Senate: Arms talks needed before testing

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate has acted to halt testing of a U.S. weapon designed to shoot down satellites until President Reagan certifies he has made a good faith effort to negotiate a treaty with the Soviets containing "the strictest possible" limits on such devices.

The 61-28 vote late Tuesday capped more than seven hours of debate which included a secret session to hear U.S. intelligence reports about recent Soviet advances in space, the last frontier of the arms race between the two superpowers.

It came only a day after Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko said a treaty should be negotiated "without delay" to ban anti-satellite weapons, a call which was publicly rejected by the White House.

Reagan insists an anti-satellite ban would be too difficult to verify and says the United States should go ahead with its own anti-satellite weapon — known as an ASAT.

"We're pleased with that vote," deputy White House press secretary Peter Roussel said today. "The Senate action reflects a greater recognition of the complexities of space arms control, in particular the inability to verify a total ban on ASAT."

But Deputy White House press secretary Bob Sims said the administration would have preferred legislation without restrictions. He said the measure also reflects awareness that the Soviets have the only operational deployed ASAT.

Sims said the administration was looking into "possible initiatives in space arms control" that could be verifiable, not a comprehensive ban "which we cannot see any way to verify." He said areas such as confidence-building measures and a ban on high altitude testing could offer "some fruitful possibilities for negotiation."

The ASAT weapons are different from the successful Sunday test of the Army's missile designed to knock down other missiles. And they also differ from Reagan's call for research into a futuristic "Star Wars" shield against Soviet missiles, although all three systems use some common technologies.

The Senate restriction would ban the next round of testing of U.S. anti-satellite weapons unless Reagan certifies he is "endeavoring, in good faith ... to negotiate the strictest possible limitations on anti-satellite weapons."

The provision tacked onto a Pentagon authorization bill differed from a House vote last month to ban the tests unless the Soviets break their self-imposed, 10-month-old moratorium on testing the weapons. The two versions will be worked out later by a House-Senate conference committee.

The secret session, the first in 15 months, was held to discuss classified reports about Soviet capabilities to kill U.S. satellites.

Both nations rely on satellites for spying, communications and early warning of attack.

The secret session lasted 2 hours, 45 minutes and when it was finished, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said he hadn't heard anything to make him "ready, as the administration has been, to throw in the towel as far as arms control agreements over space weapons is concerned."

But Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman John Tower, R-Texas, berated the attempts to limit the Reagan administration, shouting, "Why don't we pass an amendment instead urging the Supreme Soviet to negotiate? But that wouldn't do any good, would it?"

For more than a decade, according to the Pentagon, the Soviets have deployed a workable system which could knock out low-flying U.S. satellites. But critics argue that the Soviet weapon is too cumbersome and inaccurate to pose much of a threat to the Pentagon's eyes and ears.

Doggett aides confident of win

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Aides to state Sen. Lloyd Doggett say they are confident Doggett will hold his lead over U.S. Rep. Kent Hance as the recount in the Democratic U.S. Senate primary nears an end.

"We feel very comfortable in thinking the gap at the end of the recount will be about 1,000 votes," Doggett aide Paul Begala said Tuesday.

Doggett, of Austin, won the June 2 runoff by just 467 votes, according to results compiled by the secretary of state.

Hance requested recounts in all 254 counties, and both candidates have picked up some votes since the process began late last week.

Begala said that as of Tuesday afternoon, Doggett's lead was 1,079 votes. Forty-nine counties recounted on Tuesday and 13 more were to do so Wednesday, he said.

Camille Burger, primary director for the Texas Democratic Party, said the party intends that the recount be completed Wednesday.

Bexar County, which is scheduled to recount on Wednesday, is the largest county in which the results haven't been rechecked. Doggett won Bexar County in the June 2 voting.

Most of the remaining counties are small and rural, Begala said, adding that he doubts there will be anywhere near enough vote changes in them for Hance to close the gap.

"There'll be a little change up and down, but we don't think the total will change very much. There just aren't that many votes that will switch. The (original vote) counts were pretty accurate," he said.

Spokesmen for Hance said the Lubbock congressman's count shows him trailing by between 700 and 750 votes late Tuesday.

"We're showing that we just over 700 behind at this point. The changes have been just nickle and dime at a time," said aide Craig Tounget.

Tounget told the Dallas Morning News that the Hance camp is not ready to concede and still has hopes that some bigger counties could turn the tide.

Mom's caution nets healthy quadruplets

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — For five weeks, Patricia Rios stayed in bed and took medicine, struggling to defy the odds against having healthy quadruplets.

It apparently paid off.

The Rios quads — two boys and two girls — were reported in stable condition, and breathing without respirators Tuesday at Methodist Hospital.

"We were prepared for the worst. Fortunately, we got the best," said Dr. Carlos Nieto, one of three specialists who helped deliver the eight-week premature infants.

Nieto, two other doctors and Patrick Rios, the father, said Tuesday that Mrs. Rios had stayed in bed and taken medication for more than a month to delay premature delivery.

"We realized there was a possibility of a multiple birth, but we didn't expect four," said Rios, 33, a pharmaceutical salesman.

Rios said his wife had taken a fertility drug, clomid, before the birth of their first child — Patrick Bryan, now 2 years old — and before this pregnancy because she had had difficulties becoming pregnant.

Michael Errin, Matthew Elliot, Catherine Lee and Lauren Marie were born in rapid succession in a four-minute span beginning at 11:41 a.m. Monday. The infants weighed 3 pounds, 2½ ounces; 3 pounds, 5½ ounces; 3 pounds, 2 ounces; and 2 pounds, 7½ ounces.

Mrs. Rios also was reported in stable condition Tuesday, but asked that the media be kept away for at least 24 hours. The mother may go home as early as Friday, but the children probably will stay in the hospital six to eight weeks.

Dr. Mark Paine, an obstetrician, said multiple births usually occur prematurely because the additional fetuses in the womb will use up the food and oxygen sooner than a single fetus.

Sen. Thurmond nominated by landslide

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

South Carolina Republicans nominated a "very grateful" Sen. Strom Thurmond for a sixth term in a landslide, while Democrats gave a college professor a second chance at becoming the state's first black congressman this century. In Arkansas, a pugnacious sheriff who has been arrested twice won a Democratic runoff for Congress.

In other elections Tuesday, voters in Rhode Island killed a $250 million reindustrialization program called the Greenhouse Compact, while in Maine they approved by nearly a 3-1 margin a $15.7 million bond issue for building sewage-treatment plants and cleaning up hazardous waste sites.

Residents of Birmingham, Ala., and surrounding Jefferson County endorsed horse racing for the first time in the state by a 3-2 margin. Mayor Richard Arrington and other backers said it would be a boon to the local economy, but opponents, including Gov. George C. Wallace, warned it would bring crime and moral degradation to the area.

In Providence, R.I., Acting Mayor Joseph R. Paolino won a five-way Democratic primary for mayor, racking up 12,508 votes or 52.1 percent. Former Mayor Vincent Cianci Jr. was forced to resign after drawing a suspended sentence on a felony conviction, but he is one of several independents who will oppose Paolino in a special election July 17.

North Dakota Democrats picked state Rep. George Sinner to challenge Republican Gov. Allen I. Olson in November. With 88 percent of the vote in, Sinner had 32,996 votes or 88 percent, to 3,312 or 13 percent for Anne Belle Bourgois, a supporter of Democratic presidential candidate Lyndon LaRouche.

In a footnote to history, Sen. Gary Hart won North Dakota's first presidential primary in 50 years, which went virtually unnoticed because Walter Mondale claims he has enough delegates to guarantee nomination and the state's delegates had already been allotted at conventions. Hart led with 26,021 votes to 3,563 for LaRouche, the only other name on the ballot.

In Maine's only congressional contest, state Rep. Barry J. Hobbins defeated former college president Ralph Conant for the 1st District Democratic nomination to challenge GOP freshman Rep. John R. "Jock" McKernan.

Also in Maine, Louis Jalbert, who had served in the state House for 40 years and was the nation's third-longest-serving state lawmaker, lost a Democratic primary by 15 votes, 488-473, to former Lewiston school committee member John A. Aliberti. Jalbert's supporters said they hoped he would seek a recount.

Virginia had two Democratic congressional primaries. State Sen. Richard Saslaw won a three-way race in the 8th District for the Democratic nomination to challenge three-term Republican Rep. Stan Parris. Saslaw soundly defeated Craig Coverdale, a retired Army colonel who is being treated for lung cancer, and Alexandria lawyer and publisher David S. Holland.

In the neighboring 10th District, former federal prosecutor John Flannery of Arlington defeated former congressional aide Harris Miller of McLean for the Democratic nomination to oppose two-term Republican Rep. Frank R. Wolf.

In South Carolina, with 95 percent of precincts reporting, Thurmond, the 81-year-old Senate president pro tem and chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, had 44,629 votes or 94.7 percent. Retired CIA agent Robert Cunningham had 2,559 votes or 5.3 percent.

Iran, Iraq maintaining pact to avoid civilian targets

The Associated Press

Iran and Iraq today entered the second day of a moratorium on attacks against civilians with no reported violations of the agreement — the first such pact achieved between the two foes in 3½ years of war.

After a last-minute exchange of shellings and bombings on border towns Tuesday, an Iraqi military commander reported that the "cease of attacks on residential targets is holding."

The agreement, which does not affect battlefield action, came in response to a plea by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

ButMaj. Gen. Maher Abdul Rasheed, commander of the Iraqi army's Third Corps, told foreign reporters he does not "believe that the cease of attacks on residential targets is going to last."

Iran's Parliament speaker, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said Tuesday after a meeting of the Supreme Defense Council, "The cease-fire (on civilian areas) has nothing to do with the war itself, and there will be no talks on the war."

Foreign ministers of the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council gathered in Taif, Saudi Arabia, today to consider ways of keeping oil tankers safe from attacks in the gulf. The nations' oil ministers met earlier.

The ministers discussed proposals to provide naval escorts and air cover for oil tankers and to set out a special sea lane close to protected coasts.

The council includes Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar and Oman.

There has also been discussion of pumping oil through pipelines to Oman, where it could be loaded on to tankers without sending them into the gulf, where more than 40 ships have been damaged by attacks, most of them by Iraq.

The foreign ministers consulted with their respective heads of state before meeting, and their decisions were expected to be ratified.

Sources in the council secretariat who spoke on condition of anonymity said the council did not plan to invite foreign powers to intervene.

O'Neill: Debate over aid to contras holds up funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. says President Reagan's insistence on more money to aid rebels against Nicaragua's leftist government is holding up needed funds to put American youths to work at summer jobs.

O'Neill said he telephoned Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., on Tuesday to ask if the two issues could be separated so that the $100 million for summer youth employment could be sent to President Reagan for his signature.

He said Baker told him he would take the idea up with the president. A Senate Republican leadership source said the $1.1 billion appropriation bill containing the two items was discussed at a meeting of GOP leaders with Reagan, but no decisions were made.

A Senate Appropriations Committee source said no action had been scheduled and added that it appeared to be "up to the White House" what the next step would be.

The sources spoke on condition they not be identified.

Both the Senate and the House have approved all of the items in the appropriation bill, which provides emergency funds for various government agencies, except for the $21 million the administration wants for CIA operations in Nicaragua.

The Republican-controlled Senate approved the funds for CIA backing of the so-called "contras" in Nicaragua. The House, controlled by Democrats, voted 241-177 last month to deny any additional funds in this fiscal year for the purpose.

Action on the bill has been held up while the White House seeks to drum up the support it needs in the House.

O'Neill, however, said, "I don't see the votes in the House for a compromise or anything else. I don't see anybody changing in the House on Nicaragua."

O'Neill is an opponent of the undercover operation.

In addition to the $100 million for summer jobs for young people, the bill contains $62 million in military aid for El Salvador, $545 million for child nutrition programs; $300 million for a separate nutritional program for women and young children; $60 million for African drought relief, and smaller sums for a variety of other purposes.

Meanwhile, House and Senate intelligence committees scheduled meetings with CIA officials today to discuss reports that the agency exceeded a $24 million spending limit on its Nicaraguan operation that was spelled out by Congress last year.

The CIA has not commented on the reports, but a Democratic member of the House Intelligence Committee said agency officials had indicated that the committee was "changing the rules in the middle of the game." The member, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said he did not think this was the case.

The member said evidence gathered by the committee's staff showed that the CIA apparently exceeded the limit by charging expenses of its Nicaraguan harbor mining operation to an account that covered operations in a number of countries.

An aide to the Senate committee, on the other hand, said last week that the committee staff had examined the CIA's accounting practices carefully and found nothing to indicate the limit had been exceeded.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State George Shultz, in an appearance Tuesday before a group of reporters covering U.S. foreign policy, was asked about statements by former CIA analyst David MacMichael that Nicaragua is not now actively supplying guerrilla insurgents in El Salvador.

Duarte dissolves police unit linked to death squads

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The new government of President Jose Napoleon Duarte has taken a step toward combating rightist violence by dissolving a police intelligence unit that had been linked to death squads.

The Treasury Police director, Col. Rinaldo Golcher, said Tuesday the S-2 intelligence unit in his agency was dissolved earlier this week and its 100 agents were sent to combat positions at isolated posts in the east, scene of some of the heaviest fighting in the government's 4½-year-old war with leftist guerrillas.

Accusations of death squad activity "have permanently been lodged against the S-2," Golcher said, although he added that there was no evidence to support the allegations.

In Nicaragua, the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front withdrew a bill that would have forced journalists to reveal sources of information and would have tightened other controls on the news media.

Opposition representatives and some Sandinista supporters had threatened to resign from the Council of State if the bill was approved by the appointed body that serves as the country's legislature.

The bill would have required journalists and news organizations to register with the government and would have formalized state control of television broadcasting.

Although the bill was dropped, news censorship remains in effect in Nicaragua under a state of emergency imposed two years ago.

Nicaraguan rebel leader Eden Pastora, wounded in a bomb explosion two weeks ago, told a news conference Monday in Caracas, Venezuela, that he would drop his campaign to overthrow the Sandinista regime if proved it intends to bring democracy to Nicaragua.

Pastora, military leader of the Costa Rica-based Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, has objected to what he called the "Cubanization" of Nicaragua by his former Sandinista comrades.

He said he would be willing to stay out of any political struggle if such a step was required to restore democracy.

He spoke to reporters from a wheelchair in the hospital room where he was brought June 1 to recover from wounds suffered in a bomb blast two days before. Four people were killed and 28 wounded in the explosion at a news conference Pastora had called just inside the Nicaraguan border from Costa Rica.

The police intelligence unit in El Salvador was disbanded because of reports of illegal action by some S-2 agents and as a way to improve the Treasury Police image.

Two S-2 agents have been indicted and another is sought in the March 30 kidnapping and slaying of wealthy Salvadoran landowner Jose Carlos Llort.

Golcher said an investigation of the unit has begun, but so far the only criminal discovery had been the alleged involvement in the Llort kidnapping.

For years, diplomats and human rights groups, including agencies of the Roman Catholic Church, have claimed that the Treasury Police and members of other security forces were involved in abductions and killings of people suspected of leftist sympathies.

A former S-2 director, Col. Jose Ricardo Pozo, was assigned to a post in Paraguay early this year after the U.S. Embassy requested that he and two other military officers and several civilians be sent out of the country.

I helped Jonas Salk fight polio.

Polio. A crippling, often fatal disease that could strike anyone, any time. Newborn children. Young adults. Even a President of the United States fell victim to it.

In 1938, a group of volunteers organized to raise the money needed to find a cure. They succeeded. But they didn't do it alone.

They needed the help of thousands of people. People from all walks of life who gave their time, their money, to help. To lend a hand. And in 1955, when Jonas Salk developed the polio vaccine, they shared in his success. Together, they found a way to control a disease that had been uncontrollable.

But the fact is there are still diseases for which there are no cures. And the organizations dedicated to finding those cures still need your help. Your time.

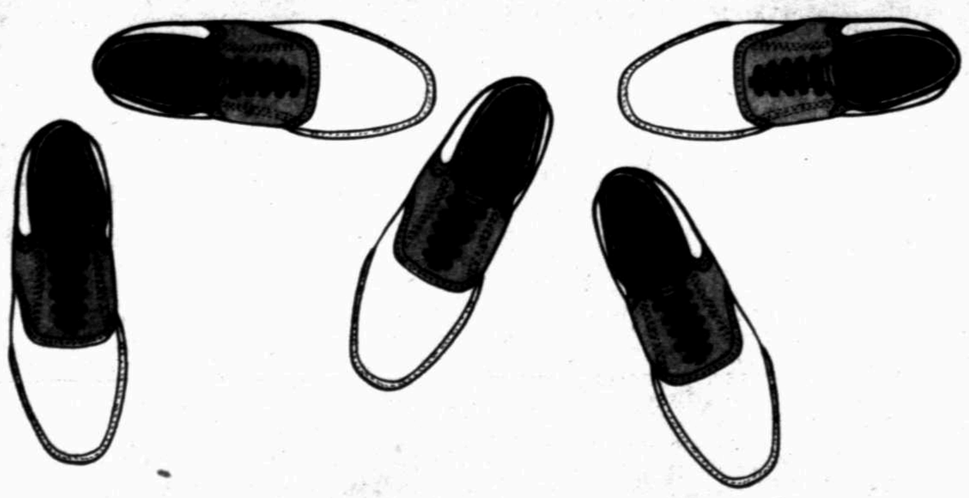

Your talents. Your money.

What you give isn't so important. That you do give is.

Pope begins visit to Switzerland

FRIBOURG, Switzerland (AP) — Pope John Paul II raised the specter of "terrifying instruments of destruction and death" today and called on scientists to take responsibility for protecting the future of mankind.

The pontiff spoke to about 500 students and faculty gathered in a small courtyard of the University of Fribourg, starting the second day of a six-day pastoral visit to Switzerland.

He said a "growing number of scientists" are troubled by changes that "risk compromising gravely the complex and delicate balance of nature."

"They are worried by the technical achievements capable of becoming terrifying instuments of destruction and death," the Roman Catholic leader added.

The pontiff, looking tanned and healthy, delivered the first part of his address in French and the second part in German.

Afterward, he was scheduled to celebrate the second outdoor Mass of his trip in a nearby park. Then he planned a brief, late afternoon meeting with leaders of the Swiss Jewish community and an address at an evening rally for French-speaking youths in Fribourg stadium.

Jews are a tiny minority of 18,000 in Switzerland, which had 3 million Roman Catholics and 2.8 million Protestants, according to the 1980 census.

The pope told the university audience that "scientific work should not be so dependent on immediate goals, on business claims or economic interests."

The pontiff frequently has warned about dangers of scientific progress for military purposes. Last Jan. 1, he warned about a world-ending "apocalypse" if the problems of famine and nuclear threats are not resolved.

John Paul opened his visit Tuesday with a ringing defense of papal authority. The papacy remains a bitter point of disagreement between Protestants and Catholics in Switzerland.

The Alpine nation was one of the most fertile grounds for the Protestant reformation and still maintains no formal ties with the Vatican.

Detectives rescue suspected thief from lynching by angry Lima mob

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Detectives armed with submachine guns and revolvers rescued a suspected thief who was on the point of being lynched by infuriated residents of San Genaro, a poor neighborhood in south Lima.

Police said the residents captured 21-year-old Freddy Rosas Meza on Thursday while he was committing a theft.

They tied his hands and feet, blindfolded him and buried him up to his neck in a sandy place and were on the point of killing him with machete strokes when police arrived, officers said. Several people were arrested and accused of intent to commit murder, police said.

A similar incident occurred earlier this month in a Lima neighborhood called El Nazareno. Residents there captured a suspected thief named Jorge Yanama Quispe, 17, burned him to death and buried him, police said.

Perez de Cuellar: Leaders interested in peace

JERUSALEM (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said he leaves the Middle East today encouraged by the interest Arab and Israeli leaders have shown in seeking a peaceful solution to the region's problems.

After visiting Egypt, Syria, Lebanon, Jordan and Israel, he said it was too early to "digest the positions put forward by the various governments.

"But what I can say, which in some way is encouraging, is the fact that all leaders I have met are interested in a peaceful solution of the problem," he told a news conference.

During his tour, Arab leaders supported Perez de Cuellar's proposal for an international Mideast peace conference under U.N. auspices. But Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir rejected the idea, saying it would only be another public forum for criticism of the Jewish state.

Perez de Cuellar said he had not raised with Shamir his alternative suggestion that peace talks be held in a private session of the U.N. Security Council.

A top Israeli official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he expected his government would react negatively to that suggestion because the 15-member Security Council "is stacked against us."

Both Shamir and opposition leader Shimon Peres told Perez de Cuellar Tuesday that peace only could be achieved through direct negotiations between Israel and its Arab foes.

"I think the time is always ripe for peace" and the ground should begin to be laid now for future negotiations even though the area isn't currently 'a hotbed,'" Perez de Cuellar said.

The final day of the secretary general's nine-day Mideast tour included a meeting in Jerusalem with Israeli President Chaim Herzog and a working session with David Kimche, director general of the foreign ministry.

After a later meeting in Tel Aviv with Defense Minister Moshe Arens, he planned to leave for Switzerland and return to New York on Thursday.

He told families of Israeli soldiers reported missing in action in Lebanon that he would be in touch with the Internatioal Red Cross in Geneva to see how the United Nations could help find and repatriate the Israelis, some of whom have been reported imprisoned in Syria.

In his meeting with Perez de Cuellar, Shamir sharply criticized U.N. actions on Middle East issues, such as giving U.N. observer status to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

At a banquet Perez de Cuellar's honor, Shamir said U.N. resolutions backing the PLO gave "a free hand to terrorists and murderers" by accepting them "as a legitimate partner at the discussion table."

Perez de Cuellar, a Peruvian, said he recognized that certain General Assembly actions "had caused strong resentment here," but "one should understand that emotional and bitter reactions sometimes inspire those resolutions."

Shamir's spokesman, Avi Pazner, said Perez de Cuellar was told that Israel believes a proposed U.N.-sponsored peace conference would produce "what usually goes on at the United Nations, meaning that Israel would immediately come under attack."

Warm weather and clear skies are forecast across the nation Thursday, according to the National Weather Service.

Chance for thunderstorms continues for Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

A 20 percent chance of thunderstorms will continue tonight with partly cloudy skies expected to last through Thursday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Temperatures will drop into the upper 60s tonight, climbing into the lower 90s Thursday.

Winds will be from the southeast at 15-20 mph and gusty this evening, decreasing to 10-15 mph late tonight and increasing to 15-20 mph and gusty by late Thursday morning.

Tuesday's high of 90 missed the record high of 104, set in 1947, by 14 degrees. The overnight low of 71 was 14 degrees warmer than 1979's record low of 57 degrees.

STATE

Another warm, humid day shaped up across Texas as a large center of high pressure over the southeastern United States pushed moist air into the state.

Scattered patches of low clouds dotted central areas of the state before dawn, while dense fog settled into portions of East Texas. High clouds blanketed the Panhandle, while the remainder of the state reported mostly fair skies.

Pre-dawn temperatures were mostly in the 70s statewide, although the mercury dropped into the low 60s in far West Texas. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 63 at the Guadalupe Pass to 78 at Dallas.

Winds were mostly from the south and southeast at 5 to 15 mph.

The forecast called for considerable morning cloudiness in central and eastern portions of North Texas. Otherwise, party cloudy skies were on tap statewide through Thursday.

NATION

Thunderstorms swept across the Central Plains today after spawning more than 24 tornadoes, while what could become the first hurricane of the season brewed in the Atlantic Ocean and the East prepared for more oppressive heat.

Much of the Central Plains region was pelted overnight by thunderstorms that prompted flash flood watches for parts of Missouri, Nebraska and Iowa.

In Missouri, 400 people were living in temporary quarters today after flooding along the Platte River drove them from their homes. There were 225 people displaced in the Bean Lake area and 150 in the community of Tracy.

Nebraska bore the brunt of the tornado damage as a twister — one of nine that touched down on Tuesday — ripped through four farmhouses near Bruning, authorities said.

Two dozen tornadoes reported

The Associated Press

Two dozen tornadoes mounted another assault on the Midwest overnight and up to 8 inches of rain flooded homes and washed away cars, drowning at least two people, while lighting set fire to an oil tank farm in Alabama.

The two people were killed when their car was swamped by floodwaters four miles east of Lincoln, Neb., bringing the toll of weather-related fatalities since the weekend to 14, including 10 who succumbed to a heat wave in the Northeast and two killed by a tornado in South Dakota.

Meanwhile, a tropical depression with 30-mph winds — the potential forerunner of a hurricane — was moving toward the coast of northeast Florida and southeast Georgia.

Nebraska bore the brunt of the storms Tuesday night and early today with at least nine twisters touching down in several communities.

In Lincoln, where 8 inches of rain fell in 24 hours, police said there were dozens of reports of people in cars and houses trapped by high water, and cars swept off roads and submerged. Many highways and streets were closed with water up to 5 feet deep..

"At one point it was almost impossible to get in or out of Lincoln," said Lancaster County chief sheriff's deputy Merle Hesser.

Lightning set fire to two houses, a car, and several utility poles.

"There were flooded vehicles all over the city," said Lt. Jon Briggs.

One man "just helping somebody else out of a car" slipped into Dead Man's Ran and had to cling to a branch to keep from being swept down the creek, said Fire Capt. Francis Ketterer. A firefighter with a rope tied around his waist rescued the man.

Five people were injured in south-central Nebraska on Tuesday night when a tornado smashed through four farmhouses near Bruning, authorities said. By early today, nearly 7⅛ inches of rain had fallen at Weeping Water, Neb., forcing Weeping Water Creek over its banks and some people from their homes, the National Weather Service said.

At Citronelle, Ala., near Mobile, a bolt of lighting struck an oil tank farm Tuesday night, touching off a spectacular explosion and fire that destroyed seven tanks holding 1,500 gallons of petroleum products each.

Several families were evacuated from the area, but there were no reorts of injuries.

In the East, meanwhile, the mercury was climbing back toward the century mark today after a brief break Tuesday from five consecutive days of oppressive heat and humidity.

What could become the first hurricane of the season was developing in the Atlantic Ocean off the coast of Florida and Georgia.

A tropical depression was 100 miles southeast of Jacksonville, Fla., and moving west-northwest at about 10 miles an hour. Packing 30 mph winds, it did not appear to be gaining strength.

Violent thunderstorms meanwhile hammered away for a second straight day from eastern Colorado to Michigan.

"We've had 25 tornadoes touch down in five states and reports are still coming in," Hugh Crowther of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said early today.

A tornado Tuesday night near Limon, Colo., destroyed some buildings and "another one ripped some telephone poles from the ground," said Byron Louis of the National Weather Service in Denver. No injuries were reported.

Golf ball-size hail Tuesda damaged at least 15 small airplan at a private airstrip in Elbe County, Colo., the weather servic said.

The twister that touched dow near Bruning was one of nine Tue day across southeast Nebraska Bruning was sealed off by author ties because of the danger caused b downed powe in standin water, Civil D ordinato Tim Aldrup sai

The four h he twiste "were pretty ed," Aldrup said.

Tornadoes touched down Tuesday night in Iowa, Kansas and Michigan, the weather service said. No serious injuries were reported.

In Missouri, flooding along the Missouri and Platte rivers left almost 400 people living in temporary quarters today — 225 in the Bean Lake area and 150 in the community of Tracy. A sheriff's office dispatcher said an undetermined number of people also were evacuated from the Lewis and Clark Village at Sugar Lake.

While the Platte's waters were receding, an official said the evacuees would not be able to return home before tonight.

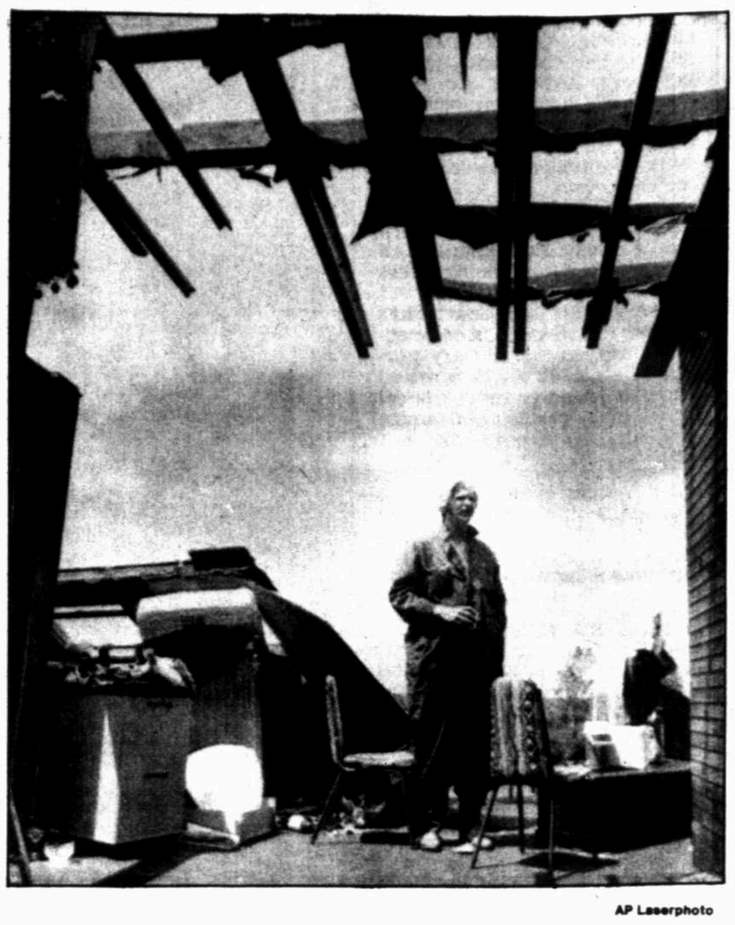

Cooler temperatures were a welcomed breath of fresh air in the East on Tuesday, but the visit was apparently to be brief.

It did heat up to 97 degrees at Richmond, Va., and 93 at Washington, D.C., on Tuesday afternoon, but was 79 in New York City and 77 in Boston, considerably cooler than the near-100 readings on he five previous days.

The mercury was expected to climb back into the mid- and upper 90s across the Northeast today, said Steve Hogan of the National Weather Service in New York.

Two additional heat-related deaths were reported Tuesday in New York City. Four heat-related deaths were reported Monday and three on Sunday in New York City, said Dr. Elliott Gross, the city's chief medical examiner. In Philadelphia, one person died of heat stroke and two of hyperthermia — high body temperature — on Monday, authorities said.

An elderly couple were killed early Tuesday in South Dakota as a twister destroyed their farm and ripped a path five miles long and three-quarters of a mile wide in the Rowena and Valley Springs area just east of Sioux Falls.

Reaction split on layoff ruling

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

A U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding "last hired, first fired" policies has sharply split organized labor leaders who support the seniority system and civil rights leaders seeking economic opportunity for blacks and women.

"It reverses affirmative action programs which are already in place and those being contemplated," said Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the NAACP.

"We certainly believe in affirmative action, but we don't believe it ought to take priority over negotiated contracts," said William King, president of the International Union of Electrical Workers local at the General Electric plant in Tiffin, Ohio.

The 6-3 decision Tuesday overturned a lower court decision that barred the Memphis, Tenn., Fire Department from laying off firefighters according to seniority during the city's economic cutbacks in 1981. The lower court ruling protected black firefighters hired under a department affirmative action program.

The Reagan administration led the battle against protection for the affirmative action employees, saying that keeping black workers on the job would amount to racial discrimination against white workers who had been hired earlier.

Attorney General William French Smith called the ruling "the correct decision" and said it "does not in any way affect those persons who have been victims of discrimination."

In Newark, N.J., a federal judge had ruled earlier that white senior firefighters can be laid off to ensure opportunities for minorities.

Michael Prigoff, an attorney for the New Jersey Firemen's Mutual Benevolent Association, said he plans to go to court in the next few days to ask U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin to reconsider his May 3 ruling in light of the high court decision.

In Boston, Michael Mullane, president of Boston Firefighters Local 718, said the ruling may raise an issue of back pay for more than 400 firefighters and police officers laid off in 1981. If the city illegally laid off the firefighters, "then clearly there is a back pay issue, and we're going to seek that for those men," he said.

Justice Byron R. White's majority opinion said Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 protects seniority systems which are not discriminatory, "and it is inappropriate to deny an innocent employee the benefits of his seniority...."

White also noted that there had been no finding of racial discrimination against any of the individual black firefighters whose jobs were protected.

The dissenters were Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan. They argued that since the Memphis firefighter layoffs have been rescinded, the decision was moot and the case should have been thrown out of court.

"This decision insulates decades of discrimination against women and minorities," said Rita Bernstein, an attorney for the Women's Law Project in Philadelphia. "It advances the Reagan administration's goal of protecting a white, male work force."

"It's terrible," said Ramona Ripston, director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California. "It takes the teeth out of affirmative action."

"Those who are racist are certainly going to become emboldened," said Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md.

Democratic presidential candidate and civil rights activist Jesse Jackson said the decision "represents a return to the days of pain."

"Another nail in the coffin, another stab in the heart of civil rights," said Dr. Emmett Burns, regional director for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Baltimore. "In practicality, it means they're going to be firing black folks right and left."

However, the decision, which may affect similar layoffs and lawsuits over layoffs in Detroit, Boston, Cincinnati and other cities, was roundly hailed by organized labor.

"The principle of seniority has long been one of the goals we strive for at the bargaining table," said Robert J. Kelley, president of the St. Louis Labor Council. "We see seniority as one of the pillars of union contracts."

Roscoe Hamby of the California Council of Firefighters said the ruling may help minorities and women in the long run. "Once minorities are on the job, seniority rules will protect them as well," he said.

Some labor leaders, however, said the victory was costly. "Most unions are for seniority, period," said Julius Uehlein, president of the Pennsylvania AFL-CIO. "But for the first time many people who were discriminated against have had a chance to get what they deserve in the first place. This ruling is taking that away from them. To that extent it's a bad decision."

Even Allen Blair, an attorney for the Memphis Firefighters Association, was apologetic in victory. "We were coming from the standpoint of protecting seniority," he said. "By no means were we in favor of doing away with affirmative action."

