Move under way to repeal law allowing women to have newborns with them in prison

LOWELL, Fla. (AP) — Mothers tenderly cuddle and coo to their small offspring in the modest eight-bedroom cottage. For many of the babies — the oldest is 13 months — it's the only home they've ever known.

A bill before Gov. Bob Graham would end such scenes. The mothers are Florida Correctional Institution inmates and the children are spending their first years in prison.

Proponents of Florida's 1979 law allowing women to have their newborns with them in prison say it's essential to keep very young children with their mothers. But advocates of the law's repeal worry about how prison might affect the children.

"I just think there's a proper place for motherhood," said Eugene Poole, the assistant prison superintendent who oversees the minimum security cottage. "People are in prison because of a commission of a crime. But why penalize and institutionalize a child?"

"If he was with my parents, I wouldn't be able to see him," counters Ginger Moore, a 22-year-old inmate who lives in the cottage with her 8-week-son Zachary. "I want him to know me. If he stayed up there (with her parents) until I got out he wouldn't know me. We wouldn't have the mother-child bond. We'd never be close, I'm sure."

The specially furnished cottage, which is on prison grounds but outside the general prison area, now houses seven women and eight children — one mother was joined recently by her newborn twins.

Each mother has a large, bright room that she shares with her baby — or babies — and there are no bars on the windows. Mothers are allowed outside to give their children fresh air.

"I believe children are getting what they need. They need food, shelter and love, and they're getting an over-abundance of love," said Mrs. Moore, who is serving three years for robbery. Her husband also is in prison.

"They're getting better care than a lot of babies out there," she said, pointing to the street. "This environment may not be the best, but it could be worse out there."

Poole says he also worries about crowding at the cottage, as two more pregnant inmates have won custody of their children. But, he said, "If the law says we'll have them here, we'll have them here, even if we have to do it limping because there has been no special funding."

Scharbaurer Draw was turned into a cesspool-like pond at Fairgrounds Road this week when sewage was "bumped" out of the main lines while a broken pipe was replaced. The lines in northeast Midland weren't designed to handle the growth in the northwest part of the city, according to city officials.

Midland gets an outdoor toilet

The latest stench to foul the neighborhood air with some of "Midland's finest" toilet products oozed forth this week after a 24-inch clay pipe carrying sewage out of the city "failed" at Scharbauer Draw and Fairgrounds Road.

The defect was corrected after a portion of the normally-dry draw was turned into a mini-sewage pond.

The pipe, a five-foot joint designed to last for 150 years, gave out after about one-fifth of that time. It was installed in the 1950s, apparently developed a fracture after a bridge was put in at Fairgrounds Road and began leaking, said Fred Baker, director of Midland's public works department. The leak was reported Monday.

"When we were digging down to the leak to repair it, the whole thing collapsed," said Baker.

The line was blocked until the joint was replaced. Meanwhile, the sewage backed up and flowed into streets and down Scharbaruer Draw, where it remains. The immediate problem was solved by Friday morning.

The joint is part of a network of feeder lines which merge into three main lines in southeast Midland. On a daily basis these channel raw sewage from about 30,000 Midland households and businesses to the sewage treatment plant.

In recent months, the treatment plant, which is designed to process about 6 million gallons of raw sewage per day, has been taxed and, according to some city critics, overly taxed. The waste water undergoes a primary treatment, and, tabbed with the term effluent, is funneled to holding ponds for agricultural use and for evaporation.

The effluent on occasion has been overflowing and running down Midland Draw, which is the rural extension of Scharbaurer Draw. Rural residents along the draw have been miffed over the flow for months.

Nuclear plant cooling system springs a leak

ATHENS, Ala. (AP) — About 10,000 gallons of radioactive water leaked from a reactor cooling system at the nation's largest nuclear power plant Friday, forcing the shutdown of a reactor but releasing no radiation into the surrounding area, officials said.

The water was recirculated and purified and no one inside the plant was contaminated, according to Jim Hufham, director of emergency control for the Tennessee Valley Authority, which operates the Browns Ferry power station near this north Alabama town of 14,000 people.

He said the accident posed no danger to plant personnel or the public.

Joe Gilliland, a spokesman for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in Atlanta, said there was "no major safety problem" at the plant.

"We don't think it's very serious in terms of our emergency guidelines," Gilliland said.

"Our designations for anything potentially serious range from an 'unusual event' to a 'general emergency.' It looks like this was an 'unusual event,'" he said. "It's something that requires immediate attention, but it does not necessarily mean there's any imminent danger."

The water leaked inside a drywell, the primary containment structure which surrounds the reactor, according to TVA spokesman Gil Francis in Knoxville, Tenn.

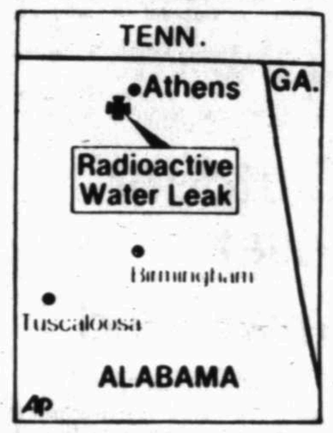

Francis said the cause of the leak could not be determined until after an examination the drywell, which TVA officials planned to begin as soon as the reactor was completely cooled down.

TVA declared a "site alert" at 12:45 a.m. CDT when drains in the drywell indicated cooling water was leaking at the rate of 21 gallons a minute, Hufham said. A "site alert" means an actual or potential emergency is under way and requires plant officials to have emergency personnel standing by.

Hufham said plant operators reduced power and shut down the unit before any of the reactor's safety systems operated automatically.

By 3 a.m., the leak had fallen to 15 gallons a minute, and by 10:30 a.m. it was halted, officials said.

Hufham said NRC regulations require the reactor to be shut down for any leak larger than 5 gallons a minute, even though the plant's safety systems are capable of adding cooling water to the reactor as rapidly as 5,000 gallons a minute.

When such leaks occur, a pump located at the bottom of the drywell removes the water and transfers it to a purification system, where it is purified and returned to the coolant system, according to Francis.

The drywell, shaped like an inverted lightbulb, is designed to hold leaks from the cooling system that circulates water around the nuclear fuel rods in the reactor, he said.

In the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident, at Pennsylvania's Three Mile Island in March 1979, several hundred thousand gallons of radioactive water leaked from the cooling system onto the containment building floor and could not be automatically recirculated. About 43,000 gallons leaked into the containment building at the Crsytal River nuclear plant in Florida in February, 1980.

Only one of Browns Ferry's three reactors remained in operation Friday. The first unit had been shut down for refueling and structural modifications.

The plant's three units can generate 3.3 million kilowatts of electricity, more than the combined capacity of TVA's dams along the Tennessee River system in seven states.

More and more Americans getting green thumbs

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

America's thumb is turning green.

Almost half of all families are expected to try their hand at growing vegetables this summer, producing a backyard harvest of billions of dollars.

"It looks like we're going to have a banner year," said Robert E. Kozlowski, of the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell University.

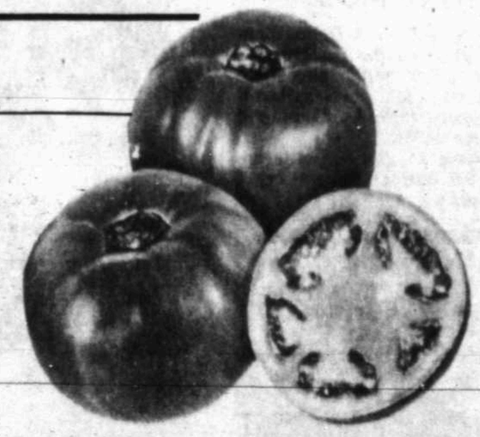

Supermarket News, a trade publication, says retailers in several areas of the country report sales of seeds are strong. James Shockley, produce merchandising manager for the Los Angeles division of Safeway Stores, was quoted as saying that seed sales were running ahead of last year. And last year, he said, was an "exceptionally good" year to begin with.

The backyard garden — a staple during World War II — became popular again in the early 1970s when food prices started to rise sharply. By 1975, Kozlowski said, a record 49 percent of all households were growing at least some of their own vegetables.

The number of vegetable growers slipped

Government estimates indicate that the value of the fruits and vegetables grown in household gardens each year is over $10 billion.

The amount of money you save by growing your own produce varies widely; according to some estimates, you can harvest $5 worth of vegetables for every hour you devote to the slightly for a few years, but is beginning to rise again. Kozlowski said a survey by a Vermont organization called "Gardens for All" shows that 43 percent of the families in the United States had home vegetable gardens last year and he predicted an even bigger harvest for 1981.

Reagan, Schmidt agree on policy with Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt agreed Friday to confront challenges posed by the Soviet Union by coupling a policy of firmness with a willingness to maintain a dialogue with Moscow.

The policy was outlined in a joint statement issued at the conclusion of Schmidt's two-day official visit here.

The statement also committed both sides to giving "equal weight" to a 1979 NATO decision which provided for deployment of U.S. nuclear weapons in Europe and a simultaneous effort to negotiate limits on such armaments with Moscow.

The declaration, along with subsequent remarks by Schmidt at a National Press Club luncheon, reflected efforts by the two countries to reconcile their differing approaches to the Soviet Union.

They reflected a compromise between the American emphasis on increasing defense spending to detdr the Soviets and the West German stress on maintaining a dialogue with the Kremlin.

The two-page, single-space statement expressed concern over "Soviet expansionism and armament efforts" and said the two leaders agreed to "respond with firmness and maintain a dialogue."

It also said Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. has started discussions with Soviet officials to prepare for planned negotiations with Moscow on limiting nuclear weaponry in Europe.

Haig met last Friday night with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin and a State Department spokeswoman confirmed that future talks on nuclear weapons in Europe was among the topics discussed.

Haig promised the NATO allies earlier this month that the United States will initiate arms control talks with the Russians before the end of the year.

The strongest language in the communique was directed at the situation in Poland. Reagan and Schmidt declared that a Soviet invasion of Poland would have the "gravest consequences" and "would fundamentally change the entire international situation."

Speaking at the press luncheon after his meeting at the White House, Schmidt said he will visit France's new president, Francois Mitterrand on Sunday. He said he will deliver a message from Reagan to Mitterrand but he gave no details on its contents.

In his prepared remarks, Schmidt said the maintainence of a power balance in Europe will remain an important factor in preserving the peace.

"But lasting peace cannot be built on a military balance only," he said.

Inflation held to 5.1%

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declining gasoline and grocery prices held inflation to a 5.1 percent annual rate in April, the lowest pace since last summer and the second straight month it has been well below 10 percent, the government said Friday.

For the first four months of 1981, inflation has risen at an annual rate of 8.4 percent, compared to 12.4 percent for all of last year.

"I think the April figures are good news but you can't jump to the conclusion that we're on a new long-term trend," said Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. "Clearly, it's nice to see a 5 percent rate of inflation."

But he cautioned that higher jumps in consumer prices were likely later in the year when recent increases in interest rates show up in housing.

The administration predicts inflation will be 11.1 percent for all of this year, although many private economists think the overall level may be lower.

Patrick Jackman, chief of the Consumer Price Index branch of the Labor Department, said the April inflation rate may be the lowest of the year. He said he expected May figures to be "in the same ballpark" but predicted the rate would start going up after that, boosted in part by rises in meat prices.

Overall, consumer prices in April rose at a seasonally adjusted rate of 0.4 percent, the lowest one-month gain since last July, the Labor Department said in its Consumer Price Index report. Consumer prices climbed 0.6 percent in March for an annual rate of 7.5 percent. In February, they had risen at a 12.1 percent annual rate and at a 9.1 percent annual rate in January.

The Labor Department also reported Friday that spendable earnings for a married worker with three dependents declined 0.1 percent last month.

Real spendable earnings — after taxes and after adjusting for inflation — were off 2.5 percent from April 1980.

The CPI figures showed grocery prices declined 0.2 percent last month, following a 0.4 percent increase in March. Meat, poultry, fish and egg prices were off 1 percent last month. Prices for sugar and sweets also were down. Fruit and vegetable prices moderated, following sharp rises earlier.

The grocery prices were balanced by higher prices for restaurant meals and alcoholic beverages so the overall food and beverage category remained unchanged from March.

Transportation costs, helped by the 1.4 percent decline in gasoline prices, were down slightly in April, following sharp rises in the previous eight months, the department said.

The drop in gasoline prices — brought down by the worldwide oil supply and consumer conservation efforts — was offset somewhat by a rise in the prices of new cars as major automakers stopped their rebate programs and boosted prices.

Housing prices were at the same pace as in January, up from February and March levels, the department said.

All of the figures were adjusted for seasonal variations.

The inflation report added to the mixed news coming out this week on the health of the nation's economy.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday the nation's gross national product climbed at an annual rate of 8.4 percent in the first three months of the year, the biggest gain in nearly three years and almost 2 percentage points more than was first reported.

But other government figures, released Monday, indicated the nation's economic growth has slowed considerably since the robust first quarter figures. Analysts predict the gross national product for the second quarter of the year will be considerably below that of the first three months.

A breakdown of other CPI figures shows:

—Housing prices were up 0.7 percent in April, following a 0.5 percent rise in March. Morrtgage interest rates were up 1.6 percent, but house prices declined for the fourth month in a row.

One of the three nuclear reactors at the Browns Ferry Nuclear Power Plant in Athens, Ala., was shut down early Friday when 3,000 gallons of radioactive water leaked from the vessel into a dry well surrounding the reactor, TVA said. TVA also said there was no danger of radioactive water escaping from the plant.

Police, fire roundup

Midlander caught

Robert Michael Lewis, 38, of Midland was arrested after a long foot pursuit Friday afternoon on a warrant in connection with the robbery of a San Angelo man early Wednesday at Sheraton Inn, 401 W. Missouri Ave.

Lewis was being held in jail in lieu of $25,000 bond.

An attendant for a service station at Wall Street and Andrews Highway, Lewis was apprehended by Midland Police Officer D. McNair in the basement of Midland Memorial Hospital.

Charles Bryce of San Angelo told officers a man knocked on the door to his room at Sheraton Inn about 3 a.m. Wednesday, indicating he was a Sheraton employe. After gaining entry to the room, the man told Bryce he had a weapon and took a $1,000 gold watch, $15 in cash and several credit cards. The suspect was described as black, with a medium build and wearing a white smock.

Fire extinguished

Midland firefighters quickly extinguished a potentially explosive fire at 4:27 p.m. Friday at a local service station.

Five trucks responded to a report of a gas pump ablaze at Fas-Gas, 200 Andrews Highway, operated by Ray Ritter.

