Scott Walker on education: States should take care of it

By Rye Druzin

Republican presidential candidate Scott Walker, governor of Wisconsin, spent more than an hour at Lori's Café on Friday morning speaking with residents as he completed his trip through Texas.

Many seemed excited to see him. One high school girl said she had skipped school to see Walker with her father. Steve Seegers and his homeschooled son, 15-year-old Coby Seegers, had driven from Marfa to see the candidate.

"Very personable. Didn't seem to be in a rush," Steve Seegers said.

Coby said that he was friendly, and that it was "cool" that the governor had come out to meet people.

Residents talked to Walker about the state of the oil economy, the moral direction of the country and their concerns about the federal government.

Rick Garcia, who works in the production side of the oilfield and was born and raised in Midland, said that he spoke to Walker about the slowdown in the oilfield and Walker agreed that more had to be done to boost production. Garcia said that he does not know what presidents can do to help the oil industry because of the industry's natural up-and-down cycles.

Garcia, who identified himself as a Mexican-American, also brought up Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump, who repeatedly has attacked the issue of undocumented immigrants in the United States. Garcia said he is not impressed by Trump's style of campaigning.

"He says a bunch of things but there's no details. It's like empty promises," Garcia said. "As far as building a wall, America's about taking down walls as far as I see it, not building walls."

The wall that Garcia is referring to was Trump's pledge to wall off the southern U.S. border with Mexico. Trump has also said that he would deport all undocumented immigrants and revoke birthright citizenship retroactively.

Steve Seegers said that Walker, former neurosurgeon Ben Carson and U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz were in his top three. When asked why he chose Carson, a political outsider, over Trump, Seegers said that Trump's past as a non-Republican calls many of his current views into question. But he did admire the real estate mogul for some of his attributes.

"He seems to be unafraid to talk about issues," he said. "Of course, our politicians, many of them on both sides of the spectrum, are walking on eggshells all the time worried about making a misstatement. Trump doesn't have that concern at all, so you gotta admire that."

When Walker was asked in a one-on-one conversation about whether he supported cutting federal funding for public schools, the candidate said that he supports redirecting the money to state governments. He believes that the change would mean "more money would be spent on education, less on the federal bureaucracy."

Walker spurred further controversy in July when he passed a budget that cut $250 million from the University of Wisconsin and removed protected tenure from professors, according to a Washington Post article. The article also said that K-12 funding for public schools was reduced, a claim that Walker denied. He said that his changes have benefited the education system overall, not harmed it.

"We got rid of tenure and seniority for everything else in the state and they said that our schools are going to be devastated," Walker said. "Four years later graduation rates are higher, ACT scores are second best in the country, and third-grade reading scores are up. So we heard those same arguments four years ago and the facts show that that's not the case at all."

According to the ACT's website, Wisconsin ranked No. 14 overall for scores, just behind California.

Walker, a second-term governor, has faced controversy in his home state of Wisconsin, battling public employees in 2011 over collective bargaining before being recalled in 2012. Walker became the first governor to survive a recall election, and he went on the defeat Democratic challenger Mary Burke in the 2014 gubernatorial elections by 6 points.

The number of rigs exploring for oil and gas in the Permian Basin fell two this week to 253, according to the weekly rotary rig count released Friday by Houston-based oilfield services company Baker Hughes.

District 8 as a whole added two rigs, raising its count to 155; however, seven rigs were idled in Midland County, lowering its count to 30.

The last time Midland County's rig count fell below 30 was the week ending July 10, when Baker Hughes reported 28 rigs. The count had risen to 40 three weeks ago, matching the first rig count for 2015. The lowest rig count of the year was 26, which Baker Hughes reported for the week of June 26.

Ector County held steady at two rigs.

For rigs operating in other areas of the Permian Basin, there were three in District 7B, unchanged; 32 in District 7C, down four; 18 in District 8A, up two; and 45 in New Mexico, down two. The Texas total was unchanged at 208.

The Permian Basin had 563 rigs a year ago this week.

Texas and New Mexico

Texas lost 11 rigs statewide, bringing its total to 375.

The Eagle Ford idled four rigs, leaving 93 rigs in the South Texas basin. There were 29 rigs in the Haynesville, down two; 15 in the Granite Wash, down two; and seven in the Barnett, unchanged.

New Mexico's rig count fell two this week, leaving 48 rigs in the Land of Enchantment.

At this time last year, there were 906 rigs in Texas and 96 rigs in New Mexico.

United States

The U.S. rig count fell 13 this week to 864. All losses occurred on land, which ended the week at 827 rigs. The count for inland waters was unchanged at four, while the offshore count was up three this week to 33. There were 31 rigs in the Gulf of Mexico, up two.

The number of rigs searching for natural gas head steady at 202, but the number of rigs searching for oil fell 13 to 662. There were zero rigs listed as miscellaneous.

By drilling trajectory, there were 120 vertical rigs, down five; 659 horizontal rigs, down 13; and 85 directional rigs, up five.

The U.S. had 1,925 rigs at this time last year.

Top 5s

The top five rig counts by county in District 8 were Midland; Reeves with 28, unchanged; Loving with 22, up one; Martin with 22, up three; Glasscock with 13, unchanged; Howard with 13, up three; and Andrews with 10, up one.

The top five basins were the Permian; the Eagle Ford; the Williston with 72, down one; the Marcellus with 51, unchanged; and the Cana Woodford with 39, down one.

The top five states were Texas; Oklahoma with 106, up one; Louisiana with 75, up four; North Dakota with 71, down one; and New Mexico with 48, down two.

George Cleve, conductor who was interpreter of Mozart, dies at 79

By Steve Chawkins
Los Angeles Times

One of George Cleve's final concert appearances also was one of the most memorable.

Two stagehands had to help him to the podium. They gingerly lowered him into his seat, the audience and the orchestra rapt. Even with his suffer-no-fools reputation, he was no longer the formidable figure he had once been — until he picked up the baton.

"And then suddenly, as if a switch had been thrown somewhere, the prospect of leading Mozart's music seemed to electrify Cleve's entire stage presence," San Francisco Chronicle music critic Joshua Kosman wrote in his review of the July 16 performance at Stanford University.

"He sat up erect and firm, gave the downbeat, and — pow! — launched into a superbly dynamic account of the overture to Mozart's one-act opera 'The Impresario.'"

Kosman called Cleve's performance at the Midsummer Mozart Festival "one of the most touching and inspiring demonstrations of personal determination I've ever witnessed at a musical event."

Cleve, a conductor who was best known as one of Mozart's foremost interpreters, died Aug. 27 at his home in Berkeley, Calif. He was 79.

He had liver cancer, according to his wife, Maria Tamburrino.

Cleve co-founded the Midsummer Mozart Festival in 1974. He directed the San Jose Symphony from 1972 to 1992, a period in which its budget soared from $200,000 to nearly $5 million. When the orchestra filed for bankruptcy protection in 2003, Cleve likened it to a death in the family.

Cleve also was a guest conductor for the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the New York Philharmonic and orchestras across the U.S. and abroad, from Singapore to Salzburg.

"He was unsurpassed in being able to get an orchestra to play precisely together simply by what he was doing physically," recalled Robert Levine, principal violist at the Milwaukee Symphony and a player at the Midsummer Mozart Festival in its early years.

"His basic technique was very economical; very little movement of the torso or head and almost no stepping around on the podium," Levine said in a reminiscence on polyphonic.org, a website for orchestra musicians. "If something wasn't economical, it really caught the orchestra's attention. Those extra gestures, when they came, were remarkably expressive."

In 1978, Cleve was burned in a house fire. After being hospitalized for several months, he painfully took the podium as his festival's orchestra rehearsed Mozart's Symphony No. 34 in C.

"He was wrapped up in pressure bandages and the movement of his hands was confined to a box about one foot by one foot by one foot," Levine wrote. "It didn't matter; that was enough for George to convey all that was necessary. I've never seen a conductor do so much with so little apparent effort."

Though he conducted works by a wide range of composers, Cleve had a particular affinity for Mozart. He was born in Vienna, where Mozart wrote some of his most important pieces and died, at 35, in 1791. Cleve's middle name was the same as Mozart's first: Wolfgang.

More important, Mozart's music suited Cleve's exacting nature.

Tamburrino, Cleve's wife since 1986, sensed it when she was principal flutist in the San Jose Symphony.

"One has no place to hide in Mozart," she told the San Jose Mercury in 2001. "Either it is perfect, or forget it. But George is never intimidated by Mozart. He knows just what to do."

Born on July 8, 1936, Cleve grew up in a family of intellectuals and musicians. His father, Felix, was a scholar of pre-Socratic philosophy and a music and literary critic for Vienna newspapers. His Aunt Fanny was an operatic soprano who sang in Germany and Austria.

Fleeing Nazi rule, the family moved to Budapest, then Italy and finally New York, where Cleve grew up. He attended the city's High School of Music and Art, and Mannes College of Music.

He studied with Leonard Bernstein, George Szell and Pierre Monteux, and conducted symphony orchestras in Iceland and Winnipeg, Canada, before moving to Berkeley in 1970.

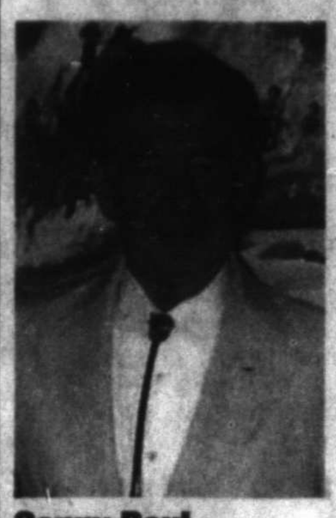

He ran a classical music show on the progressive public radio station KPFA and conducted the Berkeley Free Orchestra, a group of enthusiastic amateurs.

With horn player Wendell Rider and oboist Robert Hubbard, he founded the Midsummer Mozart Festival after he conducted Mozart's "Abduction from the Seraglio" for San Francisco's Spring Opera Theater.

In interviews, he emphasized that he was more of a Mozart "enthusiast" than a Mozart specialist. He enjoyed Mahler, Sibelius and many others. "Sometimes all that perfection can be a bit much," he once joked.

In addition to his wife, Cleve is survived by a son, Jeremiah Wiggins, and a granddaughter.

New Mexico State Police to step up Labor Day patrols

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — State police will step up patrols to catch would-be drunk drivers and officers will have no tolerance for dangerous drivers during the expected busy Labor Day weekend, New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez announced Friday

Martinez said that state troopers and other agencies will be extra vigilant over the holidays and urged New Mexico motorists not to text while on the road. More importantly, she said drivers should not drink and drive under any circumstances.

"Get a cab. Crash on someone's sofa," Martinez said. "Do something besides drink and drive, because drunk driving affects everyone."

Martinez also said state lawmakers need to pass stricter DWI laws because previous attempts have failed in the Legislature. She said as a prosecutor it was common for her to deal with cases where suspects had been arrested at least a dozen times for drunk driving.

The extra patrols come as New Mexico State Parks have scheduled numerous events in hopes of attracting visitors over the Labor Day weekend.

State Parks Director Christy Tafoya says numbers have been excellent so far this summer thanks in part to lower gas prices and high water levels at the state's reservoirs.

In a typical year, some 3.8 million people visit the state's 35 parks. Tafoya says she's hoping to surpass that this year.

Elephant Butte will be one of the hot spots this weekend as people look to get away, officials said.

Bottomless Lakes State Park is hosting the annual Bubblefest, featuring a poker contest for scuba divers. At Leasburg Dam State Park in southern New Mexico, the observatory will be open and there will be live music.

Massive rock threatening to crash into base of Arizona dam

By Felicia Fonseca
Associated Press

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. — A massive piece of rock is at risk of crashing down from a canyon wall to the base of an Arizona dam, prompting the government to send in a crew of rappelers to keep the slab in place.

The 500,000-pound slab — weighing more than many jumbo jets — began to break away from the canyon wall last week in what the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation attributes to erosion that is typical for that type of rock. The area below the slab includes a passageway to a boat ramp, a machine shop and water and power facilities for the Glen Canyon Dam, located in Page near the Arizona-Utah border.

The Bureau of Reclamation has cut off access to the boat ramp, putting some rafting trips on hold until the rock can be secured.

A three-person crew has been scaling the towering walls to drill bolts that range from 6 feet to 8 feet into the sandstone. Six bolts were placed in the canyon wall a week ago before a small chunk broke loose and crashed to the ground, hitting a building and leaving a pile of rubble, Bureau of Reclamation spokesman Chris Watt said.

The slab measures 30 feet at its widest point and is 50 feet tall. Its thickness ranges from six inches to 4 feet, he said.

The plan is to attach bolts in the area above the crack to make sure it's safe enough for crews to then work on the slab that is in jeopardy of falling. Temperatures can top 110 degrees on the face of the wall, limiting the hours the crew can work, Watt said. The work isn't expected to be complete until the first week of October.

The slab is about 150 feet away from the edge of the dam, which is not in danger of being hit by the rock. Watt also said the location is at constant risk of falling rock, and engineers have constructed protections at the site such as stronger buildings and an area designed to catch falling rock.

For now, a rafting company that takes tourists from the base of the dam down the Colorado River to Lees Ferry has cut down on the number of daily trips. Colorado River Discovery general manager Korey Seyler said the company is now launching at Lees Ferry, about 15 miles downstream, and traveling up the river until it gets the OK to resume normal operations.

Police implement tandem patrols

Associated Press

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. — A police department in northeast Oklahoma is switching to tandem patrols in an effort to improve the safety of officers following violence against police elsewhere that has local law enforcement on edge.

Tahlequah Police Chief Nate King told the Tulsa World that the department's number of active patrol vehicles will temporarily be cut in half so officers can ride in pairs. It's in response to what he calls "recent unprovoked violence" against law enforcement officials in other states.

"Officers, this violence is weighing on them, in Tahlequah and across the nation," King said. "The anxiety and elevated risk is being fueled by all the different (news) stories. I think this will help diminish that edge on our officers."

At least four officers have been killed in shootings in the past week in Texas, Louisiana and Illinois. Protests against police brutality in Ferguson, Missouri, and Baltimore, where two black men died at the hands of white police officers, also have increased tensions between law enforcement and the public.

"Between Black Lives Matter and Police Lives Matter, there's almost become a separation," King said. "That's not our goal here. Our goal is to be one unified community, and all lives matter. No matter who you are or what you do for a living, your life matters."

King can't recall any direct threats made toward Tahlequah officers, but he believes the tandem patrols will ease their minds, he said.

"In the end, this will help officers focus more on citizens without being preoccupied with the threat of violence," King said.

The tandem patrols at the Tahlequah Police Department are expected to last only a few weeks.

Representatives for the Tulsa Police Department, Tulsa County Sheriff's Office and Oklahoma Highway Patrol said the agencies don't plan on altering their operations.

Carter Lay was a cancer survivor and philanthropist who helped build schools and supported music education.

Houston-area sheriff's deputy remembered during funeral

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Thousands of law enforcement officers stood at attention to form a wall Friday outside one of Houston's largest churches as a 21-gun salute and flyover by police helicopters were carried out in honor of a slain sheriff's deputy.

The symbolic gestures followed the funeral for Harris County Sheriff's Deputy Darren Goforth, who was gunned down at a gas pump a week ago.

"We come to this place with heavy hearts, and have questions we don't really understand," Lt. Don Savell, the sheriff's department chaplain, said as the ceremony began. "We gather to share the grief we all feel and perhaps to find the strength to bear our sorrow and to look for seeds of hope."

Second Baptist Church, which holds 7,000 people, was filled. Some officers stood outside and watched the nearly two-hour service on big-screen televisions, while other spectators gathered outside the suburban convenience store where Goforth was killed to view the funeral on screens set up there. Flowers, balloons, posters and written messages in memory of Goforth still surround the pump where he was shot.

Goforth, 47, was in uniform when he was killed while putting fuel in his patrol car. A 30-year-old Houston man is charged with capital murder. Investigators are still trying to determine a motive.

Associated Press

Ryan Goforth, center, and his mother, Kathleen Goforth, second from left, arrive for the funeral service for her husband Harris County Sheriff's Deputy Darren Goforth at Second Baptist Church on Friday in Houston. Goforth was killed a week ago while filling his patrol car with gasoline at a suburban Houston convenience store. A 30-year-old Houston man is charged with his slaying.

"Darren Goforth was one of the good guys, one that made a difference," Sheriff Ron Hickman said during the funeral. He said Goforth's life was taken "senselessly and in an act of cowardice" the night of Aug. 28 but that he and others "will answer calls in Darren's honor."

He said about 11,000 officers from "coast to coast" had come to pay respects.

Outside the church after the service, Hickman gave Goforth's wife, Kathleen, the flag that had been draped over the casket.

A line of patrol cars formed a large cross in the parking lot, and two Houston fire trucks with ladders extended formed an arch with a flag extended at the top. People lined streets as the funeral procession drove away. A private burial was planned.

Officers at various Texas law enforcement departments held moments of silence outside their buildings around the time of the funeral.

The killing brought out strong emotions in the law enforcement community, with Hickman suggesting last weekend that it could have been influenced by heightened national tension over the treatment of blacks by police. Goforth was white and the man charged with killing him, Shannon Miles, is black.

The Rev. Ed Young told those at the funeral that he fears evil has reached an "almost epidemic stage" with attacks on those who "wear the blue" — a reference to the police uniform.

But he said he's seen signs of hope in the wake of Goforth's death, with people being supportive of officers and openly praying for them.

"Things are changing," Young said. "There will be a new Houston, a new Texas, a new America.

"And you can write it down. We have your back," he told officers as the funeral crowd stood and applauded.

Texas officer who killed teen hired by police on 3rd try

A white police officer fired after his fatal shooting of a black college football player had applied twice to the Arlington Police Department before being hired on his third try, according to personnel records released by the department on Friday.

Brad Miller applied to the department in 2011 but wasn't hired before his application expired a year later.

