Officials like improved 911 system

■ Mauricio Vasquez, one of the dispatchers, estimates he can save three-to-five minutes per call using the CAD.

By JEFF WEST
Staff Writer

Pampa Emergency Dispatch is using a new computer system that can make emergency responses faster, safer and more efficient.

The program is Computer Aided Dispatch or CAD. "It allows emergency operators to enter into the computer a lot of information they used to have to keep by hand. Putting the information into the system allows instant access. For instance, if an emergency call comes in for a certain address the computer now shows how many, and what kind of calls have been made about that address, according to Communication Supervisor Corey Hernandez.

Pampa Police Chief Charlie

Morris said knowing the history of an address is helpful so that dispatchers can warn officers of any potential problems. He also said the reports the CAD system can generate have been helpful. "They are a good management tool."

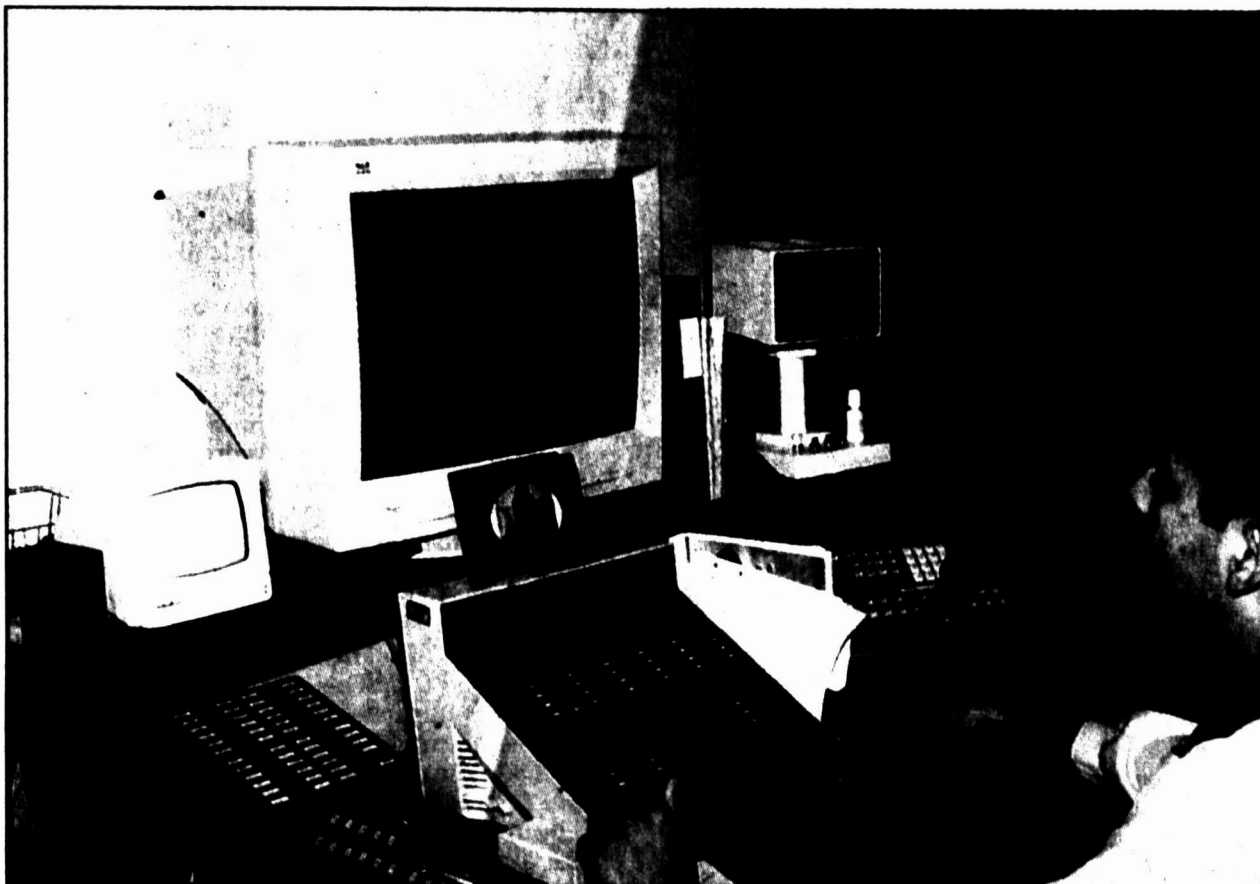

Hernandez also likes the report the new system generates, saying, "It's a more organized way of maintaining records and preserving historical data."

She said among reports the CAD can generate are a complete log of what each officer, as well as each shift, did, down to the amount of time spent on traffic stops or specific types of calls.

"It can break it down into the number of minutes," she said.

The communications staff had the system for a few months

Dispatcher Mauricio Vasquez looks at the new CAD screen which includes a map that can show any address down to the 100 block.

Pampa residents Stony Croft and Henry Dawes were among over 250 hunters at a Monday night meeting of the newly-formed B&L Hunting Club in the Texas Panhandle. Members selected a board of directors and discussed organization of the club at the meeting held in Borger.

