Americans Vent Outrage In Letters To Solons

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I am outraged; invade Iran," a Chicago man wrote Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill.

"Tell (the Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini to take his oil and stick it," a Delmar, N.Y., man scrawled in longhand to Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y.

"Drop the bomb," an Ardsley, N.Y., man wrote Rep. Peter Peyser, D-N.Y.

Americans across the country are sending letters and telegrams like that to senators and House members.

The Capitol post office says mail volume is higher than usual and Stratton's office says he's getting more mail on Iran than on any issue since Watergate.

"Don't you people or our president have the nerve to stand up to one mad man and his followers?" one man demanded of House Republican Whip Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

"Tell those ninnies at the State Department to stop pussyfooting around," a Springfield, Ill., couple urged Stevenson. "Start deportation or internment proceedings for all Iranian nationals residing in this country."

Another Springfield, Ill., man said, "Every Iranian now in the United States should be arrested and held in detention until every American is freed."

"Give them (Iranians) all a number and if any American is hurt in any way in Iran, choose by lottery 10 for one to be hurt, even executed, in the same way" a New York man wrote.

"One cannot reach out to appease a rattlesnake coiled to strike," a Bandon, Ore., man told Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore. "Let's take off the kid gloves and give Khomeini a taste of his own lawless medicine."

Many writers, including a McCall, Idaho, man, said food and other U.S. aid should be cut off.

"I wonder how oil tastes," the McCall man told Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, in a mailgram. "I'm for letting the Iranians decide."

Coincidentally, Hansen later went to Iran in a personal effort to get the hostages freed.

Many of the writers urged tough action only after American hostages still in Iran are released.

"Let's sit tight until our hostages are free," a New York man wrote. "Then we should hit Iran with every economic sanction at our disposal. As far as their oil is concerned, let them soak their rear ends in it."

Some writers were just frustrated.

"I'm outraged at the impotence of our government, both the executive and legislative branches," a Santa Cruz, Calif., man told Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

"They're making a fool of us," said an Army veteran from New York.

"If it is military action that is required, then support it," a Creswell, Ore., man told Hatfield. "If it is diplomacy, then furnish it. We truly want action now."

President Promises Retaliation

'Grave Consequences'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter met with his top military and foreign policy advisers for more than two hours today and warned Iran's leader that harming a single American hostage would produce "extremely grave" retaliation.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell told reporters after the meeting that the president had asked him to relay the message that in Carter's view, "the last American hostage is just as important to the United States as the first.

(Other Iranian Stories On Pages 6-7, Sec. B)

"The consequences of harm to any single hostage will be extremely grave."

The press secretary said he had no new developments to report but that the United States is keeping diplomatic channels open and "there may be some encouragement from the fact that they are still active."

In response to reporters' questions, Powell said the administration remains firm in its refusal to turn over the former shah, who is undergoing cancer treatment in New York. "He was allowed to come here for humanitarian reasons to receive medical treatment. That treatment will not be interrupted," he said.

Powell also said he saw little new in the threat issued Thursday by Iran's revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who said militants occupying the U.S. Embassy in Iran would kill their hostages and blow up the building if the United States attacks Iran.

Powell noted that the militants themselves had said the "same thing earlier. It really makes no difference who says it or how many times it is said," he said, adding that U.S. policy is unchanged.

Carter met for about two hours and 20 minutes with his advisers, including Vice President Walter Mondale, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, Central Intelligence Agency Chief Stansfield Turner and Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

They arrived at Carter's mountaintop retreat by helicopter and after the meeting returned to Washington.

Also present at Camp David was White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan.

Powell would not give a list of all those who took part in the meeting.

Powell said Carter plans to meet Saturday with the military Joint Chiefs of Staff, which includes the uniformed leaders of the Army, Air Force and Navy. Powell said the "primary topic" of the meeting would be to discuss the Defense Department's budget, but said he could not rule out that the Iranian situation also might be discussed.

The White House went out of its way to call attention to today's meeting by allowing photographers and television camera crews into the compound to record the arrival of the advisers. Ordinar-

ATC Halts Iranian Training

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The training of Iranian student pilots, including three at Reese Air Force Base, was indefinitely suspended today by order of the Air Training Command.

Gen. Bennie L. Davis, commander of Air Training Command at Randolph Air Force Base in San Antonio, issued the order for a one-day "stand-down" in the training of pilots from Iran.

Spokesmen at Reese AFB and at Randolph AFB said they do not know how long the halt in training will continue.

Spokesmen said they could not comment on the reason for the order. The decision, which apparently originated in the Pentagon, came shortly after Defense Secretary Harold Brown met with President Carter at Camp David, Md.

There are 245 Iranian student pilots training in the United States.

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance told The Avalanche-Journal today that the Defense Department "notified us this was a serious consideration as early as Tuesday."

Hance and other Texas lawmakers began pushing for a halt to the training of Iranian military trainees here last week.

Hance co-sponsored a resolution asking for such a termination and also wrote to Brown requesting the halt.

U.S. Sen. John Tower praised the Defense Department's decision, saying it should be a permanent cancellation.

"It seems the prudent thing to do. I

Yanks Lead Iran Parade

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — About 20 foreigners, most of them Americans, surprised Iranians today by parading through the streets of Tehran to demand the extradition of the shah, "because, having lived here through the revolution, we know him to be a murderer."

Acting Foreign Minister Abolhassan Bani-Sadr announced Iran will not pay its foreign debts, which he put at $15 billion, on grounds the debts were run up by the regime of the deposed shah, according to Tehran Radio.

The foreign marchers, accompanied by about 20 revolutionary guards, were cheered by scores of Iranians shouting "Long Live Americans" as they walked from Ferdowsi Square to Tehran University and back. One American said the group was divided over the taking of American hostages at the U.S. Embassy but that they were unanimous about the shah.

In the first anti-shah demonstration by foreign residents, one British member of the group, Peter Davis, read a statement in English to crowds gathered at the square. It said: "We express our thanks to the Iranian people for their kindness to us while we have been living here.

"To ask our people and governments to be equally kind and helpful to the Iranians living in our countries. To ask our governments not to give a home to the shah because, having lived here through the revolution, we know him to be a murderer. We are both angry and embarrassed that our governments are still helping the shah."

U.S. Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, on a one-man peace mission to Iran, said he was told Iranian officials would talk about releasing the hostages if Congress investigates the shah's regime. In a telephone interview with the Idaho Statesman, Hansen said he would request the investigation as soon as he returns to Washington.

During morning prayers at Tehran University Bani-Sadr said, "You people should know how they plundered us in this country. Now, we wish to change this banking system. We want to make it independent, to place it at the service of the Iranian revolution," according to Tehran radio.

"For this reason, how can we honor

U.S. Citizens In Pakistan Leave

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — More than 300 Americans left this Pakistani capital today in an airlift ordered by the State Department after a Moslem mob sacked the U.S. Embassy here in a riot that killed six persons, including two American servicemen.

The bodies of Marine Cpl. Steven Crowley of Port Jefferson, N.Y., and Army Chief Warrant Officer Bryan Ellis of Spring Lake, N.C., were put aboard the chartered Pan Am jumbo jet before the 310 evacuees boarded.

Children hugged teddy bears and parents carried infants and pet cages. Some cried, others questioned the necessity of the evacuation.

The departure from Islamabad airport was conducted under tight security and one reporter interviewing evacuees was ejected from the area.

Forty other American dependents and non-essential U.S. personnel boarded the plane when it stopped at Karachi, Pakistan's largest city. From there the plane headed for Washington after a refueling stop in Europe.

Those leaving from Islamabad included families from U.S. missions in Lahore and Peshawar and about 40 American civilians, most of them families of teachers, who are not employed by the government.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur W. Hummel Jr. warned evacuees against making statements in Washington critical of the Pakistani army's handling of rioters during Wednesday's disturbances. He said critical remarks might affect the safety of the 49 American hostages held by militant Moslem students at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and the 65 embassy staffers who remained in Islamabad.

Asked what could be criticized, one the of evacuees told The Associated Press: "The five-hour wait for the Pakistan army."

Witnesses have said troops did not move against the mob until five hours after the embassy siege began. Besides the two Americans killed, the riot claimed the lives of two Pakistani employees of the embassy and two of the rioters. Official sources today revised an earlier report that a third employee's body had been found in the burned embassy.

Many in Islamabad's diplomatic community have expressed surprise and anger that the martial law regime of Pakistan's president, Gen. Zia ul-Haq, acted so slowly to put down the riot, triggered by rumors that Americans had invaded a key Moslem shrine in Mecca, Saudi Arabia.

Some of the evacuees also were critical of the decision to pull U.S. personnel out of Pakistan.

"Isn't it a farce?" the wife of one U.S. official asked a reporter. "It's all quite unnecessary," she said.

The Pakistan capital has remained calm since Wednesday night. Zia's military regime expressed "deep regret" for the incident and announced Thursday it was launching an investigation into its causes.

Local newspapers said Zia visited a Catholic convent school in nearby Rawalpindi, which also was attacked Wednesday, and offered government funds for repairs. Also badly damaged by the mobs were local Bank of America and American Express branches and the American culture center.

Teacher Gets Suspension For Refusing Late Papers

DETROIT (UPI) — A high school English teacher who calls herself "firm, but fair" has been suspended for 10 days without pay for refusing to accept overdue term papers from four students.

Lillie Mann, a 12-year veteran who teaches at Mackenzie High School, said she will appeal Tuesday's Detroit Board of Education ruling to the State Teacher Tenure Commission.

"Firm, but fair — yes," Mrs. Mann said of her reputation among students. "I have a reputation around the school and the students are aware of it. They come into my class and they already know what I expect."

Last May, Mrs. Mann refused to accept overdue research papers from four college-bound seniors. When ordered by Principal Cleon Gilliam to accept the papers and grade them, she gave each student an "E — No credit" mark.

Gilliam said he asked the school board to suspend Mrs. Mann for insubordination because her refusal to accept the papers one day after they were due threatened the students' graduation and subsequent entry into college.

"In our society we talk about the penalty fitting the crime," Gilliam said. "I don't think this was the case being applied here."

Mrs. Mann said her refusal to accept overdue papers was a "matter of principle."

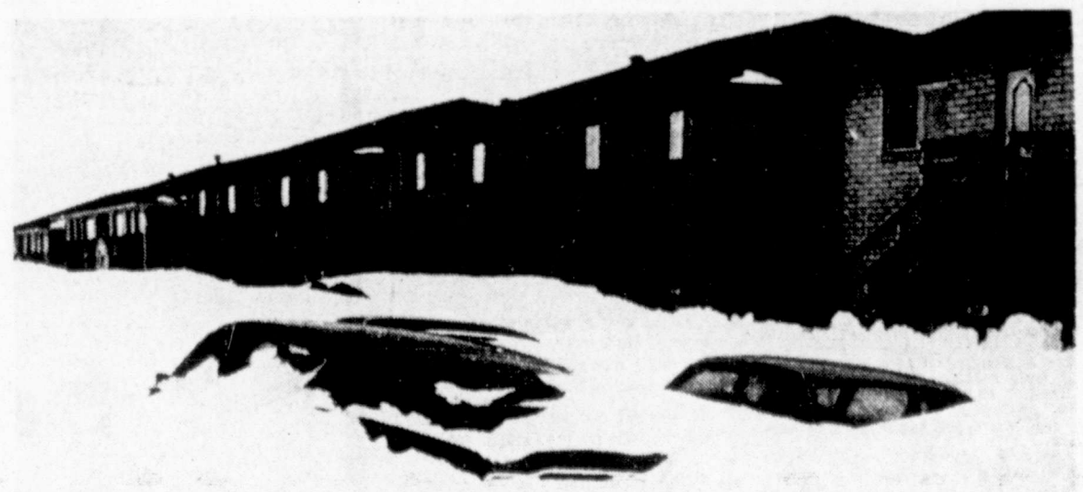

"I was not being overly hard," she said. "A lot of weight was being placed on that paper because that was the purpose of the course: Preparing and writing a research paper."

She said more than 70 other students in the course completed their papers on time as required.

"The lesson they (the four students) learn from this is that they can just go on making excuses and getting by," Mrs. Mann said.

"I'm a good teacher, I know I am," she said. "This is part of learning and growing up: Taking responsibility and accepting the consequences."

Verification Of House Panel's Findings Urged

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — The chief counsel for the House Select Committee on Assassinations says it is "imperative" that the government try to verify the panel's findings in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

The comments from G. Robert Blakey came Thursday, as the nation celebrated Thanksgiving and observed the 16th anniversary of Kennedy's assassination.

Blakey, a professor at Cornell University, said the Justice Department must verify the committee's acoustical tests, which indicate there may have been two gunmen firing shots in Dallas' Dealey Plaza when Kennedy was killed.

The committee issued its report on the Nov. 22, 1963 assassination — including the acoustical tests — last July.

"The accoustical study should be verified," Blakey said. "It's not enough simply for a congessional committee to say a conspiracy was involved.

"It seems to me imperative for the integrity of the government that (the) study be verified and the Department of Justice make public the results of that verification," he said.

"The suggestion was made (in the report) that the department should verify the committee's acoustics tests that indicated there were two gunmen in Dealey Plaza and, after that had been done, make a judgment as to what additional investigation, if any, should be conducted by the department," Blakey said in a telephone interview with a Long Island radio station.

"It is my understanding that the department has been looking at and studying the report since July, but no decisions have been made of any kind," Blakey said.

Blakey recommended the formation of a special Justice Department unit staffed by skilled attorneys and 25 FBI agents to investigate the assassination.

World Bank Reports Improved Prospects For Coal Production

WASHINGTON (UPI) The World Bank says soaring oil prices and worries about nuclear power have combined to produce a comeback for coal, and the United States holds the largest recoverable coal reserves in the world.

In a study begun in late 1978 and released this week, the World Bank said world prospects for coal production have improved considerably.

The fuel is considerably cheaper than oil in terms of heat value, even though its prices have gone up substantially since the 1973-1974 oil embargo.

But coal is both expensive and difficult to distribute, the World Bank acknowledged, citing rising transportation costs among other factors. It also faces objections from environmentalists.

The World Bank, nevertheless, said: "The prospects of a resurgence in coal use have been further enhanced by the increasing cost of other sources of energy, the delays in nuclear power programs and the anticipated depletion of oil and natural gas supplies."

The world's geological coal resources are estimated at 10,125 billion metric tons, with more than one-fourth of the total, about 2,570 billion metric tons, in the United States.

The World Bank said about 636 billion metric tons of the world supply are economically recoverable, and of that, about 117.5 billion tons are in the United States.

"The recoverable coal reserves of 636 billion metric tons compare favorably to presently known oil reserves of about 135 billion metric tons and constitute a significant energy potential," the World Bank said in its 41-page study.

Also, while oil production and reserves are concentrated in Third World countries, principally the OPEC nations, coal production and reserves are almost exclusively concentrated in the industrialized Western nations.

The same is true for coal production, which reached 2,774 billion metric tons in 1977.

Kennedy Spends Holiday At Home

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — Church and sailing were in the forefront as Sen. Edward M. Kennedy faced the 16th anniversary of his brother John's assassination.

The third Kennedy to seek the White House spent Thanksgiving at his Cape Cod home, joined by his wife and children and several friends.

On Nov. 22, 1963, President Kennedy was slain in Dallas. Kennedy paid formal tribute, taking part in a private family Mass at St. Francis Xavier Roman Catholic Church.

Later, Kennedy joined his children in a soccer game followed by some sailing. Kennedy will stay in Hyannis through at least Saturday night, according to his staff.

Lawyer Wants To Appeal Decision

CINCINNATI (AP) — A New York lawyer for Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt says a decision barring out-of-state lawyers from representing Flynt should be challenged in court.

Paul Cambria of Buffalo, N.Y., said he and his partner, Harold Fahringer, may seek a trial in U.S. District Court here on whether their removal as Flynt's defense was discriminatory.

A ruling earlier this year by the U.S. Supreme Court said Flynt has no constitutional right to be represented by out-of-state lawyers.

Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge William Morrissey decided in 1977 to bar Fahringer and Cambria from representing Flynt on charges of disseminating material harmful to juveniles.

"We think the issue ought to be tried so Morrissey can be called as a witness to explain why he excluded us," Cambria said.

Actor Describes Ideal Parent

NEW YORK (AP) — The ideal parent, says Dustin Hoffman, would be a lot like the ideal director.

"That is, someone who guides you without you even knowing it, without imposing himself," said the actor in an interview in the December issue of Parents magazine. Hoffman and his estranged wife, Anne, have two daughters.

"You kid yourself if you think being separated does not have a traumatic effect on them," said Hoffman, who starred in "All the President's Men" and "The Graduate."

"They are going to feel that it's somehow expected they favor one parent over the other. That causes conflict. It is important for them to know they can love both, that they can talk to daddy and mommy in positive terms," Hoffman said.

Light-Footed Pig Puzzling Family

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — For an avowed "city slicker," the sight of a pig running down the street can be an unsettling experience.

"I saw this pink and purple pig running down the middle of the street and I thought I was seeing things," Phillip Murphy recalled. "I said to myself, 'No it can't be.' But it was. It snorted and took off."

Murphy said he chased the 70-pound pig for nearly an hour before bagging him. "I brought him home, but then I didn't know what to do," Murphy said after the recent incident.

He said he still has no idea where the pig came from. Meanwhile, the porker, now named "Hamlet," is the hit of the Murphy home.

"Everyone in the neighborhood knows we've got him and they have all come to call. But we still don't know where Hamlet belongs," Murphy said. "I know he has to go, but we are getting kind of attached. A while ago, he danced back and forth on his feet a little bit, you know, like an elephant does in a circus. I guess you would call it a pig jig."

Employer Found Guilty Of Sex Discrimination

BUCKSPORT, Maine (AP) — This town's major employer has been found guilty of sex discrimination because it wouldn't let six women janitors clean the men's locker room.

St. Regis Paper Co. was cited earlier this week by the Maine Human Rights Commission. Male janitors are allowed to clean women's locker rooms at the sprawling paper mill along the Penobscot River.

"There'll be hell to pay in Bucksport," said St. Regis personnel director James Terrell, referring to the furor he expected the ruling to generate among male employees.

The women filed complaints against the company last April, contending the decision to bar them from the locker rooms froze them on the night shift because the men's locker room is always cleaned during the day shift. They also said the policy barred them from overtime pay because they were not allowed to work overtime to replace day-shift workers.

"That's a sad commentary on the morals of Bucksport," Terrell retorted. "You make it sound like the mill workers are a bunch of flashers."

Of the 967 non-management workers at the mill, 915 are men and 52 are women.

Mob Damages British Embassy

HANDY REVIEWING STAND — Youngsters from Juarez, Mexico, across the border from El Paso, use a handy scaffolding as a reviewing stand to watch a parade in observance of the 69th anniversary of Mexico's 1910 revolution. The parade's theme was students' participation in sports. (AP Laserphoto)

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — A howling mob of 2,000 persons hurled stones and broke windows at the British High Commission today in the second straight day of attacks on the British diplomatic headquarters here.

Demonstrators attacked the building and its surrounding garden despite the presence of police inside the compound, a British commission spokesman said. The building was closed and no injuries were reported.

The crowd then moved along Lusaka's Independence Avenue and past the residence of the British commissioner, or ambassador, Sir Leonard Allinson, and on to the state house.

It was not immediately known if damage was done to the residence of Sir Leonard, who earlier this week denied a statement by Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda that Britain was responsible for damage caused by Zimbabwe Rhodesian raids into Zambia. His denial caused an uproar in government circles and prompted the demonstrations.

The British flag was not raised after being torn down Thursday by 50 youths who jumped over steel fences surrounding the commission. Thousands of others surrounded the building during Thursday's protest, chanting, "Kill the oppressors!" and "White pigs!"

It was not immediately known if the youths, who demanded that Kaunda break relations with Britain and were identified as militants of the ruling United National Independence Party, were also involved in today's protest.

Meanwhile, the state-owned Zambia Daily Mail newspaper called for Sir Leonard's withdrawal. The newspaper, which generally reflects government thinking, accused him of diplomatic misconduct and a lack of respect for the Zambian president.

"We demand an apology from his government, and after that, he should be withdrawn because Zambia cannot tolerate him," the newspaper said.

On Tuesday, Kaunda said Zambia held Britain responsible for the deaths of nine Zambians and the destruction of 12 bridges in raids by Zimbabwe Rhodesia forces since Oct. 12.

Shortly after Kaunda's statement, Sir Leonard denied the British were to blame for raids on Zambia, which is the object of attacks because it shelters some of the black nationalist guerrillas fighting the Zimbabwe Rhodesia government. The bombings have crippled Zambia's transport links to the sea.

Kaunda said the commissioner's immediate reply was an act of "insolence."

Sir Leonard was summoned to the foreign ministry where he was told by Foreign Minister Wilson Chakulya that he had committed "a serious breach of diplomatic etiquette by immediately replying to Kaunda instead of reporting to his government."

Chakulya said Zambia would take its case for compensation from Britain — the colonial power in Rhodesia — to the U.N. Security Council.

Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser today asked Kaunda to do anything he could to help Australian Broadcasting Commission correspondent, Antony Joyce, whose condition remained critical this morning at a Lusaka hospital.

Joyce was shot in the head Tuesday while sitting in a police vehicle after he and his cameraman, Derek McKendry, were arrested for filming a bridge near Lusaka. McKendry is still under arrest.

Meanwhile, Libya said it would assist Zambia in resisting continued Zimbabwe Rhodesian raids. The offer was made by Libya's Charge D'affairs to Tanzania; Mustafa Mannaa, who flew here Thursday night.

South Korea To Choose 'Caretaker' President

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Acting President Choi Kyuhah met with the leading opposition leader and intends to hold, as scheduled, an indirect election to pick a caretaker chief executive in December, political sources said today.

Choi reportedly told Kim Young-sam that South Korea's transition to a new and democratic order following the Oct. 26 assassination of President Park Chung-hee must be done quickly and be preceded by an interim government stage.

Choi met with Kim at Kim's request for three hours at the official residence Thursday night.

Choi said politicians can speed the transition by approving constitutional amendments at an early date in the National Assembly, the sources said.

The opposition leader, however, told Choi he was opposed to the early December election by the 2,500-member electoral college called the National Conference for Unification under the scenario announced by Choi Nov. 10.

That scenario calls for the elected interim president not to complete Park's term of office expiring in 1984. Instead, the caretaker leader would revise the constitution and call new elections.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

No Long-er Invulnerable

IN WASHINGTON, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and holder of the universally bestowed title of the most powerful man in the U.S. Senate, is viewed with awe, it is written.

But it is also written that back home among the voters who must decide whether to return him for a sixth consecutive term, Sen. Long is in trouble.

In trouble, relatively speaking. "When Louisianans talk about a member of the Long family having problems," a Louisiana pundit told interviewers, "it means only that he is a little less popular than the Lord."

The senator is the scion of the family that has dominated Louisiana politics more than a half century.

SEN. LONG WAS only 30 years old (the minimum age established by the Constitution) when he was first elected to the Senate in a special election held in 1948.

He won the primary that year by a slim 51-49 margin. But in 11 subsequent primary and general elections, no opponent has been able to attract the support of even 30 percent of the participating voters.

Ironically, that lack of tough competition could be one of Sen. Long's most serious liabilities, according to conventional wisdom.

Because most of his races in the past 30 years have been low-turnout pro-forma affairs, close to half of the people in the state probably never have voted for the son and political heir of the late, legendary Huey P. (Kingfish) Long Jr.

"Sen. Long wouldn't know a modern political organization if it hit him in the face," writes syndicated columnist Robert Walters, quoting a Baton Rouge politician.

Walters says Long thinks that no reputable Republican will run against him. But, there are rumors that GOP Rep. Henson Moore III, a conservative, is quietly seeking money to finance a Senate race.

Public opinion polls repeatedly have found Moore to be within a fraction of a percentage point behind Long on a rejection-acceptance scale in hypothetical races.

In two poll contests, Sen. Long failed to gain 50-percent support—a situation that would force him into a potentially devastating runoff. Prevailing political speculation, it is written, places Sen. Long as re-electable in 1980 but "more vulnerable now than he's ever been."

The Schmertz Affair

REMEMBER the Good Old Days, before Iran, when all we had to worry about were inflation, recession, refugees, interest rates, crime, deficits, over-regulation, invasion of privacy, nuclear accidents, farm prices, labor turmoil, Soviet missiles, gasoline shortages, medical costs, forced busing, race riots and taxes?

Ah, yes, life was simpler then. Back before we had a crisis.

★

HERBERT SCHMERTZ might be cited as the classic example of why ultra-liberal politicians keep getting elected to high office with conservative business support.

Businessmen talk one game but play another.

Schmertz is vice president for public affairs of Mobil Corp. He's taking a leave of absence to set up Ted Kennedy's advertising program for his Presidential campaign.

Mobil's own advertising program, orchestrated by Schmertz, has been strongly critical of proposals for windfall profits taxes on the oil industry. It defends its ownership of Montgomery Ward.

Kennedy is a strident supporter of confiscatory taxes, including the windfall profits tax. He has introduced a bill to sharply limit oil company take-overs of non-energy companies like Montgomery Ward.

A RECENT MOBIL ad accused CBS of "prefabricating" the news with "the worst, the most unfair report on Mobil earnings that we've ever seen!"

"Much of the intemperate and inflammatory rhetoric about oil company earnings...is the result of this sort of biased and careless presentation of energy news," the ad continued in saying that Mobil's earnings are "not excessive."

If the man responsible for that ad can turn right around and support for President a man who has few peers in carelessly attacking profits as excessive, what does that say to the public?

The credibility of the oil industry position, as well as that of Kennedy, is laid open to question.

YET, SCHMERTZ'S riding both sides of the fence differs only in degree from that practiced every day by so-called conservatives who "hedge their bets" by supporting liberal candidates.

Their theory is that the liberal can get elected by mouthing anti-big business slogans but that their support will give them an "in" with him after he's elected.

Is there any wonder that voters have become cynical about the whole political process and about politicians?

Or about the "partnership" between Big Business, Big Labor and Big Government?

Ayatollah May Be An Imposter

WASHINGTON—U.S. Intelligence officials have been asked by President Carter to determine if the Ayatollah Khomeini, now acting as the strong man in Iran, is the same person that was in exile in France earlier this year.

The possibility of an imposter was raised in a memorandum furnished the President this week by Winston Frederick Churchill Guest, a close friend of the President's mother and relative of the late Winston Churchill, the wartime leader of Great Britain.

Guest, who has homes in Long Island, N.Y., and Palm Beach, Florida and knows most of the leaders in Western Europe on a first name basis, is considered one of the best informed international travelers and businessmen in the world today.

"In its edition of June 11, 1979, on Page A-2, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner carried a story which questioned the authenticity of the Ayatollah Khomeini.

"The article quoted a column by William Hickey in the London Express which included photographs of the Ayatollah Khomeini, which were taken while he was in France, showing that he had only 9 fingers. The middle digit of his right hand was missing.

"Recent photographs, including those shown on TV within the past week, show that the present 'Ayatollah Khomeini' has 10 fingers, including his middle finger on his right hand.

"This should be thoroughly investigated to determine if the present 'Ayatollah Khomeini' is an imposter."

ACCORDING TO WHITE House sources, the memorandum hit the President's inner-circle, including members of the National Security Council staff, like a bombshell.

From other intelligence sources, it was learned that before he was executed the late Iranian Premier Amir Hoveida proclaimed the present "Ayatollah Khomeini" to be an "imposter".

In one Central Intelligence estimate on the current situation in Iran, Hoveida is quoted before he was put to death as saying:

"I knew him (Ayatollah Khomeini), and I can assure you he had only 9 fingers. He lost one in an accident. This Khomeini is an imposter."

Shortly after making that statement, Hoveida was shouted down in Court and dragged out of the building and shot.

If the information passed along to the President is correct, as all signs indicate, this fact of life raises several important questions.

These are (1) What has happened to the real Ayatollah Khomeini and (2) Who is the person that is now parading as the Ayatollah Khomeini?

Since the present "Ayatollah Khomeini" has two top aides who are communists with links to Moscow, the assumption must be that the so-called "religious strongman" of Iran must be the Kremlin's man.

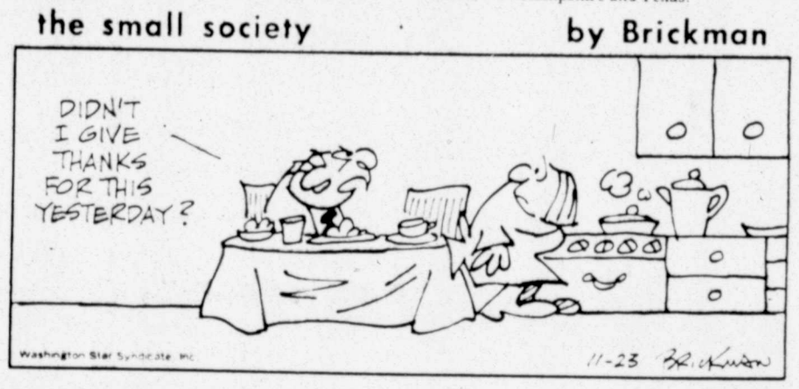

Several members of the Senate Foreign Relation Committee have been told of the memorandum and are expected to call for a full-scale Congressional probe to determine exactly who is now the leader in Iran.

★

A VOTING-record analysis by the American Conservative Union indicates that the senators from eight states are so sharply divided ideologically that their votes tend to cancel one another out.

The taxpayers could probably save dough simply by benching both senators from the following: California, Colorado, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Nevada, New Hampshire and Texas.

Truth-In-Lending Law Unbelievable To ABA

WASHINGTON—Imagine you receive a letter from your local banker, informing you that the bank had mistakenly overcharged you for a loan and thereby had violated the Truth-in-Lending law. Thus enclosed, writes the banker, you will find a refund check.

Would such an admission shake your confidence in the bank, encouraging you to take your business elsewhere?

It would, argues the American Bankers Association, the banking industry's leading trade group.

Such a confession, the ABA charges in a suit against federal bank regulatory agencies, would "undermine public confidence in the banks and banking system...to the great and lasting detriment and irreparable injury to the banks' assets, income and profits."

SO, THE ABA has gone to the courts to prevent the federal agencies which regulate banks from ordering them to reimburse consumers for Truth-in-Lending law violations.

Truth-in-Lending became law a full 10 years ago in 1969.

But most of the federal regulatory agencies did not even start to check for compliance with this vital consumer protection law until 1977.

Federally chartered banks alone might have to reimburse consumers between $30 and $100 million, the Comptroller of the Currency, one of the three federal agencies that regulate banking, estimated after sending out a force of specially trained consumer examiners.

A LONG SERIES of delays followed this initial exam, as the various agencies—individually and collectively—tried to devise uniform guidelines for enforcing the law and ordering refunds.

Some took a strict line, ordering institutions repeatedly found to have violated the law to go back as far as 1974 to identify consumers who had been overcharged. Others were more lenient, found far fewer cases of willful violations.

This past August, the ABA went to court, contending the agencies did not have the power to order banks to make reimbursements. Almost at once, the agencies suspended their enforcement guidelines.

MEANWHILE, ON CAPITOL Hill, the Senate passed a bill approving interest-bearing checking accounts. Among the amendments attached to this legislation is one which would effectively prevent consumers from being reimbursed for Truth-in-Lending law violations that were roughly more than one year old.

Ellen Broadman, counsel for Consumers Union, the non-profit publisher of Consumer Reports magazine, finds this measure nothing less than "scandalous."

"Consumers who have been overcharged aren't going to be reimbursed," she told my associate, Brooke Shearer. "They shouldn't be made to suffer just because the federal agencies have failed to enforce the law."

What can you do about all this?

First, with this report you are at least aware that your bank, inadvertently or not, may have violated the Truth-in-Lending law and may have overcharged you.

Second, depending on your own relations with your local bank and how much you have been borrowing in recent years, you now have the knowledge you need to ask intelligent questions about your charges and to seek your bank's reassurances or whatever.

THIRD, IF YOU agree with the banks' position, as reflected in the stand of the ABA, so be it. Let your bank know it has your confidence and support.

If you do not agree and instead you want the federal bank regulatory agencies to regain their aggressiveness in policing the banks' charges on loans and in seeking reimbursements if violations are found, you can let the agencies know they have your confidence and support. Either way, you have a voice; use it.

And fourth, you can make your position known on the measure that would eliminate bank reimbursements to borrowers for Truth-in-Lending violations after so short a span as one year.

If you think, as Broadman does, that this is "scandalous," tell your representatives in Washington before it is too late.

Stevens Ties A Leash On Goofy

WASHINGTON—Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, struck a blow for sanity the other day in the matter of strategic warfare. We haven't seen much sanity in that particular sector lately.

He won adoption of an amendment telling the Carter administration, in effect, to reconsider the wisdom of Goofy.

Goofy is the system devised by the Pentagon's sons of Rube Goldberg for concealing the MX missile. It is known as Goofy for the Walt Disney dog of the same name.

And it is the nuttiest scheme to come along in the name of national security since the CIA proposed to depilate the beard of Dr. Castro.

ATTEND THE IDEA is as follows: An enormous chunk of federally owned land out West would be set aside for construction of the strangest railway known to man.

It would consist of perhaps 200 closed loops, or racetracks. Each loop would have 23 shelters located a mile and a half apart. There would thus be 4,600 shelters. Right?

Right. Then we would provide 200 freight cars. Each freight car would carry a 20-ton MX missile. Each missile would carry 10 individually targeted warheads.

There would thus be 2,000 warheads on 200 missiles aboard 200 freight cars on 200 loops shuttling about the 4,600 shelters. Right?

Right. All day and all night, week in and week out, 200 switch engines would chug around the Goofy track, playing the biggest shell game ever played.

WHAT WOULD GOOFY cost? No one knows. The Pentagon has drawn up some estimates based upon present and probable costs of construction. The latest guess is $33 billion over a 10-year period.

The stentorian voice of experience cries out: Double that estimate! Annual costs of operation are placed at $400 million. None of this bears much relation to reality.

The Stevens amendment was tacked on to the bill appropriating $670 million in the current fiscal year for planning and developing this pie-eyed proposition.

The amendment tells the President to continue developing the MX, but to make no specific commitments to the racetrack scheme. Better and cheaper alternatives may be discovered.

ONE SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE is to load the missiles aboard STOL (short takeoff and landing) aircraft that could leap into action like doodlebugs at the first hint of a Soviet strike.

These vessels would be relatively inexpensive, or so it is said, and besides the crews could take shore leave in Chicago, Duluth and Cheboygan, thus supporting the local tradesmen.

There are better alternatives still. We could begin by rejecting the pending treaty on strategic arms limitation. The treaty has a thousand flaws, but the worst of its flaws is this:

It would effectively compel our government to build and to deploy all the launchers permitted under the treaty's terms. No President unilaterally could settle for anything less.

Suppose there were no treaty. Common sense might inform a President that enough is enough, that we already have amassed sufficient nuclear power to devastate the whole world, and that funds for national defense could be expended more sensibly elsewhere.

THE SOVIETS, FOR their part, might well come to the same rational conclusion. No longer impelled to arm up to the "limitations" of a treaty, both powers might substitute prudent judgment for supposed necessity.

The Stevens amendment, seeking reconsideration, is altogether wise. Do we learn from history, or do we repeat its hard lessons?

By 1990, when Goofy could be fully deployed, its loops and tracks and shelters will be obsolete.

More deadly devices yet will have been invented, and we will see the racetracks, covered by drifting sand, as so many pillboxes, so many Maginot lines.

Holiday Celebrated Nationwide

By The Associated Press

Some senior citizens in Atlantic City, N.J., had turkey on some high rollers, while New York kids screeched approval of 63-foot Underdog. In Dallas, the Cowboys may have wished they were in New York, and somewhere in the Pacific, Jack Marbut ate in a ship's mess.

It was Thanksgiving 1979, a mixed emotional bag spiked by dressing and deviled eggs, bearded tyrants, blizzards and captured Americans far from home.

Thirteen Americans released from the U.S. Embassy in Iran enjoyed Thanksgiving with their families, but President Carter's holiday message reminded the nation of the 49 still held.

The mood was upbeat in the Big Apple, where millions turned out to be cheered by clowns, stirred by bands and wowed by the larger-than-life floats and balloons as the 53rd Macy's Thanksgiving Day parade moved down Broadway.

"This is a very greasy parade," said John "Bowzer" Bauman of the '50s-style rock group Sha Na Na. "That's the highest compliment I can give."

Many of the estimated 80 million who watched the parade on TV also kicked off a long weekend of football games as they saw Dallas lose to Houston and Chicago drubbed by Detroit.

But Petty Officer 2nd Class Jack Marut was not in any of the crowds Thursday. He was aboard the USS Midway as it steamed for the Persian Gulf.

The prospect of Marut missing yet another Thanksgiving at home in Orange, N.J., was upsetting to his twin sister, Jill, but not as much as the near-certainty that he would miss the birth of his second child in Ykusuka, Japan, probably next month.

In Sterling, Kan., cloudy, rainy skies and chilling temperatures threatened to put a damper on Darlene Walsh's annual spread for folks in this central Kansas community — but sometimes even the weather cooperates.

"It was just fantastic. The weather had really been bad," said Mrs. Walsh. "Then about 10 minutes before we began serving, the sun came out. It's been just great all day."

About 2,000 persons had been expected but Mrs. Walsh said far more actually showed up. "We ran out of some things and they had to open a little store downtown to get some more food."

The Thanksgiving spirit even got to the high rollers in Atlantic City, where more than 1,000 senior citizens feasted.

Caesars Boardwalk Regency Hotel provided and prepared a complete turkey dinner while county volunteers delivered and served the meals at seven of Atlantic County's 10 nutrition sites.

Caesars got busy when it learned the nutrition centers were to be closed for Thanskgiving.

For the thousands of people snowbound in the Rocky Mountain and High Plains states, Thanksgiving was, at the least, different.

"We had a lovely Thanksgiving dinner," said Mary Young, who, with her daughter, son-in-law, two grandchildren and 60 other stranded motorists, spent the day in the National Guard Armory in Sidney, Neb.

The United American Indians of New England, a group which includes Massachusetts' Wampanoag Indians, staged its 10th annual Thanksgiving Day protest at Plymouth, Mass.

The demonstration, which attracted about 300 people to the statue of the Indian leader Massasoit, was held to "let the people know that we, as Indian people, are still here and that we still have many grievances," said Frank James, the leader of the group.

ATTEND SERVICE — Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy and his wife, Joan, leave the Saint Francis Xaivier Church in Hyannis, Mass. Thursday after attending the Thanksgiving service. # Lubbock Police Seeking Suspect In Raymond Padilla Murder

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A Lubbock man's death this morning at Health Sciences Center Hospital boosted the city's homicide toll for the year to 29, and police said the victim's killer was still at large at noon today.

Raymond Padilla, 22, was pronounced dead at 1:30 a.m. by Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy, who ruled the death a homicide.

LeCroy ordered an autopsy, which was to be performed today at St. Mary's Hospital.

Padilla, whose address has been listed as 2910 Ave. H, Apt. 1, and 3116 Cornell St., was found unconscious about 7:30 a.m. Wednesday in the 2700-block of Texas Avenue.

The man was sprawled face up just off the road and next to a trash dumpster. Padilla, who never regained consciousness, appeared to have suffered a severe blow to the left side of the face.

Lubbock homicide detectives said today they were looking for a man seen leaving a club early Wednesday morning just behind Padilla.

The suspect was described as a short, muscular Mexican-American in his mid-30s. The man reportedly had been in a fight with Padilla several weeks ago at a Lubbock nightclub.

About 10 minutes before the victim was discovered on Texas Avenue, Padilla's sister walked into police headquarters and reported her brother missing. She said she had heard the man had been in a fight earlier that morning.

Police were told Padilla and a brother had been at a club at 29th Street and Avenue H about 1 a.m. Wednesday, and that the suspect also was present.

The brother said Padilla walked out of the club and that the other man followed behind him. The brother added that when he left the nightspot he could find neither man.

In an earlier report, police were told the victim and the suspect had been seen arguing inside the club, and that the suspect challenged him to go outside and fight.

The brother reportedly told police the two men began fighting outside. He said he went back into the club to get help and that when he returned, both men were gone.

Foul Play Hinted In Guard's Death

ENID, Okla. (AP) — A security guard reported missing at Enid Memorial Hospital was found dying on an operating table with a mask over his face and a machine pumping nitrous oxide into his body, officials said.

He was identified as Malcomb Jackson, 20, of Amarillo, a junior at Phillips University.

His body was taken to the medical examiner's office in Oklahoma City for an autopsy.

"He was lying face down with a plastic mask over his nose and mouth and the (anesthesia) machine was going full blast," said security officer Bill Arnold. "He had a slight pulse and we called a doctor to do CPR, but when the doctor arrived he pronounced Malcomb dead."

Arnold said he was called to the hospital when another security guard reported Jackson missing about 2:30 a.m. Thursday. Jackson was found on the operating table about two hours later.

"The guard thought Malcomb had curled up somewhere and gone to sleep," Arnold said. "I searched in the linen closets, then finally someone suggested I look in the operating room and I found him."