He applied again but failed his medical examination and was told not to reapply for six months. Miller followed a fitness regime, applied exactly six months later and was accepted as a 48-year-old recruit.

Police Chief Will Johnson fired Miller four days after Miller confronted 19-year-old Christian Taylor alone inside a car showroom Aug. 7. Miller fatally shot the unarmed Angelo State football player, who disobeyed Miller's instructions and advanced toward him.

EL PASO

2nd person dies of West Nile virus

An El Paso-area woman has become the second person in the West Texas city's area this year to die of West Nile virus.

City health officials say the woman was the fourth person in the area to have contracted the mosquito-borne virus in 2015.

Fifteen cases, but no deaths, were reported last year. The most severe West Nile outbreak around El Paso was in 2012, when 32 people contracted the virus and six died.

El Paso Public Health Director Robert Resendes tells the El Paso Times that while the two people who now have died this year also had other medical problems, the virus also can threaten the lives of healthy people.

While most people recover, there's no known vaccine against the virus.

CORPUS CHRISTI

No charges in traffic death of police chief

A Nueces County grand jury has decided no criminal charges should be filed against a 16-year-old driver who authorities say crossed the center line of a state highway and led to the death of Corpus Christi Police Chief Floyd Simpson.

Simpson was on his motorcycle in Port Aransas in May, tried to evade the pickup truck and suffered fatal injuries when he crashed his bike and his helmet became dislodged.

Port Aransas Police Chief Scott Burroughs tells the Corpus Christi Caller-Times that evidence collected during the investigation of the crash shows it was an accident and the pickup driver likely was fatigued after a three-day diving class.

Corpus Christi Interim Police Chief Mike Markle says he believes his friend Simpson would have accepted the grand jury outcome.

DALLAS — Texas high school students taking the SAT have posted the lowest scores in more than two decades, showing decreases across the board and mirroring a nationwide decline.

The College Board, which administers the college entrance tests, reports that Texas students in the Class of 2015 averaged 486 on the math section of the test — down nine points from the previous year — and 470 in reading, down six points. A perfect score in each section is 800. Writing scores averaged 454, off seven points.

Lower scores are due at least in part to policies of two dozen districts, including Dallas and Fort Worth, where all upper-class students now take the SAT each year, Texas Education Agency spokeswoman Debbie Ratcliffe said.

"The SAT takers in those districts include not only those who are college-bound, but the whole student population (of juniors and seniors)," she told The Dallas Morning News. "That translates in lower average scores because the more test takers you have, the more scores will decline."

Texas education officials attributed the declining SAT scores in the state to an increase in the number of minority students taking the exam, the newspaper said. Students from ethnic minorities generally perform worse than white students on standardized achievement tests like the SAT and ACT, the nation's two leading college entrance exams, they said.

This year, however, Texas students' performances were overshadowed in a big way by students in California, which has demographics in its student population similar to those in Texas. California students outperformed Texans, on average, by 20 points in math and 25 points in reading, the College Board reported.

Furthermore, while more than 60 percent of seniors in both states took the SAT, California had a higher percentage of low-income students taking the exam as 42.1 percent had their test fee waived. In Texas, 30.4 percent had their fee waived.

The College Board also reported that 41.9 percent of students from this year's graduating class in the U.S. met the SAT College and Career Readiness Benchmark. In Texas, the figure was 31.8 percent.

High school graduates who reach the benchmark are more likely to enroll in a four-year college and graduate on time than those who do not hit the benchmark. Most minority students continued a pattern of falling short, with only 17.6 percent of the Hispanic and 13.2 percent of the black students in Texas meeting the college-readiness standard.

Clarification

The recently appointed justice of the peace for Precinct 1 will serve in the position until Aug. 31, 2017. According to state law, a justice appointed to fill an unexpired term must win the party's nomination in the spring primary and be elected in the November general election to fill the seat for the entire term.

A story in Tuesday's edition didn't fully explain this.

Pedestrians walk past the Santa Clara County Jail in San Jose, Calif. on Wednesday. Three California correctional deputies have been arrested on suspicion of murder in the death of an inmate at a county jail, Santa Clara County Sheriff's spokesman Sgt. James Jensen said Thursday, Sept. 3, 2015. Thirty-one-year-old Michael Tyree died last week at the jail after he had pleaded no contest to petty theft, The San Jose Mercury News reported.

Rally held after Santa Clara County jail inmate's death

By Haven Daley and Kristin J. Bender
Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — About 50 people marched Friday in protest at Santa Clara County Main Jail to demand inmates be protected from abuse after an inmate was beaten to death last week under the watch of three deputies now facing possible murder charges.

Three jail guards were arrested Thursday, a week after an inmate, later identified as 31-year-old Michael James Pipkin Tyree, was found dead in his cell of multiple blunt trauma, internal bleeding and lacerations, authorities said.

Santa Clara County sheriff's spokesman Sgt. James Jensen has identified the deputies as Rafael Rodriguez, 27, Jereh Lubrin, 28, and Matthew Farris, 27.

As the district attorney reviews the cases for possible murder charges, activists called for those charges to be filed.

"We're out here today to let those that are inside know that there's a community outside these walls that support them and are concerned about their safety considering our Santa Clara County jail is now officially a murder scene," said Raj Jayadev, an activist with Silicon Valley De-Bug, a civil rights group.

Jayadev said part of the protest was to make certain inmates know that they can come forward about issues they've had with correctional officers without fear of retaliation.

District Attorney Jeff Rosen has until Tuesday to file charges or the three could be released.

Jayadev said the group has heard complaints before from people who have been detained.

"We see the responsibility is now on the Sheriff's Office and county officials to prove that it's not systemic. The ball is squarely in their court. By no means could this be looked at as everyone's going to wash their hands and say the problem has been solved."

On Thursday afternoon following the arrests, Santa Clara County Sheriff Laurie Smith apologized to Tyree's family and said "the disappointment and disgust I feel cannot be overstated."

She said the three officers, who she called "accused murderers," were treated as anyone else as they were handcuffed, booked and locked in protective custody in the same jail where Tyree was killed. They've since been transferred to an unnamed facility for their own protection, she said.

Exactly what happened leading up to Tyree's death remains unclear.

Last Thursday, Tyree and other inmates in his jail wing were securely locked in their cells when the beating apparently took place. Smith refused to provide details but said the three officers were conducting a routine clothing search and left the wing.

She said about an hour later one officer re-entered the cell and issued a "man down" call. Tyree, naked and covered in feces and vomit, was declared dead by responding paramedics.

Smith said she apologized directly to two of Tyree's sisters earlier Thursday, and repeated her profound sorrow over his death.

Smith said the day after Tyree was declared dead, the guards — who had begun working their regular shift — were removed from duty, stripped of their weapons, uniforms and peace officer status. It took several more days for them to be arrested.

They are on unpaid administrative leave, Smith said.

Attorney Paula Canny, representing Tyree's family, commended the sheriff for an extraordinary response.

"This could have been dragged out," Canny said.

Canny urged community members to think about how we, as a system, treat mentally ill people and said she hopes the district attorney will bring the officers to justice.

Attempts to reach relatives of the deputies were unsuccessful.

Tyree was homeless and awaiting transfer to a mental-health facility when he died. He was serving a five-day sentence on a petty theft charge.

Oregon judge refuses to perform same-sex marriages

By Jonathan J. Cooper
Associated Press

SALEM, Ore. — Marion County Judge Vance Day is being investigated by a judicial fitness commission in part over his refusal to perform same-sex marriages on religious grounds, a spokesman for the judge said Friday.

When a federal court ruling in May 2014 made same-sex marriage legal in Oregon, Day instructed his staff to refer same-sex couples looking to marry to other judges, spokesman Patrick Korten said.

Last fall, he decided to stop performing weddings altogether, aside from one in March that had long been scheduled, Korten said.

"He made a decision nearly a year ago to stop doing weddings altogether, and the principal factor that he weighed was the pressure that one would face to perform a same-sex wedding, which he had a conflict with his religious beliefs," Korten said.

In an email, Day declined to comment and referred questions to Korten.

The issue of same-sex weddings is "the weightiest" of several allegations against Day that are being investigated by the Commission on Judicial Fitness and Disability, Korten said.

He declined to detail any of the allegations, saying he didn't want to defy the commission, which considers complaints confidential until it is ready to make them public.

The investigation of Day's conduct comes amid heightened national attention to the responsibilities of public officials who oppose same-sex marriage. Kim Davis, a county clerk in Kentucky, went to jail Thursday because of her refusal to issue marriage licenses to same-sex couples.

Last month, the Ohio Supreme Court's Board of Professional Conduct said judges can't refuse to marry same-sex couples on personal, moral or religious grounds.

Judges who stop performing all marriages to avoid marrying same-sex couples may be interpreted as biased and could be disqualified from any case where sexual orientation is an issue, the Ohio board ruled.

The investigation of Day came to light Thursday when the Oregon Government Ethics Commission — a separate entity from the judicial fitness commission — approved the judge's request to create a legal defense fund to pay his lawyers.

Day, a former chairman of the Oregon Republican Party, was appointed to the bench in 2011 by then-Gov. John Kitzhaber, a Democrat.

Day's move concerned Jeana Frazzini, co-director of the gay-rights group Basic Rights Oregon.

"Taking that kind of a step really calls into question how an LGBTQ person could expect to be treated in a court of law," Frazzini said. "It goes beyond marriage and gets to serious questions about judicial integrity."

Firm recalls cucumbers after salmonella outbreak

SAN DIEGO — A California company is recalling its cucumbers after a salmonella outbreak that's sickened 285 people in 27 states and killed a San Diego woman.

Andrew & Williamson Fresh Produce of San Diego on Friday voluntarily recalled its "Limited Edition" brand garden cucumbers, which were grown in Mexico.

Health officials say the cukes are the likely cause of hundreds of illnesses since July 3 and the Aug. 17 death of a 99-year-old woman.

Half the people who became ill are under 18 years of age.

Pastor believes Tahoe church vandalism based on Satanism

By Scott Sonner
Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — The minister of one of several churches hit by a string of vandalism on the north shore of Lake Tahoe says they appear to be satanic attacks by an individual who is "very angry with Jesus."

"I've seen nothing that would give a hint it was socially or politically motivated," said the Rev. Jeffrey Ogden, Presbyterian pastor at The Village Church in Incline Village.

"Everything that has been posted, the satanic symbols on the front doors of all the churches — it was satanic," he told The Associated Press on Friday. "It was anti-Christian, anti-Jesus — more theologically motivated. This is a Satanist who is opposed to Jesus."

The FBI is offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and prosecution of anyone responsible for the incidents, which began with graffiti at five Tahoe-area churches in April on Easter Sunday and continued in August.

The FBI has declined formal comment on the investigation, but Ogden said agents have told him they are "looking at this as a potential hate crime."

Last weekend, someone tried to saw down a wooden across in front of Ogden's church. They returned Tuesday night or early Wednesday and tried unsuccessfully again to bring the cross down at The Village Church, he said.

"This person seems to be very angry with Jesus, and the church," Ogden said.

Some of the graffiti included, "Jesus has already lost," and "Jesus won't save your souls," he said.

"So far from everything I've heard, it appears to be an individual," Ogden said. "It does not appear to be rationale to me. Obviously the person seems to have a lot of anger inside them."

St. Francis of Assisi Catholic Church also was hit a second time late Saturday night. The considerable damage there included broken windows and equipment, Washoe County Sheriff's Office Lt. Jeff Clark said.

St. Patrick's Episcopal Church also was vandalized again on Aug. 7, when someone painted graffiti on the building and a car parked on church property.

Ogden said it's clear the vandal is not targeting a specific denomination.

"One church that was hit was one of the more liberal in the community. The Catholic church and ours — we are more conservative in our theology. They are not making distinctions based on our social or political views," he said.

Several members of the churches attended a prayer gathering Monday night at Cornerstone Community Church to show support for each other.

"It has been a blessing to be able to gather together as people, not focused on traditions or theologies, but coming together to say we support one another as community members," Ogden said.

"It doesn't mean that as Christians we don't have some differences — some pretty profound differences on some things. But when something like this happens, those are not as important. Love is more important, truth is more important, standing together is more important."

Lawmakers back 'Yes means Yes' training for high schools

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Lawmakers on Friday sent Gov. Jerry Brown a "Yes means Yes" bill that backers said would make California the first to bring the sexual assault training to high schools.

SB695 requires school districts to teach sexual violence prevention as part of their health curriculum if health education is required to graduate.

The bill by Senate President Pro Tem Kevin de Leon and Sen. Hannah-Beth Jackson follows legislation last year requiring all colleges receiving public funds to adopt a so-called affirmative consent standard for investigating assault allegations.

The bill would specify that students be informed about the "Yes Means Yes" law.

"By teaching our youth about assertive consent and healthy relationships, we will be building a strong foundation — strong foundation for our young men, our young women, a strong foundation for our schools, a strong foundation for our community so we can understand, so we can learn about what sexual assaults are all about," said de Leon, D-Los Angeles.

Senators unanimously approved the legislation Friday, sending it to the governor.

"How critical it is that we continue this effort throughout the educational process so that we can change a culture that desperately needs that change," said Jackson, D-Santa Barbara.

No charges against Shattuck in Baltimore County

Baltimore County's top prosecutor said he will not pursue criminal charges against former Ravens cheerleader Molly Shattuck after re-examining allegations of sexual abuse involving a teen boy.

State's Attorney Scott Shellenberger said Friday his office has spoken with a representative of the victim's family.

Shattuck, 48, admitted to performing oral sex on the boy last summer at a vacation house in Bethany Beach, Del. She pleaded guilty in June to fourth-degree rape. Last month, a Delaware judge sentenced her to 48 weekends in a community corrections center for the sexual assault.

When Shattuck was arrested in November, authorities alleged that she would pick the boy up from class and take him to a parking garage in Owings Mills, where they would "kiss or 'make out'" in the back of a car.

The boy, who was 15, attended McDonogh School in Owings Mills with Shattuck's son.

Shellenberger said in a statement he reached the decision "after careful consideration of all relevant facts and circumstances including the nature of the allegations of what occurred in Baltimore County, as well as the recently concluded prosecution in Delaware."

He declined to comment further.

Aretha Franklin blocks screening of documentary at festival

A federal judge is preventing The Telluride Film Festival from screening a documentary about a 1972 Aretha Franklin concert without the singer's consent.

U.S. District Judge John L. Kane issued his order in Denver about three hours before the Friday night screening of "Amazing Grace." Franklin testified by telephone from Detroit that she had objected to use of the concert footage in the documentary for years.

Attorneys for the film festival argued that a recently discovered 1968 contract that Franklin signed allowed the use of the footage. But Kane said that document appeared to only relate to her music recordings.

The documentary was scheduled to have three screenings at the film festival, which concludes Monday.

Whole Foods guard investigated in beating

OAKLAND — California police are investigating allegations that a Whole Foods guard beat and choked a shopper until the person was unconscious.

The Oakland Tribune reported Friday that Whole Foods has suspended the Oakland guard while it also investigates.

The police investigation began when customer Zoe Marks posted images of the injured shopper Thursday on Facebook.

Marks told the Tribune that she watched a verbal dispute between a cashier and the customer turn violent when the security guard arrived.

Marks said the guard slammed the shopper against a concrete pillar outside the store and placed him in a chokehold unto he passed out.

Paramedics took the man to a hospital. Police said his condition was stable.

Police didn't release the names of those involved.

Appeals court rejects suit by teacher fired over blog

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — A former suburban Philadelphia teacher fired for writing derisively about students on her blog, calling them "disengaged, lazy whiners" and "disobedient, disrespectful oafs," can't invoke free speech in suing to get her job back, a federal appeals court ruled Friday.

The 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed a judge's decision to throw out Natalie Munroe's lawsuit against the Central Bucks School District because her posts did not rise to the level of constitutionally protected expression.

The interests of the district, a public employer, to maintain the trust of its students and parents outweighed Munroe's right to free speech, the majority in the 2-1 decision ruled.

The district fired Munroe in 2012 after a student discovered the blog, meant as an avenue to vent to family and friends, and posted it on Facebook.

"How could students be expected to participate in a class when a teacher indicated that she wished she could use terms like "Rat-like" on their own report cards (even if her list was intended as a humorous exercise)?" Judge Robert Cowen wrote in the decision.

The blog attracted national media attention. Munroe gave several interviews, refusing to apologize for her opinions, and attempting to shift attention to a larger debate over education policy.

Judge Thomas Ambro offered a dissenting opinion, saying the lower court should have afforded greater consideration to Munroe's contention that her media interviews contributed to her firing.

"I am persuaded that Munroe has, at a minimum, created a jury question about whether her media interviews factored into the discharge decision," Ambro wrote.

Lawyers for Munroe and the school district did not immediately return telephone messages.

Munroe took her case to the appellate court after U.S. District Judge Cynthia Rufe granted the school district's motion to dismiss it.

"Far from implicating larger discussions of education reform, pedagogical methods, or specific school policies," the judge said, the postings "mostly complained about the failure of (Munroe's) students to live up to her expectations."

Munroe's blog did not identify her school, district, colleagues or students, although it did include her picture and identified her as "Natalie M."

"My students are out of control," Munroe wrote in one post. "They are rude, disengaged, lazy whiners. They curse, discuss drugs, talk back, argue for grades, complain about everything, fancy themselves entitled to whatever they desire, and are just generally annoying."

Inmates provide new details on Calif. jail death

By Tracey Kaplan
San Jose Mercury News

SAN JOSE, Calif. — New eyewitness details emerged Friday from inmates housed in the same wing of the Santa Clara County Main Jail as mentally ill inmate Michael Tyree, who was allegedly beaten to death last week by three jail guards who have since been arrested on suspicion of murder.

Tyree had been behind bars for violating probation on a minor drug charge for about two weeks. Judge Steven Manley had wanted to send him to a treatment center for problems that included drug dependency, but until a bed was available, a jail cell was deemed safer for him than the streets.

