(By Associated Press)

MONROE, La., Aug. 3.—Biscuits made from poison flour killed a farmer's wife, her son and a boarder, and made three others violently ill on the E. L. Wallace farm, four miles east of Kilbourne.

Cowboy Mayor Of Mineral Wells Kicks Five Gallon Hat Into Ring; Platform Is Not Yet Formulated

(By Associated Press)

MINERAL WELLS, Aug. 3.—Charlton Brown, mayor of Mineral Wells, formally announced today that he would seek the governorship of Texas.

In his battered office on the second floor of the Mineral Wells city hall the ex-cowboy stated he "had kicked that old five gallon cowboy hat in the ring."

Platform Withheld

He gave no announcement in regard to his platform.

"You can tell them that Mayor Charlton Brown is in the running," he said. "I will have a statement to issue within the near future. There will be no politics; there won't be anything but a red headed, freckled fisted old ranch hand that knows the blue shirt and those inside it.

"There will be planks in my platform of the old pine type—the type the common people will know what they are reading about.

Gallus In Race

"I know what is going on at Austin. I can answer every question any political writer may ask me. My platform will be of the cotton stocking and overall variety. I am in the race, blue shirt, one gallus and all."

Mayor Brown's name was first mentioned for governor by Mayor J. Waddy Tate of Dallas, who incidentally is in Mineral Wells vacationing.

"He is a one gallus boy," the Dallas official said of the Mineral Wells mayor, "and we haven't had one since the days of Jim Hogg. He represents the masses of the people, laborers and farmers, the salt of the earth."

Texas Panhandle Shown As Potentially Wealthy In I. C. C. Rail Hearing

Four Railways May Share Profits Of Section

(By Associated Press)

FORT WORTH, Aug. 3. — The Golden apple of Eastern Texas Panhandle railroad facilities may be given to one road or sliced into portions for four major rail systems as a result of six days of testimony at the Interstate Commerce Commission hearing which was closed here today.

Four major railroad systems presented testimony supporting their applications for convenience and necessity certificates to construct 274.2 miles of line costing, eventually, $11,59,178 and tapping a territory of what witnesses called "unprecedented wealth and potential wealthy."

Purchase Sought.

The first application was that of the St. Louis-San Francisco for permission to purchase or lease the Gulf, Texas and Western from Salesville to Seymour. That road was valued at $1,680,000, and the Frisco said $780,000 would be spent to rehabilitate it. The Frisco asked to construct a new line from Seymour to Vernon, 44 miles, for $1,709,744.

The second application was that of the Chicago, Rock Island and Gulf for a line from Beaver creek, a point on the Frisco's proposed Seymour-Vernon road, to Shamrock, via Quanah and Wellington, a distance of 108.5 miles. The construction costs for that line would be $4,217,854, Rock Island officials estimated.

Denver Proposes Line.

The Fort Worth and Denver City proposed a line paralleling the Rock Island from Childress to Shamrock.

The Denver also asked to extend its road from Shamrock to Pampa, tapping the new oil field near Lefors, which a witness said was pro-

Hunt Minerals Prospector, Student Join Talents

In the southwestern section of the state of New Mexico, which still bears a resemblance to the old west, a student of Texas Tech met and made friends with a grizzled mining prospector, who had never darkened the doors of a technical school of learning.

This geology student, Clyde Drake, of Memphis, who was a member of the college group which made the field trip to the Sunshine State, became interested in the activities of the veteran prospector, and as a result of the friendship which arose between the two, a partnership has been formed.

Drake has returned to the home of his prospector friend, near Silver City, N. M., and the two have joined their talents in searching for the minerals believed to be hidden away in the mountains of southwestern New Mexico. With the old prospector furnishing the practical experience and the Tech student using scientific knowledge gathered here at the college, the pair hopes to make mining discoveries that will bring fame to both before September arrives.

Young Drake, a junior at the local institution, has studied here under Dr. Leroy T. Patton, head of the Geology department.

Charge Emotional Excitant Used By Snook In Murder

Former Professor At Ohio State Listens To State Theory Of Death Of His Co-Ed Sweetheart

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 3. — Dr. James H. Snook, former Ohio state veterinary professor, listened with interest today while the state introduced one of its principal witnesses to prove that he fed his co-ed sweetheart, Theora K. Hix an emotional excitant and killed her when she repulsed him.

It established through city chemist Charles F. Long that stains found on Dr. Snook's clothing after he was arrested were caused by human blood and that an examination of the girl's stomach after death revealed the narcotic preparation he was alleged to have given her.

The death of Miss Hix ended an illicit relationship which she had carried on with the former professor for three years. The prosecutor is attempting to prove to the jury that Miss Hix was tired of her 49-year-old lover and was unwilling to accompany him that night to the apartment house where they shared a room at intervals together.

The owner of the apartment house, Mrs. M. M. Smalley, a little woman, who has time to read nothing but the bible, according to her own testimony, occupied the stand for about an hour this morning.

Women Plead Guilty To Charges Of Vagrancy

DARKENING skies spread over the horizon of vice in Lubbock Saturday night as county officers swept down in one of the largest series of raids ever staged in one night. Six women were arrested, and five of them pleaded guilty and paid fines, on charges of vagrancy, while the othre was lodged in the county jail following the entering of a plea of not guilty and a determination to "fight" the case.

"You certainly cannot arrest me," she declared. "I have done nothing and I do not intend to pay a fine." She was arrested, however, and today looks out upon the world thru iron bars.

Bootleggers Not Slighted

The bootlegging fraternity was not forgotten in this sweep upon crime in Lubbock and four raids were staged which netted approximately 100 bottles of beer together with one negro man for the sale of whiskey. Four Mexicans were also lodged in the county jail and charges of violation of the prohibition laws will be filed against them Monday.

Following a call into the outskirts of the city, a negro woman and man were arrested and lodged in the county bastile for disturbing the peace. They were residents on a farm near the city and early in the night were said to have threatened the white occupants of the premises. The negro woman was alleged to have cursed the white woman and called her names. When officers arrived on the scene she was not to be found while the wan was sitting in the doorway with a gun in his lap. He declared he knew nothing of her whereabouts and that he was holding the gun for fear that she would start trouble. A thorough search of the place brought her from hiding.

Two Fires Catch In City Saturday

Fire which started on the roof of the first floor of the two-story home of A. W. Jackson, 1319 Nineteenth street, yesterday evening about 7 o'clock, did slight damage as members of the Lubbock fire department arrived on the scene in ample time to check the flames.

The blaze, said by some to have started as the result of a cigarette, only burned a small hole in the roof of the residence.

Slight damage resulted from a small fire which started Saturday afternoon about 3 o'clock in the residence of T. M. Woodard, 512 Avenue L.

Electric wires were burned but firemen arrived before other damage was sustained. The conflagration startd from a short in the wiring.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

Radio Contacts With U. S. Stations Growing More Frequent; Passengers Are Anxious For Cigarettes

(By Associated Press)

THE DIRIGIBLE Graf Zeppelin as Sunday approached, was making a bee-line across the last reach of the broad Atlantic with the hope of making New York by noon, at the earliest estimates.

The opposing winds which had retarded her, during much of its air voyage had lessened but there was a prospect that squally weather with rain might be encountered near the American shore. At 9:29 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time) Saturday, the third full day would be completed in the air so that it appeared that the total voyage would require at least 90 hours. The 1928 flight took 111, because of storms.

Radio Contacts Made.

As the giant airship narrowed the gap between to the shore, radio contacts with American stations grew more frequent and more often came the message of reassurance "all's well."

The passengers, according to direct messages to the Associated Press, were in no hurry to land, although it was apparent that their first demand at Lakehurst would be for cigarettes. The inflammable lifting gas rates smoking "out" during the flight. Meanwhile the guests amused themselves by watching whales, the Leviathans of the deep, sport below them.

There was some discrepancy in the positions given in messages received by American stations early

Figures Indicate Lubbock's Population 20,000, Plus

Utilities Survey Shows Growth Of City Outstanding

Various Figures Are Taken And Methods Of Estimating Population Applied To Reach Conclusion

HOW BIG IS LUBBOCK?

Such is the question that is asked every day by citizens of the city, travelers through this section and letters to the chamber of commerce and other civic organizations engaged in the promotion of the city and Plains country.

Several figures are available, none of them definite but estimates that will not miss the exact figure to any degree. The last government census of Lubbock was taken in 1920 and at that time the population stood at 4,051. During the years following Lubbock has enjoyed an almost phenomenal growth until estimates state that the next census, to be taken next year, will show the city well toward 25,000. The increase has averaged approximately 2,000 persons a year, as revealed by figures obtained at the Lubbock chamber of commerce, gas, light telephone and water companies.

Ratio Is Given

The average ratio of the last three census years, 1900, 1910 and 1920 showed a figure of 3.84 between scholastics and the population. The last scholastic enumeration of 1929 showed a total of 5,104. This multiplied by 3.84 gives a total estimated population for the city of Lubbock of 19,599. The 3.84 figure is rather low as compared with some sections of the country when estimating the growth but officials state that due to the fact that the Lubbock Independent School District is bigger than the corporate limits of the city, they have cut the figure. Certain investment and insurance companies have placed the ratio at a higher plane even going at times to as high as 5.50.

All sources of information, however, agree that the total population at this time is between 20,000 and 21,000. The last city directory of Lubbock, published in the fall of 1928, listed a total of 10,295 names. This listing multiplied by two gives the estimated population as arrived at by publishers of these books at 20,592.

There are at this time in the city of Lubbock 3564 gas meters installed. Officials state that in figuring population they estimate five persons to every meter, thus giving a total of 17,820. This, coupled with the fact that there are approximately 450 homes in the city not served by gas, would raise the figure to 20,070.

Telephone connections at this time approximate 3,188. Six persons are estimated to every line in the city totalling 19,128.

Electric light connections total 5 152 and officials state that their estimates are about four persons to each connection giving as their population figures 20,608.

Separate from these figures will be the enrollment of Texas Technological college, which, in the fall, winter and spring will bring the total to well par 23,000, anticipating an enrollment of approximately 2,800 students.

Attention Given Brazoria Farms

HOUSTON, Aug. 3.(AP) — Ramsey and Darrington farms in Brazoria county drew the attention of the prison centralization commission today, the second day of its survey of the Texas penitentiary properties.

During the sessions of the present legislature, the house of representatives voted to concentrate the system on those two farms but the senate refused to concur.

Sites Are Studied

The commission, created by the legislature to make concentration recommendations, gave these possible sites a close study.

The inspectors will spend the night at the Retrieve farm and continue their survey there tomorrow. They also may visit the Clemens farm tomorrow. Next week they expect to visit the farms above Houston and the Walls at Huntsville.

Yesterday's tour took the commissioners to the Imperial, Harlem and Blue Ridge farms. They were the guests of Senator Walter Woodul at a dinner last night after which a half dozen of them went to Huntsville for the Leahy electrocution.

The town has an active chamber of commerce and W. J. Ball, secretary, receives the cooperation of a majority of the business men in working for the good of the town.

Business Side Of Livestock Studied

COLLEGE STATION, Aug. 3. (AP) A thorough study of the business side of range livestock production in Texas suggests that the wisest plan of operation is to produce sufficient feed for all breeding stock and market surplus feed by feeding livestock for market, E. W. Sheets of the animal husbandry division of the bureau of animal industry, told, the general session of the Farmers Short Course at the A. and M. college of Texas today.

In making the study in Texas in question, the United States department of agriculture has acted upon the belief that government and state experiment stations and extension agencies have not gone far enough when they tell the farmer or ranchman only which is the better of two or more systems of livestock production, Sheets said.

Colonel Goebel's Visit To Lubbock Is Accelerator For Interest In Aviation

Famous Flier Gives Section Its First Air Celebrity

By LUCILE BARR-SMITH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

OUTRANKED in the minds of the minds of the public by only Col. harles A. Lindbergh and Com-ander Richard E. Byrd as Amer-a's foremost airman, Col. Arthur Goebel, Oakland-Honolulu air e winner and former movie stunt er, gave Lubbock's municipal air-rt its first celebrity this week hen he landed his famous "Wool-oc" here for an all night stay hursday.

"Known wherever aviation is talk-d a consistent leader in all phases cloud piloting, Colonel Goebel mpressed Lubbock as a straight-forward, unassuming young man of particularly pleasing personality. is visit here undoubtedly gave av-ation another boost in this sec-ion where air advancement has een decidedly slow.

Famous For Two Years

t was on August 16, two years ago, hat Colonel Goebel started on the ole race flight from Oakland, Cal., to Honolulu and won the race, fame and fortune. His best friends tried to tell him that he didn't want to make the flight but he went ahead because he knew he could do it. He said that he wasn't the least bit afraid because he was prepared for it. He took 417 gallons of gasoline, more than he was advised that he would need, and arrived in Hono-lulu with 111 gallons of gasoline and 14 gallons of oil. He took all the gasoline he could carry be-cause he wanted to be prepared for any emergencies.

Flies Above Fog

It took Colonel Goebel 26 hours 17 minutes and [illegible] seconds to cross the Pacific. Seventeen hours of that time he was flying above the fog and wasn't able to see even the water. He said he had his mind on that one dot which was his destina-tion and that he knew if he ever lost sight of that dot he was lost. But he was sure he would reach it and didn't think any more about it.

"When aviators start from one place to another they travel in what they call the 'Great Circle.' This is the shortest distance between two points in the air and is a straight line, but if drawn on a flat surface would make a curved line, follow-ing the contours of the globe. I have made three flights across the continent and when fly-ing from Los Angeles to New York, I go first to Albuquerque, New Mex-ico, over Guymon, Oklahoma and then follow the Great Circle from there to New York," explained the Colonel.

Flying Nine Years

Colonel Goebel has been flying for nine years and has a record of about five thousand hours in the air. He has never had a serious crack-up during the whole of these nine years. "I have had a few small accidents, but these were unavoid-able, and all happened on the ground."

For five years he was a stunt flyer in the movies. He has picked men from automobiles, motorcycles, speedboats and other airplanes. He has skidded automobiles through fences on race tracks for the bene-fit of thrill-loving movie fans. Once he picked a man off another plane with a large hook, and he can tell of other daring things he has done.

Not Absent Minded

"I have only run out of gasoline once and that was because my com-panion insisted that we take food instead of an extra fifteen gallons of gasoline, which would have car-ried us through." Imagine out of gas only once in nine years! I'm afraid it wouldn't do for some of our ab-sent-minded motorists to take to the air.

Arthur Goebel is a fatalist. He be-lieves that we only carry out in this world what we were put here to carry out. And it takes plenty of iron nerve to say this, "I would take any plane, and after checking it over personally to see that it was in good condition, would stunt or go anywhere if I thought there was a reasonable chance that I might make it."

A Regular Man

And he is just like any other man. When he was asked his age, he said, "I don't know. I would have to write home to find out." Of course he was not serious, but it all goes to show that even though public personages have to humor their hero worshipping public they like to have a few private matters.

He was born in Belin, New Mexico and spent part of his life in Texas and New Mexico, although he con-siders Los Angeles his home. His father was born in Germany and his mother was born in Mason, Tex-as, but of Prussian parents.

He is mechanically inclined and always checks his planes personally before a long flight. He puts the mechanical device, that pumps the gasoline to the tanks in the wings from the big tanks, on his plane himself and then he knows that it is all right.

Has Flying School

Colonel Goebel is very much in-terested in his chosen work. He has a flying school in Kansas City, known as the Art Goebel school of flying. This was established about four months ago and there are about 65 students who are now ac-tually flying, averaging about 30 hours a day. It cost about a quarter of a million dollars and has the best of instructors and equipment. The instructors in the school are United States army officers.

People in the west do not realize the value of aviation as the people in the east do. They are coming more and more to rely upon it for swift transportation. It will not be long, in Colonel Goebel's opinion, be-fore the whole United States will be a network of airports. He believes the future of aviation is a great one and that it will not be so very long before even airplanes can be used without fuel. He believes the cause of so many accidents is the careless operation rather than the motors' failing.

He has the same trouble with crowds that Lindbergh has. He is constantly afraid that someone will get in the way and get struck by a propellor.

AGREEMENT DENIED

Little Value Given Hope Of Disarmament

LONDON, Aug. 3. (AP)—Inquiry in responsible quarters tonight showed no special value was attached to a story in the Evening Standard today saying Prime Minister Ramsey MacDonald and American Ambassador Charles G. Dawes had reached a tentative agreement with regard to naval disarmament, including restriction of battleship programs.

It was generally felt the negotia-tions were not yet concluded. The Premier said yesterday he was likely to return Tuesday from his holiday at Lossiemouth, Scotland, it was understood that conversations on the naval question were likely to be resumed with the American Ambassador.

Sliding Scale On Sugar Tariff Seen

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. (AP) — A sliding scale sugar tariff with a maximum duty of 3 cents a pound and a minimum of one cent was offered today by chairman Smoot of the senate finance committee as a substitute for the house sugar tariff rate of 3 cents a pound.

The Utah senator said he believ-ed his proposal would stabilize the New York wholesale price at six cents a pound. When that price prevails a tariff rate of 2.20 cents a pound the same as n existing law would be applied under the sliding scale.

The Smoot schedule would apply the three cent tariff whenever the price of sugar at New York drops to 5.20 cents or below. As the price increases the tariff would decrease and the minimum rate of one cent would apply whenever sugar reach-ed 7.20 cents or more.

CUBS GET TWO PLAYERS

WACO, Aug. 3. (AP)—President C. R. Turner of the Waco baseball club tonight announced the purchase of Outfielder Robin and Pitcher Thormalen from the Wilmington club of the South-Atlantic league.

Easy Matter To Find Out Ball Players' Ages--We Don't Think

Do you see the ball players? What are the ball players doing? They are just standin g there. How old are they? Oh, various ages! At the left is Grover Alexander. He's 27. Next is Art Shires, who is 21. Then comes Melvin Ott, and isn't he the cunning litt le fellow? Melvin is 11. Next in line is Grover Hartley, and he's about 22. Jimmy Foxx, in the rompers and nice black tie, is 21, too, just like Melvin. Last is cute litt e Jack Quinn, who has been playing professional ball 29 years and is 32 years old.

By WM. M. BRAUCHER
NEA Service Sports Writer

After they have whacked their last line drive to the catcher, muffed their last easy grounder, flung the last ball they were able to fling and tottered off the diamond, ball players always have one more out left.

They can always go back to Pleasantville and join the Married Ladies' Club, no member of which ever can be discovered being more than 39.

How old is a ball player? Well, how old is a cockroach or an elephant? You might go around at random for days and days, either in a zoo or ball park, asking this question and about the only reward you'd get for your pains would be the winning of new friends so warm they would freeze out the Byrd party at the South Pole.

First we have Melvin Ott, the Giants' boy wonder. Melvin is 11, according to the stories the New York writers are thinking up. There's a distinct advantage in being 11 years old when breaking into the big leagues. You can play 17 years and only be 20.

Noah Brought on Quinn

If you doubt those figures go ask Jack Quinn, the old and very good spitball flinger of Mr. Mack's crew. Quinn was recommended to Mack by a fellow named Noah, who brought Quinn along as Exhibit A under the heading of right-handed pitchers.

Jack Quinn has been playing professional baseball for 29 years. That makes him 32 years old, at the outside. Down in his home town of Pottsville, Pa., you might find some grizzled old beezar who could remember when Jack was young, but if you did you ought to write the guy up, because he probably knew Lincoln, too.

Grover C. Alexander is still an adolescent, to be sure, but the boy is growing. He started pitching on the Seventh Illinois Regiment team that was organized by General Phil Sheridan, and lost his first game to the Birmingham Barons, April 10, 1864, by the decisive score of 13 to 12. That makes Grover about 24.

Rocks

There is another Grover in this youthful bevy of big leaguers—we mean Grover Hartley the Cleveland catcher. Grover was behind the bat the year that the Neolithic Haberdashers defeated the Neanderthaler Ice Creams for the amateur championship. Joe McGinnity pitched that game for the Neoliths and struck out 12 batsmen with a rock-ball that is still on exhibition at the Smithsonian Institution. By the way, that makes Grover, old boy, 29.

The Great Shires, shrinking violet of the White Sox ensemble, is 21. He was a holdout all one winter at Valley Forge but finally signed with G. Washington's Senators when spring came, and he got three home runs the day before Paul Revere's ride.

Little Poison Waner of the Pirates testifies that Ott's age really must be something like 10 or 11, since he (Waner) is 23 and has only been playing in the Pittsburgh lineup since Captain Kidd took over the management from Smoky Joe Wood and nicknamed the team the Corsairs.

After 100 Years

Jimmy Foxx, Mack's valuable ball player, was born October 22, 1907, according to the records. He was 17 when he joined the Athletics, the year that Sullivan and Kilrain fought.

Most ball players are born with gray hair, of course. They mature slowly. In order to be a veteran in the big leagues, you really should have played at least 100 years.

Bob Peck And Grady Higginbotham To Meet For Crown; Saturday's Preliminaries Leave Swartz And Acton In Fourth Flight

Two veterans of the fairways, as closely matched as is humanly possible, clash on the Lubbock Country club golf course today in a 36-hole match that will decide the open golf championship of Lubbock.

Bob Peck, diminutive club wizard who led a field of 64 in qualifying play, and Grady Higginbotham, bronzed iron shark who has traversed many a rugged course, are the chief actors in today's finals which begin this morning at 9 o'clock.

Peck and Higginbotham will lead the way for four championship matches, representing the four flights of the tournament. Following on the heels of the first flight finalists, will be Campbell and McFarland, who will meet the second flight title.

Third Flight Close

Another close contest is expected in the third flight finals between Roberds and English while in the fourth, Acton and Swartz are matched. Swartz is the favorite in the last named match.

Although Peck's consistent play in driving through to the finals has stamped him as the favorite over Higginbotham, the two golfers are so closely matched that the breaks of the game are certain to be deciding factors.

Completing the first 18 holes of the championship matches before noon, the finalists will begin their afternoon round at 2:30.

Local golf fans have been extended a cordial invitation to witness the finals today and one of the largest galleries in the history of Lubbock are expected on hand when the finalists start their 36-hole grind.

In Saturday's fourth flight semi-finals, Swarts defeated L. Doherty, 5 and 4, and Acton downed Watkins, 2 up.

Hubbers Set To Invade Lobo Lair

Local Baseball Nine To Carry Full Strength To Lamesa Today For Return Engagement

Bent on gaining revenge for the recent treatment handed them by the hard-hitting Loboes, the Lubbock Hubbers invade Lamesa today for a return engagement with the White brothers and their mates.

Still smarting under the stinging defeat handed them by the Loboes in the Amarillo tournament, the Hubbers have mustered their full strength for today's encounter.

With Alex McColl serving his baffling slants to the slugging Loboes, the locals are set to administer to the Lamesa crew the same sort of medcine they received in that memorable Saturday game at Amarillo. Manager H. B. Wilson will present a team today with a batting punch that is likely to send Rose, the Lamesa ace, to the well-known showers.

Hill or Galley will do the receiving for the Hubbers. Roy Tyler is slated for first base. Rigney for second, Ater for shortstop and Galther on third. Brothers, Marshall, Waller are in line for outfield duty.