Arnold said the operating rooms are kept locked and he was not certain that Jackson had a key to the room where he was found.

Thanksgiving Weekend Toll Climbs Past 100

A-J News Services

Snow and rain hampered travel in wide areas of the country today as the Thanksgiving holiday weekend neared the halfway mark and the highway death toll passed 100.

Travel advisories remained in effect in parts of the Rockies and Plains from a blizzard earlier in the week, and a new storm blew into the Pacific Northwest and sections of the Plateau.

As of 11 a.m. CST, 112 people had been killed in traffic accidents.

The National Safety Council estimated that between 500 and 600 persons might be killed on streets and highways between 6 p.m. Wednesday and midnight Sunday.

The Thanksgiving weekend traffic toll last year was 508. The worst toll for the four-day holiday was in 1968 when 764 died.

At least 10 persons have been killed in traffic accidents in Texas during the Thanksgiving holiday this year, including three who died in an accident in Fort Worth. Six of the seven fatal accidents were one-vehicle wrecks.

Two teen-agers, Jesse Emanuel Stringo, 16, and Scott McQuire, 15, both of Port O'Conner, were killed Thanksgiving Day when their car went out of control and flipped twice near Port Lavaca. Two other passengers in the car were treated for injuries and released.

Fort Worth police today said they had not identified the three persons killed in a wreck Thursday and knew few details.

The first victim was Edward Bullock, 18, of El Paso, who died in a one-car accident on Interstate 20 east of Barstow.

The other victim was Rogelio Burito, 46, of Presidio, a detention officer with the U.S. Border Patrol. Burito was killed when his car rolled on U.S. 67 north of Presidio.

Town Anxious To Try New Ski Slope

LOWER ALLOWAYS CREEK, N.J. (AP) — What do you buy for the town that has almost everything — including a nuclear power plant, brand-new municipal and fire buildings and a zero tax rate?

Municipal officials purchased a ski slope and now are hoping for an early snowstorm to see how it works.

This pastoral township of 1,600 residents begins its premiere season operating the 93-acre Holly Mountain ski slope.

"It all depends on the weather. From what I understand, the temperature has to be just right," said Deputy Mayor Robert Traae, chairman of parks and recreation. "Right now, we're hoping to open the first week in December."

While most communities in the state are more concerned with pinching pennies and balancing budgets, operating a ski resort may seem like a luxury.

But the $550,000 cash purchase of Holly Mountain last March didn't even make a dent in Lower Alloways Creek's $16 million surplus.

In the past few years, the township has eliminated all local and school property taxes, built a $500,000 municipal building, a $127,000 playground, a $1 million addition to the elementary school and a $165,000 fire department headquarters.

The community, which was almost bankrupt 10 years ago, derives its wealth from the Salem I nuclear power plant, located on adjacent Artificial Island. Public Service Electric & Gas Co., the plant's owner, contributed about $7 million a year in taxes and will pay an additional $14 million a year when three other planned nuclear generators go on line by 1984.

Traae said the township bought the ski site for conservation purposes and reviewed other government-owned ski slopes before opting to continue running the 7-year-old facility instead of liquidating the existing equipment.

Township residents and others can use the 130-foot-high, 1,500-foot slope for prices ranging from $10 to $18 a day. Traae said the resort will operate seven days a week from December to March. The Holly Mountain facilities include a double chair lift, a three-story chalet and a snow-making machine.

City Man Hurt In House Fire

A Lubbock man burned early this morning in a house fire was listed in fair condition at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The victim, identified as Juan Vadalada, 38, suffered burns over 12 percent of his body, according to a hospital spokesman.

Vadalada was injured about 2:40 a.m. when his house at 2913 Cornell St. erupted in flames.

A cause for the fire was under investigation early today. Lubbock Assistant Fire Marshal John Anthony said the structure sustained "extensive structure and contents damage."

The loss was estimated to exceed $1,000, according to a fire dispatcher. The house reportedly was totally enveloped in flames when firemen arrived on the scene.

The fire was under control 15 minutes after firemen arrived, according to the spokesman.

Hearing Continued On Application

AUSTIN — The Public Utility Commission has continued until Jan. 21, 1980, a hearing on an application by Lubbock Power & Light Co. to be certified to serve an area recently annexed by the City of Lubbock.

South Plains Electric Cooperative, which already is certified to serve the newly annexed area in South Lubbock, is protesting the application by LP&L.

This is the second time the hearing has been delayed. The first delay was caused by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. rate hearings.

Blaze Damages Apartments

All eight apartments in a complex under construction in the 1900-block of Raleigh Ave. were damaged by fire this morning.

No injuries were reported in the incident although plumbers were working in the building when the fire broke out.

Capt. George Whitworth of the Lubbock Fire Department said the blaze appeared to have started in a wall of one of the apartments and spread to the others.

Fire officials had no cause of the fire or damage estimate at noon.

Firemen from three Lubbock stations responded to the call.

You and the Law

Presented by the State Bar of Texas

Q: Recently, I had to fire one of my employees but he refused to surrender his company car until he is paid his profit sharing check. It will take several momths to get this check from the bank. How can I get my company property back?

A: The several month delay in processing the check is normal for profit sharing plans and does not represent a refusal of the employer to provide some of the compensation under the employment contract. Therefore, the employee is not justified in holding company property after his firing.

You could bring a civil action for conversion, but before that you may file a complaint with the District Attorney's office for theft. The police will impound the automobile and hold it as evidence. While this may not result in an immediate return of the automobile for the company, it may assure that the employee does not sell or damage the automobile.

Q: I'm planning to quit my job soon. I have earned two weeks paid vacation. Is there any way my employer can deny me my vacation pay when I quit?

A: An employee's right to vacation pay is dependent upon the employment contract. If you do not have a written contract with your employer, then whatever you and your employer agreed upon is part of your oral contract. Also, company policies in a printed employee handbook impliedly become a part of your contract.

Most contracts entitle employees to paid vacation after a certain length of service. Unless some other conditions are included in your individual contract, if you have served the requisite length of time, you should be entitled to vacation pay upon resignation.

Q: My husband has just located a new job with better benefits. When he notified his present employer, the boss told him he was withholding his pay check because he had an outstanding bill to pay them. Is this legal? Can he keep my husband's pay check?

A: Although an employer can often withhold pay for valid debts owed to him, there are exceptions.

Assuming you are covered by the federal minimum wage and overtime laws, no matter how much you owe your employer he still must pay you the minimum wage plus any overtime. He may, however, be able to deduct the debt from that part of your salary in excess of the minimum wage.

If you believe that you have not been properly paid wages due you, contact your attorney, the U.S. Department of Labor, or the Texas Deaprtment of Labor & Standards.

Q: I bought a lot after my real estate agent promised that the surrounding roads would be paved and houses built on the land would have size limitations. Now there are gravel roads and trailers instead of houses. Can I sue the broker or the original owners to get my money back?

A: Yes, if the misleading act occurred after May 21, 1973, and no more than two years has elapsed, you may bring an action under the Texas Consumer Protection and Deceptive Trade Practice Act.

The amount you may be awarded by a court will depend on the evidence of loss you present at trial. You have sufficient grounds to initiate a suit against both the sellers and the salesman, as the agent of the sellers.

Send your questions to "You and the Law," State Bar of Texas, P.O. Box 12487, Austin, 78711. Answers may appear in columns in hypotethetical terms; personal answers not possible.

ICC Wants 50 Railroads To Join Takeover Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission is asking 50 railroads whether they would be willing to operate segments of financially troubled Rock Island Railroad's routes for a guaranteed profit of 6 percent.

The plan is one of several options being considered by the ICC to maintain service on routes operated by Rock Island, which has filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws. Under the proposal, American taxpayers would not have to subsidize carriers that take on segments of the routes.

On Sept. 26, the ICC ordered the Kansas City Terminal Co., a switching company owned by 12 carriers, to take over the 7,200-mile, 13-state system until Dec. 3.

On Nov. 6, the ICC sent queries asking 50 railroads whether they might be willing to take over segments of Rock Island routes.

Talk is cheaper than you think.

How to save up to 60% on Long Distance.

The trick to saving money while keeping in touch with family or friends is knowing when to call, and calling One-Plus.

Call between 11pm and 8am.

Before you groan about how you can't stay up late or see straight in the morning, think about it.

You'll be saving up to 60%! If you're a night person, you probably don't start counting sheep until after 11 pm anyway. And if you've got friends and family to call out west, it'll be a perfectly civilized 9 or 10 pm when their phone rings. If you like to see the sun rise, and you know folks back east, it'll be an hour later on their end.

Call out of state anytime before 8 am and you can talk all day if you want and still save 60%. In-state calls are also greatly reduced. Just remember to dial One-Plus.

Even on weeknights, save up to 35%.

Sometimes you can't wait for the weekend. Or you don't want to. But you can still save plenty Sunday through Friday from 5 pm to 11 pm. Think about what a bargain it is to call someone 1900 miles away, talk it up for ten minutes, and only run a tab of about $2.00. There's just no other way to get close to a faraway friend or relative so quickly, so cheaply.

On weekdays it's still a bargain.

Here's a surprise. From 8 am to 5 pm, a Long Distance chat still doesn't cost very much. A five minute call out of state, to anywhere in the continental U.S. is only about $2.50 when you dial One-Plus. Think of how good the sound of your voice would be to a friend (not to mention your mother!) right in the middle of the day!

Reach out on the weekend and save up to 60%.

Now this is a stroke of good luck: a really cheap Long Distance phone call just when you may want it most. Call any time between 11 pm Friday and 5 pm Sunday and really save. For instance, dial One-Plus and you can make a ten-minute call to Atlanta for only $1.55. That's almost worth making a new friend in Atlanta for.

Dial One-Plus and watch the savings add up.

Even if you're not a regular do-it-yourselfer, do-it-yourself when you call Long Distance. The savings are significant when you dial "one" plus the area code plus the phone number, instead of having the Operator do it. It's also faster. If you don't know the area code you need, just look in the front of your Telephone Directory. (Also check your telephone directory for exact discounts and conditions on out-of-state and in-state calls.)

Take advantage of the Holiday discount and celebrate.

Along with the flag-waving, fetes and parades, pick up the phone and call Long Distance. Our regular evening discount rates apply all day on Christmas, New Year's Day, Labor Day, July 4th and Thanksgiving. If the holiday falls on a weekend, you get the lower rate. Isn't this the perfect time to ring up friends and family?

Chinese Stage Extravaganza

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

PEKING — Given the lavishness of college marching bands and the decolletage of pro football cheerleaders, it was only a matter of time before the halftime show became the wholetime show.

But no one, least of all this thrice-weekly diviner of trends trivial, expected the pioneer breakthrough to come in the People's Republic of China.

Mulligan's Stew

Here the medium has become the message. Or at least the rah-rah and the razzmatazz have displaced the jocks as the main attraction at an athletic event. In fact at the opening-day of China's national games, which are held every five years, the contestants only did a walk-on in their numbered unionsuits and were not permitted to sully the ambiance of Peking's Workers Stadium with their sweaty exertions.

The pageantry was all. In the presence of the Queen of Denmark, Chairman Hua, and 70,000 other spectacle-dazzled spectators not a javelin was heaved in competition or a chalk line blurred by a flying cleat. Like placards at the side of a vaudeville stage, even the scoreboard was devoted to announcing the next act to be performed by a cast of 27,000 — count 'em.

The extravaganza got under way with the release of 1,000 doves into a smog-gray September sky, then the 30 trombones, 80 piccolos, five base drums and 300 other instruments of the People's Liberation Army band struck up a march that sounded uncannily like "When the Backs Go Tearing By."

This signaled the entrance of the athletes into the arena. The band blared on for 40 uninterrupted minutes as delegations from China's 31 provinces autonomous regions and major cities marched onto the field in color-coordinated jogging togs, knees high, arms swinging, all in step, even the coaches and political cadres in their identical Mao suits.

A 600-strong pom-pon section on the left side of the field, looking down the sidelines from the ground level press box waved them on with appropriate flourishes, while across the way in the bleachers an enormous card section of 8,000 card-carrying Chinese communists flapped forth scenes of the Forbidden City, bursting fireworks and monstrous portraits of Chairmen Mao and Hua.

There was no Oriental version of the Purdue Golden Girl to toss a baton skyward and, in a country where cleavage is always political, no equivalent of the decorous Dallas Cowgirls. However, the lassies from Lhasa, the Tibetan Girls Team, created quite a stir in skimpy short shorts that revealed elevations of leg not normally visible at sea level in China. The Kilgore Rangerettes they were not, but our guides and interpreters perspired perceptibly under thier anti-clerical Mao collars and politely asked to borrow our binoculars.

While the scoreboard flashed "Jointly Celebrate Victories," torchbearers burst into the arena completing the last leg of a 74-day relay marathon that began in Shanghai on July 1 and covered more than 7,000 miles in 15 provinces along the route of Mao's famous long march.

"New Long March," blinked out the scoreboard as the finalists deposited their firebrands in a huge urn and inadvertently illuminated sections of the fence advertising Xerox, Mizuno Sports and other imperialist enterprises.

"Five hundred thousand runners helped bring the torch from Shanghai," my interpreter informed me, tossing off another of those mind-boggling statistics that pile up so rapidly in a nation of 950 million people.

It went on like that, by the numbers, the rest of the afternoon. A thousand high school athletes formed pyramids and did double cartwheels, 1,200 preteens whirled purple hula hoops in intricate arabesques, 1,200 first graders with inflated rubber beach tubes became lotus blossoms and sunflowers, 1,200 middle school (junior high) ballerinas pirouetted on point, another 1,500 junior misses performed a discreet fan dance.

When the P.L.A. finally got winded, a 600-piece children's band boomed onto the field to the beat of 45 bass drums. The card section got a mite bellicose in its propaganda speech, replacing scenes of giant wheat combines rolling over the plains of inner Mongolia with jet fighters piercing the sky (over Vietnam?) and tanks rolling toward the border.

Sometime during the lavish wholetime show, four long slithering dragons in men's trousered feet gambolled onto the turf and university students unfurled a red silk flag 150 feet long by 90 feet wide.

The finale came with 4,500 kindergarten urchins releasing 4,500 balloons, as a half dozen gilded girl butterflies flitted down onto the field on rope pulleys from the high rafters of the stadium.

The stadium show was the best I had ever seen anywhere — and I regard myself as a connoisseur of the halftime spectacle, having honed my voyeur skills at Tiger Stadium in Baton Rouge. There the keepers of the academic flame inspired scholarship with Neo-Neronian circuses that included a caged Bengal tiger, gorgeous co-eds in purple and gold bouncing on trampolines and legions of leotarded lovelies strutting their stuff and TV's NCAA game of the week.

Alas, and perhaps just as well for Sino-American rivalries, the big, big show in Workers Stadium all fell apart at the end. After getting 25,000 performers on and off stage in a miracle of clockwork precision, it took three hours to get people's buses and bureaucrats' limousines out of the parking lot. Sheriff's deputies with their fluorescent flashlights handle 100 times as many cars in less than a third that time in Baton Rouge without spilling a fruit jar.

New Film Portrays Revolt By Farmers

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The philosopher George Santayana wrote, "Those who do not learn from the past are condemned to repeat it."

Those words came to mind while watching a new film called "Northern Lights," a movie about a political revolt among North Dakota wheat farmers more than 70 years ago.

Washington Window

While the story of Ray Sorenson and Inga Olsness is fiction, the historical framework of the film is accurate. It is a prime example of how people can be pushed by events into a situation they might ordinarily have nothing to do with.

It is the story of the organization of the Nonpartisan League in 1915-1916 as a reaction to exploitation of the farmers by the railroads, the milling companies and the banks.

A few years later, the league and its goals surely would have been damned and perhaps doomed as communist-inspired. But this was just before the worldwide fright caused by the Bolshevik revolution in Russia. And the NPL was in the tradition of the populist movements in other parts of the agricultural heartland.

But by any standard, the Nonpartisan League's program was radical. It favored establishment of state-owned banks and grain elevators, among other things. Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal at its most experimental extreme never proposed to go as far as NPL actually did.

The league succeeded because the private owners of those businesses did not see the need to reform their practices and did not, until too late, realize that they had pushed the farmers too far.

And that was the key. The film makes it very clear that most of the wheat farmers were eager to be organized into a new political party. They were deeply suspicious of politics and politicians and, like farmers still, believed that with good weather and hard work, they could take care of themselves. They just wanted to farm and make a decent living.

In the political sense, those farmers were conservative. They knew there were people who were working less and making more than they were, but as long as there was a prospect of success for themselves in the system, they were not willing to join in an effort to dump it.

It took the bitter experience of blacklisting and foreclosure to bring many of them to the conclusion that the system was rigged to make sure that the railroads, millers and bankers won every time. Then 40,000 of them signed up with NPL and then NPL took over the state.

All this happened nearly three quarters of a century ago, but the economic and political lessons of that period could be valid today.

Schmertz 'Top Management' With Mobil

HERBERT SCHMERTZ
To Work For Kennedy

NEW YORK (AP) — Herbert Schmertz, selected by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy — an ardent opponent of oil price decontrol — to put together advertising for Kennedy's presidential bid, is one of the business world's most powerful corporate spokesmen.

While public relations officials for most other companies must clear their statements with top management, Schmertz is top management. He is Mobil Corp.'s vice president for public affairs and a director of the company, a rare position for a spokesman to attain.

While the statements given by spokesmen for other firms are often defensive — made in response to reporters' questions — Schmertz often takes the offensive, buying newspaper ads for Mobil to lay out the company's positions.

And although many public relations men still fit the stereotype of the rumpled ex-newspaperman, the distinguished-looking Schmertz, 49, is television-handsome — an important attribute for a man in his position and one which he uses often, making broadcast appearances as an industry defender.

So, many executives in and out of the oil industry can't understand why Schmertz would take a position in the campaign of one of big oil's most vehement critics.

"I know that Herb is friendly with the Kennedy family and all that stuff, but that is really bizarre," said one oil company executive, who didn't want to be identified.

"I honestly cannot understand Mobil going along with that," he added. "They've got to believe it's in their best interest to do it, but I don't see how it can be."

And an executive of another firm, not involved in the oil business, said, "It kind of destroys his credibility, doesn't it."

Schmertz, though, said he does not believe his role in the Kennedy campaign will conflict with his past pro-industry stance, and even anti-oil forces on the Kennedy campaign welcomed him aboard.

"I'd rather have him with me than against me," said James Flug, an adviser to Kennedy on energy and head of Energy Action, a consumer group often critical of oil companies.

Schmertz will join the Kennedy campaign as a volunteer next week and will coordinate the set-up of the campaign's advertising effort. Mobil is giving him a six-week unpaid leave of absence, and he is supposed to return to the company Jan. 1.

Schmertz, who has a law degree from Columbia University, has held a wide variety of posts in his 13 years with the nation's No. 2 oil company. He joined the company after service with the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service and was made manager of the corporate labor relations department.

He became manager of corporate planning coordination in 1968 and since has served as vice president of public affairs, chairman of the company's contributions committee and president of the company's shipping and transportation division.

Rising Weapons Cost May Force Cutback

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of U.S. weapons has swelled so high — to an estimated $725 billion on order or under development — that some will have to be scrapped, a House committee says.

The House Government Operations Committee says in a report that Congress would have to double weapons spending over the next 10 years to pay that bill and is "very unlikely" to do so.

"Clearly some projects will have to be terminated in order to properly fund those that have a higher priority," the report concludes.

It recommends no specific cuts but urges the Defense Department to send Congress by May 1 "a realistic evaluation of the relative possibility of completing the various major weapons systems."

The report, released this week, says the present cost of an ambitious post-Vietnam weapons rebuilding program is $650 billion and inflation will add at least $75 billion over the 10 years needed to complete the weapons.

The report notes that the annual cost of $72.5 billion is nearly double present weapons spending, budgeted this year at $38.7 billion.

"Unless a true national emergency occurred in the United States," the report says, "it is very unlikely funds of the magnitude needed for the projected procurement could be provided."

Although Congress authorized the Pentagon to go ahead with the weapons, the report complains that Congress did so on the basis of cost estimates that were, on average, 100 percent too low.

"That means Congress is operating largely in the dark when it gives the Defense Department the green light to go ahead with these huge expenditures," Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, the committee chairman, said in a statement.

Congress does not take a single vote on both the development and purchase of a given weapon. Instead, it approves funds for all defense projects each year and gives the go-ahead to a weapon's development by approving initial funds for it, with no controls on the weapon's future cost.

The cost of nuclear attack submarines was estimated at $1.7 billion when Congress approved the program, the report says, compared to an updated estimate of $9.6 billion.

Record Amount Of Cocaine Found In Texas

LAREDO (UPI) — More than 40 pounds of cocaine worth $10 million discovered in a secret panel of a station wagon crossing the border from Mexico exceeds last year's total seizure of the drug in South Texas, authorities say.

A dog detected the 40.4 pound cache in a car driven by Montes Pedro Gonzalez, 40, who was charged with possession and importation of cocaine.

A federal magistrate this week set a $500,000 bond for Gonzalez, believed to be a Mexican national although the car had Texas license plates.

The U.S. Customs dog, named Charlie, "registered an alert on the rear of the car" while Customs inspectors were running a computer check on Gonzalez,said Charles Conroy of the Customs Service in Houston.

A Customs spokesman in Houston said the cocaine — 40.4 pounds — was more cocaine than was seized in the South Texas region in all of 1978.

New Zealander Argues For Imports Of Casein

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A representative of the dairy industry in New Zealand, the largest source of U.S. casein imports, has tried to rebut U.S. dairy industry arguments for eliminating casein — the protein component of milk.

Bruce Stuart, president of a U.S. corporation owned by the New Zealand Dairy Board to market New Zealand's products, told a Senate Agriculture subcommittee casein — a staple of the processed food industry — is not a substitute for nonfat dry milk.

Casein's real competition comes from other protein sources such as corn and soy, but not milk, Stuart said. If casein imports were eliminated, casein users would not turn to nonfat dry milk as the U.S. dairy industry argues, he said.

The subcommittee held a hearing this week based on the U.S. milk industry's charges that casein imports are disrupting the domestic dairy industry.

Casein is used in such products as coffee whiteners, whipped toppings, instant breakfasts and imitation milks and cheeses.

Casein is not produced in the United States. Milk producers argue that imported casein displaces U.S. milk products, which are converted into butter and nonfat dry milk that must be sold to the government under the dairy price support program. Milk producers say the result is a higher-cost dairy program for U.S. taxpayers.

Casein imports, which were once used mostly for industrial products, have expanded from 100 million to 110 million pounds in the early 1960s to an annual rate this year of 150 million pounds.

Milk producers have petitioned the agriculture secretary seeking action to eliminate casein imports for processed food and feed. The U.S. International Trade Commission is investigating the impact of casein imports. A House Agriculture subcommittee also has held hearings.

Stuart, whose corporation is called New Zealand Milk Products Inc. of Rosemont, Ill., said casein is a major product of New Zealand's dairy industry, not a subsidized surplus product as U.S. critics have charged.

As a result of years of research, the imports are technically advanced and highly diversified into 40 specifications to meet U.S. demands, he said.

Casein has characteristics not shared by nonfat dry milk, he said.

It can aid gel formation, stabilize a foam or whip, increase viscosity or hold fat in a stable emulsion. For example, sodium caseinate in processed meat products such as hot dogs helps prevent build-up of fat.

In whipped toppings, it stabilizes the whip whether frozen or thawed, permitting the customer to freeze and reuse products without deterioration.

The presence of lactose in nonfat dry milk would make it an unacceptable substitute if casein imports were eliminated, Stuart said.

He said lactose would cause problems in the preparation of canned sterilized liquid products such as sauces and infant formulas because lactose has a tendency to brown under high temperatures.

Severe browning also would be a problem for breakfast cereals and snack foods if nonfat dry milk were substituted for casein to increase the nutritional quality of the products, Stuart said.

"To say that casein displaces nonfat dry milk would be analagous to saying that recreational vehicles displace automobiles — they do not," Stuart said.

Caseins are not even commodities like milk, Stuart said.

"They are highly technical and specific functional products tailored to the end users' requirements," he said.

Sen. Walter Huddleton, D-Ky., subcommittee chairman, warned that a significant industry has grown around the imports of casein. He said stopping imports could be destructive to the industry and hurt the general economy.

Institute Displays Tractor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Smithsonian Institution, often called "the nation's attic" because of its collection of museum pieces, has added an artifact commemorating the 75th anniversary of the first crawler-type tractor.

It was on Thanksgiving Day, 1904, that a grain harvester manufacturer, Benjamin Holt, successfully demonstrated his new machine near Stockton, Calif.

The crawler tractor demonstrated by Holt "changed farming and earth-moving industries in America" and in much of the world as it developed over the years, the Smithsonian said Tuesday.

In 1925, the Holt Manufacturing Co. and the Best Tractor Co. merged to form the Caterpillar Tractor Co., which became synonymous with the crawling machine.

As part of its historic display of farm equipment — including scythes and cradles, McCormick reapers and other pioneering implements, the Smithsonian has on display a 1929 model "Cat 10" tractor, the smallest ever built by Caterpillar.

The tractor was donated by George E. Logue of Trout Run, Pa., who says the Cat 10 was "the small farmer's tractor just as the Model A was designed for the average motorist."

Smithsonian officials noted that the early crawler tractors developed by Holt and others were adapted for the World War I military tank, opening a new dimension of warfare on the bogged-down Western Front in France in 1916.

Tanks, bulldozers and other machines used the principle of crawler treads throughout World War II and are widespread today in virtually all armies and in construction projects.

Nearly 5,000 of the Cat 10 models were built between 1928 and 1931, the Smithsonian said. They sold for about $1,100 each.

Today's huge four-wheel-drive tractors dominate much of American agriculture. Those commonly cost $60,000 or more.

The big tractor of today frequently includes an enclosed cab to protect the operator from sun, rain, dust, wind and cold. It often is air conditioned, has a two-way radio and sometimes includes a television and a tape deck, depending on how much money a farmer wants to spend.

But the little Cat 10, as described by one of the company's 1930 sales manuals, also had its refinements that were attractive to many farmers:

—"Ten sturdy horsepower at the drawbar ... 14 belt horsepower for stationary work ... a little over 4,400 pounds in weight ... borne on sure-gripping, lightly-treading tracks ... little in size ... big in power and performance."

—"The comfort of the operator has not been overlooked. The driver's seat is a full upholstered seat, with coiled spring and hair-padded cushion and back and padded sides."

—"The Model 10 can be equipped with a canopy top ... it can be purchased with or without drop curtains."

Soviets Buy More Corn

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the Soviet Union has bought an additional 301,600 metric tons of U.S. corn for delivery in the marketing year that began on Oct. 1.

The latest sale boosted to more than 10.2 million metric tons the grain bought by the Soviets from the United States for 1979-80, officials said this week.

Included are more than 5.8 million metric tons of corn and about 4.4 million of wheat.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Family Farm Viewpoint Called Myth By Russell

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The family farm, in which the dutiful contributions of mother, father and many children add up to a wholesome, hearth-centered and somehow profitable way of life, is a myth, says Walter Russell.

Soap operas depict it as fact. Politicians rapturously defend it. Many millions believe religiously that it is a fortress of basic American values. The Agriculture Department gives it official recognition.

"It is my opinion," says Russell, "that the 'family farm' — that whole image — has never existed, and certainly not since the Great Depression." It's a myth, he says again. "It's a perception."

Is such talk mere braying? Who is this man Russell?

He was born on an Iowa farm that has been in his family for more than a hundred years. He holds a doctorate in agronomy and once was a U.S. Agriculture Department scientist.

Now vice president of Oppenheimer Industries, he helps manage hundreds of thousands of farm acreage for the Kansas City-based agricultural services company.

There do exist families seeking to operate acreage in the manner many people perceive as traditional, says Russell. But their life is hardly idyllic and their efforts are unprofitable, he says.

"The system doesn't lend itself to accepting modern technology," he explains. "To be competitive today you must accept more technology and capital and management, and in some instances less labor.

"The type of farming envisioned as the traditional family farm is done for tradition, not for good economic reasons. They might grow cotton, for instance, because the land always was in cotton."

Time marches on, and in farming it marched swiftly. Much of U.S. agriculture, says Russell, is now made up of three categories of farms.

First, he lists the uneconomic family operation in which the husband and wife might hold part-time jobs elsewhere. They operate little acreage. They farm because of tradition and perhaps for enjoyment.

Next is the family team, perhaps made up of two brothers or a father and son or a father, son and uncle who manage perhaps 600 to 1,000 acres, half of which might be rented. They're a business.

And then there is the tightly help group, perhaps made up of family members, that operates thousands of acres. It is highly leveraged and very economic. It is a business, and good business practices govern.

"They use all the fiscal tools," said Russell. They study markets and they know how to market their goods. They raise crops, they sell and buy land, they buy and sell cattle, they operate custom feed lots.

That is the reality, says Russell. "There is nothing wrong with preserving tradition, but you cannot have economy using the traditional methods. You can't do what your grandfather did."

The decline of inefficient, smaller farms is documented by the numbers. In 1964 about 205,000 farms accounted for one-half of all farm product sales. A decade later half of all farm sales came from 100,000 units.

Deciding to get out of the dairy business because they felt it was too labor-intensive, they took out a bank loan, bought automatic machines, added 160 acres to the existing 160, and went into livestock raising.

Soon John Russell realized he was involved in more than he wanted. Bank payments always lay before him and his health was not improving. He cut back again, leasing out the 160 newly acquired acres.

For those people planning to become farmers, and for those already operating uneconomic farms, Russell has this advice: "Decide if you want to survive."

Analysis

If you do, he says, "you must recognize that you cannot operate traditionally. You must approach farming as a business, not as a way of life." And for some, this might run counter to some basic attitudes.

You must accept technology, says Russell, and examine each enterprise within the business from a cost-efficient standard. You must accept all the know-how you can get. You must control all the capital you can get.

It can mean borrowing huge amounts. "I say you must use capital other than your own," and "be ready to finance to the hilt," Russell says. If you want to farm 1,000 acres "it isn't gospel that you have to own all of it."

It isn't like it was in the old, old days, says Russell. Not when survival is a stake.

Desegregation Woes Blamed On Officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new civil rights chief for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare says local officials are mainly to blame for lengthy legal battles with the federal government over school desegregation.

"A lot of problems with school boards could have been cut off at the pass," said Roma Stewart, a lawyer appointed to succeed David Tatel, who resigned, as head of HEW's Office for Civil Rights. She said state and local officials rely too heavily on HEW to come up with palatable solutions, adding, "There wouldn't be a problem if the school boards would end their segregative attitudes and policies."

Texan Promotes Device As Means To Save Gas

WHITE OAK (UPI) — Howard Hinton contends his gas-saving device has been a long time coming — 65 years, in fact.

Hinton, a retired truckdriver, said he was only 2 years old when Standard Oil patented the device he calls a "fuel breaker" and now that the patent has expired without the oil company ever manufacturing it, Hinton wants to make sure the public gets some use from it.

"It's so simple, so darn simple, even though it's doing the job," said Hinton from his home in this east Texas community. "The engineers aren't doing anything simple, though, they want to complicate things."

Although Hinton, 67, said more than 200 of his hand-built devices are now being used and saving motorists an average of 30 percent on their gas mileage, he says he can't get anyone in Washington to listen.

"If Uncle Sam was very seriously interested and involed in saving fuel," Hinton said, "God only knows they should be testing this on their vehicles.

"But they don't even want to do it. And they keep referring me from one bureau to another. I've been trying to get reasonable cooperation for the last year.

"I want somebody, an authority, to at least take a stand or a view. If they want to call me a liar or the results aren't up to standard, they can say so. But good golly, they're obligated to say whether I've misrepresented this thing instead of shuffling me from bureau to bureau."

Hinton said his system simply breaks down the gasoline as it moves through a car, preventing raw gas from entering the cylinders where it will not burn.

"All in the world it is is a series of strainer screens that sit between the carburetor and the intake manifold on the engine," he said. "By going through these strainer screens, it breaks the raw gasoline into a gas that is combustible in the cylinders of the auto.

Hines said his system of 6.5 thousandths of an inch screens, installed between insulator blocks and gaskets, results in more engine power and less gas out the exhaust pipe. The cost of his kit, he said, ranges from $7.50 to a maximum $27.50 — depending on the engine.

"This screen actually blocks off 70 percent of the carburetor opening that goes to the engine. On some vehicles, you get slightly less in maximum getaway but on a number we're getting a higher maximum speed than we had without it."

Hinton said his work on the "fuel breaker" isn't the first time he's "tried to design something to do a better job." He said he invented a mechanical contraption called a saddle mount hitch that hooks together large trucks being moved by rail, but he allowed the patent to run out because he couldn't afford to keep working on it. Now, he said, the contraption is frequently used.

"Unless I have something that I can find I'm reasonably sure I can get public acceptance and market, it's foolish for the little man," he said. "I Don't have the kind of funds that would justify that kind of expense."

Still, Hinton said he believed there was a way to save gas mileage — something he became familiar with during his 7 million trucking miles.

"I'm of Scottish extraction. I'm a cheapskate and a tightwad," he said. "For years I've lamented the waste of both the natural and manmade resources."

So, he said, about 12 years ago he began work on the "fuel breaker" and when it looked like it was working well, he told a trucking buddy.

"He said, 'you dang fool, I had that 30 years ago,'" Hinton said.

He said that truckdriver, Walter T. McMahon, developed the system while a young man in Cleveland, Ohio, and about the time he tried to get a patent on it, his car was stolen. When he finally got his application submitted, he learned Standard had patented it three months ahead of him, said Hinton.

But Hinton said McMahon, who died last year, never carried a grudge about it and now that the patent's run out, Hinton plans to make sure the public knows about the gas-saving system.

"I'm doing this for one thing, after cussing and discussing, squalling like a pig under a gate for 25 years about the squandering and waste of natural resources, I think you realize the American public is paying a terrific price for this shortage, or whatever this is."

Hinton said his work on the system may be slowed now that doctors have found he has a malignant tumor and will need treatments, but even if he can't get his fuel breaker on the market, he wouldn't mind passing on his knowledge to someone else who wants to try.

"I want other human beings to derive some benefit from it," he said. "If we could get someone to manufacture this, help put this thing on the market, we might have some fuel and I'll have some fuel before I kick the bucket.

"But don't give me any sympathy. I'm too mean to die. But before that day comes, I'd like to have some idea that someone might make some use of it."

Production Of Oil Dropping

AUSTIN (UPI) — Railroad Commission Chairman John Poerner has told petroleum industry representatives attending a statewide oil and gas hearing that Texas oil production will fall below the billion barrel mark this year — the first time in 15 years.

"Tragic as it is in light of recent events around the world and our increasing dependence on foreign imports, (December projections) confirm my earlier suspicions," Poerner said this week.

He blamed federal policies for dwindling domestic oil production that has cost the U.S. its ranking as the world's top oil producer.

"Today, the role of top producer is being filled by the Soviet Union, with 11.2 millions barrels per day," he said.

Poerner said that early this year he had predicted Texas would fall below the billion barrel mark for the first time in 15 years unless producers were given incentive to boost output.

At the hearing, the commission set the Texas oil production rate for December at 100 percent of market demand, the 34th consecutive month it has set the ceiling level.

The commission directed the continuance of the maximum allowable after receiving and reviewing purchaser nominations for Texas oil in December totaling 2,672,973 barrels daily, a decrease of 11,967 barrels daily from the November buyer requests.

December permissable rate of output is calculated to average 3,412,267 barrels daily, with actual production estimated at 2,642,000 barrels daily. The maximum allowable applies to all but 11 fields in Texas that are assigned lower legal rates of flow for conservation purposes.

The commission also reported December nominations for the purchase of Texas gas at 25,352,118 Mcf daily. Gas nominations for November amounted to 24,001,698 Mcf daily.

With December's nominations, the Texas oil output this year will total 980.4 million barrels. Last year the state production was 1.04 billion barrels.

President Promises 'Grave' Retaliation

ıly, news photographs are not allowed inside Camp David. The last time such arrangements were made was during the Mideast summit more than a year ago.

Carter, wearing a blue windbreaker and dark slacks, walked from his lodge to the helicopter landing area to greet his advisers, who then strolled with him back along the path toward Aspen Lodge.

Powell walked over to chat with reporters and told them there had been no particular event that had prompted the meeting.

"Nothing, nothing particular," he said.

In Tehran, Khomeini called on all Moslems and American blacks to rise and "join us in this struggle between the infidel and Islam."

And the commander of Iran's navy put his forces on full alert to counter the approach of U.S. warships, dispatched to the Indian Ocean, south of Iran, by Carter.

Khomeini, in a statement from his headquarters in Qom broadcast over state radio, warned that the students holding American hostages would blow up the embassy and kill them if the United States attempts to rescue them by force.

The Carter administration said earlier this week that it hoped to end the standoff peacefully but had "other remedies" available.

At the State Department, spokesman Hodding Carter promised Thursday that the government would take a "full-court press" approach to freeing the hostages. The basketball analogy he used refers to a tactic in which everyone on the team plays an aggressive defense from one end of the court to the other.

But the chief State Department spokesman refused, as he has ever since the crisis began, to discuss the options the administration is considering.

Speaking privately, however, State Department officials say the president has not ordered them to lay the groundwork for full-scale economic reprisals against Iran. At present, the administration is asking its European and Japanese allies only to continue with oil conservation programs already begun, in anticipation of a continuing shortage of oil around the globe.

Since Iran is a principal supplier of oil to West Germany, France and Japan, any massive economic sanction against the country would need their support.

The State Department had no comment on reports from the Middle East that suggested conflicting outlooks for the remaining hostages at the U.S. Embassy.

In Tunis, Tunisia, a Palestine Liberation Organization official said Iran has told the PLO the departure of the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from the United States to Mexico or Egypt would lead to release of the hostages.

"We do not believe the PLO has made such a statement because Yasser Arafat supports our revolution," said a statement issued by the militants holding the hostages.

And Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, in Iran attempting to win the hostages' freedom, also said Iranian leaders denied the PLO claim.

Hansen told The Associated Press he met with Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, Iran's acting foreign minister, and others and "they made it clear the PLO statement has no validity. It has been rejected."

Khomeini referred to the continuing situation as a "war between the Moslems and the pagans."

"The Americans cannot harm us," he said in his broadcast remarks. "If Iran is damaged, it means the damage of Moslem countries. ... This is a war between the Moslems and the pagans."

Vance, speaking Thursday morning at a welcoming ceremony for the 13 hostages released earlier this week, said the overriding objective of the administration remains the release of the 49 Americans still held hostage in Iran.

Vance spoke after the five women and eight black men exchanged tearful hugs with their families on the ramp at Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Maryland.

"We are deeply thankful that you are home," Vance said. "On behalf of President Carter and of all the American people, let me say that during your ordeal you performed with courage and deep commitment."

Vance said Thanksgiving was tempered, and relief muted, "at our concern for your colleagues who remain" hostage.

"Let me assure you today that we will not rest or relent in our efforts until every one of your colleagues stands safely on American soil," he said. At that, there was applause. And those who came home expressed the same concern for those still held.

the debts the former plunderers have run up with their foreign collaborators and which they have taken to the same accounts and banks. We shall not pay these."

The U.S. Treasury Department declined immediate response, but a spokesman said the point of freezing Iran's assets in the United States last week was to "safeguard ourselves from an eventuality of this kind."

"We have been prepared for better than a week for a possibility of this kind," he said. But he stressed that the accuracy of this latest report was uncertain.

President Carter froze the assets last week after Iran moved to withdraw billions in deposits from U.S. banks.

Iranian strongman, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, also fired a new salvo at the United States, calling on all Moslems and American blacks to rise and "join us in this struggle between the infidel and Islam."

Khomeini, in a statement broadcast from his headquarters in Qom Thursday, warned that the students would blow up the embassy and kill the hostages if the United States attempts to rescue them by force.

The Carter administration said earlier this week that it hoped to end the standoff peacefully but had "other remedies" available. President Carter dispatched American warships to the Indian Ocean, south of Iran and Iran's naval commander responded by putting his forces on full alert.

The president summoned his top foreign policy advisers to Camp David, Md., today to plan new tactics for gaining the release of the 49 Americans held since the Nov. 4 embassy takeover. The militants have demanded that the United States extradite deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

A secret document obtained by The Associated Press suggested that the United States planned to grant permanent residence to the shah, now receiving cancer treatment in New York, as early as last summer. It acknowledged Iranian officials "may not like" the idea.

The document was sent in August by Henry Precht, State Department Iranian Affairs director, to Bruce Laingen, the now-captive U.S. Charge D'Affaires in Iran. It said the United States should aim to admit the shah permanently by next January after stepping up security at the embassy here.

In his speech from Qom, Khomeini also welcomed the wave of anti-Americanism in Pakistan and urged the Pakistani army to "rise against the oppression inflicted on their brothers" in Iran.

A Moslem mob sacked the U.S. Embassy in the Pakistani capital of Islamabad on Wednesday. The attack was fueled by rumor that the United States was behind the seizure of Islam's holiest shrine, the Grand Mosque of Mecca in Saudi Arabia.