One truck doused the fire with 100 gallons of water to avert an explosion. The pump sustained heavy damage and the building lesser damage, according to a fire department report.

Odessa man shot

RANKIN — An Odessa man was listed in stable condition late Friday in Odessa Medical Center Hospital after suffering a gunshot wound in his right leg at 11:49 a.m. Friday along Highway 329 west of Crane.

Ronald McComas, a field representative for an oilfield products firm in Odessa, told authorities he stepped out of his vehicle alongside the highway just inside the Upton County line and was struck by a bullet. According to a spokesperson for Upton County Sheriff's Department, which is investigating the incident, McComas indicated he heard the shot but did not see anyone.

An Upton County Sheriff's Deputy was en route to Odessa late Friday in continuation of the investigation.

Man injured

BIG SPRING — Manuel Cervantes Jr., 29, of Big Spring sustained a fractured jaw and contusions in a one-vehicle rollover five miles east of Coahoma at 7:13 p.m. Friday.

He was transferred late Friday to Midland Memorial Hospital after initially being taken to the emergency room at Malone-Hogan Hospital, where he had been listed in stable condition.

According to a Big Spring Police Department spokesman, Cervantes, the lone occupant of the truck, failed to negotiate a curve on East Howard Field Road.

Outdoor toilet unwanted

But the upstream, in-town overflow problem along Scharbauer Draw's east end has been going on for about two years and may be traced to the expanding north and northwest sections of town. The town's sewer system was not geared for a burgeoning city, according to Baker.

The collapse of the clay pipe this week seemed to accent the overflow problem in the older northeast section of town.

Neither the site nor the smell helps the property value there. And it doesn't give Tommy Ramirez, 19, or Antonio Ruiz, 26, a rosy image of their neighborhood.

"Sometimes, when it rains the water and all this sewer (sewage) comes out," said Ramirez. "Just about every day, water, sewer water comes out."

The waste water, packed into the outward-bound sewer lines, often bubbles out of the main lines via the street-level manhole covers or cemented-over holes to the underground lines, wetting the streets and filling the air with the foul odor.

"People have been complaining about the sewer," Ramirez said.

Somewhat displeased with the site and smell of the overflow is his neighbor, Ruiz. The lines seem particularly taxed on weekends.

"Friday, Saturday and Sunday" bring out the worst smells, said Ruiz, a carpenter who lives on North Benton Street, which crosses the draw. That's when "everybody's at the house," he said.

Antonio Ruiz takes a closer look at Midland waste water, which has been seeping through what appears to be a manhole covered by cement at Benton Street and Scharbauer Draw. The oozing sewage is particularly noticeable on weekends, Ruiz says.

Midland man suffers gunshot wound

A 28-year-old Midland man was listed in critical condition in Midland Memorial Hospital late Friday after apparently turning a .22-caliber rifle on himself when Midland County Sheriff's Department officers attempted to serve an arrest warrant.

Gary Greenley of 503 W. Estes Ave., Apt. J, underwent extensive surgery for removal of a .22-caliber long slug which entered under his chin, passed through the nasal cavity and lodged in the front portion of the brain, said a hospital spokesman.

According to investigating officer Lt. Pat Fuller, Sgt. Benny Fishback and Deputy Benny Matlock went to Greenley's garage apartment about 10 a.m. Friday to serve an arrest warrant on a bond forfeiture. Greenley had failed to appear in court in connection with a felony case.

Matlock knocked on the front door, said Fuller, and when Greenley glanced through the curtains the officer saw what appeared to be a rifle in his hands. Matlock retreated down the steps and told Fishback to call for a backup unit.

Shortly thereafter, said the investigator, the door opened and Greenley crawled out, bleeding from a bullet wound under the chin.

He was taken to Midland Memorial by a Fire Department ambulance. Assisting in crowd control were the Midland Police Department and the constable's office.

"I can't believe he did something like this," a man close to Greenley reflected late Friday. "He was a three-time loser. He'd served time in Huntsville and Leavenworth...and didn't want to be sent away for good. He told me once he'd never go back to jail."

Officers recovered a .22 rifle and a spent shell from the bedroom area of the apartment, according to Fuller.

Gambler says jury time may have cost $375,000

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Irritated big time gambler Bobby Hoff said Friday the government's bringing him to Texas to testify in a grand jury investigation of the murder of a federal judge may have cost him $375,000 or more in possible winnings.

Hoff said he had planned to play in the World Series of Poker at Binion's Horseshoe Club in Las Vegas, but instead was subpoenaed to San Antonio in connection with the investigation into the 1979 assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

The gambler, who won second place and $108,000 in the 1979 World Series of Poker, was granted immunity from prosecution and spent more than 90 minutes with the grand jury Friday.

The grand jury then recessed until an unspecified time, but reportedly will not meet again until June.

Recently the investigation has centered on an alleged "payoff" from high stakes gambler Jimmy Chagra, a convicted narcotics trafficker, to Charles V. Harrelson, a convicted hired killer. Both men are key suspects in Wood's slaying.

Investigators suspect that a purported large sum of money that Chagra allegedly lost to Harrelson in a Las Vegas card game may have been part of the "payoff." The grand jury previously subpoeaned Horseshoe Casino records.

After his appearance Hoff was given a check for a total of $806 to cover his airline flight, witness fee and room fee. He complained when a marshal told him the maximum fee for a room was $34 a day, while his room cost him $68 a day.

"I'd just as soon stayed in Las Vegas. I had a comp (complimentary room) there," Hoff said. "$375,000 is what this might have cost."

Steve Ungar, 27, a gin rummy expert, won $375,000 for first place in the poker tournament, but Hoff told reporters, half jokingly, "I didn't get to play. That's the reason."

Hoff, who said he had to stay here until Saturday waiting for a flight back to Las Vegas, had pleaded his Fifth Amendment rights during an April 29 appearance and apparently during a one-hour appearance on Thursday. His attorney, Jeff Morehouse, sought and obtained the immunity order from U.S. District Judge William Sessions prior to Friday's appearance.

Neither Hoff nor his attorney would comment on the grand jury's questions, except that Hoff said he was asked whether he had spoken to Teresa Starr Jasper, the step-daughter of Harrelson. Mrs. Jasper, 24, has been jailed at Uvalde for contempt since she refused to testify on March 27.

"I said they only allow her one phone call a week and she has visitation rights only on Wednesday and I haven't made it to Uvalde on a Wednesday," Hoff said.

He said he did not think it fair that Mrs. Jasper was jailed.

Hoff would not comment on remarks by Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, Harrelson's wife who also a gambler, that she and Hoff were friends other than to say, "she would know." Mrs. Harrelson and her daughter also has been listed as a "target" of the investigation along with Chagra and his brother, El Paso attorney Joe Chagra.

Asked whether he had been served with a wiretap order, as have several previous witnesses in the case, Hoff said, "no I didn't get one." Then he added, "They wiretap the whole city of Las Vegas. I would like to know how many legal wiretaps they have in Las Vegas."

One of the witnesses, Charles Joseph Chalin, 44, of Houston, pleaded the Fifth Amendment and was expected to be granted immunity and compelled to testify on his return in June.

Mrs. Harrelson, who previously pleaded the Fifth Amendment, also was expected back in June for a hearing on a government motion to disqualify her attorney, Don Ervin. The sealed government motion contends a "conflict of interest" in Ervin's representing Harrelson, his wife and step-daughter simultaneously.

Chavez found innocent in shooting

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Richard Chavez, 24, of Pecos was found innocent Friday of attempted murder in the wounding of Steve Prewit in an Aug. 13, 1980, shootout at a Pecos drive-in restaurant.

Chavez and his family cried and hugged each other when the seven-man, five-woman jury returned the verdict after less than two hours' deliberation.

Chavez' attorney, Richard Abalos of Odessa, had contended that Chavez acted in self-defense when he shot Prewit three times during the gun battle because Prewit allegedly had opened fire with a pistol.

Prewit and Reeves County Attorney Jack McGowen, who prosecuted the case, said, however, that Prewit did not have a pistol at the scene and that he was shot when he tried to take the rifle from Chavez. No pistol was recovered by investigators.

The shootout occurred after words were exchanged between a group of Mexican-Americans and a group of Anglo youths. Clifton, Glenn, 24, Jaime Villareal, 24, and Chavez's brother, David, 20, all were killed in the shootout.

Police said Glenn shot Villareal and David Chavez and that Richard Chavez killed Glenn and wounded Prewit.

Chavez was tried in November for murder in the death of Glenn, but that trial ended in a hung jury. No one else was charged in the case.

Abalos told the jury during closing arguments that no Anglos were charged because "the power, the positions and the money was on the side of the other group at Al's Drive-in."

Abalos also emphasized that the shootout apparently was the result of a case of mistaken identity.

Glenn had been forced to drink wine and to beg for his life at a bar earlier in the day, Abalos said, quoting testimony from some of the Anglo youths. He said a resemblance between the man at the bar and Villareal had caused Glenn to get his friends and his rifle and go to the drive-in near the Chavez residence.

"He wanted to make Jaime Villareal beg for his life just like he had been made to beg for his life earlier in the day," Abalos said.

McGowen told the jury Prewit was not armed with a pistol as Chavez had claimed and that Chavez had not attempted to retreat as is required when a defendant claims self-defense.

"If everyone had run we wouldn't be here today," McGowen said. "There is a duty to retreat. That was not done."

Senate rejects mayor's seat on prison board

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas senators refused 30-0 Friday to approve McAllen Mayor Othal Brand for the state prison board after his hometown senator called the appointment "ill-advised and inappropriate."

Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, head of the Senate Nominations Subcommittee, joined Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, in recommending the Senate turn back Gov. Bill Clements' nomination.

Uribe invoked his traditional right to block any appointment personally objectionable to him, and the rest of the Senate followed his request unanimously.

Reports of alleged brutality by the McAllen police department while Brand was city commissioner and mayor played a big part in the controversial hearings.

"Othal Brand is a good man," said McKnight, "There are a lot of state positions he could be appointed to where he would do a good job. However, since the state prison systAm is under a federal court order I don't think this is a proper appointment."

Clements replied later that he thought the Senate had done "an injustice to an outstanding citizen. I am confident he will be completely vindicated legally of any blame for incidents of police brutality and that facts will disclose beyond any doubt that he acted to correct such acts and revent their recurrence in the future. Indeed, the voters of McAllen already have vindicated him when they re-elected him as their mayor."

Uribe said in his remarks before the vote that the testimony before McKnight's subcommittee "did not establish that Mayor Brand intentionally or knowingly violated any court order.

"I have concluded the crux of this matter is not what he knew but what he should have known — even as he put it, a $50-a-month mayor."

He said there was a constant theme throughout Brand's testimony that "I was not aware" because of poor legal advice and because of "a conspiracy of silence" among police officers.

"Had Mayor Brand run his produce company the way he ran this aspect of the city's business, he would be bankrupt," Uribe said. "He should have been aware that something was amiss in the City of Palms."

The Senate subcommittee took about 4½ hours of testimony over three days before sending Brand's appointment to the full Senate without recommendation.

Some witnesses called him "divisive." Others claimed, without providing proof, that he caused erasure of some videotapes of police brutality in McAllen.

Bill wins tentative OK

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Department stores and credit card companies would have to pay the state half the interest they get on the sales tax portion of installment purchases under a bill that won tentative House approval Friday.

House members advanced the bill, by Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, and Speaker Bill Clayton, on a voice vote.

Final action, which would send the bill to the Senate, is expected Saturday.

There was a time in this country when the things we made, we made by hand. Skilled craftsmen who cared about the work they did took the time to do the job right. And every object they made was stamped with pride.
That spirit of endeavor is not lost today. You'll find it in Americans from coast to coast — men and women who still care enough to do their best. From artist to accountant, farmer to factory worker, Americans can be proud of the work they're doing. Just as they can be proud of the country that work has built.
We're proud of America — proud of the old-fashioned values this country stands for — and still has.

Syria says Israeli planes downed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria claimed its missiles shot down two pilotless Israeli spy planes over the Bekaa Valley Friday and called Israel's demand that Syrian missiles be withdrawn from both sides of the Syrian-Lebanese border tantamount to "a declaration of war."

As distant sniper fire crackled, U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib conferred here separately with President Elias Sarkis, a Christian, and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, a Moslem. He later said the diplomacy would continue but did not disclose his plans or indicate if there was progress toward heading off a full-scale Syrian-Israeli military confrontation.

Wazzan said, "There are some signs that tend to lift the level of optimism but do not remove the worrisome prospects that should keep us on guard."

Arab leaders from 21 nations, including Lebanon and Syria, were meeting in Tunisia for an emergency session on the crisis.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev called for an international conference, warning the "flames of war" in a Syrian-Israeli conflict could spread beyond the Mideast. A U.S. State Department spokesman in Washington said such talks would not be useful.

A military spokesman in Damascus said two Israeli planes were downed shortly after noon while "trying to spy on Syrian positions."

In Tel Aviv, Israel's military command said one pilotless craft was downed. It said the missiles were fired from Syrian soil near the Lebanese border.

In the past eight days, Israel has conceded losing two of the drone planes and Syria has claimed downing four. Syria moved in the missiles April 28 after two of its helicopters were downed by Israelis.

Assad's ruling Baath Party newspaper, al-Baath, carried a page one editorial on Prime Minister Menachem Begin's demands for withdrawal of the missiles and relinquishment by Syrian troops of strategic positions in Lebanon.

"In fact, these statements constitute a declaration of war suspended only during the wait for the diplomatic efforts to be exhausted," it said.

Syria's troops, in Lebanon since 1976 under an Arab League mandate to enforce a Moslem-Christian truce, exchanged artillery fire Thursday night with Christian militiamen. Police said three people died and 11 were wounded. Shells hit the presidential palace and the compound of U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean, but Dean was not there.

A Lebanese newspaper reporter said Syrian forces ringing the Maronite Christian city of Zahle, 30 miles east of Beirut, allowed five truckloads of food and blankets in.

The missile crisis grew out of Syrian-Christian clashes that began April 1 around Zahle. Fighting there, in Beirut and along the southern border with Israel since then has killed 514 people, authorities say.

The governor's office in Sidon, a Palestinian guerrilla stronghold along the southern coast, claimed Israeli frogmen scuttled a food-carrying cargo ship, killing an 8-year-old boy who drowned when it sank.

In Tunisia, Lebanese Foreign Minister Fuad Butros told reporters the Arab League meeting would not solve the present crisis but "will constitute a prelude to a settlement."

In New York, the U.N. Security Council voted unanimously to keep the U.N. interim force in the Golan Heights, the territory Israel captured from Syria in the 1973 Mideast war. U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said the continued presence of the force is "essential."