Clare Franzel, a union activist at Bethlehem Steel in Pittsburgh, said the decision may not be as pro-union as it seems on the surface. "Unemployment is a weapon used by employers to attempt to divide us," she said. "The union movement must stand behind women and blacks to support them against bosses. I think this is a blow against the union movement...."

ACLU says decision creates loophole in 'Miranda' rule

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The American Civil Liberties Union says the Supreme Court has created a potentially wide loophole in the 18-year-old "Miranda" rule that requires police to read suspects their rights before questioning them.

The court ruled 5-4 Tuesday police may question a suspect before he is warned of his rights if the inquiry is prompted by concern for public safety.

"It has the capacity to swallow" the protection established in the landmark 1966 "Miranda" case, said Burt Neuborne, chief lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union.

"It could be de facto repeal of Miranda," he said. "But I don't think that's what the court intended."

Neuborne said it will take some time to see how police apply the court's latest ruling that expands their powers.

In the 1966 Miranda case, a more liberal Supreme Court said police must alert suspects that they have a right to remain silent, that what they say may be used against them and that they have a right to have a lawyer present when questioned.

Generally, failure to give the warning automatically disqualifies any evidence obtained as a result of the questioning.

Since 1966, the court has defined the limits of the Miranda ruling, but has rarely created a sweeping exception to the requirement that suspects be told their rights.

In its decision Tuesday, however, the court held that police do not have to give the Miranda warning before interrogating a suspect if the questions are, as Justice William H. Rehnquist said in his majority opinion, "reasonably prompted by a concern for public safety."

In overturning a decision by New York's highest court, six of the nine justices held that prosecutors could introduce into evidence a gun seized by police before they gave a suspect his Miranda warning.

In the New York case, police were trying to locate a gun that a suspect had tossed aside as police chased him.

Dissenting justices said the ruling would cause "chaos" by confusing the nation's law enforcement officers. Justice Thurgood Marshall, in his dissenting opinion, said that until now police have been sure they had to read a suspect his rights when making an arrest.

Ship victim may be in Vietnamese camp

HOUSTON (AP) — An American crewman from an oil drilling ship was seen alive in a Vietnamese prison camp weeks after his ship sank, contrary to official reports that all 81 crew members perished, an escapee from the camp says.

Nguyen Hun Chanh, who is now in a Filipino refugee camp, said in a letter to Douglas Pierce that he saw Pierce's son, John, and five other Americans during his incarceration in Da Nang, the Houston Chronicle reported today in a copyright story.

"I feel great. This is a confirmation of other things I have heard. I believe my son is alive and well," said Pierce, an Austin attorney.

Nguyen, a 35-year-old industrial engineer, said he recognized John Pierce from a photograph in an Oriental publication. The elder Pierce had placed advertisements offering a $100,000 reward for information about his son's fate.

Nguyen has declined the reward, Pierce said.

"This face is exactly your son," Nguyen wrote in the letter which Pierce said was translated separately by two Vietnamese people.

John Pierce was one of 81 crew members of the Glomar Java Sea, an American ship which sank Oct. 25 during a typhoon in the South China.

Pierce said he intends to discuss the letter with Coast Guard and National Transportation Safety Board officials, who were to resume local hearings today on the sinking. Since the ship was built to withstand rough weather, the cause of the sinking remains a mystery.

The ship's owner, Global Marine Inc. of Houston, said officials are presuming dead the 47 men, including John Pierce, whose bodies were not found in the wreckage. After sending a representative to Vietnam, the firm said in April it was giving up hope that anyone survived.

But Nguyen said he sat next to six Americans in the prison camp on Nov. 19. There was no indication of the identities of the other five Americans.

Indian commander: Sikh mutineers may face death

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The government says desertions by Sikh soldiers angered over the bloody raid on the Golden Temple have been halted and a military commander said those who mutinied may face death sentences.

Thousands demonstrated in the capital today to protest the storming in Amritsar last week of the holiest Sikh shrine.

Shouting slogans against Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and President Zail Singh, about 4,000 Sikhs gathered in and around a major Sikh temple in central Bombay to protest the army action. Police dispersed the protesters with clubs and no violence was reported. Some demonstrators were briefly detained.

Military sources have said at least 2,000 Sikh soldiers deserted bases in eastern, northern and western India last weekend to head for the northern state of Punjab, site of the Golden Temple, or to the capital.

But Defense Ministry spokesman M.L. Juneja said Tuesday all of the desertions had been quelled and the situation was under control.

Lt. Gen. T.S. Oberoi, chief of the army's southern command, told reporters in Bombay that deserters would be court-martialed and would face possible death sentences.

"Nobody in the Indian army would dare a mutiny," he said.

About 3,000 troops armed with tanks, rockets and machine guns stormed the Golden Temple to flush out Sikh extremists who had been waging a campaign of terror to win greater political and religious autonomy.

Civilian and military sources said Tuesday at least 1,000 Sikhs and 220 soldiers had died and that the death toll was likely to reach 1,300. The government has not revised its original statement that 300 to 400 people were killed in the assault.

On Tuesday, soldiers were still removing bodies from the temple grounds and cremating them in mass funeral pyres.

At least 7,000 people have been arrested in the temple siege and subsequent raids of suspected extremist hideouts, sources said.

Juneja said the Indian government would "examine sympathetically" each case of desertion, and added that military investigations were under way to find out how the Sikh soldiers were influenced to join the protest march.

Army officers also have been instructed to explain to soldiers why the government ordered troops into the Golden Temple complex to flush out Sikh extremists, he said.

Juneja said the Sikh soldiers who abandoned their army bases to join civilians in protest marches had been influenced by rumors that the Golden Temple was damaged in the army attack.

world in brief

Growth rate of world's population slowing

LONDON (AP) — The growth rate of the world's population has declined for the first time in modern history, but a record 80 million to 90 million people are still being added to the human race each year, a United Nations report said today.

The annual population growth rate has declined from 2 percent to 1.7 percent in the past decade, said the State of World Population 1984 report, which put the global population at 4.76 billion.

The world population grew by nearly 800 million during the past decade — more than the number of people in India.

The report commended the overall slowdown in world population growth, but said high growth rates in many developing countries "were undercutting economic progress, reducing incomes and diminishing the quality of life for many millions of people."

The report said the per capita income of the richest country was nearly 220 times the per capita income of the poorest country in 1981. That gap will widen unless population growth is slowed and economic development is spurred, the report said.

Communists lose struggle

LONDON (AP) — Leaders of the British Communist Party have lost a two-year struggle to regain control of the party's daily newspaper, the Morning Star.

Shareholders elected only two of five party-nominated candidates to the newspaper's 15-member management committee. Four of the six seats contested Tuesday went to nominees of the newspaper. The result means that editor Tonmy Chater and his deputy, David Whitfield, will probably retain their jobs.

The party leadership has followed a moderate line of cooperation with all left-wing groups. It fell out with Chater when he pursued a hard-line, pro-Soviet policy.

The party has been losing influence for years and reportedly has fewer than 15,000 members. About half the Morning Star's 30,000 daily circulation is flown abroad for sale in Communist countries.

Man guilty of smuggling

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Nicolaas Johannes Louw claimed he set off the metal detector as he left work at a platinum factory because he had a steel hip. He didn't mention he also had platinum in his mouth.

Louw, 47, received a suspended two-year jail term and was fined the equivalent of $2,000 Monday after pleading guilty to a smuggling charge in Johannesburg Regional Court.

Louw was accused of smuggling 31 ounces of the precious metal, valued at $10,800, out of the Matthew Rustenburg Refinery in suburban Germiston from October to January. According to testimony, he confounded the alarm of the plant's metal detector, through which all employees must pass when they leave work, because of his steel hip.

Woman switches denominations with hope of becoming pastor

DALLAS (AP) — The Rev. Martha Gilmore says she left the Baptist ministry and became a Methodist because of a "nagging feeling" the Southern Baptist Convention was going to censure her.

The Rev. Gilmore, 48, became the first woman in the Dallas area ordained a Southern Baptist minister in 1977, but she says she's grown frustrated with a system that ordains women but rarely accepts them as pastors.

So, she left the church of her birth and now hopes to lead a church of her own as a Methodist.

Last week, she had her credentials accepted as a minister of the North Texas Methodist Conference. She has been associate director of the intern program at the Methodist-affiliated Perkins School of Theology since her ordination.

She said another reason she made the switch was the urge to preach and had little hope of doing so as a Baptist. United Methodists, by contrast, have more female pastors than any other major denomination.

"If I were to decide I wanted to be a (Baptist) pastor in Dallas County, it would be very difficult," she said in an interview with the Dallas Times Herald. "If I were younger, I'd stay (a Baptist) and see what happened in 20 years. I'm nearing 50 and... wanted to get on with ministry."

Her husband, former City Councilman Jerry Gilmore, who is now the lay chairman of the Baptist Home Mission Board, will remain at Cliff Temple. Church supporters, he said, are "sad but supportive" of his wife's move.

By leaving, she also bid adieu to friends, family and Sunday school students at Cliff Temple Baptist Church, where she grew up and was baptized, married and ordained.

But she said she was concerned about what actions the national Southern Baptist Convention might take concerning women's ordination when it meets next week in Kansas City.

"I think there will be motions to censure churches that have ordained women," Mrs. Gilmore said. "I had a nagging feeling that I was contributing to Cliff Temple being on the edge of being censured."

Her husband doesn't disagree.

"I am concerned," said Gilmore, "that we are continuing to train women at Baptist seminaries but not being intentional at all in helping them find employment."

Robert McGinnis, executive director of the Dallas Baptist Association, told the Herald he had not been aware of Mrs. Gilmore's decision.

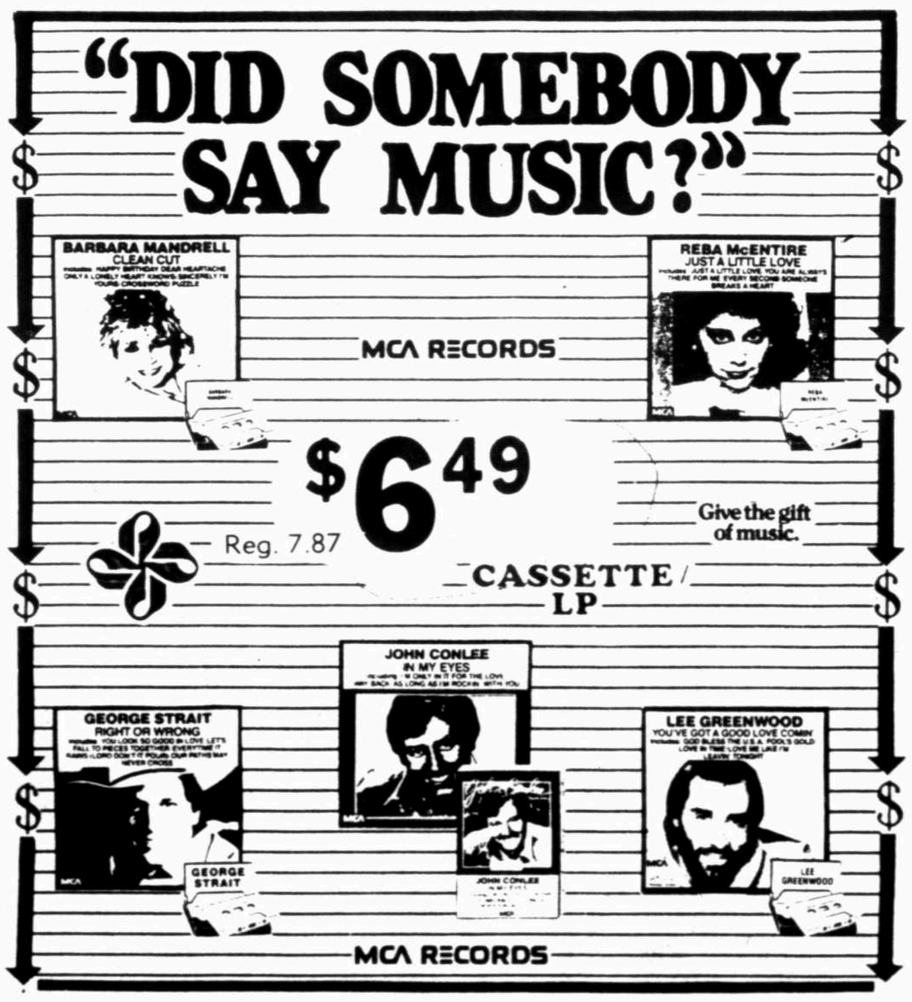

"I don't have anything to say," he said. "Those issues are left to the local church."

Only one woman serves on a Southern Baptist church staff in the area. The Rev. Nancy Ellett is associate pastor of Royal Lane Baptist Church in North Dallas. The only other female Baptist minister in the area is the Rev. Christine Rowland, a chaplain at Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Hells Angel makes novelties for convention

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. — Hells Angel Bobby "Dirt" England believes he will be backing a winner at next month's Democratic National Convention.

England is not supporting any particular candidate, inasmuch as he is admittedly apolitical — and being on parole from federal prison, he cannot vote anyway.

But Dirt, 42, has paid the Democrats $2,000 for a license to sell souvenirs at the San Francisco convention.

"I may be a Hells Angel but I'm a businessman too," the bearded, frizzy-haired England said at his gift shop here.

His convention curios are a Democratic donkey pendant ($6) and a Can-a-Date ($25) — a container the size of a tuna can that contains red and white paper roses on a blue background topped by a miniature photo of the candidate of the buyer's choice.

"It (Can-a-Date) is my 'pet rock' idea," explained England, who bears a tattoo of a dollar sign on his arm. Contrary to his nickname (and the "Filthy Few" designation on his black vest), England was cleanly garbed. Asked about other news reports that listed his sobriquet as "Mr. Dirt," he said: "The media got it all wrong. It's just 'Dirt.'" He declined to discuss the origin of the moniker.

Although the Democratic connection was England's idea — "I was just driving down the highway and heard (on the radio) that the convention was coming" — his well-groomed girlfriend, Patti Duke, carried out the in-person negotiations.

"I took some samples to them (the convention people) and they were tickled," Ms. Duke said. Avanee Smith, product liaison for the convention, agreed. "We thought it was very novel," she said.

Ms. Smith admitted that she did not know until after Dirt's products had been accepted that he is a Hells Angel, but added, "It doesn't bother us at all."

The Angels' role in the convention will be less visible than their upcoming part in the Olympic Torch Relay, for which Ventura chapter president George (Gus) Christie has paid $3,000 to run a leg.

England will not be at the convention — only his products. The Democrats, who get 12 percent of the take, have their own concessionaire.

Dirt emphasized that the Can-a-Date was not a Hells Angels' group project and will not carry the bikers' symbol of a biker with a skull-and-crossbones.

"I asked my guys (the Angels) if I could use the clubhouse for two weeks to make the cans and they said OK, but that's all," England said. "A bunch of kids and neighborhood ladies put them together. Patti and another friend, Mary Russell, helped me design them. I'd like the cans to make it on their own (without the notoriety of the Hells Angels name)."

A giant panda rescued from starvation, now living in the forests of an animal preserve, munches on an arrow bamboo which is dying in the panda's native habitat.

Pandas need more bamboo

WOLONG, China (AP) — The giant panda, ever solitary, wanders the cloud-shrouded mountain ridges of Wolong these days in a desperate search for food. The Chinese government is mounting an extensive effort to help it.

Last year, fields of arrow bamboo, the panda's food of choice, flowered and died. Brown patches of withered stalks now mark the forest, and the pandas there hunt hungrily for the few remaining plants. An adult giant panda eats about 44 pounds of bamboo daily.

The food shortage is acute. But the works of man — farms, bear traps, logging and a hydroelectric power station under construction — present a long-term threat.

Forestry Ministry experts say about 1,000 pandas remain. Eight hundred roam the mountains of rugged Sichuan province, and about 100 of those live in the Wolong preserve.

Seventy percent of the arrow bamboo in Sichuan is dead. In the 81,000-acre Wolong preserve the figure is 95 percent, and natural reseeding and growth is expected to take a decade.

No one knows what triggers the irregular flowering cycle or why the giant panda only reluctantly turns to alternate species of bamboo or other sustenance, such as the pork chops planted by researchers.

But 20 of the mournful-looking, black and white beasts have died of starvation in Sichuan since the bamboo plants began to wither last year.

In 1975-1976, another freak flowering hit some stands of arrow bamboo in the region, and officials say 130 pandas starved. China was recovering from its disastrous Cultural Revolution then and no rescue effort was mounted.

This time the Chinese, aided by the World Wildlife Fund and other groups, are trying to find the pandas and feed them.

Amply funded by organizations and individuals (first lady Nancy Reagan exhorted American youngsters to give pennies), Chinese conservatinists are trying to save an animal rarely seen in its remote habitat.

"We don't need any more money," Hu Tieqing, a Forestry Ministry official, told journalists recently.

The government, in fact, has banked for emergency use much of the $205,000 in donations received so far.

The struggle now is aimed at ignorance: the giant panda is little understood.

It's a solitary creature, unaggressive and poor of hearing and eyesight. It rarely ventures down the steep mountains even when hungry. It steers clear of the Quiang, the tribal hunters and farmers who inhabit the lower slopes.

In a bid to make the Wolong safer for pandas, the government has decided to move the Quiang down the bank of the fast-flowing Pi Tiao river, a decision the tribals regard as unpleasant at best.

They say they have been in the area as long as the pandas.

The government banned hunting in the area and the use of bear traps, which often claimed unexpected prey. They recently jailed one villager for two years after he allegedly panicked and strangled a giant panda caught in an illicit trap.

Other villagers who carried an injured, unconscious beast 18 hours to help received a reward of 1,000 yuan, the equivalent of $500 — a fortune in rural China.

Much of Wolong's forest is second growth. China harvested the rich lumber stands in the 1970s, stopping only when the reserve was officially opened in 1975.

Even now, heavy trucks rumble through the valley below, using the only available road to carry trees felled nearby.

A hydroelectric project, fought by Chinese conservationists, is under construction at the edge of Wolong. The sound of blasting echoes from peak to range.

Wolong director Lai Minghui, who came to the region as a soldier of China's Communist revolution in 1949 and stayed, said he hoped alternate roads would be finished within five years. The Qiang are to be relocated about the same time.

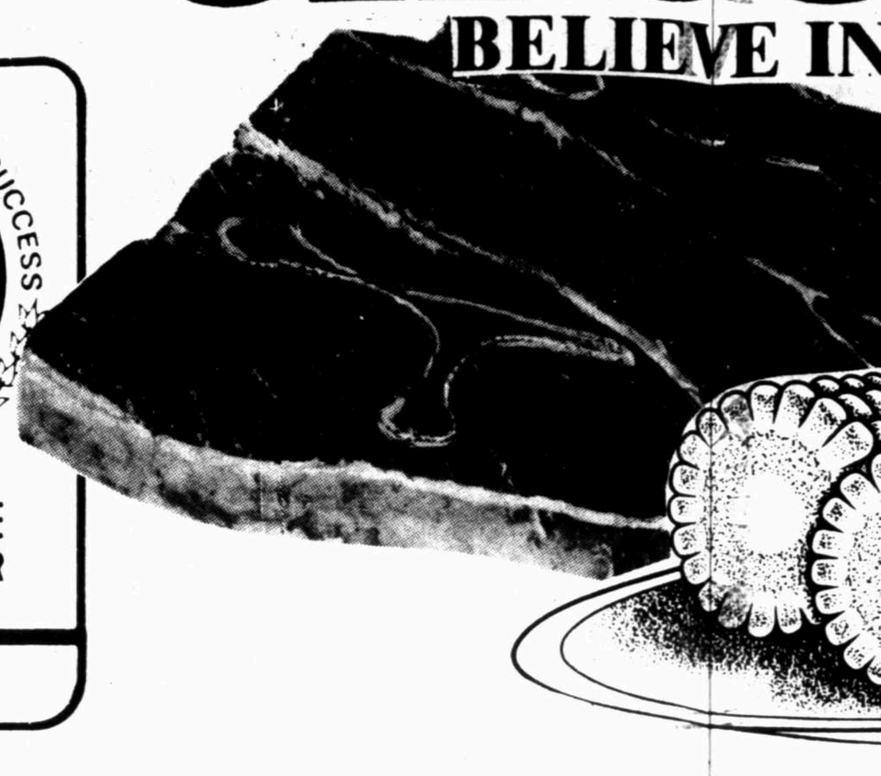

Then, he hopes, the pandas will have peace.

Meanwhile, Lai wants more money for panda tracking devices and expanded research.

Frogs don radioactive collars

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A biology graduate student says wiring tiny tree frogs with radioactive collars may help save a species from extinction. But animal protection groups are fighting his plan before federal and state authorities.

Both sides claim to be the true friend of the Pine Barrens tree frog, which tends to elude scientists because it is less than 2 inches long, climbs trees and burrows. The frog was on the federal endangered species list until last year, when researchers found it in more than 100 communities in Florida and North Carolina.

Pennsylvania State University researcher Joseph Freda decided he might be able to save the species' New Jersey habitat from developers if he could snoop on the frogs long enough to find out exactly where they lived and how far they travel.

He planned to put radioactive wires around their necks to help the tracking.

"We're not really worrying if one or two frogs gets sterile (from radiation). We're concerned about the population as a whole," said Freda, who is backed by a $10,000 grant from Rutgers University.

Members of the Friends of Animals group, however, have appealed to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Although commission officials ordered Freda not to use radioactive tantalum or cobalt, as planned, they were more concerned about the risk to humans.

"What I asked them (the biologists) to consider as a worst case was what would happen if a boy found a frog and put it in his pocket and carried it around for several hours," said Dr. John Glenn, an expert with the NRC.

So Freda switched to chromium 51, which can be used in small quantities without a license because it decays faster and emits no beta rays.

He spied last week on his first frog, named for a vast area of pine woods in southern New Jersey.

The tiny green subject has been "very cooperative," Freda said. "He's only moved 6 feet from his bush where we left him two days ago."

Suzanne Young of the Friends of Animals has asked the state Department of Environmental Protection to halt the study until an environmental impact statement can be prepared concerning the nine frogs yet to receive their collars.

"The whole scientific community is still learning about the effects of low-level radiation," Ms. Young said. "Why take the risk when there are other ways of doing it?"

A biologist supporting Freda's work, Ray E. Ashton, defended the idea of sacrificing a few frogs.

"You've got to remember we're talking about saving a species," said Ashton, who has tracked tree frogs around the country. "Individuals are expendable."

Butterfly may be victim of boom

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A butterfly placed on the endangered species list in 1979 may now be extinct, the victim of a population explosion and a building boom, a scientist says.

Federal wildlife officials aren't sure that the Palos Verdes Blue butterfly has been wiped out, but have not ruled out prosecution under laws designed to protect endangered species.

The Palos Verdes Blue is a sky-blue butterfly with dark wing markings, a close relative of the El Segundo Blue, which lives nearby and also is endangered.

The Palos Verdes Blue feeds primarily on locoweed patches that have fallen frequently under the plow in recent years because of the population spread into the South Bay suburbs of Los Angeles County.

"The likelihood is very high that it's extinct," said Richard Arnold, a scientist at the University of California-Berkeley who had a federal contract to try to save the insect.

Arnold said his three-year-old proposal to save the butterfly from developers' tractors languished in the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and was never implemented. The Fish and Wildlife Service is in charge of protecting the nation's 286 endangered species.

Meanwhile, the city of Rancho Palos Verdes implemented a housing construction and park expansion program.

Some 20 breeding sites have been wiped out since the butterfly's plight was first discovered by scientists in 1977, the Los Angeles Times reported earlier this week. And although the butterfly was still considered common in 1981, only seven were found in 1983 and none this year. No eggs or caterpillars were found either.

"This has gone on for three years without any Fish and Wildlife involvement at all," said Bruce Manheim, a Washington staff scientist for the Environmental Defense Fund.

Sanford Wilber, head of the Fish and Wildlife Service's endangered species office in the western region, said his agency met twice in 1983 with Rancho Palos Verdes officials in an effort to implement Arnold's program.

As recently as April, Wilber's agency sent the city a letter specifying two locoweed patches for preservation.

Scientists looking at leaded gasoline effects on plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nobody knows yet what is causing forests to die in Germany and conifers to slow their growth in the eastern United States, but some scientists are turning their suspicions to an old enemy: leaded gasoline.

"The amount of lead in the soil of our mountaintops is outrageous," said one researcher, Robert Bruck, assistant professor of plant pathology at North Carolina State University in Raleigh.

Tree death starts at the tops of mountains, most students agree — and the trees atop mountains concentrate pollutants, not from rain, but from passing clouds, Bruck said in a telephone interview Monday.

Trees on mountaintops act as "combs" to filter out moisture from passing clouds, which then runs down the trunks to the soil. Mount Mitchell in North Carolina, at 6,684 feet the highest in the East, gets 80 inches of rain a year — and another 60 inches of moisture from clouds, Bruck said.

The soil at the top of that mountain contains 350 parts per million of lead. Mountaintops in Germany contain 600 parts per million.

By comparison, "On the street in front of Grand Central Station, you couldn't find 200 parts per million," Bruck said.

As one moves down the face of the mountain, the lead concentration diminishes. Other metals such as cadmium and copper show similar concentration profiles, and all are higher on the western side of the mountain, which faces the oncoming clouds most of the time.

Lead attracts the most attention, Bruck said, "Because it's there in such abundance. I can't prove to you that it is killing the trees, but ... there are good grounds for suspicion."

Almost all the lead in the soil has come from leaded gasoline, still about 40 percent of U.S. gasoline use, Bruck believes. Lead and other metals do not leave the soil, "It just sits there. Suppose there is a threshold effect? This is my hypothesis about what has happened in Germany."

The Environmental Protection Agency is expected to order a ban on or drastic reductions in lead in gasoline later this summer because of the potential brain damage to children from lead in their blood.

Bruck and other U.S. scientists recently visited counterparts in Germany under an exchange organized by the acid precipitation program.

German researchers, he said, "had been working on oxidants," such as ozone, but now will look at metals, too.

Bruck was interviewed in connection with his work for a 12-agency government-wide group conducting acid rain research.

Researcher studies elusive, vanishing cottontails

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — Robert McDowell's curiosity is piqued when he sees a glimpse of a rabbit's white cottontail.

He is disappointed, though, when he spots a pink tail. What McDowell is really looking for is a bright yellow tail.

McDowell, director of the wildlife program at the University of Connecticut, has spent much of his life studying cottontail rabbits. But not just any cottontails — McDowell is hunting for the elusive and vanishing breed of New England cottontails.

His studies have taken him throughout the region, where he finds the stronger Eastern cottontail literally has pushed the New England cottontail to the brink of extinction, especially in Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

"After we catch 'em, we ear-tag 'em, weigh 'em, sex 'em and hind-foot measure 'em," says the burly professor, dressed casually for class in a red flannel shirt that sets off his silver hair. "Then we dye their tails — pink for Eastern cottontails and yellow for New England — and we let 'em go."

The tale of two rabbits' tails is a classic evolutionary theory of "survival of the fittest," McDowell says.

"One is going under at the expense of the other," he says. "But it's the responsibility of wildlife agencies to manage populations such as this."

Hunters don't see the value of saving separate species, McDowell says. In their opinions, the two species taste the same.

The New England cottontail was first identified in the 1890s, when a naturalist, Outram Bangs, caught more than a dozen in Lebanon, Conn., and determined they were a subspecies. Later research classified the New England cottontail as a separate species.

But the tough Eastern cottontail — which actually "lumps together many subspecies of cottontails from across the United States" — is moving into the New England cottontail's territory and driving it out.

McDowell says the Eastern cottontail is so much more "tough, endurable, adaptable" than the New England variety because of the many kinds of food and terrain it can adapt to.

"It can do more with less" food, he says. The Eastern cottontail "can live in the desert or the swamps and persevere."

Court clears way for higher phone bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court, in a decision likely to mean higher telephone bills for Americans next year, has ruled the Federal Communications Commission may require consumers to pay telephone "access charges."

Unless Congress overrides the FCC or the matter is successfully appealed to the Supreme Court, the court's ruling on Tuesday clears the way for the FCC to impose a $2-a-month telephone access charge on residential customers sometime during the first half of 1985.

"Confronting rapid and fundamental changes in the telephone industry as a result of competition and fast-moving technology, the FCC acted for the most part with flexibility and care," the three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia concluded.

The agency had planned to implement the fee last Jan. 1 to coincide with the breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., but then approved a delay until 1985 to allow time for further study and to mollify congressional critics. The FCC's chairman, Mark S. Fowler, has made it clear, however, he expects the consumer fee to be imposed next year.

In the meantime, the agency has already ordered most of the nation's businesses — those with more than one phone line — to begin paying a monthly access charge of up to $6 per line. Those fees became effective May 25 and Tuesday's decision allows them to remain in place.

The court's unanimous, 110-page opinion was a setback for state regulators and state utility consumer advocates as well as a host of corporations that had objected to isolated sections of the plan. The ruling could also strengthen the FCC's hand in defending its actions before Congress.

The access charge plan was developed to eliminate a decades-old procedure under which long-distance rates are set at artificially high levels to produce a subsidy to hold down local rates.

The FCC also argues that access charges are a necessity because long-distance rates must be lowered. If long-distance rates are reduced, the agency explains, large corporations will be discouraged from building private phone networks that siphon revenue from local phone companies.

Teen candidate says age shouldn't be issue

LOS LUNAS, N.M. (AP) — Matthew W. Otero's high school classmates at first didn't believe he was serious in his campaign for probate judge, but he says he is the Democratic candidate today partly because of the support of those same classmates.

Otero, 18, beat four older and more experienced candidates for the nomination in the Valencia County election June 5. He will face the Republican candidate, Felix S. Padilla, 75, in the general election in November.

"I worked hard, and maybe a little harder than the other candidates, because when I got into the race, there were a lot of things to think about," said the recent graduate of Belen High School. "And one of them was my age."

His candidacy was used by civics and sociology teachers as the springboard to discuss politics in their classes, and more than 160 students registered to vote one day at the school this spring.

Otero believes he is qualified because of his diploma and the eight years he has spent helping in his father's plumbing business, but he said he had to convince the voters.

Grand ol' flag

President Woodrow Wilson once observed that "the flag is a flag of liberty of opinion as well as of political liberty."

That it is because the flag symbolizes what is good and resilient and noble about the United States of America. It symbolizes liberty not of anything in particular, but the liberty to be free men and women living life as we choose.

Yes, there are obligations to our liberty. Freedom, ironically, is not free. It demands a singular commitment. The price of liberty can be high, evidenced in no small manner by the sobering number of those who have laid down their lives to preserve it.

So, liberty lives on and we cherish it and bask in its light. And, on occasion, we take note of its grandeur. That's particularly true on July Fourth and on the annual observance of Flag Day, which will be Thursday.

Flag Day was set aside to commemorate the day in 1777 when the Continental Congress adopted the Stars and Stripes as the official flag of the United States. The observance was first officially held in 1877 to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the selection of the flag. And in a proclamation issued May 30, 1916, President Wilson established Flag Day as an annual national celebration.

Down through this nation's history, many events are remembered specifically because of the flag's part in them. Francis Scott Key, for instance, observed the shelling by the British of Fort McHenry in Baltimore harbor and, on seeing the tattered banner, was moved to pen the immortal verse, "And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave/O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

That grand ol' flag still is proudly waving today. Not without tests of her authority, though. Many Americans were watching television during the height of the Iranian hostage crisis at the start of the 1980s and were enraged at the sight of the American flag being spat upon and stomped into the Iranian soil. That was an affront to everything the flag represents.

Flag Day is significant in Midland because of the large number of residents who patriotically display flags. Patriotism is high in the Tall City and the date isn't allowed to pass unobserved.

The United States Supreme Court once remarked that "a person gets from a symbol the meaning he puts into it." It can be said, then, that in the American flag a lot of Americans find true love of country.

The flag symbolizes America.

Blood in the temple

The storming of the Sikhs' sacred shrine by Indian troops last week left 800 Sikh separatists dead, including their militant leader, Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale.

But the repercussions of the attack on the Golden Temple complex are still being felt in Punjab state, where Sikhs predominate numerically, and throughout India, where Sikhs are a 2 percent minority.

It is tragic that Bhindranwale was killed and the temple desecrated.

But the Indian government had to confront Bhindranwale, a fundamentalist rebel, who used the shrine as a base to commit terrorist raids and as an armory for illegal weapons. He demanded political autonomy and the creation of a Sikh state called Khalistan and preached the use of terrorism to gain his ends.

If India permitted the Sikhs to use terrorism to gain autonomy, it would set the stage for other groups to split off. India, which has 16 different languages, four major religions — Hindu, Moslem, Christian and Sikh — and countless ethnic groups, would be torn apart.

But force is not enough to keep India from falling prey to religious and racial wars. Only by guarantees of freedom of religion and rights for all peoples can this nation of 700 million people survive.

Another View:
Nuclear reactions

Time may show that many Americans were misguided about the dangers of nuclear power. Their fearful opposition to nuclear power has contributed to the stalling or scratching of some nuclear energy projects.

Yet in 1983 nuclear plants accounted for 13 percent of the nation's electricity — more than either natural gas or oil. The U.S. nuclear plants were the third leading source of electrical generation, behind coal which generated 54.5 percent and hydroelectric dams which accounted for 14.4 percent.

By the end of the decade, industry sources estimate, approximately one-fifth of our electricity will come from the atom.

Expansion of this valuable energy source probably would proceed faster were it not for widespread fears in many minds equating nuclear power with "The Day After," Hiroshima, "The China Syndrome" and the overblown mishap at Three Mile Island.

Most Americans are poorly informed about the risk of nuclear plants and think mistakenly that they can explode like an atomic bomb, wrote Robert Inglehart, professor of political science at the University of Michigan, in Public Opinion magazine.

Their erroneous thinking influences their attitude toward atomic energy, Inglehart said.

"Among those members of the American public who believe that an explosion is very likely, a clear majority — 60 percent — oppose the development of nuclear power plants. Among those who are aware that it is physically impossible, only 12 percent oppose developing nuclear power."

