Carters Visit Shrine

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)-President Carter, on a day of sightseeing, visited the Maryland shrine of the first American-born saint and toured the Gettysburg battlefield where the Confederate Army made a fateful charge 115 years ago.

The president and several family members went to Culp's Hill and then to the "high-water mark," where Union forces turned back a desperate charge in one of the Civil War's bloodiest battles.

Courtroom Cleared

PYROR, Okla. (AP)-A bomb threat cleared the courtroom this morning in what was expected to be the final day of a preliminary hearing for Gene Leroy Hart, accused of killing three Girl Scouts last summer.

More than 100 spectators were rushed from the third-floor courtroom at about 10:10 a.m., after the hearing had been in session only about 10 minutes.

Hart, 34, was quickly taken from the courtroom and officers began to search the courtroom.

SIB Meets Today

AUSTIN (AP)-The State Insurance Board meets today to consider increased rates for homeowner's insurance in Texas.

The last increases allowed by the regulatory body was in July 1976.

This year the board staff has recommended a statewide increase of 13.1 percent in homeowner's insurance and 9.4 percent for separate fire policies.

Convict Home To Die

NEW YORK (AP)-Michael Covello was rebuffed at every turn in trying to end his four-year prison term for manslaughter early, but Gov. Hugh Carey stepped in and sent the convict home - to die.

The 34-year-old Covello is expected to die of stomach cancer in a matter of days, doctors say.

The SDN Column

Back there in 1961 when this community decided to have a home town Independence Day celebration, we were amazed at the response. Now, we continue to be amazed each year as the local celebration continues to be a high point of the year for thousands of people. And many of those who participate travel many miles to be in Snyder for "the fourth."

Neighboring cities and towns have contributed participants since the celebration began, but there is another group that possibily out-numbers all others in the out-of-town delegation. These are former residents of Snyder who make it a point to "return home" for July 4. Thus, the celebration has turned into a giant reunion, or homecoming, for hundreds or possibily thousands of people who once called Snyder their home town but now reside elsewhere.

Another factor that has added to the out-of-town participation in recent years is the addition of two major attractions. The tractor pull and the arts and crafts show, added only recently, have proved to be major drawing cards within themselves.

These, along with other events that have endured since 1961, assure that Towle Memorial Park, the rodeo grounds (site of the tractor pull) and all local tennis courts will be well populated for two or three days in early July. They have helped extend the celebration beyond the single day on which it originated. And it keeps the Independence Day festivities here at the very top of special annual events in this area.

We were reminded personally last weekend of the impression the July 4 celebration makes on some people. Our granddaughter, Laurie, who lives in Irving, came for a visit and brought a friend, Trisha Davidson, also of Irving. They made a real vacation trip of it, taking a plane from Dallas to Lubbock where we met them.

As they were waiting for their plane in Dallas, they saw some youngsters arrive by plane to be greeted by two adults, obviously grandparents, which prompted this comment from Laurie: "Why would anyone want to come to Dallas for the holidays when they could go to Snyder?"

Why, indeed?

With No Relief In Sight...

Inflation Reigns In US

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government says Americans should brace themselves this year for the biggest consumer price increase in four years - a 7.2 percent boost sparked by higher food prices and the decline of the dollar.

The cost of living projection released by the administration today is about 1 percent higher than the official forecast of last January.

If it holds, Americans would feel the worst bite in their wallets since inflation pushed consumer prices over 12.2 percent in 1974.

The administration said prices next year probably will rise 6.5 percent, also worse than it had forecast previously.

"The price level forecasts for 1978 and 1979 emphasize the need to find ways to control inflation," said the administration's midyear review of the economy and the 1979 budget.

The Agriculture Department said June 29 in its midyear review it was standing by its prediction that consumer food prices will rise by 8 percent to 10 percent this year.

This means that a typical urban, wage-earning family of three that spent $53.21 a week on food last year will spend $58.46 a week this year.

For its statistical market-basket of foods, which does not include fish or imported foods and beverages, the department predicts the hypothetical three-person family will spend $2,178 for groceries in 1978 - or $191 more than last year.

Declines in the value of the dollar have added as much as 0.75 percent to the inflation rate this year, Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller estimated last spring.

Because the dollar's value has fallen against the Japanese yen, for example, the price of imported Toyota cars has increased at least five times in the past year.

The worsening inflation will cause the economy to grow at a slower pace both this year and next because of declining consumer purchasing power and a slowdown in government efforts to stimulate economic growth, the administration said.

A number of economists both in and out of government are saying the worsening inflation rate could bring on a recession sometime next year.

But the administration said the current outlook still is for an acceptable economic growth rate of 4.1 percent this year and 4.3 percent in 1979.

Returnees Fare Well At Pageant

FORT WORTH (AP)-Sandi Miller, 20, Miss Red Bird Area, returned to the Miss Texas Pageant this year to capture first place in the Wednesday night talent preliminaries with medley of semi-classical and classical piano tunes.

Another pageant returnee, Margie Hooper, Miss Hurst-Euless-Bedford, won top honors for her second time in preliminary swimsuit competition at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

It was Miss Miller's second time to perform before the Miss Texas judges and the third appearance for 23-year-old Miss Hooper.

Both contestants said afterwards their familiarity with the pageant may have made the difference for them.

Preliminary competition continues tonight and Friday night. Final competition and the crowning of the new Miss Texas will be Saturday night.

Nine Drown...

Rains Flood Rochester

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) - Seven inches of rain in less than six hours sent flood waters six feet deep swirling through southeast Rochester. Police said at least nine persons were believed drowned and several others were missing.

The bodies of three wheel-chair patients and a nurse's aide were recovered from an elevator in the flooded basement of the National Health Enterprises nursing home. The four had been included in the count of nine feared dead.

Three cars believed to be carrying several persons plunged into the swollen Zumbro River and the occupants were feared drowned. Two boaters were reported missing.

Flash-flooding knocked out power and telephone service to parts of Rochester, blocked roads to the city and forced the evacuation of more than 4,000 persons. The famed Mayo Clinic in downtown Rochester was not affected, however.

"We have some real concern about how many we're going to find dead," said Olmsted County Sheriff Charles Vonwald.

Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich called out the National Guard to assist in rescue operations.

Names of the victims whose bodies were recovered from the nursing home elevator were withheld until relatives could be notified.

Witnesses told police the four were trying to go to higher floors to escape rising water.

County Deputy Coroner Paul Belau quoted witnesses as saying the nurse's aide pushed the button to go up but the elevator went down to the flooded basement instead.

The swollen Zumbro continued to rise at the rate of one foot an hour today as volunteers and police used boats to search house to house for people still stranded. Private homes and hotels were reported filled with evacuees.

As rain continued to fall, although not as heavily as Wednesday night, the National Weather Service said the Zumbro stood at 20 feet today, 8 feet over flood stage. Forecasters said the river would continue rising today, although at a slower rate.

Police Sgt. Orrin Knutson said one of the cars which reportedly plunged into the Zumbro carried a woman, another car had two to five passengers and the third an undetermined number of people. The woman's car went off a flooded bridge. It was not known immediately what caused the other cars to go into the river.

Thrills, Chills Abound In C-City AJRA Rodeo

COLORADO CITY-The AJRA rodeo took off at a brisk pace last night with an estimated 1,000 people turning out to see the young cowboys and cowgirls compete for glory and a piece of a purse approaching $9,000. The American Junior Rodeo Association rodeo will continue beginning at 7:30 p.m. every night through Saturday at the Western Riding Arena on West Highway 80.

The thrills and spills were many at last night's performance. One resulted in an injured arm for Mark Phohemus who managed 37 points before he was pitched from the bareback bronco he was riding in the boys 16-19 class. The San Angelo youth was taken from the rodeo arena by Mitchell County Ambulance Service and it was reported later that he suffered a broken arm.

Casey Lambert, a minuscule bull rider from El Paso, had the crowd cheering and on their feet when he rode his beast until the horn blew and then hopped off and strutted away to the tune of 66 points.

Several area cowboys and cowgirls turned in respectable times and scores. Mark Mueller of Snyder scored 62 points on the bull he rode in the boys 16-19 class. Thad Springer also of Snyder had the second fastest time with a 15.7 in the boys 12 and under break away roping division.

Gail, who turned out in force for the first rodeo to grace this cattle town in several years, appears to have several citizens headed for the pay window. Glen Gray had a 3.4 in the boys 13-15 break away roping. Gayla New-

LaPrade, an assistant FBI director and a 27-year-old veteran, declared that the agency was making him a scapegoat and said he would appeal his dismissal by Attorney General Griffin Bell.

Israeli Planes Fly Over Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)-Seven Israeli warplanes thundered over Beirut today in an apparent warning to Syria and show of support for Lebanon's Christians, beleaguered by a six-day Syrian siege. Israel declared it was "committed...not to let the Christian population be annihilated in Lebanon."

Flying low, the jets screamed in off the Mediterranean a few hours after Syrian gunners gave the Christian half of Beirut one of the heaviest poundings in the war-torn history of the Lebanese capital.

