Fire erupts at depository

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — A five-alarm fire erupted early today in the former Texas Schoolbook Depository Building from which Lee Harvey Oswald allegedly fired the shots that killed President John F. Kennedy.

The fire, first reported at 3 a.m. and declared extinguished at 4:54 a.m., began in the basement and spread to the first and second floors, sending smoke throughout the building, Fire Chief Dodd Miller said.

The Warren Commission, which investigated the assassination, concluded that Oswald fired the fatal shots from a sixth floor window of the seven-story, brick building on Nov. 22, 1963.

Lindalyn Adams, president of a historical foundation that plans to put an exhibit on the sixth floor, said she had not been to the basement in the past couple of years, but she believed it contained some newspapers from the time of the assassination, books about Kennedy, and panels from a Hertz rent-a-car sign that was atop the building at the time of the assassination.

Miller said it was his understanding that materials in the basement could be reproduced. Fire Marshal Jim Badgett said he was told there had been reprints of Kennedy assassination photographs in the basement.

Badgett said heavy smoke made it difficult to determine the cause of the fire, but said that heat was intense in two areas of the building, suggesting that the fire's origin might be suspicious.

Miller, asked if arson was suspected, said, "Sure. We always suspect arson. We'll look for it."

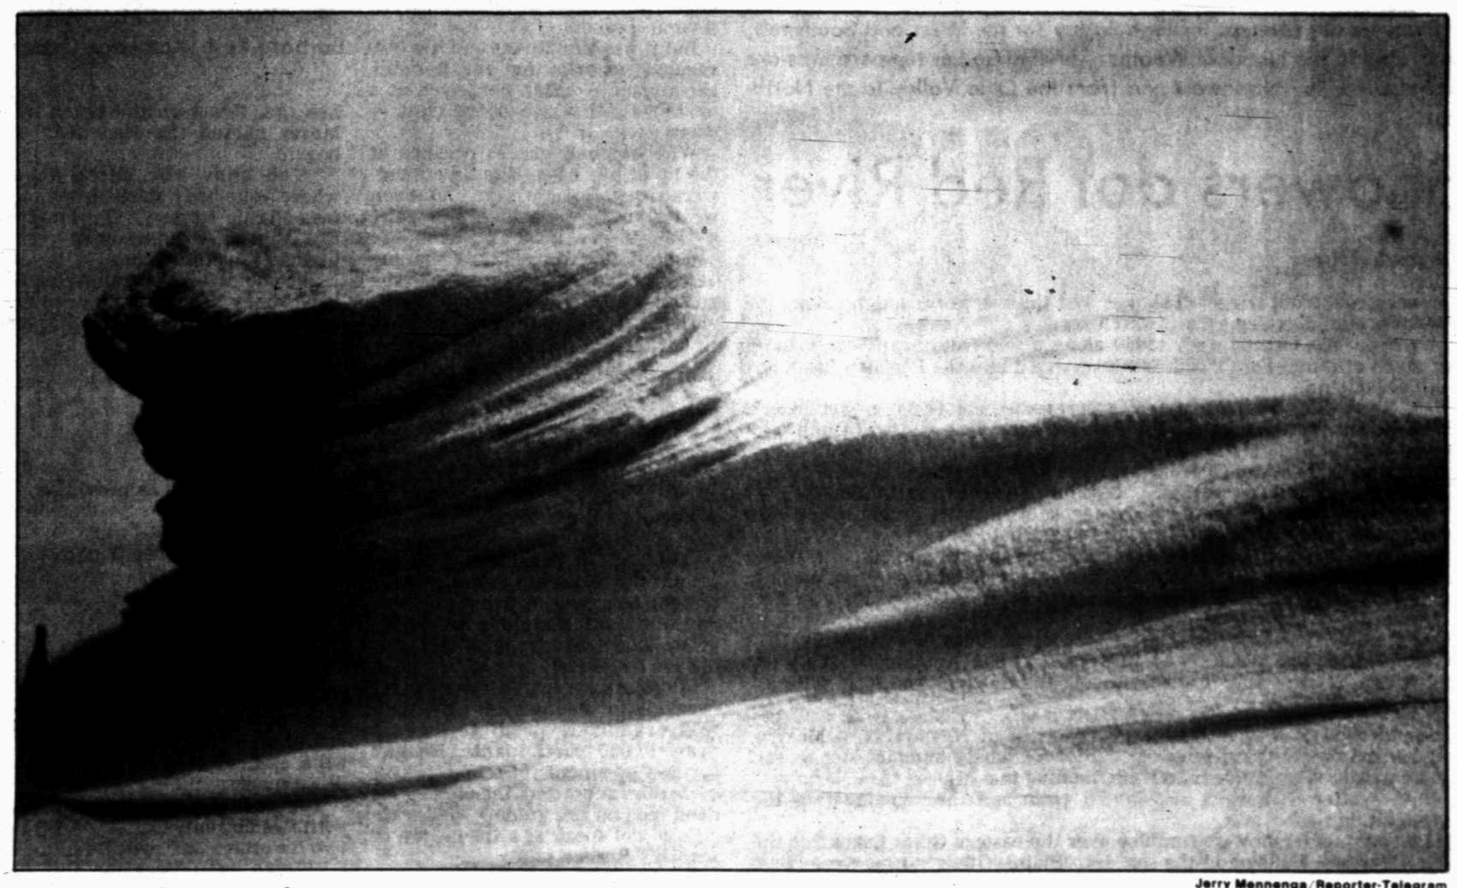

Badgett estimated at $250,000, he said. No injuries were reported.

He said that the sprinkler system in the building had been turned off for repairs after a leak was discovered Sunday. That leak had been fixed, but others were found subsequently, so the system was not on when the fire started, he said.

The building is now a county office building and Badgett said among the areas damaged in the fire were the fire marshal's office and the county commissioner's court.

The fire was first reported at about 3 a.m. Four alarms had been issued by 3:30 a.m. and a fifth alarm 15 minutes later.

The additional alarms were sounded because of the amount of smoke found in the building.

Reagan opens day with prayer breakfast

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

DALLAS — President Reagan, testing his re-election themes as he prepares to accept renomination from an adoring Republican convention, branded opponents of school prayer today as intolerant and said that politicians "need religion as a guide."

"We poison our society when we remove its theological underpinnings; we court corruption when we leave it bereft of belief," he told a prayer breakfast.

Speaking only hours after all but two of the 2,235 delegates voted to renominate him Wednesday night, the president said that he was frustrated by people who say they oppose school prayer "in the name of tolerance and freedom and open-mindedness."

"I submit to you that those who claim to be fighting for tolerance on this issue may not be tolerant at all," he said.

At a luncheon with Hispanic Republicans, Reagan said the Democratic Party "considers Americans of Hispanic descent a separate interest group. We Republicans see you as representative of the mainstream of our party and our country."

He predicted Hispanics would turn to the Republican Party "in ever-increasing numbers" and added, "We are not for handouts and welfare. We are for jobs and opportunity."

Reagan and Vice President George Bush, both nominated for second terms on a single roll call that was the most predictable moment of this tightly scripted convention, will deliver their acceptance speeches at the climactic convention session tonight.

Reagan's White House chief of staff, James Baker, previewed the president's speech this morning on NBC-TV's "Today" show: "He's going to give a review of what he found when he got to Washington as president, and what he's been able to do in four years to restore this country's pride and confidence in itself and what he sees for the next four."

Reagan received 2,233 votes, with two delegates abstaining. The tally for Bush was 2,231, with two abstentions and one vote each for U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

The president told the prayer breakfast of ecumenical Christians that "religion and politics are necessarily related."

"We need religion as a guide; we need it because we are imperfect," he said. "And our government needs the Church because only those humble enough to admit they are sinners can bring to democracy the tolerance it requires in order to survive."

Baker said today it was "quite appropriate" for Reagan to be involved in prayer breakfasts because religion is one of the "traditional values" the president was seeking to restore to American society.

Reagan's schedule also included a meeting with Hispanics and a $1,000-a-plate fund-raising luncheon.

This evening, Reagan will appear at the 33rd GOP convention to accept renomination from delegates heeding Nancy Reagan's call to "make it one more for the Gipper."

Nancy's role changing in re-election campaign

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

CONVENTION 84

DALLAS — Four years ago, Nancy Reagan sat at the Holidome in Midland shortly before the May primary, stared at her husband while he made his speech and never opened her mouth.

It was that way throughout Ronald Reagan's campaign for the presidency: smiling silence. And she came under attack by the news media and Democrats for not taking the same kind of active campaign role that Betty Ford or Rosalyn Carter had enjoyed.

Wednesday may be an indication the campaign will be different this year. Mrs. Reagan gave a short talk during a luncheon and occasionally strayed from the prepared text as she sought to explain the points HER way.

That evening she made a surprise appearance before the packed hall at the Republican National Convention delegates to ask in her quiet manner for their continued support this year.

And the biggest surprise was that her husband was no where near her side. He was watching the events from his room at the Anatole Hotel.

■ More convention coverage — Pages 2 and 4A, 3E

The First Lady ended her talk with: "Let's make it one more for the Gipper."

Midland delegate Bob Monaghan is expecting to see Mrs. Reagan hit the campaign trail by herself a few times this year.

"She's probably more comfortable doing it now. She probably felt overwhelmed by the largeness of the campaign last time," he said. Monaghan was a regional chairman for the Reagan-Bush effort four years ago and is doing the same job again this year.

Lou Brown perceived a great deal more confidence irradiating from Mrs. Reagan "that she didn't show before. She's changed for the better. Her outward expression has changed. She's grown into her public image and I think she's enjoying it."

U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler has seen the First Lady move forward in her public image, and views her as a "tremendous asset to the president."

The reports four years ago of a silent woman failed to look through that cold front to Mrs. Reagan on the inside, according to Monaghan. "She's a very warm, caring person. She's not an extrovert. I think she would be our best hope in Midland," he said.

Lou Brown's 'job offer' somewhat un-conventional

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

DALLAS — From the time she got on the plane in Midland and headed for Dallas, Lou Brown has been tackled daily about a new job. But she's decided to leave the hoopla and excitement of the Republican National Convention behind and make her decision in the quiet of her home.

Ending her term last fall as president of the State Federation of Republican Women, Mrs. Brown was elected to the National Federation of Republican Women as a delegate-at-large. But there's a move among Texas women for Mrs. Brown to campaign for state vice chairwoman when the Republicans gather in Corpus Christi this September. If elected, she would be serving with State Chairman George Strake.

The movement started quietly two years ago when the Republican Party fell apart during a spring meeting in Midland. It was at the State Republican Executive Committee that the splintering factions literally swung punches at each other. When State Chairman Chet Upham was asked to resign, so was the state vice chairwoman.

It was then that Mrs. Brown's name began cropping up as a viable successor. Still serving as president of TFRW, she squelched the efforts.

Instead, Diana Denman was put into the job.

"I was a dark horse then," said Mrs. Brown Wednesday night during the convention. "But it's been an idea that was tossed around since that SREC meeting in Midland."

When she got on the plane for the Dallas convention, an Odessa delegate started the hinting.

Sunday night at the Texas Friends for Bush barbecue, Mrs. Brown was besieged with women asking her about the job. She couldn't even make it out of the restroom without being cornered, she said.

"I have been urged from all corners of the state to consider it. But I want to wait until the adrenalin settles down and then talk to these people again," she said.

It will be a family decision involving husband Win and her son and daughter. "Right now, it is only a fact that I'm considering it."

If she decides to try for the job, Mrs. Brown will be going up against incumbent Diana Denman. And Mrs. Brown has heard that Peggy Rodgers of McAllen also is considering campaigning for the post.

"My candidacy would offer them a choice," said Mrs. Brown. And if elected, she would hope to get a stronger grassroots organization in support of the state chairman. Strake said he had heard that Mrs. Brown wanted to talk with him, but he was unaware of the reason.

Dorothy Doehne said she had heard the stories about the two women being pushed to run for vice chairwoman.

"Lou is a very talented and extremely capable woman. She demonstrated her ability while president of TFRW," said Mrs. Doehne. "And Peggy Rodgers is equally capable and talented. She was on the SREC so she understands the workings of the party."

Another Texan at the convention who asked not to be identified, said Mrs. Denman hasn't done the work for the party which others felt was needed.

Scattered thunderstorms could continue

From Staff Reports

Just when you thought it was safe to wash your car again, along came thunderstorms and flooded streets, too.

And in case you're entertaining ideas of pulling out the garden hose and car wax, the National Weather is predicting scattered thunderstorms for the next few days.

Although less than a quarter-inch of rain was recorded at Midland Regional Airport, forecaster Don Oettinger said, parts of Midland received close to an inch of precipitation in a short-lived downpour that hit the city late Wednesday afternoon.

"We probably picked up just the edge of it out here," he said, "but I recorded 8/10s in west Midland."

The .24 inches of precipitation that fell at the airport between 3:45 and 4:30 p.m. brought August's total rainfall to 2.44 inches. Normally only 1.6 inches are received this month. The latest of several recent storms raised the total rainfall this year to 9.42 inches, as compared to an average of 9.16 other years.

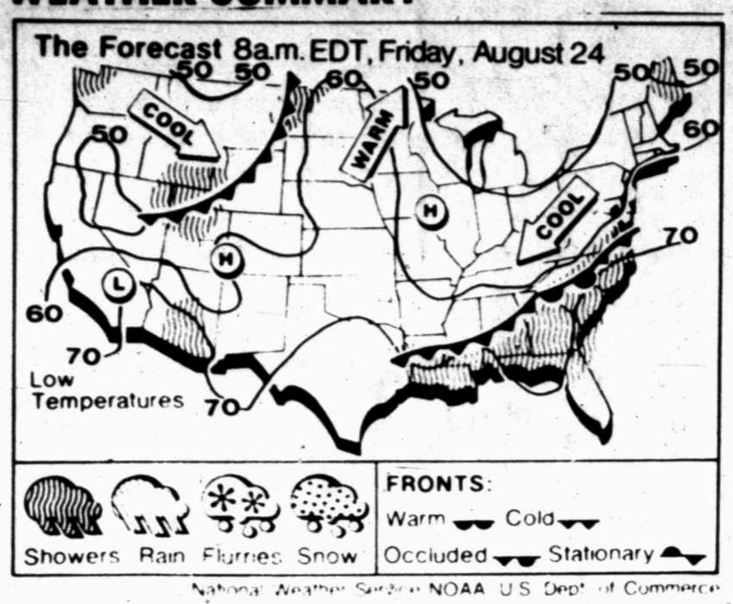

Midland should receive close to the average amount of rain by the end of the year, Oettinger predicted. A typical year's precipitation totals 13.7 inches.

"We should be close to that," he said. "September is one of our biggest months (for rain), so a lot depends on what we get in September."

The sudden squall caused temperatures to drop from 89 at 4 p.m. to 76 an hour later.

Wednesday's high reached 94 degrees, seven marks short of the record set on that date in 1963. An overnight low of 66 was recorded, five degrees warmer than the 61-degree low set in 1961.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Showers are forecast through Friday for the West and Southwest, according to the National Weather Service. Cooler temperatures are expected for the Northwest and from the Ohio Valley to the Northeast.

Showers dot Red River

Associated Press

A weak cold front triggered shower and thunderstorm activity along the Red River and in extreme Northwest Texas.

The front was located early today along a line from near Texarkana to just north of Dallas-Fort Worth southwestward into the Permian Basin just south of Midland.

Very heavy thunderstorm activity was reported before dawn over an area of the northwest Panhandle near Dalhart extending westward into New Mexico.

A high pressure system aloft was reported over Northwest Texas.

Elsewhere around the state skies were mostly clear to partly cloudy.

Winds were light and southerly over most of the state except winds were from the east and northeast behind the weak cold front.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s and 80s with cooler readings in the 60s in the Panhandle. Extremes ranged from 61 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas to 85 at Meacham Field in Fort Worth.

Other readings around the state early today included 66 at Amarillo, 75 at Wichita Falls, 78 at Waco, 77 at Austin, 76 at San Antonio, 75 at Corpus Christi, 72 at Brownsville, 70 at San Angelo and Lubbock and 76 at El Paso.

NATION

Thundershowers lingered today over much of Nevada, New Mexico, southern Arizona and southeastern California, where summer storms earlier had triggered mudslides and flash flooding that injured three people.

Widely scattered showers also dotted Utah and the remainder of the intermountain region.

Scattered thundershowers rumbled over the eastern Great Lakes into the lower Mississippi Valley and the southern Plains. Other storms were clinging to Florida and the southern Atlantic Coast.

Skies were fair over the West Coast, northern Rockies, the central and northern Plains and the western Great Lakes.

Women wait to hear Joan Rivers

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

DALLAS — The day was designed to heat up the blood and get the Texas delegates boiling hot for Wednesday night's session. Some of the speakers — primarily comedienne Joan Rivers — accomplished that goal.

But the speakers who were rolled out in two events apparently also bored the Texas delegates; they began leaving the rooms before the conclusion.

The First Lady Luncheon featuring Joan Rivers and Nancy Reagan attracted more than 2,000 women and a few men to the Loews Anatole Hotel. With an 11:30 a.m. starting time, the event ended about 3:30 p.m. after the Republicans kept trotting out more women for special recognition.

The morning breakfast and caucus meeting for the Texas delegates started that morning at 8 and ended about 10:30, again after trotting out several speakers.

But it was Miss Rivers and her outrageous remarks that the Republican women — often perceived as a too-high-for-that-level-of-fun class — wanted to hear.

With her half glasses perched at the tip of her nose, Miss Rivers answered questions which had been written out by the audience.

"When my husband tries to explain deficit financing to me, my daughter points to my chest," she said.

There was the usual question of her age. "I was on the beach when Moses parted the Red Sea," she began.

"You know you reach an age where your body starts dropping so fast. Plastic surgery? Oh, I'm from Los Angeles. Every woman over 22 has had something done."

She couldn't resist comparing first lady Nancy Reagan to England's ruling women. "Who picked Margaret Thatcher's clothes? Helen Keller? If you're looking for the Queen of England look for a woman in a house dress and a crown."

And then came the question on housework, which she tied into women's rights. "I don't do housework. I'm a Republican; that's part of being Republican. Once a year I call police and say I've been robbed. They come over and dust for fingerprints. Women should look great and be smart and go out and do things. They shouldn't have to cook and clean."

The luncheon was sponsored by the National Federation of Republican Women and instead of recognizing Mrs. Reagan's accomplishments, the first lady had asked that other women receive the focus. Jeane Kirkpatrick, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, recognized Anne Armstrong, Shirley Temple Black, Ivy Baker Priest (posthumously), Clare Booth Luce and Margaret Chase Smith as pathfinders.

Mrs. Reagan ended the four-hour rally for women saying she feels the country is on the threshold of a new era.

"It seems to be that the women who are making the most dramatic impact on our national life today are Republican women. As Eleanor Roosevelt said, 'I have never wanted to be a man. I have often wanted to be effective as a woman, but I never thought that trousers would do the trick.'"

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole was featured at the Texas delegation's morning session, and she talked of President Reagan's advancement of women's rights.

Her husband, Sen. Bob Dole, was the last speaker, joking at first about the seemingly duller star quality he has compared to his wife. But he blew the battle horn for the party, saying he wanted to "make it as big as Texas. You can be a Republican by walking through the door, or we'll pull you through if you're a little reluctant."

Reagan says religion, politics related

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — President Reagan, preparing to accept renomination tonight in a speech to his Republican convention, told a Christian group today that "religion and politics are necessarily related."

In remarks prepared for a prayer breakfast of ecumenical Christians that organizers predicted would draw 17,000 participants, Reagan accused opponents of school prayer of intolerance and insisted, "We need religion as a guide."

"I do not speak as a theologian or scholar," Reagan said.

It was the first of three speeches he was to deliver today before visiting the convention hall tonight to accept the nomination his party offered him Wednesday night.

Reagan was scheduled to address Hispanics and a $1,000-a-plate Republican fund-raising luncheon before retiring to his suite in the Loew's Anatole Hotel to practice his acceptance speech and relax during the afternoon.

As for the acceptance speech, White House Chief of Staff James Baker said on the NBC-TV "Today" show that Reagan would offer "a review of what he found when he got to Washington as president, and what he's been able to do in four years to restore this country's pride and confidence in itself and what he sees for the next four" years.

Reagan's unchallenged renomination, as well as that of Vice President George Bush, went as scripted Wednesday night.

Along with his running mate and Barbara Bush, the president and first lady Nancy watched the roll call of states on television from his suite at Loew's Anatole Hotel near downtown.

The vote was 2,233 for Reagan with two abstentions; 2,231 for Bush, two for others and two abstentions.

"We've been sweating this one out," quipped Reagan, who had no opposition. "We finally made it," he declared in mock seriousness when Missouri's votes put him over the top.

Asked whether he would accept the nomination, Reagan replied facetiously, "I guess so."

At that point, he got a kiss from his wife.

Earlier in the evening, the first lady spoke to the convention and waved at a giant screen behind the speaker's podium where her husband's image was shown live from his hotel room.

Reagan, seated on a couch with his running mate, waved back, first at his TV screen and then at the camera positioned in his hotel room.

In the speech to the religious gathering, Reagan said, "Today, there are those who are fighting to make sure voluntary prayer is not returned to the classrooms."

"And the frustrating thing for the great majority of Americans who support and understand the special importance of religion in the national life, the frustrating thing is that those who are attacking religion claim they are doing it in the name of tolerance and freedom and open-mindedness ... I submit to you that those who claim to be fighting for tolerance on this issue may not be tolerant at all."

"The truth is, politics and morality are inseparable," Reagan said. "And as morality's foundation is religion, religion and politics are necessarily related.

"We need religion as a guide; we need it because we are imperfect. And our government needs the Church because only those humble enough to admit they are sinners can bring to democracy the tolerance it requires in order to survive."

"Without God," Reagan said, "democracy will not and cannot long endure."

Baker, asked on CBC-TV's "Morning News" about Reagan's appearance at the prayer breakfast, said he himself considered it "quite appropriate" because religion is one of the "traditional values" Reagan is trying to restore.

Reagan's triumphant visit to Dallas began Wednesday afternoon with a private meeting with former President Gerald R. Ford. Joined by Vice President George Bush, Reagan then left his penthouse headquarters on the 27th floor to appear at a rally in the hotel's grand, 10-story, glass-roofed atrium.

Thousands of supporters packed shoulder to shoulder on the ground floor and lining the balconies stacked one top of the other all the way to the roof were led by Reagan's daughter Maureen through chants of "Four more years, Reagan-Bush!"

The crowd was delighted to hear him denounce the Democrats as the party of "defeatism, decline, dependency, doom and despair."

Reagan signalled his strategy of trying to tie Walter F. Mondale to former President Jimmy Carter, whom he defeated by a landslide four years ago, saying the Democrats' antidote to Republican success is to "bring back the Carter-Mondale administration."

GOP

Before they voted, the delegates cheered descriptions of the president as "a leader who is not afraid to lead," and the cry of "shame on you, Walter Mondale."

For the third time in as many GOP conventions, Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, placed Reagan's name in nomination for president and said that voters this fall will have the "the clearest of choices."

"It's a choice between Walter Mondale's fear of the future and Ronald Reagan's enduring, consistent optimism," he said.

Laxalt's speech touched off the first rip-roaring, band-playing, sign and flag waving, red-white-and-blue balloon demonstration of a convention that until then had all the emotional pizazz of a Rotary Club luncheon.

Even then, the most enthusiastic of the demonstrators were young people who were bused to the hall and marched through the aisles for 20 minutes.

Reagan and Bush, sitting in the president's 27th-floor suite in the Anatole Hotel a few miles from the hall, watched the session on television. Their wives joined them as Missouri's votes put the incumbents over the 1,118 votes needed for nomination.

Reagan didn't wait for the convention to act to launch his campaign against Mondale. He had campaigned in the Midwest earlier in the week and upon arriving at his convention hotel Wednesday, told a rally that the Democrats had come to stand for "defeatism, decline, dependency, doom and despair."

While the president passed up the convention session at which he was nominated, Mrs. Reagan was there briefly, along with daughter Maureen and son Ron. Sitting with the Reagan and Bush families was James Brady, the White House press secretary, severely wounded in the assassination attempt on the president in March 1981.

Addressing the delegates, Mrs. Reagan, looking tiny as she stood at the massive lectern, said, "I drew on your strength many, many times, particularly, the first year in the White House."

She thanked the delegates and drew a roar of approval when she asked them, "Let's make it one more for the Gipper," a reference to one of her husband's movies where he played George Gipp.

At least 17 killed in Iranian railway bombing

TEHRAN, Iran — A bomb planted in a fruit juice vendor's cart exploded during rush hour this morning in a crowded street near the central railway station, killing at least 17 people and wounding more than 300, according to official reports.

Tehran radio said the bomb contained 55 pounds of explosives and claimed it was planted by "U.S. agents." The state-run radio said 18 people were killed, but the official Iranian news agency said 17 people died. The conflicting reports could not be immediately resolved.

The blast left a six-foot-deep crater in the ground and felled pedestrians in the street, which is just off a spacious square facing the railway station. Scores of people were wounded by shards of broken glass that crashed to the ground from windows in buildings within 100 yards of the square.

The dead included two children and eight women, Police Chief Col. Abbas Moazzami told the official Islamic Republic News Agency. Out of the more than 300 injured, eight were in critical condition, he said.

About 50 people were released after first aid treatment, the police chief said.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency said ambulances still were picking up casualties and rushing them to the hopsital more than an hour after the bomb exploded at 8:50 a.m. Thousands of Iranians were in the square when the bomb went off.

The blast heavily damaged the facade of a nearby two-story building. IRNA said 11 vehicles were smashed and 20 shops were wrecked by the explosion.

There was no reported claim of responsibility for the bombing, but Tehran radio put the blame on "the stooges and puppets of America." It said the attack was aimed "at overshadowing the achievements of the Islamic government."

It was believed to be the first major bomb explosion in Tehran in more than a year.

A series of bombings and assassinations by the Mujahedeen Khalk, an outlawed Marxist organization, killed scores of people, including top government leaders, in 1981 and 1982.

But the fundamentalist regime of Iran's supreme political and religious leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, cracked down hard on such groups.

Mujahedeen Khalk leaders who escaped to France claim the Iranian government has executed more than 20,000 opponents and jailed more than 100,000 people in the last three years.

In Paris, the People's Mujahedeen Organization, a principal anti-Khomeini Iranian exile group, condemned the bombing and said it was the work either of Iranian government agents or remnants of the deposed shah's secret police.

"The People's Mujahedeen Organization of Iran has declared on many occasions in the past and reiterates again that it strongly and vehemently condemns such crimes no matter where and by whom they are perpetrated," a statement issued by the group said.

"The perpetrators of such acts are either the regime's agents, doing so in a bid to cover up their inhuman crimes and their numerous deadlocks, especially in the Iran-Iraq war, or remnants of the shah's hated secret police, Savak," the statement said.

Former Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr told Radio Monte Carlo that he believed the bomb was the work of hardliners within the Iranian power structure.

"My hypothesis is that it is hardliners who have lost the support of Khomeini and who are trying by this type of action to maintain their power," said Bani-Sadr, who fled Iran in 1981 and lives outside Paris. "There is now in Iran a war for power. Until now Khomeini had always supported the hardliners."

The People's Mujahedeen, headed by Massoud Rajavi, is an outgrowth of the Mujahedeen Kalk, which for years fought against the regime of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and was thought responsible for bombing attacks in the first years of Khomeini's revolution.

The shah was toppled in early 1979 and died in exile. Savak, his secret police force, gained a reputation for brutality.

Weather taking larger toll on nation

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Weather-related deaths nearly doubled in the United States last year and damage caused by heat, cold and storms jumped to $27 billion, government meteorologists report.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration reported Wednesday that 700 Americans died in weather-related incidents last year. That was up from 372 fatalities a year earlier.

And the $27 billion in crop and property damage was well ahead of $16.5 billion in 1982.

The deaths were not concentrated on any single weather event, with the largest toll being 42 attributed to the July heat wave. Instead, states battered by a series of bad weather accumulated the most deaths.

According to the report from NOAA' Assessment and Information Services Center, cold, snow and wind claimed 18 lives in Arkansas, 33 in New York and 34 in Virginia during the year. And heavy rains and flooding resulted in 14 deaths in California, 15 in Arizona and 34 in Texas.

Overall, Texas had the most weather-related deaths, 66, followed by 59 in Kentucky and 54 in New York.

The damage included $14 billion in losses to agriculture and $13 billion in other property, the study said.

And in addition, the agency reported that 5,276 persons were injured in weather-related incidents.

Hurricane Alicia caused 1,820 injuries in Texas alone, 80 percent of that state's weather-related injuries, the report said. Also, tornadoes, winds and flooding in April resulted in injuries to 359 Californians.

TDC witness sighted in Pennsylvania

STATE

MADISONVILLE (AP) — A former Texas Department of Corrections construction superintendent missing since it was revealed he had agreed to testify for the state in a bid rigging investigation has been sighted in Pennsylvania, according to Madison County Sheriff Ed Fannin.

Fannin told the Bryan-College Station Eagle Wednesday that Pennsylvania police have verified that James R. Pitts spent the night at the home of a former Texas prison inmate.

The former inmate, Abe Plank, 47, of Ephrata, Pa., worked as a bookkeeper for Pitts while Plank served a term in the Texas prison.

Plank, however, told the newspaper that police came to his home while he was not home and would not verify that Pitts had been there.

TDC records show that Plank served two years and one month of a five-year sentence on a car theft conviction out of Randall County.

Pitts, whose bloody, bullet-pierced van was found abandoned in a roadside park north of here, has been missing since the day after Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox identified him as a key witness in his investigation.

"He stayed with an old buddy of his," sheriff Fannin said. "I had police check it out, and they positively verified it. That joker's up there."

The sheriff said Pennsylvania police told him that Plank told them that Pitts "showed up all at once, was afoot, had no luggage, stayed the night and the next morning, left without saying where he was going or asking for any money."

Elna Christopher, a spokesman for Mattox, said state authorities learned about Pitts' stay at Plank's home late last week and had discussions with officials from the Texas Department of Public Safety about how to proceed.

"(Attorney General) Mattox still wants to talk to the guy, but unless he commits a crime, we can't extradite him," she said.

Fannin said he considers the case closed.

"I still want to talk to him to find out why he did it," he said. "He cost the county a lot of time and money, and I haven't had a good night's sleep since."

Jerry Pitts, brother of the missing man, said he also talked to Plank. He said he is now certain his brother is alive and well. He said he wishes Plank would have told him where his brother was going next.

Houston minister urges school boycott

HOUSTON (AP) — Black students should skip school two days next week and gather in a courtroom where the NAACP will be asking a federal judge to continue monitoring of Houston schools' compliance with a desegregation order, a black minister says.

The Rev. J. Don Boney Jr. said in a speech Wednesday he hopes blacks will boycott the schools Monday and Tuesday. Attorneys for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People are to petition U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor those days.

"White rules in HISD, unfortunately," Boney said in his speech on the steps of the district's administration building. "This is a prime example of what happens in desegregation cases around the country."

Boney said he is a member of a newly formed group called Save the Children.

O'Conor, who ruled in 1981 that the district is desegregated as best it can be, is considering a motion from the district urging that the suit be dismissed.

Boney said the district prefers to hire white teachers.

FLAT VS SHEEN

Many of our customers automatically ask for flat wall paint and flat house paint. They want the elegant matte finish and pastel softness provided by a flat paint. Masonry and stucco walls are often finished flat, and generally flat paints are our best sellers.

In many situations a low sheen paint has terrific advantages. Generally these products go on easier and look better even when applied by a non-professional. Low sheen adds washability and provides rich full coloration that is more custom looking.

President Reagan and Vice President Bush relax in the Anatole Hotel Wednesday night and watch first lady Nancy Reagan as she addresses the Republican National Convention.

Bush to take aim at Mondale in speech

DALLAS (AP) — George Bush is poised to accept the GOP vice presidential nomination for a second term with a speech telling Walter Mondale, "You've had your chance; your time has passed."

Bush delivers his acceptance speech tonight before delegates at the Republican National Convention, shortly before President Reagan takes the podium for his acceptance address.

Reagan and Bush were renominated Wednesday night as the president and vice president, along with their wives, watched the proceedings together on television in Reagan's hotel suite, several miles from the convention site.