AG files for river ruling rehearing

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

Attorney General John Cornyn filed a motion Monday afternoon with the Supreme Court of Texas for a rehearing on the Canadian River boundary dispute in Hutchinson and Roberts counties.

The state court issued a decision Oct. 7 giving the formerly state land to land owners whose land borders the Canadian River.

The case was from the seventh Court of Appeals in Amarillo, and involved approximately 30 landowners and the state of Texas. Plaintiffs in the case filed the suit against the State of Texas and the General Land Office.

The case centers around the boundaries of the Canadian River following the construction of Sanford Dam and Lake Meredith in 1965.

The Oct. 7 decision has been devastating to hunters and recreationists who had used the 13,000 acres for decades as it was understood to be state land.

One issue is a potential loss to the Permanent School Fund, which provides money for public schools. In 1990, then-Land Commissioner Garry Mauro estimated that oil and gas in state-owned riverbeds earned between $4 million and $5 million per year for the school trust fund.

Former employee lawsuit settlement costs county $5,000

By JEFF WEST
Staff Writer

A long standing lawsuit has been settled out of court for what District Attorney John Mann calls a "nuisance value" of $5,000.

The suit was filed by former Gray County Jailor Misty Beck in 25th District Court in Amarillo in Feb., 1996. The suit was filed as a "whistle-blower case" against then Gray County Sheriff Randy Stubblefield. Mann was asked to represent the county in the suit after County Attorney Todd Alvey asked to step aside due to the possibility he could be called as a witness.

According to Mann, Beck had first written a letter to the Governor's Office complaining about what she perceived as problems in the Sheriff's Office. She had written on Nov. 2 complaining that Stubblefield had abused some inmates among other charges. She then wrote to Stubblefield stating in part, "I will not be a part of this anymore. I will not go along to get along anymore."

Beck then did not come to

"Any time you go to trial you have exposure. The most uncertain thing in the world is a jury," he said. "We settled this for nuisance value without any risk or exposure."

work for three days, according to Mann. She came back to the Sheriff's office on Nov. 9 but then Deputy Jim Scott told her he needed her badge and keys since he and Stubblefield felt she had submitted a letter of resignation.

She denied she had resigned and Stubblefield then told her she was terminated, according to court records.

Mann said the reason he settled after nearly four years was the uncertainty of a jury trial.

"Any time you go to trial you have exposure. The most uncertain thing in the world is a jury," he said. "We settled this for nuisance value without any risk or exposure."

before going live with it. They spent the time entering data specific to Pampa. Now, when an address is entered, dispatchers know immediately which police, fire or ambulance beat should be dispatched which saves time, Hernandez said.

Mauricio Vasquez, one of the dispatchers, estimated that he can save three-to-five minutes per call using the CAD. He said the communications office can get hundreds of calls a day both over the phone and from officer inquiries. Hernandez also said the system has been programmed with all the business names cross-referenced, so if a emergency call comes in from a store the dispatcher can enter the name of the store and the exact address will pop up.

Once the mapping and readdressing of rural addresses is finished CAD will also allow emergency dispatchers to pinpoint rural address as easily as city addresses.

The CAD system Pampa is using is a Beta, or test version, according to Hernandez. She said that can be helpful to Pampa because many of the suggestions she gives the company for improving the software relate to Pampa's situation directly. But while minor bugs are inevitable in any new system, Hernandez is pleased.

"I think it's wonderful," she said. "Change is hard but each dispatcher has made the transformation real well."

How much taxes in the recently made private land to the two school districts involved has yet to be decided. Miami ISD and Plemons-Stinnett-Phillips CISD are both located in the area.

Both schools are Chapter 41 schools and get very little money from the state.

Issues presented in the request by Attorney General John Cornyn are whether the evidence in the case establishes, as a matter of law, that the closing of the gates in 1965 of Sanford Dam caused an abrupt change that did not alter state ownership in the bed of the Canadian River and whether there is a fact question as to whether the closing of the gates of Sanford Dam caused an abrupt change to the bed of the Canadian River.

The state is requesting that the court clarify its opinion on the issues of avulsive (abrupt) and accretive changes which add to the soil and the issue of the removal of water.

John Williams, General Manager of the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority that operates Sanford Dam, worked for the federal agency responsible for the dam's construction and oversaw that construction on a daily basis.

In a comparison exhibits by Williams showed that the average discharge of water past the gate at Canadian, Texas, for the 25 water years from 1939 to 1964 was 549 cubic feet per second, while for the water years of 1965 to 1987 the average discharge of water past the gate was 87 cfs.

Web site started by UT students is sold to rival

AUSTIN (AP) — An Internet company started by four University of Texas students for their compatriots around the country has been sold to a rival.

Collegestudent.com Inc., which operated Web sites for college students, said Monday it is being sold to CollegeClub.com Inc., a privately held company based in San Diego, Calif.

Financial terms were not disclosed. Collegestudent will change its name to CollegeClub but keep its operations in Austin, officials said.

The Web company was started three years ago by four UT rugby buddies who commiserated about finding housing and wound up creating a Web site to provide rental information.

