U.S., Soviets agree to extend talks

GENEVA (AP) — U.S. and Soviet arms control negotiators agreed today to extend their talks on medium-range nuclear missiles following Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's offer to sign an accord eliminating such weapons from Europe.

The agreement to extend the talks came during a special meeting to discuss the Soviet offer. The current round of Soviet-U.S. talks on medium-range nuclear missiles had been scheduled to end Wednesday.

U.S. delegation spokesman Terry Shroeder told The Associated Press that the length of the extension had not been decided. He said that would be up to the chief negotiators on medium-range missiles, Maynard Glitman and Lem Masterkov.

The two other negotiating groups, on long-range weapons and space and defense systems, were to end on schedule Wednesday, said Shroeder.

He declined further comment on the meeting.

Vladimir Shebanov, spokesman for the Soviets, confirmed that his delegation had presented the proposal but declined to provide further details.

Before going into the meeting, chief U.S. negotiator Max Kampelman said he thought the proposal would amount to "an old proposal rehashed," but said the Americans would be glad to hear it.

The meeting at the Soviet mission was a joint plenary session of the top three negotiators from each side and their aides. The meeting lasted one hour and was the first such meeting of the current round of arms talks, which began Jan. 15.

Kampelman shook hands with his Soviet counterpart, Deputy Foreign Minister Yuli Vorontsov, in the foyer outside the meeting room before beginning their talks.

Asked if the two sides were making progress toward an agreement, Kampelman said: "Of course we are. Every day brings us closer."

However, he deflected a question about whether the United States would also present a new proposal at today's meeting by reiterating that he hoped to get a new one from the Soviets.

Vorontsov replied, "You will."

Soviet officials in Moscow said today the proposal was aimed at ending a deadlock in the Geneva arms talks.

Soviets say offer proves 'willingness'

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet media hailed as historic Mikhail S. Gorbachev's offer to rid Europe of superpower medium-range nuclear missiles in which he dropped his demand that such an accord be linked to limits on "Star Wars" testing.

The state-run media reaction Sunday, similar to previous campaigns to marshal support for Kremlin positions, was clearly designed to put pressure on the United States to respond quickly to the Soviet offer.

The Foreign Ministry scheduled a news conference today to discuss the proposal, announced by Gorbachev in a statement distributed Saturday by the official news agency Tass.

In Geneva, Soviet and U.S. arms negotiators also planned a special session today to discuss the offer.

Gorbachev said a "ready accord" on medium-range missiles in Europe was reached in October at his two-day summit with President Reagan in Iceland, and should be signed immediately.

That tentative agreement, and one to reduce long-range ballistic missiles, fell apart when U.S. officials refused to meet a Soviet demand to limit testing of Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative space-based defense research program, popularly known as Star Wars.

Negotiations on space weapons, including Star Wars, are part of three sets of talks that began in Geneva on March 12, 1985.

Soviet commentaries underscored Gorbachev's claim that the Kremlin had not stalled the talks on medium-range missiles by insisting on Star Wars limits.

"There is the possibility in a short time to free our common European home from a significant share of the nuclear burden," journalist Tomas Kolesnichenko said on the television program "International Panorama."

Voting location changed

County commissioners Monday approved a request by County Clerk Beverly Ainsworth to change the boundary line between voting box 18 and voting box 19 in Towle Memorial Park for the Aug. 8 special election.

For most elections, voters in precinct 18 cast ballots in the National Guard Armory. The boundary line will be moved to the middle of Towle Park Barn and both Pct. 18 and Pct. 19 will cast ballots at the barn. A regularly scheduled National Guard meeting on that date forced the change.

Ainsworth must now seek approval from the State Department of Justice. The change will affect only the Aug. 8 election.

Court members last week called the election for a vote on a proposed sales tax increase of one-half of one percent to replace an equal amount in ad valorem taxes for the county.

In other action, commissioners turned down a request from People for Progress of Sweetwater to implement a transportation program and expand a weatheriza-

Rise in juvenile crime here 'alarming'

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of two articles related to what law officers say is the number one crime problem in Snyder—a growing incidence of crimes committed by juveniles.)

By NOBLE B. YOUNG
SDN Staff Writer

"Out-of-control" and "frustrating" are the phrases law enforcement authorities use most often in talking about juvenile crime in Snyder.

Recent figures indicate that during 1986, police picked up 264 juveniles for various offenses.

That number represents a 37.5 percent increase over the previous year and a 108 percent increase from juvenile arrests reported here five years ago.

The numbers contrast to an adult arrest rate which has decreased steadily since 1982.

Adult arrests for 1986 were down by 34 percent compared to 1982 and have declined for each of the past five years.

Lt. Steve Warren, head of Snyder PD's criminal investigation division, called juvenile crime "the number one law enforcement problem in the city."

Sgt. Jerry Morgan, the city's investigator primarily assigned to juvenile enforcement, points out that Texas juvenile laws are designed to keep the child at home. "The problem arises when there is no supervision there," he said.

Criminal offenses by persons between the ages of 10 and 17 are covered by the Texas "Family Code," which prescribes a seperate system of penalties for those classified as juveniles.

These rules usually result in the juvenile being released from custody within hours after being taken into custody.

Most of the more serious juvenile crime in Snyder is, according to Morgan, done by repeat offenders.

The cycle, he said, is to take them before juvenile court, place them on probation, then return them to homes where there is little or no supervision.

One of the juveniles detained by police in 1986 was a 13-year-old picked up 16 times during the year.

Although 11 of the 16 incidents were runaway reports, that individual was also linked to three burglaries and one assault.

The youth was eventually committed to the Texas Youth Commission — the Texas juvenile prison system — in January after having been "worked" by police on 27 different occasions since the age of 10.

Although police note this was not an ordinary case, 64 of the juveniles picked up in 1986 had a record of two or more offenses.

In addition to an increasing number of incidents, the statistics show that juveniles were detained in Snyder in 1986 for every class of criminal of-—A resolution in memory of Mort Ewing Jr.

The only item of old business faced by the council will be a second reading on speed limits set for College Ave. (Texas Highway 180) and the portion of U.S. Highway 84 within the city limits.

The council will consider two bid items also. These includes bids received to purchase new city water meters; and bids received to sell a 1956 city fire truck.

Search costing money

AUSTIN (AP) — The city of Austin paid more than $600,000 to executive search firms over 27 months to find candidates for administrative jobs routinely filled by personnel departments in some other Texas cities, the Austin American-Statesman reported Sunday.

The city has paid $626,409 to eight executive search firms for 39 searches since Oct. 1, 1984, the newspaper reported. That figure included $492,740 paid for 30 such searches in 1986.

Of 30 searches undertaken last year, nine were discontinued by the city or did not result in the hiring of a candidate recommended by a search firm, according to records furnished by the city manager's office.

Each search firm received its full fee and expenses regardless of performance or whether the position was filled, City Manager Jorge Carrasco said.

Carrasco said the search companies are being used because he wants to build the best administrative team in the nation and because he needed to respond to problems that were approaching crises when he became city manager in March 1984.

He listed the problems as wastewater treatment, transportation, growth management, Brackenridge Hospital finances, the municipal airport location, future electric generation, electric service and diminishing federal funds.

Carrasco said no city of Austin's size "has ever seen the change that we've experienced in terms of the top department head level positions that have become vacant over the last three years."

He said he has replaced 23 of the city's 26 department heads during his tenure.

"If I had waited and not sought outside assistance from search firms, I probably would not be here today," he said.

The cost of 12 searches for unfilled positions was $175,548.

Medical Advances Turn Old Jokes Into Current Reality

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago, a woman who described herself as being pregnant "out to here" wanted to know what to say to people who asked, "Are you pregnant?"

Your reply: "Next time somebody asks you that question, say, 'No, I'm carrying this for a friend.'"

Well, Abby, in recent weeks we've been witnessing a child custody battle between a surrogate mother and the contractual parents, and I was again reminded of the irony of your prophetic advice. I thought it was such a great and funny line, I never forgot it.

Did you ever dream that one day it would actually happen?