Pope has last stitches removed, plans dinner

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II had his last 14 stitches removed Friday and agreed to eat pizza with President Sandro Pertini when discharged from the hospital. Meanwhile, police said there were indications the Turkish extremist charged with shooting the pope last Wednesday didn't act alone.

Doctors took out the last stitches from the gunshot wounds in the pontiff's abdomen and back and declared that he was making satisfactory overall progress despite a continuing slight fever that caused them to extend his "guarded" prognosis.

"I was greatly pleased to find His Holiness in great shape, much better than in my two previous visits.... We had a nice talk, between two good old friends," Pertini said after a 30-minute chat with the pope, who sat in an armchair.

"We agreed to have pizza together when he gets out," the 84-year-old Pertini said, disclosing that they ate pizza together once before during his visit to the Vatican last year.

The 61-year-old pontiff is now eating strained eggs, creamed carrots, cooked fruit and juices and is watching a black-and-white television in his room at the Gemelli Policlinico Hospital, a Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Pierfranco Pastore, said.

Dr. Emilio Tresalti, the hospital's chief of medical staff, said the pope's fever was very low but wouldn't give a specific figure. The pontiff's temperature Thursday was listed as 99.3, less than one degree above the normal level.

Vatican sources said the pope would address a worldwide audience and deliver his blessing at noon Sunday in a direct Vatican Radio hookup from his hospital room.

Italian police said they still could not say whether the gunman arrested in the shooting in St. Peter's Square on May 13, Mehmet Ali Agca, acted alone or was paid to shoot the Polish-born pope.

Police said they believe the 23-year-old convicted Turkish terrorist got money from someone, perhaps Turkish right-wing groups in Turkey or abroad.

"If he had acted alone, the investigations would be complete. We have photos of him with a gun. We have a confession. But the investigations are not complete. We believe they will go on for a long time," a high-ranking official told The Associated Press.

"We don't have proof. But there are indications that he didn't act alone," said the official who asked not to be identified. The official cited as convincing circumstantial evidence that Agca, a man without apparent means of support, stayed in expensive hotels and wore stylish clothes during his 18 months of travel around Europe before coming to Rome.

The spokesman for the Rome police confirmed the view expressed by the high-ranking officials.

Two American women wounded in the attack were reported in good spirits and making satisfactory progress at Rome's Santo Spirito Hospital.

Hospital sources said both Ann Odre, 58, of Buffalo, N.Y., and Rose Hall, 21, a resident of Wuerzburg, West Germany, were getting "an avalanche" of flowers from friends every day.

Dr. Federico Meneghini said Mrs. Odre, who was shot in the chest and had her spleen removed, "is really doing well and feeling so much better."

The sources confirmed that Mrs. Hall, hit in the left elbow, will be discharged from the hospital Sunday.

Replying to a reporter's query, Dr. Mario Moraschini, administrative director of the hospital, an Italian state clinic, said the two women will not be required to pay for the medical care.

Plastic surgeon Dr. Karl Stein removes a tattoo from the hand of a 14-year-old girl recently in Los Angeles as part of a free tattoo removal program provided to former street gang members. The project is the effort of the 8-month-old Juvenile Justice Connection Project, which seeks to aid juveniles in outlying areas by matching them with those agencies that provide various services.

Removing tattoos free allows teens to give up gang ties

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Youths who want to give up their gang ties by giving up their tattoos can do so free of charge under a new community-service program designed to help juveniles.

"If a child has been a gang member and then moves to another area, he can actually be in danger because gang members in that area will regard the tattoo as a sign of hostility," said Sheila Fulton, director of the project, which was started this week by the city's juvenile court system and the Los Angeles County Medical Association.

"Or if he tries to get a job, a would-be employer might feel constrained because the tattoo marks the youngster as a gang member," she said.

More than 100 people already have inquired about tattoo-removal. And one 14-year-old girl has had a small teardrop-shaped tattoo removed from the area between her left thumb and index finger by the project's plastic surgeon, Dr. Karl Stein, Ms. Fulton said.

"The girl who's already been through it said she felt different inside already. She said there's been a change," Ms. Fulton said.

"We've had about a hundred phone calls," Ms. Fulton said. "We've screened 25, and 12 more are scheduled. The oldest is 18 and the youngest is 14.

"The fact that we've already had 100 phone calls from people who want this done proves to me that there's a lot of young people who want to make changes in their lives," she said. "They want to make this expression."

Ms. Fulton said it took Stein, working at Pacoima Memorial Hospital, 15 minutes to remove the girl's teardrop. But some gangs' tattoos feature larger decorations on other parts of the body.

"There are some tattoos that Dr. Stein will not try to remove (because of their size)," she said. No matter what size a tattoo is, its removal always leaves some kind of scar and "we will only handle those that can be done with a local anesthetic."

Ms. Fulton said the service is provided only after initial contact comes from a probation officer, attorney or school counselor who has been approached by a child.

A few days after the tattoo is removed, the patient returns to have the stitches taken out. A final check is made a month later.

The project is part of the Juvenile Justice Connection Project, a volunteer group that has been working with juveniles the past eight months trying to reduce gang activity and provide social services in the San Fernando, Santa Clarita and Antelope valleys.

Danger of smoking not realized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The message about the serious health risks connected with smoking cigarettes is not getting across to millions of Americans, a major new government report says.

In a report to Congress, the Federal Trade Commission staff said Thursday that most Americans know that smoking is harmful to health but don't realize how serious the danger is or which people are especially vulnerable.

The report questioned the effectiveness of health warnings in cigarette advertisements and suggested possible ways to make them stronger.

"Fewer than 3 percent of those who see cigarette ads even read the warning," said James H. Sneed, director of the FTC bureau of consumer protection.

He called the current warning "too general, too abstract." That warning, contained in all cigarette ads and on all packs, says, "Warning: The Surgeon General has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health."

Using previously published studies and its own research over five years, the FTC staff said:

—Some 40 percent of smokers think that only heavy smoking is dangerous, which is contradicted by medical evidence.

—More than one-third of smokers polled think falsely that those who smoke low-tar cigarettes have little more risk than non-smokers.

—A 30-year-old smoker will shorten his life expectancy by six to eight years if he smokes a pack or more a day, but 40 percent of smokers polled did not know that life expectancy was shortened at all.

—Nearly half of all women do not know that smoking during pregnancy increases the risk of miscarriage.

The Tobacco Institute said the FTC staff report showed the authors' "complete misunderstanding of the intended purpose of cigarette brand advertising in particular. The few individuals who are responsible for the document have made it clear that it is their desire to substitute their will for individual decisions."

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said, "It's clear that consumers want and need to be educated about smoking hazards." Packwood, chairman of the Commerce Committee, which has jurisdiction over the FTC, said, "I hope our committee will have an opportunity to explore the problem further."

Generic drug bill goes to governor

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas senators approved a bill designed to save consumers money on drug prescriptions but left intact a section of the bill that would let pharmacists charge extra for obeying its provisions.

The Senate voted approval Wednesday of the measure that would let pharmacists substitute cheaper "generic" drugs for brand-name products.

But senators rejected an amendment by Sen. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth, to remove a section of the bill allowing pharmacists to charge an undefined "professional fee" to the cost of the generic drug.

"They could add air conditioning, interest payment on a mortgage — we do not know what they will add to the final selling price," said Mrs. Andujar.

But Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin — who hailed the bill as "one of the major pieces of consumer legislation" ever proposed in Texas — disagreed.

He said the term "professional fee" is "already generally accepted and understood, and it (the amendment) is not necessary to the bill."

If the governor signs the bill, physicians would sign their name over a line on a prescription form that says, "Product Selection Permitted."

Generic drug language identical to that in a Senate bill was added in the House to legislation extending the life of the State Board of Pharmacy. It was this measure the Senate approved and sent to the governor on voice vote.

Financial risks in oil industry seem to be increasing

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Little evidence has been found to show that the major oil companies have earned windfall profits since the 1974 Arab oil embargo when gas prices soared, a university research project shows.

The financial risks in the oil industry seem to be increasing instead, spurred by heavier use of debt financing and the search for oil and gas in more remote parts of the world, according to a study conducted for Texas A&M University's Center for Energy and Mineral Resources. It was done by Peter Rose, a finance professor, and Kenneth D. Reiner, formerly of Texas A&M and now at Concordia University in Montreal.

The study suggests that the rate of return on investment in the oil industry has kept pace with the risks in exploration and development.

Although petroleum's capital outlays have reached all-time highs since the embargo, Rose said, industry dollar profits have fluctuated more widely and inflation-adjusted profitability appears to have declined.

The 46-page study points out the petroleum investment climate has become more uncertain since the embargo because of both political and financial risk factors.

The future of natural gas price deregulation, transporting crude oil and gas, environmental constraints, the application of antitrust laws to the industry and petroleum-based synthetic fuels contribute to the political risks, the report concludes.

Because oil and natural gas have become more difficult to find and more costly to extract, the standard measures of financial and operating risks have displayed an upward trend in petroleum, Rose explained.

While the majority of funds available for investment by petroleum companies comes from retained earnings and depreciation, the industry has become increasingly dependent upon the financial markets for investment capital since the 1950s.

If rates of return don't compare with those in the marketplace, raising new capital would become both more difficult and more costly, said the finance professor.

If high financial risk is not offset by increased returns to investors, petroleum output will decrease, Rose said, and if the demand for petroleum resources is lowered effectively by energy conservation measures, then the relative price of energy will continue to rise.

The financial experts report that this becomes a critical problem, as increases in energy prices tend to lower the nation's output per unit of invested capital.

Widow grieves

Maria Suarez walks past some of the 500 police officers who attended the funeral of her husband, Rosalin Suarez Jr., Friday in McAllen. The 23-year-old McAllen patrolman was shot to death Tuesday after chasing a burglary suspect. Helping Mrs. Suarez are the officer's father, Rosalin Suarez Sr., and Bob Stone, a funeral home director.

Officers honor slain patrolman

MCALLEN, Texas (AP) — Five hundred policemen from across Texas gathered Friday for the funeral of a slain McAllen comrade and heard him eulogized as a dedicated officer who refused family requests that he take a safer job.

Patrolman Rosalin Suarez Jr. died Tuesday morning after chasing a burglary suspect. The 23-year-old officer was shot in the head after three months on the McAllen force.

Raymond Harold Beasley, a 30-year-old oilfield worker, has been charged with capital murder.

The officer's death came as the police department is still reeling from allegations of widespread police brutality. Videotapes showing officers beating and abusing prisoners have been shown on national television and have created a morale problem among many officers, department officials have said.

Some police officials both in McAllen and in other departments have questioned if the brutality allegations and resulting restraint by many officers contributed to Suarez's death.

Uniformed and plain clothes officers came from Dallas, San Antonio, Corpus Christi and many agencies in South Texas and the Rio Grande Valley.

U.S. Customs agents, Texas Rangers, FBI agents, U.S. Border Patrol officers and the Texas Department of Public Safety also helped fill the McAllen Civic Center auditorium for the bilingual service.

"His father told me that the family had asked Rosalin to leave police and get a safer job," the Rev. Robert Johnson of Iglesia Biblica said.

"But the father said his son replied, 'I think I am made to wear a uniform,' " Johnson said.

Suarez's flag-draped coffin was attended by an honor guard of fellow officers. Their badges wore a mourning stripe of black tape.

Patrolman Jack Gonzalez euligized Suarez as a brother who gained the love and respect of other officers after just three months.

"We shall never forget him. We will always keep him in our hearts and minds," Gonzalez said.

Suarez's sobbing widow sat in front of the casket. On entering the auditorium at the start of the service, she cried, "Why, Why, Why. Oh, my baby."

One of the scripture passages read came from the Book of Romans, in which Paul wrote, telling readers, "submit to the governing authority" and warned that those who do not are rebelling against God."

"Suarez's death was unjust, like that of Jesus Christ," said the Rev. George Parker of the Rio Grande Bible Institute.

After the hour-long funeral service, the 500 officers formed an honor line stretching from the auditorium toward the cemetery across the street.

The mournful sound of "Taps," played across the the hot afternoon, and a three-round gun salute pierced the air.

The honor guard folded the flag after final prayers. Police Chief Roy Eckhardt then leaned over and handed the flag to Mrs. Suarez.

Gov. Brown takes fight against oil leases to court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Attorneys for Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., backed by 19 cities and counties opposed to the sale of offshore oil drilling leases, urged a federal judge Friday to stop the sale of leases on environmentally sensitive undersea lands.

U.S. District Judge Mariana Pfaelzer said she would make a decision before the sale, to be held Thursday in Anaheim.

Brown's suit contends that Interior Secretary James Watt acted in an "unbalanced" and "illegal" manner in opening for lease 34 of 115 tracts in the Santa Maria basin northwest of Santa Barbara.

His suit, filed last month, contends Watt ignored Brown's recommendations, alleges that the drilling is a threat to the federally protected Southern sea otter and gray whale and charges that the risk of environmental damage from potential oil spills outweighs energy benefits.

"The secretary has to accommodate the governor's recommendations unless he finds those recommendations have not made a balance between the national and the state's interests," said Don Junata, an attorney for the counties and cities opposed to the sale, during Friday's hearing.

Brown wants to block leases on the most environmentally sensitive of the undersea land, covering 600,000 acres from three to 27 miles offshore.

A companion suit filed by the National Resources Defense Council, the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, Friends of the Sea Otter, Environmental Coalition, and 17 other environmental groups is pending before the same court.

Brown's suit claims the environmental impact statement on the lease sale was based on old oil and gas yield estimates that are half the current ones, and that the analyses were not adjusted to reflect the increased potential for damage.

Furthermore, the suit says, Watt violated the federal Endangered Species Act because oil drilling could harm the otter and whale, both protected species.

Brown's office said the states of Oregon, Alaska, Massachusetts, Maine and Florida, which are also involved in lease sales off their coasts, will be filing "friend of the court" briefs supporting California's position.

The local governments seeking to join the suit are the counties of Humboldt, Mendocino, Sonoma, Marin, San Francisco, San Mateo, Santa Cruz, Monterey, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara and Santa Clara, and the cities of Brisbane, Carmel, Los Angeles, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Santa Cruz, Santa Monica and Seaside.

The suits do not deal with four Northern California basins: Point Arena, Eel, Bodega Bay and Santa Cruz. At Brown's urging, those four were removed from the sales last fall by former President Carter's interior secretary, Cecil Andrus.

However, Watt has said he is reconsidering those four basins and will make a decision by June.