The Israeli military command said the planes were on a reconnaissance mission and took no action. But Eliahu ben-Eliassar, director-general of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's office, told reporters in Jerusalem the Syrians "are performing a massacre" and "we have promised and committed ourselves not to let the Christian population be annihilated in Lebanon."

Asked what Israel intends to do about the Lebanese situation, he replied, "We shall consider steps to be taken not to let the Christians be annihilated." He would not elaborate.

The jets broke the sound barrier and caused panic throughout the city. At the sound of the sonic booms, residents thought the planes were rocketing Syrian positions in support of the Christian militias the Syrians are trying to batter into submission.

The move was seen as a signal to Syria to ease up on its campaign against the Christians, which has killed almost 200 Lebanese since Saturday. The Christians are allied with Israel against the Palestinias in southern Lebanon.

The Israeli jet mission came after a seven-hour Syrian barrage during which the Voice of Lebanon, the Christian Phalange Party's radio station, said more than 1,260 Soviet-made Grad and Katyusha rockets smashed into six residential neighborhoods and the port area.

What goes up is supposed to come down, eventually.

The airlines, however, have been doing their best of late to disprove the rule so far as it applies to business trends.

Consider that passenger traffic is up an estimated 20 percent this month - and that following an 18 percent jump in May which topped a 13 percent increase for April. Revenues and profits are on the same course - and this not despite but because of reduced fares.

It's onward and upward and all because a bureaucrat took a radically unbureaucratic approach to the airline industry and, to its initial dismay, freed it from the cocoon of federal regulations which had determined its development and operational procedures for four decades.

As Civil Aeronautics Board Chairman Alfred E. Kahn saw it, the cocoon had developed into a straitjacket. The regulatory system which was supposed to ensure orderly operation in the public service actually shortchanged the public and prevented the airlines' expansion into a mass transportation industry.

Early this year Kahn reversed the pattern of 40 years. Routes, traditionally and stingily parceled out to carefully selected carriers, were opened to competition and the lines were encouraged to develop competitive fare schedules.

The results are recent history. The airlines have seen the all-important load factor - the percentage of available seats booked on flights - climb to an average of more than 60 percent. Since operating costs are about the same whether a plane is one-quarter or three-quarters full, the extra passengers are in the category of found money.

There has, however, been a price to pay in terms of convenience. So many special fare plans and packages have been introduced that passengers and ticketing personnel alike are hard-pressed to find their way through the schedules and come up with the best fit for an individual traveler's needs and wallet. If it was difficult to get a phone call through to a reservation desk before, it is doubly so now.

Still, the bargain flights are worth the hassle and delay for a growing public, much of it relatively new to air travel as indicated in some airline surveys.

Ironically, in becoming a mass transportation service the airlines are cutting into a veteran in that category. The bus industry, which has begun making noises about the need for some public assistance, cites lower air fares as a major cause of its declining-passenger problem.

But that's business - very good business as far as the airlines are concerned.

my turn

by john long

I thoroughly enjoyed the Fourth of July celebrations.

I spent most of my time in Towle Park. I devoured innumerable snowcones, a pickle or two, and more than a few soft drinks. Although it may have been an unusual assortment of foods I ate, I still enjoyed it enormously.

I especially enjoyed the arts and crafts exhibitions.

Booths featuring items ranging from stoneware articles to handcrafted knives were in the armory and Towle Park Barn.

Of course, all that walking eventually tired me out. What I appreciated almost as much as the arts and crafts show itself was the extra chair that Del Hirst, a local stoneware maker, had at his booth.

Several days ago I received a letter from Lois Jennings telling me of the Model T car trip she and her husband made.

The Jenningses, you may recall, passed through Snyder about six weeks ago in their 1924 Model T. They were traveling from their home in Los Angeles, Calif., to Baton Rouge, La. Instead of going on to Wisconsin, as they had planned, they instead went to Pensacola, Fla.

When they passed through Snyder they said they had no qualms about making the trip. The old Model T, they said, should be able to withstand the rigors of the road.

And, it almost did.

Mrs. Jennings said the car broke down just one block from her brother's house in Baton Rouge. The crank shaft, she reported, gave out.

Her husband, Don, fixed it and replaced several valves. In making the repairs she said he enlisted the aid of seven curious boys from around the neighborhood.

In her letter, Mrs. Jennings noted the friendly reception she and Don received here in Snyder.

Next year, she wrote, they plan to go to Canada, and possibly make a side trip to Alaska in the old Ford.

cuban twist

Does it not appear to you ludicrous that our government leaders are chewing their fingernails up past the second knuckle worrying about whether a few Cubans in South Africa are threatening the peace of the world?

You and I have watched generations of Presidents trying to appear presidential by creating diplomatic crises--but this has to be the silliest ever!

The very idea that the pipsqueak dictator of Cuba is thus able to twist our tail until we cry!

When the foreign minister of France was visiting our White House last May 26, our President Carter promised him that we would help African nations defend themselves.

Understand, there are currently seven wars going on in Africa. Tribal strife on that continent is neither worse nor better than heretofore, but we have more news media personnel there now and our politicians have more concern with black-interest politics than they used to.

So our President promised that our nation would help black-ruled African nations defend themselves.

At the same time, we will help to unstabilize the two white-ruled nations on that continent.

Our President's offer of intervention in Africa is no less absurd--but is more understandable--when you realize that his personal political pollster, Patrick Caddell, has advised him to wit. "Voters ... (this is the way Caddell reads you) now less anxious about inflation, more concerned about national security policy."

It's on that advice that our President has been issuing dire warnings about Soviet belligerence and has been pleading with Congress to give him, the President, more authority to send American troops into hostile situations.

President Carter's national advisor is on television warning that Russian and Cuban involvement in Africa threatens us although the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is still waiting to see the first evidence that Cuban troops were in fact involved in the fighting in Zaire.

And even if they--were--that we should get apoplectic about a fly-bite is most unbecoming.

Yet--convinced by his political pulse-takers that you are most anxious about our nation's security--the President's urging our NATO allies to strengthen defenses against the Russians and the Cubans.

To Castro, despite a gigantic ego which feeds on any kind of recognition, this protestation has to be hilarious.

The biggest ovation which the United Nations has heard this year was not for our Vice President and not for the president of France. It was the 35 seconds of thunderous applause after an hour-long speech by the vice president of Cuba.

proposal spurs

NEW YORK (AP)-President Carter's characterization of a capital gains tax cut as a potential windfall for millionaires may be the very spur to understanding that its advocates have been hoping for.

As they see it, the presidend is all wet, and when a situation of that sort prevails it is bound to create commentary. It already has, and more is soon to follow in testimony before the Joint Economic Committee.

Rather than being a "millionaires relief act," as Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal called the proposal, advocates of a cut say it would spur investment, lower inflation, create jobs, balance the budget.

In summary, they say, a cut in the maximum capital gains tax from 49 percent to 25 percent is what the country needs; and that conversely, the trouble with America is that capital investment is discouraged.

Supporters of a cut have been seeking a hearing for years, some even since 1969, when the rate was raised to 49 percent, and when, they assert, many of today's economic trouble were generated.

Nothing is more basic to the economic health of the United States, these supporters have been saying; but few important economic issues have attracted less attention. Sometimes it has been almost total.

Now, some of them feel, Americans who own stock at least 25 million directly, and those who own homes 48 million, and who thereby stand to be affected by capital gains taxes, are puzzled. Millionaires?

In their confusion, it is hoped, many of these people might decide to find out more about the Steiger Amendment to the president's tax cut bill, offered by Rep. William Steiger, R-Wis.

Capital is passbook savings. It is stocks, bonds, mortgages. It is money or its equivalent invested in plants, machinery and tools. It is what the local savings bank and the New York Stock Exchange seek to raise.

In short, it is money invested in pursuit of more money. Money invested in creating new enterprises or larger or more efficient ones. That, say advocatees, is how we create jobs, lower taxes, raise revenues and balance the budget.

These supporters can sound almost religious, and certainly philosophical. They frequently call on the testimony of history; capital investment, they say, is our system; it built America.

And now, relative to other countries, notably Japan and Germany, it is quite small. As a percentage of Gross National Product, Japan since 1962 has invested 32 percent in business; the United States, 17.5 percent.

Is it any wonder, the capitalists ask, that American productivity growth has been only a fraction of Japan's and that the U.S. annual increase in GNP has been less that half?

And then the clincher is offered: In Japan, as in Germany, France, the Netherlands and Belgium, the maximum capital gains tax is zero. In the United States it is 49.1 percent.

martha angle and robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - President Carter will soon face an especially sensitive political decision in selecting and submitting for Senate confirmation his nomination for a new chairman of a powerful, quasi-independent federal agency.

The agency is the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. At virtually all of the nation's 15,200 commercial banks, its initials - FDIC - appear on signs assuring customers that their deposits are insured up to a maximum of $40,000.

The current chairman, George A. LeMaistre, is returning to his former post as a professor at the University of Alabama Law School. He has informed the White House that he wants to move back to his home town of Tuscaloosa, Ala. by mid-August.

The leading contender to succeed LeMaistre is his deputy, Lewis G. Odom Jr., a 52-year-old fellow Alabama resident who worked on Capitol Hill from 1955 to 1968, then returned to Montgomery to practice law.