D.L. CAMPBELL, DETROIT

Dear D.L.: Never. It's happening not only in the spirit of altruism (carrying a baby for a woman who might otherwise never experience the joy of motherhood), but there are also women with wombs for rent for $10,000 for nine months — plus delivery and carrying charges.

DEAR ABBY: "Mother of Girls" wrote from her hospital bed with tears streaming down her cheeks after just having given birth to her fifth daughter. (She felt that she had let her husband down because he had desperately wanted a son.)

Well, I am writing to you from my hospital bed with tears streaming down my cheeks because I just gave birth to a son who did not survive. This is my third pregnancy that ended in tragedy for my husband and me.

Abby, please tell "Mother of Girls" to stop complaining and to count her five blessings. I'm afraid that your advice to adopt a boy wasn't very realistic. Adoption today is a lengthy and often costly procedure. Also, not many agencies would give priority to a family that already had five birth children.

I'd gladly settle for one child — girl or boy.

MOTHER OF NONE

DEAR MOTHER OF NONE: Only one who has experienced the tragedy of losing a child (at any stage of pregnancy) can know your pain. One of the saddest inequities among women is that some are able to conceive and bear as many children as they wish, but others cannot. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure that many women felt as I did when they read that letter signed "Mother of Girls."

I am 35 and my husband is 37 and we have been trying to have a child for nearly 10 years. I have had four operations and we've spent over $20,000 on doctors and fertility clinics. Nothing has worked for us. (I still pray daily for a miracle.)

"Mother of Girls" should be offering prayers of thanks for her fifth daughter instead of shedding tears of disappointment because she didn't have a boy. She should be ashamed of herself.

Women who can readily have a child can't appreciate the anguish and disappointment we childless women go through. And our disappointment is compounded every month that pregnancy is not achieved. Worse yet, we feel that we've let our husbands down for being unable to give them a family. Sign me ...

Volunteers clean up after tornadoes

LAUREL, Miss. (AP) — About 3,000 volunteers pitched in to clean up after a tornado that killed seven and left nearly 500 families homeless as it churned a 20-mile swath of damage that officials estimated at more than $7.5 million.

"We're going house to house. If there's anything we can do, we'll do it," Andy Mayfield, part of a 22-man contingent from a Jackson Baptist church, said Sunday.

The Saturday morning twister injured at least 145 people, destroyed more than 330 homes and damaged about 300 as it carved a path 2 miles wide through mostly rural Jones County, skirting Laurel, a city of 21,000, officials said.

"It looks like Armageddon," said Judy Bryant of Hattiesburg, who was checking on relatives Saturday afternoon. Her family had escaped without serious injury.

Survivors on Sunday poked through clothing and broken furniture for their belongings, work crews used chain saws to clear away snapped pines in nearby Glade, and the owner of a used clothing shop gave clothes to the homeless.

"This is my living, but God bless me, my house didn't get torn up," said Margaret Rose, who lives two miles north of Glade. "I'm just happy to be alive."

Carl Carlos, county civil defense director, said assessment teams sent in by the state should have a complete damage estimate today. Damage to three schools alone could run to $7.5 million, he said.

The estimates will be included in the state's application for federal disaster status, a designation that would make residents eligible for grants and low-interest loans.

"Everybody is tired, but things are looking up," Carlos said Sunday. "We woke up to beautiful blue skies, so everybody feels a little better. It's just a matter of cleanup and get back on our feet now."

Six deaths, including that of a 15-year-old boy, were caused directly by the tornado, and one person died of a heart attack related to the storm, County Coroner Henry Dobson said.

The Red Cross said 492 families were left homeless by the twister, which in addition to Glade ripped through the small communities of Powers, Tucker's Crossing, Jenkins and Mosselle.

About 75 percent of the injuries were minor, Carlos said.

Carlos said it was fortunate that the tornado hit on a weekend, when there were no children in the three hard-hit schools — including one in Glade that was destroyed — and that residents had 15 minutes' warning.

The twister was spawned by a storm packing 45 mph winds that downed trees and power lines from Rankin County, near Jackson, to the Alabama border. Another tornado reportedly touched down near McComb, but only minor damage was reported, including several uprooted trees.

Gov. Bill Allain called the damage the state's worst since April 22, 1984, when four tornadoes killed 15 people and caused $18 million damage in Yalobusha County.

According to the Inter-American Development Bank, 56 percent of the rural population of Latin America lived at poverty levels in 1980. Poverty, however, varied widely among countries. Only about 10 percent of the rural population of Argentina and Uruguay were classified as poor in that year, compared with over 75 percent of the rural inhabitants of several countries in the Andean, Central American and Caribbean areas.

No settlement in squabble

HOUSTON (AP) — A squabble involving a private company that solicited funds for the restoration of the rusting Battleship Texas remains unsettled after an advisory board voted against a settlement proposal.

David Jones, a member of the Battleship Texas Advisory Board, proposed a settlement Saturday that would have given Texas Dynamics Inc. $150,000 and 10 percent of all funds raised in the next six months, along with 5 percent of funds raised over the following six months. In return, TDI would release the board to claim any percentage of a $5 million Navy grant.

Seven board members voted against the motion; Jones and another member abstained.

Jones also asked Gov. Bill Clements to remove all board members.

On-The-Job Injury
Don't let it keep you off the job a day longer than necessary

"I want to get rid of the pain and get back to work." We hear this a lot.

Temporary pain killers may be okay for temporary pain. But when the pain stays . . . or keeps coming back . . . it's time to try something else. The chiropractic approach to pain is to locate the CAUSE of the pain and correct it. When the cause is corrected, the pain usually goes away in short order. Why not try chiropractic FIRST for on-the-job injuries?

A consultation and preliminary examination can help determine whether chiropractic might help. If treatment, x-rays or other lab tests are indicated, they are covered by most Workers' Compensation insurance plans. CALL US TODAY.

This Mardi Gras is called different

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — The mention of Mardi Gras may bring New Orleans to the minds of many, but for others the Mississippi Gulf Coast is where the real party is on Fat Tuesday.

"Honey, Biloxi comes alive," says Margaret Ball.

An estimated 80,000 people will forsake New Orleans on Tuesday in favor of the parades in this area where street signs serve as town boundaries and souvenir shops are peppered every mile or so.

"I'll tell you why they come to the coast," said Gayle White, a New Orleans native who with Mrs. Ball owns a novelty shop that sells all the Mardi Gras essentials, such as sequined masks, green, purple and gold robes, and carnival wands used to extend the parade-goer's reach when grabbing for the beads thrown from floats.

"There's not as much crime and it's safer for families to come together. And besides, we know how to throw a party," Mrs. White said.

Dale Bumpers pushed into running

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dale Bumpers has been here before, teetering on the precipice of a campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination. This time around, supporters hope his head will follow his heart over the edge.

Other candidates are jumping into the presidential field, but Bumpers is being pushed. Last week, fellow Sen. Paul Simon, two members of the House and several prominent New York fund-raisers expressed their support for the undecided Arkansas Democrat.

If all this seems vaguely familiar, think back four years.

In 1983, Bumpers huddled with key national campaign strategists, surveyed Democratic fund raisers and tested his appeal at a number of "cattle shows," the events that draw prospective candidates en masse. It was said that Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts was encouraging him to run.

In late March, Bumpers gave a thumbs up to his political staff, and on March 25 they leaked his decision to run.

On April 5, they leaked his decision not to run.

"My heart was telling me I could, but my head was telling me it was nearly impossible," Bumpers said that day. The biggest hurdle: money.

AP analysis

"We figured it would be necessary to raise a minimum of $3 (million) to $5 million between now and Jan. 1, just to run a modest campaign and get to the Iowa and New Hampshire primaries," Bumpers explained. "I believe I could have raised a million in Arkansas. But I couldn't figure how we would raise the balance."

That was 1983. This is 1987. Enter Nancy Kuhn of New York City, who must have read a transcript of that news conference.

Ms. Kuhn, Walter Mondale's state finance chairman in 1984, says she recently told Bumpers she'd like to help him and estimated that he could raise at least $2.5 million in New York, the same as Mondale did.

