Too Big Sport

The resignation the board of the First Congregational church, Fremont, Neb., forced on the Rev. H. H. Kocntz didn't "take." They invited him to give up his pulpit because they thought it reflected on the church for him to attend prize fights and ball games and play billiards. Then the congregation held an indignation meeting, sent a committee of 12 after him and received him back with a rousing reception.

LOUISIANA OIL CUT A DEGREE BY SMACKOVER

New Double-Barreled Cut In All Lower Grades Made

SHREVEPORT, La., April 19.—All grades of Smackover crude were scaled down one degree and the price of heavy oil, 24 gravity and below, was cut 20 cents today by the Standaird Oil company of Louisiana, effecting a double-barreled cut in the lower grade on which the new price is 60 cents for shipment up to capacity of shipping facilities, and 40 cents for oil run to storage up to limit of storage capacity to handle.

Twenty-eight gravity and above grade, quoted at $1.30, was abolished and the new top grade, 27 to 27.9 given its price, 26 to 26.90 is $1.25, 25 to 25.9 is $1.20 and 24 to 24.9, is $1.10 and all below 24 run to storage is 40 cents per barrel, a cut of 10 cents and 24 and below accepted for shipment is 60 cents, a cut of 20 cents.

Louisiana Oil and Refining company also posted a new schedule without changing classification, quoting stuff testing 27 to 27.9 at $1.30, a cut of 5 cents, 25 to 25.9, raised 10 cents to $1.90, 24 to 24.9 raised 10 cents, to $1.10 and oil below 24 gravity cut.

In connection with the flood of Smackover heavy oil developing during the last two weeks beyond the capacity of pipelines and storage to take care of, rumors were current here today that a new pipeline from Smackover to the Mississippi river is in contemplation in connection with a barge line to New Orleans. It was also talked about that new pits exceeding in size anything yet dug in Smackover were the largest earthen storage in the world already exists, has been contracted for. While rumors concerning these two projects appeared to be well founded, official confirmations and details were not to be obtained.

PERSHING AND DAWES MAKE UNITED PLEA

Fulfill Obligations to Past And Posterity; They Urge

SPEAK IN AUSTIN

Maintenance of Nation's Institutions Needed For Safety

BOSTON, April 19.—Calling on the American people to fulfill their obligations to the past and to posterity, General John J. Pershing, chief speaker at the re-dedication of Faneuil Hall today recalled the events of 150 years ago now being celebrated in this city and urged the maintenance and improvement of this country's institutions. Vice-President Charles G. Dawes, asked for the people's re-dedication to the ideals "which our forefathers died to establish."

"Our influence in international affairs has surpassed the most fanciful vision," General Pershing said, "but with this has come an increase in our responsibilities. We must maintain and imurove our institutions. If we fail we shall revert to government by force of power. But we shall not fail. The courage of the American people handed down by our forefathers is a guarantee. Human liberty is ours to maintain, by force if need be, and to hand down inviolate to our children's children. Let us then live as individuals among men and as a people among nations that through our example may be hastened the day when freedom, justice and peace shall come to dwell among us."

Given a Gavel.

Vice-President Dawes received from the city of Boston through Mayor James M. Curley, the presiding officer a gavel from the Newel post preserved from the original Faneuil Hall destroyed by fire. A roar of laughter in which Mr. Dawes joined Mayor Curley said that the vice-president might find it useful in his dealings with the United States senate. General Pershing received a similar gavel.

"I am here not as an individual but as a representative of the government of the United States," Mr. Dawes said after the presentation. "I am glad that the greatest American soldier is to make an address here today, because the atmosphere of Faneuil Hall is militant. This has been a great battle ground, this country.

"This is a great occasion, I wonder if we cannot all rededicate ourselves and resolve to maintain the constitution of this great republic, to maintain what our forefathers died to establish."

The day's ceremonies had begun with a military parade including in its ranks Mr. Dawes and General Pershing, a squad of men in the uniform of the "minute men" of Lexington, the ancient and honorable artillery company and representatives of patriotic societies. On reaching Faneuil Hall the minute men and color bearers marched down the aisle and the program began with the trooping of the colors.

PROBLEMS TO FACE MINISTRY OF PAINLEVE

New French Body Confronted With Serious Financial Question

PARIS, April 19.—The security of France and solution of the financial problems confronting the French treasury are the two most important points to be dealt with in the Painleve ministrial declaration to be made on Tuesday, it was decided today during the first two cabinet councils of the new government. The document will be short, and excepting the two main questions, will not go into the details of cabinet politics.

Growing popular parlimentary opposition to the presence of M. Cailiaux in the Painleve ministry marked the political day in France. War veterans organized a mild manifestation at the tomb of the Unknown Soldiers, but were gently dispersed by the police when shouts of "Down with the traitor Caillaux" arose.

The appearance of Caillaux's picture on the screens of cinema theatres caused prolonged booing and hissing in two larger establishments on the boulevards.

Deputy Charles Bertrand, president of the inter-allied war veterans federation, served notice on Premier Painleve today that he would formally protest in the chamber against Caillaux being made head of the ministry of finance.

Socialist party leaders have conferred with the new premier and virtually have agreed to support the new ministry upon the broad lines of its declaration to be made on Tuesday. The socialists, however, are reserving their liberty of action upon certain questions, the most important being that of a capital levy.

97 Degrees Is Warmest Sunday

Although few in Wichita Falls would admit Saturday was the warmer, it exceeded by three degrees the temperature here Sunday. Ninety-seven, registered at 5 o'clock on the therometer of the Wichita Falls Electric company's government observation station, was the highest point reached during a day of wilting heat and little breeze.

The absence of the wind which was a salvation Saturday made Sunday seem warmer than it really was. An average wind velocity of four miles an hour prevailed and this gave the sun ample opportunity to get in its worst work.

A minimum of 63 was reached during the day, which was cloudless. Automobiles were out in force all day and, in the afternoon especially, the country roads were crowded.

INSANE MOTHER CLEAVES HEADS OF 2 CHILDREN

Kentucky Woman Goes Violently Wild and Slays Pair

SHE WILL RECOVER

Seeks to End Own Life But Gas and Axe Fail Her

ASHLAND, Ky., April 19.—Mrs. J. E. Sloan became violently insane suddenly here this morning and with a hatchet killed her two sleeping children, Margaret, 16, high school student, and Jack, 18. She then attempted to end her own life with the same weapon after locking herself in the bath room and turning on the gas. Hospital attaches said she probably would recover.

Indications of the tragedy pointed to the son being killed first. He was only struck once and the true aim of the hatchet prevented him from making any outcry to warn his sister who was asleep in an adjoining room. Mrs. Sloan then went into her daughter's room, struck her once and then barricaded herself in the bath room. The daughter died in an ambulance on the way to the hospital.

Found by Husband.

The bodies were found by the husband, John E. Sloan, upon his return from a trip downtown where he had made arrangements to take his family to Coal Grove, Ohio. The demented wife and mother inflicted severe injuries on her arms and body.

The son was said by residents here also to have been insane and often carried a hatchet around with him with which he is alleged to have said that some day he would kill his mother.

JIM'S SCHOOL ACTIONS CAUSE PUZZLEMENT

Why, Ask Officials, Were Appropriations Cut First Time

By EDMUNDS TRAVIS,
Record News Staff.

James E. Ferguson's promise of forthcoming appropriations, made in an interview at Galveston, is reassuring to the state's institutions of higher education. But it raises some puzzling questions. For instance, why were appropriations "cut to the bone" if the state administration is to advocate re-passage of the items eliminated? The explanation offered by former Governor Ferguson seems inadequate. A season of good crops, he says, will improve tax collections to a point where new levies can be made without burdening the people.

It is true that taxpayers will submit to burdens in times of prosperity which they would cry out against in a lean period. But if we are to economize severely on facing every threat of bad weather for crops and spend generously so soon as good weather comes, we are likely to save too much at one time and be downright wasteful at another.

Apparently, a special legislative session is now in prospect, which will be devoted to mixed purposes. Repassage of appropriations and framing of new revenue measures are the principal matters scheduled for the special session which is to convene in December or January. The time will be opportune for saving the state from a large deficit at the end of August, 1926, and also for rescuing our institutions of higher education from their present embarrassing position. But can the treasury and education be equally served at the same time? It would seem not, if past performances of the legisalture are taken into account.

Five Negroes Held In Dallas Assault Case

DALLAS, April 19.—Five negroes are being held in the county jail for questioning in connection with the beating to death last Sunday of Ryan Adkins, well known Dallas business man, and attack his companion, Mrs. Mary Steer, on a road near the Southern Methodist university. It was learned today. A soiled shirt with half erased blood stains on it is said to have given officers a new clue to work on.

Mrs. Steer, for the first time since being attacked, left Baylor hospital for a short time today and went to the office of District Attorney Shelby Cox.

Big Marriages Reaping Harvest of Wealth For All Jewelers In Texas

DALLAS, April 19.—Large marriage ceremonies are coming back into fashion and with them an increased demand for silverware, according to Texas jewelers meeting here tomorrow for their annual convention.

Not only does general prosperity reflect itself in jewelry sales, but now in domestic felicity, making of the business a barometer of the affections, said Marcus Baerwald of Dallas, Retail Jewelers' association.

Wanted It Quiet

For a time shortly after the war, the hurried, quiet marriage was in vogue. The couple slipped into the pastor's study and slipped out again man and wife. But the picture given by Mr. Baerwald shows a different trend in the times, as the unsettled conditions after the war recedes into history. Now, he avers, the brides and grooms have an ambition for a large formal wedding, with its ceremony, its guests and above all its gifts. The tendency is bringing more business to the jewelers, he said.

The convention starting tomorrow for a two-day session will hear talk on this and also on the new time-payment selling fad which jewelers state is sweeping the country and also sweeping many new dollars into their tills. Whether the credit business, or the time-payment sale is beneficial to the business is to be discussed from both sides, some members of the trade maintaining that it is injuring both the customer and the merchant by over-expansion of credit, and others holding that it is just as desirable and proper as the credit sale of an automobile. The latter state that a man is entitled to buy a watch on credit even more so than he is to buy an automobile on credit

SPLIT WIDENS IN M. E. RANKS ON UNIFICATION

Austin Pastor Makes Warm Retort to Opponents

IN SUNDAY SERMON

Says Church Sins When It Opposes Unity Of Branches

AUSTIN, April 19.—Rev. W. F. Bryan, by maintaining that Methodists were committing sin in opposing unification of the northern and southern branches of the church, hurled a reply today into the church argument which is gradually growing more intense in ranks of Southern Methodism over the Chattanooga conference plan of unification. Rev. Bryan, who is pastor of the First M. E. church devoted his morning sermon today to a strong appeal for unification and to answering Bishop J. E. Dickey and other Southern Methodist leaders who are opposed to combining the two branches, under the proposed organization.

Southern Methodists and also some of the Northern branch are tearing open scars 60 years old which all other organizations in the nation have long since forgotten, Rev. Bryan charged in his appeal for members of the Southern faction to dismiss the sectional feeling from the discussion.

Based on Feeling.

He said the opposition is based on sectional feeling revived after 60 years in which the rest of the nation has forgotten the North and South fight, Rev. Bryan said. "Are we to say that the church of the living God, by its dissension and petty prejudices will keep sectional differences alive?"

The minister opened his sermon by saying that he was a Southerner from a family of the south, and that he was only asking for his church to consider the question fairly with love for Methodists of the north. In discussing the attitude of southern church leaders, he said: "The Southern conference is committing a sin in spending money and time to fight the northern faction, and we must answer to God for every step we've taken in opposition to the northerp church. Both churches have sinned by ignoring the rules of separation passed when the churches split in 1845."

"But, when the northern conference failed to ratify the rules of separation and refused to seat the south's fraternal delegate shortly afterward, the church was working under extraordinary conditions; feeling was intense. We should forget the insult to Southern Methodists made under these tense conditions and look at this question from the present view," Rev. Bryan said.

Golfers Play On As Airman Drops 1000 Ft. to Death

Plunging Body Near Tulsa Briefly Halts Game On Course

PARACHUTE FAILS

3,000 Persons Witness Fatal Fall of Stunt Aviator

TULSA, April 19.—(AP)—P. P. (Daredevil) Kohle, 38, today plunged a thousand feet to instant death when a parachute he had invented and was testing for the first time, failed to open. Kohle had been a professional parachute jumper for 25 years and had made approximately 1,000 leaps from balloons and airplanes. He lived in Tulsa, coming here from Omaha, Neb.

3,000 See It

The tragedy took place at a flying field near Tulsa. More than 3,000 persons watched Kohle jump from an airplane piloted by Dick H. Phillips, a commercial aviator. The chute partially opened when Kohle was 100 feet below the plane. It then closed and the man plunged to earth, striking on a golf course near the flying field. Death was instantaneous, his body being badly broken.

