Israeli panel to investigate shooting at Temple Mount

(AP Laserphoto)

An armed Israeli soldier shows his fatigue as he stands guard at the gates of Temple Mount Tuesday following Monday's mass rioting which left 19 dead. Soldiers barred the entrance to the Dome of the Rock Mosque in an attempt to calm the scene.

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli government today named a panel led by a former chief of the Mossad secret service to investigate the killing of 19 Palestinian rioters on the Temple Mount.

The investigation was ordered by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir before the U.N. Security Council was to begin debate on condemning Israel for using police force against rioters. The Security Council also was expected to order a U.N. inquiry into Monday's blood-bath.

Israeli security forces killed 19 Arabs and wounded 140 in Monday's clash outside the Al-Aqsa mosque, Islam's third-holiest site. It was the bloodiest confrontation of the 34-month-old Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation, and it raised an immediate world outcry.

The three-man committee was ordered to investigate events leading to the riot and the conduct of paramilitary border police in opening fire with live ammunition on the Temple Mount.

However, Israel radio reported that it will not have the power to subpoena reluctant witnesses, nor will its recommendations be binding.

Yossi Ahmeir, Shamir's spokesman, said the investigation would be headed by reserve Maj. Gen. Zvi Zamir, who was head of the Mossad from 1968 to 1974. The other members will be Yaacov Neeman, a prominent attorney, and Chaim Kubersky, a former director of the Interior Ministry.

Asked what powers the committee would have, Ahmeir said it could make "every recommendation they see fit and the prime minister will decide what to do with it."

Ahmeir said the panel would report "as soon as possible."

When asked whether its hearings would be public, he replied that they "involve security and operational details so, if necessary, discussions will be subject to the usual security laws."

Members of the U.N. Security Council on Tuesday debated a resolution condemning the shootings and calling for a U.N. investigation, with the United States prepared to cast a rare vote against its ally in the chamber.

President Bush criticized Israeli forces for not acting "with more restraint." And today, China, Zimbabwe and Kuwait's government-in-exile added their voices to those condemning Israel for the violence.

"It will now be investigated by ourselves. We don't need a probe by international factors," Ahmeir said. "The marginal point of whether it was excessive force or not is to be investigated."

Ahmeir also said he hoped "our position will be understood, we reacted against provocation that was planned against Jewish worshippers."

In the occupied territories, soldiers kept more than a million Palestinians under curfew for a third day to contain unrest triggered by the violence at the Old City site, which is holy to both Jews and Moslems.

In a leaflet issued Tuesday, the PLO-backed leaders of the Palestinian uprising urged revenge attacks on soldiers and Jewish settlers.

"Every soldier and settler in the land of Palestine is a target that should be liquidated," it said.

The government published a full-page ad in leading dailies urging Israelis to respond to Monday's riots by showing up at the Wailing Wall for "Simchat Torah" holiday celebrations Thursday night.

The holiday, which means "Joy of Torah" marks the end of the eight-day Sukkot, or Feast of Tabernacles, and is celebrated by dancing while holding the Torah or biblical scrolls at synagogues.

Police Chief Yaacov Turner denied reports in Israeli newspapers that suggested his troops had failed to heed intelligence information to expect Monday's riot, and to deploy accordingly.

The riot began when Palestinians hurled rocks at Jewish worshippers at the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest site and just below the Al-Aqsa mosque. Twenty-eight Jews were injured by rocks.

Police then charged at the rioters on the Temple Mount, initially firing tear gas. According to Israeli officials, the troops, heavily outnumbered, only later opened fire with live ammunition.

The attack was provoked by rumors that Jewish zealots planned to march on the Temple Mount — which both Moslems and Jews consider sacred — and reclaim it for Judaism, Palestinians said. The site of the violence is the most emotionally charged in the lands Israel captured in the 1967 Middle East War.

The left-of-center Labor Party published a statement accusing the government of "a lax in security that endangered the lives of Jews at the Wailing Wall." The Western Wall is also known as the Wailing Wall.

The conservative daily Maariv in a full-page story today, said some policemen apparently panicked over rumors that colleagues were trapped in a burning police station on the Mount during the riot.

"The opening of fire was not done in planned fashion or by command, but rather independently based on decisions by isolated policemen or a small force when they felt their lives were endangered," the newspaper said.

In clashes Tuesday night, an 8-year-old Palestinian boy was shot and seriously wounded in the head, and a pregnant, 30-year-old Arab woman was wounded in the chest, Palestinian reports said.

The army was checking the reports.

City commission names new community services director

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Bill Hildebrandt, parks superintendent for the city of Pampa, was promoted Tuesday night to director of community services, following affirmation by the City Commission during their meeting at City Hall.

Hildebrandt received the promotion after 4 1/2 years with the city, based on his experience and education, said City Manager Glen Hackler.

"There were nine qualified applicants from within the city who applied for the job," Hackler told the Commission. "But I believe Bill will do the best job and I'm happy to present him to you."

Hildebrandt is a graduate of Texas A&M, holding bachelor's and master's degrees from the institution.

He will oversee the parks, recreation department, golf course, code enforcement, animal control, custodial services, library and civic center for the city.

"This is something I've really been looking forward to while in the nomination stage during the last few weeks," Hildebrandt said. "I will strive to give this job my very best effort, as I've tried to do in the past."

Hildebrandt said an area in community services that will require immediate attention is planting at least 100 trees at Hidden Hills Golf Course by spring.

"Gene Griggs and the personnel at the golf course, as well as (finance director) John Horst have already done the lion's share of the work," Hildebrandt said. "My job will be to step in and assist them."

"The second thing that will require my attention is Recreation Park, because we only have until September of 1992 to complete that project and have matching state funds."

In promoting Hildebrandt, Hackler also named Kathy Beck director of emergency management, a duty that had previously fallen under the community services director's job description. Beck also oversees the M.K. Brown Civic Center.

Lynn Thornton, former news director for KGRO/KOMX Radio, was named as safety and risk manager, after several months of working as a dispatcher in the city's police department.

In addition to that responsibility, Hackler said Thornton's duties will be expanded to include public information director for the city during the next several months.

Commissioners also gave final approval to a motion allowing the Civic Center advisory board to meet four times a year instead of once a month.

Also approved was a bid for purchase of 1,000 cold water meters from Western Industrial for $23,950, and a resolution endorsing the city's grant proposal to receive $100,565 in state funds for new traffic signals and computerized controls in the city.

During the city manager's report, Hackler told commissioners that construction on a new cable television system is scheduled to begin on November 1.

Under a recently-adopted franchise agreement between the city and Sammons, the company has until December of 1991 to complete the rebuild, which will put 40 stations on the system in Pampa, instead of the current 22.

Hackler also said a representative from the Census Bureau is currently re-checking that agency's work in Pampa, which showed the city suffering a population drop of around 2,000 from 1980.

Red McNatt, executive director of the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce, and Hackler have both said those entities have confirmed through the tax district and utility bills that the Census Bureau's count of Pampa residents was not accurate.

During a work session prior to the commission meeting, Hackler told city fathers, "Apparently, the person who was heading up the local (census) effort was having all kinds of personal problems during that time and would burst out crying during their meetings. We have affidavits to that effect from folks at the chamber (where the census takers would meet)."

Hackler said that information brings into question how much attention to detail the local census head could give to making sure the count was accurate.

"There were whole streets that were missed and we have pointed that out to the Census Bureau," Hackler said.

Police break up teen burglary ring

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa police and Gray County Sheriff's deputies have broken up a teen-age burglary ring operating out of a house on South Hobart Street.

Six teen-agers, four of them juveniles, two of whom were reportedly runaways from Genesis House, were detained by police Tuesday following the execution of a search warrant at 1111 1/2 S. Hobart.

Det. Donny Brown said today that items from two burglaries were recovered at the residence.

Barbara Bella Keyes, 18, who lived at the residence, remained in city jail through press time today on a charge of possession of stolen property.

A second female who lived at the house was released after police cleared her of involvement in the two crimes.

Also detained were four Hispanics, three of them males, who were reportedly between 14 and 16 years of age.

Check-in marks half-way point for United Way

The Pampa United Way is halfway through its 1990 campaign with a fifth check-in scheduled Thursday at the Meals on Wheels office.

To date, 16 percent or $54,935 of the $332,000 goal has been pledged.

This week's check-in, set for 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., is sponsored by the Meals on Wheels, Pampa Family Services and High Plains Epilepsy Association. The Meals on Wheels office is located in the basement of the First United Methodist Church.

Three more check-ins are scheduled through Nov. 1, all of them on Thursdays.

Those arrests occurred shortly after 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Brown described the residence as a place where numerous teenagers and adults live on a come-and-go basis.

"They are not all in one family," Brown said. "It's a little more casual than that."

Brown said police broke the case following a tip from an informant.

"After receiving information, we were able to get a search warrant," Brown said. "Items from a burglary at 800 N. Dwight were located there. The sheriff's department also cleared up a burglary. Everyone living there has been cleared except the juveniles and Barbara Keyes. It's going to be a juvenile offense."

Sheriff Jim Free was unavailable for comment today on the case his department cleared through the arrests.

On Tuesday morning, police also arrested another resident of 1111 1/2 S. Hobart on a charge of burglary, this time of a motor vehicle.

Michael Anthony Moreno, 17, who listed his address as 1016 Huff Rd., remained in city jail through press time today.

Police said the four other burglary suspects would be turned over to Gray County juvenile officials for processing.

Ed Barker, Gray County juvenile probation authority, said he will decide when he gets the case how to best deal with the two suspects from Genesis House, a low-security detention and rehabilitation center.

"There is an option there with the local juvenile authorities to prosecute or recommend them to the jurisdiction of the juvenile system," said Juvenile Probation Officer Ed Barker.

He said in the past Genesis House residents committing crimes in Gray County were referred back to the Texas Youth Commission, since they were from outside this area and the local juvenile probation system gets no money from the state to cover the expense of handling them.

Lefors school board considering development of district pay plan

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

LEFORS — Lefors Independent School District administrators plan to gather more information to present to the school board about the development of a system-wide pay plan.

Development of such a plan was discussed during a regular meeting of the board on Tuesday.

Superintendent Ed Gilliland said the main reason a district should have a uniform pay plan is because teachers, other personnel and the public want to know what the future holds. The plan would spell out what a specific employee would make during future years.

Gilliland said there are several ways to go about developing such a plan including having the school district run its own market survey and develop a plan, have administration and/or school board members attend schools on developing a plan or have a representative of the Texas Association of School Boards come in and develop the plan for Lefors ISD.