"I call on all Moslem nations, all Moslems, all Moslem armies, all Islamic security forces and all Moslem countries' presidents to cooperate with our nation," Khomeini said. "This is not a struggle between us and America. It is between Islam and the infidel."

Khomeini added that "American blacks who have been subject to U.S. oppression are now in accord with us. Even they might rise ..."

Meanwhile, UNESCO officials in Paris said Ireland's Sean MacBride, winner of both the Nobel and Lenin Peace Prizes, is negotiating in Tehran on behalf of UNESCO to seek a "humanitarian solution" to the embassy siege. MacBride, former director of Amnesty International, flew to Tehran Wednesday.

Militants at the embassy released five non-American hostages Thursday and issued a statement reiterating they would not free the remaining Americans unless the shah was returned to Iran for trial. Thirteen Americans, blacks and women, were released previously and deported.

13 Hostages Celebrate Holiday

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Kathy Gross, the first woman released from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, arrived home for Thanksgiving to the applause and embraces of relatives and neighbors. But for the time being, her ordeal will remain a personal secret.

"It's nice to be back in America," the 22-year-old embassy secretary when her airplane landed at Erie International Airport on Thursday. "I thank the people for their concern for all of us and hope they keep praying until the rest of them are released.

"I won't say anything. I'm worried about how it may affect the others," she said. "I'll have a statement after the rest of the people are released. It's been a tough time."

Miss Gross was released Monday, along with two black men, two weeks after the embassy was seized by demonstrators seeking the return of the deposed Shah of Iran, who is in New York for cancer treatments. Ten others were released later.

The released hostages were taken to a U.S. Air Force hospital in West Germany and were flown to Washington on Thursday for reunions with their families and a brief welcoming ceremony by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

"I'm very surprised. I didn't expect to be here," said Marine Sgt. William E. Quarles as he relaxed in his mother's home in Washington. "I'm kind of tired and nervous."

Quarles said he was treated "pretty friendly and fair" by his captors, who he said were mostly students.

"The Iranians don't have anything against the American people," he said. "They are angry at the American government."

Foreign Service officer Lloyd Rollins told reporters in Alexandria, Va., "it's terrific to be home."

"I thank all you people for the support you gave us," he said. "And we're going to get the rest of them home, too."

Residents of Cambridge Springs, Pa., planned a gala welcome today for Miss Gross.

"They're going to have a big banner outside town and a motorcade and we're going to a local college for an assembly in the evening. We're all meeting there and having a big celebration," said Dan Gross, Miss Gross' brother.

Miss Gross' father, Robert, said the family was overwhelmed with emotion when Kathy descend the steps of an airplane at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington.

"We cried. For two weeks we didn't know whether she was coming or going. It's Thanksgiving. It's great," he said.

Gross said his daughter would "rest for awhile" after Thanksgiving dinner at her grandmother's home.

"It's been a madhouse at our house," he said.

"She said she was tied up 16 hours a day, but that sometimes they let them go outside and walk around for about five minutes. They got to sleep on the floor sometimes. They said the food wasn't too bad," he said.

Asked why his sister thought she was among the first to be released, he said: "She said they probably released her because they got tired of hearing her cry."

'Don't Give In,' Father Of Hostage Urges U.S.

DETROIT (UPI) — Despite the danger to his son — a hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Iran whose taped voice broadcast a gloomy holiday message — Joseph Subic Sr. has a message fo American officials: Don't give in.

Subic, 52, today confirmed the voice broadcast by the RKO Network asking the United States to give in to Iranian students' demands was that of his 23-year-old son, Joseph Jr.

Although it has been a tense Thanksgiving weekend for the elder Subic, he said the United States must remain strong in negotiations with the Iranian students holding his son and 48 other Americans hostage in Tehran.

He exhorted President Carter not to yield to the students' demand that the deposed Shah of Iran, hospitalized in New York for treatment of cancer, be returned to his homeland for trial.

"What Iran has done is wrong," Subic said. "I am really worried about my son. I don't want to do anything to harm him. But we cannot return the shah or give in to any demands.

"I feel strongly about that, and I feel my son does too."

Subic, a machinist who lives just outside Detroit, said he was notified about 3 p.m. CST Thursday by the RKO Network of the interview with the militants in which the tape of his son was played.

He declined to give specific details about his son, saying he did not want to jeopardize the hostages' lives or any ongoing negotiations.

Subic said despite his son's captivity, the anger of Americans should not be vented on Iranian students in America.

"If they're here illegally, if they're breaking the law, they should be shipped out," Subic said. "But only those who are illegal."

Subic said he has been in touch the the State Department and is satisfied with the way officals are handling the situation, but he said he has never received official confirmation his son is a hostage.

"But I knew," Subic said. "A father must know where his son is, especially a good son."

He said he and his wife, Helen, spent a tense Thanksgiving Day with relatives and that Mrs. Subic is "understandably very upset."

"I'm still hopeful," he said. "I hope something can be settled. But the waiting has been hard, really hard on us."

The recording carried the voice of the younger Subic, apparently reading from a prepared statement in an impassive monotone. The one-minute statement indicated Subic was speaking for all the hostages.

He wished his parents well and said the hostages were being treated fairly and were in good spirits.

The statement said the hostages hoped the United States "will concede to the demands of the people of Iran," but the elder Subic said it did not mean his son wanted the exiled shah returned.

HEW Hopes To Keep Hospital Doors Open

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Health Sciences Center Hospital's default on a government loan payment in July continues as a point of concern for the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

But a representative from that agency said this week that his office is trying to keep the doors of the teaching hospital open. After hearing the latest report on the hospital's financial status, Gary Silman of the Dallas HEW office said the missed loan payment is the least of Health Sciences' problems.

The Lubbock County Hospital District missed its July 1 payment on an $8 million loan used for the hospital's construction. The payment, $449,132, came at a time when the hospital district was beginning to realize the seriousness of Health Sciences' financial problems.

LCHD board members are asking HEW for a year's grace period in which no payments will be made — including the upcoming January payment.

Silman and other HEW representatives are scheduled to meet with LCHD officials in mid-December, although they were originally scheduled to meet in mid-November.

The change in plans is the result of Brookwood Management Services' abrupt departure Oct. 31. The hospital district's board refused to sign a two-year contract with the management firm and has made several changes in financial cash flow predictions since they left.

The change in management prompted LCHD officials to ask for a little more time before making their pitch to HEW for the loan extension.

"We're kind of in a holding pattern," Silman said of the negotiations. Silman said he realizes that without the Brookwood manpower, hospital workers need a little more time.

"The problems are much larger than just meeting the loan payment," Silman said. "We're certainly trying to do everything we can to keep the hospital open. The medical school is depending on it."

HEW sent Vernon Seifert, a research consultant, to Lubbock in mid-October to survey the hospital and its financial problems. His visit was geared to give him enough information to make a prediction on the financial future of the hospital.

Seifert's first draft report was submitted to Silman this week. The final draft will be used with LCHD financial figures when HEW officials decide whether the hospital deserves an extension on the loan payment.

Hospital district attorney Charles Galey is currently working on the presentation to be made to HEW next month. The local accounting firm of Pratas, Smith and Moore has been called in to help with the final financial projections to be submitted.

"Our position has not changed" since Brookwood left the hospital, Galey said. The hospital still needs the loan extension to ease the financial burden, he has said before.

DC-10 Crew Overpowers Hijacker

TOKYO (AP) — A man armed with a bottle opener and a small plastic knife hijacked a Japan Air Lines DC-10 jetliner today and diverted it to Narita Airport near Tokyo. He was overpowered by the crew after ordering that the plane be fueled for a flight to the Soviet Union.

The crew handed Kazumi Nomura over to Narita Airport police after a scuffle in the cockpit in which the pilot, Toshiyuki Nishihiro, 39, suffered minor injuries on his wrist, a JAL official said.

None of the plane's 345 passengers, the other 10 crew members or the hijacker were injured.

Nomura, a 25-year-old tile-setter from Sakai City, near Osaka, took command of the mid-day domestic flight a few minutes after take-off from Osaka Airport.

He diverted the plane to Tokyo's new international airport 40 miles outside the Japanese capital. It was originally scheduled to land at Haneda, the Tokyo airport used mainly for domestic flights.

At Narita, Nomura demanded "enough refueling" to go to the Soviet Union.

Officials balked at first but gave in when Nomura, in a radio conversation with the Narita control tower, threatened to kill the co-pilot unless refueling was begun in 10 minutes, a spokesman for the national carrier said. Nomura was overpowered before the refueling was completed.

had urged the administration to discontinue this training because these people are being trained in pretty sophisticated systems," said Tower.

Hance, Tower and U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen last week began pushing for a halt to the training of military trainees in the United States.

The Defense Department said last week, however, that such action would not be taken at that time.

Student pilots from the politically turbulent Middle East country are training in the United States under contracts initiated by the Shah of Iran.

Following the collapse of the Shah's government, the Ayatollah Khomeini continued the agreements with the stipulation that no more Iranians, other than those under the original contracts, would be trained in this country.

Nails Need Good Diet

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My wife can't grow fingernails. She has tried everything. She eats only salads and occasionally meat. Can you help her with her fingernail problem?

DEAR READER — If your description of your wife's diet is really accurate, the first place to start is to provide proper nutrition for her. Salads with occasional meat isn't a balanced diet. Fingernails are specialized skin and consist of a large amount of protein. Proper fingernail growth depends upon the state of good health plus a good balanced diet that includes an adequate amount of protein, calcium and iron.

Your wife should be getting at least 50 grams of good quality protein a day. She would need about a half a pound of raw edible weight of the flesh only of meat, fish or chicken to provide this amount of protein. Or she could get part of this protein by drinking a quart of fortified skim milk a day. I would suggest that she use the milk plus some meat which could be either fish or chicken if she doesn't like red meat.

The milk will provide the calcium which she absolutely must have. A calcium deficient diet also will contribute to softening of the bones at an early age. Neither meat nor salads are satisfactory sources of calcium.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-6, Balanced Diet, Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances (RDA). It will provide you with a brief review of the requirements for a balanced diet. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a handicapped person and have to sit all the time. My stomach and hips are expanding. Is there any help for me so that I can lose this girth? I weigh 147 pounds and am 5 feet 5 inches tall.

DEAR READER — If you have to sit all the time and can't walk and do exercises, it certainly does increase your problem. Part of the reason that people develop heavy hips and a large middle is the accumulation of fat. Fat deposits mean that you're taking more calories than you use. If your exercise is limited, that's understandable.

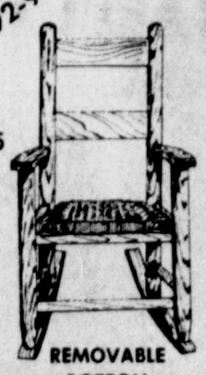

I do not know the extent of your handicap and it's possible that there are forms of physical exercise that you can use that will help you use calories and help control your weight. If so, you should try it. This might be swimming or other water exercises.

Other than those exercises and a diet to put you in the proper calorie balance, you might need to tighten up your muscles. You may not be able to do sit ups and leg lifts, depending on the nature of your handicap, but you can voluntarily contract and relax your abdominal muscles simply by sucking them in, letting them relax and then sucking them in and holding them tight again. Don't overdo this when you start.

You can learn to contract all of your trunk muscles as much as you can. Hold the contractions a few seconds and then relax for a few seconds. By doing this repeatedly for all the muscles you can move, you can help to develop and maintain your muscles even if you have to do it sitting or lying down.

Blood Compound May Cure Allergies

By MACK SISK

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Scientists investigating causes of allergic diseases have discovered a powerful new compound in the blood they believe could have help in the effort to learn how to treat and prevent allergies.

More than 40 million people in the United States suffer from hives, hay fever and asthma — all allergic diseases — and occasionally some persons have severe, sometimes even fatal allergic reactions after they receive drugs such as penicillin.

Science Today

The researchers at the University of Texas Health Science Center say the cause of allergy symptoms may be easier to understand — hence, cure — now that they have isolated, chemically analyzed and synthesized a new chemical compound found in the blood and known as "Acetyl Glyceryl Ether Mediator." They said AGEM duplicates the symptoms of allergies.

"As a scientist, this is a fairy tale come true for me. It's a once-in-a-life experience," said Dr. R. Neal Pinckard, professor of pathology and medicine who has spent 10 years looking into the causes of allergies.

Pinckard emphasizes that discovery of AGEM, a fat-like molecule, is just the first step in what could be stepped-up research in the area in coming years.

"Our long-range goal is to help explain the basic mechanisms underlying the development of allergic reactions, and possibly find a way to treat or prevent them," he said.

Working in conjunction with Dr. Donald J. Hanahan, professor and chairman of biochemistry, with a three-year grant from the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute and Morris Trust of San Antonio, the scientists in just 14 months isolated the compound in certain blood cells.

Pinckard's enthusiasm stems from his belief that AGEM also may play a role in "acute inflammatory diseases," such as rheumatoid arthritis and chronic respiratory problems.

"The research is going very rapidly. The minute we found out what the chemical structure was, the amount of information we're gaining is absolutely incredible," the researcher said.

Experimental animals and humans given AGEM exhibited most of the allergic symptoms seen in humans, the scientists found.

"The symptoms we reproduced in the animals were indistinguishable from the symptoms of the actual disease," Pinckard said. "Very small quantities of AGEM can cause, in rabbits and baboons, a severe allergic reaction in seconds. In addition, during limited studies using human volunteers, we have shown that as little as one 50 billionth of an ounce can cause hives to appear in the skin.

"AGEM is present in very small amounts in the blood, but is found in at least three types of blood cells. Now that the basic structure is known, however, AGEM will be manufactured artifically in large quantities and studied further.

"The key is this: it (AGEM) has never been described before as a chemical structure."

KKK To Probe Crab War

PASADENA (AP) — Ku Klux Klan leaders say they don't intend to escalate a local crab war when they ignore the wishes of Seadrift officials and send a "fact finding team" to the coastal fishing village Saturday.

The Klan's grand dragon of Texas said in Pasadena Thursday that 10 or 15 Klansmen would conduct a "small fact finding mission" into the Aug. 3 shooting death of a Seadrift fisherman by a Vietnamese refugee.

"They are going to interview and talk to people involved in this. There will be no parade. We do plan to go to City Hall and make ourselves known," said Louis Bean, the Klan official.

Klansmen will return in force next month, the grand dragon warned, if they find evidence of an official coverup in the death of Billy Joe Aplin.

"We have received calls at our state office that there were irregularities in the investigation, that weapons used in the killing were lost or misplaced and that testimony that should have been given at the trial was not.

"We are going to try to ascertain if this is true. If it is, and authorities are not willing to act on it, we may have to go down there in force," said Bean.

"We're going to come back next month, with 200 to 300 klansmen, and march through Seadrift and hold a demonstration if necessary," said Bean.

Seadrift City Councilmen, afraid a Klan rally could bring simmering tensions back to the boiling point, unanimously passed a resolution Tuesday night urging Klansmen to "stay away."

More than half of the community's 1,000 population packed the auditorium and cheered when the council promised prosecution "to the full extent of the law" to any group attempting "to incite a riot, provoke violence or create any unlawful assembly."

A feud between refugees and local fishermen over the Vietnamese alleged disregard of local fishing traditions erupted in a crab war after the shooting. Four Vietnamese boats and a Vietnamese residence were firebombed.

Many of the Seadrift's 200 Vietnamese, who fled the turmoil in their own country, packed their bags and left again in the face of mounting violence in the town on the mid-Texas coast.

Attorneys for the two Vietnamese brothers charged in the shooting said it was in self defense. A judge directed a verdict of acquittal for one of the brothers and a jury in Seguin acquitted the other.

The village braced for a new wave of violence after the verdict, established a curfew and beefed up security patrols. However, no trouble developed.

Only two persons, including the father of the slain fisherman, spoke in favor of the Klan during the Tuesday meeting.

"All we're after is truth and justice, and we hadn't got it," said B.T. Aplin, who denied he invited the Klan to Seadrift.

"It's not unusual for some small clique of vested interest officials to be against us. But if politicians think because they have some seat of power they can keep us from demonstrating, they're sadly mistaken," said Bean.

"That was the feeling of just a small group of people, and we happen to know a large number of citizens support us. We have had some of their residents drive all the way from Seadrift to Pasadena to ask us to come down," he said.

Bean said "everything is going to be all right as long as the city officials behave themselves. If there's any trouble, it's because they provoke it, not us."

Mayor Rayburn Haynie laughed at Klan warning it would return with 200 to 300 klansmen and said "at this point officials planned to take no special precautions for Saturday.

"I'll make it a point to find them. I'll know when they come to town. We don't care as long as there's no trouble. Let's put it this way," said Haynie, "we can get plenty of help in here in a hurry ... if necessary."

Winds Block Oil's Path

GALVESTON (AP) — Northerly winds kept oil spilled from the bowels of a battered tanker at sea and away from where 70 workmen spent Thanksgiving cleaning the crude-soaked beaches on this tourist island.

Coast Guard spokesman Larry Clark said Thursday that the tanker Burmah Agate was still aflame and leaking oil, but the northerly winds prevented any more crude oil from washing ashore on Galveston Island.

"It's fairly breezy. We've got north winds of 30 knots, gusting to 40 knots, which should disperse the oil," said Clark.

However, the gusty winds halted skimming operations and grounded helicopters used to track the drift of the spill.

"Without an overflight, we can't tell which way the slick is moving," said Clark.

The Burmah Agate, laden with 390,000 barrels of crude oil, and the freighter Mimosa, also of Liberian registry, collided Nov. 1 near the mouth of the Galveston Ship Channel.

The bodies of 17 crewmen have been recovered and 15 remain missing.

The volatile cargo has fueled a fire that has raged for 21 days on the tanker and triggered numerous explosions that have battered the vessel's charred hulk.

Firefighters have been frustrated in efforts to suffocate the blaze and the sporadic explosions have posed a constant threat.

Authorities had decided to let the fire burn itself out, but Clark said when the weather improves a new method may be tried to extinguish the flames.

"The tug Hudson is loaded with a special foam that will be pumped into the compartments in order to isolate the tanks and centralize the fire. The foam will bubble to the top and smother it," he said.

Clark said clean-up efforts were being concentrated on Jamaica Beach, the area hit hardest by the pollution.

"The tanker owners have hired a contractor who has about 70 men working today," he said.

Priscilla Wounded In Shooting Mishap

FORT WORTH (AP) — Priscilla Davis' Thanksgiving trip to San Antonio ended at a Fort Worth hospital after the blonde millionairess accidentally shot herself in the hand.

A hospital spokesman said Mrs. Davis, 39, suffered only a flesh wound. Police said the shooting was accidental.

Assistant District Attorney Jack Strickland and Strickland's girl friend, Barbara Burke, were in the back seat of Mrs. Davis' Lincoln Continental limousine with her at the time of the incident, which occurred between 9:30 a.m. and 10 a.m.

Strickland said Mrs. Davis was accompanying them to visit Strickland's parents in San Antonio for Thanksgiving.

While lying on a stretcher in John Peter Smith Hospital, where Mrs. Davis was first taken, she said:

"I was unloading my gun, and it went off accidentally."

Mrs. Davis, the ex-wife of millionaire trial figure Cullen Davis, was known to carry a .357 magnum in her purse since a 1976 shooting spree at the $6 million Davis mansion in Fort Worth. Her daughter and lover were killed, and she and one other person were wounded.

Davis, 46, from whom she was estranged at the time, was tried and acquitted of one of the killings. The related charges were dismissed two weeks ago after Davis was acquitted in Fort Worth on a murder solicitation charge.

Dallas Student Told To Trim Locks

MESQUITE (AP) — Jimmy Ray Lewis just had his ears pinned back by the administrators at Mesquite High School. Of course, you can't tell it, because Lewis' hair still covers his ears — even after the district-ordered haircut that got him back into school.

It seems that the school's dress code, a controversy not heard of by most of this generation's high school students, has sprouted again in this Dallas suburb. And when Lewis' mother appealed to the federal government to intervene, she said she was told there was nothing the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare could do.

On Nov. 7, the 17-year-old high school senior was sent home from school and told not to return with his collar-length locks. Lewis said his hair-style was reviewed by assistant principal Bob Hurst on Nov. 1 and given the seal of approval.

But six days later, he was called out of class by Bud Maines, dean of students, and told to pay a visit to his neighborhood barber.

"They told me not to sign out and when I got a haircut, I could come back," he said. "Personally, I think it's a bunch of bull. I don't see what a haircut has to do with education."

After talking it over with his parents and an attorney, Lewis submitted to scissors. His mother, meanwhile, filed a civil rights complaint with HEW.

But HEW officials said the complaint — filed under a provision of the Title IX educational amendments of 1972, which prohibit schools from applying different rules to the appearance of boys and girls — hasn't been investigated and probably never will.

"They are not investigated because of a lack of policy covering such things," said a supervisor at the Dallas HEW office who asked not to be identified.

Dr. John Bell, director of the civil rights complaint division of HEW's elementary and secondary school branch, said the "lack of policy" is caused by continual waivering on the part of the U.S. Department of Justice.

In the past 30 months, he said, the department has ruled:

— That HEW has no business enforcing dress codes.

— That HEW has the right to review dress codes, including hair length.

Sexual Anorexia Linked To Stress

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Feel less sexy lately? Is your mind on other things — bills, taxes, son's grades, daughter's acne, a falling ceiling or leaky roof?

You may have sexual anorexia — loss of sex appetite: Low or no sex desire.

If that's the case, count on plenty of company. Sexual anorexia's "highly prevalent" in America today, says Dr. Helen Singer Kaplan, a psychiatrist.

Dr. Kaplan said the sexual appetite is highly responsive to stress. She links sexual anorexia to stress — and even to fear of intimacy and fear of success, which she said also are prevalent in America today.

Dr. Kaplan, clinical professor of psychiatry and head of the Human Sexuality Program at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, also conducts a private practice in psychoanalysis and in sex therapy. She talked about the sex drive problem during the Eastern Regional Conference of the Society for the Scientific Study of Sex at Fairleigh Dickinson University in Hackensack, N.J.

Victims of sexual anorexia, she and other sex therapists maintain, include mature adults of all ages, both white and blue collar workers, males and females, rich and poor.

Sex therapists such as Dr. Kaplan see patients with this problem come into therapy at the request of a spouse or lover.

The stress that can affect sexual appetite, she said, comes in multiple forms these days but the recognition of the loss of sexual desire as a definite disorder is one of the the great advances in sex therapy.

Her credentials in the field are impressive. She has published 30 papers; co-edited with Dr. Clifford J. Sager, a text on group and family therapy. An earlier book, "The New Sex Therapy," is considered a landmark text in the field of sex therapy. Its sequel, "Disorders of Sexual Desire" (Brunner-Mazel, $17.50) is out this month.

To understand the fear of intimacy Dr. Kaplan links to sexual anorexia you must first know what she means by intimacy.

"Intimacy describes a special quality of emotional closeness between two people," Dr. Kaplan said.

"It is an affectionate bond, the strands of which are composed of mutual caring, responsibility, trust, open communication of feelings and sensations, as well as the nondefenced interchange of information about significant emotional events.

"The prototype of intimacy is the maternal-infant bond, wherein the caring mother is constantly alert and responsive to the infant's feeling tone, to the fluctuations of the emotional currents of her baby.

"Intimacy is an important ingredient in the quality of love and of life.

"A high degree of intimacy between two lovers or spouses contributes to the happiness and emotional stability of both.

"All activities are more enjoyable and life is richer and more colorful when shared with an intimate partner."

The psychiatrist said intimacy is not just part of sex but a closeness that humans can have on three levels: between parent and child; between persons of the same gender; and between persons in a romantic tie. The last involves genital sex.

"The same gender and parent and child intimacies involve sexuality but not sex," Dr. Kaplan said.

As she explained it, sexuality is in the brain and not in the genital region.

When you have intimacy on these levels, she said, you gain a buffer against the stresses of life. But you also risk something — you risk losing the intimacy and you will be hurt if such a loss occurs. But it's worth the risk, claims Dr. Kaplan, because you gain in an intimate relationship.

Dr. Kaplan said people who have intimate ties live longer and have less disease.

And the ties really bind, by the way.

"There is no doubt," Dr. Kaplan said, "that humans were meant to live in pairs."

The child and parent are a pair; the same gender intimate friends are a pair; the romantic tie makes another pair.

"Fear of intimacy is highly prevalent in our society and may produce problems that extend beyond sexual dysfunctions," Dr. Kaplan said. "We tend to spectator rather than participate together, watch television, play cards and video games rather than engage in intimate conversation.

"It sometimes seems that people are more afraid of intimacy than they are of sex.

"An intimate relationship acts as a buffer, providing shelter from the pressures and tensions of daily life.

"We are social animals and without intimate relationships, we tend to get lonely and become depressed.

"The availability of intimate relationships is an important determinant of how well we master life's crises."

The psychiatrist said sometimes both partners in a relationship are afflicted with intimacy conflicts.

"Such couples long for closeness with each other, but when they achieve a certain point of contact they become anxious. Then one or another will behave in such a manner as to create a distance."

Dr. Kaplan said the experience of treating patients with sexual dysfunctons has made it clear that, on an unconscious level, many fear sexual and romantic success.

"This is especially true of the more difficult patients, many of whom suffer from desire disorders," she said.

The concept of unconscious success anxiety is extremely useful in understanding and treating many patients who are resistant to the traditional sex therapy strategies, Dr. Kaplan said.

"This is not surprising because sex therapy is basically designed to modify fears of sexual failure but does not cure success fears," she said.

Freud recognized the success-anxiety syndrome. In 1915 he wrote a paper describing two persons who were "wrecked by success." The two fell ill and essentially ruined their lives shortly after having fulfilled a deeply wished for goal.

In her book, Dr. Kaplan makes these points about the fear of romantic success:

— According to psychoanalytic theory, the unconscious fear of success has its roots in the oedipal situation. In patients who are afflicted with this problem, success is symbolically equated with a dangerous and immoral competition with the same-gender parent for sex and power. (If you are female, blame your mom; if you are male, blame your dad.)

— "Winning" in adult life, that is, romantic success and intimacy, is symbolic of and unconsciously equated with "winning" in the oedipal situation.

— More recent extensions of psychoanalytic theory implicate unresolved sibling rivalries as etiologic factors in success anxiety. The unconscious equation of success with competition results in conflict about, as well as fear and avoidance of success.

— If a patient fails to resolve early conflicts about competition with his siblings, his world may forever be populated with sibling rivals and "winning" may forever mean the destruction of and possible retaliation from a brother or sister.

"The life of persons with success phobias displays a characteristic pattern of fluctuation in the inhibited function," Dr. Kaplan said.

"Typically, the individual will make a great effort to attain the desired goal. When he is far away, he is conflict-free and highly effective.

"But when he is about to reach it, at the 'last inch', he will sabotage himself in some manner.

"Or, he may, indeed, attain his cherished objective but, quickly manage to become ill or disinterested or obsessed about losing it — that is, he spoils his enjoyment in some way."

Dr. Kaplan said the unconscious fear of sexual pleasure is extremely common in the development of sexual dysfunctions.

Dear Abby,

DEAR ABBY: I have a great husband. Not perfect, but close enough. My problem is his father.

About four years ago he told me he wanted to go to bed with me, and had felt that way for a long time. I was insulted and sickened by the suggestion, and told him so. He has a lovely wife, he's not senile, and I did nothing to provoke it.

At first I hated him, then my hate turned to feeling absolutely nothing toward him.

I bitterly resent the love and respect this vile man receives from his family. I am constantly hearing what a "wonderful" person he is, and it all galls me to keep silent. But I must, of course. I also resent the adoration my husband has for his father when, in fact, his father has betrayed him in the worst of all betrayals.

A few months ago my father-in-law underwent emergency surgery, and the family was informed that he has six months to live. When I heard the news, I am ashamed to admit that I secretly rejoiced. His death will be the end of my play-acting, and I look forward to it with reservations.

Abby, do you think I am going to be in big trouble with God for feeling this way? I have come to terms with the insult to myself, but the betrayal of a good son by his father is something I cannot forgive.

Will God punish me for my feelings? Or might He find this sinful man as repugnant as I, and understand my feelings?

NO CITY OR STATE, PLEASE

• • •

DEAR NO CITY: Since you are obviously a God-fearing woman who feels guilty and fear of punishment for your thoughts, ask God's forgiveness through prayer.

I can't tell you how God will judge you but, in the future, leave the business of judging your fellowman to the Lord. That's HIS work.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: How long should a hostess wait for a late dinner guest? My husband and I were invited to a dinner party for 7 p.m. We arrived promptly at 7, and by 7:15 all the other guests were there except one couple. The cocktail hour continued until the tardy couple came steaming in, full of apologies, at 8:45!

By that time I had a hunger headache and my husband had exceeded his quotas of cocktails. Need I tell you what kind of an evening we had?

HAD IT IN HOUGHTON, MICH.

• • •

DEAR HAD IT: Fifteen minutes is long enough to hold up a scheduled meal for tardy guests.

George Washington is said to have set an intelligent precedent. He instructed his cook to inquire not, "Have the GUESTS arrived?" But, "Has the hour arrived?"

• • •

DEAR ABBY: With every sorrow or setback there is a bit of humor. Such was the case when I was recently hospitalized.

One of my nurses was a little Chinese doll who couldn't have weighed more than 80 pounds. She was 22, married and had two children.

After she had given me my bath and massage with her usual care and kindness, I winked at her to show my appreciation. I than asked her, "Can you wink with one eye?"

She answered, "No can with one eye. Can wink with TWO eyes." Then I asked her if she knew what a wink meant. She bent down and whispered into my ear, "Yes. That means, 'nobody home; c'mon in.'"

She knew, of course, that I was 81.

'Basic Four Food Groups' No Longer Describes Good Nutrition

By JEANNE LESEM

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It's no wonder consumers are confused by current talk about good eating habits.

Even the nutrition and medical professionals who addressed the third annual nutrition conference in Washington couldn't agree on how to get the word to the public in language they can understand — and will act upon.

They're still talking about food groups: four, five or seven.

Some think the four groups emphasize meat, poultry and fish in preference to dairy products, grains and fruits and vegetables.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently added a fifth group: nutrition-free soft drinks, sweets and alcohol.

The Basic Seven came first, said Joan Dye Gussow of Columbia University. Under that grouping, fruits and vegetables were divided into three groups: yellow and leafy green, citrus and others rich in vitamin C, and potatoes and other vegetables and fruits.

Mrs. Gussow, who is chairman and associate professor of nutrition and education at Columbia, said the four food groups concept developed in the 1940s was most often arranged with meat and milk in the first two places, "conveying a not so subtle impression" that they were more important than grains, fruits and vegetables.

She suggested modifying the Basic Four because "they may be deficient in a number of nutrients and are very likely to be excessive in others."

She also objects to the Basic Four because "they don't tell us what to eat, but what to eat less of and what to eat more of."

She also questioned the morality of continuing to use a food guide that heavily emphasizes high-priced meat products.

Mark Hegsted's preliminary report on the department's National Food Consumption Survey said Americans appear to be eating fewer total calories but getting too many from the wrong sources.

Despite the calorie reduction, he said, people appear to be either maintaining or increasing their obesity, consuming more caloric sweeteners and "alcoholic drinks are up substantially."

He said the growth in total sweetener consumption stems partly from soft drinks. They are totally lacking in nutrient content but high in calories.

Hegsted said food consumption figures from the springs of 1965 and 1977 indicate most people are eating fewer eggs and less beef and slightly more citrus fruits and dark green and leafy vegetables — in apparent response to medical advice to eat less fat, cholesterol, sugar and salt.

Several months from now, the center expects to publish a series of menu guides to help people limit their fat, cholesterol and sugar consumption and increase the amount of fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals in our diets.

It's no small job, said Carol Tucker Foreman, assistant secretary of agriculture for food and consumer services.

One problem to be solved is getting enough nutrients into a 1,500-calorie-a-day diet.

Mrs. Foreman said new data shows half the U.S. population — mostly women — generally consume only that many calories a day.

"It is very difficult to reach the recommended daily allowance levels for several nutrients, including iron, calcium, zinc, B-6 and magnesium, at that calorie level," she said.

So far, she said, USDA scientists have come up with fortified foods or menus that don't look much like what we're used to eating.

Midge Shubow, information director for the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs, said people "are begging for reliable, simple eating plans.

"They don't know how to translate (the present) guidelines into eating habits," Miss Shubow said.

"Most people want to eat right but they don't know if three grams of salt per serving is too much, too little or not enough. They may not even know what a gram is. They need information in much more common, easily understood terms."

More than ever before, Miss Shubow said, consumers need to know the nutritional value of foods per dollar.

"If people knew they were paying twice as much per gallon for Coca Cola as they are for gasoline, what would they do?" she asked.

Another speaker, an Oregon physician, recommended a three-phase program that has about as much appeal for the average American as wartime meat rationing.

Dr. William E. Connor of the University of Oregon Health Sciences Center, said the first phase would avoid high-cholesterol fats and decrease daily meat consumption from a pound per person to 6-8 ounces. Connor's phase two would cut consumption of fatty and salty foods and cheeses. By phase three, meat would be used as a condiment "as Thomas Jefferson suggested." Connor is associate director of the Clinical Research Center and a professor of cardiology, metabolism and nutrition.

No nutrition conference these days is complete without the pet food question.

One member of the audience asked William D. Smithburg, a food company president, why industry can't develop a single product that will give people complete nutrition in a can or package, just as industry does for domestic animals?

"Pets usually eat one meal a day. Humans eat several, and they eat a wide variety of foods, changing from meal to meal and day to day."

THOUGHTS ON LIFE

We seldom stop to think how many peoples' lives are entwined with our own. It is a form of selfishness to imagine that every individual can operate on his own or can pull out of the general stream and not be missed.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Everyone talks about the "baby" of the family, but no one ever does anything about him.

Is he the "favorite" of his mother? The last hurrah of his father? The indulged brat? The babysitter for Mom and Dad? It all depends on who you talk to.

I've gotten together a profile of "the baby" of the family as seen through the eyes of its members.

According to his older brothers and sisters, the "baby" is spoiled, indulged, and raised without rules. He got the digital watch when he was four, a car when he was 12, an allowance usually reserved for heirs to the British throne, and got to sit in the white living room before he was 16.

He has never known curfews, what it means to share a bedroom, handprints on his backside, chores, hand-me-downs, or heard the expression, "Clean up your plate." By the time he was born the family had a full set of encyclopedias, a riding mower, two TV sets, big bucks to send him to a college someone had heard of, and he was encouraged not to work as it interfered with his grades.

Father views the "baby" of the family as his last shot at being a father...a pal to take fishing, go to football games with, and even violate the siding on the garage by mounting a basketball hoop on it.

When this one is launched it's goodbye tuition, hello St. Thomas...goodbye car insurance premiums, hello sailboat. He's at the end of the line and somehow it doesn't seem very important that the kid borrowed his gasoline charge card when he was a sophomore and hasn't returned it since.

A mother's view of the "baby" is she's losing ground on what she does best. Mothering. That is why when the "baby" is 56, has a stomach that hangs over his belt, and a hairline shaped like the map of the Florida Keys, he will still be her "baby." What she used to hit, smack and put the others in their room for she now laughs at, ignores, or says, "You're such a tease."

Whether from guilt or the luxury of more time she wants to rap about how he feels about life. She's more relaxed, has fewer pressures and figures, "What the heck, when this one is gone, I'll clean the house."

The "baby" has an entirely different approach to his status. He regards his position as a bummer. Abandoned by the good times, he is stuck with older parents in a quiet house and a refrigerator that holds only low fat milk, yogurt and honey wheat bread without calories or preservatives. He has the pressures of an only child, but the pain of an empty baby book.

The "baby" will be with us forever, but look at it this way. It's a dirty job, and someone has to do it.

Opening lead: Ace of ◇.

It is improper, according to the proprieties of contract bridge, to hesitate deliberately to try to fool an opponent. However, it is quite proper to try to read your opponent's hesitation, even though you do so at your own risk.

When this hand was dealt at a recent club game, the South hand was held by Dr. George Rosenkranz of Mexico City. He and his partner were playing Standard International, the system devised by Dr. Rosenkranz and described in his book, "Bid Your Way to the Top." Over South's one no trump opening, West hesitated for a couple of seconds before passing. North's jump to four diamonds was a Texas transfer bid to four hearts.

From West's hesitation, Dr. Rosenkranz concluded that he held most of the missing values. West led the ace of diamonds and continued with the three, a suit preference signal for clubs. East ruffed the second diamond with the ten of trumps and duly shifted to the jack of clubs. Dr. Rosenkranz decided to back his hunch. He rose with the ace of clubs and guessed correctly when he led a trump to the ace, felling the king—East's ten of trumps had been a giveaway.

Declarer returned to his hand with the jack of trumps, cashed the king and queen of diamonds, discarding two clubs from dummy, then ruffed a club on the table. After drawing the last trump, Dr. Rosenkranz announced that, if West held the king of spades and the king of clubs, he could claim the rest. This was the position:

Declarer would lead a trump from dummy, discarding a spade from his hand. If West parts with a spade, declarer cashes the ace to fell the king, and dummy is high. And if West discards a card from either minor suit, declarer comes to his hand with the ace of spades to cash his winning minor card, discarding the spade loser from dummy. Making five odd was a top score on the board.

Columnist Debates Pros, Cons Of Plastic Lenses

By SANDY COLTON
Associated Press Writer

I must confess I enjoy writing about people more than about the technical aspects of photography.

Maybe it's because being a photo columnist somehow brings with it the connotation of being an "expert" in the field, and I remember the definition of an "expert," — ex is a has-been and spurt is a drip under pressure!

In the short time I've been writing this column I've already met through the mail some very nice people. Take, for example, Mrs. Cornelia Widmer of Oakes, N.D.

She wrote about making up photographic scrapbooks for her grandchildren, tracing their roots back through their great-great-grandmother. I passed her idea along to you through this column and many of you have written to Cornelia, much to her delight.

In another letter, R.E. Stannard, chairman of the department of journalism at Western Washington University writes that he's keeping my column on shooting lightning for use in a future photojournalism class. But he also makes me, deservedly, eat a little crow.

In that column, I said tungsten color film gives you warmer pictures when shooting at night, and daylight colder pictures. It's the exact opposite — use daylight if you want warmer pictures and tungsten for colder pictures.

Now, honest, prof, I knew that and can't imagine how I let it come out backwards. Still, carelessness is no excuse. My apologies to all and I guess I flunked the course, huh prof?

Speaking of lightning pictures, there has been a flood of letters from people asking if they can get a copy of the picture that illustrated the column. I wish that I could personally provide copies but just can't afford it. You can buy it, or almost any other AP photo you may want, through AP's commercial division: Wide World Photos, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020. Send along an identifying clip to help them find the picture you want.

From Kingman, Ariz., Leigh Hanlon asked what I think about the move from metals to plastics in cameras and lenses (and automobiles too).

Leigh, I'm against it but it's a losing battle. The argument on the part of most camera manufacturers is that if they didn't go to plastics, the price of cameras would soon climb out of reach of most consumers.

But, to be on the safe side, I asked Marty Forscher who is one of the country's leading camera innovators and repairmen as well as a long-time critic of the camera industry what he thought of your comparison of plastics in cameras and autos.

Marty has been pleading with camera manufacturers for years to come up with what he calls a "hockey puck camera." — one strong enough for the kids to use as a hockey puck on weekends and the photographer to pick up and work with the rest of the week.

He argues that the pros put their lives on the line to get pictures and don't deserve cameras that may not be reliable because of cheaper parts or shortcuts in manufacture.

Marty's answer was simply, "Ask him if he's happy with the plastics in his car." Are you?

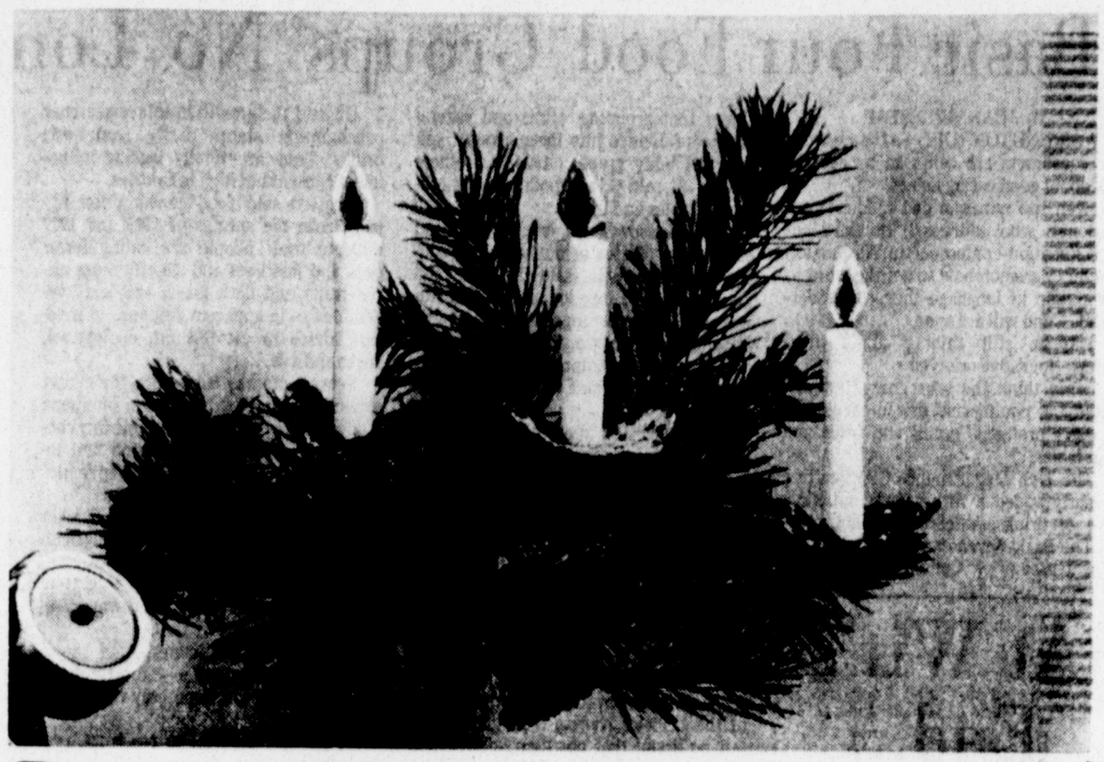

Robert Wooley, a retired trade and industrial education teacher in Cincinnati, Ohio, writes "Enough about taking pictures. Tell us about showing and viewing them." That's not exactly my area of expertise; but I promise to have a column on that subject soon.

