DODSON HOUSE TOUR — Participants of a humanities workshop at Scurry County Museum toured the Dodson House and Dermott School Thursday. Possibly beginning June 12...

Courthouse may be closed on Fridays during summer

The Scurry County Courthouse may begin operating on a four-day schedule beginning next Friday.

The new hours were considered in a meeting this morning of department heads and elected officials.

If the officials agree that the courthouse will be closed on Fridays, it will join Western Texas College and the Snyder ISD administration building in operting on a "summer schedule."

Office hours that were discussed in this morning's meeting will have the courthouse opening at 7 a.m. and closing at 5:30 p.m. All offices would remain open during the lunch hour.

Currently, all offices open at 8 a.m and close at 5 p.m. and close during the noon hour.

Two exceptions are the tax office and the county clerk's office.

The tax office opens at 8:30 a.m. and remains open during the noon hour.

While the county clerk's office opens at 8 o'clock, it does remain open during noon.

If the courthouse is closed on Friday, it will not require action of the commissioners court.

State law states that county commissioners only have jurisdiction in setting office hours for the various county offices in counties over 355,000 in population.

County Judge Ricky Fritz said Thursday afternoon that elected officials and department heads were considering the change for the summer months as a means to make the courthouse more accessible to all Scurry County citizens.

"Most believe the expanded hours, Monday through Thursday, will allow citizens to conduct their business without having to take off from work during the day."

Fritz said the county would also keep a close eye on the utility costs during this time period.

"I think the college, and the school's ad building chose to close because of the amount of money they saved on utilities by operating only four days a week during the highest electrical usage times."

"If the courthouse ends up being closed on Fridays, we'll look at the costs and know exactly how much money the county saved," Fritz said.

County road and bridge employees have been operating on a four-day work week for about four years.

Workshop is success

A five-day workshop at the Scurry County Museum ends today and is being called, "successful."

"It's been a wonderful experience for everyone," said Charlene Akers, on-site coordinator for the workshop.

"We hope to repeat a similar program at a later date," Akers added.

The workshop was a joint project of the museum, Western Texas College and the Texas Council for the Humanities.

"The participants have learned that we can approach teaching the humanities in many different ways," Akers said.

Akers said feed-back from the participants indicated they would like to see the program hours extended on a daily basis.

"They said there was just not enough time in the day to cover all the material that was available," Akers said.

"That speaks well for the course and the lecturers," Akers said.

WTC president Dr. Harry Krenek led the workshop, while Britt Canada served as the technology training instructor and LeAnna Morse served as the resource instructor.

Lecturers included Dr. James Palmer, Mildred Sentell, Robert Adams and Dr. Edward Barkowsky. Dr. David Kattes is scheduled to lecture in today's final sessions.

United construction to begin in September

One of the most frequently-asked questions over the past 2½ years has been answered.

United Supermarkets in September will break ground on a new store in Snyder and has targeted next summer for its opening.

United officials announced today that construction of the 40,000-square foot store in the former Kmart location in the 3500 block of College Avenue would begin in early September.

Kent Moore, United's chief executive officer, said the store would expect to open in June, 1999.

Company officials said site work, market research and preliminary floor plans are now complete.

United purchased the former Kmart location in December, 1995 from the Ohio Teachers Retirement System and indicated that construction would begin in 1996. Construction was later delayed to 1997, then again put on hold to consider new technology.

A United spokesman said the company would reveal what departments would be included in the Snyder store at a later date.

In addition to conventional grocery departments, most United Supermarkets include a bakery, deli and floral departments. Some also have a pharmacy and many of the new store locations also sell gasoline.

The Snyder store will be the Lubbock-based grocery chain's 39th store, and Snyder is the 21st Texas city in which United is located. Officials said the Snyder store will create approximately 100 new jobs.

United was founded 82 years ago in Sayre, Okla., by H.D. Snell. It was later separated into two companies, one based in Texas and one in Oklahoma.

Moore said the company has been working on plans for the Snyder store for a number of months, taking into consideration the results from a recent survey of area residents to ensure that the store will include the amenities that customers want.

"We are excited about our entry into Snyder," Moore said. "It's United's first new store in more than seven years. We want to be sure that we build the type of store that meets the unique needs of this community, and offers the latest conveniences available in the grocery industry.

"The response we have had from the community thus far has been extremely positive. We are as anxious as Scurry County residents to break ground on this store."

Built in 1981, the Kmart store was one of 198 closed in March, 1995. After the property was purchased by United, the prefabricated Kmart building was donated to Western Texas College and removed from the site.

Methodists agree to merger

The Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church cleared the way Thursday for a merger between St. Mary Hospital and Lubbock's Methodist Hospital.

The new hospital system will be called Covenant Health System.

Scurry County-owned Cogdell Hospital is currently operated by a management agreement with St. Mary.

St. Mary vice president Bill Weldon advised the Cogdell board of directors during its May meeting that the merger was close to being finalized and that the deal will be sealed Monday in Dallas.

The approval by the Methodist conference was the final hurdle to the merger, and Alan White, chairman of Methodist Hospital Systems, said Thursday that he had come to the conference with some concern about the passage of the merger from the 800 delegates to the Midland conference.

