ANSWERLINE

Q. My son earns spending money during the summer by mowing a few lawns. Does he have to collect sales tax for this and then fill out forms and send the tax money to the state.

A. If he only mows a few yards in the summer for spending money he does not have to collect sales tax. However, a person would have to pay sales tax to a professional lawn service company since they should have a sales tax number.

As of Friday morning, seven early votes had been cast.

Council adopts budget Thursday

Revenues should exceed expenditures if the budget for the coming fiscal year for the city of Colorado City goes as planned.

Councilmen approved the budget Thursday night following several budget workshops with revenues projected in the general fund to be $1,506,950 and expenditures projected at $1,503,344.

In the other main operating fund, water and sewer revenues are expected to be $1,159,720 while expenses are projected to be $1,144,086.

The budget contains several items the city has not had to look at before but they all indicate progress for the community. These include expenditures for payments on the proposed bond for massive improvements to the water and waste water system, payments to the county for the water lines already installed, revenue from the 80-john Wallace Unit for water and sewer services and funds set aside for a possible recycling program.

Each employee of the city was also voted a $50 per month raise.

Landfill rates and permits for electrical, plumbing, etc., were also increased.

On June 1, rates at the landfill will increase from $2.00 per cubic yard for all users to $7.50 per cubic yard for Colorado City residents and $10 per cubic yard for those outside the city limits and commercial users. Contractors and construction companies will be charged $15 per cubic yard.

For comparison purposes, an average pickup load is approximately 2 cubic yards.

Booth space increasing

Antiques growing in popularity

by Linda Stewart

Colorado City has taken the antique mall concept to heart and adapted it as uniquely as its own.

Since the first booths opened less than a year ago, the downtown area has fast become the Antique Mall Capital of West Texas. And that's not all. Many more dealers are clamoring for booth space and more buildings are being converted to the browser-friendly spaces.

"This town has come along a lot since this has started," said David Mainka of Stepping Back Into the Past Antiques, with his wife Rebecca adding, "It's the people walking around downtown going from store to store that I like."

John Williamson was instrumental in beginning the first strictly antiques shop with booth spaces for various dealers but the very first to open was Home Grown Crafts. It is a combination craft and antiques shop with as many as 26 booths decorated by various dealers.

Another building now completely filled with antiques is the one started by Williamson and operated by Vanessa Baker, the Good Ole Days Antique Mall.

"Each one of the dealers has booths filled with items reflecting their own interests," she said in response to the question of what the store specializes in. "I guess, though, it's mostly glassware," she added. There is a table set with complete place settings of rare Della Robbia glassware, made by Westmoreland from the the 1920-40 era. She also mentioned plenty of rare Rosefield items made in either Ohio or Pennsylvania in about the same time frame.

There are 23 dealers and their interests range from costume jewelry, handmade doilies in cutwork or crochet, a few toys, even a few horse items and tools and some antique kitchen cabinets.

Glenda Stinson converted the former Sears catalog store to Heartflet Treasures, an antique mall with 17 dealers from Snyder, Big Spring, Sweetwater and Odessa, as well as locally. There is also a rumor going around town that the Stinson-owned shop next to Lazy 7 Antique Haven will soon open with even more booths.

"We're opening up the upstairs soon and we'll have spaces to rent," Mrs. Stinson said, "and you can quote me on that." Heartfelt Treasures has been open since November.

A.W. Rowe's Lazy 7 Antique Haven is the latest to open, less than a month ago. "There are three dealers here already, two from here and a lady from Merkel," Rowe said, adding, "We still have plenty of space but by the time my wife and I bring some more of our things down, we'll have a lot of

Special section planned on Wallace opening

A special Souvenir Edition of the opening of the 80-John Wallace Unit will be published on Sunday, May 8.

It will include a complete written and pictorial history of the unit and how it came to be in Mitchell County. Local Texas Department of Criminal Justice personnel will be featured in this edition as well as numerous stories on how TDCJ operates.

To be included in this historical edition, please call the Record for assistance in placing your advertisement at 728-3413. The deadline for this issue which will have a press-run of several hundred extra copies will be Thursday, May 5.

Chamber suggests signs to welcome TDCJ, Governor

The Chamber of Commerce is requesting that any business or individual that has a marquee to join together to welcome the TDCJ employees and Governor Ann Richards to Colorado City.

On May 6, all the 400 TDCJ employees will be in town for orientation and the Chamber requests that the signs read "Welcome TDCJ".

And on May 11, Governor Richards will be in town and we would like the signs to then read "Welcome TDCJ and Governor Richards."

Charges to be filed on three for selling alcohol to minors

Charges are expected to be filed on three individuals here for selling alcoholic beverages to underage undercover volunteers working with the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission in conjunction with the Colorado City Police Department and the Mitchell County Sheriff's Department.