However, his fellow inmates in the same unit said the sixth floor was anything but safe. Ironically, the floor is reserved for inmates in protective custody or who have special needs.

"They kind of pick on the mentally ill," said a 23-year-old man inmate who asked not to be identified because he may be a witness in the case and is also afraid of possible retribution. "They're not someone who is going to fight back or who has family that is going to press the issue."

Another inmate, Juan Perez, 32, who was locked up directly across the hall from Tyree, said he saw the three guards enter Tyree's cell through the bottom window of his own single cell. Like others, he described hearing Tyree beg for mercy and scream in pain. However, he also claims there were telling signs that the guards knew Tyree was dead or near death when they left the cell after several minutes. They didn't return until about an hour later.

"They turned off the light when they left," Perez said. "They never do that because an inmate can always jump them from behind."

Perez also said the men — Jereh Lubrin, Rafael Rodriguez and Matthew Farris — stayed in the cell for more than five minutes after Tyree fell completely silent. As they exited Tyree's quarters, Perez said he could see Tyree lying on the floor completely nude.

"They looked worried," Perez said of the guards.

About an hour later, they returned and acted surprised to find Tyree in terrible condition, smeared with feces and vomit and completely unresponsive. The county medical examiner found Tyree died of massive internal bleeding caused by blunt force trauma. His liver and spleen were lacerated, and his body sustained cuts and bruises.

The guards allegedly told sheriff's investigators that they were trying to get Tyree to take his medication. But the inmates said Tyree cooperated meekly at "pill call," including earlier that day.

Both inmates described Tyree as a nice man who was clearly mentally ill. He often refused to shower or change his clothes, and smelled bad, they said. He also didn't have any money on his commissary books for extra food, so he'd go around asking them for soups and dig through the unit's garbage can for scraps.

Every morning, he would take a cup and ask inmates to "put a little coffee in," until the vessel was full. Perez said people were happy to do it.

"He was harmless," he said. "He didn't deserve to die like this."

Several inmates said it was not unusual for an inmate to be beaten, though not as badly as Tyree. The guards, who have limited police powers, used to be supervised by sheriff's deputies, who have four times as much training and are paid more. Over the protests of the deputies' union, the Sheriff's Office replaced those more experienced, better trained deputies with cheaper correctional officers whom she promoted.

"They're all friends," Perez said. "The grievances go nowhere."

Sources close to the investigation have said that Lubrin, Farris and Rodriguez failed to report their use of force and seek help for Tryee when they allegedly left him unconscious.

Inmates are particularly scared of something called an "elevator ride," the mother of a jail inmate who called this newspaper said. That's when an inmate is taken on a back elevator down to the basement, she said, and repeatedly punched.

Ticket requirements for the pope's Philadelphia events

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Organizers faced an outcry this week over a ticket plan keeping most of Pope Francis' audience at his two biggest Philadelphia events several blocks away. A map added to some confusion over the size of the ticketh-older-only zone.

Here are answers to some key questions:

Do I need tickets to attend the Pope's public events in Philadelphia?

It depends on the event. The pope is holding three major public events in the city: a Sept. 26 speech on immigration and religious freedom in front of Independence Hall, an appearance at the closing festival of the World Meeting of Families on Sept. 26 on the Benjamin Franklin Parkway and a celebration of Mass on Sept. 27 on the same boulevard.

Do I need tickets for the Independence Hall speech?

Yes.

Beginning at noon Tuesday, 10,000 tickets are being made available to the general public on a first-come, first-served basis through the website worldmeeting2015.org/tickets. There's a limit of four per person.

Thousands of other tickets are being given out to parishes with large immigrant communities in an effort to assure a diverse audience.

Do I need tickets for the two Benjamin Franklin parkway appearances?

No, if you don't mind standing at least 2.5 blocks, or a quarter-mile, away.

Francis' appearance at the closing festival of the World Meeting of Families on Sept. 26 is expected to draw 750,000 or more people, his celebration of Mass on Sept. 27 up to 1.5 million.

If you want to stand in the 2.5 blocks closest to the stage on Sept. 26 or the altar on Sept. 27, you will need a ticket.

Who gets tickets for the two big events?

Tickets are being distributed primarily to parishioners in the Philadelphia Archdiocese, plus surrounding dioceses in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware.

The thousands of people attending the World Meeting of Families, the triennial Catholic conference attracting Francis to Philadelphia, are automatically receiving passes. Passes also are being given to event sponsors and members of other faith communities and church social service programs.

There are also 10,000 tickets for each day that will be made available to the general public. They will be distributed Sept. 9 through a website on a first-come, first-served basis; details have not yet been announced.

Papal visit planners decided to make that last batch available after a backlash over the announcement this week that several blocks up front had been set aside for ticketholders and that tickets were largely reserved for parishioners in the city and four surrounding counties.

If I don't have a ticket, will there still be an opportunity to see the pope?

Yes. Organizers also announced that Francis will parade along the Benjamin Franklin Parkway before the Sept. 26 and 27 events, giving many an opportunity to see him up close. They said the parade the first day would likely be longer than the one before the Mass.

Papal events will also be broadcast on 40 huge screens throughout the city for crowds to watch all his appearances during his two-day visit to Philadelphia, including those that are not public.

Feds seek information after radiation exposure in E. Idaho

By Keith Ridler
Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho — Federal nuclear officials want an eastern Idaho company to provide detailed information about how it determined a worker's level of radiation exposure after a mishap exposed the worker to an amount initially estimated to be the maximum allowable in an entire year.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission also said Friday it has issued a formal letter to International Isotopes Inc. in Idaho Falls confirming specific steps the company will take before resuming some operations following the Aug. 20 incident.

"We're taking this very, very seriously," said Steve Laflin, the company's president and CEO. "We're going to aggressively go through the whole program from top to bottom to make sure we have the appropriate steps in place."

International Isotopes makes radioactive products for cancer treatment, research and industry.

Several days after initially estimating the radiation exposure to the worker's hand, the company revised the estimate to a much lower level that fell below the annual dose limit set by federal officials. The estimate of exposure to the worker's body also was lowered significantly.

Laflin said the company chose to be especially cautious with its initial response by estimating a high amount of radiation received by the employee. But after examining video and considering results from a medical test, he said, the company revised the amount. He said he expected the federal agency to confirm those results.

The worker, described by Laflin as a senior technician with more than a decade of experience, was using an instrument to remove cobalt from a container when it became stuck and then unstuck.

"It fell to the floor between his legs," said Victor Dricks, a Nuclear Regulatory Commission spokesman, noting the item weighed about 40 pounds. "He maintained control of it, but it came out of the container, and it shouldn't have. In those few brief seconds, they estimate he received in excess of an annual dose limit."

Dricks said the federal agency will verify the company's calculations of the exposure the worker received.

He said the likely outcome is that the NRC will impose certain conditions for the company to continue the work, but he didn't anticipate a fine. The agency plans a follow-up inspection at the company's facility, though Dricks said he wasn't sure when that would happen.

The worker, whose name hasn't been released, is not in danger of exposing other people, Dricks said. Laflin said there's no long-term impairment or injury to the employee based on the exposure received.

Laflin said the 25-employee company has had a good safety record until the Aug. 20 incident.

Governor pushed to waive oil safeguards

The setting sun behind pumpjacks operating at the Inglewood oil fields in the Baldwin Hills area of Los Angeles on March 6, 2014. California's top oil and gas regulators repeatedly warned Gov. Jerry Brown's senior aides in 2011 that the governor's orders to override key safeguards in granting oil industry permits would violate state and federal laws protecting the state's groundwater from contamination, one of the former officials has testified.

SAN FRANCISCO — California's top oil and gas regulators repeatedly warned Gov. Jerry Brown's senior aides in 2011 that the governor's orders to override key environmental safeguards in granting oil industry permits would violate state and federal laws protecting groundwater from contamination, one of the former officials has testified.

Brown fired the regulators on Nov. 3, 2011, one day after what the official says was a final order from the governor to bypass provisions of the federal Safe Drinking Water Act and grant permits for oilfield injection wells. Brown later boasted publicly that the dismissals led to a speed up of oilfield permitting.

In a newly filed court declaration, Derek Chernow, Brown's former acting director of the state Department of Conservation, also alleged that former Gov. Gray Davis urged fellow Democrat Brown in a phone call to fire Chernow and Elena Miller, the state's oil and gas supervisor.

Brown's spokesman, Evan Westrup, labeled the allegations "baseless."

"The expectation — clearly communicated — was and always has been full compliance with the Safe Drinking Water Act," Westrup said Thursday.

This year, however, the state acknowledged that hundreds of the oilfield operations approved after the firings are now polluting the state's federally protected underground supplies of water for drinking and irrigation.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has given the state until 2017 to resolve what state officials conceded were more than 2,000 permits improperly given to oil companies to inject oilfield production fluid and waste into protected water aquifers. An earlier AP analysis of the permits found state records showed more than 40 percent of those were granted in the four years since Brown took office.

Chernow's declaration, obtained by The Associated Press, was contained in an Aug. 21 court filing in a lawsuit brought by a group of Central Valley farmers who allege that oil production approved by Brown's administration has contaminated their water wells. The lawsuit also cites at least $750,000 in contributions that oil companies made within months of the firings to Brown's campaign for a state income tax increase.

Westrup denied the oil companies' support for Brown's tax-increase campaign was related to the firings, saying, "the governor's focus is doing what's best for California, and that's what informs his decisions."

Robert Stern, former general counsel of the state's ethics agency and the architect of a 1970s state political reform act, said there was nothing illegal about Brown receiving the oil industry contributions for his tax campaign unless they were explicitly in return for firing the oil regulators.

Chernow's statement describes for the first time the alleged back story of the controversial permit approvals. He declined to comment to the AP and Miller did not respond to interview requests.

Brown's boasting about the firings to speed up permitting is at odds with his image as a leading proponent of renewable energy and reduced fossil fuel consumption. That reputation led to a recent meeting with Pope Francis to discuss climate change.

Westrup said an ongoing effort by Brown to reduce consumption of fossil fuels in the state by up to 50 percent and the oil industry's fight against elements of Brown's climate-change campaign shows "where the administration stands and what it's fighting for."

The firings occurred as the governor was scrambling to drum up energy sources, jobs and business and to win support for the ultimately successful statewide vote on tax increases to tackle state budget woes.

Today, with the state in the fourth year of drought and a state of emergency declared by Brown, protecting the adequacy and purity of water supplies for farms and cities is a paramount priority.

In the declaration in the farmers' case, Chernow said he and Miller were under intense pressure from the oil industry as well as the Brown administration to relax permitting standards for injection wells that oil companies use to pump production fluid and waste underground.

Chernow testified he was in the office of John Laird, Brown's secretary of Natural Resources, in early October 2011 when Laird took a call from Brown. Laird told Chernow that Brown said he had just received a call from Davis, then acting as legal counsel for Occidental Petroleum, the country's fourth-biggest oil Company.

Brown said Davis and Occidental had demanded Brown fire Chernow and Miller over what Occidental complained was the slow pace of issuing drilling permits, according to Chernow.

Davis declined to comment Thursday.

A few weeks later, on Nov. 2, 2011, Chernow and Miller received a call from Brown's energy adviser, Cliff Rechtschaffen, who urged the regulators to "immediately fast-track" approval of new oilfield permits, according to Chernow's filing.

Miller replied that what Brown aides and the oil industry were pressing for "violated the Safe Drinking Water Act, and that the EPA agreed" with that conclusion, Chernow said. In response, according to Chernow, Rechtschaffen told them "this was an order from Governor Brown, and must be obeyed."

Chernow and Miller were fired the following day.

Memos sent to Department of Conservation staff the next month — obtained through state public records laws by lawyers for the farmers — allegedly detail some ways state oilfield regulators were told they could now bypass some federally mandated environmental reviews and approve permits.

The state, under increasing pressure from the EPA, this year and last ordered the shutdown of 23 improperly permitted oilfield wells posing the most immediate threat to nearby water wells.

Current officials in the Department of Conservation said they believe the actual number of flawed permits granted under Brown is lower than the 46 percent the state records show, but they have not provided alternate figures.

The state improperly issued permits, they said, because of misunderstandings and poor record-keeping, rather than willful decisions by Brown's administration.

The safeguards at issue in the alleged permitting dispute were a "very fundamental" part of the federal Safe Drinking Water Act's protections against oilfield contamination, said David Albright, manager of the EPA's California groundwater office, this week.

California "has a huge amount of work to do" to bring its regulation of oilfield injection wells into compliance with federal law, said Jared Blumenfeld, the regional EPA administrator in California. Blumenfeld cited a "sea change" over the past year in state compliance efforts, however.

Executives of Occidental and Aera Energy at the time thanked Brown for his involvement in the oilfield permitting process, as Occidental CEO Steven Chazren noted in a January 2012 call with financial analysts, two months after top regulators were fired.

That month, Occidental became the first major oil company to come out in support of the Brown's tax measure and donated the first of $500,000 to Brown's campaign for the tax referendum. A month later, Aera donated $250,000.

Margita Thompson, a spokeswoman at what is now the independent California spin-off of Occidental, California Resources Council, said that all the farmers' allegations were "wholly without merit." Cindy Pollard, spokeswoman for Aera, said the company often donates to revenue-raising state campaigns. "Aera's contributions were not quid pro quo," she said.

Biden says he's not sure if he will seek presidency

By Ken Thomas
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Vice President Joe Biden says he is unsure if he will seek the Democratic presidential nomination, saying his decision will hinge on whether he and his family have the "emotional energy to run."

"Unless I can go to my party and the American people and say that I am able to devote my whole heart and my whole soul to this endeavor, it would not be appropriate," Biden said Thursday, responding to a question following a foreign policy address at an Atlanta synagogue.

Biden offered his most extensive public remarks regarding his deliberations about entering a Democratic primary race that includes front-runner Hillary Rodham Clinton, Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders and others. His entry would shake up the campaign at a time when some Democrats would like to see more options.

Clinton has locked up much of the Democratic establishment and few expected Biden to enter the race. But the former secretary of state's recent slide in primary polls and questions surrounding her use of a private email account and server while at the State Department have prompted the vice president to explore a campaign to succeed his running mate, President Barack Obama.

Capping a day that saw Biden defend Obama's work to forge a nuclear agreement with Iran, the vice president made clear family came first.

Associated Press

Vice President Joe Biden discusses the Iran nuclear deal with Jewish community leaders at the David Posnack Jewish Community Center in Davie, Fla. on Thursday. Exploring a presidential campaign, Biden offered a robust defense of a nuclear accord with Iran strongly backed by the White House in the latest sign of his work to present himself as a natural heir to President Barack Obama.

"The most relevant factor in my decision is whether my family and I have the emotional energy to run," Biden said, responding to a question posed by his longtime friend, Stuart Eizenstat, a former U.S. ambassador to the European Union.

"Everybody talks about a lot of other factors, other people in the race, whether I can raise the money, whether I can put together an organization. That's not the factor," Biden said. "The factor is, 'Can I do it? Can my family undertake what is an arduous commitment?' That we would be proud to undertake in ordinary circumstances and the honest to god answer is, I just don't know."

Biden, who unsuccessfully sought the White House in 1988 and 2008, said he did not know if he would mount a campaign — a move that would come months after the death of his 46-year-old son, Beau Biden.

He said based on his previous experiences, there was "no way to put a timetable on it." But he added, "If I can reach that conclusion and we can do it in a fashion that would still make it viable, I would not hesitate to do it."

"I have to be honest with you and everyone who has come to me. I can't look you straight in the eye and say now I know I can do it," he said.

Democrats have said Biden is likely to make a decision this month. The first Democratic presidential debate is on Oct. 13, giving him a strong incentive to make up his mind before the first televised encounter of the primary campaign.

If Biden joined the field, he would be most closely associated with Obama, who maintains strong support among rank-and-file Democrats. But the vice president has also signaled that he would seek to champion progressive policies, meeting recently with Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren, a favorite of liberals, and AFL-CIO President Richard Trumka.

On Monday, Biden will join Trumka at Labor Day events in Pittsburgh, where the interest in his potential bid is likely to follow him. Trumka said earlier this week that "the field is still wide open" if Biden decides to run.

Expensive ad space almost sold out for debate

Get in your bids fast. CNN said Friday that only one commercial slot is still available for its coverage of the Sept. 16 debate between top Republican presidential contenders, and it's expected to draw top dollar.

The trade publication Advertising Age reported this week that CNN is asking for up to $200,000 for a 30-second ad during the debate, a price comparable to slots in popular entertainment shows on the broadcast networks. CNN would not discuss its ad prices.

On a more typical night for CNN, Ad Age quoted media buyers as saying a 30-second ad could cost as little as $5,000.

Interest was strong among advertisers even before Fox News Channel showed the first debate on Aug. 6, said Allie Bodack, a spokeswoman for Turner network advertising sales.

Last month's debate, however, reached an average of 24 million viewers, by far the most-watched event ever on Fox News Channel and one of the most popular TV shows of the summer. That likely sent advertiser interest in CNN's debate through the stratosphere.

Like Fox, CNN is airing a debate earlier in the evening for candidates not judged to be among the top 10 in polls. Advertising time is still available for that debate, Bodack said.

The CNN events are being held in the Reagan Presidential Library in Simi Valley, California.

'White Boy Rick' drug trafficker likely to get new sentence

By Jeff Karoub
Associated Press

DETROIT — A major Detroit-area drug trafficker known as "White Boy Rick" could soon be released from prison, following nearly 30 years behind bars, after a judge on Friday ordered a resentencing hearing.

Richard Wershe Jr., 46, deserves a new sentence because he was sentenced at age 18 under an old law, and the justice system now treats juveniles differently than adults, Wayne County Circuit Judge Dana Hathaway ruled.

She scheduled the resentencing for Sept. 18 over the objections of Wayne County prosecutors, who later appealed her ruling to the Michigan Court of Appeals. Prosecutors believe Wershe's sentence is lawful and note that his rights-violations claims were rejected on a previous appeal.