In early 1976, when most Alabama Democrats were united behind the presidential campaign of Gov. George C. Wallace, Odom emerged as the state's leading Carter supporter. Later that year, he became Alabama campaign manager for Carter.

When Odom returned to Washington last autumn as LeMaistre's deputy, it was widely assumed that he was positioning himself himself for a six-year term in the top FDIC job.

In addition to his early commitment and loyalty to Carter, Odom has the support of Atlanta lawyer Charles H. Kirbo, one of the president's closest personal advisors.

But Odom also is at least peripherally involved in a continuing controversy over a scheme in which unwary investors - including a number of former prisoners of war in Vietnam - lost between $1.5 million and $3.5 million because of allegedly fraudulent municipal bond sales.

The bonds were supposed to finance industrial development in two Alabama communities, Tuskegee and Aliceville. But much of the money allegedly was siphoned off by the bond underwriters, the Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. firm of Alexander and Allen.

The Securities and Exchange Commission filed suit against that company in U.S. District Court in Miami. After a trial, the judge wrote an unusually harsh opinion, which concluded:

"The evidence in this case describes a horrible fraud, one that has been vicious and brutal. It is difficult to imagine how anyone could contrive and execute a more diabolical scheme."

Odom, his partners and their law firm served only as bond counsel, a role that technically limited their involvement to certifying that the bonds were backed by legitimate industrial development authorities in the two communities.

But when those claiming to be defrauded investors filed a civil suit in U.S. District Court in Montgomery to regain their money, they named as defendants not only the bond underwriters but also Odom, his law partners and their firm.

The suit charged that Odom's firm received "excessive legal fees," participated in an "illegal scheme" and was involved in "aiding and abetting the wrongful acts which culminated in the issuance and sale" of the bonds.

Odom and his partners extricated themselves and their law firm from the still-unresolved case through an out-of-court settlement that required them to personally pay more than $100,000 to the plaintiffs.

Odom insists that he had no direct knowledge of any scheme to defraud the investors - and no evidence to the contrary has yet surfaced. But he also acknowledges that his quest for the FDIC chairmanship places him in an "awkward situation."

For Carter, the situation is far more than awkward. A decision to reward an influential political supporter probably will touch off a major controversy whose intensity could match the furor that forced Bert Lance's resignation.

study costly

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Anyone who ever served in the Navy is familiar with the saying that, "if it moves, salute it -- if it doesn't, paint it."

The idea may well apply to some government programs. Too many projects seem to be undertaken in a spirit of "why not," rather than "why."

The Federal Highway Administration has a pretty good record of building and managing our interstate road system. It has, in most instances, cooperated with State highway departments and, particularly, with those who have a good system such as Texas.

The highway administration has now, however, come up with a study which seems to be a sort of scholarly exercise that makes illiteracy look good by contrast. It has awarded a contract for $222,000 to a private think-tank which proposes to ask a couple of thousand automobile drivers at nine sites in three states their opinion on such matters as side splash from trucks on wet roads. They want to know if it is a problem. They want to know if large trucks block a driver's view. Are big trucks too slow going up hills and too fast coming down, they ask.

Most drivers of automobiles can readily answer these questions and would likely respond more forcefully if they had just gone through any one of these exasperating experiences.

Usually, however, their impatience and temper may have subsided after a short period of time.

The purpose of such a survey on questions of the relations between passenger vehicles and commercial trucks seem to focus on the human factors involved.

It appears, however, that the reason for asking these questions is that they have not been asked before. Can it be that they have not been asked because the answers are not worth knowing? This seems to be the question nobody has asked at all.

Reading a brief description of what this study is supposed to do makes you wonder if people involved might be better employed by popping bubble gum. Instead they went to graduate school to learn to talk about developing a "multi-dimensional attitude measurement device" and "collect sufficient behavorial data to relate each additude dimension to its associated behavorial correlates." It goes on to use some other descriptive words which probably only those who wrote them know what they were trying to say.

This is to not make fun at the academics and their wonderful ability with words. The question is whether the expenditure of $222,000 of public funds serves a useful end. It is difficult to relate this expenditure of public money to the "why?" or such a program but easier to see it as a "why not?"

Large French gauze squares and extra longs also makes news, both in prints and solids, and our Italian 50" tropic inspired squares are sure winners. Add these to a full range of wovens and prints from France and Italy, and the Collection is complete.

At top left is Echo's 45" French cotton square makes the prettiest shoulder wrap for a totally feminine look. Folded into a triangle, the square is easily tied and draped.

At right, Team a 50" Italian gauze cotton print with a solid bandeau for "at the bench"; the floral square Pareo is draped high over one hip and knotted low at the other. To tie the bandeau, twist an oblong gauze once in the center and place it over your chest. Cross the ends at the back, bring them back to the front and under your arms; knot at the neck.

Great for city or country are the 36" gauze prints from France shown at bottom left. They're equally good tied casually at the neck, as the Egyptian print above, or twisted into the best waist wrapping belt.

Home owners approaching retirement age fall into three categories - those who have no intention of moving from their present abodes, those who plan to spend the rest of their lives in a community with people of their own age, and those who are vehement about not living with other elderly persons.

There have been many surveys about the preferences of senior citizens, a term embraced by some and scorned by others. But the results have been only partly illuminating, perhaps because some of the surveys have been undertaken by groups hopefull that the figures will support their own theories or interests. Since our own questionnaires on various subjects related to housing have been highly productive, let's try one on the matter of retirement housing.

First, the replies should come from persons 55 or over, since few persons give much thought to the practical details of retirement before reaching that age. Secondly, it would be helpful if the answers are accompanied by the ages of the responders, a bit of information that will help to classify the data. Third, state whether you are retired and, if not, about when you plan to do so. Send all replies to Andy Lang, Associated Press Newsfeatures, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020.

1. Do you expect to seek out a retirement community. If you already are retired and live in such a place, how do you like it?

2. If you plan to remain in your present house, why? If you already are retired and haven't moved, why did you not do so?

3. If you plan to move, but not to a retirement community, why did you reach that decision? If you already are retired to a non-retirement community, how do you like it?

4. Do you expect to retire to a rented apartment, a condominium or to another house? If you already are retired, which of these three did you select and are you satisfied with your decision?

5. What is the most important thing you hope to find in a new location if you do decide to move? Pleasant surroundings? Friendly neighbors? People with the same interests? A wide range of leisure-time activities? Readily accessible medicar care? Ease of pedestrian movement? A different climate? If none of those, what?

Do-it-yourself will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

The Professor's four-spade opening was a mighty good bid.

When an expert does elect to open with four spades or four hearts he almost always has some sort of extra values.

The idea is that he is likely to be doubled and he just hates to go down two or three tricks only to find that he was tilting at windmills and that the opponents did not have a game.

The Professor just needed a couple of key cards — say the king of clubs and an ace in his partner's hand to bring four spades home.

His partner didn't have those key cards, but the Professor wrapped up the game anyway. It seems that West, after prolonged cerebration, led the deuce of hearts. It didn't take the Prof two seconds to finesse with dummy's queen, discard his losing diamond on the ace of hearts and wind up losing just one spade and two clubs.

"Could I tell which king to lead from?" asked West.

"No," replied the Professor. "Nevertheless you should have set me. Your correct lead was the ace of spades. After that start it should not be too tough to cash a diamond and two clubs."

We just raise to three notrump. He may not make it but we have made the percentage call.

Sorority Slates Year's Activities

"Seek New Horizons" will be the 1978-79 International Beta Sigma Phi Sorority theme, according to Carolyn Limmer, president of the Lambda Kappa Chapter in Snyder. Sorority chapters around the world will observe this theme in activities through the coming year. The program book for the local chapter will be "The Practice of Living."

Various committees have met recently in preparation for the coming year. The executive board met on June 11 in Mrs. Limmer's home to plan the chapter budget. The social committee met on June 14 in the home of Lora Beasley, chairman. The first social will be held in late August before Beginning Day, the traditional start of the sorority year. The social will be held in the home of Betty Richardson at Dunn. Other committee meetings were: ways and means on June 17 in Marilyn Zoda's home; membership on June 25 in Carolyn Fortune's home; yearbook on June 26 in Carolyn Greene's home; and service on June 28 in Marilyn Zoda's home.

The next activity for Lambda Kappa members will be making a float for the rodeo parade to be held on July 19. The float will re-stage a scene from a play presented by sorority members to guests at a meeting last October. A picture of this scene, entitled "A Day In the Court of Judge Roy Bean" appeared in the Snyder Daily News and in June it appeared in "The Torch," the international Beta Sigma Phi publication. Chairman of the float project is Dena Ellis.

Billie Canon of 4014 Austin, was given $100 worth of beef by the American Business Women's Association on July 4. Mrs. Canon is employed with J.C. Penneys here.

Proceeds from this project will be used toward scholarship fund for a Scurry County girl attending WTC. Kim Layne of Ira is this year's recipient.

Fashion And Beauty Tips

A tailored blazer should never be worn with a party dress. Try a silky shawl instead.

Bronze accessories, pastel jewelry or even a shell pendant on a gold chain make fine highlights for a white eyelet outfit.

Be sure to examine the wedge when buying espadrilles to see that it's not frayed or glued insecurely.