Quality Makes Sense!
Homestead Ceiling Fans are the most finely crafted American made fans on the market today, with engineering advances most other manufacturers are still trying to copy. All Whisperfans come standard with variable speed control, reversible motor and 5 year warranty.
Quietness Makes Sense!
Through years of research, Homestead has pioneered the quietest ceiling fans on the market using a General Electric motor with patented Torsion-Flex® mount and our patented flywheel design.
Energy Savings Make Sense!
Most homes and businesses were not constructed with energy conservation in mind and do not use heating and cooling energy in an efficient manner. Ceiling fans are one of the most cost efficient means to supplement an existing air distribution system. Operating at less than 100 watts of power at full speed, the 52" Whisperfan I and Whisperfan II will provide year-round comfort and real energy savings for only pennies a day.
Whisperfan® III Makes Sense!
Homestead Products introduces Whisperfan® III, our most exciting model ever! This matchless six-bladed beauty looks dramatic even when standing still. Whisperfan® III had the lowest energy consumption of any American-manufactured ceiling fan, operating at full speed on less than 50 watts of power. The six blades provide more air with less air noise than similar size four-bladed fans at the same speed. Its handsome 38" span fits perfectly into bedrooms, kitchens, over dining tables and in other average size rooms.
1. First Ceiling Fan Manufacturer in the United States to design and build a quiet ceiling fan.
2. First Ceiling Fan Manufacturer to build a ceiling fan that uses less than 50 watts of power at full speed.
3. First Ceiling Fan Manufacturer to build a highly efficient six bladed ceiling fan.
4. First in quality and craftsmanship, because of extensive quality control inspections, we see very few fans ever come back for service.

Muppets exhibit sets record

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — "The Art of the Muppets," a display of the loveable animal puppets created by Jim Henson, set an all-time attendance record for a museum display during its six-week run, according to the San Antonio Museum Association.

The association announced that 147,521 peopled visited the exhibit from April 4 through May 17 at the Witte Museum, "making it the most popular museum attraction in the history of San Antonio."

The Muppets attendance broke attendance mark registered from March through April at the new San Antonio Museum of Art, where its inaugural exhibition "Real, Really real, Super Real: Directions in Contemporary American Realism," attracted 60,000 vistors to the museum located in a converted 19th Century brewery.

The previous record of the San Antonio Museum Association, founded in 1925, was the more than 43,000 visitors to the Witte Museum to see "Treasures of Chatsworth: The Devonshire Inheritance" in 1980.

Grant may help keep kids safe

ATLANTA (AP) — The federal government announced a $460,000 grant Friday to help Atlanta keep its children safe in summer day camps, and police said they had contacted a man they wanted to question about one of 27 young blacks killed since July 1979.

Police searched for two black men missing for several days. Neither case has been added to the list of 27 being investigated by a special police task force.

And the task force began comparing some unsolved strangulation cases to the slayings in an effort to learn more about the cause of death.

The federal grant was announced here by Charles Rinkevich, head of a federal task force seeking ways the U.S. government can help the city cope with the murders.

The money, which boosts the federal grants in connection with the killings to $3.4 million, will be used to help Atlanta and surrounding Fulton and DeKalb counties run youth recreation programs. In addition to direct money outlays, the FBI has been aiding in the investigation, and other agencies have been providing services.

Officials in Atlanta and the two counties originally requested $1.2 million to help them run the "Safe Summer" day camps.

The city's deputy administrative officer, Richard Monteilh, said Atlanta officials were "increasingly confident" they will be able to provide the range of programs needed. He said the city budget would be combed for more funds to make up the difference, and appeals would be made to area businesses and the Atlanta Children's Foundation.

When 70,000 schoolchildren — most of them black — stream out of Atlanta schools next month, the city plans to have supervised play programs in operation from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. each weekday.

A general alarm was issued for Ronald Crawford, a 22-year-old black retarded man who disappeared from his home in southeast Atlanta on Monday. Crawford's mother reported him missing Wednesday night. He was described as 6-feet-1, 140 pounds.

A general alarm places all of the city's precincts on the lookout. Disappearances of youths matching the profile of the slain blacks are treated on an urgent basis.

Bobby Lee Thomas, 20, was last seen May 15 in the downtown area on his way to play pinball, and was reported missing by a cousin, police said. He is 6 feet 1 inch tall and weighs 160 pounds.

Authorities in suburban Douglas County said Friday they had interviewed an out-of-state man in connection with the case of 21-year-old Eddie Duncan, who disappeared March 20.

But they have not determined whether he is the person with whom Duncan was last seen, said Douglas County Sheriff Earl Lee.

However, "from what we've established, this man could definitely have been with Eddie Duncan when he was last seen alive," said DetectivePhil Miller o the Douglas sheriff's department.

Officials do not have "any reason" to consider the man a suspect, Lee said. He said Thursday's telephone interview did not produce a major breakthrough, and "we're anxious to continue with the investigation."

Duncan's body was recovered from the Douglas County side of the Chattahoochee River on March 31. The cause of death was not determined because of lack of evidence and the deteriorated condition of the body.

Lee said investigators became interested in "the person" while they were retracing Duncan's last steps.

The police task force was comparing the murders with some other unsolved slayings to learn more about "asphyxial" killers, law enforcement officials said.

Asphyxiation by strangulation or other means was the cause of death in 16 of the task force cases. Law officials in several metropolitan area counties have been asked to share their files.

"They (the task force) are looking to see if there are any patterns in asphyxial deaths they're not familiar with," said DeKalb County police spokesman Chuck Johnson. "They don't think these other cases are related; they're just studying them."

"We've been deluged with asphyxial deaths recently. In this part of the country, that's unpredecented," said Assistant Fulton County Police Chief Louis Graham. "We're accustomed to cases in which the victim was shot or stabbed, and you know what the weapon was."

In some recent task force cases, medical examiners ruled that the victims died of "probable asphyxiation" because no other cause of death — or weapon — could be found.

In a murder case, "you have to determine what kind of weapon you're talking about," Graham said. "You've got to know what's causing these deaths to investigate them."

DeKalb and Fulton county authorities each supplied files on two strangulation deaths.

TO SEE OR NOT TO SEE

If you had a crystal ball, would you use it? Would you really want to know what's ahead for tomorrow, next week, next month, next year?

Most of us wouldn't. In fact, very few of us could take total revelation. Life was meant to be lived a day at a time, without too much looking forward, without too much looking back.

And most of us need something . . . something bigger than we are . . . something we can trust . . . someplace where we can be in peace, for a time and know sanctuary.

Try your place of worship. It's the place where you can gather the courage today to face tomorrow.

RELIGION IN NEWS

Roman Catholics recruiting priests

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Under guidance of an ecumenicaly minded bishop, the U.S. Roman Catholic Church is starting to process applications from married, former Episcopal clergy to become Roman Catholic priests.

They're to be admitted while maintaining their marital status, and those who wish to do so may comtinue some aspects of their former church's ways of worship.

It's the first time these features have been extended to non-members entering Roman Catholicism in this country.

But the procedure in no way diminishes Roman Catholic efforts toward reunion with Episcopal and other churches, says Bishop Bernard F. Law of Springfield-Cape Girardeau, Mo., picked to handle the new processing.

"We want to act with utmost ecumenical sensitivity," he said in a telephone interview. Although a few, individual Episcopal leaders initially saw the plan as competitive, the misgivings have eased.

"The Catholic Church is committed to ecumenical dialogue with the Episcopal Church, nationally and internationally," said Law, an experienced veteran of ecumenical work for Christian unity.

"I am committed to it and I trust in its ultimate fulfillment. My hopes and dreams regarding that dialogue are unabated. At the same time, we have a responsibility to respond to those who as a matter of conscience want to become part of the Roman Catholic Church."

Accepting newcomers from other churches is "nothing new," Law noted. It's everyday policy of all churches, Catholic, Protestant and Eastern Orthodox.

As for the dissatisfied former Episcopal priests or laity seeking entry into Roman Catholicism, Law said they are to be taken on a case-by-case basis "by the conscientious, free decision of each individual."

What's new, under the Vatican's authorization of last year, is the provision for retaining some earmarks of Episcopal worship in cases of whole congregations, and allowing married priests as part of the church's Western Rite in this country.

"In the long run, it will be ecumenically good," said Law, who is widely known in Protestant circles in which he used to serve as chief representative of U.S. Catholicism in ecumenical work.

Law, Harvard educated and a one-time Jackson, Miss., priest and editor of a diocesan weekly, served as director of the bishops' ecumenical and interreligious affairs committee before becoming a bishop.

It's still uncertain just how many Episcopalians will go through the process to be Catholic priests, but more than 80 of 12,000 Episcopal priests and about 40 of 7,000 congregations have quit the church in protest to its ordination of women and other matters.

From preliminary conversations, Law estimates the number seeking the Roman Catholic priesthood at about 50. "If it was much beyond that, I'd be somewhat surprised," he said.

He reports about 70 Catholic bishops in the country have indicated willingness to accept married, former Episcopal priests. They either are to be assigned regular diocesan duties, or, if they have congregations, these would become distinctive parishes in the dioceses.

Those parishes may retain a "common identity reflecting certain elements of their own heritage," according to the Vatican provision. Details of the features still are being developed.

The parishes "will be fully in the Roman Catholic Church," Law said. "But elements of life and worship will carry forward their tradition."

Priest applicants make their requests to local Catholic bishops, who prepare dossiers on background, marital state, spiritual and psychological status, motives, academic work, baptism and ordination.

A written and oral examination also is to be given. Depending on the line of succession of Episcopal bishops who had ordained the applicant, he then will be ordained, conditionally or definitively, as a Roman Catholic priest.

Law, working with several other bishop consultors and with a former Episcopal priest, the Rev. James Parker from Albany, Ga., as an assistant, is to process each case, and forward it to the Vatican's doctrinal congregation for approval.

Law noted that acceptance of married Episcopalians as Catholic priests does not mean any change in the church's regular requirement of priestly celibacy.

Although Roman Catholicism in some European countries has a few married, ex-Protestants who have bnecome priests, and also married priests in its Eastern Rite, it has previously had none in the Western Rite in the United Sttesa.

Salaries for the married ex-Episcopalians doubtlessly will have to be higher than for celibate priests, Law said. "If not, it would be another miracle. They will be adequately compensated to take care of their families, and financial assurances made for their retirement."

Jewish Cantors in great demand

NEW YORK (AP) — Help Wanted: Cantors. Must have a sweet voice and be pious, humble and personable. Also Jewish. Salary $20,000 to $35,000 annually.

Cantors, the traditional Jewish religious liturgists and melodists, are disappearing from America's synagogues.

"There is an extreme shortage of cantors," said Cantor Macy Nulman, director of the Cantorial Training Institute at Yeshiva University here.

Since the only three cantorial training programs in the nation are in Manhattan, he is starting classes which will allow students in other parts of the country to learn the prayer chants by telephone.

"Today's youth are not inspired to study liturgic music as in the past," Nulman said. "There are so many more lucrative professions now, like doctors and lawyers. The younger generation of today does not like the life of the clergy."

However, Nulman said, even the higher salaries offered by many synagogues is not enticing young men — few women are cantors — to cantorial training.

He said there are only 1,000 full-time cantors in the United States, one for every six or seven synagogues.

Nulman said most synagogues must rely on lay members of their congregations to fulfill the cantor's Sabbath duties: leading thz musical program, chanting the Hebrew readings and directing the entire religious service.

In most temples, Nulman said, a full-time cantor's non-Sabbath duties include teaching liturgy, religious music and Yiddish folk songs to all age groups and leading congregation activities such as fund drives.

He said synagogues in Cleveland; Detroit; Los Angeles; San Antonio; Wilmington, Del., and even Brooklyn have been unable to fill recent vacancies for cantors. Some synagogues, he said, have been looking for years.

Nulman said his school, where it takes three to four years to earn a diploma, receives 60 to 100 requests a year from wynagogues looking for full-time cantors to serve alongside their rabbis. He said, however, that the nation's three cantorial training programs each graduate only three to five cantors per year.

The cantor's role dates back nearly 2,000 years, and cantors are credited with orally preserving the ancient, unwritten nusach, or tunes, and tropes, or chants, that have made cantorial synagogue music one of the great traditions of European Jewry.

Chapter 53 of the Orah Hayyim, Jewish law set down in the Middle Ages, still sets the requirements for a cantor:

"He should be a man free of transgressions and with a good reputation that should not have been soiled even in his youth. He should be of humble and pleasing personality. He should possess a sweet voice and should be fluent in the reading of the Torah, the Prophets and the Writings."

It also helps to have stamina, especially for the six-hour services during the High Holidays each autumn.

Despite the shortage, Nulman said he does not recommend that gentiles or recent converts try to become cantors: "One has to be reared in it, imbued at an early age."

For the next four Tuesday nights, Nulman will instruct 20 students — some already trained cantors and others laymen who he hopes will become intersted in formal training — in High Holy Day prayer music.

Eight of those students will be in other parts of the country, participat-

GOD MOVES IN MYSTERIOUS WAYS

"God gave Joseph unusual wisdom, so that Pharoah appointed him governor over all Egypt, as well as putting him in charge of all the affairs of the palace. But a famine developed in Egypt and Canaan and there was great misery for our ancestors. When their food was gone, Jacob heard that there was still grain in Egypt, so he sent his sons to buy some.

"The second time they went, Joseph revealed his identity to his brothers, and they were introduced to Pharaoh.

"Then Joseph sent for his father Jacob and all his brothers' families to come to Egypt, 75 persons in all. So Jacob came to Egypt, where he died, and all his sons. All of them were taken to Shechem and buried in the tomb Abraham bought from the sons of Hamor, Shechem's father.

"As the time drew near when God would fulfill His promise to Abraham to free his descendants from slavery, the Jewish people greatly multiplied in Egypt; but then a king was crowned who had no respect for Joseph's memory. This king plotted against our race, forcing parents to abandon their children in the fields.

"About that time Moses was born--a child of divine beauty. His parents hid him at home for three months, and when at last they could no longer keep him hidden, and had to abandon him, Pharaoh's daughter found him and adopted him as her own son, and taught him all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and he became a mighty prince and orator."

Presbyterians gather to celebrate birthday

May 1981 marks the 59th birthday of the Presbyterian's Women of the Church Organization and the Women of the Church of First Presbyterian Church in Midland gathered recently for a birthday luncheon to celebrate the occasion.

Each local Presbyterian church holds a birthday luncheon annually at which they donate money to various worthwhile causes. The 1981 project, "God's World, One in Christ," will be used by the four theological seminaries of the Presbyterian church in the United States to reinvigorate the church's responsibility for the evangelization of the world.

The offering will be used by the seminaries over a period of about five years. During this five-year period, each seminary will develop sources of funds to carry on those activities that prove profitable for the continued mission-minded development for faculty and students after the birthday offering has been spent.