Chief of Police David Montgomery said two seventeen year old youths visited every establishment licensed to sell alcoholic beverages in Mitchell County this past Wednesday and Thursday and were able to buy alcoholic beverages at three locations - Smyler's, D. and R. Grocery and the Skinny's on Second Street. These businesses face administrative hearings from the T.A.B.C. and possible temporary suspension of license privileges.

Montgomery said the youths did not carry any identification on them and if they were asked their age, they replied they were 17. Every transaction was recorded via hidden microphones and where possible, with video cameras.

Montgomery expressed his appreciation to the T.A.B.C. and stated this operation enabled the C.C.P.D. to get a better idea where under-age youths were obtaining beer and liquor.

"We believe that the main problem stems from certain individual adults providing alcoholic beverages to the youth and they are not obtaining it from our businesses," said Montgomery.

He said they will now concentrate their efforts on those who are providing it to the youths.

"If we can make the case against them - we will file with the County Attorney."

Cleanup campaign starts here Monday

The yearly clean-up campaign in Colorado City will get underway Monday and will continue through Saturday, May 7.

It is a joint effort of the city and the Chamber of Commerce and a real push will be made to clean up the downtown area during the week with Saturday, May 7 being the big push downtown. All citizens and civic organizations are asked to meet at the Chamber of Commerce office at 1:00 p.m. to help clean up the downtown. Everyone is asked to bring Weedeaters™, hoes and rakes to rid the downtown area of weeds.

The city will waive all the landfill fees during this clean-up week but it will not furnish a truck to haul additional items to the landfill as they have in the past. Citizens will be responsible for taking their old tires, large tree limbs, used appliances, etc., to the landfill. Citizens are reminded that the city has furnished a container for used oil disposal as well as used oil filters.

ANTIQUES

this space filled up."

The Rowes have extended their interest in antiques to such an extent that their entire house is an antique, filled with items they use on a daily basis. The 1906 landmark was bought by the Rowes in 1980 and filled with things they have been collecting since the early 1950's, he said.

"The name of this store comes from the brand my granddad used in the 1882 ranch he started north of Coahoma, and I've kept it as a registered and working brand ever since."

As enthusiastic as Rowe and Dockrey are, they can't hold a candle to the Mainkas and, in fact, their exuberance is contagious. Stepping Back Into the Past is the Mainkas' store. They've taken the former dress shop, and before that, former jewelry store, back to its original high tin ceiling and polished wooden floor. There's even a complete wall of bare brick, but exposing it was more of an accident than planned.

"We were taking the sheetrock off where leaks had left damage and as the old plaster crumbled, we discovered these uneven, unmatched bricks. Well, at first we had plans to cover the wall with new sheetrock but the more we saw, the more we liked it and now I wish I could find some more of these glassy green ones that you see here every so often," Mainka pointed out.

They also offer furniture refinishing to round out their selections of antique toys, some authentic and some artfully crafted reproductions which appreciate in value.

An interest in antiques is the abiding interest which ties many downtown businesses together these days, even E-Z Way Plumbing, which has opened in a new location across from the post office.

Ron and Darlene Bevins have had the business here on Hickory Street for the past two years but are realizing a dream come true with their own building, which will be decorated with antiques Ron has collected in the plumbing concern.

"You'd be surprised what you find under people's houses," he said, "and it's usually pretty well preserved because no air or water can get to it. I've got some old beer cans and soft drink cans, plus some old tools."

Darlene reminded him of the old egg beater he'd found and an aspirin bottle. "Yeah, and old knives. A lot of people must have dropped their knives and couldn't find them, and then of course you find old plumbing tools."

But the centerpiece of his antique display will be the old 1940's water heater which still works "but it doesn't have one safety feature on it. I don't see what kept them from hurting people," Bevins said, adding that there would be no interruption in service due to the move from Hickory to the new location downtown.

Rebecca Mainka summed up the boost that a love of antiques has given to the downtown area when she said, "I was shopping in another town and I overheard a conversation between two women who were telling another person how much fun it was to shop for antiques in Colorado City and that just made me feel so good."

Nowadays everyone can come down and find something of interest in Colorado City's growing antiques malls.

The list includes: Heartfelt Treasures, Glenda Stinson; Good Ole Days Antique Mall, John Williamson; Stepping Back Into the Past, David and Rebecca Mainka; Home Grown Crafts and Supplies, Sharon Dockrey; Lazy 7 Antique Haven, A.W. Rowe.

If someone wishes to venture further out there is also Lone Wolf Furniture, a couple of blocks east on E. 2nd, featuring custom-made wooden cabinets, chests and other furniture. Then there is Ward's Salvage and the House Next Door antique shop, both on Westpoint along with Bob's at 877 E. 2nd and Our House Antiques a mile north on 208.

As the flyer inviting more folks in to browse around says, "Antique to Your Heart's Content in the Heart of West Texas, Colorado City."