The company eventually raised several million dollars in venture capital and added features to its Web sites, including free classified ads, ride and job boards, textbook exchanges and chat rooms.

It expanded from a single site serving UT to 900 Web sites for campuses across the country.

CollegeClub, with 200 employees runs a nationwide e-mail system for college students and has 1.25 million registered users. It hopes to make money through e-commerce, offering discounts on online purchases at Web sites run by corporate partners.

CollegeClub recently bought a

Boston online auction and classified advertising site for college students and a Boston-based supplier of online college event calendars.

Sometimes I don't understand

Sometimes I just don't understand.

I realize that a complete list of things I don't understand would be way too long so I'll limit this list to politics, marriage and women. No, the list would still be too long. So let's limit this to alimony, and constitutional amendments.

Now, I will preface this by saying I am not now nor have I ever been married, (and therefore I have never been divorced for those who don't want to jump to conclusions.) I won't get into the argument on whether a single man can know anything about women and marriage or whether he knows more, and that's why he's single.

However, I have a lot of friends and acquaintances who have been married and divorced. I have heard the horror stories of both men and women and one thing I have figured out is that divorce is not fun (except for the lawyers).

I have also figured out that there is really no such thing as a amicable divorce. Oh sure, there are some that aren't as gruesome and bloody as others, but none that are truly bloodless. I have seen the divorces that resembled the Normandy invasion and those that were closer to the Granada invasion but divorce, like war, is hell.

At one time it was the woman who had troubles because after a divorce there would be no one who would "take care of her." She would just be a helpless waif cast out in an unfriendly world; oh what would she do? But I thought all that went out about the time T-shirts with expressions like, "A woman needs a man like a fish needs a bicycle" came about.

In fact, I thought, as did a lot of people, that alimony would be a thing of the past like chastity belts, dowries and wearing a pearl necklace while mopping the kitchen floor.

Well, surprise, I was wrong again. Apparently Texas women still need taking care of, even after they are no longer taking care of a man. Now, Texas voters have decided that those who are paying for services no longer being rendered can't even be trusted to do so on their own, and now say their wages can be garnished. Legal remedies to make sure that bitterness and unhealthy dependency continue long after the marriage is over. It actually passed more than 2-to-1 across the state. Yes, I realize that it's possible that men can receive alimony, I'm also aware that a tortoise can beat a hare in the 50-yard dash, but that's not the way to bet it.

Apparently, husband and wife still equally split everything made or acquired during the marriage, as it has always been done in Texas. But now, in addition, one party must continue to "keep" the other, and can go to jail if they don't. Something that Texas was always proud to oppose until recently.

I've also read that people are marrying later than ever before and more are not marrying at all. I don't know that the two things are related.

Be good to one another and be good to yourselves.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 9, the 313th day of 1999. There are 52 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Ten years ago, on Nov. 9, 1989, communist East Germany opened its borders, allowing citizens to travel freely to the West; joyous Germans danced atop the Berlin Wall.

On this date:

In 1872, fire destroyed nearly 1,000 buildings in Boston.

In 1918, Germany's Kaiser Wilhelm II announced he would abdicate. He then fled to the Netherlands.

In 1935, United Mine Workers president John L. Lewis and other labor leaders formed the Committee for Industrial Organization (CIO).

In 1938, Nazis looted and burned synagogues and Jewish-owned stores and houses in Germany and Austria in what became known as "Kristallnacht."

In 1953, author-poet Dylan Thomas died in New York at age 39.

In 1963, twin disasters struck Japan as some 450 miners were killed in a coal-dust explosion and 160 people died in a train crash.

In 1965, the great Northeast blackout left several states and parts of Canada in the dark for up to 13 1/2 hours because of a series of power failures.

In 1970, former French president Charles De Gaulle died at age 79.

In 1986, Israel said it was holding Mordechai Vanunu, a former nuclear technician who had vanished after providing information to a British newspaper about Israel's nuclear weapons program. Vanunu was convicted of treason and sentenced to 18 years in prison.

In 1988, former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, a major figure in the Watergate scandal, died in Washington at age 75.

Five years ago: A day after Republicans won majorities in both the House and Senate, President Clinton and the GOP pledged cooperation, even as they started forming battle lines over irreconcilable differences.

One year ago: A federal judge in New York approved the richest antitrust settlement in U.S. history, a promise by leading brokerage firms to pay $1.03 billion to investors who had sued over a price-rigging scheme for stocks listed on the Nasdaq market. The age of digital and interactive TV opened with a PBS documentary special, "Chihuly Over Venice."

Today's Birthdays: Actress Hedy Lamarr is 86. Sportscaster Charlie Jones is 69. Baseball executive Whitey Herzog is 68. Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., is 63. Movie director Bille August is 51. Actor Lou Ferrigno is 47. Rock musician Dee Plakas (L7) is 39. Rhythm-and-blues singers Ike and Mike Owensby (Twice) are 31. Rapper Pepa (Salt-N-Pepa) is 30. Rapper Scarface (Geto Boys) is 30. Blues singer Susan Tedeschi is 29. Rhythm-and-blues singer Nick Lachey (98 Degrees) is 26.