Phillips was flying at a 1,200 foot altitude when Kohle jumped, he said.

"When Kohle got ready to jump, he said 'good bye, Dick,'" Phillips said, after the accident. "I said 'good bye, old man. Good luck.' He didn't have it though."

The death of the airman failed to halt golfers who were playing over the course on which Kohle fell. A foursome playing a few hundred yards from the tee on which the man struck watched him fall and then continued around the course. Other golfers teed off while hundreds of people gathered about the body a few yards away.

Had Tested It

Before making the jump, Kohle said that it was the first time in his career that he had ever used a parachute that had not been thoroughly tested by other jumpers. He had tested the parachute with weights before trusting his life with it.

Kohle has made exhibition jumps in practically every state in the union, according to his acquaintances.

She Admits Poisoning Members of Own Family

ST. PAUL, Neb., April 19.—Mrs. Della Sorensen, 28, of St. Paul, who was arrested yesterday on charges of murdering by poisoning seven persons, three of them members of her own family, over a period of seven years, today signed a complete confession to the crimes before County Attorney L. O. Brey.

"I have made this confession voluntarily and of my own accord because I want to tell the truth and because I am sorry for what I have done," Mrs. Sorensen said.

The list of those said to have been killed by Mrs. Sorensen includes her 3-year-old daughter Minnie, whom she confessed to poisoning in September, 1920, because she was ill with St. Vitas dance and she could do nothing with her. She poisoned her daughter, Deloris, a nursing baby, in February, 1923, because she irritated her, the confession continued. In September, 1920, she said, she poisoned her first husband, Joseph Weldman, after a quarrel between the two.

In 1920 Mrs. Sorensen's mother-in-law, Mrs. Wilhelmina Weldman, died two hours after taking medicine administered by the accused woman. "I poisoned her because she was feeble and childish," the confession said.

Quanah Man May Die of Knife Cuts

QUANAH, April 19.—Wes Taylor, age 35, is confined in a Quanah hospital with little chance to recover from three knife wounds received Sunday afternoon in the woods 10 miles north of this place. The injuries were the result of a fight, supposed to have followed a dispute with some friends with him at the time.

A man, residing in an Oklahoma town, was said, by eye witnesses, to have been the other participant, but efforts at a late hour Sunday night to arrest him had been futile. The cause of the fight is not known.

Several friends brought Taylor into Quanah after the disturbance. A hasty examination revealed that he was suffering from a cut in the right side through to internal organs, another cut in the right side that penetrated the liver, and a third cut that entered his right lung. He was unconscious late Sunday and physicians have little hope for his recovery.

ELECTRA, Texas, April 19.—In an eleven inning whip-saw baseball game here this afternoon between Burkburnett Magnolia and the Electra Texhoma teams, the locals nosed out with the long end of a nine-ten count.

Burkburnett scored five runs in the first frame and it appeared that the locals were in for a real drubbing, but in the fifth frame the locals put three men across the mat and in the fourth frame a like number and in the seventh the score was tied 7-7.

Blakely was pulled off first in the eighth for the locals and went to the box and held the visitors to two hits in the remainder of the game, with the winning run being made in the eleventh when Patterson was passed to first and advanced to third by Jarrett.

DALLAS, April 19. — With the first of Texas league baseball at and end, Wichita Falls leads the league with four victories and one defeat. The following is the standing of the teams, including games of today, compiled by William B. Ruggles, statistician of the Texas league:

FORT WORTH, April 19.—THE STOCKYARDS ARE JUST A FEW BLOCKS AWAY. BUT IT'S PANTHER MEAT THE SPUDDERS ARE AFTER.

There was enough Cat gore spilt here this afternoon to satisfy the average Texas league glutton for Panther punishment but Skipper Tanner and several of the Spudders are sore. They got their signals crossed this afternoon in the sixth and lost out on one, possibly two more runs they didn't need, but certainly had earned.

It was a misunderstanding between a coacher and a base runner, an occurance which of this particular nature would happen to the Spudders not more than once in a life time. But it served to arouse the ire of the Skipper to a white heat. Also some of the players are keyed up to a mountainous degree of wrathfulness. The sting of a bleacherites raxberry chirps is more potent than that of a hornet.

The gang will be out after these Cats in Monday's matinee, and barring a miracle they will take 'em to a second skinning. For in this Sabbath day affair the difference in the class of the two clubs was as noticeable as a snow storm in the Sahara desert would be.

The Spudders look to be an all-around better ball club, although be it said they were just a wee bit off color in their hitting. Nobody but Fitzgerald got a home run.

It was estimated by some of the local blades that a greater crowd turned out to see our proud athletes wallop the Panthers in the dust than were present opening day when the Cats hooked with their hated civic rival, Dallas.

Surely was a tough pill for that mammoth audience to swallow. They started filing out of the stands in the eighth inning.

THAT'S HOW GOOD BOB OSBORNE LOOKED OUT THERE ON THE HILL.

Now they're planning to get onto the Humane society about not enforcing the law in regard to cruelty to Cats. An ancient wheeze, but one that is befitting all right, all right tonight. Bubber Jonnard had been held from the affray until today by Skipper Tanner because of a sore arm. But he got in there and cut loose with a couple of such terrifying whips to second during warming up exercise that the Cats—whenever they did get on they were afraid to sneak more than a yard or so off first, much less attempt any pilfering forays.

Yeah, mighty sore.

Fort Worth may win Monday afternoon. There's a ghost of a chance and I am not saying there isn't but, brother, those Panthers don't look to me like the Panther scourge of former years. Either the Spudders are far better this season, or Fort Worth has slipped.. Have it as you would like.

Speaking of Bubber, gosh, it was hot here this afternoon, and between the heat and a bit of indigestion he was a mighty sick man throughout. But, sick as he was, the Skipper couldn't see anybody else for the catching job. Wray Query is limping around with a sprained ankle and spiked knee.

If the Spudders ever get all their injuries what's the rest of the Texas league going to do then? Rip Wheeler's arm is so sore he can hardly raise it above his head. Pete Turgeon's wing is still bothering him. Fits has a game leg, even though it didn't look like it to Cat fans this afternoon. There are lots of other things wrong with the club, all except its fighting spirit, and that's quite healthy. Last of all we find Ping on the casulty list with a black eye. He caught a nasty hop on the left optic the other day in Shreveport, the injury kind of impairing his vision ever since. That's why, probably, that he only hit three home runs in the Louisiana village, and isn't liable to get more than one in the Cat orchard Monday afternoon. Sure is tough.

Secretary Gray wants it made known that there'll be lots of room in Spudder park Tuesday at the Wichita Falls Opener with the Sports. The stands are large and airy anyhow, but bleachers are to be added on both wings.

FORT WORTH, Texas, April 19.—Big boy Carl Williams, the Spudders' most willing worker, right hander obtained from Denver the past winter, will oppose Lefty Augustus Johns on the hurling eminence Monday afternoon in the second and final tilt of the Cat-Spudder series.

Williams and Osborn, the latter who pitched the Spudders to victory here this afternoon, are the sole members of the Wichita Falls staff in good condition at present. The rest of the boys are handicapped by various ailments and minor injuries.

Skipper Tanner announced the selection of Williams tonight and it is hardly likely that he will change his mind.

Manager Ats said just before the games this afternoon that he more than likely would use Johns tomorrow.

Ats is laboring under the misapprehension that the Spudders cannot beat southpaw pitching, or, at least, he was prior to the demise of Lefty Joe Pate today.

Johns is in the best shape he has enjoyed over the past three years, said Ats, and the Cat skipper is pinning much of his pennant hopes this season on the southern exposure artist.

The Spudders couldn't help but win over the Cats today. They had the moral support, luck and everything. Little Freddy Boone, Spudder mascot, drove into the Texas hotel this morning and told the boys he was here to bring them good fortune. He did.

Shortly after Freddy's arrival, a big detachment of Spudder fans began straggling in by one, twos and threes. There were no less than 100 Wichita Falls rooters, most of whom came down overland, at the game.

The Fort Worth management had reserved a fifty seat section for the Wichitans and this was filled in short order, Spudder Secretary J. Will Gray and John Parker, also of the Spudders official staff, worked overtime booking seats for fifty or more extra rooters who were on hand.

Walt's Former Battery Mate Now Developer Of Stars

By NORMAN E. BROWN

If Gabby Street, Walter Johnson's old battery mate, continues to turn out big league baseball material at Muskogee, Okla., the way he has been of late the railroads may find it a paying proposition to run baseball scout specials into that fair metropolis. For the city is becoming quite a mecca for the ivory hunters already, due to Gabby's ability to develop young ball players of higher minor league and big league caliber.

According to W. T. Huff, sporting editor of the Muskogee Daily Phoenix, here are a few results of the Muskogee manager's efforts last season.

Clyde "Pea Ridge" Day, young pitcher, was grabbed by the St. Louis Cardinals for a trial.

Jimmy McLaughlin and "Mule" Watson, were acquired by Sacramento in the Pacific Coast league.

John Paul Jones, outfielder, was signed by Augusta in the South Atlantic league.

Guy Sturdy, first baseman, went to Tulsa in the Western league.

Fair enough for one season. One player sent to the big show and four started for that objective.

All of which makes Muskogee fans swear by Gabby.

Street gained fame for two things during his career as a catcher.

He was Walter Johnson's battery mate during the early years of King Walt's reign.

And he was the first player to catch a baseball dropped to him from the top of Washington monument at the national capital.

Credit From Johnson

Johnson frankly gives Street credit for much of his greatness as a hurler. It was Gabby's masterful handling of the king's speed ball, Street's keen judge of batters and his steadying influence when the "breaks" seemed to be against Walt that helped Johnson hang up many of his great records.

Gabby's feat of catching a ball tossed from the window at the top of the monument shaft drew nation-wide attention. The possibilities of such a feat being performed was discussed for some time before Street attempted it. There were some parlor scientists who asserted that should a man catch the ball in his glove he would be struck down by the force the ball had acquired in its descent.

Others warned Street that a blow on the head from the ball would mean his death. Just why these folk imagined Gabby would elect to catch the ball with his head is unknown.

Gabby, however, was confident he could turn the trick, and did so.

Street left the big show some 10 years ago after spending some dozen years there. He started with Cincinnati in 1903. At the close of his major league career he went to the Southern league and continued to play good ball.

From Operation to War

Street was over the draft age when the war broke out, but he wanted to get into it. His efforts met with refusals until he finally talked army officials into letting him undergo a surgical operation to make him fit for military duty. He enlisted at Camp Slocum, N. Y., in November of 1917 and two months later sailed for overseas. He was with a gas throwing regiment at Armentieres when the Germans started a crushing drive that March. He had been through two gas attacks when he was wounded after 14 days of fighting in the Argonne region. While lying helpless on the field he went through another attack of mustard gas.

Despite his wounds and the effects of the gasing Street got back into baseball at the close of the war. He may well be rated now as the originator of the portable ball club idea. He won two pennants in three years with a team that had no permanent home.

Back from the war Street signed to manage the Chickasha club in the Western association. He won the pennant for the first half of the season. Then the club became homeless. The next year Street's team was transferred to Joplin in the same league and copped. The next season Street lost the flag by half a game.

Fort Worth Unable to Take Advantage of Chances To Score

FITZ GETS HOMER

Freak Hit to Center Field Gives Center Gardner Four Bases

By BLONDY CROSS,
Record News Sports Editor.

FORT WORTH, April 19.—Jonathan Jacob Atz, the well known custodian and tender of undomesticated Cats, is a sad and sorely depressed old gentleman this evening.

Tamed, punched into submission, clearly outfought and outgeneraled this afternoon, Jacob's erstwhile snarling Panthers, bruised and bedraggled, present the melancholy posture of an ordinary docile litter of kittens over which some unkind human has ruthlessly dumped a barrel of ultra frigid H-20.

Not today do the chesty Cowtown rooters strut down main street yapping to the world at large, as has been their wont about the champion Cats, five time winners of the Texas league ganfalon, and a sure-fire shot for a sixth annexation of the old rag.

Scribes Are Silenced.

And Fort Worth scribes are bleating no more that Jakie's felines are supreme in class A baseball, that our noble Spudders, the nearest contenders, carry no singularly potent threat against the laurels of the so-called indomitable champs because Wichita Falls' pitching staff is weak.

Reams of copy have been punched out by the "experts" of late about Buddy Tanner's alleged enfeebled and defenseless hurling corps. But John Robert Osborn, tall El Pasoan, gave 'em the merry guffaw today, and made 'em enjoy it.