"You never know," said White.

The Sisters of St. Joseph of Orange operate St. Joseph Hosptial and own St. Mary Hospital.

The organization will assume over $200 million in bond debt held by Methosidst Hospital.

The two hospitals agreed to merge in 1996, partly because of an over abundance of hospital beds in the Lubbock market and a slowdown in federal funding for Medicare and Medicaid.

Old pictures needed during oil celebration

The steering committee planning an oil appreciation day observance this fall is seeking photographs related to the petroleum history of Scurry County.

Persons with oilpatch pictures, particularly old pictures related to the development of the oil industry in Scurry County, are asked to loan those pictures to the Scurry County Museum located on the WTC campus.

The pictures will be copied and used in an exhibit in association with the oil day observance scheduled for Oct. 17 at the Scurry County Coliseum. Photos will be returned to the owners.

The steering committee met at noon Thursday at the chamber of commerce to discuss the event which will mark the 75th anniversary of the county's discovery well at Ira, the 50th anniversary of the discovery of the Canyon Reef and the 25th anniversary of the billionth barrel of oil produced in Scurry County.

It was reported that efforts are being made to secure a speaker for the banquet and that letters will soon go out to contractors who may want to have an exhibit at the coliseum.

Many former residents who have been associated with the Scurry County oil fields will be contacted and the event is expected to become an oilfield reunion.

Wrongful death suit is filed here

A wrongful death lawsuit seeking unspecified damages has been filed in the recent death of a Big Spring man in a tractor-trailer accident.

Keneth McVea was killed May 15 at the intersection of Highway 208 and CR 2148, and now his widow and children are suing the owner of the truck he was driving.

McVea was driving the tractor-trailer water truck when it failed to negotiate a turn and overturned.

The suit alleges that the owners of the truck, West Texas Energy Services, was negligent in allowing the truck to be operated with defective brakes.

The suit seeks exemplary, as well as actual damages.

Keeping tabs on our neighbors: The state has vowed to close down those establishments that operate video gambling devices. Despite the warnings, some operators continue.

It all goes to show that antipation of winning is in the minds of many Texans. Stephen Henry, in the Levelland News-Press, told about a woman standing in front of a vending machine.

After studying the machine for a while, she took two quarters, inserted them, deliberated for another moment and then punched the Coke button.

A canned drink rumbled out and she excitedly picked it up and put it on top of the machine.

The woman dug for two more quarters and stuck them into the slot. She deliberated and then lighted the Sprite button. A can rolled down. She was obviously delighted, and even giggled excitedly.

The woman went for her purse the third time. She found two more quarters which she inserted into the slot. This time she punched the Dr Pepper button, and a canned drink rumbled down the slot. The woman jumped up and down, squealing in delight.

An observer couldn't stand the suspense. He asked what was so exciting about getting drinks out of the machine.

"Well, duh! I'm winning aren't I?"

And O.G. Nieman, in the Hereford Brand, had a story about the same woman's sister.

A blonde opened a box of Cherrios and exclaimed, "Wow, a whole box of donut seeds."

Hop Graham, in the Lovington Daily Leader, noted that the Humane Society, animal rights groups, vets and various and sundry public policy organizations are aligned solidly in favor of neutering pets.

He said it seems like the logical thing to do, until it got to his own best friend, Murphy. Graham concluded:

"Poor Murphy will get over it, of course, but I am wondering if, in the next life, I am going to have to explain why I did this to him?"

Employee shoots three managers, then himself

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — It was mid-morning on a work day when William Muth Jr. arrived at his sister's house. She asked him if he had the day off from his job at a U.S. Foodservice Inc. distribution center.

"No, not really," he said. "I've got some personal business to take care of."

A little later, police said, Muth walked back into the plant and shot three managers Thursday, killing one who was on a conference call with the company president. Then he shot himself to death.

Muth, 41, a 12-year warehouse worker at U.S. Foodservice, had been sent home after a meeting but returned around 11:30 a.m., Lehigh County District Attorney James B. Martin said.

Muth shot his supervisor, warehouse manager Earl A. "Sonny" Moritz, and human resources manager Timothy Kita with a .40-caliber semi-automatic handgun as they were on a conference call.

Then he walked down the hall and fired through a wooden conference room door, hitting John Leodler, the vice president of operations, in the face.

"I was on the telephone in the middle of a conference call with people in this office when I heard the gun shots through the phone," Jim Miller, CEO of the Columbia, Md.-based company, said outside the plant.

The shooting "involved, we believe, a disciplinary action that was being taken by Mr. Moritz," Martin said. "I think they're going to have to wait for the recovery of Mr. Leodler and Mr. Kita to shed some light on what occurred."

Terry Nichols gets life behind bars for bombing

DENVER (AP) — Terry Nichols, the quiet, bespectacled man convicted of plotting the Oklahoma City bombing that ended 168 lives and shattered a nation's sense of security, will never get out of prison.

U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch made the declaration Thursday as he sentenced the 43-year-old Nichols to life behind bars without the possibility of parole, a penalty embraced reluctantly by survivors of the deadliest act of terrorism ever within the country's borders.