Dependency on pollutive and imported fossil fuels will be reduced as more nuclear plants are built and put into operation.

This will happen sooner, and more smoothly, when facts replace fears about nuclear energy in more American minds. That is a job for public education.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 13, the 165th day of 1984. There are 201 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 13, 1900, China's "Boxer Rebellion" against foreigners and Chinese Christians erupted into violence in Peking.

On this date:

In 1865, poet William Butler Yeats was born.

In 1886, Ludwig II, King of Bavaria, drowned.

In 1940, French forces abandoned Paris in the face of advancing German troops.

JACK ANDERSON
Lobby money bought 'friends'

WASHINGTON — Members of Congress always insist there is no connection between their votes on legislation and the campaign contributions they get from lobbying groups that are interested in that legislation.

Jack Anderson

And the special-interest money givers express pious amazement that anyone would think they're trying to buy votes. They insist they're just trying to keep their known friends in Congress.

But sometimes the timing of campaign contributions and congressional votes is just too flagrant to be explained away as mere coincidence or longtime philosophical friendship. When the lobbyists dispense their money months before an election — and while a bill they're interested in is under consideration by the recipients of their largesse — the public can be forgiven if it gets the idea that someone is at least trying to buy votes.

This kind of suspicion understandably arises in the case of legislation introduced last year to equalize insurance premiums and benefits for men and women. Women's groups support the legislation on grounds that what women as a class will lose by having to pay higher auto insurance premiums, they will more than make up by getting annuity benefits equal to men's.

The insurance industry vehemently opposes the proposed law. For years, their particular form of legalized gambling has been based on ever-more sophisticated actuarial computations that calculate the risks of payoffs — accidents among young male drivers, early death among smokers, greater life expectancy among women pension recipients.

Premiums and benefits are set according to the actuarial tables. The proposed equalization law would knock the insurance industry's existing system into a cocked hat.

The industry's first response to the proposals was to present its case to the public and Congress — a perfectly proper course of action. Insurance lobbyists argued that women would end up losing in the long run, and that pension funds would go broke if changes were made retroactive.

But the industry's next response was less creditable. As the legislation approached a crucial vote in the House Energy and Commerce Committee earlier this year, insurance industry political action committees began doling out hefty campaign contributions to members of the House committee.

Insurance executives and industry PACs donated roughly $150,000 to committee members during 1983 and the first three months of this year, according to Federal Election Commission documents checked by my associate Vicki Warren.

A significant amount of the contributions came in shortly before the key vote on the insurance bill and continued almost up to the last minute. For example, a week before the vote the Health Insurance PAC threw a $500 dinner in honor of one House committee member and a $250 cocktail party for another.

Rep. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., got the biggest chunk of donations from the insurance industry: $23,000. As it turned out, he gave his proxy to another committee member.

Rep. Matt Rinaldo, R-N.J., got $19,000. He said that didn't influence his vote on the bill; he simply thinks the legislation would be bad for women.

Reps. Wayne Dowdy, D-Miss., Billy Tauzin, D-La., and Norman Lent, R-N.Y., received a total of about $25,000 from the insurance industry — and introduced changes that disfigured the bill so drastically that its original supporters voted against it.

The legislation is now dead for this session. The insurance industry won.

Footnote: The insurance industry's umbrella lobbying group, the Committee for Fair Insurance Rates, reported spending $1,544,882 to defeat the unisex legislation. Its 1983 expenditures were the fifth highest among registered lobbying groups.

POLITICAL POTPOURRI — Where are they now? Dwight Chapin, the Nixon White House appointments secretary who was convicted of perjury in 1974 because of his involvement in the Watergate coverup, is now an occasional consultant to the Republican National Committee's convention planners. Chapin, an executive with the Chicago office of the Hill & Knowlton public relations firm, was paid $633.25 for a two-day trip to Dallas. GOP convention manager Ron Walker said Chapin is "one of the most creative, free-thinking guys around."

— Sen. Gary Hart's delegate hunters have quietly made inquiries about advertising rates on "Convention TV," the cable venture that will be piped into 15,000 hotel rooms for the entertainment and edification of delegates to the Democrats' convention in San Francisco.

— Walter Mondale's campaign attorneys are feverishly trying to locate a Puerto Rican delegate committee that got at least $5,000 from the AFL-CIO in March. Its existence was denied last month by Mondale's lawyers when Hart challenged the legality of 53 Mondale delegates chosen in the March 18 primary. Now they're not so sure — so they're trying to locate the ghostly committee.

WHOPPER OF THE WEEK — Federal Reserve Board chairman Paul Volcker seems to have contracted selective amnesia. He argues that his tight-money policy — which has pushed interest rates to their highest point in nearly two years — is needed to keep inflation from roaring back.

The evidence doesn't support Volcker. The prices of both industrial commodities and precious metals remain low — and they're sensitive barometers of future inflation.

What exasperates Volcker's critics is that a year ago he was letting the money supply grow so fast that administration economists were afraid double-digit inflation would return.

Demos have fat chance at unity

A summit meeting was held last weekend at a Holiday Inn in the outskirts of Washington between the leaders of the Mondale, Hart and Jackson forces to discuss Democratic Party unity. The conference was called at the behest of Mondale's campaign managers.

Art Buchwald

The Hart and Jackson people were stone faced.

Mondale's man was the only one smiling. "Now that the battle is over and our man has won, we feel it is time to heal the wounds of the primary race and work for a victory in November."

Hart's man objected, "The opera isn't over until the fat lady sings."

"We thought you'd say that," Mondale's man retorted. He pushed a buzzer and a fat lady entered the room and started to sing "Happy Days Are Here Again."

The Hart man stood up and said, "That's one more dirty trick. How do you expect us to agree to unity when you pull a stunt like that?"

"We were only kidding around, to ease the tension," the Mondale man said. "Let's be serious. Mondale has the delegates and he's going to be the candidate. But we need to work together if we're going to beat Reagan in November."

The Jackson man said, "Mondale stole our delegates. We're not going to agree to unity until we get them back."

Mondale's man said, "We played by the rules. You don't change them after the game is over."

Hart's man said, "Gary doesn't consider the game over. He wants to go into overtime."

"How can he go into overtime when the score is 2,000 to 1,200?"

"It doesn't matter what the score is. Hart won California. That proves the voters have rejected Mondale."

Jackson's man said, "Jesse got cheated out of delegates in California and New Jersey."

Hart's representative said, "Gary doesn't want to be a spoiler. He is willing to meet Mondale halfway."

"What does that mean?"

"He will get up at the convention and say numerically Mondale has the delegates, but politically it would be a disaster to nominate him."

"What kind of a unity message is that?" Mondale's man shouted.

"It's the best Hart can do after the things Mondale said about him."

Jackson's man said, "I can't guarantee Jesse will even come to the convention if the Democrats don't change the rules."

Mondale's man took a sheet of paper out of his briefcase. "The candidate has given me permission to offer Gary the vice presidency on his ticket."

"Big deal," Hart's man said. "How can Gary be vice president when he can't stand being in the same room with Mondale?"

"A vice president never has to be in the same room with the president," Mondale's man said. "That's what makes the American presidency work. Mondale can always communicate with Hart through Lane Kirkland."

Jackson's man said, "Jesse wants to be secretary of state."

Mondale's man said, "We can't offer Jesse a Cabinet position if we don't win the election. But in the spirit of unity Fritz would like Jesse to nominate him at the convention."

"Jesse thought you'd come up with a stupid idea like that. He said if you did he would use the time to tell the country how he got cheated out of his delegates."

"That's fine with us," Mondale's man said. "Then it's agreed. We will announce to the press that the party has been unified."

The fat lady started singing, "San Francisco, open those golden gates," and Hart's man said, "Oh shut up."

Tax breeds joblessness

I have received a letter from John C. Jennings, chief of tax for the Texas Employment Commission, informing me of an additional 25% tax imposed on the Texas Unemployment Tax I have already paid during 1983.

I guess I will have to do without an employee for two or three months in order to come up with the money to pay for those people who do not wish to work. Isn't it great that we live in a country where we do not have to work if we don't want to or if the exact job we desire is not available we can just sit at home at everyone else's expense?

It is amazing to me that The Texas Employment Commission is going to tax the exact people they are depending on to hire all of these unemployed people they are paying for not working. How do they expect us to have spare money available to hire these people when they keep taking it away from us? Let me give them some advice: When these people that do not wish to work begin to starve to death they will take any job and there are jobs available, if they do not subsidize them. Then they won't have to charge employers unemployment tax and we will have extra money available to hire even more people.

I find it difficult to believe that we have a system developed where a governing body can levy a tax on a business or an individual without their approval. I am to assume I have my representative to thank for his additional tax.

Maybe we should put up a sign: Welcome to the "United States of Socialist America."

Remarks were disappointing

I am so thoroughly disappointed with some of the people of this county it's hard to express. First, I knew Wynn Brown several years ago when I was a police officer for the city of Midland. I had a lot of respect for him as a gentleman and commissioner.

However, when he spouted off after the recent primary election for sheriff I could not have been more disappointed. Even though I supported Gary Painter for sheriff, I surely would not have put myself in the position Mr. Brown did, especially being an elected official as he is.

In short he stated the people of Midland County had no sense. I'm sorry he feels the way he does because now he may as well pack his bags as he will probably be the next one voted out of office.

Next, I can't believe that Sheriff Smith and others that support him believe that the people of Midland County would vote him out of office simply because of a supposed rumor. Give us a break folks. The people of this county have got some marbles rolling around in their heads. There is no proof of such goings-on and if there had been Mr. Painter never brought them out. He stuck strictly to the issues of importance. Painter is a good God-fearing man and would not resort to such tactics.

The people of Midland County have spoken. So let's go on and look forward to the November election and start a new administration with a new sheriff.

Time to forget 'dirty laundry'

The voters of Midland County did not want Dallas Smith for their sheriff. Whatever each and everyone's reasons were, it cannot be said any plainer. This is the way the system works. Vote people in and vote people out. All the surveys, newspaper articles or rumors will not change this.

So why keep airing dirty laundry and subjecting Dallas Smith's ex-wife and small children to such publicity?

Families sue for fire in park

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — An amusement park was "reckless, negligent and wanton" in designing, maintaining and operating the "Haunted Castle," the families of four of eight teen-agers killed in a fire allege in a lawsuit seeking $550 million each in damages.

The federal wrongful death suit filed Tuesday names Six Flags Great Adventure Park, Bally Manufacturing Inc., which owns Six Flags Corp., and George Mahana, who built and designed the Haunted Castle, which authorities said caught fire May 11 when a teen-ager ignited a lighter to find his way in the dark.

Neither Six Flags nor Bally Manufacturing would comment.

Gaye's father ordered to court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marvin Gay Sr. was ordered to appear in Municipal Court on June 20 for the scheduling of a preliminary hearing after a judge found him mentally competent to stand trial in the shooting death of his son, singer Marvin Gaye.

After reading a psychiatric report, Superior Court Judge Michael Pirosh ruled Tuesday that Gay, 70, can be tried on a murder charge.

Surgeons last month successfully removed a walnut-sized tumor found near Gay's pituitary gland, and he has been recovering at County-USC Medical Center's jail ward.

Gaye, a Grammy Award winner, died April 1 following a family argument at his father's home.

Drunken boaters may be penalized

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (AP) — Lake County boaters will face up to a year in jail or a maximum $1,000 fine if convicted of driving a boat while intoxicated under a new ordinance believed to be the first of its kind in the nation.

The court may also bar violators from driving a boat in the county for up to a year under the law approved Monday by the county board.

Jim McGranachan, a Coast Guard spokesman, said the ordinance is the first in the country to use the condition of "implied consent," meaning a driver who receives a license implies his consent either to take a breath test or surrende the license.

Orphan's find nets thousands

NEW YORK (AP) — A 16-year-old orphan sat "pretty quietly" as 91 pieces of jewelry he found while playing hooky were auctioned for $281,490, a spokeswoman for Christie's auction house said.

Eric DeWilde of Hollywood, Fla., will receive 90 percent of the proceeds from Tuesday's auction and from a sale next week of 25 more pieces. Christie's gets 10 percent.

DeWilde became the legal owner of the jewels last year after police could not locate their owner after six months.

DeWilde's aunt, Modena Trost, has said DeWilde wanted to buy her a house and himself a car.

Group rejects construction plan

NEW YORK (AP) — A 59-story office tower would dwarf the landmark St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church, and its design is "disagreeable, sharp, metallic, tinselly," the head of the Landmarks Preservation Commission said as the board rejected the proposed construction.

Under the proposal rejected Tuesday, the 66-year-old church would have demolished its community house to make way for the glass office building, which would have extended over the church dome.

Death recommended for teen killer

LOVELOCK, Nev. (AP) — Gerald Gallego, already sentenced to death in California for killing two college students, deserves to die for the hammer murders of two teen-age girls in Nevada, a jury has decided.

The jury deliberated for three hours Tuesday before recommending that Gallego be sentenced to die by lethal injection for the April 1980 killings.

His ex-wife, Charlene Williams Gallego, testified against Gallego in a plea bargain in which she received a 16-year, eight-month sentence for pleading guilty to second-degree murder. She has also implicated him in the deaths of six other women as part of what she said was his fantasy search for a perfect young sex slave.

Jackson plans three-nation tour

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic presidential hopeful the Rev. Jesse Jackson says he will visit Panama, Nicaragua and Cuba later this month in a bid to "break the cycle" of confrontation in the region and promote a "breakthrough for peace."

"We prepare to leave on this mission convinced that peace is possible," Jackson tolds reporters Tuesday after being briefed by State Department officials on U.S. policy in the region.

"I'm convinced that in this age we must fight for the pulling together of various elements of the Western Hemisphere, from Cuba to Canada, and declare the Western Hemisphere a war free zone. We must use a more aggressive diplomatic approach and stop militarizing the region."

Jackson will visit Panama on June 23 for discussions with officials of the so-called Contadora group, the four Latin American nations that have been attempting to negotiate a peace settlement in Central America since early last year. The group is comprised of Panama, Venezuela, Mexico and Colombia.

Afterward, he will go to Nicaragua and Cuba for discussions on ways these countries can ease their differences with the United States.

The Reagan administration had high-level meetings with Cuban officials in late 1981 and early 1982 but no progress was achieved. Twelve days ago, Secretary of State George P. Shultz visited Nicaragua and reached agreement to hold talks on narrowing differences between the two countries.

On Cuba, Jackson said, "In my judgment if we were to have a more active dialogue with Cuba, we could alter Cuba's course in the Western Hemisphere. When we do not talk we give up our capacity to influence."

At another point, Jackson said the United States does not have the "moral authority" to blame Cuba for Central America's problems because of its own policy of "military expansionism" in the region.

Jackson discussed hemispheric policy with a group of State Department officials led by Undersecretary of State for Political Affairs Michael Armacost. He said he believes it was appropriate to get the administration view of the issues before embarking on his trip.

Jackson's remarks evoked memories of his visit to Syria last December when he secured the release of a captured American Navy airman, Lt. Robert O. Goodman.

On Tuesday, he stressed again, as he did on his visit to Damascus, the need to seek solutions through dialogue and not confrontation.

Mondale to interview Veep candidates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Potential Democratic vice presidential candidates will begin trooping to Minnesota next week for chats with Walter F. Mondale, who is following a selection method reminiscent of how Jimmy Carter filled out the ticket in 1976.

Carter's choice that year was Mondale, who had been one of several Democrats to travel to Plains, Ga., for an interview.

Mondale, with enough delegates to win the Democratic presidential nomination at the convention next month, issued a statement Tuesday on how he plans to go about choosing a running mate.

"I expect to interview many of the candidates before I make my decision," he said. "I hope to begin these interviews within a week."

Top Mondale aides were meeting today to draw up a list of prospects and arrange times for them to travel to Minnesota. Among the participants in that session was John Reilly, the Mondale law partner and political adviser who was given the task of leading the vice presidential search.

Maxine Isaacs, Mondale campaign press secretary, said the eventual choice would not necessarily come from the ranks of those interviewed personally by Mondale.

The names mentioned most often as potential running-mates are Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, who is continuing his effort to block Mondale's nomination; Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, who endorsed Mondale on the eve of the Texas caucuses; Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York; Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York; Gov. Martha Layne Collins of Kentucky; and Mayor Dianne Feinstein of San Francisco.

In other political developments, Hart met Tuesday with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to discuss why he is remaining in the race despite Mondale's commanding lead in delegates. There was no immediate word on what was said.

Mondale has been vacationing at the beach resort of Southampton, N.Y.

His two Democratic rivals, Hart and Jackson, contend they have not abandoned their hopes of blocking a Mondale nomination. But they are coming under increasing pressure from party leaders to begin trying to heal the wounds of the long nomination campaign.

Former Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota was holding a news conference today, and there was speculation he would endorse Mondale. The 1972 Democratic presidential nominee, McGovern has been boosting a Mondale-Hart ticket as the strongest combination to challenge President Reagan.

McGovern said Tuesday that Hart should make peace with Mondale and avoid actions that might further divide the Democratic Party.

"I personally think the longer these battles continue, the more difficult it's going to be for the Democrats to win the White House," McGovern said to reporters after testifying to the Democratic Platform Committee.

All three candidates are expected to attend the Texas Democratic Party convention Friday, but a Mondale aide said no meeting has been scheduled.

Mondale was flying to Texas on Thursday to attend a fund-raising dinner for Bentsen before the convention. Later Friday, Mondale was to fly to Minnesota to attend the convention of the Minnesota Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party.

The former vice president planned to spend next week at his home in North Oaks, Minn., a suburb of St. Paul.

In his statement, Mondale said, "I feel very deeply about the need to search as far and as wide as I possibly can for the best candidate, someone who is fully qualified to be president."

He also pledged to adhere to his campaign promise that "the selection of a vice president would include women and minorities."

In other political developments, Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, who dropped out of the presidential race in March, said he would be open to the possibility of being the party's vice presidential nominee.

"We'd have to consider it," he told reporters, adding quickly that he thought the possibility unlikely.

De Lorean's attorneys consider mistrial motion over tapes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An eight-month gap in the memory and notes of the chief prosecutor in the John Z. De Lorean drug trial has fueled a controversy over his secret conversations with the trial's star witness, a drug smuggler turned informant.

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi, studying a sheaf of documents submitted to him by Assistant U.S. Attorney James Walsh, said he would decide today which material De Lorean's attorneys can see.

Defense lawyers Howard Weitzman and Donald Re said they were planning a motion for dismissal of charges on grounds of government misconduct, claiming crucial information was improperly withheld from them and possibly from the grand jury that indicted De Lorean.

"The further along we go the deeper the coverup becomes," said Re.

The dispute over an eight-month gap arose after the prosecutor submitted a sworn declaration to the judge Tuesday.

Walsh, who said earlier he had kept no notes on his talks with informant James Timothy Hoffman, made a surprise disclosure that he had subsequently found some notes.

But none of the notes shed any light on the eight-month period between De Lorean's two grand jury indictments, Walsh said.

"I have no independent recollection of how many meetings I had with Mr. Hoffman in that period," Walsh said.

The question raised by the defense and probed by the judge is whether Walsh knew his star witness had testified inaccurately at the first grand jury hearing, and, if so, why he didn't tell the panel.

Walsh indicated Tuesday he was in the dark on the subject until just after the second indictment.

De Lorean, 59, was first indicted on cocaine trafficking charges Oct. 29, 1982, ten days after his arrest. Eight months later, on June 29, 1983, the same grand jury met, heard testimony and issued a superseding indictment.

The defense has alleged that Walsh knew long before June that his witness had given inaccurate testimony but did not advise the grand jury about it.

Walsh said Tuesday he couldn't remember when he first learned that Hoffman did not record all of his phone calls with De Lorean. Hoffman told the grand jury he recorded everything during the government's "sting" operation.

Hoffman, in his fourth week on the stand, also said he could no longer remember when he told Walsh of the discrepancy. Last week, Hoffman said he probably told Walsh about it as early as January, 1983.

But Walsh swore: "I do not recall discussing inaccuracies in Mr. Hoffman's grand jury testimony and statement prior to July of 1983."

Members of De Lorean's defense team called Walsh's sworn statement "convenient" and said they did not believe all of it.

First talk held during nurses strike

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Representatives of 6,000 striking registered nurses and 15 hospitals held talks Tuesday for the first time since the strike began June 1, but no progress was reported.

The nurses' bargaining committee and hospital negotiators met for more than an hour under the direction of federal mediator Earl Larson but made no progress, said Geraldine Wedel, a spokeswoman for the Minnesota Nurses Association said. Another session was scheduled for Friday.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the association, Bob Wiesner, said talks were scheduled Thursday in the separate walkout of 300 registered nurses at Mercy Medical Center on June 4.

Earlier, Larson said he didn't know what to expect going into Tuesday's negotiations. Both sides appeared firm in their positions and held out little hope for a quick settlement.

The two sides had met 20 times this spring before the walkout began. Talks broke off May 31, deadlocked primarily over the issue of how much job security senior nurses should be entitled to during layoffs and recalls.

"We're hoping to start out dealing with ideas and concepts rather than getting bogged down in contract language people have knee-jerk reactions to," Bob Wiesner, negotiator for the Minnesota Nurses Association, said before the session began.

But, Wiesner said, the union is still firm on discussing contract layoff and recall language and the hospitals' desire to change the contract's provisions for health insurance.

Michael Phillips, labor relations director for Health Employers Inc., which represents the struck hospitals, said the hospitals were hopeful but not optimistic about the prospects for progress.

Meanwhile, nearly all of the struck hospitals were advertising for temporary replacements for their registered nurses.

Fairview-Southdale Hospital in Edina has hired 28 temporary replacements for its striking nurses and begun scheduling elective surgery, administrator Douglas Robinson said.

He said doctors are being told they can once again do cancer surgery, breast biopsies, hip-fracture repairs, hemorrhoid and hernia operations and other operations that normally can be postponed without endangering a patient.

Robinson said operating-room time is being offered by "looking at canceled surgery from two weeks ago, and calling the doctors." He said his personnel are finding that not all the doctors waited, that some did the oeprations elsewhere or had them done by surgeons at other hospitals.

Fairview-Southdale is operating at just under 30 percent of its licensed-bed capacity of 390.

Mercy Medical Center in Coon Rapids has hired two temporaries, spokesman Mick Johnson said.

Nick Hilger, administrator of Eitel Hospital, said he is operating 36 to 40 of his 114 beds and hasn't made any significant changes since most of his nurses walked out when the strike began.

John Herman, a vice president of Methodist Hospital in St. Louis Park, said his hospital is interviewing applicants, "But we have hired only a few."

"We have started to try to pick up some of our backlog in surgery," he said. Herman said Methodist isn't accepting purely elective surgery, but is allowing surgery that is "semiurgent."

School bans tug of war

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Tug of war has been banned at all school events in Haywood County after a fifth-grader lost four fingers in a competition.

The Haywood County School Board approved the ban Tuesday night following the May 31 accident at Morningstar School.

Alex Smith, 11, underwent reattachment surgery at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville, but doctors do not know if he will regain use of his fingers. He was released from the hospital over the weekend.

The boy reportedly put his fingers inside a slip knot in the rope before the game began. When the knot tightened, his fingers broke and were pinched off.

Padres win in 12

Nettles wrecks Braves

By Associated Press

Graig Nettles is happy to be in San Diego. The Atlanta Braves are glad they're leaving.

Nettles, hitting only .224 entering Tuesday night's game, drove in the winning run in the bottom of the 12th inning with a single off reliever Steve Bedrosian, 4-4, to give the Padres a 7-6 victory over the Braves.

"I like it when the situation is like that," said the 39 year-old native of San Diego. "He's a power pitcher and I'm a power hitter. It's just basic baseball."

Nettles, who is 7-14 with nine RBI in his last four games, lined a 2-0 pitch to right to score Alan Wiggins, who had walked and stolen his league-leading 32nd base.

"I've got to look for a fastball in that situation and he'd be a fool not to throw a fastball," said Nettles. "This is exciting baseball we're playing here. It could be a fun summer."

National League

Nettles may never have been the hero if right fielder Tony Gwynn hadn't made a spectacular catch in right-center field on a drive by Brad Komminsk in the eighth. Gwynn caught the ball in full flight at the wall, then spun around and nailed pinch runner Albert Hall with a one-hop throw to first for a double play.

Komminsk drove in two runs with a pair of singles and Rafael Ramirez had three hit as the the Braves ended a 14-game road trip with five straight losses. Tuesday's defeat dropped them into third place, 3½ games behind San Diego in the NL West.

Celtics hang another flag

DAVID REMICK
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BOSTON — One day this summer, some lonely soul will climb the Boston Garden rafters and hang a green and white banner on the beams.

"Boston Celtics," it will read. "1984 World Champions." It is the 15th such banner, and the Celtics captured it Tuesday night, 111-102, in the seventh and deciding game against the Los Angeles Lakers.

So ended the eighth chapter of a peculiarly stilted classic. The Lakers have played the Celtics eight times in the finals, and eight times they have lost.

Cedric Maxwell will join the litany of Boston heroes after his incredible performance here Tuesday night. He scored 24 points and played with the sort of inspiration the Celtics needed to gain the edge in so brutal and even a series.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led all scorers with 29 points, but he was not supported by his team's usual mastery off the fast break. For long stretches of time, it seemed Abdul-Jabbar played alone.

THE LAKERS cut a 99-85 deficit, with 7:57 left, to 105-102 seven minutes later, but two crucial turnovers by Magic Johnson gave the Celtics the room they needed to preserve a victory they seemed to have in hand.

Free throws by Dennis Johnson (22 points) and Larry Bird (20 points) put it away.

When it was over the Garden crowd mobbed the floor. The Celtics practically rode the green wave to their tiny dressing room.

K.C. Jones had won his first championship as a professional coach. It took a bit of Celtics magic to get him the title.

The championship comes one year after the Celtics were swept by the Milwaukee Bucks in an Eastern Conference semifinal.

Many worried that temperatures would reach as high as 97 degrees in the Garden, as they did last Friday for Game 5. But while the arena was warm, the heat came mostly from the competition on the floor. Fatigue would not play the role it did last week.

Nevertheless, the Lakers installed five rotating fans in their locker room and brought along oxygen tanks and nutriment fluids. The temperature was around 90 degrees on the court, but it was not nearly as humid as last week.

THE CROWD, predictably, was wild from the national anthem onward. When Bird scored the opening basket and the Lakers blew their first attempt, the pitch increased to almost impossible levels.

Cedric Maxwell epitomized the tone of this game. Not only did he score 17 points in the first half, he hit the floor for every loose ball, took verbal jabs at the opposition and went up for every rebound.

Abdul-Jabbar and Bird handled the ball far more than they usually do. A strategy that turned out well for both. Abdul-Jabbar scored 12 points in the first quarter. Had he not looked to score so often, the Lakers might have found themselves in trouble. The fast break was not there. And neither was Bob McAdoo, who had a severely strained Achilles' tendon. Instead of McAdoo, the Lakers went to Mitch Kupchak when they needed a reserve power forward. Kupchak scored a couple of times but he was awkward, not nearly the threat that McAdoo, who once led the league in scoring, posed in the earlier games.

Because of Abdul-Jabbar's shooting, the Lakers kept pace with Boston's inside game and the score was 30-30 after the first quarter.

But while Abdul-Jabbar rested periodically in the second quarter, the Celtics attacked. Danny Ainge, Bird and Maxwell all made big shots to give Boston a 47-38 lead with 7:42 left in the half.

James Worthy, Maxwell's principal rival as both a rebounder, scorer and psych artist, led a short drive that brought the Lakers within four points with four minutes left. Maxwell smartly went to the boards everytime he got the ball and either drew fouls or hit the layup. He passed to Bird under the hoop for a slam dunk and a 57-49 lead with 1:27 left in the period.

The half ended with the Celtics leading, 58-52, a narrow margain as every game previous has proved.

ONE THING was clear. Robert Parish was no match for Abdul-Jabbar. Parish was rebounding well and looking for his shot, but he could not hope to match the all-time leading scorer point for point.

The Celtics were brilliant in the third period. Henderson made three straight jumpers early in the quarter that kept pace with the Lakers' attempt at a run, and then the Celtics' center answered the question: "Is Parish Burning?"

With 4:28 left in the period, Parish looked fed up with Abdul-Jabbar's nonstop scoring and made a three-point play of his own to give the Celtics a 78-72 lead.

Leading by only 82-78 with 2:03 left in the period, the Celtics tore off nine straight points to end the quarter. It was certainly the most crucial stretch in the game. Kevin McHale, Ainge and Parish found the range while the Lakers' offense looked slow, a clumsy underwater ballet.

Red Sox rally again for win

By Associated Press

The Boston Red Sox are not only making a habit of winning these days, but they're doing it the hard way — with late-inning heroics.

For the third straight time, the Red Sox pulled out a game in the late innings when they rallied on Dwight Evans' three-run homer in the eighth to beat the New York Yankees 9-8 Tuesday night.

American League

"The pitch was kind of high, probably a ball, but I managed to hit it well," Evans said of the gopher ball by Yankee relief ace Dave Righetti. "I don't think I can hit a ball any better.

"Of course, here (Fenway Park) it doesn't make any difference whether you hit it 315 feet down the line or 550 feet or whatever onto the turnpike. They all count the same."

The victory was Boston's fifth in a row, and 12th in the last 14 contests. Previously, the Red Sox beat Milwaukee Sunday when Rick Miller drove in the winning run with a pinch triple in the eighth. On Monday night, Reid Nichols capped a six-run ninth with a three-run pinch homer against the Yankees.

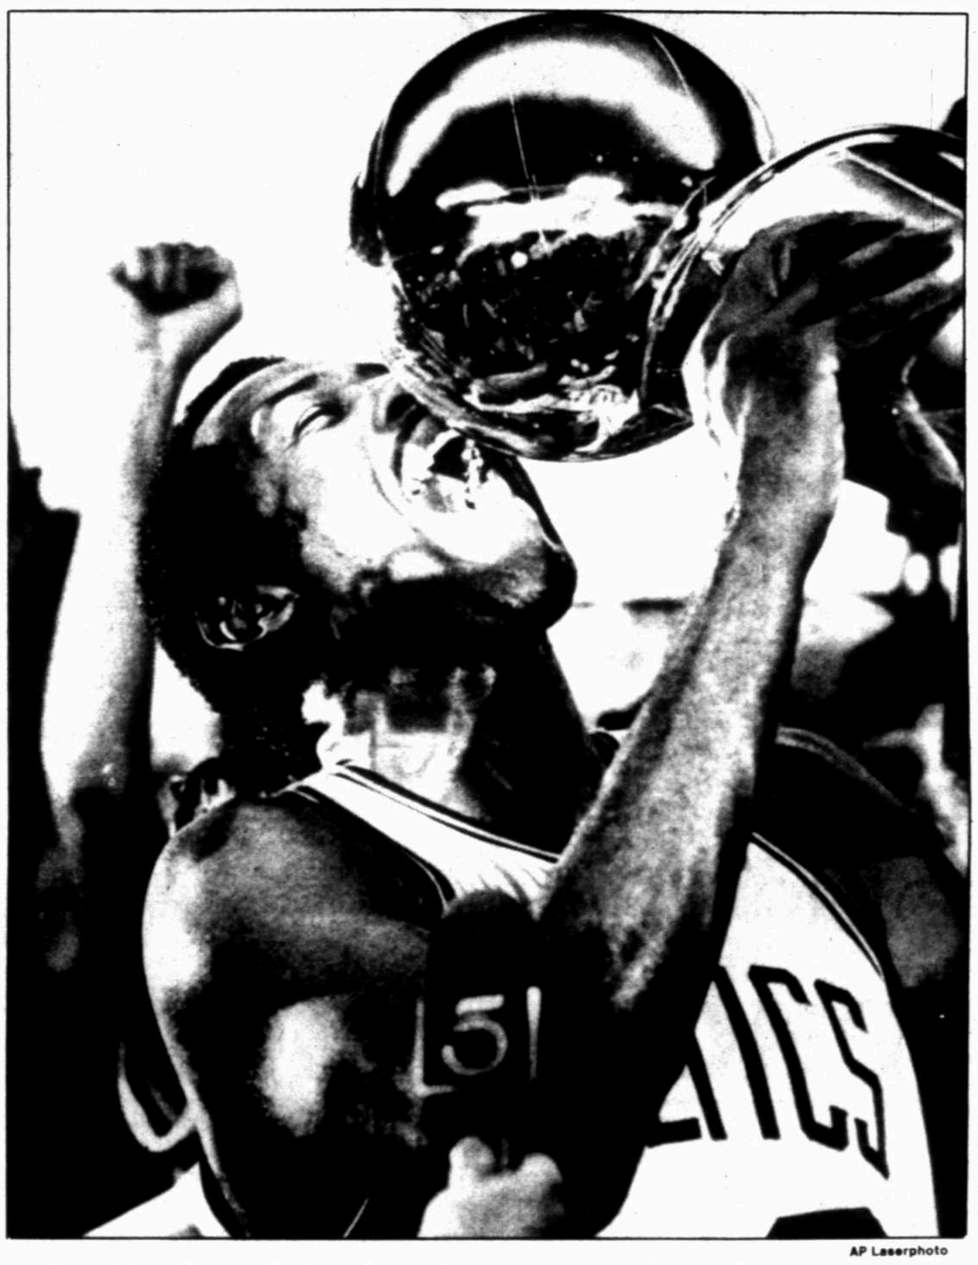

Boston's comeback offset two homers and five runs batted in by Don Baylor and five consecutive singles by Don Mattingly of the Yankees.

The Red Sox had cut the Yankee lead to 8-6 with two runs in the seventh on triples by Evans and Jim Rice and a single by Tony Armas. Then in the eighth, Miller opened the inning with a pinch walk and Jackie Gutierrez also walked before Righetti, 2-1, replaced reliever Jay Howell. Wade Boggs sacrificed the runners along before Evans belted only the second homer off the New York southpaw this season.

Rangers 6, Twins 2

Buddy Bell hit a two-run double off former teammate Mike Smithson and Larry Parrish drilled a two-run homer, carrying Texas over Minnesota behind the pitching of Danny Darwin and Odell Jones.