'New isolationism' could be beneficial

During a press conference following the Senate's defeat of the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty President Clinton lashed out at his GOP opponents in overwrought terms.

He pointed to "a reckless partisanship" that imperils America's "economic well being and, now, our national security" and to "the signs of a new isolationism among some of the opponents of the treaty."

Given that it was the Democrats' partisanship that helped torpedo the treaty and that opposition was pronounced among many prominent foreign policy experts, Clinton's tirade was groundless.

Partisanship in Washington? Heaven forbid! A new isolationism in Congress? If only it were so!

From a political perspective, the treaty failed because the president and his allies pursued a misguided strategy. "The White House set up this treaty ratification as a partisan ruff," reported The Wall Street Journal's Paul Gigot. Clinton didn't lobby too hard for it, Gigot wrote, then bungled a chance to withdraw the treaty and avoid an embarrassing vote.

Rather than recognize his own failure, the president blamed ominous forces of isolationism. Which is "laughable" when you consider that internationalist Sens. Richard Lugar and John McCain would have to be "included in the ranks of isolationism," considering that they voted against it, said Ted Galen Carpenter, vice president of defense and foreign policy studies at the Cato Institute in Washington, D.C.

The reason for the defeat, Carpenter explained, was that Republicans had "grave misgivings" about a treaty that would have banned the United States from testing its nuclear arsenal, meaning that it would have to rely on questionably accurate computer models. And they also believed the treaty would provide a "false sense of security" because many nations would not sign it and others would violate it.

In the background, "some Republicans saw this as a way of sending a message to the president" about the way he has refused to bring other treaties before the Senate. Some might decry that as partisan, but it's one of Congress' most important constitutional duties to ensure that the president is constrained in his ability to wage war and sign treaties.

President Clinton's suggestion that Congress has embraced "the reckless proposition that we can go it alone" is ridiculous when you consider all the places the United States has commitments and troops. It's nothing short of demagoguery that tries to discourage debate about crucial foreign policy questions.

For instance, should America place its faith in treaties or scale back some of its worldwide meddling now that the Cold War is over, and thereby give fewer people reason to target us?

Just because the president would decry one answer as "isolationist" is no reason not to consider it.

Idea to 'fix' education is cockeyed

Well, you should never think you've heard all of the cockamamie ideas liberals can come up with to "fix" public education.

The latest one is a scheme to take the best teachers out of the best schools and put them into the worst schools. That way, according to the thinking of one liberal genius, the bad schools will improve, and the best schools will remain the best.

OK, what's wrong with this notion?

First, it is predicated on the assumption that the worst schools are the worst because the teachers are bad teachers. Second, it assumes that good teachers can teach bad students to be good students. Third, it contradicts its own assumptions by assuming that removing the best teachers will not affect the best schools.

For heaven's sakes, the nation's teachers can't win for losing.

You know what's wrong with public education? Nothing. What's wrong is society. Let's face facts. We have a materialistic and morally depraved culture. We have a two-tier economy, with the poor getting poorer. Between poverty, ignorance and moral depravity, many children show up for their first day at school with scarred psyches, undeveloped intellects and often poorly nourished bodies.

And to make matters even worse, how the schools are allowed to cope with this flood of injured children is dictated by politicians and federal judges —theorists dictating this and that without an ounce of experiential knowledge of education. I'm surprised, frankly, that there are still people willing to try to teach children.

Charley Reese
Syndicated columnist

It's no accident that the worst schools are in the worst neighborhoods, and the best schools are in the best neighborhoods. Given that fact, one does not need a high IQ to infer that the problem is not the teachers but the students and their families.

Liberals, however, seem to expect teachers to not only teach but to undo all the social, emotional, psychological, intellectual and physical damage that has been done to the child for the five years before anybody in a school ever sees them. I've got news for you, Mr. Liberal. The medical literature is pretty clear that the most important years of a child's life, in terms of its future, are from birth to age 5.

In other words, you can only improve the schools by getting to the parents and children before the child ever reaches the kindergarten door. Only the parents can salvage the child. And if they damage the child, an overworked school teacher is not going to be able to salvage him, though heaven knows many good teachers break their hearts trying.

Nor is government the answer. There is no way the government can become the parent of all children. The real solution lies with churches, synagogues and mosques. They have abetter chance of changing a parent than a social worker.

In the meantime, what government could do is crack down on pornographers, pass Sunday closing laws so parents would have at least one day with their family, quit paying women to have illegitimate children and condition all public assistance on marriage and the presence of a father. It should also move quickly to remove children — permanently — who are abused from their homes.

And this sleazy, greedy commercial industry that corrupts children with sex and violence in movies and on television ought to be treated with the public contempt it so richly deserves.

Most of all, blame should be put where it belongs — squarely on the parents. There is no greater responsibility than being a parent, and it's time liberals quit making excuses for those who shirk their responsibility.

In the meantime, stop scapegoating teachers. It would serve the politicians right if all the teachers in the United States walked out and said: "We quit. Since you politicians and judges know so much about education, you do the teaching."