"There's no joy, but there is some justice being served," said Roy Sells, whose wife died in the bombing.

An appeal was immediately promised by defense attorneys, but Nichols for now is headed for a federal prison — perhaps even the Colorado lockup where convicted bomber Timothy McVeigh is appealing his death sentence.

Nichols was convicted Dec. 23 of conspiracy and eight involuntary manslaughter counts, one for each federal agent killed in the blast on April 19, 1995. He was acquitted of murder and weapons offenses.

The jury deadlocked over whether to give him the death penalty on the conspiracy conviction, so sentencing fell to Matsch, who under law could impose no more than the sentence he did.

The judge didn't just impose a sentence. As Nichols sat without visible emotion, Matsch called him an "enemy of the Constitution" and ridiculed the bombing plot as a vain attempt to throw the nation into chaos.

"The intentions were to change the course of government, change the policies of government. But you know, it didn't work out that way," Matsch said. "There was no anarchy; there was no reign of terror.

"We proceeded with the orderly process of recovery and restoration."

Matsch called the anti-government literature hoarded by Nichols "a gross distortion of the language of the Founding Fathers." He said if anything, McVeigh and Nichols showed how strong the government could be.

At trial, survivors of the bombing not only helped rescue their own but retrieved government documents from the rubble so welfare checks and veterans' benefits wouldn't be cut to the needy.

Acquaintances said Nichols particularly liked a quote from Thomas Jefferson: "The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants."

But Matsch said this was no murder case but "a crime against the Constitution of the United States. That's the victim. ... Terry Nichols has been proven to be an enemy of the Constitution."

Matsch had indicated he would have considered a lesser sentence had Nichols revealed new information about the bombing. Nichols declined an opportunity to speak.

While Nichols remained stone-faced, his ex-wife, Lana Padilla, and their son, Josh, wept. His wife, Marife, and his parents were not in the courtroom.

Outside court, Marsha Kight, who lost her 23-year-old daughter, Frankie Merrell, said simply: "God bless America."

In Oklahoma City, survivors and victims' relatives smiled and laughed as they spoke to reporters.

"I hope mom is up there dancing," said Angela Richerson, whose mother, Norma Jean Johnson, was killed. "We did deserve this, big time."

Nichols' attorney, Michael Tigar, said he would appeal. "We're going to go forward here and attempt to reunite the Nichols family," he said.

Prosecutors had wanted a life sentence, arguing that Nichols worked "side by side" with McVeigh to plan and carry out the bombing.

NRA braces for calls for gun control laws

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Some of the century's most infamous crimes have led to new gun-control laws.

Gang shootings and an assassination attempt against President Roosevelt in 1934 moved Congress to restrict machine guns. The assassinations of Robert Kennedy and Martin Luther King fueled laws against cheap, imported "Saturday Night Specials" in 1968. President Bush barred imported assault weapons in 1989 after a man killed five children with an AK-47 at a California playground.

Now, gun-control advocates sense an opportunity after recent school shootings in small-town America — Pearl, Miss., Jonesboro, Ark., West Paducah, Ky., Springfield, Ore., and at a school dance in Edinboro, Pa.

That has the National Rifle Association, gathering today in Philadelphia for the start of its annual meeting, girding for another battle.

"In the wake of a tragedy, it seems there are always some who spring forth and grab a headline with the quick, easy legislative answer," NRA spokesman Bill Powers said. "And, quite frankly, the problem of troubled youth and violence is a problem that's not addressed by the quick, easy legislative answer."

But gun-control advocates believe the recent spate of kids shooting kids has altered the political playing field.

"I think this is a different kind of event," said Bob Walker, president of Handgun Control Inc. "What happened in Jonesboro, in Edinboro and in Springfield has led many gun owners to the realization that the problem in America is not just the guns on the street. It's the guns in the homes."

Rep. Carolyn McCarthy, D-N.Y. — elected on a gun-control platform after her husband was killed and her son injured in a 1993 Long Island Rail Road shooting rampage — plans to introduce a bill this month to limit children's access to handguns.

The bill would seek to hold parents responsible if their gun falls into a child's hands. It also would require manufacturers to include trigger locks and new safety features.

Lawmakers at the state level, even in staunch gun-rights states such as Pennsylvania and Oregon, are acting as well.

Some Pennsylvania lawmakers want to limit gun purchases to one per month, which targets traffickers who buy many guns then immediately sell them to criminals who cannot pass required background checks. Another bill would require new handguns sold after a certain date to be "personalized," so only the owner can use it.

Girl Has Message for Other Teens: Bigger Is Not Bad

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1998 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Everyone has heard about teen-age girls who think they're fat when they're not. I'm 13 years old and a little overweight, but I try not to think about it all the time. I know lots of girls who do, and many of them are slim, healthy and attractive. Parents and teachers try to tell girls that size doesn't matter, but most teens think it does.

Magazines, television and even our peers recognize only thin people as being beautiful, so how can you blame girls for wanting to be thin? I'd like to give some advice, especially to other teen-agers.

Girls, if you are with someone who is heavier than you or uncomfortable with her body, don't complain about your own. It will only make them feel worse. Believe me, I should know — I have been hurt many times by behavior like this.