For nine frantic frames, husky John Robert flanked the enemy with deadly starboard in and out-shoots, literally hooked 'em to death, gave up seven safeties, one of which had the mange, and yielded a lone tabulation.

Storm Stockyards.

General Tanner's forces stormed the stockyards stockade, swarmed over Joe Pate, the veteran southpaw, in three stanzas for as many counters, and captured Fort Worth, 3 to 1. They'll bring Cowtown, stockyards and all, up to Wichita Falls Tuesday morning. The victory shunted the much maligned Cats into second position, and the Spudders are now riding atop the Texas league percentage ladder—four games in the bag. One lost, and a percentage of $800. The Panther pack has grabbed three tilts, tied one, lost one for a .750 average.

The Spudders will take another fling at Jake's second-placers Monday afternoon.

The scoring punch was furnished by Bodie, Dorman, Distel and Fitzgerald.

The wily Pate made short work of the first three Spudders to face him in the opening canto. Cal, gorgeous George, and Fitz each passed out to the infield, but the rollicking Mr. Bodie led away in the second with a saccharine swat to right center for easy passage to the initial station. Josephus uncorked a jungle heave at little Freddie Dorman, who was next of the line of fire. Ping advanced to second, wee Fred then toed into the Cowtown turf deep, and larruped the next pitch to the same sector in which Bodie had deposited his blow. The clout was good for two bases and Ping checked at the platter standing up.

Clark up, one golden scoring nugget for the Spudders, please. Pate stiffened. Golvin went out on a called third strike. White drew a pass, but the toiling southpaw whiffed Jonnard. Osborn bobbled out, catcher to first.

Atz had sent the southpaw hurler to the hilltop to cut down our heavy hitting left handers, but they couldn't keep all of the southern side swingers from clouting. After there were two away in the third, Fitzgerald stepped in and refrigerated the affair. Lanky Howard didn't waste any energy waiting on Joseph, but caught hold of the second chunk for a ride to the deep center field wall. The agate busted the score board, and nearly knocked Houston out of the Texas league. Fitz migrated around the runways faster than a 30-year-old sprinster cutting in after her last chance on earth to ensnare a male.

Our Howard navigated the paths with such speed that Stormy Davis in the mid garden after he retrived the apple, gave up all hopes of catching him at the plate, but stood against and watched the proceedings with a pallid expression. That home run registered Fort Worth its first 1925 defeat.

The Cats slipped over in the fifth. It was a tough break for Bob. Windle whizzed a hair raising single over short. Moore hoisted out to White. Then Pate, old Josephus himself, took a dirty crack at his flinging opponent. He swished a well-hit drive to center. Fitz lost the ball momentarily in the sun, and couldn't recover quick enough to make the catch. The pellet went on through to the boards, and Windle scored. The blow was a safe hit all right in any man's league, but the kind that Fitzgerald makes a specialty of pulling in. Davis aviated to right, and White retired the side by making a leaping catch of a hard bounder hit by Mullen which went high over the keystoners head. Al came down like a kangaroo jumping from distance and made a quick throw to first beating the runner by inches.

Back in Sixth.

The Spudders got that run back in the sixth. Distel bruised Pate for a brutal wallop to port with two cushions attached. Fitzgerald laid one between the box and third. Pate took the play, started to throw for Distel, saw it was too late, and then lined her to first, but the Spudder made the grade by a step. Bodie drove a fly to deep center and Distel counted after the catch. Fitzgerald was doubled at second when Pate took the relay from Davis and threw back at the keystone to catch Howard on the slide.

The Tanner cast showed up Jacob's own afield. In fact, the contest abounded with brilliant fielding feats from a Spudder angle. Nobody miscued, and they all performed in great style.

Golvin speared a fierce drive in the first round with one hand, beating Davis out of a hit. Distel and Dorman took care of the left side of the inner works in excellent fashion, but Al White, Spudder second sacker, is the lad who waged the real defensive game. Al enacted a sweet run toward first and back almost into right field in the fourth to pick up a slashing roller by Palmer, recovering miraculously and tossing Eddie out at first. There was a runner on and one away at the time. The Spudder keystoner stayed off disaster in the fifth by a brilliant bit of fielding with a Cat rounding third. Al handled several other chances in major league style.

Bog got in trouble in the sixth, but sturdily pitched himself out. A pretty running catch by Fitzgerald to retire the side with runners on first and second saved the game here. Robert stumbled into a hole in the seventh with one out when he walked Pate and Davis hopped onto a cripple for two bases. Joe was held at third, and then Osborne bore down and pitched Mullen into bobbling out to Dorman, who held Pate at third, and then made the throw to first. Robert walked Sears and with Big Ed Konetchy, Cat cleanup bludgeoner at the plate, gritted his teeth and forced the big fellow into bounding to Distel, who tossed to White on second, cutting Sears down for the third time.

There was one out in the eighth and Edington on first by virtue of a four ball donation when Atz sent Jay Kirke in to hit for Windle. Jay couldn't see anything but Robert's smoke. He rolled to the box for a cinch double play, Osborne to Distel to Golvin.

Three batters faced Robert in the ninth.

L. D. RUNNERS TO OPEN CONTESTS

BOSTON, April 19.—Long distance runners of many nationalities, from Canada and from many sections of the United States were gathered here tonight on the eve of the running of the twenty-ninth annual American marathon race of the Boston athletic association tomorrow over a course 26 miles, 385 yards long, from Hopkinton, Mass., to Boston. The winner of this year's race will carry off the national A. A. U. marathon championship.

A sturdy field of runners was included in the list of 121 who sent in their entries from the feature marathon of the United States. Heading the list is Clarence H. Demar, 37-year-old Melrose veteran who has won the event four times—and successively for the last three years. Last year Demar in winning covered the distance in two hours, 29 minutes, 40 1-5 seconds, the fastest time in which the Olympic distance has ever been covered in America.

BEARS 9; EXPORTERS 4

SAN ANTONIO, April 19.—Three home runs by Si Rosenthal, netting five runs together with the splendid pitching by Babe Heitzmann, gave the San Antonio Bears the final game of the series with the Beaumont Exporters, 9 to 4 Sunday afternoon. For six innings it was a pitchers' duel with Lefty Foreman on the hurling end for the Exporters, taking his turn on the hill after playing the outfield the two preceding days. In the first inning Catcher Hale for Beaumont was ordered out of the game by Umpire Daly, and in the eighth Catcher Bernsen was ordered out of the park by Umpire Osborne for some remark made from the Beaumont dugout, and as he refused to go, a policeman was called to escort him out. That left Beaumont without a catcher and Umpire Daly agreed to reinstate Hale. This brought a protest from Pilot Bob Coleman of the Bears, under which the game was finished.

An unannounced ceremony was gone through with in the second inning when Deviveros came to bat for the first time. Calling time, Umpire Daly produced a roll of paper that appeared as if he was going to make an oration, and calling the players of both teams to the home plate, and asking them to bare their heads he presented Mr. Deviveros with the roll in honor of his 21st birthday anniversary. As the Beaumont shortstop opened it a large stick of yellow candy was revealed, of which Deviveros took a large bite and then went out on strikes.

Effective Pitching An Important Factor In First Week's Games

NEW YORK, April 19.—(AP)—Effective pitching of a variety rarely contributed early in the season, coupled with heavy hitting, when oly clusters of safeties would win, put Cincinnati and Cleveland in the pace-making positions of the National and American league races during the first week of the 1925 pennant race.

The Reds went to the front with a rush behind three sensational pitching performances by Donohue, Rixey and Luque, the first of whom won two of the four triumps posted by the senior circuit leaders. Failure of Carl Mays' arm to round to 1924 form cost the team one game in their series with St. Louis, while the entire lineup strengthened its attack toward the close of the week, piling up 12 hits against Pittsburgh Saturday. Donohue's hurling was the dominant factor in Cincinnati's impressive first week. He limited opposing batters a total of ten hits in two games, with the Cardinals and Pirates.

Athletics Get Jump.

Terrific hitting gave the Athletics a jump on the American field early in the week only to have the Cleveland Indians rush to the top with four straight victories in a drive which combined two superb pitching performances by Uhle and Shaute and two batting flurries which rescued less impressive defensive exhibitions. Opening games of their series with St. Louis and Detroit were clinched for the Speaker entry only by sustained hitting throughout the nine inning battles.

The Athletics, checked in their dash by Boston, fought off the challenge of the champion Senators Saturday and maintained a threatening position in the younger circuit under a barrage of base hits which was not interrupted during the week. A total of 59 safe drives hammered out by Connie Mack's club, gave the former world's champions undisputed title to the week's batting honors and was the outstanding feature of their play.

Both Weak.

Both New York clubs showed unmistakable signs of weakness resulting from injuries and sickness among their regulars. The Giants were the quickest to recover after losing their opener at Boston, bracing in the remaining games of their series with Boston and setting back Brooklyn in the first two of a greater New York tournament. Wayland Dean's four hit game against the Braves and the sensational hitting of Frank Walker were welcome revelations to Manager McGraw as the team pulled up into second place Saturday.

The Yankees suffered from the absence of Babe Ruth and shared with Washington seventh place in total hits for the week, each team getting nineteen bingles. Both New York clubs fell behind in distance hitting, the Giants, home run champions of 1924, failing to record a single circuit drive and the Huggins club getting but two.

The week's major league record of games won and lost, runs, hits and errors, opponents runs and home runs, including games of Saturday, follows:

Duray Lowers Speed Record At Culver City

Milton Comes in Second And Cooper Third In Fast Race

CULVER CITY, April 19.—Leon Duray made a world's record when he drove his automobile 25 miles in 11 minutes, ten seconds to win the first event on the program of sprints at the speedway here this afternoon. He made an average speed of 134.22 miles an hour. Tommy Milton finished second, and Earl Cooper third.

Another world's record was smashed in the fifty mile sprint, which Harry Hartz won in 22 minutes 11 seconds with an average speed of 135.2 miles an hour. The former record made by Tommy Milton at Beverley Hills, Cal., September 2, 1922, was 26:1.92.

Peter de Paolo was second, Fred Comer third, and Bennett Hill fourth.

Nurmi Wins First Outdoor Track Race

CHICAGO, April 19.—Paavo Nurmi won the 3,000 meter special race at the Loyola university relays here today finishing the distance in eight minutes, 49 and 3-5 seconds. No records were broken. Willie Ritola finished a few feet behind the world's champion moderate distance runner, while the third man was nearly three quarters of a lap behind the leader. The day was cold and the track wet and soggy which may have accounted for Nurmi's failure to establish a new record as he had expected to do. It was his first outdoor appearance since he came to this country from Finland last winter.

600 FANS OUT FOR INAUGURAL TWILIGHT TILT

Mayor Shepherd Hurls First Ball, Umps Calls It That

Oiler Hurler Has A Snap As Mates Hit Heavily

By MACK TURNER

About 600 baseball fans greeted the opening of the Twilight league Sunday afternoon on the Twilight league diamond. They also greeted the first pitch of Mayor R. E. Shepherd, Umps Queisser called it a ball but it looked mighty close. The fans also witnessed the American Refinery baseball nine take a flying start in the league standing by swamping the Wichita Electric company by the onesided score of 22 to 9.

Ronie Glidewell slid smothly through the nine frames of ball chunking in top style. The young heaver let up on the use of his arm after his mates had hammered out enough runs to win any old ball game. Boss Medford played a nice game at first for his boys and soaked the apple for four hits and was safe once on an error. The big leader romped over the plate for four of his followers 21 counters.

Early Lead

The Oilers jumped into an early lead in the first and held it throughout the game. After the slants of Ronie Glidewell had fed up two strikeouts and a measly grounder in the first half of the first, the Oiler bats were set to flying. C. Hefner was safe at second on Woodson's error and went to third when George fumbled Medford's grounder to second. Andree walked and loaded the sacks, which "Windy" Windham cleaned shortly afterwards with a slashing double down the third-base line. Francis singled to center and Windham counted at the plate. Skeen popped to Kollman. D. Hefner singled to right, sending Francis to third. Hefner took second on Rounsaville's infield out. Glidewell smashed a single to center, scoring Francis and Hefner. C. Hefner lined to Woodson.

None in Second

No one scored in the second. In the third the Electricians counted for a pair. An error and two walks to Kollman, Woodson and Sadler, respectively, filled the sacks. Norwood sent a single to the middle pasture. Kollman and Woodson spiked the rubber on the blow.

The Americans regained one of these in their half. Glidewell singled to right. C. Hefner laid down a sacrifice bunt and was thrown out by Norwood. Glidewell had kept on to third and the first baseman heaved the ball away in an effort to nip the runner at third, Glidewell scored on the error.