But Fighting Back...

Peanuts Lose Their Glamour

By SAM HARTZ

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter is slipping in the popularity polls and peanuts aren't doing so well, either.

You remember peanuts. They were on all tongues in 1976 as dark horse Carter vaulted to the presidency amid a hail of peanut jokes, cartoons and hoopla that made goobers a national bywood.

On Inauguration Day, a French restaurant near the White House sold peanut butter sandwiches for $10 with parsley or $7.50 without.

But now, the bloom is off the legume. Carter's peanut business is run by a trust. His mother, Miss Lillian, recently told some Denver school children she doesn't eat them. And at capital cocktail fests, they're down the table with the potato chips.

Peanuts are being doctored to taste like almonds, pecans and walnuts.

Economically, the industry was hurting even in 1976, after leveling-off meat prices caused consumers to switch back from protein-rich peanut butter to steaks and chops.

Meat prices are up again, but so is peanut butter. And other sticky problems have emerged to help cause a production drop of 29 million pounds in 1977, and the trend continues.

The problems:

-More Americans are dining out, with few searching menus for peanut butter sandwiches.

-Peanut butter is about 40 percent fat, causing calorie-conscious dieters to link it with chunkiness and middle-age spread.

Last but not least, a declining birthrate has resulted in a shortage of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches' best customers - children.

"Zero population growth is hurting the peanut industry," declared Barbara Schlei, an Agriculture Department official, at a recent convention of the Peanut Butter Manufacturers and Nut Salters Association.

But peanuts are fighting back, and that takes us to Tyrone, Pa., where Flavored Nuts Inc., is removing the oil from them and substituting essences of almonds, pecans and walnuts. Millions of pounds of the bogus nuts are sold annually.

That's not exactly peanuts.

Also, the Georgia Peanut Growers are flooding the nation's restaurants with recipes for Southern-style peanut soup, peanut and sweet pea salad, and peanut pie.

And the Agriculture Department is pushing peanuts abroad. Exports have leaped from 229,000 metric tons in 1975 to 288,000 in 1977.

Japan is a new customer for American-made peanut butter. There, it is reprocessed into a creamier, sweeter product to tempt Japanese tastebuds. In Britain, along with a heavy, American-backed advertising campaign, U.S. goobers are being turned into peanut butter.

China grows nearly all the peanuts it consumes.

No Clone, But Two of a Kind

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since I've been old enough to read a newspaper, I've been confusing you with your sister, Ann Landers. It wouldn't be so bad if you were an advice columnist and she was a pediatrician. But no such luck. America has only two famous advice-givers worth their salt and they both came from the same parents!

I've often wondered how it was possible for two people to resemble each other so much in looks, actions and talent. Now I know—thanks to the latest scientific development.

Tell the truth, Abby: Are you or Ann Landers the clone?

LEW RILEY, YORBA LINDA, CALIF.

DEAR LEW: No cloning here. We are identical twins, but we've been referred to as "cyclones"!

DEAR ABBY: My mother and my boyfriend (who lives with me) are at war. My mother thinks my boyfriend is using me because he lives with me, and my boyfriend thinks my mother is trying to run my life.

Abby, I am in the middle. I love them both very much, but I'm the one who catches it from both sides. They never speak to each other. I've tried to explain to Mom that he helps with the bills and makes me very happy. And I've tried to explain to my boyfriend that she is just a regular mother who wants the best for her daughter. But it doesn't do any good.

The only time I fuss with either of them is over this situation. Please give me some advice.

ALL CRIED OUT

DEAR CRIED OUT: You tell me what your boyfriend thinks, and also what your mother thinks, but you don't tell me what YOU think! If you aren't sufficiently mature to handle this situation without getting "all cried out," you belong with a live-in mother—not a live-in boyfriend.

DEAR ABBY: Just because you have a will is no assurance that your instructions will be carried out. Once the lawyer has collected his fee, he is through.

It is then the responsibility of the person you name to dispose of your possessions, and the lawyer doesn't know or care what's done.

I witnessed the signature of a neighbor on her will. She left all her antiques to her nieces, and her husband knew of her wishes. But after she died, that scoundrel remarried and gave her antiques to the daughters of his second wife!

In my husband's will, he left me all his assets, with instructions that at my death I should leave whatever remained to his son. I didn't. I immediately split everything 50-50 with his son.

The safest thing to do is to give whatever you have to whomever you want to have it before you die.

P.C.S.

DEAR P.C.S.: Your suggestion may be the "safest," but it's not always possible. I would recommend securing the services of a lawyer. The person you designate to see that your wishes are carred out ("the executor") has the law on his side should your wishes be ignored by your heirs.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters For All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Good Hobo Worked Hard

BELVIDERE, Ill. (AP) - Fry Pan (Jack) Fish remebers the romantic days of the hobo - when welfare, Social Security, and food stamps weren't his staples.

He drifted, panhandled and worked only when he wanted.

But when the hobo worked, he worked hard, Fry Pan says.

Fry Pan should know. Since jumping his first boxcar in 1928, Fry Pan has picked fruit and cotton, repaired dams and wells, helped butchers and bakers and odd-jobbed his way from Chicago to Seattle to Los Angeles.

"The hobo worked hard," the 64-year-old drifter said while panhandling a beer in this northern Illinois city recently. He said he was en route to Chicago or wherever strikes his fancy.

"There was no income tax or welfare and we supported ourselves," he said. "The hoboes were structure workers - they worked on dams or wells. But a bum was nothing. He didn't work. He was an idiot and jungle rat to the rest of us."

Charles II of England left exile for the throne in 1660.

ARLINGTON (AP)- When Texas outfielder Richie Zisk came to bat in the eighth inning, he saw a gap in the right side of the infield between Yankee first baseman Chris Chambliss and second baseman Damaso Garcia.

Yankee Manager Billy Martin saw it too.

"We were trying to yell at him (Garcia) to move over, but we couldn't get his attention," Martin said.

Zisk sawed a broken-bat single off reliever Rich Gossage through the opening, scoring Toby Harrah from third and providing the Rangers a 3-2 victory over New York before 37,702 fans.

Jon Matlack, 7-8, pitched his ninth complete game in taking the victory over Don Gullett, 4-1. Both struck out three and yielded no walks. Matlack gave up seven hits, and Gullett gave up eight before yielding to Gossage in the eighth with runners on second and third and nobody out.

Matlack, winless on the road, is 7-2 in Arlington Stadium.

"I felt confident at home. On the road I would have been scared to death," Matlack said of a ninth-inning threat, when heads-up play by Harrah at third base and Bert Campaneris at shortstop kept the Yankees from tying or going ahead.

Thurmon Munson singled in the ninth for his third hit of the night, but Harrah backhanded Lou Piniella's smash down the third base line and forced Munson at second.

Campaneris made a diving stop of Chris Chambliss' grounder to the middle, throwing while on his stomach to second baseman Kurt Bevacqua in time to force Piniella.

Then Graig Nettles hit one through Matlack's legs that Campaneris raced hard to get to behind second base, and his throw barely beat Nettles to first for the game's final out.

"I should have gotten Nettles' ball, and when it got through I thought it was a base hit all the way. Nettles is a dead pull hitter and I was shocked when it came back to me."

A's 5, Mariners 3

Mario Guerrero slammed a tie-breaking two-run homer with one out in the ninth inning off Shane Rawley following Dave Revering's infield hit. Jeff Newman also homered while All-Star selection Matt Keough was the winner, with help from Dave Heaverlo in the ninth.

Royals 10, Angels 1

Hal McRae rapped a two-run triple and a solo home run for his 1,000th major league hit, Darrell Porter singled home two runs and every Kansas City starter collected at least one hit as the Royals bombed Nolan Ryan and two relievers. Amos Otis also homered.

Red Sox 9, White Sox 21

Fred Lynn drove in three runs with a pair of homers and Carl Yastrzemski capped a six-run seventh inning with a two-run blast as the Red Sox increased their AL East Lead. Bill Lee pitched six innings for his ninth victory.

Twins 3, Brewers 1

Rod Carew went 4-for-4 and Mike Cubbage 3-for-3 while Dave Goltz scattered eight hits. Trailing 1-0, the Twins scored all their runs in the sixth against Lary Sorensen on singles by Carew and Cubbage, Butch Wynegar's sacrifice fly, Dan Ford's triple and Rich Chiles' sacrifice fly.

Milwaukee Serves As Building Stop For Confidences

MILWAUKEE (AP) - The Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament, while perennially put down for its lack of big names, had become a favorite confidence building stop for the game's fringe players and future stars.

Just ask veteran Art Wall Jr., whose 1975 victory in the GMO snapped a 10-year drought. Or Dave Eichelberger, whose only victories in 11 years on the tour have been in the GMO in 1971 and last year. Or Andy North, the 1978 U.S. Open champion from Madison, Wis.

One attraction of the GMO for struggling pros is a chance to compete without the likes of Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson or other tour giants, who usually skip this tournament in order to prepare of the British Open the following week. Another is the 7,010-yard, par-72 Tuckaway Country Club course, with its wide open fairway, impeccably manicured grens and relatively short par five tests.