From Niagara Falls, N.Y., Herbert C. Force makes an interesting proposition. Herb has been photographing the falls there for years, in all seasons and conditions — everything from when it was a mere trickle to 50 percent of flow. He's been recognized for the excellence of his work.

But, he points out, no one has seen or photographed the falls at full flow since the 1800s before hydroelectric plants on both the Canadian and American sides of the falls began to divert much of the water.

Niagara Falls will celebrate the 300th anniversary of Father Hennepin's visit to the falls in December and, in honor of that occasion, Herb would like to see the hydroelectric plants shut down long enough to allow photographic documentation of a 100 percent flow over the falls so that others could see what Hennepin saw 300 years ago.

I have no idea what the costs might be for such a venture but I do know about dreams. Since this has been Herb's dream for years, I hope that it is somehow possible to accomplish. There's nothing quite like a dream come true and what a magnificent picture it would be!

Decorations Can Capture Charm Of Candlelit Christmas Trees

Since ancient times, candles have played an integral part in winter feasts and celebrations. The Romans fastened candles to trees to symbolize the sun's return to the earth. The Jews celebrate the Hebrew festival known as Chanukah (Feast of Lights) by lighting candles for eight days to commemorate a victory for religious freedom. And Christians have long considered candles a symbol of Christ as "Light of the World."

Today, candles are used as Christmas decorations the world over. And it's no wonder when you realize the scores of legends, stories and folklore this symbol has inspired. Although many of the traditions surrounding candles at Christmas date back to medieval times, some are still practiced today. And you may well discover one that ties in with your Yuletide celebrations.

The true Christmas candle originated in medieval Europe when it was customary to light a very large candle so that it would glow throughout the holiday festivities. This Christmas candle was lit and burned each evening until Twelfth Night. Until the latter part of the last century, a variation of this tradition was still practiced. The large Christmas candle was lit Christmas morning to burn throughout that special day rather than through the entire holidays. If the candle flame were extinguished prematurely or accidently blown out, it was considered an omen of bad luck throughout the coming year.

Candles at Christmas are not only known for the bad luck they may bring. Bayberry candles, easily identifiable by their light delicate scent, are also popular during this festive season and are said to bring good luck to a home. And according to legend, if sweethearts who are separated at Christmas light bayberry candles, the scent will drift from one to the other if they are truly in love.

Nowadays, candlelit Christmas trees are a thing of the past due to their inherent danger in the home. But you can still recapture all of the charm — and none of the hazard — of real candles by making soft-sculpture ones like those shown here.

These candles are easy to make from muslin and calico with an embroidered flame. To attach the five-inch-tall candles to your tree, simply thread a small piece of wire through the base. Fabric candle kits include enough cotton-blend print fabrics, muslin, embroidery floss and wire to make six candles.

For fabric candles, order kit No. 14934 for $4.99 (or two kits for $8.99) plus $1.49 for postage and handling. Creative Home Crafts is required to pay and collect sales tax in Texas.

Send your name, order, and remittance to Creative Home Crafts, Dept. 8BB, P.O. Box 1281, 17th and Locust, Des Moines, Iowa 50336.

Nations Pay Tribute To Sir Rowland Hill

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

Sir Rowland Hill, recognized as "the father of the modern postage stamp," is being honored philatelically this year by many nations on the centenary of his death. He has been acclaimed for producing the first postage stamp — the Penny Black of Great Britain in 1840.

Kenya has issued four new stamps for this occasion, each featuring the stamp-on-stamp theme plus Hill's portrait and signature. One adhesive shows the rare one-anna overprint of the 1890 British East Africa Company stamp. Another depicts the one-shilling stamp of 1935 showing Lake Naiwasha. A third stamp bears the famous penny black. The fourth illustrates the 2.50-shilling issued for the establishment of the Republic of Kenya in 1964.

The Republic of China (Taiwan) has released one new stamp commemorating Hill's death, according to the World Wide Philatelic Agency. The stamp features a portrait of Sir Rowland, the dates of his birth and death (1795 — 1879) and a reproduction of the British Penny Black which Hill designed.

Sri Lanka, formerly known as Ceylon, issued a single stamp depicting Hill's portrait and the Ceylon six-pence stamp of 1857. The inscriptions are in English and two dialects of Sri Lanka.

The Turks & Caicos Islands based its Hill set on the history of ships which have carried mail to and from these islands during the past 100 years. There are five stamps and a souvenir sheet. The lowest value shows a stampless envelope with circular "paid to England" handstamp and the ship "Medina," the first royal-mail steam packet ship to arrive in the Turks in 1842. The second illustrates a map and location of the Turks & Caicos with a portrait of Hill. A third adhesive pictures an early stamped envelope sent by the Royal Mail Ship, Orinoco. A fourth depicts the paddle-wheel Shannon and a letter originating in the Turks. The highest value bears a sketch of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Trent and a map of the islands.

Annual Inspection Of Septic Tank Recommended

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q. — We used to have a cesspool where we lived for many years and were always bothered with having to get it cleaned. Now we live in a house with a septic tank. We thought it would be trouble-free, but a neighbor tells us it has to be inspected at least once a year to be sure it doesn't need a cleaning. Is this true?

A. — Yes. When there is an excessive buildup of sludge in a septic tank, it must be removed to prevent a clogging of the entire system. While an annual inspection is wise, it doesn't mean that a cleaning will be necessary. Some tanks go for years without the necessity of removing the sludge. How long between cleanings depends on the number of people in a family, how well the tank is working, whether the system is being abused, etc.

Q. — I have to put down some resilient floor tiles soon. I know how to find the center of a room with chalk lines, but I don't know how to determine whether the lines are at an exact right angle. I read somewhere about a sure method of finding this out. Can you help me?

A. — After you have put down the chalk lines, start from the point where the lines meet. Measure exactly four feet along one line toward a side wall and make a mark. Again starting from the center, measure four feet along the line towards the opposite side wall. Make a second mark. Once more, starting from the center, measure three feet toward one of the end walls. Using a long ruler or tape, lay it between the first mark and the third mark. The distance should be exactly five feet. So should the distance between the second mark and the third mark. If those two measurements are not five feet each, you have made a mistake and should find out what it is before you go ahead. By the way, if this method sounds tedious, it isn't. The whole thing takes only a minute or two.

Court Sentences IRA Guerrilla

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Irish Republican Army guerrilla Thomas McMahon, 31, was sentenced to life imprisonment today for the assassination of Lord Louis Mountbatten, a cousin of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, in the Irish Republic three months ago.

Another defendant, 24-year-old Francis McGirl, was found innocent of the slaying. But the three judges at the Special Criminal Court ordered him to stand trial Jan. 21 on charges of belonging to the outlawed IRA's Provisional wing. He was freed on bail f 1,000 punds — $2,160

Presiding Judge Ian Hamilton refused to allow McMahon, a longtime Provisional IRA explosives specialist, to appeal the life sentence.

Both men had denied they killed 79-year-old soldier-statesman Earl Mountbatten of Burma, the most prominent Briton to be slain by Irish terrorists in this century. He was blown up in his boat.

Detectives said they are still hunting for at least five other men involved in the killing.

"We're confident more arrests will be made in this case soon," one police source reported.

The Mountbatten assassination was the most sensational attack staged by the IRA and has led to a major tightening of security in Ireland as well as increased cooperation between the British and Irish governments to curb the guerrillas.

The IRA, an almost exclusively Roman Catholic movement, is fighting to end British rule in largely Protestant Northern Ireland and to reunite it with the overwhelmingly Catholic Republic. Ireland was partitioned in 1922.

Mountbatten was killed Aug. 27 when IRA terrorists blew up his 27-foot lobster boat, Shadow V, in Donegal Bay where the British peer and his family were vacationing.

Also slain were: Mountbatten's 15-year-old grandson, Nicholas Knatchbull; Lady Brabourne, Mountbatten's daughter's mother-in-law; and a 15-year-old boatboy. The Provisional IRA claimed responsibility.

McMahon and McGirl were arrested by chance at a police roadblock several hours before the radio-detonated bomb exploded. Police said the pair planted the powerful bomb, leaving it for other IRA men to detonate.

Judge Hamilton said McMahon was convicted on forensic evidence that proved he had been aboard Mountbatten's boat.

This evidence — flakes of green paint found on his clothing and traces of nitroglycerine and ammonium nitrate on his hands — was all police had implicating McMahon and McGirl.

But the judge said prosecutors failed to prove McGirl had been at Mullaghmore, the fishing village on the Republic's northwest coast where Mountbatten moored his boat.

McMahon had been under police surveillance for years. Police Special Branch agents believe he was trained in explosives abroad, possibly by Palestinian guerrillas who have links with the IRA.

McMahon will serve his sentence in the Republic's top security Portloaise prison west of Dublin where more than 150 convicted IRA men are held. The burly McMahon, a farmer's son who reportedly neither drinks nor smokes, blew kisses to his weeping wife Rose as he left the court.

Saudi Troops Gain Full Control Of Grand Mosque In Mecca

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi troops regained full control of the Grand Mosque of Mecca today and were in hot pursuit of the last of the Moslem extremists who besieged the building for three days, the Saudi information minister announced.

Mohammad Abdo Yamani said in a statement broadcast by Riyadh state radio that "security at the Grand Mosque has been re-established ... and security forces now are in complete control of the entire mosque and are pursuing the remaining criminal elements to arrest them."

There was no immediate word on the fate of some 50 hostages.

Earlier, officials vowed harsh punishment for the gunmen who seized Islam's holiest shrine.

Saudi Arabia "will not tolerate any seditious act, and will not be lenient with any group provoking such acts, whatever its color or the color of those hiding behind it," Saudi Information Minister Mohammad Abdo Yamani said Thursday after the government announced it had regained "complete control" of the situation.

The 200 gunmen who stormed the mosque Tuesday, when it was filled with pilgrims celebrating the eve of the 15th Islamic century, "will face Islamic justice, which is against corruption on earth," said Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al-Faisal. Saudi Arabia takes the Islamic holy book, the Koran, as law.

Authorities said two civilians died and eight others were wounded in the Tuesday attack, but there was no overall official casualty count.

Egyptian newspapers, meanwhile, quoted a report by Radio Monte Carlo, attributed to Western diplomats in Jidda, as saying gunmen unsuccessfully tried to occupy the Prophet's Mosque in Medina at the same time as the occupation of the Mecca mosque at dawn Tuesday.

In what appeared to be an exaggerated report, a Kuwaiti newspaper said 600 persons were killed in fighting between the gunmen and Saudi troops. Several Egyptian pilgrims reported there were "scores of dead and wounded."

One Filipino Moslem who returned to the Philippines after being held hostage during the siege said "many" of the mosque's unarmed security guards were killed. The pilgrim, Haji Ahmad Buat, said, "The gunmen told us that their act was on account of the return of the Mahdi," the Islamic messiah prophesied in the Koran.

Arab sources in Tunis identified the attackers as Mahdists, an extremist Moslem sect that believes a new Islamic messiah will appear shortly. They are aligned with the Shiite branch of Islam, which is practiced by most Moslems in Iran and several other non-Arab Islamic nations. Moslems of most Arab countries, including Saudi Arabia, are members of the Sunni sect, Islam's dominant group.

"The problem is not a political one, it is one of religious fanaticism," Prince Saud was quoted as saying Thursday by the Kuwait newspaper al-Siyassah. He dismissed suggestions that the Saudi royal family, traditional guardians of Islam's holy places, were unable to defend them.

The attackers belonged to "different nationalities, including Saudis," he said.

"The shrines do not belong to one Islamic country alone but to the Moslem nation" of 800 million worldwide, Aly Abdel Kader told the Egyptian Al Ahram newspaper.

Moslem mobs attacked U.S. facilities in Pakistan, Turkey, Bangladesh and India's Kashmir region in the mistaken belief that Americans were responsible for the assault.

On Wednesday, Iranian revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said the attack might have been inspired by the United States or Israel.

Miller Says Mandatory Rules Possible To Slow Use Of Oil

LONDON (AP) — U.S. Treasury Secretary G. William Miller said Friday that President Carter may propose mandatory measures to reduce American oil consumption next year.

Miller, en route to the Middle East on a six-day trip, said the mandatory measures could include ones aimed at curtailing the use of cars by rationing gasoline, increasing gasoline taxes or other steps he did not specify.

Other mandatory measures to reduce oil consumption could include lighting and temperature controls, he told reporters during an airborne news conference.

"All the options of mandatory curtailment, price curtailment, have to be looked at," Miller said. "We need to make a tremendous effort next year to restrain demand."

Reducing energy consumption to help restrain oil price increases is the key to controlling inflation, he said.

"The battle now revolves around energy," he said. "If oil prices continue rising, then all other efforts to control inflation, including efforts to support the dollar, will be frustrated."

The Associated Press learned a week ago that an inter-agency task force was working on options for conserving oil for the president to look at, but Miller's statement was the strongest yet by a high official that mandatory measures are being seriously considered.

Miller said presidential advisers hope to have a set of specific proposals ready for Carter to consider by the middle of next month, in time to work out a final proposal for Congress in January.

Miller said the decision has not yet been made whether to actually propose mandatory controls or stick to voluntary guidelines to reduce oil consumption.

"Whether we will go one way or the other, I simply don't know."

Any mandatory actions would have to be approved by Congress to go into effect, said an official who asked not to be named.

Miller plans to spend three days in Saudi Arabia, his first stop, and then continue to Abu Dhabi and Kuwait. All three nations are considered moderates in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. His plane stopped here to refuel.

The OPEC nations will meet in Caracas, Venezuela, on Dec. 17 to consider another increase in oil prices which already have gone up more than 60 percent this year.

Miller said it would be unrealistic not to expect OPEC to vote some additional increase in oil prices. He said the effort to restrain prices should be concentrated on controlling prices in the spot oil market where a per barrel price of $40.45 far exceeds the maximum official OPEC price of $23.50.

Miller said he will urge Saudi officials to maintain their current high level of production, now about 9.5 million barrels a day, to help offset the shortage caused by the slowdown in Iranian oil production.

To win Saudi agreement to maintain high production, Miller said he is prepared to offer assurances that the United States will further reduce oil consumption in the year ahead.

"I will promise that we're going to make renewed and redoubled efforts to make further curtailment," he said.

He said the United States has succeeded this year in bringing oil consumption 5 percent below what it otherwise would have been.

Officials traveling with Miller said actual oil consumption in October was 8 percent below the level a year ago.

Lebanon, PLO Draft Pact At Summit

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Lebanese President Elias Sarkis has agreed to let Palestinian guerrillas keep their bases in southern Lebanon, and PLO chief Yasser Arafat in return has pledged to temporarily halt raids against Israel from the area, Arab summit sources say.

The pact between the Lebanese leader and the Palestine Liberation Organization chief came after hours of backstage wrangling Thursday as a three-day summit conference of Arab League nations ended.

At the summit, the Arab leaders renewed their attacks on Israel, Egypt and the United States, but rejected calls by militants to impose an all-out oil boycott against those nations.

The conference also voted to give Lebanon $2 billion over the next five years for rebuilding from the destruction of its civil war and the fighting in the southern part of the country. More than half the money from the oil-rich Arab nations is earmarked for the south.

Delegation sources said the Sarkis-Arafat compromise confirmed the PLO's right to continue its struggle against Israel "from all Arab fronts," including southern Lebanon, but said the PLO would temporarily refrain from mounting attacks from the area.

Earlier, sources said, Sarkis had insisted on complete withdrawal of the PLO from its bases in the U.N.-policed area between the Lebanon-Israel border and the Litani River.

A fragile truce exists in that area along Israel and pro-Israeli Christian militia, Palestinian guerrillas, United Nations troops and the Lebanese army as the Arab-Israeli peace talks proceed.

Arabs Appealing Israeli Settlement Decision

JERUSALEM (AP) — Twenty-one Arab villagers appealed to the Israeli Supreme Court today against a government decision to delay for up to six weeks the return of 110 acres of Arab land taken for a Jewish settlement on the West Bank of the Jordan River.

The court has ruled that land expropriations for the Elon Moreh settlement, near the West Bank city of Nablus, were illegal and ordered that the land be returned. It ordered the evacuation of 30 acres under question in the suit within 30 days.

The government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin complied and said it would return the rest of the property to forestall further court action.

But the Arab landowners refused to accept the government's promise and sought the immediate expulsion of the 100 Jewish settlers.

U.S. Promises Not To Retreat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vowing an all-out effort to win release of the remaining 49 American hostages in Iran, the State Department says events in the Moslem world will not cause the United States to retreat or retrench anywhere.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter, responding to questions aboutAmerica's future course, said the department certainly is considering what steps should be taken to ensure the security of U.S. Embassies around the world.

"But we do not intend to withdraw or retrench from our responsibilities or from our position in the world," he said Thursday.

He said the United States still believes the vast majority of all governments intend to protect the embassies in their capitals, and said, "We will continue to place that responsibility (on other governments) as we accept it for their embassies" in Washington.

Some of the violence the United States has faced in recent weeks "is based on those who have some vested interest in eroding the power of the United States," he said, while other groups "are acting out of what seems to be religious or misplaced motives."

Even as 13 American hostages were greeted in Washington Thursday, the United States vowed it will not rest nor will it negotiate any other points with Iran until the remaining 49 Americans are freed.

Carter described the U.S. strategy in basketball terms — "a full court press" — and said "we are doing everything to effect the release of all of them."

The spokesman said the United States is analyzing every report concerning the attitudes of the Iranian leaders, but, he said, they "range from insisting on an early trial (of the hostages) to suggestions of an early release. We are unable to say if they are real or a bunch of baloney."

He also said the United States "won't consider any of Iran's complaints except in the context of the release of all the prisoners."

Deposed Leader Plans Return To Mexico

NEW YORK (AP) — Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, the deposed shah of Iran, says he has completed radiation treatments for cancer and hopes to leave here for Mexico within two weeks, according to ABC News.

In an interview Thursday with the network's Barbara Walters, the former Iranian leader said he was "very anxious to leave" the United States and, in fact, never wanted to make the trip in the first place.

Miss Walters quoted the shah as saying he needs "semi-surgery" to remove another gallstone, a procedure which will involve insertion of a small basket-like device into a bladder tube to trap the stone and pull it out.

"The shah doesn't know exactly when the surgery will begin," Miss Walters said. "It depends how he reacts to the radiation. But he's very anxious to go, and hopes it will be within two weeks."

The shah's surgeon, Dr. Bjorn Thorbjarnarson, reached at his home Thursday night, said he could not comment on the report. Other doctors attending the shah have said privately they would not oppose his leaving once the radiation treatments were finished and the gallstone was out.

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., meanwhile, said he had information from a "good source" that Pahlavi would undergo surgery today for the gallstone.

"Up to this time the shah has needed treatment that could be done only in this country, but after tomorrow that will no longer be the case," Schweiker said Thursday.

The shah came to New York from his exile in Mexico on Oct. 22, and gallbladder surgery confirmed the presence of cancer in his lymph system. Miss Walters said he told her that his wife, Empress Farah, his doctors and other advisors insisted that he come.

Miss Walters quoted the shah as saying, "I did not want to come here" and as saying he had to come for a sophisticated diagnosing instrument called the body scanner.

Although he has remained current by watching television, Pahlavi did not discuss the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran where militants continue to hold Americans hostages. The Iranians have demanded that the United States return the shah to Iran so he can be tried and punished for his alleged crimes.

"He is very aware of what the media and people around the world feel about him and and he is aware of the tremendous anger towards him," she said.

Shah Could Have Been Treated In Other Foreign Countries

NEW YORK (AP) — Although his aides have insisted otherwise, the deposed shah of Iran's medical problems almost certainly could be treated in many other countries besides the United States — especially once a final gallstone operation is completed.

Spokesmen for Mohammed Reza Pahlavi have said repeatedly that the treatment the former shah is receiving at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center is unique.

Chief spokesman Robert Armao has said, for example, "the particular radiation treatment he is undergoing is not available elsewhere."

But checks with the makers of X-ray therapy machines suggest that may not be so.

The shah was treated with a linear accelerator, a half-million dollar piece of equipment that generates high-energy X-rays and electrons for treating tumors under the skin.

Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, where the treatments took place, has two brand new accelerators. One of these, the Mevatron 12, is available in more than a dozen other countries including Argentina, Brazil, India, Sweden, Germany, Venezuela and Turkey, according to Siemens Medical Corp. And the other, a Therac 20, has been sold in more than two dozen countries, according to its manufacturer, Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.

An Argentine doctor invented the procedure the shah will undergo to remove a gallstone still stuck in his bile duct.

In this procedure, surgeons will remove the stone through a drainage hole left from the removal of the shah's gallbladder on Oct. 24. Doctors familiar with the operation say many people can have it as outpatients. If it is completed without complications, they say, the shah should be able to leave whenever he wants to.

The director of Mexico's National Cancer Institute says both the gallstone and cancer could be treated in Mexico City.

"We have all the drugs necessary to treat him. We have all the equipment," said Dr. Jose Noriega Limon. "There is no problem in coordinating the treatment with the shah's doctors in the United States."

But U.S. doctors have generally supported the decision by the shah's physicians to keep him here until the radiation treatments are ended and the gallstone missed during the earlier surgery is out.

"All I can tell you is the guy has continuing medical problems and he needs the facilities he's in," said one doctor.

Iranian People Not Angry At Individual Westerners

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Despite a massive outpouring of anti-American and anti-Western sentiment in the local media, Iranians themselves show little or no animosity toward individual Westerners and are eager to discuss the takeover of the U.S. Embassy.

From shopkeepers anxious to serve Westerners to demonstrators at the embassy who courteously lower their "Kill Carter" banner to let a reporter pass, Iranians appear to be taking seriously the official line that this dispute is with the government of the United States and not with its people.

Taxi drivers, students and men in the street are keen to discuss the issue. So are secretaries and other women in smart European dress, as numerous here as the women veiled head to toe in traditional black chadors.

There is no sense of apology in their explanations for the seizure of the embassy Nov. 4 by Iranian militants demanding extradition of ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, now receiving cancer treatment in New York. The militants, supported by revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, want to put the shah on trial for what they call crimes against the state.

If Americans are angry that a group of militants hold 49 U.S. citizens hostage, the individual Iranians say, if they are appalled at the death threats, it is because they do not understand the evil of the U.S. government, which they say is giving refuge to this country's Public Enemy No. 1.

With an air of hurt, a girl student explains: "The Shah was bad, so bad, we must have him back. You should tell Americans what Carter is doing to us. How would you feel if Iran had kept Hitler?"

The condemnation focuses on the U.S. government but quickly shifts to include the entire Western world.

The sense of grievance is deep-seated, as if a whole nation believes it is almost the only one in step.

Hearing a reporter's British accent, the girl quickly added: "Britain is as bad as its big friend. Britain now turns away Iranians, ill treats them, deports them, but the British don't know because their press is government controlled."

One of the massive banners draping an apartment block opposite the American Embassy's main gate proclaims: "The U.S. is worse than Britain. Britain is worse than the U.S.A. (The) U.S.S.R. is worse than those two. Each one filthist (sic) than the other. But today our fight is against the U.S.A."

There is an air of permanence about the scene outside the embassy, where scarcely a brick of the gray compound's walls at the main gate is visible behind the display of banners and posters.

Fight Indicated On Deportation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Of the 1,250 Iranian students being asked to leave the United States because of illegal visa status, only 134 are willing to go without a fight.

The administration said Thursday 1,250 of the first 10,200 Iranian students to report to immigration authorities in response to a government order are "out of status" and being asked to leave.

All but 134 indicated they plan to fight deportaion in proceedings that could take months or years.

The new figures, covering the first eight days of the reporting program, were released by Vern Jervis, spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti initiated the program Nov. 13, and gave more than 50,000 Iranian students in the United States 30 days to report to their area immigration offices to prove they are in school full-time or face deportation.

President Carter ordered the crackdown because of concern that potentially violent Iranian demonstrations in the United States might endanger U.S. hostages at the American embassy in Tehran.

Jervis said figures compiled through Monday for the first eight days of the reporting program indiated 10,200 Iranians had been interviewed. Acting Immigration Commissioner David Crosland believes "that indicates good compliance with the reporting requirement," Jervis said.

Of the 10,200, he said, 7,900 were found to be attending U.S. colleges and universities fulltime, while 1,250 were deemed "deportable."

So far, Jervis said, 134 have agreed to sign a statement consenting to leave the country voluntarily.

"I don't know what the interpretation of that might be," Jervis said of the relatively small number of voluntary departures.

Jervis said 220 of those who reported, including some who are properly attending school, have applied for asylum in the United States — apparently because they are supporters of ousted Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi or otherwise foes of the revolutionary government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

But Jervis conceded that the pattern so far appears to indicate the opposite of normal deportation eforts in which most persons "out of status" leave the United States without demanding deportation hearings.

GI's Father Surprised At Way Son Died

SPRING LAKE, N.C. (AP) — Edmond Polinski was not surprised when he learned his son, an Army warrant officer, had been killed. But the retired Army master sergeant says he was surprised at the way Bryan Ellis died.

Polinski had not expected to be told that his son's charred body had been found in a fire-gutted apartment in the compound of the U.S. Embassy in Islamabab, Pakistan.

Ellis, 29, was one of two American servicemen killed during a mob attack on the embassy earlier this week. Ellis' wife, Brenda, and his 6-year-old son, Chris, were rescued before the mob attacked the family quarters.

"We had an understanding. We knew about the job of being a soldier," Polinski said. "But who would ever figure that a guy who flies airplanes would die like that over there?"

Polinski learned of his son's death at 7 a.m. Thanksgiving Day when a call came from the State Department.

In Mobile, Ala., another career service man also received an early-morning phone call from the State Department. Erwin H. Ellis, formerly of Swansboro, said he could find no meaning in the death of the stepson he adopted at age 9.

"We have lost respect," said Ellis, a Marine veteran of World War II, Korea and Vietnam. "I'd like to go back to Teddy Roosevelt — walk softly, but carry a big stick. When something gets out of hand, this country should take the stick and rap it on their shins to get their attention."

Polinski said he doesn't know where his son was when the family was evacuated.

He said that is just one example of the lack of information he has received. After the early-morning call, Polinski said he called the State Department twice and talked to a Pentagon general.

But, he said, "I still don't know anything. I found out more through the news media than I learned from the State Department."

He said someone in Pakistan tried to call him twice Thursday, but communications broke down both times.

"I imagine it was about Brenda and Chris coming home," he said.

Polinski was to fly to Washington today to meet his son's wife and child.

Ellis and his wife were high school sweethearts in Swansboro, where he was born and raised.

Siege At Mosque Puzzles Moslems

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Islam, like Christianity and other major religions, has found itself coping with doctrinal divisions, heresies and schismatic sects since its beginning 1,400 years ago.

The siege at the venerated mosque in the Prophet Mohammed's home city of Mecca is an example of the power of intensely-held Moslem beliefs to stir adherents — sometimes with violent consequences.

This incident, and recent events in Iran, are difficult for the secularized western world to comprehend. Even devout Moslems are finding it difficult to fully understand the meaning of this week's events in Mecca.

In the very heartland of the Wahabi (puritan) branch of Sunni orthodox Islam, an armed band apparently used the advent of a new Moslem century to proclaim the arrival of a new Mahdi, or Messiah.

The messianic theme is normally associated with the second major branch of Islam — the Shia sect whose followers are concentrated in Iraq, Iran, Bahrain, and Lebanon.

Shiites expect the return of the Imam Mohammed — a descendant of the prophet believed to be "the perfect teacher of Islam" who disappeared in A.D. 872 — to lead the faithful to world victory just before the final judgment.

Some adherents believe he will be joined in this task by Jesus in the 40-year period between his return and judgment day.

Observers in Saudi Arabia are at a loss to explain what the armed group expects to achieve other than martyrdom, itself a strong theme in some Islamic sects.

The action was universally condemned by Islamic authorities of all branches, including the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, leader of Iran's Shiite people.

A Saudi clergyman appeared on television Thursday to say that "The deviators will be tortured by God." That appears to be the consensus of many ordinary Moslems who are deeply offended by bloodshed in Mecca.

The devout are especially outraged that bloodshed has taken place in the al Haram mosque where the taking of any form of life is specifically prohibited by Islamic law.

This, however, is not the first time such events have taken place in Mecca.

Embassy Gets Bomb Threat

KUALA LAMPUR, Malaysia (UPI) — A caller today telephoned a bomb threat to the building that houses the U.S. Embassy, causing officials to evacuate the premises for three hour before it turned out to be a hoax.

More than 500 embassy employees scurried to the street after the English-speaking caller said the bomb was in the American International Assurance building that houses the embassy on the 10th floor, an American official said.

Winners Announced In Student Film Competition

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

The star in a five-minute animated film, a lamp in a shop, gurgles a bottle of gin, does a lot of tipsy things and finally breaks up all the other lamps after starting a chain reaction when he falls off the shelf.

If you search, you might find all kinds of meanings as this smashed lamp brings down all around him. But the story doesn't stop there.

It's up to each viewer to extract meaning, much the way with other films around.

John Lasseter, creator of "The Lady and the Lamp," will only say "it's a five-minute film about a lamp from a broken home that eventually finds happiness."

Lasseter, of the California Institute of the Arts, is one of six winners in the Sixth Annual Student Film Awards competition co-sponsored by the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts, the Academy Foundation and the Bell Sstem.

"Boy, do we have something to learn," Fay Kanin, president of the Academy Awards organization said when presenting prizes to the college film contest winners.

What's coming from campus movie makers is that professional!

Film, of course, is their medium and courses in all aspects of that subject do nothing but grow in popularity.

But there's more to it.

"For the Academy," said Kanin, this program represents a firm commitment to the enduring future of film in America.

"By inviting students to enter the competition, to develop and employ their creative talents to the fullest degree, we strive to encourage a wide-ranging interest in and dedication to this most iniquely American art form.

"In the process, young filmmakers are exposed to industry professionals, opening an important channel of communication and bridging the gap between the industry professionals of today and tomorrow."

"Today's students are the leaders of tomorrow," he said, "and both we and they need to understand each other if we are to successfully work together in the future."

Makers of the prize-winning films are intensely into their art. Lasseter, for one example, has been known to stay up 36 hours straight, drawing, to "let the whimsical nonsense" out of his head.

Other winners in this year's competition:

— "The Writers" by Harriotte H. Aaron of New York University. A 38-minute film about a successful teacher and writer who meets trusting young women on campus, seduces them to learn of their privat lives, writes about same, discards the exploited person, and then moves on to a new victim.

— "Since '45" by Michael David Koprolenko of Boston University. A 28-minute film on the last 30 years of American culture and history, its relation to mass media and the media's influence on the public.

— "Everybody Needs a Forever Home" by Mike Simpson, University of Texas at Austin. A 23-minute film that examines the problems of black adoption as seen through the eyes of black people.

— "Cotton Candy and Elephant Stuff" by Jan Krawitz and Thomas Ott, Temple University. A 29-minute film focusing on elements of a traveling circus tent troupe which are not visible to the everyday audience, capturing the magic and routine of circus life.

— "The Walrus and the Carpenter" by Thomas Gasek and Malcolm G. Spaull, Rochester Institute of Technology. A six-minute film that wittily examines human qualities as portrayed in Lewis Carroll's famous poem.

"It gave me confidence in myself and my talent and made me realize that my sense of humor wasn't crazy after all, that people laughed at what I laughed at," Lasseter said.

"The student film award told me I was in the right business," Miss Aaron said. (Two reels of this year's top three winning films run 80 minutes and are available to schools, community groups and organizations. No charge. The films include The Lady and the Lamp, The Writers, and Since '45. Further information from England Strohl Associates, 200 Madison Ave., Suite 1008, New York, N.Y., 10016.)

Judge Rules On Wine Labeling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is that bottle of Chardonnay wine sitting in your wine rack entirely made from Chardonnay grapes? And are the grapes in that bottle of Napa Valley wine all grown in the California wine-producing region?

You can find the answers to these questions from your winemaker. But a judge here feels that the average wine-sipper should be able to have that information at his fingertips — on the bottle's label.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell ruled this week that government regulations permit misleading wine labeling. And he ordered the Treasury Department to issue new labeling rules that the average wine-sipper can understand.

Gesell, who noted the contents of a wine affect its price, upheld the challenge brought by three wine experts to the government's 1978 labeling regulations. The experts argued that current rules allow misleading labeling in three ways.

— Labels can list a single grape type, such as Pinot Noir, without stating that other, possibly inferior, varieties may compose up to 49 percent of the volume.

— The labels can list a single wine-producing region without disclosing that up to 25 percent of the contents come from grapes grown in less celebrated regions.

— A winery can claim it made a wine that could have been produced elsewhere and given only cursory treatment in the company's wine cellars.

Gesell ruled that the new labels must carry "concise explanations" to identify "principal grape types, chief geographic origins and the identity of a producer."

Trio Charged In Texas Slayings

KOUNTZE (AP) — A discussion overheard at Baggs, Wyo., has resulted in capital murder charges filed against two men and a woman in connection with the execution-style slayings of two civil engineers in Southeast Texas earlier this month.

Three Texas officers flew to Wyoming on Thursday to take Virginia Keefe, 19, into custody. She and two men — Glen Burton Ake, 24, and Steven Keith Hatch, 25 — are charged in the slayings of the engineers.

Hardin County Sheriff Billy Paine said Miss Keefe gave a statement after being arrested Tuesday night in Baggs, Wyo. A man called authorities and said he overheard the woman discussing a double slaying with two men. The men drove away and eluded the town marshal.

The men earlier waived extradition to Oklahoma, where they face first-degree murder charges in another slaying — the Oct. 15 shooting deaths of an Oklahoma City minister and his wife. The couple's two teen-aged children were bound and shot, but survived. Miss Keefer was not charged in the Oklahoma slayings.

Ake and Hatch were arrested Wednesday morning in Craig, Colo., about 35 miles south of Baggs, after a rancher freed himself and called police to report two men who had tied him up and shot his dog.

The bodies of Dale Kokenes, 35, and Yerby Land III, 27, were found Nov. 4 in the small white frame house Land rented in Lumberton, a community in extreme south Hardin County, about 10 miles north of Beaumont.

Kokenes, who lived in Beaumont, had met Land while both worked as civil engineers for Blount Industries on a construction project on a sewer treatment plant in Austin four years ago.

House Blaze Kills Two Boys While Mother Runs Errand

ODEM (UPI) — Mrs. Jose Morataya locked her two small sons in the family's one-room house and left for a nearby elementary school to pick up her two daughters. She returned to find her house in flames and her sons dead, their bodies huddled together on a couch.

"We found them cuddled together. I guess they were trying to protect each other. It was really pitiful," said Fire Chief Jesse Rodriguez, who suffered smoke inhalation trying to save the children.

Ruben Garibay, three, and his stepbrother, Jose Anthony Morataya, one, died in the Wednesday blaze, which Rodriguez said was started by a ruptured rubber gas hose.

Friends of Mrs. Morataya and her husband collected donations and clothing and made arrangements for a new home for the family.

"The people have been wonderful. It's the Thanksgiving spirit, I guess," Rodriguez said.

The fire chief said the 10-by-15 foot house had quickly filled with gas and ignited. The children were found huddled on a couch.

"If it had been a two, three-bedroom home, they could have run to another room but in a one-room home, no way," Rodriguez said.

"The lady left the kids inside and locked the door from the outside so they wouldn't get out. I guess she did right in trying to keep them out of the street but it also kept them in the fire. And they had a rubber hose on the stove, which is a no-no."

Rodriguez said the children were burned over 70 percent of their bodies and apparently died of a combination of the burns, smoke and gas.

Brownsville Murderer At Large

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Police said they knew who shot one woman to death and wounded another Thursday in a shooting spree at a Brownsville restaurant but were unable to arrest the man they believed responsible at once.

It was theorized that the assailant fled to Mexico, just across the Rio Grande from this southmost Texas city.

The dead woman was identified as Manuela de la Garza Castillo, 55. The wounded woman is Hortencia Rodriguez, 34, police said. She was reported in serious condition at Brownsville Medical Center.

Lt. Pat Tamayo of the Brownsville Police Department said 11 empty casings, either 32 caliber or 9-millimeter, were found at the Overpass Cafe, scene of the shooting.

Police said a waitress and cook said they were in the kitchen at the time of the shootings and that there were no eyewitnesses except for the wounded woman.

"We're waiting on the owner to say what happened," Tamayo said. He said she was bleeding heavily from the upper torso as she was put into an ambulance.

Criminal Disclosure Rule Criticized

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Civil Liberties Union director John Duncan says proposed rules on criminal records could cause ex-convicts to become desperate men and women.

Duncan objected Wednesday to allowing police agencies to release individuals' criminal records to possible employers and the general public.

He voiced his objections at a hearing before Willis Whatley, counsel for the governor's Criminal Justice Division.

Whatley agreed with Duncan on one point and eliminated from the disclosure rule records of arrests that had been on the books for a year without any prosecution.

"Dissemination of conviction records is counterproductive in that it makes more likely the chance that a person will commit additional crimes. A person without a job and with little possibility of obtaining one because of the ready access of employers to an arrest or conviction record can become a desperate person," Duncan said.

The Texas Department of Public Safety, keeper of the state's criminal records, currently denies the general public access to its records. Whatley said the DPS would be free under the proposed rule to continue withholding access.

"It won't change anything," Whatley said.

He said the only reason for the rule is to comply with federal rules governing Law Enforcement Assistance Administration grants. The Criminal Justice Division administers the grants in Texas.

Whatley said arrest data already must be disclosed under the Texas Open Records Act.

Duncan said his fears arose largely from the computerization of criminal records.

"I'm afraid that what would happen is a couple of large security firms would get it (criminal conviction data) routinely ... I think there is a lot of unauthorized access that appears to be local police work but really consists of favors to large security firms," he said.

Laredo Birth Certificate Irregularities Revealed

LAREDO (AP) — At least seven birth certificates have been issued in this Texas border town for babies born in Mexico, the city secretary of Laredo has charged.

The official, Gustavo Guevara, said midwives should be required to file birth certificates with the city so irregularities can be controlled.

Mexican mothers frequently cross the border to have their children so they will have American citizenship, but Guevara said some mothers apparently are having children in Mexico and still obtaining birth certificates showing the birth to be in the United States.

Guevara said he has obtained copies of seven birth certificates issued in Mexico between 1973 and 1976 that contain the same information as birth certificates issued in Laredo by four midwives.

Guevara said he suspects the certificates were sold long after the babies were born.

An estimated half of all births in Laredo are handled by midwives, who are not regulated but must register with the city. They are issued birth certificates, which are supposed to be filed with city and state agencies, but certificates filed after a certain time go only to the state.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Australian Tourist Commission says visitors to Australia from the United States from December 1977 to December 1978 were up 6.2 percent — to 80,971 from 76,236 the previous year. It says visitors from Canada during the same period were up 5.5 percent — to 19,011 from 18,018.

Official Rejects Eddowes' Offer

FORT WORTH (UPI) — The Tarrant County district attorney's office has rejected as insufficient a British author's offer to pay a $15,000 deposit to protect against possible lawsuits in the exhumation of the body of presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald.

Assistant District Attorney Marvin Collins told attorney Jerry Pittman, who represents author Michael Eddowes of London, that the offer for the deposit on a $100,000 indemnification bond was not enough, considering the legal risks.

Collins issued the decision Wednesday, one day before the 16th anniversary of the assassination of President John Kennedy.

In his book, "The Oswald File," Eddowes questions whether it was Oswald or a look-alike Russian agent who killed Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

Collins told Pittman he did not "regard your counteroffer (of a $100,000 bond) as a meaningful counteroffer, in view of the virtually unlimited liability which could be imposed for wrongfully exhuming a body for the sole purpose of identification, where the body was identified by the next of kin, photographed and fingerprinted before it was interred 16 years ago."

Collins said if Eddowes would consider a $10 million corporate surety bond, he would feel obligated to work toward the exhumation.