Irwin returns to scene of first Open victory

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — It was in an oblique fashion that Hale Irwin got around to mentioning Jack Nicklaus.

The discussion, concerning the United States Open Golf Championship, was general in nature: courses and players, the Winged Foot layout in particular, rough and strategy.

Then Irwin, who won the first of his two Open titles at Winged Foot 10 years ago, turned his attention to the demands made on a player by the test of the Open.

"He must have talent, determination, courage, confidence — and luck," Irwin said, and immediately thought of Nicklaus.

"Jack has been most successful in going out and doing all those things necessary in the major championships.

"I have marveled, over the years, at Jack's ability to concentrate on the task at hand, to shut out everything around him, to do what he must do."

His talent never has been questioned. The most remarkable record in the history of the ancient game attests.

His courage has been displayed for a quarter-century.

His determination never was in greater evidence than two weeks ago when he, somehow, salvaged a tournament title he'd apparently lost with a shot out of bounds.

And it was in that tournament, Nicklaus' own event, the Memorial, that his confidence received a boost and the luck turned.

Role of star overshadows Natural plot

It was a rainy Sunday in Asheville or I don't know whether I'd gotten to see The Natural. The reviews were mixed, high-and-hard and low-in-the-dirt. One didn't really know what to expect.

The thing that proved intriguing was the star and the lengths to which the producers went to procure the services of a rare talent of this magnitude.

Our hero's dominance was such that I never really got into the story line. And the name of the actor who played the lead role escapes me at the moment, but I'm sure he has a future, or perhaps past, in the movies. In fact, let's make it a prediction. Whoever this guy is, he is destined for stardom...he could even be the next Randolph Scott.

And the guy who played the Whammer is as good an excuse as you need to make another film about Babe Ruth.

BUT IT was the shooting location of the film that gripped the lapels in this baseball movie of the late 1930's, 1939 to be exact.

Where, nowadays, do you find an old ball park, one that would convey the mood of an era gone by? That was the task facing the technical staff.

Someone suggested that the old ball park in Buffalo, might fill the bill. It was used by the International League team in the 1930s and was where Ray Mack and Lou Boudreau played before moving up to the Cleveland Indians. Then, someone remembered that the park, which the Buffalo (AFL and NFL) Bills used for football had been torn down when Rich Stadium was built.

Actually, it hadn't and the Buffalo Eastern League club still uses it.

THE PARK was "restored", circa 1939. The film technical crew went to great lengths to achieve its mood, even constructing an old-fashioned scoreboard, the kind that carried the inning-by-inning scores of all eight major league games as well as the pitchers and catchers (identified by numbers).

The patches on the uniform sleeves were never explained, but were the 1939 Baseeball Centennial patches...Abner Doubleday and all that business.

THE TEAM was called the New York Knights and the uniforms were imitation New York Giants. One half expected Carl Hubbell or Hal Schumacher to make an appearance. But, alas, Memorial Stadium is a single deck ball park. The only non-double decks in 1939 were Fenway and Braves Field in Boston. A minor flaw easily overlooked. Picky picky.

In one scene, players stood at attention before a game as the national anthem was played. It wasn't until the war years that the national anthem became standard fare at ball games.

In Brooklyn, the organist introduced the games as the umpires marched on the field by playing Three Blind Mice (only three umps in those days) until told to cease and desist by Ford Frick, the National League president.

They did make up for one oversight by having pitchers throw batting practice without the protective screen in front of the mound. The screen didn't come into use until several target-finding line drives and broken bones later.

The book, written by Barnard Malamud, is said to be based on Shoeless Joe Jackson, who was barred from baseball for life for batting close to .400 in the Black Sox Scandal of 1919. Also tossed in was a little Eddie Waitkus, shot by a publicity demented female fan in a hotel room...and in the skinflint judge, there seemed to be a hint of Branch Rickey or Sam Breadon.

IN ONE scene alleged to be Wrigley Field, there was a trace of vine on the outfield wall, but it was a cheap and unconvincing imitation of the classic Chicago ball park.

Perhaps, it was Wrigley Field Los Angeles, the home of the old Pacific Coast League Angels and a park that bore a slight resemblance to Chicago's Wrigley. It was the scene of many baseball movies, since it was the only double-deck minor league park, a fine looking steel, concrete and brick structure.

However, it seems as though Wrigley was levelled after serving as the first-year home of the California Angels. Surely, it couldn't be still standing...but then Buffalo's Memorial Stadium was supposed to have submitted to the wrecker's ball.

THE MOST disturbing slip was the championship playoff game. It was scheduled at night.

In the early years of night baseball, there was a strong resistance to the proliferation of night ball. Teams like the Yankees, Red Sox, Giants, Indians, Cubs, and Tigers were above such a questionable gimmick that threatened the very tradition of the sport.

The fear was that financially troubled owners like Clark Griffith of the Washington Senators, Larry MacPhail of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and John Quinn of the Boston Braves and the St. Louis Browns owners might let night baseball get out of hand just to make a buck. Consequently, a strict limit of seven games per team per season was placed on night ball.

Later, temptation, and profits, grew and this was expanded to 14 games, then 28, and....but that's another story. The point is that in 1939, no one outside of the minor leagues would have been playing night ball into September, let alone October.

If you are a baseball fan, you'll find The Natural worthwhile, even if the plot doesn't turn you on. Of course, The Natural doesn't throw a bad fast ball in whiffing the Whammer on three pitches. And he swings a bat like maybe he once used one in anger.

However, it seemed a little farfetched, the way they were forced to use the Natural in the regular lineup, having Bump Williams, or whatever, run through the right field fence in pursuit of a fly ball. After Bump was buried, they had to play The Natural.

It fact, the scene was suspiciously similar to the way they got rid of the opposing halfback in College Coach, the 1932 football epic in which Duke Morrison and Ward Bond made their film debuts as members of the USC football team, which was used as the background extras for the football scenes.

Dodgers 8, Giants 7

Pedro Guerrero went 5-for-5, scored three runs and won the game with a solo home run in the bottom of the eighth inning as the Dodgers moved into second place in the West.

"I've been struggling all year, but I know it doesn't last forever," said Guerrero. "I've always had confidence in my hitting, but I have to admit tonight gave me a very good feeling and a lot more confidence."

Guerrero's homer, only his fourth this year, came off Greg Minton, 1-5, and gave Dodger reliever Pat Zachry, 4-1, the victory. R.J. Reynolds also scored three runs and hit his first major league homer.

Jeff Leonard drove in three runs for the Giants with a single and his sixth homer, and Jack Clark had a two-run double to boost his RBI total for the year to 41.

Cubs 11, Expos 4

Jody Davis led his Chicago teammates on an afternoon romp at Wrigley Field, connecting for two home runs and a double as all nine Chicago starters had at least one hit in a 16-hit attack against four Montreal pitchers.

"I'm using a short swing to keep up a high average," said Davis, who drove in four runs and boosted his average to .311. "When the wind is blowing out, we've got seven guys who can hit the ball out."

That includes Mel Hall and Gary Matthews, who hit two-run homers and drove in three runs apiece. Matthews' fourth homer knocked out loser Charlie Lea, 10-3.

Dennis Eckersley, who had lost his first two starts for the Cubs because of a lack of support, was the beneficiary of the blasts as he earned his first NL victory.

Derrel Thomas had a run-scoring single, Tim Raines a two-run double and Gary Carter his 13th homer for Montreal.

Pirates 6, Mets 3

The Pirates, averaging just over three runs a game, are being called the "Slumber Company" these days, but not last night. They pounded out 15 hits to relieve some of the strain on their pitching staff.

"I was real happy to see those runs out there. Getting an early lead like that doesn't happen that much to anybody," said winner Larry McWilliams, 3-4, who has allowed just eight earned runs in his last 45 innings.

Milt May, starting when regular catcher Tony Pena came down with a virus, drove in two of the Pirates' four first-inning runs with a single, and Lee Lacy helped add some insurance with a solo homer in the ninth, his fifth.

Pittsburgh's first-inning barrage came against Tim Leary, 2-3, who was making his first start after six relief appearances.

Cardinals 7, Phillies 2

Rick Horton, who had relieved 15 times, made his first major league start a successful one, pitching five effective innings before giving way to reliever Neil Allen, who finished with four perfect innings for his third save.

George Hendrick provided Horton with plenty of offense with a single, homer and three RBI as the Cardinals beat the Phillies for the fifth time in five meetings.

John Wockenfuss hit his fourth homer for Philadelphia.

Astros 7, Reds 0

Joe Niekro went the distance for the first time this year, hurling the sixth three-hitter of his career, as the Astros won their third straight and handed the Reds their 10th loss in the last 13 games.

59 captures Allison golf

Ross Brunner and Dave Williams teamed to take first place in the Jimmy Allison Memorial Golf Tournament, shooting a 59 at Midland Country Club Tuesday. The tournament is played in the memory of the former publisher-president of the Reporter-Telegram and funds raised go to the Midland unit of the American Cancer Society.

Charles Kimbard and Charles Tierge shot a 60 for second while David Barton and Randy Mathews were third with 61.

In the B division, Alex Clarke and Hugh Looney won with 58. Kenneth Karr and Joe O'Neill, III, fired a 59 for second and George Staley and Tim Thompson had a third place 60.

Darwin was touched for two home runs but earned his fifth victory of the year against three losses.Darwin's elbow stiffened after seven innings in which he allowed six hits. Jones finished up.

Smithson, who was traded to Minnesota in the off-season and beat the Rangers last week, was tagged for four runs in the second inning and lost his seventh game against as many victories.

"It felt good getting back at Mike," Bell said. "He wasn't throwing as well as he did last week."

Orioles 5, Brewers 4

Mike Young and John Shelby homered in the eighth inning to rally Baltimore over Milwaukee.

Young led off the eighth against reliever Rollie Fingers, 0-2, with his third home run of the season to tie the game 3-3.One out later, Floyd Rayford singled and Shelby homered for the winning runs.

The blow gave the Orioles a 5-3 lead and helped them withstand an RBI double by Jim Sundberg in the ninth off reliever Tippy Martinez, 3-4. Sammy Stewart came on to get the last out and post his first save after Martinez left with the bases loaded.

Blue Jays 12, Tigers 3

Damaso Garcia socked four hits and scored a pair of runs, George Bell contributed three hits and Ernie Whitt walloped a three-run homer as Toronto routed Detroit and snapped a five-game losing streak.

The Blue Jays shelled Detroit starter Jack Morris, 11-3, for six runs on eight hits in the first three innings in the earliest exit for the Tiger right-hander in two seasons. The loss was Morris' first on the road in six decisions this season and prevented him from posting his 100th career victory.

Toronto right-hander Jim Clancy, 5-6, bounced back from three straight losses, striking out five and walking four in 7 2-3 innings.

The Blue Jays broke open the game with six runs in the fourth to take a 9-0 lead.

Mariners 3, Royals 2

Larry Milbourne, who had tied the game with a solo homer in the sixth, drove home the winning run with a 10th-inning single as Seattle beat Kansas City.

Alvin Davis opened the Mariner 10th with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice by Al Cowens. Ken Phelps was intentionally walked, and Barry Bonnell forced Davis at third. But after Darnell Coles went in to run for Phelps at second, Milbourne lashed a 1-2 pitch off Bret Saberhagen, 2-6.

Mariner right-hander Mike Moore, 3-4, went all the way.

Angels 3, White Sox 2

Doug DeCinces singled with the bases loaded with one out in the 10th inning to boost California over Chicago.

Rob Wilfong's single with one out off Al Jones, 0-1, brought on Juan Agosto, who surrendered a single to Rod Carew and an intentional walk to Fred Lynn. Salome Barojas then came on to face DeCinces, who singled sharply to score Wilfong.

Doug Corbett, 2-0, pitched the final 1 2-3 innings to pick up the win.

Reggie Jackson's one-out single off Jones drove in the tying run in the ninth inning for California after Mike Squires' two-out RBI single in the top of the ninth had given the White Sox a 2-1 lead.

Indians 11, A's 5

Julio Franco and Pat Tabler hit their first home runs of the season, worth two runs apiece, in a five-run first-inning outburst which propelled Cleveland over Oakland.

The lopsided game was marked by two fights in the late innings, a gigantic wrestling match in the sixth and a full-scale punching match in the seventh.

Buffalo shoots for big leagues

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — In what was billed as "a concrete first step in attracting major league baseball to Buffalo by 1990," the city's Downtown Stadium Committee Tuesday approved construction of a 20,000-seat expandable baseball stadium.

The proposed uncovered stadium, which will cost an estimated $53 million, is a compromise from Mayor James Griffin's first choice, which was a 40,000-seat domed stadium.

"Take what the doomsday artists and second-guessers say with a grain of salt," said Griffin in an apparent reference to critics of the proposal, "because we are going to do this thing."

Charles Rosenow, coordinator for the city's stadium plans, said the financing would come from a $22.5 million grant the state's Sportsplex Corporation has recommended for the project; $12.7 million in industrial revenue bonds; $5 million from the city's capital improvement budget; $4.8 million to be sought in federal highway funds and $8 million from a non-interest bearing loan which the city hopes the state will grant.

THE $8 million loan would carry no risk for the state, Rosenow said, because it would be backed by money owed the city by four corporations that received Urban Development Action Grant loans.

Frank McGuire, a member of the Sportsplex Committee, described the state loan as "a cash payment for paybacks the city has coming to it."

He said the city has "a better than average chance" for a major league franchise.

Griffin and Rosenow said the stadium, which could be expanded to 40,000 seats if a major league team is situated here, would help the city obtain a Class AAA minor league franchise, the highest class in minor league ball.

The Buffalo Bisons, the city's current professional baseball team, belong to the Class AA Eastern League.

The state's $22.5 million contribution, which has to be approved by the Legislature and Gov. Mario Cuomo, would cover the actual cost of constructing the stadium, while the remaining funds would be used for parking garages, highway access ramps, and site preparation.

The proposal will now be sent to the state Legislature, Cuomo and the state Urban Development Corp.

Cubs rained out at San Antonio

By The Associated Press

Bob Gergen hit a grand-slam homer and three other Tulsa players homered as the Drillers romped to a 20-3 win over Arkansas in a Texas League slugfest.

In other games Tuesday night, Beaumont edged El Paso 2-1 and Jackson blanked Shreveport 5-0. A game between Midland and San Antonio was rained out.

Jeff Kunkel, Jorge Gomez and Javier Ortiz each hit two-run homers for the Drillers, who ravaged five Arkansas pitchers for 20 hits.

Gotay Mills and Mike Harris had two hits apiece for Arkansas, which finished with eight hits. Harry McCulla hit a solo homer for the Travelers.

Tulsa's Bob Sebra, 5-4, took the win. Todd Worrell, 3-6, was tagged with the loss.

Beaumont got both runs in the second inning. Mark Wasinger hit a one-out single, went to third on a single by Mark Gillaspie and later scored on a fielders choice.

El Paso's only run came in the sixth inning when Bob Skube hit a lead-off double and later scored on a double by Garrett Nago.

Bill Long, 8-1, was the winning pitcher. Bryan Clutterbuck, 5-4, took the loss.

BOWLING BEAT

Wright rolls 300

BY RANDY ISENBERG

Ricky Wright rolled at 300-game in the ATBA at Dellwood Lanes Sunday. Wright, a talented young bowling enthusiast, was the first to roll a perfect game in sanctioned summer tournament play.

Wright, a 21-year-old employee of Tom Lindsey and Associates, has been bowling for two years and currently carries a 176 average. He accomplished every bowler's dream with 11 perfect pocket strikes.

In the second frame, he came up a little high on his delivery.

Wright said, "I knew that if I got my first strike in the 10th frame that I would get it (the 300 game)."

RANDY HIGGINS and Earl Phelps sent the tote board soaring in the Big Sky Mixed League with Higgins rolling a 738 and a 264 game. That set the pace for the week in Midland. Phelps wasn't bad either, rolling a 256 on the way to a 712.

Frances Gronow paced the women with a 243 game and 643 series while Rosie Urias had a 236 and 608. Both scores came in the Ladies Nite Out League.

JUNE 6 I attended the specially called meeting of the State Ways and Means committee, which is studying raising taxes to supplement the state treasurery's short fall.

One of the means of raising money under consideration is by placing a sale and usage tax on bowling lineage. If this pases, it would mean an additional fee increase of at least five per cent, or approximately 30 cents per night, passed directly on to the user.

Taxed dollars go to the state. This fee increase would not be realized to the bowler in the form of improved facilities, improved services or in any other way. It is important that anyone interested should write Tom Craddick, local representative in the state legislature, and express his views.

Player travels long road

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

MAMARONECK, N.Y. -Gary Player has traveled the longest road in sports.

"I'm closing in on 6 million miles — more than any other athlete has ever traveled," the little veteran from South Africa said.

That long, long road has produced victories on every continent — "127 around the world," Player said — and made him a wealthy man.

He's collected checks in yen and rand, pounds and dollars, cruzieros and francs, lira and pesos. In 28 years of forays into the United States he has taken some $1.7 million from the American tour alone.

"And that's a very small part of the world-wide winnings," said Player, who lives on a sprawling ranch outside Johannesburg.

HE'S 48, and has been honored around the world. In his homeland, his portrait has appeared on postage stamps. He's a member of golf's Hall of Fame. He's won almost everything there is to win, including three British Opens, the 1965 U.S. Open, three Masters and two PGA titles.

He is one of only four men (Jack Nicklaus, Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen are the others) to make a career sweep of the four titles that make up the game's recognized major championships.

His mark has been made, large and bold, in the game's history. His place is secure.

BUT ONE major goal remains for the doughty little man.

"I would like to win another U.S. Open. That is my one big, remaining ambition," Player said before a practice round for the 84th American national championship that begins Thursday at Winged Foot.

Such a victory, Player pointed out, would complete a double sweep of the Big Four titles, a feat accomplished only by Nicklaus.

"It would be a tremendous achievement," Player said.

And, after 33 seasons as a globe-trotting tourist, after three years as a non-winner, Player feels he retains the game and the ability to win in the most important tournament in this country.

"I haven't played very well for a couple of years because I haven't played very much," said Player, who now spends an increasing amount of time at home in South Africa.

"If I lived in the United States, it might be different. I'd probably have played more. But going back and forth to South Africa five or six times a year ..." He let the sentence trail off, unfinished.

"And I do so love my ranch. I love to be with my family. And when I'm home, I don't want to play golf, or practice.

"For years, for many yers, I'd practice daily. I made it a point to be the last man to leave the practice area.

"You get out of this game what you put into it.

Cubs not alone in trading off prime prospects

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

One of the main complaints of Midland Cub fans is that the Chicago Cubs trade away their farm grown produce. Actually, it's a complaint common to many organizations. Even the San Diego Padres, who have more familiar faces on the major league roster, than perhaps any other Texas League club, aren't entirely happy.

Beaumont pitcher Jim Leopold responded to the praise that the Padres seem to stick with their own with the observation that "the reason Mark Gillaspie (last year's MVP in the Texas League) is back with the Gators this year is Carmelo Martinez."

Martinez is a player San Diego acquired in a trade from Chicago last year and is a former Midland Cub.

"There has been a lot of that and it's unsettling to players coming up in the organization," said Leopold. "They got Terry Kennedy, Steve Garvey, Graig Nettles, Rich Gossage in trades. It seemed that after Ray Kroc, the organization switched away from its farm system and starting trading."...

•••

Mike Brumley, the former University of Texas shortstop, couldn't have been happier to return to Texas after starting the season at New Britain in the Eastern League.

Brumley, a No. 2 draft choice of the Boston Red Sox, after helping the Longhorns to the College World Series title last year, was part of the Bill Buckner-Dennis Eckersley trade.

"It's a good league," Brumley said of the Eastern, "but it's mostly American League teams and the weather early in the year is pretty bad."

It was pointed out by the interviewer that he heard the temperature for opening night in Burlington, Vt., was in the low 30s, even though more than 4,000 fans showed up. "That's right," agreed Mike. "I was there. And the next night we played even though it was 11 degrees and snowing."

Brumley, who hails from Oklahoma City, although he spent last winter in Austin, doesn't know whether or not he is related to Bob Brumley, who played football at Rice around 1940. "I have an uncle I don't know much about and they say he played football, but...."...

One reason, Brumley, a shortstop in college after starting out as an outfielder, is playing the outfield again is Shawon Dunston, baseball's No. 1 draft choice two years ago, right out of high school. But don't get the idea that Shawon is blase about it all.

"I played with Chicago three weeks in spring training," he relates. "I started one game against California and caught a pop fly hit by Reggie. I wanted to keep the ball, but the umpires made me give it back."...

After a start in which he was plagued by nagging injuries, Shawon seems to be getting his game together. Currently, he has a 10-game hitting streak going.

•••

The other night with Cub Manager George Enright, pitching coach Glenn "Goose" Gregson and roving batting coach Cal Emery in the Cubs Stadium manager's cubbyhole, the ultimate trivia question was asked, "Who was the MVP in the 1957 College World Series?"

From the blank looks, it was feared no one would get the answer. Finally, "It was me," Cal admitted, "but how did you know?"

As a pitcher for Penn State, Emery beat St. John's 1-0 at Ebbets Field and then the next day be Manhattan with his bat in the regional finals.

In the CWS, he beat Texas as a pitcher and then won a couple of games with his bat, although Penn State didn't win the series. "The next year, the coach tried to hide me," recalls Emery. "He wouldn't let me do anything but pitch. He thought we had a good chance to win it all in my junior year, but I got an offer and signed a pro contract anyway."....

A year ago, Ray Soff was 4-3-2 with a 6.84 era for Midland in relief. This year, he started out in the bullpen, but has developed into one of the Cubs' most reliable starters. The Riga, Mich., righthander is 2-1, but there is no telling what his won-lost record might be if he hadn't been sidelined with arm problems for several weeks.

The lone defeat came in a 1-0 game against San Antonio in which he allowed only two hits.

"It nothing new for Ray," says Enright. "Before last year he was a starter for two years."...

•••

Third baseman Tony Woods, just back from Mesa, Ariz., after rehabilitation for a broken wrist, says games were played at 9 a.m. to avoid the 110 degree heat in the Phoenix area. Cubs in extended spring training at Mesa play against the Indians, Giants, A's and Mariners, who also have clubs at Mesa...

Scuba week kickoff attracts 50 divers

BY RODNEY RIEHLE

Super Scuba Weekend attracted some 50 divers to Lake Amistad during the kick off of National Scuba Week, June 11-18, last weekend.

Among the highlights were the Advanced Open Water courses, the new Rescue Diver course and an underwater treasure hunt. Topping it all off was Dr. Boyd's famous chicken barbeque.

The event was sponsored by the Sport Diving Services of Midland, Concho Divers of San Angelo and Amistad Scuba Club of Del Rio. John Hvasta of Dacoe Corp. presented the prizes for the underwater treasure hunt.

Winners were: 1. Tony Adkins, Sonora. 2. Deni Smith, Austin. 3. Jo McManus, San Angelo. 4. Cliff Yeary, Pampa. Steve Stekbeck, San Angelo, and John Kobell, Midland, also took home prizes.

Dave Wheeler of the Midland YMCA says plans are being made for a similar event for the Labor Day weekend. Meanwhile, scuba instruction continues at the YMCA with several field trips planned during the summer...

ANGLERS WILL have a chance to hook $60,000 worth of fish at the Coors-Rehab Fishing Fiesta in San Angelo June 23. During the wee hours of the morning, Adolph I and II and Herman I and II and Joe I and II—three tagged bass and three tagged catfish worth $10,000 each—will be turned loose, one in each of San Angelo's lakes. All a fisherman has to do to claim a $10,000 check is to purchase a $10 benefit ticket prior to 7 a.m. June 23, catch one of the tagged fish by 5 p.m., present it to the Fishing Fiesta headquarters at Goodfellow Recreation Camp on Lake Nasworthy by 6 p.m. and collect the money...

AUSTIN BOAT mechanic Charlie Meyers figured the best way to catch a big fish is to go where they've been caught before. But he was not prepared to deal with the 37½ pound striped bass which hit his shallow-running crankbait in Lake Austin, just below the Mansfield dam.

The big striper he fought to the bank was only 12 inches shy of the current state record striper, which was caught in almost exactly the same spot in 1981.

"I couldn't believe I was able to bring it in," said Meyers, who waged his battle with a 12-pound test line. "The biggest fish I ever caught before was only 3½ pounds, so I was really in new territory."

SOME 42 million adults and 12 million youths go fishing each year in the U.S. According to the National Wildlife Federation, 31 per cent are women. About 36 million Americans fish in fresh water and 63 per cent of those in manmade lakes, ponds and reservoirs; 40 percent fish in natural lakes and ponds and 43 per cent in rivers and streams.

Twelve million Americans fish in salt water and 55 per cent of those fish "surf and shore", 37 percent in the deep sea; and 43 per cent in the saltwater sounds, bays and tidal inlets and streams.

About two million anglers go ice fishing each year while an estimated 400,000 go spear fishing; 300,000 use a bow and arrow and a million go gigging for frogs.

"I'd played pretty well for quite a while, but it seemed someone was always shooting 64 or 65 at me in the last round to keep me from winning," Nicklaus said.

"This time, someone did something (Andy Bean missed two short putts) that allowed me to win. Maybe it's not the way I'd like to win, but winning is important. It's important for the confidence."

And Nicklaus, now 44, comes into the 84th U.S. Open as a winner

Moyers explores autos

DETROIT (AP) — At a time when the U.S. auto industry faces an uncertain future, it pays to reflect on how the car, perhaps as much as any invention, changed the people, the landscape and even the soul of America.

In the latest program in his series "A Walk Through the 20th Century," Bill Moyers explores the automobile, from its birth as a coughing, kicking horseless carriage to a dream machine of modern suburbia.

The installment, entitled "America on the Road," will be broadcast tonight on most public television stations.

Moyers, a commentator on the "CBS Evening News" and co-anchor with Charles Kuralt on CBS' "American Parade," looks at the car and America as an inseparable unit and from a broad perspective. There are no in-depth examinations of any single event or character from automotive history.

Instead, the production is like flipping through the pages of an illustrated history book that we have read before. But Moyers pulls this off with urbane comments, tying together the program well as he takes us from one automotive era to another.

We see Ransom Olds and the first auto assembly plant and Henry Ford, his Tin Lizzie and the effects of his revolutionary $5 daily wage.

"In one stroke," Moyers says, "Ford doubled manufacturing wages and turned his workers into consumers of their very own product. You have to wonder what Karl Marx would have thought about the mobility of the masses."

Detroit's products are at first a curiosity — and, Moyers adds, a pollution-control device of sorts. Cars, he says, helped rid America of "millions of pounds of manure and thousands of gallons of horse urine (that) were left daily on city streets. ...

"In just a few years, the car was changing society. No other invention had so shaken up traditional living patterns in so short a time — moving the old boundaries, taking the city to the country and the country to the city and giving women access to a much larger world," Moyers says.

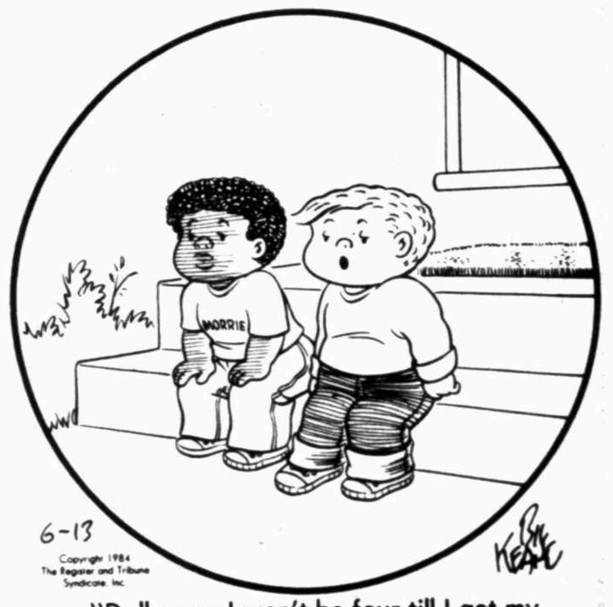

Auto executives are fond of mentioning that today's technological products, such as computer microchips, also have an important customer in the auto industry.

It was not the auto alone that became part of the American fabric, Moyers tells us. It was the making of autos as well, a point worth noting as America in the 1980s decides whether it wants to retain its basic industries.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West

2 ♡	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

This hand gave rise to a problem that appeared in the May issue of our new publication, the "Goren Bridge Letter." Cover up the East and West hands, and tackle the problem as those readers saw it.

Over North's reverse bid of two hearts, South showed a minimum two-over-one response and a stopper in the unbid suit by bidding two no trump. North saw no reason to look for any other game.

West led the queen of spades, and declarer was about to play low from dummy reflexly, so that he could win the king and take the diamond finesse, when he wisely paused to count his tricks. He had five sure tricks in the major suits, so he needed only four in the minors. If either minor suit broke 3-2, declarer could set up four tricks by tackling that suit. But he would have to guess which suit to tackle, and there was no guarantee that either suit would behave. What if both suits split 4-1?

After some thought, declarer discovered a safety play that would handle even that distribution. He won the ace of spades on the table, cashed the ace of diamonds and led a diamond toward his queen.

If both defenders followed, there was no problem. If East showed out on the second diamond lead, the queen would force the king and West's ten of diamonds would be exposed to a finesse to assure four tricks in the suit. If East had four diamonds to the king, he could not rise with the monarch without setting up the suit for South.

As the cards lay, East was forced to play low and declarer's queen won. But now that he had two tricks in diamonds, he needed only two more for his contract. So declarer abandoned the diamond suit and switched to a club to the king. No matter how the cards were divided, he could not be prevented from scoring two tricks in that suit for his contract.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Wheat, corn prices unlikely to improve

AGRICULTURE

AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — A new supply-and-demand analysis by the Agriculture Department shows that wheat and corn prices stand little chance of improving in the coming year if current harvest indications are borne out.

Looking at the livestock situation, the department's Economic Research Service said Tuesday that total meat output is expected to be around 54.1 billion pounds, up slightly from last month's estimate but still nearly 2 percent below the 1983 level.

Poultry producers, however, are boosting output in response to higher market prices this spring, the report said.

One reason for the pessimistic price outlook for wheat is the huge world supply, created in part by bumper U.S. harvests in recent years — and the 1984 wheat harvest, which is now under way in southern areas, also could be huge.

Based on current projections, 1984 total U.S. wheat output could be about 2.53 billion bushels, up from 2.43 billion bushels in 1983. That would make this year's wheat harvest the third largest on record.

The new projection of 2.53 billion bushels was down slightly from 2.55 billion bushels indicated by a similar analysis on May 10. There was some decline in winter wheat prospects since then.

Overall, wheat prices at the farm are expected to average $3.20 to $3.50 per bushel nationally in 1984-85, unchanged from last month's prediction. In the wheat marketing year that ended on May 31, prices averaged $3.50 per bushel, down from $3.55 in 1982-83.

When the new wheat marketing year began on June 1, the United States had a wheat inventory of about 1.39 billion bushels left over from previous harvests. That was a decline from the record level of 1.54 billion bushels in the carryover a year ago.

But if the 1984 harvest turns out as now predicted, the wheat carryover on June 1, 1985, could rise again to about 1.45 billion bushels, although still short of the record level.

The 1984 corn crop, which farmers are just now winding up planting, was projected at nearly 7.93 billion bushels, based on trends in yields and a normal growing season. That was up from 7.78 billion bushels projected on May 10 and would be nearly 90 percent more than the skimpy 4.2 billion bushels harvested in 1983.

Corn prices for the crop marketing year that will begin Oct. 1 were projected at $2.60 to $3.05 per bushel, compared to $3.25 forecast for 1983-84.

The Oct. 1 corn carryover was projected at 520 million bushels, down from a record 3.14 billion bushels last fall. But a bumper harvest this fall could replenish part of supply and lead to a buildup to about 1.25 billion bushels by Oct. 1, 1985, the report showed.

Outlook projections for other major U.S. crops such as soybeans, rice and cotton were mostly unchanged.

Beef production "has been slighly larger than expected this spring," the report said. "Unfavorable grazing conditions in some parts of the country have resulted in higher-than-anticipated level of beef cow slaughter. Fed-cattle marketings also have been a little larger."

Also, pork output has been more than predicted earlier, although production still is expected to be down from year-earlier levels during the second half of 1984.

"Broiler producers have responded to good returns this year by increasing output," the report said. "Chicks hatched this spring have been up from a year ago and the increases suggest that summer broiler production may exceed last month's expectations."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is expected to harvest 190 million metric tons of grain this year, down slightly from 1983 but still the second-largest output in six years, according to the Agriculture Department.

Helms says bill would be 'time bomb'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee says a civil rights bill pending before Congress would be a "legislative time bomb" that could require farmers, as recipients of federal aid, to comply with federal civil rights laws.

Committee Chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C., hosted a hearing Tuesday where a half dozen witnesses said the bill is too ambigious and would allow federal courts free rein in deciding who is covered by the law. One witness said the bill could result in farmers having to install ramps for the handicapped.

"This piece of legislation, as written, would be just a legislative time bomb for any federal judge around the country to tamper with," said Helms.

The bill is sponsored in the Senate by Robert Packwood, R-Ore., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and 54 other Senators. It is aimed at reversing a February ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court which said Grove City College in Pennsylvania could not be denied all its federal funds because one of its programs was discriminatory.

A House version of the bill has been approved by two committees and is awaiting floor action.

Packwood "can't understand all this resistance to guaranteeing American civil rights," said Packwood's press secretary, Etta Fielek, after the hearing.

Proponents of the legislation say the court's decision seriously diluted enforcement of civil rights laws and say their bill would restore those laws to their previous effectiveness — and no more.

But witnesses told Helms the bill would expand coverage of the civil rights laws by replacing the language "such program or activity" with the word "recipients" of federal aid.

That language, said U.S. Agriculture Department counsel Daniel Oliver, "is sufficiently ambiguous to leave unresolved whether or not a farmer is a recipient under the definition in the bill."