Last year, 81 players survived the cut at four-over-par 148 for the final two rounds, and many believe par or better may be required to advance to the final two rounds this year. The $150,000 tournament began today, with first prize of $30,000 awaiting Sunday's winner.

"It's definitely not a course where par wins," North said. "It's not a Muirfield or an Open course, but people want to see good golf and they do here.

"The reason the scores are so low is that the conditions are perfect," he said. "It's a legitimate test. It's as good as most courses we play and in better shape than most."

North, seventh on the tour's earnings list, is one of the biggest name players in the tourney. The field also includes former PGA and Open champion Lee Trevino, who ranks fifth in earnings, long-hitting Fuzzy Zoeller, who ranks 12th, 1975 U.S. Open winner Lou Graham (14th) and Mac McLendon (19th).

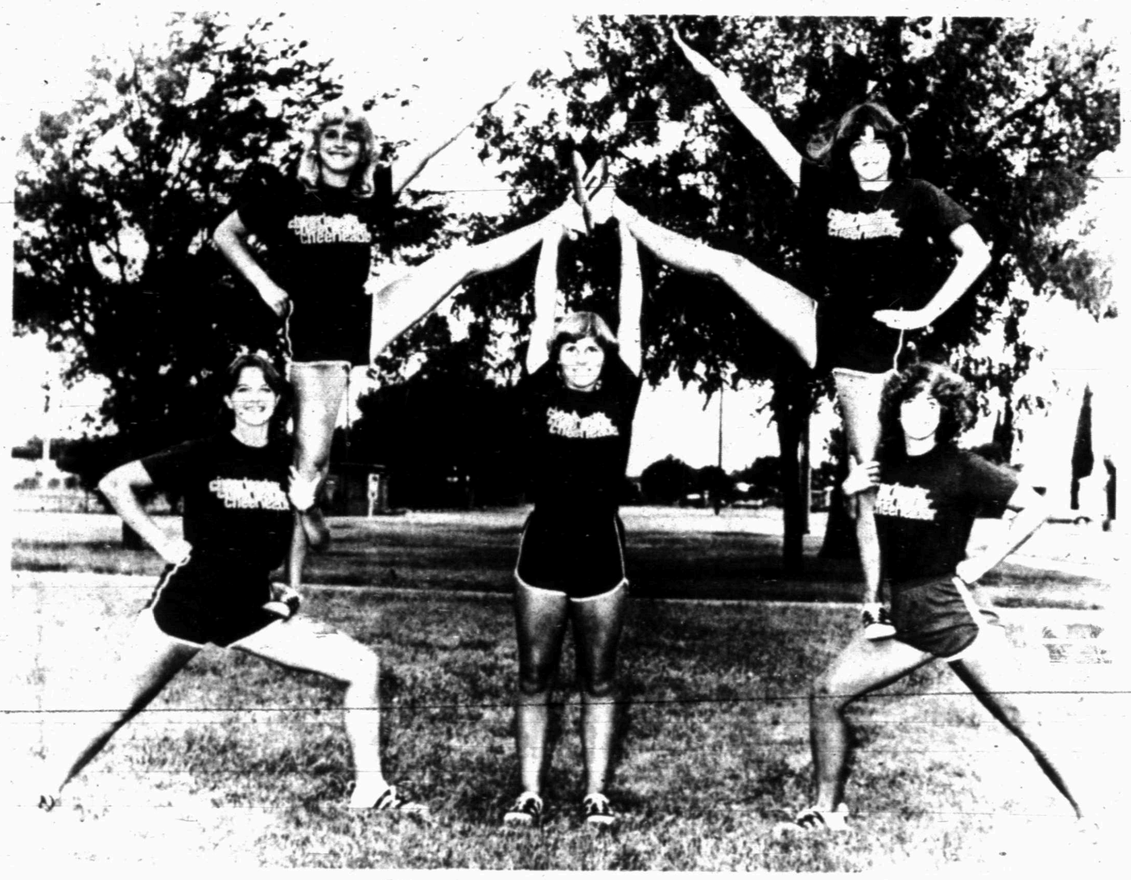
Classic Set For Snyder

The Mexican Olympic Basketball Team will be one of four nationally and internationally known teams playing in the first Classic at Scurry County Coliseum Nov. 16, 17 and 18, it has been announced.

Also playing in the three-day tournament will be two time national NJCAA champion Independance, Kan. The other two squads will be host team Western Texas College, conference and regional champions last year, and Tyler Junior College.

Independance won its national title in 1976-77 and 1977-78.

In 1976, pitcher Jerry Koosman of the Mets won 21 games and one year later he lost 20.



1978 CHEERLEADERS - Snyder High School cheerleaders for 1978-79 perform a new drill. The group has recently returned from cheerleading camp at Texas Christian University. Evert To 'Show Down' With Navratilova Friday

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Who's No. 1 will be decided, at least for the moment, on Friday when Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova meet in the finals of the Wimbledon tennis tournament.

Evert reached the finals for the fourth time in six years by defeating defending champion Virginia Wade of Britian 8-6, 6-2 Wednesday while Navratilova wore down an injured, limping Evonne Goolagong of Australia 2-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Navratilova, a Czechoslovakian who defected to the United States three years ago, is appearing in the finals at Wimbledon for the first time.

While Evert took a vacation at the beginning of the past indoor season, Navratilova established herself as the game's top player, crushing any pretender to the crown worn for the last several years by Evert.

Then Evert returned and beat Navratilova in their first meeting.

But two weeks ago, in the Eastbourne International, Navratilova defeated Evert in a marathon three-setter.

"The match at Eastbourne should give me confidence," said Navratilova, the No. 2 seed, of Friday's pending battle. "I can win if I can produce by best."

Top-seeded Evert feels she could be just reaching her peak.

"I still haven't reached top form," she said after disposing of Wade, who won last year. "I hope it will happen in the final - it's leading up to that.

"Martina is playing awfully well. I think the only vulnerable part of her game is her backhand."

Navratilova has lost only three matches this year while Evert is a two-time Wimbledon champion.

The men's semifinals today sent defending champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden against unseeded Tom Okker of the Netherlands and Jimmy Connors, the 1974 champion who lost to Borg in the finals last year, against fellow American Vitas Gerulaitis.

Kilgore AD Dies At 58

KILGORE (AP) - Kilgore College athletic director Joe Turner died Wednesday night after a lengthy illness. He was 58.

Turner was head basketball coach at Kilgore for 18 years, and led the school to a 387-124 overall record. During that time, the junior college cagers won nine league titles and two National Junior College Athletic Association titles.

He retired as coach in 1971 to become the school's athletic director.

Turner came to the Kilgore coaching staff from Cayuga High School, where he coached the Class B school to two state championships and a 237-36 overall record.

Services will be Friday at the First Baptist Church in Kilgore.

New York Met manager Joe Torre played three positions for the National League in All-Star competition, catcher, first base and third base.

U.S. Whips England 12-11 In Lacrosse

STOCKPORT, England (AP) - The United States beat England 12-11 and Canada defeated Australia 16-13 at the World Lacrosse Championships.

Eamon McEneaney of Cornell University scored the winning goal for the Americans.

The United States will play Canada in the final on Saturday.

Simpson Announces Four New Players

Western Texas College athletic director, Dr. Sid Simpson, has announced the signing of four players to the women's basketball team for the coming season, making a total of 17 girls on the squad thus far.

The most unusual signing occurred as the Dusters secured Betsy Benson, 5-7, from Ewa Beach, Hawaii. Miss Benson, who first contacted the college, played her junior high school year in Japan, lettering on a boy's team.

Unfortunately, little is known of Miss Benson's high school career averages or other statistics.

Also signed is Katie Fisher, 5-8, from Austin. Miss Fisher was a member of the Johnston High School basketball team which won its 4A district the past three years in a row.

"She is real quick, is an excellent outside shooter and jumps well," commented Dr. Simpson.

In addition, two players from Abilene Wylie have inked pacts with the Dusters. Sandra Whiteside, a 5-10 guard, and Kathy Brzowski, 5-9, make complete the list of 17 players on the current Duster roster.

"Kathy and Sandra are both very quick and real aggressive," added Dr. Simpson.

Returning from last season's Duster team will be Karen Williams, Nodia Vaughn, Pennie Sexton, Jo Beth Mitchell and Belva Marsh.

McCammon To Coach Flyers

PHILADELPHIA (AP)- Bob McCammon, who coached the Maine Mariners to an American Hockey League championship in the team's first year of existence, was appointed today as new head coach of the Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League, the Associated Press learned.

McCammon succeeds Fred Shero, who resigned in May after the Flyers were eliminated from the Stanley Cup playoff semi-finals by the Boston Bruins.

Cincy Floors Fading Astros

CINCINNATI (AP)-Paul Moskau finally won a game, beating the Houston Astros 2-1, and the Cincinnati Reds go into a crucial series with the San Francisco Giants trailing the division leaders by only 2½ games.

"I didn't know if it was ever going to come but I'm glad it did because we are on a winning track now," said Moskau, 1-2. He has started nine games and outdueled knuckleballer Joe Niekro, 5-2.