A large delegation of local baseball fans are expected to accompany the Hubbers to Lamesa for the contest.

Playoff Decides Twilight Crown

The Lubbock City baseball league wound up its schedule for the season Friday with the Santa Fe aggregation leading the pack by a full game and the Hardware Dealers and Carpenter-Painters tied for second place.

Three tie games between the Auto-Barbers and Santa Fe remain to be played before the second half title can be determined. By winning two of the three contests, the Railmen can cinch the flag while the last place Auto-Barbers can rise to the top with a clean sweep.

Another playoff is necessary to decide the championship of the first half. The Hardware Dealers and Auto-Barbers finished the first half schedule in a deadlock.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3. Champion Enriched $47,300 For Go With Tony

CHICAGO, Aug. 3. (AP)—Sammy Mandell, world light champion, will receive $47,300 for polishing off Tony Canzoneri in their ten-round title engagement in the Chicago Stadium last night. The challenger will be enriched $23,150.

These figures are based on the unofficial receipts checked up today by the Illinois State Athletic commission. The gross receipts were reported to be $136,191.36, with state and federal taxes amounting to $20,428.68. The net receipts, with the state and federal taxes deducted amounted to $115,762.58. The total paid attendance, according to unofficial figures was 20,713, with possibly 3,000 complimentary ticket holders.

Mandell and Canzoneri were understood to have received 60 per cent of the net receipts, with 40 per cent going to the champion and 20 per cent to the challenger.

Mandell was a downhearted winner. He said today he was not himself and that he would not have blamed Eddie Kane, his manager, if Kane had tossed him out of the ring. The champion appeared to have been overtrained, and his marvelous cleverness alone carried him to victory.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

By Henry L. Farrell

GREAT LUCK WITH PITCHERS

Much of the success that Bucky Harris has achieved as a major league manager has been due to his skill in handling pitchers. It is no labor on memory to recall what results he got from Dutch Ruether and Stan Coveleskie in Washington when every other manager in the major leagues thought they were through.

Harris told Ruether that he expected him to be ready to work every fourth day and that he wouldn't be used as a relief pitcher. He told George Uhle the same thing this year.

The policy of Harris in handling his pitchers is related in the following from H. G. Salsinger of the Detroit News:

HE TREATS 'EM NICE

The same program that Harris follows with Uhle is used in handling other pitchers who are regarded as first-string performers. They are pitched in regular turn and kept out of the bull pen between assignments. Harris reserves his bull pen for relief pitchers and assigns certain pitchers for relief work alone. Starting pitchers are never used for anything else.

He instills confidence in his pitchers in a number of ways. For instance, for several years it was the custom to send out from one to three relief pitchers at the start of the game. They would be kept in the bull pen, warming up, ready at a second's notice to come to the rescue of the man pitching the game. But this year the bull pen is vacant. Harris does not send out relief pitchers until the man who starts the game wobbles badly in a close contest. Only when he wobbles badly is a man sent to the bull pen to warm up.

This method benefits Detroit in two ways. One is psychological. By keeping the bull pen vacant Harris impresses his starting pitcher that he has complete confidence in him and since Harris has complete confidence in the pitcher the pitcher is quite likely to have complete confidence in himself. Nothing so shakes the confidence of a pitcher as to have a few fellow pitchers warming up in the bull pen while he is pitching, indicating to him that the manager expects him to crack. This bull pen pitching often causes the starting pitcher to do anything but disappoint his manager; expected to crack, he cracks.

SAVES PITCHERS' ARMS

By keeping pitchers out of the bull pen until the occasion absolutely demands relief, Harris saves the arms of his pitchers. It is wise economy. More games have been lost in bull pens than on the pitching hills of the major fields.

Harris realized long ago that confidence is the main thing in athletic competition. The man who does not believe in himself cannot be a howling success. His job, or part of his job, from the start of the training season, has been to instill confidence in his players, to make them believe in themselves. He spent much time in trying to establish self-confidence in his pitchers.

Dan Howley Quitting As Pilot Of St. Louis Browns

hrough At End Of Season, Says Brownies' Boss

an Who Made Contender Out Of Seventh Place Club Is At Outs With St. Louis Management

By HENRY L. FARRELL
NEA Service Sports Editor

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 3. — Howling Dan Howley, who took a seventh place club and made an actual pennant contender out of it, will not be the manager of the St. Louis Browns next year.

Dan Howley

It has been fairly well known around the circuit that Howley was not on the best of terms with the management, but there aren't many owners, outside of St. Louis, who would fire a successful manager.

"I'm not going to be fired," Howley told a personal friend just a few days ago. "But I'm out. I'm through at the end of this season. It makes no difference where the club finishes. If we win the pennant I'm through just the same I'm quitting."

Killifer Doesn't Want It

The name of Bill Killifer, one of the game's greatest catchers in his day and the coach of the Browns, has been mentioned as the probable successor to Howley, but our informant was positive in the statement that Killifer would not take the job and that he would go right along with Howley if the arrangements could be made.

After the success he achieved in the minor leagues and in St. Louis Howley should have no trouble in getting another job in the majors. In fact it has been disclosed that he was given to understand very early in the season that Judge Emil Fuchs, owner of the Boston Braves, would give him a position any time he wanted one.

You might laugh at the idea of taking a job with the Braves, but the Browns were just as bad as the Braves when Howley took the management.

Office Interference

Howley is still doing his work with the Browns, but it is obvious to those who know him that he hasn't had the heart this year that he had last year when the Browns were doing the big surprise act of the league.

He has told his close friends that office interference has made his position unpleasant and has humiliated him in front of his ball players. He didn't like to be called to the phone and be told what catcher to use. He also resented the activities of the office in buying players and making trades without consulting him.

The office claims that it made the ball club for Howley and that the sagacity of Phil Ball, owner of the club, brought to the team the young players that made it. Others have said that Killifer developed the pitchers who have had a large part in making the club successful.

Not An Aggressor

It was for this reason that Killifer's name was mentioned as the successor to Howley. He is a smart baseball man as every one knows, but he isn't of the aggressive type. But perhaps the St. Louis owners don't want a manager who asserts himself too much.

"Jimmy Austin ought to be the manager of that club," a smart baseball man said a few days ago. "He likes to carry bats around and keep watch on the satchel with the balls in it. He likes to hit balls to the infield and pound out fungos to the outfielders. He would be a swell manager for Phil Ball and the vice presidents of the club."

Bellonti Resigns; Claims Innocence

ROME, Aug. 3. (AP)—Ernesto Bellonti tonight resigned his membership in the chamber of deputies but protested his innocence of graft charges in the city administration of Milan which led to his removal from all public and official activity by Premier Mussolini yesterday.

Italy talked of nothing else but the scandal today and the newspapers, undoubtedly ordered to do so, played down the story although they printed the full text of the finding of the committee of inquiry which held that Belloni, who had represented Italy in international financial conferences, had used his position to enrich himself.

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

Lubbock's Hubbers are on the road today, meeting the Lamesa Loboes at the Dawson county capital at 3:30 this afternoon.

Another baseball team, making its first venture, will meet the strong Tahoka nine on the latter's diamond today.

At the Lubbock Country Club, beginning at 9 o'clock this morning, the final match for the open golf championship at Lubbock will be played between Bob Peck and Grady Higginbotham. The first 18 holes are to be completed before noon and the afternoon rounds will begin at 2:30.

Of the 29 managers who have managed the St. Louis Cardinals since the club was launched in 1876, Bill McKechnie is the only one to stage a comeback after being kicked off the team. After directing the Redbirds to the National League pennant last year, McKechnie took a worn-down club and lost four straight to the New York Yankees in the world series. So decisive was the New York triumph over the Cards in this disasterous series, Sam Breadon became infuriated and shipped Bill back to Rochester.

The good-natured Billy South-worth was put at the Cardinal helm at the beginning of the current season and failed to get the results expected by St. Louis owners. With McKechnie heading the Rochester club to another pennant in the International League, Breadon realized the mistake he had made. The resulting change in which Southworth went back to Rochester and McKechnie was brought back to St. Louis is history now.

Southworth's failure to handle the Cardinal pitching staff was the main cause for his failure as a big league manager. McKechnie had not been back on the job many days before a decided improvement was evident in the performance of the hurlers and the entire team. The man who piloted the Redbirds to the championship of the senior circuit in 1928 is one of the most favored managers in the big leagues.

By changing managers four times in the last three years, the St. Louis Cardinals have set a modern major league record. The Cards also hold the all-time record for changing managers—seven in one season. That happened in 1896, and the club finished 11th that year in a 12-team circuit. St. Louis has also had 13 managers in five years, from 1894 to 1898. Funny, isn't it, what we can learn by delving into the record books? Interesting, just the same.

With their present pitching staff, the Houston Buffs may be hard to put out of the race for the last half championship in the Texas League. The addition of Flint Rhem and Art Reinhart, former St. Louis stars, to the Houston hurling staff has improved President Ankerman's club at least 100 per cent. Besides these major league veterans, the Bisons have Lindsey, Brown and Wachtel who can be depended upon to win their share of games. But with this strong pitching staff, the Buffs cannot hope to repeat their 1928 performance if the team itself doesn't manufacture a few tallies for the twirlers to ride on. In recent games, the Buffs have lacked the punch that is so necessary for a winning combination.

The Chicago Cubs' triumph over the Brooklyn Robins yesterday while the Pittsburgh Pirates were lying idle gave the McCarthymen a six game lead over the second-place Buccaneers. Although the season is slightly half over, the present pace of the Bruins has just about convinced the skeptics that William Wrigley has gathered together the most powerful baseball aggregation in the senior circuit. Barney Dreyfuss has predicted that the Cubs are certain to crack under the strain of the pennant fight, but as yet no signs of skyrocketing is in evidence on the part of the Windy City crew.

Dubuque Sends 'Em To Majors

By NEA Service

DUBUQUE, Ia., Aug. 3—Al Eckert, southpaw pitcher, and Otto Bluege, shortstop, have been sold to the Cincinnati Reds by the Dubuque club of the Mississippi Valley League, according to an announcement just made. Bluege is a younger brother of Ossie Bluege of the Washington Senators and is a brilliant young infielder. Eckert, playing his first year in professional baseball, is leading the league in the averages, with 11 victories in his first 14 games. Bluege was with Dubuque last year. The two will report to the Reds at the close of the Valley League season and may get a taste of big league ball this year.

Domination Of Foxx Over American League Batting Situation Becomes More Pronounced As Star Clouts

Babe Ruth Breaks Into First Ten Society With Spurt Past Week; Mack Crew Predominates

CHICAGO, Aug. 3. (AP)—The domination of Jimmy Foxx of the Athletics, over the American League batting situation, became more pronounced during the fifteenth week of the season, averages released today, including Wednesday's games, reveal. Connie Mack's first baseman had a mark of .390, 17 points better than that of Heinie Manush of St. Louis, who was in second place.

Hits 428 For Week.

In shaking off the Manush menace, Foxx clouted the ball at a .428 clip during the week, a pace which proved much too brisk for his nearest rival. The week also gave George Herman Ruth opportunity to break into the first 10 society for the first time of the season.

Foxx was followed by these regulars: Manush, St. Louis, .373; Simmons, Philadelphia, .362; Lazzeri, New York, .361; Fonseca, Cleveland, .359; Heilmann, Detroit, .354; Combs, New York, .350; Ruth, New York, .348; Cochrane, Philadelphia, .346, and Fathergill, Detroit, .345.

An increase in the activity of the Yankee bats boosted Miller Huggins' team into a tie with the Athletics for first position in team batting. The Yanks picked up four points to make their season average .307, while Philadelphia reached the same figure by adding two points. Detroit, tied with the A's last week, found the pitching more difficult in the east and slipped to third with a mark of .301.

Philadelphia had collected a season total of 635 runs and had restricted opposition to 377.

Mack Pitchers Reign.

Connie Mack's pitchers continued to dominate the hurlers working in turn, with Robert Moses Grove laying out the route. Grove won one game for a record of 17 victories against two defeats, while Rube Walberg accomplished two triumphs to make his record 16 wins and five defeats. George Earnshaw's collection was the same as Walberg's. Tom Zachary of New York won another game and brought his record to six straight victories.

The team fielding leadership remained with Philadelphia which had a season average of .976 the same as a week ago. St. Louis with .973, and the Yanks with .972, remained in second and third places respectively with the same figures as a week ago.

Other leaders: runs batted in, Simmons, Philadelphia, 102; runs, Gehringer, Detroit, 89; home runs, Gehrig, New York, 26; triples, Miller, Philadelphia, 12; doubles, Heilmann, Detroit and R. Johnson, Detroit, 35 each; stolen bases, Gehringer, Detroit, 17; team home runs, New York 91; triple plays, Chicago, New York and Detroit, one each; double plays, Cleveland, 113.

Included in those who were admitted to the Lubbock sanitarium yesterday are Mrs. G. A. Bennett, of Amherst; E. W. Parmen, of Sudan; Mrs. J. T. Balch, of New Home; Mrs. D. J. Wilhelm, of Lubbock; Curtis Taylor, of Muleshoe; Miss Marie Bowen, of Plainview; Miss Blanche Brown, of Lubbock, and Louis Cunningham, of Levelland.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Ellis and son have returned from a vacation spent in scenic spots of Colorado and New Mexico.

SMART WITH CARROLL

Take the case of Owen Carroll, the leading Tiger pitcher of 1928. He could not get going this spring. Harris started him in the opening series of the season and Carroll was knocked out of the box. He started him in the second series and Carroll was knocked out of the box. He started him a third time and Carroll was again pounded out. Carroll was losing games where he was leading by four and five runs, but Harris kept starting him.

Finally he squeezed through a game against Boston, winning. He started him against New York and the Yankees pounded Carroll out of the box in the first inning. Then, last week, he started him against Chicago and Carroll gave a brilliant exhibition of pitching, showing all the stuff he had last year, controlling it well and winning a game where his own mates were able to score only four runs.

Harris, by starting Carroll in his regular turn and disregarding the fact that he was being pounded out of the box, finally got Carroll to believe in himself. Harris knew that Carroll was worrying badly (it was no secret) and it was up to him to smother Carroll's doubts about his own ability. Harris was willing to take the defeats for the purpose of getting Carroll started.

The same was done with Victor Sorrell, an excellent righthander but who also started badly. Sorrell, like Carroll, was being knocked out of the box, but he continued taking his regular turn and in a few weeks he caught his stride.

The Beaumont score was further swelled by Akers who hit homers on his first two trips to the plate, the bases were empty in both instances, the last one coming just after Kelly's tremendous wallop which cleared the center field fence by a good margin.

Red Bennett Goes Ahead In Batting In Texas League

Wichita Falls Outfielder Takes Commanding Lead Over Blackerby; Leader Also Has 21 Homers

DALLAS, Aug. 3 (AP)—Hitting the ball hard both at home and abroad, Red Bennett, Wichita Falls outfielder, took a commanding lead over the field in the Texas League batting race during the last week. In running his mark up to .379, Bennett gained over a score of points on his closest pursurer, Blackerby of Waco, with .363.

Bennett also threatened to assume the homerun leadership, his 21 being only four short of the 25 amassed by Sanguinet of Waco, who is in a serious slump.

Other Leaders

Other leading hitters through Thursday's games were: Langford, Shreveport, .350; J. Moore, Dallas, .344; Lapan, Wichita Falls, .344; Rosenthal, Dallas, 3.43; Bonowitz, Fort Worth, .343; Starr, Shreveport, 343.

Despite Bennett's spurt, Randy Moore of Dallas held to his lead in total hits, with 172, compared to 169 for the Spud star. Whelan, Shreveport, had scored the most runs, 104, followed by Eddie Moore, Fort Worth, with 103.

Pepper Martin, Houston, easily the most feared base runner in the league, ran his total steals to 30. Stewart, Shreveport, 26, and Flaskamper, Dallas, 22, were his closest rivals.

Eddie Socks Triples

Among the extra-base knockers Eddie Moore had things all to himself in the matter of triples, with 21. Larry Cox, Fort Worth, and Randy Moore, Dallas, each had hit 38 doubles.

Art Reinhart, new Houston southpaw, quickly has forged to the front among the pitchers by winning seven of his first eight games. Barnabe, Dallas, with 15 wins and four reverses, was second best. George Payne, Wichita Falls veteran, had the most victories, 16.

Andy Messenger, former San Antonio ace sold to the Spudders last week, had struck out 101 batters before the transfer.

The Spudders led in club batting, .308, Dallas and Shreveport each was hitting .303 as a team, Fort Worth, .301.

The Nut Cracker

By Joe Williams

Joe Williams

An anxious fan writes to ask the age of Jack Quinn. That's easy. Jack Quinn is the first guy who ever told that story about the traveling man who stopped at the farmer's house.

THE RECORD BOOK SAYS JACK QUINN WAS BORN IN 1885. HE GREW RAPIDLY, HOWEVER, AND WAS 17 YEARS OLD IN 1886. HE AND JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER ARE ABOUT THE SAME AGE, 32.

Urban Faber, says the record book, was born in 1888. He broke into the big leagues at the age of 12. This was a record until Melvin Ott came along last year. Melvin is 11.

Wally Schang was born in 1890, according to the dope book. He was 17 when he played in his first world series, back in 1913. He's 27.

It's easy to find out ball players' ages. But never believe they're as old as they tell you. Often a ball player will tell you he's 68 when he's only 67.

The ages of jockeys also are easily determined. All jockeys have great grandchildren before they have passed 29. Once a jockey publicly celebrated his 30th birthday. That was the year of the Johnston flood. That same jockey is 31 now.

You would have as much luck finding out the ages of the members of the Wednesday Afternoon Bridge Club as you would asking the same question at a ball park, race track or zoo.

There will be special music each evening and the public is cordially invited to the church located at the corner of Fourth street and Avenue D.

Terrific Pace Is Set By Herman In Gaining Top Rung

Slugging Robin Slams Out 16 Hits During Week To Raise Average To .407; O'Doul Is Second

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (AP)—A terrific clouting which brought him 16 hits last week has lifted Babe Herman of Brooklyn into a long lead among the National League sluggers, the Brooklyn Babe sent his average from .396 to .407 to take the lead from Frank O'Doul of the Phillies. In the averages released today, including Wednesday's games, Herman has a margin of 22 percentage points.

O'Doul Is Second

O'Doul, second among the league's regulars, hitting at a .385 clip, has a good margin over the third man, Bill Terry of the Giants, whose mark is .377. Terry has one point of leadership to his credit, however, having rapped out 156 hits to take first place in that respect. O'Doul ran him a good second with 151 hits.

Rogers Hornsby, the Cubs ace, came up to even terms with Mel Ott of the Giants in the matter of scoring in the week. Each has tallied 96 times. Ott has a double crown, having batted 105 runs. O'Doul holds second place in scoring as well as hitting, having crossed the plate 94 times. Hack Wilson of Chicago holds the runner-up post in the matter of delivering runs to the other fellow. He has batted in 104 counters. Frederick of Brooklyn, with 34, leads in hitting doubles while Lloyd Waner of Pittsburgh holds the triple crown with 15 three baggers. Chuck Klein, the youthful Phillie, increased his home run total to 33 to lead Hack Wilson by three. Ott is third with 29 four baggers.

Other Leaders

After the leaders among the regular batters come: Klein, Philadelphia, .366; Hornsby, Chicago, .364; Hafey, St. Louis, .360; Traynor, Pittsburgh, .360; L. Waner, Pittsburgh, .356; Wilson, Chicago, .351 and Doughit, St. Louis, .349.

The team batting title remains in the hands of the Phillies for another week. They have a collective average of .307 percent while the Cubs and the Pirates are tied for second place at .305. New York is third with .300. Chicago's Cubs have the best fielding argument by a one point margin over New York, .975 to .974. Cincinnati is third with .973.

Tech Registration Date Is Announced

Fifth Session Of Lubbock Institution Will Swing Under Way September 23; Exams Come Earlier

Registration of students for the fifth session of Texas Technological college will start Monday, September 23, according to an announcement Saturday by E. L. Dohoney, registrar. Entrance examinations are to be held for four days prior to that time, beginning September 16 and freshmen orientation week will begin Friday, September 20.

Following an opening address by Dr. Paul W. Horn, president of the institution, on Friday, a program will be given designed to render vocational counsel. Later in the afternoon an informal reception will be held with Friday evening the scene of "Joy Night," an all-freshmen entertainment.

Saturday morning will be taken up with practical suggestions for making the most out of college while Saturday afternoon will be given over to consideration of the immediate problems facing the students.

Sunday morning will be devoted to a consideration of the place of religion in the life of the college student. This meeting will be dismissed in time for all to attend Sunday School and church services in the city. At sundown a Vesper service will be held.

Officials are planning to make orientation week this year the most successful in the history of the school and committees have been appointed to aid in this work. Jack Too Busy With Promoting Plans To Think Of "Comeback"

Dempsey, Gene Normile, center, his former manager, and Frank Cummings, jr., San Diego, Calif., hotel manager, study plans for new arena; below, Bowman, left; Rodriguez, right.

BY WILLIAM RITT
Central Press Sports Editor

Jack Dempsey's hope of regaining his heavyweight crown has been clouded by a greater vision. The old man mauler wants to succeed the late Tex Rickard as America's master promoter.

This new ambition almost precludes any chance of Dempsey returning to active glove warfare—but not quite. The former champion has such a penchant for changing his mind that any definite statements of what his actions will be have long ago come under the heading of downright foolishness.

However, this is certain: Jack is so serious about becoming a big-time promoter that at present he can't talk of much else.

With this plan in view, Dempsey has surrounded himself with a clique of sportsmen new to the pugilistic guild but made up of old friends and associates of his.

Jack's Partners.

This group is now considering blueprints for the construction of a huge arena at Agua Caliente near the new race track there. The arena is to seat at least 40,000.

Associated with Dempsey are Wirt G. Bowma, head of the Agua Caliente outfit, which hopes to become the sports center of the Pacific coast; and James N. Crofton, a director of Agua Caliente. General Abelardo Rodriguez, governor of the northern section of Lower California, is also interested, as he is eager to see important fights staged in his territory.

Dempsey has visited Rodriguez at his mansion in Mexicali and there have been discussions.

Dempsey's plan concerns chiefly it is said, bouts between heavyweights because that is where the big money lies. He has been extremely eager to land the Jack Sharkey-Max Schmeling squabble for the new arena, using as an inducement a prospective bout with himself.

Return Tentative.

However, the return to the ring which the champ contemplates is in an extremely tentative state and could not take place for quite a few months.

Friends of Dempsey are prone to regard all this "comeback" stuff as ballyhoo for whatever big fight Jack might be able to land. It's good ballyhoo, all right, and Jack is a capable showman. He proved that at Miami in February.

Bowman, Crofton and Baron Long, another Agua Caliente director, have been interested for some time in bringing international boxing to their sports spot down in Hot Tamaleland and Dempsey is their best bet as the man who can bring such things to pass.

From the standpoint of the thirsty fight fan Agua Caliente is ideal for such an attraction. There is plenty of that old stuff down there.

An open-air winter bout could be staged which would draw a huge crowd from California alone. Training camps for the principals placed at Tiajuana and Auga Caliente would bring plenty trade to the sporting concessions now current — a small item which Bowman, Crofton, et al have not overlooked.