Gore shows off new campaign style

Al Gore couldn't claim to have paid for the microphone at his debate with Bill Bradley, but he took it over anyhow to get the first word and the last, determined to upstage his Democratic rival and put his new-look campaign style on televised display.

Bradley debated by the rules, stuck to his message, and defended his proposals, particularly a health insurance expansion plan, against Gore's charges that it would spend away the next decade's budget surplus.

"I dispute the cost figure that Al has used," Bradley countered. That was as vehement as he got.

Gore quipped, chatted with questioners, told a joke — obviously bent on erasing the image of the stiff and wooden vice president and creating one of a friendly, freewheeling candidate. He said later he'd been liberated, in part when the formidable challenge Bradley is waging forced him to re-examine his whole campaign.

The impact of Wednesday night's debate — actually a question and answer session in which the candidates took turns — wasn't clear despite the rival claims of victory posted afterward by their cheerleaders.

Bradley's spokesman said he came across as presidential.

The Gore campaign flew in three Cabinet members to praise his performance. "I think people saw the real Al Gore, the man I know in private," said Energy Secretary Bill Richardson.

New Hampshire Gov. Jeanne Shaheen, a Gore supporter, had said the debate probably wouldn't change many minds, especially this far in advance of the state's Feb. 1 presidential primary. Gore has said he's probably behind; the polls indicate Bradley has gained strength to pull even or marginally ahead.

So Bradley stuck to his game plan, steady, not

Walter Mears
AP Special correspondent

confrontational. Gore was the candidate out to change things.

He started before the debate did, as soon as the two men entered the Dartmouth College theater to be introduced to the audience of 500 people chosen by lottery. It was 15 minutes to air time on CNN and WMUR of Manchester.

"Now what?" the vice president said, and took over. "Why don't you start asking some questions while we're waiting?"

It was a ploy reminiscent of the 1980 Republican debate in Nashua, N.H., and Ronald Reagan's retort when the moderator threatened to shut off his microphone for breaking the format. The Reagan campaign had hired the hall.

"I paid for this microphone, Mr. Green," Reagan snapped, taking charge and mispronouncing the moderator's name. Rival George Bush sat by in silence, although he could have had the audience to himself while Reagan was off stage, haggling about the rules. They finally debated, but Bush had lost before he began, outmaneuvered in what he later described as the low point of his campaign.

Now it was Gore taking center stage in a lull. First question: How could a new Democratic president work with Congress. "Build personal bridges," Gore concluded. Then he played moderator. "Bill," he invited, and Bradley answered the question. "It's a matter of reaching out to people," he said.

Three more questions before the cameras went on.

Then the hourlong forum, in which Gore and Bradley disagreed most directly on how to expand health care, and at what cost. On most of the agenda, they differed only on details. Gore even praised Bradley as eloquent in urging equal rights for gays.

One recurrent question was campaign finance reform. Both candidates said they'd work to achieve it. Bradley passed up an opportunity to criticize the White House for illicit campaign contributions taken by the Democrats for the 1996 campaign. "I'm not going to get into the details at this point of the game," he said.

Gore, in contrast, volunteered criticism of President Clinton for his conduct in the Monica Lewinsky sex scandal. He was asked what he would do to restore confidence in the American political system.

He answered: "I understand the disappointment and anger that you feel toward President Clinton and I felt it myself." At the time, Gore said, he felt it his duty to try to strive for continuity and stability.

Gore got the final debate question, about overcoming cynicism. "That's one reason why I'd like to have a debate every week on a different issue," he said, repeating the challenge Bradley has declined. Bradley has agreed to seven debates this year and early next year, but Gore insists that isn't enough. They meet next on Dec. 17.

But Gore also had a postscript invitation. He said he'd stick around to answer more questions as long as anybody wanted to ask them. Bradley shook hands on the way out. Gore stayed, for an hour and a half, until the last questioner. He said it fit the open meeting style he's adopted, prompted by the tightening race. "And it feels liberating," he said.

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Leon Lett is once again a member of the Dallas Cowboys.

Lett's eight-game suspension for violating the NFL's substance abuse policy ended Monday night following Dallas' 27-17 loss to the Minnesota Vikings.

The defensive tackle was eligible to return to the team's Valley Ranch headquarters today. Players had the day off, though, so his first practice won't be until Wednesday. He's expected to play Sunday when Dallas faces Green Bay in Texas Stadium.

Lett's latest suspension was for his fifth violation. He's been punished three times, keeping him out of 28 of Dallas' last 60 regular-season games.

Lett, who turned 31 during his hiatus, made the Pro Bowl in his last two full seasons: 1998 and 1994.

His agent, Jim Steiner, did not return a call from The Associated Press on Monday. Last month, Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said Lett was preparing for his return.

"He's stayed in real good shape," Jones said. "He's working on his strength and should be in good condition. He's really looking forward to getting back on the field."

BASEBALL

DANA POINT, Calif. (AP) — Only one player in baseball is making more money annually than Shawn Green, and that player happens to be his new teammate.

Green accepted a six-year deal with the Los Angeles Dodgers on Monday that will pay him an average of $14 million a season, ranking him behind only Dodgers pitcher Kevin Brown.