The Reds took the series 2-1 over Houston but not without a super relief effort by Doug Bair with nobody out in the ninth inning and the bases loaded.

Jose Cruz and Bob Watson singled to open the ninth trailing 2-1 when Reds Manager Sparky Anderson lifted Moskau for Bair.

"I didn't consider taking Moskau out even after he had thrown 115 pitches, because when Cruz singled he became a base-stealing threat if I had put Bair in then," Anderson said. "Bair is a high kicker and I didn't want Cruz on second base."

Astros Manager Bill Virdon sent Art Howe to bat and he singled but Cruz was held up at third.

"He waited too long at second base to see whether or not Howe's ball would fall in," said Virdon.

"When he didn't get the jump there was no way he could have beaten the throw home," Virdon added.

Reds third baseman Pete Rose, who had increased his hitting streak to 21 games, then threw Cruz out at home after fielding Luis Pujols' grounder. Wilbur Howard grounded to Dave Concepcion at shortstop for a game ending double play.

"To tell you the truth, I was trying to strike him out," said Bair, content with the grounder.

"That was a good series against Houston," said Anderson, "They're a very tough team."

Earl Fish Tournament Set 8th-9th

The Annual Earl Fish Memorial Partnership Golf Tournament will be held Saturday and Sunday at Snyder Country Club.

Sixty-four two-man teams are expected to compete in the two-day tournament which begins with shotgun starts at 9 a.m. Saturday.

The Third, Fourth and Fifth Flights will tee off each morning session, while the Championship, First and Second Flights will get under way at 2 p.m. on both days.

Among the favorites in the Championship Flight are Larry Anderson of Snyder with Don Copeland of Dallas as partner, Dave Foster and Martin Thomas of Dallas, Jay White and Mark Smith of Lamesa, and Jake Broyles and Jess Claiborne of Lamesa.

According to pro and golf shop manager Bill Keys, "We have a very strong Championship Flight this year and any one of the teams could win it."

The annual tournament will be accented by dinner and dancing Saturday night.

Krause Snaps Swim Record

BERLIN (AP) - East German swimmer Barbara Krause broke her second world record at East Berlin National Swimming Championships with a time of 55.41 seconds for the 100-meter women's freestyle.

In 1976, pitcher Jerry Koosman of the Mets won 21 games and one year later he lost 20.

Cataract surgery

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am looking forward to an eye lens implant for cataracts. Please tell me what you think. A friend of mine got pressure on the eye after an implant. What effect will this have and can it be avoided?

DEAR READER — These operations are relatively new. It shows the progressive nature of what has been happening over the past several decades in managing cataracts.

A cataract involves an opacification of the lens inside the eye. This round globular lens is normally clear like the lens in a camera, to transmit light so we can see. When it becomes too cloudy because of changes that occur, it affects the vision. At a certain point these lenses that have cataracts have to be removed if vision is to be restored.

Originally people who had such an operation had to wear very thick lenses for their glasses. As a result there was a lot of distortion in what they could see. Then we came to the stage of the contact lenses which could be placed directly over the surface of the eye. These made an enormous improvement in the vision of patients who had had cataracts removed. The distortion of what such an individual would see was greatly minimized.

Now this has been carried one step further and in some instances the artificial lens is placed inside the eye to replace the opacified lens affected by cataracts. This lens cannot change its shape and size like a normal human lens will to accommodate for distance. But nevertheless, because of its location it is a further refinement in improving vision after the lens with its cataract formation has been removed.

Many patients have reported very satisfactory results with such procedures and have worn them for a long time. Whether or not such a procedure should be done depends a lot on the condition of the eye as a whole. Sometimes patients forget that the eye is a very complex organ and that the lens is only part of the vision mechanism. If you have changes in the back of the eye (retina) in relationship to circulation or other factors you may still have poor vision even if the cataracts are corrected.

The buildup of pressure you described must have been related to pressure on the fluid drainage mechanism in the eye. We all have a little filtering system that allows the buildup of fluid in the eye to drain out.

When this goes awry and pressure increases in the eye we call it glaucoma. You can have glaucoma from mechanical pressures even from a cataract of the normal eye lens if it is allowed to progress to the point that it creates pressure.

I would consider this a relatively uncommon complication to such surgery. Rely on your opthamologist's overall evaluation of your vision in deciding about your operation and what kind of lens you should have for your best vision after surgery.

Americans Spend More On Autos

PARSIPPANY, N.J. (AP) - Americans spend seven times as much on automobiles as on electricity for their homes.

Government statistics on how people spend their money show that 14.5 percent of income after taxes are paid in the United States is spent on buying, operating and maintaining cars, says William B. Murray, vice president of General Public Utilities Service Corp. On the other hand, he says, the cost of electricity for home use accounts for about two percent after tax income.

Mexico City Condemned To Death By 2000

MEXICO CITY (AP) - You think you have smog? Now in Mexico City it is so bad that:

A leading business magazine recently suggested wryly that the tourist brochures be rewritten to say: "Visit Mexico City and pass romantic late afternoons beneath the most toxic clouds on earth."

One enterprising real estate company has placed a large billboard along an expressway 20 miles north of the city's center, saying: "Take off your gas mask, you have just entered a fresh air zone."

On weekends, millions of Mexico City residents stream to the countryside to experience something missing for five days: fresh air.

"The Metropolitan area is condemned to death by pollution before the year 2000," claims Ramon Ojeda Mestre, president of the Academy of Ecological Law, a private organization of lawyers affiliated with the International Council of Environmental Law.

"So far," he said, "we have been able to keep one step ahead of catastrophe."

What has prompted the article in the business magazine Expansion, the billboard sign and the weekend exodus is dense smog that rises almost daily over a city of 14 million people which plays host to 2.4 million tourists a year?

It is a cloud of motor-vehicle and industrial pollution that experts estimate now weighs 650 tons and will weigh 5,000 tons by the year 2000 unless something is done about it.

Dr. Abelard Monges Nicolau, a cancer specialist, says lung cancer is increasing in the city. He did not give figures, and said he could not prove with certainty that pollution is to blame.

"However, it has been proven," he added, "that a person breathing the air in Mexico City is breathing the equivalent of 10 to 12 cigarettes a day."

Most inhabitants suffer frequent sore throats, eye irritation and bronchial reactions, and druggists report brisk sales, especially on polluted days, of inhalers and eye drops, although there are no firm statistics linking the pollution with health problems.

The orange-hued smog collects in the high altitude dish among the mountains in which Mexico City sits, filling the air with pollutants: carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons, sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxides and dust blown in from nearby dry lake beds.

Dr. Humberto Bravo Alvarez, chief of the air pollution institute at the National University of Mexico, says: "The possibility of a smog disaster such as occurred in London exists but it has not occurred because of meteorological reasons."

Transit Drivers Strike

BOSTON (AP)-Some 4,200 Boston-area subway and bus drivers walked off their jobs today, forcing the area's mass transit system to a standstill and leaving a half million Boston-area commuters wondering how they would get to work.

"Nothing is running. Absolutely nothing," said Renato Sanchioni, a spokesman for the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority.

MBTA spokesman Don Eagles said the authority would seek a temporary restraining order in Suffolk Superior Court this morning to force the drivers back to work.

Meanwhile, Eagles said, "private bus lines will be running, commuter rail trains will be running, taxis have been asked to permit multiple passengers. Other than that there's not a darn thing we can do."

Union leaders announced the job action last night, saying transit workers would use the day off work to go to lobby with state elected officials. They were to try to kill a proposed law that would require arbitrators to consider the MBTA's financial condition when deciding contract disputes.

The legislative proposal also would eliminate a current provision in the bus drivers' contract that provides automatic cost-of-living increases while a new contract is being negotiated.

Hospital Strike Is Unchanged

TEXARKANA (AP) - "Things haven't changed that much," a negotiator for striking hospital workers said after a meeting between union representatives and Wadley Hospital officials.

Union negotiator Dale Magee made the remark after a meeting held Wednesday at the request of federal mediator Gene Zimmerman. The two sides will meet again today in an attempt to break the deadlock between Local 11271 of the Communication Workers of America and the hospital.

Union members walked off the job June 28 after contract negotiations failed.

Charles Stuart Jr., a spokesman for the hospital, said Zimmerman instructed negotiators not to discuss Wednesday's session. Stuart would not comment on the discussions.

Magee said Zimmerman talked to hospital officials and then spoke separately with union officials. He said the two parties met after that.

"Things haven't changed that much," Magee said. "We've offered about everything we can offer, including binding arbitration.

"Until this time, the hospital hasn't indicated that it's interested in reaching an agreement. This may change."

The union held a meeting Wednesday night to tell its membership what was discussed Wednesday afternoon. Magee said hundreds attended.

The union says disagreement over wages is impeding progress toward a contact with the hospital.

Water Deliveries Decline In June

Curtailed deliveries to oil companies cut total deliveries to customers of the Colorado River Municipal Water District during June. Even the cities took a clue from oil company consumption and sagged below the corresponding month a year ago.

Through June, the District had delivered 9,061,318,888 gallons of water, a decline of 607 million gallons. Of this, 2,228,663,288 gallons were to oil companies, or 572 million gallons less than for the first half of 1977.