Ms. Kuhn told the Arkansas Gazette that several other prominent New York fund-raisers are smitten with Bumpers, and one of them, businessman Jay Zises, told the paper, "We've been taken with Bumpers' uniqueness as a communicator" and impressed with his grasp of economic issues, his concern about arms control and his oratory skills.

Ms. Kuhn said Bumpers had the advantage of being both a Southern liberal and a fiscal conservative whose appeal could extend across regional and ideological boundaries.

That's a good description of Bumpers' appeal, and in the at-least-temporary absence of Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., from the presidential field, Bumpers could hope to take advantage of the Super Tuesday Southern primaries next March.

My friend Mike Lawrence has been a prolific writer of bridge books for the last 15 years. His first book, "How to Read Your Opponents' Cards," was recently reissued by Devyn Press. This week we'll look at some of those deals.

After leading the diamond ace, West shifts to the club jack. Declarer wins dummy's ace and plays a spade. When East plays the jack, there is no reason not to play the queen. That loses to the king and back comes another club. Declarer should win the king in his hand, play a spade to dummy's 10 and ruff a diamond. Down comes the king from West. Declarer returns to dummy with the club queen, cashes the diamond queen, on which West discards a low heart, and plays the heart jack. East plays low, of course.

Since West has already turned up with A-K, J-10 and a king, it's a fair presumption that he does not have the heart ace. (With that card too he might well have bid three hearts immediately over two spades.) What about East? If he had only the heart queen and the lone spade jack for high cards, wouldn't he likely have passed his partner's opening bid? And if East did have the queen, would he have been able to resist covering dummy's heart jack? All these things considered, declarer should arrive at the winning solution and play the heart king.

What is worth noting here is that any tentative idea you may have about the location of key cards should be supplanted by the actual knowledge you gain as the cards fall.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Consular officials from U.S. to discuss immigration laws

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Officials from Mexican consulates in the United States will meet this week to discuss the impact of the new American immigration law on undocumented workers, the Foreign Ministry announced Sunday.

A statement said the meeting, the first such formal discussion here of the Simpson-Rodino immigration law, would last from Monday through Thursday with Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda.

According to the statement, the meeting "is intended to evaluate the consequences that the recent approval of the Simpson-Rodino law will have for Mexico" and "consider the additional measures that Mexican authorities will have to apply to give timely and effective attention to the needs and requirements of Mexican undocumented workers."

The government newspaper El Nacional on Sunday quoted unidentified Foreign Ministry sources as saying that "the protest won't be long in coming" if defective and discriminatory implementation of the law's provisions persists.

The new U.S. law grants amnesty to aliens continuously in the United States since before Jan. 1, 1982, provided they are not excluded by criminal convictions or other disqualification provisions.

It also imposes heavy fines against employers who give jobs to undocumented workers.

President Miguel de la Madrid said in an end-of-the-year interview with El Nacional that it is difficult to predict the effects of the new U.S. immigration law.

"Probably the greatest effect of the new law will not be caused by massive deportations of workers to Mexico, at least at levels significantly higher than the present," the president said.

"What can be expected is a reduction in the flow of migration toward the United States. This can be a serious element in the development of Mexico, since this factor has served as a mechanism of adjustment in regard to employment," de la Madrid said.

The Foreign Ministry's statement said it maintains "close communication with the authorities of the United States government involved in the application of the law, with the aim of assuring the protection and defense of Mexican nations and their labor and human rights."

The statement said the Mexican officials also would discuss in their meeting ways "to strengthen the system of consular protection and set the norms for the establishment of a global scheme of coordination among the different consular offices of Mexico in the United States."

Attending the meeting will be the Mexican consuls general from Los Angeles, San Diego, Chicago, New Orleans, Denver, Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and El Paso, Texas; the consuls from St. Louis, Albuquerque, N.M., Washington and San Francisco, and Mexican ambassador to the United States Jorge Espinosa de los Reyes.

Latin America's principal source of foreign exchange to keep current on its debt has been derived from a trade surplus generated by a sharp reduction in imports from the industrial countries, according to a report of the Inter-American Development Bank.

Decision nears on withdrawing Gates' name

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert M. Gates, warned by Republican congressional leaders that his nomination to head the CIA would be rejected by the Senate, is going to withdraw his name from consideration this week, a newspaper reported today.

The Washington Post, citing administration and congressional sources it did not name, said Gates arrived at his decision "without much prodding."

White House spokesman Albert Brashear said late Sunday, "Mr. Gates is still the president's nominee."

CIA spokeswoman Kathy Pherson said, "He hasn't withdrawn as nominee, and as far as we know he doesn't have any plans to do so."

The Senate Intelligence Committee, which is reviewing the nomination, had not been informed of such a decision by Gates, David Holliday, a spokesman for committee Chairman David Boren, said late Sunday.

President Reagan was aware of the potential problem Gates faced in gaining confirmation if a quick vote was sought, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

At the same time, Dole said he didn't think Gates "should be sort of held out there for five or six months until we finish all the committee hearings" into the Iran-Contra affair.

Gates, 43, was picked to head the CIA after William J. Casey resigned in December because of brain cancer.

Reagan's nominee, who held key CIA posts during the period that weapons were shipped secretly to Iran and money apparently was diverted to Contra rebels in Nicaragua, was quizzed about his involvement by members of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

At least one senator, Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said he was troubled by information he had received about Gates' actions.

Dole said Sunday he was canvassing senators on the Gates nomination, and once he finished he was expected to relay the results to the White House.

"I would guess that there would be some judgment made on this early this week," Dole said.

If Gates' nomination is sent to the Senate floor, "it could be a long process," Dole said, adding he indicated to Reagan last Thursday the nomination "could be in some difficulty" if senators pressed for a quick vote.

Boren, D-Okla., has said he favors an early vote because the CIA should not be operating with a temporary chief.

Sources told the Post the White House needed a CIA nominee with no role in the Iran-Contra arms affair.

"It is crucial to have a new CIA director who can credibly investigate and clean up any remains of Iran-Contra, not a director who himself is the subject of the investigation," the Post quoted a senior administration offial as saying.

Brent Scowcroft, a member of the Tower commission which investigated the Iran-Contra affair, said the panel found no evidence Gates knew about the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contras.

Public money campaign fund could run out

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bevy of candidates lining up to run for president in 1988 could very well deplete the pot of money the government has set aside to help candidates pay for their campaigns, a Federal Election Commission spokesman says.

With no incumbent president in the race and both parties' fields wide open, the FEC is looking at as many as 20 candidates who could tap into the presidential fund. That would be more than in any year since the system of providing public funds for presidential campaigns went into effect in 1976.

"I think there probably could be sufficient funding for 1988," FEC spokesman Fred Eiland said. "I don't think there's going to be a problem." He added, however, "It's down the road you've got to worry about."

He said that for the first time, 1988 may leave the presidential fund with no carry-over money to put in the bank for the next election.

The funding system was set up by Congress to match the money raised by presidential primary candidates and to provide all the money for the party nominees in the general election.

With the fund likely to be strained by the large field, another potential wrench in the system could come when 17 state primaries take place on March 8, 1988, which means many candidates will be raising a lot of money earlier than in past elections.

In addition, any unexpected surge in inflation could pose potential problems, Eiland noted, because the campaign spending limits are based on a formula that factors in inflation.

The 1988 fund now has about $162.2 million. That sum was accumulated from leftover 1984 funds and the annual receipts from people who checked off a $1 donation on their tax forms in the years since 1984. The voluntary tax check-off is the sole source of the presidential fund.

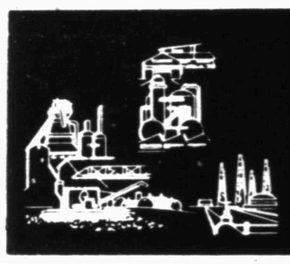

Still to be added to the fund are the tax return check-offs from this year.

For the 1984 race, the fund gave a total of $36.5 million to the primary campaigns of 11 Democratic and Republican presidential campaigns, plus $80.8 million for the two general election candidates. The same pot also funds the Democratic and GOP national conventions, paying out some $16 million for the 1984 conventions that nominated President Reagan and Democrat Walter Mondale.