Charles C. Rice, a Notre Dame University law professor, said the measure could become a "back-door ERA" by allowing the term "recipient" to be broadly defined by the courts as virtually all-inclusive.

Said Gordon Jones, vice president of the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think-tank, "Under this bill, (the Department of Housing and Urban Development) could enforce its regulations pertaining to architectural barriers to the handicapped against a farmer operating with federal loans, guarantees, or protected by commodity marketing orders."

Turkey production slowing, agency says

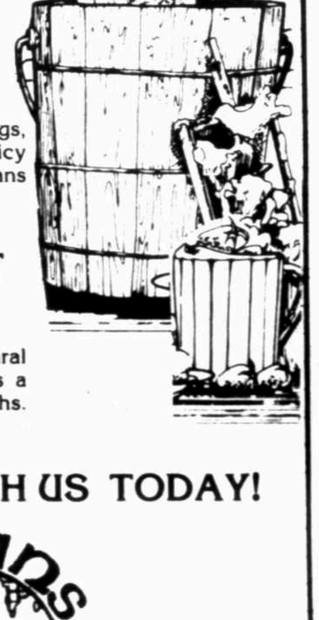

WASHINGTON (AP) — Turkey production is slowing down, according to new hatchery statistics by the Agriculture Department.

As of June 1, the department's Crop Reporting Board said Tuesday, there were 27.1 million turkey eggs in incubators. That was down 2 percent from a year earlier.

But meanwhile, the report said, the actual placement of poults in May rose 1 percent from a year earlier to 21.1 million young birds.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Water half of body weight

Dear Dr. Solomon: How much water does the body of the average person contain? — Jo, N.Y.C.

Dear Jo: From 50 to 60 percent of the body weight of the average adult consists of water, with men generally having more water than women.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My niece was on a diet that included the use of lecithin, and then she became pregnant and her obstetrician told her to stop using the lecithin. I assume that it must be bad for the mother or the baby or both. Do you have any information on this? — Mrs. E.P., York, Pa.

Dear Mrs. P.: There is some evidence that the use of lecithin during pregnancy may lead to neurologic damage to the baby. Dr. Joanne Bell of the Duke University Medical Center has reported that experiments on rats show that lecithin retards the development of the offspring, such as their ability to learn how to walk.

Lecithin does have a positive side, and some researchers are exploring its use in the treatment of patients with memory disorders, such as are found in people with Alzheimer's disease. But the animal studies by Dr. Bell are a warning against its use by women during their child-bearing years.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine went on the Dolly Parton diet and lost several pounds in three weeks. Do you recommend this diet for your own patients? I am anxious to try it but I would first like to hear your opinion of it. — Melissa, Montgomery, Ala.

Dear Melissa: The Dolly Parton diet is a nutritionally unbalanced diet, and I would not recommend any nutritionally unbalanced diet for my patients. The reason your friend lost some weight is probably because he or she reduced the intake of calories because the diet is so monotonous.

The question you should be asking is: How long can such a diet be continued? And what happens when your friend goes off the diet?

No weight reduction diet can be successful unless it includes foods that can be incorporated into a long-term diet with only minor modifications. I hope I'm wrong, but I predict that your friend will regain the lost weight as soon as he or he leaves the diet, which will have to happen sooner or later.

Dear Dr. Solomon: In one of your columns you wrote about the use ofgold treatments for people with rheumatoid arthritis. Can older people also get these treatments? Your continued help is appreciated. — Mr. F.P., Syracuse, N.Y.

Dear Mr. P.: Both older and younger patients with rheumatoid arthritis may benefit from gold therpay. The results of one study showed that patients 60 years of age and older responded to treatment pretty much the same as did patients 60 years of age.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband is a very physically active person, both on his job and when he has time off. He also gets a lot of muscle cramps. When I tell him to see a doctor, he says there is nothing that a doctor can do for muscle cramps. Is this true? If I thought he was right I would stop telling him to see a doctor. — Mrs. D.W., Seattle, Wash.

Dear Mrs. W.: Physical therapy, mineral supplements, or drugs, or some combination of these, may be helpful in the treatment of cramps. The specific treatment depends on the cause. I suggest that your husband follow your advice in this matter and see a physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you explain the difference between type I diabetes and type II diabetes? I've seen them both mentioned but I don't remember seeing an explanation of the difference between them, at least not an explanation that I can understand. — Ms. G.Y., Painesville, Ohio.

Dear Ms. Y.: Type I diabetes is also referred to as insulin-dependent diabetes; type II diabetes is noninsulin-dependent diabetes. In type I, the pancreas is unable to manufacture insulin; in type II, the amount of insulin manufactured is generally insufficient. Type II diabetes may occur at any age, but it is most commmon in individuals over 40 years of age.

Obesity is often a factor in the development of type II diabetes. Many of my patients who fall into this category have been able to avoid taking insulin simply by adopting a diet that permitted them to lose weight.

Dear Dr. Solomon: An uncle of mine has come down with tuberculosis. He is 68 years old. What is there about older people that makes them more likely to get tuberculosis than younger people? — Sue, Milton, Pa.

Dear Sue: It has been estimated that tuberculosis is responsible for about 15 percent of all lung infections among older people. According to Dr. Thomas T. Yoshikawa of the University of California, Los Angeles, School of Medicine, however, aging does not increase the risk of tuberculosis; rather, most cases represent a reactivation of disease that was acquired earlier during their lifetime.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother is in her upper 80s and reads everything she can get her hands on. She is also a crossword puzzle fan and enjoys watching television. I'm afraid she is using her eyes too much and is straining them unnecessarily. I have suggested to her that she not use her eyes so much, but I don't know how much I should insist on this. Can I have your advice about the limits that should be placed on the use of eyes by older people in order to avoid future problems? — Mrs. O.G., Bakersfield, Calif.

Dear Mrs. G.: I don't understand why you feel that your mother is straining her eyes unnecessarily. Reading, crossword puzzles and television seem to me to be very appropriate uses of vision. Furthermore, the use of one's eyes has no effect on the strength of one's vision.

My advice would be not to insist that your mother curtail these activities. More power to her.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I play racketball regularly, and both my regular partner an I have sense enough to wear eyegards. But my partner was hit in the eye with a ball while he was wearing his eyeguards and he still suffered a severe bruise. Aren't these things supposed to protect against that type of injury? — Brent, Miami, Fla.

Dear Brent: First let me urge everyone who participates in a racket sport to wear an eye protector. As readers of this column know, I am all in favor of exercise, but there is no sense in risking serious injury that can easily be avoided while exercising.

As for eye protectors, studies have shown that those without lenses are helpful, but are still associated with a significent number of injuries. Possibly your partner was using such a protector.

I want to emphasize that participants in racket sports should use eye protectors, but the protectors can be effective only if they are the right kind and if they are worn, not left in the locker.

Anne Murray 'fan' jailed again

SPRING HILL, Nova Scotia (AP) — A farmer who had been convicted of harassing Canadian singer Anne Murray has been jailed for violating his parole by visiting her mother.

Robert Charles Kieling, of Blumenhof, Saskatchewan, was found guilty of parole violation in provincial court Tuesday.

Kieling, who claims the popular singer sends him secret love messages in her songs, has been in and out of trouble for several years for harassing her.

Police said Kieling visited Marian Murray's home in February, asking for the whereabouts of her daughter Anne, who was raised in Springhill but has lived in Toronto for several years. A warrant was issued for his arrest and police found him in the area a few weeks ago.

He was held in Amherst jail until June 4, when he pleaded innocent and was transferred to Springhill for trial. After his conviction, Kieling was sent to the Cumberland County Correctional Centre in Amherst until sentencing June 26.

Liberace

Thorson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man who unsuccessfully sued Liberace for lifetime support has filed a $36.2 million libel suit over a Newsweek magazine article in which the pianist said settling the support suit would have been "blackmail."

The lawsuit Scott Thorson filed Tuesday in Superior Court names Liberace; Newsweek; its parent company, The Washington Post; and Neal Karlen, who wrote the article in the magazine's May 7 issue.

Thorson, 25, was once Liberace's chauffeur and bodyguard. He claimed in an October 1982 lawsuit to have been Liberace's live-in lover for six years.

The section of Thorson's original suit seeking lifetime support was dismissed earlier this year, but allegations including assault and battery, wrongful ejection from Liberace's penthouse and conversion of property are pending.

Karlen's article quoted Liberace as saying: "I could have stopped the whole thing (the legal battle) before it started by paying off...but that would have been blackmail. And blackmail never ends."

"Blackmail is extortion, which is a crime," said Thorson's attorney, Michael Rosenthal. "They accuse Thorson of either attempting a crime or being a criminal, which is defamation per se."

Karlen and other officials at New York-based Newsweek did not answer their telephones after business hours. Liberace's attorney, Joel R. Strote, said he had not seen the suit and could not comment.

Spielberg

LONDON (AP) — Steven Spielberg, creator of the movies "E.T.," "Jaws" and "Raiders of the Lost Ark," says he'll make a film of the classic children's story "Peter Pan."

Spielberg, in London for the premiere of his latest film, "Indiana Jones and The Temple of Doom," said Tuesday that the story of the boy who never grew up would be his next project.

"This is the first real motion picture version of 'Peter Pan,' and I am really excited about it," Spielberg said.

Filming should begin in London next summer, and the movie is scheduled for release in 1986, Spielberg said.

A portion of the film's proceeds will go to London's Great Ormond Street Hospital for Sick Children, which was bequeathed the rights to "Peter Pan" by its author, the late J.M. Barrie.

"Moyers has strong roots and strong memories of Hugo," Moses said. "He likes to talk to people and he goes back there all the time."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Skater Dorothy Hamill lost jewelry worth $150,000 in a break-in at her West Los Angeles home, but her Olympic gold medal was left untouched, police said.

Miss Hamill, who won a gold medal in women's figure skating at the 1976 Olympics in Innsbruck, Austria, found panes broken on a sliding glass door when she returned home Saturday night, police said.

Missing were rings and necklaces worth about $150,000, police Detective Lee Kingsford said Tuesday.

No arrests have been made.

WASHINGTON (AP) — L. Bruce Laingen, the top U.S. diplomat in Iran during the hostage crisis, was hospitalized with head injuries after being struck by a car while bicycling, officials said.

Laingen spent the night at George Washington University Hospital, where he was listed in fair but stable condition, hospital spokesman Mark Bombaci said late Tuesday.

Laingen was charge d'affaires at the American embassy in Tehran when he and others on the staff were taken hostage for 444 days between November 1979 and January 1981. He is now vice president of the National Defense University at Fort McNair in Washington.

He was struck Tuesday evening when a car backed into him on the grounds of the fort, said Maj. Claude White of the Military District of Washington.

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Joseph Paul Franklin's trial on aggravated assault charges in the shooting that crippled Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt will depend on the outcome of a murder trial the avowed racist faces in Wisconsin, a prosecutor says.

Franklin, 34, who is serving life for killing two blacks, was indicted Tuesday by a grand jury on two counts of aggravated assault for the sniper shooting of Flynt and his lawyer, Gene Reeves, here on March 6, 1978. The attack came during a lunch break in Flynt's trial on charges of distributing obscene materials.

Gwinnett County District Attorney Bryant Huff said Tuesday he was "ready, willing and able to go forward with the case." But he said he would defer to Madison, Wis., authorities who want to try Franklin in the fall on murder charges in the shooting deaths of a biracial couple.

Council OKs drilling ordinance amendment

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

A hole in a drilling ordinance was plugged up Tuesday when the Midland City Council adopted an amendment to regulate drilling of wells located between 467 to 1,320 feet from a structure.

The original ordinance regulating wells being drilled within city limits, and especially near residences, was written in January after an oil company began drilling in northeast Midland.

Don Sparks of Discovery Operating had told the council at its May 22 meeting there was no clear-cut rule on what applied between 467 and 1,320 feet. The amendment "allows the council to waive requirements depending on the circumstances of the well. We may want to have all requirements or none of them," said Mayor G. Thane Akins.

Those waivers include putting up an eight-foot cyclone fence around the site during the drilling procedure, installing a steel slush pit and eliminating a watchman when the crew is gone. Beyond 1,320 feet, a drilling contractor doesn't have to follow these requirements, said Akins, but they are automatically required if drilling less than 467 feet from a structure.

BEFORE THE amendment was passed, Akins noted that 1,320 feet was about a quarter of a mile and the intention of the fences was to keep children out of a drilling site. "Kids go more than a quarter of a mile. As a kid, I was even known to go half a mile," said the mayor with a smile.

The council followed Sparks' request to defer taking action on his permit for an oil well site in Adobe Meadows Addition, about 1,000 feet west of Fairgrounds Road and 150 feet north of Mockingbird Lane. By waiting until after the amendment is put into effect, he wouldn't need to follow the same requirements as if it were within the 467 foot limit.

In other action, the council approved going ahead with a new heating and air conditioning system at Midland Regional Airport, rejected bids on a drainage channel improvement, established two-hour parking near Midland Memorial Hospital and allowed a party pony inside certain city parks.

The council had considered repairing the airport's heating and air conditioning system, but consultants contended it needs to be replaced. Deputy City Manager Fred Poe said it will cost about $800,000 to $1 million for a new system, and the consulting engineers hired Tuesday will write up the plans and specifications for seeking bids.

ALTHOUGH A representative of MMH wanted the council to wait before putting in two-hour parking meters on Ohio and M streets, the council opted for the requests of Dr. Dorothy Wyvell and other physicians along those streets. Practicing in the same location for 34 years, Ms. Wyvell said she and other physicians had problems with hospital employees parking in front of their offices all day while parents had to carry sick children several blocks to the doctors' offices.

Dale Miller with MMH said the hospital had just opened a two-story parking garage and officials wanted more time to advertise it to their employees "and to do a feasibility study as to what it would do to us to lose those (on-street) spaces."

"I guess I'm not following you," said Akins. "I would think if your parking lot was empty these signs would help fill it up."

Miller said, "We want a chance to get the people off the streets and into the garage."

"I think we're fixing to help you fill up the garage," said Councilman David Godfrey.

"If it fills up, they might take the visitor parking," Miller said.

"But Dr. Wyvell shouldn't have to furnish you parking," Godfrey continued. "I suggest we pass the ordinance and you can do your study."

ALTHOUGH THE Parks and Recreation Commission had turned down the proposal, the council overruled to let Debbie Nobles operate a party pony in city parks provided she gets $1 million in liability insurance.

She told the council she has a "tiny horse" she takes to children's birthday parties, and some mothers want to have the party in city parks.

The mayor said Ms. Nobles' request wasn't onerous, but he was leery of "the foot in the door. The parks are not designed for commercial operations."

Godfrey countered that rock concerts had been allowed in city parks, "and that's a lot more onerous in my mind. As for a horse, it would be on a leash." He suggested the one-year permit and Councilman Bart Hotchkiss added the requirement for $1 million liability insurance.

The city had estimated it would cost $80,000 to dig out the Northwest Drainage Channel from Ward to I Street and pour a concrete ribbon in the bottom, but the bid came in at $240,000. The council rejected it and decided the street department could do the job for $76,000.

The council also approved a letter agreement to pay Quantitative Sciences Corporation $9,600 to correct data processing reporting problems associated with the Municipal Garage, agreed to a plat of Grassland Estates that would include a parkway which the city would maintain in exchange for five acres next to a school site for a park, and gave the go-ahead on a stop sign at Chapel Hill and Bluebird Lane and a loading zone on Colorado Street for Eagle Property Ltd.

Golfers teed off at proposal to raise fees

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The golfers took a few swings and the Midland City Council ducked when the issue of raising fees at Hogan Park Golf Course came up for play at the council's Tuesday meeting.

It wasn't the idea of raising the fees that upset the golfers who showed up in the City Hall Council Chambers, but the fact they were doubling the membership dues and raising the green fees to a point that is higher than other area cities. They also argued the course is in bad shape.

he council deferred, giving the Parks and Recreation Director and golfers a chance to scratch out a compromise.

Gum has helped some smokers kick the habit

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

It may taste like a stale cigarette butt, but a prescription drug recently introduced in the United States may help smokers who really want to quit kick the habit.

Available in Midland for the past two months, Nicorette, a nicotine-based chewing gum, has produced favorable results for patients who have laid down their cellophane packs so far, according to some Midland physicians. "But the jury is still out as far as long-term (cessation)," Dr. Paul A. Talboys cautioned.

Each piece of gum contains 2 milligrams of nicotine, which is thought to be what causes addiction, while "the average American cigarette delivers about one milligram of nicotine," according to Dr. Tulsi Dyal Singh. The nicotine is absorbed through the lining of the mouth instead of passing through the lungs.

"THE DIFFERENCE in using the gum is only 90 percent of it is absorbed and it is absorbed over a longer period of time," Singh said.

Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, manufacturers of Nicorette, recommend chewing one piece of gum whenever the urge to have a cigarette hits. The gum should be chewed slowly until the flavor or a slight tingling in the mouth is experienced. Then the person should stop chewing until he or she wants a cigarette again.

Because the nicotine in the gum is released only through chewing, the person trying to stop smoking will receive the nicotine he or she needs without the "peaks," which studies show cause the addiction, Singh said.

"When you smoke a cigarette, in addition to the nicotine, you get tar, the cancer-forming agent, and irritants, which produce the bronchial smoking cough, and an additional amount of inhaled carbon monoxide (from the burning of the cigarette which has an effect on the cardiovascular system)," Singh said.

"We're giving, first of all, a smaller overall dose of nicotine at lower levels. It satisfies the dependence of nicotine and prevents withdrawal symptoms," Singh said. "This gives the patient a chance to break the habit and not have to worry about the withdrawal symptoms at the same time. It breaks the problem into two portions."

The blaze started in the kitchen, but the cause was undetermined. The occupant of the home was Sharon Grimes. Nine fire department units responded to the call and firemen used 1,750 gallons of water bringing the fire under control. There were no injuries.

Odessa council asks Minor to resign until suit resolved

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Mayor John Minor was publicly asked by fellow city council members to step down Tuesday until he has settled his lawsuit against the city.

Councilman Nicky Sheets asked Minor to withdraw from office until the suit against the city has been brought to a conclusion, with the suggestion being supported during the meeting by Councilwoman Melissa Hirsch and afterward by Councilmen Vern Foreman and Sherman Cox. The fifth council member, Thomas Perkins, was absent, as he has been from nearly every meeting since his April re-election.

Sheets questioned Minor's ability to preside over the council, while his suit against the city continues. The mayor sued the city in December 1983 after the council voted to fire him after 10 years as municipal court administrator.

The suit asks that Minor be reinstated as court administrator, reimbursed for wages and other benefits he lost during the time he was unemployed, and that the city pay for his attorney.

John Minor

"It's been kind of a joke with other cities that the mayor is suing himself," said Sheets at the conclusion of a regularly scheduled meeting.

Ms. Hirsch, a private attorney, recalled from personal experience that dismissal of a lawsuit takes less than 30 minutes. "I really don't know what's the hold up," she said.

After the meeting had adjourned, Cox said he was "wholeheartedly" in agreement with Ms. Hirsch and Sheets.

Foreman, who as mayor pro-tem would take over for Minor should the mayor decide to temporarily step down, stated in a previous meeting that the lawsuit should be settled or dropped.

"I don't understand his reluctance to drop it," said Foreman.

"I think it would be better for everyone concerned if the lawsuit would be brought to some end," he said, suggesting that settlement might be acceptable if the case warranted a compromise.

Sheets said Minor had assured him before the two were elected that the lawsuit would be dropped after his election as mayor, but Minor did not recall making this promise. In response to Sheets' comments, the new mayor said he would not resign and that the suit would "hopefully be resolved in the near future."

Minor's attorney, Robert Evans of Midland, said the suit was in pretrial discovery stages. "I don't know what he wants to do," said Evans. "We will probably dismiss it, but that's some time in the future."

The council had gone into executive session, before reopening the portion of the meeting set aside for "recognition of visitors and items for discussion not on the agenda." After discussion of one other item, Sheets made his suggestion.

Minor said, "In the back room we talked and came to some kind of an agreement" that the council should "demonstrate some unity some of the others don't feel we've had" and suggested he was surprised by Sheets' comments.

Council members have criticized the formation of two task forces without their approval or input, but Minor maintained "I'm not working around the city government whatsoever."

Sheets' suggestion marks the third publicized attempt to relieve Minor of the office he has held approximately two months.

Public outcry began after an incident May 25 in which police were called to the home of the mayor's former girlfriend after Minor reportedly forced his way into the residence and was involved in a struggle with another man.

Citizens studied the possibility of recalling Minor the next week, but were stifled by the city charter, which apparently made it impossible to engineer a recall election because too few voters had gone to the polls in deciding the mayoral race.

Nicky Sheets

Since this effort has been stalled, another group has commissioned an Odessa attorney to research legal ways around the charter provisions. Along with questions on the legality of a provision which made the recall an impossibility, attorney Royal Caswell is researching whether it is legal — as is called for in the charter — to force voters to sign affidavits telling their choice in the election.

Minor was fired by the city after a disagreement involving control of the city's warrants division, which began when City Marshal Pat Trout was dismissed by the council after the city learned he was under federal investigation for his alleged involvement with stolen cars.

Two warrant division officers — Roy Gladden and Troy Davis — suspended by the police department since late 1983, were offered reinstatement Monday, but declined.

Their attorney has maintained since their suspension that neither officer was part of the continuing stolen car investigation, but the police department had insisted the suspensions would stand until investigation involving them had been completed. Both testified May 23 before the federal grand jury in Midland.

Following Sheets' request that he step down, Minor commented on the two officers being offered their jobs back. "My only concern at this point is which agency has been untruthful about this investigation," he said.

Minor has denied any involvement in the Trout investigation.

MISD trustees approve tax exemption for homeowners

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Midland school trustees approved a 10 percent tax exemption for homeowners Tuesday. The exemption is in addition to the $5,000 exemption mandated by the state.

"The exemption will help cushion the effects of increased property values for homeowners," said Dr. Joseph Baressi, MISD superintendent. "The average homestead increase was about 30 percent" while for other properties it was about 20 percent, he said. "So this exemption gets it back into balance."

A preliminary study of the 1984-85 budget indicated that it would be 5.24 percent larger than last year. Most of the increase would be due to increased salaries, said Baressi, but they could go up even further if the special legislative session on education acts to increase teacher salaries.

The trustees also heard a summary of the 1983-84 California Achievement Test results which showed MISD students continuing to score above the national average in the three areas covered (reading, language and mathematics). The test was given to grades 1-9, and to 10th graders who had scored below the 50 percent range on their basic skills tests.

"The report is a positive one. All our grades are above the national norm," said Dr. Duane Moore, assistant superintendent.

But the results, though still above the national average, weren't as impressive as last year, and several trustees expressed concern.

"I have some concern because reading scores across the board didn't show the improvement we've had (in recent years)," said Board President Parker Humes.

But Baressi said the statistics for each school couldn't easily be compared with last year's results, because many students were attending different schools.

"This year was a unique year," he said.

Baressi also said MISD scores may have improved to the point where large annual gains are more difficult to achieve.

"Our scores still indicate that Midland schools at every level are doing better than average — but not necessarily each grade year to year," said Moore. But even though he contends that the scores were good, "We accept the challenge to do even better than we're doing."

In other action, the trustees:

— Passed on first reading a number of policy revisions designed to bring MISD policies into line with the new, tougher state guidelines mandated by chapter 75 of the Texas Education Code. (Final action on these policies will be taken at the next board meeting.)

— Accepted the additions to the Rusk Elementary School. The $447,961 project, which included seven new classrooms, was funded by a 1982 bond issue.

— Accepted $24,000 in private donations which put MISD over the top in matching a $100,000 challenge grant from an anonymous local foundation for the purchase of instructional computers. The contributions included $10,000 from the Junior League of Midland, $5,000 from Gulf Oil and $5,000 from Mobil Oil.

— Heard a summary of MISD's performance in the 1983-84 Texas Assessment of Basic Skills Tests, which Baressi said may become part of the graduation requirement in future years.

— Accepted bids for uniforms for auxiliary employees, science materials for freshman biology classes and armored delivery service.

GOLF

The council had been scheduled to approve on final reading a proposal raising daily green fees by $1.50 to $9, and the membership dues from $300 a year up to $600. Senior citizens dues would go from $75 to $150.

Teeing off first was Charlie Coleman who pointed out golfers received no receipt nor was there any registration system at Hogan Park to keep track of the number of players. The course, he added, needs professional maintenance.

George Logan, parks and recreation director, had told the council the increased fees would go to build another nine holes, making it a 36-hole golf course.

Councilman David Godfrey pointed out to Coleman that revenues from Hogan Park are covering about 60 percent of the cost to maintain it, and that was another reason for raising the fees.

"People can walk on that course without paying. There's no receipt given. If we pay $10 to $11 for green fees, we should get a receipt," Coleman said.

During the summer, he can play a maximum of about twice a week and the annual membership fee doesn't make it as much of a bargain for him as for others, he added. He noted that Andrews has a golf course "that doesn't even compare to Midland."

Part of the problem with Hogan Park, according to Councilman Gordon Marcum II, is that numerous area players come to Midland to play because their towns, such as Odessa, have no municipal course.

Logan cited statistics which showed Hogan Park has an average of 283 rounds a day played on it. On Memorial Day, about 750 rounds were played.

Godfrey pointed to other associations, such as softball, girls softball and soccer, which have raised money to build their own projects, including playing fields. He suggested the four Hogan Park golfing associations — mens, women's, black and chicano — come up with similar fund-raising ideas.

Logan agreed to meet with these four groups at the golf clubhouse before the council's June 19 meeting. He agreed the course needs two spotters and a marshal to keep out people trying to sneak in and play without paying and to keep golfers to a schedule.

Bob Salcedo suggested keeping the membership fees at $300 but adding a user fee, such as $1.50 or $2, whenever a member played. Accordingly, a member who didn't play often payed less, and members who used the course several times a week payed more. "People can't fork over $600 at one time," he said.

Bob Walker said the $600 fee isn't worth the money and area courses were cheaper. Abilene, where he played last week, charged $6 on the weekend and $4 during the week.

Jesse Moreno told the council he now has to scrounge all year to pay his $300 membership fee. If they're raised to $600, he'll have to quit playing at Midland. Like Walker, Moreno has played at several other municipal courses and said Midland was charging the highest green fees.

Mayor G. Thane Akins said other courses, such as San Antonio or Houston, have easier maintenance and thus the lower fees. But Moreno countered by noting Big Spring's maintenance should be no different and that course's fee was only $4.50.

Councilman Jesse Hatfield added that the course only has one working water fountain.

After listening to the golfers' arguments, Akins said, "Maybe we didn't do our homework. We thought we were making it in line with other cities. We've got to do something to get the course in shape so it can be maintained throughout the year. We'll either have to reduce the play or build more holes."

GUM

LOCAL PHYSICIANS interviewed stressed a person must have the desire to quit for the prescription, approved by the Food and Drug Administration about six months ago, to work.

"It is not intended for casual use," Singh said. "It is only for the person who has decided he is ready and is prepared to make the sacrifice that is involved. This still is not going to be easy. This just makes it a little less of a problem."

But Dr. Joseph G. Rhode disagrees with the concept of a nicotine chewing gum, comparing it to candies that are supposed to satisfy smokers who are quitting, hypnosis and acupuncture.

"All are variations of the same thing," he said. "It is mainly the smoker assigning responsibilities (for quitting) anywhere except where it belongs — to themselves.

"My own experience is that nicotine is only one of a tremendous number of factors" that make smoking habit-forming, he said. "It deflects the whole point and I think that's the bottom line."

"The motivation factor is number one," said Dr. Patrick Y. Leung. Before coming to Midland, he had given it to patients in Canada since 1976 with a 65-70 percent success rate. "I prescribe it to a person when they have a (cancer or cardiovascular) disease and they come in and say, 'Hey, doctor, I need to quit.' If you do not want to quit, there's no need for Nicorette. It won't work."

"THE RESULTS back at this point are encouraging," Talboys said. "Of course, knowing human beings, we're all weak. You can go to a party and everyone's drinking...you get a little uninhibited and the next thing you know, you're puffing on a weed."

In Dr. Jesse L. Coleman's office, the few patients who returned for blood pressure checks after a couple of weeks of using the gum "were doing great." And in Dr. Christine D. deSoccaraz's office, the drug is being prescribed with good results and "is well-tolerated and accepted by the patients."

The drug has been available, over-the-counter in some countries, in Canada, Sweden, Switzerland and Great Britain, according to a press release from Walgreens, which distributes the gum. According to Singh, the product has been tested since 1973 with more than 1.2 million people in Europe. Singh said it is not recommended for pregnant or nursing patients or those with peptic ulcers or cardiovascular diseases. "And in those situations, we review the possible benefits against the risks."

The gum, with "negligible" caloric content, is available in packages of 96 for about $20, Singh said. The manufacturer recommends chewing no more than 30 pieces a day for a month, and then reducing the amount so that at the end of the 90-day period, the person is chewing only two or three pieces a day. It can, however, be used as an occasional means of support after the program.

"I'M GLAD they came out with it," Talboys said. "They've probably been trying to get it through for the past 10 years and I'd surmise the tobacco industry has lobbied against it...But at least (physicians) have something to work with. Patients would come in and say, 'What can you do?' and you'd say, 'Well, I can give you something for your nerves that will help stop the jitters.'"

Singh agreed: "It is not a cure. It is an aid. But I'm excited about it because in the past I have lectured my patients about the need and the importance of giving up smoking and many have asked me, 'Is there anything you can give to help me.' I've always had to say no. We are now in the position where we have something and some help to offer."

Godfrey to manage local Reagan re-election campaign

From Staff Reports

David Godfrey

David Godfrey has been named to coordinate President Reagan's re-election campaign in Midland County, according to Robert L. Monaghan, regional chairman for the Reagan-Bush '84 campaign.

Godfrey is a city councilman and an independent businessman who has been actively involved in several Republican Party activities. He is serving as Midland County chairman of Phil Gramm's senatorial campaign. He served as Midland County chairman of the Reagan-Bush campaign in 1980 and as campaign manager of Ernest Angelo's bid for the Texas State Senate in 1982.

U.S. Sen. John Tower, the president's campaign manager in Texas, said, "I am delighted David Godfrey has agreed to organize our campaign in Midland County and I am confident he will help us tell the tremendous success story of this administration.

"Because of President Reagan's strong leadership, our national defenses are being strengthened and our economy is growing again," Tower said. "The dramatic drop in inflation and lower taxes mean today, a Texas family earning $25,000 a year has $1,100 more in purchasing power."

Texas campaign co-chairman Martha Weisend added, "Our job in the Reagan-Bush '84 campaign is now to tell that success story in homes and schools and offices throughout this great state. Grassroots organization in all 254 Texas counties will allow us to do that.

"I am confident David Godfrey will help us meet our goal of identifying every potential voter for President Reagan and getting those voters to the polls in November."

Man tries to abduct teen-aged girl

From Staff Reports

Police are looking for a man who broke into an eastside home early this morning and attempted to abduct a teen-age girl.

According to reports, 14-year-old Michelle Rios was asleep in the living room of her grandfather's house at 1702 N. Main about 3:30 a.m. when she was awakened by a shirtless man silhouetted against the living room window.

The man put his hand over her mouth and attempted to drag her toward the back door when her screams awakened her mother, who was also asleep in the living room.

The man then ran out the back door and escaped on foot down the alley. The family was unable to provide a description of the intruder. There was no sign of forced entry, according to police.

In burglary complaints, Patsy Edens of 1011 W. Storey told officers $4,798 worth of jewelry was taken in a break-in at her residence Tuesday afternoon. Police said there was no sign of forced entry.

And Reed Ellis, 1608 Cimmaron, said furniture valued at $1,600 was taken from a storage unit at 3107 W. Industrial sometime in the past six weeks. Entry was gained by removing a padlock.

Education forum to be held

Several local and state officials are expected to attend a town hall meeting tonight to discuss education reform and funding being considered by the Texas Legislature this month in special session.

Midland will host the first of these statewide meetings at 7 p.m. today at San Jacinto Junior High, 1400 N. N St.

The public is invited.

Four Midlanders will be attending GOP convention

From Staff Reports

Four Midlanders were added to the list of delegates from Texas who will be attending the Republican National Convention in Dallas. These four were among the 28 at-large delegates selected Monday by a 13-member screening panel.

Chosen are GOP national committeeman and convention arrangements chairman Ernest Angelo Jr.; Lou Brown, former president of Texas Federation of Republican Women and a member of the national federation; Bob Monaghan, State Republican Executive Committeeman; and Bobby Holt, a member of the state Reagan-Bush finance committee.

Selected earlier was State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland.

Texas will send 109 delegates to the convention Aug. 20-23. Of these, 81 were chosen by local committees in each of the state's 27 congressional districts. Of the 109 delegates, 55 are women and 54 are men, one is black and 10 are Hispanic. In addition, there are 10 Hispanic and three black alternates.

Woman held in shooting

From Staff Reports

A woman was being held for questioning in the shooting of an Alpine man near a rest stop on Interstate-20 at the 141-mile marker east of Midland about 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Sheriff's investigators found the victim, 26-year-old Chester Gray, lying on the ground near his car suffering from a .38 caliber wound to the chest. He was in stable condition this morning at Midland Memorial Hospital.

A 32-year-old woman suspect, also of Alpine, remained in the county jail this morning, but investigators believe no charges will be filed against her. The shooting apparently resulted from a domestic argument.

Sellers divided on proposed 'sin' taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — Liquor and beer dealers say they won't like it but could live with proposed new "sin" taxes. Bartenders and cigarette sellers, however, say they can't.

Billy Hamilton

The House Ways and Means Committee, where any new tax bill will originate, took a preliminary look Tuesday at proposals of Gov. Mark White to increase levies on so-called luxury items.

Rep. Lee Jackson, R-Dallas, suggested the state comptroller might furnish a list of all the tax exemptions now enjoyed by "sin" taxes.

"I don't think the comptroller would be able to make up a list of just what is considered 'sin' in this state," Billy Hamilton, revenue estimator for Comptroller Bob Bullock, replied jokingly.