Guys, let a girl know she doesn't have to have a perfect body or look like a model for you to like her. One reason a lot of girls go on diets is so that guys will notice them.

Everyone: Compliment others. Make them feel loved, accepted and beautiful. Focus on people's good points, not their flaws. Not only will this make them feel good, it will make you glad to know you have made somebody's day a little brighter.

BEEN HURT BEFORE IN MINNESOTA

DEAR HURT: Excellent advice! It is unfortunate that someone who is as thoughtful and caring as you has been hurt by the thoughtlessness of others. The insight you possess will take you far. I hope those around you conduct themselves by your example.

DEAR ABBY: I am one of those abused husbands who took your advice and moved out 18 months ago. Fortunately, I had the means to have my own place. I am a healthy, retired professional. My wife is also a retired professional with strong willpower. I was a widower (married 35 years with three children); she, a divorcee of about 12 years with a college-age daughter. We were associates at work who had known each other about 25 years.

We started out great and had some great times, but she has a violent temper. She resorted to extremely abusive language, coupled at times with physical attacks. Abby, I never struck back.

My departure was occasioned when, nine days after I returned home from a hospital following a painful knee replacement, she attacked me physically and verbally and told me to leave. At the time, I could barely walk. With the help of my son-in-law, I found a place and moved out.

I presented my wife with a separation agreement which she ignored. She has hinted several times that we should live together for financial reasons. I say that is a poor reason to maintain a relationship.

After about seven months, I filed for divorce. She has responded quite greedily and is trying to wipe me out financially. Yes, Abby, we had a prenuptial agreement, but a lot can be acquired in 11 years together. So now we're gearing up for a complicated and expensive trial.

Nevertheless, I am happy to be out of that relationship. My family is also happy for me. My daughter, her family and my sister can visit me anytime they want. My son is visiting me again. There is no tension now.

So, Abby, I want to tell you that I heartily agree with your advice to abused husbands: "Get out. It may be tough at first, but you'll adapt."

FREE IN FLORIDA

DEAR FREE: Thank you for the firsthand testimonial. Divorce is never easy, and it can be costly — but in your case, I'd say it's the better option. Enjoy your freedom; you've earned it.

Rotan coach finding success close to home

ROTAN — Last year at this time, while coaching in Miller, Mo., Bert Otto could never have imagined he'd be where he is right now — just one series from the state tournament and only 30 miles from home.

Bert Otto

Otto, a 1989 graduate of Snyder High, has a chance to make Rotan history when he coaches the Yellowhammers in a 1A regional final series against Cross Plains beginning this evening at 5:30 in Abilene.

But between playing at Moffett Field and trying to lead Rotan to its first state baseball berth, Otto made a few stops along the way.

"I played college ball at College of the Ozarks in Missouri and then I took the coaching job in Miller," Otto said. "I knew I wanted to come back to West Texas. One day I was on the internet and saw there was an opening in Rotan. And now, here I am."

The first-year Yellowhammer skipper still has relatives in Snyder. The ex-Tiger's father and stepmother, Mike and Connie Otto, have been able to attend Rotan games, along with Otto's grandfather and his wife, Bert and Margaret Sellars.

"It's nice because there's always family and friends at the games," Otto remarked. "I get to see guys that I played with in high school and it makes it that much more special."

But the social aspect isn't the only benefit. The former SHS shortstop is enjoying just being back in West Texas.

"I prefer small schools and the West Texas area," Otto admits. "When I left, I thought I wouldn't be coming back. But once you're gone, you kind of yearn to get back here. Even my wife, Becky, likes it here. She doesn't want to go back."

With things looking bright for Otto, the perfect ending would be a trip to Austin. Rotan advanced to the regional final last year, before falling to Claude, 4-1.

"I remember when Snyder went to state in '86 and when they won it all in '83," he recalls. "I remember all the guys talking about it and saying how much fun it was.

"And if we can keep making the plays on defense, like we've been doing all year, and get some timely hitting, then maybe we'll be there, too."

Game 1 of the Yellowhammers' series starts at 5:30 this evening at Hardin-Simmons in Abilene. The second contest is slated for 4 p.m. Saturday at the same site, with Game 3 to follow, if necessary.

Jordan, Bulls relaxed for Game 2

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Admittedly dog tired, losers of four straight playoff road games and down 0-1 to the Utah Jazz, the Chicago Bulls would seem to be in big trouble going into Game 2 of the NBA Finals.

So why are they all yukking it up? Why is coach Phil Jackson mugging for photographers? Why is nobody the least upset that Dennis Rodman took an overnight trip to Las Vegas just hours after Wednesday night's 88-85 overtime loss?

Michael Jordan kidded that some of his coach's spiritual serenity is wearing off on the players.

"I think it's that Zen Buddhism stuff," Jordan said. "We're practicing smiling when we may be frustrated inside so we can relieve some tension. It's an art form. It takes about 10 years."

Time seems to be running out for the Bulls. A loss tonight would drop them to 0-2, a place Chicago has never been in its run to five titles in the 1990s.