The superintendent said he had obtained a pay plan used by Groom ISD and Dimmitt ISD, but said most of the small school districts in the area do not have plans developed.

Garrel Roberson, school board president, suggested that Gilliland contact other schools to find out if they have a pay plan, and if so, to ask for a copy of the plan.

In unrelated business, seniors Jennifer Moore and Danna Davis attended the meeting and requested that the senior class be allowed to take a senior trip rather than have a senior skip day.

Moore said the class has about $1,000 saved and could use a large part of the money for such a trip. She said the class was thinking about taking a trip to NASA or to Baylor Medical Institute, but that those plans were not definite.

There are six seniors, but that number may be decreased to five by the end of the school year because one is scheduled to move.

Larry Daniels, school board member, requested that the seniors present a detailed plan to the school board on what they will do and where they will go. Daniels said that information would allow the board to make a better decision on the issue.

In other business, the board:

- Unanimously approved the 1990 tax roll.

- Unanimously approved nominating Sam Haynes of McLean to be re-elected as the Lefors ISD representative to the Gray County Appraisal District Board of Directors.

- Approved minutes of a Sept. 11 meeting.

- Approved the payment of the monthly expenditures. Gilliland explained one of the expenditures regarding a $1,424 purchase. Gilliland said that some used football equipment, which was in good condition, was purchased from Texline.

- Took no action on putting insulation in the new bus barn.

- Heard from Gilliland who reported the new flashing lights are in the process of being put up at the school zone.

- Learned the teachers have been asked to fill out a sheet on goals and objectives for Lefors ISD. Gilliland said a random sampling of the community will also be completed as well as having board members and administration turn in their lists.

The superintendent said he plans to have a list compiled from all of the lists turned in for the November meeting of the school board.

Discovery arrives safely home after near-perfect mission to launch sun probe

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Discovery returned home today, landing safely on a desert lakebed, after a near-perfect mission that sent a sun probe hurtling through space and lifted morale at NASA.

"Rescue teams glad to have you back, also to have the fastest man-made object in the universe well on its way. Congratulations on a picture-perfect mission," Mission Controller's Brian Duffy told the five-man crew.

Discovery touched down at 6:57 a.m. PDT, shortly after sunrise, precisely as planned. The arrival was preceded by the usual two sonic booms sweeping the desert.

More than 5,200 people cheered and applauded as the shuttle landed on a concrete runway on a dry lakebed in the Mojave Desert. The touchdown, like the rest of the flight, was extremely smooth.

Discovery circled Earth 66 times during the four-day mission, logging 1,707,445 miles.

The flight — the first shuttle mission in nearly six months — has helped rebuild NASA's image, battered in recent months by the flawed Hubble Space Telescope and hydrogen leaks on the two other shuttles.

"This flight is probably as close to perfect as we can get," flight director Ron Dittmore said. The six-month delay was the longest gap between missions since shuttle flights resumed after the 1986 Challenger accident.

Discovery blasted into orbit just a few minutes behind schedule Saturday. Several hours later, the five astronauts deployed the Ulysses solar probe exactly as planned.

Ulysses continued to race through space on a 1.86 billion-mile, five-year journey. It will travel to Jupiter to use the planet's gravity to sling it back across the solar system and into an unprecedented orbit around the sun's poles.

The $250 million spacecraft is expected to pass over the sun's poles in 1994 and 1995.

On Tuesday, the astronauts retracted the shuttle's 50-foot robot arm, which had been extended in an experiment to measure the deteriorating effects of space on an Intelsat satellite that is stuck in a useless low orbit. Material attached to the arm was identical to that used on the satellite's solar panels.

Intelsat, an organization of countries that owns the communications satellite, will study the amount of decay and decide whether it is worth sending astronauts on a rescue mission in 1992.

Discovery's other crew members are mission specialists Bill Shepherd and Bruce Melnick.

Atlantis is due to fly next on a secret military mission in early November. The mission originally was scheduled for July but was delayed by hydrogen leaks.

Some repairs still must be completed in Atlantis' engine compartment, which was damaged by a metal beam left there by workers.

Supreme Court to study 'fetal protection' policies

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, a day after welcoming Justice David H. Souter to the bench, is taking up a sex-bias dispute that could affect millions of working women.

The justices were to hear arguments today over the legality of a "fetal protection" policy under which an employer excludes all women of childbearing age from some hazardous jobs.

The court, expected to be closely divided on the issue, will decide by July whether the policy amounts to illegal sex discrimination.

Souter, who sat silently through four cases argued before the court Tuesday, could find himself a pivotal vote in this one.

One federal appeals court judge, calling the case the most important of its kind since Congress outlawed on-the-job sex bias 26 years ago, said the estimated number of women affected runs as high as 20 million.

Since 1982, the Milwaukee-based Johnson Controls Inc., the nation's largest auto battery manufacturer, has barred women from factory jobs that expose them to unsafe levels of lead, the principal material used in making batteries.

Lead exposure is a health risk for female workers and their fetuses.

Lead exposure, of course, also is a health risk for male workers. But the scientific proof that high levels of lead in a man's blood can contribute to fetal harm is sketchy.

At Johnson Controls, women who could not prove they were infertile were forced to transfer to other jobs, although their salaries were not cut. Some of the women were in their 60s.

Fertile women now hired are ineligible for top-paying jobs at the company's 13 plants, located in California, Delaware, Florida, Illinois, Kentucky, North Carolina, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio, Oregon, Texas, Vermont and Wisconsin.

Eight employees and the United Auto Workers union challenged the policy in court, alleging that it violates Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

It was not the first such challenge. At least 15 major corporations have fetal protection policies, and the American Civil Liberties Union says lawsuits have been filed in behalf of hospital technicians and factory and auto workers.

Among the companies with such policies are General Motors, Monsanto and DuPont.

U.S. District Judge Robert W. Warren in Milwaukee ruled for Johnson Controls before any trial.

Public Utilities Commission approves rate increase for Central Power was held, and the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals voted 7-4 to uphold his ruling.

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission has approved a $144 million rate increase for Central Power and Light Co. But customer bills won't change because the rates have been in effect since March on an interim basis.

Judge John L. Coffey wrote for the appeals court that the differing treatment of women employees was based on a "business necessity." The appeals court concluded that the policy "is reasonably necessary to industrial safety."

Bush administration lawyers told the high court that a fetal protection policy could be legal, but that it should be judged by a standard more stringent than the "business necessity" test used by the appeals court.

In action Tuesday, the Supreme Court:

—Let stand a ruling in a Pennsylvania case that public schools that allow civic groups and others to rent space cannot refuse the same access to religious organizations.

—Agreed to decide in a Florida case whether police without a court warrant may conduct random searches aboard buses and trains.

—Left intact an affirmative action program plan for hiring and promoting more minorities and women in San Francisco's fire department. The plan had been challenged as discriminatory against white men.

—Revived a $4 billion lawsuit by a millionaire Florida inventor who says an ABC television program falsely portrayed him as a liar and hypocrite.

ny's rate case.

CPL, which is based in Corpus Christi, says the higher rates are needed to help pay for the $5.8 billion South Texas Nuclear Project, the electricity-generating plant in Matagorda County.

Federal agents processing 49 cases against 49 companies for bird deaths

AUSTIN (AP) — Special agents for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service are processing cases against 49 companies for killing migratory birds in uncovered oil pits and tanks, authorities say.

The cases are being filed by special agents stationed in Lubbock and Fort Worth and involve oil operators in the Panhandle, South Plains and North Central Texas, said special agents Robert Lee of Lubbock and Steve Hamilton of Fort Worth.

An official of the Texas attorney general's office said the state is also investigating the problem.

"We're very concerned about the loss of this state's wildlife resources," said Phillip Poplin of the attorney general's environmental protection division. "We are investigating the problem and any avenues we can use to address it."

In March, the wildlife service filed its first such action in Texas against Union Pacific Railroad. The railroad was fined $5,000 and paid $1,400 in restitution for the deaths of 46 migratory birds in a waste pond at Big Spring.

Agents say the new prosecutions are in arid areas where migratory waterfowl frequently mistake Texas' thousands of oil pits and tanks for small ponds. Many birds die a slow, struggling death from drowning, exposure, starvation or poisoning, they say.

Wildlife service officials estimate up to 500,000 migrating ducks die this way each year. But numerous other migratory species protected by federal law, from rare bald eagles to common cardinals, also die in the pits, authorities say.

Under the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, the penalties for killing a single protected bird range up to $5,000 for an individual or $10,000 for a corporation, plus six months in jail.

Lee and Hamilton declined to name the companies involved until the cases have been processed.

Lee said he has developed his cases, each involving a small number of birds, against 40 firms over the past year. All the defendants, Lee said, are following the precedent set by Union Pacific.

"They're agreeing to pay relatively small criminal fines and civil restitution and promising to render their facilities non-hazardous to wildlife," Lee said.

Hamilton said he was preparing cases against nine corporate defendants for the deaths of 26 migratory birds whose carcasses were found last weekend.

The two agents said dead birds they found included owls, hawks, rails, blue herons and songbirds.

Details of the enforcement actions would be made public soon, the officials said.

Hamilton was accompanied during some of his inspections by Poplin, who witnessed the recovery of about 15 dead birds.

"We pulled 11 birds out of one fiberglass tank about 12 feet wide," Poplin said. "We're concerned about this, whether these tanks and pits are permitted or unpermitted."

The wildlife service also has fined several corporations in Kansas and New Mexico for bird deaths in oil pits.

The federal agency spent more than a year working with oil operators and state regulatory agencies in an effort to resolve the problem before finally resorting to enforcement actions early this year.

Woman says she shot her mother in mercy killing

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas woman tearfully testified that she shot her crippled, sleeping mother in the head last summer because she was in so much pain that she no longer wanted to live.

Kimberly Ball, 20, testified Tuesday that her mother Karen Ramzi, 46, suffered from a rare muscle disease.

The woman's testimony came on the second day of her punishment hearing.

Ball pleaded guilty Monday to voluntary manslaughter just before she was to go on trial on a murder charge. She asked that a jury set her punishment, which could be up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Prosecutors agreed to reduce the charge in exchange for the guilty plea.

Jurors deliberated several hours Tuesday without deciding on her punishment. They were to resume deliberations today.

The defendant, a high school dropout, wept almost uncontrollably as she described the early morning hours of July 7, when she shot her mother once behind the ear with a .22-caliber rifle.

She said she woke up about 2 a.m. and recalled her mother's last words to her the night before.