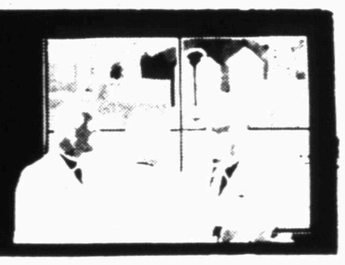

In 1980, with 10 candidates eligible, the fund spent $103 million, and in 1976, with 14 candidates, $70.7 million.

To be eligible for matching funds in primary races, a candidate must raise $5,000 in each of 20 states through contributions of $250 or less. The presidential fund matches each $250 contribution.

Young talent comes through...

Girls open season with good showing

WOLFFORTH -- Snyder's Lady Tigers took first place medals in four events, including the 1600 meter relay, to place in the top three at the girl's ABC Tiger Relays here Saturday.

The field was a strong one, paced by Lubbock Estacado's 168 total points. Frenship took second with 142 while Snyder polled 135 for a runnaway third. Fourth was Levelland with 59.

"Overall I was estatic," said Snyder Coach Patty Grimmett of the Tigers' finish. "I thought everybody did great for the first meet. The kids that were returning, their times were as fast or faster than they finished with last year. The younger kids, the freshmen, did excellent, I thought. I think they surprised a lot of people. They surprised me," she laughed.

Snyder led the entire way in the 1600 as Nicole Overman, Kim Koening, Melody Pickering and Katrina Reed sped to a 4:29.41 clocking.

Koening, who gave up the sprints this year for the 800 meters, won that event in 2:43.01.

Melissa Williams, who advanced to regionals in the high jump as a freshman last year, picked up where she left off. She cleared 4-10 to win the high jump Saturday.

Snyder also placed first and second in the 200 meters. Reed, a senior, flashed a 26.93 for first place while teammate Sharnette Thompson took second with a 27.94.

In other individual efforts placing in the top three, Donna Clay placed second in the shot put with a throw of 32-1¾; freshman Trina Brown was second in the 3200 meters with a time of 14:35.39; and freshman Rana Eicke was third in the 3200 with a 14:46.28; and sophomore Melody Pickering took second in the 400 meters with a run of 65.98.

Snyder was second in the 800 meter relay with a time of 1:53.21. Running on the squad were Thompson, Sandra Powell, Koening and Reed.

The Tigers' 400 relay team of Clay, Sandra Gutierrez, McKnight and Thompson placed fourth with a time of 54.5.

In other results...

- Anne Osborn was fourth in the 3200 with a 15:14.10.
- Snyder placed fourth and fifth in the 100 hurdles with Christi Comer in 18.05 and Nicole Overman in 18.13.
- McKnight was fifth in the long jump with a 15-3¾ and sixth in the 100 meters with a 13.7.
- Dana Fenton was fourth in the 400 meters with a 69.9.
- Tracy Ball was fourth in the high jump with a 4-4.
- Jennifer Alarcon was sixth in the 1600 with a time of 6:54.74.
- Trina Brown was sixth in the shot put with a 29-5.

Snyder girls will trek to San Angelo this Saturday for the Concho Belle Relays. Field events begin at 9 a.m. Finals begin at 3:30 p.m.

Tigers jump high in first track meet

WOLFFORTH -- Coach Kevin Wiseman said his Tigers would probably be strongest in the high jump and his prediction came true as Snyder took second and third places in the event at the ABC Tiger Relays here Saturday.

Talent-laden Lubbock Estacado ran away with the team title, capturing 212 points to Lubbock Dunbar's 102. Levelland was third with 77, Frenship fourth with 60, Sweetwater fifth with 45 and Snyder sixth with 16.

Senior Chris Garrett soared six-feet, four-inches to place second in the high jump. Terry Garza, who placed third at the District 2-4A meet a year ago, took second here at a height of 5-10.

The Tigers will compete in the Mustang Relays at Andrews this Saturday, March 7.

FIRST PLACE -- Snyder's Melissa Williams soared 4-10 to win first place in the high jump at the ABC Tiger Relays in Wolfforth last Saturday. Snyder got several first places and finished third overall in the meet, its first of the season. (SDN Staff Photo by Noble Young)

Frogs hope to add tourney championship to SWC title

by The Associated Press

The Texas Christian Horned Frogs have left other Southwest Conference teams far behind in the regular-season basketball race.

TCU's four-game edge over runnerup Baylor is the widest winning margin since the SWC expanded to nine teams in 1976.

Now it remains to be seen if the Horned Frogs can repeat with a championship in the SWC Post-Season Classic, which gets under way Friday at Reunion Arena in Dallas.

After all, just winning the regular-season title isn't enough to guarantee a spot in the NCAA tournament. Just go back to 1986, when TCU, Texas and Texas A&M finished in a three-way tie for first in the regular season, but fell victim to fifth-place Texas Tech's blitz through the SWC tournament.

Tech got the automatic NCAA bid that goes to the tournament champion, and nobody else made the 64-team field.

Most observers feel TCU, with its national ranking and 23-5 record, probably will get an invite from the NCAA this year even should they stumble in the SWC tournament. But TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth would rather make it a sure thing.

The Horned Frogs blasted Rice Saturday, 85-69, to finish the season at 14-2 in the league. TCU, the No. 1 seed, will test its mettle against No. 8 seed Texas A&M, 6-10 and 14-13, at 2:30 p.m. in the second half of a Friday afternoon double header.

Senior Guard Carl Lott, who was out for 10 games with a broken finger, primed himself for the tournament by scoring 17 points and grabbing seven rebounds in just 26 minutes against the Owls.

Baylor's second-place finish was significant for a program that has struggled after a National Collegiate Athletic Association investigation that kept them out of the tournament last year.

"I'll tell you what, second place makes a difference to me. It's a major step for this program," Baylor coach Gene Iba said after his club put another mark in the win column with a 51-48 victory over A&M Saturday night. The win improved Baylor to 10-6 in the conference and 16-11 overall.

Baylor meets No. 7 seed Southern Methodist University, 7-9 and 16-12, at 6 p.m. Friday.

SMU blasted Arkansas 93-76 Sunday afternoon to close out 1986-87 regular-season play.

SMU Coach Dave Bliss said the victory, the sixth in seven games for the Mustangs, will give his team momentum going into the post-season classic.

"This game was important to us," Bliss said. "We wanted to finish strong. We played well most of the second half of conference play. We're looking forward to the tournament."

Weatherford to test Dusters in regional tourney Tuesday

WACO -- Weatherford Coach Betty Jo Graber knows her team will be the underdog when it takes on fifth-ranked Western Texas College here Tuesday in the Region V Tournament, but she isn't about to concede the game yet.

Weatherford and WTC play at 1 p.m. in Highlands Gym on the McLennan Community College campus.

In other games, South Plains plays Cisco at 3 p.m., Howard battles McLennan at 7 p.m. and Odessa takes on Grayson at 9 p.m.

"If we already knew who was going to win we wouldn't need to play the game," said Graber, who coached Weatherford to a regional title in 1976.

Youth and inexperience have produced a not-so-outstanding 10-20 season record at Weatherford this season, but the team boasts good talent and good height.

"We have to have everybody contributing but when we do that, we can play pretty well," said Graber.

The starting lineup for Weatherford will likely be 5-6 freshman point guard Margo Campbell from El Paso, 5-9 sophomore wing-forward Lisa Hollaway from Iowa Park, 5-6 sophomore guard Andrea Kirkland from Weatherford, 6-2 sophomore post Beth Naughton from Fort Worth, and 5-11 sophomore wing-post Sonji Palmer from La Marque.

"We have a lot of sophomores on the starting lineup but only Beth and Lisa played very much at all last year," said Graber. "That's been our problem this season. We don't have a lot of experience and when we go to our bench we are usually having to bring in freshmen."

Western will likely counter with 5-11 sophomore Brenda Welch and 6-0 sophomore GiGi Robinson at the post, 5-9 freshman Kaila Thompson at point guard, 5-11 sophomore Wendy Milner at the wing, and either 6-0 sophomore Dee Ann Marr or 6-0 sophomore Lisa Thompson at the other wing-forward position.