Epidemic Raging

Lubbock Needs A Peacemaker

Peacemaker wanted. Apply at the police and sheriff departments.

A fighting epidemic has hit Lubbock, officers say. During the last week eight have been arraigned in police court on charges of fighting, and an equal number has been fined in county courts.

A wide range of discordant notes have been aired in the courts by the "fighters."

Mexico-Catholic Settlement Only Temporary Truce

Arrangement Unlikely To Endure, Says Traveler And Editor Following Investigation Of Nation

WILLIAMSON, Mass., Aug. 3. (AP)—The recent settlement between the Mexican government and the Roman Catholic church is at best only a truce, an arrangement unlikely to endure, Ernest Gruening, author of "Mexico and Its Heritage," an extensive traveler in Mexico and editor of the Portland News today told the general conference on Mexico of the institute of politics.

"It seems unlikely that this settlement can be permanent when one reviews the long standing conflict between church and state, and realizes how dissatisfied the church is with its present position," Gruening said. "By the present agreement the church has gained no concession of major importance.

Task Said Impossible.

"The impression is current in the United States that the government, finding its task of keeping religion away from the people an impossible one, was forced to yield and came to terms with the church. That is incorrect.

"The church objected to the governmental decree stipulating that the clergy must register, and that only mexicans by birth may be ministers of religion. The church ordered the withdrawal of the clergy from the churches, expecting to create a situation which would bring the government to its knees.

"When that did not result there was nohing for the Episcopate to do but make terms and this it very wisely has done, but under the terms of the agreement, the clergy agreed to come back and register."

Six Affiliation Units Granted In Lorenzo Schools

Another Year Of Successful Work Completed With Word From State Department Of Education

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

LORENZO, Aug. 3.—Lorenzo high school has closed another year of successful work, according to Supt. O. W. Fagala, following receipt of a communication from the state department of education stating that six more units of affiliation have been granted, making a total of eight units granted this session. Two units in English were obtained in May without submission of material upon recommendation of the high school inspector.

Has High Record.

Few Schools in this part of the state have met the standards set by the department of education as quickly as Lorenzo high school. The first units were obtained in 1927. This application was for 14 units, 10 of which were granted and four refused. At the close of the 1928 session, eight and one-half were applied for with two granted and six and one-half refused. The remaining eight subjects taught were applied for this session and all were granted.

This gives Lorenzo a fully accredited high school from which the graduates as well as other students may transfer their records to any college or larger high school.

New Building Completed.

A new high school building, capable of serving this community, was completed early in the year at a cost of $40,000. This building is well equipped in every department. Expressing their appreciation for the new school Lorenzo patrons gave an all-day working on the ground setting out trees to beautify the plot. The Parent-Teacher association, together with merchants of the town and others paid for an expensive set of curtains for the stage in the school auditorium and playground equipment for the grade school.

"All teachers have been elected for the coming year and everything is ready for the opening on September 5.

Statesmen Of Six Nations To Meet Over War Trouble

Adoption Of Young Plan For Payment Of Reparations Is First Item On Program For Session

By S. F. WADER
Associated Press Staff Writer

THE HAGUE, Aug. 3. (AP)—Statesmen of Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium and Japan meet here Tuesday to wipe the international slate clean of troubles hanging over from the world war.

The first item is the adoption of the Young plan for reparations payments.

Reduction Is Aim

The principal feature is the reduction of the amount charged Germany for reparations from the original total of 132 billion marks to about 37 billion, payable in 58 years.

A new organization which the financial experts who met in Paris early this year named the "Bank for International settlements," is to be substituted for the reparations commission and for the agent general for reparations. The young plan also calls for the restriction of deliveries in kind on reparations to a period of ten years, beginning with a maximum of 750,000,000 marks and decreasing gradually to 350,000,000 the tenth year, when they cease altogether.

Plan Acceptable

Most of the governments interested have signified acceptance of the plan as far as concerns the reduced amounts Germany must pay.

The government representatives here first will decide whether they accept the Young plan of annuities; then they will pass upon the proposed bank as substitute for the old reparations organizations.

The only criticism of the plan is that the proposed bank would have powers that might make it an important rival to all the central state banks, and perhaps able to exercise a controlling influence over international finance.

Owen D. Young, originator of the plan, held that some institution of the kind will become necessary, whether it is accepted in connection with the reparations scheme, or independently.

The Tinymites were tickled pink. Said Carpy, "Well, now, just to think that Scouty turned out brave enough to give that lion chase. I wouldn't try a thing like that. I'd fear the beast would knock me flat upon my back, or on my chest or maybe on my face."

"Aw, Scouty's braver than the rest," said Coppy. "He can stand the test of anything. I only hope he makes the lion stop. I guess he'll try to lasso him. He'll do it, if his arm's in trim. Say, wouldn't it be funny just to see that big beast flop?"

All of a sudden Clowny cried, "Don't get up too close by his side. I fear he'll take a bite at you. His teeth are big, you know. Stay just behind and throw your rope. If you do that, you'll win, I hope. If you feel he can lick you, 'twould be wise to let him go."

Then Scouty cried back to the bunch. "I'll fool this beast. I have a hunch he's getting rather tired right now. I'll lasso him ere long. And when the rope is o'er his neck, he'll think that he's been in a wreck. He cannot get away because this rope is very strong."

The chase went on a moment more and then the bunch began to roar. Wee Scouty let his lasso fly. His aim was quite all right. The rope caught Mister Lion quick, and he was startled by the trick. 'Course Scouty gave a sudden jerk and pulled the rope up tight.

Then roars of all the rest increased, 'cause back came Scouty with the beast. The lion now seemed very tame, instead of in a rage. He followed Scouty up a hill. Of chasing he had his fill. It wasn't very long till he was safely in his cage.

(The Tinymites have a chariot race in the next story.)

Relief Likely In Proposed Tariff Bill, Says Allen

Kansas Senator Promises Substantial Aid To Agriculturalists Of Southwest In Pending Measure

WICHITA, Kas., Aug. 3. (AP)—Wheat farmers and millers of the southwest may receive relief of a substantial nature from one of the provisions of the proposed tariff bills, Senator Henry J. Allen of Kansas declared in a statement here today.

A provision being considered by the Senate finance committee, would open Cuban market to southwestern wheat interests, a market, Senator Allen said, now "virtually monopolized by millers in Buffalo and other cities in northern United States because of a peculiar arrangement in our present tariff law.

Relief Indicated

"Under a reciprocity trade agreement," Senator Allen asserted, "United States exporters ship flour into Cuba at a tariff rate of 95 cents a barrel, when flour from other countries is assessed at $1.30 a barrel. This gives the United States an advantage of 35 cents a barrel over its foreign competitors in the Cuban flour market. But mills and elevators in Buffalo and other cities near the Canadian border have been making a practice of buying Canadian wheat, giving bonds to guarantee that none of the product of this wheat would be sold in the United States, then shipping it to foreign ports as flour.

Advantage Shown

"Thus, Canadian wheat, shipped from Buffalo to Cuba as flour, has a theoretical advantage over Kansas milled Kansas wheat of 42 cents a bushel, which is the amount of the United States tariff."

Cooperating with the organized millers and wheat growers of the southwest, Senator Allen said he had urged the Senate financing committee to retain in the new tariff bill the provision remedying this situation.

Early Inhabitants Of Plains Section Are Still Unknown, Lubbock Man Says

Prehistoric Peoples Object Of Search By Tech Man

JUST how long Indians and prehistoric peoples had lived upon the Plains before the coming of the whites, we have not been able so far to tell," says Dr. W. C. Holden of the department of history of Texas Technological college. "The tribes that existed here when the pioneers and Spaniards first came to the country were the Comanches and the Apaches."

"Until recent years the facts of the lives of these peoples were scattered about over the country in the memories of some of the oldest settlers, in old records and in the ruins of the old Indian habitations. In the last few years, however, largely through the efforts of the West Texas Historical association, these facts are being assembled and at least the main events in this history have been assembled.

Comanches Not First

"However," Dr. Holden said, "it is also known that pre-historic peoples existed upon the Plains and in places scattered about over West Texas hundreds of years before the Comanches and Apaches became sovereigns of this area. These early peoples were also very different in their habits and culture to these later tribes. Evidents of their cultures have been found in some Pueblo ruins on the Canadian river that show that these peoples had a comparatively high culture and that were first more nearly a nomadic peoples as were the Comanche and Apache tribes, and then became more organized and lived in pueblos where there was water to be found and more protection could be had from the invading tribes. However, there is very little known about these peoples yet, both as to their habits and culture.

"The lives of the tribes that were inhabiting this country at the time present a very interesting study to the student of history and to all other people as well, because of the vicinity of the field and the extremely romantic nature of early West Texas history.

Were Peaceful People

"If we could be permitted to turn the tide of time back to the early sixteenth century, before the invasion of the Spaniards, and should be permitted to look for a moment upon the distant past of the Llano Estacado, or the Staked Plains of Texas, we would see bands of peaceful Indians roaming about over a wide and level expanse of grassland following herds of buffalo and carrying all their belongings with them, killing the buffaloes for their daily food and making their homes wherever night happened to find them. The Comanches were very nomadic and were not agriculturely inclined. They followed the buffalo herds throughout the year and carried their few belonging and teepees with them upon small sleds that were drawn by mongrel dogs, for horses had not yet made their way into this part of the country from Old Mexico.

"The introduction of the horse brought about a drastic change in the lives of these inhabitants of West Texas, who became almost as vicious as the little Spanish ponies themselves. The Indians were no longer peaceful and became extremely hostile. The Indian on horseback became an entirely different one to the Indian on foot, changing from peaceful tribes to tribes of the most warlike nature possible, whose range of operations were increased ten fold.

Hostile Tribes Found.

"This was the situation that the white settlers and pioneers who advanced westward to the Plains found,—ravenous tribes who were hostile to the last degree to any intruder—making pioneer life consatntly in danger of the red desperadoes who killed people and carried off all property such as livestock which they could get their hands upon. On arriving from the eastern sections of the country, the settlers were used to fighting at long range and in the woods with rifles, and were unable to cope with the skill of the Indians in the new surroundings. This situation caused a necessity for the settlers to revolutionize their whole system of warfare. The frontiersmen became skillful riders also and instead of carrying rifles they invented the revolver for quick action and the pioneer evolved to the famous Westerner with revolvers strapped to his sides and who could ride hard and shot straight.

"However, because of the still superior skill as warriors the Indians for a long time yet were able to baffle the whites as to their numbers, which was the main reason that the question of frontier defense was drawn out so long, and the Indians continued to be the scourge of the whites until the winter of 1874-75.

Policy Is Changed.

"In the summer of 1874 the Indian policy of the federal government took a new turn. In 1872 it had been discovered that hides from the buffaloes could be very probitably sold to manufacturers who utilized them in making leather goods. Then in 1873 the wholesale slaughtering of buffaloes went into full swing from northwest Texas to Nebraska and vast herds of buffaloes were slaughtered for their hides, a movement that was memorably portrayed by Zane Grey in his book, 'The Thundering Herd.' According to an article by Dr. W. C. Holden entitled 'The Buffalo of the Plains Area' in the West Texas Historical Association Yearbook, volume two, the Indians became frantic when they saw the buffaloes, upon which they depended almost entirely for their livelihood, fastly vanishing, and in the spring and summer of 1874 the Comanches and Kiowas went on a general rampage, attacking a hunters' station at Adobe Walls. On hearing of the hostilities of the Indians the war department obtained permission from the department of interior, on July 1, to make war on the Plains tribes and to round them up and force them into reservations. Four expeditions were sent to the Plains region. Col. Davidson was ordered from Ft. Sill with a considerable force, Col. Nelson A. Miles was ordered to operate south from Fort Dodge wiht nine hundred men, Major Price was to proceed east from Fort Bascom, N. M., down the Canadian river with 250 men and General McKenzie, with eight companies of cavalry, with Fort Griffith as a base, was to advance to the northwest.

Indians Hunted.

"All the expeditions had a common objective, the Panhandle-Plains area, and the Indians were given no rest. They were hunted out from their secrets haunts in the canyons and sent hurrying across the Plains only to find themselves headed by another force and were forced to the reservations very unwillingly. During the campaign of 1874-75 there were twenty-five engagements and operations went on relentlessly during zero weather and all. This was a surprise to the Indians who had previously thought that the whites could not fight under such conditions and consequently the strength and the spirit of the Indias were broken. The decisive engagement of the campaign took place at Tule canyon when General McKenzie trapped several hundred Indians in the canyon, captured their entire herd of over 1400 horses which he had killed on the spot, and made the Indians walk back to the reservations.

From this time on most of the Indians that remained on the Plains were desperadoes. At the beginning of the Indian outbreak of 1874, the necessity of a frontier defense was seen by the state government and the governor, under an act of Congress approved April 10, 1874, raised a batallion of six companies of 74 men each, which was the begining of a frontier batallion which was to last as a frontier institution for more than twenty years. The batallion was placed under Major J. B. Jones who established the companies at posts over the parts of the Plains which were most frequently raided by the Indian desperadoes. Major Jones carried on a vigilant watch over the country and gave the companies instructions to scout the counties to which they were assigned thoroughly and frequently. He, himself, with and escort of 30 or 40 men scouted the entire frontier from the head of the Nueces river to Red river every month and too a different route each time.

Fought 14 Times.

"During the first twelve months of the watch the various units had fourteen engagements. In most instances they met raiders coming into settlements and turned them back and in other instances they discovered their trails and followed them to prevent mischief.

Thus with only the worst of the tribes remaining, before the Civil War the Plains country was more or less a rendezvous for Indian desperadoes and dangerous bands which hid in the canyons and about the rivers and made moonlight raids upon the settlements. They rode down near the settlements under cover of the darkest part of the night and secreted themselves until the moon rose and it became light enough for them to ride down and take the defenseless settlers by surprise and take off their horses and retreat to the Plains and the canyons with their loot. It was against these operations that Major Jones and his men were directed. What was probably the last depredation of this kind that took place in this part of the country occurred in 1883 in Dickens county, according to an article by Clifford B. Jones, appearing in the issue of the Dickens County Times for September 16, 1925. The Comanches stole some horses from Sam Gholson and some from John and Bill Slaughter, including some named 'Sugar Child,' 'Old Sorghum,' and 'Tailer Eye.'

"These Indian desperadoes were the last to cede this country to the settlers. When they were attacked by the soldiers they fought with an undaunted and incomparable bravery. As the story goes, back in 1859 Major George H. Thomas was returning from Fort Belknap, Jones county, to Fort Cooper with 28 mounted troopers, and just as they were riding off Mountain Pass, near Merkel, they saw in the valley below a company of eleven of these Indian raiders moving westward and driving before them about 120 stolen horses. Major Thomas gave chase immediately and his company was almost upon the Indians before they noticed them.

One Was Brave

"The raiders abandoned their horses and rode for their lives, but the soldiers pushed them hard and were soon almost within shooting distance when on of the band deliberately stopped, made a breastwork of his horse and prepared to give their pursuers the best that he had until the remainder of his band could make their escape. Major Thomas ordered a charge but the Indian poured arrows into their ranks so fast that they were forced to back up and hold a council of attack. They decided to make another charge in open formation but before their single foe was killed he wounded six of the soldiers including Major Thomas himself. Thus one lone Indian held off a force of 29 men for about fifteen minutes during which time the remainder of his band escaped entirely and were never heard of afterward. They presumably made their way to the Plains and the canyons where they were never apprehended. This story sounds incredible but it was taken from a report of the Secretary of War."

ABERNATHY NEWS

BY MRS. W. A. RICHTER

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. U. B. Jones entertained a number of the little folks at her home in the south part of town, with a party in honor of her son, J. B., who celebrated his seventh birthday. WHITE WINS!

New sales records being made by Hicks built Star tires and by Dayton De Luxe Balloons emphasize the swing to tires with white sidewalls. In more than beauty and color are white sidewall tires supreme. Mere outward appearance of distinction is insufficient as a reason for preference and patronage.

Strength as Well as Beauty

Material as well as colorful reasons have guided HICKS in PIONEERING in white sidewall tires.

White sidewalls, with their high zinc content, are conductors of heat.

THEY RESIST HEAT. The heat is conducted out of the tire and not bottled up, as in the case of tires with black sidewalls.

Much of the success of the South's largest tire house may well be attributed to the fact that white sidewall tires sold by Hicks have proven to run the coolest at any temperature and have therefore, given the most mileage.

Perryton To Get Additional Paving On Streets

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

PERRYTON, Aug. 3.—Perryton is t ohave eight and a half blocks more paving. The city commission signed a contract this week for the additional amount with the Lacy Paving company. This will give Perryton a total of 23 blocks of paving, and represents an expenditure of approximately $200,000.

Most of the above paving is being put down in the business district, and petitions are being circulated on many of the residence streets, and many believe that the paving program will be doubled before the construction company is through.

HOTEL WORK RUSHED

New $90,000 Hostelry Being Rushed For Occasion

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

PERRYTON, Aug. 3.—Work is being rushed on Perryton's $90,000 hotel, in an effort to have it ready for the birthday celebration which will be held here August 22-23. Most of the outside work has been done, and only a portion of the inside decorations and finishig touches eed be made.

Perryton will be exactly 10 years old August 22, and a huge crowd from Ochiltree and adjoining counties and cities are expected to be here, and if the new hotel is not finished, housing the guests will be a problem.

MOTION REFUSED

Judge Pharr Won't Allow Dissolving Injunction

A motion of defendants to dissolve an injunction was refused Saturday by Judge Homer L. Pharr in 72nd district court in the case of West Texas Compress and Warehouse company, et al, vs. T. M. Nowlin, et al.

In the original suit for an injunction, granted several weeks ago, the plaintiffs, West Texas Compress company, E. N. Phillips and C. L. Blackburn, charge T. M. Nowlin, B. H. Miller and T. C. Dunbar with conducting an illegal stockholders meeting without mailing notices to all stockholders. At the meeting Mr. Nowlin was allegedly elected president.

The injunction granted by Judge Pharr restrains the defendants from taking charge and usurping affairs of the company.

New Mexico Gets W.T.C.C. Work In Division Program

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

PORTALES, N. M., Aug. 3. — A New Mexico division of the WTCC is the latest in West Texas chamber of commerce news.

At a meeting of the Advisory board in Fort Worth, July 30, it was decided to establish a district office of the organization in eastern New Mexico. The office is to be located in Portales, and will be under the direction of an Advisory board composed of Coe Howard, Portales, chairman; Claude Simpson, secretary, Roswell; Bob Anglin, secretary, Clovis; and J. D. Hamlin, of Farwell. Mr. Howard and Mr. Hamlin are members of the executive board of the organization.

To Furnish Space

The Portales chamber of commerce is to furnish office space, and also the services of its secretary, Sam Seay, who is to carry on the membership work of the organization in that district. The Portales chamber of commerce will receive 25 percent of all the memberships collected, which is to go for the expenses of carrying on this work until all such expenses have been met, then the entire membership fees are to go to the headquarters office. All memberships are to be sent to the headquarters office in Stamford and membership cards issued from that office. The citizenship of eastern New Mexico will have the full services of the various departments of the West Texas chamber of commerce placed at their disposal.

The opportunity for service by the West Texas chamber of commerce in New Mexico was made manifest some four years ago, and to this end the territory of the organization was extended so as to include eastern New Mexico. Since that time 10 or 12 towns have affiliated with the organization, covering fourteen counties. This latest expansion of the regional body was the direct result of a meeting of prominent men of New Mexico on June 20 who presented a request to the executive board for the establishmen tof the branch office.

Cause Of Prison Riots Denounced

Representatives Report On Prisons Included Clause About Congestion In U. S. Penitentiaries

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. — The crowding of prisoners into Federal penitentiaries, cited today as one of the causes of the riots in the Leavenworth, Kan., institution, was denounced in a report by a special committee of the house of representatives made a year ago after a survey of prison conditions.

The riots followed closely similar outbreaks in prisons at Clinton and Auburn and served to center attention on condition in the Federal institutions, where nearly 19,000 convicts are confined.

"The committee believed that under no circumstances should the existing penitentiaries at Leavenworth, Atlanta and McNeil Island be enlarged to accommodate more prisoners," said the report of the committee made to the house of representatives, "but that as quickly as possible the prison population be reduced to not more than 2,000. Only in this manner can the vicious practice of placing two prisoners in cells designed for one be ended. The committee believes further that there shall be two additional penitentiaries established as soon as possible.

Membership campaign for Ralls will be held next week.

"Troop 33 at Ralls is a well organized troop," said Mr. Yates. "A. B. Sanders is scoutmaster and E. E. Young, assistant."

MAP DEMAND GROWS

Gulf Man Reports Greater Demand For Texas Maps

The demand for Texas road maps has broken all records this year, O. H. Carlisle, assistant district sales manager of the Gulf Refining company's Texas district, reports to the Lubbock office.

When the Gulf company inaugurated the free distribution of Texas road maps, seven years ago, the number of motor tourists was comparatively small. During the past few years, however, highways in Texas have been greatly improved and hundreds of thousands of motorists travel over them annually.

Lynn County Club Woman Elected To Lead Home Demonstration Group In State Has Had Much Work With Clubs

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

TAHOKA, Aug. 3.—Mrs. R. W. Fenton, Tahoka, who was this week elected president of the State Home Demonstration association and who was selected as one of the five master farm home makers of Texas at the annual A. & M. college Farmers' Short Course, has long been identified with demonstration and civic clubs and church affairs here.

She has served as president of the Lynn county home demonstration council, and has been instrumental in extendig the work of the organization to its present large proportions. She has been a club member for several years, serving under Miss Millie M. Halsey, who instituted the work in this county, and under Miss Thelma Greenwade, present home demonstration agent.

Is Church Leader

Mrs. Fenton is a leader in the Methodist church at this place, in the Sunday school as a teacher, and has several times been president of both the local and the district W. M. U's.

Mrs. Fenton is a director of the Lynn county Fair association and a chamber of commerce booster, and from time to time has been a member of numerous civic organizations.

In addition to being active in all these organizations, she is a model farm woman, raising chickens, garden stuff, and practicing the live-at-home plan. She states that her chief ambition is "to be a wise mother, a wife who is a real help mate, a neighbor to be loved and a real homemaker."

Mr. and Mrs. Fenton reside on a farm three miles east of Tahoka, where they practice modern methods of diversification the year around. They are the parents of several sons and daughters, all of whom are either grown or in the "teens."

The fact that Mrs. Fenton was awarded these two honors at College Station the past week, may be considered an honor, not for Lynn county alone, but to all West Texas.

War On Cigarets Started By 'Antis'

Reformers Begin Campaign To Force 'Fags' In Wake Of Whiskey; Quote Hoover As Cigaret Opponent

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—"Cigarets are a source of crime," says President Hoover.

He is thus quoted in a a propaganda sheet being broadcast by the Anti-Cigaret Alliance, which seeks to make this a sweeter and better world by abolishing cigarets. The piece of propaganda is entitled "What Great Americans Say About Cigarets." The president is quoted as follows:

"There is no agency in the world today that is so seriously affecting the health, efficiency, education and character of boys and girls as the cigaret habit, yet very little attention is paid to it. Nearly every delinquent boy is a cigaret smoker, which certainly has much to do with it.

