cases followed a series of Chapter 11 filings by smaller companies over the last several years.

"When one goes under, they come back as lower-cost facilities" Barnett said.

Chapter 11 protects companies from creditors' lawsuits and allows them to negotiate lower payments under loan agreements, supply contracts and under certain conditions even labor contracts.

"For the other producers ... it means a more formidable competitor. It becomes a domino effect. The pressure goes on the next weakest," he said.

Just how much pressure the others might feel is a subject of debate.

"The notion that troubled companies are going to be the source of increasing competitive pressure simply because they reorganize is grossly overstated," said Robert Crandall, an analyst for the Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C.

"The U.S. Steels and Inlands aren't worried about the McClouths, Weirtons or Wheeling-Pittsburghs coming out of reoganization roaring like tigers," he said.

U.S. Steel, recently renamed USX., is the industry leader. While considered among the healthiest financially, its leaders say steel operations would have lost nearly $2.4 billion over the last six years if not supported by earnings in oil and gas.

Inland Steel Corp. of Chicago is also considered relatively healthy.

McLouth Steel Products Corp. of Trenton, Mich., formerly McLouth Steel Corp., went into Chapter 11 reorganization in December 1981, and was purchased by Tang Industries Inc. in November 1982. Weirton Steel Corp. was bought by its employees in 1984 after National Steel Corp. threatened to close it.

School in Portland, Oregon nixes wilderness program

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Oregon Episcopal School has suspended its wilderness program pending a report on the deaths of seven students and two faculty members during a climbing expedition on Mount Hood.

School headmaster Malcolm H. Manson announced the suspension of the Basecamp program Wednesday during a meeting of the board of trustees, he said in a statement issued Friday.

The program will be suspended for at least six months, Manson said. Meanwhile, the school will begin a national search for a full-time director for the wilderness program.

An independent panel appointed by the school is expected to complete its review of the tragedy and the school's wilderness program by the end of the month.

The nine who died were part of an 13-member expedition climbing Mount Hood as part of the Basecamp program for high school students. They were near the 11,235-foot summit the morning of May 12 when a blizzard struck.

Unable to see where they were going, the climbers tunneled into the snow to escape 60 mph winds and below-freezing temperatures.

The next morning, the group's adult guide and a teen-age girl hiked to safety to alert rescuers. A day later, three teen-agers left the snow cave but died in the storm a short distance away.

Two adults and four teen-agers who were found in the snow cave May 15 could not be revived.

One of the survivors of the snow cave, 16-year-old Giles Thompson of Longview, Wash., went home last week from a Portland hospital where both his legs were amputated. The other, 16-year-old Brinton Clark of Portland, suffered minor nerve damage and went home last month.

Moscow condemns Nevada weapons test

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union, which is observing a unilateral moratorium on nuclear tests, Friday condemned the latest U. S. atomic explosion.

The official Tass news agency reported the blast in the Nevada desert less than two hours after it took place Thursday afternoon, Nevada time, which was around midnight in Moscow. Minutes later, the agency provided a long commentary condemning the test.

"The (Reagan) administration ... is winding up the clock of atomic death," Tass said. "Time is running out and fewer and fewer opportunities remain for taking joint radical and effective measures to curb the arms race."

Radio Moscow's English-language service said Washington flouted what it called growing anti-nuclear public sentiment with the weapons test, the 14th by U.S. authorities since a Soviet moratorium on testing began last August.

That moratorium, which has been extended three times, is to expire Aug. 6.

As the deadline nears, Soviet media have stepped up their campaign for a nuclear test ban.

The Reagan administration has refused to join the Soviet moratorium, in part because it contends that a complete halt to nuclear tests could not be verified.

President Harry S. Truman ordered the Air Force and the Navy into the Korean conflict June 27, 1950, following a call from the U.N. Security Council for member nations to help South Korea repel an invasion from the North.

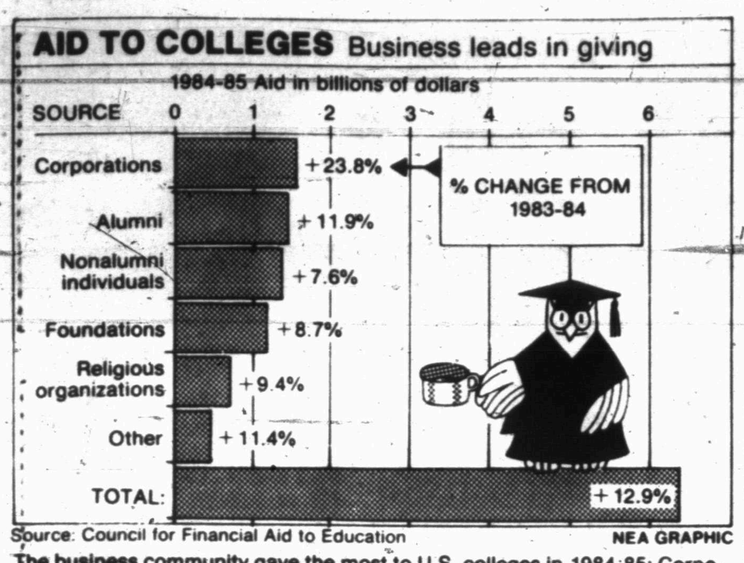
LAFF-A-DAY

"You're in big trouble, mac!"