Neither Graber or Western's Kelly Chadwick has much information on the other team, though as regional director, Graber receives the Western Conference statistics.

"I just know what the statistics tell me and they are pretty impressive," said Graber.

"We really don't know much about Weatherford," said Chadwick. "We just want to go out and play our type game. Sometimes its almost better if you don't know much about a team (an opponent). Hopefully, that will be the case for this game."

WTC vies at Roswell

ROSWELL, N.M. -- Western Texas College fought top talent, wind and sub-freezing temperatures to place 10th and 13th in the annual Bronco Collegiate Invitational Golf Tournament, played here Friday and Saturday.

Texas Tech University shot a red hot 881 to win the two-day tournament. New Mexico Junior College placed second and third as its Red team shot a 900 and its Gold team carded a 902.

Texas Tech's Randy Strickland was medalist with scores of 70, 73 and 72 for a total 215.

Western Texas White team, led by Mike Harrison, turned in a 929 total. The Westerners shot a 296 early but added a 315 and a 318 as the weather turned worse - up to 25 miles per hour - with sub-freezing wind chill temperatures on Saturday.

In other results involving teams from the Western Conference, Midland shot a 903, NMMI and South Plains 912s and Odessa a 931.

Next action for Western will be the Texas State Junior College Championship on March 28-31 in Conroe.

Tigers to open season Tuesday

SAN ANGELO -- Snyder High School will open the 1987 baseball season at 4 p.m. here Tuesday against San Angelo Central.

Snyder was to have started its campaign on Feb. 24 with the Bobcats, but the game was cancelled due to weather. A second try to open the season was also cancelled when weather forced officials to scrap the Fredricksburg Tournament last Friday and Saturday.

Lawmakers in Texas to face hearings on proposed taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — On Texas' 151st birthday, lawmakers went to work on proposals for tax increases that many believe are necessary to keep the state afloat.

Consideration of the first tax bill of the 4½-month session comes in the eighth week of the 1987 Legislature.

The much-publicized tort reform — or "tort deform" as it is called by some trial lawyer — also was expected to get public hearings in a Senate committee starting today.

A half dozen proposals that would affect personal injury lawsuits are on the agenda for the Senate Economic Development Committee, with hearings expected to last two weeks.

Rep. Roman Martinez, D-Houston, scheduled a news conference for today to announce the filing of a bill to reduce Texas' school drooupout rate of 33-percent.

"The state cannot achieve economic diversitfication if a large percentage of our future work force is uneducated," said Martinez, who will be joned at a news conference by "Miami Vice" television performer James Edward Olmos.

On Tuesday, a plan to extend "temporary" sales and gasoline tax increases to Sept. 1, 1989, will be heard by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The increases, raising the state sales tax from 4.125 percent to 5.25 percent and the gasoline tax from 10 cents to 15 cents a gallon, became effective Jan. 1 and would expire Sept. 1.

Committee chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, predicted his panel would send the bill to the floor, and Speaker Gib Lewis predicted it could win full House approval by week's end.

Gov. Bill Clements favors extension of the taxes, but with a gasoline tax of 13 cents per gallon. The govenor also wants lawmakers to expand the sales tax to cover some now-exempt items, such as services, but reduce the rate to make the changes "revenue neutral."

Schlueter and Lewis have said House members do not want to tackle the tax overhaul this year if it does not raise additional revenue.

A special Senate tax subcommittee will begin hearings Thursday on a proposal by State Comptroller Bob Bullock to reduce the sales tax rate to 4.5 percent, but bring customer services under the tax.

What his aides refer to as "Bullock II" also would restructure the 80-year-old franchise tax to shift the tax burden from capital investments to gross receipts.

Bullock told the Senate last week that service companies account for more than half of the purchases in Texas, but pay only 5 percent of the total sales tax.

The comptroller's tax plan would raise $3.3 billion over two years, $400 million more than the tax extension proposed by Schluter.

Strong earthquake hits New Zealand; several people hurt

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — A strong earthquake jolted the coast area of New Zealand's Bay of Plenty today, damaging buildings, roads and bridges and reportedly injuring several people.

Television New Zealand said at least five people were seriously injured in the 1:36 p.m. (8:36 p.m. Sunday EST) quake, which registered 6.4 on the Richter scale.

It said most homes in Whakatane were damaged. Whakatane is a community of 16,000 people about 260 miles north-northeast of the capital, Wellington.

Radio Pacific, reporting from Auckland, said there were reports of damage from nearby Tauranga and Rotorua as well.

A state of emergency was declared in the area, which is mostly farmland and forest. Local authorities commandeered all available helicopters in the region to help assess damage and to ferry supplies needed for repairs.

Hospitals in Tauranga and Rotorua were on standby to accept patients from Whakatane hospital, which was evacuated because of damage to the top of the building.

Australian Associated Press said office buildings in Tauranga swayed for up to 30 seconds while residents and workers took shelter under tables and in doorways or were evacuated.

Radio Pacific said "many people" were injured. It said there was damage to road and rail links, bridges and forests, and that power supplies were cut to several rural and forestry towns.

Two forestry workers were seriously hurt when they were struck by falling trees, the radio said, and a motorist trapped in a landslide was also seriously injured.

Further information on the number of casualties was not available immediately.

Juvenile crime is on the rise

fense short of murder.

Theft was the largest single category, with 48 cases involving 66 individuals reported.

Many of the theft cases were shoplifting or bicycle theft incidents, crimes which can involve substantial amounts of dollar damage to victims.

Nine juvenile males were picked up by police in 1986 in what appeared to be a bicycle theft ring.

These suspects are thought to have routinely stolen BMX type bikes and then sold or traded them away as parts over a period of months.

Investigators recovered a sizable amount of bicycle parts with the suspects, but were never able to determine exactly how many bikes were stolen.

Runaway — a "status" offense for juveniles but technically not a crime — was the second largest category with 36 cases and 36 individuals involved.

The largest number of individuals were involved in crimes in the category of criminal mischief or vandalism.

In 1986, 137 juveniles were determined to have been involved in 31 reported vandalism incidents.

Again, there are no figures available for the cost of vandalism incidents to victims. These amounts often wind up as restitution amounts charged to juveniles formally placed on probation.

According to juvenile probation officer Larry Thompson, restitution amounts in current files range from a high of $6,000 to a low of $40.

Other juvenile incidents reported during the year include aggravated assault, aggravated sexual assault, burglary, vehicle theft, possession of marijuana, forgery, resisting arrest, indecent exposure, public intoxication, minor in possession of alcohol, disorderly conduct and driving while intoxicated.

Of particular concern to local enforcement officers are increasing episodes of violent crime involving juveniles.

In one case last spring, a 51-year-old mentally retarded man was assaulted by two 16-year-old males. Police could find no apparent reason for the attack.

The victim told police the boys approached him and asked for cigarettes. He said he complied, then turned to enter his house.

When he turned his back, one of the youth hit him with a tree limb, police say. Both suspects were picked up later that afternoon and then released to the custody of a relative under the terms of juvenile law that requires suspects be released or housed in an approved juvenile detention center.

Both have prior criminal records for offenses including multiple counts of burglary, theft and criminal mischief.

As of January, they remained free under "supervision" of parents or relatives.

Another area of concern in the juvenile crime statistics is the number of offenders who are released after arrest and then commit felonies while awaiting court hearings.

Morgan points to the case of another 13-year-old sent to TYC in January following a series of offenses during the latter part of 1986.

That suspect was originially picked up along with an adult in connection with reported burglaries at a local business where gasoline was said stolen.

When arrested, the pair was additionally charged with the theft of a car from a local used car lot, which they told police they planned to use to leave town.

Under questioning, they also confessed to the burglary of an East Snyder residence that had not been reported to police.

The victim of that burglary was a 71-year-old woman living alone.

The suspects told investigators they went into the house during the night and took the woman's purse — getting less than $1 in change for their efforts.

They said that they went back later in the night looking for more money.

During the second burglary, they told officers they sprayed engine starting fluid containing ether on a rag and held it over the face of the sleeping woman to make her unconcious.

She awoke during the burglary attempt and struggled with the suspects. She told police she didn't report the incident because she was unsure "if it really happened."