The governor has proposed to partially pay for public school improvements by increasing taxes on liquor, beer, wine and mixed drinks by 20 percent and increase the cigarette tax by 5 cents a pack.

Later the committee will hear more testimony when, and if, specific tax bills are prepared for debate.

Hamilton told the committee that cigarette tax collections are in a decline now, partly from the no-smoking drives and from recently increased federal taxes. He said beer tax collections are up slightly but bottle liquor sales are down. Mixed drink sales are up 8 to 9 percent and wine sales are ahead 10 percent.

"I don't see any real growth in the next few years in any of them except may mixed drink sales," Hamilton said.

Rep. Roy English, D-Arlington, said he would like to suggest a new "sin" tax — one on the subscription pornographic TV films being shown in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

"They pay nothing but a franchise tax at the local level and any sales taxes on equipment they buy," English said. "Can we put some sort of tax on them?"

"I assume if you can tax any service, you could tax them," said Hamilton.

Mike Hopkins, speaking for the Wholesale Beer Distributors of Texas, said he felt the beer industry was paying more than its share of taxes now, but "if we need more taxes, we believe the 20 percent is reasonable."

A spokesman for Coors beer agreed.

Mary Jo Carroll, Austin attorney representing Licensed Beverage Distributors of Texas, said liquor wholesalers warned that any increased tax on liquor would also affect other businesses.

"We are expecting a big federal tax increase also," she said. "Restraurants and hotels will be hurt by an increase in liquor taxes. Newspapers are anticipating the increase in cost because federal raises will decrease advertising at least 8 perecent.

"But if you have to have taxes to pay for education, I think our members will hold their nose and pay the 20 percent," she said.

Determined opposition to the governor's "sin" tax hikes came from sellers of mixed drinks and cigarette wholesalers.

Waggonner Carr, attorney for Associated Clubs of Texas, said increasing the gross receipts levy on sale of mixed drinks from 10 to 12 percent would be "unfair and inequitable...we're getting the double whammy."

Carr displayed a poster showing that a case of vodka, actual worth about $29, had $25 in federal excise taxes, $6 in state excise taxes and $55 from the gross receipts tax making a total of $86.

Executive: Poor schools may prevent boom

AUSTIN (AP) — Poor public schools could be the "Achilles' heel" that would prevent Texas from enjoying yet another economic boom, a high-tech executive has told legislators.

Bobby Ray Inman, a product of Texas public schools, said location of Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. in Austin has made the city a major research center, but he indicated manufacturing facilities would not necessarily follow.

Inman, president of MCC, the computer research consortium, told the Legislature on Tuesday there are at least a dozen states "that have very energetic programs underway to try to be that third or fourth great new center of manufacturing in this country."

When corporations try to decide where to put their manufacturing plants, "they are going to be very concerned about business climate but they're also going to look at the quality of the work force," Inman told a joint session of the House and Senate.

"Along with that strong (Texas) work ethic, is there going to be the base of knowledge to permit them to be trained rapidly to whatever level of technology is needed? My judgment is that's the Achilles' heel for the potential great economic boom for this state in yet a new area," he said.

(In Greek Mythology, Achilles was a leader of the Trojan War who was killed with an arrow that struck his only vulnerable spot, his heel.)

Inman also told legislators he was "inflamed" by a Republican billboard reminding voters that Democratic Gov. Mark White once promised not to raise taxes.

"Education is a bipartisan issue," said Inman, who described himself as a registered independent. "I've never endorsed a political candidate, and I don't plan to start. But I greatly admire Gov. Mark White's courage in coming to grips with the public education problem and the cost — no matter what he may have promised before. I was inflamed last night with some coverage about some ads focusing on taxes."

The billboard near the Capitol quotes White as saying in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram on Oct. 23, 1982, "There will be no new taxes for Texans when I am governor."

White now proposes a three-year $4.8 billion tax increase to improve public education and highways, and called a 30-day special session of the Legislature to consider it.

Bobby Inman

George Strake, chairman of the Texas Republican Party, said Monday the billboard was purchased by the GOP to "graphically demonstrate how (White) has broken this important promise."

Inman, a retired Navy admiral, said he had called around the state Tuesday and found that "old friends" such as former Republican Gov. Bill Clements and former state GOP chairman Peter O'Donnell "are out working to support the governor on this issue of reforming public education and on paying for it.

"It's a bipartisan issue that holds the future not only of the youngsters that are coming along but potentially of the nation. If this state rises to the occasion, it will provide the leadership this country must have in competing effectively at the international market place in the year 2000."

"I believe all of us need to set as a goal that we want a public education system that is in the top five in the country," Inman said. "That it takes us 10 years to get there is far less important than the goal, and I believe industry will bet on this state if they see the drive is there."

Dena Carter, 17, mother of 4½-month-old twins Chad, left, and Chase, is in a bitter custody battle with her husband Stan, also 17.

Judge orders twins to alternate between parents

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge who was overruled when he decided to divide twins between their divorcing teen-age parents has now ordered that the 4½-month-old, breast-fed babies spend alternate two-week periods with each parent.

The mother has gone back to court to fight the order, which would force the children to travel every two weeks between Houston and northeast Texas — a 500-mile round trip.

State District Judge Virgil Mulanax of Gilmer in northeast Texas touched off the latest round in a custody fight between Dena Denise Carter and her estranged husband, Stan, both 17.

Mrs. Carter's lawyers convinced the 12th Texas Court of Appeals in Tyler to block the judge's order until a June 21 hearing.

The battle for the twins, Chad Edward and Chase Edward, began Feb. 14 after Carter filed for divorce Feb. 14. Mrs. Carter dropped out of high school and moved to Houston with the infants to live with her parents.

In March, Mulanax decided each parent should have custody of one of the twins. But Mrs. Carter fought the ruling and it was suspended last month by the appeals court.

Then Mulanax issued his latest ruling, but Mrs. Carter is fighting it, too, arguing the two-week custody periods won't work. She said she must accompany the babies, who were born prematurely, because they must be breast-fed.

Mrs. Carter said she is taking classes two days a week to get her high school equivalency certificate and will have to drop out of school to comply with the ruling. She also said it would be an emotional strain to live with her in-laws during the visit to Big Sandy in northeast Texas.

Carter will be a senior next fall at Big Sandy High School.

Mrs. Carter's father, Houston police Officer Manuel Ortega, said Mulanax is a friend of Carter's parents and should be disqualified from the case. But a visiting judge from Dallas denied a disqualification motion filed by Mrs. Carter's lawyers.

Mulanax admitted he knows Carter's father, Ed, because they attended Texas A&M University. But the judge insisted they are only acquaintances.

The judge said he issued the two rulings because he believes the couple "is still in love and willing to reconcile."

But Mrs. Carter said she does not want to reconcile with her husband.

"Earlier, yes," she said. "But so much conflict has gone on that I don't care any more about him. He has showed me that he doesn't care."

Carter's attorney, Ric Freeman, called the order "reasonable" and said Mrs. Carter refused to let her husband see the twins.

"My biggest concern now is that I'm representing a client who has not been able to see his children," Freeman said. He said Mrs. Carter left her husband three days before he filed for divorce and did not tell him where she was.

PUC suggests rate cut for company

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission staff has recommended that Texas Utilities Electric Co., which is requesting a $304 million rate increase, instead be ordered to cut rates by $65.2 million.

In a report issued Tuesday, the PUC staff said the company was overcharging its customers. It was the first time in the PUC's eight-year history that its staff recommended a rate reduction for an electric company.

TUEC was created Jan. 1 by the merger of Dallas Power & Light Co., Texas Electric Services Co. and Texas Power & Light Co.

The recommendation brought an angry reaction from TUEC officials, who complained that rate reduction would send devastating economic signals to their industry.

"This is a jolt," TUEC Vice President Tom Baker said. "The concern I have is just the apparent change in direction and change in signals...If it's adopted, I think in the long run it could prevent our company from building the additional facilities that we need to meet our growing demands for energy."

Baker warned that a rate cut could force the company to back off from new construction programs.

"I'm not saying if you get a rate decrease, the lights are going to go out tomorrow," he said. "But I would suggest that there would be a long-term deterioration."

Don Butler, an attorney for the Texas Municipal League, which had proposed a $30.8 million rate cut, praised the staff's recommendation.

PUC Assistant General Counsel Ed Pope said the staff's decision had been guided by the provisions of a new law that allows utilities to be granted money for uncompleted construction projects only under exceptional circumstances.

Vowing to continue to pursue the company's rate request, Baker accused the PUC staff of abandoning its responsibility to the public interest.

"It's short-term expediency, but I think in the long run it will work to the detriment of the ratepayer," he said. "It almost appears as if there's a contest to see who can cut the most. I don't think it ultimately serves the public interest, although it may make headlines now."

Judge says 'lemon law' not valid

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. District Judge James Nowlin says Texas' "lemon law" is unconstitutional and void because it gives consumers a better break than manufacturers.

Nowlin said Tuesday that the law, designed to protect new car buyers from faulty vehicles, "is invalid and unenforceable because of the constitutional invalidity."

The law, which became effective last October, was backed by the Texas Automobile Dealers Association, which represents most new car sellers in the state.

The law passed by the 1983 Legislature allowed the state Motor Vehicle Commission to conduct hearings and order cash refunds or the replacement of a faulty car. Consumers were allowed to file a complaint if a car needed repairs at least four times within the first year or was out of service for 30 days during the warranty.

Chrysler Corp. filed suit in November charging that the law was unfair to manufacturers because car dealers were allowed to sit in judgment of the disputes. Dealers, who comprise five of the nine members on the motor vehicle commission and who backed the bill, were not liable under the law for any defects in a new car.

The suit also charged that manufacturers were not allowed sufficient appeal of commission rulings, and that there was no stipulation in the law to withhold fines against manufacturers while a ruling was appealed.

Nowlin ruled that "the differing treatment afforded owners of vehicles and the manufacturers of vehicles in the commission's review process lacks rationaal basis. The owners have several options in pursuing their complaint. The manufacturers are bound by the commission orders without effective stay pending appeal."

The judge also ruled that car dealers should not decide the disputes because they have "both a pecuniary and an institutional interest in the decision-making process."

Cookout Says "Thanks Dad"

It's Father's Day

Time to dust off your outdoor cooker or grill and plan an extra-special meal to show Dad how much you care — it's Father's Day. To treat Dad like a king serve the foods he loves best — beef from the grill and fresh fruit like succulent, richly colored grapes.

Make Father's Day a real family affair and invite grandfathers, uncles, cousins and brothers for an outdoor cookout. Serving a large crew is oh, so easy when you cook a flavorful beef tip roast in a covered barbecue kettle. Position the beef roast using the indirect cooking method (see Covered Barbecue Kettle instructions). Roasts cooked by this method turn out tender, moist and delicious. You have to add briquettes every hour (see accompanying instructions.)

Show Dad how special he is when you serve Jeweled Grape Rum Ring for dessert. Turn an ordinary cake ring into an extraordinary dessert by soaking it in rum syrup and garnishing with an assortment of rum-flavored red, green and blue/black grapes. The beauty of the grapes comes through in jewel-like color and sweet fresh flavor. Served with ice cream, this dessert adds a festive note to your salute to Dad.

Father's Favorite Beef Tip Roast

4 to 5-pound beef tip roast
1 tablespoon Italian seasoning
1 teaspoon garlic salt
1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper

Combine Italian seasoning, garlic salt and cayenne pepper; rub evenly over roast. Insert roast meat thermometer so bulb is centered in thickest part. Make certain bulb does not rest in fat. When coals are ready, ash-covered, set drip pan in place in center of the lower grill. Position roast, fat side up, on top grill directly above the drip pan. Cover kettle (leaving all vents wide open) and cook roast until meat thermometer registers 140°F. for rare; 160°F. for medium; allow 15 to 20 minutes per pound. For easier carving allow roast to "set" in a warm place 15 to 20 minutes after removal from kettle. Since roast usually continues to cook after removal from kettle, it is best to remove it about 5°F. below temperature desired. Makes 16 to 20 three-ounce servings.

Jeweled Grape Rum Ring

1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup milk
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
Rum Syrup
4-1/2 cups red, green and/or blue/black grapes, seeded if necessary
Vanilla ice cream or whipped cream (optional)

Beat sugar and eggs 2 minutes at medium speed with mixer. Combine flour, baking powder and salt; gradually beat into egg mixture. Heat milk and butter over low heat until butter melts. Add to egg mixture; beat only until blended. Pour into well-buttered and floured 9-inch savarin ring mold or 9-inch square cake pan. Bake at 350°F. 25 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched. With long-tined fork, prick cake while still in mold; unmold and prick other side. Spoon 1-1/2 cups Rum Syrup over cake. Pour remaining syrup over grapes; let both cake and grapes stand at least one hour. Drain grapes; place in center of cake ring. Serve with ice cream. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

Rum Syrup: In saucepan, combine 2 cups sugar, 1 cup water, 1-1/2 teaspoons grated lemon peel and dash salt. Bring to boil and simmer over medium heat 6 minutes; remove from heat and add 1/2 cup rum.* Strain. Makes 2-1/2 cups.

*Favorite liqueur can be substituted.

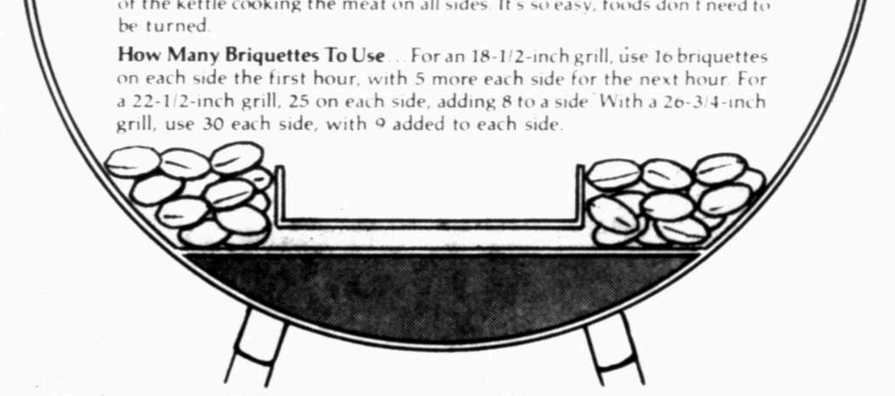

It's Easy To Cook In A Covered BBQ Kettle

- Equal amounts of charcoal are held at the sides of the lower grill by a set of charcoal rails
- All vents should be open
- Ignite coals
- Cover should be left off until coals are ash-covered (about 30 minutes).

When coals are ready, center a drip pan (slightly larger than the roast) between the charcoal rails. Place cooking grill in kettle and position roast in the center directly above the drip pan. Cover kettle and consult recipe for recommended cooking time.

With the cover on, heat from the coals is reflected by the inside surface of the kettle cooking the meat on all sides. It's so easy, foods don't need to be turned.

How Many Briquettes To Use . . For an 18-1/2-inch grill, use 16 briquettes on each side the first hour, with 5 more each side for the next hour. For a 22-1/2-inch grill, 25 on each side, adding 8 to a side. With a 26-3/4-inch grill, use 30 each side, with 9 added to each side.

An easy-to-prepare Father's Day menu gives you plenty of time to spend with your guest-of-honor. Start with naturally tender and juicy Broiled Sirloin Steak. Cook this family-size steak directly over coals in a covered barbecue kettle with Herbed Vegetable Kabobs. Once the food is on the grill you'll spend little time tending it.

Grape Pasta Salad makes mealtime even easier. Simply toss sweet, mellow red grapes into a cold pasta salad the night before Dad's special day. A perfectly grilled beef steak and a luscious salad are a great way to say "Thanks Dad."

Broiled Sirloin Steak

1 beef sirloin steak, cut 1-inch thick (about 2 pounds)
Salt and pepper
Herbed Vegetable Kabobs*

Place steak on grill directly over ash-covered coals. Cover kettle (leaving all vents open) and cook. When first side is brown, turn and season with salt and pepper and finish cooking second side. Turn and season. Steak requires 5 to 7 minutes total cooking for rare; 8 to 10 minutes for medium. Makes 4 servings.

NOTE: Cooking times shown for beef roast and sirloin steak are recommended by Weber-Stephen.

*Herbed Vegetable Kabobs

1/4 cup butter
1 tablespoon snipped parsley
1/2 each teaspoon dried basil, dried oregano and salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 medium zucchini, cut into 8 slices
8 large mushrooms
8 large cherry tomatoes

Cook butter, parsley, basil, oregano, salt and pepper in small saucepan over low heat 2 to 3 minutes. Thread two slices of zucchini crosswise (through rind) and two mushrooms on each of four 12-inch skewers. Brush both sides of vegetables with seasoned butter. Place kabobs on grill directly over ash-covered coals; cover kettle and cook 8 to 12 minutes. Turn and brush kabobs with seasoned butter occasionally. Place two cherry tomatoes on end of each skewer during last 3 minutes of cooking time. Makes 4 servings.

Grape Pasta Salad

6 ounces rotini or shell macaroni
Boiling salted water
1-1/2 cups halved red grapes, seeded if necessary
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1/4 cup each chopped green pepper and sliced green onion
Vinaigrette Dressing

Cook pasta in boiling salted water as directed on package. Drain. Add grapes, mushrooms, green pepper, green onion and Vinaigrette Dressing; toss well. Cover and refrigerate several hours or overnight to blend flavors. Toss again before serving. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Vinaigrette Dressing: Combine 1/4 cup oil, 3 tablespoons white wine vinegar, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/8 teaspoon dried oregano and dash each pepper and bottled hot pepper sauce; blend well. Makes about 1/2 cup dressing.

Tour inside Ye Tower Restaurant proves nostalgic

LANTANA, Fla. (AP) — A step inside Ye Tower Restaurant on U.S. 1 here is a nostalgic journey into the past — not because someone tried to duplicate a local "beanery" of the 1920s, but because that's the way Paul Dunbar has operated the place all these years.

Some things have changed since 1925 when this 82-year-old Gloversville, N.Y., native opened the diner's doors to serve its first meals. Four small tables have joined the 11 stools at the L-shaped counter; the French doors that automobiles plowed through on three occasions are gone; and an 85-foot frame tower that stood in front of this plain single-story stucco building is missing.

"The 1928 hurricane did that," recalls Dunbar. "The storm just laid the tower right down the side of the road."

It was that tower that gave the place its name. It was built by a development company so potential customers could view nearby subdivisions. A small bell tower now adorns the front roof.

"I won't tell you how many years I've been eating here because then you'll know how old I am," said Ruth Brock as she ordered lunch from waitress Ann Bumiller, "but the food is good or I wouldn't be here."

The menu hasn't changed much over the years and neither has the quality of food that's kept customers coming back for decades. One of the more popular items is the "hot barb-cue sandwich" — pork, beef or ham — for $1.50.

"I make four kinds of cream pies from scratch," Dunbar explains proudly. They go for 75 cents a hunk and there's rarely any left over for the following day.

There's nothing fancy about Ye Tower. The walls are painted blue-green and the menu hung on the wall is one of those old ones Coca Cola provided with a set of small letters and numbers to arrange on a slotted black felt background.

A small plaque with the words "Since 1925" hanging by the soda fountain is the local Chamber of Commerce's way of acknowledging Ye Tower is the town's oldest business in continuous operation.

And from the soda fountain comes Dunbar's "piece de resistance" — rich, creamy malted milks of a bygone era.

"I use real milk," he says, pouring one into an antique fountain glass.

Without video games, recorded music or other accouterments, Dunbar's eating place attracts the old as well as the young.

"The food is good," explains Sherry Scantland, a young woman who works at a supermarket not far away. "I like it. It's neat and sort of corny."

Sheila Brannon agrees. "The burgers are fatter and cheaper than those famous places. We know they haven't been sitting in back."

Ye Tower operates from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday. One person works in the kitchen and another out front. Dunbar still pulls the kitchen shift in the evening. During the day, he does the buying, baking and bookkeeping.

Regular customers insist on chatting with Dunbar. Many of them started eating here as children years ago. "I've fed some of their grandparents," he adds. Others know him from the 17 years he served on the city's council, including the seven he spent as mayor of Lantana.

Dandelion greens are dandy delicacies

Hearst Feature Service

Dandelion greens can be dandy delicacies.

Dandelion greens should be carefully cleaned. First, trim off the root end and any tough or overlarge stalks near the root. Remove discolored or bruised leaves. Wash by immersing in a large bowl of tepid water, then separate leaves and hold under cold running water.

Now for the recipes:

GREENS VINAIGRETTE

3 cups cooked, drained greens
1/4 cup wine vinegar
3/4 cup olive oil
1 tsp. mustard powder
1 hard-boiled egg, chopped
1 clove garlic, split
2 tbsps. pickle relish (optional)
2 tbsps. chopped pimiento
1 tbsp. minced chives or scallions
Salt and pepper to taste

To boil the greens, clean and trim and cook in a small amount of boiling water (the water clinging to the leaves is usually sufficient) for 10 to 15 minutes. Drain.

Place in a container with a close-fitting lid the oil, vinegar, mustard, chopped egg, pimiento, scallions or chives and relish. Close container and shake well. Pour over greens. Add split garlic clove, season to taste, and chill several hours or overnight. Drain and serve as salad or appetizer. Serves four to six.

COUNTRY GREENS

1 quart each dandelion and spinach greens
1/2 cup plus two tablespoons butter
1/4 cup soft bread cubes
2 finely chopped hard-cooked eggs
1 tbsp. chopped watercress

Wash greens in warm water, then in cold running water. Plunge dandelions into boiling water. Cook five minutes. Drain. Add one half cup water and spinach. Cook 10 to 12 minutes until tender. Do not overcook. Add two tablespoons butter and salt and pepper.

In skillet, melt one-half cup butter. When butter foams, add bread cubes. Cook over low heat until brown. Remove from heat and stir in eggs and watercress. Salt and pepper to taste. Pour over hot greens.

WILTED DANDELION GREENS

6 quarts tender young dandelion leaves
6 slices cooked bacon, crumbled
3 tbsps. bacon fat or oil
4 tbsps. cider vinegar
3 tbsps. minced shallots
1 to 2 tsps. honey
1/4 tsp. salt
Dash pepper
3 hard-boiled eggs, chopped

Wash greens and place in a large kettle. Add water just to cover; bring to a boil. Remove from heat and let stand for a few minutes. Drain well.

Heat oil or bacon fat in a large skillet. Stir in vinegar and shallots and heat briefly. Add honey, salt and pepper and cook on low heat for a few minutes. Gradually stir drained greens into skillet, cover, and simmer a few minutes more. Serve garnished with hard-boiled eggs. Serves six.

Meat loaf interesting

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

An acquaintance of mine makes an interesting meat loaf using ground beef and bulk pork sausage, embellished with pistachio nuts, that does triple duty.

She serves it cold, as you would a French pate, as a main dish for lunch or as a first course for dinner. Or she offers it as a sandwich filling for a light meal or an afternoon or evening snack.

When the loaf appears at lunch or dinner she accompanies it with lettuce, cherry tomatoes and cornichons. Cornichons, imported from France, are available at specialty food shops. They are midget gherkins pickled with vinegar, salt and such seasonings as small white onions, tarragon, thyme and bay leaf. If cornichons are not at hand, the small sour pickles processed and packed in the United States and widely available in supermarkets may be used.

When we made sandwiches of the meat loaf, we varied the bread and spread it generously with homemade mayonnaise. As an accompaniment to the sandwiches, we offered small lettuce cups filled with cornichons.

PISTACHIO MEAT LOAF

1 large egg
½ pound ground lean beef
½ pound bulk pork sausage
1 cup finely chopped peeled apple
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¼ cup coarsely chopped natural pistachios
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. dried crushed oregano
⅛ tsp. coarsely ground pepper
Lettuce
Cherry tomatoes
Cornichons

In a medium bowl beat the egg enough to combine the yolk and white. Add the beef, sausage, apple, crumbs, onion, pistachios, salt, oregano and pepper. Pack into a glass or metal loaf pan (about 7x4x2 inches and holding 3 cups). Bake in a preheated 350-F. oven until well-done — 50 to 60 minutes. Let stand 20 minutes to reabsorb some of the juices; drain off remaining juices; cool; turn out. Cover tightly and chill.

At serving time, cut into ¼-inch thick slices. Serve on lettuce garnished with the tomatoes and cornichons as a main dish for lunch or as a first course for dinner. Or use as a filling for sandwiches for a light meal.

NOTE: Cornichons are sour pickled midget gherkins imported from France.

Cheese once named for Roman baskets

The French word for cheese is "fromage," and the Italian is "formaggio." Both derive from the Latin "formia," which were the rush baskets Romans used to drain cheeses, according to the American Dairy Association.

DEAR ABBY

Minister turns session into confession

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of a minister who would say to a bride, "I have to know if you are a virgin or not." I was asked this question during a premarital counseling session. My fiance was present and was as shocked as I was.

When I told the minister it was a private matter, he replied, "Then I will have to jump to conclusions." I said, "That is your privilege." The minister then insinuated that I had to get married. Abby, we announced our engagement in August of 1982 and set our wedding date at that time. The minister was aware of this, so he had to know that we didn't have to get married.

He then said he had to know if we were living together, because if we were, it would reflect badly on him and the church. My fiance and I are not living together, never did, nor do we intend to until we are married.

Neither my fiance nor I is Catholic, and confession to a clergyman is not required by our faith. We are both over 21. I have been very upset since this meeting, and I don't want to have this minister officiate at our wedding. Am I wrong? — BOTHERED BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: You are not wrong. Ask your minister's superior if the questions you were asked were appropriate in your situation. I certainly understand your wanting another minister to marry you. "Seek and ye shall find."

DEAR ABBY: Can you explain why a 57-year-old Christian woman would want to spend all her time with an 83-year-old Jewish widower?

He calls her every day, and she takes every opportunity to go to his home. Every time they meet, they embrace like lovers.

What is the motive? His and hers? — PERPLEXED IN SUN CITY, ARIZ.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Maybe she's looking for a father figure. Or he's looking for a daughter figure. Or his income figures in the millions. I can't figure it out. But then, it's really none of my business.

DEAR ABBY: You said, "There is no way a man can demand to be called 'Mister' without coming across as arrogant, pretentious and self-important."

Wrong! Perhaps you've been eating in too many restaurants that require the staff to say, "Hi, I'm Bruce, I'll fill your water glass," and "Hi, I'm Nancy. I'll be your breadbasket girl." Have you ever asked some intelligent restaurant employees how they feel about saying that? They hate it.

That kind of cheap familiarity spills over into the rest of life, demeaning everyone who is victimized by it, usually the young and women. Sit in a doctor's office and listen to the staff call the patients: "SALLY, Dr. Fletcher will see you now. MR. JONES, Dr. Smith will see you now." If informality is so terrific, what's wrong with, "Sally, SAM will see you now"?

Formality is terrific stuff. It allows for room to become more familiar. But when you start out on the chummiest plateau, there's nowhere to go. — CONSERVATIVE IN DAYTON

Glaze ingredients unusual

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

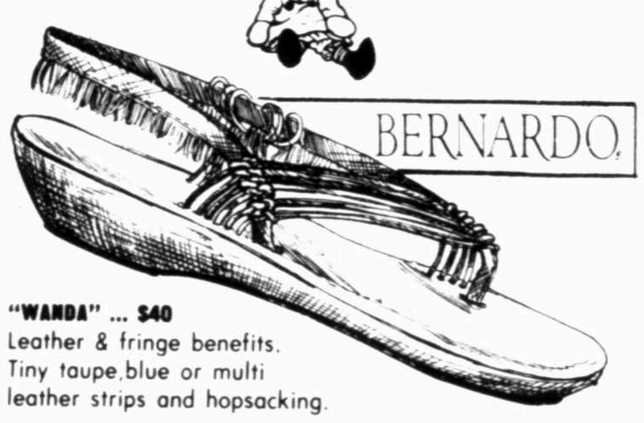

Recently, an inventive cook sent me a jar of glaze for charcoal-grilled, broiled or baked chicken. It became known at my house as Mystery Glaze because none of my tasters could guess what was in it. Neither could I. But all of us enjoyed it.

MYSTERY GLAZE FOR CHICKEN

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 small onion, finely chopped (¼ cup)
2 teaspoons curry powder
2 teaspoons prepared yellow mustard
⅓ cup prune juice
⅓ cup apricot jam
¼ cup red wine vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cornstarch blended with 2 tablespoons water

In a small saucepan over low heat, heat the oil; add the onion and curry powder and cook, stirring several times, for about 5 minutes. Stir in mustard, then prune juice, apricot jam, vinegar and salt. Bring to a boil, stirring to melt jam; boil 1 minute. Add the cornstarch mixture and stir constantly until clear and thickened — a matter of minutes. Makes about 1¼ cups.

To use the Glaze, charcoal-grill, broil or bake chicken pieces; about 10 minutes before they are done, brush with some of the Mystery Glaze; just before serving, brush again with the Glaze and serve remaining Glaze for dipping.

Cinnamon popular worldwide

By TOM HOGE
The Associated Press

The aromatic spice known as cinnamon is one of the world's oldest seasonings, popular in gourmet cuisines the world over.

Actually, there are two varieties of cinnamon. The reddish-brown bark from the cassia tree is the one we usually see in the United States. Buff-colored Ceylon cinnamon from the bark of a laurel tree is popular in many lands, including Mexico, but it is rarely consumed in this country.

Cassia cinnamon is a native of southern China, where the people in ancient times regarded the cassia as the Tree of Life. Our two principal cassia sources today are Indonesia and Vietnam.

There are several mentions of cinnamon in the Bible. The Lord told Moses on Mount Sinai to make an anointing oil which would include cinnamon. And the 45th Psalm says "all thy garments smell of myrrh and aloes and cassia ..."

Cinnamon is cultivated today, much as it was thousands of years ago. It is harvested during the rainy season because the bark is easier to handle in wet weather. Once stripped, it is rolled into long, slender quills — the sticks familiar here in the United States.

Cinnamon is usually regarded in the United States as a seasoning to be added to recipes for sweets, but it has many other uses.

In Greece, the spice is used in beef stew, while in India it is used in curries.

In our country, the Pennsylvania Dutch sprinkle cinnamon sugar over sliced tomatoes, which I have found very tasty. Cinnamon sticks are also used to stir mulled cider and wine.

As for other uses, I once enjoyed a pungent chicken dish that was flavored with cinnamon. Here is the recipe.

CINNAMON CHICKEN

4-pound chicken, ready to cook
2 teaspoons salt
4 cups water
½ cup chicken fat
½ cup flour
2 slices bread, crumbled
2 dozen sliced green olives
1 cup (8 ounces) tomato sauce
⅓ cup seedless raisins
3 tablespoons instant minced onions
1 cinnamon stick, 1 inch long
2 teaspoons ground coriander
2 teaspoons oregano leaves
½ teaspoon black pepper
½ teaspoon instant garlic

Wash chicken and cut into serving-size pieces. Place with salt and water in 6-quart pan. Cover and cook slowly 2 hours until chicken is tender.

Remove chicken from stock. Skim fat from broth and set aside. Measure 5 cups stock, adding water if necessary. Set aside. Return chicken fat to pan and blend in flour.

Stir and cook until browned. Remove from heat and stir in stock and bread. Beat until smooth. Add remaining ingredients. Stir and cook until thickened.

Add chicken pieces. Cook uncovered 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Serve hot with rice or noodles. Serves 8.

Oatmeal rolls easy introduction to home baking

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

If you have never baked bread with yeast and have an urge to do so, we suggest you begin by baking rolls. The following recipe produces a manageable dough that is easy to shape. All you have to do is divide the dough in half, use your hands to form each half into a 12-inch roll and then cut each roll crosswise into equal pieces.

These rolls call for oats (quick-cooking or regular) along with all-purpose flour; the oats give excellent flavor, texture and nutrients. The rolls are lovely to serve warm the day you bake them (or reheated). They also make good sandwiches. For these, use two rolls for each serving, then cut each roll into three lengthwise slices. Toast the six slices and make three sandwiches of them. We like to use cold meat for fillings — pork, lamb or beef — with curry mayonnaise, lettuce and chutney. You might enjoy trying these.

SLICE-AND-BAKE OATMEAL ROLLS

3 to 3½ cups all-purpose flour
1 cup quick-cooking or regular oats
1 tablespoon sugar
1 envelope dry yeast
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
¼ cup water
3 tablespoons butter
2 large eggs

In the large bowl of an electric mixer stir together 1½ cups of the flour, the oats, sugar, yeast and salt; reserve.

In a small saucepan heat together the milk, water and 2 tablespoons of the butter until very warm (120 to 130 degrees) — butter does not need to melt; gradually stir into flour mixture. Beat at medium speed for 2 minutes, scraping bowl a few times. Add 1 of the eggs and 1 cup more flour. Beat at high speed for 2 minutes, scraping bowl a few times. Stir in enough of the remaining flour to make a soft dough.

Turn out on a lightly floured surface; knead until smooth and elastic — 8 to 10 minutes. Form into a ball; place in a large buttered bowl, turning once to coat surface of dough. Cover bowl; let rise in a warm place (about 80 degrees) until doubled in size — about 1 hour. Punch down dough; divide in half. Form each half into a 12-inch rope. Cut each rope crosswise into 9 equal pieces — each about 1¼ inches long. Place, well apart, on a buttered cookie sheet.

Melt the remaining 1 tablespoon butter; brush over rolls. Cover; let rise in a warm place (about 80 degrees) until nearly doubled in size — 25 to 30 minutes. Lightly beat remaining egg; brush over tops of rolls. If desired, sprinkle with extra oats. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until golden brown — 15 to 18 minutes.

Makes 18.

Fudge cooked different ways

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

The latest recipe I have tried for vanilla fudge uses sour cream and in my opinion the flavor and texture are delightful. And the recipe offers a bonus: for cooks who like chocolate, we tell how to add that flavoring.

SOUR CREAM FUDGE
2 cups sugar
½ cup sour cream
½ cup light corn syrup
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup walnuts, coarsely chopped

Butter an 8 by 8 by 2-inch baking pan.