Defense attorney Ralph Musilli said his client conceivably could be released immediately after the September hearing, given the time he has served.

"He has done his time," his mother, Darlene McCormick, said after the hearing. "He's been very good and he needs to get out, spend time with his family."

At the time Wershe was arrested in 1987, authorities described him as being at the top echelons of trafficking. One judge said at a 1987 hearing that "he's worse than a mass murderer."

Prosecutors said he had cocaine before his arrest but dumped it in a neighbor's yard. His lawyers said the cocaine was found only after Wershe was beaten by police.

Authorities say he had eight kilos, or 17.6 pounds, of cocaine. He was convicted of possessing more than 650 grams of cocaine and sentenced to life in prison without parole.

However, changes made in 2002 to Michigan's drug laws made him eligible for parole the next year.

Hathaway said she wasn't ruling that a life sentence with parole was unconstitutional. Rather, Wershe is "entitled to be resentenced with consideration given to his youth and the circumstances surrounding the crime."

In their appeal Friday, prosecutors accused Hathaway of overstepping and argued that only the governor or state parole board could release him from prison.

"The action of the circuit court here is the wrong relief in the wrong forum, for the wrong reasons," prosecutors wrote. "It should promptly be reversed."

Wershe was a childhood friend of musician Kid Rock, who testified on his behalf in 2003 before the Michigan Parole Board.

Wershe, who is being held in a state prison in northern Michigan, has helped the FBI investigate drugs and police corruption.

"They put him away for life, they buried him and they said, 'Not only are we going to hope everyone forgets about him, we're going to take ... action to make sure he stays buried,'" Musilli said.

Wershe's son, Richard Williams, also attended the hearing. The 27-year-old was born shortly after his father was imprisoned.

Williams said it's hard to put into words how he feels. He acknowledges that his father, like everybody, "has to play by the rules." Still, Williams added, he's "hoping that the rules can be fair for once."

Judge: Injunction against water rule limited to 13 states

By James MacPherson
Associated Press

BISMARCK, N.D. — A federal judge in North Dakota said Friday that his injunction blocking a new Obama administration rule aimed at regulating some small waterways applies only to the 13 states that sued to block it, and not nationwide.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge Ralph Erickson clarified the temporary injunction he issued last week at the request of North Dakota and 12 other states. They sought to stop the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Army Corps of Engineers from regulating some small streams, tributaries and wetlands under the Clean Water Act.

"Because there are competing sovereign interests and competing judicial rulings, the court declines to extend the preliminary injunction at issue beyond the entities actually before it," Erickson wrote.

The EPA had maintained after Erickson's initial ruling that the injunction applied in only those 13 states, and said it had begun enforcing it elsewhere. The states had argued that the judge made no geographical limitation in his ruling and it should apply everywhere.

"No harm, no foul for North Dakota and the 12 other states," said North Dakota Attorney General Wayne Stenehjem, who filed the original lawsuit on behalf of those states. "It's unfortunate for the other states because they will have to abide by the ruling."

The states involved in the lawsuit with North Dakota are Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Idaho, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, Nevada, South Dakota and Wyoming.

Erickson, who is based in Fargo, wrote that there are "compelling reasons in favor of both extension of the injunction and limitation of the injunction.

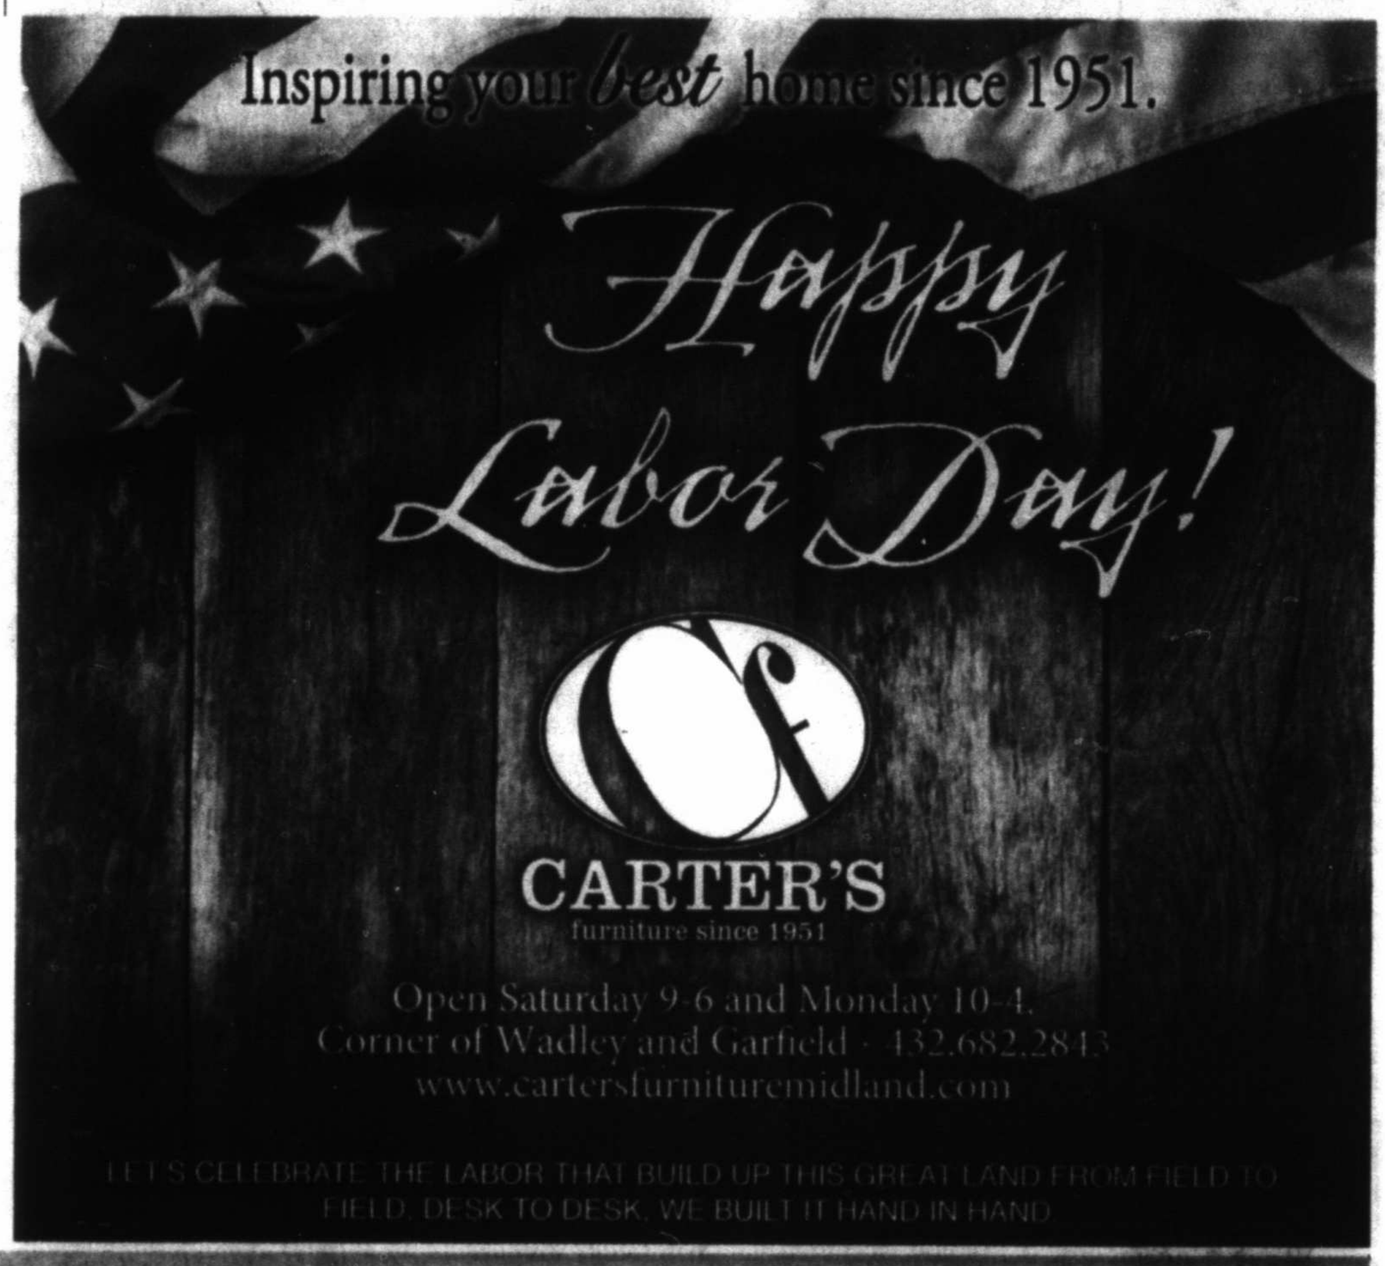

"On the one hand, there is a desirability for uniformity regarding a national rule with national application. On the other hand, there is the idea of respecting the decisions of other courts and other sovereign states."