June deliveries by the district amounted to 1,714,031,974 gallons, which was off 408 million gallons for the month, 301 million gallons of which were in reduced deliveries to oil companies. As of May 1, the district cut off almost all surface water deliveries to oil companies.

Early and late-month showers reduced the deliveries to cities which totalled 1,427,783,100 gallons in June, down 110 million gallons from June a year ago. Municipal deliveries for the first half, however, were up 572 million gallons in amounting to 6,832,655,800 gallons. The figures for June showed Odessa with 615,244,000 gallons, down 9.36 per cent; Big Spring 285,261,000 gallons, down 1.74 per cent; Snyder 106,374,000 gallons, down 4.19 per cent; Stanton 15,095,220 gallons, up 5.45 per cent; Midland 391,790,000 gallons, down 10.47 per cent; Robert Lee 14,019,000 gallons, up 152.8 per cent.

Prosecution Of Gray Unwarranted

WASHINGTON (AP)- The Society of Former Special Agents of the FBI says prosecution of former acting FBI director L. Patrick Gray III and two top aides is unwarranted. It wants dismissal of federal indictments charging authorization of illegal surveillance against radical groups in the early 1970s.

The group submitted a resolution to President Carter and Attorney General Griffin Bell on Wednesday saying the accused officials "acted to protect the country."

Panels Told...

'13' Wouldn't Work In Texas

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas legislators looking for a magic tax-relief remedy have been told that what worked in California won't work in Texas.

Joint meetings of two House committees on tax relief legislation resumed work today as they awaited Gov. Dolph Briscoe's formal call for a special session opening Monday.

Most of the House committee talk Wednesday concerned Proposition 13, the state constitution change voted in California to limit taxes and spending to certain levels.

"It was a great thing in California but I would hate to see it in Texas," James McGrew, executive director of the Texas Research League, "I'd prefer almost anything to Proposition 13."

He said California has only 57 taxing units in the state while Texas has 2,241. Texas's property taxes are much lower than California's.

McGrew estimated that if the Proposition 13 theory was applied to Texas, more than half of the benefits would go to businesses instead of homeowners, farmers and others who could not pass the taxes on.

"The overall impact in California is devastating," said Walter Lilie, assistant state comptroller, of Proposition 13, "Texas is immensely ahead of California in terms of having a reasonable tax burden on our citizens."

He said Texas taxpayers would stand to lose half a billion dollars in property tax deductions on federal income tax if a Proposition 13 type measure is passed here.

"Let's stop talking and fighting Proposition 13. That's not an issue in Texas," protested committee member Rep. Brad Wright, R-Houston. "Let's get on to some talking about a meaningful tax limitation plan."

Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, committee chairman, said the purpose of the Wednesday session was to discuss Proposition 13, "so we will know why it won't work in Texas." He said detailed plans for legislation would be presented at the Friday hearing.

In opening the Wednesday session Speaker Bill Clayton said he hoped they would make "sensible" suggestions for tax relief to the special legislative session and avoid "drastic approaches."

He said testimony before the committees on ways and means and constitutional amendments would show that a California Proposition 13-type proposal would not work in Texas.

Lamps, Radio Are Taken In Burglaries

Reports of July 4 breakins and thefts began trickling in to the police station.

Robert Allen told police that an Independence Day thief visited his 600-19th St. home and made off with two antique lamps, collectively valued at $400. The theft is alleged to have occurred between noon and 11 p.m.

A $160 citizens band radio was reportedly taken from the 1977 GMC pickup owned by Raymond Lunsford. Lunsford told officers the theft apparently occurred between 11:45 a.m. and 7:45 p.m. July 4.

Two traffic mishaps were among the incidents investigated Wednesday.

The first collision occurred in the 3500 block of Ave. M about 12:15 p.m.

It involved a 1976 Chevrolet driven by Brenda Pruitt and a 1973 Pontiac driven by Daisy Jackson of Colorado City. Only minor damages were reported.

Minor damages were also reported in a two-car collision at Furr's Supermarket Wednesday at 6 p.m.

Reports show that a 1971 Mercury driven by Blyth Goodman was in collision with a parked 1973 Pontiac driven by Cindy Granham.

New Evidence Frees Convicted Man

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) - Earl Patrick Charles sat in a cell for 3½ years insisting he was falsely accused of murdering two men. Today he is a free man, the burden of his conviction swept away by new evidence.

"The thing was, I knew I didn't do it," he said. "That was the force that helped me believe I'd someday go free."

Charles, 25, was released Wednesday from the Chatham County Jail, where he had been held since his arrest in Tampa, Fla., on charges of murdering Max and Fred Rosenstein, two Savannah merchants. The proscutors said they would not retry him because of new evidence.

"I can't believe it's all over," said his mother, Flossie Mae Charles, 49, who fainted in court when she heard the death sentence pronounced on her son in 1975.

His mother "was the first face I saw" after being released from prison," he said. "That was beautiful. My father was a double dose."

"I still believed the good Lord would make a way somehow," said his father, Patterson, 62.

Superior Court Judge George Oliver, who had sentenced Charles to death on the recommendation of the jury that convicted him ruled June 14 that prosecutors had to free the 25-year-old man or retry him because of new evidence in the case.

His attorneys had found a police detective who corroborated their contention that Charles was working at a Tampa service station when the crime was committed.

District Attorney Andrew J. Ryan III announced Wednesday that he had no plans to prosecute Charles further.

Charles' attorney, John Sullivan, said he was "satisfied" with the outcome of the case.

"All the evidence points ultimately and unquestionably to a solid alibi which would be tantamount...to securing an acquittal" if the case were retried, he said. "I doubt very seriously if the district attorney...would ever attempt to bring this to trial."

Sullivan said he was considering a civil suit against prosecutors for violation of Charles' civil rights.

"I intend to pursue it in conjuntion with a defense team out of the East that specializes in these things," he said.

But Ryan said he had a clear conscience about the way the case was handled by his office.

Results of investigations in the case are attached to the court order and are a matter of public record, he said. "I invite anyone to come in and read it."

Charles, who celebrated his 25th birthday in jail Monday, said he was not bitter.

"It was a bitter pain to serve that time for something I didn't do," he said. "But I made it serve me, too. It sure advanced my outlook on life."

Famous Pilot Laid To Rest

HOUSTON (AP) - The man who spotted targets for American bombers over Hiroshima in August 1945 has been laid to rest in Texas soil after searching the last 33 years for some peace.

Claude Robert Eatherly was a 24-year-old Air Force pilot who picked out Hiroshima through a hole in the clouds that August 6 and radioed the Enola Gay to bomb primary targets. He died Saturday from cancer in the Veterans Administration Hospital here.

The Distinguished Flying Cross winner did not witness the actual bombing of Hiroshima but later flew into a mushroom cloud during nuclear testing on Bikini Atoll.

He was discharged from the service in 1947 following numerous psychiatric tests that indicated "severe neurosis and guilt complex." Doctors said he told them he felt responsible for the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Japanese.

In 1960 after a series of small-time burglaries, the Van Alstyne, Texas native told reporters he hadn't had any sleep in 15 years.

"All I want is a break," he said. "There is no peace."

"I can remember him waking up night after night," said his brother James Eatherly of Midland, Texas after the burial service Wednesday. "He said his brain was on fire. He said he could feel those people burning."

Joe Eatherley of Van Alstyne said he thought his brother had suffered from nuclear radiation.

"One of his navigators came down with radiation sickness. We didn't know what it was then. I doubt we really know what it is now," he said.

A resident of Houston for the past 20 years, Claude Eatherly was stricken with cancer and lost his speech several years ago.

"I kind of felt for him because I went through 16 atomic bomb tests after the war," said Paul Guidry, a fellow VFW member and one of Eatherly's pallbearers. "Just watching a blast makes you feel insignificant - like a cockroach on a dance floor."

DA To Fight Salary Cuts

AMARILLO (AP) - The district attorney in this Panhandle city says he meant what he said when he told a country commissioner he would file suit if the commissioners cut salaries in the prosecutor's office.

The Amarillo Globe News revealed a conversation between District Attorney Tom Curtis and commissioner Steve Scott in Sunday editions of the paper. Scott said he had recorded the conversation.

Scott said Curtis last month threatened to sue the commissioners if they reduced the salaries of his staff.

Scott and a majority of the other commissioners voted in favor of some budget increases for Curtis, but later Scott apparently felt he had been unfairly coerced and released the tape to the Amarillo newspaper.

The newspaper's transcript of the conversation quoted Curtis as telling Scott if the commissioners tried to cut the salary of the DA's staff "I'd try to seek an injunction immediately against you in the state and federal courts."

In another part of the conversation Curtis said he was "fixing to get after them good," referring to two commissioners who sought to cut his staff's salaries.

Scott consulted Attorney General John Hill, who questioned the ethics of Curtis' actions but said no laws were broken.

Curtis said Wednesday he was merely warning the commissioners that it was against the law for commissioners to slash salaries in a prosecutor's office.

If the commissioners court had cut my assistants' pay, I assure you as I assured Commissioner Steve Scott that I would have brought the suit that I threatened in my conversation with him.

"There is nothing in the world unethical about doing that no matter what the Amarillo newspaper or John Hill would have you believe," Curtis said.