In a heavy 3-quart saucepan, cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, the sugar, sour cream, corn syrup and butter until mixture boils. Cover and cook 1 minute.

Remove cover. Without stirring, continue cooking until the temperature on a candy thermometer reaches 236 degrees or a small amount of mixture when dropped into a large bowl of very cold water forms a soft ball that flattens on removal from the water. Off heat, add vanilla; do not stir. Cool on a wire rack until temperature reaches 176 degrees — about 15 to 20 minutes.

With a wooden spoon beat until mixture just begins to thicken slightly and turns creamy — about 3 minutes. Stir in walnuts. Turn into prepared pan, spreading quickly and evenly. Cool. Cut into squares.

Makes about 1½ pounds.

Chocolate Sour Cream Fudge: Follow recipe for Sour Cream Fudge. Add 2 squares (each 1 ounce) unsweetened chocolate with the vanilla. Do not stir, cool and continue as recipe directs.

Lasagne made with sausage sauce

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

LASAGNE
Sausage Sauce, recipe follows
8 lasagna noodles, cooked
1 cup ricotta
½ cup grated Parmesan
12 thin slices mozzarella

In an 8-inch square baking dish, layer enough Sausage Sauce to cover bottom; add 4 strips lasagne, folding ends over to fit dish, ½ cup ricotta, ¼ cup Parmesan, 4 slices mozzarella and ⅓ of remaining Sausage Sauce. Keep repeating layers, ending with Sauce.

Bake, uncovered, in a preheated 375-degree oven until hot — 15 to 25 minutes. Place remaining mozzarella over top and continue baking until it melts — 5 minutes.

Makes 4 large servings.

Sausage Sauce: In a heavy saucepan brown ¼ pound sweet Italian sausage (sliced); remove; add ½ pound ground beef to pan and crumble with a fork until it loses its red color; pour off any fat.

Return sausage to pan; add 1 small onion (chopped), large clove garlic (crushed), 14-ounce can plum tomatoes, 6-ounce can tomato paste, ¼ cup water, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper and dried oregano to taste.

Cover and simmer, stirring occasionally, until thick — about 1 hour.

"After 38 years, we finally won the war against roaches."

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Baxley, Kansas City, Kansas.

"We sprayed over and over again—and still had roaches. Combat is the only thing we found that kills roaches for three whole months."

"We have lived in the same house for at least 38 years and even though we tried everything, we still had a roach problem.

After using Combat,® we virtually eliminated our roach problem."

"We followed the instructions to the letter."

"We put the Combat discs in the kitchen—on shelves, under the sink, near the range and refrigerator, on cabinet tops, and inside food and dish cabinets. We also put them in the bathroom—under the sink and behind the toilet.

We did the whole thing in 10 or 15 minutes.

Another thing that we like so much is you can hide them—out of sight."

"Combat is convenient. No odor. No mess."

"There was always a terrible odor with sprays. We'd have to raise the windows to let the darn stuff out of the house. It was awful.

With Combat, there's no odor, no mess, no bother. There's just no comparison with sprays."

"It's better because it works for three months."

"We started using Combat more than a year ago. Combat lasts so long we only have to replace the Combat discs every three months. Now, our roach problem is really under control."

For large roaches, water and palmetto bugs

For small roaches

KILLS WITHOUT A TRACE

More powerful than leading sprays or foggers.

Combat is a new, completely different roach killer. So exclusive, it's patented. So powerful, it kills more roaches in a three-month period than repeated applications of sprays and foggers.

Combat's powerful roach killer is contained in child-proof, spill-proof discs. It's dry, so there's no possibility of evaporation.

Simply place the Combat discs according to directions—10 in the kitchen, 2 in the bathroom. Wherever you've seen roaches. Even where you wouldn't dare spray. In food and dish cabinets. In silver and utensil drawers.

With Combat, there are no fumes, odor, oily film or contamination worry.

Replace Combat discs every three months, and you can virtually eliminate your roach problem.

We're so confident Combat works, we guarantee it. Or your money back.

Microwaves may ease picnic preparation

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

There's no better way to celebrate the increasingly summery weather than with a good old-fashioned American picnic. Whether you trek out to the countryside, a park, lake, beach — or just your own back yard — a meal enjoyed in the great outdoors always seems to taste better.

Picnics are an occasion for food and fun, and your microwave will make preparation easier than ever. While you probably won't want to take your microwave with you, you can use it to shorten the time you'll spend in the kitchen before your picnic, so you'll be more in the mood to relax and enjoy.

Double Corn Bread and Nutty Cocoa Brownies are especially quick and easy: a few minutes to mix, a few minutes in the microwave, and they're done! Plan to serve with barbecued chicken (directions following), a salad or raw vegetable sticks and fresh fruit. What could be simpler?

To prepare barbecued chicken, use your microwave to partially precook individual pieces ahead of time. Arrange 2½ to 3 pounds of chicken pieces (larger ones toward the outside) in a 12x7-inch glass baking dish. Microwave 15 minutes. Let cool, wrap in plastic and keep refrigerated or in an ice chest until ready to barbecue. Baste chicken with favorite sauce (or use recipe below) and place on grill over hot coals. Cook, turning and basting frequently, about 20 minutes. When done, meat near the bone will no longer be pink. This method is great for reducing grill time, so the delicate meat will not end up charred on the outside and raw on the inside. Two and one-half to 3 pounds of chicken will serve from 4 to 6 hungry picknickers.

TANGY BARBECUE SAUCE
1 cup chili sauce
½ cup water
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¼ cup lemon juice
2 tbsps. packed brown sugar
1 tbsp. vegetable oil
¼ tsp. garlic salt
¼ tsp. paprika
¼ tsp. Tabasco sauce
1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce

Thoroughly combine all ingredients in 1-quart casserole. Cover and mcrowave 5 to 7 minutes, stirring halfway through cooking time, until hot and blended. Use to baste chicken, ribs, etc. Makes about 2 cups.

DOUBLE CORN BREAD
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup yellow cornmeal
Scant ¼ cup sugar
4 tsps. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup milk
¼ cup vegetable oil
1 (12-oz.) can corh niblets, drained
Paprika

Into medium-size bowl sift together flour, cornmeal, sugar, baking pwder and salt. Gradually stir in eggs, milk and oil, beating until all dry ingredients are moistened. Add drained corn and blend thoroughly.

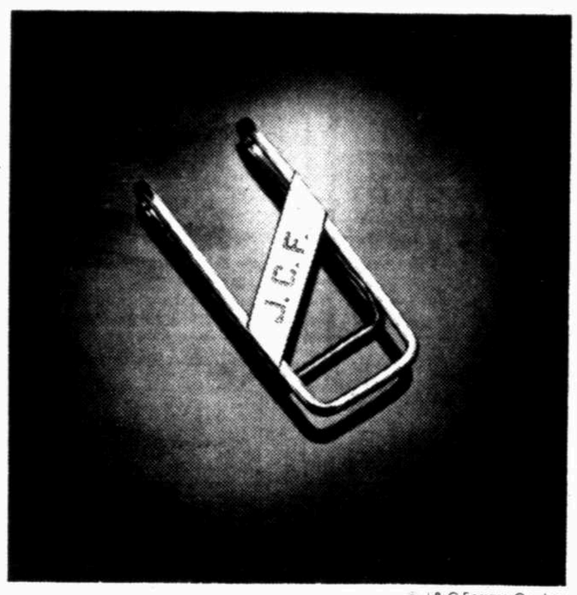

Pour batter evenly into 8-inch-square glass baking dish. Sprinkle top lightly with paprika. Microwave 5¼ to 6 minutes, or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Allow to cool, then cut into squares. Makes 9 squares.

NUTTY COCOA BROWNIES
Two-thirds cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
3 tbsps. water
1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
½ tsp. baking soda
¼ tsp. salt
⅓ cup cocoa
½ cup chopped walnuts

Place butter or margarine in 8-inch-square glass baking dish. Micowave 1½ to 2 minutes, until melted. Stir in sugar and let cool. In small bowl, beat together eggs, water and vanilla. Stir into sugar mixture. Sift together flour, baking soda, salt and cocoa.

Stir into baking dish and mix thoroughly. Sprinkle nuts evenly over top and microwave 4 to 4½ minutes, rotating dish ¼-turn every 2 minutes. Allow to cool before cutting. Makes 16 brownies.

Recipes are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens. Foods are cooked on HIGH (100 percent power) and uncovered unless otherwise specified.

During the peak summer months, orchard-sweet peaches are perfect for cool and refreshing ideas, from juicy pies to cool parfaits. This honey-sweet fruit wins consumer approval for its delicious versatility, fuzz down.

Use fresh peaches in milk shakes or pureed into fruit punch. Party desserts and frozen treats can be something special when prepared with peaches.

Some peaches have carried a few celebrities to immortality.

Such as Peach Melba. It was inspired by Australian opera star Nellie Melba, who sang in major European cities during the 1890s. Her stage name was a shortened version of her hometown of Melbourne.

One of her admirers was the great French chef, Escoffier, who was in charge of the Savoy Hotel's kitchen at the time of Melba's London triumph. He dedicated a new dessert to her.

His creation, peches Melba, actually was an improvement over a dish called peches cardinal, in which peaches were served with a raspberry or strawberry sauce (for the red hat of a cardinal). He served the dish with vanilla ice cream, carried on the wings of an ice swan, the hero of the opera "Lohengrin," in which Melca was singing.

Escoffier also created another famous peach, peches Eugenie, for Empress Eugenie, wife of Napoleon III of France. It's made of ripe peaches and maraschino liquer and served with champagne sauce.

The classic Melba recipe involves making vanilla ice cream, poaching peaches and creating a raspberry sauce out of the fresh fruit. Here's a quicker version served in many Paris cafes.

QUICK PEACH MELBA

4 fresh peaches
1 pint vanilla ice cream
6 tbsps. raspberry jelly
3 tbsps. water
1½ tbsps. lemon juice

To peel the peaches, scald in a pan of boiling water for 30 seconds; drain,rinse under cold water and peel with a knife. Cut peaches in half and chill.

To make the raspberry jelly sauce, gently heat the raspberry jelly, water and lemon juice, stirring until smooth. Let cook, stirring often.

To serve, place scoops or spoonfuls of ice cream in each of 4 deep dessert dishes. Top with peach halves. Spoon a little sauce over peaches. Serve the remaining separately.

What's a better way to enjoy fresh peaches than with a homemade pie? Minute tapioca acts as a thickener without affecting the taste or the fruit flavor.

PEACH CRUMB PIE

⅛ cup sugar
¼ tsp. salt
3 tbsps. minute tapioca
4 cups sliced fresh peaches
2 tbsps. lemon juice
1 unbaked 9-inch pie shell
Crumb topping

Combine sugar, salt, tapioca, peaches and lemon juice; let stand 15 minutes Pour peach mixture into pie shell and sprinkle with crumb topping. Bake at 425-F. for 45 to 50 minutes or until syrup boils with heavy bubbles that do not burst.

Crumb topping: Combine one-third cup firmly packed brown sugar, ¼ cup all-purpose flour, ⅛ teaspoon cinnamon and 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened. Mix with pastry blender or fork until crumbs are the size of large peas. Makes 1¼ cups.

If you are interested in trying an unusual combination of flavors, try this recipe for chicken with fresh peaches. The chicken is marinated in an Oriental-style sauce, then sprinkled with four different spices and baked. Fresh peaches and water chestnuts go into the pan shortly before the chicken is ready. Rice complements the dish.

CHICKEN WITH FRESH PEACHES

¼ cup soy sauce
¼ cup water
⅛ cup chopped onion
1½ tsps. finely chopped fresh ginger
1 large clove garlic, finely chopped
3½-lb. frying chicken, cut up
¼ tsp. anise seed, crushed
¼ tsp. ground allspice
⅛ tsp. ground cloves
2 large fresh peaches, quartered
1 (8-oz.) can water chestnuts, drained and sliced

In 3-quart rectangular baking dish, stir together soy sauce, water, onion, inger and garlic; add chicken in a single layer, marinate 2 or 3 hours, turning several times. Turn chicken skin side up; stir together anise, allspice, cinnamon and cloves; sprinkle over chicken.

Bake everything in a preheated 350-F. oven 50 minutes, basting several times; add peaches and water chestnuts; bake until chicken is tender and peaches are heated through — 10 minutes longer. Serve with rice. Makes 4 servings.

Hikers need energy

(AP) — The Appalachian Mountain Club says hikers can burn as much as 2,800-3,500 calories in a normal day of hiking, twice that in winter. This makes energy important and sugar, in the form of dried fruits and candy, provides quick energy in a convenient form. Carbohydrates, in the form of bread, spaghetti, and rice, provide longer-lasting and slower-acting energy.

Season arrives for grilling family fare outdoors

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

The summer season is upon us. It's time to gather around a picnic table with family and friends at the first big outdoor barbecue of the year.

Grilling meats, fish and other foods is second nature to those who seem to be addicted to the wonderful smoky flavor produced when foods are cooked over white-hot coals. There are times when salmon, trout, whole turkeys and thick, juicy — and expensive — steaks are carefully cooked to absolute perfection on the family barbecue.

Still, there are those who prefer more casual menus; menus built around hot dogs and hamburgers, old-fashioned potato salad and crisp and creamy coleslaw.

If you are short on ideas for new treatments for trusted old picnic delights, the accompanying recipes should help get your creative juices going. They'll spice up a picnic menu in style and make the summer season truly memorable.

LAMB BURGER BALLS AND PITA

1¾ pounds ground lamb
1 egg
½ cup finely chopped onion
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 to 2 tablespoons finely chopped mint leaves
½ cup fresh bread crumbs
Salt, pepper
Pita breads, cut in halves
Leaf lettuce
Crumbled feta cheese
Black olives
Cucumber-Yogurt Sauce

Combine ground lamb, egg, onion, garlic, mint leaves and bread crumbs in bowl. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Mix lightly but thoroughly. Shape into small (about ¾-inch in diameter) balls. If preparing night before serving, place meatballs on tray, cover and chill. If using wooden skewers, soak in water overnight. Thread meatballs on skewers. Cook on grill 3 to 4 inches over medium-hot coals, turning occasionally, about 10 minutes or until done. Fill pita halves (warmed or lightly grilled, if desired) with about 4 meatballs and garnish with lettuce, feta cheese and olives. Serve with Cucumber-Yogurt Sauce. Makes about 10 servings.

Cucumber-Yogurt Sauce:
1 (8-ounce) carton yogurt
½ medium cucumber, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ teaspoon dill weed
Salt

Combine yogurt, cucumber, garlic and dill weed. Mix and season to taste with salt. Makes about 1½ cups.

TERIYAKI BURGERS

2 pounds ground beef
½ cup finely chopped green onions
1 (8-ounce) can water chestnuts, drained and chopped
1 teaspoon sesame seeds, optional
Teriyaki Marinade (recipe below)
4 to 8 sesame seed buns
Green onions
Chinese pea pods, blanched

Combine ground beef, green onions, water chestnuts and sesame seeds in bowl. Mix lightly but thoroughly. Shape into 4 to 8 patties without pressing or overhandling meat. Place patties in large shallow rectangular dish (or 2 dishes) and pour in Teriyaki Marinade. Allow to marinate overnight.

Next day, cook on grill, 3 to 4 inches over hot coals, 3 to 6 minutes on each side, depending on desired doneness. Place burgers on buns, grilled and lettuce-lined, if desired, and garnish with pea pods on top of meat and green onion stalks inserted in top buns. Makes 4 to 8 servings.

Teriyaki Marinade:
½ cup soy sauce
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ cup rice vinegar
2 teaspoons sugar
1 tablespoon minced ginger root
Few drops sesame oil

Combine soy sauce, garlic, vinegar, sugar, ginger and sesame oil. Stir well.

DOGS ON CROISSANTS

4 frankfurters or bratwurst
Dijon or other prepared mustard
4 strips American, Swiss or Cheddar cheese
4 slices bacon
4 croissants, sliced in halves

Cut each frankfurter lengthwise but not all the way through. Spread insides with mustard. Place 1 cheese strip inside, then wrap 1 slice bacon around frankfurter, securing with wood picks. Broil or cook on grill, turning few times, until bacon is done and frankfurter is heated through, about 6 to 8 minutes. Serve on warmed croissants. Makes 4 servings.

Variation: Score frankfurters diagonally at ½-inch intervals. Place in bowl of hot water 30 seconds. Drain and cook on grill, turning until frankfurters curl and are heated through, 2 to 4 minutes. Serve on warmed croissants with relish and/or mustard.

SMOKED SAUSAGE PITAS

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup chopped onion
1 green pepper, cut in thin strips
1 to 1½ kielbasa, cut into ¼-inch slices
2 cups sauerkraut, drained
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
1 cup sour cream
4 pita breads, cut in halves
Lettuce

Melt butter in saucepan. Saute onion and green pepper until tender. Mix in sausage slices and saute. Add sauerkraut and heat through. Combine mustard and sour cream and stir into mixture. Place over low heat until mixture is hot but not boiling. Fill pita breads with sausage-sauerkraut mixture. Tuck in lettuce. Makes 8 pita pockets.

PINEAPPLE PARTY BURGER

1 (20-ounce) can crushed pineapple in juice
3 pounds ground beef
3 eggs
2 cloves garlic, pressed
1 cup cubed Cheddar cheese
¾ cup chopped onion
½ cup seasoned bread crumbs
½ teaspoon crushed dried red chiles
Salt, pepper
Pineapple-Honey Sauce (recipe below)
1 large round loaf French bread, cut in half horizontally
Crisp lettuce leaves
Red onion slices
Tomato slices

Drain pineapple well, pressing out juice with back of spoon. Reserve juice. Combine pineapple, beef, eggs, garlic, cheese, onion, bread crumbs, dried chiles, ½ teaspoon salt and pepper. Mix well.

Shape meat mixture into large hamburger patty about 1½ inches thick. Arrange patties on broiler rack. Brush Pineapple-Honey Sauce to cover burger. Broil 4 inches from heat 20 minutes, basting after first 10 minutes. Place plate on top of burger, flip and slide off plate onto broiler rack. Baste again and broil 10 minutes longer. (Burger can be partially cooked at home and reheated on barbecue grill.) Serve burger on French bread with lettuce, onion and tomato slices. Makes 8 servings.

Pineapple-Honey Sauce:
Reserved pineapple juice
1 (6-ounce) can pineapple juice
½ cup orange marmalade
¼ cup honey
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon salt

Combine reserved pineapple juice, 6-ounce can pineapple juice, marmalade, honey, cornstarch, Worcestershire and salt. Heat, stirring occasionally, until sauce boils.

SNOW CAKE

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 tablespoon cornstarch
8 large egg whites (1 cup)
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup sugar
¼-pound butter, melted and cooled
Confectioners' sugar

Sift together flour, baking powder and cornstarch; return to sifter. Beat egg whites and vanilla until foamy; beat in sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, until whites hold stiff straight peaks.

Gradually sift in flour mixture, folding it in as you do so, until blended. Gradually fold in butter until blended. Turn into a 2-quart swirled tube pan that has been buttered and coated with confectioners' sugar; cut through batter with a knife.

Potatoes give pancakes touch of Ireland

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Irish potato pancakes, called Boxty, are different from those I've come across in other cuisines. The difference lies in the addition of both cooked mashed potato and shredded raw potato to the batter. They are interesting and delicious.

You may enjoy serving them, as I do, for breakfast with eggs and bacon. Have lots of good strong hot tea on hand, the way the Irish would make it. These pancakes are also delicious for a light lunch or with meat, poultry or fish for dinner. The last time we made them we had some left over. Next day we cut them in about ½-inch strips and fried them in butter.

IRISH PANCAKES

1 cup all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 pound potatoes
2 large eggs, slightly beaten
¼ cup butter, melted
4 tablespoons (about) milk

Stir together flour, baking powder and salt.

Peel ½ pound of the potatoes and steam or boil until tender; mash fine — there should be 1 firmly packed cup. Peel the remaining potatoes and finely shred; press out liquid — there should be 1 lightly packed cup.

Add mashed potatoes, shredded potatoes, and eggs to flour mixture; mix well; stir in butter. Gradually stir in enough milk to make a soft batter.

Melt a generous amount of extra butter in a large heavy skillet; add heaping tablespoons of the batter, well apart; fry over moderate heat, turning as necessary, until cooked through and browned on both sides. Keep warm in a low oven. Fry remaining batter the same way. Serve hot with butter. Makes 14.

Barbecues don't have to be loaded with calories. Grilled Potato Bake, Savory Vegetable Boats and Fruit Kabobs can help keep the calorie count low and the menu delicious.

Vegetables grilled

For a lighter barbecue, try the following low-calorie accompaniments to the meat.

GRILLED POTATO BAKE
8 medium baking potaotes (about 6 oz. each)
Non-stick vegetable cooking spray
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 pound mushrooms, sliced
1/2 cup finely chopped green onions
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon Worcesershire sauce

Scrub potatoes and pat dry with paper towels. Pierce skin of each in several places with a fork. Place potatoes on grid along edge of grill five inches from medium-hot coals. Cook potatoes until they can easily be pierced with a fork, about 45 minutes, turning occasionally. Spray saucepan with cooking spray. Heat on grill. Add garlic and cook a few seconds. Stir in remaining ingredients. Cook until mushrooms are tender, stirring often. Just before serving slit potatoes open and top with mushroom mixture. Makes eight servings.

SAVORY VEGETABLE BOATS
4 zucchini, each about 7 inches long
1 medium tomato, peeled, cored, halved, seeded and diced
1/2 cup chopped celery
1/2 cup chopped green pepper
1/4 cup packaged seasoned bread crumbs
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon dried basil
1/8 teaspoon pepper

Trim ends off zucchini. Cut each zucchini lengthwise in half. With melon ball cutter or grapefruit knife, carefully hollow out zucchini, leaving 1/4-inch thick shell. Coarsely chop pieces of zucchini. In bowl combine chopped zucchini, tomato, celery, green pepper, bread, onion, salt, basil and pepper. Tear four 12-inch pieces of heavy-duty foil; cut each piece in half crosswise. Place a zucchini shell on each piece of foil; fill with vegetable mixture. Seal and cook on grill about five inches from medium coals for 20 minues or until zucchini boats are tender. Makes eight servings.

FRUIT KABOBS
About 8 bamboo skewers, each 8 inches long
1 pint strawberries
2 large bananas
2 large peaches or nectarines
1/4 cup honey
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Soak skewers in water to cover. Meanwhile, rinse strawberries; pat dry and hull. Peel and cut bananas into 1-inch chunks. Cut peaches or nectarines in half; pit and cut into thick wedges then cut wedges in half. Drain skewers. Alternately thread fruit on skewers. In cup combine honey and lemon juice. Brush on fruit kabobs. Grill five inches from low coals for about five minutes or until fruit is just warm, turning often and brushing with honey mixture. Makes about eight servings.

COME FOR DESSERT
Blueberry Tart & Coffee

BLUEBERRY TART
1½ cups all-purpose flour
¼-pound butter
Sour Cream
2 cups frozen unsweetened blueberries, rinsed
3 large egg yolks

'Natural' foods stand out at convention

By CANDY SAGON
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — In the midst of all the sugary snack food, additive-bolstered mixes and artificially sweetened drinks displayed at the recent Food Marketing Institute convention here were two natural products that have made successful men of their hippie-turned-entrepreneur owners.

Richard Worth and Mark Blumenthal believed in the back-to-nature attitudes of the early '70s. A Me-Decade later, they have embraced capitalism, but their products still reflect their basic philosophy of only healthy, additive-free food.

The two men exhibited their wares at FMI, the supermarket industry's annual convention to introduce new products and discuss new trends.

Worth, president of Sorrell Ridge Farm, produces an intensely fruity, mouth-watering jam that contains no sweeteners of any kind.

Blumenthal, an El Paso native, makes a no-sugar, no-salt, preservative-free Texas salsa that is thick and spicy with chopped fresh vegetables and peppers.

BOTH PRODUCTS are carried in health-food stores across the country, but Worth's Sorrell Ridge Conserves, as they are called, are now being sold in posh gourmet departments and stores such as Macy's in San Francisco, Balducci's in New York City, Wannamaker's in Philadelphia and Lawry's Center in Los Angeles.

In the '70s, Worth and his wife, Suzie, were blueberry farmers in New Brunswick Province, Canada, raising chickens, sheep and cattle and "living off the land," as it was then fashionable to say.

Blumenthal became a vegetarian as a protest against the killing in the Vietnam War and started a wholesale herb company in Austin.

In 1978, Worth's wife gave birth to a son. "We had the baby at home," he said, "and I remember looking down at this tiny creature and thinking, 'I could go slowly broke being a farmer and have nothing to leave to my son.' "

Then 28, he decided to find a more lucrative, less risky, career. The choice was between making wood-burning stoves or doing something with their 20,000-pound-per-year crop of organically grown blueberries.

HE DECIDED on the blueberries, and he and his wife began making jam and selling it at the local farmers' market.

"We found that other jams had lots of chemicals and sugar in them, and the honey-sweetened ones just didn't taste good. The big companies used lots of sugar, because it's cheaper to add sugar than to add fruit.

"We decided to make jams without sugar that allowed the taste of the fruit to come through. We did not want fruit-flavored sugar," Worth said.

They hired food technologists to help them adapt their home recipe to a larger batch version. "Under their guidance, the stuff we were turning out was awful. We were taking the jam to the dump and feeding it to the bears," Worth recalls.

"Suzie and I would sit in the kitchen at night and cry. Our dream, all our money was tied up in this thing. The food technologists told us it was better than anything else on the market, but we knew it was not the best. We were not proud of it."

Eventually they fired the food technologists and began working on a process to reduce cooking time to help increase the flavor. "The food technologists said we couldn't do it. We knew we could and we did.

"When we gave them the product to taste, they said we hadn't really done what we said we had."

THE WORTHS built a plant (actually a barn with a concrete floor) in May and sent their product to market in November. Their jam, named Sorrell Ridge after their farm, contained only fruit, fruit juice and fruit pectin.

Worth knew the jam would be a success when a small grocery frequented by local New Brunswick fishermen began carrying it on the shelf next to a nationally known commercial brand. "Our jam was a dollar more per bottle and we were still outselling the other brand," he said.

Sorrell Ridge Conserves began to be carried in health-food stores in the Northeast and rapidly spread across the country.

The jam has an intensely fruity flavor and is so naturally sweet that most people who try it have to be convinced that there is no sugar or other sweetener added.

The wild-blueberry conserves, for which the company is known, are thick with whole blueberries and only 14 calories per teaspoon. In addition to being spread on bread, the conserves are excellent spooned over whole-milk ricotta cheese for a high-protein, low-calorie Italian dessert.

SORRELL RIDGE now produces both an unsweetened and a honey-sweetened line of conserves (the honey-sweetened ones have 17 calories per teaspoon). In addition to wild blueberry, there are 16 other flavors, including peach, raspberry, Damson plum, strawberry-rhubarb and orange marmalade.

Mark Blumenthal, 37, who works with Worth, is the creator of Hot Cha Cha! Texas salsa. He has lived in Austin since 1964, when he attended the University of Texas, graduating with a degree in philosophy.

"... We put in nine ingredients — tomatoes, jalapenos, carrots, celery, garlic, cilantro, green bell pepper, onions, apple cider vinegar — and left out five — salt, sugar, oil, food starch and gum," he said. "Our salsa is thick because of the vegetables, not because we added starches."

He claims Hot Cha Cha is the only salsa in the country without salt and sugar. "We use fresh carrots to give it a light natural sweetness," he said.

Skillet asparagus easily prepared

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

SKILLET ASPARAGUS

Easy to cook this way.
2 pounds asparagus
1 cup boiling water
½ teaspoon salt
2 to 4 tablespoons butter

Break or cut off tough whitish ends from asparagus and discard.

With a swivel-blade vegetable peeler, remove fibrous outer covering from asparagus spears up to buds. Wash thoroughly.

Arrange spears in a 10-inch skillet having half the buds at one side of skillet and half at other side. Add water and salt.

Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and boil rapidly, lifting cover several times to help keep asparagus green, until as tender as you like — 7 minutes or longer. Drain off any water.

Slather with butter. Serve at once. Makes 6 servings.

Sorrel, a versatile herb

By OLIVIA AND PAUL BENSEN
Copley News Service

The herb sorrel, with its distinctive tart flavor, cooks very much like spinach; that is, it wilts and reduces greatly in volume during the cooking process. In fact, after steaming for a few minutes, sorrel leaves take on the consistency of a puree.

First, strip the leaves from the stems and wash the leaves thoroughly in several changes of water.

Place a half-inch or so of water in a large saucepan. Steam the sorrel, covered, for about 4 minutes over moderate heat, until the leaves are thoroughly wilted.

Drain the leaves in a colander, pressing down with a wooden spoon to remove excess moisture.

SORREL MAYONNAISE

3 cups fresh sorrel, tightly packed
1 bunch fresh watercress
1 tsp. white wine vinegar
2 large eggs
2 tsps. Dijon mustard
1 cup vegetable oil
2 tbsps. scallions, minced
Juice of ¼ lemon (or to taste)
Salt and freshly ground white pepper to taste

Before measuring sorrel and watercress, wash, drain and remove stems.

In meium saucepan, boil 3 cups lightly salted water. Add sorrel and watercress and cook 2 to 3 minutes. Remove from saucepan and drain well, pressing greens with a wooden spoon to remove excess moisture.

In blender or food processor, mix vinegar, eggs and mustard until smooth. Turn off blender or processor, and scrape mixture to bottom of container. With blender or processor running again, drizzle in oil. Continue to blend until mixture is thick and smooth.

Add sorrel, watercress, parsley and scallions, and blend about 15 seconds, until smooth.

Remove from blender or processor to bowl, and whisk in salt, pepper and lemon juice to taste.

BAKED TROUT STUFFED WITH SORREL

4 whole medium-size trout (about 12 ozs. each)
1 lb. fresh sorrel leaves
6 tbsps. butter
1 medium onion, finely chopped
¼ cup heavy cream
1/3 cup dry white wine
Salt and pepper to taste

Bone, clean and wash trout. Remove sorrel stems, chop coarsely.

Melt 3 tablspoons butter in medium saucepan and gently cook sorrel leaves, about 5 minutes, until almost the consistency of a puree.

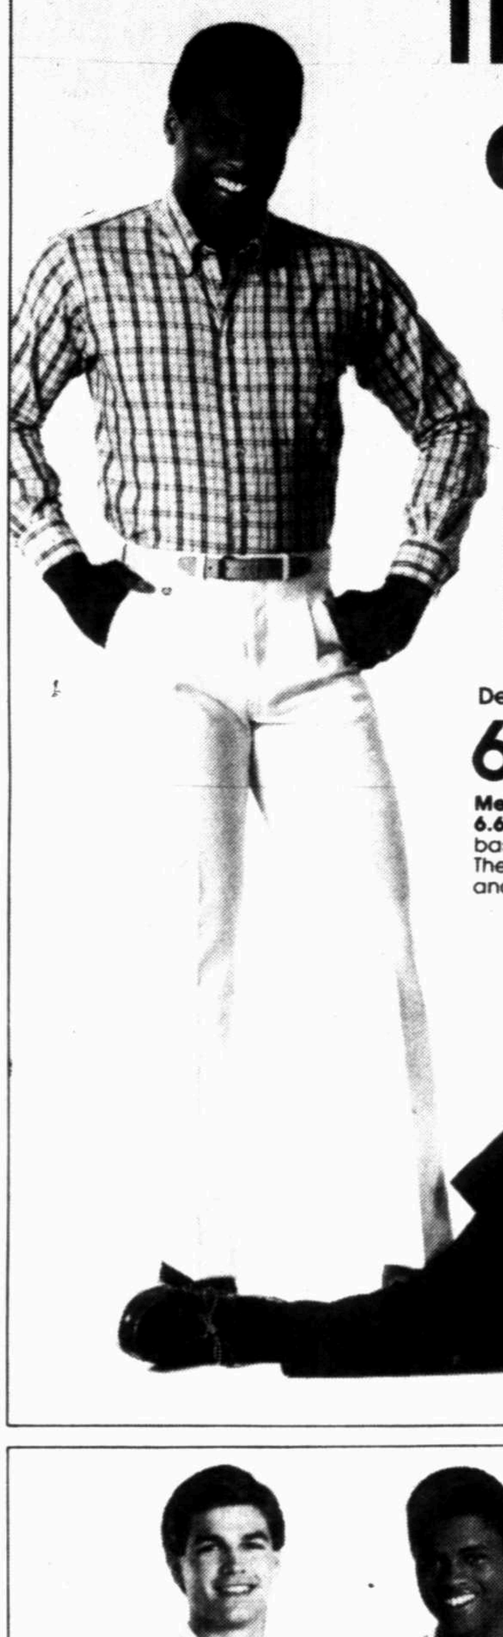

In ovenproof baking dish large enough to hold fish, spread onion evenly over bottom. Lightly salt and pepper fish, inside and out; put a small slice of butter inside each fish. Stuff cavities of fish with sorrel "puree" and arrange in dish.

Sprinkle wine over fish. Cut a piece of waxed paper slightly smaller than inside of dish and loosely cover fish to retain moisture during baking.

In a preheated oven, bake at 400 F for 15 minutes, or until cooked through. Remove from oven, discard waxed paper and adjust seasoning. Pour cream evenly over fish and serve in baking dish. Serves 4.

Garlic controversial seasoning

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Most people have fixed ideas about garlic. They either love the herb or hate it.

I am among those who crave the controversial seasoning, and it was with delight that I finally read Lloyd J. Harris' exhaustive study of this cousin of the onion. ("The Book Of Garlic." Panjandrum-Aris Books, 11321 Iowa, No. 1, Los Angeles, CA 90025.)

Among other things, the book tells of garlic's medicinal role over the centuries. Sometimes called Russian penicillin, it is one of the natural herbal remedies still used by the Soviets. At one point, the U.S.S.R. is said to have imported 500 tons of garlic during a flu epidemic.

The ancient Babylonians were garlic buffs and one Babylonian ruler reportedly had 395,000 bushels of the herb delivered to the court in a single batch.