A major element of the GOP's election-year strategy is to underscore the link between Mondale, the Democratic presidential nominee, and Jimmy Carter, under whom he served as vice president before their administration was rejectd by voters in 1980.

"No matter how your rhetoric tries to move away from your voting records, no matter how hard you try to turn your back on Jimmy Carter, no matter how much you now talk about family values, this country will not retreat," Bush says, according to an advance text of tonight's speech.

"You've had your chance, your time has passed," the vice president declares.

Twice in the last several days, Bush has gone to a trailer next to the convention center to practice reading his speech from a Teleprompter. Time was blocked out today for a third practice session, a tour of the convention arena and a haircut.

Also on the schedule were a prayer breakfast with President Reagan, an address to a GOP Hispanic luncheon and attendance at another luncheon with Reagan.

Bush was nominated for another term by California Gov. George Deukmejian, who praised the vice president as someone who "has backed our president every step of the way."

While claiming that Mondale and his running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, offer America "a message of fear," Deukmejian described Bush as an able and experienced partner who has helped Reagan steer the nation to an economic recovery at home and through peaceful foreign relations.

"Businessman, congressman, naval officer, ambassador, diplomat, director of intelligence and vice president — no one in the United State can match that experience," Deukmejian said of Bush.

Describing accomplishments of "the Reagan-Bush team" over the past four years, Deukmejian stressed Bush's loyalty to Reagan.

"It is a genuine team," Deukmejian said. "Vice President George Bush has backed our president every step of the way.

Paralytic says platform slights the disabled

DALLAS (AP) — The Republican platform slights the nation's 35 million disabled by not addressing their problems in a separate plank, says a former Texas football player leading the Disabled Americans for Reagan-Bush.

Kent Waldrep of Dallas, paralyzed by a tackle while playing for Texas Christian in 1974, said Republican National Convention delegates muffed a chance to pick up support for President Reagan.

"It should be a pro-Reagan movement, a chance to highlight the president's achievements. Why miss that opportunity? It's absurd," said Waldrep, president of the American Paralysis Association.

The platform on which Reagan will run includes several items pushed by disabled groups. But Waldrep said Wednesday that disabled Americans deserve a separate plank.

The GOP missed a no-lose opportunity, he said.

"You can understand issues such as abortion and equal rights" not winning GOP support, Waldrep said. "But disabilities is not a controversial issue. What American is against anybody with a disability?"

Waldrep, now 30, was a TCU running back when a sweep play ended with him being flipped. He broke his neck when he landed on his head. He garnered national attention again in 1978 when he went to the Soviet Union for treatments that returned some arm and hand movement.

He said the disabled can benefit more from Reagan's economic policies than from any program pushed by the Democrats — who did give a separate plank to the problems of the disabled.

"But their language said nothing," according to Waldrep, who said the GOP should have jumped on the opportunity.

"The items left out of the platform could do nothing but good public relations for the president. They really missed a genuine opportunity to counteract the fairness issue the Democrats are always bringing up," Waldrep said.

"The platform was railroaded by a select group of people and we didn't receive adequate hearing on disability issues," he said. "Disabled people are still the only ones discriminated against.

"There are still inaccessible voting places. You can't say that about blacks, Hispanics, the elderly. You want to talk about minorities? The disabled really have to be the last minority in this country. We're at the bottom of the ladder," Waldrep said, his hand pounding the table.

The platform slight is additionally frustrating, Waldrep said, because he believes Reagan has a good record on issues of importance to the nation's 35 million disabled.

In January, Reagan endorsed a "National Policy for Persons with Disabilities" drafted by the National Council on the Handicapped.

"There are still many barriers to be eliminated," Reagan said in a letter.

Gray Panthers object to Reagan

DALLAS (AP) — Although President Reagan has age in common with elderly Americans, he is insulated from their plight and often is insensitive to their needs, the leader of the Gray Panthers says.

"I do not want him re-elected," Maggie Kuhn said Wednesday. "Our primary objection to him is that he is insensitive and incapable of addressing the needs of the people. His wealth and his power isolate him,"

At 79, Ms. Kuhn, of Philadelphia, is six years older than the president.

"It's a tragedy that the oldest president on record would have so little sensitivity to his peers," she said.

Reagan is insulated from the plight of the elderly, who often are faced with poverty for the first times in their lives when they no longer can work and must live on small pensions or Social Security benefits, Ms. Kuhn said.

"He's old and rich. In our society, if you're old and rich, you're not deemed old," she said.

At a news conference, Ms. Kuhn also criticized the platform adopted Tuesday at the Republican National Convention, which enters its final day today.

"I think the platform leaves a lot to be desired," she said.

The platform committee failed to include any of the Gray Panther suggestions, such as revamping the Social Security system, the creation of a national health care system and an end to waste in defense spending, Ms. Kuhn said.

Staubach praises Nancy Reagan

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach, introducing a film about first lady Nancy Reagan at the Republican National Convention, Wednesday praised Mrs. Reagan for her tireless work to combat drug abuse.

Staubach, who campaigned for President Reagan in 1980, said that during the campaign he was deeply impressed with Mrs. Reagan's concern for children and fear that they might use drugs.

"I watched in simple admiration as she reached out to those children with hugs and love, holding them close, and I watched as their bright eyes shown and teared with joy," he said.

"She was at the center of things then, just as she has been at the center of a great crusade against drug abuse since then."

Staubach said Mrs. Reagan has used her position to raise the nation's conscience about "the terrible plague of drug and alcohol abuse.

"We are changing this country's attitudes about what can be done to protect children from drugs. Indeed, many years from now, I predict they will write that Mrs. Reagan did as much to educate a generation to the awful ravages of drug abuse as her husband did to restore pride and prosperity to this country."

Staubach, who lives in Dallas, substituted for actor Tom Selleck, star of the television series "Magnum P.I.," GOP officials said.

Man charged in death of teen-age boy

CHICAGO (AP) — A man who is a suspect in 19 slayings and was free on bond while awaiting a murder trial has been charged in the death of a teen-age boy whose body was hacked to pieces and wrapped in garbage bags, police said.

Larry Eyler, 31, was charged late Wednesday with murder and concealing a homicidal death in the stabbing of 16-year-old Daniel Bridges, said Detective William Baldree.

In February, Eyler's bond was reduced from $1 million to $10,000 pending prosecution for the 1983 slaying of a man whose body was found in suburban Lake County, and he was freed.

The bond reduction came after a judge ruled that evidence, including a blood-stained knife, handcuffs, tape and rope, had been seized illegally from Eyler's truck by Indiana state police.

Lake County Detective Willie Smith has said Eyler is a suspect in as many as 19 slayings in the Midwest over the past three years, and authorities said 13 of the killings were related to homosexual activities.

Also on Wednesday, authorities from Kenosha County, Wis., questioned Eyler about the death of an 18-year-old man whose torso was found in a plastic bag last October, police said.

Eyler, who had been in custody since Tuesday for questioning, remained in jail pending a bond hearing today.

Bridges' body was found Tuesday in eight pieces in a trash container near Eyler's apartment, police said. Cook County Medical Examiner Robert J. Stein said the victim had been repeatedly stabbed in the chest.

"It looked like that body was dismembered with a hacksaw," said police Cmdr. Edward S. Wodnicki.

Earlier this week, Lake County Sheriff Robert Babcox said he was concerned about Eyler's release.

"I'm thoroughly convinced that he cannot control his urges to kill," he said. "He should have been kept locked up for the protection of the citizens. I don't think he can control himself."

At Eyler's apartment Wednesday, authorities removed parts of bedroom walls to examine them for blood and fingerprints. They previously had searched the apartment and the building's laundry room and left with 20 plastic bags — two filled with bloody water, police said. Detectives said they also found what appeared to be human skin in a laundry room tub.

Inmate has reason to say 'Thank you, Paine Webber'

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A federal inmate has admitted defrauding a national brokerage house out of $14,000 while he was serving a 10-year term at a U.S. penitentiary in Kansas on a similar charge.

Johnnie Ray Johnson, 31, pleaded guilty to wire fraud Wednesday in U.S. District Court. The Atlanta man admitted using a series of interstate telephone calls in August and September 1983 to convince the Denver office of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis to transfer funds by wire to a New Jersey bank account he controlled.

U.S. Attorney W. Hunt Dumont said that Johnson, who has served seven years of a 10-year term at Leavenworth, Kan., for a previous wire fraud conviction, impersonated bank officers and used fictitious names to pull off the scheme.

Johnson faces up to five years in prison and a $1,000 fine when he is sentenced Oct 9.

Dumont said Johnson telephoned Paine, Webber to open a stock trading account under the fictitious name "Jodith Swayze."

Posing as that individual, Johnson advised the brokerage house that he would transfer $29,000 to its Denver bank by a wire transfer to open the account, Dumont said.

A few days later, Johnson impersonated a bank officer in a call to Paine, Webber and falsely advised that a $29,000 wire transfer had been received by the Denver bank from the "Jodith Swayze" account at Paine, Webber, Dumont said.

In fact, no funds had been wired to the bank, the U.S. attorney said.

NOTICE OF VOTE ON TAX RATE

The City of Midland conducted a public hearing on a proposal to increase your property taxes by 7.94 percent on 8-21-84 at 10:00 A.M.

A public meeting to vote on the tax rate will be held on 8-28-84 at 5:30 P.M. at City Council Chambers, 300 North Loraine, Midland Texas 79702.

Massachusetts officials warn of ethnic tensions in towns

BOSTON (AP) — Two weeks after Lawrence exploded in two nights of rioting, state and federal officials warn that economic frustration and ethnic tension in a half-dozen other Massachusetts cities could burst into violence.

But some mayors say the assessment is "way off base."

"I haven't worried about a riot in Holyoke for 10 years," said Holyoke Mayor Ernest Proulx.

"The Hispanics here have gone from the riot stage, to the marching stage and now they have gone to the voting booth," he said. "I think they have evolved into a far more sophisticated group" than state and federal officials believe.

"Of course it can happen again, and it will," said Alex Rodriguez, head of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination. "We can't prevent another Lawrence, it's impossible. The cities and towns have not been able to face their history and racism."

The commission, a state agency assigned to fight discrimination, is compiling a list of communities that might ignite as Lawrence did on Aug. 9 and Aug. 10, when Hispanics and whites battled in the streets of the low-income Tower Hill neighborhood.

Two nights of rioting in the city 30 miles north of Boston resulted in 20 arrests and more than a dozen injuries.

Rodriguez said Wednesday that the final "critical list" will probably include all Massachusetts communities where 50 percent of the minority population lives at or below the poverty level and where there is a history of racial discrimination and violence.

The U.S. Justice Department's community relations service in New England is also keeping an eye on several cities, said Adela Acosta, a federal mediator.

"To say that Lawrence is an aberration in the commonwealth would be unfair," she said. "We just saw the tip of the iceberg. There are other towns in the commonwealth that are at the edge. But they may never move from that edge and they may never explode.

"Hopefully, Lawrence brought attention to the problem and cities will put together programs quickly so this doesn't happen in their communities. There is a lot of work to be done."

In interviews, state and federal officials listed five cities and towns that appear to be high-risk areas for unrest.

They are Chelsea, where 14 percent of the 25,431 residents are Hispanic; Holyoke, the scene of riots in 1974, where 13.8 percent of the 46,865 residents are Hispanic; and New Bedford, where the population of 98,478 is 4.6 percent Hispanic and 2.7 percent black.

Pentagon suspends payments on Hughes missile systems

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The Pentagon is suspending payments to the Hughes Aircraft Co. for three of the military's primary missile systems because of "serious deficiencies" in manufacturing and quality control, military officials said.

The payments, amounting to $30 million a month, are for the Army's TOW antitank missile, the Navy's Phoenix air-to-air missile and the Air Force's Maverick air-to-ground missile. All are made at the Hughes plant at Tucson, Ariz.

In Tuesday's statement, the Air Force said its investigation at Tucson earlier this month uncovered "68 separate findings associated with poor workmanship, inadequate translation of engineering specifications to production planning, failure of manufacturing personnel to follow planning documentation and, most importantly, failure of management to ensure the flowdown of contractual requirements to operating levels."

As a result, the Army and Navy joined the Air Force in suspending completely the so-called "progress payments" for the weapons programs. Such payments are installments made to help a contractor cover costs during manufacturing.

"The joint service agreement was reached following the discovery recently of serious deficiencies...identified by recent Air Force product reviews of the Phoenix, Maverick and TOW programs," said the statement.

The suspension of payments represents one of the most serious actions taken by the Pentagon so far against defense contractors in an effort to clear up quality problems some officials have said are widespread in the industry.

A spokesman for Hughes' missile systems group, H.D. Watkins, told the Washington Post the company was undertaking "a wide-ranging program to check out procedures and to improve quality." He was commenting on earlier Navy and Air Force complaints about missile quality.

Hughes officials declined comment on the shut-off of government payments.

After completing an examination of Hughes' production practices at the Tucson plant on Aug. 3, the Air Force told the company it had 90 days to improve its quality assurance program or face decertification as a government contractor.

Additionally, the Air Force announced that it would neither accept more Maverick missiles from Hughes nor make further progress payments to the company "until Hughes has taken appropriate action to address quality-related problems uncovered in a recent Air Force review of the (Maverick) program."

It said the Air Force had asked Hughes to submit a comprehensive management plan by Sept. 1, outlining how it would correct the deficiencies.

Although the Navy on June 22 announced it would accept no more Phoenix missiles from Hughes until quality improved, the Navy had continued to make progress payments, as had the Army for TOW missiles.

Kari Fielder, an Air Force spokeswoman at Kirtland Air Force Base in New Mexico, said the Hughes Missile System Group progress payment requests of all three services have averaged about $30 million monthly since the first of the year.

Researchers seek missing pieces of skeleton, find fossil bone bed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers seeking the remaining pieces of an important fossil skeleton found decades ago say they succeeded beyond any expectation by stumbling upon another African site brimming with thousands of ancient bones.

In an announcement Wednesday, scientists said the "unprecedented" site in Kenya contains thousands of fossil fragments and that the bounty includes rare remains of five apelike animals who could have produced a common ancestor to apes and humans.

The five partial skeletons of the 18 million-year-old creatures, known as Proconsuls, as well as fossils of snakes and huge lizards, were found in an open area measuring about 15 yards by 30 yards, they said.

The American and Kenyan expedition that discovered the site in June also recovered additional fossils from a nearby area explored in the early 1950s by famed anthropologists Louis and Mary Leakey.

Drs. Alan Walker and Mark Teaford of Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, and Richard E. Leakey, director of the National Museums of Kenya, led the expedition. Leakey is the son of Louis Leakey, who died in 1972, and Mary Leakey.

Two miles from the new site, the researchers reexamined the area explored earlier by the elder Leakeys and found more parts of an important partial skeleton of a Proconsul discovered in 1951. The latest examination also yielded remains of a new species of bat and a new type of hare.

The expedition's primary mission was to explore this tiny site, which is a little more than a yard across and at least three yards deep, for more of the 1951 skeleton and to study how the bones of this animal and others got concentrated together 18 million years ago.

"Fossil apes from any time and place are exceedingly rare," Walker said in a report to the National Science Foundation, which co-sponsored the expedition with the National Museums of Kenya.

Several species of animals who shared features of both apes and monkeys are known to have existed in Africa between 16 million and 22 million years ago, but few fossils from them have been recovered.

Teamsters president sets condition on endorsement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Teamsters Union is pushing for the ouster of the chairman of the National Labor Relations Board as the price for renewing its 1980 endorsement of Ronald Reagan, but the president says "I'm not firing anybody."

Teamsters President Jackie Presser, in Dallas for the Republican National Convention, was quoted Wednesday as saying the replacement of Donald L. Dotson is "do-or-die" if Reagan wants the official support of the 1.9 million-member union.

But deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said "there's no deal" with the Teamsters to remove the NLRB chairman, a former corporate lawyer in Pittsburgh who was appointed by Reagan in 1982. "On the other hand," he added, "we certainly value the support" of the Teamsters.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer quoted Presser on Wednesday as saying that "I've let it be known that this is a do-or-die situation. If that decision (on Dotson) isn't forthcoming, I've got a whole board to deal with. My board will take a firm position. They've let me know it."

Iliff McMahan, a spokesman for the NLRB, noted that "no American president has ever demoted a sitting chairman of" the National Labor Relations Board, the federal agency responsible for interpreting labor law and refereeing disputes between private employers and unions.

McMahan refused further comment, and said Dotson was unwilling to discuss the matter with reporters.

From other administration sources, who agreed to talk only on condition they not be named, it was learned that Dotson recently was summoned to the White House and was told that internal feuding among board members must stop.

"He got chewed out" said one source.

In his 1980 White House campaign, Reagan got more than 40 percent of the vote of U.S. union households. The president's campaign managers, and Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan, have said Reagan must do well among union members once more in 1984.

Most of the labor establishment — including 90 unions affiliated with the AFL-CIO — has endorsed Democrat Walter F. Mondale for the presidency.

The International Brotherhood of Teamsters was the only major union to come out for Reagan in 1980, and that was largely at the behest of Presser, then president of the Ohio Conference of Teamsters, who subsequently ascended to the top when Roy L. Williams resigned under a court order that preserved his freedom while he appealed a federal bribery-conspiracy conviction.

In a July 27 interview, Donovan was asked about reports of huge backlogs at the NLRB and of feuding between Dotson and Patricia Diaz Dennis, a Democratic lawyer named to the board by Reagan in 1983.

Asked if he thought Dotson should remain as chairman, Donovan replied, "I do. I do." But he also said, "I'd like to see them all to get along a little better, but I don't see that happening."

Reagan could, in theory, replace Dotson as chairman of the NLRB but allow him to remain a member of the board. A vacancy on the five-member panel has existed since August 1983, and the president could designate a new appointee as chairman.

Presser has been under investigation by the Justice Department, and the Los Angeles Times and Cleveland Plain Dealer reported earlier this summer that Organized Crime Strike Force attorneys in Cleveland had recommended indicting him.

Presser, who has never been indicted or convicted, is under scrutiny by federal prosecutors for possible involvement in a "ghost payroll" scheme involving his former union local in Cleveland, Presser's home town.

Duke Zeller, a spokesman for Presser, has said that "Jackie is comfortable with his situation," and is confident there will be no indictment.

Presser was effusive in his praise of Reagan in an interview with The Associated Press in late March.

But tens of thousands of rank-and-file Teamsters took part in what was mostly an anti-Reagan protest march on the eve of the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco last month, and some members of the general executive board are disenchanted with Reagan's handling of unions and labor issues.

Unfair labor practice complaints, the principal issues handled by the NLRB, have stacked up in recent months, and a large backlog of unresolved cases languish at the board.

The board was created in the 1930s by legislation which accepted the legitimacy of America's trade union movement and guaranteed in law the right of workers to organize and to bargain collectively with management.

Union leaders argue that delays in processing unfair labor practice cases have the effect of thwarting labor organizing and subverting the purpose of the act.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland has said that the NLRB had taken "such a pro-business" stance during the Reagan administration that labor unions would be better off without laws governing organizing and that "the law of the jungle" might be preferable.

NATION in brief

City council ordinance just isn't the cat's meow

MIAMI SHORES, Fla. (AP) — The Village Council has unanimously approved an ordinance aimed at ridding this Miami suburb of nuisance cats.

The ordinance was prompted by complaints from Miami Shores Country Club members and residents upset over wandering strays and noisy cats, said Village Manager Les Forney, who has a pair of cats himself.

The law makes it a misdemeanor to have more than four adult cats or to "harbor" strays or abandoned felines. The ordinance also forbids a cat that "engages in frequent or habitual crying and meowing."

Violators will be cited for breaking city codes and subject to fines. Problem cats will be "humanely disposed of," according to the ordinance.

Forney said that stray animals could carry rabies.

Plea bargain accepted

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Authorities accepted a plea bargain for one of 22 Americans freed from Cuban jails because the man agreed to testify about drug smuggling and has already served "rather hard time," Assistant U.S. Attorney Tommy E. Miller said.

Clarence W. Elbourn, 47, of James County, pleaded guilty Wednesday to a federal count of using a telephone to further a marijuana smuggling operation.

He had been indicted on four counts last August while he was in jail in Cuba, and was among 48 Americans and Cubans freed from Cuban jails in June after the Rev. Jesse Jackson negotiated their release.

Officials seize coca base

MIAMI (AP) — Authorities confiscated 2,754 pounds of the main ingredient in cocaine in the "first major seizure of coca base" in the nation. Three people were arrested on smuggling and conspiracy charges, authorities said.

A federal grand jury indicted the three earlier this month.

Jim Dingfelder, spokesman for a federal drug task force, said the coca base would have produced the same amount of pure cocaine, worth about $70 million wholesale. The coca originated in Lima, Peru, and arrived on a flight from Caracas, Venezuela, officials said.

Judge rules against himself

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A federal judge has ruled he has no jurisdiction to force Agriculture Secretary John Block to implement discretionary farm aid programs.

U.S. District Judge William C. Stuart dismissed a lawsuit filed by Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller, who claimed Block could implement a variety of programs to help farmers hurt by last summer's drought but had no done so.

The suit also claimed many Iowa farmers were being denied aid for which they were eligible.

Officer lacked valid license

MILLVILLE, N.J. (AP) — A policeman who officials say patrolled streets here for seven years without a valid driver's license now has one, but still faces disciplinary charges.

Police Chief Paul Quinn filed departmental charges against Patrolman William Narvaez, 33, whose license was declared invalid 19 days after he was hired in April 1977, according to city and state records.

Teacher to get new trial

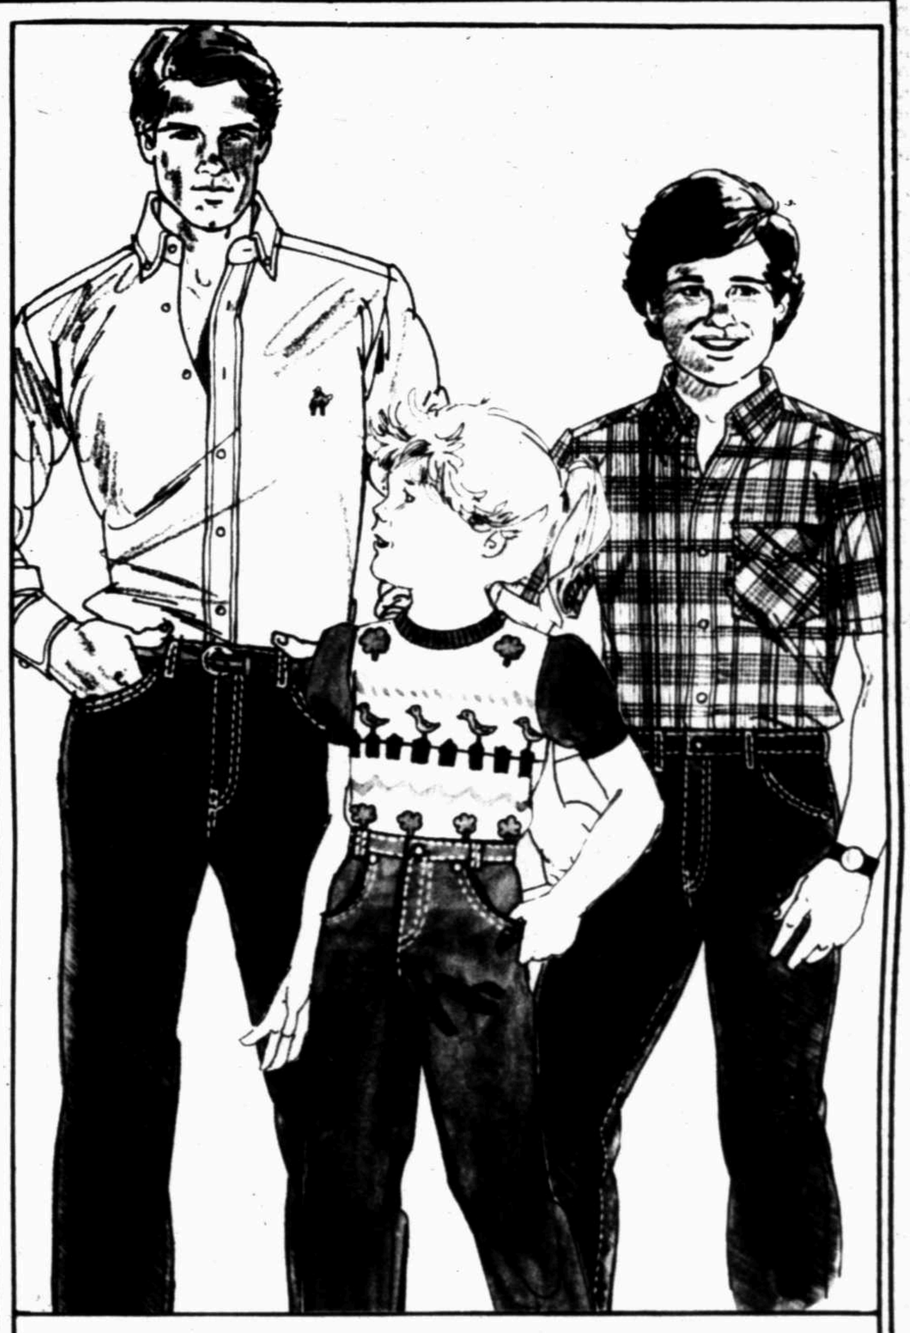

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A Sunday school teacher who claims she was wrongly accused of shoplifting will get a new trial, an appeals court ruled.

A judge had dismissed the suit, ruling the accusation was not slander per se because it was a disorderly persons offense, not an indictable crime, unless the goods are worth more than $200.

But the Appellate Division of Superior Court ruled Wednesday the value of the goods "should make little difference if a person's reputation is ruined by an unwarranted charge of theft," and ordered a new trial.

Cuban moves

Over in Dallas where the Republican Party is meeting to, among other things, nominate he and President Ronald Reagan for re-election, Vice President and former Midlander George Bush addressed a topic of utmost concern for this nation: Its relationship with Cuba.

What he said was important, we believe, because it spelled out in explicit terminology what Fidel Castro's regime needs to do in order to get back in this country's good graces — something many Americans, including ourselves, agree would be in the best interests of both nations.

Cuba is a close neighbor, lying only 90 miles from the Florida peninsula. But Cuba isn't a good neighbor in any stretch of the imagination and her "unneighborliness" has created a rash of problems for the United States in the past couple of decades. In fact, the two countries have shared a stormy relationship at best, particularly in recent years.

Oh, Castro says he wants to be a good neighbor and goes through all the motions to convince us that he's sincere. But his actions contradict his words. Now, says Vice President Bush, if the island nation wants an improved relationship with the United States it's going to have to take a number of steps that will prove its sincerity.

Those steps, says Bush, would include:

— Offering a solution to the "excludables" — the people Castro turned out of Cuban prisons and sent to the United States. A federal warden in Atlanta has said those people are the most vicious criminals he's ever seen.

— Cuba should be less dependent on the Soviet Union.

— Cuba should get out of the "drug business."

— Cuba should give the United States a "firm and verifiable commitment not to export revolution," said Bush.

Basically what Vice President Bush is stressing is the concept of neighborliness, something Cuba and Castro have never been very good at. It's costing both countries a good volume of trade and tourism traffic and holding back cultural exchanges. That's really too bad.

But Vice President Bush is absolutely correct. Cuba has to show it has changed before we'll open our arms to that country. Currently Cuba doesn't deserve our trust — like the bad neighbor she has been.

Education issue

Education will not be the key issue in the forthcoming campaigns for president and other offices. That front-and-center spot is reserved for the economy. The nation's school systems will, however, be discussed by many candidates for public office, and that will be a good thing for all Americans.

Our schools were made an issue by President Reagan, who appointed a blue-ribbon commission to examine their strengths and weaknesses. The commission's report used the word "mediocrity" to describe some of education's ailments, and inevitably such bluntness was offensive to some. But the use of that word served a constructive purpose because it generated widespread discussion of ways and means to improve the teaching process.

A number of proposals have been made, some by the President, some by parents and teachers, and some by scores of others who have been participating in the debate. One is that good teachers be paid more handsomely than poor ones. The term for this practice is merit pay, and while controversial, many observers believe it would work well in education because it works so well in a host of other occupations. Another proposal, often stressed by Mr. Reagan, is that our schools should get back to the basics and give greater emphasis to the teaching of English, biology and mathematics.

Whatever direction campaign oratory takes in the field of education in the coming weeks, the ultimate beneficiaries will be millions of young Americans whose intellectual lives are shaped in the classroom.

Another View:

Getting the vote

As the presidential election approaches, both major parties have launched plans for multimillion-dollar fund-raising campaigns to finance efforts to register and get to the polls those voters who favor their respective candidates. There is nothing wrong with these efforts, which are to be paid for largely by so-called "soft money" donations that fall outside the areas regulated by the Federal Election Commission. But more voters would participate and such partisan get-out-the-vote drives would be less necessary if the United States had the kind of politically neutral, simpler and easier registration system that other democratic countries have.

In the United States, only 48.5 percent of the potential electorate actually voted in the 1982 congressional elections. Many of those who didn't vote were of age and otherwise qualified but had not registered, often because of needless impediments. Of those in the United States who are registered, between 80 percent and 90 percent do vote — figures comparable to voter turnout in other democracies where registration is made easier. In Britain, for example, registrars actively canvass and write to potential voters; in Canada they visit each household as in a census. In the United States, such government registration efforts are often resisted, particularly by officeholders, who have been elected by voters registered under rules that they know and are happy with.

Although failure to vote in this country may be due in part to voter apathy, it is no doubt also due to difficulties in registration caused by unknown rules and inconvenient hours and places of registration. One method that could produce greater voter participation would be mass mailings from election officials informing potential voters of the rules and the places and hours for registration.

JACK ANDERSON

Heated response follows story

WASHINGTON — My recent columns on the 1978 congressional bailout of General Dynamics, the nation's biggest defense contractor, brought a heated response from the chief government architect of the deal, former Secretary of the Navy Edward Hidalgo.

Jack Anderson

In a letter to the Washington Post, Hidalgo accused Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., and me of having "concocted an offensively inaccurate fantasy about a worthwhile accomplishment." That "accomplishment" is currently the subject of separate investigations by Proxmire and by a House investigations subcommittee headed by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich.

Hidalgo's letter deserves a response.

After some soul-searching, I've decided that I may have erred on the side of charity toward Hidalgo. I was also too lenient toward the General Dynamics executives who followed Hidalgo's suggested method of milking the taxpayers for hundreds of millions of dollars in cost overruns on construction of nuclear submarines by the company's Electric Boat Division, in Groton, Conn.

Let's set the record straight:

Hidalgo's charge: "Mr. Anderson's reference to a $1 billion bailout of the company is a figure created out of thin air with no relation to reality." He claimed that the settlement involved only $125 million plus $359 million in contract adjustments.

Response: Hidalgo conveniently disregards an additional $332 million in inflation adjustments, future overrun agreements and tax credits, which brought the total to $816 million. Still not enough? He also fails to mention that General Dynamics was paid $300 million up front in cash for progress payments that accumulated during the bailout negotiations.

A staff analysis prepared for Dingell points out that the interest savings the company enjoyed — by not having to borrow the $300 million over the life of the contract — put the total bailout package comfortably over my "thin air" estimate of $1 billion.

Hidalgo's charge: "No one ever claimed that the settlement was necessary as a 'bailout' to save General Dynamics from bankruptcy. ... The Navy witnesses explicitly told Congress that bankruptcy was not an issue."

Response: Internal General Dynamics documents examined by my associate Tony Capaccio make clear that Hidalgo himself tried to push the bankruptcy tactic on company executives, citing the success Lockheed and Grumman had achieved seeking bailouts from Congress on grounds of impending bankruptcy.

According to minutes of a Dec. 21, 1977, meeting, General Dynamics Board Chairman David S. Lewis "expressed serious concern with Hidalgo's approach ... by saying that it was just not in the cards for General Dynamics to be asked to base its request for relief on 'financial disaster' grounds."

Hidalgo then said, according to the minutes, that he had used the Lockheed and Grumman cases "as a guide, and that he had not meant that (General Dynamics) would necessarily have to go as far as those two companies did in pleading virtual bankruptcy."

Minutes of a meeting on Jan. 18, 1978, say that "Hidalgo, without stating explicitly that he was backing off his approach based on 'bankruptcy,' did so by clear implication."