"She told me she loved me and if I loved her I'd make sure she didn't wake up," Ball said.

Ball said she picked up the loaded rifle, walked downstairs and approached her mother sleeping on the couch.

"I just told her I loved her and I just pulled the trigger," Ball said.

Williams outspends Richards 2-1 in Texas governor's race

By SCOTT ROTHCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican Clayton Williams and Democrat Ann Richards criticized each other's money-raising habits in what has become the most expensive governor's race in Texas history.

Since March, Williams has raised about $8.1 million and spent $7.5 million; about a 2-1 edge over Richards who has received $4.3 million and spent $3.7 million, according to campaign finance reports.

"The money he's spending doesn't seem to be doing anything for him," Glenn Smith, a Richards aide, said Tuesday.

Williams' campaign said Richards was seeking money from out-of-state. "Democrat Ann Richards has been actively courting the likes of Jane Fonda and her Hollywood PAC (political action committee)," said Gordon Hensley, Williams' press secretary.

But the Richards camp said 82 percent of their contributions were from Texans. "We're not the big-money candidate, but we're clearly getting small amounts from thousands of new people. That translates into a huge grassroots support system," Richards' campaign manager Mary Beth Rogers said.

Williams spent about $8.5 million — $6.6 million of it from his personal ranching and oil fortune — in winning the GOP primary, according to the reports filed with the secretary of state's office.

Richards spent about $5.75 million in the Democratic Party primary and runoff.

Combined with the totals of other primary candidates, the governor's race has surpassed the 1986 record of approximately $33 million, set when Democrat Mark White was ousted by Republican Bill Clements, who had been defeated by White in 1982.

Candidates on Tuesday filed disclosure statements for the period covering July 1 through Sept. 27.

For that period, Williams reported raising $3.4 million and spending $4.7 million. Richards said she received donations of $2.63 million and spent $2.22 million.

The finance reports were due Tuesday but could be mailed with a postmark no later than midnight. The election is Nov. 6.

In other finance statements:

• Republican Rob Mosbacher, running for lieutenant governor, reported raising $1.1 million and spending $1.3 million. He loaned his campaign $600,000 from his personal funds. Mosbacher faces Democrat Bob Bullock, whose report had not been received by 5 p.m.

• Texas attorney general candidate Dan Morales, a Democratic state representative from San Antonio, reported raising $411,915 and spending $441,694. His Republican opponent J.E. "Buster" Brown, a state senator from Lake Jackson, said he received $549,476.

• Two write-in candidates for governor filed statements. Carl Hickerson-Bull of Austin reported raising nearly $4,000 and spending $2,385, and Bubbles Cash of Dallas received $700 in donations and spent $686.

• Democrat Oscar Mauzy, a Texas Supreme Court justice wanting to become chief justice, reported raising $246,940 and spending $86,939. He faces Republican Chief Justice Tom Phillips.

• Republican Rick Perry, who is running for agriculture commissioner against incumbent Democrat Jim Hightower, reported receiving $482,178 and spending $280,944. Hightower's statement had not been received as of 5 p.m.

• Democratic comptroller candidate John Sharp reported raising $270,000 and spending $860,000. He said most of that money will be used for television commercials to raise the candidate's name identification against his Republican opponent, Warren G. Harding Jr.

In a news release, Sharp said he received $25 from Mrs. Chic Williams, Clayton Williams' mother, and $1,000 from Tom Fatjo of Houston, a Republican who considered running for comptroller.

Bullock, Mosbacher trade political 'insider' charges

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The candidates for lieutenant governor are at odds over who's the most inside political insider.

Democrat Bob Bullock charged Tuesday that Republican hopeful Rob Mosbacher's claim to being a political outsider is a sham.

Mosbacher said Bullock's lengthy political career has made him "the insider's insider" who now fears loss of his public paycheck.

"Any way you figure it, he has spent his time playing party politics for at least 15 of the last 19 years since he got old enough to vote," Bullock said of Mosbacher.

He called the Republican "the consummate, ultimate political insider."

Mosbacher said Bullock, five-term state comptroller, has been in politics since "Ike was president" and now worries that voters will decide that's enough.

"Bullock sounds more like a scared professional politician who sees his 33-year career as an Austin insider coming to an end," Mosbacher said.

The charges were the sharpest the two have exchanged so far.

Bullock said Mosbacher's role in GOP politics can be traced to volunteer work for Richard Nixon when Mosbacher was a teen-ager.

Since 1971, he said, Mosbacher has worked on the staff of Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn.; assisted in Baker's 1980 presidential bid; was a President Reagan appointee to a federal board; worked for the GOP candidate against Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas; sought the GOP U.S. Senate nomination in 1984; served as finance chairman of the Texas Republican Party; was vice-chairman of George Bush's presidential campaign; and now is the GOP nominee for lieutenant governor.

"Don't try to tell me — or the people of Texas — that this is the record of an outsider. That dog just won't hunt, and neither will his stories about being a businessman," Bullock said.

Mosbacher contended that Bullock is worried voters are ready for a change.

"From his early days as a state representative back when Ike was president, to his work as a used car lobbyist, to his present job as the state's tax collector, Bullock has become the insider's insider," Mosbacher said.

"While Bullock was in the smoke-filled rooms of Austin, I was running an independent oil and gas company in Houston. While Bullock sat around counting jobs, I was creating jobs," he said.

The Republican said Bullock served in the Legislature from 1956-1959, was an assistant attorney general, an aide to Gov. Preston Smith, secretary of state and comptroller. From 1963-1967, Bullock also lobbied for car dealers and other interests, Mosbacher said.

State says retarded woman's pregnancy didn't need to be reported to the court

AUSTIN (AP) — The lawyer for a profoundly mentally retarded, pregnant woman wants a federal judge to hold the state in contempt for "failing to provide adequate medical care and protection" for her.

The state says it acted appropriately in the woman's case.

The Lubbock State School resident became pregnant after being raped while under state care last spring. Police and state officials still don't know who raped her.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders, in an order last week, said the 32-year-old retarded woman's life and health are in danger.

The state disputed that finding in documents filed Tuesday with the court in Dallas.

Also, the state said it did nothing wrong by not reporting the woman's pregnancy to the court after discovering it in June.

Sanders has ordered reforms in care provided mentally retarded people in state institutions. The federal court became involved in the system in 1974, when families filed a class-action lawsuit alleging poor care.

The pregnant woman, who has an IQ of 12, is so severely mentally retarded that she does not even know she's pregnant.

Her lawyer, David Ferleger of Philadelphia, said he'd mail Sanders a motion for contempt against the state Tuesday. It's based on several factors, including the woman's pregnancy, the state's failure to report it and an alleged lack of proper care by the state.

In last week's order, Sanders told the state to immediately dispatch an expert physician to investigate the woman's care and to give federal court monitor Linda O'Neill all state records on the woman from June 1, 1988, to the present.

Assistant Attorney General Dona Hamilton said the state was doing so. She said the physician was writing his report, adding, "The indication I have so far is that the care is excellent."

The state also was ordered to explain why the woman's rape and pregnancy were not reported to the court.

Ms. Hamilton said the state only is required to report to the court monitor abuse of a retarded client by state school staff. It has not been determined who sexually assaulted the woman, she said, so a report would not be required at this point.

The case was reported to Lubbock police, the state welfare agency's Adult Protective Services program and the Rape Crisis Center, according to the state's motion. An internal investigation at the state school has been delayed pending the conclusion of the police probe, at the request of police, the motion said.

Ferleger said any abuse should be reported to the court.

"If a state school resident becomes pregnant, there was abuse, period. End of question. Who the perpetrator was is a different question," he said.

The state also is asking Sanders to modify his order.

Rather than having the expert physician contact family members and health care professionals for background on the woman's care, the state says that should be done through a court proceeding.

Ferleger disagrees, saying the doctor should do a complete medical history.

The state asks Sanders to delete some findings of his order, including that the retarded woman's life and health are in danger.

The woman "is receiving appropriate prenatal care and is assigned to a high-risk pregnancy clinic at the University Health Sciences Center," said the state's motion. It said there are no pregnancy-related problems.

The state said it did not have the opportunity to provide information to Sanders on the case before last week's ruling, and so has not been given its due process rights.

Ferleger said the state's response to Sanders' order "misses the point," which is the health and safety of the retarded woman.

Rising fuel prices force 40 layoffs at American Airlines

FORT WORTH (AP) — Rising fuel prices have forced American Airlines, for the first time in years, to eliminate 1,000 jobs from its workforce.

About 40 American employees have received layoff notices so far.

The Fort Worth-based airlines, which employs more than 90,400 workers, took the action because of high fuel prices and a weakening U.S. economy.

"The move is an effort to reduce costs," said spokesman Al Becker Tuesday. "The (cost-cutting) plan isn't completed yet and won't be for several more weeks."

Company officials had said this past summer that the company planned to reduce costs sharply, and an unexpected rise in the price of jet fuel last winter contributed to a first-quarter loss of $19.3 million.

An unexpected decline in domestic air travel helped reduce second-quarter profits to $129.2 million, 27.4 percent less than the comparable period of 1989.

American officials had planned to reduce costs by implementing a "head-count freeze" in management and clerical ranks. The company said it planned to eliminate about 1,000 jobs primarily through attrition, but did not rule out layoffs if necessary.

Becker said several American workers at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, the largest of the carrier's seven connecting hubs, were included in the layoffs. He did not know the specific number.

The American workers affected at D-FW, where the airline has more than 12,000 workers, primarily are fleet service clerks, a group that includes airplane cleaners and baggage handlers.

American employees more than 217,600 workers in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Laid-off workers have priority rights over other job applicants for new positions at American. The employees, however, must meet the requirements for those new positions.

American currently operates 541 aircraft.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

'When in the course of human events...'

Mark Oct. 27 on your calendar. It's Taxpayer Action Day—the Independence Day of the new taxpayer revolt. On that Saturday thousands of people across the country will protest the exorbitant taxes our federal, state, and local governments take from us. Taxpayer Action Day comes just before the Nov. 5 mid-term election, so maybe a few politicians will get the message.

Taxpayer Action Day will feature a new Taxpayer's Declaration of Independence against the gang of modern-day George III's in Congress, in the state legislatures, and in city and county governments. The new Declaration begins: "When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for taxpayers to remonstrate against the arrogance, greed, ineptitude, and broken promises of incumbent politicians..."

Any taxpayer can easily write up his own list of grievances: the $500 billion-plus savings and loan scandal that eventually will cost every man, woman, and infant several thousand dollars in new taxes; investment-choking capital-gains tax rates; KGB-style IRS interrogations; a monumentally expensive Social Security system that may go broke in 20 years. And on and on.