A. W. Rowe looks over some of the antiques displayed in one of the latest Antique Stores to open up in Colorado City. Antique dealers from all over West Texas now have booths in the numerous shops here.

Colorado City Council Place 3

GARY REDWINE

Gary Redwine has been a Colorado City Councilman for five years and is seeking reelection.

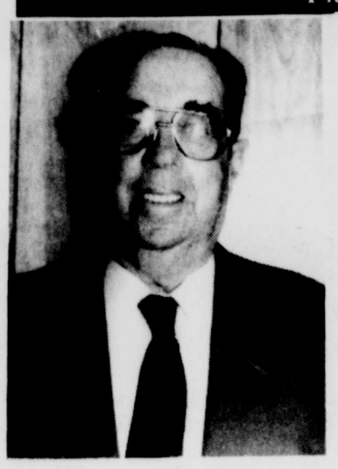

He says, "Finally it seems as though Colorado City has started to grow and move forward, thanks to the county and its Economic Development Board. Yet, there's still a long way to go.

"Having served for five years, I feel like it's only now that I can serve knowing how our city functions.

"The toughest part of serving the citizens on the council is knowing that no matter what you do or how you vote, someone is always going to criticize your actions. But all in all, the citizens have been very supportive and your opinions and ideas are very welcome because you are who I represent."

Redwine and his wife, Shelia, have two children, Coleder and Kassi.

With the many changes our community faces at this time, I would like the opportunity to help make the decisions that will benefit everyone who lives here.

"I have lived in Colorado City all my life and I know the people in this community. Having raised three children here, I have over twenty years experience working with many youth organizations.

Also, with the possible growth, these next three years could be very exciting."

Molina continues, "If we had to sum up in one word what education is all about, I think most of us could agree that education is about learning. And our job as public servants is to assure that learning takes place in each classroom on every campus within our school district, as well as in our own environment. I am committed to continuous improvement. My serving on the PSI Team "partnership schools" modified block scheduling and several committees proves this. Not everyone is quick to embrace change, but how will we know what works bets unless we move forward.

"We have an excellent quality school system, but you can always stretch your imagination and find ways to become even better. I want to work with the school board and

Jameson advances to finals

The ever-growing Texas High School Rodeo Association, Region II season wrapped up last Sunday with an awards banquet for the top winners at the San Angelo fairgrounds.

On Saturday, the rodeo participants competed in two rodeos at Bly's Indoor Arena to determine the final standings for the season.

More than 100 students in a vast area that encompasses San Angelo, Del Rio, Coleman, Snyder and El Paso competed in eight events.

The top six finalists in each event will advance, free of cost, to the State Rodeo finals in Abilene beginning the first of June. The seventh through tenth place finishers can attend the State Rodeo finals by paying an entrance fee.

Joe Ross Jameson of Colorado City is among those qualifying in calf roping and team roping. Throughout the 24 rodeos of the '93-'94 season, Joe Ross was in the top ten of both events.

Academics are a must in High School Rodeo, where grades must be turned in with each entry blank. Of the 45 Region II qualifiers, only 13 are freshmen and only 5 of those are boys. Joe Ross is a freshman at Colorado High School and the son of Foster and Rosanne Jameson.

National Cotton Council supports insurance reform

The National Cotton Council told a House Agriculture subcommittee here today that it supports concepts included in USDA's Crop Insurance Reform proposal, adding that for reform to be successful, credibility must be restored and program abuse minimized.

"Reform is essential if this program is to effectively replace disaster relief and entice more participation," said Myrl Mitchell, a Lenorah, Texas producer and ginner who chairs the Council's Crop Insurance Advisory Task Force. "I must caution, however, that cotton producers are skeptical that a workable crop insurance program can be developed. That is why it is critical that the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC) staff continue to listen carefully to regional concerns. We cannot design a one-size-fits-all policy."

Mitchell told a House Subcommittee on Environment, Credit and Rural Development hearing that U.S. cotton believes the proposal is moving in the right direction. He said the industry is encouraged by the proposal's reduced premiums for higher coverage levels.

Mitchell relayed a summary of comments the Council received from producers during recent meetings it conducted across the Cotton Belt. Major elements that should be considered for the crop insurance proposal are:

- inclusion of a catastrophic yield adjustment when calculating actual yields during disaster years;
- inclusion of a harvest incentive when determining losses to improve the program's effectiveness;
- the need to entice non-users of the current program to use crop insurance by offering such options as insuring the cost of production and lowering premiums for producers with good loss histories or with lower risk operations;
- improvements in the quality adjustment provisions for cotton and elimination of the current 25 percent deductible for quality losses because losses in crop quality often are more economically devastating than production losses;
- addressing smaller farm units such as fields or sections, rather than a producer's acreage on a county basis so that, for example, a farmer who irrigates his cotton does not have to pay the same premium as a farmer who does not irrigate.