Hidalgo's charge: "I refused to negotiate unless General Dynamics consented to lay bare all its internal corporate books. Then an independent audit by ... Coopers & Lybrand, retained by the Navy at my direction, confirmed the projected overrun ...."

Response: A Proxmire staff study states: "Navy officials and the accounting firm apparently allowed General Dynamics to delete important information from the audit report prior to its publication." In fact, a key stipulation of the outside audit contract was that General Dynamics could review it beforehand for factual correctness.

There must have been a bundle of errors. Marginal notes on the 51-page draft report show that Hidalgo and General Dynamics executives reviewed the "independent" audit six days before it was issued. At least 17 pages were deleted from the final revision.

The independence of the audit is also called into question by the contents of a General Dynamics memo dated June 9, 1978 — 10 days before the audit report was released.

The memo recounts a conversation in which a company official assured an aide to Hidalgo that the official "would be in touch with him to indicate which portions would have to be excluded from the (audit) report and which would be all right to release by the Navy." The memo added: "The size of the exclusion would reduce the report to about one-third current length."

FEUD OF THE WEEK: The General Accounting Office and the Customs Service are scrapping over the value of customs' role in following up drug-smuggling investigations in South Florida.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., asked the GAO to look into the matter. The agency's response concluded that customs' involvement didn't justify expanding its participation to the rest of the country, except when the Drug Enforcement Administration simply needs some customs agents as warm bodies.

Customs was outraged. It had assured GAO's auditors that its follow-ups had led to 77 new investigations, which in turn led to 114 arrests and significant seizures of drugs, boats, aircraft, firearms and cash.

Delegates and politicians, pursuing Pleasure through the meadow of Dissipation, with strange foods and drinks leering at them on all sides, seem ready to talk economic theory at the drop of a canape. Never has the dismal science dominated such a glittery seminar.

This is an odd time for economic theory to underpin a political strategy. In medicine, when many remedies are suggested, that often means the disease cannot yet be cured. In economics, multiplying prescriptions for achieving low inflation and low interest rates and low deficits mean we do not know how to achieve these goals simultaneously. Yet many restless Republicans have nailed their flag firmly to the mast of economic science.

In 1980 Republicans began broadcasting ads featuring an actor who resembled Tip O'Neill. Driving his car, "Tip" ignored advice and ran out of gas. The ad concluded as Gary Hart would later begin: "The Democrats are out of gas. We need some new ideas."

So did the Republicans 10 years ago. Then a poll revealed that when people were asked what words came to mind when the word "Republican" was mentioned, they said "Nixon" and "Hoover."

In the last 10 years, while it has been repeatedly said the parties are in decline, the GOP has become as formidable a party as America has ever had. It now possesses the sinews of action (a technology for raising money) and a core of animating thought. The thought has been primary, the money secondary. People spend for a faith.

The two parties constantly vie to appear as the people's protector. Since the advent of the New Deal, Democrats have presented government programs to protect people from the vicissitudes of life. But as the electorate has become more educated and affluent, more able to protect itself and more interested in discretionary uses of personal income than in collective purchases through government, Republican tax-cutters have come forward as protectors of the people against government.

The supply-side approach to tax cutting fits a political need. Many Republicans, exemplified by Rep. Kemp, believe the Republican Party became a "party of pain," a party of grim virtues like balanced budgets achieved through austerity in the domestic agenda. Supply-side economics turns on the promise of self-financing tax cuts — cuts that so stimulate economic activity that lower rates generate higher revenues and allow conservative financing of the post-New Deal state.

The swift rise of the supply-side idea in Republican circles reflects a phenomenon noted by James Q. Wilson of Harvard. The political system has become so open to ideas generated by elites that changes of public policy are increasingly often the result not of changes of public opinion but of changes in the way political elites think.

Today the political elites — the parties as they exist in conventions — are polarized to an unusual degree. The country is not.

The parties are even further apart today than they were 20 years ago when Goldwater ran against Johnson. Then the parties differed as much on domestic matters as Reagan and Mondale do, but the parties shared the Cold War foreign-policy consensus from which Mondale's party has departed. The polarization between the parties does not reflect the public mood. Today there are no issues polarizing the public as Vietnam and race did a few presidential elections ago.

Each of the parties also is, to an unusual and arguably unhealthy degree, homogenized. Much has been made of the decline of Republican "moderates." As much should be made of the isolation of the dwindling band of "Scoop Jackson Democrats." These are moderate liberals who adhere to the traditional Democratic foreign policy of Presidents Truman, Kennedy and Johnson.

Democratic senators such as Nunn of Georgia, Boren of Oklahoma and Bentsen of Texas were not seen in prime time in San Francisco. The only such Democrat to address a convention in prime time did so in Dallas — Jeane Kirkpatrick. She remains a Democrat to make the point that hers is an ideology with a distinguished Democratic pedigree.

Lotteries pay off

In spite of all the lucubrating by both parties about the national debt and the balancing of the budget, you can be sure of one thing. This government will never be out of debt. The government's debt will continue to increase with each administration but more so with a clone of the Carter administration.

There is a way that money could be generated to make a substantial reduction in the government's debt and thereby provide some relief to the taxpayers. (That is if you can keep the funds out the hands of Congress.) And that is by a National Lottery. Some states seem to be doing well with such a program.

Of course, there will be a hue and cry raised by certain groups against raising money in this manner. They would chick and cluck about the evils of it at their weekly bingo games, which are played solely for their pet fund-raising programs or strictly for charity, you understand. Of course.

Gannett report was cheap shot

Your Aug. 14 editorial, "That's No Joke," made valid points which, at least from this reader's viewpoint, were well taken. You're right. Some subjects are too serious to joke about. Mr. Reagan's off the record remarks were unfortunate. Even more unfortuante was that his remarks were made public.

Come on, how about a few whacks at Gannett News Service who violated the president's privacy? Gannett wasn't engaged in responsible journalism, they were listening at the keyhole, and salivating over what they heard.

Every profession, including journalism, bears a responsibility to use a bit of discretion from time to time. Gannett's action shows a callous disregard for such ethics. If Mr. Reagan's remarks were in poor taste, Gannett's reporting of them was a cheap shot approaching the obscene.

Granted, there are subjects which should never be joked about. There are also off the record remarks which should never be reported.

Police action draws thanks

I am writing to thank Police Chief Wayne Gideon and his staff for recovering two automobiles stolen from my car lot. I am especially grateful to Sgt. Frank Bartlett who gave quick attention and careful work to this case.

To have anything stolen is more than aggravating and I do appreciate not only being able to rely on our police department but also appreciate the kind of personnel we have working with us.

You all are appreciated.

Sakharov looks healthy in recently released film

NEW YORK (AP) — Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov appears "haggard" and aged in a hidden-camera videotape being broadcast nationwide tonight, but his stepdaughter thanked the Soviet Union for the apparent evidence that her parents are still alive.

ABC News showed still photographs Wednesday from an 18-minute videotape of Sakharov and his wife, Yelena Bonner, in Gorky that were supposedly taken "within the last month."

The network said it got the tape from a West German newspaper, but there were indications that it originated with the Soviet government.

In an interview on ABC's "Nightline" early today, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said the Soviets may be releasing the tape on an "unattributable basis" to quiet Western protests about the Sakharovs and set the stage for a September "peace offensive."

ABC plans to broadcast the footage, including sound from Sakharov, on its "World News Tonight" this evening, said "Nightline" anchor Ted Koppel.

A PHYSICIST who helped develop the Soviet hydrogen bomb, Sakharov later became an anti-nuclear activist and won the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize for his defense of human rights in the Soviet Union.

In 1980 he was exiled to the industrial city of Gorky, 220 miles east of Moscow. That city is normally closed to foreigners, and Sakharov has not been heard from since early May.

Sakharov reportedly began a hunger strike May 2 to press authorities to grant his wife a visa to leave the country for medical treatment. The Soviet media has charged Mrs. Bonner with being an anti-Soviet activist and accused her of encouraging her husband's dissident activities. She has not been permitted to leave the country.

"I'd like to say we are heartened to see that our parents are alive. We are grateful for this to the Soviet government to be able to see them," Tatiana Yankelevich, Sakharov's stepdaughter, said from her home in Newton, Mass., after viewing the still photographs Wednesday night.

"He has aged very much. He looks very haggard," said Mrs. Yankelevich, who last saw pictures of her mother and stepfather in the spring when they sent her snapshots taken in December and March.

Earlier this month, sources in Moscow quoted Mrs. Bonner as saying that Sakharov had ended his hunger strike and was being treated in a hospital in Gorky. Sakharov's stepson said in Los Angeles on Aug. 9 that he believed the reports were false, but Mrs. Yankelevich said the pictures seemed to confirm that he is not on a hunger strike.

ABC SAID THE tape was purchased from the West German newspaper Bild Zeitung for an undisclosed sum. A source at a rival network said all three major U.S. television networks bid for the tape and ABC's offer of $67,500 was tops.

Bild Zeitung, a mass-circulation daily, said it acquired the videotape from the same source that provided the newspaper with two photographs of the couple in June — London-based Soviet journalist Victor Louis, who's often used by the Kremlin to leak material to the West.

The pictures show Sakharov in what ABC said appeared to be a hospital holding a July issue of Newsweek with pop singer Michael Jackson on the cover.

In another photograph, Sakharov was sitting with a man ABC said appeared to be a psychiatrist. There were pictures of June magazines in the frame, which would be after the Soviets announced Sakharov had ended his hunger strike.

Kissinger said it would be impossible for the tape to reach the West without a "Politburo decision."

He said that Soviet leaders, convinced there is a high probability that President Reagan will be reelected, want to commit the United States to a "negotiating position" before the election.

"THEY KNOW that they cannot get that as long as the Sakharov issue is unresolved," said Kissinger.

Sakharov's stepdaughter said she could not confirm the "authenticity" of the videotape.

"We believe that my mother is awaiting the trial, and it appears to be the case, and that my father is kept in the hospital against his will because he is not allowed to leave despite the end of the hunger strike," she said.

Bild Zeitung said the tape, mostly in color, apparently was shot in early and mid-July by hidden cameras in Gorky, where Sakharov was exiled in 1980 for criticizing the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

It said the footage shows a "seemingly healthy" Sakharov springing from a first-floor window to his garden.

The tape also pictures Mrs. Bonner at various times standing on the couple's balcony, shopping and putting gas in her car, Bild said.

The Hamburg-based newspaper quoted a doctor as saying the couple's slow movements could be the result of psychiatric drugs that are used in brainwashing. The doctor's name was not given.

Irish Times newpaper criticizes U.S. IRA supporter

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The Irish Times newspaper, one of the Irsh Republic's leading newspapers, has criticized American IRA supporter Martin Galvin for his role in the recent strife in Northern Ireland.

Galvin's appearance at an Aug. 12 rally in Belfast, Northern Ireland, in defiance of a British ban, led to a police charge into the crowd and the death of 22-year-old Sean Downes. Galvin, who is publicity director of the New York-based Irish Northern Aid Committee, escaped in the bungled attempt to arrest him.

"Mr. Martin Galvin has gone back to the United States with one death to his name," the Irish Times said Wednesday. "It was a Republican (Roman Catholic Irish nationalist) death. He deserves no medal from any Irish tradition for that deed. People familiar with Belfast know how easy it is to daub the streets of that long-suffering city with blood, often innocent blood."

The outlawed Irish Republican Army is fighting for the union of Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland.

"The RUC (Royal Ulster Constabulary, Northern Ireland's police force) made the propaganda for Mr. Galvin. They have learned nothing, as the Provisionals (the military wing of the Irish Republican Army) have learned nothing. After 60 years of experiments on both sides of the border, it should be clear that for alleged separatists to be killing Irish men and women in the interest of uniting Ireland is a daftness beyond comprehension."

The newspaper carried a cartoon on its front page, beneath a report of a news conference Galvin gave in Dublin Tuesday, showing two walls meeting at right angles. One of the walls is topped with barbed wire. The walls bear the inscription: "Yanks go home — but the rest of us have to live here."

Petroleum strike choking Bolivia

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — A new nationwide strike by petroleum workers threatens to choke off much of Bolivia's industry and transport this week, and a week-old doctors' walkout has left the country with only emergency health care.

More than 7,200 petroleum workers, from pipeline operators to gas station attendants, went on strike Wednesday to demand higher wages and greater investment in their industry.

Taxis ran out of fuel and buses became harder to find as the day went on, and airlines said they would cancel domestic and international flights starting Friday if the strike is not settled. Mines, trains and factories could be forced to close if the strike continues.

The petroleum walkout began as 40,000 other federal workers returned to their jobs after a 29-day strike.

The Ministry of Labor said the new strike was illegal, and a spokesman for the Ministy of Energy and Hydrocarbons said it would cost the national economy $2 million a day.

The petroleum workers, whose $400 average monthly wage is among the highest in the country, are demanding increases of 45 to 100 percent. Teachers and other government workers receive an average of $60 a month.

The striking doctors are asking for a monthly wage of $700, while the government says it can only afford $230.

Inflation is running at about 1,000 percent a year in this landlocked nation of 5.8 million people.

Finance Minister Oscar Bonifaz said Bolivia cannot afford to pay the salary increases demanded by the petroleum union.

The union also wants the government to budget $50 million for supplies and equipment to maintain current production levels. Bolivia produces 22,000 barrels of crude oil a day, compared to 50,000 a decade ago. State officials say that if production is not increased, Bolivia will have to import petroleum by the end of the year.

The union and government agreed verbally Tuesday to make $50,000 available for equipment purchases, but a presidential decree authorizing the disbursement has not been signed.

Three opposition parties stripped of legal status

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Three political parties that formed the main opposition to the leftist government in the Nov. 4 national elections have been stripped of their legal status because they refused to meet a deadline for registering candidates.

The National Council of Parties voted 6-2 Wednesday night to cancel the legal status of the Liberal Constitutionalist, Social Christian and Social Democratic parties, council president Hugo Mejia said.

The parties, with two independent labor unions and members of the business community, make up the Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinate coalition.

Mejia said the parties "have lost their legal status by not registering during the period that expired Aug. 5."

The action, effective immediately, prohibits the parties from holding political meetings, demonstrations or campaigning or distributing election propaganda. Any information on the parties in the news media will be subject to censorship, Mejia said.

Erick Ramirez, the Social Christian Party representative on the council and one of the two dissenting voters, said Wednesday night: "We are going to meet now to see what we are going to do."

The parties have five days to ask the council to review the decision and 30 days to appeal to the Supreme Court.

Earlier, officials said the three parties would have to collect 20,000 signatures each to be reinstated.

The scheduled Nov. 4 elections for president, vice president and a legislature will be the first since the leftist Sandinistas took power in a 1978-79 revolution that ended 42 years of rule by the pro-U.S. Somoza family.

Seven parties, out of the 10 that were accredited before the Supreme Electoral Council, are registered for the elections.

The coordinate had named Arturo Cruz, a former ambassador to the United States and former member of the governing junta, its presidential candidate, but he refused to register unless the Sandinistas agreed to a series of demands.

They included lifting press censorship and holding a national dialogue, with Nicaraguan rebel leaders participating, to insure the fairness of the elections.

The government showed some flexibility but said it would not engage in a dialogue with the U.S.-backed rebels, calling them "assassins of the people." After the deadline passed, rebel leaders gave the coordinate the go-ahead to arrange talks without them.

The council includes four representatives from the National Assembly of Political Parties, three from the Council of State, an appointed body that serves as parliament, and one from the governing junta.

Mariano Fiallos, president of the Supreme Electoral Council, had said earlier this month that the parties lost their legal status when the Aug. 5 deadline passed.

Local leaders want to end 'bloodbath'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Moslem militias battled with mortars, rockets and machine guns in the northern port of Tripoli today, and local leaders asked Syria to help stop what one called "this massive bloodbath."

Police said at least 105 people have been killed and 320 wounded in four straight days of fighting in the city of 500,000.

Radio stations reported that Tripoli's religious and political leaders cabled appeals to Syrian President Hafez Assad to intervene to halt the fighting in Lebanon's second largest city.

The Syrian army has controlled north and east Lebanon since its 1976 intervention to halt the first round of the Lebanese civil war. Syrian troops maintain checkpoints around Tripoli but have no presence inside the city.

On Wednesday night, heavy artillery and rocket exchanges spread to almost all the city's residential neighborhoods, blocking fire engines from reaching burning buildings. Hospitals appealed for blood donations.

A NEW CEASE-FIRE was called at 4 a.m. today. Random bombardment tapered off after that but occasional sniping persisted after daybreak, imperilling the truce, police said.

The fighting in Tripoli, hometown of Prime Minister Rashid Karami, was between the Syrian-equipped Arabian Knights militia and the fundamentalist Islamic Unification movement.

The Arabian Knights are predominantly Alawites, a minority offshoot of Islam. Fighters of the Islamic Unification are Sunnis, Islam's largest sect. They have been fighting for dominance of Tripoli for the last two years.

In Beirut, four shops and a car were destroyed in an overnight rash of bombings in the city's Christian sector. Police said there were no casualities.

Lebanon's state radio said Israel today reopened the Bater-Jezzine crossing, the only major gateway between the Beirut area and the occupied southern third of Lebanon, after a three-day shutdown.

HOWEVER, MILITARY sources in Tel Aviv said only "special cases" were being allowed through today, and an Israeli spokesman said the crossing would not offically reopen until Friday.

The Israeli command had said the closure was needed to introduce new traffic procedures and tighten restrictions against arms smuggling into the south.

An Israeli soldier was slightly wounded in south Lebanon today when a rocket-propelled grenade exploded at a military position, a military spokesman said. The attack occurred in the town of Nabatiyeh, which has been the focus of Shiite Moslem protests against Israeli occupation forces.

Lebanese Foreign Ministry legal experts today began drafting a complaint to the U.N. Security Council against what Karami has called Israel's "inhumane repression," the state radio said.

The decision to lodge the complaint was made by Karami's half-Christian, half-Moslem Cabinet at a meeting Wednesday.

KARAMI TOLD reporters the complaint would rely on "international conventions that prevent the repetition of what Nazism did to the Jews." But he did not say whether Lebanon would seek a Security Council debate.

In Tel Aviv, a top Israeli official rejected Karami's arguments. Uri Lubrani, coordinator of Israel's activities in Lebanon, said in an Israel Radio interview that Karami's statement was "part of the trumped-up charges which we believe are being prepared for a United Nations Security Council Session concerning the Lebanon."

"It is nothing to do with the facts," Lubrani said.

In the campaign for last month's general election, Israeli politicians promised to withdraw from Lebanon, but senior military officers in south Lebanon and Tel Aviv said this week the army would not be ready to leave for at least a year.

Israel's 15,000 troops in south Lebanon have been facing an escalating guerrilla war, and Israel has imposed more restrictions on Lebanese civilians. Israel invaded south Lebanon in June 1982 with the stated purpose of clearing out Palestinian rebel bases, drove all the way to Beirut and has maintained forces in south Lebanon since.

ANDROGYNOUS AUTUMN ACCENTS 1984

Text by Lisa Gerlock

Like a breath of fresh autumn air, this season's look is invigorating and cozy.

The elements are really nothing new. In fact, many designers have labeled it a used, worn look. It's the combinations that are refreshing.

There's the conservative Wall Street inspiration — found in pin-striped jeans and men's neckties. Then there's the military flavor — such as berets or fatigue belts. These style are layered with collegiate-look argyle patterns. Or Michael Jackson-style vests. The person who wears this cozy combination will probably be seen walking in frilly lacy anklets tucked in moccasin-look penny loafers.

And then there's the Boy George style. Big baggy skirt — reminiscent of the Annie Hall look of the mid-70s — topped with a similar combination of the above. But the feet, of course, will show off lumberjack-type lace up boots.

The new kid in school this year will more than likely be Esprit — replacing the buzz about the formerly popular, but classic, Izod.

Sweaters, straight vests, cropped pants, long skirts, pedal-pusher length pants and baggy shirts are other pieces to mix with together for more combinations.

The look of the season has been tagged "androgynous" — what designers call the menswear-inspired styles of dressing worn by men and women. The style was introduced on the streets of Paris, London and New York.

"I LOVE THE look because it has something new," said Della Neal, owner of The Gazebo, 21 Imperial Shopping Center.

Used clothing stores carry brand names

From Staff Reports

Surprises can turn up on the racks of many second-hand clothing stores. And recycled classics are one way to beat the new season's wardrobe bill — and many of Midland's used clothing stores feature designer brand names.

Some of the stores operate on consignment — which benefits women who can afford a new wardrobe each season, and those who can't.

Designer Secrets, a new store in Midland at LaVillita Plaza, features ultra suede suits, silk dresses and blouses, furs, accessories, formals and cocktail dresses in such brand names such as Ernest Strauss, Bill Blass, Casper, Nipon, Halston, Molly Parnis, Mary McFadden, George Masket, Ltd. and Hande Mori. According to owner LaVeda Boggs, the store's clothing is received from Dallas, San Francisco, Lubbock, Scottsdale, Ariz. and Hobbs.

Second Time Around, 904 S. Garfield, features an array of brand names in children's, women's and men's clothing. The store, owned and operated by Pat Bradford, is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday; and 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday.

All clothes on the store's racks and shelves are on consignment or are unsold items from local stores. The clothing is priced according to quality and condition.

Next to New, 905 E. Illinois, is a non-profit project operated by the Junior League of Midland Inc.. It is open from 9:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The shop is one of the organization's many service projects to fund programs for the community.

All garments are dated and prices are reduced by 25 percent after a month and are 50 percent off after 60 days. All clothes, except wedding dresses and furs not sold after 90 days are donated to charities.

The shop's racks and shelves include designs by Evan Picone, Albert Nipon, Peck and Peck, Butte Knits, John Meyer, The Villager, Jantzen and White Stag.

Much of the clothing donated to the Salvation Army Thrift Shop, 300 S. Baird, is worn but still has a lot of mileage on it. All items are donated and money earned from clothing sales subsidizes Salvation Army projects.

The shop, managed by Mrs. Major Jack Camp is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Trade Arama, 801 E. Front, is open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday through through Saturday.

League sponsors benefit show

The Children's Service League of Midland will present a luncheon and style show at 11:30 a.m., Sept. 13 at the ClayDesta Atrium to benefit the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center.

Fashions by top American and European designers and furs will be featured in "Paradise of Fashions," by Amen Wardy of Newport Beach, Calif. Wardy, who also presented fashion shows in Midland in 1970, 1972 and 1978 to benefit the Children's Service League, will mark the eleventh benefit fashion show sponsored by the Service League.

In 1977, Wardy opened a store in El Paso and since has added a Galano Salon, with a complete Chanel Salon.

Children's Service League, organized in 1939, began presenting fashion shows as a bienniel fund-raising event in 1966.

The League also sponsors and staffs the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center, provides volunteers for the City County Health Department Well Child Clinics, Prental Clinics and Immunization Clinics.

The organization is comprised of 50 members, headed by Mrs. Ron Holcomb, president. Chairman include mrs. William W. Henry, fashion show; Mrs. J.W. Manaugh, decorations; Mrs. Tom Stovell, invitations; Mrs. James W. Richards, reservations; Mrs. Durward Goolsby, show coordinator; and Mrs. Roy H. Davidson, publicity.

"I am traditional, but I like the way they are softening the traditional styles," she said.

The androgynous look this fall is carried right down to the toes. One popular look is a soft leather shoeboot, by Esprit De Corps, that laces up the front. Mrs. Neal recently added the line at her store. "We had to because they go so well with the rest of the Esprit styles."

Knit ties tucked into sweater vests, wrapped with big belts and topped with large accessories are what Mrs. Neal sees for fall.

"We're selling a lot of crop pants, shirts, cotton sweaters and sweater vests," she said.

"We're selling basics, like black and brown, but putting jewel colors, such as sapphire blues and ruby reds with the basics for a brighter look."

Other popular colors for the season include teal, rose and plum, she said.

Her store caters to juniors, working women and ladies. "We have a young look," she said.

"Midland women are very fashion-conscious. I think they are very tastefully dressed.

"But they are not necessarily high-fashion — fad fashion. They are very tailored, well dressed women.

"And I see more and more women who are shopping in Midland, keeping their money in Midland. As a retailer, I like that because I can offer more fashion to them."

BETTY SMITH, owner of Betty's Boutique, said she sells more jeans — striped, baggies, check and cropped — than any other item in her store.

Big, baggy shirts tied at the waist are also popular for fall, she said.

Belts, in bold blue, orange, red, burgundy, gray, purple and khaki, range in textures from army fatigue-type to fish-net ropes.

"The casual shorter pants are the biggest change. They wear them with decorative anklets."

The anklets, she said, are white, pastel or light colors. Some are gray with pink, blue or red hearts on them.

Though Mrs. Smith has "not had very many calls" for the Michael Jackson or Boy George look, she said "it may hit here big" in the future.

As for brand names of the season, Esprit is one of the most popular. "Izods will be with us forever...but Esprit has replaced Izod as far as brand name," she said. And yes, "Esprit puts its brand name on the outside of everything they make."

Mrs. Smith agrees many of this fall's new looks are similar to the Annie Hall days. "Some of the looks are so casual and relaxed they border on 'slouchy.'"

When she was introduced to the new looks at market, she admitted, she didn't really like them.

"But we started putting some of them together and added belts and they looked real cute."

The interchangeable separates, truly menswear-inspired, are predicted to be the hit of the season.

Comfortable, casual look is season's highlight

The Associated Press

Coeds heading for college for the first time this fall will find the more casual they look the more in fashion they will be.

"A lot of clothes for fall have a lived-in look," says Terry Melville, fashion director for New York's R.H. Macy & Co. Inc. "There is an abundance of casual clothes that look great and are real comfortable, too."

Heading every coed's shopping list should be jeans, according to Ms. Melville, who says this fall's selection includes new ones that are rounded in shape and cropped at the ankle, with plenty of detailing.

Coeds might consider buying two pairs of jeans and a miniskirt as the base of their campus wardrobe, she suggested, adding:

"They then could pick up a denim jacket that has a military feeling to it. It could be a bomber or aviator jacket in denim that could have a quilted or sherpa lining depending on what part of the country their school is in.

Ms. Melville advises that besides the military theme for fall there also is a rugged outdoor look.

Oversized lumberjack plaid flannel shirts will look great with the new jeans or a pair of corduroy pants, she said, and coeds might want to buy a couple of long-john tops that can be worn alone or layered under plaid flannel shirts.

"These long-john tops are comfortable, functional and believe-it-or-not are one of the new fashion trends from Paris this season," she says.

The androgynous look — clothes that are inspired by menswear — also will be popular this fall, according to Ms. Melville.

Button up in style

Buttons, the diminutive workhorses of fashion, usually are overlooked as decorative elements, even though the very first buttons served not as fasteners, but as ornaments.

Think of buttons as an accessory that can contribute as much dash to an outfit as a scarf or a piece of jewelry. Buttons are available in a tremendous variety of materials, from functional and inexpensive plastic to gleaming brass, exotic mother-of-pearl, leather, wood, bone and 24-karat gold plate.

The right buttons can turn an ordinary garment into an outfit with a strong fashion statement. A new set of buttons even can update a favorite houndstooth check blazer or add polish and personal style to one of fall's menswear-inspired suits.

Polished geometric wood buttons will add impact to a bold windowpane check overcoat. Gold-plated buttons, a classic note for a navy blazer, can lend sparkle to a tweed trouser suit or double-breasted herringbone jacket. This fall the fashion focus is on combinations of textures, so experiment. Try a shiny button on natty wool or a leather button on smooth flannel.

Be creative in searching for interesting buttons. Scout out pretty buttons on old clothing in thrift shops. Gold-plated blazer button sets usually are sold in department stores or professional trimming stores.

But remember to consider quality before buying replacement buttons. Quality will affect a button's durability as well as appearance. A bargain set of buttons may appear fine under department store lights, but after a few washings or dry cleanings, they may loose their finish and become stained or tarnished.

Button quality also is something to keep in mind when purchasing garments. If a manufacturer cares enough to use quality buttons, it's an indication that the overall construction and fabric of the garment also will be superior.

Metal buttons in particular are offered in varying degrees of workmanship and materials. Waterbury Cos., a 171-year-old Connecticut company that manufactures buttons that adorn the uniforms of America's military forces and the latest fashions, suggests using the "finger-snap" test. If a button sounds tinny or hollow, it is probably of inferior quality. A metal button should not yield to pressure when squeezed.

The two basic types of buttons are sew-through and shank buttons. Sew-through buttons should be attached with a thread shank so that the garment won't pucker around the buttonhole. To make a thread shank, position a straight pin on top of the button between the holes and work the stitches through the button and over the pin, forming a loop. Remove the pin, pull the button to the end of the loop farthest from the fabric and wrap the thread tightly around the stitches several times.

Regular thread can be used to sew on buttons, although heavier, top-stitching thread will produce more attractive results. Use a single thread to prevent strands from twisting and knotting. —CNS

Tie choice may reflect character

Most men don't have many suits. Corporate guidelines and financial status often limit the style or number of suits a man may have, so the majority of suits are uniform and sedate. How to express individuality? The tie.

Gordon Williams, president of Countess Mara, a clothing distributor, says the best way a man can express himself is by the tie he wears. Flamboyant icant fashion statement, but every individual should remain true to his personal style, Williams says. If a bright tie doesn't suit that style, don't force it.

Not only may color make a fashion statement, but it also can reflect moods. For example, an individual who habitually wears dark clothes, especially dark ties, probably is a somber person, perhaps one of grave mien and dignity.

Clothing psychologists have outlined examples of how people are affected by color combinations in homes, offices, restaurants and, yes, the clothes they wear. So, a brightly colored tie may act as a tonic for a depressed man. For exuberant personalities, subdued colors act as a sedative.

Countess Mara, who founded the company, often was heard to say: "On rainy days, a man should wear the brightest tie in his wardrobe. It will not only cheer him up, but also will act as a cheerful catalyst in conversation with other individuals."

Before buying an array of colorful ties, a person should thoughtfully consider appropriate colors. An important factor in selecting the right color tie is a person's skin and hair coloring.

Men with dark skin and hair look good in any of the brown tones from dark brown to beige and ecru. Maroon and black also are good colors.

Fair-haired persons should select ties in light tones of green, blue and gold. Ruddy-skinned individuals should choose deeper tones.

Men who are short and stout should stick to subdued hues such as dark blues, browns and black. Tall men look good in a variety of colors.

Fiori featured at trunk show

A trunk show of handbags and accessories of Carlo Fiori of Italy will be presented from 11 a.m.-3 p.m., Friday and Saturday at Sakowitz in the Midland Park Mall.

In his latest collection, designer Fiori brings an Italian "Ricamato" style of embrodiery, satin and silk thread tassles to handbags.

Fiori leans toward novelty treatment. "People want something unique and different," he said.

Also introduced will be Fiori's new line of men's and women's buckles.

Dirndl skirts, sweaters and belts can add dimensions to a basic two piece suit to meet the demands of schedule which may include business travel, socializing and casual events.

Build fall wardrobe with basics

Wage earner or valued volunteer, today's woman knows she's being taken more seriously than ever before. But along with her new status and involvements come new demands on her time, wardrobe and checkbook.

"A woman who is active and has a fashion flair shouldn't have to suffer because she can't find what she wants in her price range," says Maxine Forman, senior vice president in charge of design for Russ Togs, a designer of women's clothing.

The key to stretching fashion dollars is buying coordinated jackets, skirts, slacks and tops in classic fabrics and designs that can be mixed and matched into an entire fall wardrobe.

Forman recommends a suit with a classic blazer and a subtly pleated skirt in a tan or gray flannel wool. This will wear well and stay crisp-looking even during the most hectic days. Add to the suit a skirt and a pair of slacks in contrasting colors, such as blue or red, and a multicolored sweater or vest for texture and change of pace.

To change the overall effect of your basic components, use a variety of belts and scarves. Tie the scarves as ascots, drape and secure them to the side with a pin or tie them under blouse collars in casual bows.

Sweaters and blouses should be chosen to blend with as many components of your wardrobe as possible. Women's wardrobe planners advise sticking to small prints, conservative stripes or coordinated solids.

Forman, an international traveler familiar with the pressures of a busy woman's life, advises that having a hemline just below the knee will keep a skirt in style forever. Jacket sleeves should allow three-fourths to one-half inch of your blouse cuff to show, according to the standard set by most European and American haberdashers.

Optional additions to the basic wardrobe could include a two-piece dress for mixing and matching with your flannel wool separates or a textured jacket in a herringbone or tweed.