The Taxpayer's Declaration of Independence itemizes many more grievances: a federal debt of $12,000 imposed on the head of each new child born in America; "dishonest accounting practices" used to violate the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law; a 37 percent hike for congressmen even as the country drops into a recession and unemployment rises; failure to balance the budget for 21 years; "a welfare system that traps generations of inner city residents in conditions of poverty and despair."

It makes one pretty mad. But the Declaration also includes some hilarious examples of government waste: $6 million for an Arkansas fish farm; $500,000 to study how smoking affects dogs; $500,000 to prove that sheepdogs do, in fact, protect sheep. "Pretty expensive jokes."

Taxpayer Action Day is sponsored by the Council for Citizens Against Government Waste, a coalition of groups calling for responsible government. One member is Mike Siegel, president of the National Association of Radio Talk Show Hosts. That means that revolt will be plumped loudly across the nation's lively talk-radio network.

America's independence in 1776 was sparked by a tax revolt against King George III, whose tyrannies look rather pale compared to those of the U.S. government of 1990. Even that foreign potentate never dared impose an income tax, a capital-gains tax, or a payroll tax. It's time for taxpayers to "mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor" — as the words of the 1776 Declaration put it — to defeat 1990's gang of tax tyrants.

Berry's World

"Mommy's in Saudi Arabia. Do you want to talk to Daddy?"

Let Iraq be a lesson to us

The current unpleasantness in the Middle East may be remembered less for what eventually happens than for what we learn from it.

Lesson #1: Even without an aggressive Soviet menace, the United States can not afford to disarm. Before the Soviet Union there was Ho Chi Minh in Vietnam. Before that, Emperor Hirohito in Japan and Adolph Hitler in Germany. Before that, Kaiser Wilhelm II. And on and on, through a list of names and places now long forgotten.

Though U.S. ground troops may no longer be needed in Europe, plenty of world-class troublemakers stand ready to spread their mischief, and the United States — the "Imperialist Devil!" — remains their favorite target.

Lesson #2: When the troublemakers try it, we must stand ready to give them a swift, firm kick in the rear. No, the United States is not the world's policeman. But we're not strictly a continental power any more either. We can't withdraw from the world without jeopardizing our own future. If legitimate U.S. interests are threatened, we should act quickly and with firm resolve.

Lesson #3: The Middle East "peace process" is fiction. Israel's Likud government the object of much derision and criticism in this country, has been right all along: many of its neighbors won't be satisfied until every Jew has been driven out of the Middle East, and Israel—the Land of Milk and Honey—has been turned into another desert rat hole, fit only for camels and scorpions.

As Robert Loewenberg of the Institute for Advanced Strategic and Political Studies in Jerusalem reminds us: Israel can't afford to lose a single war. Just one loss means the country's destruction. With neighbors like Iraq's Saddam Hussein, whose aggression has been cheered by the Palestinians, is it any wonder that Israelis generally, and Israeli military strategists in particular, have been inhospitable to the idea of handing the West Bank over to PLO types.

Lesson #4: We need to end the fiction that developing a defense against guided (and perhaps unguided) missiles was a Ronald Reagan pipedream. The Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) is necessary. It is well within our ability, we now know, to develop weapons that would destroy incoming missiles before they reach their targets. Just days after the Iraqis rolled into Kuwait, Israel test-fired an interceptor missile, which it has been developing in cooperation with the Pentagon. We need to move ahead without delay to develop and deploy SDI.

Iraq has chemical warheads and intermediate-range ballistic missiles — and would have had nuclear warheads if the Israelis hadn't destroyed Hussein's nuclear weapons plant. During the next decade, more countries will join the nuclear club, and some of them undoubtedly will beg, buy, steal, or build the kind of missiles needed to lob one or more warheads our way. There's no rational, or moral, reason to leave ourselves naked to such a threat. Congressional footdragging on this is a disgrace.

Argument against foreign aid

In 1822 the first shipload of freed American slaves landed on the malarial swamps of what was to become Monrovia (named for President Monroe) and later "Liberia" — with liberty and justice for all.

So grateful were these former slaves to the nation that had set them free that they formed a government as much like ours as possible, with a seal like ours, with a constitution fashioned after our own. Their national flag was red, white and blue.

Former Americans slaves — now Liberians — were "free at last."

Within one generation, they were divided along tribal lines and selling one another into slavery.

American attitudes toward Liberia since have been ambivalent, contradictory.

In recent years, our country has been first credited with — and then accused of — sponsoring the government of President Samuel Doe.

Doe, an increasingly ruthless dictator, had allowed his army to harass civilians for money, to hijack their cars, even to shoot people.

At the same time, in the suburbs of Monrovia, crazed teen-age rebels who claimed to be fighting for "democracy" executed civilians who dared to support the government.

And, however inadvertently, we're still in the middle of it.

Doe's army wore the uniforms of American GIs as they murdered Liberian civilians.

The rebels wore "Camp Beverly Hills" T-shirts and listened to American rap music as they went about murdering Liberian civilians.

And the bodies of many of the civilian victims were dumped in the morgue of the American-built John F. Kennedy Hospital.

Anyway, Doe's resistance has been overwhelmed. During his last days his troops, including his personal bodyguard, fled for their lives.

The Reagan Administration pumped $500 million in economic aid to Liberia, a country of only two million people.

Even as evidence mounted that Doe was stealing much of the money, the aid continued.

I guess what I'm saying is that if ever there were an argument against foreign aid, Liberia is it.

In 1987, the United States sent a team of economic analysts to Liberia to monitor government spending. Within a year, the analysts came home in disgust.

Yet even as you read this, Washington is contemplating more of your money to help the next dictator to "restore order."

Two cities — and what a difference

By CHUCK STONE

Down in Atlanta, its euphoric residents have been quoting the first half of Dickens' famed opening line in A Tale of Two Cities: "It was the best of times..."

The city once burned by Gen. Sherman has arrayed itself with a new international glory after being chosen to host the 1996 Summer Olympics. Scarlett O' Hara's hometown has never looked better.

Meanwhile, up in Philadelphia, its dyspeptic residents have been quoting the second half of Dickens' line: "...it was the worst of times."

The city where the Declaration of Independence was written and American democracy was born has sunk to a nadir of disrepute. The major Wall Street bond-rating agencies lowered Philadelphia's bonds to somewhere between junk-bond status and betting at the Las Vegas crap tables. Benjamin Franklin's hometown never looked worse.

Why is the nation's fifth largest city on the brink of financial disaster, while the nation's 30th largest city is on the verge of an economic renaissance?

Despite regional and size-of-population differences, the two cities share similarities. Both have almost identical per capita incomes: Philadelphia, $16,160; Atlanta, $16,408. Both have been governed by black mayors for the last six years.

The similarities end there. But the differences explain why Atlanta is soaring into the heavens of financial stability while Philadelphia is plummeting into a quagmire of financial incredulity.

Begin with the political and business leadership of the two cities. For 16 years, Atlanta has been governed by black mayors, eight years of Maynard Jackson — portly, affable and exceptionally bright — followed by eight years of the Rev. Andrew Young, a former close associate of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. — somber, studious and well-connected internationally.

During Jackson's tenure, Atlanta built one of the nation's most modern airports with almost 30 percent black subcontractors.

The last fact is important. Atlanta has a black corporate and educational leadership class that interacts comfortably with the city's most influential corporate leaders. Its conception of itself as "the city too busy to hate" may be hyperbolic. But members of its racially integrated power structure do occasionally meet together.

Now, take Philadelphia...please! For the past seven years, the misnamed "City of Brotherly Love" also has been governed by a black mayor, W. Wilson Goode. He etched his name in the annals of history by becoming the first American mayor to approve the bombing of his own city. Eleven persons, including five children, were killed.

Everybody makes mistakes. But an unconscionably arrogant Goode boasted that he would do the same thing again! That imperiousness, bordering on what the Greeks disdained as hubris, isolates Goode from most elected officials.

Some of Goode's failings are relatively minor: His pathetic fracturing of syntax lends a Mrs. Malaprop embarrassment to his pontifications. Some are major: Goode has failed to build political alliances that could repair his repeated budgetary miscalculations. At least George Bush has congressional Republicans pushing his budget. Goode doesn't even have one Democrat.

But Philadelphia's business community must share some of the blame. For the first five years of Goode's tenure, sycophantic business leaders were like the populace who admired the king's finery. Nobody cried, "but the king has no clothes."

Even worse, Philadelphia has no black corporate leadership within the city's white power structure.

Atlanta has shown that the best of times can be crowned by the Olympics when a proud city gets its economic act together.

Philadelphia has shown that the worst of times can be disgraced by junk bonds when the voters become too corrupted by laziness to care.

101st Congress has much to do and little time to do it

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two weeks from the end of its two-year term, the 101st Congress has little to brag about and much to do.

The preoccupation with getting a budget has backed up other important legislation on subjects ranging from clean air and housing to civil rights and child care.

With anti-incumbent sentiment running high across the country, no member of Congress wants to face voters having done little more than approve job protection rights for the disabled, an inadequate savings and loan bailout and a congressional pay raise.

"It's been a thin session so far, there's no question about it," said Thomas Mann, who studies Congress for the Brookings Institution, a Washington think tank.

Before they can go home for an abbreviated campaign season, lawmakers still must pass the nuts and bolts: taxes and spending cuts to enact the vague guidelines they have agreed to in the budget; and the 13 annual spending bills needed to run the government through next Sept. 30.

That won't be easy. The bill implementing the budget agreement will have to include $135 billion or more in new taxes, possibly including levies on gasoline, alcoholic beverages and cigarettes, and about $40 billion in Medicare savings including higher deductibles for beneficiaries.

"If the budget deal is genuine, that overwhelms everything else and becomes the major piece of legislation by which the Congress is remembered," said Mann. "They will have tackled the biggest problem that has haunted government for a decade."

On top of those must-do bills, leaders in both houses have a pared-down list of other items they want badly to complete.

Topping the list is a compromise Clean Air Act, the first rewrite since 1977 of the law setting air quality standards.

The bill would impose broad new air pollution control requirements on factories, power plants and automobiles to ease acid rain and urban smog, and for the first time require broad industrial controls on toxic chemical releases.

Another top priority is legislation providing federal child care assistance, including money to low-income families through tax credits.

One little-noticed measure that falls into the must-pass category is new money for the Resolution Trust Corp., which has run dry as it seeks to take over failed savings and loans. An estimated $90 billion will be needed this year to cover losses and provide working capital.