"Cigarets are a source of crime. To neglect crime at its source is a short-sighted policy unworthy of a nation of our intelligence."

Out of a Letter

The Anti-Cigaret Alliance, an inquiry, says the extract was taken from a letter to President Coolidge from Mr. Hoover written while the latter was Secretary of Commerce. The other great Americans quoted against the cigaret are Senator Reed Smoot of Utah and President Daniel E. Poling of the Christian Endeavor.

President Hoover smokes cigars and sometimes a pipe. The Alliance is really opposed to all types of smoking, but it concentrates its attack on cigarets.

The organization is pushing out this Hoover statement at a time when professional reformers are showing a greater tendency than ever to branch off from prohibition, gambling and vice and take in tobacco. Mr. Hoover, although he appeared to be mainly concerned with the effect of cigarets on boys and girls, even going so far as to suggest that they caused adolescents to become criminals, has said nothing against use of cigarets by adults. In fact, it is quite a common thing to smoke cigarets in the presidential presence. Mr. Coolidge also preferred cigars, but Harding was a cigaret smoker.

A few weeks ago the Rev. Dr. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, publicly announced that the cigaret makers were following in the dangerous footsteps of the old-time liquor interests and warned by implication of some future prohibition act against cigarets.

Equally ominous from the standpoint of the cigaret smoker were the words of the Christian Register, an organ of the Unitarians—often regarded as a liberal denomination—in a recent editorial.

"For several years we have said nothing about tobacco," says the editor. "Cigaret consumption is rampant and colossal, and only an astronomer can give the figures. But the time is near at hand when the women crusaders are going to assail the habbit among women, and the result will not be in doubt. Fantastic it seems, but fact it will become that tobacco will soon be fighting for its right to be a solace to mankind, as the liquor people did the generation before prohibition came. They sense somtehing. Medical experiment is all against the weed, as we demonstrated in the extraordinary clinical articles that were published in the Register 10 years ago.

"Whoever uses tobacco habitually in any form, but especially in smoking, the clinic said, is not the same person, nor as good a person, as he would be in body, mind and spirit, if he let it alone. We are telling the world. And the world is going to hear about it in the next decade."

Obviously, such propaganda is directed against adult cigaret smoking, though adolescent smoking and advertising appeals to women have offered an especially convenient target fo rthe recent welter of it.

He'd Regulate the Ads

No bills to abolish cigarets have been introduced yet in Congress, but Senator Smoot has a resolution designed to regulate cigaret advertising. Smoot attacks cigarets exactly on the same grounds on which alsohol has been attacked. He points out the great "waste of money," the "decreases of efficiency," the loss to employers of cigaret-smoking workmen, the "link" between excessive cigaret smoking and the drink and drug habits and so on. He is especially sour about the appeals to potential women smokers, though editorial writers have suggested that he is speaking for the sugar interests, which are powerful in his home state.

The Anti-Salon League is taking no part in the early skirmishes against cigarets. Some of the League officials, in fact, are inveterate smokers.

"It's The Women Who Pay And Pay"

Man Earns The Coin In Lubbock But Its The Women Who Do The Paying Of Bills, Survey Shows

"A jug of wine, a loaf of bread and thou!"

And another man takes on his ball and chain to love, honor and support. Especially to support, for the man pays the bills.

Man Earns Coin.

"No matter who hands the money across the counter, it's the man who earned the coin with which the paying is done." Thus spoke the lordly male last week in the course of some more statistics making.

Financers and others in the know claim that approximately 80 per cent of the world's money that is spent passes through the hands of the women, which seems to be some indication that the women pay the bills.

And a lot of Lubbock women are employing their time keeping money of the city in circulation. Approximately one half of those who call at the telephone office, at the gas, water and light company offices to pay bill are women, according to estimates made at the counters.

Man Signs Checks

But very few of the bills are paid from private accounts of these women, the counter information indicates. Checks are usually signed by the man's name and countersigned by his wife or simply the man's name is used in the signature.

Bills are seldom ever paid in cash. The majority of this money comes into the offices through the mails in checks.

Some housewives here have their household accounts for which specific amounts of money are allowed monthy. These women consistently pay their bills in cash or with checks and it is a rarity for one of these checks to be returned marked "insufficient funds," according to the receiving clerks.

Children Pay Sometimes

Children call at offices and pay some of these bills, usually by checks that have been signed by their fathers or paying in cash, but men and women do most of the paying, passing the money over the counters in about equal numbers.

Always, eventualy, the man pays. That's what men believe. But women are not so sure for have they not heard some where some time a quotation which is in part, "It's the woman who pays—and pays—and pays—."

Hoover Wants Millionaires For Diplomatic Posts

President Hoover is making his diplomatic appointments slowly and cautiously with a view to choosing several millionaires who will center their diplomatic efforts on adjusting the financial supremacy of the United States to the Hoover ideal of international goodwill. Senator Walter Edge (1) of New Jersey is authentically reported as the next ambassador to France; Ambassador Morrow (2) will be retained in Mexico without question; John N. Willys (3), Toledo automobile manufacturer, is almost certain to receive an important post; Eugene Meyer (4), former chairman of the War Finance corporation, is being considered for Germany; (5) Henry M. Robinson, Los Angeles banker and intimate friend of Hoover, is being groomed for an ambassadorship, and Thomas W. Lamont (6) of the House of Morgan, has been urged for Rome or Madrid.

Liquor Seized After Mexican Border Battle

After a battle between U. S. border patrol officers and rum smugglers near El Paso, Tex., in which two of the smugglers were shot to death and three wounded, federal officials seized the liquor shown above, in addition to confiscating two passenger cars and two trucks. In the fight the border patrol was outnumbered five to one.

Mrs. Ramsey To Seek Hidden Jars

Widow Of Slain Mathis Physician To Aid In Search For Hidden Valuables; Leahy Said To Have Told

(By Associated Press)

CORPUS CHRISTI, Aug. 3—Mrs. J. A. Ramsel, widow of the man for whose slaying Harry J. Leahy was executed at Huntsville early Friday, hopes to retrieve her husband's personal jewelry, believed hidden in a pickle jar somewhere around Mathis, where Dr. Ramsey was killed.

In an exclusive interview with the Corpus Christi Caller last night, Mrs. Ramsey said she expected to join officers in a search for the jar.

Leahy Tells Hamer

The widow said she had been informed that Leahy had told Ranger Captain Frank Hamer "numbers of secrets, among them being the hiding place of some money, some papers and some jewelry. Leahy told Hamer, so I am informed, that there are three pickle jars hidden, one containing papers, another money and still another jewelry."

"I feel certain that the papers are the papers that Dr. Ramsey was forced to sign just before his death, and the jewelry—I would give the world to get the doctor's jewelry back. There is a solid gold nugget bearing seven diamonds among the pieces of jewelry. And there is Dr. Ramsey's shrine ring, diamond pin, cuff links and watch.

Asked to Hunt Jars

"While Leahy was at Georgetown, he asked Governor Moody twice to let him go and look for those pickle jars. And he asked once to be permitted to go and look for them after he got to Huntsville.

"I expect to join officers in a search for those pickle jars. Captain Hamer, I believe, knows where they are now and he will help me find them. Of course, the papers are no good, being signed under duress. But it is important to know what those papers are." The money will go to Leahy's widow.

HONOLULU, Aug. 3 (AP).—Holding a complete suit in a bridge game is not so rare, but the division of the remaining suits has been more or less split up between the three other players in the game heretofore. George B. Wason, however, recently held 13 spades while his partner held 12 hearts and one diamond. One of their opponents held 13 clubs and the other 12 diamonds and the ace of hearts.

With Liverpool Closed The Market At New Orleans Opens Irregular In Session On Saturday

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 3. (AP)—Following an erratic opening cotton developed a steadier tone in later trading today on contracts which had sold off from 18.77 to 18.65 rallied to 18.85 and closed two points under the latter figure for a net gain of 9 points. The general market closed steady at net advances of 8 to 9 points.

With Liverpool closed the market here opened irregular, January showed a gain of 11 points on the call. The advance in the northern market steadied values here and after the start October recovered to 18.77 and December 18.96, or 12 points above yesterday's close.

Demand Supplied

Demand was supplied around the advance and the market encountered some selling on reports of rains in West Texas where moisture is not needed. Evening up for over the week-end and liquidation in advance of the government report added to the subsequent decline which carried December to 18.86, or 10 to 11 points under the early highs.

Uncertainty Marks Cotton Market

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (AP)—Cotton again appeared dominated by uncertainty as to the coming crop prospect during the greater part of today's trading and reactions from an opening advance were followed by renewed firmness. December contracts after selling off from 19.17 to 19.08, advanced to 19.26, and closed at 19.24, with the general market closing firm at net advances of 10 to 14 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 2 to 10 points but soon eased under week-end realizing. The market was rather unsettled during the early trading. October eased off to 18.81 and March to 19.21, making net declines of about 2 to 6 points on the general list.

Prices Firm Up

The prices firmed up again in the late trading on renewed covering. October sold up to 18.99 and March to 19.40, making new highs for the day in the late trading and recoveries of about 17 to 20 points from the low levels of the morning.

Business was comparatively quiet, with the market sensitive to orders, but there was a little more activity during the last half hour.

Owing to the holiday there were no cables from Liverpool. The market there also will be closed on Monday.

Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at about 33,000 bales against 40,000 last year.

Oil Notes

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

BIG SPRING, Aug. 3.—The attention of the oil fraternity operating in the Howard-Glasscock county area has been centered on the Glasscock Brothers (Lumu Oil company) No. 1-Turner, for the past three weeks. No. 1 Turner located 330 feet from the east line and 2,310 feet from the north line of section 19, block 33, township 2 south, believed to have found the Roberts pay after encountering thirty-eight feet of pay from 2,468 to 2,506 feet total depth, 83 feet below the oil strata found by the World Oil company in their No. 1-C. McDowell. 20 feet saturated lime was drilled into Friday. The 6 5-8ths inch casing which has been set at 2,400 feet filled with salt water and a string of 5 3-16ths inch casing will be set to 2,470 feet to shut off water between 2,460 feet and 2,470 feet.

No estimates of the production has been made according to Lonnie Glasscack and well will be given test Monday.

This well is one and one-quarter miles northeast of the World No. 1 C. McDowell, which opened a new field in this area and which is now pumping approximately 75 barrels per day from a total depth of 2,398 feet.

The Kirby Petroleum company topped the lime at 2,064 feet in its No. 1 Baker and had showing of oil at 2,085 feet. Eight one-quarter-inch casing is being set. The well is located 330 feet from the north line and 2,310 feet from the west line of section 23, block 32, 2 south, Glasscock county.

Sharp Price Decline In Livestock Features 11 Circuits In Past Week

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 3. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Livestock trade around the 11-market circuit this week was marked by sharp price declines on most all classes of cattle. Depressing factors to the trade were a sluggish outlet for dressed beef and a narrow demand for stocker and feeder classes.

A few points maintained steady prices on strictly choice natives, but the general market was 25c to $1.00 off, with western grass cattle bearing the brunt of the decline. Veals and calves closed the week $1.00 to $2.00 lower. Aggregate receipts were around 229,200, an increase of 21,-000 over last week, and 49,000 heavier than a year ago.

Lambs Decline

Fat lambs suffered additional price declines early in the week, but on late sessions curtailed receipts more than off-set the depressing influence on a lower dressed lamb trade. Aged stock showed little change. The supply approximated 234,500, as compared with 236,852 a year ago.

Reduced supplies failed to stimulate demand for hogs. Considerable price fluctuation throughout the week, closing values were uneven 10 to 50c lower. St. Louis had a late top of $12.00. Total offerings were around 401,800, a decrease of 53,000 from last week, but 18,000 heavier than a year ago.

Livestock Quality Generally Lacking

FT. WORTH, Aug. 3. (AP)—The usual light supply of livestock arrived here for Saturday's market. Quality was generally lacking. Steers 6.25@11.75, common light bulls $6, better heavy bulls in the $7.00 range, canners sold around $4.50, cutter cows at $6.50@7.00, common packages sold at $6.50@7.50.

Sheep values considered steady.

Naval Delay

sible effect of any prolonged discussions in the senate over the authority of the president to take the action he did.

Senator Swanson, in opposing the president's action on the cruisers, used plainer language than did chairman Hale, of the senate naval committee, and chairman Britten, of the house naval committee, in expressing their opposition to the course of the chief executive.

Action "Contrary to Law"

Describing the president's action as "contrary to law," the Virginian said it behooved "the president, especially when he was appointed a committee to study law enforcement, to obey the law himself."

Senator Swanson said he did not think the president's action would aid in obtaining a naval agreement between the United tStates and Great Britain, as it would strengthen the British belief "that all Great Britain has to do is to delay matters, negotiate to keep the present status which gives her nation an overwhelming superiority over ours."

Senator Pessimistic

Asserting that it was the former Ramsay MacDonald government which continued and approved the building of cruisers which made the British navy superior to the American navy, the senator said the American people should not be too hopeful about the outcome of the present negotiations.

"It would be much better for the United States to proceed to construct a navy suitable to its own needs and wants and let Great Britain do likewise than to let Great Britain and the United States make a treaty which would give a great inferiority to the American navy," he said.

The confession was signed in the presence of County Attorney Vaughn Wilson, Elmer Reed, Chief Deputy Sheriff O. B. Conley and the father of the woman.

She testified that they were married when she was 14 years old and while in Lubbock lived at 1416 Avenue E.

Townsend was returned to Lubbock late yesterday afternoon and lodged in the county jail by Sheriff Wade Hardy and Chief of Police John Lemond. Aside from charges here, he is charged with burglary, theft, swindling and forgery in six counts in Crosby county.

J. W. Townsend, of this city, father of E. C. Townsend, was arrested Friday on charges of receiving stolen goods in connection with the thefts.

last evening, but expectations of arrival at Lakehurst early Sunday afternoon, was confirmed in a direct message to The Associated Press from Herbert S. Siebel of Saginaw, Mich., a passenger on the dirigible.

His message, received at the Cape Elizabeth naval station at 10 p. m. (Eastern Daylight Time) gave the position of the dirigible as 55 degrees, five minutes west, 35 degrees, 32 minutes north.

NAVAL AIR STATION, LAKEHURST, Aug. 3. (AP) — Radio messages from the Graf Zeppelin to the Navy Department at Washington relayed here late tonight, indicated the ship was turning south in its course to avoid stormy weather. It was about 810 nautical miles from Lakehurst at 10 p. m., Eastern Standard Time.

The dirigible gave its position as 38:40 north latitude and 58:08 west longitude, which would place the Graf 330 miles northeast of Bermuda. The latest figures compared with the ship's position as reported to the nevy at 2 p. m., today indicated that it was traveled 435 miles at an average speed of 54 knots in 10 hours up to 10 p. m.

If this speed is maintained the dirigible should reach Lakehurst in about 15 hours or at 1 p. m., tomorrow.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. (AP)—The weather bureau tonight predicted fair weather for tomorrow in the Atlantic coast states along the probable route of the Graf Zeppelin as she heads toward New York, except in Virginia where cloudy weather and showers were indicated. The forecast for Maryland, New Jersey, Delaware and Eastern New York indicated favorable conditions after the airship reaches land.

ABOARD GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 3. (AP)—We passed two whales at 11:30 a. m., going in the same direction. Our position at noon was 36 degrees, four minutes north and 43 degrees, 36 minutes west. Our speed was 128 kilometers an hour (about 80 miles) and we had covered up to noon 5,519 kilometers (about 3,430 miles).

About half of the passengers are smoking anythetic cigarettes.

Zeppelin Welcome Plans Underway

NAVAL AIR STATION, LAKEHURST, N. J. Aug. 3.(AP)—The arrival of the dirigible Graf Zeppelin here tomorrow will be an "all hands maneuver" for the navy, meaning that every man on the post is assigned a task, and not even the lowliest sailer or marine rookie is excepted.

The normal crew has been expanded from 275 to 400.

Newspaper Men On Hand

Newspaper men from the larger eastern cities had taken over a section of the huge hangar as press headquarters.

The field has been mapped off and danger spots marked with red flags, especially in the vicinity of the hangar and the mooring mast more than half a mile away.

Hangar Space Given

Within the hangar the dirigible Los Angeles and two navy blimps have been bunched, leaving a full side of the hangar for the 776-foot Zeppelin visitor.

Atop the hangar have been placed two loud speakers, each nine feet in diameter and capable of throwing a voice to any corner of the 2,500 field. An effort is to be made to pick and send through the loud speakers the story of the arrival to the broadcast as the ship nears its destination by Frank E. Nicholson, a passenger.

under arrest."

Rushed At Man

"When I rushed the man it was to keep him from shooting me," Stevens said. He declared he tripped in a sand rut and pulled the trigger of his rifle as he fell, the bullet hitting Chandler below the heart.

The gun which Chandler was supposed to have in his hand when the officers appeared was found later by R. W. Lott, deputy marshal of Poteet, who was with Stevens at the time of the shooting. Lott testified that when he opened the gun one of the cartridges had a hammer mark on it, showing the trigger had been pulled.

Bond Is Set

Bond for Stevens was set at $2,000. He was ordered to appear before grand jury at Jourdanton October 7. C. S. Slatton, district attorney demanded a $5,000 bond to show that they were not trying to exonerate Stevens of guilt by a light bond, and Stevens demanded a bond of $1,500 on the plea that a heavy bond for a federal officer would encourage the lawless element.

After Chandler was shot, according to the testimony of Lott, who followed Stevens on the stand, the three men in the house came out and surrendered. One of the sons of Chandler is said to have knelt beside the dead man and said: "Daddy, tell me how in hell this happened."

Stevens reported they had captured a 100-gallon still in operation and about 30 gallons of whiskey, as well as several cars used for delivery purposes.

Wheat Prices Are Pushed Downward In Mart Saturday

Prospective Big Receipts Monday And Unmanagable Burden Of Supplies Is Reason For Decline

By JOHN BOUGHAN
Associated Press Market Editor

CHICAGO, Aug. 3. (AP)—Faced by prospective big receipts Monday and staggering under an almost unmanageable burden of supplies, wheat today plunged downgrade. Primary receipts of domestic wheat reached 37,012,000 bu. for the week, compared with 24,497,000 bushels a year ago. Exporters were credited with having bought 1,000,000 bushels of United States wheat today.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy at 1 3-4c to 2 3-4c under yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1 7-8c to 2 1-2c off, oats 7-8c a 1c down, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2c.

Wheat Prices Drop

Lower prices for wheat resulted from urgent selling that was associated with the arrival here of 545 cars today, nearly double the receipts at this time last year. It was announced that Chicago receipts of wheat for the week totaled 7,105,-000 bushels, against 2,825,000 bushels a year ago.

The close today was ragged, about 1c up from the day's bottom figures.

Good additional rains in corn territory, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana, contributed to wheat weakness by pulling corn prices down. The corn market was apparently unaffected by reports of four successive days of temperatures of 100 in Kansas, cats gave way with corn.

Provisions were easier owing to downturns in the value of hogs.

Rail Hearing

ducing 60,000 barrels of oil daily and might produce 200,000. The Denver line would cost $4,276,580, and would be 113 miles in length.

F. E. Williamson, president of the Burlington lines, the Denver parent company, suggested a compromise. He proposed both the Denver and Rock Island be allowed to build into Wellington, the roads there joining of construction to Shamrock.

Rivalry Is Shown.

Rivalry between the railroads as well as between Panhandle towns, principally Pampa and Amarillo, was shown clearly throughout the hearing. Pampa opposed all proposals but that of the Denver. Amarillo intervened in support of the Rock Island proposal while Childress and Quanah favored those of the Denver and Rock Island respectively. The San Antonio Chamber of Commerce and the Nueces County Navigation District number 1 and Corpus Christi Chamber of Commerce supported the Frisco-Rock Island joint line. Fort Worth introduced witnesses who urged all petitions be granted.

As the hearing was closed, Finance Director Mahaffie told attorneys they might have until October 1 to brief their cases. He said the Interstate Commerce Commission might not make a decision before Jan. 1, 1930.

A total of 85 witnesses testified.

The principal contention of petitioners was that the planned railroad connections would give fertile wheat, grain and cotton fields as well as productive oil areas a more direct connection to Southeast Texas and the Gulf with consequent lower rates.

tributing corporation, a Texas subsidiary with offices in Houston, also is a defendant in the case.

The petitions pointed out the facts that the suits involved sums over $2,000 and that the principals in the case were residents of different states. Either of these two factors would automatically place the case in the Federal courts.

Next Term In December.

The next term of Federal court opens here December 2, with Judge J. C. Hutcheson Jr., on the bench.

Counsel for Creager in the suits are: Kemerly, Williams, Lee, Hill and Sears of Houston; West and Hightower, R. E. Green, Graham, Graham and Graham and Davenport, West and Ranson, all of Brownsville.

Creager alleged the reading matter and cartoons contained in each of the articles were libelous, false and untrue. He accused Colliers of consistently following "yellow journalism."

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 3. Shorts Are Sent To Cover Pending Early Reactions

Trading Moderately Active Saturday As High Total Of 1,842,080 Shares In Market Change Hands

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. (AP)—Aggressive bullish operations in selected issues in today's stock market sent shorts to cover who had been expecting week-end reaction and sustained the general upward trend of prices. Trading was moderately active, 1,842,080 shares changing hands.

Operations for the advance again centered in the utilities week-end liquidation was for the most part quickly absorbed. The market took but passing notice of the overnight announcement of a gain of approximately $400,000,000 in stock exchange member borrowings during July, making a gain of more than $800,000,000 in the past two months.

Call Money Easy.

Call money money was a little easier yesterday, holding at 10 per cent all day, which rate carried over the week-end. Comparatively tight money is expected next week.

There was nothing in the day's meagre industrial news to influence the market.

The further bidding up of the utilities carried the index of 20 leading utility stocks up 5 points to another record level.

Revived interest in the metals and motors was again apparent.

In the foreign exchanges, Sterling held firm at $4.85 1-4. Marks were in some demand, while Francs sagged slightly. The Japanese yen reached another new high for the year at 47 3-4 cents.

Finger Marks Found

The sheriff said he found finger marks in a sack of poison in an outhouse with a trail of the poison leading to the sack of flour in the Wallace kitchen.

After an investigation, Dr. P. N. Pulley, West Carroll coroner, returned a verdict of death by poisoning resulting from an act of a person or persons unknown.

Oil Fumes Blast Fatal To Five

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 3. (AP)—A terrific explosion of oil fumes this afternoon wrecked a 170-foot steel tank barge moored at Kosmosdale, Ky., twenty miles west of here on the Ohio river, killing five men instantly. Two other men who were on the barge were missing and were believed dead. The seventh man on the craft was seriously injured and was expected to die.

The blast reduced the big barge to a twisted mass of junk which sunk at its mooring.

One of the victims, Leslie Underwood of Louisville, was blown to the top of a loading crane, 75 feet above the river level, while the body of the other, Murray Jockel, West Point, Ky., was found in the river. The injured man was Alfred Sauer, Louisville. The other victims were E. O. Joplin and Cleve Skeeters.

The missing men were Franklin Raeder and William Welderdiey, all of Kosmosdale.