Investigators say they observed bruises on the woman's neck where it appeared that the burglars attempted to choke her.

The adult suspect in the case was arrested and placed in jail in early December. The juvenile was released to the custody of parents.

Following this release, the 13-year-old was picked up three more times before being sent to TYC approximately one month later. Those charges included pulling a knife on a friend's mother, the burglary of coin operated machines at a local laundry, and a shoplifting charge.

The juvenile was officially declared delinquent in January and remanded to the custody of the TYC.

Although this is an exceptional case, police say that the circumstances — an offender charged with a serious crime who commits more violations while awaiting court action — are very typical of what happens in juvenile justice.

(In Tuesday's SDN, the juvenile justice system as it exists in Scurry County will be profiled.)

After 10 years quadriplegic is leaving hospital

CHICAGO (AP) — Ben Roberts, a quadriplegic who is kept alive by a machine, is leaving the hospital where he has lived 10 years for what his doctor said is "the best place ... to grow and develop." He's going home.

Roberts, 18, will move this month from Children's Memorial Hospital to a specially adapted apartment on the city's North Side, where he will stay with his mother, brother and a nurse.

"He's a little scared," his mother, Martha Chester, said at Sunday's going-away party attended by about 200 friends, nurses, doctors and patients.

"He's been saying he hopes he can go home," Ms. Chester said. "Ten years is a long time for him being here."

Roberts was 7 in March 1976 when doctors operated to remove a malignant brain tumor. He went home after the operation, but nearly a year later he returned, paralyzed from the neck down.

He was put on a ventilator to help him breathe and started receiving 24-hour health care.

With the help of his mother and some expensive equipment, Roberts, who is a high school freshman at the Spaulding School for disabled children and has difficulty speaking, will get care at home.

Rifle, spurs said missing

Police are investigating a misdemeanor theft report filed Sunday evening involving a 22 cal. rifle and a pair of spurs.

Mike Foster of Snyder reported the theft at 9:42 p.m. He said the items were stolen from his pickup.

The theft is thought to have occurred while the Foster vehicle was parked at the Bethel Assembly of God Church in the 1400 Block of 25th St. between 5 and 9 p.m.

Police also logged three misdemeanor arrests over the weekend.

A 16-year-old suspect was taken into custody just before 6 p.m. Saturday and charged with theft.

That arrest followed a call from employees of McCrory's who reported a subject attempting to steal a pair of tennis shoes valued at $8.

One juvenile was picked up Saturday night and charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol and a local man was arrested Sunday night on charges of driving while intoxicated and driving with a suspended license.

Weekend wreck listed as minor

A single minor traffic accident was reported in Snyder over the weekend.

Involved in the mishap — at 3 p.m. Sunday in the 4700 Block of College Ave. — were a 1981 Ford driven by Bennie Alvis Cogburn of 207 34th St. and a 1967 Plymouth driven by Erik John Waak of the Western Texas College Apartments.

Fire run is controlled burn

Units of the Snyder Fire Department answered one fire alarm Sunday afternoon, a fire which turned out to be a controlled burn of range land.

Firefighters were summoned to the grass fire near Fluvanna at 5:31 p.m.

Upon arrival, they were told the fire was a range burn in progress on land in Scurry and Garza Counties.

Emergency water rations handed out after gas leak

MINERAL WELLS, Texas (AP) — A corroded gasoine pipeline spilled fuel into Little Sunday Creek, forcing authorities to hand out emergency water rations and urge residents not to drink from the city's water supply.

Residents of the town of 14,000 lined up at City Hall Sunday to pick up bottled water purchased by Chevron Pipe Line Co., owners of the pipeline.

One person was treated for an upset stomach at Palo Pinto General Hospital here, Carla Hay, director of nursing, said.

Dr. Robert Messer of Palo Pinto General Hospital said that gasoline, when ingested, can cause serious illness, but the amount in the water probably was too small to cause any symptoms at all.

Long-term effects, such as abdominal cramps, might occur, but Messer said he seriously doubted he would see any.

"I wouldn't think there was enough lead in there to affect anybody, at this point," he said.

Authorities planned to deliver water to schools and the homebound today.

The leak in a 30-year-old pipeline occurred downstream from Lake Palo Pinto in a tributary from which the city draws its drinking water, Mayor Arthur Zappe said. No gasoline has been found in the lake, the city's primary water source, Zappe said.

The leak was detected Friday and located Saturday, but city officials said they did not issue a warning until Sunday because they were not aware fuel had entered the city's water supply until Sunday.

Jim Nuckols, a Chevron environmental specialist, estimated about 16,800 gallons of gasoline leaked from a section of the 512-mile pipeline that starts at the company's Port Arthur refinery, runs through Fort Worth and extends to East Texas. About 4,200 gallons of spilled fuel has been removed, Nuckols said.

Lines formed 12 blocks long in all four directions leading to city hall as residents waited up to two hours to receive a 5-gallon container of drinking water.

Lawmakers in Texas to face hearings on proposed taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — On Texas' 151st birthday, lawmakers went to work on proposals for tax increases that many believe are necessary to keep the state afloat.

Consideration of the first tax bill of the 4½-month session comes in the eighth week of the 1987 Legislature.

The much-publicized tort reform — or "tort deform" as it is called by some trial lawyer — also was expected to get public hearings in a Senate committee starting today.

A half dozen proposals that would affect personal injury lawsuits are on the agenda for the Senate Economic Development Committee, with hearings expected to last two weeks.

Rep. Roman Martinez, D-Houston, scheduled a news conference for today to announce the filing of a bill to reduce Texas' school drooupout rate of 33 percent.

"The state cannot achieve economic diversitfication if a large percentage of our future work force is uneducated," said Martinez, who will be joned at a news conference by "Miami Vice" television performer James Edward Olmos.

On Tuesday, a plan to extend "temporary" sales and gasoline tax increases to Sept. 1, 1989, will be heard by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The increases, raising the state sales tax from 4.125 percent to 5.25 percent and the gasoline tax from 10 cents to 15 cents a gallon, became effective Jan. 1 and would expire Sept. 1.

Committee chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, predicted his panel would send the bill to the floor, and Speaker Gib Lewis predicted it could win full House approval by week's end.

Gov. Bill Clements favors extension of the taxes, but with a gasoline tax of 13 cents per gallon. The govenor also wants lawmakers to expand the sales tax to cover some now-exempt items, such as services, but reduce the rate to make the changes "revenue neutral."

Schlueter and Lewis have said House members do not want to tackle the tax overhaul this year if it does not raise additional revenue.

A special Senate tax subcommittee will begin hearings Thursday on a proposal by State Comptroller Bob Bullock to reduce the sales tax rate to 4.5 percent, but bring customer services under the tax.

What his aides refer to as "Bullock II" also would restructure the 80-year-old franchise tax to shift the tax burden from capital investments to gross receipts.

Bullock told the Senate last week that service companies account for more than half of the purchases in Texas, but pay only 5 percent of the total sales tax.

The comptroller's tax plan would raise $3.3 billion over two years, $400 million more than the tax extension proposed by Schluter.

Strong earthquake hits New Zealand; several people hurt

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — A strong earthquake jolted the coast area of New Zealand's Bay of Plenty today, damaging buildings, roads and bridges and reportedly injuring several people.

Television New Zealand said at least five people were seriously injured in the 1:36 p.m. (8:36 p.m. Sunday EST) quake, which registered 6.4 on the Richter scale.

It said most homes in Whakatane were damaged. Whakatane is a community of 16,000 people about 260 miles north-northeast of the capital, Wellington.

Radio Pacific, reporting from Auckland, said there were reports of damage from nearby Tauranga and Rotorua as well.

A state of emergency was declared in the area, which is mostly farmland and forest. Local authorities commandeered all available helicopters in the region to help assess damage and to ferry supplies needed for repairs.

Hospitals in Tauranga and Rotorua were on standby to accept patients from Whakatane hospital, which was evacuated because of damage to the top of the building.

Australian Associated Press said office buildings in Tauranga swayed for up to 30 seconds while residents and workers took shelter under tables and in doorways or were evacuated.