House and Senate conferees also are to begin resolving differences over an anti-crime bill, following House action last week to broaden use of capital punishment and curtail the appeal rights of death row inmates.

Also pending, and facing a presidential veto threat, is a civil rights bill aimed at protecting employees from job discrimination. Elements range from a ban on racial harassment in the workplace to a provision locking in court-approved fair-hiring agreements.

The core of the bill would ease the way for minorities to win discrimination suits against employers. The administration and some business groups say the Senate-passed measure would prompt companies to hire by quota as a way of insulating themselves against such suits.

Other items expected to come up in the final days of the congressional session include:

• An intelligence authorization bill that has been the focus of a battle between the House and Senate over whether to continue covert U.S. support for rebels in Angola, Afghanistan and Cambodia.

• A bill authorizing activities of the National Endowment for the Arts, and deciding how far the government should go in determining whether a work is obscene.

• An extension of the nation's borrowing authority to $3,444 trillion.

• Whether to grant most-favored-nation trading status to China.

Fighter-bomber crashes; kills both crew members

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — A U.S. Air Force F-111 fighter-bomber crashed today in Saudi Arabia, killing both crew members, U.S. military officials reported.

It was the fourth American aircraft to crash in three days among those deployed to this kingdom for Operation Desert Shield.

Eight Marines are missing in the crash of two helicopters in the northern Arabian Sea on Monday. An Air Force F-4 reconnaissance jet also went down that day, killing both crew members.

Lt. Cmdr. J.D. van Sickle, a military spokesman, said the F-111 crashed in the "southern Arabian peninsula" while on a training mission and that the incident was under investigation. The names of the flyers were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

The aircraft was attached to the 48th Tactical Fighter Wing based at RAF Lakenheath Air Base in Britain. The wing was sent to Turkey as U.S. forces massed in the region in response to Iraq's Aug. 2 takeover of Kuwait.

Today's crash brought to at least nine the number of Americans killed in the Persian Gulf region since Operation Desert Shield began.

The eight Marines aboard the two UH-1 Huey helicopters that vanished Monday are still officially listed as missing.

In addition to those killed in Saudi Arabia, 13 other Air Force personnel were killed in a crash of a C-5 jet cargo plane in Germany. That aircraft was ferrying supplies and equipment to the Saudi peninsula.

A U.S. Air Force F-111 fighter-bomber, similar to the one shown, crashed today in Saudi Arabia.

Former LULAC head Tony Bonilla indicted

DALLAS (AP) — Hispanic rights activist Tony Bonilla is innocent of a sexual assault charge lodged by a 22-year-old family friend, his attorney says.

Bonilla, former president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, was indicted on the charge Tuesday.

"I would say only that he is innocent of the charges," said Anthony Nicholas, Bonilla's attorney. "And he will plead absolutely not guilty (at arraignment)."

Bonilla is accused of forcing the woman to have sex with him in a San Antonio motel room on May 5. He turned himself into Bexar County authorities at about 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, Nicholas said.

Bonilla, a Corpus Christi native, was released on a $10,000 personal recognizance bond.

The woman making the accusation, Nicholas said, was a close friend of one of Bonilla's daughters.

Bonilla is currently chairman of the Corpus Christi Chamber of Commerce. He's the first Hispanic to head the more than 2,000-member organization.

To preserve anti-Iraq alliance, U.S. supports resolution against Israel

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — In a rare move against Israel, the United States is siding with Arab allies in the Persian Gulf crisis and urging U.N. condemnation of the Jewish state for using "excessive" force against Palestinian rioters.

Not since Israel invaded Lebanon in 1982 to drive out the PLO has the United States taken such a strong stance against its close ally, which it frequently shields from denunciation in the Security Council.

U.S. diplomats have drafted a resolution that in addition to condemning Israel seeks a U.N. probe into Monday's killings of 19 Palestinians in Jerusalem on the Temple Mount, which is sacred to Moslems and Jews.

But the PLO and non-aligned nations consider the U.S.-drafted measure too weak and vowed to fight it today with a rival resolution.

U.S. condemnation of the Temple Mount killings was disclosed Tuesday as the 15-member Security Council met to formulate a response to the incident and decide on action to protect Palestinians in the occupied territories.

A council meeting that had been scheduled for Tuesday night was delayed to enable diplomats to try to reconcile conflicting drafts. Diplomats said a vote could take place sometime today.

The sudden U.S. move in favor of condemnation appeared intended to avert a U.S. veto of the competing resolution and to preserve the fragile U.S.-led coalition that has isolated Iraq economically and politically for its Aug. 2 seizure of Kuwait.

A U.S. veto, diplomats argued, would only benefit the PLO and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, enraged Arabs and shake U.S. credibility in the Arab world.

Even Kuwait's government-in-exile joined Egypt, Saudi Arabia and more than two dozen other nations in condemning Israel's treatment of Palestinians and demanding that Israel withdraw from territories it seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

"We know full well the bitterness and sufferings of the unarmed Palestinian people under occupation, because we are passing through a similar experience," said Sheikh Sabah al-Ahmad al-Jaber al-Sabah of Kuwait.

The U.S. draft carefully balances criticism of Israeli security forces with condemnation of all violence, including that by Palestinians.

Israeli security forces opened fire after thousands of Palestinians threw stones down on unarmed Jewish worshippers at the Western Wall, injuring more than 20 Israelis. About 140 Palestinians were wounded in the shooting.

In Washington, President Bush told a news conference: "Israeli security forces need to be better prepared for such situations, need to act with greater restraint, particularly when it comes to the use of deadly force..."

The U.S. draft says the Security Council is "deeply concerned that Israeli security forces were ill-prepared to contain the violence, and responded excessively, and with deadly force, thus resulting in the tragic consequences."

It also "regrets that innocent worshippers also were attacked."

The draft "calls upon all parties to refrain from any actions which could complicate efforts to achieve a just, lasting and comprehensive peace."

Workers spend eternity with the boss

By MIMI MANN
Associated Press Writer

GIZA PLATEAU, Egypt (AP) — Even death couldn't free some workers from their bosses, archaeologists are finding in a newly discovered cemetery near the pyramids.

It's the first burial ground ever found for the Egyptian working man of 45 centuries ago.

Five other cemeteries with 4,000 tombs flank the pyramids, on the horizon above. But all 4,000 were reserved for royalty, their families and officials, said Zahi Hawass, director-general of antiquities for the pyramids area and the new dig's excavation chief.

"What we haven't found until now is the working class," said Hawass. "We were shocked when we looked at inscriptions of who was buried in the new tombs. Overseers holding their sticks. And behind, skeletons of workers."

He said it appears the workers were members of the foremen's crews.

The first eight tombs, three miles south of the Sphinx, lie at the base of sand hills stretching endlessly into the desert. Hawass said the cemetery undoubtedly extends deep into the dunes.

Tombs date from the fourth dynasty — 4,600 years ago when the Giza pyramids were built — until the sixth, 300 years later. It's a mysterious period when legend says workers grew tired of almighty pharaohs and of building pyramids for them.

Because no middle-class burials had been discovered on sacred Giza plateau, some Egyptologists have theorized that the afterlife was perceived as off-limits to the working man. But the new cemetery proves that pharaonic blue-collar workers prepared for eternity as their betters did, being buried with amulets, limestone tablets, offering tables, pottery vessels and more.

The largest tomb, built for a fifth-dynasty overseer named Ptah-Shepses, is 20 feet by 61/2 feet with an arched ceiling.

To the rear of the tomb, in a honeycomb of compartments, excavators found six skeletons buried in the fetal position. Hawass said they were members of one work crew.

Ancient Egyptians didn't practice human sacrifice, so the workers were not killed and buried at the same time as their bosses. And

(AP Laserphoto)

Zahi Hawass, director-general for the pyramids area at Giza Plateau, Egypt, oversees diggers excavating a tomb in a newly-discovered cemetery.

Hawass said there's no indication so far how a foreman chose the workers to be buried near him.

"Perhaps they were his favorites. Or perhaps we'll find others when we keep digging," Hawass said. "We have no idea how many people an overseer would have had on his staff."

Foremen handled day-to-day administration of the pharaohs' estates, with responsibilities comparable to farm managers or assembly-line supervisors in today's world.

"They dressed better, ate better and wanted better tombs than the men who worked for them," Hawass said.

"They looked at the pyramids and the fancy tombs of the officials. They knew they couldn't afford such luxury. Still they wanted a nice place to spend eternity."

In 1987, Hawass and Egyptologist Mark Lehner of Yale University began a search for homes of workers who built the three Giza pyramids. At a site some distance from the monuments, they uncovered ruins of a business center and other artifacts.

They stopped excavating in early 1988. The recently discovered tombs lay undetected only a few feet away.

Bush defends abrasive chief of staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Sununu may have the reputation on Capitol Hill of a bull in a china shop, but his boss says "there's bound to be a little broken china" when passions get high.

President Bush rallied to the defense of his abrasive chief of staff and his almost equally abrasive budget director, Richard G. Darman. "I have full confidence in them," Bush said at a news conference Tuesday. "They did an outstanding job."

Even so, following the collapse of a budget agreement negotiated by the White House and congressional leaders, the two top White House aides have been the target of heavy criticism from congressional budget negotiators of both parties.

Sununu and Darman got the vote of confidence from the man who counts.

But the residual hard feelings could make it harder for Bush to patch up differences with congressional leaders — and heal the gaping rift among House Republicans — in the coming days.

At one point last weekend, Democratic budget negotiators refused to meet with their Republican counterparts if Sununu and Darman were at the table.

Rep. Jim Lightfoot, R-Iowa, wrote a letter to Bush urging him to come to Capitol Hill on a peace-keeping mission but to leave the "pit bulldogs" at the White House.

Lawmakers have bristled at what they say is Sununu's arrogance and heavy-handedness in dealing with members of Congress.

Sununu, asked by reporters Tuesday if he thought he had gone too far, retorted: "I don't think so. We got a budget passed, didn't we?"

Bush, asked if he had taken any members of his staff to the woodshed as a result of the congressional criticism, said: "Absolutely not."

"When the passions get high, I understand that there's bound to be a little broken china up there," the president said.

It's not the first time that Sununu has been in trouble with Congress on budget issues — or that Bush had to rally to his defense.

Early in the budget negotiations last summer, Sununu suggested that the president really didn't mean it when he suggested for the first time that he would consider tax increases to reduce the deficit.

Democrats were outraged. White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater had to disavow the remarks. But in the end, Bush stood fast by his embattled aide.