The Electric company failed to score in the fourth, but the American Refinery walloped out another pair. Lamar took the hillock for the Electricians in the fourth. After Windham had been retired, Francis singled to left. Skeen was hit by a pitched ball. D. Hefner was safe on the third baseman's error. Francis scored and Skeen took second. Norwood nailed Skeen at third a moment later in an attempted steal, Hefner took second. Rounsaville singled, scoring Hefner and Glidewell skied to Ramsey.

Another pair for Norwood's charges came in the fifth. Woodson was hit by a pitched ball, and stole second. Lamar smacked a single to left, sending Woodson to third, Lamar took second on the throw to third. Lamar was picked off third, Glidewell to Windham. Sadler slashed a single to center scoring Woodson, Ramsey popped to second. Norwood lined a single to right sending Sadler to third. Sadler scored on a passed ball.

Two errors, one hit, a stolen base, and a base on balls netted another pair for the Americans in the fifth.

Five in Sixth

Five more were run over the pan in the sixth. Skeen fanned. D. Hefner walked. Rounsaville doubled to center scoring Hefner. A hit batsman and a walk filled the bases. Generalissimo Medford then slapped a single to right and two runners spiked the rubber, the third man was thrown out at third and Medford took second on the throw to third. Andree singled to center scoring Medford. Andree took second on the throw in. Windham singled and scored Andree.

WICHITA FALLS IS GREAT

Because: City valuation has increased nearly $8,000,000. In 1923 the assessed valuation was $31,409,540, and at the close of 1924 the figures were $34,697,170.

WEST TEXAS IS GREAT

Because: The approximate amount of oil produced in this region in 1924 is roughly estimated at 46,000,000 barrels, selling for approximately $82,000,000 and it is estimated that the by-products of oil, such as natural gas, casing head gasoline, carbon black and others would aggregate $25,000,000 more. NEGLECTING LIFE'S ELEMENTARY JOYS.

In a remarkable autobiographic document, "The Story of My Heart," one Richard Jefferies tells in many pages of the rapture with which in youth the sense of the life of nature filled him. On a certain hilltop, he says:

"I was utterly alone with the sun and the earth. Lying down on the grass, I spoke in my soul to the earth, the sun, the air, and the distant sea, far beyond sight. . . .

"With all the intensity of feeling which exalted me, all the intense communion I held with the earth, the sun and sky, the stars hidden by light, with the ocean—in no manner can the thrilling depth of these feelings be written—with these I prayed as if they were the keys on an instrument . . .

"The great sun, burning with light, the strong earth—dear earth—the warm sky, the pure air, the thought of ocean, the inexpressible beauty of all filled with a rapture, an ecstacy, an inflatus. With this inflatus, too, I prayed . . .

"The prayer, this soul-emotion, was in itself not for an object; it was a passion. I hid my face in the grass. I was wholly prostrated, I lost myself in the wrestle, I was rapt and carried away . . .

"Had any shepherd accidently seen me lying on the turf he would only have thought I was resting a few minutes. I made no outward show. Who could have imagined the whirlwind of passion that was going on in me as I reclined there!"

Surely, a worthless hour of life when measured by the usual standards of commercial value. "Yet," William James commented on this passage, "in what other kind of value can the preciousness of any hour, made precious by any standard, consist, if it consist not in feelings of excited significance like these, engendered in some one, by what the hour contains?"

But so blind and dead does the clamour of our own practical interests make us to all other things, it seems almost as if it were necessary to become worthless as a practical being, if one is to hope to attain any breadth of insight into the impersonal world of worths as such, to have any perception of life's meaning on a large objective scale. Says James:

"Only your mystic, your dreamer, or your insolvent tramp can afford so sympathetic an occupation which will change the usual standards of human value in the twinkling of an eye, giving to foolishness a place ahead of power, and laying low in a minute the distinctions which it takes a hard-working conventional man a lifetime to build up. You may be a prophet at this rate; but you cannot be a worldly success."

Life is always worth living, if one have such responsive sensibilities as Jeffries lying on the hilltop. But most of us have got far, far away from Nature. Our training, our environment, tends to make us overlook the common, the peculiar sources of joy connected with our simpler functions, and we grow insensible to life's more elementary and general goods and joys.

ANOTHER VAST IRRIGATION PROJECT.

And now the fulfillment of a dream has come true. Land owners in the counties of Medina, Atascosa and Bexar are concerned. They have formed a water improvement district and have called an election to issue $2,500,000 of bonds. It is said these bonds will take over the entire plant, including the Medina dam across the Medina river, the several diversion dams and all the land and canals.

Many years ago a practical dreamer planned the work. He not only planned but he interested others. Financiers say the original cost was close to $6,000,000, but the system was never completed, the dreamer never realized on his dream and litigation has kept it in the courts for years.

More than 40,000 acres of land will be irrigated under the plan, and the land will be developed of five units of about 8,000 acres each. Some of these units are now fully developed and water is being supplied by the large reservoir created by the Medina dam.

Wherever the water flows it can be impounded; wherever the floodwater falls it can be caught and conserved. There are millions of acres of semi-aried lands in Texas. Some day, in the not far distant future, the floodwaters will be caught and conserved and these lands will blossom like the rose garden.

They are doing it now in many lower Rio Grande counties. They are doing it in west Texas. They are going to do it in the Medina valley.

A WONDER CITY.

New York has a hotel association. It was organized in 1878. It had 12 hotels with 2,300 rooms in that year. It has 136 hotels with 40,000 rooms now. Hotels in the City Hotel association of New York have an improved property valuation of more than $200,000,000, they pay over $5,000,000 in taxes and have over 28,000 employes on their payroll. It must be true that New York is the wonder city of the world.

THE SIXTH SENSE.

There has always been a feeling of lively interest in the great sea of nescience that surrounds our science.

There are a lot more things that we do not know than we do know.

Mrs. Henry Sidgwick of the Society of Psychical Research has recorded in a paper the experiments in thought transference carried out by Professor Gilbert Murray, in which the Earl of Balfour recently participated.

confined to the usual five senses of sight, sound.

The way we sense the infinite around us is not smell, taste and touch. It is conceived that we may appreciate another's thought by some other sense than these.

As in the case of telepathy there may be thought transference without any purely physical process. There may be brain waves which are transmitted through the ether and which are received without the of some to penetrate into the unknown, but so far as is now established there has been no distinct and definite understanding of mental telepathy. We are still moving in a sea of mystery and the facts of mental telepathy have not yet been firmly established.

Mrs. Sidgwick classifies her subjects into five divisions; first, scenes of incidents in which friends and acquaintances are concerned; second, scenes or incidents from books or plays; third, fantastic scenes, including dreams; fourth, particular quotations asked for; and fifth, scenes in which human beings do not appear.

The highest percentage of success was in the third class, and her explanation is that these had a more explosive quality and were perceived with the greatest attention.

Professor Murray in his presidential address to the society declared that he was inclined provisionally to admit the likelihood that we may become directly sensitive to another person's state of mind.

This statement will require a lot more proof.

Thought transference at present is an occasional and unusual incident and the laws underlying it have not yet been discovered. What the future has in store for us, of course, we cannot tell.

NEW YORK TRIUMPHET

And it has come to pass that New York has been proclaimed the cleanest of all the world's largest cities in the annual report of the committee of 14 which has completed twenty years work in helping to eliminate commercialised vice from the great metropolis of the world.

No so bad for Mayor John F. Hylan who is nearing his eighth year as chief executive of the city and its police department which covers Manhattan Island and adjacent territory.

In the report it is said that street conditions in the city of New York are so good that foreign visitors are mystified and that professional exploiters of women have practically vanished. It is possible to keep a great city clean.

DOHENY ON DECK.

Standard Oil is the owner of the new Pan-American Eastern company, which will take over all of the Mexican and South American property of the Pan-American organization and also the tanker fleet, pipe line and refineries in Mexico and on the Atlantic Seaboard.

Edward L. Doheny parted with these interests when the Standard handed him its check for $38,000,000.

Now there is to be a Pan-American Western company which will handle the affairs of the organization on the Pacific coast. King Doheny will be the boss.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

"For to Admire and for to See."

It is good for the young to travel.

It is wise for them to do their traveling before they have a wife and family to support.

They may mean to travel later on, after they have attained a competence.

But a competence is so hard to come by that many people who were born with the spirit of a rover, and the desire "for to admire and for to see" never get very far beyond the limits of their home town after they have taken up the load we all must carry.

But mere traveling does not mean that one will have a real acquaintance with the places or countries traveled through.

I have seen Americans and Europeans in the city of Rome, who walked through the ruins of the past talking about the price of eggs at home, who stopped outside of St. Peter's in conversation with somebody they had met from the same country, and became so interested in the happenings in their native country that they never entered at all.

I have seen men on shipboard, passing through the Mediterranean who sat and played cards for the entire afternoon, never once looking out of the window at the Isles of Greece or the shores of Africa.

The average sailor who voyages around the world today remembers more about the moving pictures he sees ashore than he does about the sights of the strange exotic ports he has visited.

Hundreds of people who go regularly to Paris can tell you all about the best places to eat, and the locations where you are most likely to see your fellow countrymen, but who know as much about the spots which make Paris a delight to educated and well read people as they do about Zanzibar.

One must take with him an abiding interest in history and beauty to get anything out of travel.

With that equipment it is one of the greatest joys in life, and for that reason it is well to avail oneself of it at the first opportunity, lest another opportunity may never arrive.

But there is abundant comfort nowadays for those who cannot travel.

The moving pictures bring into the home town the sights and scenes of all the world, and within the life time of those who read this newspaper they will be operated in connection with the radio so that the sounds as well as the sights can be enjoyed without the listeners stirring beyond the city limits.

And always at home there are people, which constitute the world in miniature—and there are hills and streams and sunsets in one's own home as well as in the Alps or in mid Africa.

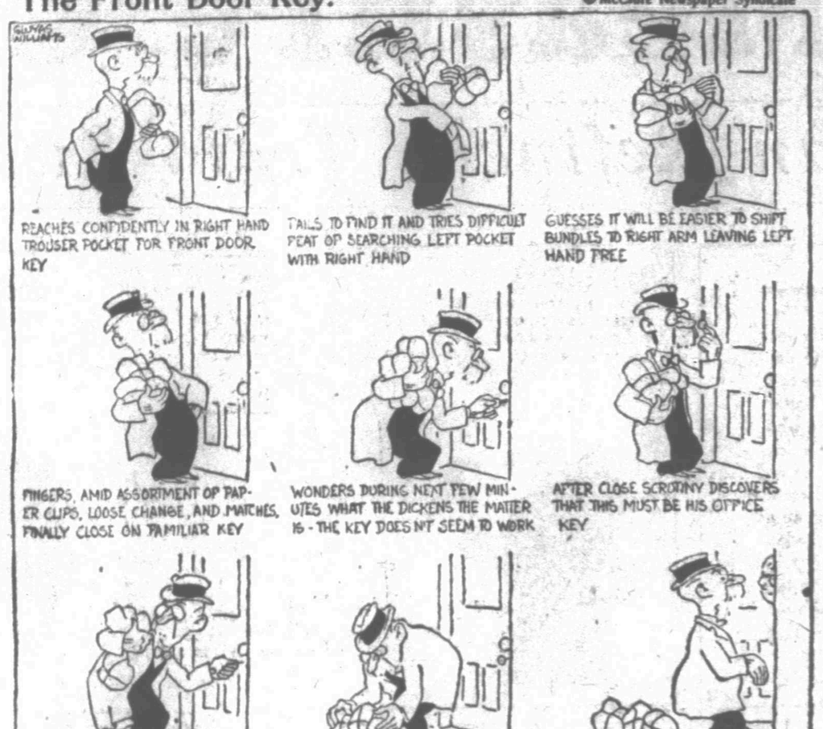

To know the whole wide world is good, but to known one's own country, or even one's own county is a source of never ending pleasure, if one has learned how to understand and to appreciate and to enjoy it.

A thousand people travel today where ten traveled fifty years ago, but of the thousand who travel there are perhaps only ten to whom travel means anything but going from one town to another and growing vastly bored in the process.

What Today Means To You

By MARY BLAKE

Aries

The workings of today are quite favorable in the early part of the day, and reveal that any concentrated effort, even though it be along entirely fresh lines to those you are accustomed, will bring to you successful efforts. In the afternoon the conditions undergo somewhat of a change and counsel not only care and deliberation, but demand the exercise of self-restraint, and self control in order to avoid the yielding to impulse and the consequent disaster attending in such course. In the evening the signs reveal a very contented atmosphere, which will endgender emotions of the best character, awakening affection and inspiring that which is best in one's nature. Under these circumstances engagements or marriages will be productive of full happiness and contentment.