Fourth hunger striker's death prompts rioting

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A wave of shootings, gasoline bombings, rioting and burning hit four cities Friday after the death of a fourth Irish nationalist hunger striker. Authorities reported one person killed and at least 20 injured, including civilians, rioters and five soldiers.

A 12-year-old girl died of wounds suffered in earlier rioting and a baby girl, playing in her home, was hit in the back by a stray bullet when gunmen fired on police. Her condition was reported not serious.

In local elections, extremism was also evident as Protestant and Roman Catholic hardliners scored big gains over moderates in elections for city councils in the British-ruled province. Nearly all the results of Wednesday's election were counted by Friday.

It was a "vote for the gunman," a Catholic moderate leader said of results in Catholic areas.

The Northern Ireland Office reported hunger striker Brendan McLaughlin in grave condition Friday on the eighth day of his fast. They said he was suffering from a bleeding perforated ulcer that could kill him without the medical treatment he was continuing to refuse.

Another IRA prisoner, Kieran Doherty, 24, had refused breakfast, joining the fast to back IRA demands for political prisoner status, according to Maze Prison officials.

Violence flared in Belfast, Londonderry, Newry and Dungannon following the death Thursday night of Patrick "Patsy" O'Hara, 24, in the 61st day of his fast at the Maze Prison outside Belfast.

His death came 21 hours after that of hunger striker Raymond McCreesh. Two other hunger strikers have died — Bobby Sands on May 5 and Francis Hughes on May 12. All were members of the IRA except for O'Hara, who belonged to the outlawed Irish National Liberation Army, a radical faction allied with the IRA's Provisional wing.

A 40-year old Catholic, Henry Duffy, was fatally wounded in the head by an anti-riot plastic bullet early Friday in Londonderry, the province's second largest city and O'Hara's home town. Police said the plastic bullets injured at least 20 people in Belfast and Londonderry in the early morning rioting.

In Belfast, 12-year-old Carol Kelly, wounded in the head during rioting Tuesday, died in hospital late Friday from her injuries. Neighbors claimed she was hit by a plastic bullet and police said they were investigating the claims.

The deaths of Duffy and Carol brought Northern Ireland's toll of fatalities in nearly 12 years of violence to at least 2,111. Forty people have died so far this year.

In Londonderry, an 18-month-old girl playing in the front room of her home on the Creggan Estate was shot in the back by a stray bullet when a police jeep came under fire from gunmen. The bullet was successfully removed, authorities said. Police were not injured in the attack.

Hospitals in Belfast reported at least a dozen civilians received treatment for injuries suffered in the clashes.

Police said at least 25 rioters were arrested in Belfast, Londonderry and Newry.

Wreckage lies scattered following a train derailment early Friday, near Vandenberg Air Force base in Santa Barbara, Calif. Three trains were involved in the accident.

Six people injured in train derailment

SURF, Calif. (AP) — A derailed train toppled into two other trains Friday, injuring six people and scattering overturned freight cars, slabs of sheetrock and caskets of wine across railroad tracks and beach at a seaside depot.

Seventy-eight railroad cars were damaged, including empty tank cars that leaked ammonia chloride fumes, authorities said. At least 17 people, including 13 railroad employees, were taken to three hospitals, but only six were found to be injured.

The sparsely populated area on the edge of Vandenberg Air Force Base was evacuated for several hours because of the leaking fumes, and at least one man was examined at the base hospital for fume inhalation, the Air Force said.

Amtrak passenger service on the coast line during the busy Memorial Day weekend was interrupted by the wreck. Passengers were bused around the wreckage to other trains.

Slabs of sheetrock from flatcars were scattered like playing cards through the area, about 140 miles northwest of Los Angeles. Another car carried caskets of wine from Northern California.

"You could smell wine, not gas," said one rescuer at the scene.

The accident began when the 25 middle cars of a 131-car Southern Pacific freight train northbound to Oakland derailed at 4:18 a.m., toppling onto the two other trains, Southern Pacific spokesman Tom Buckley said. Cars from the other trains were sent tumbling off the tracks.

"The power behind the massive weight was incredible. How people got out of there without being killed was extremely lucky," said Santa Barbara County firefighter Rick Vatter, one of the first rescuers to arrive at the scene. There was no fire, he said.

Sixteen cars on a stationary 41-car southbound train were knocked from a siding as they waited for the northbound train to pass. A stationary switcher train that serves the agricultural area, consisting of an engine, two box cars and a caboose, was also hit by tumbling cars from the moving train, Buckley said.

Railroad employees in the switcher caboose were injured when it flipped upside down.

Sheriff's department, Air Force, railroad and fire department investigators were trying to determine what caused the derailment.

The most serious injury was that of Southern Pacific brakeman William Jackson, 28, who was hospitalized in stable condition in San Luis Obispo with a possible skull fracture.

Three patients hospitalized in Lompoc were identified as transients who were apparently riding one of the trains. They were Joaquin Valades Rios, 18, suffering from back pain; Wilbert Jones, 40, complaining of spine injuries, and Noe Macias Zamora, 21, who had cuts on his head.

Thirteen people were taken to the Vandenburg base hospital, where the 12 railroad workers were taken. However, only two, identified as Richard Ruiz and Thomas Templeton, were actually treated for injuries, and even they were released.

French president names Cabinet

PARIS (AP) — Socialist President Francois Mitterrand dissolved Parliament Friday and named a Cabinet that did not include any of the Communists whose support made possible his election victory over conservative incumbent Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

Mitterrand's Cabinet does include one radical leftist as justice minister and, for the first time, ministers of leisure time, national solidarity, the sea and decentralization. Six of the 42 posts went to women.

Mitterrand has refused to respond publicly to Communist demands that their party be represented in the government.

The new Cabinet will run the country until legislative elections next month, when Mitterrand hopes to oust the center-right majority in the 491-seat National Assembly and replace it with a majority of Socialists and Communists who will support his proposed economic and social programs.

Working with Premier Pierre Mauroy, Mitterrand named European Common Market Commissioner Claude Cheysson as foreign minister, with Andre Chandernagor his deputy for European affairs.

Jacques Delors, once an adviser to centrist premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas, was named minister of economy and finance, with Socialist Party spokesman Laurent Fabius as budget minister.

The party's long-time defense expert Charles Hernu was named defense minister.

Although there were no communists, Mitterrand brought in Maurice Faure from the small moderate Radical Left Party as justice minister and Michel Jobert, an independent who was foreign minister for Georges Pompidou, as minister of foreign trade.

He carefully balanced the various factions in the Socialist Party. His moderate rival for the presidential candidacy, Michel Rocard, was made minister of economic planning, and Jean-Pierre Chevenement, leader of the party's left wing, was named minister of research and technology.

Mitterrand also made innovations, with a "minister of leisure time," Andre Henry, and a "minister of national solidarity," Nicole Questiaux. She had the rank of minister of state, one of five senior cabinet members, along with Interior Minister Gaston Defferre, Rocard, Jobert and Chevenement.

Other innovations were a "ministry of the sea," headed by Louis Le Pensec, a native of the west coast Brittany region, and the addition to the important Interior Ministry,, which controls the police and regional administration, of the title of ministry for "decentralization."

It was given to Gaston Defferre, a former Socialist candidate who as long-time mayor of Marseille, knows intimately the problems of excessive power being held in Paris.

There were four women ministers.

Lottery rigging defendants fired after convictions

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Television emcee Nick Perry and lottery official Edward Plevel have been fired following their conviction on charges of rigging the Pennsylvania Lottery in a scheme that generated a record $3.5 million payout.

Perry, the 64-year-old host of the nightly drawing, was dismissed Thursday by WTAE-TV in Pittsburgh, said Fred Young, the station's general manager.

Perry, a WTAE employee since it went on the air in 1958, had been suspended with pay pending the outcome of the case, Young said.

Plevel, the Lottery Bureau district manager in charge of security the night of the drawing, was fired by the state Revenue Department, said Jim Wiggins, an aide to Gov. Dick Thornburgh.

Plevel, 52, was suspended without pay from his $17,500-a-year job last September when he was named by a grand jury, Wiggins said.

On Wednesday night, a Common Pleas Court jury convicted Plevel and Perry of fixing the April 24, 1980, Daily Number drawing, which generated the record payout when 6-6-6 was drawn.

The six-man, six-woman jury found both men guilty of theft by deception, rigging a publicly exhibited contest, criminal mischief, criminal conspiracy and perjury. Plevel was acquitted of unsworn falsification.

No sentencing date was set and both men remain free on bond while their attorneys prepare appeals for a new trial or to overturn the verdict. Perry faces a maximum 61 years imprisonment and $130,000 in fines while Plevel faces a maximum 33 years and a $70,000 fine.

During the seven-day trial, the state accused Perry and Plevel of devising a scheme to switch the numbered pingpong balls in the drawing. The bogus balls, with the exception of the "4" and "6," were weighted so they could not be selected by the air machines.

Meanwhile, Patrick Philbin, Revenue Department deputy secretary, said security measures have been upgraded at the drawing. The Revenue Department oversees the Lottery Bureau.

Prior to April 24, only one lottery official was at the station to supervise the drawing. Now, Philbin noted, a state trooper is there nightly and additional lottery officials also attend periodically.

House members violate rule; Put 'hold card' on bingo bill

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Shouts of "Hold your cards" echoed through the House of Representatives when Rep. Ron Wilson said he had found a problem in the bingo bill. And sure enough, bingo was on hold Thursday because House members had violated one of their own rules by bringing the measure up for debate.

Before Wilson ended Wednesday's debate by pointing out the technicality his colleagues had violated, some legislators contended bingo is more sinister than merely a church money-raiser and a pastime of the elderly.

Rep. Randy Pennington, R-Houston, said bingo would be a $500 million-a-year business, with gross receipts "so great that they will allow operators to buy off local law enforcement officers."

"It will open the door to drugs and prostitution and all the other things that come with this kind of game," Pennington said.

Wilson, D-Houston, said debating the bill violated a House rule against passing expenditure measures ahead of the general state budget bill. The bingo measure allocates money to the state comptroller for licensing and regulating bingo games.

Speaker Bill Clayton agreed with Wilson and sent the bill back to committee for repairs.

Sponsor Lloyd Criss, D-La Marque, said he hoped the bill could come up again Monday.

Voters approved local option bingo for churches and charities last year, but the constitutional amendment takes effect only when the Legislature spells out ground rules.

"You are dealing with something we have never dealt with before, and that is gambling in the state of Texas," Rep. Bob Maloney, R-Dallas, told the House.

Maloney wanted to eliminate a provision allowing organizations staging bingo games to pay the operators — often professionals — up to $50 a session.

"If the games are going to be played for charitable purposes, there is no reason to be paying people to run them," Maloney said.

"I don't think there is any real danger ... that $50 a night would attract the Mafia or these other bugaboos people are raising," said Criss.

Rep. Alan Schoolcraft, R-San Antonio, said some major charities depend on bingo for funds, and "they are going to get shut down if this amendment goes on."

Police say banker ploy bought time

HOUSTON (AP) — Police officials credit a quick-thinking bank president with buying enough time for a SWAT team to rescue a Freeport couple from a kidnapper who was trying to extort $20,000.

Officials said they expected charges to be filed today.

The gunman abducted Glen and Marie Maness at gunpoint from their Freeport home early Thursday, according to Lt. Jim Gunn, head of the Special Weapons and Tactics team. Gunn said the man told the couple an accomplice was holding their older daughter hostage and that a bomb had been planted in their younger daughter's car.

Gunn said that there was no accomplice and no bomb. He said Freeport police kept both daughters in protective custody until their parents returned home Thursday evening.

The man took the Manesses to a bank in downtown Houston, about 50 miles away, where he ordered Maness to go in and write a check for the money.

The abductor kept Mrs. Maness in the van, which he parked in front of the Houston City Bank.

Maness explained the situation to a bank employee, who called President John Hazard.

Hazard, saying he wanted to stall for time, told Maness that recent eye surgery had altered his appearance from the picture on his drivers license, and demanded that he bring his wife in to vouch for him.

Hazard has known Maness for 20 years, Gunn said.

"Mr. Hazard did an excellent job of stalling for time," Gunn said.

Meanwhile, Gunn said, a bank employee called police, and SWAT team officers spotted the van from helicopters.

When the gunman sent Mrs. Maness into the bank for the money, officers armed with M-16 rifles surrounded the van and arrested a suspect.

Gunn said bank security adviser Clyde Wilson jerked Maness out of the van.

Cocaine detectives leave without questioning Texan

HOUSTON (AP) — Tennessee detectives looking for cocaine smugglers in Texas left town after trying for two days to talk to a pilot they say flew 614 pounds of uncut cocaine from South America to East Tennessee.

The pilot, Clarence "C.D." Newell, 50, is charged byTennessee oficials with possession of cocaine for resale and held on $1 million bond in Harris County Jail in Houston.

Newell refused to talk to Tennessee Bureau of Investigation agents without his attorney or to give his Social Security number, his attorney, Harry Noe, said Thursday.

TBI agents David Davenport and Bob Denney returned to their Knoxville, Tenn., homes Thursday night. They had arrived in Houston after Newell was arrested Monday at Noe's office.

"They called and were very polite and said good-bye," Noe said. "As long as I would be present, they apparently lost interest in talking to my client."

Before the arrest, the agents had said they would visit Texas to look for people they allege were involved in

Rooney makes TV look easy

By GUS STEVENS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — He looks like a crusty associate professor of English at Rutgers. He sounds like a man who is speaking in public for the first time, a behind-the-scenes person who is flustered before the bright lights of the television stage.

So he would have us believe, but Andy Rooney is a fake. Those bon mots don't tumble from his lips nearly as casually as you might think.

Rooney works hard on his "A Few Minutes with Andy Rooney" segments on "60 Minutes." He may be on the air only three minutes or so, but his prose doesn't squander a second of time.

His words have that feel of spontaneity cloaked in cleverness and humor. Those kind of words generally are born of blood and sweat.

Rooney has become a prime reason for watching "60 Minutes."

Rooney is no overnight success. He's been writing for his bread and butter since he was a World War II reporter for the Stars and Stripes (in which case he wrote for his Spam).

He was a war hero, sort of. He volunteered to fly with the 8th Air Force on the first American bombing raid into Germany. He was one of eight correspondents who went along for the ride. Another was Walter Cronkite.

After the war Rooney wrote for Arthur Godfrey, Victor Borge, Herb Shriner and Sam Levenson. He wrote for the "Garry Moore Show" for radio. He contributed to "Twentieth Century," "News of America," "Adventure" and "The Morning Show."

You can tell by now Rooney isn't picking his "60 Minutes" humor off the wall. He's been around the block a few times.

