Hurricane Leaves Heavy Property Damage; Aransas County Escapes Without Loss of Life

PILOTING

We've had another storm. It was the worst in 23 years, but not as bad as the 1919-er. Damage was light in comparison with the blow of '19, which brought in a deluge of salt water.

Rockport, Live Oak and Lamar Peninsulas had damage aplenty, but almost everyone considers themselves lucky because it could have been much worse. For instance, (personally speaking) the whole roof of the Pilot office could have fallen in, along with the walls. Instead we only had a gaping hole in the roof over the presses, and rain water instead of salty brine on the linotype.

There are several people who deserve public commendation for their work during the storm. First of these, we believe, should be Herbie Caraway, local manager of the Central Power and Light Co. Herbie was out early Sunday morning climbing poles before they stopped swaying. He worked furiously, but systematically, all day. Just as the gauge on the water tank settled to the empty mark, the pump motors started humming and the gauge started climbing as water poured into the city water system. Herbie had electric service restored to the business section by dusk, and to most of the residential section by dark.

Herbie Caraway wasn't just "making another day" when he started out climbing poles and clearing away loose, swinging power lines Sunday while the wind was still storming. He had his heart in his work. He had a job to do—a service to render. He didn't wait for help to arrive.

County Judge Fox, Fire Chief Edward Barnard and members of the Fire Department, did a swell job of patrolling and taking people to safer places during the night.

Again we let personalities enter this column to say "Thank You" to Kay Bynum for her valuable assistance to the Pilot this week. After presiding over the Pilot's news desk for the past 6 months, Kay decided to give up her work here last week. Because of the emergency brought about by the hurricane, she kindly offered her services on this week's issue of the Pilot, thus enabling us to get the paper out in good style, despite the tremendous amount of work necessary to get press and equipment into running order after their soaking Saturday night.

Kay is a wonderful newspaper woman. She has that indefinable "something" it takes to ferret out news, and a clear, concise style of recording it on paper for readers. There are better places awaiting Kay in the field of journalism, and we know that the many friends she has made during her sojourn in Rockport will join the Pilot in wishing for her every success and happiness.

Back to several little stories of the storm and sidelights thereof:

"Rockport will come back stronger than ever" says Harry Traylor, veteran of three storms here, including the 1919 flood. Traylor, real estate dealer, who divides his time between San Antonio and Rockport, closed a deal before noon Monday involving several thousand dollars, cash consideration, for a new investment in Rockport. Traylor's confidence in the town is based on close acquaintance through many years. He was elected mayor of Rockport at the age of 23 during the first decade of the century, and served several terms. His father built the old Del Mar hotel.

PAGING—One electric signal lantern for the Fire Department, the lantern was placed by fallen wire in front of Bracht Bros. during the storm Sunday morning. Chief Barnard would greatly appreciate knowing its whereabouts.

Mrs. Simon Lee Sorenson narrowly escaped injury Wednesday afternoon while in the post office.

CAMERA-EYE VIEW OF HURRICANE'S SCORE HERE

For no good reason, except that it was loose, a long plank fell off the ceiling and crashed to the floor beside her.

John Sorenson, weather bureau man here, had the Coast Guard worried for awhile Friday afternoon. He hoisted two red pennants as a storm warning. Such an arrangement was not to be found in the "bluejacket's manual," and the Coast Guardsmen called on Mr. Sorenson to learn that it was an arrangement of his own to make the warning a bit more impressive.

Sunday's Storm One Of Four 'Bad Ones' Since 1875

David Rockport Scrivner, first boy born in Rockport, recalled today that beginning with 1875 Rockport has had only four "bad" storms. He believes the 1942 blow was "second worst" and would have equalled the '19 blow if the wind had come in from the water side. Mr. Scrivner recalls a severe storm in 1875. The next one to his memory was 1916, then 1919 and 1942. The 1886 storm that destroyed Old Indianola was not very se-

Jack Hagar Appointed To Rationing Board

Jack D. Hagar was sworn in Wednesday as a member of the Aransas county War Price and Rationing Board. Hagar fills a vacancy made by the resignation of James DeWhitt.

Here, Mr. Scrivner recalls. Mr. Scrivner, now county treasurer, was born here Feb. 2, 1868. His father, D. D. Scrivner came here in 1867 and built the ninth house to be constructed in Rockport.

THE PICTURES

With a lot of huffing, puffing and just plain blowing, the worst tropical hurricane since 1919 caved in windows, toppled buildings in, took off roofs and left electric and telephone wires in a tangle on poles and the ground. Even though the damage was heavy throughout the length and breadth of Live Oak and Lamar Peninsulas there was not a single life lost and only a few slight injuries. The wind blew from the land side and there were no inundating tidal waves as was the case in 1919.

MIDDLE PICTURE—Two-story building of the Rockport Mercantile Company of concrete block construction, which was wrecked by the storm. The back was caved in and the front blown off. The grocery department will be combined with the Red and White Store, Fred Bracht, manager, said this week.

LOWER PICTURE—What was once the sprawling Rockport Pavilion on the beach is now a total wreck. Its walls caved in and the roof fell in.

Two Boatmen Ride Out Storm On St. Charles

Jesse Cruz and John Velasquez, boatmen employed by Roy Moyston are believed to be the only men to ride out the hurricane aboard a boat in St. Charles Bay. They rode the Restless II, anchored with three lines far up the bay, while the wind estimated at 120 miles an hour churned up mountainous waves.

The Moyston boat was probably 20 miles closer to the storm center than Rockport. The men reported that the barometer on the boat dropped to a low of 28.50.

"We thought we were gone two or three times," said Cruz.

People Begin Task Of Rebuilding Damaged Property -- Cheerful In Thought It Could Have Been Worse

Powerful Wind That Blew In From 'Back Door' Failed To Play Return Engagement From Sea With Tidal Wave Accompaniment

MATERIAL SHORTAGE HINDERS REBUILDING

President Asked To Relax Priorities So That Materials May Be Secured For Rebuilding And Repairing Extensive Storm Losses

Citizens of this wind-battered section of the Texas Coast continue their work to bring back order out of chaos, cheerful in the thought that it could have been worse—much worse.

When a tropical hurricane howled in through Rockport's back door Saturday night this section experienced its worst wind-drubbing since the 'nineteen' storm deluged the town with mammoth tidal waves. Damage Saturday night and Sunday morning was greatly minimized when the wind blew in only from the landward side and did not play a return engagement from the water-side.

Center of the great circle of whirling wind, it's velocity placed by the weather bureau at 150 miles per hour, struck to the north of Rockport at Matagorda. The speed of the winds here that came in from the northwest and swung on around to the southwest was placed at 105 miles per hour.

Barometers here reached as low as 28.52 as the storm reached the height of its fury.

No lives were lost and no serious injuries were reported on Live Oak and Lamar Peninsulas.

Property damage ran into the thousands of dollars, but was light as compared to other sections of the coast to the northward, and even to the damage of inland cities unprepared for the blow.

After centering its full strength in the Matagorda-Port O'Connor area, the wide-spread storm moved inland and wrought great damage to farms, crops, livestock, cities and towns.

Winds upward of 70 miles per hour struck Victoria, Cuero, Yoakum, Gonzales, Nixon, Seguin, Luling, San Antonio and other cities. Damage to property ran into millions of dollars.

Greatest handicap at this time is lack of materials with which to repair damage. Cong. Richard M. Leberg is petitioning President Roosevelt to relax priority rules to allow citizens in this great war-production section of the Nation to rebuild their homes and businesses.

THIRTY-SIX HOUR WARNING GIVEN

Few people, including visitors here, left Rockport to flee from the storm, although ample warning was given. The Weather Bureau issued storm warnings shortly after noon Friday. Weather bulletins were issued frequently thereafter.

At 5 o'clock Saturday the ominous red, black-centered, hurricane warning flags were raised, giving several hours additional time for storm preparations and for people who desired to leave to get away from the coast.

The wind did not become dangerously strong until near midnight.

RED CROSS AID AVAILABLE

Emergency aid to several families was rendered by the local chapter of the Red Cross. Clothing, bedding and some groceries were provided where household goods were completely destroyed. In addition to local funds, $200 was ordered by the national organization for immediate relief.

Few families called for help from the Red Cross, according to A. C. Glass, chairman of the Aransas county chapter. Most people even those who suffered considerable loss, indicated that they would be able to maintain themselves.

A representative of the national

Red Cross was in Rockport Monday and again Wednesday, and will continue to investigate cases needing further aid. It is hoped that priorities will be lifted to the extent of allowing the Red Cross to restore some living quarters, windmills, poultry, livestock and necessary household goods.

Supplies have been requisitioned for 200 families, said E. C. Morgan, who is helping the Red Cross and Public Welfare Board by taking applications for aid. The amount of supplies and time of arrival were uncertain, he stated, because of transportation difficulties.

POWER RESTORED FEW HOURS AFTER BLOW

Work on reconstructing Rockport's power system began Sunday morning even before the wind quit blowing. Herbie Caraway, local Central Power and Light Co. manager did an excellent job in restoring electricity to the down-town section, thereby preventing an acute water shortage in the city system.

Electrical power failed in the south part of town shortly after midnight, and the whole town was in darkness at three a. m. Disruption of service was due to flying parts of buildings and trees being thrown against the distributors here. Seventy five service lines were on the ground Sunday morning according to Caraway.

An emergency C. P. & L. crew from Sinton aided in Rockport Sunday and power back into the town was restored at 10 a. m., with service restored on Main Street by six and about one half the town by eight. Crews from Corpus Christi worked here with Caraway Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The company reported service 99 per cent restored by Wednesday noon.

Solomon Islands—Where Japs Were Driven Out

Gun Girls of the RAF Are Doing Grand Job

A notable organization in Britain is the Women's Auxiliary Air Force service, which is attached to the Royal Air Force. They do all kinds of jobs short of piloting combat ships in action. Shown above (left) two WAAF girls load machine gun bullets into magazines that are installed in the planes. Center: Repairing a gun turret demounted from a bomber. Right: Girls of the RAF armory—angels of death—never give a thought to the grim implications of their job as they service the machine guns and cannon used in the daily fights over the English channel and France.

Trains for Double Revenge on Japs

C. R. Baker of St. Louis, machinist's mate first class (left), learns to use a tommy-gun at a Seabee base near Norfolk, Va., from which point he will soon depart to seek revenge for the death of two sons in the Pacific. One was killed with the army when Manila fell. The other is missing from the aircraft carrier Lexington, which went down in the Coral sea.

'Jungle Mudders' in Caribbean Outpost

This picture shows one of the phases in the life of U. S. troops stationed in the deep jungles of the Caribbean area. Stepping "out of character," these coast artillery "jungle mudders" now adopt the weapons and methods of the infantrymen, and are seen here charging through knee-deep mud. They take to mud and swampy terrain like ducks to water.

Map shows how Hitler's 1942 conquest of Russia nears the climax as his armies move into position in a pincer movement closing on Stalingrad. A million Nazi soldiers assaulted that vital city on the Volga river, closing in from two directions. By skirting the Caucasian mountains, Hitler's army can push on to the Caspian sea for a junction with the Japanese.

PACIFIC INVASION:
Costly to Japs

Despite heavy Allied air action, which cost the enemy one transport, six landing barges and probably a cruiser, Japanese shock troops made another landing in Milne bay on the island of New Guinea, 240 miles east of Port Moresby and less than 500 miles from the Australian mainland.

However, "Our ground forces anticipated this movement and are in contact with the enemy," a spokesman from General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia said. United Nations medium bombers and fighters heavily bombed and strafed Jap barges which were heading toward shore and Jap troops which already had landed. The aerial attack was carried out despite adverse weather conditions, the communique said.

Spokesmen acknowledged that the Japanese had put into action the airdrome at Buna, 200 miles northwest from Milne Bay on the north coast of New Guinea. They established a beachhead at Buna in July, then pushed south to Kokoda, within 60 miles of Port Moresby.

Solomon Thrust

The violent sea-air battle in the Solomon Islands saw the United States win the opening round. Land-based American dive bombers, torpedo planes and fighters were credited with forcing a battered Jap fleet to withdraw from Guadalcanal island in the southeast Solomons, less than a thousand miles from Australia, across the Coral sea.