As a final note, Forman advises that you plan your outfits for the week much as you might plan family menus. "This saves the time and tension of choosing under pressure," she says. —CNS

This classic flannel suit, flouncy bowed blouse and coordinated sweater vest give a look of put-together fashion. Remove the sweater and add a string of pearls, and this suiting goes right through to cocktails and dinner.

Simple suit capable of several looks

Headed for the country or out on the town? Meeting an important client for lunch or stepping out like a female dandy? The same suit — a simple skirt and jacket — serves well for all these occasions when put together with different blouses and accessories.

Start with a basic suit with a short jacket and dirndl skirt. By choosing a neutral color suit with a variety of colors in the weave, it will be versatile enough to wear with a rainbow of sweaters and blouses.

For a meeting with the boss or lunch with that big account, the skirted suit can't be beat for authority. Button-down tailored shirts have given way to softer blouses that say a woman can be feminine and still have clout. Team up the suit with a slightly ruffled blouse and a leather briefcase, and you've got a no-nonsense image.

A little more casual, but still businesslike, is the suit skirt topped with an oxford cloth shirt and a cable-knit wool sweater. Add a scarf tied into a bow at the neck to make this preppy outfit even more businesslike. When the weather gets really nippy, the jacket easily slips over it all.

For those occasions when it's OK to be a little less businesslike and a little more trendy, put on a white cotton tuxedo blouse with a bow tie and cummerbund. Add a short velveteen vest for a more dressy version of the same look.

Evoke the charm and simplicity of English country dressing by teaming up the skirt with a ruffled blouse and a shawl tied around the waist or over the shoulder.

For all of these looks, the suit is the major investment. Here quality counts. Mary Anne Torres, manager of a clothing boutique, offers the following tips for finding a quality suit.

Tape around the armholes and padded shoulders means longer life for shoulder seams.

Fusing in the lapels will keep the line clean and crisp, even after cleaning. Without that interfacing, lapels often pull and buckle on shrunken lining.

Suits should be fully lined both in the jacket and skirt.

Keyhole buttonholes keep the button locked in place and prevent it from rubbing back and forth and fraying the buttonhole.

Vented sleeves not only look better but also provide more room in the sleeves for bending the elbow.

For ease in altering, look for open-press seams with double stitching and seam binding at the hem.

Finally, you can tell a quality suit by its buttons. Make certain they closely, if not exactly, match the color of the suit. Covered buttons are a plus. —CNS

Dress feet for success

Stodgy boardroom dressing — especially from the knees down — is on its way out, according to Italian shoe manufacturers. This fall, executive footwear will take its cues from a variety of heel heights, textures, colors and details. It's what the "bottom line" is all about.

According to Collete Hughes, associate director for the Italian Shoe Center, "This fall's footwear is the best yet for office dressing." Executive dressing today is more than a seersucker suit and plain navy pumps — "women want excitement in their office fashions," she says.

Career women also want versatility in their "9-to-5" dressing because many are finding that their workdays don't necessarily start at 9 a.m. or stop immediately at 5 p.m. "So they need a style versatile enough to carry through to other occasions," Hughes says.

Drawing his inspiration from the walls and subway tunnels of New York City, Fabrice creates what he calls graffiti beading on a red chiffon chemise with thigh-high side slit.

Bead graffiti shines

He arrived, 45 minutes late, looking none the worse for wear after a late-night fashion extravaganza the night before. But when he asked for a glass of orange juice — "or anything with vitamin C in it" — it was easy enough to guess that he looked better on the outside than he felt on the inside.

Still, Fabrice, the 32-year-old Haiti-born, New York-bred designer of opulent beaded gowns, was more than gracious as a photographer flashed lights in his eyes and a reporter fired questions at him.

"I'm sorry," he said upon his arrival. "We should have parties like that only every other night and have a day to recuperate."

"The party" was a special showing of Fabrice's collection of beaded gowns hosted by the owner of a Newport Beach, Calif., boutique. Many of those invited to the affair showed up early the next day ready and willing to spend anywhere from $2,500 to $5,000 for a Fabrice dress.

"Beaded dresses have been very popular this year," said Fabrice. "I think it is because people's lifestyles are changing. There are more things to go to, more parties, and women want to be glamorous, to make a glittery statement."

Fabrice, who had designed textiles for sheet and towel manufacturers until he turned to hand-painted silk clothes in the mid-'70s, decided to add beading to his repertoire about three years ago.

He loves it, he said, but beads present some special problems.

The dresses are assembled in New York, where Fabrice lives, and then must be sent to Haiti for beading.

"We have our (beading) factories in Haiti because they know the art there and it's close to the states. You can go there in three hours if you have to — not like Hong Kong or India."

Even before the dresses are sent to the factories, Fabrice must give careful consideration to design technicalities.

"First, you must make sure the dress is not too heavy," he said. "Beads are glass, and the more you add, the more it weighs.

"Then, you must balance the designs. You can't have too many beads on one side and too few on the other, or the dress will not hang right.

"And, of course, the dress has to look good on the body. The design must be appealing, and the patterns must hit in the right spot on the body."

Fabrice likes geometric patterns. A dress of silver beads and sequins on black chiffon, for example, is beaded in an argyle pattern.

But the collection he was showing had taken some new turns.

"I call this graffiti beading," he said, pointing to a red chiffon dress scrawled with abstract, swirling sequin designs. "It's styled after the graffiti on the walls in New York."

His rococo beading — a delicate and flowery combination of gold and silver beads on cream chiffon — also was new.

Multicolored beads on black and the use of bright chiffons rather than classic black also were new.

"You have to do new things," the designer continued, "or beading will not remain as popular. You have to keep changing, give new allure."

To Fabrice, allure borders on flash. His gowns, cut on the bias, cling to every curve. They often feature low-cut backs or high-cut slits that reveal the thigh.

There's no biz like shoe biz

There's no biz like shoe biz, according to Jerry Miller, author of "The Wandering Shoe." Tracing his roots back 100 years to his grandfather, I. Miller, he walks the reader through the beginnings of shoe business in America.

It's a personal account that bares the joys and pains of a career that has many ups and downs. —CNS

Nothing makes a fall fashion statement like big scarves, shawls and capes.

Trench coat: Traditional in menswear

Three items of menswear, it seems, have been with us forever. From all appearances, they will continue to be with us far into the future.

They are the traditional, or Ivy League, look in suits and sport coats, blue jeans and the trench coat.

The traditional look is the lineal descendant of the sack coat that men were wearing in the years before World War I.

The trench coat, born in World War I days, has continued, almost without change, as the most-wanted rough-weather garment for men.

Thomas Burberry used a fine twill cotton gabardine that was chemically treated to repel rain but still allow air to ventilate under the coat.

Today "at least 95 percent of the rainwear sold is gabardine or a similar poplin fabric that is treated to repel rain," according to Alfred Oppenheimer, vice president of Gleneagles Inc., a Baltimore-based manufacturer of outerwear.

The water-repellent fabric was a major breakthrough, but further design features were added to the trench coat for additional protection against the elements.

The original trench coat was double-breasted, more voluminous and styled with raglan sleeves. Today's trench coat is streamlined for a slimmer silhoutte. —CNS

Wrapping up for the season

How do you wrap up the new fall fashions? Top a man-tailored suit with a large, geometrically patterned shawl. Swing a wide, nubby scarf across a big coat. Drape a chill-chasing wool challis scarf oblong over your head and shoulders or sash a silk scarf at your waist. Any way you wear them, scarves and shawls are the season's best bets.

"The big shawl makes such a fashion statement, it doesn't make any difference what you're wearing beneath it," says Francesca Saldarini, designer of Saldarini & Saldarini scarves. One of the first designers to produce large shawls, she believes they're the best way to give a feminine lift to menswear-inspired classics.

Large, multicolor paisleys, classic plaids or colorful abstracts are ideal patterns to spark menswear tweeds and solids. A shawl with bright colors splashed on a black background, or a graphic design combining neutrals like khaki with brights like red, or a modern art print mixing red and purple will give your basic separates more than a little pizzazz.

And if your wardrobe isn't new, you can update last year's styles with a textured, oblong scarf, a silk square, a wool shawl and some of Saldarini's tips for tying on some instant fashion.

Toss a shawl over one shoulder to give a simple suit or dress the layered look. Belting it at the waist keeps it in place and adds punch. A knit dress goes from simple to smashing with a long, oblong scarf worn over one shoulder and knotted on the opposite hip. For a high-fashion look, make a fanny wrap by crisscrossing a long, wide fringed scarf around your fanny, securing it with a knot over one hip.

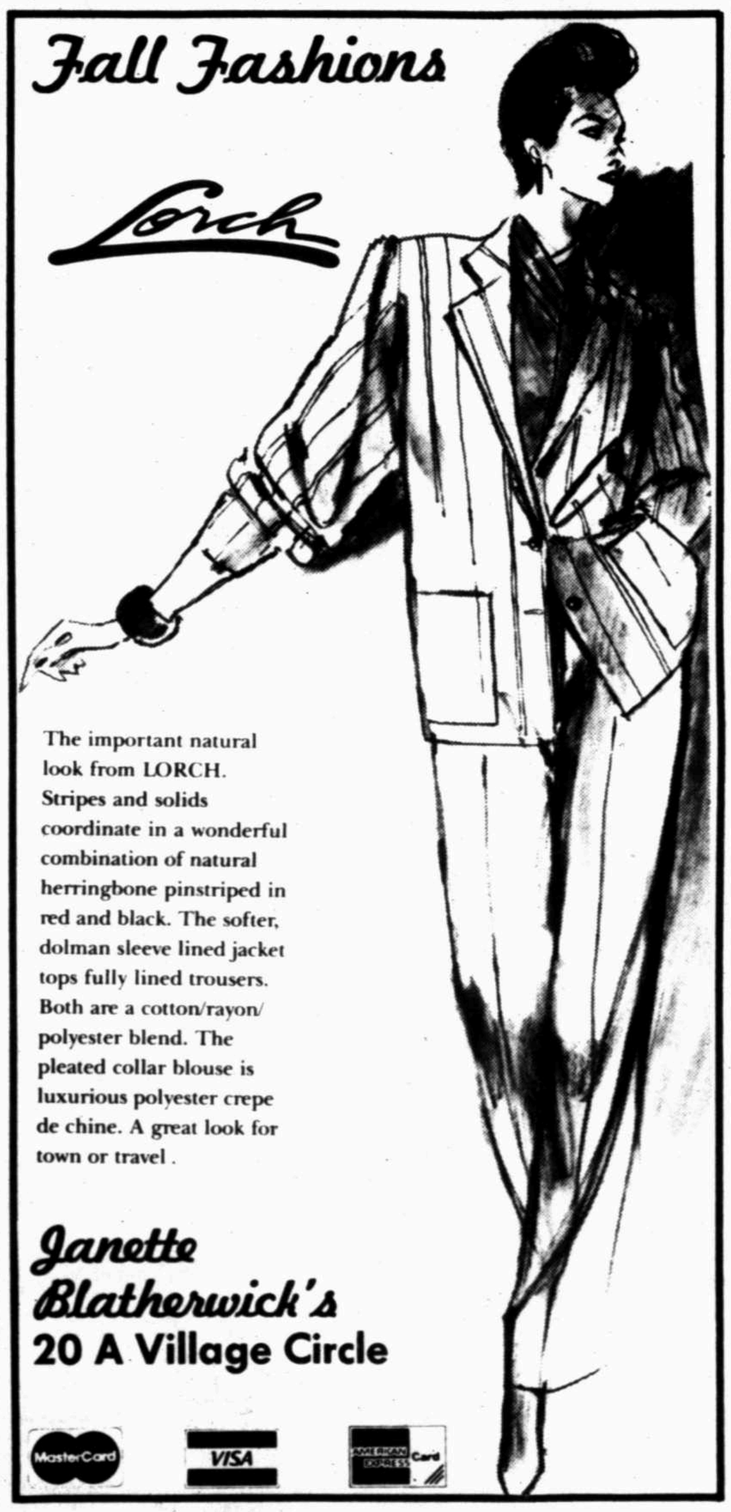

A silk scarf always dresses up a suit, Saldarini says. Just fold it into a triangle and tie loosely around your neck, ends in front to fill in the neckline. And, of course, you always can feel dressed for success in a classic silk scarf worn as a bow. It's a fashion basic for many women — just as men wear ties.

Saldarini's favorite new way to wear scarves is to twist a nubby, solid-color, oblong scarf and wind it around her head. She then tosses a coordinated print shawl over her shoulders for a flattering look.

Look for scarves and shawls that are luxurious and a bit flamboyant. Look for bright colors to heat up the fall palette of browns and blacks. Scarves and shawls will bring zest to a season of darks and neutrals and tailored styles. They're the perfect way to wrap up fashion. —CNS

Furs warm heart of winter

For a woman who wants to be well dressed, the ultimate is to be able to throw a fur over whatever else she might wear.

And because women are dressing up more and more today, furriers are delighted.

After all, who could be more dressed up than someone in a luxurious fur?

But if a person is considering taking the plunge into a plush fur, that person had better be ready to do it right.

R.J. Friedrich learned this maxim from his father, A.F. Friedrich, who founded Friedrich Furs in Chicago 70 years ago:

"If you can't afford to buy a good fur, don't buy one at all."

Even within those confines, the price range varies greatly.

A good casual fur will rank in a completely different price bracket than a good dressy fur.

The most popular fur at Friedrich's shop today is mink, including sable, Canadian fisher and chinchilla. Following closely in popularity are long-haired furs like lynx, fox, coyote and raccoon.

Popularly priced furs include muskrat, opossum, mink paw and beaver. Youthful customers seem to prefer curly lamb styled in jackets.

The full-length fur is still the favorite style, he said. But jackets have made a comeback — in all kinds of furs.

"The fur industry today uses furs basically from domestic farms," Friedrich said. "And we don't use furs from endangered species."

The fur business has gone through several changes in past years, he said. Originally, it was very personalized, with furs specially made for each customer.

Then came the option of buying furs right off the rack, and then of buying accessories from fur hats to hoods.

Cleaning, glazing and proper storage are essential for maintaining the sheen and luster of fur — regardless of the shape of the garment. Without such care, the fur would shed.

And, when a customer purchases a fur, he should consider insurance for it.

"It is a necessity today," Friedrich said. It may be purchased when the coat is, or it may be included with a home owner's policy as a special rider.

Besides the worth of the fur itself, the workmanship that goes into a fur coat establishes the value.

An average mink coat, for instance, easily could entail 7,000 to 7,500 cuts and seams, he said. If female pelts are used, it could mean more work because the pelts are smaller and more might be needed for a coat. —CNS

Leather can be investment

It takes skill and artistry to fashion leather and suede skins into wearing apparel. So such fashions are expensive. But considering the durability and fashion versatility of a basic leather jacket, it's a good investment.

"A leather blazer can go anywhere from a baseball game to a fine restaurant," said Anthony Monkiewicz, owner of a leather shop in Orange County, Calif. "And it can last forever if properly cared for."

"We regard leather and suede as the royal family of materials for body coverings," said D. Gordon Williams, president of Countess Mara, a producer of leather apparel. "Their soft, supple textures mold subtly to body shapes. They are wonderfully wearable and their 'breathing' qualities lend themselves to all types of weather."

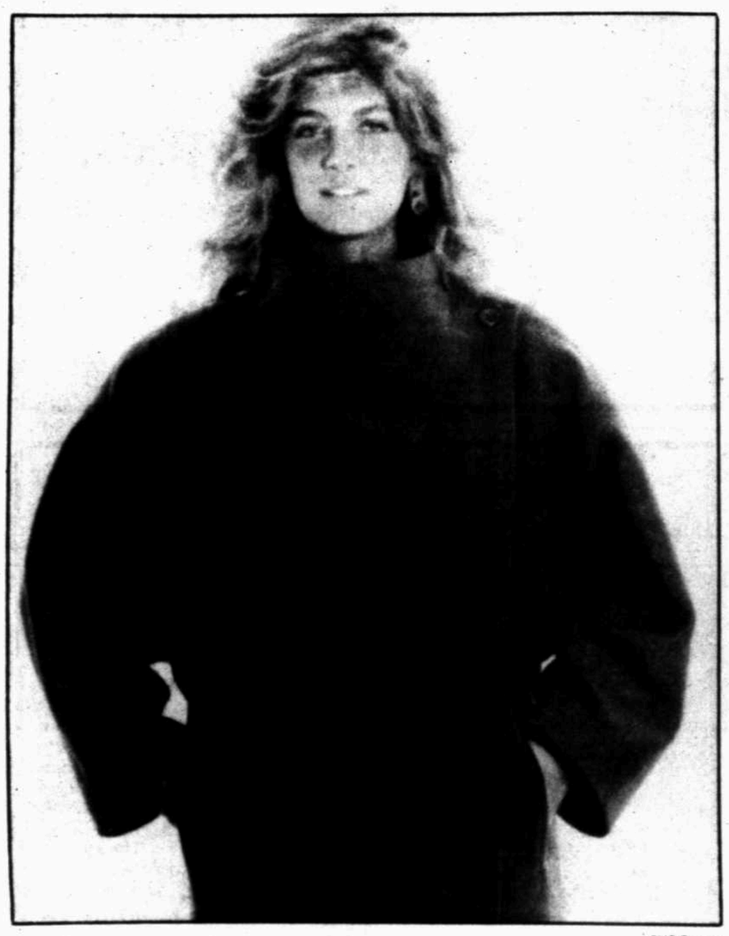

But according to Monkiewicz, you'll be disappointed if you expect your leather jacket to ward off harsh winter cold. Leather is porous and breathes, and lighter weight leathers are used for cool summer shorts. Thicker skins, however, can provide a good windbreak.

Most leather even can withstand a little rain, and weatherproofing treatments are available. If a leather coat does get wet, allow it to dry slowly at a moderate room temperature, Monkiewicz said.

Dirt can be removed from suede by brushing with a stiff wire suede brush. A soft art gum eraser also can help remove stubborn spots.

In damp climates, a grayish coating like mildew might appear on the garment. This is not serious, according to Williams. Simply spray the garment with an aerosol disinfectant spray and the mildew will disappear. This procedure should be used only on grain leather. On suede, use a soft brush to brush it off.

Williams also cautioned that leather garments should not be stored in closed bags or in closets where air cannot circulate easily. Leather needs to breathe, and if it doesn't, it will get hard and stiff. — CNS

Cloth coats make big hit

After seasons of down coats, fake and real furs, lined raincoats, jackets and vests, the cloth coat is making a comeback. At a recent Donna Moda showing of Italian fall/winter fashions in New York City, the exciting news was the "big coat."

Don't confuse today's cloth coat with yesterday's coat. The new version is a bold adaptation of classic menswear styles with loose sleeves, longer length and broad, rounded shoulders to give the comfort of a man's overcoat but a feminine look.

Making-do with last year's close-to-the-body style won't give you the fashion mileage you'll need. Fashions have grown bigger this season, incorporating padded shoulders, lots of layers and long, full sleeves. These dresses, suits and sweaters call for new proportions in outerwear — you'll need a big coat that fits easily over the shoulders and sleeves.

Trousers are fashionable, too, and look best with classic-style coats like the reefer, the bathrobe, the polo and the trench coat. This season's versions of these styles are oversize with bold details such as shoulder ornaments that sometimes droop almost to the elbow and wide, low back belts. Some coats even come with matching trousers, creating a new type of exaggerated suit.

Roomy enough to be worn over jackets, sweaters and multilayered sportswear, many big coats also are elegant enough to go over dressy

Just make sure that the one you choose is neutral enough to go over everything you own, but not so quiet that it disappears into the background. What you want in a coat, besides warmth and comfort, is pizzazz — a finishing touch to your clothes and not just a cover-up.

Look for cloth coats with surface texture — tweeds and twills — in shades of black, gray and brown. Also look for asymmetrical closings or collars and lapels that are big, bigger, biggest — some even trailing off into long scarves. Look for coats that swagger and boast. After all, your coat is the first thing people see. What's underneath is seen last.

Smith questions ethics of Gideon's lawyer

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith is questioning the ethics of lawyer Charles Tighe representing his adversary, Midland Police Chief Wayne Gideon, in a $4 million civil slander suit which the sheriff is bringing against the police chief.

A hearing to disqualify Tighe from the case was to be held at noon today before 118th State District Court Judge James W. Gregg of Big Spring in the Midland County Courthouse.

Smith, 41, is claiming that Gideon, 49, uttered slanderous remarks that Smith "physically abused and beat" his ex-wife, Gail Mabee Smith, that the people of Midland County "were not going to have a sheriff that beats his wife's ——," and that those "false" and reckless comments damaged Smith's reputation and led to his defeat in the Republican Party primary election last May 5.

Gary Painter, 37-year-old former sheriff's patrol lieutenant, beat out Smith by garnering 60.6 percent of the vote. Painter is to challenge Joe W. Carr, the Democratic Party nominee in the Nov. 6 general election, for the sheriff's job. Carr is a Midland Police Department detective.

Through his attorney, Thomas J. Sims of Houston, Smith is contending that Tighe "should respectfully decline" to represent Gideon since Tighe's law firm, Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson, was involved in Smith's 1982 divorce.

Smith and his wife, who were married in 1973 when she was a 20-year-old bank teller, were divorced in August 1982. She had filed for divorce in September 1981. The couple had three children.

Smith, sheriff since 1977, had hired Midland lawyer John Hyde to represent him in the divorce proceeding before 32nd State District Court Judge Weldon Kirk of Sweetwater. He also retained the Cotton, Bledsoe firm and had conferences with Allen D. Cummings and Robert C. Bledsoe "regarding the entirety of the divorce proceedingss," including "the relationship" between Smith and his wife and Smith's "overall financial situation."

Smith's motion to oust Tighe says the sheriff contacted Tighe, who declined to "voluntarily withdraw" his representation of Gideon.

Smith is claiming that Cotton, Bledsoe law firm is infringing on the Code of Professional Responsibility of the State Bar of Texas and should not represent Gideon in the slander suit.

Smith's lawyer, Sims, cites canons and ethical considerations which hold that a "lawyer should preserve the confidences and secrets of his client," "must always be sensitive to the rights and wishes of his client and act scrupulously in the making of decisions which may involve the disclosure of information obtained in his professional relationship," has the obligation "to preserve the confidences and secrets" of his client and "should avoid even the appearance of professional impropriety."

Smith's motion says there is the "potential for an overlapping of confidences and secrets" in the slander case.

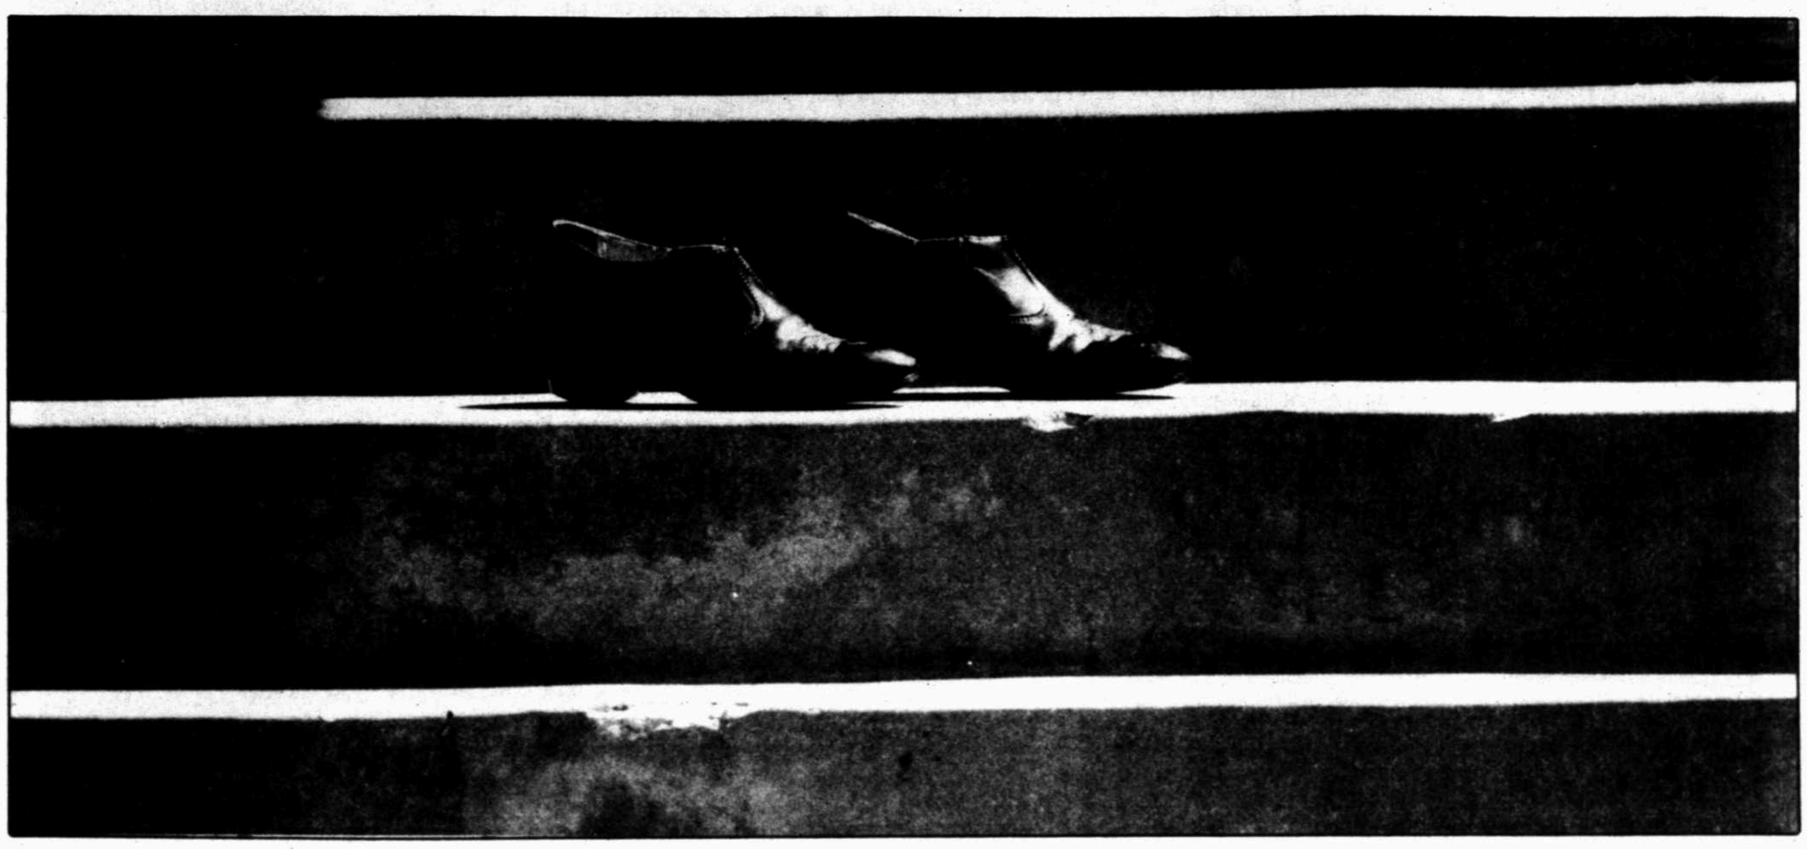

In his formal response to Smith's arguments, Tighe says "the courts have seen no need to fashion a rule that prevents an attorney from ever representing an interest adverse to that of a former client." At the same time, the courts "rigidly" enforce the "ethnical obligations of confidentiality."

Tighe says that Smith's motion to oust his law firm from the Smith-vs.-Gideon case "ignores" the firm's "limited involvement" in the representation of Smith and makes "absolutely no reference" to the fact that Hyde was Smith's attorney of record in the divorce proceeding and "misconstrues the issues" in the proceeding.

Cotton, Bledsoe's role in the divorce dealt with the "proper division of oil and gas properties" owned by Smith and his wife, Tighe says, and Smith's and his wife's marital relationship "was not even an issue" in the divorce proceeding.

Further, Tighe holds that his representation of Gideon does not infringe on the State Bar's ethics on confidentiality, that no impropriety has been proved, and that he is "left in the dark" as to Smith's contention that Tighe or Cotton, Bledsoe might be "a potential witness" in the slander suit.

The suit was filed in early July in Midland's 238th State District Court, but that district's presiding judge, Vann Culp, is removing himself from the case because of his acqaintances with the sheriff and the police chief.

Trial reveals sixth participant in shooting deaths

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A sixth participant and another car were involved in the June 23 shooting deaths of two southside teen-agers, according to the testimony Wednesday of an off-duty officer who observed part of the exchange.

As testimony began in the murder trial of Joe and David Mendoza, Rocky Couder of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission recalled the events leading up to the shooting of 19-year-old Ronald Don Lopez down the street from the Mendoza's home on Autumn Street in south Odessa.

Couder told jurors a third man who has not been charged or identified in previous reports threw a piece of cinderblock which struck Lopez in the face, struck the injured Lopez again while he was kneeling and finally held up the 19-year-old while the Mendozas fired on him from close range.

He also referred to another car that apparently was sitting near the Monte Carlo from which Lopez stepped when the slaying occurred. Under questioning by defense attorney Richard Abalos, Couder admitted seeing some smoke coming from the vehicle, but denied he saw a gun being fired from the mystery car.

Johnnie Moreno, 18, Odessa, also was shot to death in the ensuing action, but Couder did not recall seeing that shooting or the stabbing of a third man in Moreno's car, 15-year-old Jessie Hernandez.

Couder said he first noticed the Monte Carlo as it was driving next to a car Abalos said carried other Mendoza family members shortly before the gunplay began. He said Lopez threw a beer bottle which passed in front of the other car's windshield as the two cars approached the intersection of Autumn and Clements streets.

The driver of the Mendoza car motioned for Lopez, Moreno and Hernandez "to come on back," said Couder of the events preceding the killings. By the time he had turned around the car carrying his wife and two other family members, Couder said the Monte Carlo had stopped down Autumn Street from the Mendoza residence, while the third car, reportedly a Malibu or Nova, nearly struck Couder's car before passing in front of the home and coming to a pause behind the Monte Carlo.

Both Mendozas emerged from the home with pistols and began firing, said Couder, as Lopez tossed another beer bottle at the brothers. At this point, the mystery man came from between the houses and threw the rock which hit Lopez in the face, said the off-duty officer.

David Mendoza, 34, and Joe Mendoza, 27, fired about four shots each, said Couder, with the final rounds fired from behind the Monte Carlo directly at Lopez. While he did not testify that these shots struck Lopez, Couder said the 19-year-old's body jerked after the final firing.

When the Mendozas began heading back toward their home, Couder said he realized his family might be in danger and drove away. He returned shortly after calling police, according to his testimony.

Couder told District Attorney Mike Holmes he saw Lopez carrying no other weapon or make any aggressive move after throwing the bottle. But under cross-examination by Abalos, he admitted Lopez had a history of carrying a gun and had his shirt pulled out when the exchange occurred.

Abalos also suggested Lopez, Moreno and Hernandez participated in the beating of a younger Mendoza brother a few days before the shootings and that Lopez had a gun in that instance.

Pre-kindergarten to resemble Head Start

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

School for 4-year-olds.

It was one of the recommendations to come out of Ross Perot's Select Committee on Public Education and to be approved by the Legislature during its special session this summer. And more than one parent, mistakenly believing classes for 4-year-olds would be mandatory, called newspaper offices to protest what they considered to be an outrageous, even communistic, concept.

"Next it'll be 2- and 3-year-olds," one mother said.

Actually, the pre-kindergarten which is to begin operating next year will be little different from the Head Start and Migrant programs that have been offered in Midland for several years.

The main difference should be in numbers, according to Assistant Superintendent Dr. Duane Moore. Next year's pre-kindergarten will probably be expanded to include more than the 188 4-year-olds currently served.

While Head Start is offered to students from low-income families and the Migrant Program is mainly designed for children who speak little English, the newly-mandated pre-kindergarten will serve both types of students.

The idea behind all three programs, according to Moore, is to close the educational gap between disadvantaged children and others their age, so when they begin kindergarten all the students will be performing at approximately the same level.

But school officials could only speculate on how the three programs might be combined. A committee has been formed to consider options, but the state has yet to draw up pre-kindergarten guidelines.

"I would expect the programs to be on one campus and under one administrator," said Dr. John McAfee Sr., who oversees Bunche Early Childhood Center, where Migrant classes are, and DeZavala Annex, where Head Start is located.