Rooney has written continuously for almost 40 years. He became a regular on "60 Minutes" in 1978, winning an Emmy his first season. He has won a Writers Guild best-script-of-the-year award six times, more than anybody in the history of television.

Now that you know where this guy is coming from, let's sit back and relax with some of his more juicy chunks of "60 Minutes" humor. Here are some comments Rooney has made over the past couple of years:

"There are only two types od people in the world, Type A and Type Z. It isn't hard to tell which you are. How long before the plane leaves do you arrive at the airpot? ... Early plane catchers, Type A, pack their bags a day in advance. ... Type Z packs hastily at the last minute and arrives at the airport too late to buy a newspaper.

"... Type A squeezes a tube of toothpaste from the bottom and rolls it very carefully as he uses it and puts the top back on every time. Type Z squeezes the tube from the middle, and he lost the cap under the refrigerator.

"Maybe we ought to start an affirmative action program, draft nothing but women until the total number of women equals the total number of men who have been drafted. Even West Point would be all women, you know, with maybe eight or 10 token men, just enough for an occasional newspaper feature story about how they're doing there."

Animal swears off weed

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Daryl Anderson says he thinks newspaper photographers complained about the character he portays on "Lou Grant" for the wrong reasons.

In the early days of the CBS series, Animal, a photographer for a Los Angeles newspaper, looked like a candidate for a rescue mission. He had a three-day growth of beard, a far-away look in his eyes (perhaps put there by a controlled substance) and clothes that looked like he got them at that mission.

Things have changed. Animal now has a beard rather than stubble, has sworn off the weed, and dresses more respectably. Not that he's gone Establishment, but Lou and Billie and Joe may have to start calling him Dennis Price instead.

"I'm really surprised that all the criticism has been about his appearance," said Anderson, "and not about the fact that he is portrayed as a reporter's assistant. That he just tags along. Although once I did tell Billie that I was there because pictures sell papers.

"But he doesn't often get to be on his own, the way many newspaper photographers work."

About once a year, Anderson has a show of his own in which Animal does get to work independently. Last year, he helped unravel an old Hollywood scandal and this year he dug into the past of a young woman who committed suicide. He fell in love with his image of her.

Anderson, an amateur photographer, was ready with his camera for real not long ago when a building caught fire near a location film site. He began snapping away with Animals's camera.

His photographs were distributed to newspapers by The Associated Press and later reprinted in American Photographer magazine.

He said he plans to take a lot of pictures this spring on his trip to Germany. He and a group of actors will be guests of the East German government.

Anderson was born 29 years ago in Seattle and studied acting at the University of Washington and the Seattle Repertory Theater. Two weeks after graduation from college, he landed his first role in the movie "Sweet Revenge." It was while playing a part at the Los Angeles Actors Theater that he was invited to read for the role of Animal.

"When I showed up for the audition, I had a three-day growth of beard," he said. "I'd gotten a description of the character and grew the stubble for the reading. The casting director was familiar with my stage work. So on the basis of that and looking the part I got a reading."

It was his first television role. He later had a small part as a guard in the movie "Butch and Sundance: The Early Years." His first television film was "The Phoenix," which was broadcast by ABC about a month ago. He played a scientist who gets a sarcophagus out of a South American country only to find that the mummy inside is very much alive — and has superhuman powers. The plot is loosely based on the "ancient astronaut" theory.

Youthful defending champion retains card-playing title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Down to only $2,500 in chips midway through the final day of play, defending champion Stu Ungar admitted he had his doubts about being able to win the annual World Series of Poker.

But the youthful gin rummy expert came from far behind with a steady run of pots Thursday to capture the $375,000 first prize in the tournament at Binion's Horseshoe Club.

Ungar, a New York native now living in Las Vegas, outlasted 74 other players in the four-day event, including Perry Green, an Alaskan furrier who led much of the final day of action.

"It looked like I didn't have too good of a chance earlier," said Ungar. "I never had any chips the whole tournament, but when I got some, I got a lot."

Ungar laid down pairs of aces and fours to finish off Green, who bet all of his remaining $110,000 in an unsuccessful effort to fill a straight on the final hand.

Green, of Anchorage, collected $160,000 for his second place finish while Gene Fischer of San Antonio, Tex. took home $75,000 for third place.

The 27-year-old champion began wth only $43,000 in chips with nine players left in the game on the final day of action.

Green regained the lead but lost a pot totaling $560,000 to seal his fate.

"It's a hard way to make a hard living," Green said.

The "Hold 'em" contest, the annual big game capping the month-long event at Binion's, started out slowly Thursday, but heated up as players one-by-one lost their chips and were forced to leave the game.

A total of 75 contestants began play Monday, each putting in $10,000 to participate in the tournament. If a player lost his buy-in, he was out of the game.

Betting was almost as intense among the hundreds of spectators who crowded around the tables in the small poker room, with odds shifting on each player almost every time a big hand was won or lost.

"Hold 'em," a type of poker said to have originated in Texas and popular throughout the Southwest, is a favorite at casino poker rooms in Las Vegas. Each player gets two cards and makes the best five-card poker hand using communal cards dealt in the center of the table.

U.S. troops using drugs in Europe

By ELIE MARCUSE
Agence France-Presse

BRUSSELS — Western generals are worried at reports that the U.S. armed forces based in Europe are hotbeds of hashish smokers.

There are an estimated 200,000 U.S. troops scattered throughout 700 bases and barracks in Europe, and 20 percent of them — or 40,000 — are believed to regularly smoke hashish. In addition, among the 100,000 dependents and friends of U.S. servicemen, there is also hashish addiction. These statistics are included in a report drawn up by American researchers.

"This is a disturbing reality. We put it down to being just one more evil holdover of the Vietnamese War," one of the researchers said in an interview.

Sentence not cut

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The state Supreme Court has refused to cut eight months from the sentence of Dan White, who was convicted of gunning down the mayor and a supervisor in their City Hall offices.

The court, without comment Thursday, denied a request from White to strike down one of the two additional terms that was tacked on to his sentence because he used a gun to kill Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk.

White contended it was unjust for a judge to penalize him twice for using a gun to kill the two men because he only used one gun. He was sentenced in July 1979 to seven years, eight months in prison.

Petition withdrawn

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — David and Betty Whitmore, a black couple, have withdrawn a petition to adopt their white foster child because "such a fuss has been raised."

The Whitmores had been trying to adopt 16-month-old Lana, who has lived with them since she was 2 days old. But adoption officials want to place the child, of Armenian descent, with a white family.

They withdrew their petition Wednesday during the ninth day of a juvenile court hearing. They said they "felt that, loving Lana as we do, we should fight the matter. However, such a fuss has been raised we felt Lana would be a marked child in the future."

Mayor is indicted

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Angelo Errichetti of Camden, N.J., who was convicted of bribery and conspiracy in the Abscam probe, has been indicted on new bribery charges in connection with sewer projects.

The indictment returned Thursday by a federal grand jury accused him of traveling and aiding others to travel to promote bribery.

The indictment claims Errichetti was bribed on federally subsidized sewer projects by co-defendants Charles Walsh and Vincent J. Cuti.

Media not worried

BOSTON (AP) — A bill that would require any story, editorial or news report appearing in a newspaper to be signed by the writer has been sent to the floor of the Massachusetts House. But media executives say they're not worried.

The bill requiring bylines was approved unanimously Thursday by the Legislature's Judiciary Committee.

But Joseph L. Doherty, executive director of the Massachusetts Newspaper Publishers Association, said his group is "not taking the bill too seriously because it is obviously unconstitutional."

Murder trial postponed

NEW YORK (AP) — The murder trial of Mark David Chapman, accused of gunning down ex-Beatle John Lennon, has been postponed until June 22.

Agreement to delay the trial, originally set to begin June 1, was reached at a meeting Thursday between defense attorneys and Manhattan Assistant District Attorney Allen Sullivan.

No reason was given for the delay.

Chapman, 26, is accused of fatally shooting the 40-year-old Lennon as he and his wife, Yoko Ono, were entering their fashionable apartment building on Dec. 8.

Kennedy quits as Cubs GM; Franks returns

By JOE MOOSHIL

CHICAGO (AP) — Herman Franks, who said he was fed up with the demands and sniping of his ballplayers and left the Chicago Cubs as field manager in the final week of the 1979 season, Friday was named interim general manager.

He replaces Bob Kennedy, who resigned under the pressure of a 6-27 record.

"Bob Kennedy has resigned as executive vice president of the Chicago Cubs and I accepted the resignation," said owner William Wrigley at a hastily called news conference. "All of us are distressed at our current won-and-lost record.

"THERE IS no question it is downright embarrassing. It is also mystifying because the players have much more talent than the record would indicate," continued Wrigley. "With the possibility that I may be too close to the forest to see the trees, I have decided to bring in someone from the outside who is also familiar with the organization — a man with an unusual depth and baseball knowledge," said Wrigley.

"I have asked Herman Franks," Wrigley said, "to represent ownership as interim general manager with complete authority to get us moving forward at both the major and minor league levels — to take a fresh look at things and, based on his experience, correct any weaknesses and deficiencits he turns up in any aspect of our operations."

KENNEDY was named vice president of the Cubs after the 1976 season and his first act was to hire Franks as his field manager. The Cubs finished fourth in 1977, third in 1978 and fifth in 1979, when Franks, 67, resigned with a week left in the season.

Preston Gomez was hired to replace Franks last year, but was fired in mid-season and replaced by Joey Amalfitano, who remains the field manager.

"He'd better tread softly," joked Franks when asked about Amalfitano's status.

Franks said Wrigley contacted him earlier this week for advice and then told him to come to Chicago from his home in Salt Lake City two days ago.

Wrigley asked Franks if he would take the job and Franks said, "I told him 'yes, under certain conditions. I want complete control of the ballclub, the players and their agents.'

"We can do two things," said Franks, "get in the business and become competitive — or get out."

Neither Wrigley or Franks allowed themselves to be pinned down on questions regarding the possibility the Cubs might enter the free-agent market.

ASKED IF he, Franks, a multimillionaire, might be taking a step towards purchasing the Cubs, or putting together a syndicate to buy the club, Franks snappd, "I couldn't buy the bats."

Of the label "interim," he added, "Titles mean nothing. Put it any way you want. I'm here to run the club."

When leaving the club in 1979, Franks said he was fed up with the demands and sniping of the players.

Among those Franks blasted as he departed was Bill Buckner, saying the defending National League batting titlist was jealous of slugger Dave Kingman, who has since been traded to the New York Mets.

"I like Bob, he was doing his best and he wasn't afrad to make a deal," Buckner said of Kennedy. As for Franks, Buckner said, "This may be a blessing in disguise.

KENNEDY, 60, formerly managed the Cubs after their "college of coaches" experiment in the early 1960s and later managed the Oakland A's in 1968. He spent most of his playing career with the Chicago White Sox and the Cleveland Indians.

Franks, who called himself a "young 67," spent six years in the major leagues as a catcher with St. Louis, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and the New York Giants. He managed the San Francisco Giants from 1965 through 1968.

Why would Franks come in and take over the Cubs?

"My wife asked me the same question," said Franks. "And I told her, when a friend calls and asks for help, you help. Yes, I got a little fed up when I resigned as manager, but that's in the past. Let's forget the past."

Farmer homers expel Rebs, 3-1

By MIKE CRUVER
R-T Sports Writer

LEWISVILLE—Midland Lee Coach Ernie Johnson summed it up best, "It was the same old thing. The long ball ate us up."

Sam Burgess belted solo home run and Kevin Miller followed with a two-run shot in the sixth inning while lefty Mike Crusoe and Bron Beal combined on a four-hitter to lead the Lewisville Farmers to a 3-1 victory over Midland Lee here Friday, ending the Rebels season at 16-8.

Lewisville, who won the best of three bi-district in two straight, now faces Arlington Sam Houston in regional play next week.

WITH ONE down in the sixth inning of a scoreless game, Burgess drove a pitch off Randy Velarde far over the left field fence. Guy Larson followed with a hot smash that got by Chris Parker at third base and Miller then added a two-run shot left.

Rebel left fielder Alan Koonce made a gallant effort to catch the ball as he climbed the fence 330 from the plate on the line, but it was just out of reach as Lewisville went on top 3-0.

Lewisville's only other scoring threat came in the fifth inning when a single, a walk and an error loaded the bases. Velarde got out of that jam by striking out the dangerous left-handed hitting Chris Hall on a 3-2 count.

Midland Lee threatened in the seventh inning when Bill Dern drew a walk off Beal and moved to second on Parker's ground out. Barry Corley's double to right-center scored Dern.

Beal escaped further trouble by getting Randy Pepper on a pop to short and fanning Kevin Bradshaw to end the game. The Rebels who had been held to one hit Crusoe the first five innings, mounted their first serious threat in the top of the sixth.

Bradshaw drew a leadoff walk from Crusoe. Ricky Wright, running for Bradshaw, moved to second on Velarde's sacrifice. Crusoe then walked Barry Blackwell and Ron Smedley on eight pitches to load the bases with one out. After throwing two straight balls to Koonce, Crusoe beckoned coach Mike Campbell to the mound. After a short conversation, Campbell called in Beal, winner of the first game in the series.

IT WAS an interesting matchup. Koonce was the hitter who had knocked Beal out of the first game with a wicked liner off his shin. This time Beal won. On a full count, Koonce fouled out to the catcher.

With the bases still loaded, Dern, owner of the Rebels' only two hits, worked the count to 3-2, but never got the payoff pitch as Beal caught Wright off third with a pick off throw to end the threat.

When Beal was asked what his feelings were in his second confrontation with Koonce, he said, "No, I didn't feel anything. I didn't even know there was pressure." About his injury, Beal added, "Tuesday they

Bulldogs stage annual Mims game

MHS displaysnew look

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The Midland High Bulldogs will unveil its new Dogbone offense and Bulldog 8 defense today at 7:30 p.m. in the annual Bill Mims spring scrimmage at Memorial Stadium, so after tonight's Purple-White encounter, MHS fans should become the most knowledgeable fans on formations in town.

For the third year in a row MHS fans will be treated to a new look. Dennie Hays had the Wing-T three years ago and Pat Culpepper installed the "I" look last year with a seven man front of defense. Now it's the Dogbone (a version of the wishbone) and the Bulldog 8 (an eight man defensive front similiar to what national collegiate champion Georgia used last year.)

Tickets for tonight's scrimmage will be $2 for adults and $1 for students.

TONIGHT'S GAME will feature four 12-minute quarters with no kickoffs. Play will start at the 25-yard line. Each team will punt, but there will be no returns.