A child brought into the world today will have fairly good health during its infancy, although it will naturally be subject to the inherent ailments of infancy. Proper care and regular nutrition will offset this condition and enable it to attain the physical condition desired for it.

Its disposition will be rather erratic and its character somewhat unreliable. It will not have that respect for truth or that love of right doing which distinguishes the good from the bad, but if the proper disciplinary measures are adopted it can be taught to see the error of its way, and easily overcome weaknesses which otherwise would become failings. This is not a bad sign, but it should not be allowed to carry this desire on its part to extremes and should be forced to associate as much as possible with playmates of an equal age.

If today is your birthday, you have secured a considerable measure of material success, but in thus attaining it, have incurred a great deal of criticism and possibly caused some hardship and suffering. This has been brought about by your extreme character or positive opinions, your headstrong actions and your fixed determination to succeed in spite of-all obstacles. You show little or no compassion for others that have stood in your way, and you show no compassion in either pushing them aside or trampling upon them. You are easily influenced by flattery and by praise, and any effort to drive you is bound to meet with failure. You possess many admirable principles in spite of your numerous failings, and your loyalty is unquestioned. Your truthfulness is never doubted and your honesty of purpose is sincere. You are seen at your best in your family circle, where you do not attempt to exercise that power which seems to characterize your outside efforts. In your home life you are absolutely happy, as all those who belong to you or to whom you belong admire, respect and love you.

SPLAWN BACK TO AUSTIN

Texas President Returns From Dallas Conference.

AUSTIN, April 19.—Dr. Walter Splawn, president of the University of Texas, returned Saturday from a conference at Dallas with R. G. Storey, chairman of the university committee who represents the school in any court test o fthe new oil royalties law. No course of procedure has been decided upon Dr. Splawn said by the regents, pending action by other state officials.

Meantime, Terasurer W. Gregory Hatcher has notified Land Commissioner J. T. Robison he will accept for the university available fund the $54,377 oil royalty checks now in Robison's possession; but insisting that Robison should allocate the royaltien to the available fund rather than to the permanent fund as under the old law, or to send them to the treasury without allocation.

MATTERS OF HEALTH

From east to west,
From north to south;
Full many a hook's
In a goggleeye's mouth.

He lives long who walks far.

Surplus food begets surplus fat.

If you wish to start something, stop sleeping.

And nothing is better
For tired office blokes,
Than going a round
In eighty odd strokes.

If you'd lower your blood pressure raise vegetables.

For a garden plot'll feed a lot and gives 'em recreation.

When the waist line exceeds the chest line you're in bad form.

When you're worried, Old Timer,
And plumb full o' doubt,
Put a sign on your office—
"For the present I'm out."

Call up any fishin' hole these days and you'll find the line's busy.

POEMS THAT LIVE

THE DAFFODILS.

I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills,
When all at once I saw a crowd,
A host of golden daffodils,
Beside the lake, beneath the trees,
Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.

Continuous as the stars that shine
And twinkle on the milky way,
They stretched in never ending line
Along the margin of the bay;
Ten thousand saw I at a glance,
Tossing their heads in sprightly dance.

The waves beside them danced, but they
Outdid the sparkling waves in glee—
A poet could not but be gay
In such a jocund company!
I gazed—and gazed—but little thought
What wealth to me the show had brought.

For oft, when on my couch I lie
In vacant or in pensive mood,
They flash upon that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude;
And then my heart with pleasure fills,
And dances with the daffodils.

Wichita Takes Kindly to New Mailing Rates

Cit Not As Displeased As Other Towns Over the State

Contrary to report conditions in other sections of the country where considerable dissatisfaction has been found with the new postal rates, Wichita Falls is taking kindly to them. This is the belief of Postmaster O. P. Maricle, who declares that "they get a little mixed up for a while, but that will all be straightened out in a short time; and every one I've talked to is more than glad to pay the extra charge to allow the salary increases for the boys here."

The postmaster explained that the postal employe raises, to meet which the increases in certain class of mail matter were established, brings about $25,000 more a year to Wichita Falls in the shape of salaries.

Widespread

Public dissatisfaction with the changes prescribed in the new postal rate law seems to be somewhat widespread. Increases are numerous and more or less complicated, but Mr. Maricle believes that will be approved here when they are thoroughly understood.

At first glance the rates do seem incongruous. Only the postage on letters is left unchanged. Rates on all other varieties are changed. The regulation post card, with a one cent stamp, remain. Picture postals and other private mailing cards must be placed in envelopes that sell for one and an-half cents. Circulars and other advertising matter that heretofore has gone as post card mail must be slipped in the one and one-half cent envelope.

Quite as odd are the new special delivery charges, which run from 12 to 20 cents, according to the weight of the package. Formerly, 10 cents would insure speedy delivery of any package.

Most Remarkable

What is the most remarkable of all the new rates is the charge of 25 cents for careful handling of fragile packages. This item, like the special delivery schedule, is difficult of explanation, although Mr. Maricle thinks no excessive amount of opposition to it has developed here. Fragile packets have formerly been given careful handling by the mail service merely as a matter of good business and plain duty.

The rates on money orders; the charge of three cents for a receipt for insured mail matter, and other alterations in the whole postal schedule are also odd. Some, perhaps, are unjust. Wichita Falls, though, the postmaster says, is willing to do its part to allow better salaries for the public servants whose work assures prompt and efficient postal service.

Irrigation

TERRACING LAND.

Under rainfall conditions and on hilly land where the soil is dense and hard the farmers often have trouble with their farms washing badly. One of the best remedies for preventing such damage is to build terraces.

Terraces are also built by irrigation farmers who are raising crops which they irrigate by flooding. Building what is know as contour checks has the same effect as terracing so far as flood irrigation is concerned.

Contour checks are expensive to build and require the services of an engineer or some engineering knowledg on the part of the farmer. If a farmer can handle an ordinary farm level he can get by.

The same thing applies to terracing when it is done for irrigation, except that it is far more expensive as more dirt has to be moved.

When one considers the large amount of labor and expense involved in putting a new farm in shape for the simplest kind of irrigation it hardly seems that building terraces on this project would be justified.

Texas farmers, especially east Texas farmers have long been advised, and rightly so, to terrace their farms wherever the slope of their land was great enough to cause washing from heavy rains.

But they should delay going to this expense here on this project until they have learned more about handling irrigation water. By that time they will have probably come to the conclusion that but little if any terracing will have to be done.

HOW IT STARTED

Toasting.

For the social creature who aspires to prominence and popularity at the convivial board there are books and books of clever toasts. But they dot not tell us why we call these complimentary little speeches "toasts" nor why the subject of them is "toasted," or called the "toast." But history that sheds light into the remotest corners, has preserved a rich tale.

When glasses were goblets and wine was drunk out of cups, "toast" was just as it is today—bread toasted. And no old-time goblet of wine was complete without its floating piece of toast which was supposed to give the drink a flavor. So, instead of saying "I drink to thee" it was "I toast thee" or "a toast to thee."

In the days of Addison and Steele the Bath was quite a social function in England. As in our day people congregate at the seashore, court ladies and gentlemen met at the famous "Baths" in town and held salon.

One day when a noted beauty was at the Cross Baths a young courtier took a glass of water in which she stood and proposed her health to the company, at which another suitor jumped up and exclaimed that though he had no taste for the liquor he would have the toast! It takes two to make a bargain, and whether or not the toast agreed we do not know but the appellation has survived to our day.

More Truth Than Poetry

A DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

I want to tune in to the Far Away;
It is always a joy to me
To listen to people that sing or play
By the side of some distant sea.
I always am trying to get a song
That is sung on the beach at Nome,
But I never do, for my wife is strong
For the stations right here at home.

As faint and thin as the fluttering moan
Of the breeze on the fields afar,
I can sometimes catch the tinkling tone
Which perhaps is from Zanzibar.
But when I am barking with straining ears,
And with every nerve a-thrill,
My wife says gently: "Now try, my dear,
To get me the Jazzbo Grill."

The tunes from a thousand cities flow
Through the room as the hours fly;
I might catch them all on the radio,
Had I only the chance to try.
But whenever, far out in the air I reach,
To capture them in their flight,
My wife observes: "There's a splendid speech
At the new town hall tonight."

Some day however I'll have my will;
Nobody shall say me nay.
I will listen with heart and soul a-thrill
To the voices of far away.
No more my over-domestic wife,
My questioning mind shall fret,
I will make an end of dispute and strife—
I will get her another set!

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

THE PROBLEM OF THE TIRED BUSINESS MAN'S IRRITABILITY AT HOME CAN BE SOLVED, NOT BY SCENES AND SQUABBLES, BUT BY LESS TEMPER ON THE HUSBAND'S SIDE AND MORE SALVE ON THE WIFE'S PART

A man wants to know if I don't think his wife is very wrong and foolish to be hurt and offended because he is often irritable and cross at home.

He says that she knows that he adores her, and that he is a model of all the standardized domestic virtues, but that he works all day under a terrific strain, and by the time that night comes his nerves are worn to a frazzle. He thinks that his wife should appreciate this, and that instead of further rasping them with argumentation, she should apply a soothing emolument to them.

> I agree with the gentleman that it is always the part of prudence for a wife to give the soft answer that turneth away wrath, instead of retorting with a snappy comeback when her husband makes a nasty crack at her. It certainly doesn't add to the peace and harmony of a home for a wife to be ready to jump into her fighting clothes every time her husband makes a pass at her. Nothing comes of family rows but bitterness, and anger, and disillusion. Nor does any love long survive them.

I also agree with the gentleman that any woman who has cut her wisdom teeth on matrimony should be able to assay her husband's temper and tell how much of it is due to raw nerves and how much to pure cussedness, and so know when to spread the salve and when to hand him a solar plexus blow.

> Furthermore, I opine that a wife who starts anything with her husband of an evening until after he is fed and rested, and has had his smoke and his paper unmolested, deserves to be put in the Home for the Incurably Feeble-Minded for the balance of her natural life or else bound over by the courts to keep the peace. For she is either lacking in brains or just loves a fight for the fight's sake.

It is the greatest possible pity that women haven't more sense of humor than they have, for if they did they would be able to laugh at many things their husbands do over which they shed scalding tears. It would enable them to see how really funny it is for a big man to get into a babyish tantrum over nothing and how much easier it is to kid him out of it than it is to make a scene over it.

Unhappily, however, few women have a funny bone, and fewer still can see the joke when it is on them, and so husbands and wives meet temper with temper and irritability with irritability, and the domestic war goes merrily on.

> Certainly, the woman who is married to a nervous, overworked man might well do a little mental balancing of accounts and check off a lot of temper, and impatience, and unreason, and fault finding against the fiery her husband gives her, and the success he has achieved of which she is so proud and which he has literally bought with his life's blood. She might well forgive his faults and deal leniently with them, since they are the direct result of his struggle to lap her in luxury.

She is, believe me, a discerning and a tender wife who answers her husband's irascible speeches with a pat on the head and a "there, there, it's all right," as she would a sick and fretful child, instead of going to the mat with him.

So much for the wife's side of the question. Now for the husband's.

> Business furnishes no alibi for surliness, and grouchiness, and general disagreeableness. No man has a right to come home at night and dump down on his own hearthstone all the nerves, and temper, and irritability he has kept bottled up in him all day.
> Because a woman has the misfortune to be a man's wife is no reason he should insult her and say to her things that he would not say to any other woman who had an able-bodied brother, or that he would dream of saying to any woman who had $10 to spend across his counter, or who was his client, or his patient.

If a man can control his temper and his tongue in dealing with the outside world, he can control it still at home. If he can be polite and courteous and flattering to other women, he can make the same gracious speeches to his wife, instead of growling like a bear when she asks him a simple question. And if he has any sense of honor, he will be the more careful of what he says to his wife than he is to the others, because his attitude means nothing to them, but his wife's whole happiness is dependent on the way he treats her.

> Nor does the fact that he overworks excuse a man's irritability at home. Nine wives out of ten would rather have a little more amiability in their husbands and less money, if they had to choose between the two.
> The beloved husband and wives are not those who work themselves into a state of nervous irritability for their families. They are those who keep themselves calm, and good natured, and pleasant to live with.

To expect other people to overlook our temper and forgive the cross and cruel speeches that we flash out at them without provocation is expecting too much of human nature.

West Texas Owes Her Growth to Those Men Who Believed In Her

Editor's Note: This is another of a series of articles by Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald on the winning of west Texas. They are now being published in The Record News in connection with the coming convention of the west Texas chamber of commerce at Mineral Wells to which Wichita Falls will send a large delegation. Wichitans should make their reservations now with the chamber of commerce committee.