Doctors' Bills Linked To Insurance Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federal study links higher doctors' bills to physician control of many of the nation's Blue Shield insurance plans.

The study by the Federal Trade Commission's bureau of economics, released this week, compared fees billed to state Blue Shield plans where doctors control the plans with those where non-doctors are in charge.

"We found evidence that control is associated with significantly higher physician fees," the report said.

The report by David K. Kass and Paul A. Pautler appears to increase the chance of the FTC requiring that Blue Shield boards have a majority of non-physicians.

The commissioners have delayed acting on a recommendation for such a requirement until the bureau of economics study was finished.

Blue Shield plans, the largest provider of insurance for physicians' services, paid more than $5 billion in benefits in 1977.

The study made statistical correlations between fees and various measures of physician control over the plans. The comparisons all indicated significant savings if boards were not controlled by doctors.

The largest of these differences was where medical societies influence board composition. In this measurement, the report found an average of 16 percent higher prices for medical procedures.

"If prices were reduced by this amount, then total savings would approximate $435 million for the present quality of services," it said.

Heitler said a study by the association indicated a larger percentage of physician-directors leads to lower average payments. "We are really puzzled as to how the FTC staff could have arrived at such different findings as we have from the same data," he said.

Fed Restrictions Place Farmers In Tight Squeeze

PAMELA J. HUEY
United Press International Writer

New Federal Reserve Board restrictions on the supply of money and credit are putting a tight squeeze on farmers, especially those already overextended on land and machinery, bankers and economists say.

Farmers, who often must make large capital expenditures to stay in business, also use credit to purchase fuel, fertilizer, seed and chemicals.

Partly because of inflation, outstanding farm debt is increasing every year. As of Jan. 1, 1978, farm debt nationwide was $119.3 billion; on Jan. 1, 1979, it was $137.5 billion, and the estimate for Jan. 1, 1980, is $157.8 billion.

Faced with expensive credit, farmers should watch their cash flow very carefully and delay any large machinery purchases for the time being, economists advise.

C News
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Friday, Nov. 23, 1979

"Since farming is a business with higher operational costs than most, they have to be cautious about how much cash flow they can take on," said Folke Dovring, a University of Illinois agricultural economist.

C. Edward Hashbarger, an economist with the Federal Reserve Bank in Kansas City on loan to the Farm Credit Administration in Washington, said it appears funds are available — at a cost. Farmers, however, may have to seek out a few more resources than usual, such as insurance companies or the farm credit system.

Howard Walker, vice president of the First National Bank in Metamora, Ill., is worried the credit crunch along with soaring fuel and fertilizer costs will force a small segment of farmers out of business.

"When it comes to refinancing, some farmers might find it most difficult to meet the repayment of loans. They may have gotten themselves a little overextended and as interest rates and fuel costs get higher, some are going to find it much harder to come up with the net money. Some will get in a difficult position and have to sell out," Walker said.

Prices for fertilizer and chemicals, fairly stable the past year, are expected to jump significanly next spring, putting a further cost-price squeeze on the farmer who cannot pass on his costs like other businesses can, he said.

One bright spot, however, is the bumper corn and soybean crops harvested this fall.

Lonnie Doan, senior vice president for the Olney Trust and Banking Co., said he has advised farmers who have a good cash flow because of the large crop to delay big capital purchases if possible and save the money for spring planting needs.

Racketeers Afraid To Enter California

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The California attorney general says racketeers moved to the West Coast in increasing numbers over the past five years, but the word is now out to avoid the state "because there is too much heat from the police."

That was the report to the Legislature from Attorney General George Deukmejian. It was the state Justice Department's first update since May 1978 when Attorney General Evelle Younger listed 92 California residents allegedly connected with organized crime.

Abortion Squabble Threatened Government Financing Bills

By CHERYL ARVIDSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It happened again this year, as predictable as ever. Government very nearly ground to a halt as the House and Senate squabbled over abortions.

Not abortions for everyone, just for the poor — and then, only a tiny group of them.

For years, Congress has weaved around and ducked the abortion issue, tossing small sops to anti-abortionists who threaten political retribution for not voting their way.

The anti-abortionists want no abortions — ever, for anyone. But Congress has lacked the resolve to go that far. Instead, the battle is being fought year after year against the most vulnerable group in society, the poor, and in the appropriations committees rather than the legislative committees that should handle it.

Once the government paid for abortions for poor women under the federal Medicaid program. But the poor don't have the money and power that talk in this federal city, so when they ran into the anti-abortionists it was no surprise they lost.

Nearly three years ago Congress ended federally funded abortions for poor women unless the mother's life or health were at stake or in cases of rape and incest — eliminating, according to the government's own figures, 99 percent of the Medicaid abortions.

Washington Window

But that didn't satisfy the anti-abortionists and their political supporters in the House.

On Oct. 1, as fiscal 1980 began, several vital appropriations bills were hopelessly tied up as the House kept adding more restrictive anti-abortion language and the Senate kept resisting.

Normally, Congress passes a routine continuing resolution to keep government operating until the regular funding bills are approved. This year, the House put the anti-abortion language on the continuing resolution as well and trapped that legislation in the abortion tight.

For more than two weeks in early October, the resolution was stalled and the government technically was without funds. Federal paychecks were threatened, as were payments under a variety of government assistance programs.

The Senate finally buckled and eliminated government-financed abortions for women who would suffer permanent health damage by continuing their pregnancy and allowing abortions only if the women would die or for victims of rape or incest.

More than one month later, many of those regular appropriations bills still were hostage to the battle over abortions, and another continuing resolution was needed to tide the government.

But it, too, became trapped in the abortion fight, with the House and Senate again threatening the government with a cutoff of funds as both sides of the dispute engaged in political posturing.

Government operations should not be repeatedly tied up — and federal workers should not repeatedly face payless paydays — over the issue of abortion.

Couple Waiting On Housing Market To Improve

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — When they started looking in suburban Westchester County several months ago, Bob and Joanne Dorris hoped to find their first house by Christmastime.

But early this month, with uncertainty mounting in their minds about the future direction of the housing market, and with mortgage rates at record highs, they sat down and acknowledged that they weren't going to make that goal.

Not that the Dorrises (a pseudonym they requested for reasons of privacy) are poor by any means. Bob earns better than $25,000 a year in his technical writing job, and Joanne nearly $10,000 as a teacher.

In their three years of marriage, while renting an apartment, they have saved about $15,000 toward a down payment on a house. But they don't feel much closer to home-ownership today than they were when they started out.

At the outset they faced, along with all other would-be home buyers, the obstacle of soaring house prices. More recently their problem has been compounded by the Federal Reserve's pinch on credit, and warnings from some experts that house prices might not fare so well in the future as they have in the recent past.

"The houses we could afford were at the bottom of the market — very small, or poorly built — but we didn't quit looking," Bob says. "The clincher was when prices started slowing down and money got tight.

"Aside from the difficulty of finding a house we liked, there was a fear in our minds of buying one whose price wouldn't hold up. The houses we were looking at were the kind that are hard to sell. The owners were having trouble selling them, and we thought, 'why should we buy their problems?'"

Thus they decided, not to abandon the idea altogether, but to wait the market out for a while, with a plan of looking in earnest again next spring.

By that time, Bob reasons, mortgages might be a at least a little less expensive and easier to get, although he acknowledges, "that's a completely uneducated prediction."

In the meantime, the Dorrises hope at least to keep pace with any further rise in home prices by increasing their savings over the winter, and by getting the best possible return, without sacrificing safety, on the money they have already accumulated.

While they were actively looking, they kept that nest egg in a conventional 5½ percent savings-bank passbook account, so that it would be protected by federal insurance and available on short notice.

Now they are looking at alternative places to put it where it can earn something closer to the inflation rate, which is currently about 13 percent.

They ruled out a six-month money-market certificate at their savings bank, even with its yield of close to 12 percent, on the grounds that they would lose most or all of that interest in early-withdrawal penalties should a good housing buy come along before next May.

That left Bob considering two remaining choices:

—Treasury bills, which offer yields a shade better than six-month MMCs, and which can be sold before maturity if need be through a banker or broker.

—Money-market mutual funds, which currently offer double-digit returns as well as ready availability of the money at any time. Yields on these funds would decline immediately if interest rates came down, of course, and though they are considered relatively safe, they lack the government backing that Treasury securities have.

Q: What happened between Henry Kissinger and his old friend and favorite interviewer, Oriana Fallaci? I hear they're no longer on speaking terms. — Dorothy Balick, Staten Island, N.Y.

A. Seems the famous Italian journalist is furious with Henry for the "many idiotic things" described in his newly published memoirs. Particularly his "distorting" her 1972 interview with him. Mike Wallace (who had Fallaci on "60 Minutes") got into the act and listened to part of the disputed taped conversation. "Oriana was not anxious that I should hear all of it," said Wallace. "But I don't think it was a cheat; simply a condensation." Meanwhile, the Intelligence editor of New York magazine quotes Miss Fallaci as commenting (about Kissinger): "He is breaking my b--s." After which, it says here, the tempestuous Fallaci hung up.

TIPS FOR GARDENERS

Expert Says Thatch No Threat To Grass

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press Writer

What appear to be dead spots in your lawn may be due to thatch, but one of the nation's grass experts says it is no great threat and nothing to be overly concerned about.

Thatch, generally speaking, is spent tissues at the base of the sod between the soil and the green growth. It represents accumulation of organic residues faster than they decay, and may be cleaned out.

Dr. Robert W. Schery, director of the Lawn Institute at Marysville, Ohio, says clippings from lawn mowings are seldom important in thatch buildup. He notes clippings are leaftip tissue, tender and succulent, that decompose readily, and that "thatch builds up mostly from plant parts that grow below mowing height."

Of course, grasses differ in resistance to decay and some decompose more rapidly at one season than at another. For instance, zoysia grass is tough and decomposes slowly. Fescue sheathes are more durable generally than bluegrass and perennial ryegrass. In most cases, Schery says, fresh growth decays more readily than older stems.

"Lawn care has some influence on thatching," says Schery, "since it regulates abundance of topgrowth and may interfere with decomposition processes. Pesticides that decimate microorganisms and earthworms may hinder thatch breakdown. Earthworms eat organic materials such as thatch. Sometimes thatch is overly acid for the liking of decay organisms. Then liming encourages its disappearance. Fertilizer may have contradictory influences. Nitrogen is advantageous to decay 'bugs' in a carbon-rich environment, but it also stimulates grass productivity."

Schery says some grasses are so vigorous they thatch more readily, and so do some especially well-tended lawns. Then occasional thinning may be wanted.

Thinning removes thatch physically, usually with powered de-thatchers you can buy or rent from garden equipment shops.

Aerification by punching holes in the ground (coring) will help discourage thatching by bringing bits of soil to the surface to act as something of a top dressing. The biological activity helps provide a better air and water mix, essential for decay, Schery adds.

"Moderate thatch is beneficial," says the grass researcher, "say up to one-half inch of it. Thatch cushions grass against wear, and it restrains the sprouting of weed seeds. As thatch decomposes it recycles useful nutrients. It may even conserve moisture a bit. But thick thatch impedes fertilizer and water from getting to the root zone.

"On dense ground, grasses may root mainly into thatch instead of growing deeply into the soil. Then the turf becomes a little more than a surface mat, prone to loss from summer weather."

Lawn Grubs

If your lawn sod lifts like a mat or rolls back, check for grubs. They are fleshy, C-shaped, ugly creatures often unearthed in autumn.

The grubs, which begin as eggs in spring, feast on grass roots and can ruin the deep-reaching roots essential for keeping lawngrass green in dry weather.

Check for grubs also if your grass gradually yellows as the weather becomes dry. (You may be blaming drought.) If rainfall is consistent the grass may not show much distress because it will re-root after the grubs have dined and dug deeper into the soil for winter hibernation.

If the grub damage is serious, consider rebuilding the lawn. Otherwise soak the infested sod with insecticide or douse the grubs before they can retreat.

Jury Being Chosen In Newspaper Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jury selection has begun in the trial of an antitrust suit brought by the Pacific Sun and other newspapers against the San Francisco Examiner and San Francisco Chronicle.

The Pacific Sun, a weekly in nearby Marin County, claims its San Francisco edition failed five years ago because high advertising rates in the defendant newspapers left potential customers with no money to spend for advertising in competing publications.

The Examiner and Chronicle have separate owners, but advertising is handled by one agency. Jury selection began Monday in U.S. District Court.

Kansan Builds Odd Furniture From Farm Machinery Parts

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Even as a kid, Frank Jensen saw beauty in the old gears, sockets and wheels that lay rusting on his father's Kansas farm.

Now he's preserving those antiques in butcher-block tables, magazine racks and even hat stands.

For 18 months, the high school English teacher has spent his free Saturdays traveling to farm auctions. He buys farm machinery and takes it apart. Then he welds, sandblasts and paints. Later he affixes the iron to reclaimed oak.

"This type of furniture has the warmth you can stand in your living room," he says.

A cigar stub clenched in his teeth and heavy pea jacket on his back, Jensen sifts through a pile of machinery he has dumped in his backyard in Wichita. He refuses to see it as junk metal. To him, it's unfinished furniture.

"I'm just not quite sure how to use some of them yet," he says. "But I'll find a way."

Jensen has managed to make 40 pieces, some of which he sold during a recent weekend open house. The prices ranged from $12 for a tiny ashtray stand to $1,200 for a butcher-block table.

The raw material for his furniture is inexpensive and easy to find on farms in the Midwest. But the hours spent shopping at auctions, dreaming up designs and shaping the metal and wood boosts the price of the finished version.

Jensen keeps the original purpose of the farm implement in mind during his designing sessions. His tables often have a wheel or gear for a base, a chain for the skirt and an axle for the stem. That way the top can be raised and lowered simply by twisting the table.

Jensen's furniture may be the first — and last — of its kind.

"Some of this stuff is real scarce," he says. "And the thing that will force me to change designs will be the type of material I am able to find."

On the farm where Jensen grew up, his father always parked the worn-out machinery. "I can't remember Dad ever selling anything," Jensen says.

When his father died two years ago, Jensen went to the estate sale. The antique farm implements were being auctioned for scrap iron.

"I watched those junk dealers buy Dads stuff and out of frustration I bought the last seven implements," Jensen says.

Indians Fast, Whites Dine At Plymouth Gatherings

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (UPI) — It was a study in irony: thousands dined and celebrated Thanksgiving at this historic coastal community as American Indians fasted nearby, because they "have nothing to be thankful for."

In October 1621, the Pilgrims celebrated their first successful harvest with a three-day festival; the main fare was deer and roast goose, but notturkey. The festival was not an annual event and didn't become so for many years.

Those who feasted on roast turkey and fixings at Memorial Hall Thursday celebrated a holiday which really wasn't a national event until President Lincoln proclaimed it so.

That, combined with an 1th century New England holiday called Forefathers Day, evolved into what is now America's traditional Thankgiving day holiday.

The relations between the Pilgrims and the native Indians were hardly amicable then, regardless of what the myths associated with the holiday say, according to Frank James, 58, of North Chatham.

James said his group, the United American Indians of New England, was fasting until sundown to "mourn all the injustices to the American Indian in the past and today."

Up to 300 followers gathered at the statue of Massasoit, the Wampanoag Indian chief who, James said, was intoxicated with "strong water" given to him by the Pilgrims before he signed the first friendship treaty.

"We want to tell the public the American Indian has nothing to be thankful for on this Thanksgiving day," James said. "The injustices that have been going on for 400 or 500 years are still going on today."

Thanksgiving, he said, is merely a day for "merchants to hoodwink everybody in the country into going out and buying a big meal." Meanwhile, he said, there are still those who are starving.

Misconceptions Cited About Thanksgiving

BERKELEY, Calif (UPI) — There probably were no prayers at the first Thanksgiving celebration.

And what's more, says a University of California faculty member, there probably wasn't any turkey either.

James J F. Deetz, formerly with the Plymouth Plantation museum, also said Thursday that on the first Thanksgiving in 1621 it wasn't the end of November, and undoubtedly some home brew was consumed.

"There are a lot of misconceptions," Deetz said. "They don't teach it right in school."

The first Thanksgiving was "a standard English harvest festival," Deetz said, and it dated back to the Middle Ages.

As for the Mayflowr party's feast, Deetz said, "I'm not sure how much drinking happened that first year. They were running out of beer when the Mayflower put ashore, but I'm sure they malted up part of the corn they grew that first year."

"There is no evidence that they said prayers. Any 17th century Englishman would have said prayers the day before or the day after, but not on the day of the celebration. Only about one-third of the settlers in the party were members of the separatist religious group. The rest were Church of England.

They did not call themselves "pilgrims."

"Knowing what it's like to catch a turkey, they probably didn't catch any but had geese and ducks which were more easily bagged," the historian said. "The settlers were not hunters. They were farmers. Farmers don't do much hunting."

The Indians, who outnumbered the 50 settlers nearly 2 to 1 at the party, brought five deer. "That goes quite a way, and they may have had other small game, but I'll bet there were no turkeys," he said.

Deetz said, "Chances are it was in late September or early October. I'm sure they didn' wait until November."

He said that while the religious separatists came on the Mayflower, most of the party aboard were strangers recruited around London who had colorful living styles far more Elizabethan than puritanical. They were assembled by "merchant-adventurers" interested in developing the new land.

"John Alden, for example, was not a member of the separatist group," he said.

Deetz said the traditional erroneous version of the first Thanksgiving probably resulted from a single paragraph written by one of the participants, Edward Winslow, who mentioned a three-day celebration held with the Indians after "our harvest being gotten in" and proved to be a good one "by the goodness of God."

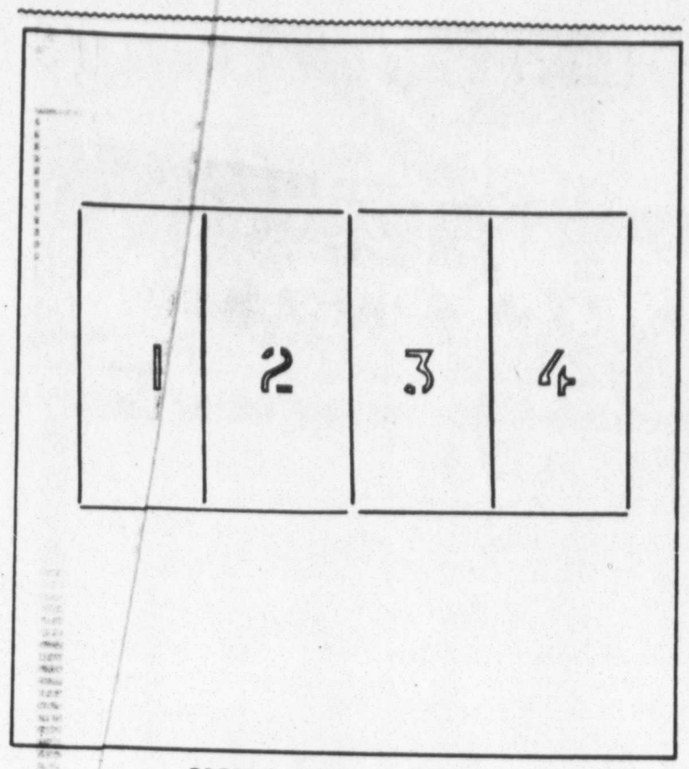

The scholar noted that the modern Thanksgiving Day was instituted in Lincoln's time and it was only in the 1930s that President Roosevelt moved it to late in November "to get a shorter shopping season before Christmas."

Fingerprints Easy To Take

By SHARIS LEWIS

Even if your hands are clean as an be, fingertips have oil on them, so you leave oil on everything you touch. Because you have lines on the ends of your fingers what you leave behind is an oily pattern that is different from everyone else's in the whole world. That's your fingerprint!

If you want to see how different each one of your own fingertips is, slide the ends of your fingers lightly across a damp top of an inked stamp pad. Now roll the inky fingertip onto a blank file card. Do the same with each finger on that hand in order, label the five prints, and put your name in the center of the card.

It's fun to lift a fingerprint off a smooth (preferably glass) surface. Press your finger down on the area. Brush lightly with black powder (made by rubbing a lead pencil across sandpaper and dumping the powder into an envelope).

When the powder is on the surface with the fingerprint very carefully brush off the loose grains with a soft feather or dry watercolor brush.

Place a strip of clear cellophane tape over the print, press down, remove the tape and stick it in the center of a blank file card.

Yestertay's Brain Twister: If April showers bring May flowers, what do May Flowers bring?

Answer: Pilgrims.

Today's Brain Twister: This is a classic old farm puzzle: The farmer had nine hurdles. He had them put together so that they formed four pens, like this (illustration). Then he got one extra hurdle. How did he make five pens each of the same size? (Look for the answer in Sunday's Kids-Only Club column.)

Killing Called Drug-Related

PARKERSBURG, W.Va. (UPI) — The headless body of a construction worker found in a small house with the head resting on a dresser was a "drug-related" killing, authorities speculate.

A woman, identified by police as Debbie Hannan, made the grim discovery around noon Tuesday and was reported under heavy sedation hours later.

The body of the victim, tentatively identified as Charles Morgan Marsh, 34, of Columbia, S.C., was found lying in a bed with his wrists handcuffed and his feet trussed with a cord.

His severed head was placed on a dresser in the house on Dry Run Road, a rural area of Wood County near Parkersburg. Police said no weapon had been found.

Sheriff L.W. Bechtold, who believes "the murder may be drug-related," said an inudppanty hak an acked the five-room, bungalow type home.

A note was found scrawled on the outside wall of the house, police said. It read: "I came. You weren't home. I love you."

Presbyterians Hold Historic Meeting

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (Special) — North Carolina Presbyterians recently held an historic meeting in the Myers Park Presbyterian Church here.

According to an account in "The Presbyterian Outlook," the meeting brought together for the first time representatives of Mecklenburg Presbytery, a 33,000-member, predominantly white group of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. and Catawba Presbytery, a 5,000-member, almost entirely black group affiliated with the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

Addressing this landmark meeting were the moderators of the two denominations, the Rev. Howard Rice of the UPCUSA and the Rev. Albert C. Winn of the PCUS.

More than 700 Presbyterians met together to sing and worship.

The two denominations have been separated since the Civil War. The "Outlook" article says: "Through the process started at this event, the slow, costly, but joyous process of Presbyterian reunion may have begun in the Charlotte area ... a heartland of American Presbyterianism."

Missionaries To Speak

SLATON (Special) — Newly appointed missionaries to Cameroon, West Africa, John and Amonna Sue Goodwin, will be guest speakers for a special service Sunday at the First Assembly of God Church, 14th Street and Jean Street. The service will begin at 9:45 a.m.

GOODWIN

The Goodwins, both children of missionaries, grew up in Ghana, West Africa. Goodwin will preach the sermon and Mrs. Goodwin will lead the music. The couple will discuss African culture and customs.

Goodwin, a native of West Texas, received a master of arts degree in sociology from West Texas State University. He also was graduated from Oral Roberts University in Tulsa.

Goodwin was ordained by the West Texas District of the Assemblies of God while serving as co-pastor of the First Assembly in Hereford. He was an instructor at Evangel College in Springfield, Mo., for two years before receiving mission appointment.

Board Adopts Framework

NEW YORK (Special) — The 266-member Governing Board of the National Council of Churches has adopted a framework for its work during 1979-81 which stresses a need to more clearly articulate the biblical and theological basis for the council's work.

In other actions taken during its semi-annual session, the board approved six months of intensive study leading to development of a new policy statement on the Middle East.

The board also adopted a new policy statement on criminal justice which advocates major changes in the way the nation deals with crime, including a revision of present criminal codes and a wider use of fines, mandatory community service and restitution to victims as an alternative to imprisonment.

Ezell To Lead Services

Dr. M. Douglas Ezell, associate professor of New Testament at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, will preach at First Baptist Church in the 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. services Sunday.

EZELL

Ezell was graduated from Louisiana State University and Southwestern Seminary. He also engaged in further study at Princeton Theological Seminary.

He is a member of the Society of Biblical Literature and of the Southwestern Association of Baptist Teachers of Religion.

Ezell is the author of several articles in the "Southwestern Journal of Theology" and "Event" magazine. He has written the book, "Revelations on Revelation: New Sounds from Old Symbols."

Spong was one of five recipients of honorary degrees.

Spong was graduated from the University of North Carolina, the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Virginia and Duke University.

The North Carolina native is a diplomate of the American Association of Pastoral Counselors, a chaplain supervisor for the Association of Clinical Pastoral Education and a fellow of the College of Chaplains of the American Protestant Hospital Association.

Youth Moved To U.S. Hospital

NAIROBI, Kenya (Special) — Wayne Martin, 16-year old son of Southern Baptist missionaries Earl and Jane Martin, has entered Baylor University Medical Center for treatment of head injuries sustained in East Africa.

Doctors in Nairobi, where Martin had been hospitalized with a brain hemorrhage, recommended that the youth be taken to the United States for treatment after bleeding stopped and his condition stabilized.

Cause of the hemorrhage is unclear, although Martin was involved in two accidents in recent months. In August a swimming pool accident in Rwanda, where his parents are stationed, caused temporary headaches. In October he was injured again while playing soccer in Kenya.

Fellowship Sets Meeting

Speaker for the meeting will be Norman Williams, one of only 70 survivors of a double plane crash disaster on Tenerife Island.

Williams has written a book, "Terror at Tenerife," and has spoken of his experiences before many church groups.

Minister, Wife Devote Lives To Children

By OLEN J. LE BLANC

COVINGTON, La. (WNS) — If you are concerned with the myriad problems of raising your typical family, just think of the Rev. and Mrs. Harold Brown. They have 130 children. However, some are now grown and are on their own, leaving a mere 40 youngsters at home today on their small farm near Covington, La.

And if this staggers your imagination, consider the fact that the Browns have accomplished this miraculous feat without accepting any government funds whatsoever.

An ordained Baptist minister, Brown held pastorates in various cities and finally headed a church in Covington. Here he and his wife decided to dedicate their lives to raising children, not as temporary wards, but as permanent legal guardians.

They obtained legal custody of their first child, a six-month-old boy, in 1955 after his father was imprisoned and his mother could not care for him. Next was a boy from a broken home, followed by a teen-age girl from a state correctional institution. Then they adopted two more boys, and later three other girls and the family subsequently continued to multiply until it outgrew the parsonage even after expansions.

Undaunted, the Browns purchased a 40-acre farm some 12 miles from town as a permanent home. After making the downpayment, they found themselves with a total cash fund of $1.47 as they began plans for the first building. But with lots of faith in God and help from volunteers in the surrounding community they finally moved into the dormitory.

They named the farm Fair Haven Children's Home, and from that day forward Brown and his wife have devoted their full time to the children. The home today consists of four separate buildings.

Ranging from toddlers to teen-agers, the children live and play with genuine love and devotion for each other, reflecting the outpouring of affection the Browns lavish on each child.

Ten times the size of the average American family, the huge Brown household consumes enormous amounts of food daily. However, the normal expenses are drastically reduced since they raise most of their own vegetables, beef and pork right on the farm. Each child from school age onward has designated chores, including maintenance of buildings and grounds, dormitories, growing vegetables and tending the livestock. Yet plenty of free time remains for fun and games. The children are encouraged to have pet dogs and cats and there are 10 horses for riding.

Judge Says Church Must Pay Costs

PHILADELPHIA (Special) — Declaring that the First Amendment to the Constitution "has consistently been interpreted in letter and in spirit as prohibiting the expenditure of public funds for a religious service," a federal judge has ruled that the archdiocese of Philadelphia must reimburse the city for expenses incurred in constructing a platform from which Pope John Paul II said mass during his recent U.S. visit.

City Solicitor Sheldon Albert, who argued the case for Philadelphia, said the city will appeal.

Judge Raymond J. Broderick, himself a Roman Catholic, ruled that the expenditure, insisted on by Philadelphia Mayor Frank Rizzo, violated all three guidelines of the Supreme Court's three-pronged test for spending public monies for non-public uses. He ordered the city to seek reimbursement of more than $200,000.

Judge Broderick's carefully written, 17-page memorandum held that the city's purpose in building the platform was religious instead of secular, that the primary effect of its action was to advance religion, and that it fostered an excessive entanglement of the city with religion.

His opinion also called attention to a fourth test enunciated by the nation's highest court in recent years, the question of whether such an action as that of the city of Philadelphia would tend to promote divisiveness along religious lines. Representatives from several religious groups in Philadelphia have claimed that the city should now be willing to expend public funds for their services.

Judge Broderick's decision came in a case brought by two Philadelphia women, one of them an American Baptist minister, May Anne Forehand, who is an information specialist for the Board of National Ministries of the American Baptist Churches in the U.S.A. in nearby Valley Forge, Pa.

Miss Forehand, a former White House aide during Gerald Ford's presidency, was joined in her suit by the Board of National Ministries and the American Civil Liberties Union. Support in the form of a resolution also came from the Washington-based Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs.

Miss Forehand's and the National Ministeries' position has been publicly criticized by American Baptist Churches president-elect William F. Keucher, who said he had sent a contribution to the archdiocese of Philadelphia to demonstrate his support of the pope's visit. Keucher, pastor of Covenant Baptist Church of Detroit, is also a member and former chairman of the Baptist Joint Committee.

The Well-Rounded Life

COPYRIGHT 1979
KEISTER ADVERTISING SERVICE

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VIRGINIA 22906

There are times we want to paint, and times we want to study. Who says a fellow can't wear his work clothes while enriching his mind? And relax with his shoes off, too!

Indeed all of us need to be cultivating the well-rounded life. We need to make provision in our busy weeks for work and play and learning and worship.

Much of the pressure under which we live may not be so much the result of life's unreasonable demands upon us as the result of our inadequate preparation for meeting life's demands.

Time spent with God . . . learning of His purposes, His power and His love . . . is one of the essentials for the well-rounded life. And while custom has long prompted folks to express reverence by donning their best clothes, in the church today the important thing is not what you wear — but that you're there.

Industry Placing Younger Executives In Charge

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — You can tell that American industry is up against a fierce competitive scrap in the 1980s by the people it is putting in charge, said the professor.

"They are young, vigorous and mature beyond their age. They are tough as nails," he said.

Professor Eugene E. Jennings, source of the observation, has studied the executive suite for three decades while teaching at Michigan State, counseling chairmen and writing basic texts on executive careers.

"You can always tell when industry is up against the wall," he said. "It's choice of leaders always is an indicator of what they believe to be the critical problems ahead."

A critical problem, one that involves many lesser ones, will be the level of competition. "Few companies believe there will be a big expansion," he said. "Growth will come from sheer competitiveness."

To face the pressure, industry has been appointing young but tested leaders. In the past two years, Jennings found, industry opted for the youngest batch of presidents since the 1966-1969 period.

Studying the 500 largest industrial companies, he found presidents of no less than one in four concerns are still in their 40s. The average age when made president was 47. Two years ago it was 51.

Despite their age, Jennings has found them thoroughly experienced. Most were divisional managers during the recession of the mid-'70s and so learned "back" management. They are survivors; they're tough.

Back management is the art or science of retrenchment, of trimming an operation lean and competitive, of making it fit and efficient. These survivors learned it well; otherwise they wouldn't be where they are.

Later in the 1970s, as the economy expanded for four years, these leaders excelled in forward management too. They showed they knew how to grow, to expand markets. They demonstrated their versatility.

"They're also going to improve with time," Jennings believes, and so he calls them "a tremendous national asset," the kind that can stand the "horrendous" pressures of competition in the 1980s.

While young, as the 1966-1969 group was, they differ substantially. Those young presidents of the earlier period landed at the top in part because of a fluke, because of timing rather than maturity.

Jennings explains that one-third of the earlier group benefitted from a structural change in which companies promoted the chief executive officer from president to chairman, leaving the presidency open.

"Today, there is no fluke involved," he said. "The changes occur because industry thinks it needs certain qualities in the 1980s and that these people have them."

Nevertheless, the odds are heavy that some of the young presidents might not last in their jobs. "Always when you opt for youth there are mismatches," said Jennings.

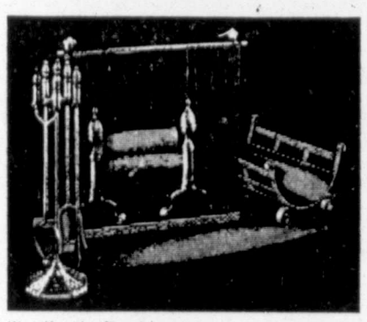

Recycling of various products is usually regarded as a modern idea, but the Liberty Bell was cast in bronze that was melted down twice from earlier models.

Mismatch, he emphasized, is not necessarily failure; instead, it may mean the individual's personality or goals fail to synchronize with company expectations. Many mismatches are likely to be placed again.

Jennings explains that in many companies today the directors are less apt to let time pass while a president attempts to prove himself. And, he feels, presidents are less inclined to stay when not wanted.

In fact, the professor says, some openings for young presidents developed because companies recently have been flushing out mismatches, preparing for what they see as tougher competition in the 1980s.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Preference For Music Changes

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter still likes to listen to classical music while he works, but the word is that when he returns to his family quarters, the mood changes.

"There is an awful lot of classical music" on tap in the Oval Office and in the small study nearby that Carter prefers when he is working by himself, one aide reported.

However, this source said, at the end of the day, when Carter walks past the Rose Garden and takes an elevator to the family quarters, country music is first choice.

Lately, the president and his wife, Rosalynn, have been playing country and western hits, as well as the softer music known as "beautiful music" or "easy listening."

What is more, one observer reported that Mrs. Carter often asks the president to turn down the volume.

Interviews To Air

One day in January, Dinah Shore is likely to appear on television screens with a series of interviews conducted in the White House press room. They were videotaped earlier this month.

With dozens of reporters clamoring for information about the seizure of hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, the entertainer and television talk show hostess perched on the back of a couch and chatted with several journalists.

The press room was turned into a television set — of a press room — and lights, cameras, and microphones blocked passageways.

Cracked one grumbling television reporter, "In Iran, they're only being held by Moslems. Here, we're being held hostage by Dinah Shore."

The television reporters, who occasionally go on the air live with hastily scribbled scripts, were amused by the preparations for Miss Shore's interviews.

She had cue cards, held up by a member of her crew, that gave her questions to ask her guests.

"I gather you like your job, how ... describe it?" read one.

"What are your duties as a White House correspondent?" she asked another reporter.

Crisis Grounds President

The crisis in Iran has almost grounded the president, whose travel schedule, as the political campaign becomes more active, was originaly full.

It has brought havoc to the White House transportation office. No sooner has the office found an airline that has sufficient equipment to transport reporters and White House staff members than it has had to cancel the order because the trip is called off.

Demand Dropping

The presidential campaign of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has been good, in a way, to White House reporters who earn some money on the side making speeches.

While the demand has dropped with Carter's fall in the popularity polls, they have had more time to travel around the country giving their talks.

But one lamented that while he was in great demand in 1977 to address prestigious foreign policy councils, invitations nowadays come from the likes of Montgomery County, Md., garden clubs.

Americans Need To Change View On Living Space

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Within 10 years the price of office space in the United States might double, said the real estate executive. The size of reception areas will decline. Executive offices will shrink.

The change will be pervasive, he said. "The idea of 250 or 300 square feet of space per person will disappear. There'll be an open, 'garden' approach to design. Decorators will be challenged to make less more."

This view, by John White, a real estate consultant, is challenged by some people. In fact, by many. One contrary opinion, for example, has real estate and other prices, falling sharply by next spring.

Whatever the outlook, a series of factors — interest rates, building costs and, above all, energy prices — has brought analysts together in agreement that we have to change our concept of living space.

That we must use less space is generally agreed upon.

Some housing designers are cutting the fourth bedroom, sometimes the family room and maybe the extra bath, from their single-family home designs, a direct reversal of a trend to bigger homes in the 1970s.

Apartment house builders have almost ceased activity in once active big-city areas, and when they begin again many of them say they will have to reduce the size of units even though rents continue to rise.

Some construction industry analysts also believe the use of exterior, geographical, space is bound to change too, with many insisting that transportation costs will force people to cling together in cities.

Typical of the confusion, however, is the belief of other seers that expenses will prevent the re-emergence of the city as the prime living and working area. Cities, they say, have outpriced themselves.

White, who heads Landauer Associates, a real estate consulting firm that advises many blue chip corporations, argues that the cities will remain or become even more attractive, despite high prices.

"Where New York (business office) space now averages $20 to $25 a square foot," he says, "it could be $50 a square foot within 10 years." Current costs, he maintains, are relatively inexpensive.

"In London and Paris, for instance, it is far more expensive. Rents will become more internationally competitive, and the United States still has to catch up with the world."

Urban housing, especially in cities where international business is conducted, is expected by many housing analysts to follow a similar pattern. In this city, some one-bedroom apartments rent for well over $1,000 a month and cost $150,000 to purchase.

Suburban patterns are also widely expected to change. Studies show that young Americans still prefer the detached house on its own plot of ground, but experience shows they often cannot afford it.

In fact, perhaps nowhere is the appearance of a decline in living standards more obvious than in comparing the home available to many young couples with the home in which their parents raised them.

Cluster housing, in which many homes share a common green space, has established itself in many suburbs. And larger and commodious older homes are being broken into apartments.

Efforts by architects and builders to lower costs by designing and marketing basic, stripped-down houses have generally been frustrated by rising costs, even though factory-built units are now commonly used.

Analysis

A commentary released last week by Advance Mortgage Corp. and Citicorp Real Estate, which regularly survey the housing market, depicts the difficulties of holding the price line.

"The Fed's tough new policy may wind down general inflation and reduce the inflation in housing prices a few points," it said, "but it will have little effect on inflation that is specific to housing."

Housing inflation, it said, reflects a long lag in construction activity because of credit difficulties, a high rate of household formation, and increases in buying power because of two incomes.

Though the inability to obtain mortgages has slowed price increases on some houses, many of them already have jumped 15 percent or more in the most recent 12 months.

In mid-summer, for example, the National Association of Realtors found the $57,900 median price of existing homes represented a jump of 17.2 percent over a year earlier. Price tags in the Northeast, probably reflecting a return to cities, rose 23.3 percent.

Despite the conveniences they offer, analysts question the ability of some urban areas, suffering from problems of financing, crime and grime, to contnue attracting former suburbanites.

19 Injured In Gang Shooting

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — The Thanksgiving rivalry between two high schools was overshadowed by the rivalry of two motorcyle gangs when gunfire erupted on the football field, sending 5,000 fans screaming for cover and leaving 19 persons injured.

Eight persons were hit, including a 2-year-old boy, when shots rang out at the Woodrow Wilson High School field during the third quarter of the game Thursday against Camden. Police said at least 20 shots were fired.

Eleven persons suffered other injuries, including some hurt when they were trampled by fleeing spectators.

Dozens of police officers converged on the field to restore order, and at least 37 persons were arrested.

The fighting erupted between the Wheels of Soul gang of Atco and the Ghetto Riders of Camden just behind the south end zone shortly before 1 p.m., police said.

"There were clearly gunshots fired and a lot of, I guess, general hysteria here and we've had an ending — an abrupt ending — to our scheduled game in this great, long rivalry, which dates back to 1933," said play-by-play announcer Herb Hurvitz of WCAM, Camden.

"All of a sudden we saw a crowd, a horde of people running from the left corner of the field toward our side which houses the greater part of the stands here at Wilson Field and you heard gunshots," Hurvitz said.

Spectator Jerry Cross said players and spectators hit the ground "like it was Vietnam."

The wounded youngster, Sean Hill, and his mother, Jeanette Hill, 22, were in satisfactory condition today at Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital with gunshot wounds.

Camden police said they got a tip to expect trouble between the gangs at the game. The gangs fought Wednesday night at a Pennsauken diner.

Senate Probe Shows Dramatic Rise In Car Thefts In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Car theft, once the province of teen-agers looking for joy rides, has become a major area for organized crime, a 15-month investigation by a Senate panel reveals.

The Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations will open five days of hearings on the subject beginning Tuesday. Witnesses will include convicted criminals, subcommittee investigators and law enforcement officials, including FBI Director William H. Webster.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., who will conduct the hearings, called car theft "the fastest growing crime in America. It is a $4 billion-a-year industry, if you can call it that. In the first half of 1979, motor vehicle theft increased 13 percent over the same period last year."

Car theft rings often work with a "chop shop," a secret garage that breaks expensive late-model cars into major parts within hours of when they are stolen. These parts then are sold to repair shops, subcommittee investigators have found.

Replacement parts are expensive when bought from legitimate sources, costing as much as 400 percent above their assembly line value. But criminals can sell stolen parts for less and still make huge profits.

"In large part, it is a steal-to-order racket," Percy said. "If a repair shop is looking for front-end parts for a white 1979 Cadillac Seville, then that kind of car will be stolen.

"Once the target car is located, a thief with the proper tools can be driving it away in a very few minutes. It probably will be at the 'chop shop' before the owner even knows it is missing."

Subcommittee investigator Howard Marks said the scheme attracts organized crime in Boston, New York, Chicago and some other areas because "it has the two things that organized crime wants: high profits and low risk. It's the ideal crime and we are all paying for it in higher insurance costs."

Marks said one of the favorite spots for theft is in large parking lots where the criminals can "shop" for the kind of car they want.