Radio Pacific said "many people" were injured. It said there was damage to road and rail links, bridges and forests, and that power supplies were cut to several rural and forestry towns.

Two forestry workers were seriously hurt when they were struck by falling trees, the radio said, and a motorist trapped in a landslide was also seriously injured.

Further information on the number of casualties was not available immediately.

Juvenile crime is on the rise

fense short of murder.

Theft was the largest single category, with 48 cases involving 66 individuals reported.

Many of the theft cases were shoplifting or bicycle theft incidents, crimes which can involve substantial amounts of dollar damage to victims.

Nine juvenile males were picked up by police in 1986 in what appeared to be a bicycle theft ring.

These suspects are thought to have routinely stolen BMX type bikes and then sold or traded them away as parts over a period of months.

Investigators recovered a sizable amount of bicycle parts with the suspects, but were never able to determine exactly how many bikes were stolen.

Runaway — a "status" offense for juveniles but technically not a crime — was the second largest category with 36 cases and 36 individuals involved.

The largest number of individuals were involved in crimes in the category of criminal mischief or vandalism.

In 1986, 137 juveniles were determined to have been involved in 31 reported vandalism incidents.

Again, there are no figures available for the cost of vandalism incidents to victims. These amounts often wind up as restitution amounts charged to juveniles formally placed on probation.

According to juvenile probation officer Larry Thompson, restitution amounts in current files range from a high of $6,000 to a low of $40.

Other juvenile incidents reported during the year include aggravated assault, aggravated sexual assault, burglary, vehicle theft, possession of marijuana, forgery, resisting arrest, indecent exposure, public intoxication, minor in possession of alcohol, disorderly conduct and driving while intoxicated.

Of particular concern to local enforcement officers are increasing episodes of violent crime involving juveniles.

In one case last spring, a 51-year-old mentally retarded man was assaulted by two 16-year-old males. Police could find no apparent reason for the attack.

The victim told police the boys approached him and asked for cigarettes. He said he complied, then turned to enter his house.

When he turned his back, one of the youth hit him with a tree limb, police say. Both suspects were picked up later that afternoon and then released to the custody of a relative under the terms of juvenile law that requires suspects be released or housed in an approved juvenile detention center.

Both have prior criminal records for offenses including multiple counts of burglary, theft and criminal mischief.

As of January, they remained free under "supervision" of parents or relatives.

Another area of concern in the juvenile crime statistics is the number of offenders who are released after arrest and then commit felonies while awaiting court hearings.

Morgan points to the case of another 13-year-old sent to TYC in January following a series of offenses during the latter part of 1986.

That suspect was originially picked up along with an adult in connection with reported burglaries at a local business where gasoline was said stolen.

When arrested, the pair was additionally charged with the theft of a car from a local used car lot, which they told police they planned to use to leave town.

Under questioning, they also confessed to the burglary of an East Snyder residence that had not been reported to police.

The victim of that burglary was a 71-year-old woman living alone.

The suspects told investigators they went into the house during the night and took the woman's purse — getting less than $1 in change for their efforts.

They said that they went back later in the night looking for more money.

During the second burglary, they told officers they sprayed engine starting fluid containing ether on a rag and held it over the face of the sleeping woman to make her unconcious.

She awoke during the burglary attempt and struggled with the suspects. She told police she didn't report the incident because she was unsure "if it really happened."

Investigators say they observed bruises on the woman's neck where it appeared that the burglars attempted to choke her.

The adult suspect in the case was arrested and placed in jail in early December. The juvenile was released to the custody of parents.

Following this release, the 13-year-old was picked up three more times before being sent to TYC approximately one month later. Those charges included pulling a knife on a friend's mother, the burglary of coin operated machines at a local laundry, and a shoplifting charge.

The juvenile was officially declared delinquent in January and remanded to the custody of the TYC.

Although this is an exceptional case, police say that the circumstances — an offender charged with a serious crime who commits more violations while awaiting court action — are very typical of what happens in juvenile justice.

(In Tuesday's SDN, the juvenile justice system as it exists in Scurry County will be profiled.)

Rifle, spurs said missing

Police are investigating a misdemeanor theft report filed Sunday evening involving a .22 cal. rifle and a pair of spurs.

Mike Foster of Snyder reported the theft at 9:42 p.m. He said the items were stolen from his pickup.

The theft is thought to have occurred while the Foster vehicle was parked at the Bethel Assembly of God Church in the 1400 Block of 25th St. between 5 and 9 p.m.

Police also logged three misdemeanor arrests over the weekend.

A 16-year-old suspect was taken into custody just before 6 p.m. Saturday and charged with theft.

That arrest followed a call from employees of McCrory's who reported a subject attempting to steal a pair of tennis shoes valued at $8.

One juvenile was picked up Saturday night and charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol and a local man was arrested Sunday night on charges of driving while intoxicated and driving with a suspended license.

After 10 years quadriplegic is leaving hospital

CHICAGO (AP) — Ben Roberts, a quadriplegic who is kept alive by a machine, is leaving the hospital where he has lived 10 years for what his doctor said is "the best place ... to grow and develop." He's going home.

Roberts, 18, will move this month from Children's Memorial Hospital to a specially adapted apartment on the city's North Side, where he will stay with his mother, brother and a nurse.

"He's a little scared," his mother, Martha Chester, said at Sunday's going-away party attended by about 200 friends, nurses, doctors and patients.

"He's been saying he hopes he can go home," Ms. Chester said. "Ten years is a long time for him being here."

Roberts was 7 in March 1976 when doctors operated to remove a malignant brain tumor. He went home after the operation, but nearly a year later he returned, paralyzed from the neck down.

He was put on a ventilator to help him breathe and started receiving 24-hour health care.

With the help of his mother and some expensive equipment, Roberts, who is a high school freshman at the Spaulding School for disabled children and has difficulty speaking, will get care at home.

Weekend wreck listed as minor

A single minor traffic accident was reported in Snyder over the weekend.

Involved in the mishap — at 3 p.m. Sunday in the 4700 Block of College Ave. — were a 1981 Ford driven by Bennie Alvis Cogburn of 207 34th St. and a 1967 Plymouth driven by Erik John Waak of the Western Texas College Apartments.

Fire run is controlled burn

Units of the Snyder Fire Department answered one fire alarm Sunday afternoon, a fire which turned out to be a controlled burn of range land.

Firefighters were summoned to the grass fire near Fluvanna at 5:31 p.m.

Upon arrival, they were told the fire was a range burn in progress on land in Scurry and Garza Counties.

Emergency water rations handed out after gas leak

MINERAL WELLS, Texas (AP) — A corroded gasoine pipeline spilled fuel into Little Sunday Creek, forcing authorities to hand out emergency water rations and urge residents not to drink from the city's water supply.

Residents of the town of 14,000 lined up at City Hall Sunday to pick up bottled water purchased by Chevron Pipe Line Co., owners of the pipeline.

One person was treated for an upset stomach at Palo Pinto General Hospital here, Carla Hay, director of nursing, said.

Dr. Robert Messer of Palo Pinto General Hospital said that gasoline, when ingested, can cause serious illness, but the amount in the water probably was too small to cause any symptoms at all.

Long-term effects, such as abdominal cramps, might occur, but Messer said he seriously doubted he would see any.

"I wouldn't think there was enough lead in there to affect anybody, at this point," he said.

Authorities planned to deliver water to schools and the homebound today.

The leak in a 30-year-old pipeline occurred downstream from Lake Palo Pinto in a tributary from which the city draws its drinking water, Mayor Arthur Zappe said. No gasoline has been found in the lake, the city's primary water source, Zappe said.

The leak was detected Friday and located Saturday, but city officials said they did not issue a warning until Sunday because they were not aware fuel had entered the city's water supply until Sunday.

Jim Nuckols, a Chevron environmental specialist, estimated about 16,800 gallons of gasoline leaked from a section of the 512-mile pipeline that starts at the company's Port Arthur refinery, runs through Fort Worth and extends to East Texas. About 4,200 gallons of spilled fuel has been removed, Nuckols said.