Nor is Sununu the first presidential chief of staff to generate harsh feelings.

Donald T. Regan, who was President Reagan's chief of staff for most of his second term, was almost universally disliked by Democrats in Congress, many other White House staffers and — perhaps more significantly — by first lady Nancy Reagan.

Like Sununu, Regan was accused of being caustic and arrogant.

Some of the same criticism was leveled at H.R. Haldeman, President Nixon's heavy-handed chief of staff and a central figure in the Watergate scandal.

And President Carter's chief of staff, Hamilton Jordan, so angered then-House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., that O'Neill deliberately and consistently mispronounced his name, calling him "Hannibal Jerkin."

Calzones feature the flavor of pizza

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Garden
Magazine Food Editor

Calzones feature the flavors of pizza neatly packaged in pastry. Save preparation time with folded, refrigerated unbaked piecrusts. To freeze calzones, wrap tightly in moisture-vaporproof wrap, then seal, label and freeze. At serving time, remove the wrap and rewrap the calzones individually in foil. Bake in a 375-degree F oven for 45 to 50 minutes or until heated through.

CALZONES

- One 15-ounce package (2 crusts) folded refrigerated unbaked piecrusts
- 3/4 pound bulk Italian sausage or bulk pork sausage
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
- One 8-ounce can pizza sauce
- One 4-ounce can sliced mushrooms, drained
- 1/4 cup sliced pitted ripe olives
- 1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese

(4 ounces)
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Let piecrusts stand at room temperature according to package directions. Meanwhile, for filling, in a large skillet cook sausage, onion and green pepper until meat is brown and vegetables are tender. Drain off fat. Stir in pizza sauce, mushrooms and olives. Set filling aside.

Unfold piecrusts; cut each in half, making four semicircles. Spoon 1/4 of the filling onto half of each piecrust semicircle. Sprinkle each with 1/4 cup of the mozzarella cheese. Moisten pastry edges with water. Carefully lift and fold each piecrust semicircle in half over filling. Seal edges with fingers, then with tines of a fork.

Place on a greased baking sheet. Brush with water and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Cut slits in tops of calzones to allow steam to escape. Bake in a 375-degree F oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until golden brown. Let stand for 5 minutes on baking sheet before serving. Makes 4 servings.

These pizza calzones are filled with cooked sausage, onions and peppers combined with pizza sauce, mushrooms and olives. The filling is sprinkled with mozzarella cheese before the calzones are sealed and baked.

Delicious chicken dish is low fat, high flavor

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine Food Editor

Low-fat selections are a regular feature of chef Kelly Mills' menu at the Four Seasons Clift Hotel in San Francisco. "At the restaurant, I often lighten up traditional favorites," Mills says. "To make this well-known dish a healthful hit, I skin the chicken and cut down on cooking oil." Mills offers a choice of simmering or baking as the cooking method.

CHICKEN CACCIATORE

- 6 skinned, boned small chicken breast halves (3 ounces each)
- 2 tablespoons olive oil or cooking oil
- 2 medium sweet red or green peppers, cut into strips
- 1 large onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings (1 cup)
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- Two 4-ounce jars whole button mushrooms, drained
- 1/2 cup dry white wine
- 1 small serrano chili pepper, seeded and finely chopped, or 1/4 teaspoon crushed dried red pepper (optional)
- One 28-ounce can tomatoes, cut up
- 2 tablespoons tomato paste
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons dried basil, crushed
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- Hot cooked penne or rigatoni pasta (optional)

In a heavy 12-inch skillet or Dutch oven brown chicken in hot oil on all sides (4 to 5 minutes total). Remove chicken; set aside. Add sweet peppers, onion and garlic to skillet drippings. Cook until vegetables are tender.

Add mushrooms, wine and serrano or crushed red pepper to vegetable mixture. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, uncovered, until almost all liquid evaporates. Add undrained tomatoes, tomato paste, lemon juice, basil, sugar, thyme, salt and pepper. Return chicken to pan.

Simmer, uncovered, 15 minutes or until chicken is tender and no longer pink. Or, after returning chicken to pan, bake, uncovered, in a 350-degree F oven 10 to 15 minutes or until chicken is done (use an ovenproof skillet for this method). Serve over hot cooked pasta. Makes 6 servings.

Raspberries top off pears for classy, easy to fix salad

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine Food Editor

Best eaten fresh, Anjou or Comice varieties of pears are good choices for this classy salad. Most pears you buy will be firm. To ripen them, place the pears in a paper bag at room temperature for a few days. When they yield to gentle pressure at the stem end, they are ripe and ready to enjoy. Store ripe pears in the refrigerator up to one week.

PEAR SALAD WITH RASPBERRY VINAIGRETTE

- 1 cup fresh or frozen red raspberries
- 1/4 cup red-wine vinegar
- 1/4 cup salad oil
- 1 to 2 tablespoons sugar

- 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 4 cups torn mixed greens
- 2 pears, cored and sliced
- 1 cup seedless red grapes, halved
- 1/4 cup chopped pecans

Thaw raspberries, if frozen. For dressing, in a blender container or food processor bowl combine raspberries and vinegar. Cover and blend or process about 30 seconds or until raspberries are pureed. Sieve mixture and discard the seeds.

Transfer raspberry mixture to a small mixing bowl. Stir in salad oil, sugar and ground cinnamon. Cover dressing and chill until serving time. To serve, arrange torn greens on individual salad plates. Top with pear slices and grapes. Sprinkle with pecans. Stir dressing; drizzle over each salad. Pass any remaining dressing. Makes 4 servings.

Canadian's annual Fall Foliage Festival this weekend

The Citadel Garden, owned by Dr. and Mrs. Malouf Abraham, Jr., will be on the Tour of Homes.

Canadian's annual Fall Foliage Festival, which includes a tour of historic homes, a Classic Car Show, a Quilt Show, an Arts and Crafts Show, Kounty Kitchen and other special events will be held Sunday, Oct. 21st. Some of the events will also be open Saturday, Oct. 20th.

The Fifth Annual Classic Car Show will be held at the County Exhibition Building from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Antique, classic and later model cars, trucks, street rods, motorcycles and model cars will be on exhibit. There is an admission charge. "Moon Man" will provide entertainment for the two day event.

The River Valley Pioneer Museum will be open Saturday and Sunday from noon to 5. An exhibit of the work of area photographers and the Artist of the Month showing will be on display. Admission to the museum is free.

On Saturday evening a Cal/Fish Fry will be held on the back lawn of the museum located on Highway 60-83, starting at 6 p.m. Live music will be provided and there is an admission charge for adult and children.

"Fencewalker" will provide country western music for the Saturday evening dance at the City Auditorium beginning at 9 p.m. Admission will be charged.

Sunday's festivities will include a free Arts and Crafts Show at the Canadian Elementary School from 11 a.m. - 5 p.m. The Women's Service League will sponsor the Kounty Kitchen 11:30 a.m. - 4 p.m. also at the school. Hot beef brisket sandwiches, with beverages will also be sold. Desserts will be available.

The 1990 Tour of Homes will feature the homes of Dick and Gail Waterfield, J.B. and Carol Reid, and Dell and Elise Krehbiel. In addition to these historic homes, the Citadel Gardens of Dr. and Mrs. Malouf Abraham and the artwork of Conrad Cooper (on display at the Moody building downtown) will be included.

The tour is from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. There is a charge, but children under 12 and accompanied by an adult will be admitted free of charge. Tickets for the Tour will be available at the River Valley Pioneer Museum and the Canadian Elementary School on Sunday.

The Museum will sponsor a Quilt Show Sunday afternoon between noon and 5 p.m. at the former Anthony's Building on lower Main Street. There is an admission charge.

Live musical entertainment will be provided at the Gazebo Park Sunday afternoon between 1 and 4 p.m.. There is no charge for this event and visitors will have the opportunity to sit and enjoy the music.

There is no charge for the Nature Trail and Foliage Tour in the Lake Marvin area northeast of Canadian. Visitors may enjoy an unescorted drive to Lake Marvin where a nature trails will be marked. Maps and information will be available at the Museum both Saturday and Sunday, at the Canadian Elementary School Sunday, and at the entrance to the lake area on Sunday. Foliage should be beautiful for the weekend.

For more information on any of these events call the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, (806) 323-6234.

Juror's patience goes on trial

DEAR ABBY: This is another one of those "I never thought I'd be writing to Dear Abby" letters. However, because of your response to a letter concerning jury duty, I felt an obligation to set the record straight.

Obviously, you have never been summoned to jury duty. If you had, I doubt that you would have answered as you did.

Being summoned is one thing; serving is another. You can sit around for a month waiting to be impaneled; then you have to deal with the defense, the prosecutor and judge, who ask you more questions than they ask the accused.

After the trial is finally over and a verdict is reached, the judge either reverses the decision or throws it out.

This kind of treatment makes people want to serve on a jury? Not me!

BEEN THERE IN OHIO

DEAR BEEN THERE: I agree with Judge Boldt, who wrote: "Jury service honorably performed is as important in defense of our country, its Constitution and laws, and the ideals and standards for which they stand, as the service rendered by the soldier on the field of battle in time of war."

I rest my case.

DEAR TROUBLED: When you are approached by children — as you surely will be while feeding the ducks — tell the children that they are safe with you, but to remember that not every stranger is an OK person.

Be sure to stress that they never should accept any kind of gift — candy or money or anything else — from a stranger. And they should never under any circumstances get into a car with a stranger. Use the opportunity to educate these children about the dangers of strangers.

Field of toxic plants helps train veterinarian students

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER
Associated Press Writer

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Plants in this garden range from those whose very names suggest poison — rattlesnake, water hemlock, snake-root — to those that seem as innocent as a backyard in spring — tomato, daffodil, black walnut. But don't be fooled.

In this small field, surrounded by research to feed people and livestock, all the plants can kill.

When the quarter-acre plot at the University of Illinois is complete, students will study nearly 100 varieties of vegetables, shrubs, trees and weeds that are toxic to man and animal.

The main idea is to give veterinary students a look at plants that can cause sickness and death in small house pets or large farm animals, says Val Beasley, a vet who teaches toxicology.

"Students need to see the real plants in all their growth stages — spring, summer and fall," says Beasley. "They can stroll through the garden at lunchtime; it's a lot better than looking at slides."

The garden is the project of Paula Braitch, a student and technician at the Illinois Animal Poison Information Center on campus. The plants are being put into the 50-by-150 foot plot, which will have much walkways and a chain fence. They will be labeled with their Latin and common names as well as the toxic symptoms they produce.