"Outside of a movie theater is a good place for them to operate," he said. "They know when the movie ends so they know how long they have to work. The same goes in a parking lot outside a sports stadium. They know when the game will end and they can work undisturbed until then."

Percy has introduced a bill to icrease the number of car parts carrying identification numbers. "Law enforcement officials tell us the single greatest deterrent to car theft is those numbers. The thieves want nothing to do with parts that can be traced," he said.

Maimed Officer Seeks Suspects In Bombing

BESSEMER, Ala. (AP) — Max Williams is searching for a killer — the person or persons who killed a police lieutenant, left Williams partially blind and without his left hand, and wounded another city official.

"I don't care what they do to me," says Williams, the city Public Safety Commissioner. "My life's ruined anyway."

Williams was maimed when a mail bomb exploded in his second-floor office May 2, killing his good friend, police Lt. Clifford Hill, and wounding Gene Lint, the mayor's executive secretary.

The person charged with aggravated murder and two counts of attempted murder in the incident, Thomas Fullman, already has been tried once. But Circuit Judge Dan Reynolds declared a mistrial last week after the jury of eight men and four women failed to reach a verdict after nearly 12 hours of deliberations.

Fullman, a 33-year-old former Bessemer policeman, remains in jail without bond despite an attempt by his attorney to get him released. Reynolds has set Jan. 7 as the date for Fullman's retrial.

Williams said he thinks there were more people involved in the bombing, whether Fullman was involved or not.

The commissioner has been meeting with city and state officials to seek a renewed investigation into the source of the string-wrapped, shoebox-size package that exploded when Hill opened it. And he said if necessary he would meet with the FBI and officials of the U.S. Justice Department to seek their help.

"I was only waiting for the trial to be over," Williams said. "This case will be investigated more thoroughly, and there will be more arrests made, even if I have to sign the warrants myself."

Williams wants warrants issued for the state's two key witnesses in the case, Aubrey M. "Snuffy" Garrett and Carter Roberts. Garrett lost the public safety job to Williams in last year's election, and Roberts is a former Bessemer policeman.

Garrett testified that before the bombing Fullman twice told him of plans to kill Williams and police chief George Barron. Garrett also testified that on one occasion he told Fullman he would make him police chief if he could regain the commissioner's job in the event of Williams' death.

Garrett and Williams have been bitter political enemies in the past, but Garrett testified that he never threatened Williams' life.

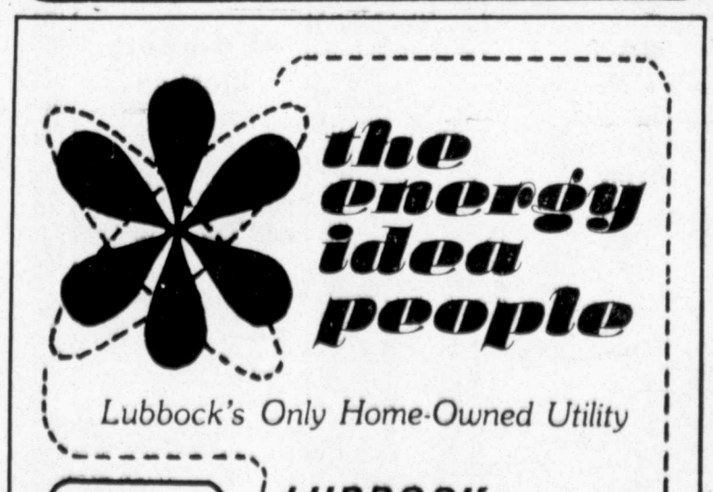

Roberts testified that Fullman once asked him for dynamite to send a bomb to Barron's son in Florida.

For their help in prosecuting Fullman, District Attorney Pete Short gave Garrett and Roberts immunity from prosecution. However, Short stipulated that the arrangement would be voided if further investigation revealed either man to be directly involved in the bombing.

Mississippi Man Offers Reward For Spotting Blue-Gray Tanager

MIAMI (AP) — If that bird in the bush is a blue-gray tanager, a Mississippi man is offering to hand you $100.

But blue-gray tanagers are rare in the United States — and the bird must still be there by the time lumberman Jim Vardaman arrives from Jackson, Miss.

Vardaman hopes to spot 700 species of birds in North America this year. So far, he's spied on 695, breaking the old record of 657 recognized by the American Birding Association of Austin.

"I sighted my first bird of the year, a barnyard owl, at 12:01 a.m. on New Year's Day, near the Florida City police station," he said in a telephone interview. "I broke the old record with number 658, an American woodcock, in Chicago on July 28."

Vardaman offered $100 in a Miami News classified advertisement to anyone who sights the blue-gray bird and has its species confirmed by a birdwatcher or staff member of the Tropical Audubon Society here.

He says he'll catch the next plane to Miami to take his own look and will pay the $100 if he's satisfied.

The blue-gray tanager — one of 197 species of tanager — likes fruit, nectar and insects. It's native to the Caribbean and South America and "is very, very rare in Florida," he said. The last confirmed sighting of the species in South Florida was in 1977.

If it were still living wild in the area, he said, local birdwatchers probably would have spotted it.

Unfortunately, the bird doesn't do anything that might distinguish it from other feathered friends.

He described the blue-gray tanager as "about 6 or 7 inches long and mostly blue-gray, with some silver — or what some people might call white — on the wings."

Vardaman, 58, who started birdwatching as a Boy Scout some 46 years ago, refuses to be discouraged. He says he's traveled 151,000 miles this year and spent more than $25,000. He thinks the Miami ad will help him edge toward his goal.

States Giving Heating Bills Aid

By The Associated Press

When heating bills go up, public pressure comes down on state legislators. So while Congress has allocated some $400 million for fuel assistance for the nation's poorest, a number of states have set up programs to help the working poor meet escalating costs.

Earlier this month, Congress approved the Energy Crisis Assistance Program, which will provide more than a million households with $200 to $400 for this winter's fuel bills.

To be eligible for the program, family income must fall within 125 percent of federal poverty guidelines. For a family of four, that means an annual paycheck must be under $8,300 to qualify for help.

But with heating bills taking a bigger and bigger bite of the family budget, many state legislatures are under pressure to expand the aid.

"I think the thing we have to remember is the amount of funds we have is limited and we have to get it to the people who are the most in need," said Ed Freel, director of the federal program. "That is not to say there are others who are not in need."

The Massachusetts plan provides $15 million in grants up to $200 for families living uncomfortably close to the poverty level. That means a family of four, with an annual income of $10,050, can turn to the state for help with their fuel bills.

"We basically felt that people between the 125 to 150 percent mark — who are essentially in the lower middle class — were under the same problems as people on fixed incomes," said Stanley Grawle, a director of the Community Action Program in Franklin County, Mass.

Grawle said many families in his area spent last winter surviving in 50 degree temperatures because they couldn't afford fuel.

"They are usually in a desperate situation; they're not trying to rip the system off," he said.

Earlier this week, the New York State Assembly overrode a veto by Gov. Hugh Carey and passed a fuel assistance bill which provides a $35 "energy tax credit" to senior citizens and up to $200 in assistance to families living well above the poverty level. Under the New York plan, a family of four earning up to $13,400 a year would still be eligible for help.

Minnesota Gov. Al Quie is considering a special legislative session to enact an energy assistance program similar to Massachusetts'.

ARMY DESERTER RETURNS — Maj. Richard H. Pearce, right, arrives at Simmons Army Airfield, Ft. Bragg, N.C. Pearce returned to the United States after a twelve-year stay in Cuba. Pearce is awaiting Army investigation. (AP Laserphoto)

Army Major Returns After Stay In Cuba

MIAMI (UPI) — An Army major who defected to Cuba 12 years ago with his 4-year-old son has returned to the United States and has been assigned to Fort Bragg, N.C., while the Army studies his case.

Richard H. Pearce, who piloted a red and white Cessna 150 to Cuba in May 1967, returned to the United States of his own accord, the Army said Wednesday. The major arrived in Miami and was flown to Fort Bragg where he was assigned to the Personnel Control Facility.

Pearce, 49, took his 4-year-old son with him when he deserted the Army in Key West during a 13-day leave from his duties as senior aide to Lt. Gen. Thomas W. Dunn, then commander of the 4th U.S. Army at Fort Sam Houston.

Before his defection, Pearce had access to extensive classified information about Cuba, the Army said. "We have no way of knowing at this time" if he gave any of that information to the Cubans, Army officials said.

Friends and fellow officers said Pearce defected because he wanted custody of his son, Richard H. Pearce Jr. He was divorced from his wife of two years, Sandra, in 1965 and she retained custody of the boy.

Pearce's brother, Walter Pearce of Birmingham, Ala., said shortly after the defection, "Politically, my brother is extremely conservative. I am convinced in my own mind that his son is the motivation (for the defection)."

Pearce's son returned to the United States last year and is living with relatives.

The Army said Pearce, a decorated Vietnam veteran and Jacksonville, Fla., native, first explored the possibility of returning to this country a year ago when he contacted the U.S. Interests Section in Havana.

He had spent the past 12 years in Cuba "working and living as a carpenter," the Army said.

When he defected to Cuba, the Swiss embassy informed the U.S. State Department that Pearce "publicly stated that he could no longer live in the United States and requested asylum in Cuba."

Upon his arrival in Havana, Pearce issued a statement that said: "I have decided to part from my country in the company of my 4½-year-old son for reasons of conscience, and requests of Cuban authorities to grant us asylum or authorization to proceed to another country of my choice."

HIGHER DEATH RATE

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study shows that inbreeding among small groups of animals in zoos and wildlife parks results in a significantly higher infant death rate. The study by researchers at the National Zoo here found that highly inbred animals also face decreased fertility, reduced litter size and failure of the immune response, making them more susceptible to disease and parasites.

SHOW MUST GO ON — Mirana, a well-known Middle Eastern dancer from Central Arkansas, performed the "Arabian Dance" this week in the Arkansas State Capitol Rotunda in Little Rock. Last week the secretary of state's office questioned whether Mirana's dance would be in good taste after she was described as a belly dancer. Her performance was canceled, but later rescheduled after the office was flooded with calls protesting the cancellation. (AP Laserphoto)

Weight Drop To Continue For U.S. Autos

DETROIT (UPI) — When gasoline was cheap, it didn't really matter how much fuel was needed to accelerate two tons of steel and iron to 70 miles per hour.

But experts now are predicting it may eventually cost $50 to fill a car's gasoline tank, and the weight-fuel ratio has become critically important.

U.S. automakers are anticipating an era when the need to wring more miles out of a gallon of gas will outweigh the costs of using lighter, more expensive materials.

Automobiles already are shrinking — the industry calls it "downsizing" — to trim gas-wasting pounds. But the race also is on to make more use of such materials as aluminum, magnesium, plastics and plastic-based composite material.

General Motors Corp. President E.M. "Pete" Estes recently told a group of plastics engineers the average weight of a GM car in 1985 may be 1,150 pounds less than the 1970 composite vehicle.

"The curb weight of the 1985 car could be as little as 2,800 pounds with the use of between 220 and 300 pounds of plastics and between 150 and 235 pounds of aluminum," Estes said.

A cross-section of high-ranking auto industry executives surveyed by the Arthur Andersen & Co. accounting firm projected an average car weight of 2,900 pounds in 1985 and 2,500 pounds in 1990, compared with 3,300 in the 1980 model year.

During the coming decade, the Andersen survey said, the use of cast iron in a car will drop from 16 percent to 10 percent of vehicle weight, while the use of plastic, aluminum and composites will increase from 10 percent to 20 percent.

Manufacturers of plastic and fiber-reinforced composites already are supplying many trim items for automobiles and are arguing for even greater use in panels and structural parts.

Plastics are beginning to replace steel in some unexpected places. For instance, glass fiber reinforced plastic leaf springs will substitute for conventional steel springs in 1981 on the Chevrolet Corvette.

Estes listed one major drawback with the use of plastics in automobiles. No on knows how to recycle them.

"The person who solves that problem should be the handsdown co-winner of your society's highest award," Estes told the engineers.

Gas Fumes Kill Woman, Son

SALIDA, Colo. (UPI) — Carbon monoxide poisoning from a clogged furnace flue killed an elderly woman and then killed her son who had come to her house to make funeral arrangements, police say.

Investigators discovered the body of Nina Heberer, 83, at her two-story brick Victorian home in south central Colorado last week and assumed the woman, who had complained to friends she was feeling ill, died of natural causes.

A few days later, authorities found the woman's son dead and his wife in a coma in the same home. The couple had traveled to Colorado from Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, to arrange for Mrs. Heberer's funeral.

Officials Tuesday blamed the two deaths on a clogged flue in the furnace — an old coal-burner converted to gas. A police officer said the flue was filled with soot, causing gases to back up and settle in the house.

Preliminary autopsy results revealed the older woman and her son, Robert C. Heberer, 48, died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

RIGHT ON TARGET... FOR HIGH MILEAGE SEEKERS
409 MILES ON ONE TANK
The estimated highway range is 409 miles, based on 31 EPA estimated miles per gallon. Your mileage may differ, depending on speed, weather conditions, trip length and your driving habits. This is for the 2000 CC 4-cylinder engine and TorqueFlite transmission.
ARROW GT's standard engine is a peppy 1600cc over-head-cam, Silent Shaft, hemi-head, 4-cylinder mill with the amazing new MCA-JET design that keeps emissions in line with 1978 standard while it improves fuel economy. A 2000 MCA-JET 4-cylinder engine is available for even more power.

Security Guard Reports Attack

A 21-year-old security guard said two men came to his apartment about 11 p.m. Thursday, beat him and threatened to return if he ever turned in anyone to the police again.

Roy Flores Ortaga of 1000 E. 28th St., Apt. 106, quoted one of the men as telling him, "This is what you get when you turn my son in."

Ortaga said he believed his assailants were the father and brother of several juveniles he had turned over to Lubbock police Sunday night for stealing two pickup trucks and burglarizing several other vehicles.

Reports indicate the victim picked up a .45-caliber pistol and flashlight after he looked out his window and saw one of the men wearing a green ski mask.

Ortaga said that when he opened the door, the men jumped him and knocked the flashlight and pistol out of his hands. The victim reportedly was knocked to the ground and beaten.

He said the attackers threatened worse consequences if he ever turned in anyone to police again. Ortaga was not seriously injured in the assault, according to police.

He described one of the suspects as a short, thin, young Mexican-American, wearing a green ski mask and blue pants. His companion also was described as a Mexican-American, between 26 and 35, tall, heavy and wearing dark clothing.

In other activity, Cody T. Mitchell, 17, of 1313 61st St. told police he was robbed of a cigarette lighter and $23 in cash and change shortly after 2 a.m. today in the 5800-block of Avenue P.

Mitchell said he was walking south on Avenue P when two males drove up, jumped out of their vehicle and attacked him. He said one of the assailants was armed with a stick and that the other struck him several times with his fist.

Reports state one of the men held Mitchell on the ground with one hand behind his back while his companion took the loot out of the teen-ager's pants pocket. The bandits then drove away, police were told.

The robbers were described as Mexican-Americans driving a dark, two-door vehicle.

A 21-year-old Lubbock man was arrested about 11:45 p.m. Thursday after he allegedly broke out a window at a club at Fourth Street and Quirt Avenue.

The man was asked to leave the nightspot after he reportedly had been fight. The club manager said the man reentered the business with a chain and broke out a window in the office.

Club employees subdued and handcuffed the suspect before police arrived. He was taken to the county jail and booked on suspicion of criminal mischief.

Two male teen-agers were arrested Thursday afternoon after they allegedly burglarized Dale Roberson's residence at 414 N. Niter Ave. and made off with $60 worth of light fixtures.

The suspects, ages 17 and 18, were apprehended in their car shortly after 5 p.m. in the 4000-block of East Baylor Street. They reportedly told police they burglarized the house because they were "bored."

A 27-year-old Lubbock man was booked into the county jail on suspicion of criminal trespassing after he allegedly refused to leave his mother's house about 5:25 a.m. today after arguing about a car.

The man was arrested after he refused to obey officers' orders to leave the residence.

Pedro R. Delarosa of 4105 Mesa Road told police he lost about $960 in stereo equipment and a CB radio when his house was burglarized between 8 p.m. Wednesday and 9:30 p.m. Thursday.

About $2,000 in property, including a large quantity of firearms, was the reported loot taken in a break-in at Larry Philip Martin's 301 39th St. residence between 9:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. Thursday.

Phillip Morrow of 2817 74th Place said a house he owns at 3708 Elgin Avenue was burglarized Thursday and $600 in property stolen, including a guitar and shotgun.

A 19-year-old Lubbock woman told police she was raped repeatedly early Thursday by two men she had been drinking with earlier at the Lubbock International Airport.

The woman, who was treated at both Methodist and Health Sciences Center hospitals, said she had met the suspects at the airport lounge shortly before 1 a.m. Thursday and voluntarily left with them when the club closed.

Reports state the men drove the woman to a spot near the airport, pulled her out of their vehicle and raped her. She said both men raped her twice.

After the assault, the men allegedly left their victim at a motel in the 400-block of Idalou Road. The woman called her parents and was taken to Methodist Hospital, where police were called. She was transferred to HSCH, where she met with Rape Crisis representatives.

The victim said she was never threatened with a weapon.

The suspects were described as Mexican-Americans, between 19 and 20, wearing blue jeans and driving a 1977-78 black and gray Thunderbird.

In other activity, an 18-year-old Lubbock woman said she was sexually assaulted by a man about 11:40 p.m. Wednesday behind a closed service station in the 1500-block of East Broadway.

The woman said she had gone behind the building to relieve herself when the man walked up from behind and put his hand over her mouth.

She said the man assaulted her before she was able to pull his hand away and scream. He was last seen running north across East Broadway.

The suspect was described as a short black man, between 18 and 25, wearing a long brown coat.

A Lubbock man was arrested about 3:50 a.m. Thursday after he allegedly attempted to rob Frank L. Evans, 49, of 1710 Ave. A at 10th Street and Avenue B.

Evans told police he was walking north on Avenue A when he accepted a ride with the suspect. He said the driver pulled a hook-blade knife from the seat and demanded his money. When the passenger said he did not have any money, the suspect reportedly threatened to kill Evans if he did not get out of the car.

Maria Pearl Lopez of 1501 52nd St. told police she was assaulted by a man about 1 a.m. Thursday at a club in the 800-block of North Avenue Q Drive, and that the assailant stole her purse containing $65 cash.

Miss Lopez said she was in a bathroom when the suspect, an old boyfriend, walked in, grabbed her by the throat and said, "Now you're going to get it." She said that when the man reached into his coat pocket, she pushed him away and ran out of the club, leaving her purse behind.

When Miss Lopez went back to the club with police, the purse was missing but the suspect was there, according to reports. He was taken into custody at the scene.

Yvonna Bright, 23, of 4815 12th St. told police she was grabbed by a man about 9:15 p.m. Wednesday as she was attempting to drive away from an apartment complex in the 1700-block of Avenue R.

She said she screamed and the man fled west on 18th Street. The suspect was described as a tall, "basketball type" black man, about 23, wearing a print shirt and blue jeans.

Three persons, a 45-year-old woman and two men, ages 17 and 24, were arrested about 5:40 p.m. Wednesday in front of the K-Mart department store at 2501 Ave. Q for alleged disorderly conduct, assaulting a policeman and hindering an arrest.

The suspect allegedly jumped on officer Mitchell W. Mount Jr. and Cpl. Ronnie Sowell as the policemen were escorting a person out of the store for allegedly causing a disturbance. One of the subjects attempted to get Mount's service revolver, according to reports.

After a brief scuffle with police, the suspects — all members of the same family — were taken into custody.

Henry Eugene Hearn of 2525 52nd St. said $3,500 cash was stolen from his house during an apparent burglary between 6:30 p.m. Monday and 1:55 p.m. Wednesday. The cash reportedly was taken from a coat pocket in a closet.

Snowstorm Subsides In Midwest Region

A-J News Services

A Thanksgiving-week blizzard that blew mightily through the Rockies and Plains subsided before it entered the upper Midwest, giving worried holiday travelers a bit of happy news for which to be thankful.

Frigid air chilled the Plains and snow fell in Minnesota and Iowa today, but the weather was much more docile than the blizzard that struck earlier in the week.

Still, blowing and drifting snow created hazardous road conditions for the southeastern part of South Dakota and Wyoming and parts of the upper Midwest Thursday. The National Weather Service reported snow drifts of up to eight feet in southeastern Wyoming.

Temperatures sank to their lowest levels of the season over much of the area this morning.

Lubbock's low was 19 degrees and readings on the South Plains generally were in the teens and low 20s.

Lowest temperature reported was at Hereford — a chilly 17. It was 18 at Dimmitt, Floydada and Silverton.

Plains, Plainview and Muleshoe matched Lubbock's low of 19, while it was an even 20 at Littlefield, Lockettville and Seminole.

Other readings ranged from 21 at Lamesa, Levelland and Spur to 26 at Big Spring and Paducah.

Forecasters promise slightly warmer weather for the remainder of the Thanksgiving weekend, however. Today's forecast calls for a high in the mid-50s, warming to the low 60s on Saturday. Low tonight should be in the middle 20s.

Winds were expected to be westerly at 5 to 10 mph today, becoming light and variable tonight.

The extended forecast predicts mild afternoons and cold nights Sunday through Tuesday. Highs over most of the area should be in the mid-60s and lows in the upper 20s.

Elsewhere in the state, light rain continued to drift through cloudy skies in the eastern portions of Texas today.

Trace amounts of rain were reported in Longview, Lufkin, Palacios, Corpus Christi and Victoria, and light sleet clogged traffic in the Houston area.

The rest of the state was clear and cold with early morning temperatures ranging from near 10 at Marfa in the western mountains to the low teens in the Panhandle. Temperatures dipped to the mid 30s in Northeast Texas and the upper 40s in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a chance of showers in the southeastern coastal sections. Weathermen call for partly cloudy skies in South Central Texas and showers and light sleet in East Texas.

The rest of the Lone Star state should be cool and clear with afternoon highs in the 50s except in the Big Bend and lower Rio Grande Valley where thermometers should reach in the mid 60s.

In southwestern Minnesota, travel was discouraged because of limited visibility and snow-compacted roads.

Authorities said travel west of North Platte also almost was halted Thursday morning as blowing and drifting snow hampered road crews. Conditions were expected to improve today.

At least 10 deaths were blamed on the storm, including five from traffic accidents in Nebraska, one in an accident in Wisconsin and two from a plane crash in Colorado.

The blizzard that struck the Rockies and Plains Tuesday and Wednesday covered cars with mountains of snow, stranded motorists, isolated cities and paralyzed industry and government.

Heavy rains drenched the Mississippi Delta, with three inches falling at Jackson and McComb, Miss., and Lake Charles, La.

Light snowfall moved across the upper Mississippi Valley, but a four-inch blanket covered the ground at Redwood Falls, Minn. One inch of snow was on the ground at Minneapolis and Sioux City, Iowa.

The weather service reported another major storm developing in the West as a strong cold front pushed rain across the Pacific Northwest. The higher elevations of the Cascades and northern Rockies were getting new snow.

DePauw Held For Murder

Murder suspect Joseph Michael DePauw, 28, was booked into the Lubbock County Jail about 9:30 p.m. Wednesday after a brief layover in Denver because of a snowstorm.

DePauw, charged with the Oct. 5 murder of Lubbock business owner Oland Kenneth Anderson, 63, surrendered to FBI agents in San Jose, Calif., Nov. 11, ending a month-long search for the suspect.

Anderson's body was found sprawled inside his business at Neon Specialty Co. at 2402 Ave. J. DePauw was charged with his murder three days later, and Justice of the Peace Charles Smith set his bond at $100,000.

DePauw remained in the county jail late Thursday.

Lubbock County sheriff's deputy Ernest Rector was to arrive here with the suspect Tuesday, but they were delayed a day because of a heavy snowstorm in Denver.

Plainsmen Reach For Bidistrict Crown

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Odom, Monterey's head football coach, had watched in disgust as the Plainsmen ended the '77 season with a 3-6-1 won-loss record. But this season, things have changed a wee bit.

Instead of watching the high school playoffs from Row 22, Seat 11, this year, Odom will stand on the sidelines tonight when MHS takes on Amarillo High in a bidistrict contest at 7:30 p.m. in Lowrey Field.

"Let's just say I'm thankful to be here this year," commented Odom.

Odom has watched as the Plainsmen went from the poorhouse to the penthouse all in a matter of 12 months. Monterey, like the Sandstorm, brings a lofty 9-1 mark along with an equally lofty state ranking into the contest.

Only a 22-21 loss to Midland Lee back on Sept. 21 tarnished the Plainsmen's record this year. But, according to Odom the loss to the Midlanders taught Monterey a thing or two.

"We learned that we just couldn't show up and expect to beat somebody," explained Odom. "We've got to work for everything we get."

And Odom will be the first to admit that the Plainsmen have their work cut out for them tonight against the District 3-AAAA winning Sandies.

"We've gotten up only twice this year for games," said Odom, "and that was against Estacado and Plainview. We got excited about those games. And I feel that same excitement building for Amarillo.

"They whipped our butts in the scrimmage (in August). And our kids still remember that. That gives them a little added incentive."

Plus, added Odom, any game with Amarillo is going to be a hard-hitter and a crowd-pleaser.

"We really get after it when we play," commented Odom. "It's a good rivalry and we enjoy playing them. And after the game is over the kids hug each other and get back on the bus. But while they're on the field, they get after it."

Tonight's game should be no exception.

On paper the teams are like Siamese twins. Both Monterey and Amarillo were 4-0 in district play. Monterey scored 106 points in conference action, Amarillo 95. Amarillo gave up only 16 points in the four games, Monterey 15. The two are both averaging well under 150 yards a game on defense and over 300 yards offensively.

Monterey's only real advantage over Amarillo seems to be in the R&R department. Last week AHS had to come from behind to defeat Pampa 13-10 for the district title. Meanwhile, the Plainsmen had an easy time with Hereford, rolling to a 38-0 victory.

In the game, Odom pulled most of his key people in the second quarter. And on top of that, Monterey didn't ever play the week before that.

"We're in as good a shape as we've been in all year," said Odom. "I'm glad we didn't have to play a tough game against Hereford. It gave us some time to get some people well."

The only doubtful starter for Monterey is middle linebacker Monte McCrite, who suffered a knee injury against Coronado. Brad Hill will start in McCrite's place.

Both coaches expect tonight's contest to be a low-scoring affair, which comes as no surprise since Monterey and Amarillo own two of the best defenses around. The Plainsmen have held opponents to exactly 124.0 yards a game.

"We're going to try to run on them," explained AHS head man Larry Dippel. "But I don't know how successful we'll be. Monterey's defense is just so strong."

But Dippel is also equally as quick to praise Amarillo's defenders.

"I think this is the best defense

Oilers Defuse Cowboy Computer

IRVING (AP) — The famed Dallas Cowboys computer blew a fuse Thursday when it couldn't count to 11.

The monumental mistake, courtesy of Dallas' specialty teams, gave the Houston Oilers a second chance, and they cashed in the boner for the game-winning touchdown and a wild, 30-24 National Football League victory.

It all happened like this: On fourth-and-4 from the Dallas 37, Cliff Parsley punted. However, Dallas, thinking Houston was going to try a field goal, was confused.

The 5-yard penalty moved the ball to the Cowboys 32, and on the next down, quarterback Dan Pastorini rifled a touchdown pass to Ken Burrough for Houston's winning score.

While Pastorini was applying the coup de grace with 7:54 to play, Cowboys specialty team coach Mike Ditka was spiking his clipboard on the sidelines and shouting at Stalls.

Then he shouted at coach Tom Landry in an exchange along the troubled Cowboy bench.

"It was a critical error," Landry said later. "You'll have to ask Mike Ditka just what happened." However, Ditka was a no-show in the Cowboys dressing room after the game and couldn't be questioned about the matter.

"It would have been a tough go without that," said Houston coach Bum Phillips. "It was the critical play of the game."

The victory put Houston a half-game ahead of Pittsburgh in the American Conference Central Division with a 10-3 record, while the Cowboys dropped a half-game behind Philadelphia and Washington, with an 8-5 ledger.

"They (the Cowboys) may be America's team, but we're Texas' team," said Phillips. "I wouldn't have it any other way. This was probably the most emotional game I've ever been involved in."

It was a game of Roger Staubach versus Earl Campbell.

Campbell dashed for touchdowns on runs of 61 and 27 yards and finished the day with 195 yards on 33 carries.

Staubach completed touchdown passes of 56 yards to Drew Pearson and 21 yards to Robert Newhouse and had statistics of 21 of 30 for 287 yards.

Dallas built a 21-17 halftime lead before young Mike Renfro, who was a Cowboy waterboy when his father Ray served as an assistant coach in the 1960s, shagged a 47-yard touchdown pass from Pastorini.

Rafael Septien's 44-yard field goal set the stage for the fourth-quarter faux pas by the Cowboys and the game-winning touchdown pass by Pastorini.

It was the first time Houston had beaten Dallas in the regular season in three tries, and gave them five victories in a row for the first time since 1962.

Campbell said, "To me, this game is like Oklahoma and Texas. But I'll never forget this stadium because it is where I made my debut as a rookie."

Defensive end Elvin Bethea said, "The biggest thing that happened was them having 12 men on the field. Our defense sputtered some the last three quarters, but we proved again — though I hate to keep saying it — we're a pressure team."

Monterey Takes On Amarillo

we've ever had at Amarillo since I've been here," noted Dippel. "We haven't given up the big play that often and our statistics are very impressive."

Dippel said Amarillo's main goal, defensively, will be to stop Monterey's super runner Willie Johnson. Johnson had gained 1384 yards on 224 carries this year and scored 12 touchdowns on the ground.

"Nobody else has stopped him, but we're going to try," said Dippel.

Amarillo is not without a strong runner itself in fullback Ty Richmond, who has also gained over 1,000 yards this season, mostly up the middle.

Winner of tonight's game will play the El Paso Coronado-Ysleta Bel Air contest, also being played tonight.

Queens Take Opening Win

PLAINVIEW (Special) — The first round of the Queens Classic basketball tournament was held Thursday at Hutcherson Gym with the favorites advancing as expected.

Games were played in both girls and women's divisions.

Other high school games found Nazareth beating Dimmitt 44-34, Slaton downing Lockney 58-52, and defending champion Dallas South Oak Cliff clobbering Dumas 75-45. SOC and Slaton are the favorites for the championship.

In the college division, three-time defending champion Wayland Baptist defeated San Jose State 76-55. WBC was sparked by Kathy Harston with 26 points and Elaine Schulte added 16 points and 13 rebounds.

The hostess Queens are the only team to have won the college championship here. Missouri surprised Brigham Young 90-70 and nationally ranked Kansas beat Memphis State 87-73. Louisiana Tech, which finished second in the nation last year defeated Ohio State in a late game Thursday night.

In game's today, Slaton and Oak Cliff meet at 4 p.m. with the winner expected to win the title, and Hale Center plays Nazareth at 7:30 p.m. in the winner's bracket. In the loser's bracket, Plainview met Dimmitt at noon and Lockney-Dumas squared off this morning.

In the college division winner's bracket, WBC plays Missouri at 9 p.m. and Kansas took on Louisiana Tech at 5:30.

The loser's bracket had San Jose and Brigham Young playing this morning and Memphis State meeting either Ohio State this afternoon.

Bears Eye UT Scrap

By The Associated Press

The Baylor Bears, with bowl bid firmly in hand, now try to accomplish something they haven't done in 28 years — beat the University of Texas in Austin.

"Beating an outstanding team on the road was one of our goals when the season started" said Baylor coach Grant Teaff.

The Bears are 11-point underdogs for Saturday's meeting with the Longhorns, who are tied atop the Southwest Conference standings with Arkansas and Houston.

"I'm not even thinking about going to the Peach Bowl right now, the only thing on my mind is beating the Longhorns," said linebacker Doak Fields.

"I look forward to this game each year as much as any. We beat them last year and I think we'll beat them Saturday. We particularly want to beat them on their home field."

Baylor bombed the Longhorns 38-14 last year in Waco. Only twice in the series between the two schools which dates back to 1901 have the Bears beaten the 'Horns two years in a row.

Baylor is set for a Peach Bowl meeting Dec. 31 with powerful Clemson of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Arkansas, Texas and Houston all have only one loss in SWC play, and if all win their remaining games, Arkansas will go to the Cotton Bowl against the Big Eight runner-up since the Longhorns and Cougars have been to the Jan. 1 classic in Dallas since the Razorbacks.

Texas would go to the Sugar Bowl against the Southeastern Conference champion and Houston would go to the Sun Bowl against Washington, provided Washington doesn't go to the Rose Bowl.

Arkansas plays SMU Saturday night in Little Rock, Texas hosts Baylor and TCU hosts Texas A&M.

Houston played host to Texas Tech in a nationally televised game this afternoon in the Astrodome.

Either Texas or Arkansas will be in the Sugar Bowl depending on how the cards fall in the SWC. But if Arkansas stumbles to SMU, Texas would have the edge on the Cotton Bowl host berth, since the Longhorns beat Houston, the team with whih it woul tie for the conferenc title.

Even if Arkansas beats SMU, the Razorbacks' Cotton Bowl hopes still depend upon Texas not losing again. A Texas loss to either Baylor or Texas A&M in its final two SWC matches would leave Arkansas and Houston tied for the title, and in a two-way tie Houston would go to the Cotton Bowl since the Cougars beat Arkansas this season.

Should Houston end up in the Cotton Bowl, the Sun Bowl has said it would invite Texas or Arkansas, whichever one doesn't go to the Sugar Bowl.

"Since we have a bowl invitation, the tendency might be to slack up against the Longhorns," said Baylor running back Walter Abercrombie. "I think Texas has one of the best defensive teams in the nation. It's going to be a real challenge to play against them."

Teaff said Baylor slipped up on the Longhorns last year and that won't be the case again.

"Last year Texas couldn't have taken Baylor serious," said Teaff. "I know this year they'll look at us with different eyes. We were lucky last year and they knew it. It's a different situation for both teams this year."

Oddsmakers picked Texas A&M by nine points over TCU at Fort Worth and rated Arkansas a 14-point choice over SMU.

Not All Blessings Termed Good

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

On the day after Thanksgiving, a few things not to be thankful for:

• Football announcers who yell into the microphone on every play as if the world is about to explode.

• Cold turkey.

• Baseball writers who criticize other baseball writers for their votes on the Most Valuable Player award. Every man has a right to an opinion, otherwise why a ballot? It should be secret anyhow.

• Warmed-over stuffing.

• Psuedo purists who berate players who spike the ball after scoring a touchdown, calling it "bush." Baloney. Despite all the money involved, football is still a little boy's game. Let them be little boys.

• While we think of it, baloney.

• The starchy baseball rule, if it actually exists, denying first ball honors at World Series games to "politicians and show personalities." (This cost Baltimore's Jerold Hoffberger $2,500 for inviting Maryland's governor to perform the ritual without first consulting Bowie Kuhn). We seem to recall that Frank Sinatra has done the bit in Los Angeles, and what about all the Presidents, starting with pillowy Howard Taft?

• Empty Alka-Seltzer bottles.

• TV announcers who repeatedly offend the ears with the grammatical horror, "Between you and I." The same goes for us print guys if guilty, but a sharp editor usually catches it.

• Ayatollah Khomeini.

• Drop-in guests who insist on watching soap operas and sitcoms in prime football time on the house's only color TV set.

• Creamed turkey on toast.

• A jangling telephone when the Steelers have the ball on the 1-yard line.

• Pumpkin pie that tastes like sweet potato pie.

• Those TV commercials which depict a guy's stomach blowing up like a balloon and yelling, "In-di-ges-chun."

• Cold turkey legs.

• Fallen football superstars who refuse to talk to you while they're in their glory but, once retired, bore you to tears with their huckstering of antiperspirants, popcorn poppers and other items on the big tube.

• That expensive bubbly French water. Our spring water is better.

• Reams of publicity poop from university SIDs seeking to get their campus football hero, or heroes, on the all-America team or consideration for the Heisman Trophy.

• Choreographed political debates.

• Alarmists who warn that free agency and million-dollar contracts will be the economic ruination of baseball. Okay, fireballer Nolan Ryan signs for $1 million a year. The Astros will more than get it back at the gate. The game has never been more prosperous or more healthy.

• Scoreless ties in ice hockey and soccer. What's a blue line, anyhow?

• Self-serving, cloutless boxing associations, WBA and WBC, which thoroughly confuse the public and damage the sport with their silly feuding and refusal to recognize the same champion.

• Empty aspirin bottles.

• TV cameras that zero in on those idiotic signs at ball parks which say, "Muleshoe, Tex., loves Howard. The Horns and ABC are No. 1." Why haven't the sane network producers made such obviously encouraged back-scratching goofiness a camera "no no" as they do publicity-seeking fans as kissin' Morgana?

• Triple-flavor banana splits — 14,500 calories.

• Those see-hear-speak-no-evil straightbacks who become outraged when people such as Hank Aaron, Frank Robinson and now Ed Garvey contend racism and discrimination still exist in big time sports. Let's face it, it does exist, largely in administrative areas, but great strides have been and are being made. Don't blame Pete Rozelle of the NFL, one of the most progressive of commissioners.

• The bell on the alarm clock.

Redskins, Eagles Favored

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

You have to give Cincinnati and St. Louis credit. Week after week, they get beat and still show up for the next game. It's something like your friendly Pro Picker.

This week the Cardinals and Bengals get a break from the schedulemaker. Instead of facing powerhouses, they go against each other. The AFC vs. NFC formula says Cincinnati but the Picker, who loves underdogs, occasionally, will take a chance on the Cardinals.

Last week's 9-5 was followed by an 0-2 on Thanksgiving Day. That made the season's log show 104-64 for .619.

The Picks:

NEW ENGLAND 33, BUFFALO 17: Enough of this up and down stuff for the Patriots. The time has come for them to assert themselves.

PITTSBURGH 27, CLEVELAND 10: No last minute heroics this week for Bran Sipe and Co. They won't be close enough at the end.

SAN DIEGO 23, KANSAS CITY 14: Charger defense is improving every week and after the Steeler romp, this team is sky high.

MIAMI 20, BALTIMORE 10: Yes, on the road and yes, with Don Strock at quarterback instead of benched Bob Griese.

DENVER 24, OAKLAND 10: Breathe in. Now exhale. That thin air is great, isn't it? The Broncos sure think so.

LOS ANGELES 30, SAN FRANCISCO 17: Rams beat the 49ers when their northern neighbors were good. Now they're not so good.

TAMPA BAY 24, MINNESOTA 7: Bucs smell title now and the Vikings won't interfere.

NEW ORLEANS 31, ATLANTA 10: Payback time for the Saints who have lost some toughies to the Falcons the last two years.

PHILADELPHIA 16, GREEN BAY 7: The key question is whether kicker Tony Franklin's bare foot will survive the Wisconsin deep freeze.

WASHINGTON 20, NY GIANTS 14: This one's too important for the Redskins to let get away.

BASKETBALL SUSPENSION

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Western Carolina University starting forward Eric Taylor has been suspended from the basketball team permanently.

OU-Nebraska Struggle Headlines Football Slate

By The Associated Press

Oklahoma and Nebraska are clearly the Big Two in the Big Eight.

Since the World War II, those two college football superpowers have won or shared the conference championship 32 times.

And Saturday, one of them will make it 33.

"The game will be a great one, probably a classic," says Oklahoma halfback Dave Overstreet as the Sooners prepare to meet the Cornhuskers in Norman once more for the Big Eight championship. "The teams are pretty evenly matched, and at the end the one that makes the fewer mistakes will be victorious. I am very confident that we will be that team."

The winner will get a trip to the Orange Bowl to meet No. 5 Florida State. The loser won't do too badly, either, gaining a spot in the Cotton Bowl against the Southwest Conference champion.

The Sooners, who have lost only to Texas in 10 games thus far and are ranked No. 8 nationally, have won 17 Big Eight titles outright and shared six others. Nebraska, 10-0 heading into this big showdown and ranked No. 3, has been undisputed conference champions six times and shared it on three other occasions.

"If the defense plays to its potential, I don't think we will have any problems," says Oklahoma tackle Keith Gary. "But the offense will have to move the ball well to insure a victory for us. It all comes down to a defensive struggle in the end, though, because both teams have excellent offensive units and it will be up to the defenses to contain their opponents."

Halfback Billy Sims, last year's Heisman Trophy winner, is the big gun for Oklahoma, while Jarvis Redwine is Nebraska's star in two of the nation's most awesome running attacks.

In another traditional and meaningful game Saturday, fourth-ranked Southern Cal will play UCLA in the Los Angeles Coliseum. If the Trojans win as expected, they will make another of their perennial trips to the Rose Bowl, where they'll meet Ohio State. The Trojans are led by one of the nation's classiest tailbacks, Charles White, and quarterback Paul McDonald.

Starting with ninth-ranked Houston, which played Texas Tech today, the four teams still in contention for the SWC title will be in action this weekend. Sixth-ranked Texas will host No. 17 Baylor and No. 7 Arkansas will meet SMU in a night game Saturday.