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Record News Staff

Texas is today a billion dollar agriculture state. Texas has all varieties of soil as well as all varities of plants. Texas produces all the cereals and feed stuffs. Texas is a fruit producing state. Texas is a vegetable producing state. Texas is far in the lead as an egg producing state, and when it comes to poultry, West Texas need not be ashamed of its record made in recent years. It is as a wheat producing section that West Texas is coming into its own some day. There are elevators in every important center from Amarillo to Fort Worth. There are flouring mills in every important center from Amarillo to Fort Worth.

Frank Kell Leader

For 30 years the main operator in the grain elavtor and flour milling world has been Frank Kell. Long before the discovery of petroleum in the mid-continent territory the wheat farmers of Wichita county were in evidence and in all the upper country those familiar with wheat raising were convinced that the soil was there to make West Texas or the Panhandle and the plains as productive a grain center as Kansas or the Dakotas. By chance the writer heard an interesting conversation several years since which took place between Hale Holden and Mr. Kell as to the future of the Panhandle and the Plains.

Mr. Kell said to the president of the Burlington, "Nature intended the territory traversed by the Fort Worth and Denver as a wheat producing land and the day is coming when West Texas will yield a larger crop of wheat annually than Kansas at its best." Representative Marvin Jones, the Panhandle Kid, is authority for the statement that there are 20,000,000 acres of virgin soil in the northwest Panhandle and the lower Panhandle ready for cultivation where all the grains and feed stuffs and vegetables and fruits and berries of the temperate zone may be cultivated with handsome profit to those who do the labor.

Newcomers Settled

Since Marvin Jones made this statement thousands of newcomers have made homes for themselves in the district which he has the honor to represent in the American congress. There are more swine breeders in West Texas today than there were in the entire state of Texas 30 years ago. There are more people interested in the turkey and chicken industry in West Texas than all Texas could boast of 30 years ago. Every year train loads of turkeys and chickens are shipped to the northern markets and every week train loads of eggs are packed and shipped from West Texas to the great centers of population of a republic. There are dairy farms everywhere in West Texas. West Texans are not going to Kansas for their flour, to Missouri for their bacon, to Wisconsin for their butter or to New England and New York for condensed milk and canned fruits and vegetables. They are growing them at home and supplying their table, from their own orchards and gardens.

Write a Book

Some day an ambitious Texan should write a book on what state and county fairs and fat stock shows have done for the advancement of Texas and the education of the people of Texas. Next to the iron horse and the press, these institutions have done more than any other agency.

Col. Frank P. Holland, a newspaper publisher, assisted in the launching of the Dallas State fair 35 years ago. It has been one of the successes of the world and yearly a greater number of people enter its gates than enter the gates of any like institution on the North American continent.

Fort Worth, not to be outdone by Dallas, established an annual fat stock show, which has been worth millions and millions of dollars as an educator. Now there are fairs in nearly every West Texas county, there are district fairs and there are expositions which are potential influences in making the people of Texas read and think as well as move onward. Waco has a Cotton Palace and exposition which has but few rivals under Old Glory.

These are facts that the 5,000 delegates and visitors, including 50 brass bands, should not overlook when they assemble at Mineral Wells in the coming month of May. Dreamers, practical dreamers, are the builders of empires and the workers of the world are the winners of the world.

Megargel Rebuilds Burned Section

MEGARGEL, April 19.—Work is progressing nicely on buildings in area burned out March 17. Creighton Mercantile company building with fifty-foot front is about half finished and work is started on J. M. Spoonts and W. L. Lovern buildings each with fifty-foot frontage. Horany and Bird have their building about half done.

J. M. Spoonts brick block across from burned area is ready for inside finish, this makes a total of eleven brick buildings in course of construction here.

Work in both Harmel and Field south of town are handicapped account of lack of water, though about ten cars are shipped in from Seymour each day. Had two light rains this week but not sufficient to put water in tanks for drilling purposes, but will start farm work.

Coolidge Speaks To Women's Fair Over the Radio

President Advocates A Soundness In All Business

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Advocating sound methods in business and the home as well as in the conduct of government, President Coolidge in a radio address delivered today in connection with the opening in Chicago of the Woman's World fair asserted there is little inspiration to the public to be business-like in their domestic affairs if governmental activities are managed in a lax and careless manner.

"If the people, in the daily management of their modest dramatic affairs," said the president, "know that the great interest of their government, and their semi-public institutions are dealt with in a spirit f laxity and mood of carelessness they find little inspiration to apply better methods in the management of their own concerns. The great business operations which are constantly under the public eye ought to be handled so as to make them an example and sound procedure.

"The importance of sound business methods was never so great as it is today. It is particularly true that government business should be placed on a basis of rigid economy."

The president delivered the address from his study. It was carried by wire to a Chicago broadcasting station after Mrs. Coolidge had pressed a button opening the doors of the fair. She used a transmission set, fashioned of gold mined in the Klondike and utilized for the first time by President Taft in opening the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition in 1909.

Megargel Men Ship Steers to Kansas

MEGARGEL, April 19. — B. F. Howard and R. Z. Blackburn have bought nine hundred two-year-old steers from Davis Brothers and shipped them yesterday to Kansas points making a total of thirty cars.

They buy cattle here each spring and ship north for pasture and feed.

UDDEN NOT TO LEAVE

AUSTIN, April 19.—Rumors that Dr. J. A. Udden, director of economic geology at the University of Texas was about to leave the university were declared by President Walter Splawn Saturday to be "wholly without foundation."

The Felon of the Film —By James J. Montague

If you are built like a half back, possess hard, inscrutable gray eyes, and have withal the manner of a parlor-bred aristocrat you can earn good money as a Film Felon. Education is not necessary. That is supplied by the scenario writer who gets it in turn from the author of the detective story which he prepares for the screen. But then education is not requisite for any other film position. Look what the heroes get away with.

The work of the Film Felon is for the most part easy and pleasant. His chief duty is to foil the hero, and most movie heroes could be foiled by a six-year-old child without straining the infant's native rascality in the least. There are moments however, when considerable athletic ability is necessary, and that is the reason why strength and agility are useful.

The Film Felon in his time plays many parts. He begins with simple hold-ups in which he is required to tap the hero or the hero's friends and associates over the head with a cotton stuffed black jack, after which he goes through their pockets, extracts a roll of green paper and registers the delight born of having got a million dollars in cold cash with so little difficulty. Later on he must appear behind prison bars in a striped suit. They have not been wearing striped suits in penitentiaries since Jimmy Hope did his last bit some thirty years ago, but the movie public would refuse to believe that a place was a penitentiary unless all the inmates were thus arrayed.

After a little hold up work a few porch climbing stunts, and a kidnaping or two, the Film Felon is promoted to the role of assistant to a Master Mind in Crime.

His duties now become more complicated. He spends many feet of celluloid in a laboratory working on various forms of poison which cause instant death without a trace. These poisons he takes to the Master Mind who dusts them on the gold tips of cigarettes, or flicks them into cocktails, with the result that everybody who comes to his house party is found dead the day afterward, and the police have no guess as to what happened to them.

The assistant also has to serve as butler in the house owned by the Master Mind, and in that capacity listen to the conversations of the guests in order to find out where they left the diamonds and bonds when they came to the party. This information he conveys to the Master Mind who sends his satrapa out to get these valuables and hide them where they will not be found until the day that has been set for the grand escape.

At last the Film Felon becomes a Master Mind himself, and after that his life is one long luxurious dream. With the loot which the scenario writer was kind enough to acquire for him before he appeared on any film he buys a magnificent mansion situated in a tree dotted park on the outskirts of a great city.

With this money he has gained the esteem of all the best people, many of them being bank presidents and foreign noblemen who have come to this country to make drives to buy food for the people of their native lands, and who usually carry the money raised by these drives around in their clothes.

The Master Mind, having entered a criminal career as soon as his course at Harvard had been rounded out by four years of scientific work at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has a wide acquaintance in the underworld. All the employees about his place, from the under gardner up to the aristocratic appearing private secretary are crooks of various degrees, ranging from porch climber to confidence man.

These criminals begin to work on the guests as soon as the latter arrive, using gentle or violent tactics according to the ease or difficulty they encounter in getting money for their employer.

The Master Mind strolls about the house, superintending the miner drugging and sandbaggings that take care of the more trustful of the victims. Always he is clad in immaculate evening dress, and never does he ruffle his hair or soil his long, slender beautifully manicured fingers with any rough stuff until toward the end of the film.

It is at this point that the hero enters, disguised as the man who has come to collect the lighting bill. Naturally this disguise is penetrated by the Master Mind instantly, and all the help are sent by ones or twos or threes to eject the intruder in such a manner that his suspicions of the place and what is going on there will not be excited. It never seems to occur to them that if his suspicions had not been excited in advance he wouldn't be there.

The hero, who has mastered Master Minds so frequently that the work is child's play to him, has little trouble with the help. He waves away a drugged cigar that the under butler hands him, he flips a dagger from the grip of the parlor maid who is about to thrust it into his heart, and removing the table cloth from the table makes a thong of it and binds her to the Sheraton sideboard.

When a footstep creeps up behind him with a caraffe which he means to use as a black jack, the hero simply steps to one side as the blow falls, and the caraffe is shivered to approximately a thousand pieces. The would-be assailant is then gagged and locked in the silverware closet.

It is at this juncture that the Master Mind enters. From his library where he has remained alertly listening, he has heard through the detectaphone the sounds of the struggles his assistants have had with the hero. So slipped a long slender knife into one pocket, a six-shooter into another, a phial of phosgene gas into one pocket, a six-shooter into another, a phial of phosgene gas into a third, and taking a heavy iron cane in his hand, he strolls into the dining room.

Here begins a terrific struggle. The Master Mind is the aggressor, and he matches his skill, his training and his steel nerves against the power of conscious rectitude which is about the only weapon the hero wields.

There is a fight which lasts for several thousand feet. For a time the attire of neither contender is mussed. But at last a blow from the heavy cane propels the hero across the room, and when he arises there is a sinister bruise over one eye. Instantly the hero picks up a chair which he slams so violently on the Master Minds' hair that he disturbs its smoothness a bit. At last the phosgene gas is loosed, and it would do its lethal work except that a bone-head helper of the Master Mind's rushes in to his boss's assistance, and breathes it all up before the hero can get a sniff of it. For this rashness the assistant pays with his life.

In the end of course the Master Mind loses, and is either despatched on the spot, or led away to the electric chair. But during most of the play and all of the fight he shares with the hero the good wishes and sympathy of the audience.

His is really a fat part, and one which, as is indicated by the crime statistics serves far more generally an example than does that of the hero. Just now the ranks of Film Felons are a little overcrowded, but the tricks of the profession are great and there is no telling when there will be a fresh demand for them. So if you think favorably of the business as a career, hurry up and acquire a fine stature and abundant resistance to punishment and you may get a wire summoning you to Hollywood at almost any time.

Through A Woman's Eyes

Married 75 Years and Never Sorry.

In the little town of Wyckoff, N. J., a public holiday was decreed the other day for the unique purpose of helping to celebrate a diamond wedding anniversary. The happy couple are Mr. and Mrs. John C. Demarest who have been married, and to each other only, for 75 years, who have survived to tell the tale and who have never been sorry! That is vouched for by all who know them.

"So it's 75 years ago today," says "Uncle Johnny," as they call him, though he's a great grandfather, and 96 years old."

"Seventy-five years!" echoes "Aunt Susan," 93.

"Speech, speech!" call the children and grandchildren and great-grandchildren and all the relatives and friends and townspeople who have knocked off work and closed their shops and given the schoolchildren a holiday to celebrate the diamond wedding.

So Uncle Johnny tells of the way he first brought his bride from New York to Jersey. Today the trip is less than an hour's ride in a comfortable train. But back in 1856, as Uncle Johnny well remembers, it took two days by ox team and crossing the river on a flatboat propelled by horse-treading power! So this happy pair at their diamond wedding think it's a wonderful world that we live in today—a magic Arabian nights dream world indeed!

Then Uncle Johnny goes on to say, "Some folk think it's wonderful to be married 75 years, (what he means is to say married) but it isn't at all. If the newlyweds of today followed the rules that Ma and I have consistently lived up to, the divorce lawyers would be starving.

"On the part of the husband it's just a matter of keeping in mind that Ma is the same girl he was so madly in love with at the beginning.

"When Susan and I got married we realized we would have to work hard. I believe that has been the foundation of our good health and our happiness—working together.

"We have had little difference, Ma and I, but we have always forgiven mutual faults. She has helped me and I have helped her—we have pulled together all these years on the same end of the rope.

"Married life, to be successful, must be a series of compromises, of giving in. Pride of opinion must be sacrificed for the happiness of the family. That is the main consideration. In any differences that may arise, let the husband remember that his wife is the very same girl to whom he used to yield in all matters of dispute in the days of courtship and the honeymoon. That's about all I have to say."