Museum Curator Wants To Restore SATS Trolley

By GREG THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - If you were ever a conductor on a San Antonio Transit System trolley during the 1920's, Joe Zawatski is looking for you.

Zawatski, curator of the San Antonio Museum of Transportation, wants to restore the decaying, last-remaining SATS trolley car to the way it looked when it last served the city in 1929.

But there's a slight problem. Zawatski, you see, is only 27 years old and has absolutely no idea how a 1920s-vintage trolley is supposed to look.

"We're looking for people who worked for the system during those years, a mechanic or a conductor, for example, or maybe someone who used to ride on them and remembers how they looked. Anybody in town over 50 years old has probably ridden on one of these," said Zawatski.

"We need people to tell us what they were like back then," he added. "Any kind of information or photographs can help. We don't have much."

Dozens of the bright yellow and green electric trolleys crisscrossed the city before the 1930s brought more mobile, inexpensive, gasoline-powered buses.

No. 300, the last of the SATS trolleys, ran its final route on April 29, 1929. Built in the late 1800s, No. 300 was the only SATS trolley that wasn't junked or melted down by the end of World War II, said Zawatski.

A SATS employee bought No. 300 and donated it in 1937 to the Witte Museum, where it was used as a temporary pottery studio until 1947. The 50-foot trolley spent the next 22 years outdoors on the museum's grounds.

No. 300, with its route sign still sporting, "Barnett St.," then ended up parked outside Zawatski's museum in 1969, bared to the weather and vandals and forlornly decaying into a mass of rotting wood, rusting metal and peeling paint.

"It's an old relic, but it's an important part of our city's history," said Zawatski.

No. 300 is too large to move inside the Hemisfair Plaza museum, so Zawatski envisions a restored trolley that could be put on display in a covered fenced-in area outside the museum.

But his budget doesn't cover such an extensive restoration job, so Zawatski is searching for volunteers and materials. A local paint company has donated enough paint for the restoration, while others have offered their time.

No. 300's wooden floors and ceilings and its wood and canvas interior have deteriorated to the point that "We don't even like to go in it anymore since the ceiling might fall," said Zawatski.

Much of the wood and windows would have to be replaced and the exterior stripped and repainted.

But Zawatski is optimistic, since his musuem recently used volunteer labor and donated materials for an extensive, six-month restoration job on a rare, 1920-vintage Jenny biplane.

"You can't find a restored Jenny to buy anymore," said Zawatski. "The restoration couldn't have been done without volunteer help. We've done this before. I think we can do it again to save the trolley."

Newman Determined To Race

LAKEVILLE, Conn. (AP)-Actor-diplomat Paul Newman didn't let a few bad breaks stand in his way at Lime Rock Park.

All that stood between Newman and his Datsun 280-Z and a victory in the sports car race Tuesday was one second.

Newman, starting from the second spot on the grid, rushed to the front at the start, only to be involved in an accident at the first turn. Officials said Newman slowed at the rain-soaked Big Bend and was struck from behind by a car driven by Bob Leitzinger of State College, Pa.

Newman returned to the 25-lap, 40-mile race and began his chase of the eventual winner, Don Kearney of Tuxedo, Md. In his pursuit, he was forced once to use the escape road before Big Bend. Newman righted his car, but with three laps to go, spun out again on the course.

For a third time Newman put on a charge, finishing third overall and second in his class in the Sports Car Club of America-Sanctioned race.

Little Change Seen In Children's Television Programs

DALLAS (AP) - The creator of "Sesame Street" says there has been little improvement in children's television programming on the three major networks, despite broadcasters' claims to the contrary.

"We have seen some good things in commercial television, but there has been little quantatative change over the years," Joan Ganz Cooney said Wednesday to more than 12,000 participants at the National Education Association's convention.

Ms. Cooney was presented the organization's "Friend of Education" award, becoming the first woman and first non-politician so honored. Previous recipients included Lyndon Johnson and Hubert Humphrey.

The director of the Children's Television Workshop said in an interview that she had hoped "Sesame Street," which is aired on Public Braodcasting Company stations, would have been more influential in changing the face of commercial TV.

"If that was our goal, I would have to say we mostly failed," Ms. Cooney said. "We have actually seen a lessening of interest in children, not an increase, despite what the networks tell you."

She said only CBS has continuously honored its responsibility to children, with the long-running "Captain Kangaroo" show.

"I think the networks are going to end up with what they and I both don't want - more regulation," she said.

Scores Of Sterilization Cases Taken To Court

EDITOR'S NOTE-Sterilization as a form of birth control is on the increase both in the United States and elsewhere in the world. So, too, apparently is abuse of people's rights to decide, or even understand, what's best for them.

NEW YORK (AP)-Rosalind Johnson was 20 years old when she was arrested for vagrancy. She also was pregnant. While in custody she had an abortion - and was sterilized.

Now, two years later she's suing New York City for $12 million. She claims she was told a tubal ligation - blocking the Fallopian tubes was not permanent, that it could be reversed later when she became a "good girl." She signed the consent forms.

As Rosalind Johnson Keys, she and her husband want children. She knows now that the chances of reversing the surgery and becoming pregnant are slim, although some progress is being made.

Hers is one of scores of sterlization cases that have been taken to court since sterilization has increased as a form of birth control. A study by George Washington University shows there are 80 million sterilized couples in the world, 8 million in the United States alone.

Another study by the National Center of Health Statstics shows that sterilizations in the United States rose 25 percent among married couples from 1973 to 1976.

With this upswing come moral and legal questions:

-What is voluntary consent? Do patients really understand they're closing the door on future offspring.

-Should a woman be allowed to make the choice during a period of stress, say in labor or prior to an abortion?

-Do parents have the right to order that their severely retarded children be sterilized?

-Are the poor and the minorities singled out for sterilization?

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare recently heard testimony from interested parties in 10 regional centers and Washington as part of an effort to set guidelines for federal funded sterilizations which account for 6 percent to 10 percent of the 1 million or so a year in the United States.

Betty Gonzales of the Association for Voluntary Sterilization Inc. says the greatest abuse is that it doesn't reach the people who want sterilization even though it is legal in all 50 states.

Karen Stamm of the Committee to End Sterlization Abuse feels the greatest problems are in coercing women into being sterilized and performing hysterectomies for that purpose. Dr. Charles McLaughlin, president of the American College of Surgeons, once likened the procedure to "killing a mouse with a cannon."

Allan Chase, independent scholar and author of "The Legacy of Malthus," says we are in the midst of a sterilization epidemic and that while it became chic in the 1960s, it's now back to a punitive procedure.

Some minority groups are apprehensive about the whole thing. The Public Citizen's Health Group contended in Washington testimony a while ago that black women were abused through hysterectomies and sterilization. Using HEW figures, the group asserted that 20.5 percent of hysterectomies were done for sterilization and that 44.4 percent of these were done on black women, 16.3 on white.

Since May 1977, New York City has what many call a model ordinance. Before sterilization, an individual must think about it for 30 days, must be told in his preferred language what sterilization is and the various ways it may be performed, must be at least 21 years old and must seek professional advice from someone other than the attending physician.

Elsewhere in the country, the waiting period is no longer than 72 hours, the explanation is only in English and the physician recommending sterilization often is the only consultant.

In addition, some 20 states still have eugenics laws on the books. Eugenics, a fad of the early 1900s, is a philosophy of good breeding, of giving society the right to produce.

The U.S. Supreme Court recently ruled on a case that bore all the earmarks of eugenicism. Seven years ago, a judge approved a mother's request that her "somewhat retarded" 15-year-old daughter be sterilized without her consent.

The daughter, now 22 and married, wants a family. When she learned she had been sterilized she sued the judge. The Supreme Court, over three sharply dissenting opinions, ruled the judge was immune despite the "tragic consequences" of his action. However, it did not block the young woman's right to sue her mother and the doctor.

"This is an area of increasing litigation," says Norm Rosenberg, a lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union in Washington. "It's impossible to say how many cases are in the courts, for these are things that generally go unreported."

On the ACLU docket are some 17 cases in various states of disposition.

Mrs. Gonzales, of the prosterilization forces, concedes there has always been abuse and admits it is difficult to define. "I think it's an abuse if woman tells her husband that for medical reasons she should have no more children and orders him to get a vasectomy. Did he really think about it? People should be very selfish when they make this decision."

But there also are those who have carefully made a decision for sterilization and can't find a willing doctor. Mrs. Gonzales says this applies particularly to rural areas.

Public hospitals that deal in obstetrics aren't allowed to refuse to do sterilizations, but private hospitals may. The problem in rural areas, she says, is finding a doctor who will agree to it.

One relatively new way of sterilizing women is the minilaparotomy, or mini-lap. It is a form of tubal ligation developed in Thailand that does not require hospitalization. A clinic specializing in mini-lap opened recently in Baltimore. Author Chase abhors the thought of these clinics, labeling them "sterilization boutiques."

Although tubal ligation is considered irreversible, some doctors are achieving reversals with new microscopic techniques.

Dr. Sherman J. Silber, a urologist in St. Louis, is using a microscopic surgical technique to reverse vasectomies.