Elsewhere, 10th-ranked Brigham Young plays San Diego State for the Western Athletic Conference title and a berth in the Holiday Bowl Dec. 21 in San Diego.

The Cougars are led by passing sensation Marc Wilson, who can close out his spectacular season with a 10th straight 300-yard passing day.

"We have to get pressure on Wilson or he's going to eat you alive," said San Diego State coach Claude Gilbert.

Wilson, who already holds or shares seven NCAA records, has thrown for 25 touchdown passes and a remarkable 3,442 yards. By comparison, Dan Fouts of the San Diego Chargers — pro football's passingest team — has 2,911 yards in 12 games.

Clemson, the nation's 13th-ranked team, plays No. 19 South Carolina and No. 18 Tulane takes on LSU in other games Saturday involving the nation's Top Twenty teams. In another game today, Florida State plays arch-rival Florida.

Among other games Saturday between long-standing rivals: Georgia-Georgia Tech; North Carolina-Duke; Mississippi-Mississippi State; Kansas-Missouri; Oregon-Oregon State and Arizona-Arizona State.

A sellout crowd of 58,020 is expected for the regionally televised Georgia-Georgia Tech game at Atlanta's Grant Field. Kickoff is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. for the rivalry which began in 1893.

Georgia, 5-5, lost its first Southeastern Conference of the year a week ago to Auburn 33-13 to fall out of a first-place tie with top-ranked Alabama. However, if the Crimson Tide loses to Auburn on Dec. 1 and the Bulldogs defeat Georgia Tech Saturday, both schools would tie for the lead and Georgia would represent the SEC in the Sugar Bowl.

But coach Vince Dooley sent a letter to the league asking that Georgia "be released from its obligation" of going to the Sugar Bowl, if the Bulldogs fail to defeat Georgia Tech.

Lotshaw Captures Midget Racing Title

GARDENA (AP) — Steve Lotshaw of Indianapolis finished second to Ron Shuman of Mesa, Ariz., to clinch the U.S. Auto Club National Midget Racing Championship in the season finale at Ascot Park Thursday night.

The Indianapolis driver entered the 100-lap Turkey Night Grand Prix trailing Mel Kenyon of Lebanon, Ind., by five points. But since Kenyon finished sixth in overall points, Lotshaw took the title, 805-801.

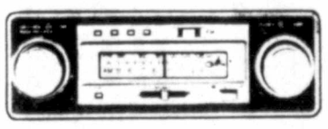

In the race itself, Shuman, who is the U.S. Sprint Car Champion, led every lap. He was fast qualifier and had the pole position at the start of the 39th running of the dirt track event.

Detroit Reacts To TV

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Memo to CBS-TV: If you're looking for a prime-time show about a struggling young professional football team with a patient, understanding coach, Monte Clark and the Detroit Lions would like to volunteer.

It would be a real grabber. The team would lose its quarterback to injuries and start the season with a raw rookie calling signals. The club would be 1-11, taking an eight-game losing streak into a nationally televised Thanksgiving Day game against the rough, tough Chicago Bears, who would be riding a four-game winning string and talking about the playoffs.

The rest is elementary. In the Big Game, with the whole nation glued to its television sets, the quarterback — a blond matinee idol and the fun-loving defensive end — who wears an earring in one ear off the field — lead the team to a 20-0 victory and everyone agrees it's the best Thanksgiving ever.

And listen: The Lions could go into production immediately because they rehearsed the whole show Thursday and pulled it off with a letter-perfect dress rehearsal. They played it before a house of 66,219 NFL fans in the Silverdome and drew rave reviews. Even the Chicago critics said it was a good show.

"We talked about the fact that the whole country was watching today," Clark said after the game. "This was our chance to show the nation what we're made of."

Komlo, a 6-foot-2, 205-pounder out of Delaware, hit on 16 of 30 pass attempts for 244 yards and one touchdown, despite throwing three interceptions.

Baker, the second-year giant who was All-Pro as a rookie, had four sacks as the Lions' defense held Walter Payton and the potent Bears offense to just 220 total yards — only 54 of them by Payton who was the league's second-leading rusher going into the game.

It was the first time all season the Lions had appeared on national television — their other games have been regional telecasts. Clark and Komlo said it made the team play harder. Baker said the cameras made no difference.

"The national television means nothing to tell you the truth," Baker said. "It just adds pressure. You have to be man enough when you're losing to keep your shirt on. Then, when your number comes up on a day like today, you're ready."

Chicago coach Neil Armstrong said he felt the Bears beat themselves.

"Just like when we won, we won as a team," Armstrong said. "Today we lost the same way. Neither our offense nor our special teams executed very well.

"Our defense gave us the ball three times on pass interceptions in good field positions but we couldn't take advantage of them."

The Bears slipped to 7-6 with the defeat, but still retain a slim hope of making the payoffs. The Lions are 2-11.

"Monte believed in us," Komlo said. "He hasn't criticized us. That's the thing that's been so valuable to us. We haven't gotten down on one another."

Beamon's Olympic Long Jump Brings Scientific Examination

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Scientists remain puzzled by a record-breaking leap at the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City — and want to guard against similar mysteries at the upcoming Moscow Games.

Bob Beamon's long jump of more than 29 feet broke the old world mark by nearly two feet in a sport where gains are usually measured in fractions of inches.

The achievement startled spectators and Beamon himself, whose longest jump since was a little short of 27 feet. And no competitor has come close to duplicating his Olympic feat.

"It was just one of those rare moments in sports, but we'll never know exactly what he did right because there were no scientific films made at the Olympics," said Dr. Richard C. Nelson, director of the Biomechanics Laboratory at Pennsylvania State University.

Nelson, a professor, heads the team of scientists planning to photograph movements of athletes in the Moscow Olympic Games in 1980.

"We'll be looking at selected biomedical components for each of the sport movements," Nelson said.

"Every sport has a specific biomedical profile. What we're trying to do is find out what it is that sets apart top contenders in each sport."

According to Nelson, general purpose films made at earlier Olympics were not suitable for biomedical analysis. The films did not capture the details needed to analyze athletes' movements, he said.

In the first project of its kind, Nelson's team will use sophisticated equipment to record four sports at the 1980 Games.

"We won't bother the athletes," Nelson said. "They'll never even know they're participating."

Working with Soviet scientists, the team will record competition in men's and women's gymnastics, diving, rowing and weightlifting.

"We still have some final decisions to make on placement of cameras, specific events to film and many logistical problems," Nelson said.

The project is sponsored by the U.S. Olympic Committee and the American College of Sports Medicine.

After analyzing the films, Nelson and his associates intend to publish four scientific volumes — one for each event. They also plan a practical manual for coaches and trainers, based on their findings.

"Too much of the research that has been done with Olympic athletes has been science for the scientists," Nelson said.

"We intend to present our findings to make them useful to the coaches and athletes."

LeDoux, Weaver Meet

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Scott LeDoux and Mike Weaver, two journeyman boxers who still have designs on the title, will square off Saturday at the Met Center in a 12-round bout designed to produce a challenger to the heavyweight throne.

The winner reportedly will be in line for a match against John Tate, the current World Boxing Association champion, or Larry Holmes, the reigning World Boxing Council champ.

The bout, being held in LeDoux's home state of Minnesota, is being billed as the battle for the U.S. heavyweight crown by Harold J. Smith, a producer for Muhammad Ali Sports.

"The cream of world boxers still come from America," Smith said. "The winner of this U.S. championship fight will be ready to challenge Holmes or Tate for the world championship.

LeDoux, who has a 25-7-4 record, fought to a draw against Norton in his last fight Aug. 19 at the Met Center. Weaver, 22-8, last fought Sept. 22, when he knocked out Harry Terrell in four rounds in Los Angeles. Before that, he had gone 11 rounds of a 15-round title fight with Holmes before the fight was stopped.

Holmes said at the time that it was the hardest fight of his career.

"Weaver can fight," said LeDoux. "His fight with Holmes should not have been stopped. He had Holmes down once and was doing all right when the referee called it a TKO. Weaver is a good fighter for me right now. After I beat him, it puts me in a better position for a title fight. I feel for the guy, though I'll beat him."

LeDoux, a relentless boxer with neither the physique of a Norton nor the speed of an Ali, expects to weigh in at 220 pounds. Weaver, the stronger puncher, will fight at just over 200 pounds.

"Not bad for a midget," LeDoux commented. "Weaver is gone. I've already eliminated him in my mind."

UNM Starts Search For Football Coach

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Several professional and college football assistant coaches have expressed interest in applying for the University of New Mexico head coaching job.

The position becomes open early next year because of the dismissal of current Lobo coach Bill Mondt, who compiled a 31-36-1 record in six years.

The prospective applicants include Chuck Clausen, assistant coach for the Philadelphia Eagles; Lance Van Zandt, assistant at the University of Nebraska; John Levra, assistant at North Texas State and a former New Mexico Highlands University head coach; former UNM assistant coach Leon Fuller; and Jim Sweeney, an assistant with the St. Louis Cardinals who almost accepted the UNM job six years ago.

New Mexico State University coach Gil Krueger said he would consider applying for the job if requested to do so by UNM.

"The New Mexico job has great potential," said Clausen, a top player at UNM in the late 1950s and former assistant at Ohio State. "There are only a couple of places worth leaving the Eagles for and New Mexico is one of them."

Van Zandt, the top assistant at Nebraska, is in his third year with the Cornhuskers.

"I have a very good job here and I know we're going to win for a long time," said Van Zandt. "But I want to be a head coach. I think I know what it takes to be a winner. Everywhere I've been, we've won. I'm familiar with New Mexico, and I know the type kids it takes to win there."

Van Zandt was an assistant at Highlands University in 1966 and 1967.

Levra said he could "develop a winning team. . .one that the alumni, the students and the community would be happy with. I did it at Highlands and I did it at Stephen F. Austin. The potential at New Mexico is even better."

Krueger said he probably would not apply for the job, "but I guess I would consider it if I was contacted. I feel it is one of the better jobs in the Southwest, and the Western Athletic Conference is a step up from the Missouri Valley (of which New Mexico State is a member.)"

Two other collegiate coaches, Bill Yung of West Texas State and Darrell Mudra of Eastrn Illinois, also reportedly have expressed an interest in applying for the job.

UNM also is searching for a new athletic director to succeed Lavon McDonald, who left the position earlier this year. The new athletic director will be hired before the new coach, UNM officials said.

Wells Gets Westerners Off To Winning Start

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

"Lubbock High. Can I help you?"

"Yeah, I need to speak with Craig Wells, please."

"Who?"

"Craig Wells."

"Is he a student or a teacher, sir?"

"He's the basketball coach there at Lubbock High."

"Oh. I'll connect you with the gym then."

Informed of the above conversation, Wells, the second-year head coach of the Lubbock Westerners, replied: "I guess when you go 2-24, people tend to forget who you are."

It would seem that way.

But after two games this season, the Westerners are off to a fast start, winning both the outings over Odessa High and Dunbar. If that continues, then operators won't have any trouble patching would-be callers into Wells' office.

"It was important that we get off to a good start," noted Wells. "We needed the momentum. It's tough on a kid to come out here and run 48 miles during practice and then get his tail whipped on game night. They begin to wonder if all the hard work is really worth it."

And "hard work" is something Wells likes to stand in the pulpit and preach.

"For us to be any good," commented Wells, "we're going to have to work harder than anybody else."

Only two returning starters are back this season at LHS — David Norrid (5-10) and Jeff Manley (6-2). The duo also serves as the team's capitans.

Because of that lack of experience, the '79 season has Wells scratching his head.

"I really don't know what kind of team we're going to have," continued Wells. "We could have a very fine team or we might not. I really don't know. I know we're working hard right now and playing as a team. Both of those are important to us."

Joining Norrid and Manley in LHS' starting lineup are Oscar Lopez (6-1) and Kirk Cole (6-3). Wells is still uncertain who the fifth man will be. So far he has tried Gilbert Cuevas (6-0), Rodney Norris (6-0) and Mike Hill (5-11) at the position.

Brad Ruff, who suffered torn ligaments in his ankle during a practice session earlier this year and is expected to return at Christmas, is also vying for a starting berth.

Wells points to both Cuevas and Lopez, both transfers from Abernathy, as a pair of reasons why Lubbock just might record its first winning season since 1971. The pair, says Wells, gives Lubbock High something it hasn't been overly blessed with in the past — depth.

But Wells isn't looking at just this season. He's also trying to develop a strong junior varsity program, knowing transfers students are too few and too far between.

"We're committed to the future," said Wells. "I think that's been the problem here in the past. The coaches took it only one season at a time and never looked into the future."

Unlike Don Nentwig (two seasons), Doyle Edmiston (three seasons), Glen Hallum (two seasons) or even C.E. Carmichael (four seasons), Wells is one coach who plans to stay in town for awhile.

"At least I hope I don't find any 'For Sale' signs in my yard for awhile," laughed Wells.

Hoople Picks Nebraska In Big Eight Battle

By MAJ. AMOS B. HOOPLE
Peerless Prognosticator

Egad, friends, traditional rivalries abound on this week's college football schedule. It's topped by the Nebraska-Oklahoma renewal, marking its 60th anniversary.

California-UCLA (their 49th); Pittsburgh-Penn State (79th); and Florida State-Florida (22nd).

Some more with ancient beginnings: Oregon-Oregon State (for the 83rd time); Arizona State-Arizona (53rd); and Tennessee-Kentucky (75th). Also, it's Texas-Baylor (69th); Arkansas-SMU (55th); and Texas A&M-TCU (75th).

Other interesting engagements include Houston vs. Texas Tech on the glorious tube this afternoon, Notre Dame vs. Miami of Florida (in faraway Tokyo, Japan); and Brigham Young vs. San Diego State, a showdown for the Western Athletic Conference title.

Occupying center stage is the Nebraska-Oklahoma meeting in Norman, Okla., for the coveted Big Eight championship and the Orange Bowl host assignment.

Last year Nebraska won the regular season encounter but fell before the Oklahoma onslaught in a rematch in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day.

Both clubs have played excellent football this fall. The TV duel between Billy Sims, Oklahoma's Heisman Award winner, and Jarvis Redwine, Nebraska's whirling dervish, will be as electrifying as the one staged a few weeks back between Southern Cal's Charles White and Notre Dame's Vegas Ferguson.

In our — kaff-kaff — humble opinion, the undefeated Nebraska Cornhuskers have a slight edge on both offense and defense. They will prevail 30-22.

The Los Angeles Coliseum will be in for its usual rock 'em, sock 'em blast as the USC Trojans and UCLA slug it out — on the field both call home. UCLA has looked good at times this season. But it simply can't match the offensive power and defensive strength of USC. We confidently predict a Trojan victory 33-21.

The Hoople Three-Star Special of the Week finds Joe Paterno's Penn State Nittany Lions springing a mild upset as they edge the Pitt Panthers. For Penn State, it will be a rousing finish to a so-so season. And for the Panthers, a devastating loss. We see it: Penn State 27, Pittsburgh 24.

Florida State, which has risen to new heights under Bobby Bowden, will wrap up its regular season undefeated and untied with a convincing 33-21 win over Florida's Gators today.

In a SWC quarter, we make 'em: Texas 36-17 over Baylor; Texas A&M 27-13 over TCU, and Houston 21-14 over Texas Tech in a game moved up to today by the television folks. Please remember, dear readers of this afternoon chronicle, that I made these predictions long before the TV set flickered out today.

Notre Dame, tumbled from the Top Twenty by rugged Tennessee, will close on the upswing, knocking off the Miami Hurricanes 31-18 in the 100,000-seat Tokyo Stadium.

Louisiana State will give coach Charley McClendon a fitting going-away present by defeating a fine Tulane eleven 22-21. McClendon is retiring after 18 successful years as LSU's head man.

Now go on with my forecast:

Today's Games

Saturday's Games

Arizona State 24, Arizona 20; Arkansas 36, SMU 17; BYU 42, San Diego State 22; Central Michigan 19, San Jose State 18; East Carolina 20, William & Mary 12; Florida A&M 27, Bethune Cookman 10; Hawaii 15, Colorado State 13; Holy Cross 10, Connecticut 7; Kansas State 30, Colorado 7; Long Beach State 31, Fullerton State 19; LSU 22 Tulane 21; Maryland 19, Virginia 17; Massachusetts 23, Boston College 7.

Also Mississippi State 16 Mississippi 13; Missouri 27, Kansas 22; Nebraska 30, Oklahoma 22; New Mexico 28, Wyoming 14; North Carolina 24, Duke 17; Notre Dame 31, Miami (F) 18; Oklahoma State 23, Iowa State 15; Oregon 35, Oregon State 27; Penn State 27, Pittsburgh 24; Southern Cal 33, UCLA 21; SouthCarolina 28, Clemson 21; Temple 38, Villanova 14; Tennessee 18, Kentucky 15; Texas 17, Baylor 12; Texas A&M 27, TCU 13; Utah State 35, Fresno State 14.

Bucks, Cavs Post NBA Victories

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks defeated the New Jersey Nets but it wasn't easy on their coach.

"That was a tough game on me," Milwaukee Bucks coach Don Nelson said Thursday night after his team's 117-109 victory. "We built a comfortable lead in the first half, stopped hitting in the third when the Nets pressured the ball, and then finally put it back together in the fourth period."

Milwaukee was ahead 66-49 at the half but was tied at 83 at the end of three periods.

"We just don't seem to be able to win the close games in the final minutes of the fourth period, and that's what professional basketball is all about," said Nets coach Kevin Loughery.

In the night's only other NBA game, the Cleveland Cavaliers defeated the Golden State Warriors 120-93.

The Nets sent John Williamson off the bench in the third period, and he responded with 10 of his 14 points to help put New Jersey back in the game.

Milwaukee also helped by missing 10 of their 11 shots in the first six minutes. With 4:10 remaining in the third period, Calvin Natt's two free throws gave the Nets a 72-71 lead.

"It was tough to stop them then because they were putting two men on the ball and we started to press," Nelson said.

None were as important, however, as the two free throws rookie Pat Cummings scored with 6:38 left in the fourth period, giving Milwaukee a 98-99 lead they never gave up.

Cummings had 15 points and Sidney Moncrief and Kent Benson 14 each.

Milwaukee's Brian Winters, second high man with 16 points, was ejected at the 8:38 mark of the fourth period when referee Wally Rooney hit him with two technical fouls.

Mike Newlin lead New Jersey with 20 points, Natt had 19, Ed Jordan 18, and Rich Kelley and Williamson had 14 each.

Dave Robisch came in for an injured John Lambert and sparked Cleveland over Golden State. After a sprained right ankle sidelined Lambert, Cleveland's regular center, just four minutes into the game, Robisch replaced him and scored 16 points.

The Cavaliers outscored the Warriors 20-3 in the final five minutes of the first half to take a 61-45 lead as Robisch led the spurt with eight points. Randy Smith scored eight points and Campy Russell seven in the third period as the Cavaliers extended their lead to 22 points, 86-64, and coasted from there.

"He's a darn good pro," said Cleveland coach Stan Albeck of Robisch. "He did a good job defensively, too, tonight. He's a smart, wily guy who knows his limitations and just does a job for you."

Lloyds Plan 'Professional' Separation

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd and her British husband John plan to split up for three months at the start of next year to try to regain their lost tennis prestige.

For both of us 1980 cannot possibly be anything like this present year, when we had so much on our minds and decided to get married," Chris Lloyd said after reaching the quarterfinals of a $100,000 women's tennis tournament here.

We both took long spells away from the game and naturally it didn't help either of us."

Chris, twice Wimbledon champion, has lost her place as the world's No. 1 woman player to Martina Navratilova. John Lloyd climbed into the world's top 25 in 1978 but has won few matches since he became engaged.

We have had long discussions about our plans for next year," Chris said. "I am desperately keen to rededicate myself to getting back the No. 1 position in the world that I have lost to Martina. John is just as anxious to regain his old form.

Criminal Trial Expected For Gang Of Four

PEKING (UPI) — Mao Tsetung's widow and other members of the disgraced "Gang of Four" probably will be tried only on criminal charges to avoid a sensational political trial where they could attack the Chinese leaders, legal experts say.

Diplomats and Chinese and foreign legal experts expect the trial to begin shortly after China's new legal code — the first on criminal law procedure under the communist regime — goes into effect Jan. 1.

The Gang of Four members, who controlled China in Mao's name during his last years, were arrested after his death in 1976.

Experts expect charges against the Gang to be torture and murder, to avoid the spectacle of Mao's widow, a former actress, hurling political charges at the current regime.

"The question of China putting them on trial at all brings the question: what will they say to defend themselves?" said Jerome Cohen, a U.S. lawyer and expert on China who is lecturing in Peking to Chinese officials on American contract and economic law.

"What they say would be a risk for the leaders. But on nonpolitical offenses there can be no dispute. Then they won't get into anything that smacks of political machinations."

As Cohen paints the trial scenario, criminal charges leveled at the Gang in court could be "overwhelmingly supported by evidence." The official press continually charges the Gang with responsibility for various deaths and disasters.

F News
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Friday, Nov. 23, 1979

Cohen said in an interview that, after setting up a new legal code, China had no choice but to try the Gang of Four. To leave its members under arrest indefinitely in special houses near Peking would mean that Communist Party leaders are above the law.

The party leadership decided to stage the trial after Jan. 1 "to demonstrate most vividly the new legal procedures," in Cohen's view.

The trial could be held in secret. The new legal code says trials involving minors, or intimate personal matters such as sex or state secrets, need not be open to the public. The Gang's trial could be in the state secrets category.

"That would be the safest way to try the Gang, but a secret trial wouldn't have the impact of an open trial covered by the Chinese mass media," Cohen said. He sees an open trial as "a tremendous opportunity" to both to publicize the new laws and drum up support for the post-Mao regime.

He believes an open trial would be limited to invited guests with no foreign press allowed, as at the October trials of underground editor Wei Jingsheng and activist Fu Yuehua.

Party Chairman Hua Guofeng announced in October that the Gang would be tried but not sentenced to death. "From a legal point of view, people could say he was assuming they were guilty and taking away from the judiciary one option in sentencing them," Cohen sajd.

There is no precedent in China for a trial of losers in high Communist Party power struggles.

EPA Lowers Cancer Risk Predictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency says the additional risk of residents in the chemical-contaminated Love Canal area of New York getting cancer is about one in 100.

That prediction, released this week, is sharply lower than the previous EPA risk estimate of one in 10. The agency said the lower risk estimate assumes a lifelong exposure to the toxic chemicals contaminating the Niagara Falls neighborhood. The earlier prediction "was taken from a preliminary draft document which had not undergone final review," said the EPA. Long-buried chemicals in the Love Canal area are leaking to the surface, forcing some residents to leave their homes.

Dutch Firm Offers Gold Dinner Setting

By MARY TOBIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — For perhaps 2,000 people in the world there's a $2 million investment that will bring unusual dividends — unmatched glamor for their dinner parties.

For that sum the super-rich can have a complete dinner setting for 12 — plates and cutlery — in 24 carat gold, the result of a new process of hardening the metal developed by the Gerritsens, a Dutch family that have been gold and silversmiths since 1863.

Ted J. Veenendaal, a twinkly-eyed, bearded Dutchman, is marketing director for Ofir Export, which has world-wide right for the 999.9 fine gold dinnerware.

Veenendaal said the dinnerware is aimed at the "super-rich and kings." He estimates there are 2,000 people in the world who can afford complete settings and that about 1500 of them live in the United States.

One indication of prospective customers is Veenendaal's business card. It is printed in English and Arabic.

The firm's most splendid offering is the King Solomon banquet cassette which includes 516 pieces and goes for about $6 million. The cassettes, from the two-place setting to the banquet, come in hand-crafted nutwood cases. The 12 place-setting case is worth $15,000.

Gold, while heavy and durable, has through history been too soft to use in its pure state; thus 22-carat, 18-carat and 64-carat gold jewelry in which alloys, usually copper, are mixed with gold.

Even King Solomon, whose Ofir gold mines inspired the name of the marketing company, was thought to have used 14-carat gold service at his banquets.

The Gerritsen's method — secret until Ofir has obtained world-wide patents — has changed all that. It involves 29 processes for each piece and much of the work is done by hand. But much of the gold is lost in the process.

"We have to buy three times the amount of gold it takes to make one piece," Veenendaal said. "You can imagine the financing costs."

Each piece has five hallmarks: the Gerritsens, the 999.9 fine, the universal gold, the year of assay and the Dutch government assay office.

Veenenaal said the firm will be able to produce about 350 table settings a year in it present facilities, but it is looking to expand.

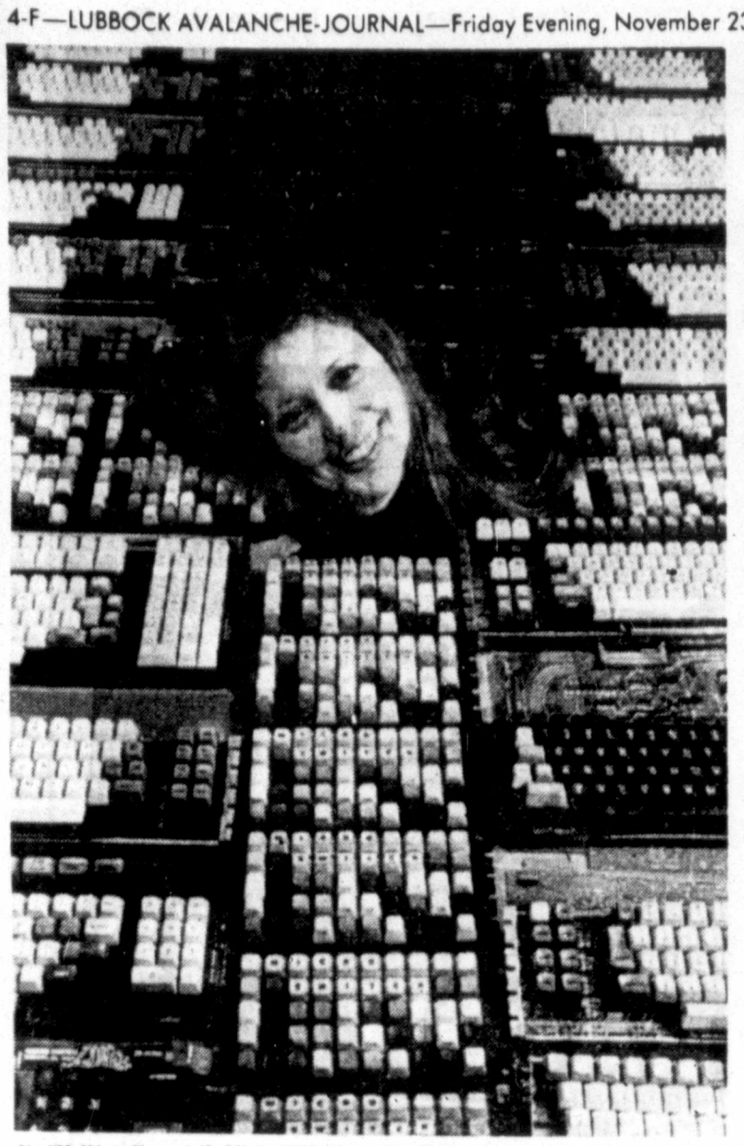

"One of our problems has been finding enough skilled goldsmiths," Veenendaal said in an interview. "It's not a skill you can learn in school. It involves a long apprenticeship and usually is passed from father to son."

Scientist Says Carcinogens Unnecessary

By JACK JACKSON

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — The word "carcinogen" entered the average American's vocabulary when cancer-causing chemicals turned up in such things as soft drinks, hamburgers and maraschino cherries.

Carcinogens — substances able to cause cancer — occur naturally in some foods, but the majority are additives put there as artificial flavors, colors, sweeteners or preservatives.

It might be hard to imagine that Americans could lead the same lifestyle without some of the questionable chemical compounds used in the food and manufacturing industries.

Not so, says Dr. Johnathan King, a geneticist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He thinks it is possible to have the same quality of life — if not the same lifestyle — without filling the world with carcinogens.

"I can't think of a really major carcinogen that is absolutely necessary and can't be replaced with something else," he said in an interview.

Scientists have estimated that 75 percent to 90 percent of all human cancers are caused by environmental factors, including chemicals in foods, the environment and the workplace.

Maraschino cherries were once colored with Red Dye No. 2, which has since been banned by the Food and Drug Adminstration because the chemical was found to cause cancer in test animals.

The cherries are still red because they are colored with Red Dye No. 40. An FDA spokesman said No. 40 has undergone extensive tests and there is no evidence it is harmful — although the agency is still studying it.

But either of these synthetic food colorings could be replaced with a natural substance, King said, and still produce red cherries.

Given a choice between food with carcinogens and less colorful foods without them, King said, people would inevitably choose the chemical-free foods — only they rarely have that option.

"The trouble is people don't have a choice — let them choose if they want to suffer through four or five years of cancer or a slightly less red maraschino cherry, and what will they choose?"

The problem, therefore, is more than one of making the public aware that companies put chemicals in food.

Researchers Defend Benefits Of Vaccine

By AL ROSSITER JR.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four out of five American children under five routinely are immunized against whooping cough. Are the benefits of the vaccine

Yes, answers a team of researchers from the Center for Disease Control and Harvard University.

The question was raised a few years ago in Scotland by Dr. Gordon T. Stewart of the University of Glasgow. He believed the risks in some cases outweighed the benefits.

Sir Charles Stuart-Harris of the University of Sheffield Medical School told an international conference on whooping cough a year ago that the publicity over the risks of the vaccine largely was responsible for a drop in immunization rates in British children from 75 percent in 1974 to only 40 percent in 1976.

He said an epidemic of whooping cough followed in England and Wales with 12 deaths reported in a 12-month period that ended last November.

Whooping cough, also known as pertussis, is a bacterial infection that causes severe coughing spells which may interfere with breathing.

Routine immunization in infants and young children has been widely practiced in the United States and throughout the world for the past 25 years. Pertussis vaccine generally is included in a triple vaccine known as DPT which also protects against diphtheria and tetanus.

A team of researchers headed by Dr. Jeffrey Koplan of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta conducted a formal risk-benefit analysis of whooping cough vaccine and reported the results in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Minor reactions from the vccine include fever, soreness at the injection site, irritability and aches lasting up to 48 hours. The researchers said these are relatively common, occurring in half the children given the recommended total of four doses.

Major reactions consist of neuorologic irritations such as convulsions, shock and persistent, uncontrollable screaming requiring hospitalization. Even more serious reactions can result in inflammation of the brain.

A Swedish study indicated the rate of moderately severe reactions is one in 3,100 people vaccinated, and one in 34,000 for severe reactions. The rate of encephalitis, or brain inflammation, was one in 170,000.

Unofficial, preliminary data from the Netherlands showed a rate of one in 2,150, convulsions and one in 3,500 for shock and one in 50,000 for encephalitis.

The researchers said that for every one million children, they expected 3.7 cases per million of permanent disability or death with a vaccination program and 8.4 cases without one.

The report also said a vccination program would reduce by 61 percent the costs of whooping cough — $720,862 versus $1,866,153 per million people.

"Under the assumptions and outcomes we have presented, there appears to be merit in continuing and promoting pertussis immunization," the report said.

Parties Seeking Hispanic Vote

AUSTIN (AP) — Now that presidential candidates are out and working, the Texas Democratic and Republican parties are beginning to think about voter turnout May 3.

"The key to the 1980 elections in Texas is south Texas with its large Mexican-American vote," said State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg at National Democratic Committee meeting in San Antonio. "Mexican-Americans are the most under-registered group in Texas' growing population."

Goldberg noted repeatedly that the DNC meeting and the June 1980 state Democratic convention were scheduled in San Antonio in an effort to attract attention of Hispanic voters.

"The Hispanic vote has become vitally important," said National Democratic Chairman John White. "I don't believe Texas, Arizona or California can be carried without the Hispanic minority's vote."

"Both Sen. John Tower and Gov. Bill Clements received good Mexican-American support in 1978. That's what got Billy Goldberg worried," said State Republican Chairman Chester R. Upham. "We feel we are going to do well all over the state in 1980, and we will be working on it."

Upham predicted even more Mexican-Americans will vote Republican in 1980 than in previous elections.

"The Mexican-American vote has been increasing every year — not always at the local level, but certainly on the state level it has been growing," he said.

U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland of Houston says there is an even greater reason for Democrats to increase their minority support in 1980, and that is the 1980 census.

"The resulting re-districting in 1981 make this year's contests even more significant, and the Republicans know that," Leland said. "They want to draw the lines. They want to decide where to put the thousands of blacks and Chicanos in Texas who have never been counted before. The Democratic party, the people's party, cannot let this happen."

The steering committee is headed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and former Attorney General John Hill — "the two top vote getters in 1978," according to Goldberg. Goldberg said he planned to ask former Gov. Dolph Briscoe also to serve on the committee.

Other steering committee members include Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas; former Sen. Ralph Yarborough; Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, a key Carter campaign executive; Jess Hay, former finance chairman for Briscoe; Democratic National Committeewoman Billie Carr, a Kennedy supporter, and White.

Goldberg will head a $1 million drive to register Texas voters and get them to the polls. The drive will be financed by asking Democrats to contribute $19.80 each for the 1980 campaign.

He conceded Republicans may be able to attract a turnout of about one million to their May 3 primary, more than double the 1976 turnout and many of them former Democratic voters. But, said Goldberg, "Texas is a traditional Democratic state and will remain that in 1980."

Wet Fields Hampering Harvests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wet fields in some areas continue to hamper this fall's harvests of corn and soybeans, says the Agriculture Department.

As of Nov. 18, the department said this week, the corn harvest in the major producing states was about 82 percent completed, compared to 96 percent a year ago. However, it said, the longer-term average for this time of year is a completion rate of 83 percent.

The weekly report, based on surveys of weather and crop conditions, said about 92 percent of the soybean acreage was harvested, compared to 95 percent a year ago but ahead of the average pace by five percentage points.

Cotton picking was 58 percent done by Nov. 18, ahead of the year-ago pace of 55 percent, the report said.

Planting of winter wheat "neared completion in most states, except in California," it said. "In Kansas, some reseeding took place because of the heavy rains that were received there recently."

Change Sought In Calendars

NEW YORK (UPI) — The creator of the "Ziggy" cartoon strip is waging a one-man battle to chang calendars so that they begin on a Monday instead of a Sunday.

"I feel like Im attacking mom, apple pie and the church," cartoonist Tom Wilson on Cleveland said Monday.

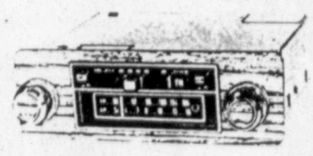

Wilson, 48, vice president of a greeting card company that makes calendars, complained that he has run into strong opposition to the idea from company executives.

He said the executives told him "people are used to having the calendars start on a Sunday."

"But changing it to Mondays is more in keeping with people's life styles," he said. "People start the work week on Mondays."

Republicans Upset By Schweiker

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Sen. Richard S. Schweiker was told in 1976 that Ronald Reagan wanted him as a running mate, the liberal Pennsylvania Republican was astonished. The other day, Schweiker got his chance to return the surprise.

Reagan, campaigning in the Philadelphia suburbs in his bid for the 1980 GOP presidential nomination, asked Schweiker to introduce him at a rally.

What did Schweiker say? Only that he was proud and happy to be back in Falcraft, Pa.

It's Folcroft — and the citizens of one of the few GOP strongholds in the Philadelphia area made it clear they felt Schweiker should know the right pronounciation.

Rivals Challenged

Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., another seeker of his party's 1980 nomination, has offered a new wrinkle in the way of a challenge to fellow candidates.

Pressler, youngest of the announced presidential candidates, challenged his rivals to jog with him.

"We want to show that the GOP is in good shape in more ways than one," said Pressler, 37.

Watergate Reminder

An electronic echo of Watergate cropped up as the Senate Banking Committee was considering the administration's proposed loan-guarantee package for the Chrysler Corp.

The committee's microphone system repeatedly sputtered and had to be turned off as Peter G. Peterson, one-time secretary of commerce in the Nixon administratuonn testified. Finally the temptation was too much for Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., who as a House member served on the Judiciary Committee during its investigation of electronic bugging and other Watergate abuses.

Study Urges Germans To Assimilate Foreigners

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Four million Italians, Turks and other foreigners living in ghettos pose a threat to West German society so long as they remain outsiders, a government study says.

"Uncontrollable social conflicts" are inevitable unless foreign workers and their families are quickly integrated into the German mainstream, said a study commissioned by the Ministry of Research and Technology.

Foreigners fleeing poverty in Mediterranean countries haul garbage, dig ditches, drive buses and perform many other jobs that Germans avoid. All major political parties accept the presence of the "gastarbeiter" (German for guest workers) as at least an economic necessity.

But many West Germans fret about the long-term consequences of relying on these foreign laborers, who are often referred to as a "social time bomb."

Arguing that West Germany has become an "immigration country" and should recognize the fact, the study goes far beyond previous reports in making recommendations to assimilate foreigners.

The proposals call for granting voting rights to foreign workers after three years' residence, permitting them to organize political groups and encouraging Germans to share apartment houses with foreigners.

The four-year survey was made of 1,503 Turks, Italians, Yugoslavs, Spaniards and Greeks and a similar number of Germans by university researchers.

The survey found that most foreign workers in West Germany repeatedly prolong their stays because of good wages and most would not voluntarily return home.

West Germany has a 10-year residence requirement for citizenship, but few works go through the red tape of applying.

The study urged foreigners to earn acceptance from West Germans by mastering the language and keeping their children in school beyond the ninth grade, the minimum legal requirement.

Young foreigners who complete school will be able to mix more easily in German society, it said. Otherwise, "discrimination coupled with rising expectations ... worsens social tensions and friction."

It noted that unemployment rates for foreign teen-agers was significantly higher than in the same German age group and provided another source of conflict.

West Germany's foreign population more than doubled from 1.92 million in 1968 to a high of 4.13 million in 1974.

In 1973 the government here imposed a recruiting ban on workers from non-Common Market nations because of rising unemployment. After peaking a year later, the number of foreigners declined to 3.95 million in a total population of about 61 million.

The study, citing the most recent figures compiled two years ago, listed the five largest ethnic groups in West Germany: 1.12 million Turks, 630,000 Yugoslavs, 570,000 Italians, 328,000 Greeks and 201,000 Spaniards.

Workers 21 to 35 years old made up the largest foreign age group, followed by 35 to 45 year olds. Children under 6 were the third largest group.

The survey showed foreign workers, who are often unskilled, generally get worse jobs, lower pay and fewer chances for promotion than German counterparts.

The report gave these other findings:

— Living quarters of foreign workers are mostly overpriced and substandard: 15 percent lack a private toilet, 42 percent a bath or shower and 58 percent central heating.

— Germans and foreigners have little contact and bear many prejudices against each other.

Regulations Hindering MX Missile Depoyment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air Force officials doubt the United States can meet its 1986 goal for deploying the new MX mobile missile unless they can cut through a jungle of environmental and land-use regulations.

"We are concerned that, without legislation in this area, we cannot meet an initial operating capability for the MX in 1986," one official said.

Pentagon authorities emphasized they have no intention of waving aside environmental safeguards in constructing bases for 200 MX missiles, probably in about 50 thinly-populated valleys in Utah and Nevada.

But they said a "common sense" way must be found to simplify state and federal regulations.

The officials, who asked not to be named, noted that the federal government had, in effect, yielded to the states some of the power to control water, air and noise pollution.

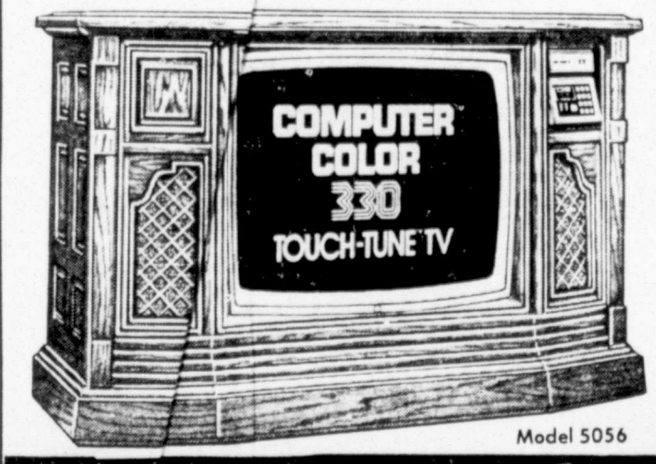

Officials said some of the regulations require the issuance of permits in complicated procedures that could take up to 10 years and "we just don't have that time."

One possible approach, they said, would be for President Carter to authorize waivers from present environmental and land-use regulations if he finds such a move would be in the "paramount national interest." But they indicated they would rather get congressional approval for simplifying legislation.

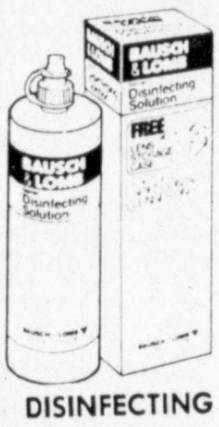

According to these authorities, a consensus is beginning to form within the interested federal agencies in support of such legislation, with the possible exception of the Interior Department, which still objects to some aspects of the simplifying approach.