Brown last December signed a seven-year, $105 million deal that works out to $15 million a year.

When the Dodgers agreed to the contract for Green, that enabled him to land with the team he wanted and sent Raul Mondesi, who wanted out of Los Angeles, to the Toronto Blue Jays in a swap of outfielders.

The Dodgers also acquired minor league second baseman Jorge Nunez from Toronto and gave the Blue Jays reliever Pedro Borbon.

Green, who turns 27 Wednesday, grew up in suburban Tustin, some 35 miles from Dodger Stadium.

"It's something to get a chance to play at home in L.A.," he said at a news conference during the baseball general managers' meetings.

"I think a lot of people were disappointed with the Dodgers' performance last year, and that looked like an opportunity to me. It would be really great to be a part of helping turn this team around."

Mondesi, 28, had asked Los Angeles to trade him. The Dodgers and Blue Jays agreed to the tentative deal Friday night, and Los Angeles was given 72 hours by the commissioner's office to work out a contract with Green.

"Shawn Green has a chance to come home to Southern California, where he went to school and spent much of his youth. Raul Mondesi gets a chance for a new start in Toronto," said agent Jeff Moorad, who represents both players.

Green's $84 million deal is the fourth-highest package ever in baseball, trailing only Brown, New York Mets catcher Mike Piazza ($91 million for seven years) and New York Yankees outfielder Bernie Williams ($87.5 million for seven years).

Dodgers general manager Kevin Malone believes Green and the Dodgers are a good match.

"The fact that he hits from the left side, and I think most important, his integrity and character," Malone said.

Vikings rally past
Cowboys, 27-17

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings' big break came when Emmitt Smith stiff-armed rookie cornerback Kenny Wright on his way into the end zone.

Smith broke his hand on the play and watched in street clothes as the Vikings rallied for a 27-17 victory over the Dallas Cowboys on Monday night.

"I don't know how he hurt his hand," Wright said. "Maybe he did it grabbing my face mask."

Dallas dominated the first half as Smith scored twice within 18 seconds on runs of 63 and 24 yards. Smith gained 140 yards on 13 carries in just 21 minutes as the Cowboys ran up a 17-0 lead and held Minnesota without a pass completion until 5:30 was left in the half.

Troy Aikman sustained a mild concussion early in the third quarter and joined Smith on the sideline, and the Vikings (5-4) scored the final 27 points behind Jeff George, who won his third straight since replacing Randall Cunningham.

Smith broke his hand on his 63-yard run, but didn't have time to leave the sideline because Minnesota fumbled away the ensuing kickoff. So Smith rumbled in from 24 yards out, giving Dallas a 17-0 lead and tying Marcus Allen for second place with 145 career touchdowns. Jerry Rice is the leader.

"When I came off, I felt it. There were a few cracks. Then we got a quick turnover and I got my helmet on and went onto the field," Smith said.

And into the end zone.

But then Smith left, and the Vikings recovered an errant snap that led to a 4-yard touchdown pass from George to Randy Moss to cut it to 17-7 by halftime.

Aikman got the sixth concussion of his 11-year career after getting sacked by Jerry Ball on the first series of the second half. After he was replaced by Jason Garrett, the Vikings took over.

Dallas (4-4) lost for the third time in its last four starts and fell to third in the NFC East, a game behind Washington and the New York Giants.

Gary Anderson kicked two field goals to start the second-half rally, then George completed another 4-yard TD pass for the go-ahead score with 1:22 gone in the final quarter. The pass was to Cris Carter, who caught it despite premature fireworks blasts that went off just as the ball left George's hand.

"It sure shocked me," George said. "Cris had great concentration to make the catch. It could have cost us the touchdown."

"I heard it," Carter said.

What did he think?

"Prophetic," he replied with a smile.

George then clinched it with 5:10 left, throwing a 47-yard TD pass to Moss, his third TD pass of the night.