Endurance Record Goal Is 700 Hours

CHICAGO, Aug. 3. (AP)—With a goal of 700 hours in the air, a Stinson Detroiter plane, carrying three pilots, will go aloft tomorrow to begin an endurance flight over the Municipal airport, weather permitting.

An effort will be made to better the world endurance record set by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, at St. Louis who stayed up in the St. Louis Robin for 420 hours.

The three pilots for this attempt are Russell Mossman of Chicago, Wilson Herren of Barrington, and Earle Steele. The plane selected is larger than the Curtiss Robin.

Joe Heyden of Cleveland, has been chosen to handle the hose on the refueling plane, and another pilot accustomed to handling Stinson ships will be selected as his companion.

6200 Texans Are At Camp Palacios

PALACIOS, Aug. 3. (AP)—In shop and office and on farm and ranch 6,200 young Texans turned from their trades Saturday to don the khaki uniform of Uncle Sam's second line of defense, the National Guard, for two weeks of work and play at the annual summer encampment of the thirty-sixth division at Camp Palacios.

Officered for the most part by world war veterans, some of whom saw active service in the Spanish American war, the troops will undergo a vigorous training in the arts of war on the drill fields and target ranges overlooking the broad expanse of Palacios Bay.

A large number of the organizations were en route from their home stations all day Saturday, the first of the special trains leaving El Paso at 12:15 a. m., Saturday.

GOING PLACES AND SEEING THINGS

ABOARD THE WESTERN AIR EXPRESS, HEADED FOR SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 3.—Leaving Hollywood gives me the same sensation I have felt when walking out into Broadway after seeing a good show.

A sense of unreality continues to cling long after the curtain has fallen. There's something of the land-of-make-believe in the Hollywood air which takes time to accept. The endless pageant of men and women garbed as gypsies, princes and troubadours somehow doesn't fit into the workaday world I have come to live in. And the thousands of toy houses, gayly painted oil stations and cerise stores seem, in retrospect, like fantasic and colorful fairy tale.

Nor do the street crowds help much in bringing me back to reality. There's a tropical quality about the thousands of girls which makes them appear as supper-Ziegfield selections. The sun has browned their skins to a very attractive brown. Their attire is gay and color-splashed. They go in for summer holiday clothes in a big way. They are eminently conscious of their sex, even at an early age, and garb themselves accordingly. They are a healthy husky, well-built crew—and what with the summer sun, many seem to be coming down the streets in variations on the bathing suit theme.

Thanks to the mass rush of beauties toward the movies, the hotel lobbies and the picture sets are jammed with young things who are far too attractive for a traveling columnist, for instance. They seem like all the elegant choruses I have ever beheld in a vast parade.

However, it might be the climate—these tropical places always did do strange things to me!

And they're beginning to tell me that my success at flying can be due quite as much to light-headedness as to air-mindedness.

Here, 7000 feet above the earth, on an air as quiet as a placid sea, the little old portable rattles along as easily as upon an office desk.

Were I an artist, I would spend half my time flying between Los Angeles and San Francisco, and at the end of the tenth trip I'd throw my colors and palettes out the window. For in all the world, I doubt if quite so much color and sheer beauty can be captured within a space of three hours.

Nor is there any feeling quite so unworldly as that of skimming along the upper levels of a sea of fog so vast that it seems endless. It lies in a tremendous, billowing mass, completely hiding the ground below and opalescent in the bright sun which seeks to dispel it.

Within a few moments we are climbing to top the peaks of the coast range and heading for a long stretch of valley which opens between two ragged lines of uneven mountains.

Far below stretches an endless variety of pastel shades, which grow softer in hue as we mount higher. The browned California hills become as huge inverted oyster shells, tinted so subtly at times as to seem unreal. Such is the illusion that the greens of treetops and fields run the chromatic scale.

The salt mashes run from the softest lavenders to the deepest imperial purples. Towns disappear and skylines vanish. The earth becomes a rainbow of varied tones.

Just across from me sits a Britisher, reading his copy of the London Times. A Broadway actress, who came from San Jose and graduated from the University of California, is on her way home for a vacation, after taking time off to look after a job in the talkies. A bored furniture salesman yawns and tells me he flies too often to get much of a kick out of the view any more. The assistant pilot appears with a thermos bottle filled with orange juice.

The Oakland and Alameda estuaries stand suddenly green-blue against the purple-brown of the soil—the ship circles and settles—the chill salt wind, kelp scented and briskly tonic, whips against you as the dor swings open. And if you've ever been here before, you know without looking, that the Golden Gate is not far off.

Moses Is Elected GOP Senate Head

New Hampshire Solon Will Seek To Increase Lead Of Republicans In Upper House Over Democrats

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. (AP)—Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, veteran political leader and campaigner, has been selected by senate republicans to direct the 1930 campaign in which they hope not only to hold their present lines, but to increase their majority of 16 over the democrats.

Assisting Moses in his task will be three newcomers to the senate, but men long trained on the ways of political campaigns—Herbert, of Rhode Island; Patterson, of Missouri, and Hatfield, of West Virginia. The others on the republican senatorial campaign committee are Steiwer of Oregon; Norbeck of South Dakota, and Vandenberg, of Michigan.

Succeeds Metcalfe

The new Hampshire senator succeeds Senator Metcalf, of Rhode Island, who is up for re-election along with 18 other republican senators. These include such veterans of senate service as Warren, of Wyoming; Borah, of Idaho; Norris, of Nebraska; Capper, of Kansas, and McNary, of Oregon.

Only 13 democrats come up for re-election next year. Ten of these represent states in the normally democratic south, and the republicans entertain little hope of making inroads except in the western states.

Seek Re-Election

Daniel F. Steck, democrat, is up for re-election. He was seated in 1926 in a contest with Senator Brookhart, republican insurgent, who subsequently defeated the late Senator Cummins in the senatorial primary and was sent back to the senate in the general election by an overwhelming majority.

The other two western democrats whose terms expire in 1931 are Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, and Sam G. Bratton, of New Mexico.

The itinerary was mapped out today by the commission at the conclusion of its tour of inspection of the state prison farms. A few of the commissioners will visit the state penitentiary at Huntsville and the farms north of Houston early next week. The remainder left for home to stay until the national swing is begun.

Among the penitentiaries to be inspected are Sing Sing at Albany, N. Y., and the federal prisons at Atlanta and Leavenworth.

POISONING AVERTED

Tablets Taken From Women Inmates Of Jail

DALLAS, Aug. 3. (AP)—The possibility that more women inmates of the county jail might become seriously ill from stolen slightly poison tablets appeared to have been averted late today. All the tablets which had not been swallowed had been recovered, it was believed.

Sheriff Hal Hood, after an investigation, reported that six women, in addition to a negress who died and two others made seriously ill, who had taken the pills were improved.

Grain Men Warned Of Crowding Mart

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. (AP)—The Federal Farm Board indicated today it believed wheat growers would be wise to refrain from crowding the markets with their products at this time.

The board announced it had made no statement, nor does it intend to forecast in any way, concerning the proper price of wheat for this market year, and described the present tendency toward overcrowding terminals and transportation facilities as "unfortunate."

The statement was interpreted as advice to wheat growers to hold back their product in order that better distribution may be effected but without the assumption on the part of the board of any responsibility for the eventuality of wheat prices.

Democrats Attack Sliding Scale Of Sugar Tariff Rate

Proposal Of Senator Smoot Is Described As "Scheme To Fix And Manipulate Prices" By Harrison

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. (AP)—Democrats lost no time today in attacking the proposal of Senator Smoot of Utah for a sliding scale for sugar tariff rates which was carried by the Utah Senator to Virginia for discussion with President Hoover at the executive's fishing preserve in the Blue Ridge mountains.

Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, a member of the finance committee of which Smoot is chairman, described the proposal as "a fine scheme to fix and manipulate prices," and Senator Connally, of Texas, also a democratic member of the committee, asserted the sliding scale was sure to cause a higher rate on sugar than at present.

Smoot's committee will hold a hearing on the proposal Wednesday and committee action was expected to follow. There were indications that republican senators, including Senator Borah of Idaho, also were not wholly satisfied that the Smoot plan would prove effacious for meeting the president's wish to frame a sugar schedule which will benefit both the producer and consumer.

STILL IN UGLY MOOD

Leavenworth Convicts Are Now Under Control

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Aug. 3. (AP)—Prisoners at Leavenworth federal prison, who mutinied Thursday, still are reported in an ugly mood, will not enjoy their regular Sunday band concert and ball games tomorrow.

Warden Thomas B. White today said the situation was under complete control and that he expected no additional trouble. At the same time he announced no Sunday entertainment would be allowed.

One prisoner, Mike Martinez, a Mexican, was slain by guards in putting down the mutiny several days ago.

Complaints of food and the overcrowded condition of the prison are blamed for the uprising.

Negotiations Of Strike Hit Snag

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 3. (AP) — A snag was struck today in the street car strike negotiations soon after the city commission council announced that the union and the company had agreed to accept Judge Rufust E. Foster of the United States circuit court of appeals as mediator.

Judge Foster prepared late today to receive delegations from each side of the labor controversy but union officials appeared with a written statement in which they said they agreed to accept Judge Foster as mediator, but requested the selection of a second mediator and nominated Judge William H. Byrnes of the civil district court, for the place.

The proposal for two mediators brought an end to the proposed afternoon conferences and late today public service officials had not indicated whether they would agree to two mediators.

Texas Motorcade Goes To Lamesa

LAMESA, Aug. 3.—The caravan of motorists making the all-Texas tour from Marshall, Texas, to El Paso, arrived in Lamesa about 11 o'clock Saturday morning. Sixty-five cars met the caravan at the east county line and escorted them into Lamesa. Lead by the fire truck, the fire whistle blowing from the time they entered the city limits. The Lamesa band furnished music and Judge Carl Rountree delivered the welcome address. Ice cold lemonade was served. Several cars joined the party here. They departed from here to Seminole where they will have lunch and thence to Carlsbad tonight.

Alabama banned Florida fruit because of the Mediterranean fly, but couldn't curb the appetites of tourists, who gorged themselves at the border when halted by patrolmen.

Says That Britain Should Follow U.S. Example In Parity

Senator Borah Would Like To See England Scrap Ships Rather Than America Building More

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. (AP)—Unlike many who have expressed their views on means of attaining parity between all branches of the British and American navies, Chairman Borah of the Senate foreign relations committee apparently would rather see British scrapping of ships than American building or a combination of the two.

"If Great Britain will follow our example at the Washington conference and sink some of her ships and thus come to parity," he suggests, "it will not only save the taxpayer but reduce the incentive to war—for huge armaments are always an incentive to war, parity or no parity. But if we have to build up to parity, it vastly increases the burdens of the taxpayers and augments the incentive to war."

Statement After Luncheon

His statement, issued 24 hours after a White House luncheon at which he and President Hoover discussed the general naval situation and, presumably, the British-American parity agreement reached in London by Prime Minister MacDonald and Ambassador Dawes, revived curiosity as to the chief executive's opinions as to various means of attaining the desired end. No indication was given, however, that the Idaho senator, who usually expresses his own ideas in his statements, might be reflecting those of the president as well.

Mr. Hoover, himself, meanwhile, seems to have said all he intends to say on that subject, for the time being, at any rate, in his letter to Paul V. McNutt, commander of the American Legion.

Senator Borah described as "very discouraging news" dispatches from London to the effect that Great Britain will not reduce its cruisers.

SAYS BILL VALID

SAN ANGELO, Aug. 3. (AP)—Penrose Metcalfe, representative from the ninety-first district, telegraphed Governor Dan Moody today that the pink boll worm bill was constitutional and urged him not to veto it.

Defeat Of Amendments Puts Damper On Activities In Austin; Governor Moody Chagrined At Votes Results

By R. W. BARRY
Associated Press Staff Writer

AUSTIN, Aug. 3. (AP)—Defeat of the two proposed constitutional amendments at the July 16 election, at first believed, on the basis of meager unofficial returns, to have carried, brought keen disappointment to the state capitol.

Governor Dan Moody, whose administration had urged court reform, among the proposed changes being a nine-member supreme court to be accessible every day in the year by abolition of the constitutional three-months' annual vacation, was plainly chagrined by the results, as indicated by later unofficial and still incomplete tabulations of the vote.

Cureton's Heart Set

Seemingly the Governor's disappointment was shared by Chief Justice C. M. Cureton, who had his heart set on the proposed enlarged court. He had lent his recommendation to the amendment, having foregone a vacation to stay here and aid the proposal at the polls. When first partial unofficial returns indicated the amendment might possibly have been adopted, he turned his interest to rearrangement of the court room, where the nine justices would meet every week and construe the law and constitution. Like a gardener tending his roses and shrubs, he had court attaches bring in six additional chairs and place them on the platform. Out in front he sat for hours working out in his mind's eye the permanent rearrangement of the bench. Doubtless he saw in those six extra chairs the forms of well-known Texas lawyers Governor Moody would likely place there.

Governor Moody was besieged with petitions for barristers who were commended for places on the enlarged court. He had made up his mind who to put in the extra chairs.

Those who urged the constitutional amendments pointed out that the expense of the enlarged court had probably prompted many persons to oppose the change. However, the two commissions of appeals which consider cases referred to them by the Supreme court will continue to function—although without authority to act finally—with the cost as great as that which would have been incurred had the amendment carried.

Another Amendment Coming

There is another amendment coming up for a vote in the general election of 1930 proposing a continuous session of the Supreme court. If carried, it would likely work an additional hardship on the present over-worked three member court, it is said.

It is recalled that Chief Justice Cureton said in a speech recently before the Texas Bar association that under present arrangements lawyers who served on the high court were apt to work out their lives sooner than it was intended.

"An old man who works over there nine months out of the year is apt to contract anything," the Chief Justice commented this week, pointing to the Supreme court judges' studys, after he had been informed Judge Thomas B. Greenwood, associate justice, had been sick while on a vacation in Seattle, Washington, and had been threatened with pneumonia.

The same disappointment was felt over the seeming failure of the amendment to increase the governor's salary from $4,000 to $10,000 annually. Everybody realizes that one who serves as governor leaves the office much poorer than when he went in, unless, of course, he has incomes from outside and independent sources.

Reported defeat of the salary increase amendment has put a damper on the movement that friends of Governor Moody had started to indube him to stand for a third term. Their argument was that the young Williamson county attorney who had spent four years in the governor's office at a financial sacrifice during a period of his life when he could of all time least afford it, should be given two more years at $10,000 a year to afford him opportunity to recoup his finances.

Beseiged With Requests

However, it was believed by other friends of Mr. Moody that the chief executive would have refused to be drafted under a plan of that kind. Still others are of the opinion he may decide to come out for a third term anyway, believing that he should take to the people some of his ideas of government—such as substituting an income tax for the ad valorem levy, and regulation of public utilities—which were turned down by the legislature.

One thing is positive: Governor Moody does not believe in raising the salary of an official while that official is serving a term. He has always insisted, when salary increases were proposed, that they be made effective at expiration of the term he is serving.

Tahoka To Get $70,000 Compress

New Cotton Plant Planned For Lynn County Area; To Start Construction Within Near Future

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

TAHOKA, Aug. 3.—Tahoka is to have a new $70,000 cotton compress, construction to start in a few days, and completion is expected in time for this fall's cotton crop. The plant will be located on Santa Fe trackage in the gin district in the north east outskirts of town.

The stock totaling $70,000 has been subscribed by local citizens, the chief promoters being A. L. Lockwood, W. D. Nevels, and R. C. Wood. Other large subscribers to stock include G. W. Small, E. R. Allen, Edwards and Lockhart, M. L. Handley, Thomas Bros., Belton Howell, Grover Stewart, and others.

Charter to be Filled

A charter of incorporation will be filed immediately and construction work will begin at an early date. Machinery and equipment will be of the latest and best type.

The need of a compress at this point has long been felt by Lynn county, and the announcement of the new enterprise is being welcomed with much interest. The compress will serve a major part of Lynn county and parts of Dawson and Garza counties. The fact that this county has produced an average of 42,000 bales of cotton on an average over a period of five years will practically assure the success of the business, the local stockholders believe.

Domestic Relations Clinics Are Recommended After Investigation

By BESS FURMAN
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. (AP)—Domestic relations clinics staffed by psychiatrists, psychologists, and social investigators are recommended in the findings of the United States children's bureau after a study of family and domestic relations courts of 26 cities in 16 states.

"These domestic relations clinics should be available to any person desiring help in adjusting troubles growing out of the marital relations," the report reads.

Phase of Investigation

The proposed clinics are but one phase of "the new technique of investigation and supervision" urged by the authors of the report, Bernard Flexner and Reuben Oppenheimer, attorneys, and Katherine F. Lenroot, assistant to the chief of the children's bureau, who also advocate physicians, psychologists, and psychiatrists attached to the courts.

The report, just completed, stresses the vast distinction between old court procedure and the methods used in the new family courts.

Lawyers Replaced

"The old courts relief upon the learning of lawyers; the new courts depend more upon psychiatrists and social workers," it says. "Justice in the old courts was based on legal science. In the new courts it is based upon social engineering."

The family court movement is described as an outgrowth of the Juvenile court, the result of practical experience which has demonstrated that child welfare and family welfare are inextricably intertwined, and as establishing the need for a new technique in dealing with family problems.

Brotherly love vanished when coffee was involved.

Two brothers arraigned in police court here Saturday morning related incidents leading to an altercation, for which each paid a fine.

One of the men is 46 years old, the other 42.

Mid-Summer Is Time When College Girl Plans Wardrobe For College During The Fall

Every college girl needs a smart tweed coat. This one is beige and black, with a fur scarf accenting the long-lined silhouette. The beige felt hat is very new in cut.

BY HENRI BENDEL
For NEA Service

NEW YORK, Aug. 3—Mid-summer is the time when the college girl is planning her winter wardrobe.

By this time of year the best points in the new modes have crystallized enough for her to be able to select with assurance styles that will be just as good in January as September.

Being correctly dressed means everything to the college girl. Plunged into a land of new adventure, socially and intellectually, she is much better equipped for the latter if she is sure of herself in the former. Knowing that she is well-groomed and smartly clad is her best posible social equipment. For, of course, ease is built on confidence charm on ease.

Building Lovely Structure of Dress

A college girl's wardrobe should be planned as a unit. Her various requirements in dress should be considered and with pencil and pad, a wardrobe structure should be outlined. Upon this framework various new and lovely things may be built extras of all kinds. But the basic needs should be cared for first of all

Among these basic needs I should list such things as a very good looking coat, two or three daytime frocks that combine utility with grace and prettiness, a few sports things either spectator or participator depending on her prowess in outdoor pasttimes, at least one afternoon frock that has a dignified lady-look to it, and evening things that recognize dinner and dance requirements.

For the coat I suggest a tweed. Most of the brown mixtures have an intriguing way of introducing a fleck of orange, red or other livening tone and greys se color in the same subtle way. Therefore these new tweeds are good for many different colored frocks.

One that is exceptionally smart is a beige and black tweed which developes the long-lined silhoutte with full bottom flare. It has raglan sleeves. Raccoon trims it in a new way, forming a scarf which runs down each side of the coat to the very bottom. This emphasized the longer lines in vogue this winter.

A blue chiffon dance frock for the college girl has charm, distinction and youth in its unusual style. Its individual touches are an apron front and cape back made of petals of the fabric, shirred to a deep heading. Its neckline sponsors the modish square in front and a restrained suntan back.

Here's a Feature in New Hats

The hat topping this coat lifts the face from the forehead, an important feature in new hats. It is light beige felt and has a long right side. It sonly trimming is a jade pin stuck through the crown.

Flat crepes are serviceable, svelt, and practical. Therefore I suggest at least one or two flat crepe frocks in the daytime wardrobe of the well-dressed college girl. One I have in mind is a two-piece beige flat crepe, with the blouse featuring a peplum of small box pleats, following the smae idea of the skirt's pleats. Cuffs flare in the same way. The neckline is singularl yyouthful, having a round collar finished with fine pleats. The little tab is formed of three rows of hand faggoting surrounded also by fine pleats.

Often evening clothes are the first to sponsor new silhouettes, new lengths, new fabrics and new trimmings. A little turquoise blue chiffon evening frock is very different fro mlast season's models. It is extremely youthful, very suitable to the college girl's needs.

New Effects In Front and Back

The waist is long and there is a front apron and a back cape effect that is new and interesting. They are made of floating petals of the chiffon, shirred many times to a heading which is attached to the frock. The gown is quite long and when its wearer dances the little cape's petals and the apron's petals also float in graceful manner.

Many evening gowns for young girls feature the cape back. It is the next step onward from the separate packet. It is youthful and charming, moreover.

A pepium, cuffs and skirt of hand pleating distinguishes a beige flat crepe frock whose youthfulness and chic make it ideal for the college girl.

The Woman's Day

By Allene Sumner

Allene Sumner

The mother of a 9-year-old boy was hailed before a Los Angeles judge the other day to answer the charge of violating the school attendance law.

She frankly admitted that she had refused to send her child to the public schools, explaining that she favored her own system of education.

The judge assailed her "system." He charged that she had created a "super ego" in the boy; that she was deluding the boy with a sense of his own superiority, and that he would have a rude awakening when he had to leave her and face the world.

Tested in open court, however, the boy was found to have a surprising general knowledge, quite beyond that of the average 9-year-old.

The mother was given a suspended sentence of five days in jail and was put on a year's probation providing that she would send her child to school.

This question of home versus public or private education confronts many an intelligent and educated parent.

THERE ARE DRAWBACKS

The more capable parents are of educating their childen, the more clearly they may see the system; the more keenly they may desire to make their child benefit by their own cultural opportunities.

No one can deny that many a woman is eminently more qualified to really teach her child than is the teacher to whom she sends the child.

Educating a child is not such fun that the average parent is going to beg to undertake it. Many parents believe that they pay taxes for schools in order to keep their progeny out from under foot.

And yet to say that any parent who desires to home educate his or her child proves by that very wish that he or she is capable of it, is probably a far-fetched statement.

Mrs. Johny Berry, of Los Angeles, who was sentenced for keeping her child from school is not the first parent who has attempted it.

Not long ago a national woman's magazine told the story of another woman who successfully defied the authorities over a long period of time. She related her child's achievements, which quite put in the shade the larnin' of public school trained children of her age.

Nor did this mother seem to make the mistake of believing that a mere accumulation of knowledge was education. She told the methods by which she taught her child to be resourceful, ingenious, creative, logical, completely mentally sharpened.

IS THERE ALTERNATIVE?

And yet, granting that some mothers are infinitely more capable of educating their children than are the teachers to whom the law compels them to send them, what are we going to do about it?

Who is going to decide who is qualified to teach children at home and who is not?

That is the whole point of the question. It is silly to argue that any discrimination is un-American; that all children must go through the same hopper. It is a simple question of whether isolated home education, even by the most capable of parents, is as good for the child as outside the home training with its inevitable rubbing of elbows with each and all.

After all, no child grows up to live in a world alone. It would almost seem that learning how to live with his fellow human beings is infinitely more important to him than being taught in isolation by even the most competent teacher-parent.

Camp Fire Girls Of City To Attend Week's Outing

INTEREST in the annual encampment of the local Camp Fire girls, which is to be at Two Draw lake near Post, August 14 to 21, is unusually keen among the adolescent girls of the city, according to Mrs. Hub Jones, local executive.