In the original United States offensive in the Solomons, the American marine corps vanguard obtained beachheads on the island, overcoming enemy resistance and seizing an air field. Planes, bombs, torpedoes, ground crews and gasoline were brought in to repel a major invasion.

While a communique stated that results in the struggle for the strategic islands are "encouraging," it warned that a large scale sea battle still was in progress and that the outcome could not yet be determined. But one official expressed the opinion that "we are winning the second round of the battle of the Solomons."

ACTION IN EGYPT:

Transport Blasted

Striking at Marshal Erwin Rommel's preparations for a new offensive in Egypt, Royal Air Force fighters killed or disabled hundreds of enemy troops in a raid on transport columns west of El Alamein.

New Zealand troops saw fast action when they routed an Italian division on the same line, and United States bombers blasted Axis shipping in Suda bay, Crete and the Corinth canal in Greece.

Tension on the Egyptian front has mounted steadily. German tank movements were observed near the Qattara depression and Italian forces were attempting to concentrate their positions.

As the all-out battle of Egypt grew closer British newspapers described this front as equal in importance to Stalingrad. They pointed out that the smashing of Rommel's army would restore the Mediterranean command to the United Nations, whose forces then could start to close in on the enemy. According to the London Daily Mail, "The coming battle in Egypt may in the end reverse the fortunes of war in Russia." Indications are that Rommel will have the hardest fight in his life in the 80-mile stretch between El Alamein to Alexandria.

WAR RISK:

Improving Situation?

Indication that the convoy system for Atlantic shipping was showing improvement was reflected in a 5 per cent reduction of cargo war risk rates charged on certain voyages. Marine underwriters revealed that this was the first important reduction in war risk rates in many months. Trends had been increasingly upward since the submarine activity of the enemy had been intensified off our Atlantic coast.

Most important effect of the reduction would be in the trade between the United States and Brazil and Argentina where the previous rate has been cut from 25 to 20 per cent.

RED OFFENSIVE:

For Stalingrad Relief

Even while clerks and factory hands joined Red troops in the defense of Stalingrad, Russia's Central front armies began a counterattack in the German-held area northwest of Moscow, killing 45,000 enemy troops in the first 15 days of a drive that pushed back a Nazi salient 25 to 30 miles.

As Soviet troops battled for footholds within the streets of Rzhnev, the Germans were reported to have thrown fresh reserves into the battle but were compelled to retreat with heavy losses as Russian troops thrust westward. The Russians claimed the capture of 610 communities.

Despite the offensive action, which was intended to relieve pressure on Stalingrad, the situation in that industrial city was conceded to be critical. However, the Russians described it as "no worse."

CHINA:

Counter-Attack

In the provinces of Chekiang and Kiangsi the Chinese were fighting a determined counteroffensive to dislodge the Japs from important bases whence the United Nations might launch air raids on Japan.

This offensive was meeting with considerable success as the Chinese troops pushed toward Chusien, site of the biggest airfield in China and drove hard on Lishui and Sungyang, both vital points. In addition the Chinese forces had recaptured over a hundred mile strip of the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway. At one time the Japs had controlled this railroad in its entirety.

Biggest questions in the minds of military experts was where the Japs were sending their troops now being diverted from this Chinese front. Some sources were inclined to believe that they had gone to the South Pacific for the battle of the Solomons and New Guinea, while unofficial reports told of mass movements of troops toward the Russian back door.

Chinese leaders were on the lookout for a strategic retreat by the Japs which might have as its purpose the setting of a large-scale trap.

DRAFT:

A Forecast

Representative Sabath of Illinois, chairman of the house rules committee, believes that the waning months of the 77th congress will see the drafting of 18 and 19-year-old youths authorized by new legislation. This session of congress ends in January, 1943.

The congressman predicted that: "In all likelihood congress will be asked this session to permit the drafting of 18 and 19 year olds and will give its approval."

CEILINGS:

For Hogs, Cattle

As the Office of Price Administration worked out its plans for price ceilings on hogs and cattle, J. K. Galbraith, deputy administrator, told a delegation of large stock producers in Washington that revisions of this system would eliminate inequalities between different regions and different classes of buyers.

Meanwhile concurrence with the OPA plan was being considered by the department of agriculture. Ceilings were worked out in conjunction with representative groups of producers and OPA before submission to Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard.

Beef producers were assured by OPA that this agency would take no steps to discourage normal feeding and marketing of livestock.

"While feeders must exercise normal caution and avoid paying high prices for their feeders," said Deputy OPA Administrator Galbraith, "the working out of ceilings will be undertaken in close consultation with producers and with a full and complete recognition of the market relationships involved."

He said further that "feeders who buy carefully may look forward to the coming year with confidence."

DUKE OF KENT:

Dies in Action

The first casualty in England's royal family since the start of the war occurred in northern Scotland when a giant Sunderland flying boat crashed, bringing death to the duke of Kent, youngest brother of King George VI. With him died all but one of the crew, a tail gunner who was thrown clear of the wreck. The duke, fifth in succession to the throne, was 39 years old. On active military duty, he was the youngest of the four sons of Queen Mary and the late King George V. Married to Princess Marina of Greece in 1934, his three children were Prince Edward, 6; Princess Alexandra, 5; and Prince George, who was born last July 4. Prince George also bears the name of Franklin for President Roosevelt, his godfather.

BRAZIL:

Good Neighbors Speak

Just a week after Brazil's declaration of war against Germany and Italy, the Uruguayan government announced that the two South American nations would co-operate in a "common defense against possible aggression."

Thus Uruguay forged ahead of her South American neighbors in a show of solidarity with Brazil. The country's national defense ministry had been authorized to "adopt, in agreement with the government of Brazil, the necessary measures for the defense of the two countries."

ment with military authorities of Brazil, all measures designed for better efficiency in the common defense against possible aggressions."

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Caracciolo Parra Perez of Venezuela expressed his nation's "sincere sympathy and solidarity" with Brazil and announced that Venezuela automatically will treat Brazil as a nonbelligerent under a decree affecting any American nation that goes to war against the Axis.

BRIEFS:

ADVANCE: Seven months in advance of schedule, the 45,000-ton battleship, Iowa, greatest warship ever built, slid down the ways of the New York navy yard.

RETURNS: After a summer's visit to the United States and Canada, Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands was back in London.

TYPEWRITERS: An OPA order was issued forbidding (after September 15) the rental, lease or loan of typewriters manufactured since January 1, 1935, and bans the sale of typewriters manufactured since January 1, 1915.

UNITY: Meeting at their 65th annual convention in Detroit, members of the American Bar association heard Associate Justice Stanley Reed of the Supreme court call on them for lawyers to promote U. S. unity and lead the way so that a unified America could march on to victory.

FREE-FOR-ALL: A tempestuous session of the Louisiana state senate featured fistfights among legislators and spectators after a floor argument over the merits of a sales tax proposal for financing welfare services in New Orleans.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Just when it looks as though Norland Airways is through, Cruger finds a "scientist" named Frayne, who offers to pay well to be flown to the Anawotto, a river in Canada's barren North Country, where he hopes to find the breeding ground of the trumpeter swan. This good news helps to soften the blow when Cruger has to tell his partner and ace flyer, Alan Slade, that his application for overseas service with the army air corps has been turned down. Slade explains that he signed up because he thought they would lose the business. Cruger says he has bought a new Lockheed that will keep them going for a while. He and Alan are discussing their new client, who is apparently not inexperienced, having recently returned from an expedition to the Himalayas.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER II

"What was this man Frayne after in the Himalayas?" Slade asked.

"The Great Tibetan Sheep. Karnell, he explained, was his shikari on both occasions. But Karnell doesn't count. All he does, apparently, is supply the brawn. It's our man of science who supplies the brain in that outfit."

"Wasn't your nature-lover shooting wide of the mark when he went looking for sheep in winter? It's in spring and summer sheep come down, anywhere. Every hunter knows that."

Cruger's chair-shift was one of impatience.

"Don't worry about your passengers. Your business, Lindy, is flying. And if you feel that dream-eyed ornithologist is after gold, like all the rest of them, you'll think along another line when you've seen him. He's different. And before summer's over, you may be sure, he'll be calling for supplies."

"Should he go in there to starve?" questioned Slade.

"He won't starve," retorted the other. "He's well heeled, his papers are in order, and the Royal Mounted have okayed his excursion. Cruger's glance went to the window. "They'll be bringing over their stuff from the terminal any time now."

"Themselves?" Cruger nodded.

"It's too precious, apparently, for our port boys to handle. Before sundown they'll be stowing it aboard your ship, and when they do you'd better stand by and check up on their kit."

"Why?" Cruger shrugged.

"Well, let's say it's to make sure he doesn't give you an over-load."

Slade rebutted his flyer's coat.

"I'll be back from McMurray in two hours," he proclaimed. "And I'll check and double-check on that swan-stalker."

Cruger glanced up at the route map on the wall.

"An early start tomorrow should give you light for landing. It won't be easy flying, remember."

"I'll fly baby elephants to the Pole," Slade announced, "if it's going to keep this outfit on its feet."

Cruger's quiet smile was that of a man with a trump card still in his hand.

"But the important point," he pursued, "is that you're not the only one who didn't get to the Front this time."

He paused for a moment as though to give timing to a message too important to be lightly uttered. "I thought you'd like to know that Doctor Morlock's daughter didn't swing in with that Red Cross unit."

Slade turned away and looked at the wall map. It was taking time, apparently, for information so unexpected to be absorbed.

"How do you know that?" Slade demanded with just a trace of a tremor in his voice.

The older man's half-smile was quickly smothered.

"It came from Morlock himself. He'd the offer of a chair in medicine at the University of Manitoba and that girl of his was set on him getting out of frontier-life flying. I guess she felt he'd weaken if she stepped out and went over-seas. But the old boy stuck to his guns. He said he was needed in the North and would die with his boots on. And that meant only one thing for a girl like that. It meant she had to stick to her dad."

Even Cruger could smile a little at the newer light that crept into the Viking eyes.

"So she's not going to England," Slade repeated.

"No, she's flying to Coronation with her father tomorrow," Cruger said, as he picked up the envelope.

Slade's glance remained preoccupied. He had the look of a tired swimmer who had unexpectedly found solid ground under his feet.

Even the sunlight outside, when he swung open the door, seemed a little brighter. For there wasn't, after all, to be a wide Atlantic between him and Lynn Morlock.

He drew a deep breath and turned back to Cruger.

"You're right about this outfit," he said. "We're going to keep her going."

He swung the door shut on Cruger's smile.

Alan Slade, jolting over the three-mile trail between McMurray and Waterways, sat back in Cassie Olin's taxi and let the road and Cassie do their worst. But Cassie, he saw, knew how to handle her dust-

"Buyin' diamonds for your girl friend down the Basin?"

covered old jalopy, probably the most northerly taxicab, omitting Alaska, on the continent. For Cassie, who had driven an Arctic dog team in her time, was both stalwart of body and resolute of spirit. "Where'll I be droppin' you?" asked Cassie, as they rolled into the town's wooden-fronted main street.

"At Dillon, the jeweler's," Slade told her.

"Buyin' diamonds for your girl friend down the Basin?" Slade laughed.

"There's no such animal," he said, as he waved her good-by. But he was wondering, at the moment, if Lynn Morlock would be paying her customary visit to St. Gabriel's.

She'd be wanting supplies, before heading north. For the North was empty of much that was needed there. His present mission was evidence enough of that. It involved, he remembered, a wedding ring at a love-lorn mine-worker at El Dorado, a mine-worker impatient to travel in double-harness with a full-bodied Swede waitress who answered to the name of Atlin Olga.

For five years now, Slade also remembered, he had been an unattached shopping agent for the exiles along the new frontier. He had taken in Christmas turkeys and radio sets, dancing slippers and tobacco, compasses and clock-keys. He had swapped their beaver and muskrat pelts for layettes and cotton-flannel, and exchanged white foxskins for baby food and safety pins. He had matched yarn and learned how to spot service-weight silk stockings and select slips of the right tea-rose tint. He had sleuthed out needed machine parts and bought cough medicine and kidney pills.