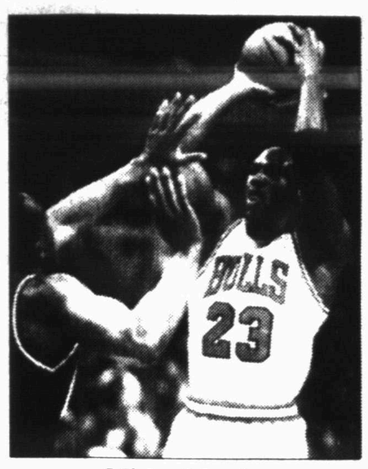

"I have an inner confidence about ourselves and what we are capable of accomplishing," Jordan said. "One game does not deteriorate like that. It's the ultimate apex of the season, but you don't fight that apex with anger and frustration."

Instead, Jordan is banging away at the piano in his hotel suite, taking out his frustration on the ivory and plotting for a big game tonight.

"Well, I played at it," Jordan said. "Don't confuse the issue here. I pushed the keys. I don't really know what I'm doing, but it's relaxation for me, that's all."

Jeff Hornacek will start out guarding Jordan. Bryon Russell and Shandon Anderson also will get their turns.

Hornacek insists he feels fine, but he looks as if his sore Achilles' tendon is bothering him.

Michael Jordan

Even when Hornacek is healthy, he's much smaller and slower than Jordan. Expect the Bulls to try to take advantage of that matchup.

It's just a matter of deciding whether to post Jordan up inside for short jumpers or set up plays that allow him to drive to the basket.

The Jazz adopt the attitude of their tough-guy coach Jerry Sloan when it comes to injuries. They don't talk about them.

"It just gives you an excuse to fail," Sloan said.

So if Hornacek is hurting, nobody is saying so.

"Jeff's physical condition is he's like anybody else: when we suit up, he's ready to play," Karl Malone said. "That's basically the motto of this team. When we put our uniform on, we're ready, no excuses."

There is no way that Hornacek — or Russell or Anderson or anybody else — can guard Jordan one on one.

"Jeff realizes he's not going to stop him. We realize that," Malone said. "But it's our job as big guys to help him out a lot more than we did last night."

Malone, meanwhile, will try to locate the jump shot that deserted him for most of Game 1. He had trouble getting to the basket against Luc Longley, but hinted that he would alter his approach tonight.

"I had opportunities," Malone said Thursday. "Let's just say that Luc was a great defensive player and I didn't do the things I was capable of maybe doing. I made a minor adjustment for tomorrow night's game. I'm not going to tell you what it is. But I'm not going to stop shooting, if that's what you're asking."

Sloan said Malone's shooting was the least of his concerns.

"It's no big deal," Sloan said. "I'm not going to lose any sleep over it. He'll either make shots or miss them. That's not a brilliant statement, but that's all this game is. He's liable to have those same shots and make them the next time. It wasn't like he was having to take shots that were totally strange to him.

"The positions he got the ball on the floor were almost identical positions where he's had the ball the last four or five years."

Athletics 6, Rangers 1...

Henderson's homer drops Texas

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A blend of speed and power made Rickey Henderson one of the game's premier leadoff hitters. Nothing has changed in his 19th year in the big leagues.

Henderson has been displaying that rare combination on a daily basis for the Oakland Athletics, with the latest instance coming in Thursday's 6-1 victory over the AL West-leading Texas Rangers.

The 39-year-old outfielder hit a tie-breaking, three-run homer in the seventh. It was his third home run in as many games, and helped make a winner of Jimmy Haynes (4-2), who teamed with Bill Taylor on a five-hitter.

The score was tied 1-1 in the bottom of the seventh, when Miguel Tejada doubled and Ryan Christenson rolled a bunt single down the third-base line that no one picked up.

Henderson drove Rick Helling's first offering into the left-field bleachers as Oakland won for just the fifth time in the past 15 games.

Helling (7-3), who failed in his third try for his eighth victory, said a miscommunication between him and third baseman Luis Alicea led to their failure to go after Christenson's bunt, allowing him to beat it out.

"It's frustrating because they're willing to give you an out," said Helling, who allowed four runs on eight hits over seven innings. "But there was no way I could get it and there was a little miscommunication between Luis and myself. The next thing you know he hits a home run and it's 4-1."

Haynes, acquired in a midseason trade with Baltimore last year, allowed one run on five hits in 7 1-3 innings and Taylor got five outs for his 10th save.

"Rickey's homer was a huge lift," Haynes said. "It gave us some breathing room."

Actor arrested

PRINCETON, W.Va. (AP) — Bob Denver, who played the title character on "Gilligan's Island," was arrested Thursday after a package of marijuana was delivered to his home.

Denver was charged with marijuana possession and released on $1,000 bond.

He appeared briefly in court for arraignment.

West Virginia authorities were notified earlier this week by Pueblo, Colo., police that a package containing marijuana was sent there by a delivery service and addressed to Denver at his Princeton home, said Lt. Bruce McNeill.

After an officer delivered the package Wednesday night, a drug task force executed a search warrant. Inside Denver's home, police found about 10 grams of marijuana and drug paraphernalia, McNeill said.

In all, police recovered about an ounce and a half of marijuana from the package and Denver's home, he said.

"He was very apologetic over the incident and remorseful," McNeill said.