This is a big scrimmage for the Bulldogs in the eyes of Culpepper, who is going to take a good look at two offensive backfield units.

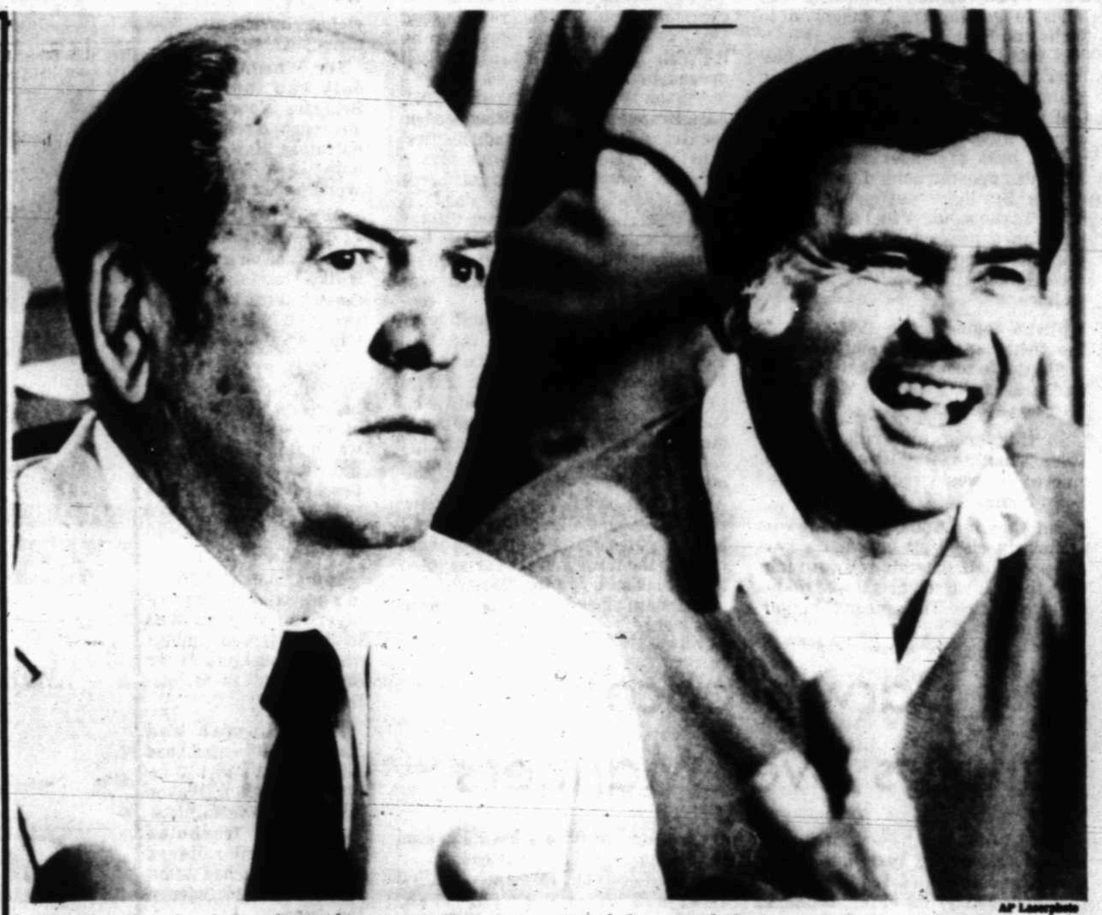

Culpepper will use quarterback Alan Chick, fullback Byron Campbell and halfbacks John Hibbitts and Ricky Madrid as one team and they will start with the Purple team, which has the No. 1 offensive line. Quarterback Scott Sears, fullback Bruce Sears and halfbacks Wesley Williams and Alex Mata will compose the other unit, which will go with the White team, which has the No. 2 offensive line. At the half, the two backfield units will switch teams so Culpepper can see both units work behind both offensive lines.

"We have been very strong offensively this spring with this type of situation," Culpepper notes. "We wanted to establish a No. 1 backfield by the second week of spring training, but there is so little difference in the two units that we couldn't do it.

"THERE IS a possibility that next fall we will play our first three non-conference games with two backfields alternating. I know that keeping fresh backs in the game can make a big difference if there is not a dropoff in talent and these two backfields seem to be almost dead even."

Culpepper also expects to play three freshmen in tonight's scrimmage. Linebacker Eric Brunson and defen-

1961...birth of a legend

And end of another with death of Bettenhausen

By BOB COLLINS
The Indianapolis Star

INDIANAPOLIS — It wan't all that long ago, just 20 years. It almost never rained here in May — Tony Hulman wouldn't allow it. And the Indianapolis Motor Speedway had itself all prettied up for an event that was to start exactly 50 years after the inaugural 500-mile race.

A new double-decked grandstand, 600 feet long, sat across the track from the pit area. There was speculation the purse would climb over $400,000 and, just maybe, somebody finally would negotiate the 2½-mile track in less than one minute.

And May 1961 was a month in which the Speedway, which sometimes promises much and delivers nothing, yanked off the panoply and revealed a mother lode of suspense, excitement, spills, thrills, triumph and tragedy.

In that month, the Speedway dealt out the death of a legend and the birth of another; the debut of a driver with a magic name and the touch of an artist; one of the most exciting races in history, and a tantalizing look into the future.

SPECULATION WAS that the first 150-mph lap would be turned by Tony Bettenhausen, a tough-as-nails veteran of the pre-war bull ring and dirt-track shows. Twice a national champion and already rated as one of the great drivers of all time, Tony still was searching for his first Speedway victory.

Bettenhausen had 14 starts, a second and two fourths in his Speedway record, and this year he and mechanic Jack Beckley appeared to have it all together and tucked in. After turning a lap at 149.250 — just a tick of the watch under the magic minute — Tony, relaxed and smiling, said, "I'm ready and so is the car. This is my year."

Tony Bettenhausen was killed that afternoon sorting out a race car for his buddy Paul Russo.

Making his first appearance in 1961 was a young man from California whose reputation for amazing racing accomplishments had preceded him. His full handle was Rufus Parnell Jones. People called him Parnelli.

Eddie Sachs, the popular clown prince of racing, won the pole with an average speed of 147.481. Beside him in the front row were a couple of rapid gents named Don Branson and Jim Hurtubise.

THE FIRST 50 laps were like a trophy dash as Sachs, Parnelli, Hurtubise and Jim Rathmann (the 1960 winner) swapped the lead on nearly every lap.

In the '60s, the hearts of racing fans could have been covered with a sign that read: "Sachs, No.1." And his followers went wild as Eddie fought back those early challenges only to have the gauntlet thrown down by canny Rodger Ward, Troy Ruttman and A.J. Foyt.

Ruttman's clutch went and suspen-

Two teams share Stampede lead

Bill Lupardus and Wayne Young shot a 67 to share the first round lead in the Ranchland Hill Country Club member-guest Stampede with James Winkel and Chip Walling after 18 holes of the 54-hole best ball tournament.

Just one stroke back were defending champion Jerry Willenburg and his Odessa CC partner James Wright along with Al Boudreaux and Larry Snyder. Snyder, MCC, was on the championship team in 1979.

Craig and Jim Adams were locked with Sam Terry and Jeff Jones at 70 while three teams, Bill McWilliams-C.E. Boyd, Claude Mitchell-Lee golf coach Ronnie Huckabee and Joel Mays -David Griffin were tied at 71.

Plays resumes today with the championship flight teeing off, starting at 9:07 a.m. The tournament concludes with 18 holes Sunday.

Gene McDaniel and John Carey shot a 70 to share first place with Dan Bailey and Tom Kite, Sr., in the first flight of play while Jack Lieber and Barney Barnard were the undisputed second flight leaders with a 73, but only by one stroke.

In all, 120 teams are in the nine-flight field.

Twins fire Goryl; Gardner named

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Minnesota Twins announced Friday that Manager Johnny Goryl has been fired and third base coach Billy Gardner named as his replacement.

The Twins finished third in the American League's Western Division last year after Goryl took over at midseason. Going into Friday night's game, they were in sixth place in the AL West with an 11-24 record, 11½ games back of first-place Oakland.

Gardner was to make his managing debut in the Friday night game against the Royals in Kansas City. Goryl did not make the trip.

The announcement of the managerial change came in a clubhouse news conference just an hour before the two teams took the field.

Gardner, 53, a former major league infielder with several teams, including the Twins, was named to handle third-base duties last Dec. 7. He hed been an assistant previously with Boston and Montreal.

Goryl was named manager of the Twins last Aug. 24, succeeding Gene Mauch, under whom he had served as third base coach since 1979.

The Twins went 23-13 under Goryl in 1980.

Gardner became the ninth manager in Twins history. The others were Cookie Lavagetto, Sam Mele, Cal Ermer, Billy Martin, Bill Rigney, Frank Quilici and Mauch.

Fergus takes 1-stroke lead in Memorial golf

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Keith Fergus, often a challenger but not yet a winner on the PGA Tour, birdied three of his last four holes for a 4-under-par 68 that staked him to one-stroke command Friday in the second round of the Memorial golf tournament.

"I hit the ball well and I putted well. I've got a little more confidence than I've had in the past and that makes a lot of difference," Fergus said after posting his 139 total.

That's five shots under par after two trips over Jack Nicklaus' 7,116-yard Muirfield Village Golf Club course and one in front of Lanny Wadkins and Canadian Dan Halldorson, tied at 140.

Halldorson had another 70 and Wadkins had a share of the lead until he missed the green and bogeyed the last hole for a 72.

"I'm very confident about the last two rounds," Wadkins said. "I haven't missed a fairway in 36 holes. If I can keep on driving like that, well, I figure I can put up some pretty good scores."

Craig Stadler was next at 141 after a 71.

First-round leader Mark Hayes slipped to a 75 and was tied at 142 with Tom Purtzer. Purtzer had a 74 in the bright, warm, sunny weather.

Nicklaus, the tournament founder and host, scrambled to a 71 that left him very much in contention at 143, one under and four back with 36 holes to go.

Birth of a legend

sion problems slowed Ward, so with 75 miles to go, the track belonged to Sachs and Foyt.

In 1961, Foyt was 26. But he had three 500 starts and a national driving championship behind him. A career that was going to surpass all others already was launched.

Foyt held a slender lead as the miles disappeared behind their flying wheels. But there was consternation in the Texan's pits. A fuel hose hadn't functioned properly on a previous stop and there was doubt that Foyt could finish without pitting for more go-juice.

Foyt's engine began sputtering on the 184th lap and he paused for a refill. Eddie zoomed into the lead and had a 32-second margin when Foyt took up the chase

So this one appeared to have Eddie's name on it. With a big lead, it figured he would reduce speed and coast home.

But slow for Eddie was a sign on somebody else's pit board. He kept the pedal to the metal. And with four laps to go, a white line showed on his right rear tire. That means danger. Pit. Now.

FOYT TOOK the lead at almost the exact moment Sach's crew pushed him away from the pit. Foyt won by the scant margin of 600 yards (or just over eight seconds).

And, oh yes, the look ahead. In 1961, Jack Brabham, an established star on the Grand Prix circuit, made his first stop here. He brought with him a strange contraption that railbirds quickly labeled a "funny car." It looked fragile and it's Cooper-Climax engine, which had 85 cubic inches less piston displacement than the Offenhausers, was out of place. It was behind the driver.

But when Brabham's qualifying speed of 145.144 put him in the third row, Indianapolis car owner Art Lathrop was visited by the gift of prophecy. "Gentlemen," said Art, waving his hand around at the roadsters in the pits, "you are looking at $1 million worth of obsolete racing equipment."

Brabham couldn't handle the powerful Offies on the straightaways, but he kept putt-putting right up to them through the turns and the car handled like it was on a rail for 200 laps.

Brabham placed ninth, and Lathrop was right.

Bell, Darwin pace Rangers over Mariners

SEATTLE (AP) — Buddy Bell belted two homers and drove in four runs and Danny Darwin pitched a four-hitter as the Texas Rangers defeated the Seattle Mariners 6-2 Friday night.

Bell led off the second inning with a home run to give the Rangers a 1-0 lead. He then capped a four-run scoring burst with a three-run homer in the third. All four runs for the Rangers came with two outs.

In the third, Bump Wills and Mickey Rivers singled. Al Oliver scored Wills with a single before Bell cleared the bases with a 350-foot homer into the left field bleachers for a 5-0 Texas lead.

Darwin, 5-3, walked just two and struck out four and at one point retired 10 Mariners in a row.

Bruce Bochte led off the seventh inning for the Mariners with a walk. One out later, Jeff Burroughs singled and Bochte scored on a single by Dan Meyer. The Mariners scored their second run in the ninth on a home run by Burroughs, his fifth of the year.

Floyd Bannister lasted just 22-3 innings for the Mariners, pickin up his furth loss for the season in eight decisions.

The Mariners pulled off a triple play in the eighth inning. With runners on first and second, shortstop Rick Auerbach snagged a line drive by Mario Mendoza and then stepped on second and threw to first to complete the second triple play in the American League this year. The Oakland A's pulled one off earlier this season.

Longhorns whip BYU in NCAA Central tilt

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Fifth-ranked Texas jumped to a 6-0 lead in the first inning and collected 14 hits in whipping Brigham Young 11-4 in the NCAA Central Regional baseball tournament Friday night.

The Longhorns, host for the double elimination tournament, will play Saturday night against Lamar, which edged Stanford 6-5 in Friday's first game. Brigham Young and Stanford will play in the first game Saturday.

Texas' major offensive output in the first inning included four infield hits, and undefeated right-hander Tony Arnold held off the hard-hitting Brigham Young team — which ripped 10 hits — in winning his 16th game without a loss this season and his 20th consecutive victory during the past three years.

Joe Whitmer lasted only two innings for Brigham Young, which advanced to regionals by defeating Hawaii, a finalist in the 1980 College World Series.

Texas clinched the game with three eighth inning runs on a single, a walk, shortstop Spike Owen's third infield hit, two wild pitches and a triple by Mike Zatopek.

Texas extended its season record to 56-8-1 before its largest crowd of the season — 6,300, which didn't include hundreds of spectators perched in trees and on the tops of cars parked behind the outfield fence.

Lamar battered freshman pitcher Brian Myers for all of its runs in the first two innings and turned back three Stanford rallies to beat the Cardinals.

After Lamar had slammed four extra base hits off Myers in 1-23 innings, including Wayne Schwing's towering two-run homer, freshman Steve Cottrell relieved Myers and pitched no-hit ball for the remainder of the game.

Trailing 6-1, Stanford rallied for four runs in the top of the fourth inning but could not score again.