"When vet students get into practice, an owner might come in and say, 'This is what my animal has been chewing on,'" says Beasley. "Or they might go to his home and see one of these plants and make a quick diagnosis."

If a pig eats pigweed, he can suffer kidney failure; if a cow nibbles on a fallen cherry branch, the cyanide in it can be lethal; if a horse encounters black walnut shavings, his hoofs can become swollen and sore; and if he eats a Japanese yew, it can stop his heart.

Though the plants can be toxic, Beasley says there is no major concern about danger or liability.

"It will clearly be labeled as a poisonous plant garden," he says. "The choice is between ignorance and knowledge."

Besides, says Braitch, there won't be anything exotic in the garden.

"We're talking about plants that people can come in contact with walking down the railroad tracks right here in Illinois."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Something you unsuccessfully attempted to do previously can be achieved with relative ease today. This is because the timing is now right. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your logical evaluations will be caressed by sensitivity today, making you an excellent person to give advice to those who seek your counsel.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Endeavors in which you get involved today should eventually work out to your satisfaction, because you'll know how to advantageously use all the resources available to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Partnership arrangements substantially enhance your probabilities for success today. It could be due to the fact that two heads are brighter than one if the objective is singular.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Goals are achievable today, but you must keep your objectives uppermost in your mind at all times. Your effectiveness will be considerably reduced if you start to let your thoughts wander.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Friends will take a sincere interest in you today and try to cater to your needs both socially and commercially. There's a chance you might turn a profit and have a good time doing it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Conditions that have an influence on your domestic affairs should be reasonably stable today, but they could get tilted off balance if either you or your mate introduce an old disagreeable issue.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your mental attributes are very keen today, but you may have only limited powers of concentration. Try to complete assignments that require brain work as early as possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You should be rather sharp today when shopping for essential commodities or household items, but your same sense of values might not be operative when it comes to buying trendy merchandise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Schedule things today so that you have adequate time to take care of your personal interests. It looks like you might be free to do what you want to do without too much outside interference.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll perform effectively today, provided you can do things at your own time and pace. Your proficiency as a producer could lessen, however, if you have a supervisor peering over your shoulder.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you will realize that something which has been causing you anxiety lately is not nearly as bad as you've imagined. In fact, you should begin to see you have reasons to be hopeful.

Sox send Clemens to the mound in last-gasp effort

By TIM LIOTTA
AP Sports Writer
OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Our last chance? Where's Roger?

Facing elimination from the American League playoffs, the Boston Red Sox will shove Roger Clemens back to the mound today to make one last stand.

On three days rest. After two starts in a month filled with shoulder pain.

It sounds like the obvious move, one filled with courage on Clemens' part. But is this really necessary? Why risk anything — or everything, if you're talking about what Clemens means to the Red Sox — on such a long shot.

"I don't believe they can win four games in a row, so I just don't see any point in him pitching," said Oakland pitcher Dave Stewart, who will start Game 4 for the Oakland Athletics.

Boston manager Joe Morgan pulled Clemens from Game 1 after six innings, even though he was leading 1-0. It was an obvious move then. Clemens was obviously struggling, pitching far from his best but far better than what the bullpen would offer.

But if Morgan knew Clemens was less than 100 percent on Saturday night, could this pitcher's condition have changed so drastically in less than 72 hours that the franchise jewel would not be at stake? Is winning one game, maybe only prolonging the inevitable by one day, that important?

"His shoulder is tired and I believe that probably he is tired," Stewart said. "I would think that the best thing for Roger Clemens would be to rest for the rest of the year and get himself healthy and strong for next year, so he can do what he has got to do. Or see if they should happen to win tomorrow's game and pitch on his regular day."

Morgan even admitted Clemens would not pitch if he did not have to.

"If we would have won (Game 3), he would not have been pitching," Morgan said.

But Clemens is pitching, even though the A's have beaten the Red Sox seven straight times, going back to the 1988 playoffs, and have outscored them 17-3 in the first three games of this series.

Oakland has lost its starting shortstop, Walt Weiss, and has yet to hit a home run. And still the Athletics win. Should they finish off a four-game sweep today, they will have won 12 of 13 playoff games over the last three seasons.

The Red Sox have managed three runs in three games. They have gotten three outstanding pitching performances from their starters — Clemens in Game 1, Dana Kiecker in Game 2 and Mike Boddicker in Game 3 — and still they haven't won.

They haven't even threatened to win. After getting what seems an obligatory run early, the A's have just shredded the Red Sox into threads, magnifying every Boston slipup into a run.

And if the first three games are any evidence, there's somebody new waiting in the Oakland dugout to tear out Boston's heart.

In the first two games, Harold Baines and Willie McGee, both with the A's less than six weeks, led the way with five hits, three runs scored, three RBIs and two stolen bases.

In Game 3, Willie Randolph and Dave Henderson, guys who didn't start either of the first two games, did in the Red Sox. Randolph had a pair of run-scoring singles and Henderson drove in another run with a sacrifice fly.

"We know this team is good enough to lose any one or two players and continue to win," Henderson said.

Faced with all this, maybe Stewart is right. Maybe Clemens should sit this one out. Or at least wait another day.

Reds strong-arm Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates aren't throwing away their chances of winning the National League playoffs. The Cincinnati Reds are doing it for them.

The Pirates knew they'd have to find a way to beat the Reds' great young arms — Rob Dibble, Randy Myers, Norm Charlton, Jose Rijo — to make it to the World Series. Little did they know they'd also have to beat the arms of Eric Davis, Paul O'Neill and Billy Hatcher.

The Reds' 5-3 victory in Game 4 Tuesday night gave Cincinnati a 3-1 edge in a series few expected one team to dominate so convincingly.

The Reds have out-homered the Pirates 4-3, have out-hit them .256-.225 and have a 2.50 earned run average to Pittsburgh's 4.11. The Reds' bullpen has allowed only two earned runs in 12 2-3 innings and has limited the Pirates' dangerous 3-4-5 hitters — Andy Van Slyke, Bobby Bonilla and Barry Bonds — to a .222 average and three RBIs.

The Killer Bs have become the Killer ZZZZZs.

Bonds and Bonilla, who had 65 homers and 234 RBIs during the season, have zero homers and two RBIs. Bonds, the NL's likely Most Valuable Player, has no homers and no RBIs. And, in several ineffectual at-bats against the Reds' Nasty Boys bullpen, no chance.

"I know we're going to wake up eventually," Bonds said. "But we may find ourselves waking up to play golf unless we wake up..."

If they don't wake up tonight, the Pirates' tee-off times begin Thursday morning. Their backs are so far against the proverbial wall that Van

Slyke said, "It's a good thing the paint's dry or we might stick."

What has kept the Pirates at arm's length has been a Reds' outfield "that's thrown out more runners in this series than you usually see in a whole month," losing pitcher Bob Walk said.

Paul O'Neill threw out Van Slyke at third in the turning point of the Reds' 2-1 victory in Game 2. Every time the Pirates got something going in Game 4, the Reds turned right around and threw it back in their faces.

The Reds took a 2-1 lead in the fourth on O'Neill's solo homer and Chris Sabo's sacrifice fly. Van Slyke singled, stole second and scored on Sid Bream's double in the bottom of the inning, but center fielder Hatcher easily threw out Bream trying to score on Jose Lind's single.

"We're gambling, being aggressive, trying to get something going," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said.

Sabo's two-run homer made it 4-2 in the seventh, but Jay Bell's solo homer chased Rijo and brought in Myers, who hadn't allowed the Pirates a hit in 2 2-3 innings.

Bonilla fouled off four straight 3-2 pitches, then drilled a shot off the center field wall than missed being a home run by several feet. Hatcher fell down, but Davis — a three-time Gold Glove center fielder who's playing left to ease the pressure on his aching knees — raced over to play the carom off the wall.

With his back to the infield, Davis wheeled and threw a 300-foot line drive that just beat a sliding Bonilla at third.

No luck for the Irish!

Holtz hoping to revive team's fortunes

By THOMAS P. WYMAN
Associated Press Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — How does Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz feel after having a few days to absorb the Irish loss to Stanford?

"One step from suicide," the coach says.

Notre Dame may have seen enough self-destruction after the Irish fumbled away three punts to Stanford, two of which were converted to scores in the Cardinal's 36-31 victory.

So Holtz's thoughts turn instead to Saturday's game against Air Force (3-3) and a chance to revive his team's fortunes.

"I really and truly have not thought about sleep, about eating, about ratings or anything else," he said Tuesday. "All I'm concerned about is our football team and how we're going to turn this thing around."

And he's stopped thinking about his hopes for a second national championship.

"As far as I'm concerned, that's a dead issue," he said. "The only chance we had was to go 11-0 and play anybody else that went 11-0. Here, you aren't going to win it with a loss."

Stanford (2-3) knocked Notre Dame from No. 1 last week to No. 8 when Tommy Vardell rushed for his fourth 1-yard touchdown and the final score. Irish quarterback Rick Mirer's pass slipped off Derek Brown's fingertips as time ran out.

Holtz appeared revived from the Stanford shock, but admitted he and the team haven't had enough time to recover.

"I handle losses very poorly. I think that's a known fact," he said. "But you don't have time to shake it, and you have to shake it."

He refused to second-guess his decision to play tailback Ricky Waters and receiver Adrian Jarrell on punt returns against Stanford in place of the injured Raghib Ismail.

"If I had to do it over again, I wouldn't send anybody (deep)," he said.

The Irish began the season ranked No. 2, then moved into the top spot after a 28-24 comeback victory over Michigan, now ranked at the top. Notre Dame held the top ranking through a 20-19 victory over Michigan State, won in the final moments, and an easy victory over Purdue.

Irish fans were bracing for the Oct. 20 game against No. 3 Miami. The matchup was pivotal in Notre Dame's 1988 national championship season, when the Irish beat Miami, and in the Hurricane's 1989 championship year, when they beat Notre Dame.

But Holtz offered no hope this year's game would count as much.

"You've got to be lucky to win a national championship, especially at Notre Dame," he said. "You've got to win it convincingly. You can't just be good enough, or deserve it."

Six-Man Poll

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Although so scrambling took place, the top 10 teams remained the same for the third consecutive week in the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal six-man poll.

Eight of the top 10 teams recorded victories in the past week, and the other two — Rule and Jayton — did not play. Rule won by forfeit over Harrold.

Christoval has clamped a stranglehold on the top spot for all six voting periods, despite having two forfeit losses on its record for using an ineligible player in victories against Harper (50-2) and Sands (24-9).