Combining the three programs into one might seem to avoid duplication, but school officials say such integration is unlikely. Head Start and the Migrant Program are federally funded and monitored. Pre-kindergarten would be regulated by the state and will probably have different guidelines.

"We're really restricted as far as merging them because of the guidelines and restrictions of Head Start," Moore said.

Head Start, beginning its 19th year in Midland, was part of Lyndon B. Johnson's War on Poverty Act of 1965. It is funded to serve 155 students. Last year 75 were placed on a waiting list.

Income eligibility requirements are very strict, McAfee said. A two-parent, four-child family, for example, could earn no more than $13,680 to qualify. Income guidelines for pre-kindergarten are expected to be more lenient, perhaps similar to requirements for the free lunch program. Moore estimated another 300 students could be eligible.

Head Start currently is limited to students living in southeast Midland, but pre-kindergarten would encompass the entire school district.

While the staff numbers 22, more than 150 volunteers donated 1,000 hours of their time for Head Start last year. MISD funds a third of the cost by providing services, facilities and personnel. Transportation, supplies and meals are free to students.

Last year's budget totaled about $380,000, making the per-student cost nearly $2,500.

The nine-month program focuses more on self-concept than academics, McAfee explained. "We work on raising self-esteem, self-respect, personal things."

Activities include directed learning experiences (learning shapes, colors, sounds, etc.), learning center activities (such as music, art and woodworking) and group experiences (games, multi-cultural events and social interaction).

In the last weeks more attention is directed to pre-academic skills that will prepare children for entering kindergarten.

When government agents audited the program last year, McAfee said, "we were 100 percent in compliance with performance standards and cited as one of the outstanding programs in Texas."

The Migrant Program is almost identical to Head Start, he added, but is oriented more toward learning than improving self-image. It is set up to serve 33 students, but McAfee estimated more than 100 4-year-olds could qualify for pre-kindergarten next year on the basis of limited English.

Ammonia to be added to water Monday

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Ammonia will be added to city water Monday in an effort to reduce the level of trihalomethanes, deemed twice too high by the Texas Department of Health, but Midland residents on home dialysis machines and those with tropical fish should be the only ones who need to heed the difference.

Levels of trihalomethanes, formed in the chlorination process, were limited in 1979 when the Environmental Protection Agency determined concentrations above 100 parts per billion may increase health risks. Midland's level, established by an average of quarterly samplings taken by the TDH, is at 205 ppb, according to T. Brent Payne, assistant director of utilities for the city.

While the 100 ppb level is comparable to one second in 32 years, "the health department feels it's warranted to reduce the potential health risks," Payne said, emphasizing the possible risks are long-term.

"The health department has to look at not only the average person but they've got to look at the most susceptible person and that's probably part of the reason for the regulation," he said.

The city will switch from a chlorine disinfection system, responsible for reducing bacteria, typhoid fever and viruses, to a chloramine disinfectant, Payne said. Organic materials such as salt, decaying vegetables and leaves provide a carbon or methane that, when combined with chlorine in the water, tends to form trihalomethanes, he explained. Because of the salt beds in the area, the water provided from area lakes is high in trihalomethanes.

Political issues often get bogged down in personalities

I have never claimed to be a "political observer," for that implies watching the sometimes inane happenings called politics with keen interest.

I have other interests that are keener.

Now, I get immensely entertained, sometimes bored, sometimes enthralled, but always entertained by the rhetoric of politicians whether it's lackluster or dramatic or whether it's the great general, Dwight D. Eisenhower, or the great orator, Adlai E. Stevenson, talking.

Politics, closely akin to economics and to the issues of war and peace, probably should command our attention most religiously. It's the consuming interest of some folks; it's their vocation, avocation, hobby, pastime. It's a serious game of checkers, sometimes chess, in which the symbols of battle are real folks. To others, it's just a soap opera. They may get all excited about one scenario but will view it as a pulp-magazine gossip article and take it about as seriously.

The problems with politics is that issues often get bogged down in personalities. Now, personalities and issues are inseparable. And often from the standpoint of "the media," one becomes the other. That's the way it is: a treaty, for example, is only as good as its backers — by those who make and enforce it.

So, issues very much are linked to personalities.

Politics then demand personality and character. And selecting the right person for the job, any job inside or outside of politics, is so very crucial.

Everybody, well, mostly everybody, knows that.

Now, what could be more interesting than observing politicians in their proverbial glass houses.

Sex and food.

If you're a would-be womanizer and gourmet like me, you'll revel in girl watching and eating. And if you're a woman of the comparable ilk and fantasies, you'll delight in man-izing and partaking of foods and drinks that tantalize the palate. Let's not call it lust or love, gluttony or appreciation; we just don't want ethics to interfere with pleasure and the basics of life.

It's a delight in and out of politics. But after we're satiated, we really might delve into politics.

Ed Todd is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

Tower: Goldwater one of the 'truly great' men

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Sen. John Tower, introducing Sen. Barry Goldwater to the Republican National Convention, praised the Arizona senator Wednesday as the spark that ignited a generation of conservatives.

"We owe him so much," Tower said, describing his long-time friend and colleague as "one of the truly great men of our time."

Tower, who is retiring this year after 23 years in the Senate, seconded Goldwater's nomination for president at the 1964 Republican convention in San Francisco.

"At that time, I said, 'We can think better of ourselves because we belong to a society that produced Barry Goldwater.' I am even more deeply seized of that conviction today than I was then," Tower said in his introduction speech.

Referring to the title of a book Goldwater authored, Tower said, "With his 'Conscience of a Conservative,' with his tireless and eloquent advocacy, with his encouragement and inspiration, he galvanized a generation of young people into action and breathed new life and purpose into our party."

Although Goldwater lost the 1964 presidential election to Lyndon Johnson, whose Senate seat Tower won in 1961, Goldwater "fostered a movement that changed the political complexion of America — culminating in the election of Ronald Reagan to the presidency of the United States," Tower said.

The Texas senator said Goldwater's assets are many, and they have marked his service in government.

Longhorns, cowhands too tired to continue drive

DALLAS (AP) — The longhorn steers were just as happy in their makeshift corral in West Dallas as they would have been at home, but their human caretakers said they decided to forego a last night of sleeping in 80-degree heat by the Trinity River.

John Ball, one of the organizers of an effort to publicize the longhorn breed and give a thrill to visitors for the Republican National Convention, said Wednesday that the group would not hold a final cattle drive today.

"We got hot and we got tired," said Ball, who owns many of the 150 or so longhorns brought to Dallas for a week of cattle drives during the convention.

"Hey, the protesters didn't last but three days. We lasted six," Ball said.

The cattle and cowhands were camped just west of downtown and about a mile from "Tent City," where protesters were ensconced until most of them left on Monday.

The temperature at night has been in the 80s. It has soared well over 100 during the day, when the cowhands from several ranches around Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, drove the herd along the river for the benefit of curious onlookers and the news media.

Burglary of business nets more than $15,000 worth of tools, items

From Staff Reports

The burglary of a business Wednesday night netted more than $15,000 worth of tools and items.

Lee Williams of Lee's Auto Sales, 3407 W. Wall, told police a large tool box, containing assorted tools and weighing 150 pounds was missing along with a telephone and a briefcase containing car titles and business checks. Entry apparently was gained by breaking a restroom window on the north side sometime between 6:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. Car keys to seven vehicles also were reported missing but all cars were still on the lot, according to reports. Total loss was placed at $15,100.

In other complaints filed with police Wednesday, Gregory King of 102 S. Marshall, said a gold chain and a gold piece worth a total of $2,150 were taken from his home sometime in June. He noticed the items were missing after an acquaintance said she had bought the two pieces at a pawn shop.

Alice Corrales of 1708 S. Cuthbert said her home was burglarized between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. Wednesday. A bicycle, TV converter box and remote control, valued at a total of $430, were taken.

Police Round-up

Rinda White of All My Children Daycare Center, 707 S. Midkiff, reported the facility was burglarized and a $540 AM/FM receiver and speakers were taken sometime between 6 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Wednesday.

A 21-year-old Midland man injured in a two-vehicle accident early Saturday that claimed the life of another Midlander was listed in critical condition this morning in Odessa Medical Center Hospital's intensive care unit.

Kenneth Everett Baskett, who suffered two broken legs and a broken rib, was listed as stable Wednesday until his condition apparently worsened. He was injured in an accident on State Highway 191 about three miles west of Midland, when his vehicle, traveling east in a westbound lane, struck a car driven by Joseph Wesley Higgins, 24. Higgins was pronounced dead at the scene.

A Midland man who was listed in serious condition after suffering a gunshot wound to the abdomen early Tuesday morning has been moved out of intensive care and is listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning.

Robert Ray Hernandez, 26, of 1117 English Drive, told police he was shot at Hogan Park at about 2 a.m. Tuesday, but declined to press charges.

Autopsy provides description

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Partial results of an autopsy released on the body found inside a building in southeast Odessa Monday have provided police with a better description and a cause of death.

Results from the Institute of Forensic Science in Dallas show the dead man was an Anglo, 50-60 years of age, 5 feet, 8 inches tall and weighing about 160 pounds.

The unidentified man had brown hair graying around the edges and scars from a tracheotomy and stomach surgery. He had no teeth and showed no signs of having worn dentures.

Cause of death was listed as blunt forced trauma, meaning the man was killed by being struck in the head with a blunt object. Full results will be released later.

The body was found at about 5:30 p.m. Monday by officers called to the scene by a woman who noticed the body inside the building. The badly decomposed body had reportedly been there for several days.

WATER

Public notification of the addition of ammonia, which forms chloramine when mixed with chlorine, began in May. The news media, hospitals, county medical society and the public, through notices on water bills, were told of the changes and bids were advertised for storage tanks.

For $100 a month, the city is leasing an 8,000-water gallon tank that can hold 35,000 pounds of ammonia, Payne said. The ammonia will be fed as a gas although it is stored as a liquid under pressure. Lab personnel and operators will be sampling the water every two hours, making adjustments as needed.

Larger cities have already complied with the regulations and those that have installed the ammonia systems haven't noted any difference in taste, according to John Lowe, utitlities director. He said ammonia can harm those on kidney dialysis machines and tropical fish unless special filters are placed on equipment.

But one pet store manager said tropical fish can be safe with the addition of a chemical when changing tank water.

"Chlorine in the water kills fish anyway," said Ron Coughlin of Jerry's Perfect Pets. "When you start putting in chloramines, it's double trouble."

The average chlorine cure chemical used by tropical fish owners and filters will not protect the fish from the chloramines, he said. People should contact their pet stores and inquire about a special chlorine cure chemical, he recommended.

Calls to determine the procedure for filterization for kidney dialysis patients at Midland Memorial Hospital were not returned.

Researchers fed "massive doses" of chloroform, the predominant chemical which breaks down into trihalomethanes, to determine health risks in rats, Lowe said in May. "They were pushing those numbers pretty hard to get those figures. There's no zero risk — even when driving a car."

The regulations "were simply designed to limit some potential hazards over a person's lifetime and it makes sense, since we've got the technical ability to do it," Payne said.

TRIAL

Police reports indicate Johnnie Mendoza, 17, was beaten by a group including Lopez several days before the two teen-agers were gunned down. Lopez questioned the younger Mendoza about the family's involvement in gunfire into the Lopez home in late May that wounded Lopez's mother.

Upon his return, Couder recalled finding Hernandez standing next to the Monte Carlo bleeding from a stab wound and Moreno lying wounded in a nearby yard.

The TABC officer admitted there was no way for him to know whether shots were fired from the Monte Carlo or the mystery car before he turned his car around and watched the Mendozas firing at Lopez. He said the mystery car did come to a virtual stop in front of the Mendoza residence, before moving up next to the Monte Carlo.

He offered no hint as to the identity of the man who tossed the cinderblock other than to recall the man had been wearing a black T-shirt.

Lopez had promised to quit carrying a gun during weekly meetings held between the law enforcement officials and the warring families, said Couder.

An Odessa policewoman testified that about 150 people had gathered in the block near the scene by the time she and other on-duty officers arrived. She said there were several beer bottles inside the car when she investigated.

The Mendozas, who are free on bond, face maximums of life in prison and a $10,000 fine if convicted of the murders.

Jurors were kept separated from the trial audience during recesses, apparently so they would not be aware of a metal detector stationed at the single entrance to the courtroom.

Couder was still on the stand when 70th District Court Judge Gene adjourned proceedings Wednesday at 5 p.m. Testimony was scheduled to resume at 9 a.m. today.

DEATHS

Lewis Downing

ANDREWS — Services for Lewis Carter Downing, 86, of Andrews were to be today at 2:30 p.m. at Means Memorial United Methodist Church in Andrews with the Revs. Milton Jochetz ad Keith Wiseman officiating. Burial was to be in Andrews Cemetery under the direction of Singleton Funeral Home.

Downing died Tuesday in an Andrews hospital after a lengthy illness.

He was born Nov. 17, 1897, in Hunt County. He married Loyle Anice Moxley July 25, 1923. She died Jan. 31, 1982.

He was a veteran of World War I and a member of Means Memorial United Mthodist Church and United Methodist Men.

Survivors include a son, J.L. Downing of Andrews; a daughter, Louise Harmon of Fort Worth; a brother, Charlie Downing of Quinlin; two sisters, Dixie Johnson of Kernes and Mable Williams of Winters; seven grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

Frank Stewart

ALPHARETTA, Ga. — Services for Frank E. Stewart, 77, formerly of Midland, are to be Friday at 10 a.m. in the Louie Jones Funeral Home in Alpharetta, with Pastor Curtis Morton officiating. Interment is to follow in Roswell, Ga., at the Greenlawn Cemetery.

He was an accountant for Thomason Construction in Midland. Stewart's wife, Ida, taught in the Midland public school system for 20 years.

Survivors include his wife; three brothers, Vernon E. Stewart, Midland, Clarence E. Stewart, Brookhaven, Miss., and Wilbur E. Stewart, Ruston, La; one daughter, Janis Stebbins, Alpharetta; one son, Connally Stewart, Ventura, Ca., and five grandchildren.

Ruby Schooler

Mrs. Ruby L. Schooler, 77, of Midland, died Wednesday afternoon in a local hospital.

Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in the Ellis chapel. Burial wil be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Ms. Schooler was born Dec. 10, 1906 in Ben Hur, Limestone County. Her early life was spent in Fort Worth, where she met and married the late Fred T. Schooler. He died in 1982. They moved to Midland in 1946, then to Houston in 1962 where they lived until 1981 when they returned to Midland.

Survivors include a daughter, Dorothy Jean Cramer of Green River, Wyoming; a brother, John T. Lewallen of Atlanta; a sister, Mrs. Corinne Van Kleek of Rontonda West, Florida; and three grandchildren.

The family suggests memorials be directed to the Building Fund of Tennessee & A Street Church of Christ.

John A. Burgess

BIG SPRING — Services for John A. Burgess, 51, of Big Spring, will be Friday at 10 a.m. in the First Christian Church with burial in Trinity Memorial Park directed by Nalley-Pickle and Welch Funeral Home.

Burgess died Wednesday in a Big Spring hospital.

He was a deacon at the First Christian Church, worked as an attorney and was a resident of Big Spring since 1959.

SCHOOL

School officials fear the most difficult aspect of setting up a pre-kindergarten next year will be finding certified teachers. Although requirements are still unclear, it appears the classes will have to be taught by teachers who are certified in both early childhood education and bilingual education. Midland apparently has no teachers with both types of certification, Moore said.

Such teachers are rare now, he said, and will be even more in demand next year when school districts across the state establish or expand pre-school programs.

Financing will be another concern, he continued. Although the state is mandating pre-kindergarten, it is not increasing funding to Midland schools. The cost will have to come from local revenues.

Seminole man dies in car rollover

From Staff Reports

A Seminole well service employee was killed in a one-vehicle rollover on U.S. 62, about 13 miles west of Seminole in Gaines County early this morning.

Juan Jose Gonzales, 33, was pronounced dead at the scene at 3:20 a.m. by Gaines County Justice of the Peace Mary Parrott, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Reports indicate Gonzales was eastbound on U.S. 62 at a high rate of speed, passed two vehicles and ran off the road to the right. He overcorrected, rolling his 1981 Mercury two-and-a-half times. He was thrown from the vehicle.

His body was taken to Singleton Funeral Home.

Farmers should sign up for crop insurance

Kiker

Farmers interested in signing up for federal crop insurance on their 1985 wheat, oats and barley have until August 31 to do so. This applies to farmers not previously enrolled in federal crop insurance.

Producers who insured their crops last year will automatically have their contracts renewed unless they were cancelled or terminated. However, if such producers want to change their level of coverage or price election, they need to do so by the same deadline.

Crop insurance is designed to take some of the risk out of farming. It is an alternative strategy for managing yield or production shortfalls. In a sense, crop insurance protects the money that it takes to make money.

When a producer applies for crop insurance, he must specify the level of coverage (50, 65 or 75 pecent) and the price. Price options include $1.75, $2 and $2.40 per bushel for barley; $1, $1.25 and $1.50 per bushel for oats; and $2.50, $3.25 and $3.75 per bushel for wheat. The higher the coverage and price levels selected, the higher the premium.

For the insurance to be effective, a producer must plant his crop prior to the county's final planting date. He also must file an acreage report with the insurance agent by the acreage reporting date. This report provides a portion of the information needed for the summary of protection — number of acres insured, total bushel guarantee and net premium.

While most small grain growers have already done most of their planning regarding their 1985 crop, they may not have given careful consideration to risk management. There's still time to do this, including taking a close look at crop insurance.

Auburn forms global network

UNITED NATIONS (AP) -- Auburn University is setting up a global information network to help promote fish farming as a response to the Third World's growing need for cheap sources of protein.

Auburn President James E. Martin today planned to announce at U.N. headquarters the formation of the International Aquacultural Network, linking scientists from 70 nations in what the university described as "a cooperative effort to combat world hunger."

Satellite and telex hookups will give the scientists quick access to information on fish production and aquacultural research, according to the Alabama university.

Auburn is marking the 50th anniversary of its research into fish breeding in warm-water, inland ponds. The new network will be part of Auburn's International Center for Aquaculture, founded in 1970.

The center works with the U.S. Agency for International Development, CARE, the Peace Corps and various private organization on projects in more than 70 countries in Latin America, Asia and Africa.

Initially, the network will function with Auburn alumni, but expansion plans call for the inclusion of outside administrators, scientists, teachers and staff workers in developing countries.

Auburn officials see aquaculture as an answer to nutritional problems linked to population pressures and the diminishing per capita supply of increasingly costly wild fish.

Dr. E. Wayne Shell, director of Auburn's aquacultural center, said the fish catch from the oceans would have to increase 500 percent over the next 16 years to keep up with expected world demand.

Through the farm-style raising of fish in ponds, he believes, production can be tailored to demand.

This is one big turkey

The male wild turkey, America's largest game bird, sometimes reaches weights approaching 30 pounds, though commonly averaging 20 pounds or less. The female, much smaller, averages about 10 pounds.

Congressional study says farm program obsolete

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. farm policy should be changed so that large-scale commodity support programs are scrapped in favor of aid to individual farmers, says a report from the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

The report concludes that the present farm program has grown too costly to support.

"There may be substantial social and economic benefits of a 'smaller farm policy' which is more farmer-oriented and less volume- and commodity-based," the report said.

Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, chairman of the committee, said farm programs have cost an estimated $50 billion during the past four years and could cost that much during the next four.

"A potential $100 billion in eight years. Never has so much done so little," Jepsen said.

The report concluded that eliminating support programs could jeopardize some 900,000 family farmers but that current market manipulation policies, exemplified by the payment-in-kind program of 1983, are ineffective.

"These farmers will suffer greatly if the public's current disenchantment with farm programs results in less federal assistance," the report said. "Large, successful farms merely will be denied the windfall to which they currently are entitled."

The $9.7 billion PIK program paid farmers not to plant by reimbursing them with surplus grain instead of cash.

The Reagan administration has been critical of many federal farm programs and has urged a more flexible, market-oriented approach to price supports. But the administration is not expected to make specific recommendations for revisions before the November elections.

Commodity price support programs have bolstered farm income by 25 to 40 percent in the past, the report said, but "the job simply has become too big and too unmanageable."

In 1973, agriculture's best year on record, the report said, 39 percent of the nation's farmers suffered losses. The 1982 farm program cost an estimated $12 billion, triple the previous year.

The committee listed the major options suggested by witnesses at 30 hearings conducted during the past three years. The suggestions ranged from a "free agriculture market" with no government programs to a "benevolent monopolist" — the federal government — delegating production and marketing quotas.

Plastic wraps pull through test

By LINDA ANDERSON

There are a few "modern kitchen conveniences" I consider necessities. Aside from the obvious ones like a working refrigerator, freezer and range, I'm absolutely lost without my paper towels (used for almost every clean-up job in the house, from washing little faces to washing the car), my can opener and my non-stick skillet.

But perhaps the most necessary of these conveniences (in my house, anyway) is plastic food wrap. I sink into a mild panic during the school year if I run out of plastic wrap before I finish packing school lunches.

Several manufacturers market plastic food wrap, but the most well-known one is Saran Wrap. Many people use the product's name as synonymous with the term "plastic food wrap."

However, another company famous for its food wrap — Reynolds Wrap — has recently begun marketing plastic wrap, in addition to its long-established and successful aluminum foil.

We decided to test Saran Wrap, Reynolds Plastic Wrap and Handi-Wrap II (another popular brand) for price, strength and advertising accuracy. All the tests were performed at home using ordinary objects.

Advertising for plastic food wrap always seems to emphasize the product's "cling," or how tightly it keeps food covered and air out. To test this cling for all three plastic wraps, about 1/2 cup water was placed in a bowl, the bowl was covered tightly with the wraps, and the water-filled-plastic-covered bowl was then turned upside-down. (This test was done twice with each plastic wrap to make sure of the results.)

No doubt about it — the Saran Wrap did cling best, followed closely by the Reynolds Plastic Wrap. The Handi-Wrap II, even though label advertising claims it has "cling plus," didn't.

One of the worst aspects of plastic food wrap is its tendency to stick to itself. To test for this problem in the three wraps, we did the simple test of wadding up a sheet of each wrap and then un-wadded them. This time the Handi-Wrap II came through like a champ. Saran Wrap and Reynolds Plastic Wrap were more difficult to untangle.

However, the flip side of this test is the wraps which are hardest to untangle are also those which cling to food and containers best.

We also tested the three wraps for re-wrap ability. All three products wrap food — sandwiches were used in this test — very well. But when the sandwiches were unwrapped and re-wrapped with the same pieces of plastic, the results were different. In re-wrapping, Saran Wrap again was winner. Reynolds Plastic Wrap did a fair job of re-wrapping, but Handi-Wrap II did not. Apparently the "cling" in a plastic food wrap is lessened after it has been used once.

Prices of the three wraps varied also. Saran Wrap cost $1.19 for a 50-foot roll. Price of Reynolds Plastic Wrap was $1.25 for a 50-foot-long roll. But the Handi-Wrap II was 99 cents for a roll 125-feet long. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

For economy of price, the Handi-Wrap II was winner by far, and for those of us who use a lot of plastic wrap this brand can do an adequate job. But for those who need super-cling or re-wrap ability, Saran Wrap or Reynolds Plastic Wrap beat Handi-Wrap II by a roll.

BETTER BUSINESS

Magazines may lack police ties

By LINDA TRUITT

Some Midlanders recently may have noticed a sticker resembling a sheriff's badge or other law enforcement emblem stuck to a window or door of a store or business office.

Upon closer examination, they may have noticed an official-sounding name similar to "Peace Officers Quarterly" or "Law Enforcement News."

While the emblem may give the impression the business is supporting law enforcement, in most cases the emblem's only value is to identify advertisers in the magazine.

Independent magazines which trade on the police name are continually soliciting advertising from local businesses. At one time, independent operators rarely attempted to publish or distribute any semblence of a magazine. Today the magazines are often adorned with articles on drug abuse, women in law enforcement, rights of police officers and the like. Circulation may be miniscule, perhaps only to the sponsors and advertisers, but at least the publications usually exist.

Many inquiries and complaints have been received recently by the Better Business Bureau concerning independent law enforcement magazines.

Those businesses solicited on the telephone often complain they are led to believe the magazine is associated with a law enforcement agency and the donation will be supporting law enforcement.

It is not until they receive an invoice that it is discovered they are placing an ad in a magazine published by a profit-making organization which is not affiliated with any law enforcement agency.

Other businesses have complained they received unauthorized invoices for advertising. The invoice will often imply the business previously bought advertising in the magazine and someone authorized future advertising. Those sending the unauthorized invoices hope the bookkeeper will not question the bill and pay the amount asked for.

For those businesses contacted by a salesperson soliciting for a law enforcement magazine the BBB suggests:

— These solicitations should be evaluated as purchases of advertising and not donations.

— Demand written proof of how and to whom the publication has been distributed before paying for the ad.

— Before advertising in a publicaion of this nature, make sure a copy of the ad to be published will be provided before paying for the ad.

For a report on a specific law enforcement publication or any other company, call the BBB at 563-1880.

DEAR ABBY

Lonely trucker offered advice

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A few words to "Lonely in Dallas," the 30-year-old truck driver who wants a wife:

Supposing you do get married. Your wife will go along with you for maybe two years, then a baby comes along, and guess who is sitting home alone for two or three months waiting for you to come off the road? Only now she has the responsibility of running a home and raising a child because you can't do it over the telephone.

Her social life is almost non-existent because it's easier to stay home alone than to be lonely at a party.

You miss out on all the joys of fatherhood because you're not there when the baby takes his first step, says his first word, etc. Meanwhile your wife sleeps alone in a big double bed for two and three months at a time, and envies her friends whose husbands come home from work every night.

And what are you going to do for sex while you're away from home? And what is your wife supposed to do?

When your son is 4, he will feel abandoned because his daddy is never home to take him to the beach, ball games, etc.

My advice to you is get off the road if you want a wife and family. I should know. I've been married to a long-distance trucker for 14 years. Sign me ... LONELY IN NEW YORK

DEAR LONELY: A writer from Michigan offers a surprising solution for "Lonely in Dallas." Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing concerning the truck driver who wants a girlfriend. I understand his problem.

I'm a lady truck driver, and it's true that most companies will not let their drivers take an unauthorized passenger in the truck.

"Lonely in Dallas" simply needs to find a woman co-driver. There are a lot more women drivers now than people imagine. Single truckers like having a woman co-driver because it solves problems like the one "Lonely in Dallas" has. — LADY TRUCKER FROM MICHIGAN

How many AP preseason No. 1 picks since the poll began in 1938 have finished the season No. 1?

Wednesday's answer:
The catcher in Johnny Vander Meer's consecutive no-hitters in 1938 for the Cincinnati Reds was Ernie Lombardi.

Baltimore gets USFL Stars

CHICAGO (AP) — United States Football League owners voted Wednesday to conduct one final season of spring football in 1985, but will shift to the fall in 1986 in direct competition with the older, more established National Football League, USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons said.

"I think they (the NFL) really hoped we'd stay in the spring and slowly drip away," said Simmons. The decision, he added, reflected a great "amount of belief in this product, a belief in this league."

After the announcement, Myles Tanenbaum, owner of the league-champion Philadelphia Stars, said he would move his franchise to Baltimore in 1986 rather than compete against the NFL's Eagles and baseball's Philadelphia Phillies for use of Veterans Stadium.

"Personally, I'm distressed to say goodbye to the fans who gave their hearts to this team," said Tanenbaum one of six of the original 12 USFL owners. "It's the wrong thing to do."

Tanenbaum said he would retain ownership of the team, adding he already had conducted "extensive discussions" with Baltimore city officials about a move. The NFL Colts, who played in Baltimore for 30 years, moved to Indianapolis this spring.

Philadelphia was one of several cities where scheduling fall games conflicts with an NFL or professional baseball team, presenting clear problems of survival to USFL franchises.

Donald Trump, owner of the New Jersey Generals and one of the league's strongest advocates of a fall season, conceded the USFL likely will shrink, "possibly to 14 teams in the very near future."

But he insisted such an alignment would be stronger, and said he was confident the USFL could hold its own against the NFL in any competitive market by the 1986 season.

Three USFL teams — Los Angeles, Washington and Chicago — ran into serious financial problems last season and several others are said to be facing a cash crunch. Discussions on any mergers are set for the second day of league meetings Thursday, said Simmons.

The USFL began in 1983 with 12 teams and expanded to 18 for 1984. But failing franchises have prompted rumors of mergers, the most prominent being the consolidation of the Oklahoma and Oakland franchises.

Asked whether some teams might leave the league as a result either of financial problems or the risk of opposing the NFL, Simmons replied. "As far as I'm concerned, they're all in the league right now."

Also left in doubt after Wednesday's announcement was the fate of the league's television deal with ABC. That network carried USFL games in both of the league's first two seasons, but retains broadcast rights only from the months of January through July

Jim Spence, senior vice president of ABC-Sports, said Wednesday: "Clearly our agreement calls for spring football in '85 and '86. They are obligated to deliver games to us in the spring of those years."

Franco waiting for call

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Franco Harris, who can't break the National Football League's rushing record unless he gets a football job, sat by his telephone again Wednesday, hoping for a call some team executives speculate may never come.

"Unfortunately, it could be the end for Franco," said Dick Steinberg, player personnel director of the New England Patriots.

Harris, after boycotting training camp for a month, was released Monday by the Pittsburgh Steelers after turning down a one-year contract offer that would have paid him nearly $600,000 this season.

Harris went unclaimed Tuesday by the rest of the National Football League's 27 teams and now is a free agent, free to negotiate with any team in pro football.

Harris' eight 1,000-yard seasons are an NFL record and he gained 1,007 yards only last season, but some NFL team executives wonder if there is a market for a 34-year-old back with questionable speed.

"Our interest in him is absolutely none," said Bill Davis, player personnel director of the Cleveland Browns. "I don't see any other teams being interested in him, either."

"To me, if the Steelers can't sign him, how can we?" said George Young, general manager of the New York Giants.

"He's been a great player, a wonderful player," Young said. "He's going to the Hall of Fame. It saddens me to see it occur this way."

There has been speculation — even among some Steelers' players — that the Steelers would reopen negotiations by making Harris a new, less-lucrative offer.

But Bart Beier, the Pittsburgh attorney who became Harris' agent several months ago, doubts the Steelers will negotiate again with the fullback who gained 11,950 yards for them in 12 seasons.

"Dan Rooney told us Monday that his decision was irrevocable," Beier said.

There were rumors Tuesday night that the Atlanta Falcons might be interested because of an injury suffered by star back William Andrews, but Falcons General Manager Tom Braatz said he is satisfied with his backups.

"You're talking about a big-money guy with a minimum amount of future," said Philadelphia Eagles personnel director Lynn Stiles. "The season is starting. He might not fit into the scheme of a new team. The Steelers do things differently. They run a lot of traps and things for him that other teams don't do.

"Because of the dollars involved, teams won't take him unless they're in a disastrous situation," Stiles said.

After Harris cleared waivers, Beier contacted the Montreal Concordes of the Canadian Football League, but coach-general manager Joe Galat said Harris' salary is too high for the Canadian Football League.

"One hundred thousand dollars would be a very big salary in the CFL these days. Franco would want a lot more," Galat said.

"These ballplayers have really priced themselves out of the market," said Cleveland Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano. "To be honest, I think Franco has priced himself out of the market. He's a great ballplayer, but the boat has sailed away from us. And Harris isn't exactly a spring chicken."

Raiders ready for SWC glory

LUBBOCK (AP) — With uncommon size, speed and experience, Texas Tech's Red Raiders loom as a time bomb in the Southwest Conference football chase this season and might make coach Jerry Moore's fourth year on the South Plains a memorable one.

"It looks like a wide open race," said Moore in assessing the 1984 prospects for his Raiders and their SWC opponents.

"I think the conference has a chance to be more balanced than it's been in some time," he said. "Somebody could run away with it but I don't see that right now."

Moore's most impressive off-season acquisition was a veteran coaching staff but he also has a team with more size, speed, talent and depth that at any time since his arrival in 1981.

The squad includes 27 seniors, giving it a new dimension in experience.

"We're going to be better this year, but so are most of the other conference teams," he said. "Just how much we've improved, only time is going to tell."

Moore said a few victories early on would enhance the team's confidence level and could propel the Red Raiders into the thick of the race.