Approximately seventy-five girls are expected to attend the encampment this year, she said.

Various groups of Camp Fire girls in the city are staging parties, sales and other benefit affairs to make money to pay their fees at the encampment. Meetings of these groups during this summer are more enthusiastic than they have been during past years and new groups are being organized as the summer progresses, she said.

Receives Inquiries

Mrs. Jones is receiving inquiries every day from girls who expect to attend the encampment concerning the requirements.

Each girl who goes must present a health certificate which is signed by her parent or guardian and by the family physician. This is a necessary part of the camp preparation as some adolescent girls require particular attention and are not able to participate in all camp activities, according to those who are sponsoring the expedition.

Few Socialities Break Monotony Of Summer Days

Material Is Being Compiled For Club Year-Books By Committees In The Study Clubs Of City

LOOKING into the fall months, which will be the busiest of the year, women in Lubbock are enjoying the rest that accompanies their lethargy during the heat of this first week in August.

Practically no one is entertaining, although a few functions honoring visitors each week and some of the clubs are continuing to meet. Evenings are devoted to swimming and picnics.

However, even though no formal meetings are held, every club woman is anticipating her meetings which will bgin in September and October. Year books are being arranged and published, books and articles are being read in preparing for talks during the winter, committee are meeting to look after details of club activities.

Fair Anticipated

The Panhandle-South Plains fair, which falls the last of September and the first of October, is attracting its usual attraction. Pieces of handiwork are being prepared for exhibition, novelties are receiving their attention, fair superintendents and direcors are planning for the week's display.

Withal there is an undercurrent of alertness among the society and club women of the city, even though few events break the monotony of the summer days.

Many people of the city are yet away on their annual vacations. Some families do not expect to return from their mountain retreats until the public schools open next month. Others are still preparing to make their departures and in the working world there is a steady stream of those who aer leaving or returning from their two-weeks of rest and play.

Children and adolescents are happy with their vacation and numbers of parties are given each week. Birthdays are celebrated among the very young, watermelon feasts delight the older youngsters, while swimming, picnics in the parks or on lawns and other outdoor diversions make the days gala for these juniors.

Last week was marked by very little entertaining here.

One of the largest affairs was a treasure hunt staged on Thursday evening by the J. B. Crislers and R. D. Erwins for a number of their friends. This diversion is proving popular during the summer.

Misses Faye Hunt and Gertrude Terrell entertained the Las Chaparittas club on Wednesday afternoon in Miss Hunt's home and Mrs. J. A. Phipps, jr., was hostess on Tuesday afternoon to 1928 Bridge club members in her home. Mr. and Mrs. William Dingus entertained on Wednesday evening, choosing their guests principally from the Technological college faculty, and Miss Jonnie McCrery, a member of the home economics faculty at the college, was guest of honor at a bridge party given by Misses Margaret Weeks and Mabel Erwin.

Mr. and Mrs. John Jarrott entertained the Cotters club on Friday evening and Miss Virginia Bacon was hostess last evening to members of the Sans Souci club.

South Plains Society Events Last Week Were Devoted Principally To Affairs Honoring Plains' Visitors

Picnics, Skating Parties And Bridge Are Popular Form Of Diversion Among The Society People

South Plains society the past week has been devoted to the giving of in-honor parties for visitors from many parts of the state. Several weddings have been held, and birthday parties given. The heat apparently is having little success in causing a lull in society events. One of the loveliest affairs of the week was an outing in the form of a picnic Friday honoring Miss Mary Frances Miller, of Amarillo, who is visiting friends in Snyder. The young people motored to Scott's ranch where a delightful picnic lunch was spread.

Encampment

is $5 for each girl and those who attend are each required to bring a cot, bed roll, plate, knife, fork, spoon and cup, bathing suit, sweater and camp clothing. A specific list of needs will be furnished to each girl who attends.

The girls are being urged to take more bedding than they think they will need as the nights are usually cool in the canyon.

Director Chosen

Miss Cecelia Peterson, Camp Fire executive whose home is in Phoenix, Ariz., is to direct the camp again this year. She was director last summer of the encampment in Ceta canyon, which was considered the most successful of those conducted for local girls.

Miss Peterson is to arrive in Lubbock on the Saturday preceding the Wednesday on which the encampment opens and will advise with the girls during that period.

A nurse, recreational director, swimming instructor, life saver, handicraft teachers, adult supervisors and others are being chosen for the encampment and names of these will be announced before the opening of the conference, Mrs. Jones explained.

Receive Special Care

Each girl will be under special care of an adult. Those who attend will be required to keep health records, to sleep a specified number of hours during the day, to devote certain periods to relaxation, to play, to camp duties and to training in Camp Fire activities.

Ceremonies of the order will be a part of the routine of the encampment.

Excellent camping facilities are available at Two Draw lake, according to the committee arranging for the conference, and this encampment is expected to excell any previous encampments in efficiency and in the pleasure it affords young girls of the city. The camp site is about forty-three miles south of Lubbock.

It's Five-Day Week In This Woman's Factory In Pennsylvania

By JULIA BLANCHARD
NEA Service Writer

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—Katherine Gartside Emmert is a far-sighted manufacturer who believes in the efficiency of the five-day week and allows her own employes two days of rest in seven.

"I think life is to short to be so tired all the time from your work that you can't enjoy it," this amiable, frank woman maintained.

"I have been fagged myself too often not to know," she added. "You see I sold our rust soap from house to house before we made such a go of it. Moreover I know most women have some home-making to do in addition to their work. If they have a couple of days each week to get home tasks completed and have a little recreation besides, they work faster and better and production stays practically the same."

How Business Began

The whole history of the growth of the now highly prosperous company she and her brother own is just as human and interesting as is Mrs. Emmert herself.

It started 35 years ago when Mrs. Emmert was a little girl in a pink chambray dress, all ready to go on a picnic, and accidentally spilt a bottle of ink over herself.

"My father was a chemist. We children always thought he could fix anything up right. So I went crying to him." Mrs. Emmert told it all so graphically one could almost see the little girl she once was, tearful, pathetic, running to Papa for help.

"He tried a lot of things," she recounted. "He didn't succeed in removing all the spots right then and there. But he took out enough so I could go to the picnic.

"Then he began experimenting. He finally worked out a satisfactory formula for both ink and rust spots. But it never occurred to him to sell it, then."

Her Start In Business

In the meantime little Katherine had outgrown her pink chambray dresses by several summers and had started as a stenographer at five dollars a week. She kept books too, and in her own words:

"I might have been there yet if the boss hadn't developed a troublesome trick of taking money out of the cash register without saying anything about it. I'd figure almost all night, trying to balance things. The next morning I'd ask him about the two, three or five dollars missing. He'd look absent-minded and then say, 'O, yes, you are right. I took a little money out for John's shoes.' John was his little boy. But no child ever wore as many shoes as that cash register paid for!

"Finally I got mad, spoke to him and got fired. Then I held down several positions, in a religious publishing company, in a railroad office, then as a court reporter. In the meantime Father had started his little business. I put on demonstrations at state fairs, on the Atlantic board walk, in stores. I thoroughly enjoyed it all. And when the soap began selling well, I started out from house to house with it. Then I organized groups of salesmen. Finally, when Father left the business to my brother and myself and we began selling through stores, I felt I knew the distribution problem thoroughly.

Happy Family Life

Since Mrs. Emmert started in rust soap she has been married, become a mother, then a widow, and now she is finding her greatest happiness in being the proud possessor of a cute, chubby little grand-child.

"My boy isn't in business with me." She rather sighed, as she spoke, but one knew that her type of woman accepts facts like this matter-of-fact. "You see, my son is musical and one of the happiest days of my life was the one when I was able to get a building he wanted and give him a start in his business of musical instruments."

She didn't even mention the fact that it was a $55,000 business start she gave him. That is beside the point with this woman to whom personal relations are of infinite importance and money nothing except a convenience.

Starting on a three months' vacation in Europe, Mrs. Emmert seemed much more willing to talk about her son and his family than the business.

"That is because we have everything worked out and running well," she explained. "But I know that it will be the factories and the business possibilities abroad that will interest me. You see, when you have put as many years into a thing as I have into rust soap, you just naturally have it in the back of your mind all the time. But, even then, I think no one should let business consume her. For it's the personal things in life that sustain you, when you are as old as I am."

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

BY MADAME RUBINSTEIN

One of the most fascinating of all feminine accessories is perfume. One drop of a delicious and distinctive scent touched to the lobe of a woman's ear or whiffed in the hollow of her throat, or even sprayed in the hem of her dress, lends her an aura of enchantment, a subtle glamour that surrounds her like a mist, delicate, elusive and altogether delightful.

Of course the scent must be a "good" one—that is, not cheap or obvious or blantant. And it should in some mysterious way, suit her personality. But there are countless perfumes today from which any woman should be able to choose, without much difficulty, one that does suggest herself. Our modern life is growing more and more complex. Luxuries are multiplying and crowding their pleasant, persistent way into the fold of what were formerly considered mere necessities. And perfume is among the most highly developed and approved of such luxurious belongings. Nearly every woman today uses perfume, and nearly every woman should — for perfume is an undeniable aid to be charming.

The most natural and simple types of perfume are those made with flower scents. When we think of fragrance, we usually think first of Nature's fragrances — the fresh, sweet smells that belong to rain-drenched gardens in the spring, or to the fields and hills of a summer countryside. These are the familiar perfumes — violet, narcissus, lilac, rose, lily of the valley, jasmine, mimosa—scents of the flowers that grow in the part of the country in which we live.

But there are other subtle blends of scents, sweet and delicious and having nothing to do with these simple fragrances of flowers. Among them are the spicy, pungent scents, such as sandalwood and the fragrances of incense, myrrh and sage. These are the scents from the orient, subtle and pleasantly rich, though often unfamiliar.

Ambergris from the sperm whale, musk from the male musk-deer, patchouli, an East Indian mint, all have lent their contribution of sweetness to the fine art of perfume making; so that today a woman may choose from among hundreds of perfumes the one or several that she considers appropriate to enhance her mysterious charm.

After pointing out that nearly fifty per cent of the European nations today were republics as against fifteen per cent in the pre-war days, Dr. Rappard plunged into a discussion of Germany's change from monarcrial to republican government.

Monument Commemorates Pioneering Spirit

AUSTIN, Aug. 3 (AP).—By the side of the road, where passerby may see and read—is a monument to "a true pioneer and patriot" who braved the tomahawk and other dangers to blaze the way for civilization.

A red granite stone sitting on a knoll a few miles beyond the Austin city limits marks the spot where Josiah Pugh Wilbarker, a member of Stephen F. Austin's colony, was stabbed and scalped by the Indians in 1832. At the time he was engaged in locating lands for the colonies.

"We honor the spirit of sacrifice," the inscription states.

Of the German war vessels sunk in Scapa Flow during the World War, 25 destroyers and 3 battleships have been raised.

Philosophy Of Feminism Marks Novel About Three Generations Of Sinners

Ellen Glasgow Has Something To Say In New Novel

A NEW book by Ellen Glasgow is a literary event, since she does not produce one every year. And when she does you feel it is not on a publisher's order or an obligation to her dear public, but because she has something to say.

"They Stooped to Folly" (Doubleday-Doran) follows the history of three women who loved not wisely and according to the state and church, but according to their affections, and each in a different generation, paid after the manner of her day.

Aunt Agatha's sin made a ruined woman out of her and brought her family grief and shame. Moral turpitude meant something in those days and put a woman in her place—if it became known. Aunt Agatha sinned with deadly seriousness, and paid for it with tears and repentence the rest of her life—though in latter days she did become a movie fan, and no film was too florid.

The beautiful and seductive Mrs. Dalrymple sinned lightly, beautifully and repeatedly. Instead of going into seclusion after her initial fall, she went to Paris, acquired a Parisian wardrobe and a continental point of view, both of which enabled her to enjoy life more fully. But she never put anything over the women of the town, and her position had none of the security that a woman yearns for.

Milly the stenographer, a contemporary flapper, sinned naturally, suffered in her own way, and didn't ask or care for reproof or for sympathy. She got over the loss of her lover in the approved fashion of the day, by sticking to her job, living her own life, and getting out of a small town into the big town as soon as she could.

Quite conclusively it is pointed out that each generation calls for a different toll for the same privileges, but that one is ruined, not by others, but by one's own attitude. Agatha was not a victim of sin, but of Victorian philosophy. Milly showed that it is not necessarily easy to pick yourself up after a fall, but that it can be done.

This book expounds the feministic philosophy that runs through all Mrs. Glasgow's books—there should be something more permanent than love in a woman's life, and that the average woman is a failure because she is unable to provide it, and builds her house on the unsound foundation of physical attraction instead.

Granted this theory is not new, and that modern psychology has grayed what used so definitely to be black and white, still the book has the charm of novelty, of beautiful writing, and adroit characterization. The most interesting characters in the book, to me, were not the ones who stooped to folly, but those who did not. Virginius Littlepage, with his southern traditions and suppressed desires muddling his point of view, his calm wife and his virtuous daughter, and his brother, a pagan strayed into a southern fold are a fine family group to have created. And Louisa Goddard, who was a creature of such rare restraint, and Martin Welding, who had none, are most intriguing folk.

It is a generous book, with a large number of characters, a rich background, and an intricate but thoroughly consistent pattern.

Honore Morrow's New Book Tells Of Missionaries

"Splendor Of God" Tells Of Life In Orient

HONORE WILLSIE MORROW, who has contributed two novels based on Lincoln's life, and who has usually used the American background for her stories, goes to the orient with her new novel, "Splendor of God" (Morrow) which is laid in Rangoon.

Honoree Morrow

It is the story of a New England couple who go there as Baptist missionaries. Adoniram Judson is a crusader with a blazing sword, Ann a delicate woman of great beauty. Her death plunges him into such despair that for a while, his faith wavers, and he is almost won over to the mysticism of the east. Christianity wins, however, and later, with Sarah Boardman, his second wife, they build and establish the Baptist church at Rangoon which endures to this day.

Publishers Offering Avalanche Of Stories From Plots Of World War

Germans Writing Of Other Side Of Front

WE MIGHT just as well be prepared for an avalanche of war books because the yare inevitable, particularly with the bright examples of "All Quiet on the Western Front," and "The Case of Sergeant Grischa" to lure on the literary aspirants. The former book is now selling in all European countries, translated in all languages, and has sold close to a million and a half copies.

Another volume, written by a German, that is getting away to a good start is "War" (Dodd, Mead & Co.) by Ludwig Renn, in which an eyewitness describes all that a soldier in the ranks saw and experienced, almost as if he had kept an hourly record of his sensations.

"OVERSHADOWED," by Eugene Lohrke (Jonathan Cape and Harrison Smith) is anything but hard-boiled—It is the story of a sensitive soul and how it was disintegrated and shattered by a conflict to which it could not adjust.

The hero went to war because the Germans shelled Rheims. He started away with his mother's miniature, a lock of her hair bound in a gold fillet and a morocco-bound edition of Shelley. One is quite prepared for the spiritual downfall. Beautiful prose, but a story that never quite sets.

THOUGH written in a slightly sophomoric style, and without any reverence for the old god of war, I think "War Bugs" (Doubleday-Doran) by Charles MacArthur, is a rather welcome relief from such seriousness. At least, you feel that the Rainbow Division had a good time, and that the boys injected a little much-needed lightness and leaven into the dismal lump. It reeks with liquor, reels and drunkenness, thumbs its nose at our most cherished traditions of noble men and virtuous women—but is lively and cheery.

QUITE as unpleasant in locale and as packed with brutality and horror as any war book is "Adventures of An Outlaw" (Jonathan Cape and Harrison Smith), being the memoirs of Ralph Rashleigh, a penal exile in Australia from 1826 to 1844, when England's riff-raff was sent out there to penal colonies.

Because of such a vogue for literary discoveries, and persons who drop from nowhere and proceed to write of their adventures in out of the way spots of the earth, with such a flair for fiction, one is apt to suspect any manuscript from a mysterious source.

This one comes from a librarian in New South Wales, who got it from someone who inherited it from his wife's father. Its 150,000 words of spotted English written on blue veined fool's-cap paper, purports to be written by Giacomo di Rosenberg, who took the story as it was told to him by Ralph Rashleigh.

His adventures are a chronicle of hairbreadth escapes and fantastic cruelties, floggings, hot Australian sun, and a hideous indictment of so-called civilized existence. It has more excitement than Robison Crusoe, Captain Kidd, and Trader Horn combined.

RADCLYFFE HALL, who received much attention because her novel "The Well of Loneliness" was banned in England and threatened to be here, offers another book to the public which was published in England in 1924, "The Unlit Lamp" (Jonathan Cape and Harrison Smith). It will probably rouse considerably less comment than her previous work, with its ambiguous problem, but it is a well written, honestly written book, with a character, Joan Ogden, who is as living and vital a one as you will find in contemporary fiction.

Edison Winner Is "Modest, Retiring Lad," Tutor Says

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 3. (AP) — Wilbur B. Huston, 16, student selected today as the winner of the Thomas A. Edison scholarship contest, was described by his former teacher as a "modest, retiring lad who has to be pushed into contests."

He i sthe son of Bishop and Mrs S. A. Huston of the Episcopal cese of Olympia, Wash. They expressed themselves as overjoyed at their son's selection as the winner.

Dr. Charles King Bliss, principal of the Lakeside school for boys which young Huston attended said:

"Young Huston's lack of interest in languages was a great disappointment to his father. It was not until the lad got into physics, chemistry and mathematics that he began to wake up. His father was disappointed but he preferred to let the boy find himself. Wilbur received fairly good grades in his Latin, foreign languages and literature but his heart was not in these subjects."

Book News Notes For This Week

WHO EVER heard of a married philosopher? The old proverb has its tragic as well as comic truth, for if man's intellectual life is frustrated by the cares and interruptions of marriage, what of the wife who suffers poverty and isolation because of her husband's devotion to ideal she does not share? Where woman's instinct for physical creation is met by man's equally strong passion for intellectual creation, there is sure to be sex war. In "Lone Voyagers" (Houghton Mifflin Company) Wanda Fraiken Neff who has been both college teacher and faculty wife, shows this conflict at its highest intensity in the supposedly calm circles of a university.

Love Whips Business

"Private Secretary," by Alan B Schultz, is a sprightly tale of a modern, quite modern young woman who knew what she wanted, but was willing to sidetrack her ambitions in favor of what the novelists are coming more and more to refer to as "love."

Mary Linden had to choose among her boss, a coming young man; a young, charming and ever so selfish writer, and that always faithful "Joe" who lives in novelists' spheres.

She made the logical choice, turning down the boss for reasons which are not evident, but which must have been sincere; turning down the clever young writer because she had tired of him and he of her, and choosing Joe because it was either that or the life of a spinsterly file clerk.

Perhaps Mr. Schultz did not mean it exactly that way, but so it worked out to the mind of the casual reader.

The English translation of Marcel Proust's continuous novel, "Remembrance of Things Past," is nearer completion by one more volume.

Written in eight parts, it is being published in England and America in seven volumes, of which the most recent, "The Captive," is the fifth.

"The Captive," like the other parts, is a minute study of modern society, as observed by a sensitive Frenchman who not only satirizes snobbishness, vulgarity and affectations, but at the same time, as some authority has said, "probes into the motives of the heart and soul."

You can journey far before you will find more murders within one cover than in "The Dain Curse" by Dashiell Hammett, (Alfred A. Knopf). Among the few characters left on the last page are the detective who tell the story and the perverse young girl, addicted to morphine, who was the custodian of the curse. And yet, it is quite impossible to lay the book down until the last man has been shot. Preposterous as it all is, it is thrilling and exciting, told in the slangy vernacular of the detective.

It is not the Japan of lanterns and flowers and Madame Butterflys that William Plomer depicts in his "Paper Houses" (Coward McCann). He reveals curious tensions and cross currents in the lives of these people that make suicide play such an important role in that country.

"Suicide," he writes, "is prevalent in Japan, especially among the young mature. And in the civil service it is still, in certain circumstances, considered meritorious to cut one's stomach to spite some one's past, or somebody's else."

The drab lives of uneducated country girls and servant girls is set forth in a most realistic manner, bringing out the dire results of oriental philosophy and the apathetic attitude of the lower classes. Reading it, you forget all about the cherry blossoms, chrysanthemums, geishas and kimonas. Short stories—but they throw a revealing light.

Third Annual Old Settlers Reunion Dates Scheduled

West Texas Group To Meet August 15 And 16 At Old "Rock House" In Blanco Canyon

RALLS, Aug. 3—The annual West Texas Old Settlers reunion will be held on Thursday and Friday, August 15 and 16 at the Hank Smith Memorial park in the Blanco canyon. This will be the third annual meeting of the old timers at this memorable spot since the organization was perfected some four years ago. John McDermett, Pink Parrish, Bob Smith and a few other old timers conceived the idea for such a reunion to be held at the old Rock House, the first house built in Crosby county, the house was built in 1877 by Uncle Hank Smith, the first settler. Interest in the reunion has grown rapidly and now the reunion draws visitors from all over the state and New Mexico and Oklahoma.

An outstanding feature of the reunion is the gathering together of the pioneer settlers who lived here some fifty years ago. It is estimated that more than twenty thousand people attended the reunion last year and as many are expected to attend this year. The site of this reunion is the original settling place of the first settlers of this county. Besides the gathering together of the old timers, there will be entertainment for everyone. Such as square dancing, old fiddlers contest, speaking, etc.

The old "chuck wagon" will be there and those attending will have an opportunity of eating as they were served in 1876.

The famous old "rock house" in the shadow of old Mount Blanco, stands as a monument to the foresight of the hardy pioneer who fifty years ago divined the possibilities of the plains of Texas.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 3 (AP).—Mexico ha saccepted an invitation from Belgian government to participate in the International Exposition of Paintings by school children to be opened at Brussels soon, and will send 50 paintings together with a motion picture film showing how the primary schools are conducted in this country.

Plenty Of Fun—All For One Buck!

A Dollar Bill Will Go Farther Than You Think When It Comes To Furnishing Amusement In Lubbock

By LUCILE BARR SMITH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ONE DOESN'T have to have a whole pocketful of money to enjoy a day spent in Lubbock. In fact, even one small dollar, if not spent recklessly, will give pleasure from daylight to dark especially if a person has a car.

The morning can be very enjoyable whiled away with a game of golf. The County Park golf course is just across the railroad tracks east of town. It only costs a quarter and though it may not be so large it will give plenty of exercise to one chasing the little white pill over the course.

After playing all morning in the hot sun a "coke" will do wonders toward cooling you off, and will only cost a nickel, too.

Then There's The Theatre

For an afternoon that promises to be very warm, a seat in a cool theatre will be highly enjoyable. By attending in the afternoon, matinee prices may be taken advantage of. A good show, one that will cost you sixty cents to see at night, can be enjoyed in the afternoon for thirty-five cents. And of course there must be a sack of popcorn to help relieve the tension just when the villain is about to throw the handsome hero off a cliff.

By the time the show is over it is rather late in the afternoon. The day is at least two-thirds past and we have thirty cents left. In wandering about hunting for more amusement we might play a game of baseball or "try your skill at batting" where you get a chance at a dozen balls for a dime.