Report: Federal law doesn't ban Oregon's doctor-assisted suicide

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Clinton administration is poised to announce that federal law doesn't forbid doctor-assisted suicide in Oregon, The Oregonian reported today.

The newspaper, citing sources in Washington, said Attorney General Janet Reno would make the announcement, based on a Justice Department review that said the Controlled Substances Act does not forbid doctors from prescribing lethal doses of medicine for terminally ill patients.

It wasn't clear whether the decision would foretell a national policy initiative.

But it would clear the way for doctor-assisted suicide in Oregon, where voters twice have approved a law allowing doctors to prescribe lethal doses of drugs for patients with less than six months to live. It is the nation's first doctor-assisted suicide law.

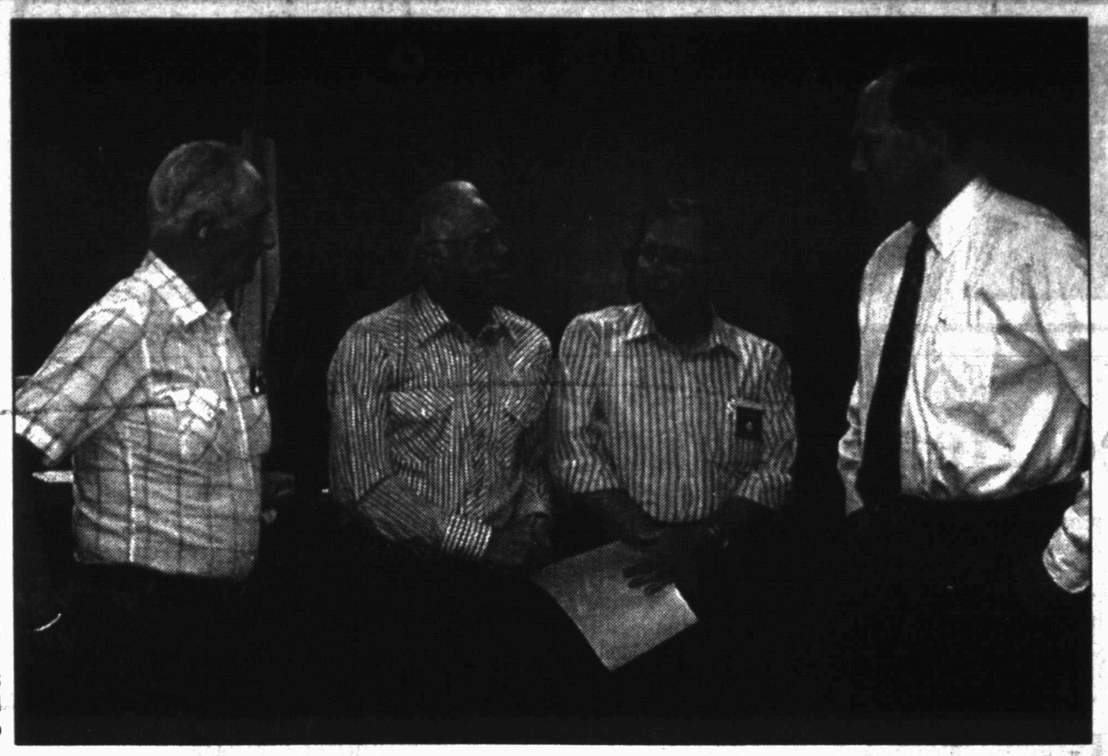

However, legal challenges and the reluctance of the Justice Department to issue an opinion about the Oregon law had made doctors and hospitals wary.

At a November meeting of the Oregon Medical Association's governing body, doctors said they were concerned about implied threats from Congress and the Drug Enforcement Administration to restrict prescriptions for controlled substances.

Although the Justice Department began reviewing its jurisdiction over assisted suicide November 1997, the Oregon law attracted widespread attention in Washington after the first reports of an assisted suicide surfaced in March.

The news sent a shock wave through Congress, prompting dozens of members to write to Reno. Most urged her to accept an interpretation of the Controlled Substances Act that would disqualify assisted suicide as a "legitimate medical purpose" of drugs.

The long wait for the Justice Department opinion has not stopped the assisted-suicide law from being used.

Lawsuit OK'd in 911 case

AUSTIN (AP) — In his calls to the city of Temple's 911 dispatcher, Stephan Peterson became increasingly distraught.

He told the dispatcher that his wife, who suffered from asthma, was in respiratory arrest.

He gave directions to their home.

But the dispatcher told him a different address was listed on the 911 screen — and that's where the ambulance went.

After five calls from Peterson to 911, the ambulance finally reached the right address. Hilda Peterson, 47, was dead, two months before the couple's 16th wedding anniversary.

Stephan Peterson filed a lawsuit against the city in the wake of his wife's 1996 death. On Thursday, the 3rd Court of Appeals cleared the way for a trial.

"We're prepared to go to trial," said Edward Berliner of Austin, Peterson's lawyer. He said he believes that under the law, a claim against the city is limited to $250,000.

"We're suing for the maximum we can obtain," he said.

Stuart Smith, a lawyer representing the city, said he hadn't seen the appeals court opinion and declined to comment on the case.