Stanford threatened twice, however, off freshmanleft-handr John Senes, who relieved starter Joe Pantaleo to start the seventh inning.

With one out in the eighth, John Elway got his fourth consecutive hit for Stanford — a bunt down the first base line. Phil Wilson singled Elway to second, but Bill Worden and Bob DeCosta struck out, with De Costa swinging at a third strike after lining a potential double foul past third base.

Mike Dotterer led off the ninth for Stanford with a bunt single and dashed to second when Lamar second baseman Alan Marr threw wild to first. Mike Toothman, trying to bunt, popped out to catcher Rich Bailey in front of the plate, and third baseman Kim Christensen made a leaping stab and throw for the second out.

Pinch hitter Darryl Stephens kept the rally going with a walk but Dave Meier — Stanford's leading hitter with a .415 average — flew out to center field for the final out.

Lamar's six-run surge in the first two innings included consecutive doubles by Marr and Lew Surratt and Schwing's homer far over the 375-foot sign in left center in the first. In

Cubs' 5 in 7th nips Drillers, 6-5

TULSA—Midland's Cubs exploded for five runs in the seventh inning to beat Tulsa, 6-5, here Saturday night as they opened a 10-game Texas League road trip with their seventh win in the last 11 games.

Craig Lefferts pitched the win, his fourth, although he needed relief help from Tim Milner.

Mike Shepston opened the 10-batter seventh inning with a single to right, stole second and continued to third on the Terry Cowger's wild throw. Dave Owen walked and Mel Hall gave Midland a 3-2 lead with a triple to the right field corner. Hall then scored after a walk to Javier Fierro on a wild pitch by Kevin Richards, who had relieved after Hall's hit.

Rightfielder Tom Grant then drove his 10th homer over the left-center field fence, a 370-foot shot. The blow equaled his 1980 home run output.

The Cubs other run came in second when Randy LaVigne rattled the left field fence with a triple, rebounding so hard the shortstop fielded the ball. Randy then scored on an infield grounder by Fritz Connally, who just reported from Quad Cities.

Until the seventh, Walt Terrell had allowed the Cubs just two hits, a first inning single by Fierro and LaVigne's triple. The Cubs got hits in only three innings, but made them count. Terrell must hear footsteps against the Cubs. He had blown an 8-3 lead in Midland.

Lefthander Lefferts gave up a first inning run when he walked Bobby Ball, who went to third on infield outs and scored on a Phil Klimas single.

In the second. George Wright singled to left. Then, Tracy Cowger drilled a double to the left field corner. Wright was blazing for the plate, but stumbled coming around third and was caught in a rundown, otherwise the teams might still be playing.

Lefferts then settled down to retired the next 11 Drillers before Joe Gooch singled with one out in the sixth and scored on Mel Barrow's a run-producing single. Then Wright grounded into a double play.

Lefferts needed relief help when Ball singled and O'Brien's fifth homer gave Tulsa two more runs. Tim Milner came on after a rain delay and surrendered a ninth inning homer to Wright.

Manager Roy Hartsfield felt, "Lefferts had command of his pitches and pitched as he has all season. The team has played better ball the last 10 games than they have all year. It's about time. We've paid the price."

The games here today and Sunday are afternoon games.

Midland's Brad Wright gets NLF shot with Dolphins

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

Two injury plagued seasons at the University of New Mexico didn't scare off the Miami Dolphins from picking Brad Wright in the fourth round of the recent National Football League draft, and now the Midlander has a chance to become the fourth Tall City resident to join a current NFL roster.

Wright was the fourth quarterback to be picked in the draft by NFL teams behind Neil Lomax, Rich Campbell and Tom Flick. He feels fortunate to have been picked in the fourth round, but it really didn't come as a surprise to him.

"I was guessing that I might go pretty quick in the draft from the things the Dolphins told me, and my brother-in-law Bill Crutcher, who lives in Lubbock, guessed the fourth round after reading several publications. So it didn't really surprise me," Wright said.

BUT FOR most NFL draft observers, Miami's choice of Wright could be questioned. After all, he tore up a knee in his junior year at New Mexico and had to have surgery after four games, and last season, he broke a collarbone in the sixth game of the year. Injuries like that can scare a lot of people off.

However, since Brad was a sophomore at New Mexico, the pros have shown an interest. As a sophomore, he was fifth in the nation in total offense with a 210-yard per game average (throwing and running).

"The injuries could make a lot of people shy away from me," Wright notes, "but going in the fourth round and being the fourth quarterback picked in the draft is an indication that it didn't bother the Dolphins.

"WITH TWO serious injuries, I know it sounds funny to say they were flukes, but they were. They both happened in unusual circumstances. And both times when I was injured I was on about the same clip as I was as a sophomore when I was fifth in the nation in total offense. I was in the top 10 or 12 in total offense in my junior year and in the top 10 again as a senior when I was hurt. I was showing some consistency."

Wright appears to have an excellent chance of sticking with the Dolphins, and he wants to make the best of that opportunity.

"Bob Griese, who is one of the greats at quarterback, is injured and hasn't responded to treatment and Don Strock, who had such a good season last year, is a free agent and things are unsure there too. There seems to be an opening at quarterback," Wright stated.

"I'm confident in what I can do and I have to make the most of this shot. I know there is a learning process in the pros and I can take sitting on the bench for a while, but I have a competitive spirit and don't like sitting on the bench. I want to give whoever is the starter a run for his money any time I can whether it's in practice or where ever."

WRIGHT'S odyssey to the pro ranks begins July 12 when he reports to the Dolphin camp at Biscayne College in Miami. The only other quarterback selected in the draft by the Dolphins was Boston University's Jim Jensen in the 12th round. Wright has already been to the Dolphins' mini-camp for rookies and was asked to stay over for the veteran mini-camp. Until time to report, Wright is headed back for Albuquerque, N.M., for his own training. He will be throwing to some of his college receivers.

"Ever since I was in the fourth grade playing YMCA football, I've been ogling the professional ranks. I would really like to make the team," says Wright.

Wright helped lead the Midland Lee to its last District 5-5A football championship in 1976. The Rebels posted a 10-2 season that year before falling to Sam Houston Arlington in the regional matchup in San Angelo.

"I found college ball much less strenuous than under Jim Acree at Lee. Acree made us spend a lot of time on the field. In college, we had a lot more film study and didn't spend as much time in actual practice. I can already see after the mini-camp, the the pro ranks is going to be even more mental preparation. While at camp, the Dolphins had team meetings for 1½ hours before and after practice and we were only on the field for about 1½ hours."

IF WRIGHT makes the Dolphin squad, he will join Keith Bishop, Junior Miller and Tom Brahaney as Midland's NFL pros. James Zachery is playing in the Canadian Football League.

Yankees' second baseman Willie Randolph rolls over Indians' Andre Thornton, who is forced at second but breaks up double play in American League game at New York Friday night.

Diaz, Blyleven humble Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Bo Diaz collected three RBI and broke a 3-3 tie in the fifth inning with a sacrifice fly in helping Bert Blyleven to his sixth straight complete-game victory, as the Cleveland Indians defeated the New York Yankees 7-3 Friday night.

Diaz singled in two more runs in the seventh and Rick Manning smashed a solo home run in the sixth to complete Cleveland's scoring. Diaz's game-winning RBI was his fifth of the season.

Blyleven, 6-1, did not allow a run after the third inning, surrendering seven hits and striking out eight.

The Yankees got three runs in the third inning when Barry Foote led off with a single, took second on Blyleven's wild pitch and came home on Willie Randolph's one-out double off the left-center field wall. Then Jerry Mumphrey, making his first start since May 10, singled down the first base line, scoring Randolph. Reggie Jackson drove in the final run of the inning with a single to right, as New York grabbed a 3-0 lead.

Cleveland tied it 3-3 in the top of the fourth on Joe Charboneau's third homer of the year, a three-run job off loser Tommy John, 5-4.

Doug Bird relieved John in the sixth inning. John, who left the game due to a sprained lower back, yielded four runs, six hits and five walks.

Baker beats Cincy for Dodgers

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dusty Baker's two-run single in the 12th inning broke a 2-2 tie and gave the Los Angeles Dodgers a 4-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Friday night.

With Doug Bair, 1-1, pitching, Derrel Thomas of the Dodgers walked leading off the 12th. Rick Monday, attempting a sacrifice, beat Bair's throw to first and was credited with a single. Bill Russell sacrificed and Ken Landreux was intentionally walked before Baker's tie-breaking single.

Baker hit his third home run of the season with two out in the first inning off Reds starter Mike LaCoss to start the scoring. Successive singles by Steve Garvey, Ron Cey and Pedro Guerrero then gave the Dodgers a 2-0 lead.

Los Angeles' Jerry Reuss held the Reds scoreless until the seventh. Ray Knight reached first on shortstop Russell's fielding error and took second on Ron Oester's single. The runners advanced on Mike O'Berry's sacrifice but Knight was erased in a rundown when Mike Vail grounded back to Reuss. Oester then scored on Dave Collins' single.

The Reds tied it in the eighth when George Foster doubled with one out and scored on Knight.

Los Angeles rookie Dave Stewart, 2-0, was the winner, working two scoreless innings.

Easler leads Bucs over Phillies, 3-1

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Hot-hitting Mike Easler rapped a triple and a tie-breaking single and rookie Pascual Perez earned his first major league victory as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 3-1 Friday night.

Perez, 1-0, a 6-foot-2, 162-pound right-hander, limited the Phillies to six hits. He was 0-1 in two games last season.

Loser Larry Christenson, 1-4, held the Pirates hitless over the first four innings. But Easler, who had two home runs and a double against Atlanta Wednesday night, lashed a triple down the right field line in the fifth and scored on a sacrifice fly by Phil Garner to give Pittsburgh a 1-0 lead.

Perez yielded a solo home run to Manny Trillo in the top of the seventh inning, his third of the season. But the Pirates scored twice in the bottom of the seventh with the aid of singles by Bill Madlock, Easler and Omar Moreno.

Orioles' Singleton wrecks Tigers, 4-2

DETROIT (AP) — Ken Singleton drove in a pair of runs with a homer and a single as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Detroit Tigers 4-2 Friday night.

Singleton's homer, his ninth of the season, was a two-out shot into the left field stands off Detroit starter Milt Wilcox, 5-4, that snapped a 2-2 tie in the eighth.

The Orioles added a run in the ninth-on Gary Roenicke's RBI double, the eighth hit off Wilcox, who went the distance for the Tigers.

Winner Scott McGregor, 5-1, who now has won his last five starts, gave up seven hits in eight innings before getting relief help in the ninth from Tippy Martinez. The relief pitcher recorded his seventh save.

Baltimore got two runs after two were out in the third. Al Bumbry was safe on a fielder's choice grounder and scored all the way from first on Rich Dauer's double to center. Then Singleton drove Dauer in with a single.

Lou Whitaker singled in the Detroit fifth, went to third on Al Cowens' hit-and-run single and scored on Alan Trammell's sacrifice fly.

John Wockenfuss hit a leadoff single in the Detroit sixth, went to third on Lance Parrish's single, and came home on Champ Summers' sacrifice fly to tie the game 2-2.

Cramps stop Hooper

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Top-seeded Chip Hooper of Arkansas was eliminated from the NCAA tennis singles championships Friday when he had to be carried from the court because of leg cramps, and the No.1 seed in the doubles compeititon also went down to defeat.

Hooper was trailing 3-4 in the third set of his match against Drew Gitlin of SMU when he was hit by the severe cramps and had to retire. Hooper had won the first set 7-6 and had lost the second 6-4.

Earlier Friday, No.2 seed Glenn Michibata of Pepperdine was knocked out of the tournament by Jimmy Gurfein of Stanford 7-5, 6-7, 6-2.

The losses by Hooper and Michibata left only one of the top eight seeds still in the competition as the singles tournament moves into Saturday's semifinal round.

No.4 seed Tim Mayotte of Stanford advanced to the semifinals with a 6-1, 7-5 triumph over John Davis of UCLA.

Owens, a fullback, and Mitchell, a defensive lineman, each received $20,000 in retroactive benefits and interest. Vilas wins first tough challenge

ROME (AP) — Defending champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina survived his first stiff challenge Friday to lead a South American charge into the semifinals of the $200,000 Italian Open tennis tournament.

The left-hander posted a 6-4, 3-6, 6-2 victory over Hungary's Balasz Taroczy and will face Victor Pecci of Paraguay, who defeated Peter McNamara of Australia in a marathon quarterfinal match 6-2, 5-7, 7-6.

Players' Miller to meet with NRLB's Lubbers

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, was called to Washington Friday to meet with William Lubbers, general counsel for the National Labor Relations Board, after another fruitless bargaining session in the threatened baseball strike.

Miller talked for 90 minutes with Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for management, before flying to Washington to see Lubbers. Both sides reported no progress in the talks aimed at preventing a shutdown of the sport which would come after games of next Thursday, May 28.

The players association had filed an unfair labor practice charge with the NLRB earlier this month, seeking an injunction which would force the 26 major league owners to open their financial books. Grebey and the management negotiators appeared before Lubbers in Washington Wednesday.

"I wanted to give both sides a chance and I did speak with the owners on Wednesday," Lubbers said. "I called this meeting for further factfinding and to discuss the legal issue."

The meeting, which began at 3:30 p.m., was extraordinary because much of official Washington closed early Friday at the start of the Memorial Day holiday weekend.

"I realize time is getting short, but I probably won't announce my decision until Tuesday," Lubbers said.

In labor negotiations, management is required to open its books only if it claims financial exigency. Baseball routinely denies any such exigency at the start of each negotiations but the players say that current bargaining has been linked to the issue because management often publicly claims it cannot afford the large contracts growing out of free agency.

Collins upsets Austin; Rains halt Munich play

BERLIN (AP) — Sandy Collins upset Tracy Austin 3-6, 6-4, 7-6 Friday in the quarterfinals of the $100,000 Berlin Grand Prix tennis tournament.

Before 2,500 spectators, Collins, listed 32nd in the world, fought back the opening attack from the top-seeded Austin to defeat her in the second set.

The 22-year-old Texan battled to a tiebreaker to win the final set against her fellow American, playing in only her second tournament following four months off because of a sciatic nerve problem.

Collins advanced to meet Argentina's Ivanna Madruga, who defeated Britain's Deborah Jevans 6-1, 6-3 earlier in the day.

In another upset, Astralia's Diane Fromholtz defeated Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova 6-4, 7-6.

Regina Marsikovy, also of Czechoslovakia, defeated Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia 6-4, 6-2.

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Heavy rains interrupted the Bavarian International Tennis Tournament Friday, with Czechoslovakia's Pavel Slozil leading New Zealand's Chris Lewis 5-3.