So the purchase of a wedding ring, and even a wedding ring of the massiveness and diameter designated by the impatient groom, seemed merely an incident in the day's work. He laughed a little as he inspected the big ring in its velvet box.

His smile faded as he looked at his watch. His plane, he remembered, was awaiting his attention. He turned and looked about for Cassie's taxi. He was still diffidently searching the dusty street ends when he heard his name called.

"Alan!"

It quickened his pulse. For he knew that calling voice belonged to Lynn Morlock, even before he caught sight of her between the loungers fringing the shop fronts.

She was, he saw, almost running along the none too even sidewalk. Her hair, close-clipped and boy-like, shone mahogany-brown in the sunlight and she carried her familiar first-aid bag. There was neither alarm nor excitement on her face. But there was resolution in her stride.

"Alan, come with me, quick," she called over her shoulder, without slackening her pace.

"What's happened?" Alan asked as he swung in beside her.

"There's been a fight," she said, between breaths. "There's a man bleeding to death. At least that's the word they sent."

"Where is he?" asked Slade.

They turned up a side street, where the idlers, both Indian and white, could no longer gape after them.

"At the Blue Goose," was Lynn's answer. "It sounds like a severed artery."

Slade knew enough of frontier-town gambling joints and gin mills disguised as dance halls to realize what they might have to face.

"That's no place for a girl," he contended.

"I've been in worse," was Lynn's quick reply. "And you may have to help me."

"Why isn't the Padre attending to this?" he asked as he hurried on beside her.

A shadow crossed the girl's face. "You know how Father feels about drinking."

"But even a drunken man can die," protested Slade.

"I'm afraid Father would let him," was the girl's answer to that.

"He's no longer a doctor, where alcoholics are concerned. He's washed his hands of them. And nothing will ever change him."

Slade remembered something about that. It tied up, he recalled, with the hazy story of the Flying Padre's abrupt migration from a once-opulent city practice to the outposts of the Mackenzie Basin. Lawrence Morlock, he remembered, had his reasons for hating drunkenness. For as Slade was able to piece the story together, Lynn's father had been one of New York's most successful surgeons. He had flown high and flown fast, until the tragic death of his wife brought him up short.

The enemy he was fighting on a well-fortified front line dropped like a parachutist in his own home. Bewildered and stunned, but refusing to give ground, he had sought relief in over-work and alcohol. But one night when called from a night club for an emergency operation his hand had failed him and his patient, a pillar of Wall Street, had died on the table. That death, the surgeon always felt, was due to his own drunkenness. It rang the curtain down on all his earlier feverish scramble for wealth. He cabled his daughter Lynn, then in Switzerland, that he was giving up his practice and selling his city home. He quietly dropped out of his old life and, a year later, reappeared as a relief-worker when a flu epidemic was decimating the northern camps of Canada. His field broadened as he learned the need for medical service along the outer fringes of the New Frontier, and he equipped himself with a plane which was used in many a mercy flight.

His daughter Lynn was proving herself a chip of the old block. For when she realized her father was somberly happy in that work and definitely committed to what she accepted as a life of expiation, she quietly went in training as a nurse, equipped herself as a co-worker with the Padre, and joined him in his silent yet stoic campaign of redemption. She had stuck to him with a tender loyalty.

"If this is going to be a murder case," he contended, "why not notify the police?"

"It mustn't be murder," cried Lynn. To the man following her she looked reassuringly fearless in the slanting northern sunlight.

They must have been waiting for her in the Blue Goose. The door opened, expectantly, even before she reached it.

"Where is he?" the girl asked of the pock-marked man in his shirt sleeves. He closed and locked the door before answering.

"In here," he said with a side glance of hostility as Slade pushed in after the girl. The sound of a phonograph blaring out dance music in some outer room suddenly came to a stop. A bold-eyed woman, heavily rouged, backed away at the peremptory hand wave of the proprietor, who opened a second door and pointed inside, without advancing.

His first impression of the room, as he entered, was one of blood. There was blood on the cover of an overturned table, on the floor and on the summer parka worn by a figure half-lying and half-crouching along a stained wicker couch splashed with red.

Slade couldn't tell whether the man in the parka was being held up or held down by an aproned and yellow-faced bartender who sat with one arm about the wounded man and looked up at them with the round eyes of a bewildered rabbit as the girl with the bag ran to his side. It wasn't until she pushed the aproned man away that Slade recognized the face above the parka.

It was the parka that he recognized first. He promptly identified it as the garment that had been given to Slim Tumstead by Air-Commander Rollins-Benson on the occasion of a bush-fire flight in which Slim had proved both his flying ability and his fearlessness.

It was Slim Tumstead looking up at him with a one-sided and slightly sardonic smile.

"I'm all right," he stubbornly protested. But his voice was thin with weakness.

"Let's see," challenged Lynn, with her bag already open. Each movement was quick and decisive as she examined her patient. "Get me water," she commanded, without turning her head, "water that's been boiled."

Terror Killer, Motive Robbery, Hanged in London

RAF Cadet Murdered Four Women Within a Week, Attacked Two Others.

LONDON.—Delivering wine to a club in Piccadilly, in the almost cimmerian gloom of the blackout, one night last February, a London errand boy heard a woman scream. He flashed on an electric torch. In the momentary beam of light he saw a man dash from a doorway and vanish.

That man was hanged at Wandsworth prison the other morning, and as he died a heavy mantle of dread was lifted from the shoulders of the women of the metropolis. He was Gordon Frederick Cummins, 28-year-old married air cadet, who in a single week, within a two-mile radius of Piccadilly Circus, had slain and mutilated four women and tried to kill two others.

Recalls Jack the Ripper.

There had been nothing like the widespread terror he created since the name of Jack the Ripper was given to an unknown man who murdered and mutilated eight women in the East End between Christmas 1887 and July 1889. Women were afraid to venture out unescorted after dark.

Cummins' motive was robbery, inspired by vanity; he wanted more money with which to impress his friends. He had passed himself off as "the Honorable Gordon Cummins," pretending that he was the illegitimate son of a peer, and boasted of his amatory conquests.

The four murders he committed by strangling his victims. Three of them had admitted him to their apartments. The fourth was killed in a raid shelter. He was attacking a girl he had accosted when her screams caused the errand boy to turn his flashlight on the doorway where she had sought to elude her annoyance.

Protests Innocence.

Police who also had been attracted by her outcry picked up a service respirator on the doorstep. It bore Cummins' number, and by this he was easily traced to North London, where he was billeted with other cadets. He said he had lost it and denied ever being near the house where it was found.

But Scotland Yard men who had been scouring all London in search of the swift-acting killer pinned the shelter crime upon him. Particles of sand in the respirator were identified by the scientists of the police college as having come from the refuge. Fingerprints convicted him of the other three murders.

It was the theory of the Yard that he mutilated the women with the idea of deluding the detectives into the belief that a maniac was at large and thus throwing them off the trail.

In summing up the evidence, Justice Asquith, in the Old Bailey court, characterized the crimes as "sadistic sexual murders of a ghastly type."

Cummins, gripping the front of the dock, exclaimed: "I am absolutely innocent."

Country Doctor's Will Cancels All Bills Due

ETNA, OHIO.—The last wish of Dr. Charles D. Watkins, 78, who died recently after practicing medicine in this country hamlet for 55 years, was that all bills owed to him by his many patients be cancelled.

"Father was like that," said his daughter, Mrs. Irma V. Rector, of Columbus. "If he got the money, it was all right. And it was the same if he didn't get it."

The fee for rich and poor alike was 50 cents, that is, providing they could afford to pay at all. Often former patients would return after many years and "pay an old account" to the doctor.

Girl's Kindness Wins Her Estate

Former Employer Remembers Early Assistance.

LIMA, OHIO.—Kindnesses shown him by a former clerk during his first days in Lima were remembered by Charles Shannon, 68, local confectioner and maker of nostrums, before he ended his life here by taking poison.

Shannon had settled in Lima 20 years ago, stopping off here while en route from Virginia, where he had taken his wife for burial, and liking the city so well he decided to stay here. He heard of a small confectionery for sale, so he purchased it, later branching out into the making of "tar" syrups and cure-all compounds.

One of his first clerks was Ruth Primmer, who since had been married and had two children, to whom Shannon became very attached.

Six weeks ago she received a letter from Shannon asking her to bring the children to see him. When a few days ago she received another letter saying, in part, "...after many years I am going out of business," and inclosing the keys to Shannon's small shop, she became alarmed and informed police.

They visited the small shop and there found Shannon's body on his bed, an empty poison glass nearby. Coroner Harry Lewis said death was a suicide due to poisoning.

In a penciled note found in the bedroom, Shannon willed all his earthly goods, including his small store, to the little clerk who many years ago had aided him in getting his start here.

Swoon Saves Submarine Crew on Floor of Sea

LONDON.—The British Press association reported this strange incident:

A British submarine lay disabled on the ocean floor. After two days hope of raising her was abandoned. The crew, on orders of the commanding officer, began singing "Abide With Me."

The officer explained to the men that they did not have long to live. There was no hope of outside aid, he said, because the surface searchers did not know the vessel's position.

A sedative was distributed to the men to quiet their nerves. One sailor was affected more quickly than the others and he swooned. He fell heavily against a piece of equipment and set in motion the submarine's jammed surfacing mechanism.

The submarine went to the surface and made port safely.

The Press association said it had learned of the incident from a letter written by one of the crewmen to a relative.

Official sources declined comment.

Mother Left Her Estate To Dog, Daughter's Gift

WAUPACA, WIS.—Two years ago Mrs. Cecil Engbreton gave her mother, Mrs. Nina Berlinger, a bull terrier puppy named Lady Pooh.

Now Mrs. Engbreton, wife of the superintendent of schools at Rochester, Mich., is contesting her mother's will. It left Mrs. Engbreton nothing, but gave the entire estate of more than $75,000 to Lady Pooh.

It also stipulated that Mrs. Berlinger's former home, an imposing residence in Detroit's exclusive Gladstone avenue, be turned over to the dog. Lady Pooh, under terms of the will, would be cared for by a servant, Tatiana Rhune.

DEFECTS IN CHIMNEYS A COMMON CAUSE OF FIRES

"AS A result of a fire in our house a new chimney was built from the basement up," writes a correspondent. "It has two flues for the furnace and a fireplace. Two months after the new chimney was built, the mortar between the bricks of the fireplace lining is dropping out. Does that mean that the chimney is still unsafe?"

With poor workmanship showing at the top of the chimney and at the fireplace, you can suspect trouble anywhere between. If the contractor is a man of responsibility, he should certainly undertake to put that chimney in proper condition, for he must know that a defective chimney is a fire hazard. You can make a smoke test that will disclose any leaks that there may be. Build small fires, first in the fireplace and then in the furnace, and when in full blaze, put scraps of tar paper or asphalt roofing on them; anything that will make a dense smoke. When the smoke is coming out of the chimney, put a piece of wet carpeting over the flue to force the smoke to seek other outlets. If there are breaks in the masonry and defective mortar joints, smoke will escape through them, and be noticed in the attic and other parts of the house. If the joints are tight, smoke will come out through the heater and the fireplace.

Bungalow Heater.

Question: What kind of a heating system would you advise for my bungalow?

Answer: If the bungalow is to be permanently occupied during the winter, a compact hot water heating system would give excellent results. But if the house is to be used only occasionally for week ends and holidays, I recommend some form of circulating hot air heater. As this system contains no water, there is no danger of freezing pipes, so that the job of pipe-draining on leaving the house is eliminated. Another point is that heat comes up almost as soon as the fire is started.

Home Plastering Job

Question: I have large areas to be plastered, walls and ceilings. The estimate I received is much too much and I believe I could do it myself if I could get information on the proper mix.

Answer: You will need to know more about plastering than the mixtures. Printed information on the subject can be obtained from the National Lime association, Washington, D. C., and the Gypsum association, 211 West Wacker Drive, Chicago. With no experience, my advice is to have a plasterer do the job; you will run into difficulties, particularly on the ceilings.