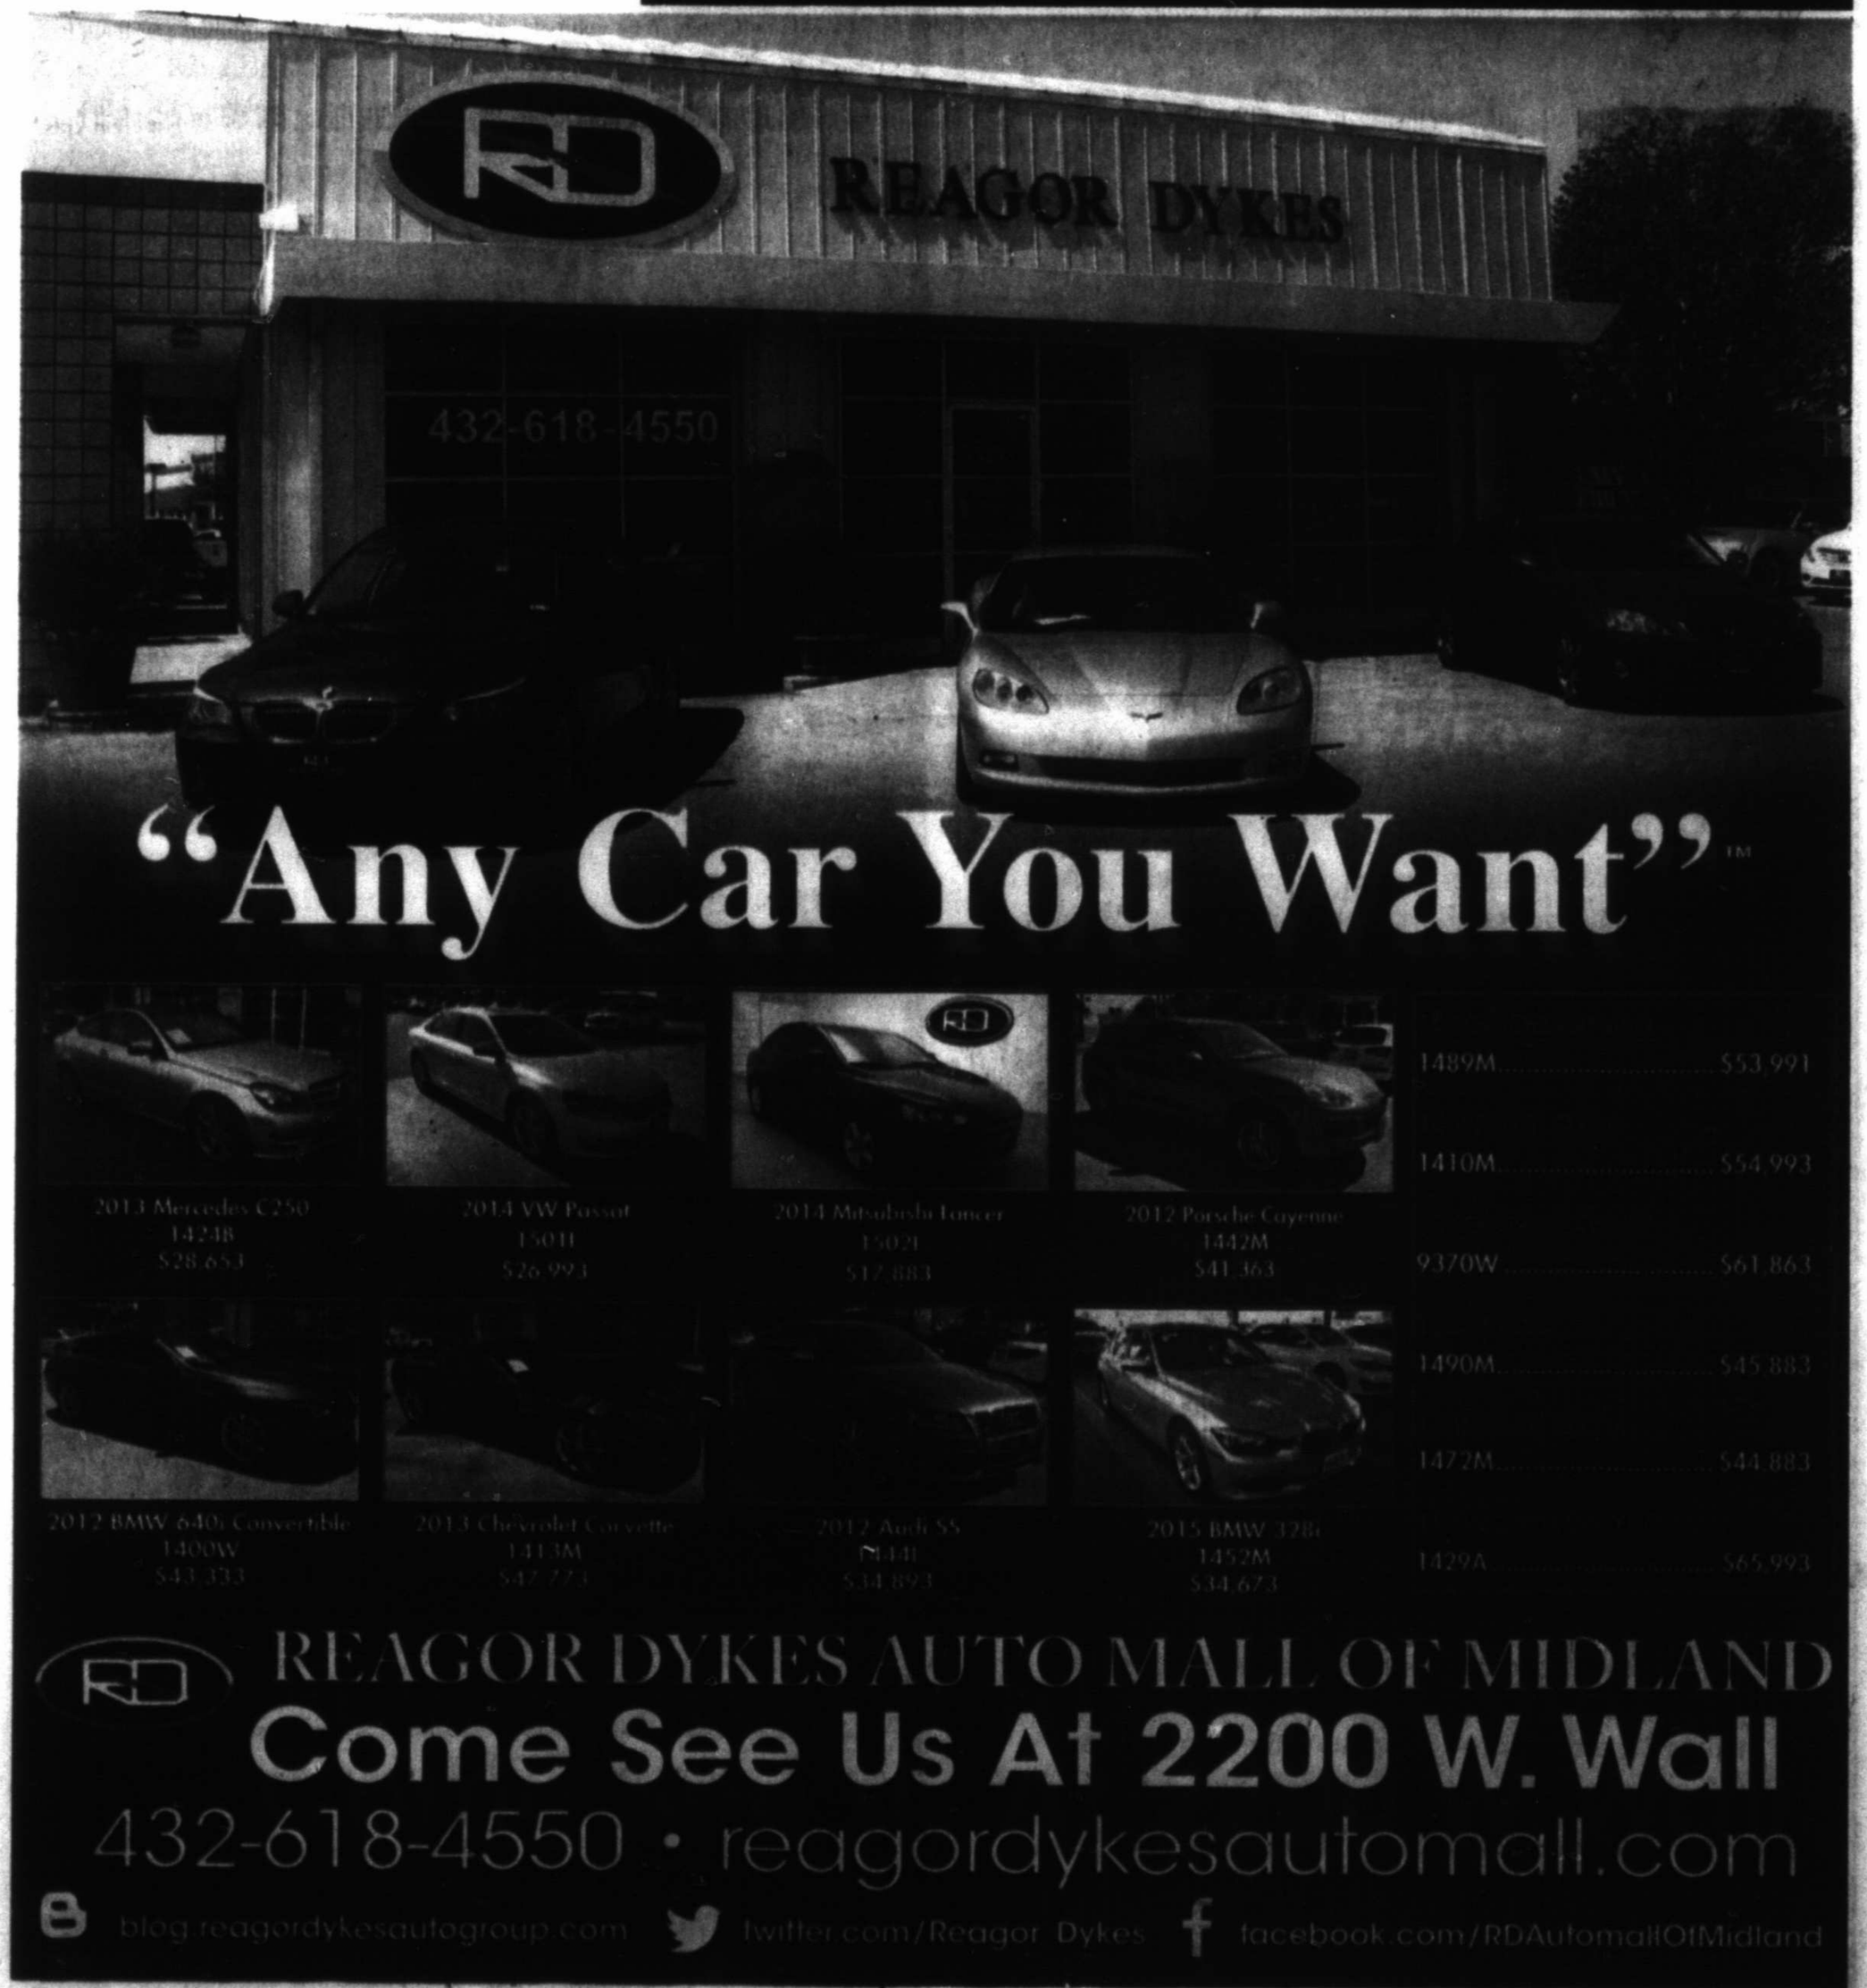

Stenehjem said a total of 31 states have filed various lawsuits against the ruling. The states involved "cover 75 percent of the nation's landmass," he said.

District judges in other high-profile cases have issued orders that apply nationwide, over the federal government's objection.

One recent example was earlier this year in Texas, where U.S. District Judge Andrew Hanen issued a nationwide order blocking the Obama administration from implementing rules to spare nearly 5 million people living in the U.S. illegally from deportation. Hanen issued his order in a lawsuit filed by Texas and 25 other states. The government has appealed

The water rule is a response to calls from the U.S. Supreme Court and Congress for the EPA to clarify which smaller waterways are protected. The EPA said the new law aims to help landowners understand which waters fall under the Clean Water Act.

Rams	28
Bulldogs	14

Friday evening was a night the Midland High football team would probably like to forget about.

Behind a strong ground attack, El Paso Montwood cruised to a 28-14 victory over the Bulldogs at Grande Communications Stadium.

From the onset, the visiting Rams (2-0) imposed their will on the Bulldogs (0-2) by running the football, one week after Montwood totaled just 30 rushing yards versus Las Cruces (N.M.).

The Rams amassed 223 rushing yards, spearheaded by the first-half efforts of running back Brandon Gomez, who rushed 16 times for 131 yards and two touchdowns before departing the game because of injury.

The Bulldogs offense didn't fare much better, as they were beset by eight sacks allowed and couldn't generate consistent, quality drives.

"We got to do a better job of transferring what we are doing on the practice field to the game field," MHS head coach Craig Yenzer said. "We are just making way too many mistakes, too many breakdowns. Right now, we were continuing to make those young mistakes that you can't make on a football field. You gotta give Montwood credit, they did a good job."

Adding to the woes on both offense and defense, the injury bug hit Midland High hard again as wide receiver Courtney McMaryion and offensive tackle Noah Englestad suffered injuries that forced their departure from the game.

McMaryion was injured on a 16-yard reception in the fourth quarter and was carried off the field while not putting any weight on his left leg. McMaryion was carted off the field after the mid-section of his left leg was wrapped with ice.

McMaryion caught seven passes for 118 yards and a touchdown, accounting for 68 percent of the Bulldogs' total passing offense versus the Rams.

Englestad started at left offensive tackle and left the game on the first offensive play from scrimmage. Englestad was filling in for offensive line anchor Paxton Heiting, who was injured last week versus Keller.

"Injuries are mounting for us," Yenzer said. "We lost a few guys that we can't afford to lose. All those things combined, our team is really being challenged right now. We're going through tough times, but we've got great kids, they gotta respond and bounce back. We are all pretty disappointed right now."

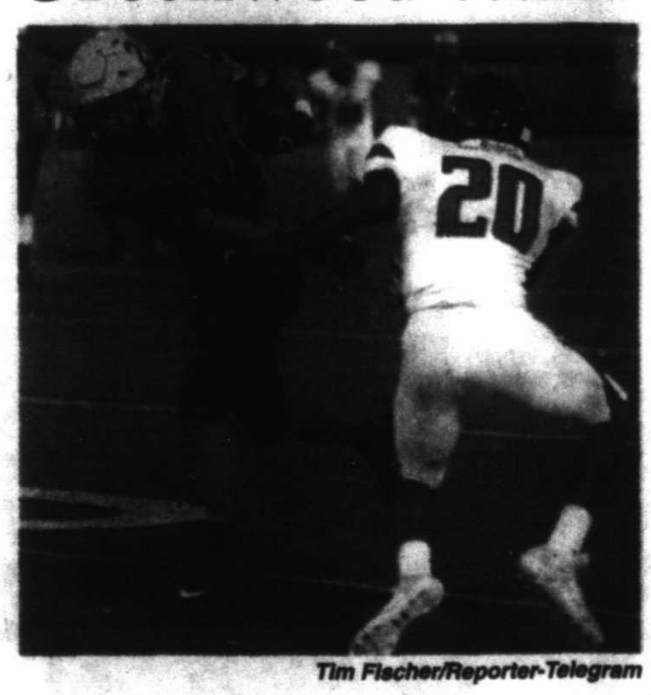

Montwood jumped to a 14-0 lead in the first quarter, quickly putting Midland High in a unfavorable position. On the opening drive, the Rams had a 7-play, 75-yard possession that culminated when quarterback Gio Cisneros threw a pass to wide receiver Alex Cepeda behind the line of scrimmage and Cepeda followed with a 30-yard touchdown pass to Andrew Perez on a trick play.

Nolan, Cubs too much for resilient Greenwood team

Greenwood's Samuel Shaw gets around Brownfield's Jezreel Griffin Friday at J.M. King Memorial Stadium in Greenwood.

Cubs	46
Rangers	41

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood football team knew it had to contain Brownfield quarterback Jaelyn Nolan if it had any chance to beat the Cubs.

Nolan's speed, athleticism and big play ability proved to be just enough for the Cubs to beat the Rangers 46-41 in a non-district game Friday night at J.M. King Memorial Stadium.

Nolan finished with 275 yard passing, 147 yards rushing and accounted for all seven of Brownfield's touchdowns.

But still, the Rangers had an opportunity at the end of the game after the Cubs fumbled the ball from center on what was supposed to be a game-ending kneel down with less than a minute left.

Following two big pass plays, the Rangers were in Cubs territory. But after Eric Rojas caught a 29-yard pass from Ben Brockman, Brownfield defender Coby Cervantes stripped the ball away to preserve a win for the Cubs (2-0).

After the game, all Greenwood coach Shad Hanna could do was shake his head and wonder what could have been if the Rangers had cut out a mistake or two and came up with the bigger plays of the game.

"We tried, we tried," Hanna said. "We dug ourselves a little bit of a hole, I guess. They got a good football team and you can't take anything away from those guys. We learned more about our football team tonight than we did before this game. I think this is going to make us a lot better football team.

Considering the Rangers (1-1) were down 40-21 early in the third quarter, the fact that they had an opportunity to win was a credit to their determination and willingness to fight.

"I'm proud of my boys, I'm proud of the way we fought," Hanna said. "We had our opportunities. We could not get any breaks."

The Rangers got two scores — a Ben Brockman 10-yard TD run and a 17-yard TD run by Jake Rogers — to close the gap to 40-35 midway through

EL PASO — A losing streak that begin last year in Midland against El Paso Coronado, ended in El Paso against Coronado.

The Lee football team broke a 10-game losing streak Friday night soundly defeating the T-Birds 46-28 at Quarles-Brooks Thunderbird Stadium.

"I know everyone looks at it a little bit differently than I do," said James Morton, Lee's coach. "I see it as a new team and a new year. The way I came into was we were 0-1. For the people who want to count all those other games, it gives them something that they don't have to count now."

The teams traded first quarter touchdowns.

First, Lee's Tony Jones scored on a 2-yard run with 3:39 left in the first quarter but the PAT failed. Two minutes later, Coronado's Jonathan Millan scored on a 14-yard run but the T-Birds point after kick was good, giving them a 7-6 lead after the first quarter.

That's when Lee took over the game, namely running junior quarterback Sema'J Davis who would end the night with 170 yards on 23 carries and touchdown. He would throw a fourth quarter 34-yard touchdown pass to CJ Robles to put the game away from Coronado.

Lee scored four unanswered touchdowns from early in the second quarter to late in third to take a 33-7 lead with 4:23 remaining in the third.

"More importantly for us, as a team, from week one to week two, we took a big step," Morton said. "Now from week two to week three we have to take another step.

Lee would end the night with 417 total yards (321 rushing and 96 passing).

"Coronado is a good football," Morton said. "I knew going into the game it was to be a battle of trenches. I'm proud of the way we responded with our running game."

Lee improves to 1-1 while Coronado drops to 1-1.

"Or defense didn't play a real good game but that's a credit to the Midland Lee offense," Coronado coach Bob Anderson said. "They're a good team. They're

Serena Williams' comeback extends Grand Slam try at US Open

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

Associated Press

Serena Williams reacts after a point against Bethanie Mattek-Sands during the third round of the U.S. Open tennis tournament Friday in New York.

NEW YORK — Can't count out Serena Williams, no matter how big the deficit, no matter how off-target her strokes, no matter how much the pressure might be mounting as she bids for a calendar-year Grand Slam.

Eight times this season at major tournaments, Williams has dropped the opening set. Eight times, she has won.

The latest comeback was in the third round of the U.S. Open on Friday night, when Williams figured out a way to deal with a tricky opponent and get her own game going before it was too late, eventually emerging to grab the last eight games for a 3-6, 7-5, 6-0 victory over Bethanie Mattek-Sands.

"I'm not trying to live on the edge," Williams said with a big smile.

Perhaps. Still, no one does it better. And with so much at stake, no less.

The No. 1-ranked Williams is trying to become the first tennis player since Steffi Graf in 1988 to win all four Grand Slam tournaments in the same season.

She won the Australian Open on hard courts in January, the French Open on clay courts in June, and Wimbledon on grass courts in July, and now is four wins away from adding the trophy on the hard courts of the U.S. Open. Next up is a fourth-round match Sunday against yet another American, 19th-seeded Madison Keys.

Looking down the line, Williams' quarterfinal opponent could be her older sister Venus.

There were moments Friday under the lights of Arthur Ashe Stadium when it appeared that Mattek-Sands, a wild-card entry ranked 101st, would not allow that to happen.

While Mattek-Sands won doubles titles this year at the Australian Open and French Open, this was a rare moment in the spotlight for her in singles. She had appeared in the U.S. Open 13 other times, never making it as far as the third round until this week.

But by mixing in slices with flat strokes, heading to the net when there were openings — and even sometimes when there weren't — Mattek-Sands played a varied, attacking style that gave Williams fits at times.

Particularly on break points: Williams was able to convert only 3 of 16 through the first two sets, before going 3 of 5 in the third.

"I said, 'You know what, Serena? Just keep going,'" said Williams, a 33-year-old American who also has a chance to become the first woman since Chris Evert in 1975-78 to win four U.S. Opens in a row. "'Keep trying, keep trying, keep trying.'"

Mattek-Sands started well, taking a 3-0 lead while grabbing 16 of the first 21 points.

Williams decidedly did not, responsible for each of the match's first half-dozen unforced errors. That opening set ended with three consecutive miscues by Williams — a backhand wide, a swinging forehand volley long, a forehand return wide.

As excited as Mattek-Sands was, and as visibly upset as Williams was, the match could hardly be considered over at that point. Consider: Williams entered with a 7-0 record when dropping the first set of a match at a major in 2015.

It took her a while to get into the second set, though, missing out on break chance after break chance, and showing her exasperation repeatedly. After one flubbed backhand, she wheeled and looked at coach Patrick Mouratoglou in the stands. After another, she leaned over, pushing her forehead against the handle of her racket.

This did not come easily.

Even when Williams finally converted her sixth break point of the second set, screaming loudly to celebrate the 5-3 lead, she quickly double-faulted twice while serving for the set, helping Mattek-Sands break right back. Soon thereafter, it was 5-all, and Mattek-Sands was two games from one of the biggest surprises in tennis history.

She did not win another game.

Earlier Friday, Venus gathered herself after a mid-match dip to reel off the five games and beat 12th-seeded Belinda Bencic of Switzerland 6-3, 6-4.

Today's games

Mission Veterans Memorial at Odessa Permian

When/where: 2 p.m. today, Ratliff Stadium, Odessa

On the air: KMCM (98.9 FM), Odessa

Records: Mission Veterans Memorial 1-0; Permian 1-0

Last game: Mission Veterans Memorial 25, Mission 2; Permian 70, McAllen 14

Last meeting/series: Permian won, 44-9, last season in the first meeting between the teams.

Three things to watch

■ The Panthers' rushing attack: Permian gained 468 yards on the ground in last week's blowout win against McAllen. Permian hit the Bulldogs on all sides by using the speed of their skill players, as well as star running back Brandon Bailey. If that level of production continues this week, the Panthers could roll to a 2-0 start.

■ Keep an eye on Memorial middle linebacker Hugo Cabrera. Last season, he recorded 107 total tackles, including 19 for a loss and four sacks for a team that reached the area round of the Class 5A playoffs. If the Patriots are able to slow Permian's fast-paced offense, Cabrera will have a major say in the effort.

■ Permian head coach Blake Feldt said the Patriots are an all-in-out offense with several threats on the outside. Memorial boasts a duo of talented receivers in Bobby Tovar and Roman DeLeon, who combined for 17 touchdown receptions last season.

Feldt said he wasn't pleased with his team's defensive intensity last week against a weaker McAllen squad. The Panthers will have to dig in a little deeper this week, as the Patriots figure to be a step up from week 1.

Next game: Mission Veterans Memorial at Juarez-Lincoln, 7:30 p.m., Friday; El Paso Americas at Permian, 7 p.m., Friday

San Antonio Warren at Abilene High

Next game: 6 p.m. today, Shotwell Stadium, Abilene

Records: San Antonio Warren 0-1; Abilene High 1-0

Last game: San Antonio Roosevelt 42, San Antonio Warren 21; Abilene High 35, Colleyville Heritage 21

Last meeting/series: Abilene High won, 38-7, last season in the first meeting between the teams.

Three things to watch

■ Eagles first-year head coach Del Van Cox said he was impressed with the way new starting quarterback Peyton Killam handled the offense in his debut last Friday against Colleyville Heritage. Killam went 14-for-18 with 142 yards and a touchdown along with no interceptions.

■ Abilene high running back Abram Smith also got into a groove last week. The junior ran 23 times for 177 yards and three touchdowns, including a 48-yard scoring run in the second quarter.

■ Warren has abc returning starters on both offense and defense. The Warriors boast a talented defense, led by linebacker Ray Garza, who recorded 104 total tackles and three sacks in 2014. Also look out for a couple of ball hawks in Warren's secondary. Tristen Trevino had 91 tackles last year at defensive back and will also play at quarterback. Meanwhile, defensive back Keshawn Payne, who also spends time at running back, intercepted three passes last season.

Next game: San Antonio Reagan at San Antonio Warren, 7 p.m., Saturday; Abilene High at Abilene Cooper, 7:30 p.m., Friday

Steers bounce back with win over Monahans

BIG SPRING — Junior running back Preston Alexander had a memorable night carrying the football, as he racked up 157 yards and four touchdowns on 21 touches and led Big Spring to a 32-13 rout of Monahans on Friday at Memorial Stadium.

Alexander

Wigington

The Steers (1-1) used a balanced offensive attack to recover from an ugly 62-6 loss to Kerrville Tivy last week. Monahans fell to 1-1 on the season with the loss.

Alexander said he was motivated after his team was dismantled against Tivy and was also proud the Steers bounced back against a solid Monahans squad.

"I didn't like the way the Tivy game went," Alexander, who accounted for four of Big Spring's five touchdowns in the game, said. "But against these guys (Monahans), they're a good team, good competitors and I liked the way we played."

After a scoreless first quarter marred by countless pre-snap penalties, the Steers got on the board just 16 seconds into the second quarter. Senior quarterback Garrett Wigington — who moved under center after switching from linebacker during the offseason — hit receiver Daniel Luna on a wide open slant route over the middle for an 80-yard score and a 7-0 lead.

It was Wigington's first career touchdown pass as a Big Spring quarterback. He finished the game with 172 yards and a touchdown.