Lines formed 12 blocks long in all four directions leading to city hall as residents waited up to two hours to receive a 5-gallon container of drinking water.

Strange treatment eases diarrhea

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Recently, my neighbor's baby son had diarrhea. When I went to visit them, he was drinking some revolting-looking liquid from his bottle. It was liquid Jell-O, which, believe it or not, his pediatrician had "prescribed." Is this acceptable treatment?

DEAR READER — Liquid Jell-O is appropriate treatment for infants with diarrhea. The sugar and simple protein in Jell-O are easily digested and the drink provides fluid to prevent dehydration. Your neighbor's pediatrician is correct in prescribing a safe, inexpensive and palatable treatment.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My mother, 86, has suffered from tinnitus 24 hours a day for the past 15 years. She hears ringing, whistling, banging doors, freight-train noises and now, several people singing. She wants to leave her head for medical study after death, but the ear specialist said there was no need for it. Is it true that there is no research into this problem or are there enough head donors?

DEAR READER — You raise two questions.

Tinnitus is a ringing or roaring in the ears that is due to a malfunction of the auditory mechanism. It often is difficult to treat but, by and large, is an innocuous nuisance, not a serious condition.

The fact that your mother is also hearing sounds that aren't there — such as banging doors and singing — suggests that she is experiencing auditory hallucinations, rather than simple tinnitus. She needs to be examined by a neurologist to discover whether her symptoms are caused by an abnormality of the central nervous system. For example, certain types of degenerative brain disorders can cause auditory hallucinations.

The second question concerns research. From a practical standpoint, I would feel more comfortable if a diagnosis could be established before your mother dies. That way, she could be helped and her life improved. Nonetheless, autopsies are an important way to diagnose diseases and teach doctors about methods of diagnosis and treatment of live people. Although fewer autopsies are being performed now than in past years, I believe that post-mortem examinations remain an invaluable part of medical education. They also give the family specific proof of cause of death, which can be important when infections or hereditary diseases are present.

There is no oversupply of post-mortem material. Most medical schools will welcome patients' willed bodies. Such gifts help train young doctors and further research.

Dr. Gott's new Health Report on ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE discusses symptoms, management and new studies of this tragic and irreversible disease. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

Unneeded service hawked to aliens

DALLAS (AP) — Agencies billing themselves as "Immigration consultants" are charging up to $100 to help undocumented aliens obtain temporary tax numbers that they can get free by simply writing a letter to the Internal Revenue Service, officials say.

IRS officials say the agencies' actions appear to violate no laws, but Mexican officials say at the very least the practice is unethical.

The temporary numbers are similar to Social Security numbers except that they begin with 9. They have no function except to process a person's income tax return.

But agencies such as Agencia Hispana in Dallas are charging aliens to help apply for the number so they can file income tax returns, leaders of the nonprofit North Texas Immigration Coalition say.

Enrique, an undocumented alien from Mexico who lives in Dallas, paid $30 to Agencia Hispana to get a number and was later appalled to learn he could have gotten one free by writing an Internal Revenue Service office in Philadelphia.

"I was trying to make myself straight with taxes so I won't have any problems with the government," said Enrique, who asked that his last name not be used, before he applies for legal residence under amnesty provisions of the new immigration law.

A document notarized for Enrique by Teresa Arnesen, cofounder of Agencia Hispana, calls the number "a temporary Social Security number from the Internal Revenue Service."

But Dee O'Neil, a Social Security Administration spokesman, said the SSA issues no temporary numbers.

"This number is no way tied into the Social Security system and is only for use in processing a tax return," said Marlene Gaysek, an IRS spokeswoman in Dallas. "I don't think they need to pay for something they can get free."

Wallet-sized cards sold by Agencia Hispana to undocumented aliens are embossed with "Social Security number" in bold blue letters, along with "temporary" and "from the IRS" stamped in smaller print above the spread wings of an eagle.

"We don't sell numbers because that is against the law," said Christian Arnesen.

Inmate mischief...

Sewage spills into court buildings

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — More than once inmate pranksters have clogged the pipes at the Tarrant County Criminal Courts Building, sending raw sewage seeping into offices and court rooms below.

Inmates have been known to use pieces of mattresses, rolls of toilet paper and other obstacles to stop up toilets and send the smelly fluid cascading into rooms below the seventh floor facility.

Authorities try to punish inmates for intentionally causing floods, but finding the culprits isn't easy, according to Capt. James White, who heads the service division of the Tarrant County sheriff's department.

"It happens whenever the natives get restless up there," White said.

Stella Davis, chief clerk in the criminal division of the district clerk's office, says sewage has often come down the walls and out the light fixtures in her office.

"Three or four times we've had sewage leak onto the desks," Davis said. "I have even washed the walls in my office with Lysol and water when that stuff starts coming out."

The frequent sewage floods have caused everyone from judges to clerks who work in the 24-year-old building to learn to cope with the problem.

Large tobacco cans hang from the ceiling in the jury room for District Judge Earl Bates' court to keep jurors from being dripped on while they are deliberating.

Judge Frank Coffey has had to put pads on the back of his wall hangings to prevent his documents from being damaged by leaking liquids. He has had to place his desk at an angle to keep it from being dripped on both from the walls and to keep it from being under a ceiling vent.

Court reporter Debbie Main has had to put her records on stands or old phone books to keep them off the floor and safe from flooding.

Legislators are ready to fight program cuts

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Rural Texas is under attack in Austin because planned budget cuts would hit county extension offices hard, severely damage 4-H programs and hurt vocational education, legislators representing rural western areas of the state say.

Rural areas came out much worse than urban areas when Gov. Bill Clements made his budget proposals public last month, the lawmakers say.

"There is definitely a discrimination against rural Texas," State Rep. Rick Perry, D-Haskell, a member of the House Appropriations Committee, told the Abilene Reporter-News.

State Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, said Clements' budget plan would cut more than $10 million out of the county extension program. That could mean a loss of more than 300 jobs to a program that has lost more than 140 positions since 1985, Shaw said.

"That means county agents in some counties would be eliminated," said Shaw, vice chairman of the House Agriculture and Livestock Committee and a member of the House Appropriations Committee.

The budget plan would cut extension service funding by about 30 percent, Shaw said.

"4-H, those type of programs would be gone," said Perry, whose district includes no town with a population greater than 14,500.

"I understand his (Clements') desire to have efficient government," he said. "But I will not stand by and let the governor balance the state budget on the backs of rural Texas."

Perry said many other aids to rural areas, such as the farm-to-market program and general school funding, would also see dramatic cuts. The vocational education program faces a $125 million cut, lawmakers say.

The Agriculture and Livestock Committee will discuss the effects of cuts with the Appropriations Committee this week.

Jay Rosser, Clements' deputy press secretary, said the governor's budget was meant to be a "springboard for comment."

"That's exactly what we're getting," Rosser said. "There are no plans to eliminate specific agencies."

The governor has heard comments that his budget proposals are unfair to rural Texas, Rosser said.

"We're looking for a better delivery of programs, especially in the rural areas," Rosser said.

But he stressed that the proposals are "flexible," as long as spending does not increase.

Clements' plan would balance the state's budget, estimated to be $5.8 billion short between now and the end of fiscal 1989, by extending increases in the state sales and gasoline taxes and cutting spending.

The governor has said his opponents want to solve the budget problem by passing a $6-billion tax bill this year.

Shaw and Perry are worried that the governor's pledge not to increase taxes will mean severe cuts in rural programs.

Cutbacks in education funding would dramatically hurt small school districts, some of which have already faced financial problems due to the drop in the worth of oil property, lawmakers say.

Chemical Pump Service Serves Many Oil Patch Needs

Chemical Pump Service, owned locally by Tom Machen, serves the needs of the oil patch, by carrying a full line of Texsteam Electric Drive Injectors. The 4100 Series Texsteam Injectors are positive displacement, plunger-type pumps which are gear driven and utilize electric motors, V-belts or other rotating drives as the power source. The unit's gear drive is housed in a precision-bored, heavy cast iron case with anti-friction bearings on the high speed shaft. The output gear, made of high strength alloy iron, is supported in a special bearing arrangement assuring extremely long life with maximum rigidity.