Wax on Linen

Question: Our young daughter decorated a linen tablecloth with red wax crayons. How can these marks be removed?

Answer: Sponge with carbon tetrachloride or other spot remover. If the stain is stubborn, rub with a colorless grease, such as white vaseline, and repeat the sponging. This should take out all of the wax; if the stain remains, bleach with peroxide of hydrogen or a weak solution of Javelle water. Follow by thorough rinsing. If the tablecloth is valuable, however, it would be safer to send it out to a good dry cleaner.

Curled Rug

Question: I have a rug that is curling on the ends and is getting worse. How can I make it lie flat?

Answer: The sizing has given out. To resize the rug, stretch it upside down on the floor, where it can remain for 24 hours, tacking it lightly into place. Spray the back with a solution of one-half pound of chip glue in two parts of water, and allow to remain until thoroughly dry. A thin coat of white shellac can be used instead of glue.

Floor Finish

Question: Do you recommend a "seal" for the finish of a new oak floor? If the floor is first sanded with coarse and then fine sandpaper, must it be sanded again after the seal is applied?

Answer: A seal is an excellent finish for a floor, provided it is applied according to the manufacturer's instructions, which will tell you whether or not the first coat of seal must be sanded.

Cleaning Casein Paint

Question: Can walls painted with cold water casein paint be cleaned, or must they be repainted?

Answer: While ordinary casein paint is not waterproof, it can usually be cleaned by light sponging without injury. Make a test behind a heavy piece of furniture or other inconspicuous place.

Casein Paint

Question: If walls are finished with casein paint and it is later desired to paper, must the paint first be removed?

Answer: Not if the paint is of good quality, for it is resistant to water and will not be softened by the wallpaper paste.

Farms for Sale

Question: To what office should I write to get a list of Federal Loan farms for sale in southeastern Wisconsin and northeastern Illinois?

Answer: You can get that information from your bank.

THINGS for You TO MAKE

BEAUTY comes to the linen closet in fascinating pairs when pillow slips are embroidered with these new motifs. At top, there is a picture treatment, unusual and interesting. Next—a scalloped band of dainty flowers in all white is effectively relieved by pastel center flowers. For the third pair, the perennial butterfly emerges in a new and lovely design; lastly, pots of tulips furnish distinctive embroidery in cross stitch.

You'll agree there is beauty in all four designs, and you'll be glad to know they are all on one usable-several-times transfer—29344, 15 cents. Send your order to:

Mr. Chu's Name Is Not One to Be Sneezed At!

At a United China Relief dinner Mr. Kah Chu, prominent business man from Foochow, China, was scheduled to make a speech. Before that event began the master of ceremonies came over, very solicitously asked Mr. Chu how to pronounce his name. Mr. Chu smiled, suggested:

"If you will remember 'kerchow' I think the association will help you get it right."

The toastmaster thanked him, rose a few minutes later to introduce the speaker.

"This evening," he said, "we are very proud to present Mr. . . ."

He fumbled around in his subconscious a moment for the association, then came out triumphantly with:

" . . . Mr. Sneeze."

In the Navy a floor is a "deck," doors are "bulkheads," downstairs is "below," and a cigarette is a "Camel." At least, Camel is the favorite cigarette among Navy men as it is among men in the Army, Marines and Coast Guard. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) And a carton of Camels is their favorite gift. Your local dealer is featuring Camel cartons for service men, now. And now is the time to send that carton.—Adv.

New York Woman Revisits Childhood Scenes

Mrs. Mamie Dellahant Campbell and her son, Dr. Andrew Campbell, of New York City, were visitors in Fulton last week in the home of Mrs. W. G. Cline.
Mrs. Campbell was born here, leaving when she was a small child.
Her father was one of the organizers of the Fulton Packery, one of the important business institutions during the early days of the town.

Marion McElveen Stationed At Camp Wolters

Soldier Marion McElveen will probably keep right on handling mail in the army as he had been doing in the Post Office here before going into the service. Uncle Sam found out right away of his experience and he is now at Camp Wolters, Mineral Wells, where he will have a three month training period in clerical work.
Marion writes that the army food is excellent there, and that he likes the life, except for "so much walking and drilling". He is the only one of the Rockport boys in his induction group who was sent to Camp Wolters.
Mrs. McElveen is remaining in San Antonio for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Clarke of West Columbia visited Miss Katie
Lee Clark Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Johnson of Brownsville spent the week-end visiting Mrs. Johnson's mother,
Mrs. Roy Court.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Sparks and daughters, Clydine and Nancy Sue of Refugio spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Sparks and family.

Rev. Alfred Guyon and son, Fred
L. Guyon of Uvalde were visitors in Rockport Monday.

Father Kelly Is Host To Dinner

The Rev. J. H. Kelly was host to a seafood dinner in the rectory of the Sacred Heart church Wednesday evening.
Guests of the occasion were
Bishop E. B. Ledvina and Bishop
M. S. Garriga of Corpus Christi;
the Rev. Adolph Marx of Catholic University, Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Smith of San Antonio; the Rev. Herbert Bockholt and William Disney.

"Knit Two, Purl Two" Group Doubles, Everybody Knits

Believe it or not, a soldier in camp knitted a sweater for his wife back home, the papers told about it. But that won't happen here because all the women here are learning to knit.
Yarn for 11 more sweaters was issued from Red Cross supplies
Thursday, according to Mrs. Fred Booth, chairman of the knitting class. They are Mrs. J. H. Mills,
Miss Edith Eldridge, Mrs. Leslie
Sontag, Mrs. L. W. Hunt, Mrs. Albert Collier, Mrs. Stephen Bettley,
Mrs. Charles Powell, Mrs. Paul
Dupuy, Mrs. E. E. McFadden, Mrs.
Everett Brundrett, Mrs. T. A. Mc-
Vicar.
Mrs. Booth offers to teach the men, too, since hearing the radio skit in which the young surgeon recommended knitting as one of the best possible exercises for keeping the fingers nimble.

John Haynes Writes Optimistic Letter From Marlin

"I am really in better shape than I expected to find myself", writes John W. Haynes from his hospital bed in Marlin, following complete clinical examinations. "The diagnosis shows sciatica, bad tossils and a slight injury at the base of my spine, otherwise I am
O K and expect to be feeling better soon."
In the letter to the Rev. Almus
D. Jameson, Haynes expressed appreciation to his friends here who assisted him in securing hospitalization. "I am really indebted to the good people of Rockport", he stated, "It's more than I can ever repay but I shall try to live so that their faith in me will be a good investment."

SPARK'S COLONY NOTES

Mrs. W. R. Stephens spent last week in Corpus Christi visiting her daughter, Mrs. Roy Cook.
Burney Tedford and family
Portland were over Sunday visiting his mother, Mrs. E. Smallwood, and reported the storm not as bad
there as in his community.
Mrs. Boyd Foster left Wednesday for Nashville, Tenn., where she will join her husband. From there they will go to Indiana where Foster is to be employed on a government job.
Melvin Jones of Port O'Connor and Marion Johnson of Fulton were in the Colony Sunday to see how their families fared during the storm.
Isom Gibson has moved to the house vacated by L. F. Clark of the Market street road.

Jeff Jeter Returns From Visit With Sisters

Jeff Jeter returned Friday from where he visited his two sisters,

Miss Beth Jeter and Miss Mabel Jeter.

J. D. Irons Passes Away Thursday

J. D. Irons, 80, stepfather of J.
P. Hanway, died of heart failure at his home in San Antonio Thursday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Han-way had gone Tuesday when they learned of his failing health, and were nearby when he passed away quietly in his sleep.
Burial took place Saturday in Tyler, where Irons was in the grocery business for 20 years. Surviving are one son, J. P. Hanway of Rockport; and a daughter, Mrs. W.
E. Farmer of Tyler; and several grandchildren.
Born in Illinois, Irons passed his 80th birthday on August 1. His health had been excellent until a very few days before his death. On his visits to Rockport it was not unusual for him to continue in fine fishing form long after younger men had tired out. He insisted on doing the work about his home
even to mowing the lawn.
Irons had made his home in San Antonio for the past twenty years.
In 1927 he purchased a cottage here near the Episcopal church as a summer home. Since that time he had been a regular visitor, because fishing was a favorite sport and he had made many friends here.

From where I sit ...
by Joe Marsh

WHEN I drop into Sam Abernethy's store, I usually come away with something worth remembering.

Sam's our town's most successful storekeeper and he's not one to do much talking, unless he figures he's really got something to say.

Last evenin' he said plenty.

Stranger was in the store. And Ben Ryder, Homer Bentley and some others were talkin' about the scrap collection when this feller sort of horned in ...

"I hear these scrap collections are a lot a bunk," he says. "Fact of the matter is, this junk they're gatherin' ain't no use for makin' steel. Just a waste of time gettin'
it together ..."

At that point Sam steps in.

"Jest a minute," he says, fixing him with a cold and steely eye.
"May I inquire where you got them so-called facts?"

The stranger hems and haws,
and Sam advances on him grim and unsmilin'.

"Name your authority, sir," he says. And he wasn't kiddin'! "Tell us, where did you get all this inside, private information?"

Well, sir, I never saw Sam so mad since Lem Martin's dog chased the cat into the pickle barrel. And I guess I never saw a man crawfish out of a place fast as that fellow did.

Thinking it over afterwards, I came to the conclusion that Sam's got the real system for handling folks who throw facts and figures around free and easy like.

Frinstance, I've noticed there's some pretty fancy fact and figure jugglin' done by some of those who oppose the right enjoyed by millions of decent people to drink a friendly glass of beer when they want to.

Lately I've been asking these folks the same kind of questions that Sam asked that rumormongerin' stranger. Try it yourself, next time you hear anybody making derogatory remarks—whether it's against the war effort ... or just against beer.

Every ton of iron and steel scrap salvaged saves two tons of iron ore, one of our most precious national resources. GET IN YOUR SCRAP.

Lost and found columns of Tokio newspapers are crowded ed these days. Every time an American buys a War Bond, the Japs lose face. Buy yours 10% every pay day.

"What's it good for?"
"Guns, tanks, and maybe part of a plane"

JUNK

needed for War

In the attics and cellars of homes, in garages, tool sheds, and on farms, is a lot of Junk which is doing no good where it is, but which is needed at once to help smash the Japs and Nazis.

Scrap iron and steel, for example. Old radiators, lengths of pipe, refrigerators, garbage pails, broken garden tools...

It may be rusty, old "scrap" to you, but it is actually refined steel, with most impurities removed--and can be quickly melted with new metal in the form of pig iron to produce highest quality steel for our war machines.

Even in peacetime our Nation relied on scrap to provide about 50% of the raw material for steel. Now production of steel has gone up, UP, until today America is turning out as much steel as all the rest of the world combined.

But unless at least 6,000,000 additional tons of scrap steel is uncovered promptly, the full rate of production cannot be attained or increased; the necessary tanks, guns, and ships cannot be produced.

The rubber situation is also critical. In spite of the recent rubber drive, there is a continuing need for large quantities of scrap rubber. Also for other waste materials and metals like brass, copper, zinc, lead, and tin.

America needs your active assistance in rounding up these materials. The Junk which you collect is bought by industry from scrap dealers at established, government-controlled prices.

Will you help?

First--collect all your waste material and pile it up.

Then--sell it to a Junk dealer, give it to a charity, take it yourself to the nearest collection point, or get in touch with your Local Salvage Committee.

If you live on a farm, consult your County War Board or your farm implement dealer.

Throw YOUR scrap into the fight!

JUNK MAKES FIGHTING WEAPONS

MATERIALS NEEDED

- Scrap iron and steel.
 - Other metals of all kinds.
 - Old rubber.
 - Rags, Manila rope, burlap bags.
 - Waste Cooking Fats--Strain into a large tin can and when you get a pound or more, sell to your meat dealer.
- NEEDED ONLY IN CERTAIN LOCALITIES:
Waste paper and tin cans, as announced locally.
NOT NEEDED at this time: Razor blades--glass.

No Casualties As Storm Rips And Tears Buildings

Looking Southward along the East side of Main Street Sunday morning after the storm spent several hours banging against buildings.