But Monahans, which was particularly slowed by penalties — notably four false starts in the first half alone, answered quickly with a seven-play, 69-yard scoring drive, capped off by Quentin Jones' 20-yard pass to Marcos Montez.

In the second half, Alexander and the Steers — who were in a bit of a funk for most of the first half — came to life.

On the heels of a 64-yard strike from Wigington to Luna, Alexander barreled his way into the end zone from 14 yards out. Monahans answered again, setting the stage for Alexander. He scored for a second time from 13 yards out to give Big Spring a 20-13 lead. And he didn't stop there. His first two touchdowns only seemed to add fuel to the Steers' second-half fire.

Alexander beefed up his stat sheet with a pair of fourth-quarter touchdown runs of 14 and 34 yards respectively — the latter serving as the dagger score with 1:31 left in the game.

"With the Steer Nation fans, they got me motivated to get out there and do what I had to do to win this game," Alexander said.

For Monahans, shifty running back Maurilio Marquez led the way, picking up 100 yards on 16 carries.

Luna had 159 yards on three catches, as well as an interception for the Steers.

the fourth.

Greenwood had a big opportunity to get a key stop when Brownfield faced a fourth-and-19 from the GHS 25.

But just like he did several times in the game, Nolan found a way to use his legs to evade the Ranger defenders and then throw a 25-yard strike to Jezeel Griffin to give the Cubs a 46-35 lead with 3:40 left in the game. Griffin finished with 160 yards and three touchdowns on six receptions.

"Their receivers made great catches and great runs after the catch," Hanna said. "They have a good football team and I think they're a better football team this week than they were last week. I think they're going to continue to get better and we are too."

Brockman led the Rangers with 186 yards passing to go with 69 yards rushing and three total touchdowns.

life when Noah Marquez returned a punt 35 yards to set up his team with favorable field position at the Rams' 40-yard line.

Two players later, Midland High quarterback Jackson Anuszkiewicz capitalized on the field position by heaving a 28-yard touchdown pass to Courtney McMaryion in the corner of the southeast end zone. Montwood led 14-7 at that point with 9:47 left in the second quarter.

After that point, the Rams were in control and they took a comfortable 28-7 lead when Cisneros scrambled and connected with Tyreese Andrus on a 15-yard touchdown with 4:35 left to play in the third quarter.

Despite losing Gomez at halftime, Montwood reserve running back George Henderson filled in nicely with 71 second-half rushing yards.

Midland High mounted a late scoring drive when Brady Bolger passed to baseball teammate Brooks Betcher for a 29-yard touchdown pass with 1:10 remaining in the contest.

Bolger was 10 of 20 for 145 yards passing, a touchdown and an interception.

Notes: On an evening when there were few highlights, the Bulldogs special teams shined at times as they blocked two field goals, the second one batted down by Marquez. … MHS defensive backs Holt Wood and Aderrial Henry each recovered fumbles, while Midland High defensive end Traver Vliem caused a fumble. … The Bulldogs started 0-2 for the first time since the 2009 season and will face Hurst L.D. Pats coach Belichick on having Brady back: 'He never left'

■ NFL appealing Deflategate ruling

Associated Press

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Like every game, Patriots coach Bill Belichick says he's focused on his next opponent. But he doesn't feel as if he's got a new edge with star quarterback Tom Brady able to play in the regular0season opener against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"He never left," Belichick said Friday when asked how it felt to have Brady back with his four-game "Deflategate" suspension erased.

Brady posted a statement Friday night on Facebook.

"While I am pleased to be eligible to play, I am sorry our league had to endure this. I don't think it has been good for our sport — to a large degree, we have all lost," Brady said. "I am also sorry to anyone whose feelings I may have hurt as I have tried to work to resolve this situation. I love the NFL. It is a privilege to be a member of the NFL community and I will always try to do my best in representing my team and the league in a way that would make all members of this community proud."

Even if its offensive plans stay largely the same, Brady certainly factored into his team's celebration plans for the Sept. 10 opener. A federal judge brought clarity to the saga Thursday when he overturned Brady's suspension backed by NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell, saying the league had legal missteps as it punished Brady for his role in using underinflated footballs during the AFC championship game last season.

Patriots President Jonathan Kraft, the son of team owner Robert Kraft, says the team wouldn't have gone through with raising its Super Bowl championship banner if Brady weren't playing.

"We may have been raising a banner, it just might not have been our championship banner," Kraft told WBZ-FM on Thursday night before New England played its exhibition finale against the New York Giants. "He needed to be there the first game that that banner existed in the stadium."

Team officials had an alternate, Brady-themed banner ready if Brady's suspension was upheld, Kraft said, less like the homemade signs gloating "Vindicated" and "Free Brady" in the stands during the game and more a recap of Brady's accomplishments.

Offensive coordinator Josh McDaniels said he's confident Brady will be ready by Thursday. All along, the team has been getting three quarterbacks prepared for the Steelers and little has changed, he said.

"In this game, we all have to deal with adversity and distractions," McDaniels said. "We had enough of this in practice and you don't ever get used to it. Tom is a veteran player and he's dealt with adversity before, whether it was injury or other distractions. He's always just gone out and prepared and improved."

Though the NFL is appealing the ruling, it could take months for the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to hear the case because the league would have to show it would suffer irreparable harm to speed up the timetable.

Day, Spieth rolling in opposite directions at TPC Boston

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

NORTON, Mass. — Luke Donald took a big step toward advancing to the next FedEx Cup playoff event at his home course in Chicago. Jason Day took a small step toward No. 1 in the world.

As for Jordan Spieth?

He took another step in the wrong direction with his third straight round over par.

Donald, who narrowly qualified for the PGA Tour's postseason, made six birdies in blustery conditions for a 4-under 67 that gave him a share of the lead with Colt Knost among early starters Friday at the Deutsche Bank Championship.

With three players having a chance to be No. 1 in the world ranking, Day had the most promising start. Coming off a six-shot victory at The Barclays, the 27-year-old Australian opened with three straight birdies and saved par on his next hole at No. 14 with a 10-foot putt in the heart of the cup.

Day reached 5 under until two bogeys over his last five holes gave him a 68, tied with Gary Woodland and Ryan Palmer.

The PGA champion was in full flight, looking comfortable and confident as he goes for his fourth win in his last five tournaments. Winning is required for him to have any chance to reach No. 1 in the world for the first time.

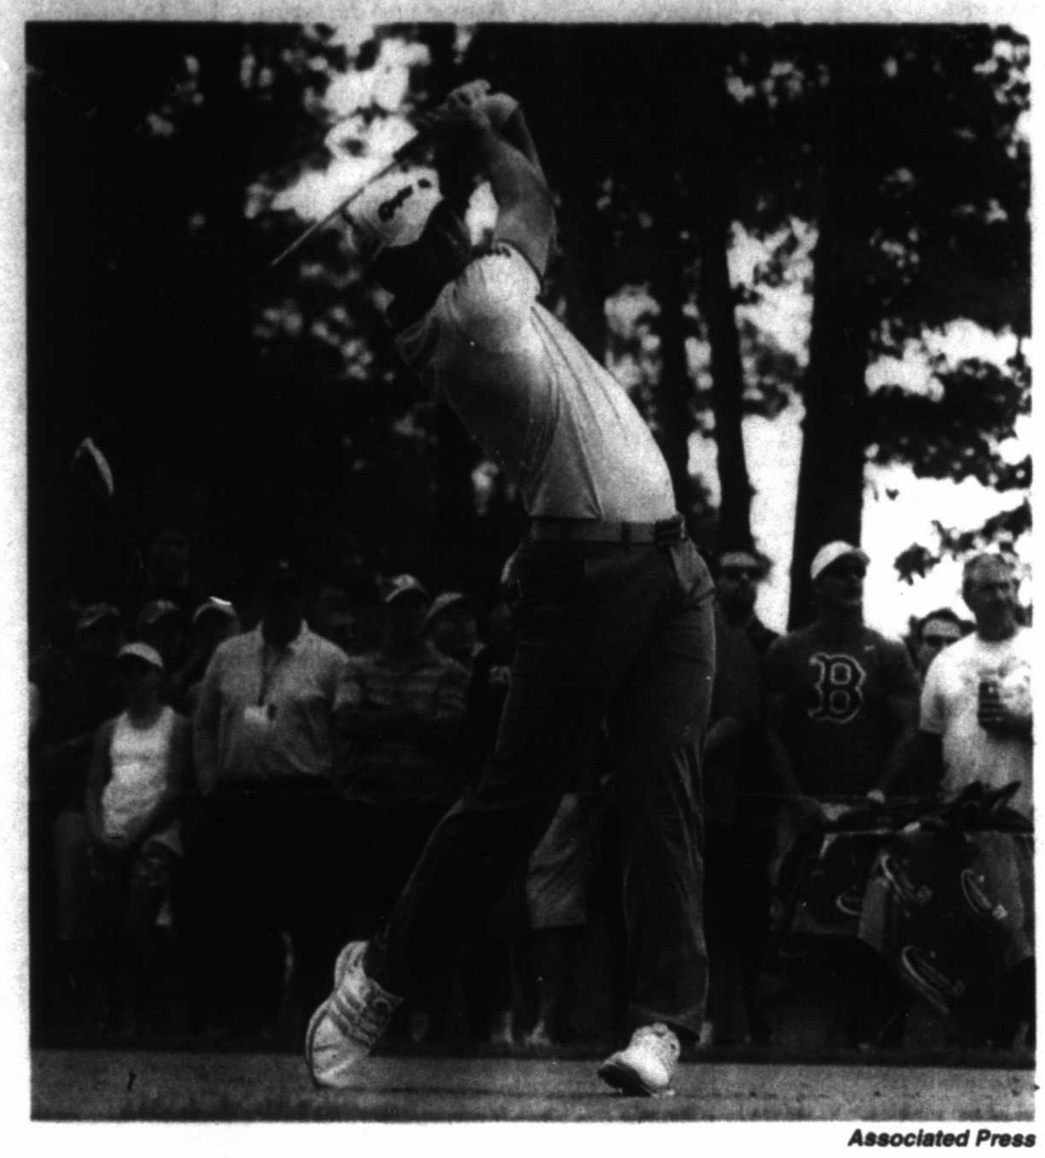

Spieth lost the No. 1 ranking back to Rory McIlroy when he missed the cut at The Barclays. He faces another short week after a most peculiar round of 75. It was bad enough that Spieth did not miss a fairway, except for the reachable par-4 fourth hole where he hit it into a good spot in the front bunker.

It was his level of irritation.

He was muttering as he left the 11th green with a hard-earned bogey from a buried lie in the lip of the bunker. He slammed his bag and looked disgusted over most of his shot. And it was only the opening round.

Spieth missed a 5-foot par putt on his 17th hole that never touched the cup, and even after missing a 20-foot birdie putt on his last hole, he had to concentrate over the comeback par putt from 4 feet. Combined with last week, it was his third straight round over par, the first time that has happened since June 2014.

Spieth left the TPC Boston without speaking to reporters.

Jason Day of Australia tees off on the 12th hole during the first round of the Deutsche Bank Championship golf tournament in Norton, Mass., on Friday.

McIlroy, playing two groups ahead of Spieth and Day, was within one shot of the lead until he dropped two shots coming in and had a 70.

Donald moved up 32 spots to No. 87 in the FedEx Cup, and only the top 70 advance to the BMW Championship in two weeks at Conway Farms, where Donald is a member. He was a long shot starting these playoffs. He's looking better each day.

"I would love to continue," Donald said. "But first things first. I've got to get to Conway Farms."

Donald said it was tough to make birdies, and those are words rarely spoken on glorious days such as this one at the TPC Boston. A front came through that made temperatures pleasant, though the wind was strong at times in the morning and a few pins were on knobs.

Phil Mickelson, in dire need of a big week to bolster any chance of being picked for the Presidents Cup, had a pair of three-putt bogeys and shot 70.

"It was the most challenging I've seen this golf course play, especially given that the greens were very receptive," Mickelson said. "But I played pretty good golf today. I hit a lot of good shots and I hit a few bad ones, but they weren't too bad. And it was an OK start."

Day looked like he might birdie them all after three holes. Ultimately, he knew that 68 was a decent start.

He stuffed his approach on No. 10 to 4 feet. He hit a towering 4-iron to 10 feet for birdie on the par-3 11th. He rolled in a 20-foot birdie on No. 12. And when his birdie putt caught the lip on No. 15, Day flipped his putter into the air in shock. He must have felt he was going to make them all.

"I was making everything I looked at, and then it slowly dried up," Day said. "It was a very patient day. You can't get out there and be so disappointed. Once you're frustrated you're going to make some mental errors and it's going to be bad for you."

DIVOTS: Ryan Moore took a 10 on the par-5 second hole, bounced back with an eagle two holes later and finally ran out of steam. He shot 78. ... Bubba Watson did not set foot on the TPC Boston until Friday so he could rest his back. Had a 50-foot putt on his opening hole and had no idea how fast the greens were and left it short. Then, he heard Jordan Spieth say the greens were slower than Tuesday, and Watson was really lost. He shot 73.

3 minor leaguers suspended for positive drug tests

Associated Press

Texas right-hander Victor Gonzalez has been suspended for the first 72 games of next season following a positive test under baseball's minor league drug program, and Seattle left-hander Joe Pistorese and free-agent outfielder Anderson Caro have been banned 50 games each.

Gonzalez, who is with the Dominican Summer League Rangers 2, was disciplined for a positive test for metabolites of Stanozolol, the commissioner's office said Friday. He was 0-2 with an 8.18 ERA in one start and five relief appearances this season.

Pistorese, a 17th-round draft pick this year who was 6-0 with a 1.28 ERA at Class A Everett, tested positive for an amphetamine.

Caro had a second positive test for a drug of abuse and will serve the penalty when he signs with another major league organization. He was 1 for 32 for the DSL Royals, who released him on July 9.

There have been 83 suspensions this year under the minor league program, including 32 for drugs of abuse.

HOUSTON — Collin McHugh went 7 2-3 innings and Henk Conger hit a grand slam as the Houston Astros beat the Minnesota Twins 8-0 on Friday night.

McHugh (15-7) gave up seven hits and struck out six in picking up his second straight win. McHugh has allowed two runs or fewer in each of his last six starts.

Colby Rasmus had two hits, including a monstrous two-run homer into the upper deck in right field in the second inning to give the Astros a 3-0 lead.

Conger upped the lead to 7-0 with the grand slam in the fourth into the Crawford Boxes in left field. After Evan Gattis, Jed Lowrie and Carlos Gomez led off the inning with singles, Mike Pelfrey (6-9) struck out the next two hitters to set up Conger's second grand slam of the season.

YANKEES 5
RAYS 2

NEW YORK — On and off the mound, Luis Severino seemed completely at ease.

The sizzling rookie won his third straight start, Alex Rodriguez hit his 681st career home run and the New York Yankees beat the Tampa Bay Rays 5-2 on Friday night for their sixth win in seven games.

"I have confidence," the 21-year-old Severino said. "My team made me feel comfortable."

Severino felt relaxed enough to do his postgame interviews in English for the first time. Born and raised in the Dominican Republic, he usually spoke in Spanish and had a teammate translate for him.

Severino (3-2), looking more and more like a key starter in the playoff rotation if the Yankees make it that far, has a 2.04 ERA after his first six big league starts.

"He has confidence in what he's doing," manager Joe Girardi said. "He knows what he needs to do."

Brian McCann and Greg Bird also homered for the Yankees, who hold the top AL wild-card spot and are a half-game behind East-leading Toronto. New York won with just four hits — an infield tapper and three long balls.

"We need to hit the ball out of the ballpark and we did," Girardi said.

ORIOLES 10
BLUE JAYS 2

TORONTO — Chris Davis hit two home runs to take the major league lead with 40, Matt Wieters and Adam Jones both connected and the Baltimore Orioles beat the Toronto Blue Jays 10-2 on Friday night.

Ubaldo Jimenez (10-9) pitched 5 2-3 innings for the victory as the Orioles won consecutive games for the first time since beating Oakland on Aug. 16-17.

Toronto's lead atop the AL East shrank to one-half game as the second-place New York Yankees beat Tampa Bay 5-2.

Davis opened the scoring by leading off the second inning with a second-deck drive to right, then broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run shot in the sixth. Both homers came off Blue Jays right-hander Drew Hutchison.

The home runs were the 39th and 40th of the season for Davis, moving him past Seattle's Nelson Cruz. Davis, who hit 53 homers in 2013, is the first player in Orioles history to hit 40 or more in multiple seasons.

WHITE SOX 12
ROYALS 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — John Danks threw a seven-hitter and Adam Eaton matched his career high with four hits, including a three-run homer, as the Chicago White Sox beat the Kansas City Royals 12-1 Friday night.

Alexei Ramirez also had four hits — tying his career high — drove in two runs and scored three times. Tyler Flowers also hit a three-run homer in the fourth inning.

Eaton went back-to-back with Jose Abreu, his 25th, in a five-run eighth off Jeremy Guthrie.

Danks (7-12), who snapped a personal four-game losing streak, owns a 10-2 record in 21 career starts against the Royals. Three of his seven victories this season are over the AL Central-leading Royals.

After scoring 27 runs and notching 34 hits in crushing Detroit the previous two games, the Royals managed just seven hits off Danks.

The White Sox scored three runs in the first off Kris Medlen (3-1).

CHICAGO — A steady breeze blowing in off Lake Michigan kept Wrigley Field comfortable Friday. It didn't contain or cool off the Chicago Cubs.

Anthony Rizzo hit a grand slam in Chicago's eight-run fifth inning, and rookie Addison Russell homered twice to power the Cubs and Jon Lester to a 14-5 rout of the Arizona Diamondbacks.

Javier Baez added a two-run shot — his first homer this season — and went 3 for 4 in his third game since his recall from the minors as the Cubs rolled to their third win in five games following a four-game losing streak.