Uncle Johnny generously puts the burden on the husband: Aunt Susan, no doubt, would put it on the wife. And that is why they have been happy. Instead of passing the buck, each was eager to do his or her part.

Nothing that Uncle Johnny says is new. Neither is happiness new, nor truth. It is all the old, old story, so old that we do not always listen when we heart it, yet so simple and so true that we have but to take it seriously to have happiness.

TOO PERT

Nowadays, it's fashionable to be breezy and independent and flippant—a totally different sort of person from the sweet, docile clinging vine our grandmothers were brought up to be.

The boys and the older men rather like the pert, witty girl who's capable of as brisk and peppy repartee as any of the men she goes with.

They admire independent little toss of the head—the flippancy with which she discusses all the serious things of life—the sarcasm which she lavishes on the offendor who dares to become sentimental.

All this is part of the spirit of the times—and many people think the modern Young Idea is a great improvement on the ancient model of womanly charm.

But there's one situation in which the most breezy flapper who ever wished her skirts across a ball-room floor, must conform to all the old customs and standards, if she's to find favor in the eyes of the masculine contingent—and usually that's her aim.

She must not be pert to older people. She must not be flippant and disrespectful when discussing with them the things they hold as solemn and weighty matters. No matter how old and dull their opinions seem to her, she must not betray her feelings.

Otherwise she will jar on the ears of her listeners—her independent cocksureness amusing to boys her own age, and men just enough older than she to find her cute—will seem in bad taste when directed towards older people for whom she should have some respect.

At so many houseparties, nowadays, you will see the girls clustered together in one corner of the room, animatedly discussing their own affairs—while their hostess, an older woman, will be left to her own devices.

Also you will notice how they rush in and out of her room, borrowing things from her, throwing a few casual breezy impertinences her way—and otherwise totally ignoring her.

You will see them trooping away from her home hastily assuring her over one shoulder that she's been an awfully good skate to lend them the use of her house for a week-end. Toodle-oo.

You think perhaps the boys never notice this? Well, take it from me they do—much more than the girls themselves. Somehow boys seem to have a more definite respect for older people than the much-spoiled modern girl. Anyway, they take more care to tone their conversation, and adopt a more respectful tone when older people are present. And they are rather apt to criticize the lady who makes it a point to talk to a woman 30 years her senior with the same pertness and flippancy she uses in talking to her own particular chum.

Don't run the risk of being thought too fresh. Soft pedal all your bright girlish patter, when you're meeting the older folks.

$25,000 Issue for Schools Is Voted On

FREDERICK, Okla., April 19.—The special school bond election held in Davidson Friday by the patrons of consolidated school district No. 9, on the question of the issuance of $25,000 in school bonds, carried by a vote of 74-34, according to information received here by C. R. Pulliam, county superintendent of public instruction, Saturday.

This school district lays in the heart of one of the richest agricultural spots in southwestern Oklahoma, and the putting over of the bond issue was a small matter.

Frederick May Soon Have Own Electric Plant

Efforts Being Made to Better Situation In City

FREDERICK, Okla., April 19.—Preparatory to arriving at a betterment of the electric light and power situation in Frederick, and what indicates a step toward the city's resumption of making its own current, a survey is at present being made by Joseph C. Bros of the Fulton Iron Works company of St. Louis, Mo. The survey is being made at the instance of the city with a view to having the company submit an estimate to the council of the cost of the construction of a new power plant and distributing system.

When this information has been obtained, together with data as to the consumption of electricity here and the probable increase if the plant were adequate, it is proposed to submit this information to the citizens in order that they may determine which course is best to pursue.

The council's contract with the Southwestern Light and Power company, who are now furnishing the city with electricity will be in force for slightly over two years longer, a three-year contract having been signed. However, if the people deem it fit, the old generating plant which is idle since the bringing in of the high-line, will be purchased by the Southwestern company at a price of $107,500.

The high-line problem has caused a great deal of controversy here for several months, citizens being reluctant to give up the old plant which has very faithfully furnished power for years. Repairs were needed however, and an increased load was in sight so that city authorities were forced to seek some way out of their difficulties with the result that the high-line contract was signed.

WEEKLY STOCK REVIEW

NEW YORK, April 19.—(AP)—The familiar tests of industrial activity contributed little last week toward clearing away the confusion which has been overhanging the general business situation. Underlying conditions continued good, but the cross currents of trade, including a contraction of certain manufacturing activity, lower commodity prices and a drifting steel market, indicated that little progress was being made.

Credit conditions became noticeably easier, a relaxation in money rates being ascribed partly to the recent liquidation in the speculative markets and the slackening in industry. This contributed to moderate improvement in stock and bond prices despite the conflicting character of trade news.

Operations in the steel industry gave no indication of any marked revival of business. Curtailment of pig iron and finished steel production was extended, while the improvement in new business noted the first week in April after a period of depression in March apparently was not carried further. The market generally was described as a "drifting" one with the consumers attempting to digest the heavy tonnage taken in the first quarter.

Symptomatic of the diminished public buying power were the reductions in commodity prices. Raw and refined sugar more than 17 points above the 1924 low and 37 points above the receivership levels of a year ago.

Among the corporation securities, investment dealers reported, high grade public utility liens were commanding first place in public demand. This, they explained, was due to the fact that for many years this type of bond had failed to capture the favor of investors, with the result that buyers now had more room for them with the turn in sentiment toward utility companies.

Despite the severe test imposed on the market's absorptive capacity by the huge Dodge Brothers financial operation the demand for new developments last week appeared to be unimpaired.

grew more cheerful as trading expanded, with the advance showing more uniformity than in the other financial markets.

The response to changing money conditions was reflected most clearly in the list. With an abundance of time finds available and the federal reserve bank's rediscount rate mainted at 3 1-2 per cent institutional buying was revived on a substantial call. Most of the liberty bonds were carried to new peak prices for the year.

Another encouraging development was the remarkable resiliency displayed by the French obligations. Depressed by the financial and political crisis which culminated in the fall of the Herriot government they quickly rallied following the formation of a new ministry under Premier Painleve. After selling around the year's lowest levels, the government's issues recovered two to six points from the extreme low points, while municipal and railroad liens made corresponding gains.

Domestic corporation issues scored moderate improvement, with quiet accumulation under way in representative railroad, public utility and industrial bonds. Rail liens moved up in sympathy with a revival of demand for the carrier stocks based on the maintenance of feright traffic at a high level, the progress made in the "Nickel Plate" merger hearings and the prospects of new consolidations in the south and east. Virginia-Carolina Chemical obligations showed independent strength on indications of an early termination of the company's receivership. At the week's high level, the seven per cent bonds sold more than 17 points above the 1924 low and 37 points above the receivership levels of a year ago.

WEEKLY COTTON REVIEW

NEW ORLEANS, April 19.—The cotton market has shown more activity the past week and fluctuations have been rather wider than has been the case for some time. When the market re-opened after the Easter holidays, traders were confronted with reports of good rains over most of Oklahoma and in many portions of North Texas and as a result prices eased off moderately under selling pressure. The belief was entertained that as a result of the rains conditions in the western belt had improved considerably. Prices eased off gradually Monday and Tuesday and on the latter date reached a "low" for the July position of 24.22.

The publication of the government's weekly weather report Wednesday morning claimed not only that rains in the west

Judge Kay Tells Bible Class Story of Ananias and Saphira

Big Attendance Sunday Morning At the Strand

Kay Delivers Interesting Talk on the Two Thieves In the Bible

Big attendance featured the excellent talk made Sunday morning by Judge John C. Kay to the Kay Bible class at the Strand theatre. Over 495 persons were present.

The following is the text in full of Judge Kay's address:

I want to talk to you a little bit this morning about sin. The lesson is about Ananias and Sapphira, but I never thought much of either of them, so I am not going to talk very much about them. They held out some money that belonged to God. They didn't have to give it to Him in the first place, but, having committed themselves, they afterward tried to hold it out. It is the church people only that could commit that kind of a sin. You know, there are some sins that the church people can commit better than anybody. It is a great sin and pity that a church has to put in so much time with its own members. Ah, what a battle the church could wage in its effort to capture the world, if it didn't have to stop to look after and work with its own membership. It has got so, when a preacher goes out to hold a protracted meeting, say, he has got ten days, he has to put in eight days straightening up the church membership, and two days in shelling the woods for the sinners.

Scared to Death.

I always thought that Ananias and Sapphira, (the Bible didn't tell much about it)—I always thought they were scared to death, they literally dropped dead from fright and fear.

You know, there are a lot of fellows that are afraid to turn the corner of a brick house, they are so steeped in sin.

Now, there is nobody competent to write the history of the people that he lives among. The history of the civil war can't be written for a hundred years yet, because there is nobody competent to write it. There is too much feeling, too much partisanship, too much bias. But, a people write their own history. There is being written today, unconsciously, the spiritual history of the people of Texas, as reflected by the laws that are passed by the legislature. We will jump forward, say, ten thousand or fifteen thousand years, and some learned archaeologist or anthropologist comes along digging to find whatever he can about the inhabitants of Texas in 1925. At that time, there wouldn't be left very much of all that we value. I don't know of anything that you have, or that I have, that would last that long, but we will suppose that in some caves, somewhere, and under the mud of some floods, and some of the sedimentary rocks, he would find something that was left by you and I. We will suppose that he dig up the penal code of Texas, the criminal law of Texas, as we had it and administered it.

Would Have Laws.

Now, if we are a sinful people, if we are a criminal people, says this scientist of the future age, we would naturally have many laws against crime, so he turns the pages of that book, and he is trying to find out, for the moment, he is writing the chapter on our covetous disposition, and that is the sin that destroyed Ananias—and he finds our law against forgery, and he finds our law against theft, and our law against swindling and forty other laws of that character and he says: "These people in Texas were a covetous people, or they wouldn't have needed these laws." He turns over, and he finds a chapter on adultery, and he says: "There must have been, in Texas, some shameless men, or they wouldn't have had this statute," and so on through all the statutes.

So that, whether you like it or not, whether you will or not, the lawmakers of your country are writing your spiritual history into your criminal law. That is as far as I want to go with that.

I want to talk to you a little further, now, about the teachings of the Savior. He was not a lawmaker. He never journeyed to Rome, nor ever wrote a letter to Caesar. His law was the law of love, and, when He talks about the men who were sent away into everlasting punishment, He says that they were sent there because they neglected the interests of their fellowmen. He didn't talk to them about doctrines. I don't know how our friend, the doctor here, feels about doctrines by now, but the Savior never asked the twelve apostles a question about it, but He stands Peter up one day and asked him three times, after he had been with Him nearly three years, He said: "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" He could have asked him about Adam and Eve. He never mentioned those worthies. He could have asked him about the fall of man. Jesus Christ never argued about the great theological doctrine of the soul of man. He knew that man had fallen, and He was here in the practical business of raising him up again. He didn't stop to argue about it. And, you needn't stop to argue about it. If you can't see that man, with all his strength, and wisdom, and pride, is yet prone to do evil, he wanders away from God, is not willing to do right, except as right is taught by the moral precepts of the gospel; if you can't see that, then none can teach it to you. So, He taught a religion of love. That is His great doctrine, that men should love God, and love each other.

Good Arguments.

Now, the infidel, in arguing for his system, makes some pretty good arguments from his standpoint, but he never gets anywhere with the argument. The infidel makes a fine argument, but he has got no place to put it. What is the matter with him? Ah, it is because he has no yardstick by which to measure his argument, when he gest it made. He is without a standard of right. He is without a standard of morals. He is without a standard of behavior. He is without any standard, except he turns to that great standard which is to be found only in the Bible, the book that he rejects.

Now, there are a lot of good people who think. I mean, pretty good people—a lot of college professors think. You know, I am a great friend to the college professor. He needs friends, going along like he is, on his little narrow wagon track, never thinking about but one subject: a lot of them don't get a broad enough view of life. But, men of that type, and a lot of unthinking people, will tell you that morality is natural, that it is education that has made it. (I am talking about a pretty deep subject here, this morning. I am assuming that you folks are pretty well up in the mental world.) That morality is natural with man. Or, if not natural, that it has been worked out through a process of evolution, so that man has made better and better progress through the process of evolution, and the process worked out through that institution which teaches the morals of the country. That would be true, if it were true. Unfortunately for that kind of an argument, for that kind of philosophy, we are not without examples. Here are the people over in Africa, here's the wild bushman in Australia. He didn't have any Bible. Has natural mental evolution given him the standards that are claimed by this argument? No! He is still eating his animals raw, toasting his shins by the campfire, living in his skin tent as of yore. What is the matter with that fellow over there? He never had a standard. He never had a yardstick to measure his conduct by. He never had pointed out to him a high goal that humanity could reach by effort and by consecration. That is his trouble.