Minus a steeple Sunday was the Presbyterian Church. The super structure toppled during the early hours of Sunday morning.

Two Bracht buildings were damaged heavily as shown here. On the right is the rear of the large two story building used for storage and at left is the Rockport Mercantile Building.

IT COULD BE! The sign on this cafe just out of Aransas Pass says "Atlantic Cafe". Torrential rain that accompanied the storm left many places surrounded by water in the vicinity of Aransas Pass.

task of restoring electrical service to this section, C. P. and L. workmen employed the use of men, trucks, tractors and airplane. The plane was used by a company foreman to locate linemen and ground crews who plunged into the marshy back bay country to repair lines. Power was re-established in Refugio late Wednesday.

WATCHES KEPT AS HURRICANE HOWLS

Throughout Saturday night several groups of men kept watch and stood ready to give assistance wherever needed. Judge B. S. Fox headed a group that patrolled and established the court house as their headquarters. Fire Chief Edward Barnard and several members of the Emergency Squad held forth at the fire house and also patrolled. Another group, including County Attorney Emory Spencer, Captain Marshall V. Clark of the Game Department, Leon Bullington, Chief Boatswain's Mate C. L. Grant of the Coast Guard, Jack Blackwell, Jim Hague and Gene Shults stayed in W. B. Pridy's office, making frequent trips out over town and keeping in constant touch with Corpus Christi to aid in following the route of the storm. Border Patrolmen cruised about all night.

COURT HOUSE AND SCHOOL BUILDING REFUGES

Scores of people left unroofed and shaking homes during the night for safer lodging at the court house and school building. Rescue squads did effective work in getting people out of dangerous areas and assisting them to places of security.

ROCKPORT MERCANTILE BUILDING WRECKED

Worst wrecked building in the city was that of the Rockport Mercantile building, which housed a grocery store operated by Fred A. Bracht and a department store operated by Grossman Bros. The Bracht building in the rear of the mercantile was also badly damaged. Both buildings were of concrete block and brick construction. The Grossman store is being closed out and the Bracht grocery business will be consolidated with the Bracht Red & White store.

The Post Office building was wrecked, its front blown entirely out and the roof badly damaged. Awnings were blown off and windows crashed in along the east side of main street occupied by Kaufman's store, the post office, Sparks Dry Goods, Hunt's Barber Shop, Modern Market, Ahl's Bakery, Hunt's Cafe, Bruhl's Drug Store, Hazels Confectionery and Sorensons Store.

Both the Riteway and Fred's laundry were wrecked and put out of commission for a few days. Roofs were badly damaged on the

High School Football Schedule Cancelled

Intra Mural Athletics Will Be Encouraged

Intra mural athletics will replace the usual football program of Rockport High School for the duration, according to R. E. Black, superintendent, today. OPA regulations have been made which forbid the use of school busses for transportation of teams or bands, or for any purpose except the transportation of students to and from school.

Black and Jim T. Mobley, coach, attended a meeting of district officials in Odem Wednesday, at which the schedule for District 35-B, including Rockport, Odem, Ingleside, Mathis, Bishop, Woodsboro, Gregory and Banquette, was cancelled. The local board approved the action at a meeting last night.

The saving of tires and the fact that towns of less than 5,000 population and within 10 miles of the coast line are not allowed to use flood lights for night games, made the action necessary.

An enlarged athletic program between classes will be carried out, Black said. And teams organized in the town will be encouraged. The board placed the facilities of the school at the disposal of such teams.

Sacred Heart School Opens Thursday

The Sacred Heart school will enroll students Thursday, Sept. 10, according to the Rev. J. F. Kelly, pastor of Sacred Heart Church.

Storm damage to the convent will delay the opening of school for two days, it being previously planned to begin Tuesday. The school building was unhurt by the storm.

Marshall V. Clark returned Friday from a business trip which took him to Dallas, Fort Worth and Austin. W. B. Arnold, Corpus Christi, made the trip with him.

ELECTRIC SERVICE speeds OUR VICTORY

- From the first blueprint ... to bomber ... to action, Electric Power speeds the perfection of America's air power.
- In the airplane factories of North Texas and in the training fields and military posts of South and Southwest Texas, Electric Power is equally important in making America supreme in the air.
- In every other war industry—in Texas and in the nation—Uncle Sam outproduces the Axis because our country has the greatest supply of electric power in the world.
- This vast supply of power didn't just happen. Fairy tales to the contrary, Electric Power is not a natural resource, for seven-eighths of it has been built-up by business management under government regulation—by men with a real incentive to work, create, succeed—and by the savings of millions of Americans invested in the electric industry.
- No military project in South and Southwest Texas has been delayed one moment for lack of dependable, low-cost power. The men and women of CPL, through their efforts and the funds supplied by thousands of stockholders and bondholders, are doing their part to speed victory.
- Like many another American business, Central Power and Light Company grew to its position of service under proved and practical business management. That way of life is part of what we Americans are fighting for—and a big reason why we'll win!

Here's what happens to hurricane warning flags when they go through their prediction. The picture was made at Corpus Christi Sunday morning by Doc McGregor.

Shown here is an old landmark at Gregory that was razed by the storm.

"YOU brought out an important point in connection with Carl Hubbell," writes Old Timer, "that I don't think you stressed enough. This was about Hubbell after 20 years of pitching, 15 years as a big leaguer, still trying to learn something new or something better."

"I always knew that Carl Hubbell was one of the smartest pitchers in baseball. This proves that he is even smarter than I thought he was. For the great majority, especially those who are above the average in skill, think they know most of it. They are no longer interested in learning something new and something better."

Carl Hubbell

"This is a great human weakness. Too many think they know enough when no one knows much. Especially in these days no one knows nearly enough."

"What a fine thing it would be to have many more people adopting Carl Hubbell's method of still trying to learn after so many years at the top."

The Meager Minority

This happens to be 100 per cent true. We'll take the argument back to sport.

Those who happen to lack certain qualifications in the way of skill or knack, get discouraged too easily and give up.

They either lack the determination to keep trying or they fail to understand how much they might learn from others that would carry them out of the rut.

Many of those who happen to be rigged out with speed or skill or the winning knack take it for granted they are approaching the superman class and so need no further instruction or improvement.

There never was a human being who knew it all, or anything even approaching the ultimate.

You'll find that Cobb and Tilden were still experimenting, studying, working on new angles after more than twenty years of championship competition.

We could also name a number of others who stopped learning quickly and showed no particular improvement in later years.

They had nothing to learn from coaches or trainers.

Old timers were jokes. They already had the answers.

Sarazen Speaks

"One of the big thrills I've gotten out of golf," Gene Sarazen says, "is this—I've learned something every year I've played."

"I've found out that things I thought were important 20 years ago are not so important after all. I've found other things I paid little attention to meant a lot."

"Hagen was always a great guy in this respect. He was always trying to learn something that might improve his game. After he had been Open champion, I saw him one day taking a lesson, or at least friendly advice, from Harry Vardon on how to play a certain type of shot. Walter never thought he knew it all, or any big part of it."

"I've tried to learn something that would help my play for the last ten or fifteen years. I thought as a kid I knew most of it."

"It was only when I began to find out how little I really knew that I started winning again after a lapse. You get a lot of foolish and useless advice. But here and there you can pick up something that will help a lot."

Walter Camp and Pudge

Years ago Walter Camp told me an interesting experience he had had with Pudge Heffelfinger, a football star who lasted over 30 years.

"Pudge was so good," Camp said, "that I was afraid he would be another know-it-all. In place of that he kept coming to me for more advice on guard play. I showed him three new variations. Later on he came back and told me he had learned four new angles. One of these was the possibility of the running guard. How many people know that Pudge Heffelfinger had worked out and developed the correct method of the running guard around 1889 or 1890?"

All I know is that as late as 1921 or 1922 Heffelfinger, then 53 years old, kept telling Bo McMillin, then 22, to speed up his start and give him a chance to lead that interference. Ask Bo.

"The more you know, the easier any game is," an old-time trainer said recently. "You can save yourself so much and last so much longer. You can often handle superior physical power and even greater natural skill by knowing more than your rival does. But this can only come from trying to learn everything you can as you go along."

Washington, D. C.
IMPROVED NAVAL POSITION
Behind the Solomon Islands battle are some optimistic naval facts, entirely aside from the announcement of victory. These facts had to be very carefully considered even before U. S. naval chiefs started to invade the Solomons.

One of these naval facts is that the Japs have suffered very severe losses in cruisers. Although it has escaped public notice, U. S. forces have been bumping off this fast, important type of warship with deadly regularity, so that Jap cruiser strength is now cut at least in half, perhaps more.

Another known naval fact is that the Japs have lost approximately half of their airplane carriers. And with air power what it is today, this is the type of vessel they can least afford to lose.

On the American side of the picture is the fact that U. S. repairs of ships sunk or damaged at Pearl Harbor have been miraculously swift.

All this obviously was taken into consideration before the United States started a major engagement and the offensive in the South Pacific. For Admiral King had to calculate the risk of the Jap admirals rushing a large force to the Solomon Islands.

Simultaneously he also had to figure the risk of a Jap attack on various other vital points—Midway, Alaska, Hawaii, even the continental United States.

Top admirals these days do not take chances. Not when the fate of a nation depends on them. Therefore, it requires only a mathematician to figure that the scale of American strength in the Pacific has turned. It reached its low ebb just after Pearl Harbor, when the navy was unable to do anything about the Philippines, Singapore, or Java.

But now the Battle of Midway has shown that Hawaii and the West coast can be defended by land-based planes. No Jap ship dares come near land-based planes without committing suicide.

This leaves a reinforced fleet to operate in the Pacific. Top naval men are not doing any crowing yet. But at least the naval picture seems to counterbalance some of the bad news from Russia—which is going to get a lot worse.

BURIED SILVER

Ten years ago, President Roosevelt and Cordell Hull held a series of discussions with the foreign ministers of Europe in preparation for the London Economic conference, at which one of the chief proposals of the United States was world use of silver.

At these conferences, the late Senator Key Pittman, of the great silver state of Nevada, droned through a regular 45 minute lecture on silver which American experts knew almost by heart and which put Hjalmar Schacht, German finance minister, to sleep. After Pittman had finished, the German minister woke up with a start, hastily brushed aside silver.

"We accept silver. Now this is what we want in return."

The London Economic conference was a dismal failure. But the United States had committed itself so completely to silver in these preliminary talks, that it undertook a silver program, which actually meant that the world sold its silver to us at an artificial price and we buried it in the ground at West Point, N. Y. It was a fine thing for Mexico, China and Canada and a great victory for Senator Pittman and the Rocky Mountain states. Also it resulted in the U. S. treasury accumulating two and a half billion ounces of silver—other than coin.

Today, however, there is a shortage of industrial silver. And yet the treasury will not open up the giant hoard of silver gathering mold at West Point.

Shortage Amid Plenty.

What has happened is this. About 5,000,000 ounces of silver monthly is being mined in the United States, which is ample to care for war needs, but not enough for ordinary commercial needs, especially for the silver industry of New England.

The silver industry, which makes knives, forks, and household ware, formerly used alloys and critical materials—all of which have now been dispensed with. However, silver is not a critical material. There is plenty mined for the war effort but not enough to supply the 80,000,000 ounces needed annually for the silver industry.

So New England silversmiths now ask that they be permitted to buy a mere 80,000,000 ounces out of the two and a half billion ounces which the treasury has buried.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Though the U. S. navy gave the royal run-around to the Sea Otter, Germany is now reported building exactly this type of shallow-draft, automobile-engined boat for use on the Danube, the Black and Caspian seas—against Russia.

When the WPB made a survey of junk dealers it found 6,000,000 pounds of "scrap" silk stockings on hand. This is a "gold mine" for making silk bags to hold gunpowder for the navy.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Don't Divorce an Unfaithful Father

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

All this time my husband has regarded Alma as merely another child; now he wants her for his wife and has asked me for a divorce.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

IN the many years during which I have been writing these articles, one question has been asked frequently—perhaps more frequently, than any other. It is "Is infidelity a justification for divorce, when children are involved?" My answer has inevitably been "no."