WASHINGTON — Michael Taylor had a pinch-hit, three-run homer in the bottom of the 10th inning to lift the Washington Nationals to a 5-2 win over the Atlanta Braves on Friday night.

Bryce Harper, who hit his 32nd homer in the first inning, singled off Matt Marksberry (0-3) leading off the 10th. Reliever Brandon Cunniff came on and Ryan Zimmerman grounded a single up the middle, sending Harper to third.

Taylor, who missed the last two games with a sore right knee, batted for Jonathan Papelbon and hit a 1-0 pitch over the wall in left-center for his 14th home run.

Washington tied the score on Matt den Dekker's RBI single with two outs in the ninth. Yunei Escobar doubled to lead off the inning against Aradys Vizcaino, and pinch-runner Trea Turner scored on den Dekker's hit.

MARLINS 6
METS 5, 11 INNINGS

MIAMI — Martin Prado's fifth hit of the game was a two-out double in the 11th inning that scored Christian Yelich from first base and gave the Miami Marlins a 6-5 victory over the New York Mets on Friday night.

The Mets tied the seesaw game with a run in the ninth but they stranded 13 runners, including three in the eighth and three more in the ninth.

Mets starter Jacob deGrom allowed nine hits and three runs in six innings. His ERA has climbed to 2.40 from 1.98 on Aug. 24, but he was in line for his 13th win before an uncharacteristically shaky showing by the bullpen in the seventh.

Rookie Michael Conforto, batting cleanup for the first time because injuries left the Mets short-handed, went 0 for 6 with an RBI. David Wright went 0 for 5.

So long, lady in black: Jeff Gordon faces Darlington finale

By Pete Iacobelli
Associated Press

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Jeff Gordon hopes to make his last Southern 500 as a full-time driver as memorable as the rest of his career at Darlington Raceway.

Gordon is third all-time with seven Darlington victories, including a record six Southern 500s. He'd love nothing more than to lock up a spot in Sprint Cup's championship chase with another checkered flag at the track "Too Tough To Tame."

"That would be huge," said Gordon, who sits a precarious 13th in points for the 16-driver Chase playoff. "I feel like we were in pretty comfortable position a month ago and we've just had some misfortunes."

A win at Darlington on Sunday night would be a welcome balm for Gordon's winless team and ease his worries about limping through the final 10 races with little to race for in his farewell season.

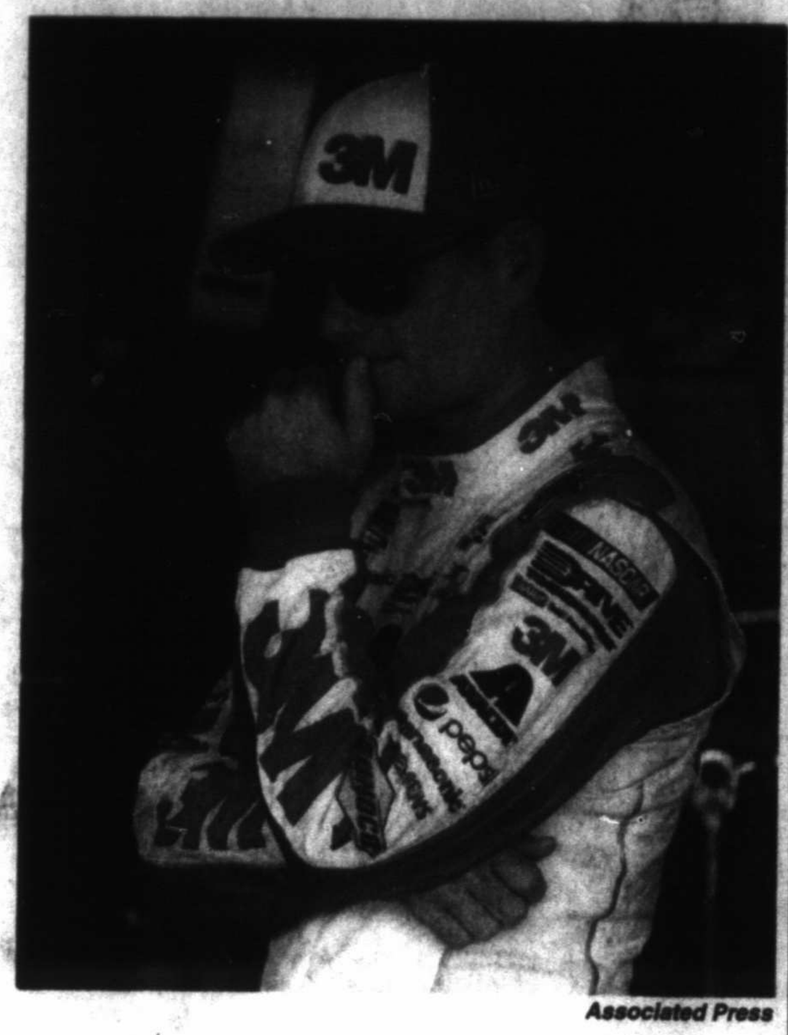

"We definitely feel pressure and it's a little bit stressful right now being on the bubble," Gordon said Friday. "I feel like we've performed well enough to be securely in by points, but I can't say we've performed well enough to be real confident coming in here that we're going to be one of the cars to beat."

That has not happened often this season for Gordon, the 44-year-old four-time Sprint Cup champion who announced earlier this year he would step away from his longtime, No. 24 Hendrick Motorsports ride. He has come close — a third place at Bristol in April and at Pocono last month are his best showings this year — yet has not shown the magic and skill of last year's run when he won four races and finished sixth in the Chase.

Some have wondered if the weekly celebration of Gordon's career at each NASCAR stop has led to distractions.

"Honestly, I've had so many distractions over the years, far more distractions than I've had this year, and performed well," Gordon said.

Particularly at Darlington.

Associated Press

Jeff Gordon stands in the garage before a NASCAR Sprint Cup practice session at Darlington Raceway in Darlington, S.C., Friday.

He first won his first Southern 500 in 1995 when he was still an unproven driver on the way to his first Sprint Cup title. Gordon thwarted the Winston Million bonus try of Dale Jarett by winning a second straight Southern 500 in 1996, then became part of history himself a year later when he collected the $1 million prize.

Gordon took an unprecedented fourth Southern 500 in a row in 1998, then tied Cale Yarborough's mark of five in 2002.

In 2007, Gordon moved in front with his sixth Southern 500 win, getting through the final laps with an engine ready to burst. Gordon recalled how his radiator blew up when he took the car to victory lane, one of his most memorable Darlington moments.

His sister, Kim, was on hand that day, Gordon recalled, and had not ever seen her brother win. When word reached the family of Gordon's engine problems, they left Darlington early to beat the traffic, then were stunned when he finished out front in one piece.

"You can imagine. My stepdad got in a lot of trouble that day as they were listening to it on the radio driving out of here," Gordon said with a laugh.

Defending Xfinity Series champion Chase Elliott will slip into the No. 24 driver seat next season after Gordon leaves. He has followed Gordon's legacy of success at Darlington and elsewhere and hopes he can one day live up to that.

"This is not the only place he's dominated at," Elliott said. "He's obviously made history at a lot of places and that separates him from a lot of the guys."

Closed cockpits in Formula One? Not so fast

JOHN LEICESTER
Associated Press

MONZA, Italy — The idea of enveloping Formula One drivers in closed cockpits to better protect them from flying debris and crashes is more complicated than it sounds.

The governing body of motorsport, the FIA, has tried, and for the moment, rejected closed cockpits for F1 after they tested one concept by firing heavy tires at the canopy of an F-16 fighter jet.

F1 is, however, working toward a compromise that will increase driver protection while keeping cockpits open, says race director Charlie Whiting.

Tradition and aesthetics are considerations, too. Since the shockingly unsafe early days of F1 when drivers raced without safety belts and in flimsy leather caps, cockpits have always been open, allowing spectators to see the men battling to control their speedy machines.

Bolting a transparent dome or clunky safety bars onto F1 cars will ruin their sleek lines.

The death last month in IndyCar of British driver Justin Wilson after a flying piece of crash debris struck his helmet is, understandably, prompting renewed calls for greater protection.

"You have got to get a canopy on the car of some sort because we can't have this happening as much as it has over the past few years," McLaren-Honda driver and former world champion Jenson Button, said in Monza ahead of the Italian Grand Prix this weekend. "There has been a lot of head injuries which have ended up in death, so it has to change."

But based on FIA testing so far, the solution isn't likely to be a closed canopy.

"We've looked at fully closed cockpits ... and we've rejected them for a number of reasons," F1 race director Whiting said in an interview Friday at Monza with The Associated Press.

Here's why:

■ Too heavy: Tires fired at the F-16 canopy did bounce harmlessly off. But the glass needs to be thick. That would make them heavy. Like peering through the bottom of a bottle, thick glass could also hinder drivers' vision.

To be suitable in F1, the canopy would "need to have very high optical quality," said Whiting, "and for that it would be massively heavy."

■ Death trap? Another concern is that drivers could become trapped under canopies meant to protect them.

"There are major problems extracting injured drivers from closed cars," said Whiting. "If the car was slightly damaged and was on fire, and you couldn't get it (the canopy) off, no one would be able to take the driver out."

■ Other concepts: The FIA experimented a couple of years ago with thick bars and struts attached to the top of a car, directly in front of the driver. The contraption could deflect large objects, like flying tires, protecting the occupant, but looked ugly.

"It was a pretty chunky and, dare I say it, horrible-looking thing," said Whiting.

More recent concepts are more elegant.

They include a hoop, shaped like a chicken wishbone, that would wrap around in front of the driver at head level and rest on a central strut.

Another idea is to have two thin blades that would poke up from the flat space in front of the driver's steering wheel, again to deflect away debris.

More tests are scheduled for this month.

■ Middle ground: In short, F1 seems headed for a compromise solution that will both respect its open-cockpit tradition and look but also offer drivers better protection without fully enveloping them.

Whiting says that if this month's tests are successful, the technology could be introduced for 2017.

"What we're trying to do is reduce the risk while accepting the fact that it's an open-cockpit formula," Whiting said. "It's inevitable that we will end up with something that will protect the driver more, but not as a closed cockpit, unless something miraculous happens and we can overcome those problems."

Texas Tech defensive lineman and Lee High graduate Talor Nunez makes a play during the spring scrimmage March 28 at Grande Communications Stadium.

Hard work pays off for Red Raiders' Nunez

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

Talor Nunez had no idea it was coming.

During a meeting in the middle of the Texas Tech football team's fall camp last month, head coach Kliff Kingsbury started showing highlights of Nunez during his freshman season with the Red Raiders.

Nunez, who was a quarterback at Lee, walked on and was projected as a safety. He grew into a linebacker and then into a defensive lineman, where he got playing time last year because of injuries.

Nunez apparently impressed the coaches, because after Kingsbury's presentation, the coach informed him that he would be placed on scholarship.

Nunez said the room erupted with cheers as every teammate and coach was happy for a player who had given it his all without the promise of a scholarship.

"When it happened, I had tears of joy," Nunez said. "Everyone was celebrating, yelling. It was awesome to know that my school was paid for and my parents didn't have to worry about paying for school anymore and that burden had been lifted. It also meant that I could continue to do what I love to do, and that's play football and also get my education paid for."

Kingsbury said on his weekly radio show on Thursday that he even had to step out of the room because he got choked up.

"Talor is a very smart young man. He's a mechanical engineering major and he carries a 3.8-3.9 GPA. The transition from quarterback to defensive line is unheard of, but Talor has done a great job," Kingsbury said. "He's a great kid on and off the field. He's the kind of kid you would want your daughter to marry."

Nunez, a 6-foot-4, 256-pound sophomore, was also impressive in camp as he is listed as the backup to senior defensive end Branden Jackson in the two-deep lineup released prior to today's 2:30 p.m. season opener against FCS Sam Houston State at Jones AT&T Stadium as the Red Raiders look to bounce back from a 4-8 year in 2014.

Defensive line coach Mike Smith said Nunez earned that spot because of his hard work and production.

"The thing about Talor, he's just a technician," said Smith in a recent interview with the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. "He does everything exactly right every single day. He goes out there and does exactly what I teach you to do. This whole camp, he led the group in sacks. Right now, he's playing the best out of all of them."

Nunez said it was almost like destiny that he became a defensive lineman.

Nunez grew up as a Red Raider fan and was on the sidelines in Lubbock when receiver Michael Crabtree caught the game-winning pass to beat top-ranked Texas in 2008. Like many Red Raider fans, Nunez was on the field celebrating and took a

DALLAS — Seth Russell threw for 376 yards with three of his five touchdowns to Jay Lee, and the new starting quarterback also ran for a score as fourth-ranked Baylor finally got back on the field with 56-21 victory at SMU on Friday night.

The Bears got to start fresh after the long, long offseason that followed their playoff snub despite a second consecutive Big 12 Conference title, and then blowing a 20-point lead in the fourth quarter in a Cotton Bowl loss to Michigan State.

Russell succeeded two-year starter Bryce Petty and the Bears kept rolling on offense, as has become usual under eighth-season coach Art Briles. Russell completed 15 of 30 passes and had a 4-yard TD run as Baylor had 723 total yards. They averaged 582 yards and 48 points a game last season.

SMU played its first game for new coach Chad Morris, Clemson's offensive coordinator the past four seasons.

The Mustangs, who scored only 12 total points their first four games last season including a 45-0 loss at Baylor, had 21 points in the first 1 1/2 quarters. They were still in the game until two impressive TD catches by Lee in the third quarter.

Associated Press

Baylor wide receiver Jay Lee (4) runs past SMU defensive lineman Andrew McCleneghen on his way to scoring a touchdown during the second half of an NCAA college football game Friday in Dallas.

Russell hit Corey Coleman for a 42-yard gain on the game's first play and Baylor got in the end zone on all four of its possessions in the first quarter. The Bears' first two drives each took less than a minute to cover 75 yards in four plays.

With dual-threat quarterback Matt Davis, the Mustangs immediately responded with touchdowns on their first two drives. Davis threw a 46-yard TD to Courtland Sutton on their first offensive play of the season, and they later connected on a 31-yard score.

Davis finished 16 of 23 passing for 166 yards with two touchdowns and two interceptions. He ran 24 times for 115 yards.

But with SMU at the 3 and within 28-21, Davis was sacked on the final play of the first half. The Mustangs were out of timeouts and couldn't get lined back up for another play.

Davis redshirted as a freshman in 2012 behind Johnny Manziel at Texas A&M, where he went after being recruited by then Clemson OC Morris. After one junior college season, Davis went to SMU and was the starter by the end of last season before Morris became his coach.

Notre Dame's Zaire seeks to stay calm in start against Texas

By Tom Coyne
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Notre Dame coach Brian Kelly is concerned about quarterback Malik Zaire being overwhelmed in big moments as the 11th-ranked Fighting Irish open the season against Texas.

"He can be emotional at times. We have to transfer that into just being enthusiastic," Kelly said. "I told him, 'You don't have to be the reason that we won. You just can't be the reason why we lost.'"

The 6-foot, 220-pound lefthander got the start for the Music City Bowl against LSU last year because Everett Golson kept making turnovers that contributed to Notre Dame stumbling to an 8-5 record after a 6-0 start. Zaire will see his first significant playing time at home tonight, but dismissed talk about feeling like a rookie.

"You can only really feel like a rookie, in my opinion, if you aren't prepared, you aren't confident in what you're doing," Zaire said. "That's kind of in my mind a rookie mentality where you're unsure of yourself. I've been able to be decisive in practice."

While Zaire knows the job is his alone, Texas quarterback Tyrone Swoopes doesn't have that security.

Swoopes, who started 12 games last season and struggled mightily, knows he

Texas A&M, No. 15 Arizona St. to meet for 1st time in opener

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M quarterback Kyle Allen was born and raised in Scottsdale, Arizona, just 15 minutes from Arizona State.

It's a fact has the sophomore more than a little excited for today's season-opener against the 15th-ranked Sun Devils in Houston.

"Special one for me," he said. "A lot of people say A&M has a lot of rivals in the SEC. I didn't grow up in the South, I grew up in Arizona. So this is a rivalry game for me."

It will be the first meeting between these schools and the only game between teams from the Pac-12 and Southeastern conferences this season. The Sun Devils are 0-6 against SEC teams.

Allen started the last five regular-season games as a freshman in 2014, but had to fight off talented freshman Kyler Murray in camp to keep the job this year. He was MVP of the Aggies' win over West Virginia in the Liberty Bowl, and finished the season with 1,322 yards passing with 16 touchdowns and seven interceptions.

Coach Kevin Sumlin said Allen has become more of a leader since the bowl game and has been impressed with the 19-year-old.

"He likes where he is right now from a growth standpoint," Sumlin said. "Has been growing mentally but also physically. Up to 215 pounds now. All part of the process. He's come along just fine."

Arizona State coach Todd Graham, who tried to recruit Allen, raved about his work so far.

"There are a lot of guys that have strong arms, and he can make all the throws, but he's really accurate down the field and makes quick decisions," Graham said. While Texas A&M will start a teenager at quarterback, the Sun Devils have a senior signal-caller in Mike Bercovici. Bercovici threw for 1,445 yards and 12 touchdowns last season, most of which came in four games he started in place of injured starter Taylor Kelly before getting the job full-time this season.

"He's like having a coach on the field," Graham said. "All the things that Taylor did, he's at that level and expanded on that level. I think Taylor's the best I've ever coached and I think that Mike's got a chance to be better."

Some things to know about the opener between Arizona State and Texas A&M:

GO D.J.: Arizona State receiver D.J. Foster is the only active player in the Football Bowl Subdivision to enter this season with more than 1,500 yards rushing and 1,500 yards receiving in his career. He ran for 1,081 yards and nine touchdowns to lead the Sun Devils last season and was second on the team with 62 catches for 688 yards and three more scores. He had at least one reception in each game last season to extend his streak to 40 straight games, which leads the nation.