Bollworm Problem Grows

No End In Sight, Entomologist Declares

By DUANE HOWELL
Avalanche-Journal Farm Editor

A multimillion dollar bollworm problem has continued to escalate in recent years — especially during the last four seasons — for High Plains cotton farmers and an entomologist here says there appears to be no end in sight.

Historically, damaging infestions of bollworms have occurred every five to eight years on the High Plains, says Dr. James Leser, area entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Lubbock.

"The extent and severity of these earlier infestations were not well documented," he says, "as there were fewer sources of reliable entomological information at that time."

Presently, he adds, economic infestations appear to be occurring more frequently. There were economic infestations across a wide area in 1977, 1978 and 1979. The trend, Leser says, has been toward more extensive and severe bollworm problems each year.

More than $10 million was spent in bollworm management in 1978 and $15 million was spent in 1979, Leser says. For every dollar invested in bollworm management, he adds, the farmer received approximately $1.33 in return.

In 1977, economic infestations occurred in several locations. These included Gaines County to the south and most counties to the north of Lubbock. No attempt was made to accurately assess the extent of the bollworm damage or its economic impact that year.

Economic infestations during the last two years have encompassed an area of approximately 500,000 to 800,000 acres.

"There are several factors which may be interacting to cause an increased bollworm problem on the High Plains," Leser says. "The cropping system in this area has undergone extensive changes and shifts in acreage of the major field crops."

Corn has become a major agricultural commodity, with significant acreage expansions in 1975 and 1976. This crop provides an ideal, early host for bollworm buildups, Leser points out.

While corn acreage declined somewhat in 1978 and 1979, the entomologist notes, it still was sufficient to gen erate large numbers of bollworms to infest cotton later in the season.

"We can expect a 15 to 25 percent increase in corn acreage in 1980 due to favorable pricing," Leser says.

Harvested acreage of corn, Leser says, leaped from 82,000 in 1968 to more than 1.2 million in both 1976 and 1977 before declining to 908,000 in 1978 and to a projected 753,000 in 1979. Sorghum's harvested acreage declined from more than 3.1 million acres in 1968 to 1.89 in 1976, 1.32 in 1977 and 1.37 in 1978. Harvested acreage of soybeans rose from 226,000 in 1968 to a 189,000 last year and to a projected 300,000 in 1979. Sunflowers have dropped from a high of 228,700 acres in 1975 to a projection this year of 70,000.

Meanwhile, harvested acreage of cotton has soared from about 1.531 million in 1968 to 3.514 last year and to what Leser projects to be 3.6 million this year.

"Research has shown that sorghum acts as a reservoir for beneficials which move into cotton later in the season," Leser points out. "Even before the use of economic thresholds, reduced chemical rates and greenbug-resistant varieties, large numbers of beneficials were generated in sorghum."

Now, the entomologist says, sorghum acreage is so scarce it's doubtful that beneficials produced in this crop have much impact on minimizing late-season pest problems in cotton.

An increase in the harvested acreage of cotton of about 1 million acres in 1977 occurred mainly to the north of Lubbock in areas where corn and sorghum are traditionally grown, Leser points out.

"Favorable pricing and excellent growing weather, coupled with less favorable economic conditions for grain crops, probably were the factors leading to this major change in our cropping pattern," Leser says.

"This additional cotton acreage is in an area where bollworm damage risks would be highest, both because of its proximity to corn and because of the shortness of the growing season."

In general, Leser points out, bollworm infestations can be expected to be more severe in irrigated fields. Temperature and humidity probably are the most important elements of environmental resistance applied to this pest in this area, he says.

While numbers of bollworms moving out of corn in 1979 were much lower than in 1978, Leser says, mortality to both eggs and larvae of the bollworm in cotton probably amounted to less than 5 percent. Usually, he adds, temperature and humidity related mortality amounts to approximately 35 percent. In addition, predation and parasitism usually result in a 10 to 15 percent mortality.

Farmers generally have been unable to deal adequately with a bollworm situation, Leser says. Management problems with this pest involve poor assessment and hence late discovery of economic infestations, he says, and the delayed application of pesticides in situations where chemical control is warranted.

"Inadequate scouting has frequently resulted in missing the time when bollworm control is most effective," Leser says. "This generally results in excessive econom ic loss prior to control initiation and the need for high rates of the harsher and more expensive materials to achieve adequate control."

In those instances where producers or others have adequately assessed the bollworm situation, Leser says, poor management decisions frequently negate the benefits derived from good and timely scouting.

"Very few individuals are capable of making sound management decisions," Leser says. "The economic thresholds currently supported by research appear to be inadequate for the situations encountered in late August and early September, nor do they adequately handle egg laying over an extended period."

One of the major problems confronting cotton producers attempting to control bollworms is that of timely chemical application, the entomologist says. Recent infestations, he points out, have involved thousands of acres and have developed with surprising suddenness.

"Aerial applicators have been unable to meet the demands and apply timely applications," Leser says. "Delays of up to four days have occurred even when applications were made throughout the day.

"Poor coverage has resulted when applications were made out of necessity during the late morning and early afternoon hours. This period is frequently characterized by inversion layers, high temperatures and excessive winds, all of which have reduced coverage by as much as 65 percent.

"While there has been less than satisfactory control exercised by those who have made an attempt, a large percentage of those fields requiring treatment have been, in fact, ignored.

"Many producers feel that chemical control is a losing proposition and still others feel that their beneficial arthropods must be protected at all costs.

Although changes in the agroecosystem probably are responsible for the increased trend toward bollworm problems, Leser says, poor management practices have tended to aggravate the situation.

"Only through careful management can we hope to succeed at arriving at optimal pesticide use patterns which will maximize profits while minimizing adverse environmental impact," the entomologist emphasizes.

BOLLWORM CHECK — Dr. James Leser, area entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Lubbock, is shown checking for cotton bollworms during the summer. He says High Plains growers spent more than $10 million in bollworm management in 1978 and about $15 million in 1979.

Bloat-Free Forage Crop
Sanfoin Gaining Favor

CLOVIS (Special) — Sainfoin, a non-bloating forage legume, is a relatively new crop in New Mexico, says Charles Glover, extension agronomist at New Mexico State University.

In recnt years, it has been used successfully in Montana and Canada as hay and pasture crop.

Sainfoin has shown promise in New Mexico as a pasture crop both in pure stands and in mixtures with cool season grasses. More extensive research is needed to determine the production potential and the cultural practices necessary to successfully grow this crop in the state, Glover says.

Sainfoin is not a new crop, having been grown in Russia more than 1,000 years ago and in Europe as early as the 14th century. It was grown for forage in both Russia and Europe on dry, calcareous soils where other forage legumes did not thrive.

It was introduced in the United States in the early 1900s but failed to gain acceptance. This was because it was tested on unadapted soils. Researchers also overlooked its non-bloating characteristics, and thought cattle would not like it because of its poor leafiness and coarse stems.

NMSU initiated work on sainfoin as a possible alternate crop, not a replacement for alfalfa. Researchers were interested because it is non-bloating, drought tolerant, winter-hardy and resistant to the alfalfa weevil. The variety Renumex was released in 1978 as a hay and pasture crop.

The seeds are fairly large and have good vigor which makes establishment relatively easy. The growth characteristics are similar to alfalfa. Well adapted to sandy or cobbly soils which are well drained, sainfoin begins growth approximately 10 days earlier than alfalfa.

The feeding value of sainfoin is equal to alfalfa and it is one of the most palatable forage crops. It is higher in sugar and carbohydrates than alfalfa, resulting in increased consumption and conversion. The forage makes excellent hay and may be cubed or processed for silage or haylage.

Being a lugume, sainfoin has the ability to make its own nitrogen. However, the seed has to be inoculated with a specific bacteria for sainfoin because alfalfa inoculants will not work on sainfoin.

Sainfoin is not an efficient nitrogen fixer and it suffers a mid-summer slump. A nitrogen fertilizer needs to be applied to maintain adequate growth during this period.

Calcareous soils will rapidly tie up phosphorus in an unavailable form, but sainfoin has the ability to utilize this unavailable form of phosphorus. Sainfoin did not respond to phosphorus fertilization when tested in Montana, Glover says.

Sainfoin should not be planted on acid soils or on soils which are poorly drained, but it will tolerate moderately akaline soils. It performs well on less desirable soils as long as they have good drainage. Sainfoin appears to favor sandy soils.

The high palatability of sainfoin can result in overgrazing unless strict grazing management is followed, the specialist says. Overgrazing sainfoin can result in decreasing the life of the stand. When planted in mixtures with less palatable grasses, it may be overgrazed. Sainfoin will not compete well.

Unlike alfalfa, sainfoin has a weak crown which can be torn quite easily. Because of this characteristic, it will not tolerate trampling by grazing animals. By planting it in rows, preferably on top of the bed, this trampling can be reduced. Animals tend to walk between the rows minimizing the injury and increasing the life of the stand.

Grazing trials at Clovis, using sainfoin and Jose Tall wheatgrass, have been quite successful. Well managed, this pasture is capable of carrying three animal units and producing 900 pounds of beef to the acre over the grazing period of April to October.

Much more research is needed on the crop, but it does show promise as a forage legume in an irrigated pasture program, Glover says. Researchers need to develop the proper fertilizer program, disease and insect resistance and other cultural practices.

"Sainfoin is intended as an alternative to alfalfa, not as a replacement or competition for alfalfa. It is not a wonder plant, but it has the potential of being an excellent forage variety," Glover says.

Bumper Fruit Crops Force Prices Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fruit growers are harvesting bumper crops and are seeing prices decline from year-earlier levels for some major items, says the Agriculture Department.

The lower prices also are expected to be reflected at wholesale and retail stores, particularly for some important citrus products, officials said recently.

Retail prices for fresh fruit in September, for example, were down almost 22 percent from a year ago.

The price index overall "is expected to remain below year-earlier levels at least through midwinder if the record citrus crop materializes," the department said.

The citrus crop, mainly oranges, is estimated at a record of 15.2 million tons, up 15 percent from 1978-79.

Non-citrus output, which includes 10 major fruits, is forecast at 12.2 million tons, up 4 percent. Production is expected to be up for all items except apples and tart cherries, the department's outlook board said.

"With an expected larger carryover of frozen concentrated orange juice, plus the record orange crop, market prospects for oranges through mid-winter point to grower prices below last year's levels," the report said.

"These lower grower prices are expected to result in lower retail prices even with the continued increase in marketing costs."

But apple prices "are moderately higher than last year" at shipping points, the report said, and "supplies for fresh market may be smaller this season since the crop is smaller and processor demand is good."

The 1979-80 supply of most processed noncitrus fruit will be larger than a year ago, but "total supplies of canned fruit will not increase appreciably because of smaller carryover stocks," the report said.

"Thus, prices at both retail and wholesale levels for most canned fruit this fall and winter will remain relatively firm because of higher costs of raw products and increased marketing and processing costs."

Rangelands Spotlighted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has ordered agencies under his control to pay more attention to livestock rangelands and forage-producing forest areas.

Bergland said recently the new policy on range management is intended to "get more productivity" from the 1.55 billion acres of forage and rangeland in the United States.

"The policy is designed to improve and protect the range and communities that depend on range for their livelihood," he said.

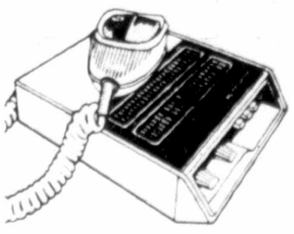

Henceforth, Bergland said, the Agriculture Department's agencies "must work the policy into their existing policies and programs within one year."

Bergland said he will set up a USDA committe to implement the policy. The committee will look into ways of speeding up the application of profitable range management methods.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE CROP INSURANCE BILL, tentatively scheduled for House action last week, has been delayed.

It was pulled off the floor by House Agriculture Committee chairman Tom Foley, D-Wash., after a hoped-for compromise came unglued.

The compromise involved support for a package of amendments, including one to extend the expiring disaster program through 1981. Other amendments related to concerns of the private insurance industry.

Industry officials say the Carter administration now is urging support for the bill and amendments.

In a letter to Foley, Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Jim Williams said there was no objection from the administration or the Office of Management and Budget in extending the disaster program through 1981.

National Cotton Council officials say it is not likely, however, that the bill will be brought up again until next year.

MEANWHILE, THE HOUSE AG COMMITTEE tentatively has scheduled a mark-up of an extra long staple cotton bill for Monday.

Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., is expected to offer a series of amendments related to Cotton Inc. operations, including:

— Making it illegal for Cotton Board and CI members to benefit from any information provided by CI unless such information is at the same time made available to all other cotton producers.

— Establishing an independent U. S. Department of Agriculture Committee to set up guidelines governing expenditures of CI, approving the annual budget, and granting prior approval for all expenses in excess of $7,500.

— Combining CI "own" funds with checkoff funds subject to regulations established by the independent USDA committee.

ANOTHER PROPOSED AMENDMENT would prohibit anyone from serving on the Cotton Board who has been convicted of any offense with a penalty of one year or more in prison or who has been found guilty of violating laws relating to buying, selling, handling or transporting agricultural commodities.

The situation may change because of efforts being made by the Cotton Subcommittee to seek agreement to avoid opening the Cotton Research and Promotion Act to amendment on the House floor.

Members of the panel are said to fear that adoption of one or more amendments in committee could jeopardize the entire research and promotion act on the House floor.

A parliamentary question of germaneness is reported to be unclear at this point. For one thing, the bill under discussion pertains only to ELS cotton and not to upland cotton.

Spokesmen say the National Cotton Council staff is continuing to monitor the situation and to work with committee members to find a solution.

ELSEWHERE ON THE WASHINGTON SCENE, cotton council president Hoke Leggett has urged adotpion of a measure such as the Capital Cost Recovery Act. He testified last week before the Senate Finance committee.

The proposed measure would provide 10, five and three-year depreciation by businesses of investments in buildings, machinery and transportation equipment, respectively.

Without the tax write-off proposed in the act, Leggett said, it would be virtually impossible for the industry to obtain the huge amount of capital required in an effort to meet the Occupational Safety and Health Administration cotton dust standard.

Leggett added that the act "may make it possible to reduce dust levels in the expensive fashion dictated by OSHA, greatly increase our productivity, and continue processing of cotton in this country."

A BILL TO INCREASE 1980 TARGET PRICES for wheat and feed grains has been introduced by Sens. Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Milton Young, R-N. D.

The 1980 levels proposed by Dole and Young would be 7 percent above the 1979 target prices in the bill approved earlier this month by the House.

The House bill, sponsored by Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., would increase 1979 target prices to $3.63 per bushel for wheat and $2.35 per bushel for corn. The Dole-Young bill would set 1980 target prices at $3.88 for wheat and $2.51 for corn.

Sources expect the English bill to be amended in the Senate Agriculture Committee to encompass 1980 target price levels. The Dole-Young bill could be added as an amendment to the English bill when the committee meets Tuesday.

Target prices in 1978 were $3.40 per bushel for wheat and $2.20 for corn. In a statement, Dole said failure to increase 1980 target prices could resut in the end of many family farms before 1980.

World Food Authorities Keep Tab On Harvests

U.S. Production, Trade Roles Studied

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board of Trade

KANSAS CITY — Calendar year 1979 is drawing to a close and authorities around the world who keep tab on food have a pretty good idea of the harvests, total supplies on hand, probable utilization and what should be left over when the 1980-81 harvests roll around.

The figures available provide an opportunity to put the U.S. role in world grain production and in world trade in perspective, a rather interesting undertaking because on the one hand this role is fantastic, but on the other the possibility exists for exaggeration.

All figures on worldwide farm production and utilization are estimates. They are changed from month to month as the year progresses. The final world harvest tabulations will not be abvailable until the southern hemisphere crops are all garnered, and their harvests run into the new year. The figures for the comments in this article come from the October World Agricultural Situation Report issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The forecast on world wheat production this marketing year, 1979-80, is 401.2 million metric tons. The word forecast is used because the Argentina and Australia crops still haven't been harvested.

U.S. wheat production this year is estimated at 57.8 million metric tons. So, out of the world's total, the United States should account for about 14.4 percent. The Soviet Union, incidentally, this year is accredited with a short wheat crop of 85 million metric tons, which would be 21.2 percent of the world's total.

Total world coarse grain production (corn, barley, oats, grain sorghum and millet) is put at 729.3 million metric tons with the United States accounting for 221.5 million tons or 30.4 percent of the total. It will be observed that it is on coarse grains, principally corn, that the U.S. really shines in comparison with the rest of the world.

The world's total production of rice, rough basis, is forecast at 374.8 million metric tons, about 26.4 million tons less than the wheat crop. In some years in the past, world rice production has exceeded that of wheat, but not recently. Rice is, however, one of the world's important food grains.

U.S. production of rice is estimated at 6.1 million metric tons, just about the same as it was last year. But out of the world's total, the U.S. accounts for only about 1.63 percent.

When all the grains, including rice, are put together, the total metric tonnage as estimated in the USDA report would be 1.5 billion. This is counting rice on a rough basis. But, as the USDA explains, production figures on rice are given on the rough basis, but trade in rice is calculated on a milled rice basis. There's quite a difference. Milling the rice cuts down the tonnage considerably.

The net result is that when a figure on milled rice is used, the total amount of the grains produced this year is estimated at 1.38 billion metric tons. Also, it is estimated that world trade in all grains this year will amount to 190 million metric tons.

Now, out of all these figures the point is reached where some interesting conlusions may be drawn. First, if the world is producing 1.38 billion metric tons of grain and 190 million are moving in world trade, this means 13.8 percent of the total production goes into world trade, or is shipped from one country to another.

Put another way, 86.2 percent of what the world produces stays, and presumably is eaten, in the countries where it is grown.

Said still another way, on the average, 86.2 percent of the grain the people in the world eat is raised in their own countries. What they import is what they need in addition to their own production. Obviously, these needs vary among all countries.

Out of the 190 million metric tons of grain estimated to move in world trade, the United States expects to account for 111.6 million or about 58.7 percent. This is one of the fantastic figures. For several years, the United States has accounted for half or a little more of all the grains moving in world trade; this year, the percentage apparently is pushing for the 60 percent mark.

But — to carry on the calculations further — if the United States accounts for 58.7 percent of the world trade in grains this year, that will amount to 8 percent of the world's production. However, the world is expected to eat more than it produces this year, drawing down on its carryover stocks. In fact, utilization is estimated at 1.42 billion metric tons as compared with the 1.38 billion metric tons of production.

Therefore, the 11.6 million metric tons the United States expects to export will acount for a little less than 8 percent of what the world uses. Again, this is a rather fantastic figure because it apparently represents the largest share of the world's total grains ever supplied by the United States.

Once again, a restraining thought. The world doesn't live on grains alone. People eat potatoes, cabbages, turnips, fish , oranges, melons and a host of other foods. So, to get a more accurate estimate on the share the U.S. provides of total world food consumption, it is necessary to whittle something off that 8 percent figure. What's the final answer: maybe 6 percent or maybe 5?

Incidentally, the United States exports more than grains. Soybeans are a major item not counted as grains. The Unted States is a big importer of food, too.

The one conclusion that must be about right is that most people of the world live on what is produced within their own counties, but for what they need in addition the United States is the major supplier, by far. But the United States doesn't feed the world in total, by far.

Area Grows As Dairy Supplier

LAS CRUCES (Special) — Who would have predicted five years ago that the arid plains of eastern New Mexico and western Texas would be one of the fastest growing dairy production areas?

Who would have guessed that milk production would be declining in one of the nation's highest priced milk markets — the Houston area?

Yet both of these changes have taken place, says Borden Ells, extension dairy specialist at New Mexico State University.

In 1974 and 1975 dairymen in New Mexico and West Texas were losing money every month. Many were facing bankruptcy. The cost of production, especially feed, was increasing much faster than the price of milk.

However, several changes have taken place during the last five years. Milk production has declined considerably near the metropolitan areas of Texas and Oklahoma.

In the Houston-Dallas area, milk production declined over 150 million pounds for the first six months of 1979, compared with 1974. The population continued to increase greatly in these areas during this same period.

The milk to supply these markets had to come from other areas. One of the most dramatic increases in production has taken place in New Mexico and West Texas. This area produced 93 million pounds more milk for the first six months of 1979, compared with 1974.

There has been an increase in dairy cow numbers in New Mexico from 31,000 to 35,000. There has also been a decided increase in milk production per cow.

In 1974 the average dairy cow in New Mexico produced 10,903 pounds of milk per year. For 1978 the average had increased to 13,879 pounds. This is an increase of more than 1,380 quarts per cow per year. This is due to better breeding, feeding and management, Ells says.

The shift in milk production in New Mexico and West Texas is because land values are lower; there is less competition for labor; the dry climate favors herd health; and, feed, both alfalfa hay and grain, are available from nearby irrigated farms.

Many dairymen are building or remodeling their milking facilities, Ells says. They are installing labor-saving devices, including automatic detachers, automatic crowd gates, automatic washers, bunk line feeders and feed wagons and electronic scales.

The largest dairy in New Mexico produces more than 150,000 pounds of milk per day. It milks over 3,000 cows per day.

Dairy leaders expect no surplus of dairy supplies for the next two years. Escalating transportation costs will have a decided effect on milk marketing.

Beet Farmers Field Day Guests

By JIM STEIERT
A-J Correspondent

BUSHLAND — High Plains sugar beet producers were informed that controlling weed and insect problems, obtaining a good stand and keeping hand labor to a minimum are key factors for profitable beet farming during a recent field day at the U.S. Department of Agriculture Research Center Here.

Dr. Steve Winter, a sugar beet researcher with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, outlined procedures to enable beet producers to obtain both high tonnage and high sugar content from their beets, while Dr. Allen Wiese, weed scientist at Bushland, outlined new and more economical methods of controlling weeds in beet crops.

Winter referred to the critical nature of nitrogen content of the soil in connection with sugar beet production during a stop at a fertilization test plot.

"Nitrogen management is a tremendous key to successful production of high quality beets, but is also a difficult management factor," Winter explained.

According to Winter, in his experiments, efforts were made to remove excess nitrogen in the top four feet of soil.

Core samples of each foot of soil were obtained and analyzed for nitrogen content.

Winter indicated that one crop of irrigated corn controlled nitrogen level at the research center, but added that if the soil nitrogen level is high, two years may be required to crop the excess nitrogen from the uppermost four feet of soil.

"Removing excess nitrogen from levels deeper than four feet is difficult," Winter related, indicating growers are usually better off to maintain proper nitrogen in the upper four feet of soil, rather than causing their beets to root down into the deeper source late in the season, when excess nitrogen reduces quality of the crop.

"Removing excess nitrogen from deeper than four feet requires deep-rooted crops such as sunflowers or sugar beets, because the roots of these crops will go below four feet if the soil on top is short of nitrogen. Unfortunately, if sugarbeets tap this source of additional nitrogen deep in the soil during the late fall, additional growth can severely reduce sugar content," said Winter.

The beet researcher emphasized that many area farmers may have extremely high-quality beets on a portion of their cropland where nitrogen levels are proper and not even be aware of it.

Citing a case in the Hereford area, Winter explained that during 1978, one farmer had beets with an impressive sugar content of 18 percent on the upper end of his field, while on the lower end where nitrogen had built up in the soil, sugar content was only about 13 percent. Due to these wide variations, the field averaged only 14 percent sugar.

"High yields and high quality are possible at the same time. We have the potential in some of our area fields to harvest 40 ton beets with 17-18 percent sugar content. This can be done with good management, and it takes soil sampling ahead of every crop every year," he emphasized.

According to Winter, producers might be well-advised to sample sugar beets on the upper and lower ends of their fields to determine just what type of quality variance is encountered in their fields.

The scientist also suggested doubling up on the application of nitrogen fertilizer in a check area of the field, with the check area to serve as an indicator of possible early-season nitrogen shortage in the overall beet crop.

At a demonstration on disease control, Winter expressed a strong preference for ground application of disease control chemicals.

"If a producer is in a situation where he can spray with a ground rig, he can boost his profits by $50 to $100 per acre," said Winter.

In experiments at the research station, beets received five applications of Duter mixed with sulfur, with applications initiated in late June and continued at two or three week intervals until early September.

The program eliminated mildew and leaf spot, which Winter explained was less a problem this year due to dry conditions.

Wnter highlighted research from four seasons during a stop at an irrigation interval demonstration.

According to Winter, a preplant irrigation of six inches followed by a two inch irrigation for emergence and summer rain produced 17 tons of beets per acre with a 16 percent sugar content.

Winter's 1979 experiment with this method will yield about 16 tons per acre, due to three inches less rainfall.

Winter explained that the pre-plant and emergence irrigation system will produce one-half maximum yield, while six summer irrigations increase yields to at least 35 tons per acre with a substantial sugar content.

The researcher indicated that root aphids became a particular problem in one test area this summer, with the pests building up primarily in plots where irrigations were restricted.

Damage was less severe in full irrigation plots, although the pests attacked the full irrigation beets as well.

Sugarbeet varieties were highlighted at another stop, here participants were allowed to view topped and recently dug beets to compare the size of roots and overall looks of the varities.

Yield samples taken Oct. 1 in one limited irrigation study showed that the top variety in the trial produced 18 tons of beets per acre with an impressive 17 percent sugar content. The varieties in that trial area, which encounted a root aphid problem, received a pre-plant irrigation and a watering to obtain a stand.

A second trial included 13 beet varities and received pre-plant water plus six summer irrigations.

Early yield samples taken in that area indicated that the top-performing varieties will produce 40 tons of beets per acre with at least 15.5 percent sugar content.

Winter emphasized the economic advantages of sugar beets, pointing out that beets which produce 17 tons per acre with good sugar from pre-irrigation only will gross $425 acre per acre.

He also claimed that fully irrigated beets producing 35 tons per acre will gross $850 per acre.

He referred to 1978 trials at Bushland in which the top variety yielded 50 tons per acre with 17 percent sugar and grossed $1,500 per acre.

"Considering that at least one-half the gross is net profit, well-managed sugar beets are the most profitable field crop in the area," Winter maintained.

Wiese explained that methods are available today that provide weed control in beets at an economical price, and that this represents a major breakthrough over the beet production practices of only 10 years ago.

"A good rotation program to stay away from weeds and a well-planned program to handle the weeds you do have are the secrets of success in controlling weeds in sugar beets," Wiese explained.

"It's like everything else about sugar beet culture. You have to do it right or trouble starts. Economical weed control starts with a good rotation of summer and winter crops. If crops and fallow ground are kept weed free, 90 percent of the weed problem in sugar beets is over," said Wiese.

Beets then planted in the area received a band of Nortron at 2.5 pounds per acre pre-plant plus a post-emergence band of Betanex at .75 pounds per acre for pigweed control, and a layby treatment of Treflan.

The field was also hoed twice at a cost of $30 per acre.

"In another field well managed for five years, weeds were eliminated with a post-emergency treatment and a layby treatment. Hoeing cost was $10 an acre to walk the field," said Wiese.

Wiese was asked to recommend a program for a field where an operator knew he would be facing a weed problem.

"I'd recommend using a hipper-ripper or moldbord to prepare the land, and then put up a good seedbed. I'd put on Nortron, unless there was going to be some problem with volunteer sorghum, and then I'd use Roneet. In a bad weed situation, you may need a Betanol-Betanex mixture, and a layby application of Treflan may be to your advantage," Wiese advised.

"Although Nortron is expensive, it is worth the price if you know you have a real weed problem. Without Nortron, you may have a planting you can't salvage," he added.

According to Wiese, misapplication of herbicides is one of the major reasons they fail to provide sufficient weed control for producers.

Dr. G.B. Thompson, director of the research station concluded the beet field tour by informing participants that Winter is planning to enter farming Jan. 2, and may be leaving his position as a sugar beet researcher at the Bushland station at that time.

Floyd County Gets Major As New Agent

FLOYDADA (Special) — A new county extension agent for agriculture has been named for Floyd County, effective Dec. 1.

He is Jett V. Major, formerly an extension agent in Lubbock County. He replaces Stephen R. Herber, who resigned.

The appointment of Major was announced by Floyd County Judge Choise Smith and Billy C. Gunter of Lubbock, district agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Jett has served as assistant county agent and a county agent in Lubbock since September 1977, and has done an excellent job," Gunter said. "He has conducted outstanding programs in Lubbock and we are pleased that he will be providing leadership for adult and 4-H programs in agriculture in Floyd County."

A native of Groom in Carson County, Major was graduated from Groom HIgh School. He received an Associate in Science degree from Clarendon Junior College in 1974 and a bachelor of Science degree in animal science from Texas A&M University in 1976.He is completing requirements for a master's degree at Texas Tech University.

At Clarendon, Major was class salutatorian, honor graduate, dean's list student, member of Phi Theta Kappa national honor society and was listed in "Who's Who in American Junior College."

At A&M, he was graduated cum laude, was designated a distinguished student, was active in the Corps of Cadets, and was active in the Pre-Veterinary Society, the Bio-Medical Assn., and Robbin's Aero Squadron.

Prior to joining the Extension Service, Major was a veterinary assistant at an animal clinic in Lubbock, and worked on farms in Idalou and Groom.

He is married to the former Mary Lynette Bichsel of Groom. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore W. Major, now live in Abernathy.

Processing Plants Pass Tests On Fried Bacon Nitrosamines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department said this week its latest preliminary tests showed no violations by processing plants in the amount of nitrosamines found in bacon after it is fried.

Bacon from 11 plants was found to be in compliance with the federal standards, the latest weekly report said.

Although the report showed no new violations, it said one plant that had been found in earlier tests to exceed the standards is now in compliance after making "procedure changes" in its ba-

That plant was identified as Cudahy Co., Denver, Colo.

Another plant — DeWig Packing Co., Haubstadt, Ind. — was placed in a "retention phase" after further tests confirmed its bacon exceeded the nitrosamine limits.

Sodium nitrite is commonly used in the bacon curing process and, under certain conditions such as high heat, can form with ohter substances to produce nitrosamines.

According to department records, nitrosamines formed when bacon is fried at high heat "are considered to be carcinogenic (cancer-causing) since laboratory animals administered these compounds develop cancer."

But some industry groups, including the American Meat Institute, along with some members of Congress, have objected to release of the test information on grounds it might be misleading to the public.

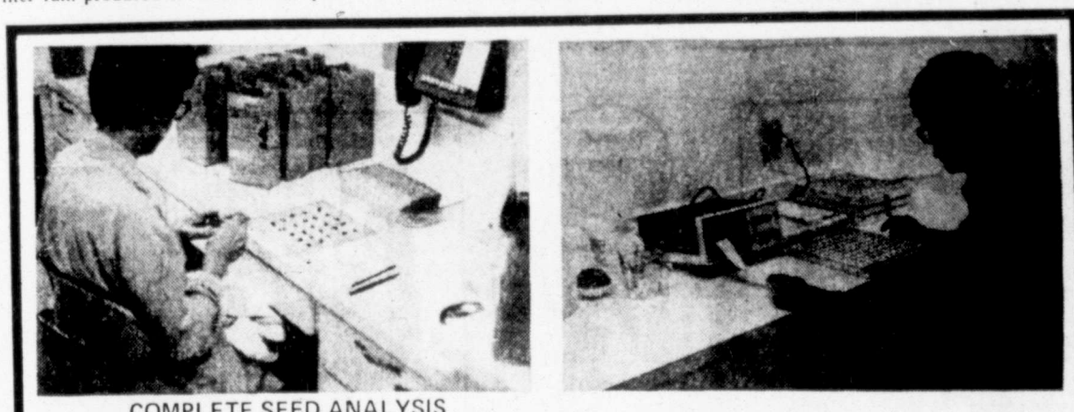

Also, the institute says the amount of nitrosamines formed from the bacon is too small to be harmful.

Agriculture Department Funds For New Year Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved $16.7 billion recently for operation of the Agriculture Department during the 1980 fiscal year, which began Oct. 1.

The money is about $1.6 billion less than President Carter requested and is $2.7 billion less than was appropriated last year.

The 304-25 House vote sent the bill to the Senate, where final action is expected next week.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Dow Jones Up 4.27 At 811.69

Gainers outnumbered losers by close to a 2-1 margin in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers said those traders who were active today generally were still wary over the continuing confrontation between the United States and Iran.

But they also noted some favorable response to the latest evidence of a slowing economy, which is widely regarded as a necessary precursor to reductions in inflation and interest rates.

The government reported Wednesday that new orders for durable goods dropped 4.2 percent in October.

Macmillan led the active list, off 3⅜ at 13⅞. On Wednesday American Broadcasting Co. broke off merger talks with the diversified publishing concern.

Among recently depressed auto stocks, General Motors gained ½ to 51 and Ford was up ⅛ at 31, but Chrysler slipped ⅜ to 6. American Motors was steady at 6⅞.

The NYSE's composite index rose .35 to 59.53. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index climbed 2.51 to 222.57.

Gossips Once Held Enormous Power Over Actors

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — More than 30 years ago Sylvia Sidney attended a party at the home of Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall. It was a typical Bogart soiree.

The booze flowed freely in the celebrity-studded crowd. Bogy, after getting half-bombed, began insulting his guests one at a time, as was his wont. The insults were part and parcel of the actor's dubious social charm.

Miss Sidney, who had known Bogey for years, was rarely amused by her host's scathing personal observations. She was especially testy after having a few belts the night of the party.

When Bogart had blasted everyone else in sight, he asked Sylva a vile and insulting question about her personal life.

As Miss Sidney relates the story, much lamentation and furor resulted. Her date fetched her back into the house, outraged that she had behaved so badly.

The actress returned to find her tormentor being ministered to by Bacall. The glass had broken on impact with Bogey's skull and resulted in a severe gash from his temple to behind his ear.

"There was blood all over the place," Miss Sidney recalled. "Betty Bacall poured a bottle of iodine on Bogey's head and he really yelled. Then she sent for a doctor who had to put in several stitches.

"Funny, Bogey wasn't angry with me. He kept saying, 'You're a great kid, Sylvia. Didn't know you had that kinda fire.'"

The next day Miss Sidney sent Bogart a bouquet of flowers and joined a conspiracy of silence to prevent any word of the affray from leaking out.

In those days a battery of gossip columnists wielded enormous power in newspapers and on radio, often intimidating movie stars whose careers sometimes hung in the balance of their social behavior.

In an era of studio contracts, stars knuckled under to studio fiat or went on suspension if their off-screen antics were judged injurious to the studio or to the picture in which the star was appearing.

"It was the heyday of Louella Parsons, Hedda Hopper, Seila Graham, Edith Gwynn, Jimmy Fiddler and Walter Winchell," Miss Sidney said.

"They were all feared and sometimes despised by the stars. I was scared to death of all of them myself because of the enormous power they had.

"I learned Louella's technique for worming out all the personal stuff that could make headlines. She'd begin by crying and telling me about her own personal love life or problems.

"To make her feel better, telling her she wasn't the only one who suffered, I'd confess the truth about my entire life. The next day I'd read it in headlines. I'd get furious with myself and promise not to talk to her again."

It happens that Miss Sidney is playing a has-been columnist herself in the "The Gossip Columnist," a two-hour TV movie. Her sympathies clearly lie with celebrities, not professional muckrakers.

"The movie magazines ran vicious columns in those days, too," Miss Sidney said. "Thank God, I had a few secrets I managed to keep to myself. But it wasn't easy trying to protect your private life and personal indiscretions.

"If you got caught holding hands with a man in a restaurant, it would be reported as a blazing romance.

"You were always in trouble with either Louella or Hedda because if you gave a bit of news to one, the other would have the axe out for you. So you had to balance it out by alternating your calls to the two of them."

Acid Rainfall Contaminating Southern California

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Rain falling through air pollution over Los Angeles is as contaminated as the East Coast's notorious "acid rain," scientists say, but a bigger problem in sunny Southern California may be acid smog.

The acid smog — acid dripping as tiny water droplets or gas from the haze that often envelops the cars, industries and homes of the Los Angeles basin — has the same effect as acid rain.

The average acidity of rainfall in the basin ranged to more than 10 times as acidic as clean water in clean air. Light rain once fell on Pasadena that was nearly as acidic as vinegar, he said.

Roger Loter sold the ZuiderZee Oyster Bar & Seafood Restaurants in 1967, and signed a non-competitive agreement not to serve seafood. That agreement has expired! Fine Seafoods once again are coming to Lubbock at...

Frank Gilroy's 'Last Licks' Opens On Broadway

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — A once-vigorous man, 63, becomes an ailing recluse when his wife of 39 years dies. His married son, leaving town soon, doesn't want him in a nursing home. Solution: A housekeeper.

A slim start for "Last Licks," a new Frank Gilroy play that bowed recently on Broadway. But it leads to a complex survey of long, unresolved feelings between father and son, a kind of summing-up of their love, lies, guilt, hate, and ultimately, respect.

"Licks" stars Ed Flanders as a crusty father, J.T. Walsh as his middle-class son and Susan Kellermann as a seemingly grim, prim, graying maiden who answers the son's ad for a housekeeper.

Before she arrives at Pop's comfortable, old-shoe Brooklyn home, we learn he's lost the will to live, reveres his late wife and without his son would rather be in a nursing home awaiting death.

The trick, of course, is for the son to revive Pop's will to live, which he does in part by, among other things, getting him to 'fess up to long-ago infidelities. Anger here indicates recovery.

His long, secret guilt at treating her so badly starts abating. Then the would-be housekeeper arrives. Pop hobbles upstairs : disgust. Strange turns ensue. Such as his unaccountably spry return in a white suit and Panama hat he once wore on business in South America.

But he still dislikes her: "She looks like a keeper in a concentration camp." She withdraws to let the men talk things over. Then she returns. And unaccountably suggests the son take a walk and let her talk with Pop alone.

"The challenge appeals," she crisply explains, adding, "I can cope with anything but apathy."

The son pretends to leave but lurks in a hallway. He overhears mighty amazing things, such as her warm, "Hello, Matt," to his dad and the news the two were secret lovers until his wife died.

Not only that, she's an ex-nun, they used to booze together, he made her talk dirty. But Pop now has mixed feelings about her. As he wryly sighs to her, "In a life of debauchery, I regret you most."

The son exits, the lovers adjourn for amour in the bed he once shared with his beloved wife. The ex-nun must prod him with merry talk of "exorcism" when he balks, but lust prevails.

Quite shocking, all this. But Gilroy somehow makes the potentially tasteless tasteful, gut-bustingly funny at times, with dazzling verbal jousts on love and guilt, the family kind and otherwise.

I won't blow the finale, but it is upbeat in its off-beat, bittersweet way, the father's self-respect and will to live restored by his son.

Tony-winner Tom Conti, making his Broadway directing debut here, keeps things crisp and smooth. Of the players, Miss Kellermman comes across the best, superb both in prim and bawdy scenes.

Walsh also scoes well, espite sometimes too-florid dialogue assigned him. Flanders is just fine, too, though he seems — may heaven forgive me — a tad young-looking for his codger's role.

"Licks," whose author won the 1964 Pulitzer for "The Subject Was Roses," often strains to make plot ends meet and occasionally shifts pace too abruptly. No big deal.

It's warm, full of human juices, accentuates the positive and finds humor and meaning even in the negative. If it doesn't leave you with a good feeling, check your pulse and see if anyone's home.

NBC's Today Show Still Leading ABC's Good Morning America

By PETER J. BOYER

When we last checked in on the morning war between ABC and NBC, the "Today" show (NBC) was about to be routed by "Good Morning America" (ABC).

Employing a soft style and a folksy actor, "Good Morning America" made a strong run at "Today" during the spring, and figured to overtake NBC's prototype morning show by summer. "Good Morning America" had the force of trend behind it.

But as of last week, "Today," the show with the newsman-host, was still ahead of "Good Morning America," the show with the actor-host, in the morning Nielsen ratings. This cheers "Today's" newsman-host, Tom Brokaw.

"I've been reading for two years now that ABC and 'Good Morning America' are on the move, but, we're still winning. Maybe they will get us at some point. But we're still winning."

Yes. But ABC has made a dramatic encroachment on what has traditionally been NBC territory, improving its morning ratings in October by 26 percent over last year, while "Today" has gone down by 11 percent.

"Good Morning America" epitomizes the trend in communications of the last five years toward softer, personality news; and to some extent, host David Hartman, the actor, personifies the soft-news newsman. While "Today" has made changes in that direction in the last year, the NBC show still exudes a more sophisticated, harder-edged air.

NBC, for example, has changed Brokaw's title from "host" to "correspondent" and has had him reading the news himself for several weeks ("I've always hated 'hosts,'" Brokaw says. "I felt like I was either presiding over a lunch or a game show.")

"ABC has a lot of dough," Brokaw says, "and they're spending it on promotion stuff, very good promotion stuff.

"There are lots of things that we're first on, things we were innovative on, that people don't know about. We taped some cheapies (short promos) for them to run on the station break. And they dump them and put on a 10-second plug for 'Sheriff Lobo.'

"It's very frustrating, because then they (NBC executives) come to us about the ratings. But we're still winning."

Yes, which suggests the interesting prospect that 'Sheriff Lobo' may save "Today." If the show is still beating ABC without benefit of on-air promotion spots, imagine how it would do if NBC suddenly had money to spend on non-prime time promotions.