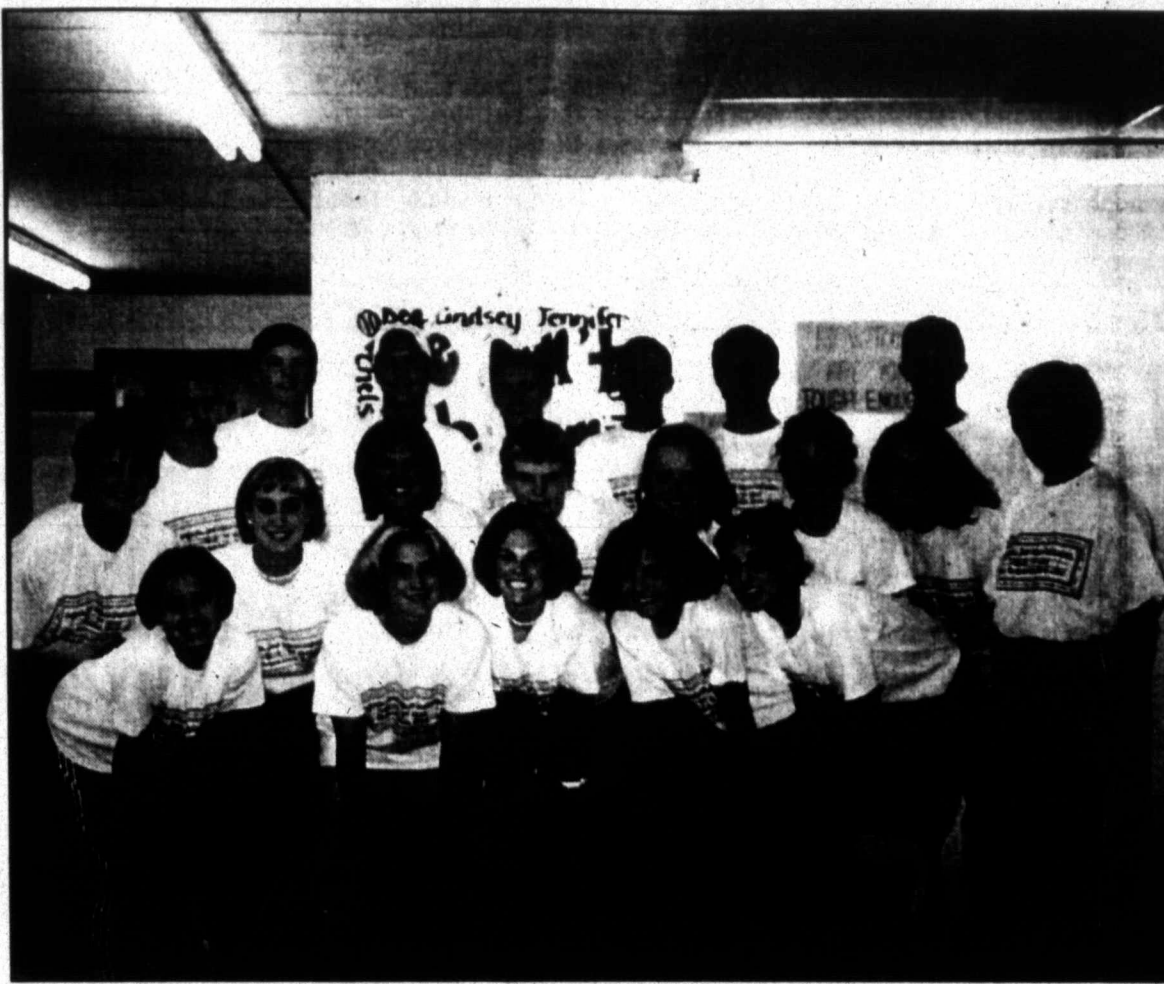

Deion Sanders was called for illegal contact during the nine-play, 61-yard drive that led to the touchdown, negating an interception by teammate George Teague on the other side of the field.

The game began with mistakes, penalties and missed field goals — two by Dallas' Richie Cunningham and one by the Anderson until Cunningham hit a 39-yarder with 11:21 left in the second quarter.

Minnesota safety Robert Griffith said he wasn't sure what role Dallas' injuries played in the comeback.

"I don't know how the game would have gone," he said. "But we were going to play better football."

Tiger League football players invaded Dumas

By GROVER BLACK
Pampa News correspondent

Football! Football! Football!

That was the order of the day for the Pampa All Stars, and Fans in Dumas Saturday.

The Pampa All Stars is a football team made up of the top players from the Tiger league teams of Pampa. The names of the top players from the Packers, Raiders, and Cowboys, are submitted by the coaches, then the players are selected for The Pampa All Stars.

The "Pampa Stars" were on the field before daybreak for the first game with a kickoff time of 8:00 A.M. The "Stars" were fired up and took their first game with ease, scoring 24 points and leaving Dalhart with nothing.

After a short rest the Stars returned to the main field to meet the Sunray team at 11:00 A.M. The Sunray team had defeated Dumas, giving them a shot at the Stars. With very little of the cutting edge taken off, the Stars handed Sunray a defeat of 22-6, earning a play off spot for the championship in the tournament. Spot was a direct result of a strong offense led by such players as Trevor Day, Tyler Klein, Ryan Hansen, Colby Scott, Jerod Moler, Chadd Malone and Jarrett Kotara. Some of the determined defense that kept the e on the field were, Taylor Fatheree, Dylan Henley, Josh Perez, Justin Johnson, Marcos Campos, Michael Robinson, and Jake Craig.

But alas, the play off at 7:130 P.M. found a tired but ready Pampa Stars. The game ended with the Pampa Stars 0 and the Stinnett Comanches 28.

When the results were in the Pampa Stars placed second overall with Stinnett in first and Guymon Ok. in third.

The 7 towns represented in the "Dumas All Star Tournament" were Pampa, Sunray, Dumas, Dalhart, Guymon, Perryton, and Stinnett.

Unexpected Guest for Dinner Party Results in Empty Seats

DEAR ABBY: Some friends of mine and my husband's invited us over for a sit-down dinner at their home. The friends are acquainted with my husband's parents and extended a written invitation to them as well, which I thought was very nice.