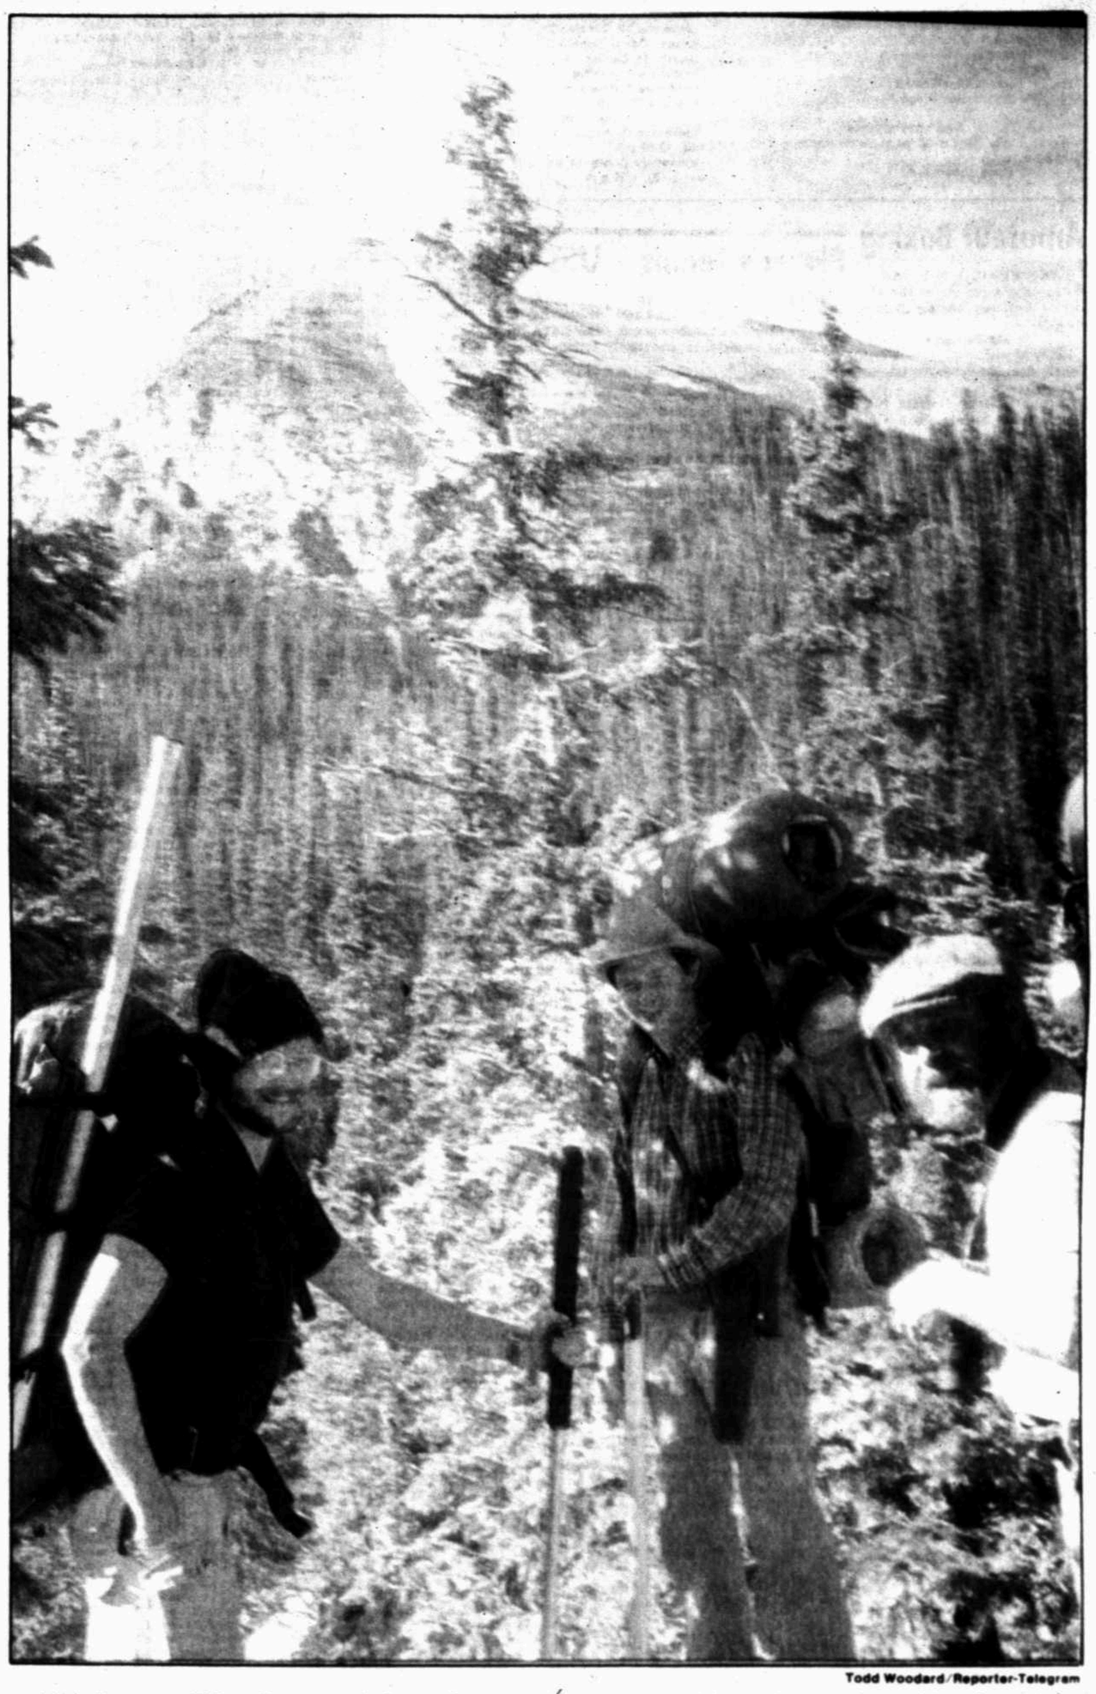

The Raiders open at home against UT-Arlington, travel to Albuquerque to meet New Mexico and then entertain Baylor in the SWC opener.

"Realistically, we've got a chance to get off to a good start, but you never know," Moore said. "That's how it looked last year, too."

Tech unexpectedly dropped three non-conference games to Air Force, New Mexico and Tulsa and despite a fast start in SWC action limped to a 3-7-1 season.

Moore felt his kicking game cost the Raiders two or three more victories but he predicts that place kicker Ricky Gann and punter Dennis Vance will have a spectacular year.

Mustangs go with youth

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

ANDREWS— There are a lot of schools that would take 6-3-1 records every year and rarely, if ever, complain.

But in Andrews, that very mark in 1983 was an extreme disappointment. The Mustangs stumbled in mid-season en route to a fifth place finish in the highly competitive District 2-AAAA.

And the 1984 edition of the Mustangs are attempting to replace a passel of seniors, 24 in all. "Only ten returning lettermen are back," laments Andrews coach David Visentine.

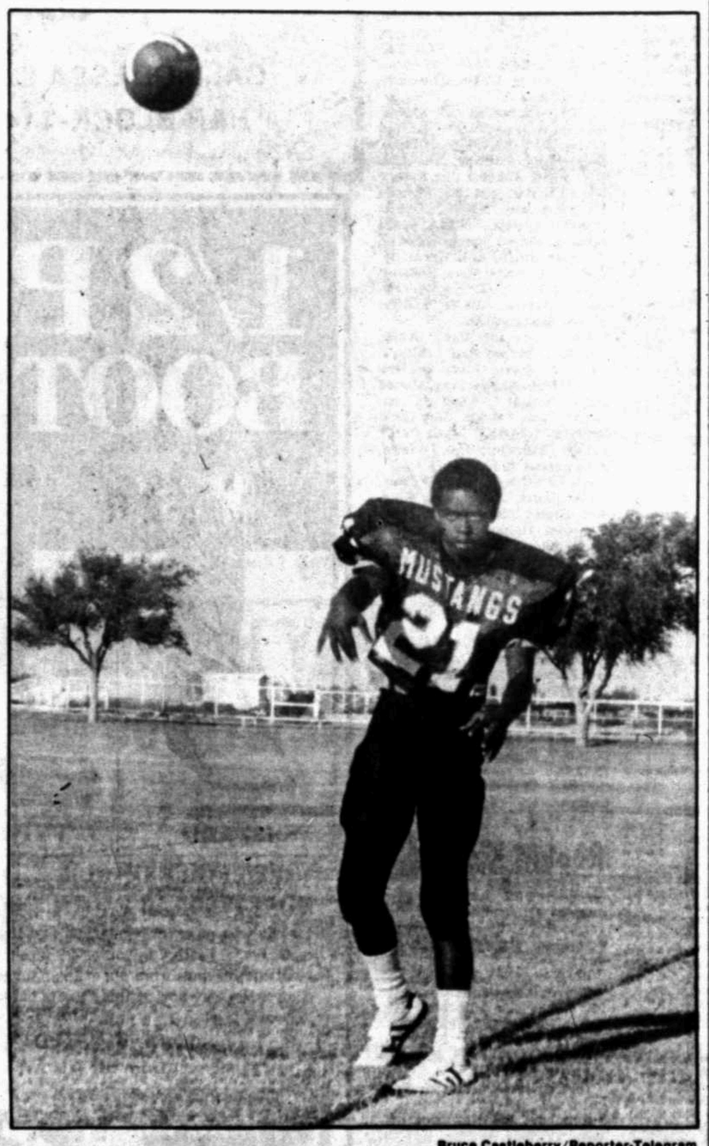

As a result, the Mustangs are undergoing a sort of youth movement. About half the 30-man squad will be underclassmen. "We're looking at four or five sophomores as possible starters."

One of the leading sophomore candidates for playing time is Louis Clay. Clay and junior Danny Neighbors are locked in a struggle for the quarterback position vacated by graduated Bill Morrison. Morrison was good enough at the option to wind up among the 2-4A rushing leaders, and his absence creates a void at quarterback.

Clay is a 5-6, 125-lb. burner that has shown flashes of leadership running Visentine's option attack. Neighbors saw lots of duty last year as a punter and general duties kicker as well as defensively.

Neither has established a solid claim to the job, but Visentine favors running offenses. "We're going to try and throw more this year and we've worked on that," he said. "But the guy that calls the plays has got to be willing to call a pass every now and then and that guy's me.

Gators whip Cubs; take pennant

Associated Press

Steve Johnson doubled home the winning run in the eighth inning as the Beaumont Golden Gators edged the Midland Cubs, 1-0, and earned the right to represent the Texas League West in the league championship series.

The victory clinched the second half title for Beaumont. Since they also won the first half title, they will automatically advance to the championship series. The Jackson Mets, who also won the first half title in the Texas League East, are leading Tulsa by 7½ games as the regular season winds down. If the Mets win the second half title, they would face Beaumont in a seven-game series since there would be no need for any division championship games.

Elsewhere around the Texas League Wednesday night, Tulsa blanked Arkansas, 3-0, Shreveport beat Jackson, 4-1, in 10 innings and San Antonio blasted El Paso, 16-5.

The Beaumont-Midland game was scoreless until the eighth inning when Steve Murray walked, advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by Bill Wrona and scored on the two-out double by Johnson.

Mike Barba, pitching in relief, was the winning pitcher. He is 3-1. Larry Hrynko, 2-7, was the loser.

Johnson was 2-for-4 for Beaumont. Gary Varsho was 2-for-4 for Midland.

Bobby Brower scored two runs as the Tulsa Drillers blanked the Arkansas Travelers, 3-0.

Brower tripled in the fourth inning and scored on a groundout by Oscar Mejia to give the Drillers a 1-0 lead. She scored again in the sixth when he walked, stole second, moved to third on a throwing error and came on Mejia's single.

The final run came in the seventh after Randy Asadoor doubled and scored on a double by Bob Gergen.

The winning pitcher was Rob Clark, 2-0. The loser was Matt Kinzer, 4-6.

Shreveport pitcher Bobby Moore slugged a two-run double in the top of the 10th inning Wednesday night to lift the Captains to a 4-1 victory over the Jackson Mets.

Steve Springler singled in the first inning and scored Jackson's only run on a double by Billy Beane.

Shreveport tied the score, 1-1, in the second when Glenn Jones singled and came home on a hit by Orlando Blackwell.

The game went into extra innings tied at 1-1.

Everett Graham lead off the 10th inning for Shreveport with a double. With one out, Matt Nokes singled Graham in for the game winning RBI. Jones, who was up next, grounded out, but Nokes advanced to second.

Jackson pitcher Joe Graves then intentionally walked Bob O'Connor to set up a forceout. But Moore, up next, hit the two-run double to ice the victory for Shreveport.

Texas League

Moore is now 7-5. Graves, 9-9, was the loser.

The El Paso Diablos had a 5-2 lead over the San Antonio Dodgers as the seventh inning got under way and the bottom fell out.

The Dodgers scored seven runs in the seventh inning and seven in the eighth inning to take a 16-5 victory.

Dan Cataline highlighted the seven-run outburst in the seventh inning with a three-run homer and joined teammates Larry See and Ralph Bryant as they slugged consecutive homers in the seven-run outburst in the eighth inning. See started the eighth inning scoring binge with a three-run homer and Cataline and Bryant followed with consecutive solo shots.

Jose Torres, 1-0, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Dana Plesac, 2-2.

Ryan mows down Cubs 8-3 with dozen strikeouts

AP Laserphoto

Associated Press

Jose Cruz's grand slam capped a seven-run second inning Wednesday and Nolan Ryan hurled a five-hitter as the Houston Astros took an 8-3 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

Ryan, working with the benefit of Wrigley Field shadows, struck out his season high of 12 batters, the 155th time in his career he has struck out 10 or more batters in a game.

The Astros snapped the Cubs' four-game winning streak. The Cubs snapped the Astros nine-game winning streak Monday.

"Probably the best stuff I've had all year," said Ryan of his pitches. He conceded that the 3:05 starting time, causing lengthening shadows throughout the game, gave the batters difficulty. The fact that Ryan was clocked at 99 mph didn't help.

"I've been clocked at 99 on that gun before," Ryan said. "It was my best stuff. My fastball, my curve and my change were all there, although I didn't use my change too much."

"Starting in the seventh inning, the shadows affected everybody," said Ryan, 11-7. His 12 strikeouts gave him a career total of 3,841, three behind all-time leader Steve Carlton of Philadelphia.

Phil Garner hit his fourth homer off loser Dick Ruthven, 3-9, with one out to start the big second inning. Mark Bailey walked and Craig Reynolds singled before Ryan grounded out.

Bill Doran singled to drive in two runs and after Terry Puhl doubled, Denny Walling was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Cruz cleared them with his ninth homer of the season and third career grand slam.

The Cubs had scored a run in the first on a walk to Ryne Sandberg and a double by Gary Matthews. They added another in the third on a walk, a double by Sandberg and an infield out by Matthews.

Ryan retired 12 consecutive batters until Ron Cey singled with one out in the seventh. Cey went to second on a passed ball, to third on a single by Larry Bowa and scored on an infield single by pinch-hitter Thad Bosley.

Baseball Roundup

In other National League games, pinch-hitter Johnnie LeMaster broke an eighth-inning tie with a two-out infield single that helped the San Francisco Giants to a 7-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Mark Davis, 4-15, pitched two scoreless relief innings and earned the victory. He broke a personal nine-game losing streak, the longest in the majors this year. Davis had not won since June 14.

Dan Driessen and Tim Wallach each doubled to lead off the 11th inning and Mike Stenhouse later added a two-run single, leading the Montreal Expos to a 5-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Expos broke a 2-2 tie in the inning. The Dodgers struck back for a run in the bottom of the inning against Gary Lucas, but Dick Grapenthin came on for his first save.

In National League night games, Mike Jorgensen and Terry Pendleton belted home runs to help Joaquin Andujar gain his 17th victory, tops in the major leagues, as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Cincinnati Reds 6-3.

Larry McWilliams pitched a four-hitter while driving in two runs and Lee Lacy had three hits and scored twice to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates over the Atlanta Braves 7-2.

In the American League, Mickey Hatcher's run-scoring single in the eighth inning lifted Minnesota to a 4-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers and gave the Twins a sweep of their twi-night double-header.

In the first game, Mike Smithson tossed a six-hitter and Kirby Puckett doubled, tripled and drove in two runs to lead the Twins to a 5-2 victory.

Elsehwere in the AL, Willie Wilson had four consecutive hits and scored three times, Lynn Jones drove in three runs and Darryl Motley belted a two-run homer, powering the Kansas City Royals to a 6-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Kansas City's Steve Balboni struck out four times in four at-bats, extending his consecutive strikeout string to nine. Only four players, all pitchers, have struck out in 10 or more consecutive appearances at the plate.

The Indians won their eighth straight game. George Vukovich keyed Cleveland's seven-run first inning with a two-run single and Brett Butler banged out four hits to lead the Indians a 13-3 rout of the Toronto Blue Jays.

Five of Cleveland's eight victories have come over Toronto.

Bobby Grich broke a scoreless tie with a sixth-inning home run and doubled home California's other run as the Angels broke a seven-game losing streak with a 2-1 victory over the New York Yankees.

Scott McGregor shut out Seattle on nine hits and Wayne Gross hit a two-run homer to lead the Baltimore Orioles past the Mariners 4-0. McGregor, 15-11, allowed just two extra base hits and helped his cause by picking off three runners, two from second base.

Marty Castillo drove in three runs with a single and a triple, Juan Berenguer pitched seven innings of five-hit ball and Oakland committed three costly errors as the Detroit Tigers beat the hapless A's 11-4 to sweep their three-game series. Detroit outscored the A's 37-10 in the series.

Mickey Rivers belted a home run and two singles, knocked in two runs and scored twice to back the strong pitching of Danny Darwin in the Texas Rangers' 3-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

In a late National League game, Dwight Gooden survived Graig Nettles' seventh home run in six games and went on to pitch a three-hitter.

He also became the 11th rookie in baseball history to strike out 200 batters in a season as the New York Mets downed the San Diego Padres 5-2. The 19-year-old Gooden, 12-8, struck out nine to raise his major league-leading total to 202.

USFL

Spence added: "There are a number of options open to us."

However, noting that ABC had no professional football telecasts in the fall — excepting "Monday Night Football" — Trump expressed optimism that the USFL would be able to negotiate a deal with ABC for the 1986 season.

A $15 million package with that network already is in place for 1985.

"The real big play is for 1987," Trump said. "That's when the network contracts with the NFL end. The NFL will be asking billions and we will be in that bidding with better players and a more exciting brand of football.

"Don't forget the havoc that a half-point ratings drop (in NFL telecasts) brought last season," he added. "When we cut into that market in 1986, you'll see just how strong this league is."

Trump maintained the quality of play in the two leagues was now nearly equal and said the Generals would play the NFL's New York Jets or Giants in an exhibition game with a $1 million donation to charity pegged to the outcome. He said he might make such a proposal formally in the near future.

Only 16 of the present 18 USFL teams voted Wednesday. Simmons said Philadelphia and the Michigan Panthers voted against the fall plan. But both later changed their votes to give unanimous approval.

Los Angeles, which has effectively been taken over by the league after the collapse of owner of J. William Oldenburg's financial empire, did not vote. Nor did Washington, which was sold to Florida real estate developer Sherwood Weiser, who moved operations to Miami.

A survey of 3,000 fans commissioned by the league showed that 65 percent of those asked preferred that the league remain in the spring.

But Trump and Eddie Einhorn, owner of the new Chicago USFL team, baseball's Chicago White Sox and another vocal supporter of a fall season, contended the survey showed such general enthusiasm for professional football that the USFL could make a go of it against the NFL.

The USFL Game of the Week fell about 8 percent over last year and most owners felt the $15-million ABC package for 1985 was too small. Even with a new $70 million, three-year package from ESPN cable, that means only about $2 million per year per team, compared with the nearly $15 million each NFL team gets from the networks.

This year's USFL losses are estimated at more than $30 million, with Los Angeles, which drew fewer than 8,000 fans to the Coliseum for a playoff game, reportedly losing more than $10 million.

TECH

"They're both fifth-year seniors, they've got the experience and the pressure shouldn't bother them," Moore said. "We're not the kind of team that can afford to go out and miss field goals or get 26-yard punts and stuff like that."

A total of 38 lettermen are returning, including eight starters on offense and six on defense.

Though veteran quarterback Jim Hart is gone, Moore said he thinks Perry Morren, another fifth-year senior, is an adequate successor and "the kind of guy who makes things happen."

He said his main concern is offensive consistency and added that "We are going to have to depend on a lot of young players for depth in the offensive line, so it's important that they get ready to play as quickly as possible."

The biggest plus, he said, is "the depth defensively, especially at linebacker and defensive end. Offensively, we reurn seven two-year starters and their experience should be a plus."

Newly acquired offensive coordinator Tom Wilson, a former Tech quarterback and head coach at Texas A&M, has a couple of premier players in guard Danny Buzzard and tight end Buzz Tatom and a stable of swift split ends and wide receivers.

"We're gonna have some guys lined up out there who can turn a ball game," Moore said.

Former Texas Longhorn assistant Spike Dykes, the new defensive coordinator, has half a dozen outstanding veterans back, including tackles Ronald Byers and Brad White, linebackers Dwayne Jiles and Mike Kinsey and cornerback Carl Carter.

"I don't know how many games we will win," said Moore, "but I do know we will be more exciting."

High schooler death ruled non-football related

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A 17-year-old high school student who collapsed during a football workout died late Tuesday of a ruptured aneurysm, doctors said.

An autopsy was scheduled for Wednesday on Smithson Valley High School student James Worthey Jr., but football coach Stan Irvine said his death did not appear to be football-related.

Irvine said Tuesday that Northeast Baptist Hospital doctors and family members told him it was a "deep imbedded aneurysm that might not have been detected with a brain scan."

Two brain scans Saturday showed no brain waves. Worthey was kept alive on life support devices.

Irvine said doctors have assured him the aneurysm could have ruptured anytime.

"It was a non-football related injury," he said.

Worthey had played football for six years in the Comal School District. He had received a clean bill of health after a physical examination before the start of practice last week.

Long hike pays off with fishing at 'Wally World'

By TODD WOODARD
Outdoors Writer

"Daddy, how far is it to Wally World?" Gary Garmon, a 32-year-old Dallas architect, asked. "I'm tired."

Weighed down by his 70-pound backpack for eight hours, Garmon had good reason to want to find the three 12,800-foot New Mexico lakes he had jokingly termed Wally World.

Garmon, banker Nick Pappen of Albuquerque, N.M., Tripp Drew, an industrial chain salesman from Ruidoso, N.M., and I had set out two days earlier for Truchas Lakes, three pristine trout havens locked into the mountains of the Pecos Wilderness northeast of Santa Fe, N.M. At lunch on the third day, we all felt like Chevy Chase in the movie "Vacation." We would have killed for a glimpse of the lakes — Wally World.

When we planned the trip in May, Drew told us we would hike from the 8,600-foot Santa Barbara campsite 13.2 miles into the Carson National Forest. At the base of one of the highest peaks in New Mexico, Truchas (elevation 13,101 feet), we would find three deep lakes which had little fishing pressure. There, he said, in the middle of the summer, we would catch cutthroats and who-knew-what-else, enjoy the 60-degree days and the 40-degree nights and escape the rigors of our various homes.

Up until we strapped on the backpacks, laden with cooking utensils, food for four days, warm clothes and extra shoes, it all sounded pretty good. But at the base of North Truchas Peak, looking upward to the pass through which we had to walk to reach the still-unseen lakes, I wondered whether Tripp had some land in Florida to sell me.

"How much further do you think, Tripp?" I asked as a cold rain beat on my slicker. "Is Wally World on the other side of the pass, and will it be closed when we get there?"

"It's over there, probably about three more miles, once we cross the pass," he said. "I think."

Outdoors

Tripp, as it turned out, thought correctly. We trudged over the gravelly switchbacks that led to the pass, lingered on the ridge east of North Truchas and descended into the forest that would eventually yield the lakes.

We found them about 4 p.m. July 29, tucked under the haunches of North Truchas Peak. A fly fisherman standing on the south end of the middle lake said he had landed a 15-inch cutthroat the day before, but hadn't caught anything that day. "Looks like they're working topwater," he said. "But I've got enough to eat already. I think I'll quit."

We rubbed our hands in glee because the lake was ours. We set up camp quickly, with Drew and Pappen taking on the cooking duties and Gary, who had packed in all his own equipment to test it, assuming on the sleeping duties. That left me to fish. It began raining again.

Since everyone else brought fly fishing gear, I chose ultralight spinning gear. I didn't think I would be too successful, but I thought I might find some live bait and put the fly fishermen to shame (all the while telling them I was catching fish on spinnerbaits). I saw myself coming back to camp with a fish per man, and I could taste the delicious trout that Tripp's cooking skills could conjure up.

Like most pipedreams, it faded quickly. I made a terrible cast into the clear water and learned my bail on the spinning reel was on backwards. I had loaned it to a friend, who for some reason, had disassembled it. I spent a precious hour putting it back together.

By that time Tripp had come to the lake with his new fly fishing rod and a handful of flies. He called to me, asking why I was sitting on a rock and not fishing. He laughed when I told him my predicament and waved to me heartily. The box of flies he was holding in his right hand popped open and scattered $25 of midges and caddis flies all over the ground. "Welcome to Wally World," I yelled back.

We didn't catch any fish that day, but just being at Truchas Lakes made up for it. The first of the lakes is fed by snowmelt and the daily mountain rains. The second, and largest lake, receives water from the first, which it sends to the third lake a few hundred yards below it.

The water in the three lakes is gin clear — submerged rocks look as though no water separates you from them. At the lakes' edges, lush grass makes a green transition to the forest, which houses an overly friendly herd of bighorn sheep that visited camp nearly every day. The air, as clear as the water but considerably thinner, has the peculiar highlights of a crisp winter day, when everything seems brighter than usual.

But the lakes aren't as remote as they might seem on paper. More than a dozen people visited the lakes while we were camped, and on the way in, we followed the distinctive hoof prints and natural trail markers left by a well-fed group of pack horses.

But they are remote enough that if you pack in more than you need, you'll pay a price for it with every step. While a 13-mile walk might not seem much by flat West Texas standards (I was running five miles a day to get ready), the 9,000 feet of extra elevation take a considerable toll. A 100-yard walk from camp to the middle lake made me pant.

Even though the remoteness of the lakes and the cold nights are enough to recommend Truchas Lakes, the fishing is the clincher. The healthy, tasty fish in the middle lake hit dry flies with a vengeance, and they also liked garlic cheese and salmon eggs.

And now that I know what to expect, I would enjoy the walk in more. Tripp said, "The next time I come to Wally World, I'm not going to pack so much stuff," he said, hefting a package of coffee that still had 3 pounds of java in it. "I like to have died on the way up.

"But once I got here and heard the quiet, it made that walk up a distant memory."

Decker injury brings end to Europe slate

From Wire Reports

TRACK AND FIELD — Injuries sustained in her much-publicized collision with Zola Budd at the Olympic Games in Los Angeles will prevent Mary Decker from running in Europe this summer.

Evelyn Ashford, gold medalist in the women's 100-meter race at the Summer Olympics, set a world record in the event at the Weltklasse track meet with a time of 10.76 seconds, beating her own previous record of 10.79 set last year....

TENNIS — Vijay Amritraj lost to fellow Indian Ramesh Krishnan, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, and then had to be taken to the hospital due to heat exhaustion.

After the match, Amritraj, 30, collapsed on the court. When he didn't respond to treatment at a tournament first aid compound, he was taken to Bethesda North Hospital in suburban Cincinnati where he was treated and released an hour and a half later...

DRAG RACING — Shirley Muldowney, the only driver to win the National Hot Rod Association's top fuel world championship three times, said in an interview with the Indianapolis News her racing career may be over.

Muldowney is currently hospitalized in Detroit, recovering from critical injuries received June 29 in a drag race outside Montreal...

FOOTBALL — Antonio McKay, a gold and bronze medalist at the Los Angeles Olympics, has decided not to play football for Georgia Tech.

"Antonio and I talked today, in fact several times since the Olympics, and came to the decision that he should not play," Coach Bill Curry said Wednesday.

"He's much too tired from all he's gone through, and he is not in football condition. A lot of people don't know that he's accomplished all he has with a bad leg. He still has an inch of atrophy in the leg where he had knee surgery two summers ago.

"He has a red-shirt year, so he'll sit out and re-evaluate his position next spring."

McKay was on the gold medal-winning 1600-meter relay team and won a bronze in the 400-meter dash....

East German sets cycling mark in Friendship Games

MOSCOW (AP) — East Germany's Lutz Hesslich set a world indoor 200-meter flying start record as the cycling competition ended Wednesday at the Friendship '84 Games.

Hesslich, the 1980 Olympic sprint gold medalist and two-time world champion, clocked 10.021 seconds to lower the old record by his great Soviet rival, Sergei Kopylov, of 10.249.

Kopylov, who also has won the world sprint title twice, had set the mark on the same track at the Olympic cycling center at Krylatskoye in suburban Moscow two years ago.

It was the sixth world record set on the cycling track during the two-week games and the second of two successes Wednesday for Hesslich over Kopylov.

Basketball also got underway Wednesday with the Soviet Union beating Hungary 115-64.

In the final of the sprint cycling competition, Hesslich won 2-0 but only after forcing two restarts in the opening race when he fell from the track.

When the eagerly awaited clash between the two giants of sprint racing finally got under way, Hesslich rode from the front, sprinted with 400 meters to go and just held off Kopylov's challenge.

He adopted a different strategy in the second race, staying behind until the last 50 meters when he burst through to win by half a bike's length with a clenched fist salute.

Vratislav Sustr won the third-place race, 2-0 over Andrezj Michlak of Poland.

The final of the 4,000-meter team pursuit race ended in mystery when the Soviet quartet inexplicably quit when one of its riders was forced to retire.

After less than one lap of the final against East Germany, Valeri Movchan appeared to lose control and rode off the track. But instead of continuing with the permitted three riders, his team just gave up amid whistles from the normally partisan home crowd.

In the semifinals, the Soviets had downed Czechoslovakia by more than eight seconds while the East Germans edged Poland by 0.80 seconds.

The 50-kilometer individual points race went to Hungarian Miklos Somodi, who scored 81 points and held a two-lap advantage over Martin Penc of Czechoslovakia. Penc was second with 77 points, and Ivan Romanov of the Soviet Union third with 71.

The Soviets went unthreatened in their Group A basketball game against Hungary, leading 15-3 after five minutes and never looking back. Arvidas-Romas Sabonis led six Soviets in double figures with 22 points.

The other Group B game saw Poland thrash Czechoslovakia 119-42, while in Group A, Sweden trounced Algeria 114-48.

In the women's basketball competition, which is being staged in one group only, the Soviets defeated North Korea 135-60, Cuba beat Hungary 82-73, Poland edged Czechoslovakia 63-62 and Bulgaria beat Finland 79-62.

In field hockey competition, there was a major upset in the last round of round-robin matches when Poland defeated the Soviet second team 1-0.

The Soviets B Team was expected to make the final against the host nation's strongest team, but they will now meet in the semifinals on Friday. The Soviet first team continued its domination by beating Finland 7-0 and has now scored 28 goals and conceded only one in three matches.

In the other semifinal, Zimbabwe will meet East Germany. The African team hammered Afghanistan 11-0 after leading by six goals at half-time.

"We should have had even more goals, but the victory over Poland has given us a great chance of reaching the final," said Zimbabwe Coach Dennis Edwards.

Yachtsman sighted near Brisbane

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — There has been an unconfirmed sighting of lone American yachtsman Bill Dunlop, who is 13 days overdue on a voyage from the Cook Islands in the Pacific, officials said Thursday.

It was not known if the vessel was Dunlop's yacht, the nine-foot Winds Will.

MUSTANGS

"Our quarterback situation looks bright. Both are real good athletes, but Danny has a stronger arm. They both possess a lot of leadership capabilities. It's an interesting battle."

Should Andrews decide to go deep, newcoming split end Rodney Buck will be a likely target. But Visentine admits that the passing game has been under wraps.

"I really think the problem is us utilizing the passing game properly. We've always been such a running football team."