The city said the dispatcher sent emergency personnel to an address she believed was correct; the personnel eventually arrived at the correct address; and the dispatcher believed her actions were helping preserve Mrs. Peterson's life.

The city also said the dispatcher's actions can't be considered ineffective just because she should have acted differently.

Countering, Peterson said the dispatcher was unfamiliar with the city's geography, the computer system, and policies applicable to such emergencies; that she received no training on unfamiliar equipment; and she sent emergency personnel to the wrong address.

He also said when the dispatcher was asked by the emergency technician if the emergency was on West Young — the correct street — she falsely replied that Peterson had told her the address was on East Young.

The East Young address was the one the dispatcher told Peterson was listed on the 911 screen, according to tapes that Berliner played in an interview with The Associated Press.

Domestic violence penalty boosted

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Oregon is trying to break the cycle of domestic violence with a new law that increases the penalties for spousal abuse if the beating takes place in front of the children.

It is the latest among new laws across the nation that are based on growing evidence that the children of abusers suffer mental scars and are more likely to grow up to be abusers themselves.

"We know domestic violence can go through generations, and some witnesses later will be abusers," said Marion County District Attorney Dale Penn. "That suggests there's a need for intervention."

Beginning July 1, if a child living in the household witnesses a domestic attack, the crime is automatically bumped from a misdemeanor to a felony, increasing the possible penalty from one to five years in prison.

At least three other states — including California, Florida and Utah — have passed similar laws within the past few years.

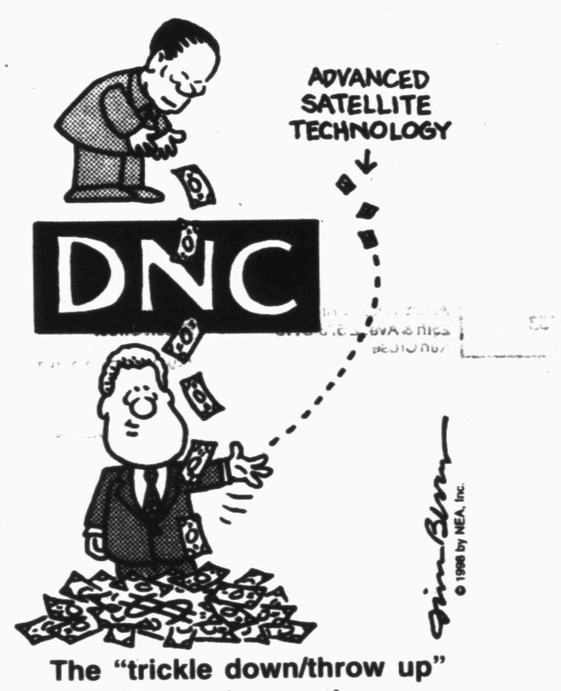

At a shelter for battered women in Portland, the law comes too late for a 30-year-old mother whose husband went on rampages through the house with a baseball bat, smashing dishes and whatever else was around.

She escaped with only a broken nose, but when her 6-year-old son arrived at the shelter, he would hit people when he got mad, duck under a table whenever he heard a loud noise, and call others obscene names, copying his father's practice.

"Maybe if it was taken more seriously in the court system, it would get out in open and women and kids could get more help," said the woman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Rod Underhill, a prosecutor in Portland and surrounding Multnomah County, said he plans to interpret the word "witness" in the law to include cases in which a child only heard an attack. Often, children hide when the parents fight.

Is obesity related to culture?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have read about the epidemic of obesity in the United States and I wonder if it could be the result of our propensity to consume junk food.

On a recent trip to Europe, I was astonished to see relatively few overweight people. Overall, the children were not fat but seemed attentive and self-disciplined. The food was also different from ours: small desserts and lots of fresh fruits and vegetables.

Years ago, because of a weight problem, I placed myself on a 2000-calorie, natural-food diet. At the end of a few months, my weight was normal. However, since consistently eating the "typical" American diet, I have regained unwanted pounds. Cculd our national obesity have a cultural basis?

DEAR READER: In the process of being digested, food releases calories that are either burned for energy or stored as fat. Whether a person burns or stores is the result of genetic tendencies and level of activity. Those individuals who consume more calories than they can burn will become overweight.

I cannot comment on the slimness and fitness of our European neighbors. However, if your perceptions are correct, I'm not surprised that an emphasis on healthful, low-calorie foods is associated with a more ideal body weight.

Many nutrition experts believe that we, as a nation, eat too much and consume the wrong foods. As you know, fat contains twice as many calories, gram for gram, as do carbohydrates and protein. Because junk food (and most fast foods, for that matter) contains a high proportion of fat, such an unhealthful diet could certainly be a huge factor in the fattening of America — especially when coupled with our love affair with a sedentary lifestyle.

Your comments made sense to me, but I have no scientific proof that our national obesity has a cultural basis. Proof or not, however, we would all benefit from eating more prudently: less fat and empty calories (from sugar and alcohol), and more fresh fruit and produce. And our health would certainly improve if we exercised regularly and more vigorously.

Also, our pattern of eating may be important. Several years ago, scientists studied two groups of rats that were litter mates. Both groups received exactly the same number of daily calories. One group was fed three times a day; the other, once.