The Cougars accumulated four of a possible seven first-place votes after battering Midland Christian 88-33 Saturday.

ing Trent 59-14. McLean edged Valley 35-28. Trinidad moved to eighth with a 49-26 win over Abbott.

No. 5 Bosqueville, a 26-18 winner against Blum, and No. 6 Rule maintained the same positions for the third consecutive week.

Sands and Zephyr were repeat choices at the seventh and 10th spots, respectively.

Here is the weekly Lubbock Avalanche-Journal high school six-man football poll of Texas sports writers with records, first-place votes in parentheses, total points (tabulated on a 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis) and last week's ranking:

Football pollster makes good picks

Good guesses. It's hard to be critical of the Harris Rating System, which weekly predicts the outcome of high school football games across the state.

Harris is right more times than not. The pollster had a good week when it came to picking seven area games, involving Pampa's District 1-4A foes and teams in the Pampa News coverage area.

Harris correctly picked four winners, Frenship over Randall, 38-14; Canyon over Dumas, 30-9; Stratford over White Deer, 54-0, and Wheeler over Vega, 54-0.

The ones he missed could easily have gone the other way.

Canadian was a 7-point favorite over Boys Ranch, but the Wildcats ended up on the short end, 10-6. "We had several chances to win it, but we just didn't get the job done," said Canadian coach Paul Wilson.

Fourth-quarter mishaps plagued the Wildcats. Canadian had a punt blocked and a Wildcat receiver dropped a pass in the end zone.

"We were throwing and catching the ball well, except for that dropped end zone pass," added Wilson. "Their line of scrimmage was a little quicker than we were and that hurt us."

Borger was a 1-point underdog against Lubbock. The Panthers failed on a two-point conversion in the fourth quarter that would have tied the score, giving Borger a 14-12 win.

Harris had Hereford favored by six over Levelland, but Steve Salazar kicked a 23-yard field goal with 2:19 to play to give the Lobos a 9-7 victory.

Not even Harris would have guessed the White-faces would be 1-4 at the halfway mark of the season.

Class 4A's top-ranked A&M Consolidated continues to roll along, soundly whipping Belton, 34-6, last weekend. Harris almost had that one picked right on the money, favoring the unbeaten Tigers by 29 points.

Pampa's loss to A&M four weeks ago by a 27-7 score is starting to look pretty respectable.

Terrific Tiger Teams. Area six-man teams McLean and Groom have the old momentum in their favor going into the district season.

McLean and Groom are undefeated, but they both had close calls last Friday night. McLean held off Valley, 35-28, while Groom survived a 45-36 scare against Amherst.

Dennis Hill and Tuffy Sanders turned in outstanding all-around games as fourth-ranked McLean went 5-0.

Hill scored a touchdown while rushing for 171 yards on 26 carries. On defense, Hill recovered a fumble and had nine tackles (3 unassisted, 6 assisted).

Sanders scored three TDs and rushed for 175 yards on 27 carries. He also kicked two two-point conversions, threw a one-point conversion pass and, defensively, was in on four tackles.

Groom was trailing Amherst by a touchdown going into the fourth quarter, but the Tigers erupted for 21 points to notch their fifth win.

"That was the first time we've had to come from behind," said Groom coach Jimmy Branch. "It was a good experience for the kids."

Robert Miller rushed 40 times for a whopping 246 yards and scored all three of his touchdowns in the fourth-quarter rally.

"Miller was carrying quite a load for us," Branch said. "They were putting some pretty good hits on us throughout the game."

McLean hosts Lefors while Groom travels to Higgins for District 1-1A opener Friday night.

Clay, Lewis share SWC offensive player honors

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

When it came to the best offensive performances of the week in the Southwest Conference, it came down to Leon Clay's arm and the churning legs of Darren Lewis.

Their feats were so spectacular that the heroics couldn't be separated, so they share The Associated Press Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week award.

Texas Christian's Clay, who won the award outright last week by accounting for five touchdowns against Southern Methodist, did it again Saturday. But this time it was against a more formidable opponent, the Arkansas Razorbacks.

Clay threw four touchdown passes on scoring plays of 18, 88, 57, and 7 yards and scored on a 1-yard run. He completed 19 of 28 passes for 322 yards in the Horned Frogs' "Triple Shoot" offense.

TCU obliterated Arkansas 54-26. It's a first time a player had won the award back-to-back since Andre Ware did it for the Houston Cougars in his Heisman Trophy winning season. The last Horned Frog to win the award in consecutive weeks was running back Kenneth Davis in 1984.

In the last two weeks, Clay has accounted for 10 touchdowns. "He's been on an incredible roll and I hope it never stops," said TCU coach Jim Wacker. "He's just a sophomore, too. Imagine what might happen when he gets some experience."

Texas A&M's Lewis was no less a force in the Aggies 28-24 victory over Texas Tech, but he did it the old-fashioned way — overland.

Lewis rushed for a career-high 232 yards on 34 carries, the third best rushing day in school history.

It was Lewis' fourth 200-yard game which tied him for the SWC record with former Texas Tech running back, James Gray.

Lewis has 21 games of 100 yards rushing or more. Earl Campbell of Texas also had 21 during his career. Eric Dickerson of SMU has the career record of 28.

Lewis' performance came a week after he had been ejected for punching a Louisiana State player.

"I had something to prove to the team," Lewis said. "I owed them a game like this."

Lewis also made his first touchdown pass reception of his collegiate career. It came on a 4-yard pass from Bucky Richardson.

The AP's SWC Defensive Player of the Week is TCU's sophomore safety, Tony Rand, who blocked an Arkansas punt and fell on the ball for a touchdown. The 5-11, 176-pounder from Aldine also intercepted a pass that led to a field goal and made six tackles in the Frogs' upset.

PMS football teams sweep past Canyon

Pampa won all four games from Canyon is middle school football action Tuesday night.

Pampa Eighth-Grade Red won, 14-8, as Dwain Nickelberry scored on a 95-yard run and Kyle Parnell broke loose for a 45-yard TD.

Pampa Eighth-Grade Blue defeated Canyon, 22-12. Scoring for Pampa were Rod Donnell, 75-yard run; J.R. Neal, 20-yard run and Eric Parker, 35-yard run.

In seventh-grade action, Pampa Red rolled to a 22-0 victory. Jason Gutierrez and Ross Watkins scored on runs of 45 and 38 yards respectively. Adam Clark added a touchdown on a three-yard run.

Pampa Blue was victorious, 22-0. Scoring for Pampa were Rayford Young, 25-yard TD; Todd Finney, three-yard TD, and Waylon Bridwell, 14-yard TD.

The Pampa teams play next Thursday night. The seventh-graders host Hereford at 5 p.m. while the eighth-graders travel to Hereford for 5 p.m. games.

Bargain hunters throng oil-spill auction

By JULIA RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Thousands of bargain hunters snatched up everything from all-terrain vehicles to animal shampoo on the first day of an Alaska-size garage sale offering gear from the Exxon Valdez cleanup.

Locals grumbled that out-of-town businessmen with plenty of money in their pockets and a need to justify their jaunts to Alaska helped drive up prices Tuesday.

"It's a feeding frenzy," said Butch Johnson, a fisherman in search of nets who lives in the Prince William Sound fishing community of Cordova.

Everything on the opening-day block was sold, including a plane, mobile homes, TV sets and cat box filler, used to provide traction on oily beaches.

Ritchie Bros. Auctioneers International of Vancouver, British Columbia, bought the leftover equipment from Exxon Corp. last month for untold millions.

The auction company won't say how much it expects to make, but officials said they collected $3.8 million Tuesday.

Many items were grouped in lots, about 5,000 of them.

"A sale like this only comes around once in a lifetime," said Rod Meeks, an Anchorage aviation mechanic who bought two outboard motors for $3,250. "You really realize the size of the spill by all the garbage that came out of it."

The four-day sale continues through Friday at various sites. The items up for sale today include 10 cars, 51 trucks, six buses, heavy equipment such as forklifts and more marine supplies.

Many in the crowd complained prices were too high. Some people were upset about having to buy in lots. Microwave ovens were clumped with animal shampoo, for example.

Anchorage businessman Brian Watson, looking for equipment for his water purification company, expressed awe at sky-high pallets around him.

"The magnitude of this — and all because one ship blew it big," he said.

The Exxon Valdez ran aground in Prince William Sound in March 1989 and spewed nearly 11 million gallons of crude in the nation's biggest oil spill.

Exxon crews worked two summers to clean up the mess and plan to return next spring for a shoreline survey. Exxon officials said they didn't sell any equipment that could be used for additional cleanup.

Parked cars lined the roads for miles in all directions and Ritchie Bros. ran shuttle buses to the auction. An auctioneer in a booth atop a truck sold rows of all-terrain vehicles and aluminum skiffs, pallet after pallet of brand-new fishing nets and such things as life jackets, tables and chairs.

There was more inside a hangar, including outdoor thermometers and clothing.

A 1966 DeHaviland Beaver seaplane with an old Esso tiger painted on its tail and uncertain salt-water wear sold for $435,000. New, the plane would cost about $700,000, said several air-taxi company officials in the crowd.

Four used, nothing-special TV sets sold for a total of $2,000. Exxon used the TVs and videocassette recorders, also for sale, to show training tapes.

"Prices are way out of line. The people we know — the fishermen — aren't buying anything. They're just shaking their heads," said a Kodiak fisherman who wouldn't give his name.

Potential bidders look over rows of inflatable power boats Tuesday during the first day of a three-day auction of gear used by Exxon in the Exxon Valdez oil-spill cleanup effort. Nearly 8,000 people signed up to bid on acres of gear expected to bring in millions of dollars for the auctioneers who now own it.

Ground broken in Dallas for first compressed natural gas station

DALLAS (AP) — Ground was broken on what Railroad Commissioner John Sharp said would be the first compressed natural gas station in Texas for privately owned vehicles.

Sharp on Tuesday joined officials of United Parcel Service and Lone Star Energy Co. at the construction site.

"Around the turn of the century, someone had the bright idea of installing a gasoline pump in front of their business, and the gasoline station was born," Sharp said during the ceremony at the UPS facility.

Today, he said, "this first natural-gas station in Texas may prove to be just as important a beginning as we move into the next century and towards the increased use of natural gas as an alternative fuel for vehicles."

Under the agreement, Sharp said,

UPS will convert 15 of its Dallas-based delivery vehicles to natural gas and Lone Star will build a fueling facility on UPS property.

The fast-fill station will be capable of fueling a vehicle in four to six minutes, Sharp said.