The women who have no children don't ask this question. They simply get their divorces. It is when there is a small son or daughter in the family that the agonizing problem presents itself, and that a woman's decision to seek a divorce brings infinite misery to the innocent as well as the guilty.

Possibly very high spiritual and religious grounds might be cited as reasons against such divorces; but these are not the grounds upon which I base my position. It is based solely upon human happiness. A woman, who preserves the outward dignity of her home, saves her children the spiritual disturbance of losing faith in their father, maintains her position as wife, mother and house manager, despite inward heartbreak and disillusionment, is in the end far happier than the woman who breaks all ties, pulls up roots, scars and horrifies young minds with devastating revelations of the details of marital failure.

Some Harsh Descriptions. The proof of this is all about us. To justify herself in the step she takes a woman describes her faulty spouse as nothing less than a monster. Keep check some time on the number of your divorced friends who describe their ex-husbands as fiends, mental cases, moral degenerates. Their own mothers can't stand them. Their clubs have expelled them. They ought to be in institutions.

"Ann," I said once to a friend who was in course of being divorced, "how could you tell Tommy and Ellen that Tom struck you?" "Well," she answered defensively, "he might as well have struck me as he has said some of the things he did."

This is typical. The accusing woman lowers herself; she becomes vituperative and spiteful. Only a new great love, accompanied with understanding and patience and gentleness can restore her to a normal attitude toward life. She does not often find that love; she is in no condition to find it.

So my advice to her is to stick to it. To stop suspicion, to conquer sensitivity, to accept facts. Tom, the dear, attentive, delightful companion of only a few years past, loves another woman. That part of Mary's life is over; the joyous, beloved, confident part. She has lived only for him, adored her son and daughter partly because they were also his. It hasn't been enough; it hasn't saved her.

Nothing can save Mary from the bitter humiliation of knowing that she hasn't been able to hold her man. Divorce won't save her that; divorce will only advertise it to the whole world. Divorce hands all the trump cards to the new sweetheart; the latter grabs them easily, and a few days after the divorce is granted she marries Tom, to his enduring wretchedness and hers.

Mary is also wretched. Wretched as she lives a lopsided, lonely life with the children, sharing their ceases and applause at six o'clock and going to bed at nine. More wretched if she marries someone who doesn't understand them or love them.

THE LESSER EVIL

The woman who chooses divorce as the solution of her marital problems runs the risk of having to face even greater unhappiness. And if there are children, even infidelity is not sufficient cause for her to make such a choice. She must face heartbreak and suspicion and yet remain calm. She must not let the loss of the confidence and love of the man she married disturb the comfort and serenity of his home. That is, of course, asking a great deal, but by following this course rather than the other one of divorce she will avoid adding her mistake to his. The mere semblance of a happy home is bad enough, but in this case it is the lesser evil.

Today's mail brings me this letter.

"I am a woman of 34, married just ten years. I idealized Rob for years before we were married and for years afterward. We have two beautiful girls, eight and five. We four have been inseparable, loving, admiring each other, always happy together. Seven months ago there was a change."

"The girl who has taken my place in my husband's heart is only 18. She is orphaned, my husband's ward. She is very beautiful, innocent and artless in manner, and rich. To Robert the thought of possessing all this loveliness, youth, charm and the added independence is evidently acting like an intoxicating wine. He is completely bewitched. Alma makes no secret of her passionate devotion to him. Since she was very small she has been in the habit of kissing him, sitting on his knee, ruffling his hair. She continues all this. All this time, until now, he has regarded her as merely another child; but now he wants her for his wife."

It Never Lasts.

"I know the wreckage of his life that would follow this step. Alma is shallow, flirtatious, self-centered as most little beauties of her age. She loves to pout and tease; she wants to go to Hollywood to study for the films and he has promised to take her, if only Sally will be an angel and say 'yes!' His infatuation for her will last only as long as she chooses to flatter him and be sweet; then some younger man will come along, and Rob, reputation and practice destroyed, wife and children alienated, will be left in the ruins of his own life. Rob is just 40."

"The alternative to my shrieking at him, as I sometimes want to do, 'Take her and get out; I never want to see either of you idiots again!' is the bitter one of living with a silent, resentful man, whose attitude will be that I have destroyed his one chance for happiness in life. That my own life is destroyed, I know. But there are my girls, innocent and sweet and completely unconscious of all this. Until very lately their father's devotion to them, from the very hour of their birth, has been the admiration of all our friends."

"I can send Alma away; indeed it is already arranged that she is to go to a dramatic school in southern California. But what sort of a husband would I have after all this? What am I to do?"

Divorce will only bring misery to you, Sally, and in the long run to him, too.

MEXICAN WOMEN IN WAR

HYDE PARK.—Miss Mary Winslow, in the Office of the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs, came to see me in Washington the other day to tell me about her trip to Mexico, which she had undertaken at the invitation of a group of Mexican women's organizations. They called a mass meeting of women and Miss Winslow showed me some of the handbills used at it. They seemed striking in their make-up and extremely concise in the way in which they expressed the reasons for women to take an active part in the war situation.

The first handbill simply stated: "Your country calls you," and then listed creeds and political parties. However, it had underneath them the simple phrase: "If you are Mexicans, to defend the liberty which you have created, your country calls you." In this way was emphasized the unity of interest of all creeds and political parties. A second list listed the various things Nazi-Fascism would wipe out, dramatizing thus in the simplest and most direct manner, not only unity, but the reasons why unity could and should exist.

LOCAL ELECTIONS

I have a letter from a woman, which tells me of a local political situation. In the primaries of her party, she quite evidently suspects one candidate of being pro-Nazi, and urges me to investigate the circumstances of her particular locality. I do not think it is possible for anyone, not even the leaders of a political organization, really to know in detail the exact situation in every locality. That is why we hold primaries, so that the people who live in the locality may have the opportunity to choose the best man as they see him and know him.

People who are detached from party organizations can study published principles and can stand for certain general ideas and actions within groups. But where the individual localities are concerned, it is the people who live in those localities who have to weigh the real virtues of their candidates. Sometimes neither candidate seems good enough, and they may even have to vote against their own party in the final election. The value of democracy lies in the fact that good or bad government has its roots in the localities where people know each other and where they account for their actions to their neighbors.

DELIGHTFUL POEM AND LETTER

I have a delightful letter in my mail, which reads:

"Dear Mrs. Roosevelt, 'I am sending you a copy of a poem two of us soldier boys wrote while in the Sixth Evacuation hospital. This poem expressed the thoughts of every soldier whose loved ones neglect to mail that necessary letter. This poem is our humble effort to tell the people of the U. S. how we soldiers actually feel about our mail. If you can use this poem in any way to help the soldiers, we heartily give our consent. Sincerely yours,

Corporal — and Private First Class—

Here's the poem:

A Soldier's Lament
"What's the matter? Out of ink, Or is your pen on the blink? All I want is one nice line, To let me know that you are fine. It sure is nice to get a line From some one that's so divine. A letter a day in such a way, Will put the spirits into play. From an old friend, a letter is dear."

I hope I am making myself clear. A letter from you I pine, Send one when you have the time. The darkness of eve draws near, So I must close now with tears. Remember me while we're apart, Yours truly with all my heart."

I am sure no one will resist this appeal, so I need say no more.

BRITISH VIEWPOINT

Miss Barbara Ward, foreign editor of the Economist in England, who has come over here for a few months, spent an hour one day with some of us on the South Porch. I think it was a most profitable hour, because it showed us that in many ways it is hard in this country to get a complete picture of what is happening in other countries.

NO WEATHER 'REPORTS'

The censor has written me a very stern letter about my remarks on the weather, and so from now on I shall not tell you whether it rains or whether the sun shines where I am.

A CHARMING BOOK

I have finished Elizabeth Goudge's book: "A Castle on the Hill." I like Miss Goudge's writing, and this book puts before me, more vividly perhaps than I have read lately, the changes that are coming about in the mind and hearts of the people of Great Britain. The boy in the book has lived in the traditions of his family. He loves the beauty of his environment and is sensitive to his surroundings, as well as to the qualities of the people with whom he comes in contact.

While Mr. Winchell is on vacation, his column will be conducted by guest columnists.

TOPPERS:

Clancey died and his wife decided to have him cremated, instead of regular burial. At crematory, attendant tried to sell her an urn for his ashes. "Nothing doing," she cried, "the little loafer never worked a day in his life—I'm going to put his ashes in an hour glass and he'll be doing something from now on!"

A husband walked into the radio studio of John J. Anthony of the "Good Will Hour." He stated his case: "Mr. Anthony, I'm a very rich man. I am married to the most beautiful woman. We have yachts, polo ponies and mansions. We have five children and we're all in perfect health—what I want to know, Mr. Anthony, is this—what's my problem?"

A citizen was describing a political dinner he had attended: "Soon as I got into my place, my watch was stolen. I went to the manager of the affair and complained. He told me to sit tight and all would be O. K. In ten minutes he returned with my watch. 'What did the crook say?' I asked. 'Sh-h—he doesn't know I got it!' came the clincher."

Cassidy was walking through the streets of London, paying little attention to the war. Fifteen minutes later he was running down the Strand, waving a door knob in his hand and yelling: "Let me get at Hitler's aviators—let me get at his bums." "What happened?" asked a bobby. "They just blew a saloon right out of me hand!" cried the furious Cassidy.

A panhandler accosted a citizen on Broadway: "Will you give me a dime for a cup of coffee, buddy?" "Listen, you," growled the grouch, "I don't give money to people on the street!" "What should I do—open up an office?" retorted the toucher.

Hitler ordered a captured general to be brought to Berchtesgaden—"I wish to humiliate him!" Arriving, the prisoner was told by Adolf: "I will show you that the Nazi mind is superior to your Russian intellect. We will now hold a quiz program. And we'll make bets!" "I can't compete with you financially, Herr Hitler," said the visitor. "That's where the humiliation comes in," gleefully cried Adolf. "To every question I can't answer, I'll give you fifty dollars. To every one you can't answer, you give me twenty-five dollars—go ahead, ask the first question!" The Russian asked this one: "What goes up in the sky with 20 legs, makes ten somersaults, whistles four times and then comes down with only one leg?" Adolf thought a minute and cried: "I don't know—here's the fifty dollars!" "I don't know, either—here's twenty-five dollars back!" answered the Russ general.

Into the patent office rushed an inventor: "I want to patent this new cigarette lighter!" The clerk smiled: "Why bring another cigarette lighter—why there are already thousands on the market." "But this one is different," insisted the inventor. "With this cigarette lighter, you push a button and an arrow comes out—and points to a man with a match!"

A supposed moron was brought to a medico for examination. The doc asked this question: "If I cut off your left ear, what would happen to you?" "I wouldn't be able to hear." "Fine—now, if I then cut off your right ear, what would happen to you?" "Then I wouldn't be able to see." The physician was now puzzled and he asked: "If I cut off both your ears, why wouldn't you be able to see?" "Because then my hat would fall over my eyes."

To help morale, a store advertised that it would give away a pack of cigarettes free between the hours of 7 a. m. and 8 a. m. Long line formed. Rushing toward the head of the queue, Maxie Goldberg was hurled back by a big bruiser in front: "Get in line with the rest of us!" Maxie tried it a second time—and again was pushed back. The third time he tried it the bruiser knocked Maxie down. Up rushed a cop: "Did he smash you?" "Yes," moaned Maxie, "and if he does it again I won't open the store!"

Star Dust

STAGE SCREEN RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

AT NINE O'CLOCK on the night of Tuesday, September 1, every theater in the land is expected to stop its program and stage a "Salute to Our Heroes"; it's planned as one of the features of the treasury's billion-dollar war bond and stamp drive. Patriotic airs will be played as a color guard marches down the aisle, a one-minute speech will be made, the audience will give three cheers and then sing the national anthem. If every movie theater is filled, 11,000,000 people will participate.

Bobby Breeh, once famous as a child singing star, who retired from the screen in 1939 at the age of 13, is coming back to it. In Republic's "Johnny Doughboy" he will play himself, a passe movie star, appearing with Jane Withers and Patrick Brook.