Guess which animals gained an inordinate amount of weight? The researchers concluded that one large daily meal provided more calories than the rats would burn; hence, the excess was stored as fat. On the other hand, spacing the meals enabled the rats to burn the calories for energy and reduce fat deposits.

Therefore, the person who skips breakfast, grabs a quick lunch and eats a large dinner (or pigs out while watching evening television) is probably setting himself up for periodic caloric excess: in a word, fat. To maintain an ideal weight, it makes more sense to divide the daily calories more equitably among three meals, and even have a light afternoon snack.

Colorado shooting...

One suspect dead, two others on the run

BLUFF, Utah (AP) — In a scene reminiscent of the Wild West, authorities said two survivalists suspected of killing a lawman and wounding two others were surrounded today in a canyon in the Utah wilderness.

A third suspect was dead, with pipe bombs attached to his body, apparently after shooting himself.

Scores of law-enforcement officers, including National Guard troops and SWAT teams, converged on southeast Utah, not far from the Four Corners area where Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid used to hide from posses led by Pinkerton detectives.

The manhunt began May 29 after police officer Dale Claxton, 45, was slain in a barrage of gunfire in Cortez, Colo., 50 miles east of here. Two other officers were wounded in the ensuing shootout.

Based on a tip, authorities identified the suspects as Robert Mason, Alan "Monte" Pilon and Jason Wayne McVean, but they found nothing but a pair of tracks until Thursday.

That's when Kelly Bradford, a San Juan County sheriff's deputy, was shot as he checked a report that a camouflage-clad gunman had fired at a social worker. Bradford, 35, was in serious condition at a Colorado hospital.

Bluff, a colorful artists' colony of about 300 people, was evacuated after Bradford was shot.

Found 300 yards away was the camouflage-clad body of Mason, 26, of Durango, Colo.

Authorities did not know if Mason had shot Bradford. Sheriff Mike Lacey said Mason appeared to have shot himself in the head. A bomb squad was called to remove the pipe bombs.

Officers followed tracks until dark Thursday before the ground search for Pilon, 30, of Dove Creek, Colo., and McVean, 26, of Durango was called off for the night.

Helicopters with night-vision equipment searched through the night, but around dawn, authorities said there had been no new developments.

Lacey said the fugitives were believed to be surrounded in a 7-by-2 mile area in a rugged region of heavy brush and woods near the San Juan River.

UAW strikes key GM plant in Flint

DETROIT (AP) — More than 3,300 United Auto Workers went out on strike today at a key General Motors Corp. stamping plant that makes parts for its lucrative light trucks.

The strike, the seventh against GM since early 1997, came after negotiators failed to reach agreement by the union's 10 a.m. deadline. Talks went around the clock in the final day.

A lengthy strike could cost the No. 1 automaker hundreds of millions of dollars in lost sales of its high-profit pickups, sport utility vehicles and minivans. Like the rest of the industry, GM has been enjoying strong sales of light trucks.

"We are extremely concerned about this critical work stoppage that may have far-reaching consequences," GM spokeswoman Mary Irby said. The plant was shut down 20 minutes after the deadline passed and workers began to staff picket lines.

The Flint Metal Center north of Detroit makes fenders, doors, hoods and other sheet metal parts for most of GM's full-size light trucks and some cars. With 3,377 hourly workers, the plant supplies 16 GM assembly plants in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

GOP leaders hunt votes for tax cuts, $101 billion budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing a revolt by party moderates, House Republican leaders hunted for votes today for a budget plan with $101 billion in new domestic spending cuts through 2003 and an equal amount in tax reductions.

The cuts were the heart of a $1.72 trillion budget for 1999 that the House planned to vote on later. Lawmakers began considering the measure Thursday night, a debate that stretched beyond midnight and resumed this morning.

The election-year blueprint was written chiefly by House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, R-Ohio, a possible 2000 presidential candidate. It features a proposal that is a favorite of conservative pro-family voters: eliminating the income tax's so-called marriage penalty, the extra taxes 21 million American couples pay that they would not owe if single.

GOP leaders argued that the cuts were just 1 percent of the $9 trillion the government plans to spend over the next five years. But it faced a nail-biter of a vote, thanks to reluctance by many moderates to support the extra cuts and the GOP's scant 10-vote House margin.

"I ask them if they want to go home and explain that the federal government is so efficient and well-run that they can't find 1 percent" in savings, said House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., in a brief interview when asked what he is telling wavering members. "Not many of them have said yes to that."

Though the budget does not require President Clinton's signature and merely suggests changes that would be made in later bills, it calls for unspecified reductions in welfare, Medicaid and other programs — beyond the savings from last summer's five-year budget-balancing deal.

"The vast majority of the American people want us to pay down the $6 trillion national debt we have before we have more tax cuts," said moderate Rep. Ray LaHood, R-Ill., who said he would vote "no."

On the House floor, lawmakers planned votes on two alternative spending blueprints.

A Democratic measure would ignore the GOP cuts, limit tax cuts to $30 billion and spend $10 billion more to hire teachers, expand Medicare access and for other programs favored by President Clinton.