DENNIS THE MENACE

"MOM'S HAD A ROUGH DAY. SHE SAYS I'M ALL YOURS."



The business community gave the most to U.S. colleges in 1984-85: Corporate donations rose 23.8 percent and totaled $1.6 billion.

Less soybean crop predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's output of soybeans is expected to decline slightly in 1986-87 to around 95.6 million metric tons from the record of almost 96.2 million tons in 1985-86, according to Agriculture Department projections.

But global demand also is expected to remain about the same, meaning that American soybean farmers will probably not see any improvement in market prices for this year's crop.

The USDA will not officially estimate the size of this year's soybean crop until next month, but department economists have projected the harvest at about 1.9 billion bushels, down from the 1985 output of 2.1 billion bushels.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of soybeans. Thus, the 1986 U.S. crop would be about 51.7 million tons or more than half of the projected world output.

Soybean prices at the farm have been projected at $4.70 to $5.10 per bushel in the year ahead, compared with $5.10 estimated for 1985-86.

A report this week by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said normal weather has helped Brazil and Paraguay to a 24 percent recovery from last season's drought, meaning renewed competition for American producers.

"Argentina and China are forecast to increase soybean production," the report said. "Mainly because of a significant increase in the government procurement price for soybeans, China's production is forecast up 1 million tons from the 1985-86 level" of 10.5 million tons.

Only a slight increase is expected in Argentina's new harvest, forecast at 7.5 million tons, the report said.

The amount of soybean oil and meal will continue to expand, but all of the increase will be in foreign countries, including Brazil and Argentina.

In the 12-nation European Community, the amount of soybeans crushed into oil and meal "will continue to be tempered by growing EC production of sunflowerseed, rapeseed, field peas and beans, large wheat supplies, and large supplies of competing vegetable oils, especially palm oil," the report said. "These factors will also keep meal use at the 1985-86 level despite declining soybean meal prices."

Lower prices in the United States are expected to stimulate increased livestock feeding of high-protein soybean meal, with 1986-87 meal use forecast to increase by 2 percent over last season.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donations of U.S. surplus food commodities to needy people in foreign countries will be increased to 650,000 metric tons in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng said Thursday the donations will include 500,000 tons of grains and oilseeds and 150,000 tons of dairy products owned by the Agriculture Department's Commodity Credit Corp. About 140,000 tons have already been obligated to recipient countries.

The commodities available for donation include wheat, barley, corn, sorghum, rice, soybeans, non-fat dry milk, cheese, butter and butteroil. Donations may be made to private voluntary organizations, international organizations and governments of developing, friendly countries, he said.

Melvin E. Sims, general sales manager in the USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service, said the donations will be "more than the program has ever moved in any previous year" but had no comparative figures at hand.

Sims said Congress called for the expanded donations in the Food Security Act of 1985. The program is in addition to the regular Food for Peace donations and concessional sales of U.S. farm commodities.

Senators speaking out against border patrol committee

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Mexican-American leaders have asked state officials to use their power to discourage a paramilitary organization from patroling the Mexico-Texas border.

J.R. Hagan, an officer of the Civilian Materiel Assistance organization, told the Houston Chronicle from Tucson, Ariz., that patrols would be sent into deserted areas of the border between El Paso, Marfa, Del Rio, Laredo and McAllen.

Earlier this month, the group sent an armed patrol along the Arizona-Mexico border and held 16 illegal aliens until federal authorities arrived.

Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, wrote Gov. Mark White on Thursday that he was concerned by reports of CMA plans to patrol the border.

"Whatever its motives, this organization's plans have a potential to provoke needless violence," Santiesteban said. "The patrols may or may not be of a vigilante nature, but they are vigilante in appearance, and could only be harmful to our relationship with Mexico."

Santiesteban said he thought the state "should make it plain that we neither desire nor need the assistance of this group in protecting our frontiers."

Ruben Bonilla, chairman of Mexican American Democrats of Texas, said he had written Attorney General Jim Mattox on Wednesday asking for a formal inquiry into the CMA.

Bonilla said he had asked Mattox to contact the FBI and U.S. Department of Justice to see if the CMA had violated state or federal laws. Also, he said, he asked the attorney general to file a lawsuit seeking injunctive relief if certain laws had been violated.

Santiesteban also asked White to request law enforcement agencies to monitor the CMA's activities "to ensure that no acts of violence occur ..."

Bonilla described the CMA as a paramilitary organization "trained out of Alabama."

He said the state lawmakers would soon be debating economic issues, some of which would be of extreme importance to the border area, "and we don't need any brushfires or sideshows of this type."

"My thought is Texas is not quite ready for real-life Charles Bronsons to patrol the border," Bonilla said in a telephone interview.

LTV-Dallas area jobs probably safe

DALLAS (AP) — LTV Corp.'s filing for reorganization under bankruptcy laws probably won't threaten many of the 17,000 LTV jobs in Dallas, a company official said.