During the past year Ginny Simms has been working for RKO, under the usual six-month contract, with options. There's been no big publicity build-up. But recently she signed as the singing mistress of ceremonies for the new "Johnny Presents" radio show, starting September 8—immediately she was cast for three important films, and two other studios that wanted to borrow her were refused!

Orson Welles has given us another superb picture; "The Magnificent Ambersons" rates right along with "Citizen Kane." He makes a story really come to life. And he has done us all a service in bringing Dolores Costello back to the screen.

Dorothy Lamour has a brand-new makeup for "White Cargo," but it sounds like one of those things that one would rather do without. She wears five successive layers of a fluid foundation that combines cream with powder; each is applied all over her body with a sponge and allowed to dry before the next is applied. Then she's sprayed with a film containing gold dust!

"The War Against Mrs. Hadley" has been selected by the Kate Smith radio hour for a nation-wide salute on September 25. It features Edward Arnold, Fay Bainter, Spring Byington, Richard Ney, Jean Rogers and Van Johnson. Quite a way to launch a picture, as the Kate Smith hour is broadcast over 104 stations, and is said to attract more than 30,000,000 listeners.

Susan Hayward can thank her stars that she's a good screamer. Few actresses can scream convincingly, but Susan let out such a good yelp when testing for "Reap the Wild Wind" that C. B. DeMille promptly signed her up for the second feminine lead. As a result of her performance, those in the know are predicting stardom for the pretty little redhead within a year.

Joan Davis can thank broadcasting for furthering her movie career. Though she's such a clever comedienne, her roles just seemed to be getting smaller and smaller. Then Rudy Vallee asked her to guest star on his program a few times, and she was such a hit that he made her a regular. Whereupon the film studios began to wake up to what they'd been missing, and she's in demand once more.

Lesley Woods, who stars in Columbia's "Joyce Jordan" every afternoon, likes to remember when she and Tyrone Power were on the payroll of the Motion Picture Exhibit at the Century of Progress Exposition in 1933. She says they stood around and tried to look like movie stars and ate ham sandwiches.

ODDS AND ENDS—When Jacqueline White reported on the set of "Skyway to Glory" she was handed a telegram wishing her good luck, signed "Uncle Frank"—meaning Frank Knox, secretary of the navy... Dave Eiman, the "Hobby Lobby" man of radio, has been so busy that he hasn't been able to catch up with his own hobby for months; he's a stamp collector... Meyer Davis heads a committee of bandleaders to collect musical instruments for American prisoners of war... The Y. M. C. A. will distribute them... William Powell and Hedy Lamarr teamed so well in "Crossroads" that they'll be starred in "Starlight."

Jane Bags a Burglar

By ALICE DUANE
McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

NICE house, thought Jane, as she idled along the wide suburban street in the spring sunshine. She paused to look over the green hedge at crocuses and scillas already blooming. Then her eyes went back to the house—white clapboard Colonial. With heavy green shutters fastened over the windows. Too bad, thought Jane, that such a nice house should be tenanted only in the summer.

She specially liked the long garden side of the house that she was facing now. The wide flagged terrace must be outside the living room. Then that room with all one end windows might be the dining room and beyond that was the—Jane paused in her conjectures as she came to what was obviously the pantry window. There was no blind over it. It was the only first-floor window unprotected by one of the heavy green wood shutters. Emerging from it were two feet, with muddy shoes.

"Thieves," thought Jane—"probably."

Nobody could hurt her, she reasoned, with only two feet outside the window. She'd investigate. But first she ran into the next place, rang a bell, asked the maid, who said she was alone in the house, to send for the police and then join her—and then she ran back again.

While Jane was wondering what to do next, the maid from next door arrived. "I'm scared, I am," she said in a loud whisper. "There's no men ever lived here. There's a lady comes here summers, with three children and two maids. And any-ways, even if he had a right to come here, he wouldn't go in through the window."

"No, of course not," said Jane. "You see, I'm just visiting here—at Mrs. Harley's—so of course I don't know who people are. Do you suppose he's all right? You know what I think? I think he's stuck. Let's see if we can pull him out. He isn't moving."

Jane climbed agilely upon a rose trellis—evidently the boost by which the intruder had reached the windows. From there she seized one of the muddy boots. She pulled.

"Push, don't pull," came the voice from inside the window.

So Jane pushed. She exerted all her strength. And in a second or two both feet had disappeared inside the window.

A moment later the place of the protruding feet in the window was filled by a head—covered with flour.

"Why, Sam Reynolds!" exclaimed Jane.

"Jane, for crying tears! How did you get here?"

Jane giggled nervously. "I think I might ask that question about you. I thought you were a burglar."

The floury head disappeared from the window and a moment later the side door opened.

"For heaven's sake come in and let me explain." The man was dusting flour from his coat. But his hands were floury, too, and he didn't make much progress.

"Well, you see, a friend of my sister owns this house—they're coming out tonight for a couple of weeks, and one of the kids is sick. So they asked my sister to ask me—she told them I was coming up here to see you—to start the furnace so the place would be dry and warm. And I lost the key."

"So—I pried open this window. I was in a hurry, you see—to see you. And I came in head first. I landed head on in the flour barrel. There wasn't much flour in it. But I couldn't get out. Then you came to the rescue."

"You were coming to see me?" "Yes. Your family said you'd come visiting here. And I've put up at the hotel. I know your hostess—enough so she'll let me in. Jane, I look a mess. I wouldn't blame you now. But why did you run away? I just politely asked you to marry me, and you said you'd see me next day—and then you disappeared. I'm not a sloppy looking brute usually—nothing to scare you."

"Sam, I adore you." Jane threw her arms about his floury shoulders and kissed his scratched, floury face. "But, Sam, I couldn't imagine you ever looked anything but—oh, perfectly dressed and pressed and tidy. And I didn't know if I could stand it."

Sam laughed ruefully. "Funny girl, Jane. I'll dress in old, torn clothes all the time and wear flour in my hair if you like me that way. Funny Jane."

"But you understand, a little, Sam? I mean—you seem more natural, easier to understand, now I know you can look like this and still be—nice."

"Funny Jane," said Sam again to the girl in his arms, implanting a floury kiss on her upturned lips. Just then a whirling motor stopped with a sudden grind of brakes before the house. "What's that?" said Sam.

"Oh, that? That must be the police," said Jane. "I sent for them, to catch the burglar. Let's go out and explain, and then come back and start the furnace."

Hand in hand, two flour-spattered figures stepped out into the spring sunshine. "Here's the burglar," said Jane. "But I'm engaged to him."

Turn a Meal Into a Banquet With Blueberry Muffins

(See Recipes Below.)

Prepare for Week-Ends

Lazy days with first signs of fall in the air, wilted appetites and the whole family home for the week-end are a heavy drain on the homemaker. If she expects to spend any time with her family, Madame Housewife must scurry around and plan a preparedness campaign which will stock her refrigerator with foods that can be pulled—like the traditional bunny out of the hat—and still keep her reputation as the "best cook around here."

It's a mistaken notion that the main dish has to be an elaborate hot and heavy affair that sends the hostess to the head of her table sweltering after hours of preparation. A much better idea would be to have a cool, tempting chicken-mousse such as I've planned for you today.

Wash the vegetables and store them in the cold compartment and they're ready to toss together in a few minutes, crisp, and chewy, coated with a flavorful dressing, in a salad supreme. If the family really has its heart set on "something hot" bring out some bran muffins, all moist and tasty with blueberries. These take but a short time to bake.

Your table should be bright and gay with oranges and yellows, reds, rich browns to add warm notes to the porch supper or lunch—indoors or out. Let your imagination run riot with the dry leaves, bright berries, sprays from the wayside or fall's bountiful fruits.

Remember, you can do more for your table by arranging Concord grapes tastefully with a few golden pears, bluish red apples on rich brown leaves or in well polished pewter, copper or brass vessels than rare, expensive flowers that your family does not know how to appreciate. Then, of course, if you have a few yellow or deep red chrysanthemums in your fall garden, let them fall gracefully in and out among their own leaves in a burnished bowl, and you leave nothing to be desired.

Here's the mousse which you can have as a main dish. Make it the night before and it's all ready to serve just with unmolding:

*Chicken-Ham Mousse.

(Serves 6)

3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups chicken broth
1½ cups ground, cooked chicken
1½ cups ground, cooked ham
¼ cup salad dressing
1 minced scallion
¼ cup whipped cream
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin.
Add salt to egg yolks, then broth. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly until mixture coats a spoon.

Lynn Says:

Easier Way to Live: One good way by which to simplify home-making is to get rid of trouble-makers in your household furnishings as fast as you can.

If you have an expensively upholstered sofa or chair which requires special cleaning often, make a slip-cover for it out of one of the practical cottons or other washable fabrics which are so numerous in the stores these days. A quick trip through the household washer now and then will keep it spic-and-span. Whisk it off and let the regular covering show when special guests are coming, or use the slip-covers day in and day out, for they are so attractive in themselves.

When your draperies wear out, or when you decide to do over a room, look at the beautiful wash fabrics which you can buy for your windows. Make them up with washable linings, these pre-shrunk, too, of course, and save yourself troublesome cleaning from then on. In time, you can "re-plan" many of your furnishings for practical washing machine handling.

This Week's Menu

*Chicken-Ham Mousse
*All-Bran Blueberry Muffins
Butter
*Julienne Salad
*Whipped Cream Sugarless Cake
*Recipes Given.

Pour over gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool. Fold in remaining ingredients. Place strips of green pepper, sliced olives, sliced hard-cooked eggs on bottom of oiled mold. Pour in mousse. Let chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce and garnish with romaine, endive and tomato wedges.

Dispositions will all be the merrier when you serve these bran-blueberry muffins because the B-vitamins, often called morale builders, in the bran and the magnesium in the blueberries, which is reputed to create kinder feelings toward your fellow men, really get together and do their best for the system:

*All-Bran Blueberry Muffins.

(Makes 12 small muffins)

2 tablespoons shortening
¼ cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup all-bran
¼ cup milk
1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ cup fresh blueberries
Cream shortening and sugar until fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Stir in all-bran and milk and let soak until all moisture is taken up. Sift dry ingredients and add blueberries. Add to first mixture and stir just until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin tins until two-thirds full and bake in a moderately hot (400-degree) oven about 30 minutes.

Greens tossed together with melon french dressing are attention-getters:

*Julienne Salad Bowl.

(Serves 6)

1 cup cabbage
1 cup carrots
½ cup green peppers
¼ cup red radishes
Garlic
Curly endive or shredded lettuce
Shred all the vegetables fine. Arrange mounds of them in a bowl, and toss french dressing over them. Rub the bowl in which they are served with garlic.

A main dish that will go well with the Julienne Salad is this Baked Bean dish:

Baked Bean Rarebit

1 can baked beans
¼ pound American cheese, grated
3 slices bacon, fried crisp
½ green pepper sliced
Mix beans, green pepper and crumbled bacon with grated cheese and pour into a casserole. Bake in a moderate oven 35-40 minutes.

A cake that's a tasty sugar saver is this one:

*Whipped Cream Sugarless Cake.
2½ cups sifted cake flour
2½ teaspoons double acting baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or shortening
¼ cup light corn syrup
2 eggs, unbeaten
½ cup orange juice
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
1 cup cream, whipped

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift dry ingredients together three times. Cream shortening, add orange rind, and then syrup beating well after each addition. Add ¼ of flour and beat until smooth and well blended.

Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each. Add remaining flour in thirds alternately with orange juice, beating after each addition for best results. Bake in two greased 8-inch layer pans in a moderate (375-degree) oven 30 minutes. Cool. Spread whipped cream between and on top of layers.

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for September 6

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

THE ALCOHOL PROBLEM: PAST AND PRESENT

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 13:13; 19:27-28; Deuteronomy 32:1-33; Amos 6:1-7. GOLDEN TEXT—The way of the ungodly shall perish.—Psalm 1:6.

The necessity for using to the limit every resource—man power and material—in this time of national crisis should make every American doubly alert to the devastation and loss which has come (and is coming in increasing measure) to us as a result of the sale of intoxicants.