Now for a Swim

After getting rather warm at our game of baseball we decide a swim would be rather nice. A dime will get a ticket and a basket to check your clothes in. There is the slide, diving boards, a wheel and a barrel to try to ride. Perhaps a chance acquaintance will make the swim more lively by a race, an "under water" contest or some other form of rivalry.

Back to town and the day about gone, but still a dime left if we care to spend it. We might play a game of football or golf in a nickel slot machine or aim a pop-gun at colored circles in a row.

One nickel left. Why take that home with us? A punchboard will do away with this last nickel. If we happen to punch a lucky number we get a box of candy, and if we don't our nickel is just gone.

No more money oh, well, we are getting sleepy anyway, and a whole day's pleasure is enough to ask of one small dollar.

Other than this abnormality, which physicians believe will disappear when she becomes older, the girl is perfectly normal.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

Again the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

Again the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea and gathered of every kind.

Which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away.—St. Matthew, xiii, 44, 47, 48.

CONCENTRATED IMPROVEMENT

PROPERTY owners of lots, houses and business structures on Texas avenue have organized for the purpose of improving appearances along the thoroughfare, and, incidentally, to increase values. The move, as The Avalanche-Journal sees it, is a good one and might well be copied by property owners in other sections of the city.

Let a number of people think along any one line and some action is certai nto result. Form groups representing every section of the city, let them discuss their problems and move to correct natural faults and a better city will bloom, almost as by magic.

This newspaper congratulates the Texas avenue property owners for their anbition to make their section of the city more useful, more attractive and at the same time more valuable, and expresses the hope that others will see fit to work on similar lines.

MERGERS CONTINUE

The spectacle of electric power consolidations continues. Scarcely a week passes without some merger in one part of the country or another. Just what all this means for the people of the future none can tell definitely, but the stabbing thought is taht so few persons seem to be interested.

The American people went through about the same experience to their sorrow in previous years with respect to other industries, many of them not nearly so essential to orderly living as electric power. Nothing more momentous in the influence on human life has developed for years to match the part which electricity plays and will continue to play.

No person with any wit at all can feel safe with all the money which is being made of these consolidations, the public interest is being guarded as zealously as it should. There is economic soundness in the mass generation and distribution of power, but do enough persons, more especially the consumers, share in this economic soundness or is it confined to a small circle of insiders? Does this unceasing process of mergers mean tyrannical monopoly in the future?

These questions are pertinent. Many are asking them. The answers thus far leave much untouched. Efforts to explore the power industry are resisted. Such rates as have been reduced seem much too high to experts. Service, while in most places better than formerly, is not perfect, but these matters are but symptoms, phases of the matter which goes deeper and reflects itself in the question of whether the public can afford to sit by placidly while the revolutionary changes in an essential and overwhelming industry are taking place without being certain that viewed in the large they are good for the country.

ARE JUDGES ABOVE CRITICISM?

In defending the editor and chief editorial writer of the Cleveland Press against a charge of contempt of court, Newton D. Baker, secretary of war in the Wilson administration, gave expression to a sound interpretation of the judge's place in democratic society. The following paragraph is central:

"As a matter of fact, the question of a judge's fitness to sit on the bench cannot be decided by him. It is decided by popular election; that is, in some classes of our judiciary, and in some it is decided by appointment. And if a man be a judge, and if some other man thinks he is an improper person to be a judge, the judge does not become proper by restraining the person who thinks him improper from expressing that opinion."

Mr. Baker further declared that the very idea of a court is too impersonal to permit a judge, when somebody speaks ill of him, to get angry and want vengence.

Unfortunately, hearings on contempt of court charges are held before the tribunal which is alleged to have been offended against. This in itself tends to increase the likelihood of personal animosities and feelings being predominant.

The case involving the Cleveland journalists, which resulted in a sentence of 0 days in jail and fines of $500, might have had a different outcome if the requisite impersonality to which Mr. Baker alluded had been obtained by means of trial before a wholly disinterested court.

TOURISTS IN RUSSIA

The American business men and women who are at present touring in Soviet Russia are receiving, it is evident, a welcome of the kind that once would have been described as royal. It was rumored before they started that these pioneers would be compelled to adopt the disguise of proletarians before they could effect an entrance into Soviet territory, discarding silk stockings and vanity cases, creased trousers and fragrant cigars at the frontier. In fact, the delegation traveled to Moscow and on to Leningrad in luxurious pullman cars, relics of the old regime, equipped with radio and bathtubs; and never before, it is said, has a foreign mission received such constant and kindly attention from Soviet officials.

This solicitude has a double source. The Soviet government has a natural desire to establish trade relations with the United States; and this country, as the most completely mechanized society in the world, has always been an inspiration to bolshevik leaders. The American visitor in Russia, therefore, may be assured of a welcome both for what he brings and for what he represents. It has been ironically prophesied that before long Russia will become the tourists' Mecca, but at least it seems likely that as a result of the present excursion American tourists will visit Russia in increasing numbers.

Refueling tests are all right in this prohibition era. There was a time when to refuel was to court trouble at home.

German liners lay claim to being the fastest boats afloat. There are other reasons why they seemed destined to attract American patronage.

EXPRESSION "INDIRECT PROTECTION" FILLS LONG-FELT WANT, SAYS STEWART

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—"Indirect protection" is a new expression, but it fills a longfelt want.

The idea it embodies is not so new, but the term, "indirect protection," is the neatest, compactest designation for it that we have had yet, and we undoubtedly are due to hear it a great deal used henceforward, as people come to recognize in it all that it implies.

Arguments over the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill gave birth to it, while the measure was pending in the house of representatives. The senators who are wrestling with the bill now in committee, for final action when congress reconvenes next month, adopted it right away.

"INDIRECT protection" was introduced to the public in connection with the proposal, already several times referred to, of a stiff import tax on bananas, to make them cost like sixty in the United States.

"For heaven's sake," exclaimed the low tariff folk, 'why put a protective tariff on bananas? We raise none here, and can't. Our climate won't permit us to. What sense is there in protecting an impossible American industry against foreign competition?"

"No," replied the high protectionists, "we never can have a domestic banana industry, but we have plenty of peaches and apples and other home-grown fruit. If bananas are made too expensive to buy, people will have to eat more of this stuff of our own.

"Indirect protection! See?"

IT seemed to ue that this principle might be made pretty elastic.

I asked Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, one of our foremost alarimsts on the subject of tariff boosting, what he thought about it.

"Yes," nodded the senator, 'it can be stretched considerably.

"Just at present they are trying to bar imported tapioca from the American menu, in order to make us eat more cornstarch."

A very little tapioca, a cassava derivative, I learned, is produced in Florida, but not nearly enough to go around; mostly it is too tropical for us. Except for the advantage which its exclusion might be to a handful of Floridians, a tapioca embargo would eb another case of "indirect protection" in full force.

"CARRIED to its logical conclusion," observed the Mississippi senafor, 'the idea promises to compel us to accept some sort of a home-made subetitute for everything we cannot produce in the United States."

"More than that," I insisted, 'why may it not compel us to accept substitutes for a lot of things that we do produce in the United States?

"For instance, Senator Smoot, whose state of Utah yields beet sugar, has declared war on cigarette manufacturers, for prescribing a coffin nail in preference to a sweet.

"Suppose he should succeed in prohibiting tobacco. Wouldn't we have to eat candy instead?

"How about that for indirect protection of the beet sugar industry?"

SENATOR HARRISON laughed.

"Even so, I would hardly call it tariff protection," he said.

No?

WELL, will anyone say that soft drink magnates were unmindful of the benefit that prohibition of "lickir" might prove, to their trade?

Has it not been mentioned quite openly that, the fewer nickles spent on beer, the more there are available for 5 and 10-cent stores?—and larger coins for movies?—and still bigger money for flivvers and savings banks?

Did not a delegation call on President Hoover a few days ago, to point out to him that the suppression of Sunday golf would leave large numbers of individuals with no place to go but church?

NO tariff consideration enters into these matters, certainly.

But indirect protection?—why not?

Senator Harrison listened politely, but he evidently remained unconvinced. The indirect protection concept is inextricably involved with the tariff theory, in his mind.

GREEN LETTUCE LEAVES CONTAIN MORE VITAMINS THAN LIGHTER "HEARTS"

Leaf Lettuce

"Look here, waiter! I ordered hearts of lettuce, not this rabbit food!" the aggrieved diner protests.

"Sorry, sir, we have only the leaf lettuce today."

Now had this diner known his dietetics he would have ordered the leaf lettuce instead of the "hearts", for the hearts do not have anywhere near the vitamin content that the green outer leaves do. Vitamins seem to be bound up with the coloring matter of plants—the green and yellow. The golden color of carrots makes it a golden vegetable.

Eat more carrots and green leaf vegetables, raw.

"Dear Doctor: I'm now down to normal weight, thanks to Petersizing. But now, how to stay there? Gosh, I hate to be fat again, but have I always got to be as careful with my diet as I've had to be while reducing? F."

No, you won't always have to be strict with your diet, F., but you'll always have to be careful. Of course now that you are down to normal weight, every movement you make has more pep to it and you do need more than you did while reducing, and you can go on a more generous diet. But watch your scales.

You'll have to remember that you are never going to be able to overeat for your needs without gaining again, naturally. But that overeating for the needs gives you a clue. If you want to eat more, make your needs greater. Walk more, Exercise more. Make a practice of exercising in odd moments. When you stoop to pick up anything, make an exercise of it by not bending your knees. When you are waiting for the water to boil, do a few dancing steps or knee-bends. (In the winter, every night, while filling my hot water bag, I get in 10 knee-bends.) While you're waiting for the telephone number, take some deep breaths and contract your tummy. Walk to work, part way, anyway. Walk up and down the stairs instead of taking the elevator. While waiting for a car, walk back and forth, don't stand still. When you put on your clothes in the morning, make an exercise of it, etc., etc.

You didn't say how much you had to reduce, but if it took any time you undoubtedly have changed your food tastes, so you don't care so much for the concentrated sweets. Not so? Don't you really like fruits now for dessert, instead of French pastries, ice cream, etc? You can even enjoy a glass of plain seltzer with ice in it, instead of ice cream soda. You don't eat between meals (especially of nuts and candies) and you don't take the before-retiring lunches that you used to. All this is going to help you out wonderfully.

Watch your weight. If you find you have gone up three pounds, go on a low calorie diet for a day and lose it pronto. That's what I have resolved to do. I hope I have had my last personal experience with reducings.

Trying New Methods On A Tough Old Customer

On the Fence with The Seer

Travel is an age-old, fascinating adventure. Through the march of civilization men have, and are, realizing more fully its broadening educational advantages. Millions are spent annually in this great investment and its influence upon the intellect of the masses has been felt throughout the world.

The Seer has long nourished secret desires to traverse the earth in quest of its natural and historical shrines of interest. He feels that some day his eyes will behold in all their traditional glory the wonders of the ancient world, that have been preserved by a thoughtful, discriminating people. But despite all these desires he strongly advocates the practice to see the wonders of the homeland first of all.

We have in our own back yard, so to speak, one of the sensational wonders of the world—Carlsbad Cavern—This phenomenal giant, discovered in recent years, lies under the barren hills of New Mexico. A few years ago the Seer had the combined pleasure and experience of seeing this gigantic spectacle and the memory of its hidden, indescribable beauty lingers with him still.

How small and insignificant he felt as he tread with the crowd through its spacious recesses of dream-like grandeur, hidden there within the silence of the earth for centuries. Amid the muffled exclamations of the crowd as they stood midget-like at the base of some colossal creation, the Seer could not refrain from wondering how an Athiest would feel under the influence of the spell it seemed to cast upon those present. Only the hand of God could have wrought such beauty from the substances of the earth. Today Carlsbad Cavern, phenomenal marvel of the age awaits in all its sublime supremacy for the further advent of man.

Today's Poem

(As I Lay Asleep in Italy—Shelley)

One night I lay asleep in Africa,
In a closed garden by the city gate;
A desert horseman, furious and late,
Came wildly thundering at the massive bar,
"Open in Allah's name! Wake, Mustapha!
Slain is the Sultan—treason, war, and hate
Rage from Fez to Tetuan! Open straight."
The watchman heard as thunder from afar:
"Go to! In peace this city lies asleep;
To all-knowing Allah, 'tis no news you bring;"
Then turned in slumber still his watch to keep.
At once a nightingale began to sing.
In oriental calm the garden lay—
Panic and war postponed another day.

PLANT KILLS ANIMALS

KIMBERLY, South Africa, Aug. 3.—All animals steer clear of the South African grapple plant. Its seed vessel has a large number of curved hooks which catch in the coats and hoofs of passing animals. In trying to tear these hooks out, the animals get them in their mouths, thus choking to death.

The SHINING TALENT

By ELEANOR EARLY © 1929 by NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

MOLLY BURNHAM, sob sister on a Boston paper, has been shot by a dope fiend, whose drug-erased brain led him to believe he should kill her. Molly was reporting the trial of a gunman named Mandinello, and Dopey Dan took exception to her stories. His bullets failed, however, to wound her seriously. And now she is rapidly getting better.

JACK WELLS, her sweetheart, learns that Molly is collaborating with RED FLYNN, a police court reporter, on a play, written from real life, and to be called "The Death of Delphine Darrows."

Because of the shooting, Molly has received widespread publicity. Red declares that it is worth a million dollars in advertising, and predicts a great success for their play. Then Jack conceives the notion that if Molly is going to have a career, she would be better off if their engagement were broken. He tries to tell her, but she promptly runs a temperature of 102 and her nurse sends him away.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIX

The paper was sending Molly to Florida to recuperate. It was the night before she was to leave, and Jack had come to say goodby.

She greeted him rapturously. "Oh, Jack, Rita's going to have a baby!"

"Zatso?"

"Is that so?" she cried. "Why, Jack Wells, I thought you'd be thrilled to death."

He grinned. "Lots of women have 'em."

"But Rita's different," she pointed out. "Theirs was a companionate marriage."

"Well, it all amounts to about the same thing, doesn't it? Now she's going to have a child, like her mother and her grandmother, and all the mothers since Eve. Nothing very revolutionary about that."

"Well, anyhow, I think it's perfectly wonderful," declared Molly. "Rita's the happiest girl in the world."

Molly's eyes grew wistful—"Just seeing her so glad made me think it must be wonderful to be married, and to be going to have a little baby."

"But us writers," taunted Jack, "must have our careers. You know, Molly, I haven't mentioned breaking our engagement since that day at the hospital when you ran a temperature on me. But I've thought of it plenty, and I haven't changed my mind any."

Molly had put her arms about his neck, when Jack did a most incredible thing. Unclasping her hands, he withdrew from her embrace.

"Molly, I can't be hardboiled when you do that! Can't you see that what I'm trying to do is for your own good? If I were to bust up your career, I'd feel like a rat. And after a while you'd hate me. On the other hand, if you go ahead, you're going to make a ton of money. Then where do I get off? Nowhere at all. You'd despise me if you have all the money, and I didn't have any."

"That's a dreadful way for you to talk, Jack. Besides, I may be an awful flop."

"Then I'll marry you," he promised.

"But that's not the half of it," she declared. "Suppose I do get somewhere—you're going to, too, honey."

"Sure I am," he boasted. "Only I haven't made the grade yet. And I'm not going to be any hanger-on while you're going strong. If I'd made my little pile, it would be a different story. Don't you know I'm right, dear?"

"No. But I'll do what you say. I'll let our engagement be broken, if that's what you want. And, by and by, I can prove that I love you more than fame, or money, or anything."

Molly was struggling with the clasp on the pearl-studded fraternity pin Jack had given her.

"Here," she said, and sobbed.

"Oh, darling!" Jack kissed the tears in her eyes. "Won't you wear it, Molly? Somewhere where it won't show, if you'd rather. I'd like to know that it was close to you."

They clung to each other desperately. And Molly cried because the boy she loved was holding her in his arms. Kissing her tears away. Telling her that their futures lay far apart.

Molly wiped her eyes.

"I forgot to tell you," she said "Red got himself transferred from police court to sports. He's written baseball before. Besides, he has a drag with the publisher. And he's got himself sent to St. Petersburg, to cover the Braves' training camp. You see he wanted to be around, dear, while I'm working on the play."

Jack lit a cigaret and said nothing.

"After all," she pointed out defensively, "it was his idea—the play, I mean. If it goes, it will be more to Red's credit than mine. . . . You're not jealous of Red, honey?"

"Jealous?" he repeated. "Well, I reckon everyone in love is more or less jealous, honey."

"No, they're not," she affirmed. Psycho-analysts say that jealousy is an indication of an inferiority complex."

"Yes—and how old are psycho-analysts?" he demanded. "They're ancient fossils who've forgotten all about being young and in love. Maybe they never were in love anyhow. What do they know about it? But I'm not cross, dear. And if I'm jealous, it's my own funeral. I hope you and Red hit the bulls' eye. Honest I do."

A week later Molly and Red were hard at work. They had left the train at Jacksonville, where they hired a second-hand car and motored on to St. Petersburg. The car was theirs for six weeks. They had loitered at St. Augustine, and they stopped in Daytona to see the famous beach, where a friend of Red's had been killed driving a racing car.

At St. Augustine, over the ancient walls of the oldest house in America, there grows a money vine, and the legend is that whoever carries a leaf of it will always have wealth. Molly had promised not to write Jack, unless a time should come when she needed his help. But now she put leaves from the celebrated money vine in an envelope, and send them to Jack for a talisman.

"I'd lots rather," she told herself, "have Jack be somebody, than be somebody myself." And at the time she believed she meant it, for she was missing him cruelly. And Red was not always tactful.

"Any girl that can earn a good living is pretty darn lucky," observed Red one day.

They were at Don Ce-Sar Beach, watching a group of young people who played at being acrobats. They were strong young things, with beautiful brown bodies, slim and straight and supple.

"Look at 'em," said Red. "The young out of the nest. Rich kids on a holiday. And pretty soon the holiday will be over—and the boys will go to work. They'll learn to forage for themselves. But how about the girls? What's going to happen to them? They don't go to work—not if the old man has money bags, they don't. Well, what are they going to do?"

Molly laughed.

"Find a forager," she predicted lightly.

"Exactly," agreed Red. "And if that ain't hell, what is? It's degrading, that's what it is. Nice girls—and they're brought up to hunt a forager! Molly old dear, it's a lucky girl can earn her own living."

But Molly was growing tired of Red's cynicisms.

"Oh, I don't know," she protested. "I'm beginning to lean toward old-fashioned romance. A man who loves his wife wants to support her. It is a privilege, a pleasure, and a pride."

Red grimaced. "Not only that," he amended impiously, "but 'Tis more blessed to give than to receive.'"

"It certainly is," agreed Molly. "The pleasure of giving is sweeter than that of receiving, and infinitely more beneficial. Take my father and mother. All their lives they've been sacrificing for each other, and they're the happiest people I know. Take Jack and me. He's generous and noble. And I'm so darn selfish and mercenary—"

"Let's not get personal," interposed Red hastily. "Hey, look Molly—lot at the Yellow Peril over there!"

The Peril was a tremendous woman in a yellow sun suit. She was dressed like the slim young things, in a suit without a back. And her flesh fell in great loose waves, that quivered like jelly.

"You ought to bring a jane like that into the play. Touch of comedy. We'll have to relieve the tragedy somehow. How'd it be to introduce a scene on Don Ce-Sar beach?".

Molly watched the young people on the beach with marveling interest. She had heard so much of the thing called Sex Consciousness. Where was it, this stalking, horrid Consciousness that had the adult world by its ears? Surely there was none of it among these beautiful, naked pagans. These girlous boys and girls who romped and swam, and rode the waves like sun-tanned sprites.

"There's a new Youth," she told Red wisely, "and the oldsters don't know it. Look at that girl—the one in blue. There isn't enough material in the suit she's wearing to make a bandanna. And the boy with her—the one in trunks without a jersey—did you ever see a finer looking boy in your life?"

They had been racing in the water—the girl in blue, and the boy in trunks—and now, breathless, they had thrown themselves on the beach.

"I wonder," mused Molly, "if there are middle-aged moralists anywhere with as little sex consciousness as those two. Wearing a lot of clothes and cultivating repressions doesn't do much for morality. I think boys and girls in sun suits are the surest, healthiest, beautifulest things in the world."

"Now Molly!" Red laughed at her earnestness. "Don't turn propogandist. You're all dated up to forget this fine, clean youth you're hipped oh. You gotta bend your talents to a swell, dirty play. Lay off young virtue now, and get busy on middle-eged sin."

Her hotel was on the beach, and Molly's room faced the ocean. She found that she could have a swim, and still work six hours a day, meeting Red for dinner, to go over with him the result of her labors.

They play was almost finished when Molly had a telegram from Bob. Rita's baby had come. A little girl. She weighed six pounds, and had long black hair. Rita was feeling fine.

Molly showed the wire to Red.

"I think I'd like a baby myself," she sighed.

"Horsefeathers?" he retorted. "You can't have everything. Hadn't you rather have your name up in electric lights?"

They were leaving that week for New York, and Red had made an appointment for Molly to meet George Durbin, the great producer.

Many A Sob Story Found In Wantads

Classified Columns Carry Heart-Throbs As Well As An Occasional Laugh; Many Departments Offered

By SUTTON CHRISTIAN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WANTED—Somebody, something happiness.

Aside from presenting the news of the day to an ever interested public, the newspaper plays an essentially important role in helping obtain that which is wanted—whether it be a companion, a runaway son, money, a home, a lost dog, or whatnot.

Moods, fancies, wants and dislikes of a heteriogeneous populace form the undercurrent of the Avalanche-Journal classified ad page.

Lonliness Portrayed

An aged woman portrays her loneliness in these words—"Wanted — Woman companion for elderly lady." Her appeal, disguised in brevity, perhaps contains a message of suffering feeble and deserted womanhood to the reader who would lift the curtain. Strength waning, she wants someone to lighten in a measure the burden which solitude brings to one in the twilight of life. She is not seeking some one to do merely chores around the house, but she is pleading for companionship, for some one who would talk with her. She would pay for such an associate.

What seems a commercial gesture might sometimes be veiled in sorrow. "For Sale—Five room bungalow, furnished, occupied, but three months." His bride of three months had died. As advertised, it was but a bungalow to him, who is now without a home.

A 14-year-old girl sought a place in a "refined" home where she may care for small children and aid with work in exchange for room and board. Homeless orphan, perhaps, who seeks "refinement."

Many Lose Possessions

In other instances one reads of lost dogs and inumerable lost articles. One woman lost a bag containing child's clothes, a farmer lost a white cow, two suit cases containing a man's and a woman's wearing apparel were lost and a girl sought to find a lost Charleston bag in which were some red house shoes. All were seeking to locate them through the Avalanche-Journal columns.

A man is driving to Tulsa, Oklahoma City, and Kansas City and will take a passenger. He is a cautious tourist who wants to interview several before choosing his passenger for the trip. Otherwise he could start out any highway and find a hitch-hiker.

Property in Demand

Lubbock property is in demand throughout the southwest, the Avalanche-Journal classified page reveals. Men of several cities in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico have advertised for Lubbock or South Plains property.