But news of the court action by Dallas' fourth largest employer may have been the culprit for the heavy trading and drop in the stock price of one Dallas bank, a banking analyst speculated Thursday.

Most of the 17,000 LTV employees in the Dallas area work for the profitable LTV Aerospace and Defense Co., described by analysts as the "crown jewel" of the company.

Company spokesman Charles Palmer said, "I would anticipate no reduction of employees in the Dallas area."

Dennis Telzrow, an analyst for Schneider, Bernet & Hickman Inc. in Dallas, agreed that Aerospace probably would remain mostly intact.

Jerry Debo, mayor of Grand Prairie where LTV's Vought Aero Products division employs about 14,000, said, "(The Chapter 11 filing) will not have a major effect on Grand Prairie because Vought Aerospace is extremely successful."

But the news from LTV may have had an immediate effect on InterFirst Corp., said Frank Anderson, an analyst with Webber, Hall & Sale in Dallas.

Anderson said he believes many Wall Street traders thought InterFirst was a major LTV creditor, when in fact, New York banks are the lead creditors.

He said InterFirst officials told him LTV had $24 million outstanding on a $33 million credit line, which he said does not make InterFirst a major LTV debt-holder.

Nevertheless, InterFirst's bank stock fell ⅝, closing at 5¼ after reaching 4¾, a new low.

"We're in a market where a spark starts a grass fire," said Anderson. "I think people wrongly thought they were the lead bank."

(LTV stock fell $2.25 to $2.12½ as more than 6 million shares changed hands after the announcement.)

At Dallas City Hall, officials sighed with relief at learning LTV was paid up on all its city taxes.

Mayor Starke Taylor interrupted a budget meeting, where city council members were grappling with their own deficit, to announce the news about LTV.

According to mayoral spokeswoman Dottie de la Garza, city finance director Winston Evans said: "We've checked and all their accounts are paid."

"Whew," Evans sighed.

Randy Gressett named to Howard Payne post

Randy Gressett, Snyder High School graduate and formerly youth director at First Baptist Church here, has been named Dean of Men and Director of Student Activities at Howard Payne University in Brownwood.

Gressett, who is nearing completion of the Master of Religious Education Degree at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, is married to the former Teresa Strickland, who is also from Snyder.

Gresset is a graduate of Hardin-Simmons University where he was a member of the baseball team, and won numerous student honors. His wife was an honor student at Western Texas College; she also is a graduate of Snyder High School.

"I know of no person more effective in working with youth, or more committed to the causes of Christian education, than Randy Gressett," said Dr. Don Newbury, HPU President.

Mrs. Gressett will work toward a bachelor's degree in elementary education at HPU.

Gressett is the son of Don and Sue Gressett, both of whom are teachers in Snyder Public Schools. Mrs. Gressett's parents are H.D. and Pauline Strickland, who own and operate Strickland's TV Sales and Service in Snyder.

MCorp is recovering from 1st quarter loss

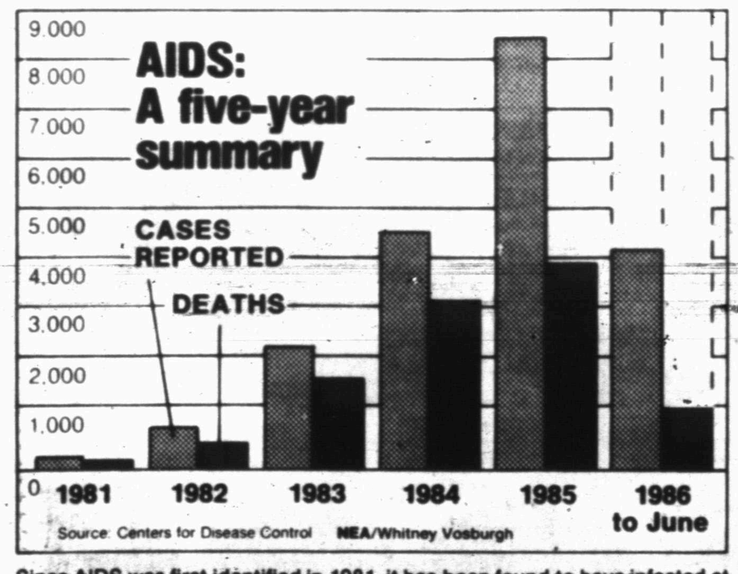
HOUSTON (AP) — Despite a half year's earnings loss of $98.2 million, MCorp officials are predicting their financial services organization will rebound and earn income the rest of the year.

They announced Thursday their company had a net income of $21.7 million or 44 cents a share for the second quarter after suffering a loss of $119.9 million or $2.90 a share in the first quarter.

"We are pleased with the second quarter results considering the extreme pressures affecting the Southwest region's economy, particularly with respect to the energy sector," said Gene H. Bishop, chairman and chief executive officer.

However, the second quarter earnings were down $14.6 million from the $36.3 million or 84 cents a share for same period in 1985, according to a company statement.

The performance in the second quarter couldn't prevent the company from posting a loss.



Since AIDS was first identified in 1981, it has been found to have infected at least 21,303 victims — and more than half of them have died.