Beyond the quarterbacks, there is help. Tailback Jeff Tidwell was a second-team All-District choice last year, and he returns both ways to provide experience. Visentine is also pleased with soph fullback Ronnie Elmore. "We're looking for big things out of him," said the coach.

Andrews has plenty of strength on the offensive line, but the coaching staff is concerned about the defensive front. With three starters returning, the offense is in good shape, but the stoppers are all inexperienced. "Defensive line roight now is a weak area. We return nobody on the interior line, so we're looking at a lot of JV kids." Visentine added, "That can be scary."

Although the Mustangs graduated most of their experienced players, four offensive regulars and five defensive starters return.

Thus far, Visentine has taken a more realistic approach with the young ponies. "We set our goals last year to win the district," he said. "When we stumped our toe, we had a hard time recovering, so this year we set goals to just take one game at a time."

The harshest task facing Andrews upon developing their talent will be getting through a loaded district. The Mustangs and Fort Stockton were favored a year ago and both stumbled. Both teams have enough talent to earn the state playoffs.

The defending champions are San Angelo Lake View and Monahans. Sweetwater went through the district slate with only a single loss last year, but could not qualify.

Pecos upset the Mustangs last year with a rock-ribbed defense. Lamesa is on the rise, and Snyder is hoping for anything over last year's winless showing.

"One of the strong points about this group is attitude," Visentine said. "They know they are fighting an uphill battle and they're trying to prove some people wrong."

And the underdog role is one Andrews can appreciate. "We're only concerned about where we finish at the end," the coach laughed. "You hear this everywhere, but the district is getting more balanced as the years go by. Any of the top four or five teams can beat anybody else."

Mustangs Report Card

Offensive Line: A - Experienced beef.
Receivers: C - Few familiar faces.
Quarterbacks: B - Talent, but untested.
Running Backs: A - Quick, strong combo.
Defensive Line: C - Could be better. Could be worse.
Linebackers: B-plus - Rangy and ready.
Secondary: C - Currently under repair.
Overall: B - As usual, Andrews will be competitive. But the Mustangs need some people to mature quickly, especially at quarterback and on the defensive front, to have playoff hopes. Otherwise, District 2-4A will take its toll.
Predicted Finish: 7-3.
1984 Schedule: 9/7 at Brownfield; 9/14 Midland High; 9/21 Levelland; 9/28 OPEN; 10/5 Lamesa; 10/12 at Pecos; 10/19 Sweetwater; 10/26 at Ft. Stockton; 11/2 Monahans; 11/9 at SA Lake View; 11/16 Snyder.

Economy slows

Durables down

Associated Press

Continuing their seasaw performance of recent months, orders to factories for durable goods rose 2.2 percent in July after falling 3 percent in June, the Commerce Department reported.

Inflation at the retail level, meanwhile, edged up only 0.3 percent last month as a sharp drop in gasoline prices helped offset increases in housing and food costs, the Labor Department said.

Orders for durable goods — so-called "big-ticket" items such as major appliances and autos — had tumbled 6.5 percent in April and rebounded 4 percent in May before falling in June and then rising again in July.

The movement indicates the economy is slowing from its 8.9 percent growth rate set in the first half of 1984, economists said. Most economists predict the expansion to slow to half that figure in the last six months of the year.

The July gain was "essentially catch-up, following an unusually rapid decline in June," said Jerry Jasinowski, chief economist of the National Association of Manufacturers. Fluctuations in inventories being held by businesses this year has significantly increased the volatility of orders for durable goods, he said.

In its inflation report for July, the Labor Department said food prices rose 0.3 percent and housing costs climbed 0.5 percent. But gasoline prices fell 1.8 percent and are now down 14.7 percent from their peak level of March 1981.

Overall prices, as measured by the department's Consumer Price Index, are up at a 4 percent annual rate for the first seven months of the year. Last year's overall 3.8 percent gain was the lowest in 11 years and below the Reagan administration's prediction of 4.4 percent for all of 1984.

Donald Ratajczak, director of the Economic Forecasting Project at Georgia State University, said "0.3 percent is not a bad number." But he said at least slightly higher figures should dominate the rest of the year's inflation reports, with next year's rate a bit higher yet.

"It looks like the low point of the inflation cycle has been reached," he said.

But the Commerce Department's chief economist, Robert Ortner, said there was "still no sign of acceleration in inflation, which should make everybody very happy."

In other developments Wednesday:

—U.S. workers' weekly earnings, adjusted for inflation and seasonal factors, rose 0.1 percent in July after a 0.4 percent increase in June and a 0.9 percent decline in May, the Labor Department said.

Gold rallys, dollar drops

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices surged in Europe this morning following New York's late bullion rally while the dollar lost ground against all major currencies.

Bullion prices rose nearly $7 an ounce in London and Zurich at the opening but drifted slightly lower in London at mid-morning. Dealers said trading was fairly quiet.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, gold was trading at a bid price of $352.00 an ounce at mid-morning, up from $345.25 late Wednesday.

In London, the precious metal opened at a bid $352.30 an ounce but the city's five major bullion houses later set a lower recommended price of $351.75, still above Wednesday's close of $345.50.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold rose the equivalent of $5.15 an ounce to close at a bid $351.85.

Silver followed gold's rise on the London market where it was trading at a bid $7.66 an ounce at mid-morning, compared with $7.475 late Wednesday.

The dollar was lower against all currencies in what dealers called quiet and trendless trading.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar closed at 240.95 Japanese yen, down from 242.35 yen the previous day.

In London, the pound sterling gained against the dollar. It cost $1.31245 to buy one pound Thursday morning, more expensive than the $1.3077 price late Wednesday.

–2.8692 West German marks, down from 2.8870.

–2.3880 Swiss francs, down from 2.4100.

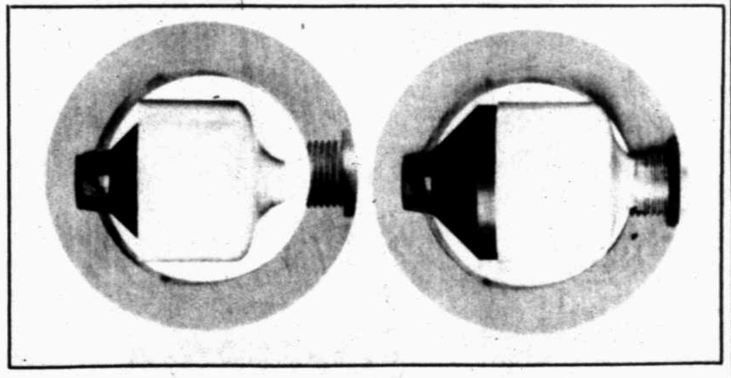

–8.8085 French francs, down from 8.8625.

–3.2355 Dutch guilders, down from 3.2585.

–1,775.75 Italian lire, down from 1,784.00.

–1.29955 Canadian dollars, down from 1.30105.

New MPS perforating charge is designed for standard screw port carrier guns.

New standard perforating charge design introduced

Jet Research Center, Inc. has introduced a new pop-up sleeve perforating charge for standard screw port carrier perforating guns.

According to the firm the 4 inch charge utilizes a metal sleeve to help solve loading and alignment problems fround with all-rubber charge designs. It is reported to be more economical than rubber designs, while perforating performance specifications are equal.

The metal sleeve is said to form a precise metal-to-metal alignment of the charge in the carrier, putting the charge in an optimum performance position in the gun when the sleeve is expanded.

There's timber in East Texas, oil in West Texas, the Metroplex in North Texas. Where's the money, and who's paying the taxes in Texas.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock has divided the state into six economic regions: the Gulf Coast, the Metroplex, the Plains, the Central Corridor, East Texas, and the Border.

In 1983, the State of Texas received about $8.5 billion in tax revenue. The Gulf Coast, being the most populated region, paid the largest share, $2.4 billion , in 1983, and continues to be the state's economic powerhouse.

Texans pay such state taxes as the Sales tax, Oil and Gas Severance tax, Business taxes, Transportation taxes, Alcohol and Tobacco taxes, and other taxes.

Almost 40 cents of every tax dollar comes from the state sales tax. Being the most populous regions, the Gulf Coast and the Metroplex furnish the largest share of sales tax revenues. Retail sales comprise about 50 percent of the sales tax total. The other half is paid by businesses when they buy equipment and supplies. Firms in the Gulf Coast and Metroplex account for 63 percent of the business portion of the sales tax.

Oil and gas production taxes, the state's second largest revenue source, provided 27 percent of state tax revenue in 1983. The Plains, with its strong oil and gas production, paid 54 percent of the oil and gas severance tax in 1983.

Although the Metroplex has almost twice the population, and more than twice the total income, and leads the Plains in all other tax categories, oil and gas production helped the Plains edge out the Metroplex in total amount of tax dollars paid.

Mortage rates for metro areas reported

CHICAGO (AP) — Average mortgage rates for single-family homes in 14 metropolitan areas as of Aug. 22, as compiled by the Chicago Title Insurance Co. The rates are for 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages for 80 percent of the value of the house. A point is a one-time fee equaling one percent of the mortgage.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Interfirst gets approval for three new banks

DALLAS — InterFirst Corp. has announced approval from the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System to establish three new (de novo) banks.

Two of the banks are located in fast-growing suburban areas of Austin. The third is in Beaumont.

The two new Austin banks will increase to five the number of InterFirst banks in the Austin area.

NAHB urges policy in Republican platform

DALLAS — The National Association of Home Builders has urged the Republican party to adopt as part of its 1984 platform the correct mix of fiscal, monetary and tax policies that encourage economic growth and construction of affordable housing.

Testifying before the Republican Platform Committee here, NAHB President Peter D. Herder expressed concern that the rate of homeownership in the U.S. declined for the first time in three decades from 65.6 percent in 1980 to 64.6 percent in 1983. Hopefully, he said, this drop "represents only a temporary blip based on record high interest rates and the catastropic downturn in housing production in 1981 and 1982."

Existing home sales increase from last year

WASHINGTON — Thirty-seven states and the District of Columbia had higher rates of existing-home sales in the second quarter than in the same quarter of 1983, according to the National Association of Realtors.

Eleven states had increases of 20 percent or more in their seasonally adjusted annual rates of resale activity, with seven of those states reporting increases of 30 percent or more. The findings contained in the association's quarterly state-by-state activity report cover resales in single-family homes, apartment condominiums and cooperatives.

Resale home prices vary in second quarter

WASHINGTON — Median resale home prices ranged from a low of $49,300 in the Louisville, Ky., area to a high of $135,100 in the Anaheim/Santa Ana, Calif., area during the second quarter of 1984, according to the latest quarterly survey of 37 metropolitan areas by the National Association of Realtors.

The metropolitan areas of Detroit, Indianapolis, Ind., and Tampa, Fla., also ranked among the least expensive in which to purchase a previously occupied home during the second quarter, with median prices of $49,600, $55,500 and $58,200 respectively.

Key speakers set for banker's convention

WASHINGTON — Federal National Mortgage Associationn chairman and chief executive officer David O. Maxwell will address the Annual Convention of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America (MBA) in San Francisco, October 14-17. U.S. Senator Jake Garn (R-UT), chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, also has been invited to speak.

Texas Union to hold management workshop

AUSTIN — The management espoused in "The One-Minute Manager" will be the basis for a workshop at The University of Texas November 2 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Lyndon B. Johnson Auditorium.

The seminar, sponsored by the Texas Union, will include three management techniques; one-minute goal-setting, one-minute praising and one-minute reprimands. The techniques will be practiced through simulated on-the-job situations. The steps are designed to be simple and effective in improving productivity and performance among employees.

Home sales slump could slow construction

WASHINGTON — Housing production could decline by as much as 20 percent over the second half of 1984 because of declining home sales and growing uncertainty over the future path of interest rates, according to Pete Herder, president of the National Association of Home Builders.

The Commerce Department has reported that housing starts fell 6.6 percent in July to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1,761,000. Housing construction fell in all regions and among all types of construction, single-family as well as multifamily.

CIVIL ACTION NO. 2-79-206

NOTICE OF SETTLEMENT OF CLASS ACTION

To: All person of hispanic descent who have been or will be questioned, arrested, detained, incarcerated or charged by Texas Department of Public Safety personnel for alleged violations of the immigration laws or for investigation of their immigration status.

A class action lawsuit has been filed on your behalf alleging that officers of the Texas Department of Public Safety had no authority to arrest or charge people with violations of the U.S. immigration laws. In order to settle this lawsuit, the Texas Department of Public Safety has agreed to a consent decree which prohibits their officers from the following: enforcing civil immigration laws, enforcing criminal immigration laws for which arrest is not authorized by state and federal law, questioning people regarding their right to be or remain in the United States, and placing immigration holds on people suspected of immigration violations. In addition, the decree provides for guidelines in the questioning and arrest for investigation of nationality and immigration status, handling of arrest for criminal immigration violations, and record keeping.

For more information about the terms of the settlement and your right to file objections, you should write or call

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

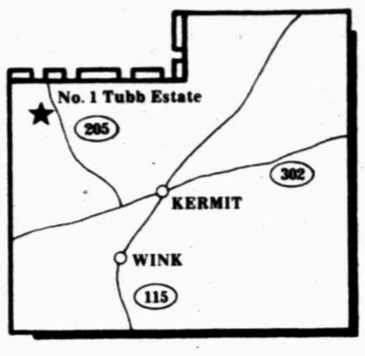

Two strong wells for Conger field

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

BRIGHT & CO., Dallas, has completed two good producers in the Conger (Penn) field of Glasscock and Sterling County.

The No.1 Frank Glass flowed 100 bopd of 42 gravity API, with 661 Mcfd and 20 bwpd on a 12/64 in. choke from perforations at 8,052-8,452 ft. following treatment with 4,500 gal 15 percent acid and a massive frac of the Cisco and Canyon using 188,485 gal. gel with 386,198 lb. sand.

The well was drilled to a TD of 8,550 ft. and formation tops were: 8,052 at the top of the Cisco; 8,179 on the bottom of the Cisco; 8,348 ft. at the top of the Canyon and 8,452 on the bottom of the Canyon.

Location is 660 ft. from east and 990 ft. from south lines of Section 16, Block 32, T-5-S, T&P survey, 14 miles east of Garden City.

The No.3 Ray completed flowing 91 bopd of 43 gravity crude and 345 Mcfd gas with 22 bwpd on a 20/64 in. choke from perforations at 7,527-7,983 ft. About 4,500 gal. of 15 percent acid were used to treat the well before it was fraced with 190,000 gal. gel and 305,000 lb. of 20/40 sand.

Drilled to a TD of 8,175 ft., formation tops were established at 7,527 on top of the Cisco and 7,688 on the bottom with the top of the Canyon pegged at 7,872 and the bottom at 7,983.

Location is 950 ft. from north and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 30, Block 22, H&TC survey, 12 miles west of Sterling City.

Deep wildcat finaled in Winkler County

ARCO OIL & GAS, Midland, has finaled a 22,180 ft. test in Winkler County and come up with slim pickings.

The No.1 Tubb Estate completed for 172 Mcfd gas from perforations at 18,984 to 18,998 ft. following treatment with 7,000 gal. 15 percent acid. It was drilled to a total depth of 22,180 ft. and plugged back to 18,998 ft.

On a ground elevation of 2,895 formation tops were selected as 12,110 at the Wolfcamp; 14,590 ft. to the Atoka; 16,150 ft. for the Barnett; 17,878 on top of the Mississipi lime and 18,317 to the Woodford.

Domestic petroleum products see increase

WASHINGTON — The pace of increases in petroleum products continued to be strong in July, increasing by 648,000 barrels per day or 4.3 percent compared to the same month of 1983, the American Petroleum Institute reports.

Total domestic products supplied in July averaged 15,669,000 barrels per day (bpd), up from 15,021,000 bpd in July, 1983.

Diamond Shamrock opens Dallas offices

DALLAS — Diamond Shamrock Exploration Co., a subsidiary of Diamond Shamrock Corp., has announced the opening of its new executive headquarters in downtown Dallas.

The subsidiary's headquarters office is located in Suite 1500 of the new LT Center, 2001 Ross Avenue. The office is staffed by 25 employees including the subsidiary's senior executives and various support personnel. Previously, the subsidiary's headquarters were located in Amarillo, Texas. The subsidiary is maintaining a business operations center and mid-continent division exploration and production office in Amarillo that together employ approximately 425 people.

DeltaUS Corp. still facing net revenue losses

TYLER — DeltaUS Corp., formerly Delta Drilling Co., has reported revenues of $29.1 million for the second quarter of 1984 for a 34 percent increase over revenues of $21.7 million for the same period in 1983. For the first six months, total revenues increased 24 percent to $60.9 million as compared to $49.3 million in 1983. The increased revenue performance was attributed to an upswing in the company's average domestic rig utilization rate to 54 percent from 35 percent in the second quarter of 1983.

Although the increased revenues in the second quarter were not great enough to bring the company out of a loss position, the net loss was narrowed to $3.2 million, or 15 cents per share, as compared to a net loss of $6.7 million, or 32 cents per share, reported for the second quarter of 1983. The reduction was due primarily to the sale of the company's interests in its Mexican affiliates.

Tucker reports small profit improvement

Tucker Drilling, San Angelo, reports a small profit improvement for the first quarter ended June 30, 1984. For the three months ended June 30, 1984 compared to the same period of the previous year, contract drilling revenues decreased 14 percent to $3,036,000; oil and gas sales decreased 16 percent to $1,386,000; and equipment and supplies sales increased 29 percent to $1,830,000.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Stock sale would mean paying tax on capital gains

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Over the years, I have been most fortunate in buying good stocks that increased in value. I am 81 and feel, for my wife's security and our children's inheritance, I should sell all my stocks and put the money in tax-free mutual funds. Should I make such a change?

A. The decision on whether or not to make that big change has to be your decision. It's wise for many older people to get out of risk investments such as stocks and into higher income-paying investments. However, considering your tax bracket, you don't seem to be strapped for cash.

Doyle

By selling all your stocks, you would have to pay capital gains tax on your profit and you would give up all possibilities of future stock market profits. Nonetheless, since you seem ready to hunker down on your assets, that move seems logical.

• • •

Q. How safe are tax-free mutual funds?

A. There are two basic types of tax-fee mutual funds — those holding long-term municipal bonds and those holding short-term municipal debt obligations. Because interest paid on municipal debt securities is not subject to federal income tax, both types collect that interest and pass it on to fund shareholders as dividends, also free fronm federal income tax.

Long-term bonds pay higher interest than short-term debt securities. So, mutual funds holding long-term municipal bonds have higher yields than those holding short-term municipals.

Mutual funds holding short-term municipals are called "tax-free money market mutual funds." They use accounting methods that keep the value of their shares constant — usually at $1. That makes tax-free money market mutual funds virtually risk free.

The share values of mutual funds holding long-term municipal bonds can rise or fall — going up when interest rates decrease and down when interest rates increase — giving such funds an element of risk.

• • •

Q. I know you never recommend specific mutual funds or any other individual securities, because you don't want to be accused of "touting." But can you give me some idea about what tax-free mutual funds to consider, in order to keep brokerage costs at a miminum?

A. That's simple enough. Look only at no-load mutual funds, those whose shares can be purchased without any commission charge.

All tax-free money market mutual funds are no-load. Some tax-free mutual funds holding long-term municipal bonds are no-load. Some aren't and have commission bites of up to 9.3 percent.

Interest on borrowed money still deductible

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the biggest tax deductions many Americans take each year is the interest they pay.

Interest on home mortgages, interest on personal loans, interest on credit-card purchases — it's all fully deductible when it comes time to calculate the taxes you owe.

So is interest paid on money borrowed to finance investments — within reasonably liberal limits set by the tax rules.

Ordinarily these rules are pretty simple to understand, to comply with and to take full advantage of. But borrowers can run into a snag if they happen, as countless Americans do, to have investments in tax-exempt securities like municipal bonds.

As the investment firm of Thomson McKinnon Securities points out, "interest and other investment expenses incurred to purchase or carry tax-exempt securities are not allowable deductions."

This exception is intended to keep people from taking out a tax-deductible loan in order to buy a tax-exempt security. Consider what would happen if an investor could borrow $20,000 at 10 percent interest to buy $20,000 in municipal bonds paying 10 percent.

That's no money out of the investor's pocket. But he or she could earn a significant gain on the transaction.

The $2,000 coming in the form of municipal-bond interest is exempt from federal taxes. At the same time, the $2,000 paid out in interest on the loan would result in a tax saving of up to $1,000 for someone in the 50 percent tax bracket.

Net after-tax benefit: As much as $1,000 on a maneuver that involves none of the person's own money and very little risk. In larger amounts, the reward would be proportionately greater.

Congress and the Internal Revenue Service naturally saw plenty of good reason to forestall this practice by disallowing the interest deduction on the loan. Without the deduction, the strategy loses its appeal. So, generally, people simply don't attempt it.

But savers and investors who own a variety of investments still can unwittingly run afoul of the rule. As Thomson McKinnon points out:

"In certain cases, the IRS may infer a relationship between interest expense and the ownership of tax-exempt securities. The indebtedness does not have to be directly traceable to the tax-exempt securities as long as there is a sufficiently direct relationship between the ownership of tax-exempt securities and the indebtedness incurred.

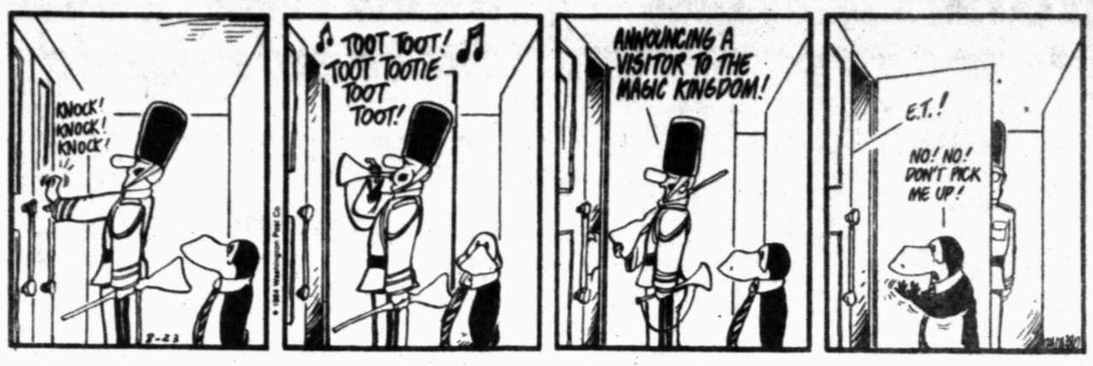

"For example, if an investor borrows to finance a stock or bond portfolio while also owning municipal bonds, a portion of the interest expense on the portfolio investment is deemed to be related to the ownership of the municipal bonds. Therefore, an apportioned amount of the interest expense deduction otherwise allowable will be disallowed."

Does this mean you can't borrow to buy, say, a house or car at a time when you have tax-exempt investments?

No, the restrictions don't go quite that far.

In the case of a home purchase, Thomson McKinnon says, "the purpose of incurring the indebtedness is so directly related to the purpose of acquiring the residence that no sufficiently direct relationship between the borrowing and the investment in tax-exempt obligations may be inferred."

Mr. T's brother sues over job promise

CHICAGO (AP) — Probably one of the few people in the world brave enough to mess with Mr. T — his police officer brother — is suing the musclebound actor for allegedly breaking an agreement over a job as a bodyguard.

Police officer Gustave J. Tero claims Mr. T broke an oral promise to hire Tero for one year as a bodyguard and is suing him for back pay and damages.

Tero's attorney, Lewis Shapiro, said Wednesday Tero filed a lawsuit in Cook County Circuit Court seeking more than $72,000 from Mr. T, of NBC's highly rated "A Team," and Blue Coral Inc., a company Mr. T was working for when the bodyguard service was needed.

Tero acted as a bodyguard for Mr. T from Oct. 1, 1983, to May 11, 1984, while Mr. T made appearances for Blue Coral, a car-care product, Shapiro said.

Efforts to reach Mr. T for comment were unsuccessful. A telephone listing for the actor could not be found.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge has branded a $36 million libel suit against Liberace and Newsweek Magazine "a silly complaint" that must be rewritten.

Liberace

However, Superior Court Judge John Cole said Wednesday that there are grounds for at least part of the suit by Scott Thorson to proceed toward trial.

Thorson, who says he was the entertainer's former lover, based his lawsuit on a May 7, 1983, article in Newsweek which quoted Liberace as saying Thorson's palimony suit against him amounted to "blackmail."

Thorson called the comment defamatory.

Cole, saying portions of the article could be defamatory, ordered Thorson's attorney, Ernst Lipschutz, to rewrite his suit within 30 days.

"I have never seen a complaint as bad as this one," the judge said of the lawsuit, calling it "a silly complaint."

Rex Heinke, attorney for Newsweek, said he would seek dismissal of the suit once it is rewritten.

A key portion of Thorson's $113 palimony suit has already been dismissed.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson has won a potentially profitable round in his divorce suit, with a judge deciding that Carson and his estranged wife, Joanna, split up earlier than Mrs. Carson claimed.

The difference in dates could be worth $6 million to Carson.

The decision, made about a month ago, was disclosed Wednesday and confirmed by the office of Carson's attorney, Henry Bushkin.

Carson

Former presiding Superior Court Judge William Hogoboom ruled that the couple separated Nov. 7, 1982, as Carson had contended, not March 4, 1983, as Mrs. Carson said.

Mrs. Carson had claimed she was entitled to division of $6 million in community property acquired during the four-month period.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Clara Peller, the 82-year-old who got feisty in a famous commercial because of too little meat for her sandwich, has no beef over her new recording career.

The gray-haired widow asks her much-repeated question, "Where's the beef?" in a new song by that name recorded with former Nashville radio disc jockey Coyote McCloud.

McCloud, 36, says they'll become "the Sonny and Cher of 1984."

The two sang the song Wednesday during a news conference to promote the tune. "I didn't record anything, but I like it," Mrs. Peller said amiably.

Her 16 repetitions of "Where's the beef?" in the song were taken from the commercials and dubbed into the recording.

COLUMBIA FALLS, Mont. (AP) — This month's wedding of Patti Davis and Paul Grilley in Los Angeles was about as normal as possible — considering that the president's daughter was involved, say Grilley's parents.

Terry and Donna Grilley returned home to Columbia Falls from Los Angeles on Sunday after the Aug. 13 wedding of their son to President Reagan's daughter. They had met the president and Nancy Reagan at a rehearsal the day before.

First girl plays in league series

By JEFF BARKER
Associated Press Writer

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — With only one inning to go and the game almost out of reach, 8,000 people loudly cheered for a pint-sized pinch hitter.

A Korean orphan adopted by British parents, Victoria Roche, 12, stepped into the dusty batter's box for the European team in the fifth inning and became the first girl to play in the 38-year-old Little League World Series.

She bent her 5-foot, 94-pound frame in a crouch and, with the crowd cheering every pitch, drew a walk.

"She is a sweet, sweet kid and a good ballplayer in her own right. She's no schlepper. She made it ahead of nine boys," said team manager John Fader.

Girls have played Little League baseball since 1974, but none had ever advanced to the single-elimination tournament held annually in this city where the league was born in 1939.

Victoria, who has shoulder length black hair, a quick smile and a British accent, was found "in a bundle somewhere" in Seoul, South Korea, when she was about 3 months old, said her chaperone, Mary Lynn Fader, wife of team manager Fader.

Her British adoptive parents, John and Angela Roche, heard about her through a Belgian organization that handles foreign-born adoptions, and adopted her when she was 3, said Mrs. Fader. Victoria holds joint British-South Korean citizenship.

Victoria and her brother, Jeremy, 11, play for an all-star team from Brussels, Belgium, where they live with their parents and another brother, Duncan.

Victoria, a reserve outfielder who says she is also a good catcher, was picked out of a pool of 25 players for an all-star team of 14.

With little leaguers from America, Japan, Great Britain and France, Fader calls his Brussels team a "mini United Nations." Some of the players' parents are in the military, others work in private industry.

Brussels won a tournament among teams from Holland, Spain, Germany and others to advance here, representing Europe. But the team lost 3-0 in Tuesday's game. Victoria batted again in a consolation game Wednesday and grounded out.

Victoria is a celebrity at 10,000-seat Lamade Stadium, where the games are being played this week with teams representing the United States, Europe, Latin America, Canada and the Far East.

But she would rather trade memorabilia and play wiffle-ball like the other youngsters than sign autographs and do television interviews.

"We were watching me on television last night. It was pretty awful," she said in a British accent as she sat on a fence post and joked with security guards near the stadium.

"I'd rather be just like the other boys," she said.

Victoria doesn't sleep in the International Grove, where the 111 boys entered in the tournament live in cabins, but stays in a hotel across the street with Mrs. Fader.

Judge considering woman's extradition

TORONTO (AP) — A County Court judge says he will rule next month on California's request to extradite Cathy Evelyn Smith, who is accused of murder in the drug-overdose death of comedian John Belushi.

Judge Stephen Borins said Wednesday he would announce his decision Sept. 12.

Miss Smith sat calmly through Wednesday's detailed legal arguments, leaning her elbow on the rail of the prisoner's dock. Afterward, she told reporters: "I have no comment whatsoever."

Miss Smith, a Canadian citizen, was indicted in March 1983 on one count of murder and 13 counts of administering dangerous drugs. She is free on $75,000 bail.

Brian Greenspan, Miss Smith's lawyer, argued during the three-day hearing that the evidence presented would only support a conviction for manslaughter, not murder, under Canadian criminal law.

He said extradition also should be denied on the drug counts because there was not encugh evidence to prove that the drug being administered was heroin or cocaine.

Bartender gets more bad news in sitcom

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When last we saw Sam and Diane they had split up. Here's more bad news for the skirt-chasing bartender on NBC's "Cheers."

Sam, played by Ted Danson, is getting a rival for the affections of Diane, the waitress played by Shelley Long. Kelsey Grammer is joining "Cheers" in the fall as Dr. Frasier Crane.

"We wanted to give a different form to the Sam-Diane relationship — a triangle," said Glen Charles, one of the show's executive producers. "We really don't know where the road's going to led us.

"Diane's always been attracted to Sam, but claimed he wasn't her romantic and intellectual ideal. Now we're going to give her her ideal and see how it works out," said Charles. "We've shot four shows already and we think the dynamics of the three-some works out."

Grammer starred in the soap opera "Another World" and appeared in the miniseries "Kennedy" and "George Washington."

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

Sometimes you can choose which defender will win a particular trick. If so, concede it to the hand that can do you the least damage.

There is something undignified about landing at the five-level voluntarily in a major suit. You are upping the ante without increasing your reward for fulfilling the contract. But there can be no gainsaying the fact South had a very fine hand that grew even better once his suit had been supported. North had the bare-bones minimum for his free raise, so he kept signing off until South made a slam try above game level, when he cooperated mildly.

West got his side off to a good lead when he attacked with the ace of spades. Declarer ruffed and drew trumps in two rounds, ending in dummy. Since the king of clubs was surely wrong and declarer had to lose the ace of diamonds, everything seemed to depend on the location of the jack of diamonds. But declarer proved the hand was a cinch even if he lost a trick to the knave.

As long as his club holding could not be attacked, he could set up at least one diamond in his hand to take care of dummy's losing club. So at trick four declarer led the nine of diamonds from the table.