Wants to Live.

It is a right funny thing to me, that a man who don't believe in the church, and don't believe in Christian people, would want to live among them. I wouldn't. But, you take one of those fellows that is trying to get all the goods that he can in the world any trying to keep them, like Ananias, and doesn't believe in preachers—I want to stop right there just long enough to tell you that a man that goes around over the country denouncing the ministry is, to my mind the shabbiest individual in Texas. A good many politicians have tried to do that. Nobody ever got away with it, or ever will get away with it, in Texas. And, the people of Texas have turned and defeated every politician who tried to climb to office upon the bones of the ministry, and on the bones of the church.

But, the Savior's doctrine was that love was the standard. "Simon, Son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" And, in another place, you have got to do something more than love your Savior and that is, to love your neighbor. Now, it is not much trouble to do right, by those that you love. This would be a fine world if we loved our fellowmen. You know, you can love God without loving your fellowmen, and you can't love your fellowmen without loving God, because, there is in the human body, and in the human heart, and in the human soul, a kinship with God and Jesus Christ is our elder brother.

What is it that makes a man run around on the earth so restless? I see that the bluebirds are going to build the same nest that they built a thousand years ago. These Baltimore Orioles will be here this week. They are going to build their little, neatly tallored, hanging nests in the mosquite trees as they have been doing through the most remote antiquity; satisfied, contented, what the poet called "a little flash of summer fire." All of them happy, living, as they think, in perfection. But, man isn't that way. Always seeking something better, seeking something different; discontented; ambitious; dominant; he seeks things that he doesn't find in life.

Now, all that speaks to me, whether it does to you, that there is in the heart of man a remembrance of the great dignity of a former, higher charter. That man doesn't belong here on earth. That he is out of line, and out of keeping, and without kinship with all the other animals on earth; that his mind and his body speak eloquently that he is a stranger to this system, at least. Then, what is it that will restore to him his ancient charter? What is it that will bring him upward to that high place that he once occupied, and to that high place to which heaven assigned him? It is this love, and this worship of Jesus Christ, and this love of his fellowmen.

Anglo Saxon Folk Dancing Represents Rarest Form Of Accurate Stepping--Gould

Gloria Gould Bishop in a charming pose.

By GLORIA GOULD BISHOP.

The fifteenth of an exclusive, novel series of articles on dancing by Glorious Gloria Gould Bishop—America's "million dollar bride."

I am going to give as today's lesson some facts about Anglo Saxon folk dancing, and some of the steps.

This classification includes, of course, English, Irish, Scottish and Welsh character steps.

I want to say at the beginning of this lesson that the person who masters various kinds of folk dancing is not only a healthier, happier person—since these dances require agility of muscles and serve therefore as beneficial exercises—but can become a wealthier one.

This is true because a really excellent folk dancer is a rara avis and can command a large salary, and of course, I am hoping that these lessons will help some of the boys and girls who study them to become self-supporting.

England has several charming and interesting folk dances, which are still danced at various ceremonies and at the country festivals, fairs and social events of all kinds.

Included in these dances will be found the Morris dance, the Sailor's Hornpipe and the Union Jack. Of course, these dances mentioned are all used as fundamentals for individual types of character steps.

The Morris dance is regarded as the most important surviving traditional dance in England today. There are many variations of the Morris dance, the origin of which has been much disputed. Some authorities claim this dance was derived from the Celtic word "mor" meaning "great noble and dignified." I believe the generally conceded idea of its beginning ascribes its derivation from the Moors.

Historical authorities say it is connected with the dance of the Druidical festival of Beltane, the sun god. It is reported that the priests and prophets of the Druids marched to the top of a hill in a solemn procession and saluted the sun in a series of dignified steps and postures.

The steps of the Morris dance are identical with those of the minuet. Today this dance is often done around the Maypole. Therefore I am going to recommend that you study over again the steps of the minuet as they give you the proper bakground for this dance.

If you are interested in the proper type of costume for the Morris dance I shall, of course, be glad to tell you about it if you will write me in care of your favorite newspaper.

The Sailor's Hornpipe is known as the national dance of Great Britain. This is a solemn affair, with arms held akimbo throughout the first position of the dance. The steps are a series of shuffles forward on the right foot, a flourish back on the left. These steps are followed by a balancing on the heel and then the toe, forward and backward, with the arms and hands doing a pantomime significant of a sailor raising the sail, and then climbing into the rigging. From this point on, the movements of the dance vary, but there is one very strenuous final part, requiring a traditional sailor's position, which means the open hands at the waistline, right hand in front and left hand in back. As the dancer swaggers forward in this position on his right foot, he bends the body from the waist slightly, with the head in the direction of the forward foot. As he changes his foot position, he also changes the positions of the hands, reversing them.

Just as a point of information I will tell you about the Union Jack. This is a dance having a spectacular effect capable of infinite additions and variations. I do not as a general rule teach this dance in my classes unless the pupils show a special desire to learn it. In the Anglo-Saxon countries it is usually a children's dance requiring four children, standing in a row each holding a flag and taking a succession of slow steps and dignified poses.

Hogg Talks To Men Sunday On "Prodigal Son"

Evangelist Breaks Through Reserve of Audience With Sermon

Hundreds of Wichita Falls business men, big strong men, husky youths, and gray haired fathers, with tears streaming down their cheeks surged into the aisles and fell on their knees at the altar of Floral Heights Methodist church as a call for the reconsecration of their lives to God came from the lips of Will Hogg at the close of what is declared by several men rich in Christian experience to be "the greatest sermon I ever heard."

Prodigal Son

Under the inspiration of the noted evangelist, preaching on "The Prodigal Son," telling true stories with powerful force, and exposing modern vice in the business and social world with simplicity and thundering accusations, the vast audience of men were moved universally to the need of religion in their lives.

Twenty men came at the first call, professing Christ, and at the second call, in the grip of a great spiritual force, men, with hazy eyes swept in a great throng toward the front of the church. It seemed they had forgotten everything else but the matter of straightening out their lives.

"Men, I've just turned it all over to the Lord," said one business man as he stood explaining what he felt to the men about him.

"Brother Hogg," declared one young man, "today I trust Jesus Christ as my Saviour."

From the back of the house came the voice of a gray-haired man, "Brother Hogg, that's my son kneeling down there at the altar. I want you to pray that God will help me straighten out my life so I can live right before him." Rev. S. J. T. Williams made his way back to the father and led him to the front where he knelt, arms about his son.

A father from Electra spoke, "Brother Hogg, I have four boys and I want to lead them right. My life hasn't been what it should be, but it is now!"

A salesman for a local automobile firm stood and said, "Men, I'm through," as he dedicated his life to Godly living.

Sincerity and Honesty

Rev. Hogg, who has gained a reputation for his sincerity and honesty with his audiences, stood before the men talking to them about the part they played in modern life, and their responsibility for modern conditions. Speaking reasonably, sanely and forcefully about moral vice, the speaker revealed the practices common in American cities today, as abhorrent, and a menace to the home, the city and the nation. By means of true illustrations, conditions of licentiousness were brought close home to the throngof listening men, and a subject about which little care is taken was impressed forcibly as a local problem.

Jeff Wall conducted a stirring song service with Raybon Porter of the First Methodist Church, South, at the piano. At the invitation to remove their coats, men in the great audience did so, and settled down for an afternoon of attention, devotion and action. Groups of men, discussing the service after the dismissal, declared it the greatest and most spiritual meeting for men they had ever witnessed. Many tstified to a definite spiritual experience, and declared the need for more meetings of its kind.

Rev. S. J. T. Williams spoke Sunday afternoon to the Junior league in the basement of the Floral Heights Methodist church when 14 young people professed their faith in Christ and erpressed a desire to join the church.

The driver of the machine did not see the woman as she alighted from the street car until too late to avoid the accident, she said. Miss Mabel Huddleston was in the Silber machine at the time.

Mrs. Gafford was taken to her home and her husband summoned from Electra. It was reported at a late hour last night she was resting easily.

Kent Cooper Elected New General Manager of The Associated Press Wires

NEW YORK, April 19.—Frank B. Noyes, president of The Associated Press, today announced that the board of directors had appointed Kent Cooper general manager. He will succeed Frederick Roy Martin, whose resignation tendered some time ago, takes effect within a few days.

Mr. Cooper's advancement to the position of general manager comes after many years of wide activity in The Associated Press. He has had experience in every phase and detail of press association work with the advantage of 15 years of intimate association with President Noyes and Melville E. Stone, former general manager and now counselor of the organization.

A News Man.

Fundamentally and essentially a news man, Mr. Cooper's earlier activities in The Associated Press had to do with another field. He joined the staff in 1910 on the invitation of Mr. Stone, who gave him a roving commission as traveling inspector. Thus there were afforded to him unlimited opportunities for observation of, and participation in, the service throughout the country, the work later taking him into the broader field of the entire world. He visited all of the 70 Associated Press bureaus in the United States, not once but many times, as well as many of the larger bureaus abroad. He also has visited hundreds of the offices of newspaper members of the Associated Press, gaining intimate personal knowledge of the requirements and wishes of the members.

This knowledge furnished means of applying practical solutions of many of the intricate problems of this specialized branch of newspaper work. The personal contact with the staffs of member newspapers at their daily tasks also helped to bring closer coordination in this great co-operative endeavor at news exchange.

Great Efficiency on Wire.

The progress in the development of newspapers, the increase in the number of daily editions and the fact that in recent years there is an edition of some Associated Press paper going to press almost every minute of the day, required greater speed in the delivery of news. Never wishing to jeopardize accuracy for speed, accuracy being the first and cardinal principle of The Associated Press work Mr. Cooper applied practical ideas for more rapidly collecting and delivering news. Thus his first important specific assignment was to undertake a reorganization of the communications system of The Associated Press, and by Mr. Stone's direction in 1912 he organized the traffic department, was its first chief. Having earlier evolved the idea of the application of the telephone to the dissemination of press reports, he applied it extensively. He established the first automatic telegraph printer service utilized by any press association which doubled the capacity of each telegraph wire upon which it was installed and afforded simultaneous delivery of the news report to each of a large number of newspapers on urban and interurban circuits.

Cable Problems.

The problems of cable news transmission presented by the European war especially after the modification of the censorship was serious. Hundreds of thousands of words of news were being offered in competition with large quotas of governmental reports, Mr. Cooper went to Europe, visiting the main centers of transmission. Transmission of news over government cables was out of the question but by taking advantage of modern means of preparing news and getting it to the cables the actual time of transmission from Europe to this country was materially lowered.

Upon assignment by President Noyes in 1918 to investigate the press association field in South America the extensive Associated Press service now being sent there was established through arrangements made by Mr. Cooper on three trips. In preparation for this work he acquired a fluent knowledge of Spanish prior to his first South American visit.

Frederick Lions To Offer Busses No Aid

FREDERICK, Okla., April 19.—That the Frederick Lions club would take absolutely no action in the controversy between W. A. Hammers, of Wichita Falls, Texas, and the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad relative to the issuance of a license to Hammers for the operation of a stage line between Wichita Falls, Electra and Frederick and Davidson, Okla. This decision was announced Saturday by J. D. Moore, chairman of the ways and means committee of the Lions club.

At the regular Wednesday meeting of the Lions club, a petition was presented by the Katy representatives to the effect that the train service between the points that would be affected had been satisfactory. The Lions club was asked to sign the petition and forward it to the State Corporation commission who would have charge of the issuance of the license. The matter was referred to the ways and means committee, with the hands off action the result.

You're Working for Yourself!

You may be employed by a firm but you are really working for yourself. Sometimes you may think that the work you do is entirely for the boss. But if it doesn't also help you, it will probably not be very helpful to the boss.

Your interest and the interest of your firm are inseparable. You get out of anything exactly what you put into it. Work hard and intelligently and it will help you. Bury your talents and they will not grow.

You, yourself—not the boss—should be the most difficult person to please. When you lose a sale, your store loses money. But you also lose something. On the other hand, if you become a "go-getter" for your store, you will find that you have also become a "go-getter" for yourself.

There are more order-takers today than salespeople. Order takers are poorly paid and are not interested in their self-improvement. The better the salesperson, the more interested you will find him in taking advantage of opportunities looking towards his self development.

Did you ever learn how to use yourself to the best advantage? You wouldn't think of buying an electric machine without also learning exactly how to use it. Have you applied the same common sense to your most valuable asset, namely yourself?

The Institute of Salesmanship is your opportunity. It appeals to those who are ambitious; to those who realize that it is to their self-interest to become more productive; and to those who have learned that everything they do and everything they leave undone is chalked up on the ledger-book of their own progress.