Garlic was prized as a medium of exchange in Egypt. And the authorities there fed a diet of garlic, onions and radishes to thousands of workers laboring to build the great pyramid of Cheops.

When he passed through the Yunnan region of China, Marco Polo said he saw people eating raw liver, chopped and flavored with garlic.

Centuries later, the herb received a warm reception in France, particularly in Provence, where the peasants eat garlic on black bread for breakfast.

The British gave garlic a cool reception and were said to have sought some means of disguising the smell, but little was done. The Japanese are said to have developed an odorless fresh garlic, however. No mean feat, since it is estimated that one millionth of an ounce can be detected on one's breath.

Garlic is a key ingredient in gourmet dishes everywhere, but no one uses more of the herb than the Chinese, I believe. Here's a Chinese recipe from Lloyd Harris' book for Pekinese eggplant with garlic.

PEKINESE EGGPLANT

1 medium eggplant, firm and dark
8 cloves garlic
1 tablespoon Chinese black beans
2 tablespoons soy sauce
⅛ teaspoon sugar
1½ cups chicken broth
Vegetable oil, as needed

Cut eggplant into 2-inch cubes, leaving unpeeled. Brown the eggplant in a heavy frying pan, adding a few drops of oil as needed. Mix in paste made of crushed garlic and black beans (about 2 tablespoons). Add mixture of soy sauce, sugar and chicken broth. Reduce heat and simmer covered for 12 minutes.

To obtain other recipes, taken mostly from Tom Hoge's writings over the past years, send $2 for a copy of "101 Recipes" to Gourmet Corner, AP Newsfeatures, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10020.

Maryland beaten biscuit has long life

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WYE MILLS, Md. — The potential of the Maryland beaten biscuit has somehow been overlooked in the current national furor over the perils of nuclear war.

No more perfect food item could be set aside for the fallout shelter. The Maryland beaten biscuit doesn't have a shelf life, it has a half-life.

"As long as I can get 'em open, I can eat 'em," said 82-year-old Ruth Orrell, who runs Maryland's only known commercial beaten biscuit business in the shadow of the oldest white oak in the nation, the Wye Oak. "The only time I throw them away is if they mold," she said, adding that they only mold in extreme heat and humidity.

The Maryland beaten biscuit comes about as close as you're likely to get to permanence in a bread. Beaten biscuits start out hard. Left around long enough they get stone hard, and then Orrell likes to crush them up for use as a pancake base or for breading oysters or pork chops for frying.

Presumably, a survivalist who stocked his underground larder with Maryland beaten biscuits would have bread forever and no need for firearms to protect his cache. Intruders could be repelled with a barrage of the little breads, which are a bit larger, about as heavy and just as hard as golf balls.

Beaten biscuits have a rich history, dating to the earliest settlers who presumably were taught to beat their dough by the Indians, Orrell said.

Novelist John Barth wrote in The Floating Opera: "I recommend three Maryland beaten biscuits for breakfast. They are hard as a haul-seiners' conscience and dry as a dredger's tongue, and they sit for hours in your morning stomach like ballast on a tender ship's keel.

"They cost little, are easily and crumblessly carried in your pockets, and if forgotten and gone stale are neither harder nor less palatable than when fresh."

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., a champion of the beaten biscuit, will drive the hour and a half from Washington to the Eastern Shore just to load up on Orrell's products, which he says are "to Maryland what the crepe is to France, pasta to Italy and the matzo to Israel."

But he says the biscuit is often misunderstood. "When the gift of a beaten biscuit is exported from Maryland by air mail ... the recipient will assume that the unique consistency is somehow the result of having become stale in the mail. Only when he tastes the beaten biscuit and penetrates its hard shell will he discover the fresh, rewarding treat awaiting him."

Mathias for years has been spreading the word about Orrell's Maryland beaten biscuits and inflicting them on his staff, one of whom said the gifts are particularly appreciated by "those of us with strong teeth."

On an average week, Orrell's staff of six women and a man, working three days a week in her sunwashed kitchen and an adjoining shed, produce about 1,000 dozen beaten biscuits. The morsels sell for $1.60 a dozen retail.

Orrell started the business in 1935 as a way of making "pin money," she said. Her first batch, beaten into submission with a two-pound hammer, "wasn't fit to eat," but over the years the biscuits got better and the system got smoother. The ingredients never changed: flour, country lard, water, sugar, salt, a smidgen of baking soda and plenty of elbow grease.

These days the beating is done by an electrically powered roller, which pounds great hunks of dough for 25 minutes to aerate it. The dough is hand-formed into silky smooth biscuits by one of five women working around a kitchen table, then baked in six ovens by Mary Holtzlaw, chief baker for 20 years.

Chicken salad has tropical flair

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

A good many modern cooks have changed the way they serve old-time chicken salad. For some years now a favorite way of offering it has been to couple it with fruit — notably pineapple and seedless green grapes.

Now an inventive cook has teamed chicken salad with papaya. That delectable fruit sets off the chicken combination and it may be mounded in the cavities of papaya halves.

The following recipe for chicken salad with papaya benefits from homemade curry mayonnaise.

CHICKEN SALAD WITH PAPAYA

3 cups diced (¾ inch) cooked chicken
1 cup thinly sliced celery
⅓ cup thinly sliced scallion
⅔-cup Curry Mayonnaise, recipe follows
2 papayas (each about 1 pound)
2 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds, if desired
Watercress sprigs

In a large bowl thoroughly toss together the chicken, celery, scallion and ⅔ cup mayonnaise; cover and chill. At serving time halve papayas lengthwise and remove the seeds. Cut away peel from each papaya half, if you like. Place each half on an individual salad or luncheon plate; mound chicken salad in papaya cavities. Sprinkle with the sesame seeds. Garnish with the watercress. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

CURRY MAYONNAISE

1 large egg
2⅓ tablespoons lemon juice
1⅓ teaspoons curry powder
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon cayenne
1 cup vegetable oil

In an electric blender whirl together just until blended the egg, lemon juice, curry powder, salt and cayenne. With the motor running, pour in the oil in a thin steady stream; whirl just until oil is incorporated. Turn into a jar, cover tightly and refrigerate. Makes about 1¼ cups. Use the amount called for in the Chicken Salad with Papaya recipe and keep the remainder stored in the refrigerator for use with other salads or in sandwich spreads.

Enjoy a whole family of breads lovingly made with special touches (like letting the dough rise twice and adding bran on top). Bursting with natural ingredients. Free of artificial preservatives. And baked nearby, so they'll be at their best when you bring them home.

Polo Park completing clubhouse, facilities

Polo Park has announced that construction is nearing completion on a 3,000 square foot clubhouse and outdoor recreational facility which will be the focal point for both garden homes and larger custom homes in the Polo Park community.

The complete clubhouse facility is scheduled for completion by mid-summer, with tennis courts and swimming pool to be underway soon, according to Scott Steenson, developer of Polo Park.

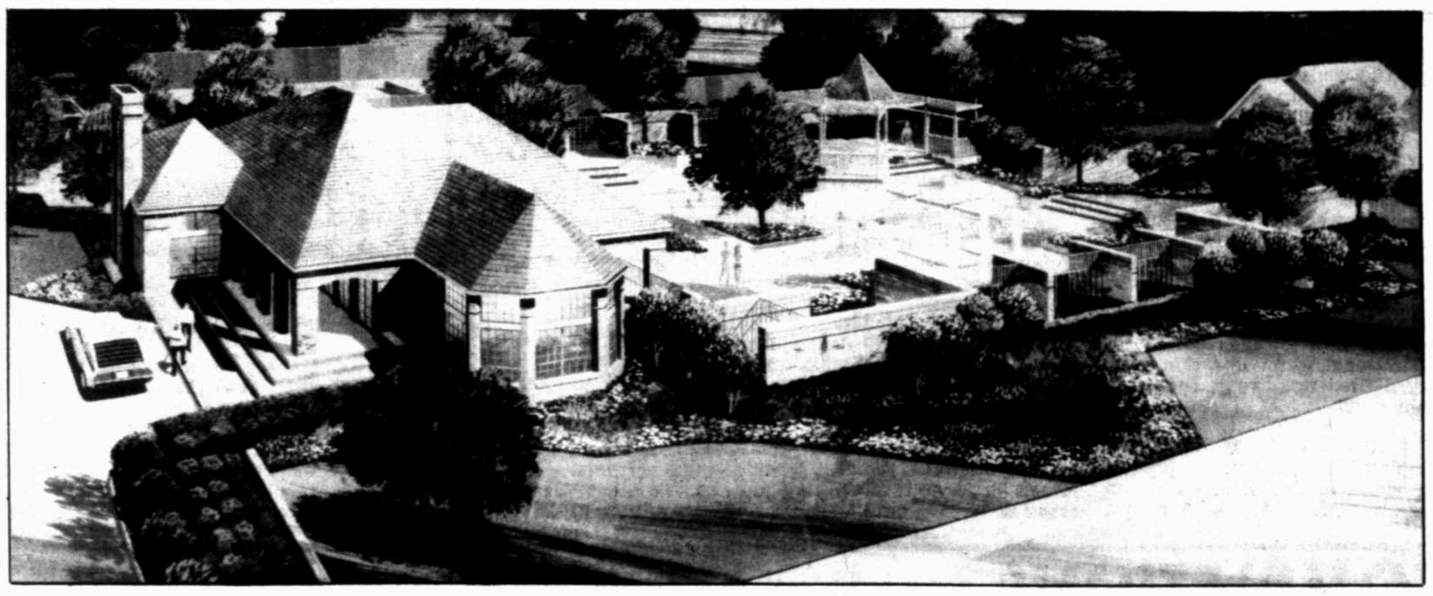

"Every homeowner will have access to its features with a small fee for landscape maintenance of the common areas, approximately $25 per month," said Steenson.

"This entitles them to use the pool, tennis courts, work-out room, sun room and the large entertaining capabilities of the clubhouse."

A mid-summer grand opening celebration is planned to introduce the newly-completed clubhouse. Models of the new garden homes will be completed about July 1.

The garden homes under construction at Polo Park will be priced from $90,000 to $110,000, while the larger, luxury homes range from $125,000 to $200,000.

Steenson, a native of Iraan and a Midland resident, has been involved in real estate brokerage and development for 10 years. He was formerly with Coldwell Banker commercial Brokerage Co.

Single-family home affordability increases

WASHINGTON — Although higher mortgage interest rates make further improvements in housing affordability unlikely in coming months, the door to homeownership opportunity did open a bit wider in April for people seeking to purchase an existing single-family home, the National Association of Realtors reports.

The association's Housing Affordability Index moved up to 87.4, the highest level since December 1979, as resale home prices remained relatively stable, median family income rose and a growing number of homebuyers turned to adjustable-rate mortgages (ARMs), which carry lower initial interest rates than fixed-rate loans, reported Jack Carlson, the executive officer and chief economist of the association.

The preliminary April index was 0.4 percentage points above the revised March index of 87.0. The April 1984 level was 5.1 percentage points above the April 1983 index of 82.3 and 23.5 percentage points higher than the index low of 63.9 recorded in September 1981.

However, the affordability index last month remained far below the 151.9 record reached in April 1971, Carlson said.

"The index has not been at 100, which would mean that a family earning the median income had exactly enough income to qualify for a mortgage on a median-priced home, since December 1978," he added.

The April index means that a family earning the national median income of $25,276 had 87.4 percent of the income needed to qualify for a mortgage financing 80 percent of a median-priced resale home, which was $72,600 that month.

Carlson said that, because more than 60 percent of the mortgages closed by major lenders last month for the purchase of resale homes were ARMs, whose interest rates start out 1-2 percentage points lower than those on fixed-rate mortgages, the interest rate series used in computing the Housing Affordability Index moved down from March to April. The average effective interest rate on all loans closed (both fixed-rate and ARMs) for existing homes fell to 12.11 percent from 12.17 percent, according to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

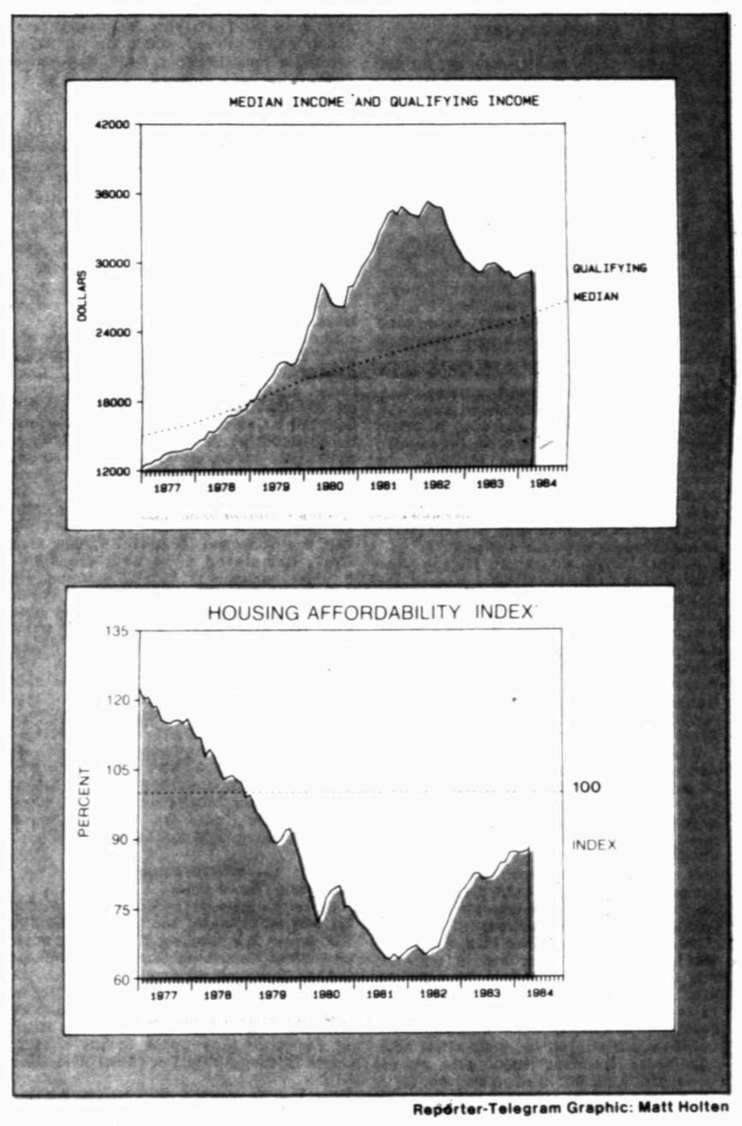

"Although the average initial ARM rate moved down from March to April, mortgage interest rates on fixed-rate loans were moving upward in April and can be expected to continue doing so in the months ahead, making prospects for further improvement in the affordability index unlikely," Carlson said.

Even initial ARM rates can be expected to rise in the months ahead, he predicted.

"The Housing Affordability Index is not likely to reach the 100 mark in the near future because of high and rising interest rates," Carlson said.

He predicted that the Housing Affordability Index would remain in the 84-86 range throughout the remainder of 1984 and 1985.

Further analyzing the April survey data, Carlson noted that, although the median family income fell $3,636 below the income needed to qualify for a mortgage on a median-priced resale home in April, it was enough to qualify for a loan on a $63,500 home with a 20 percent down payment.

TEC being investigated

AUSTIN (AP) — A House subcommittee has been named to investigate the Texas Employment Commission, and Rep. Lloyd Criss says the probe will look into the firings of two top officials and the sale of three TEC buildings.

"The best interests of the public will be served if everything is brought out into the open," said Criss, D-Texas City, who is chairman of the House Committee on Labor and Employment Relations.

Criss' full committee is responsible for overseeing the TEC. He named the investigative subcommittee after the three agency commissioners refused to answer some of his questions about the firings of two top agency officials.

During a meeting of the full committee Tuesday, Commissioners Ed Grisham, Ronnie Luna and Ken Clapp said they all have been sued by fired TEC administrator Ernie Tullis. Citing their lawyers' advice, the three declined to answer questions about that firing and the firing of former associate administrator Pat Joiner.

Criss said he wants to know more about those firings, and about the sale of three TEC buildings which have been appraised at about $52 million but may be sold for $32 million.

"There are a lot of questions we need answered," Criss said.

He said he was concerned that the commissioners would refuse to answer questions, even after being subpoenaed.

"That gives all agencies something to hide behind when they don't want to testify (to the Legislature). If everything's on the up and up, why not bring it all out?" Criss said.

The TEC administers unemployment compensation benefits and runs job placement programs.

Census finds more law firms operating in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans seeking legal help have plenty of choices, the government reports, with an increase of nearly 50 percent in the number of law firms over a decade.

The Census Bureau reported Tuesday that there were 115,435 law firms in the United States as of 1982. That's up from 94,882 in 1977 and is 49 percent more than the 77,282 firms counted in 1972.

The Census of Service Industries counts firms with payrolls, thus not including single lawyers working alone, or those not in practice.

But the American Bar Association reported that the increase in law firms has paralleled a growth in the number of lawyers in the United States.

The ABA estimated that there were about 622,000 persons admitted to practice across the country as of 1983. That is up from 535,000 in 1980 and 357,000 in 1970, the ABA said.

However, bar association officials said that growth seems to have begun to level off, and that for the last two years new admissions to the bar have not increased over the year before.

David Weinberg of the bar association said that as of 1980, 68 percent of American lawyers were in private practice, and 49 percent of those operated in solo practices.

He said 17 percent of lawyers in private practice were members of firms of two or three lawyers, 16 percent were in firms of four to nine; 9 percent are in firms of 10 to 24; 8 percent in firms of 25 to 99 and the rest in firms of 100 or more.

The new Census report on law firms found that these businesses had receipts of $34 billion in 1982, double that of 1977. Firms in the District of Columbia had the highest average receipts at $1.1 million 1982, while the lowest were in South Dakota, $140,000.

These law firms had 569,278 full- and part-time employees in 1982, up from 392,048 in 1977.

Dollar mixed; Gold steady

LONDON (AP) — The dollar turned in a mixed performance in early European trading today. Gold bullion prices were also mixed.

West German bankers said the dollar was holding steady, but they noted a weakening of some factors that had been underpinning the currency in recent weeks.

For example, one trader said West Germany's metalworkers' strike, now in its fifth week, was no longer affecting exchange markets.

Steel producers get some relief

By The Associated Press

Although the U.S. International Trade Commission has promised U.S. steelmakers some relief from damaging imports, it didn't give the producers the comprehensive import restrictions they were seeking.

The green light, meanwhile, was given by the Justice Department to the purchase of half of National Steel Corp. for $292 million by Japan's No. 2 steelmaker.

The ITC on Tuesday ruled that nearly three-fourths of steel imports have caused major damage to U.S. producers and should be limited. But it rejected a request for comprehensive trade protection for all steel products.

The trade commission, an independent, fact-finding government agency, concluded by a 3-2 vote that imports are a principal cause of serious injury in five steel product categories — plates, sheet and strip, wire and wire plate, semi-finished steel and structural shapes.

At the same time, the panel denied protection to wire rod, railway products, bars, and pipe and tube on the ground that imports are not the primary cause of problems in those industries.

The steel products in line for protection accounted for $4.3 billion or 70 percent of 1983 imports, and are used primarily in construction, auto manufacturing and other heavy industries.

The commission will hold hearings later this month on whether quotas, tariffs or a combination of both should be recommended to President Reagan. He must accept, reject or modify the commission's proposed remedies by Sept. 24.

Bethlehem Steel Corp. and the United Steelworkers of America, which filed the ITC petition, had requested a worldwide quota limiting all steel imports to 15 percent of American consumption for five years.

Imports accounted for 20.5 percent of the American market last year, and 25.2 percent of domestic consumption in the first four months of 1984, up from 18.3 percent in the same period last year.

Assistant Attorney General J. Paul McGrath, head of the Justice Department's antitrust division, said the government will advise National Steel and Nippon Kokan Kabushiki Kaisha that their deal presents no competitive problems and there will be no government challenge to it in court under the Clayton Act.

In April, NKK proposed to buy a half interest in National Intergroup Inc.'s wholly owned subsidiary, National Steel. National Steel is the seventh-ranked U.S. steelmaker.

The U.S. steel industry lost $6 billion in 1982 and 1983, and an estimated 90,000 steelworkers are jobless due to layoffs and plant shutdowns. More than 170 facilities have closed in the last two years.

In other economic developments Tuesday:

—A federal appeals court upheld the Federal Communications Commission's plan to require all telephone customers to pay "access charges." Under the plan, set to take effect next year, residential customers would have to pay $2 per month, while businesses would be charged up to $6 per line per month.

—The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 15.64 points Monday, slipped another 5.08 to close at 1,110.53. That brought losses over the past four sessions to 23.31 points.

—Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said he expects interest rates to "trend down" this summer rather than rising as some economists predict. He also said the U.S. economic recovery is proving stronger than the Reagan administration had expected, and he contended it could also prove more durable than most recent revivals.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Irion wildcat finals for 352 bopd

A.N. NORWOOD INC., Midland, has completed its No.1 Page-Suggs as a Canyon oil producer in the Rock Pen multipay field in Irion County. The well flowed 352 bopd of 38.8 API with a trace of water through a 16/64 in. choke. Gas, oil ratio was 2,144:1.

The well was completed through perforations at 6,580 to 6,636 ft. after being drilled to 7,575 ft. and plugged back to 7,012 ft.

The well is located 2,173 from the north and east lines of Section 40, C.A. Chadwick survey, two miles west of Mertzon.

CHEVRON U.S.A., Midland, has completed the final six wells of its 1984 infill program in the Iatan East Howard field, in Howard and Mitchell counties.

All the wells but one completed well over 200 bopd, but this is characteristic of wells in the field. Initial production rates are high, but usually drop to about 40 bopd after about one year.

Chevron has drilled approximately 30 wells in the field in the past two years, looking for locations where oil might have been trapped and by-passed. The firms has now concluded drilling all the producers it intends to drill this year and will take time to review the results.

Additional water injection wells may drilled next year, following evaluations.

EXXON CORP., Midland, has completed three additional producing wells in the Means field in Andrews County. The wells finaled for four, 149, and 212 bopd.

PARKER & PARSLEY, Midland, has completed two new wells in the Spraberry trend. The No.1 Howard finaled on pump for 40 bopd of 39.4 API, 28 Mcfd, and 205 bwpd. Location is 565 from west and 660 from south lines of Section 23, Block 37, T-1-S, T&P survey, six miles west of Stanton in Martin County.

The firm's No.1 Nail finaled on pump for 56 bopd of 39.6 API, 42 Mcfd and 205 bwpd. It is located 660 ft. from south and 760 ft. from east lines of Section 5, Block 38, T-1-S, T&P survey, 16 miles west of Stanton.

Wildcats slated

POGO PRODUCTION, Midland, will drill the No.1 W.C. Houston in the Big Whit field in Glasscock County to test the Wolfcamp at 8,400 ft. and for a wildcat test at 7,932 ft.

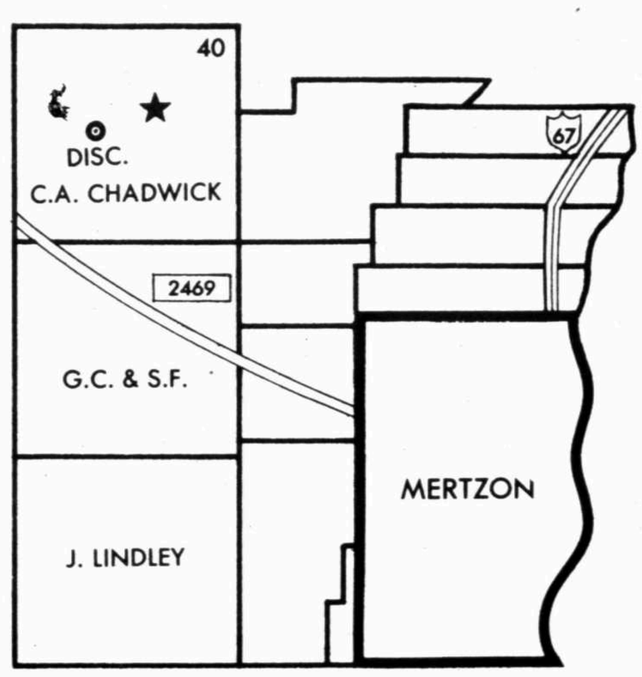

SANTA FE MINERALS, Midland, has scheduled to drill the No.1 McDowell Estate, a 8,400 ft. wildcat, 15 miles northwest of Garden Cityin Glasscock County.

HNG OIL CO., will drill a wildcat to 14,400 ft. 28 miles southwest of Fort Stockton in Pecos County.

SHELL WESTERN E&P, Houston has scheduled the No.1 Downie Ranch -5- 24 miles north of Sanderson in Pecos County for a wildcat test at 7500 ft.

McKAY OIL CORP., will drill the No.1-Y Berrendo to a total depth of 4,000 ft. Location is 2-T10S-24e, 2.5 miles northeast of Roswell.

ORLA PETCO INC., Midland, will drill a step out wildcat in Culberson County. It is the No.1 Horseshoe Springs State located 10 miles west of Orla. The well is set to spud today, going to a TD of 3,900. Classified as a wildcat, it is not considered rank and will probably complete as a development well.

Fair housing leader charged in discrimination suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leader in the nation's fair housing movement and a major developer of federally subsidized housing has been sued by the Justice Department for allegedly discriminating against blacks in the rental of apartments.

In a separate case filed in U.S. District Court in Boston, the department also charged the owners and operators of 13 apartment complexes in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island with discriminating against black and Hispanic rental applicants.

The two suits were the 18th and 19th housing cases brought since the Reagan administration took office in 1981. The administration has been sharply criticized for the small number of cases, which compare with the average of 30 a year filed during the Carter administration.

Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the department's civil rights division, said one suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Wilmington, Del., against North Delaware Realty Co.; its chief executive officer Leon Weiner, and a rental supervisor, Barry Rizzo.

Weiner, an active liberal Democrat in the nation's housing industry, is chairman of the board of the National Housing Conference, a nonprofit national organization devoted to expanding federally subsidized housing for low-income Americans. On June 27, he is to be named Housing Man of the Year by the conference.

Weiner is a past president of the National Association of Home Builders and has served for 20 years on the board of the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing.

Weiner, of Wilmington, develops, owns and manages low- and moderate-income rental housing subsidized by HUD. He said he operates about 20 such projects along the East Coast.

The government charged Weiner, his company and Rizzo with violating the Fair Housing Act of 1968. It said they, "through their employees, followed a policy of giving white applicants for apartments priority over black applicants whose qualifications were similar and who applied for apartments at an earlier date, and have systematically falsified records in order to conceal this policy."

The government also charged that one rental manager, William E. Mason Jr., was fired allegedly because he informed HUD about the purported racial discrimination.

Average earnings of families up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The weekly earnings of an estimated 40.3 million American families with one or more breadwinners averaged $488 in the first quarter, up 7.5 percent from $453 during the same period in 1983, the government reports.

Over half of these families contained at least two wage-earners, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said. It added that the average wage and salary earnings of these multi-earner families, at $648, were more than twice those of single-earner families.

The earnings of families maintained by women — $280 a week — continued to be a little more than half the earnings of married-couple families, which averaged $530 a week, the report said.

It said the average weekly earnings for white families totaled $503, compared with $353 for black families and $390 for Hispanic families.

"These differences are much greater than earnings differences for individuals (whites, blacks and Hispanics) because minority families are less likely to have more than one worker (in the household)," the report said.

An estimated 62 percent of the families with a member officially listed as unemployed had someone else in the household working.

The report, based on a survey of 60,000 U.S. households, said that in instances where the husband was unemployed and the wife was the only worker, usual weekly earnings averaged $203. But when the wife was jobless and the husband was the lone breadwinner, the usual weekly earnings averaged $342, it said.

The "usual weekly earnings" of individual full-time wage and salary males averaged between $325 and $400, while the figure for women in this category was $258.

The average weekly earnings of people with full-time jobs rose 5.4 percent in the first quarter.

Firm reviving name, expanding services

Reed Tool Co., once a prominent name in the oil industry, is again to be listed among the important firms in the oilfield service industry. Reed Rock Bit Co. is reviving the former company name to better identify its expanding range of drilling tools and services.

Following the 1975 acquisition of Reed Tool by Baker International, the company was divided into separage entities along product lines. Reed Rock Bit Co., formed out of this decision, emerged as one of the technological leaders in the drill bit industry.

In 1982, Reed Rock Bit introduced a full line of polycrystalline diamond bits, known as RDC (Reed polycrystalline diamond bits). The following year the company acquired American Coldset Corp., a 30 year old diamond bit and coring service company, to expand its marketing line of drilling tools for the industry.

Roman Boruta, president, said, "the ACC acquisition last year positioned our company with a complete complement of drill bit tools to accomodate every customer need, in any formation, throughout the world. The Reed-ACC combination meant that we could provide our customers with a planned well program supported by a full line of drill bits from spud to TD.

Worker says he bought zoo rabbits for food

ATLANTA (AP) — As the City Council president called for a shakeup of employees at the beleaguered Atlanta Zoo, a newspaper reported that a city worker bought "old and fat" rabbits and pigs from the zoo's children's exhibit and slaughtered and ate them.

Neil Jackson, a groundskeeper with the city's Parks and Recreation Department, said he bought about 20 rabbits in recent years that were on display at the children's exhibit under an arrangement with Ron Jackson, the zoo's mammal curator.

"Ron Jackson knows all about it; you ask him," said Neil Jackson, no relation to Ron Jackson.

The animals "were old and fat anyway. They were going to die anyway," the groundskeeper was quoted as saying in today's editions of The Atlanta Constitution. "The pigs' bellies were scraping on the ground. And those rabbits were overpopulated."

Neil Jackson, whose maintenance station is next to the zoo, said he regularly took pigs, ducks and other animals from the children's exhibit under the longstanding arrangement with Ron Jackson.

Ron Jackson said he did not recall the arrangement and refused to answer further questions.

Neil Jackson's comments came as City Council President Marvin Arrington said he would ask Mayor Andrew Young to get rid of some employees at the troubled zoo, where the city is investigating allegations that animals were neglected.

Among the incidents being investigated by the city are the deaths of two mona monkeys, the death of an elephant while with a traveling circus this spring, the deaths of two kodiak bears that were shipped to a North Carolina buffalo ranch and the deaths of a tiger and lion, both of which were diagnosed as having advanced cancer.

The Constitution reported that three zoo keepers, including former children's zoo keeper Ivy Luden and two others who asked not to be identified, said Ron Jackson ordered them in January to catch the rabbits and give them to Neil Jackson.

When the keepers asked Neil Jackson what he was doing with them, he told them, "I'm going to make me a rabbit stew."

Asked Tuesday about the comment, Neil Jackson said, "You can fry them, boil them, any way you like."

Neil Jackson said he bought the rabbits for a total of about $70 from the mammal curator. Ron Jackson refused to confirm the sale.

But former zoo director Steve Dobbs was quoted by the Constitution as saying he had seen canceled checks and that the money went into the city coffers.

The rest of the animals, Neil Jackson said, he obtained free, with the agreement that he would replace them later with other animals. He said he provided two hogs to the zoo.

Baptist group chooses new president

Rev. Stanley

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — National delegates of the Southern Baptist Convention chose the Rev. Charles Stanley, a conservative Atlanta minister, over two opponents for president of the 14.1-million-member denomination.

Stanley won 7,692 of the 14,822 votes cast to outdistance the Rev. Grady C. Cothen of Nashville, Tenn., who had 3,874 votes. The Rev. John Sullivan, the convention's first vice president, finished third with 3,174 votes. About 100 votes were invalid.

Stanley's election Tuesday was a victory for Southern Baptist conservatives, who have elected their candidate every year since 1979.

During the past five years the denomination has split into conservative and moderate factions. Convention leaders have said this meeting could line up the denomination along one side.

As a conservative, Stanley said, he opposes the ordination of women and backs prayer in schools.

"I am committed to Biblical authority," he said after his election.

Downplaying the conservative-moderate rift, Stanley, 51, said he did not believe he was elected by just one faction.

"You'll never get all Baptists to agree. I think we'll have to learn to live together and love each other," he said.

Paul Pressler, a leader of the conservative movement, said Stanley's election clearly shows what Southern Baptists want.

"I think his election shows where the hearts of Southern Baptists are and moves us solidly back to the Biblical basis that has made us a great denomination," said Pressler, of Houston.

Pressler scored a conservative victory by narrowly winning election to the convention's Executive Committee, the main governing body. In a controversial move, moderate forces nominated the Rev. Bruce McIver, of Dallas, to oppose him. After strong debate on the nominations, Pressler received 5,462 votes and McIver 4,607.

More than 22,000 Southern Baptists are attending the meeting, which began Tuesday and ends Thursday. There about 18,000 messengers, or voting delegates.

Grandmother blames drugs for her killings

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A 51-year-old grandmother facing the death penalty for poisoning her boyfriend says she blames drug addiction for leading her to commit murder.

"No one knows how easy it is to become addicted to the medicine," Velma Margie Barfield said in an interview on the "CBS Morning News" broadcast today. "I blame it all on drugs because these things had never happened in my life until I got involved with drugs."

Mrs. Barfield, described by a prosecutor as a "merciless killer," was convicted in 1978 of poisoning her boyfriend, Stuart Taylor of St. Pauls. At her trial, Mrs. Barfield also testified she had poisoned at least three other people, including her mother.

A stay of execution for Mrs. Barfield was lifted last week after her latest appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court was denied. A sentencing hearing to set a new execution date was scheduled today in Bladen County Superior Court.

If the execution is carried out, she would be the first woman executed in the United States in 22 years. In North Carolina, prisoners facing execution can choose from cyanide gas or lethal injection.

Interviewed at the Corrections Center for Women in Raleigh, Mrs. Barfield said she began taking prescription drugs after her first husband died in a fire. She said she began most days with two or three Valium, Librium and other tranquilizers, and took three or four sleeping pills at night.

Mrs. Barfield said she regretted the pain she had caused others.

"I have spent many sleepless days and nights," she said. "I don't think no one can know unless they have been there. When I think of the hurt I've caused so many people, it's almost unbearable."