East could not rise with the ace of diamonds without setting up the suit, so he played low. Declarer ran the diamond to West's jack, and West could do no better than return a spade. Declarer ruffed and continued with a diamond to the king and ace. East shifted to a club, but it was too late. Declarer rose with the ace, cashed the queen of diamonds and pitched the board's club on a good diamond. Making five-odd, losing two diamonds.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: TV host Dennis James, pianist Louis Teicher, MVP Cal Ripken of the Baltimore Orioles, auto racing's Roger McCluskey, announcer Durward Kirby, California Angels' Luis Sanchez and Cleveland second sacker Tony Bernazard celebrate birthdays today. From the past: author Sir Max Beerbohm. Learn to delegate more responsibilities and you will accomplish twice as much. Teamwork boosts productivity to new heights. Financial considerations influence a job or career choice. Count on romance to be more active than ever! Business travel proves very worthwhile. Family events grow in importance. A young person needs your interest and guidance. Open new lines of communication.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Changes are featured; stay loose. Your work load could increase if an associate is absent. Stay good-humored. Someone influential should be more easygoing now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An excellent day for making plans to improve your property. Let a professional make major repairs. An influential person backs down on a promise. Turn on the charm! A newcomer shows interest.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If distant affairs are worrisome, write letters and make phone calls. Steer clear of friends who like to gamble. A family member could be holding back something to avoid incurring your anger.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A busy day lies ahead. A get-together with friends should prove very enjoyable, providing you do not pick up the tab. Avoid lending. Romance looks most promising.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Put extra effort into your work. Someone you need to see could prove elusive. Concentration will not come easy. Consult an older family member. He/she can help calm troubled waters.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Investigate any new financial opportunities. You need to understand the risks involved before investing. Keep spending within reasonable limits. Relatives are compassionate if you have a personal problem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You gain the support of someone influential. Problems are easier to solve than in the past. Investments bring gains. Ask family members to pitch in and help.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A part-time job could become full-time. Show more confidence in yourself. A quiet conversation with a loved one will restore domestic harmony. Go along with mate's suggestions. Limit your spending.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Shun speculative ventures and make a fresh start at work. Teamwork boosts profits and salaries. Advertised "bargains" may not be good value. A newcomer is a source of inspiration. Romance heats up.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Home and family matters claim your attention. Go out of your way to please loved ones. Someone who is a stickler for the rules could cause a delay. Welcome new work responsibilities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The career outlook is brighter now. Later on, obligations could threaten to hem you in. Be imaginative. Those who follow their intuition make record financial gains. Solve a personal problem before it grows.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Loved one may resent the time and attention you are giving to your personal interests. Innovative ideas will make a hit with the boss. Small groups prove more enjoyable than large ones tonight.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Police breaks up student protests

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Police used tear gas and fired shots into the air to break up a crowd of stone-throwing students protesting increases in textbook prices and bus fares.

Police said an undetermined number of students and policemen were slightly injured by stones in the scuffle Wednesday, and several demonstrators were arrested.

The disturbances, just outside the campus of the Autonomous University of Santo Domingo, forced cancellation of classes, according to Chancellor Fernando Sanchez Martinez. The university has an enrollment of 74,000 students.

The clash occurred after a five-student delegation met with Education Minister Ivelisse Prats de Perez to discuss increases of up to 150 percent in textbook prices and a 66 percent hike in bus fares.

Police said the disturbances were the worst since April, when four days of rioting over price increases for food and other consumer goods claimed at least 54 lives.

The price increases are among austerity measures the government has taken in its negotiations to obtain a three-year $459.5 million loan from the International Monetary Fund.

Boy accidentally shot to death

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — A 13-year-old boy was accidentally shot to death by an American military policeman who was cleaning his service revolver, the U.S. Information Agency reports.

The statement Wednesday said the boy, identified as Ernest John, was pronounced dead on arrival at a hospital. did not identify the American, serving with the peacekeeping force here, and no additional details were given.

The shooting, which occurred Tuesday, is under investigation by the Royal Grenada Police Force, the USIA statement said.

The American military police are part of the multinational Caribbean Peacekeeping Force that has been in Grenada since the Oct. 25 U.S.-led invasion.

Ugandan refugees return home

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Ugandan refugees who fled to Zaire in the final days of dictator Idi Amin's rule have begun returning home again under a United Nations repatriation program that was halted for seven weeks.

The program, which resumed Wednesday, had been stopped after Haji Jabiri, a chief from Amin's Kakwa tribe, was killed when he returned to Uganda's West Nile region, 156 miles northwest of Kampala, capital of this East African nation.

The West Nile, which borders Zaire and Sudan, was the last point of resistance by Amin's troops in 1979, when Tanzanian forces overthrew Amin, whose regime was blamed for the torture and killing of tens of thousands of civilians.

Marcel Lukika, a U.N. refugee official, said he had received guarantees of the refugees' safety from Gen. Tito Okello, Uganda's chief of defense forces. Lukika said an estimated 45,000 Ugandans had fled to Zaire when Tanzania moved in.

Hundreds reportedly missing

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The attorney general's office says it has received complaints about more than 900 people who have vanished in Peru's guerrilla war zone, most of them allegedly disappearing after being arrested by government forces.

In its report Wednesday, the attorney general's office listed 934 people as having been reported "disappeared" in the war zone.

The figures, covering roughly the last 36 months of the insurgency, show 18 percent of the cases were reported since President Fernando Belaunde Terry gave the military the main role in fighting the rebels last month.

The attorney general's office made no comment on the cases and did not say whether prosecution had been recommended. It was the first time the office had given figures on the missing persons issue.

Belaunde has denied human rights violations related to the four-year insurgency by Maoist-oriented guerrillas of the Shining Path movement. He said last week, however, that any abuses of police power would be punished.

Princess makes trip to funeral

SANDRINGHAM, England (AP) — Princess Diana, who is expecting her second child next month, made a 700-mile round trip to attend the funeral of an uncle who committed suicide.

The princess traveled Wednesday from Balmoral Castle, the royal family's vacation home in Scotland, to Sandringham in eastern England, where a service was held in the parish church for Lord Fermoy.

Family members said Lord Fermoy, 45, was suffering from depression when he killed himself Sunday at his family home, Eddington House in Berkshire, west of London.

Lord Fermoy was the brother of Princess Diana's mother, Frances Shand Kydd. He grew up on the royal estate at Sandringham, where his mother was a lady-in-waiting to Queen Mother Elizabeth.

The 23-year-old Diana, wife of Prince Charles, flew from Aberdeen to Marham Royal Air Force Base, wearing a black maternity dress and a veil. After attending the funeral, she returned to Balmoral Castle.

Both sides claim election victory

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The white-minority government today said a 30 percent voter turnout was enough to legitimize South Africa's first non-white chamber of Parliament, but leaders of a boycott campaign claimed they had discredited the election.

Unofficial results today from 63 of 80 districts showed that close to 30 percent of registered mixed-race voters cast ballots Wednesday for the new, segregated Parliament chamber.

Police fired tear gas and rubber bullets and used batons to disperse anti-election demonstrators in two townships near Johannesburg, andpolice headquarters in Pretoria said 110 people were arrested nationwide on charges of disrupting the voting.

The Cape Times newspaper quoted education officials as saying that half a million mixed-race students stayed away from school Wednesday to support the boycott.

Before the elections, government spokesmen had said that no matter how low the turnout, they would go ahead with plans to create mixed-race and Asian chambers of Parliament, in addition to an all-white chamber that would retain ultimate control. The Asians, also divided over whether to boycott the polls, vote next Wednesday.

South Africa's black majority of 22 million remains without the right to vote, own land or move about freely.

Chris Heunis, minister of constitutional development and planning, said the expected 30 percent turnout was "acceptable" to legitimize the parliamentary chamber.

However, Jonathan de Vries of the United Democratic Front, which urged mixed-race voters to stay away from the polls, said the voting was "a lesson that you cannot speak on behalf of the people without receiving a mandate from them."

Unofficial results today showed that the Labor Party had won 59 seats and was favored in most of the ones where ballot counting continued. The People's Congress won one seat, two were captured by independents and one race ended in a tie, which will require a runoff.

The Cape Times, in an editorial, said: "The embarrassingly low percentage poll in many of the constituencies won by Labor will make the victory somewhat hollow and give weight to the claims of anti-election groups that the results constitute a moral victory."

The newspaper, which is often critical of South Africa's official policy of race separation, noted that the 30 percent of registered voters who cast ballots included just 18 percent of those who could have voted if all those eligible had registered.

A new constitution approved last year by white voters adds an 80-seat chamber of Parliament for the 2.7 million people of mixed race and a 40-seat house for the 850,000 South Africans of Asian descent — mainly Indian.

But the new constitution, which takes effect next month, left the 166-member white chamber with power to veto actions by the other two and govern without them if necessary. There are about 5 million whites in South Africa.

New law could create crime wave

ROME (AP) — A controversial new law that could free thousands of suspects awaiting trial, among them Mafia figures and alleged leftist and right-wing terrorists, is raising fears of a new wave of crime in Italy.

The law, passed on July 26 with the support of Socialist Premier Bettino Craxi's five party coalition, reduces to six years the maximum term a prisoner can be detained without trial.

It replaces a law adopted in the 1970s when Italy was battling waves of left- and right-wing terrorism and organized crime. The old law allowed suspects to languish in jail for 10 years and eight months without trial.

The new law was opposed by judges and prosecutors, who will be under pressure to speed up the judicial process or allow suspects to be released on "provisional liberty," comparable to being released on bail, or placed under house arrest pending trial.

"We will have to begin from zero because no one will be left in prison," said Judge Giovanni Falcone of Palermo, who added that dozens of big-time Mafia leaders will have to be freed.

Last week 36 magistrates released a letter to the government saying they feared the new law would unleash hundreds of criminals and undo the progress made in the battle against terrorism and organized crime.

Socialist legislator Domenico Romano admitted there would be problems implementing the new law, but said: "You have to start somewhere."

There is no firm figure for how many prisoners will be released.

According to the Rome daily La Repubblica, 36,000 detainees are either awaiting trial or have appealed their sentences, and may be eligible for pre-trial release.

Avanti, the Socialist Party newspaper, said some 5,000 detainees will actually benefit from the new law and soon gain provisional liberty.

The plight of Giuliano Naria, a jailed Red Brigades terrorist, has become a focus of the controversey.He served a five-year sentence for belonging to the Red Brigades, but has been awaiting trial for eight years on charges arising from terrorist incidents.

Naria, once a hefty man, is suffering from the nervous disorder anorexia nervosa, which has cut his weight down to less than 100 pounds.

Prosecutors argue that he is a dangerous terrorist and should be held in jail until all pending cases against him are settled. Others argue it is inhumane and a violation of human rights to hold some one in prison for so long without trial.

Naria has yet to obtain his freedom from a prison hospital in the northern city of Turin. On Tuesday a Rome court awarded him the first victory in his efforts to be transferred to house arrest. But another court in Trani, on the southern Adriatic coast, has yet to make the final decision on the transfer.

For now only those prisoners held on such charges as armed assault and criminal association can be released. Suspects in more serious crimes will have to wait until February, when the law goes into full effect, to obtain freedom.

The new law has created a nightmare for Italy's judicial system, which must race to clear thousands of cases, many of them pending for years, before the February deadline.

Otherwise thousands of criminals will be released and many officials fear Italy will face the same anarchy that confronted the country before terrorism declined in the early 1980s.

Crime rates have gone down as a result of arrest blitzes in recent years and there are fears that they could shoot up again if many untried terrorists and gangsters are freed.

Reservations still open for jazz classic

Reservations may still be made for Midland's 8th annual Jazz Classic to be held at the Holiday Inn Country Villa beginning Oct. 9 and lasting through Oct. 14. Some 20 nationally well-known jazz musicians will provide the nightly entertainment.

Only 240 seats are available to the general public. Each seat costs $125 and is good for all six performances. Many people who are interested in going to some, but not all, of the performances get together with friends and share tickets. This reduces the price considerably for a couple attending one performance.

Tickets are available only from the Midland Jazz Association, 400 W. Wall Ave., Suite 209. Reservations may be made by calling 682-5334. Tickets are not available at the door.

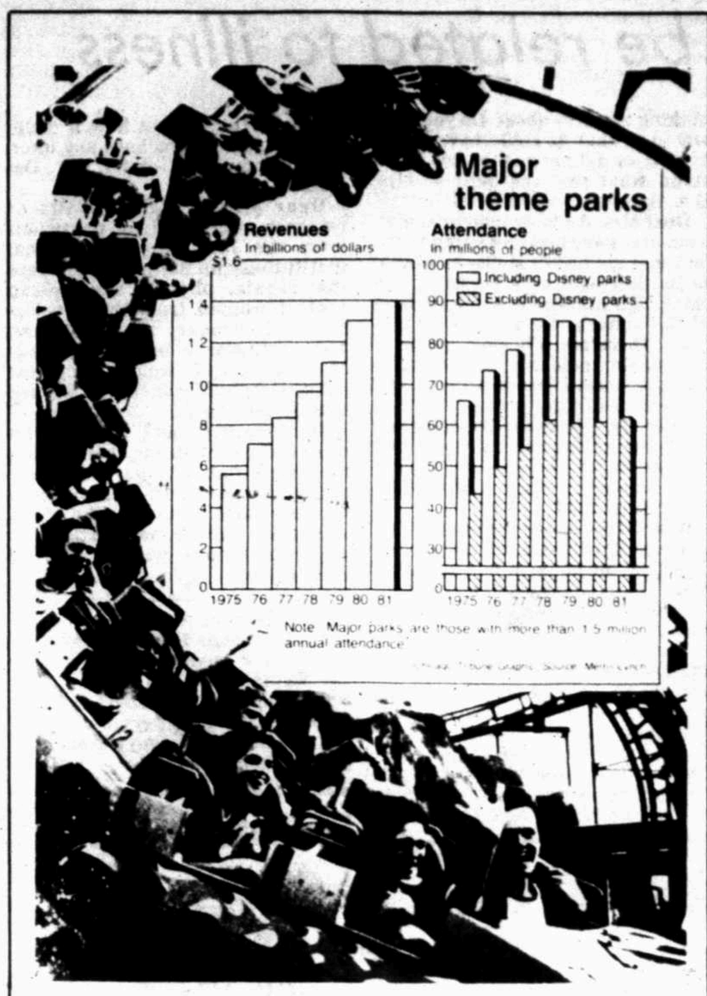

Many of the musicians who performed in 1983 have accepted invitations to return in 1984. Two of the returning musicians, Trummy Young on trombone, and Jack Sheldon on trumpet, received many standing ovations for their music, vocals and humor in 1983.

Young, whose musical career spans 54 years, has been featured with such giants as Earl Hines, Jimmy Lunceford, Billie Holiday, Charley Barnet and Louis Armstrong. He has also been heard on many hit records since 1933.

Sheldon has appeared with Benny Goodman, Count Basie, Stan Kenton, Harry James and Woody Herman. He has also been on many television shows including The Mike Douglas Show, The Joey Bishop Show, The Tonight Show and The Merv Griffin Show.

Other musicians who have been invited to the 1984 Classic are Derek Smith, Ralph Sutton and Dick Hyman, piano; Jack Lesberg (who is also the musical director for the event), Milt Hinton and Michael Moore, bass; Butch Miles, Gus Johnson and Mousey Alexander, drums; Warren Vache and Clark Terry, trumpet; Urbie Green and Carl Fontana, trombone; Zoot Sims and Flip Phillips, tenor sax; Bud Shanks and Jim Galloway, soprano sax, alto sax and flute; Johnny Mince and Phil Bodner, clarinet; and Cal Collins, guitar.

Hudson reads himself to sleep with scripts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock Hudson, who is making features again after a four-year absence, says he finds a useful purpose for the scripts that pour in.

"They're the best sleeping pill in the world," the actor said. "And if you can get into the story it doesn't happen until page 25."

Hudson, 58, who had quintuple bypass surgery in 1981, made his last film in 1980, "The Mirror Crack'd." He recently completed the movie, "The Ambassador."

"I would love to do a good play...or a good film," he said. "I'd love to do a good miniseries...Last year I didn't work for a year.

Santa Rita Club to host orientation coffee

The Santa Rita Club of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum is hosting an orientation coffee at 10 a.m. Tuesday for all those interested in learning more about the docent program at the museum.

The Santa Rita Club of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame was formed July 9, 1975, with 28 charter members. The group is named after the discovery well in the Big Lake Field.

Out of this group, volunteers were set up to work in various areas of the museum, such as the gift shop, archives and conducting tours. The docents who conduct tours have a series of training sessions to prepare them for the tours.

One of the outreach programs the docents provide is a puppeteers group that visits Midland elementary schools before their trip to the museum to present an orientation play to the children.

To date, 385 teachers, 6,710 children and 199 adults have gone through the museum on about 354 docent tours.

Training sessions this year begin Sept. 4 and continue each Tuesday through Oct. 16. The sessions start at 9:30 a.m.

The Santa Rita Club has 31 active members. Moira Attwell is president and Sara Grimes is the docent recruiting chairman.

The Petroleum Museum is the only major museum of its kind in the Southwest. It was conceived, designed and built to pay tribute to the area's largest industry, petroleum. The museum, which is a nonprofit organization, has been funded entirely by contributions.

For more information call the museum, 684-9123 or 683-4403.

Midlander to speak at Toastmasters convention

ORLANDO, Fla. — John Slyker of Midland is a featured speaker on the educational program at the International Convention of Toastmasters International in Orlando, Fla., through Saturday.

The convention program includes educational presentations about improving personal communications, public speaking and interpersonal communications. Slyker is presenting a session on "The First Result of Speech Training is Self Discovery."

Among the Midlanders attending the convention is Scott Long, immediate past district governor of District 44, which includes North Texas and West Texas. He is to be honored as one of the top 10 leaders in Toastmasters International in 1983-84. District 44 finished 10th in member educational accomplishments ad membership growth. There are 74 districts in the world.

The World Championship of Public Speaking Contest, the climax of the activities, will be held Saturday.

Toastmasters International is a non-profit educational organization that offers communication and leadership training.

MCT production demonstrates 'Mass Appeal'

Midland Community Theatre's production of Bill Davis' "Mass Appeal" closes Saturday. The production was held over for two additional performances due to popular demand.

This comedy/drama about the relationship between a young seminary student and a popular parish priest is being staged in Theatre Two at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Starring in the play are Jess Kozman as Father Tim Farley and Matt Mabe as Mark Dolson.

For reservations call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Degree of risk from drug must be related to illness

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that some of the drugs that are used in the treatment of cancer are poisonous? I find this hard to believe, and I wonder if you would explain why a drug that is so risky is used to treat people who are so very sick. — Mr. T.P., Staten Island, N.Y.

Dear Mr. P.: It is just because these patients are so very sick that the use of these drugs is warranted. The degree of risk in the use of a drug must be related to the disease it is being used to treat. Many of the drugs that are being used to treat cancer are toxic; however, the serious nature of the disease justifies their use since without treatment the patient would probably not survive.

On the other hand, a very high standard of safety is required for drugs used in the treatment of minor illnesses, such as the common cold. A person who has a cold is essentially healthy; it would be wrong to expose such a person to a dangerous drug in order to treat a minor ailment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother is 76 years old. She tells me at the last physical examinatin her doctor told her that her sugar was a little high but that in view of her age, it was nothing to worry about. Do you have any idea what he could have meant by that, or did my mother misunderstand what she was told? — Mrs. E.A., Atlanta

Dear Mrs. A.: Your mother's physician may have been referring to the fact that the body's ability to handle sugar decreases as a person grows older. This has lead to some revision of the criteria for diagnosing diabetes. Therefore, a blood sugar level that might indicated diabetes in a younger person may not be of any concern in an older person.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter is 17 years of age and has never had her period. Do you have any suggestions for such a case? — Mrs. W.P., Bakersfield, Calif.

Dear Mrs. P.: According to Dr. William E. Gibbons, of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, a 17-year-old girl who has not had a spontaneous vaginal flow should be evaluated.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband and I are in our mid-forties. He has become an exercise nut because he says it will protect him against heart disease, and he is pressuring me to do the same. I have heard that exercise can help protect men from getting heart disease, but I've never heard anything about how it might help women. Do you have any information about this? — Mrs. W.P., Des Moines, Iowa.

Dear Mrs. P.: The results of research conducted by physicians from the John Hopkins Medical Institutions in Baltimore indicate that regular physical activity can protect women from the development of coronary artery disease. The conclusion is based on a study of more than 200 women, including housewives and women who worked outside the home.

Significantly more women who were sedentary during their leisure time were found to have coronary artery disease than were women who exercised regularly. The effect of regular exrcise was particularly apparent among women over 50 years of age.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Is famed music hall taking in boarders?

NEW YORK (AP) — Radio City Music Hall in the hotel business? Not quite.

But it seemed that way when scores of adolescent fans appeared outside the famed art deco concert hall with beds and lounge chairs to wait overnight so they could buy tickets to next month's Menudo concert.

When the hot pop group appeared at Radio City last February, it set a record in ticket sales. This concert is expected to be the same, a spokeswoman said, adding that five shows were completely sold out during the first day of ticket sales last Thursday.

Radio City is sponsoring a contest with a local radio station and TV channel for chaperoned dates at a secret place with the five Menudo youngsters. The winning girls can take a best friend along and will get on a shopping spree with a personal shopper at Macy's.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., gestures during his speech to the Republican National Convention Wednesday night in Dallas. Goldwater was the Republican presidential nominee in 1964.

Goldwater sowed seeds; Reagan reaps harvest

By WALTER R. MEARS

An Analysis

DALLAS (AP) — Twenty years ago, Barry Goldwater planted the seeds of conservative dominance in the Republican Party, and now he was back for Ronald Reagan's harvest.

The nominee of 1964, who battled in the political trenches to "take this party back" for conservatism, bestowed his old campaign slogan on his heir, the president of 1984.

"In your hearts, you know he's right," Goldwater told the Republican National Convention on Wednesday night.

The Arizona senator was duly applauded then, as when he repeated his defiant warcry of two decades back. "And let me remind you," he said, "extremism in the defense of liberty is no vice."

It was explosive first time out. This time it was only nostalgic. These conservative Republicans warmed to the words, but they hadn't waged the wars of the Goldwater era.

The controversies that raged between GOP factions in those days have not ended, but the conservatives Goldwater led through a losing presidential battle are in total command of the party.

They gained it behind President Reagan, who first came to national politics as a campaigner and fund-raiser in the Goldwater campaign. There's no generation gap between the conservative champions — Reagan is 73, Goldwater 75. But there is a wide one between the Republican troops of their campaigns.

In the years since Goldwater's nomination, the Republican spectrum — indeed, the American political spectrum — has moved toward the right. The Democratic platform of 1984 is a more conservative document than those of the past. The Republican platform includes planks that go beyond Goldwater's conservatism.

In another era, conservatives did battle with people like Nelson A. Rockefeller, liberal Republicans who preferred to be called moderates, or centrists or mainstream politicians.

But the mainstream isn't where it used to be. Gerald R. Ford is a basically conservative midwestern Republican, but in today's lineup he's a voice from the center. "I'm a moderate or a centrist in the Republican Party," the former president said. "I feel very strongly that that element in the Republican Party has to be represented."

That's the sort of thing Rockefeller and his allies used to say to the Goldwater conservatives. Not that it got them much. The nominated Goldwater said he did not expect the support of people who did not agree with his cause. That cause was Republican conservatism.

"I don't buy the idea that I'm the godfather or the padre of what's going on today," Goldwater said in Dallas. "My ideas weren't new."

But he was the leader, "the conscience of a conservative," the symbol of the movement that moved the party. Sen. John Tower of Texas told the convention Goldwater "fostered a movement that changed the political complexion of America — culminating in the election of Ronald Reagan to the presidency of the United States."

For all that, Goldwater has not always been a hero to the new right. He supported Ford over Reagan for the Republican nomination in 1976, and some of his old supporters thought it a betrayal.

He opposes constitutional amendments to ban abortion and to permit prayer in public schools, not because he disagrees with the objectives but because he doesn't want the Constitution changed for such purposes. Both are supported in the GOP platform. Goldwater once vowed to fight the new right "if they try to dictate their moral convictions to all Americans in the name of conservatism."

The 1984 platform was approved routinely, without a dissenting word. The moderates who wanted it amended in their direction couldn't muster the support to take their case to the convention floor. Goldwater's partisans didn't have that kind of control in 1964. But they had the voices to shout down his critics, and the votes make it stick.

"I have a hunch this is my last convention," Goldwater remarked in Dallas.

Whether it is or not, his imprint will be there when Republican meet again.

Democrats help hype tribute to Reagan

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — Like the movie that snowballs into a box office hit by word of mouth, the President Reagan promotional film will be carried in its entirety by at least two television networks tonight partially because the Democrats tried to ban it and bury it, but only ended up boosting it.

In a convention minus controversy and surprise, the networks' uncertainty about providing Reagan with 18 minutes of gravy has become a big issue. "Is that what we mean by Decision '84?" correspondent Roger Mudd asked anchor Tom Brokaw during a report about the film on the "NBC Nightly News."

NBC and the Cable News Network have said they will run the 18-minute cinematic tribute introducing Reagan to the Republican convention tonight. ABC said this morning that it won't show the film in its entirety.

CBS said it will make a decision later today.

Network executives who have seen what amounts to a highlight reel of the president's victories and virtues the past four years say it is slick, patriotic and movingly upbeat, the kind of sentimental soft sell that Madison Avenue uses to peddle colas and burgers.

The Reagan-Bush campaign's advertising arm, the Tuesday Team, produced the $425,000 film. One key player was Phil Dusenberry, whose ad agency created Pepsi-Cola's energetic commercials with Michael Jackson.

Normally, the networks treat these back-slapping political pictures as pure propaganda. Their attitude is, cut it down to 18 one-minute commercial spots and you can pay us to run them in prime time.

ABC, CBS and NBC showed no guilt over censoring Walter F. Mondale's flick last month in San Francisco — but there are added issues here, not the least of which is that the Democrats helped fan interest in the film.

"There's a certain irony in that they started it," said Lawrence Grossman, president of NBC News.

Earlier this month, the Democratic National Committee suggested that since the networks didn't find the Mondale movie newsworthy, Reagan's film should not be ready for prime time either. "What's sauce for the goose (should be) sauce for the gander," the DNC said in a letter.

The DNC sent another letter to the networks Tuesday, contending the film was still a "lavishly produced political commercial," even though it had attained celebrity status.

In explaining NBC's decision, Grossman alluded to the media attention. "In the end you make the decision that makes the most sense to the viewers you are serving," he said. "It's now a matter of general interest."

Grossman says viewers also will be served by NBC pointing out omissions from the film. While the Reagan-narrated biography dwells on the high spots, NBC will offer some journalistic balance. In addition, NBC White House correspondent Andrea Mitchell is preparing a four-minute piece on the making of the movie.

But for the viewer-voter, the film's lasting image will be the pictures, sound track and emotions tapped, not Brokaw's caveats.

The result is that the Democrats, so intent on keeping those beauty shots off the air, have lost a key round to the Republicans, whose strategy of using the film — and not a speaker — as the introduction to Reagan's acceptance speech was called "a master stroke" by NBC floor correspondent Ken Bode.

With the convention hall dark, the movie flickering and anticipation for Reagan surging, the Republicans have made it very hard for the networks to ignore the film. Interviews on the darkened floor are impossible, and in the anchor booth difficult.

What Republican is going to upstage the star of the movie and the GOP?

As Grossman said, "to have somebody talk about the film and not show it wouldn't make any sense. And for the networks to do their own Reagan retrospective, instead, might be interpreted as arrogance."

So what's left would seem to be showing all of it — as NBC and CNN are doing — or including excerpts of it in a produced analytical piece, such as the celluloid selling of the two parties. That's what ABC will probably do right before Reagan's speech, and viewers will get two movie stars — Reagan and Mondale.

An ABC executive, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified, said that was exactly what "Nightline" had planned to do. The late-night broadcast was preparing to show both the Reagan and Mondale films and have them reviewed by Chicago movie critics Gene Siskel and Roger Ebert.

What state is universe's hub? Where is the last frontier?

DALLAS (AP) — Quick now, what state is the hub of the universe, where is America's last frontier, which is the land of pleasant living and which is the home of farms and beautiful beaches?

If you had been paying attention Wednesday night during the roll call of the Republican National Convention, you'd know the answers are Mass[illegible], Alaska, Maryland and [illegible].

You'd also know that one delegate [illegible] a vote for giving the nation Eugene McCarthy, who tried to be a presidential nominee and failed, and Hubert Humphrey, who was one and lost.

What state?

Why, Walter Mondale's Minnesota, of course.

What state is the home of Sandra Day O'Connor, the first female Supreme Court justice, and where does the West truly begin? Arizona and North Dakota, but stick around — the questions get tougher.

The roll call traditionally gives states an opportunity for blatant boosterism on national television if they so like, but only among fellow delegates if they're not.

Republicans installed $2.5 million worth of electronic gadgetry this year — whiz-bang computers that deliver mail, take messages and keep delegates up to date on everything going on around them. But voting is done by voice, from Alabama through Wyoming. Some things are sacred.

Every state is "The Proud State Of." Or "The Great State Of." Utah is the "Great and Beautiful State Of."

But let's get to the nitty gritty, relying on the Republicans for answers.

Match up the home of the U.S. Air Force Academy, the state that "leads the way in agriculture and in political caucuses," the "most Republican of all Southern states" and "the home of the nation's first woman governor."

Colorado, Iowa, Virginia and Wyoming.

The Empire State of the South?

Georgia.

The Constitution State?

Connecticut.

But how about "The Gem of the Mountains," "The Land of Opportunity" and "The Summer Home of Our Great Vice President"?

Idaho, Arkansas and Maine.

"Home of spacious skies, purple mountain majesties and a few less amber waves of grain than we had hoped for this year."

Montana.

Where are the "versatile" state, the "equality state" and "the most productive and innovative in the world?"

Oklahoma, Wyoming and Wisconsin.

Nancy Reagan says she's 'punching bag' for critics

DALLAS (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan says she has lost her private life and become a "punching bag" for her husband's critics, but she insists her ardor hasn't cooled for four more White House years.

Mrs. Reagan, who became a film star at 28, a governor's wife at 46 and a president's wife at 59, noted that while she and her husband have "always been in public life," the glare of public scrutiny in the White House is far more intense than she had ever expected.

"I never knew that there was such a difference," she said in an interview. "I never knew that the magnifying glass was that much stronger." She said she didn't "know whether one gets used to it or not."

Reflecting further on life in the executive mansion, she said: "I think any time you're the president or the president's wife you are in a sense a punching bag," but she offered no specifics.

And recalling remarks earlier in the day that she knew while standing on the inaugural platform at the capitol four years ago that "life would never be the same," she said the "obvious" difference is that "you don't have a private life any more."

Interviewed as her motorcade rolled Wednesday night from a convention hall tribute to her life and work, Mrs. Reagan discussed a wide range of subjects. She predicted November's election will be close but said President Reagan wants re-election to "work for peace."

The first lady was upbeat and laughing following her address and the demonstration that erupted when her husband's name was placed in nomination. She was driving back to the Anatole Hotel to watch the balloting that gave Reagan his second presidential nomination.

She said she would like a second term as first lady to continue her nationwide campaign against drug abuse, especially among the young.

"I would like to continue on the drug effort because there's a great, great more to do," she said. "I think it's a huge problem."

She said she intends to campaign with her husband this fall.

"I will be doing some traveling with him," she said. "I don't know exactly how much."

But she said she also wants to devote considerable time this fall traveling for the drug abuse program.

"I really don't want to let that slide," she said. "There's still a lot to do. What I'll do is really a combination of those two things."

She was asked for a prediction on the outcome of the campaign.

"I'm a very superstitious lady," replied the president's wife.

So no prediction?

"No," she replied with a laugh. "Certainly not."

While the Republican convention here has seen little dissent and much unity, two of the Reagan children, Maureen and Ronald Prescott Reagan, have staked out distinctly independent approaches on issues of concern to them.

Maureen Reagan, a delegate from California, voted against the Republican platform after failing in efforts to persuade the platform committee to include words of encouragement for the Equal Rights Amendment.

The president's youngest son authored a columnn for The Dallas Morning News in which he made clear the Reagan children reserve the right to make independent political judgments and cheered on Maureen's efforts saying he is "proud to have a sister on the cutting edge of the Republican Party's enlightenment concerning women's issues."

Soviet reporters at convention still prefer Communist society

DALLAS (AP) — Covering the Republican National Convention, with its capitalist theme, hasn't altered the devotion held by the New York bureau chief of the Soviet news agency Tass for his own government's ways.

Nicolai Setounski, making his first visit to Dallas with his coverage of the GOP convention, said, "I came here from a socialist society, which in my judgment is superior to the capitalist system in terms of how the state cares for ordinary people."

Setounski added, "We don't have unemployment, education is free, medical care is free and we don't have homeless people."

In his hotel room, Setounski talked Tuesday with fellow Soviet journalist Andrej Tolkunov of Pravda.

"Tass has about 20 people in Washington and New York, and we have two," Tolkunov said.

Setounski said that Dallas is "no more capitalistic than New York," where he has worked at varying intervals for the past eight years.

"I think Dallas is a pretty new developed area...The architecture in some quarters is very nice," he said. "I wish we would have had time to look inside some of the buildings.

"We watched some of the important reconstructed places," he said. "We watched old Hoovervilles," referring to the small-frame shanties of West Dallas.