Because the friends live some distance away, we planned to carpool there with my in-laws. When my in-laws arrived at our door, they had my sister-in-law with them. (She's middle-aged and still lives at home.) I was mortified because I knew "Sis" hadn't been invited.

I promptly called the hosts to give them a heads-up and an apology, and offered to bring more food. My mother-in-law overheard me on the phone and took great offense and said they weren't going. She said my husband and I were rude because we treated Sis like a criminal. She asked repeatedly before storming off, "What's one more person gonna hurt?" Who was in the wrong here?

BAFFLED BY LACK OF ETIQUETTE

DEAR BAFFLED: Your mother-in-law was wrong to bring an uninvited guest with her. Assuming you quietly telephoned to warn the hosts, and did not embarrass your sister-in-law by doing it in front of her, your mother-in-law was wrong again in taking offense because you tried to keep the hosts from being caught flat-footed. It was extremely rude to punish the hosts by leaving them with empty seats at their table at the last minute.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Wounded in Midland, Texas," who was devastated because a friend had told her that her deceased husband had had an affair. Twelve years ago, when I was 23, my husband committed suicide while I was in the room with him. Not only did I have to deal with the pain of losing him, but also the guilt of wondering what I could have done to stop him.

At his funeral, several of our "friends" just had to share stories about his infidelities and drug habits with me. They laughed about them. (This was the first I had heard of them.)

I'll never understand why people do that when you're at one of the lowest points in your life. If they couldn't tell me while he was with me, what was the point of telling me then? Losing someone causes enough pain; at least leave us with what happy memories we have.

I, too, went through years of therapy and am now happily remarried for eight years, but I'll never forget those "friends" at the funeral. Needless to say, I haven't seen or talked to them in 12 years.

ALSO WOUNDED IN WISCONSIN

DEAR ALSO WOUNDED: I'm pleased that you have managed to get past your tragedy and have gone on to have a successful life. Believe it or not, I have actually heard from some people who feel that the widow should be told so that she won't idealize her deceased spouse and will "get on with her life." I have never subscribed to the "for your own good" school of disclosure. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: In response to the lady from Midland, Texas, whose "friend" divulged that her deceased husband had carried on a verifiable affair, she should ask herself, "Why did she tell me this?" The answer, of course, is she wanted to hurt her!

My sister revealed that my son had told his cousin that he didn't care about coming back home again after receiving his degrees. I cried every night after work for three months, until my husband asked me, "Why did she tell you that?" To hurt me, of course. I promptly quit bawling.

FEELING FINE, PRAIRIE VILLAGE, KAN.

DEAR FEELING FINE: I applaud your husband for his insight.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 10, 1999

BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

 Unexpected news greets you today. You can deal with almost anything, thanks to your versatility and creativity. Others tap into this special gift of yours. You thrill a loved one with your attention and caring. Another's overtures are heartfelt. Tonight: Follow that long-term vision.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

 Another does his best for you. However, his feedback triggers unexpected news or actions by those in charge. Your creativity and people skills always rescue you. Count on your abilities and your understanding of money and individual personalities. Tonight: Do something special for a partner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

 Reach out for others. You could be delighted by what two minds can conjure up as opposed to just one. Ingenuity becomes your trademark. A special relationship with a child or new friend is in the process of developing. Talk about your dreams for the future. Tonight: Allow more romance into your life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

 Get down to the bottom line, both financially and emotionally. You might not be sure what you want to do about an unpredictable work-related situation. Charge your energy into areas where you are clear. Add to the quality of your domestic life and your home. Tonight: Price a new item for the house. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

 Others know how to appeal to your energy and creativity. You respond easily to an unpredictable friend in your life. Caring, gentle communication eases and transforms a tense situation. Making that extra effort pays off. Tonight: Let the kid in you out. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

 Thoughts about work and whether to have a home office occupy your mind. Remember, there are pluses and minuses. Can you handle all the unexpected bumps at home? Do you have the self-discipline to work alone? Tonight: Buy something special for you. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

 You know what to say to get what you want. Another is touchy and unpredictable. Be realistic about a child; he could easily be pulling the wool over your eyes. Sensitivity to a loved one is key to success. Tonight: Work on the give-and-take of communication. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

 Build financial security. Check out information and make sure your sources are as reliable as you think they are. You could be overly sensitive to a family member, wanting to please him. Feelings run high. Tonight: Be careful with spending. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

 You are personality plus, allowing others to express their essence as well. A friend shares some good news;

there could also be more of a bond between the two of you than just friendship. Your intuition leads you in the right direction. Tonight: Wherever you enjoy yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

 Take the lead. Let your intuition and sensitivity to life's ebb and flow help you finesse a difficult boss. You know what to do and how to deal with others. Finances play an enormous role in making the correct decisions. Be very careful about an investment. Tonight: Your treat. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

 Network; take charge of your life. As you know what you want, another might no longer be able to lure you on a specific path of his choosing. However, because of your independence, there could be a strong reaction in the near future. Tonight: Reach out for a loved one at a distance. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

 Others look to you to make decisions at work. You might not always feel secure with the choices you make. Heed your inner voice. A co-worker or associate gives you important support. Don't forget to listen! Tonight: Make time for an important friendship.