OLD FOES: While their teams are meeting for the first time today, it isn't the first time Sumlin and Graham have faced one another. The pair met three times in Conference USA games from 2008-10 when Sumlin was at Houston and Graham coached Tulsa. Sumlin won two of those three meetings.

MY OH MYLES: Texas A&M's defense is led by Myles Garrett, a 6-foot-5, 262-poun.l sophomore, who had 14 tackles for losses last season and broke Jadeveon Clowney's freshman SEC sack record with 11 1/2.

"You won't play any better," Graham said. "He's arguably the best pass rusher in their conference, and would have to be the best in the country that I've seen on film."

TEXAS

will be sharing time with redshirt freshman Jerrod Heard as he works to try to keep the job. Second-year Texas coach Charlie Strong isn't saying how the time will be divided. Swoopes said he and the rest of the Longhorns know they have to prove themselves.

"I think everybody kind of has a chip on their shoulder and is just kind of ready to go out there and show people what we've got," he said.

The two programs are playing each other for the first time since 1996. Expectations are high for the Irish with 15 returning starters. The Longhorns are coming off a 6-7 finish, including big losses in the final two games against TCU and Arkansas, and are depending on freshmen at key positions.

Other things to know about the Texas-Notre Dame game:

VETERANS VS. INEXPERIENCE: Texas will start six freshmen, including two offensive linemen, and 24 figure in their two- and-three-deep lineup, with many listed as the top backups at key positions. The Irish have no freshmen starters and only two sophomore starters, although some freshmen are expected to contribute, most notably defensive lineman Jerry Tillery, tight end Alize Jones and place-kicker Justin Yoon.

TEXAS COULDN'T HOLD 'EM: The Irish have a handful of players from Texas who could have an impact against the Longhorns, including wide receivers Corey Robinson of San Antonio and Torii Hunter Jr. of Prosper — the sons of former San Antonio Spurs great David Robinson and Minnesota Twins outfielder Torii Hunter. Robinson was second on the team in receiving last season with 40 catches while Irish coaches have been raving about Hunter, who was slowed by injuries his first two seasons.

KICKING CONTEST: Texas senior kicker Nick Rose posted a video of himself this summer kicking a 70-yard field goal. His career long is 51. Yoon has been drawing praise from Kelly, who says the freshman has been making nearly 80 percent of his attempts from 40 to 49 yards.

NO WALK-THROUGH: Texas coach Charlie Strong, an assistant at Notre Dame 1995-98, isn't bringing the Longhorns for the traditional walkthrough at Notre Dame Stadium on Friday because he knows how crowded campus gets. "I don't want our guys chattering with their fans and hearing all that," he said.

COTTON BOWL MEMORIES: Notre Dame played Texas three times in the 1970s with national championships at stake. The Longhorns won the 1970 game to claim the 1969 national title, were upset by the Irish the next season and Notre Dame upset the Longhorns again to win the 1977 national title.

"I think it's so funny that it happened when I was in the eighth grade and seven years later at 20 years old, I'm a defensive lineman," Nunez said.

The former Rebel was just happy to play on special teams and just to do a small part to help the team. But then he got time on the defensive line in games against Iowa State, TCU and against Baylor at the end of the season. He definitely held his own against some of the best competition in the Big 12 Conference.

"I was just lucky enough by God's grace to get the time that I did get that much playing time," said Nunez, who always leans on his faith. "Any success I had I attribute to the defensive line working together. Plus, the backup needs to be as good as the starter when he gets in."

While he has the ability to move to the inside of the line, Nunez now gets to backup a Big 12 veteran in Jackson, who's been a big help in his progress.

"I've learned a lot of stuff from him and how he holds his blocks," said Nunez of Jackson. "He's famous for using his long arms to get around blockers and he's teaching me how to use my arms to do the same thing."

While Nunez, who was hardly recruited out of high school, has achieved his dreams of playing big time college football and getting a scholarship, he insists he's still the same Talor that people have known over the years.

"I'm here to serve the team and do whatever I can to help my team win," he said. "I'm not motivated by money, although it's nice to get my school paid for. I'm here because God wants me and not for my own glory. I love my teammates and I can't wait to be on the field with them."

phia law firm to do an independent investigation into the university's handling of sexual assault complaints, including one that led to a conviction last month against former transfer Sam Ukwuachu. The defensive end never played a down for the Bears.

Coleman had five catches for 178 yards and KD Cannon caught three passes for 104 yards, each scoring a touchdown. Both were 1,000-yard receivers last season.

Baylor went ahead to stay when Russell hit Lee for a 7-yard TD to make it 21-14 with just under 4 minutes left in the first quarter. All three of Lee's catches went for scores.

In the third quarter, Lee had a 22-yard TD after he caught the ball near the 15, spun around a defender and stayed inbounds along the right sideline. On the next Baylor drive, Lee had a 41-yarder after making a back-shoulder catch at the 20 and shedding a defender before making it 42-21.

Baylor was without two All-Big 12 starters on defense. Big end Shawn Oakman and safety Orion Stewart were suspended for the opener for violation of unspecified team rules.

TEXAS FOOTBALL PREVIEWS

Texas State (7-5 2014) at No. 10 Florida State (13-1), 8 p.m. (ESPNews)
Line: Florida State by 29
Series Record: First meeting

WHAT'S AT STAKE
After being the defending national champion and top-ranked team entering last season, Florida State comes into this year with plenty of questions. Only four starters return on offense while the defense had five games last year where it allowed 30 points or more. The Seminoles though have an easier opening game compared to the past couple seasons. In 2013, they opened at Pittsburgh and last year faced Oklahoma State in a neutral-site game. Texas State, which is coached by Dennis Franchione, is looking to have consecutive winning seasons for the first time since 1984.

KEY MATCHUP
Florida State junior WR Bobo Wilson against Texas State senior CB David Mims. Wilson is the Seminoles' top returning receiver from last season (42 catches, 527 yards, 4 touchdowns) and anchors a group that is young and inexperienced. Mims is one of the top corners in the Sun Belt Conference and have five interceptions last year.

PLAYERS TO WATCH
Texas State: QB Tyler Jones completed 65.3 percent of his passes last season, which was a school record, and has the third-longest touchdown pass streak in the country entering the season at 16 games.
Florida State: QB Everett Golson won the starting job after arriving on campus as a graduate transfer from Notre Dame. In two seasons with the Fighting Irish, Golson went 17-6 and had five 300-yard passing games last season.

FACTS & FIGURES
Texas State is facing a ranked team for the fourth time in school history and is looking for its first win. ... Franchione is facing the Seminoles for the first time and has a 2-4 career record against ACC teams. ... The Bobcats are just one of eight FBS schools to return a 2,600-yard passer (Jones) and 1,000-yard rusher (Robert Lowe). ... Florida State is opening at home for the first time since 2012. ... The Seminoles are 12-0 at home against unranked non-conference teams under Jimbo Fisher, who is entering his sixth season. The Seminoles have won those games by an average margin of 42.3 points. ... Fisher said sophomore RB Dalvin Cook would not be under any playtime restrictions despite missing most of preseason drills. Cook was found not guilty of misdemeanor battery on Aug. 24 and returned to practice the following day.

UTEP (7-6 in 2014) at No. 18 Arkansas (7-6 in 2014)
3:30 p.m. (ESPNU)
Line: Arkansas by 35.
Series Record: Arkansas leads 2-0.

WHAT'S AT STAKE
Entering its third season under coach Bret Bielema, Arkansas has hopes of finally snapping its two-year stay at the bottom of the Southeastern Conference West division. The Razorbacks can't affect that in their nonconference opener, but they can build on the confidence from last season —when they won three of their final four games — against the Miners.

KEY MATCHUP
Arkansas' power running game against UTEP's defensive front. The Razorbacks return four of five starters on an offensive line that averages 328 pounds, including highly regarded left tackle Denver Kirkland (6-foot-5, 340) and left guard Sebastian Tretola (6-5, 334).

PLAYERS TO WATCH
UTEP: RB Aaron Jones. The talented junior has led the Miners in rushing in each of his first two seasons, including 1,321 last season. He's rushed for 100 yards or more nine times in his career, and he scored 14 touchdowns a year ago.
Arkansas: QB Brandon Allen. The much-maligned fifth-year starter is coming off a season in which he threw for 20 touchdowns and only five interceptions, but doubts still remain about his performance in close late-game situations. This doesn't figure to test that scenario for Allen, but all eyes will be on his performance under first-year offensive coordinator Dan Enos.

FACTS & FIGURES
Arkansas is without last year's leading rusher, Jonathan Williams, for likely the season following a left foot injury during the preseason ... Also, Bielema said freshman WR Jojo Robinson will be suspended for the first half for a rules violation from during the summer ... UTEP enters this season in search of back-to-back winning years for the first time since 2004-05 ... Arkansas RB Alex Collins is the second player in school history to rush for at least 1,000 yards in each of his first two seasons, following Darren McFadden in 2006-07.

Boykin, No. 2 TCU outlast Minnesota

By Jon Krawczynski
Associated Press

Horned Frogs	23
Golden Gophers	17

MINNEAPOLIS — Longtime friends TCU coach Gary Patterson and Minnesota coach Jerry Kill met at midfield after another tough game and shook hands.

"He said, 'We're never going to play each other again,'" Kill said. "I said, 'That's right.'"

The second-ranked Horned Frogs enter this season with national championship aspirations, and the Golden Gophers showed them just how difficult that pursuit is going to be.

Trevone Boykin threw for 246 yards and a touchdown and ran for 92 yards and another score to help the Horned Frogs outlast Minnesota 23-17 on Thursday night.

Boykin started his Heisman push by completing 26 of 42 passes. But he also threw an interception and the Horned Frogs had a difficult time getting their frenetic offense rolling against Minnesota's determined defense. The 23 points were their fewest scored since Nov. 9, 2013, in a 21-17 victory over Iowa State.

"If you had your perfect ballgame so everybody learns a lesson, this would be it," Patterson said. "Because we found out it's not going to be easy."

Jaden Oberkrom made three field goals, including a 53-yarder, and Josh Doctson had eight catches for 74 yards and a touchdown for TCU.

Mitch Leidner was 19 for 35 for 197 yards for Minnesota. His touchdown pass to K.J. Maye with 1:32 left pulled the Golden Gophers within a touchdown, but TCU recovered the ensuing onside kick to hang on.

Maye had four catches for 73 yards and Rodney Smith rushed for 88 yards and a touchdown for the Golden Gophers. They haven't beaten a Top 10 team at home since 1977.

Kill was a member of Patterson's wedding party, and the two coaches have said they weren't entirely pleased about the matchup, with both preferring the Kansas State-style nonconference schedule filled with cream puffs and pushovers.

The Gophers visited Fort Worth last year, losing 30-7 to a team that wound up averaging 46.5 points per game and sharing the Big 12 title.

The Horned Frogs still missed the four-team playoff field. They've heard nothing but questions about the crushing disappointment for the last nine months, providing plenty of motivation to erase that memory with a national championship run this season.

Boykin wasn't particularly sharp in the opener. He missed two wide open receivers down the field for easy touchdowns, including Shaun Nixon all alone in the end zone in the fourth quarter. He also threw an interception right to cornerback Eric Murray in the second quarter and was nearly picked by a leaping De'Vondre Campbell.

"Just too anxious or whatever you want to call it," Boykin said. "But that's just something that can't happen."

He showed just enough flashes of electricity to walk out a winner, especially when he dusted Murray with a nifty juke to turn a keeper into a 19-yard touchdown run in the third quarter that gave TCU a 17-3 lead.

Boykin looked sharp in comparison to Leidner, the junior who lost his two biggest weapons from last year — tight end Maxx Williams and running back David Cobb — to the NFL draft. The Gophers opened the game with five punts and a fumble by Leidner on a sack from Terrell Lathan that set up Boykin's 11-yard TD pass to Doctson.

Rodrick Williams also fumbled the ball out of the back of the end zone about 1 yard away from a touchdown, and the two turnovers proved costly in a one-score game.

"We clean up a few things here and there and we know we're going to be great," Leidner said.

The Horned Frogs' biggest question entering the season was on defense after losing six of their top seven tacklers from last year's unit. They also were missing sack leader James McFarland and senior defensive tackle Davion Pierson, who did not play for unspecified reasons. The inexperienced defense responded by forcing five punts in the first six possessions.

The other one ended when Terrell Lathan sacked Leidner and forced a fumble to set up Boykin's 11-yard TD pass to Doctson that gave TCU a 10-0 lead early.

Science brief

Study: Better health a key benefit of renewables

Researchers from Harvard University have found that energy efficiency measures and low-carbon energy sources can save a region between $5.7 million and $210 million annually, based on the accepted dollar value of human life.

Those benefits depend on the type of low-carbon energy involved and the population density of the area surrounding a coal-fired power plant whose emissions are reduced by a clean energy project, according to the study, published Monday in the journal Nature Climate Change.

Family sidesteps questions about girl's feet

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: My beautiful 6-year-old granddaughter has clubfeet. Although she had several surgeries, her ongoing treatment requires her to wear her shoes on the opposite feet.

Every time we go out somewhere, well-intentioned people seem compelled to let us know she has her shoes on wrong. My granddaughter told me it bothers her and she gets embarrassed when we must explain the reason, and truthfully, I don't blame her. I worry about her self-esteem.

Have you any suggestions as to what we could say to these people without giving out personal information? — NANNY IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR NANNY: If it were me, I would also assume that the person meant well and reply, "We're already aware of that, thank you." Period.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in fifth grade and I'm wondering: Which do you prefer — dogs or cats?

My friends and I often debate about this topic. — ANIMAL LOVER IN OAKLAND, CALIF.

DEAR ANIMAL LOVER: I'm an animal lover, too, and I have met both dogs and cats that had wonderful personalities. However, when it comes to choosing between cats and dogs, I'm more of a dog person. My favorite breed is the German shepherd.

DEAR ABBY: My sister moved in with me after my husband died. I thought it would be good for both of us, and we could go places together and share household chores. At the time, we were both working.

When I discovered she would sleep all day on our days off and didn't help with the housework at all, I was very disappointed. She would clean her room only when I got upset with her.

Now she does almost nothing. She won't clean her room and she sleeps for months without changing her sheets. I am sickened by the smell of her and her room. She hasn't showered or brushed her teeth in almost two weeks, and it doesn't look like she's in any hurry to do so.

We are both retired now and could enjoy going places together, but she would rather stay up all night and sleep all day. I am at my wits' end. I have begged, threatened and shamed, but nothing works. I am a very clean person and like to have a clean house. Help! — WANTS MY CLEAN HOUSE BACK

DEAR WANTS: Changes in behavior like those you describe should not be ignored. Was your sister always like this? If not, she needs to be examined by a doctor to determine if she's depressed or having some other kind of mental problem. She should also be seen by a dentist if her oral hygiene is as poor as you say it is, while she still has teeth.

The living arrangement the two of you have doesn't appear to be healthy for either of you. Before this goes any further, consult an attorney for guidance. You may need help in getting her out after all this time — or help finding other safe living arrangements for your sister if she's unable or unwilling to do it for herself.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Sept. 5, 2015:

This year you often have a lot to smile about. You are about to start a new life and luck cycle. The first year, which you will enter soon, is probably one where your good fortune is at its highest point. Use the positive vibes and planetary interactions to enhance your life. If you are single, you could meet someone who will knock your socks off. You will notice the uniqueness of this person as well as the unusual strength of your feelings. If you are attached, your upbeat attitude draws your significant other closer to you. What the two of you initiate this year could last a long time. GEMINI gets under your skin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You unintentionally could stumble into an either/or situation. You might find yourself caught in a control game. Walk away while you can. Passions run high when interacting with a loved one, as this interaction is much more fulfilling. Tonight: Full of surprises.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ You could find the costs of this weekend to be too much for your taste. You will attempt to gain more control by eliminating an item or an event from your to-do list. Spend time closer to home and invite a friend or two over. Tonight: Allow a spontaneous happening to begin.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Your awareness of what needs to happen could change as a result of someone's caring actions. Your need to follow plans as they were made easily could be tossed to the wind. You'll want to be with a loved one who wants to do something else. Tonight: Share some news.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ You might want to be more aware of what someone else wants. You don't seem to have as much energy as you would like. This person is of the same mind as you, so make today a lazy day at home. Make the most of the lack of demands. Tonight: Not to be found.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Passions runs high no matter which way you turn. Your magnetism draws others toward you. Your smile will make someone feel special, but recognize how easily others misread you. Your warmth might be interpreted as more. Tonight: Right in the middle of a happening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ Tension builds because of what you believe someone else expects from you. Perhaps a discussion is in order. You can't ignore a strong feeling you have about a person whom you frequently encounter. Ask for more of what you want. Tonight: Remain sensitive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Look beyond someone's behavior and consider what is happening within him or her. This person will be able to hide his or her feelings, but only for so long. Avoid bringing this matter up, as it could backfire. Instead, try to address your own feelings. Tonight: Where there is music.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Recognize that spending some quality one-on-one time with a special someone is important. Disruption and/or some insecurity could throw your plans into chaos. You can't keep covering up your feelings by staying nonreactive to others' behavior. Tonight: Clear the air.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Your friends will remind you of playful children as they get into this holiday weekend. The activities they choose might be more adult, but the glee of being together can't be hidden. Invitations keep coming forth. Which one you accept is up to you. Tonight: Join the fun.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ You might be instrumental to someone's festivities. You won't mind pitching in behind the scenes or barbecuing the chicken. While in the midst of a happening and speaking to others, you will see a loved one in a new light. Clearly, this person misses you. Tonight: Togetherness works.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Whether you can be grounded enough for a conversation seems questionable, especially with someone who is serious-minded. Your playfulness and flirtatiousness is likely to delight a special loved one. Make no commitments; keep it light. Tonight: Full of mischief.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You could be in a position where you will have a lot to handle. Responsibilities weigh heavily on your shoulders, but try to prevent every moment from being charged with tasks. Lighten up, and you will gain more perspective on what must be done. Tonight: At home.