This is no time (nor was there ever a time) when "men should put their enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains; that we should with joy, pleasure, revel and applause transform ourselves into beasts! To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast!" (Shakespeare).

Christians—and especially Sunday school teachers—should use this lesson to drive home anew the great lesson of moral accountability, of the importance of man's choice of a way of life, and the certainty of judgment.

I. Man is Morally Responsible (Gen. 13:13; 19:23-25).

Life is not just a careless drifting from day to day, from pleasure to pleasure, from sin to sin. Man was created in the likeness and image of God, which means that he is a personal being, knowing right from wrong and possessing the power of choice. Sodom and Gomorrah drew upon themselves the judgment of God because of their determination to persist in horrible wickedness. What happened to those cities, terrible as it was, is but a prophecy of even greater judgment to come (Luke 10:10-12).

If man chooses to do right, he may count on all the resources of the omnipotent God to uphold him. But if he chooses to go in the way of sin, he must look forward to the judgment of God. It is important to remember that

II. He Chooses His Own Way of Life (Deut. 32:1-33).

Moses contrasts the Rock—Jehovah—in whom his people trusted, and the corrupt standards of their heathen neighbors, of Sodom and Gomorrah; but note it well, each one made his own choice.

One greater than Moses, our Lord Himself (Matt. 7:13, 14), spoke of the two ways, and noted with sadness that many go down the broad road to destruction and but few walk in the narrow way of life.

It is a vital matter that we teach our boys and girls the great and noble spiritual standards of Christianity; bring into their lives the power of God through faith in Christ that they may choose well for themselves and be able to lead a bewildered war-shocked world in the right way.

The need of humanity is great now, but it will be even greater in a post-war world of broken homes, broken lives and broken hearts. We must be ready to minister in the name of Christ.

III. Neglect and Ignorance Are No Excuse (Amos 6:1-7).

Surprise attack is always doubly effective. "Remember Pearl Harbor." Yes, and remember man's defeat in spiritual things.

Satan would like to lull us to sleep with the assurance that all is well. The heart of man is prone to cherish optimistic thoughts; to magnify that which encourages him to take his ease; to keep away the fear of reality by sweet music, good food, and flowing bowl of wine.

The people of Amos' day, to whom this message was given, had come to the point where prosperity had made them at ease, when they should have been actively alert; foolishly serene, when they should have been vigilant and ready for battle.

Who can say that the same is not in all too large a measure true of the people of our own beloved America. Many elements enter into that dangerous situation, but not the least of them is our increasing use of intoxicants. It may shock some to learn that the per capita use of alcoholic beverages has increased greatly throughout the country. The appalling fact is that the city of Washington, D. C., which should in these days set an example of sobriety and sanity, has led the nation in the increase of the use of strong drink.

That way is the way of captivity (v. 7) unless we repent—and that right soon. America needs to awaken to the dangers which threaten its precious liberty—and, we repeat, the liquor question is not the least of these problems. We must win a victory over it soon, or we may find that it has won the victory over us—which may God in His mercy forbid!

WHAT will look prettier or fresher on the summer landscape than you in this trim, slim "two-piecer" made up in a cool linen, a rayon weave or a crisp cotton? Pattern No. 1629-B presents that all-time love, the dress which looks like a suit, in a spick-and-span tailored version. Brisk turn-down collar and lapels, patch pockets and darts at the waist give the top a precisely tailored air; the skirt has front and back pleats which give it good walking fullness while it maintains the slim silhouette wanted today.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1629-B is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19. Corresponding bust measurements 29, 31, 33, 35 and 37. Size 13 (31) with short sleeves requires 4½ yards 35-inch material.

J. Fuller Pep

By JERRY LINK

The Deacon used to say, "Bad news doesn't need any pushin'. It moves along fast enough by itself. But good news is kinda sluggish. So nudge it along all you can!" I sort of like that idea myself. So I'm nudging along to you how KELLOGG'S PEP is extra-rich in vitamins B₁ and D—the two vitamins hardest to get enough of in ordinary meals.

And nothing that tastes as good as PEP has any business being good for you! Try it. I just know you'll like it!

Kellogg's Pep

A delicious cereal that supplies per serving (1 oz.) the full minimum daily need of vitamin B₁; 1/4 the daily need of vitamin D.

THE POWER OF THE PRESS

Manufacturers and merchants sense the power of the press. Early they began using it to carry their advertising facts and ideas into homes. And they found it a most profitable way in which to tell their story to buyers. And the buyers in turn found it profitable to deal with those who were willing to state in print the values and services they offered.

Mrs. Ivey will leave La Jolla, Calif. soon to join her husband in Oregon.

Pilot office, Hooper Grocery, Frank's Cafe and Johnsons Drug Store. Many residences, in addition to other business places, sustained damaged roofs and broken windows.

ONE CHURCH WRECKED, ANOTHER DAMAGED

The Christian church was completely demolished. The steeple of the Presbyterian church was blown off, windows were broken, and some water damage suffered. Services in the church will not be interrupted, however, according to the Rev. T. H. Pollard, pastor.

Roofs were torn off the sheds at the Rice Bros. & Co. shipyard but the boats were unhurt according to Rob Roy Rice, member of the firm. Work on the subchangers proceeded as usual Monday and the plant will be repaired by Friday, he said.

Devastation on the Loop road was widespread. While few houses were blown over, many were unroofed, or were blown from the foundations. Lean-to rooms and porches were carried away by the force of the wind, and windmills were torn down. One family spent the night huddled in a room where only the corner of the roof was left. Others found safety in their cars.

Damage to the court house is limited to broken window panes, a north door blown off and slate peeled from the roof. Some tin was blown from the jail roof. According to Judge B. S. Fox, cost for repairs, including both labor and materials will be about $300. Considerable water blew in but all permanent records were untouched.

RINCON SECTION HARD HIT
Storm damage in the Rincon District was heavy, according to W. T. Salch. Ninety-five percent of the windmills are down. Ninety per cent of their barns are collapsed; fifty per cent of the residences are off the blocks. Livestock losses were slight, but more than half the poultry was drowned. Cotton crops are estimated at one third destroyed.

HIGHWAY DAMAGE SLIGHT
Highways were hurt less during this storm than in the flood, according to workmen. There were a few small washouts, all repaired by Wednesday. Most serious is the damage done to the causeway across Copano Bay. A dredge beat against the bridge and displaced two pilings on the east side. Traffic is being diverted to the opposite side of the causeway until repairs can be made.

Reporter Recommends Viking Funeral For Old "Oscar" To Rid Society Of Frightful Menace

By KAY BYNUM
Pilot Staff Writer

Truly 'tis an ill wind that blows nobody good and if the breeze Saturday night terminated the career of Oscar, dummy hunter who allegedly decorated the roof peak of Mills' Wharf, then in my opinion, some good was done.

I quite realize that in this I am probably in a solitary minority, for Oscar has been a great favorite with local people and visitors these many years. During his colorful career he has scared the wits out of dozens of people, good and bad. From the stories told about him, he must have furnished thousands of laughs; notwithstanding, the creature is still unfunny to me.

The first time I saw Oscar was just before he was to be freshened up for the tourist crop. At that time he was bleached and mildewed to a villainous corpse green. Alone, and wholly unprepared, I waited, petrified for the varmint to move, hoping I'd have strength enough to run.

The longer he didn't move, the worse I felt. Feathers grew on my spine and my knees turned watery. It was days before I found out about Oscar, and how much fun he had been to people.

I still didn't like him. Oscar was found in installments Sunday. His feet stuck straight up from the mud near the Wharf. His head washed ashore up the bay. Other parts of him are still being collected.

Two schools of thought prevail concerning the disposal of Oscar. Everybody else but me wants to reassemble him and restore him to his perch on the roof. I have proposed to Mr. Mills that we give

WIND HARDER ON LAMAR PENINSULA

Storm wreckage indicates that the storm was harder on Lamar Peninsula than at Rockport, and there are also indications that there was a considerable twist to the wind in some sections along that shore line. Trees were twisted off in a number of places.

DREDGE PLOWS INTO MILLS' WHARF

Damage to Mills' Wharf was not only done by wind and water, but also by a Heldenfels dredge which was swept against the pier, tearing away the wharf and kitchen. The refrigerator and kitchen stove were roped and dragged in as they were about to slip into the water.

HOUSE FLOATS OFF WITH MAN INSIDE

Fritz Behring was master of an ark for 45 minutes, but he was more interested in making shore than in making history, so as soon as he could get a door open he got out, into water above his waist. Behring, a truck driver for Heldenfels, was living in a cottage across the driveway at the Wharf. About three A. M. he felt the house leave the blocks

SEA BREEZE COTTAGES WRECKED

Half the Seabreeze cottages on the Lamar shore were laid flat. Mr. and Mrs. Otto Key, operators, were alone at the camp, having turned away tourists late Saturday afternoon. The Keys occupied the first of the four cottages. Shortly after one o'clock their house was lifted from the foundation and blown against a gate post. They left the house and made their way to the Bishop's Retreat, being blown down three times and having to crawl the last few feet to the door. Half the cottages were blown apart, with no walls left standing, two more tossed against nearby trees.

From the road into Goose Island eight boats could be seen Monday still lying in the shallow water or up on the shore. Some lay 15 feet inland.

The bridge connecting with Goose Island was washed away.

FAMILY SPENDS HOURS CLINGING TO TREE

On the other side of the peninsula high water from Copano Bay added to the hazards of the storm. It was a wretched night for Mr. and Mrs. George A. Rattiseau and their daughter, Shirley. The three spent several hours clinging to a tree, sitting in water to their waists, before daylight came and they could find their way to safety.

The Rattiseaus operated the Jolly Roger Cottages on Redfish Point, where five of the six were demolished. As the bay water blew

SHRIMP FLEET READY FOR WORK AGAIN SOON

Disaster to the shrimp fleet, which might have involved one of the most important industries, appears not as great as was feared. Anchored in St. Charles Bay thirty shrimp boats and pleasure craft were nearly all beached and some sunk. Half the vessels were in the water again Monday.

Little damage was reported by Johnson Fish Co. and Jackson Seafoods Co. Both fleets were expected to be in service before the end of the week. A few individual owners will need to make repairs amounting to one or two hundred dollars in order to get their boats in commission.

Only a few boats went out Tuesday at the opening of the new season for bay shrimping where in normal years 30 boats from Rockport and Fulton go out. A good season is expected and most operators expect to be bringing in large hauls soon.

The Lenanne III belonging to Dr. H. H. Weaver of Sinton was found Tuesday, three quarters of a mile inland from the shore of St. Charles Bay. The boat had been washed and blown up Cavasso Creek and out into a marsh. She had been anchored on the opposite side of the bay.

Several pleasure boats were sunk and others are still missing and a complete check up on this was not possible early this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hodge and son, Jackie, visited in Sinton the week-end.

Dr. and Mrs. Chas. F. Cron and family spent the week-end in San Antonio.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schmidt and Mrs. James G. Hooper spent the week-end in Beeville.

Dallas Artists On Sketching Trip To Rockport

"I wish now I had been coming to this part of the country for 20 years," says Olin H. Travis, well known Dallas artist, who finds the Rockport vicinity very interesting painting material in spite of the devastation of Saturday's storm.

Mr. and Mrs. Travis arrived Monday and are the guests of Kay Bynum. They will spend several weeks sketching here.

Travis is a graduate of the Chicago Art Institute and is the founder of the Dallas Art Institute. He has painted in all parts of this country, principally in the Great Lakes region, the Ozarks, Colorado, Florida and West Texas. This is his first trip to the lower Gulf Coast.

A recent commission completed by the Dallas painter is the notable mural decorating the new airport at Love Field.

Mrs. Travis is an artist and distinguished violinist as well. She is a member of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, and is a radio and concert artist.

Florida Sportsman Lands Tarpon From Seawall

Harry L. Ludwig of Miami Beach, Florida, brought in a 30 pound tarpon Saturday morning, catching the big fish from the seawall. He was fishing with a four foot casting rod and small reel. The fish made four jumps from the water, and was brought in in about 20 minutes.