This city is children's paradise, the "For Rent" section indicates. In four issues of the Morning Avalanche and the Daily Journal there was no "children-not-wanted" specification. In few instances "couple only" hinted that there was no room for children, but apparently Lubbock apartments and houses are being built for the whole family.

Wanted—A home, a companion, and a pocket edition of "Royal Road to Romance."

Big Spring Scout Troops Plan Trip

Boys To Leave August 8 On Annual Outing; Banks Of Concho River To Be Scene Of Encampment

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

BIG SPRING, Aug. 3—Boy Scout Troops No. 1 and 2 will leave here Monday morning August 5, for their annual outing. Troop No. 1, the oldest Scout troop in the state will launch their camp on the Concho River.

Twenty-four of the thirty-two Scouts have signed for the trip according to Fred Hopkins, Scoutmaster. August 11 has been set aside by the Scouts as Rotary Day in honor of the Big Spring Rotary club who are sponsoring the trip, the local club will be special guests on this date.

To Join Camp

At an executive meeting held here today it was voted for Troop No. 2, in charge of Scoutmaster Wingo to join the Council Camp at Leuders, under the leadership of Ed Shumway, Scout executive, where a large per cent of the 900 Boy Scouts in Chisholm Trail area are expected to attend a two weeks' outing.

Among the requirements of the camp are that " No Scout will be permitted to receive extra food or candies while at camp, and that no Scouts will be permitted to smake and boys who smoke will be sent home," says Scoutmaster Wingo. Troop No. 2, also consists of thirty-two members, most of whom will avail themselves of the opportunity of the Leuders camp.

ACTS LIKE IT WAS JUST MADE FOR HER CASE

"I Hadn't Seen A Well Day For Ten Years Until I Took Orgatone," Says Lubbock Housewife

"This Orgatone acts just like it was made especially for my case," said Mrs. J. F. Higgins, of 302 Avenue Q, Lubbock, Texas. Mrs. Higgins, husband, is an employee of the Lubbock Lumber Co., and is very well known in this section of Texas.

"The fact is, I hadn't seen a well day for ten years," continued Mrs. Higgins, 'and almost as soon as I started taking Orgatone, it went right to the seat of my troubles, and anybody could see that I was getting better.

"My stomach was all out of order and gave me lots of trouble, and I was also bothered with liver and kidney trouble. I had no appetite and could hardly eat enough to keep me on my feet, and what I did eat, soured and caused gas to form and I would bloat up, until I would be miserable for hours. I had such terrible, intense pains in my stomach, at times, I could hardly stand it. I was weak and nervous and all run down, didn't rest well at night and would get up in the morning feeling tired and not fit for a thing. I kept very bad condition, and nothing seemed to do me any good. I took all kinds of medicines and treatments, and spent dollar after dollar, but it was just like throwing money away, for I didn't get any better.

"Orgatone had helped so many people and it was recommended to me, so I decided to try it, and it was a lucky day for me, when I did. I have just taken one bottle and can go about my work feeling fine, and am not troubled in the least, with my stomach, kidney or liver troubles. I honestly, feel better than I have in the past ten years, and I'm going to take the full treatment and then I know I shall have all my perfect health again. Orgatone has just saved my life and I am more than glad to tell others about it."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Lubbock exclusively by the Bowen's Drug Store who are direct laboratory agents. Adv.

"Sonny Boy" Headlines Local Theater Program During Week

Davey Lee To Be Seen In Picture At Lindsey Today

Co-Star Of "The Singing Fool" In Film

"Sonny Boy."

Combine all the "ohs" and "ahs" of doting parents at the antics of their offspring, and the same appreciative utterances of audiences burgling at all the child players of the screen, and you have a faint idea of the reception Davey Lee gets and will continue to get, in his starring role as "Sonny Boy."

The four-year-old youngster divided honors with Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool," in which the child made his first screen appearance as the inspiration for the song, "Sonny Boy."

And in the film of that name, which opens at the Lindsey today, he is so lovable, so delightfully appealing that everything else fades into insignificance.

Davey Lee is, without a doubt, the greatest screen find of years. The Warner Brothers have reason to congratulate themselves. The child is natural, with none of the affectations of most theatre prodigies; he is amusing and winning; he acts with a most ingratiating charm and a refreshing lack of camera-consciousness.

The things Davey is given to do are immaterial, when the youngster puckers up his face and does anything at all, from breakfast to his prayer time—even when he stands right up and holds out his hands, he does it in a manner that one won't forget for a long time. The audience is his forever.

No Chance For Tear In "Sonny Boy"

A REVIEW

"Sonny Boy" is not the kind of a picture one expects it to be, from the memory of the part little Davy Lee Played in Al Jolson's starring vehicle, "The Singing Fool." It was in this picture that the lad Davy made his first appearance in any featured part, and the pathos evolved from the sad incidents leads one to expect something akin in this production.

There is, however, no chance for a tear in "Sonny Boy." Plenty of laughs will be provoked, though, what with the superb characterization Edward Everett Horton gives, not to forget Betty Bronson, co-starred with Horton and Davy Lee.

Horton, to this reviewer is past-master at the art of pantomime, as well as being a splendid actor, when it comes to speaking his lines as well as mugging.

More Mill Workers May Go On Strike

MANCHESTER, Eng., Aug. 3 (AP)—The first week of the cotton industry stoppage will end tomorrow with indications that additional members will be added to the idle rather than an early peace obtained.

A further 13,000 will be added to the unemployed tomorrow when operatives in the cotton waste spinners and other sections remain away rather than accept the wage reductions called for in notices effective at that time.

TWO WOMEN HELD

Chicago Police Attempting To Break Up Arson Ring

CHICAGO, Aug. 3 (AP)—Suspected of implication in an arson ring which police blamed for more than 200 fires, two women were arrested last night in the belief that they were associated with Michael Casselli, one of eight men booked today as members of a bombing gang.

The women, Mrs. Barbara Amster, 34, and Mrs. Evelyn Sugar, 27, were questioned by prosecutors, who say they acted as agents for Casselli in the arson ring which he confessed operating. A youth, who is a secret witness against the arson ring, pointed out the women as having been involved in a butcher shop fire.

BUDDY RODGERS

Second Starring Film Of Charles Rogers Is Coming

"Someone To Love" Is Scheduled For Palace

Charles (Buddy) Rogers second starring picture for Paramount, "Someone to Love," will be the attraction at the Palace Theatre Wednesday and Thursday. In this picture, Mary Brian, who proved such a success opposite the star in his first starring vehicle, "Varsity," is cast in a leading role and is offered an unusual opportunity to exercise the winning personality which has won her many screen friends.

In "Someone to Love," Rogers has the role of a music sheet salesman who falls in love with the daughter of a wealthy man. Through the blundering of his two companions, plyaed by Jack Oakie and William Austin, the girl and her father get the impression that he is a fortune hunter. Rogers is unable to explain the situation and his romance is blighted.

Having lost his job at the music store, he accepts the commission to revive a failing girls' school. His high-pressure efforts meet with success and the girl comes to the school to see the improvements. They meet again and are reconciled. The girl's father is won over and love is victorious.

The story is one particularly suited to Rogers' personality. It is bright and quick with plenty of comedy included in its unusual plot. The supporting cast headed by Mary Brian, is excellent. Jack Oakie won instant success in Clara Bow's "The Fleet's In!" and William Austin is famed as the best character Englishman on stage or screen today.

Courtroom Drama Forms Theme Of Lindsey Picture

"On Trial" Will Be Seen Here This Week

Courtroom drama of the most thrilling and sensational sort forms the subject matter of Warner Bros.' latest murder mystery special, "On Trial," which comes to the Lindsey Thursday.

Pauline Frederick, Bert Lytell, Lois Wilson, Holmes Herbert, Jason Robards, Franklin, Pangborn, Johnny Arthur, Richard Tucker, Edward Martindel, Fred Kelsey, Vondell Darr and Edmund Breese are seen in the principal roles in the thriller.

"On Trial" presents a scene in the Superior Court of the State of New York, where Robert Strickland is being tried for the murder of Gerald Trask. In the opening speech of the prosecuting attorney it is revealed that Strickland had, on the night of the murder, given Trask twenty one-thousand dollar bills in payment of a loan.

Later that evening the wall safe of the Trask home had been robbed of the money, Mrs. Trask assaulted when she interrupted the robber, and Gerald Trask shot by Strickland. The accomplice had escaped, but Glover, Trask's secretary, had broken Strickland's arm with a heavy cane. Strickland has confessed and apparently deliberately planned the robbery.

Mrs. Trask, called to the stand, tells a story that incriminates Strickland and establishes that he was the only one beside Trask who knew the combiation of the safe. Glover testifies that Strickland tried to tear up the card on which the combination was written, seemingly sufficient evidence that he knew the combination.

Then, Doris Strickland, little daughter of the defendant, describes Strickland's arrival home from a business trip the night of the murder. Strickland discovers that his wife has been with Trask at his country house all day and when she hesitates to explain takes his gun and rushes from the house.

Mrs. Strickland, the wife, comes from her concealment in a hospital to tell how Trask, already married, had lured her away from home sixteen years before. Two years later she had married Strickland. When Strickland and Trask had become friendly a year before the tragedy, she had avoided a meeting, as long as possible. When Trask finally discovered her identity he forced her to come to him.

Unable to come to a verdict because they are uncertain whether or not Strickland planned the robbery; the members of the jury ask that the portion of Glover's testimony relating to the tearing of the card be re-read. This gives the defense attorney the idea of calling the physician who attended Strickland. He testifies that Strickland was incapable of tearing the card.

Glover is then recalled and gives details of the tearing of the card which conflict with the doctor's testimony. When the attorney suddenly asks him, "What did you do with that $20,000?" he breaks down and confesses to the theft. Without retiring, the jury returns a verdict of "Not Guilty" in accordance with the unwritten law.

The Strickland family is reconciled and Mrs. Trask, who has long been a victim of her husband's philanderings, forgives Strickland.

"Two Lovers" Is Lyric Headliner

Vilma Banky And Ronald Coleman In Final Film

"Two Lovers," with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky as its leading players, comes to the Lyric theater on Thursday as Samuel Goldwyn's final and farewell presentation of the most famous duet in screen history.

With the completion of "Two Lovers" under Fred Niblo's direction, Colman and Miss Banky are beginning their individual starring careers. Together they have appeared in "The Dark Angel," "The Night of Love," "The Winning of Barbara Worth" and "The Magic Flame."

Niblo's recent directional efforts include "The Enemy" with Lillian Gish, "The Devil Dancer" with Gilda Gray, and "Camille" with Norma Talmadge. "Two Lovers," his most recent production for Samuel Goldwyn, is being released by United Artists, which also sponsors the pictures of Mary Pickford, Norma Talmadge, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, David Wark Griffith and John Barrymore.

"Leatherface," by Baroness Orczy, one of the most popular novels of this generation, furnished the story from which Alice D. G. Miller photo-dramatized the final co-starring picture of Mr. Colman and Miss Banky. Its tale is that of the triumph of love over adversity, but startling twists of circumstances give the Baroness Orczy story a new and brighter flash of the tender, poignant beauty that has characterized all Colman-Banky pictures.

Laid against the ever-stirring background of war, "Two Lovers" tells the story of Mark Van Rycke, son of the patrician burgomaster of Ghent, and of his secret adventures as "Leatherface," mysterious and faithful aid to William, Prince of Orange, who seeks to lead the enslaved country of Flanders to freedom from the oppressing hands of the Spaniards. Wild nigh rides, hair raising duels (of wit as well as of sword) reveal Ronald Colman, as "Leatherface," in a role more colorful and varied than any he has ever attempted.

Tom Tyler Coming In Wild Wester

Teeming with action, rich in sentiment and with all the glamour of the days '49, Tom Tyler gallops across the screen of the Lyric theater on Friday in his latest FBO picture, "The Pride of Pawnee."

Considered by many to be the crowning picture of his career, Tyler justifies public appreciation of his past work by rendering a most unusual and convincing performance.

The locale is laid in picturesque California at the time of the great gold rush. Tyler is seen in the role of a special investigator for the Wells-Fargo company, sent to the mining town of Eldorado to look into activities of a band of renegades known as "The Wolves" who have been preying on local miners and the overland stages.

"The Kid's Clever" To Be Tuesday

Another hilarious Glenn Tryon screen comedy is to be seen here when "The Kid's Clever," the Universal fun maker's latest photoplay, is presented at the Lyric theater. It is promised as a worthy successor to such Tryon hits as "Painting the Town," "Hot Heels," "The Gate Crasher," "How to Handle Women" and "A Hero for a Night."

William James Craft, who has directed most of Tryon's successes, also was at the helm in the making of this new laugh film. The story, an original by Vin Moore, noted screen writer, presents Tryon as an inventive service station owner in a large city, who has devised a combination auto boat that is fuelled by electricity or something, drawn from the air. There is a pretty girl, the daughter of a wealthy auto manufacturer. There is a demonstration of the trick auto boat, with that craft doing odd, weird things in a thrilling exciting dash. There are humorous incidents galore and a sensational windup, with Tryon winning both a marvelous contract and the girl.

Cooperative Efforts To Rule Corporation Farming

The Great Plains Farming Future Is Declared Hopeful

Result Of Farm Board's Efforts Will Encourage The Cooperative Farm Organizations, Bower Says

By H. J. BOWER
Professor of Agronomy
Texas Technological College

In the opinion of some capitalists, the great Plains area offers an unusual opportunity in corporation farming.

According to returns for some investors, no country has prospects equal to the Plains in large scale farming, and that large scale farming offers a larger return on investment than any business, while, on the other hand, farmers of limited capital are met daily who complain of not being able to make ends meet.

Some Do Make A Success

Just here and there we meet a farmer of unusual ability that is making an unusual success. It is just from here and there that we read of the success of some outstanding farmer in Texas, Kansas or Oklahoma.

To meet this economic situation the United States has originated the Farm Board Cooperative idea, under the alluring promise of more profit for the farmer without added cost to the consumer.

The grain marketing corporation project, for example, is the vehicle which promises to carry the grain farmers of America out of the slough of surplus crops, price fluctuations and other dangers.

Legge Born A Plainsman.

The new czar for this supposed leadership is headed by Alexander H. Legge. This recent candidate for such czar leadership, a Chicagoan, ex-president of the International Harvester Company, is described as America's greatest agricultural engineer, who was born a Plainsman and is known as the farmer's friend.

All such descriptions are merely developing the farmers' suspicions and distrust in what is intended to be an antedote for his economic ills.

For a clearer understanding, let's consider Mr. Legge's hope for permanent agricultural improvement. It lies first, in better cooperation among farmers, with respect to production standards and marketing methods, and second, in more general use of labor-saving and profit-making farm operating equipment.

Corporation vs. Cooperation

From which the question might be added: "How Does Corporation Differ from Co-operative farming, or How Does Co-operative Differ From Corporation Farming?" In either case it is the working of larger investments of capital and labor, with lower interest rates on the borrowed capital, and with lesser current expenses all in directed units.

Mr. Legge has been quoted as saying that, "The United States is so big, so rich and so powerful, that it can get along for a time without farmers sharing in its prosperity. He has waited a long time already and has been discouraged many times in recent years. But ultimately he will come into his own. This abnormal condition, with resultant high interest rates, produces an adverse effect upon agriculture, the country's greatest industry, as well as upon other commercial and industrial undertakings."

Gives Impetus To Coops.

The result, from the formulation of the Farm Board with such ideas, will add impetus to farm group organizations and farmers now outside such organizations will not stay out long. Each farmer with limited capital and operations will volunteer for better co-operative production standards and marketing methods.

The abnormal conditions of high interest rates and current expenses, that have worked hardships upon the individual farmer, is dawning with a new system of agriculture. This new system will be a merging of all co-operative organizations for the common good of agriculture. This system will change the present notion of the great Plains farming being operated by corporation farming. The idea and plan for permanent agricultural improvement, as expressed by Mr. Legge, will be a co-operative system operated by each home owner or resident in each local organization.

Thus in the great economic stress of present day agriculture the plan is for co-operative efforts to preliminate over corporation capital.

Farm World Will Focus Attention On Institute In Louisiana City

The South will entertain world leaders in the cooperative farm movement, when the American Institute of Cooperation meets on the campus of Louisiana university (center) during August. C. C. Teague, (left), prominent cooperative leader and member of federal farm board, will attend. R. A. Ward, (right), is a speaker.

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 3 (AP).—A symposium of world thought on the cooperative farm movement virtually will be gained with the American institute of Cooperation holding its fifth summer session on the campus of Louisiana University during August.

The institute is expected to draw leaders from all over the world in the movement of agriculture to help itself through cooperative production and marketing.

Farm Board Is A Help

In the United States this movement has been accelerated by the appointment of the federal farm board whose members are expected to attend the general sessions which opened July 29, continuing 10 days.

It is the first time the south has entertained such an important gathering of leaders in the cooperative movement.

C. O. Moser of Dallas Tex., is chairman of the institute, and the speakers include R. A. Ward, general manager of the Pacific Cooperative Wool Growers; Nils A. Olsen, chief of the federal bureau of agricultural economics, and many other prominent figures in agriculture.

Many Expect To Attend

C. S. Teague, Santa Paula, Cal., president of the California Fruit Growers Exchange and the California Walnut Growers' association, is expected to attend with other members of the farm board. Teague originally was on the program with several others who have withdrawn with their appointment by President Hoover to the board.

While the general sessions last only 10 days, other sessions continue to Aug. 24.

The meeting is providing ample time for academic courses and sectional conferences.

Special Conference To Be Held

There also will be special conferences lasting five days each week for teachers of vocational agriculture and a non-credit course in membership relations of cooperatives which will place particular stress upon local problems.

The general sessions will close with an automobile tour of Louisiana rice and sugar plantations and a visit to New Orleans.

Previous institutes have enrolled from 370 to 600 persons, including delegates from Canada and nine European countries.

The institute, incorporated under the District of Columbia, is supported solely by voluntary contributions.

Its chief purpose is to collect and make available knowledge concerning the cooperative movement in America and other lands.

Chinese Elm Fits Farm Needs Here

ARDMORE, S. D., Aug. 3.—The Chinese elm, originating on the arid plains of Manchuria, has been found unusually hardy and well adapted to conditions in western South Dakota. Extensive tests have been made at the agricultural experimental station here.

It leafs late in the spring, is never damaged by frost, and grows as fast as cottonwood.

It does better, according to Oscar Mathews, director of the station, if given extra care during the first year.

"At planting time, the root system is severely pruned and must be given a chance to become established," he said. "This best can be done by keeping soil near the tree free from weeds competing with it for food."

Too fine a mulch is warned against, and slightly roughened surface that will admit water, readily, is advised. Farmers in the Fall River country set out 2,031 seedlings this spring.

Sheep On Texas Farms Will Give Balanced System

No Farm Animal Is Capable Of Returning Greater Net Profit, A & M. Professor Tells Farmers

COLLEGE STATION, Aug 3.—When more farmers in Texas add a few sheep to their farming operations as well as the cow and the hen, Texas will have a more balanced system of farming, Ernest Gibbens, of the animal husbandry department, A. & M. College of Texas, told those in attendance at the beef cattle, sheep and goats section of the Farmers Short Course here. "No farm animal is capable of returning a greater net profit than sheep when given intelligent attention, nor of losing money faster when not properly handled," he said. Mr. Gibbens discussed "Sheep Breeding."

There are two phases of sheep production to be considered, the speaker pointed out in opening his discussion, range production and farm flock. Range production in Texas has changed much in the last twenty years, he went on to point out. "Production of sheep on the ranges of Texas is rapidly going through a transition period from production of a strictly fine wool type of sheep, as was the case some years ago, to the production of good mutton as well as fine fleece."

Touching on the farm flock phase of sheep raising, Mr. Gibbens said that many farms in the lime prairie section of Texas should add sheep to their system of farming. "A small farm flock brings in funds in the spring at a time when most farms have little or nothing to sell," he continued. "No farmer should stock too heavily on sheep, however, but rather should keep just enough to eat his surplus weeds and turn them into money."

Crop Rotation Now Important

COLLEGE STATION, Aug 3.—Crop rotation is becoming of increasing importance on many Texas farms, not only because of its value in producing larger yields but for various other practical reasons also, E. A. Miller, agronomist of the Extension Service, A. & M. College of Texas, pointed out in addressing the farm crops division of the Farmers Short Course here Monday. Advantages of a good rotation or cropping system, in addition to increased yields to the acre, were cited by Mr. Miller as follows: Aid in the control of insect pests and plant diseases, help in keeping down weeds, use of a legume or soil building crop such as cowpeas, soy beans, sweet clover and the like, and better distribution of labor on the farm.

Experiments by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at the blackland substation near Temple showed big increase in acre yield and the largest net profits in the rotation of cotton, corn and oats, Mr. Miller said. "In this rotation," he added, "the average yields to the acre over a period of ten years were 276 pounds of lint cotton, 34.3 bushels of corn and 32 bushels of oats as contrasted with 142 pounds of lint cotton, 19.3 bushels of corn and 27.3 bushels of oats with continuous cropping. Every acre in the rotation made an average profit of $15.96 whereas continuous cotton made only $7.33 profit an acre."

A four year rotation of cotton, cowpeas, corn and oats at the main station at College Station, produced an average annual yield over a period of thirteen years of 223 pounds of lint cotton, while cotton planted on the same land year after year made only 182 pounds to the acre, the speaker said. The results of these and other experiments cited prove conclusively that a farmer can well afford to establish a good cropping system, he added in conclusion.

City Of Chicago Is Coveting Title Of The World's Money Capital Now

By EDWARD STANLEY
(Associated Press Feature Writer)

CHICAGO, Aug. 3 (AP).—Aside from those who merely live here, Chicagoans envy New Yorkers only two things—Broadway and Wall street.

Not much can be done about Broadway, it is admitted, with appropriate tears, but if the tide of finance can be turned westward, Chicago means to do it.

World's Commodity Market

The city now has the world's largest commodity market in the board of trade; an active stock exchange; a lusty curb, only a year old and already glib in LaSalle street's slang; a bustling produce exchange, and a cotton exchange five years old, rankig third in the nation.

With these as a supporting cast, the board of trade will go into the dance with its new securities market early this fall.

Chicago financiers find many reasons for their optimism.

Can Handle Huge Orders

First in importance, is the fact that the board of trade is competent to handle huge orders. One July day's business in wheat totaled $256,000,000, and that in three and three-quarters hours.

Then there is the enormous scope and prestige of the board of trade, built up in its 81 years of activity.

Its private wire system, claims the board of trade, is the largest in existence threading through all the rich middle west, the cotton belt, the west, east, New England and parts of Canada. It taps 536 cities, 226 exclusively.

Many Speculative Trades

The board of trade has 1586 members, the largest group of speculative traders in the world. One hundrend and fourtaen of these firms have partner members on the New York exchange.

Until recently the Chicago market has been hobbled by a state law holding the rate on call money to a maximum of 11 per cent. Despite this handicap the city has risen to third place as a money center and the last legislature removed the statute as applied to loans above $5,000.

Small Investor Protected

Samuel P. Arnot, president of the board of trade, points out that while the new law increases Chicago's power, it also "protects the so-called small investor whose borrowings are infrequently as high as $5,000."

The stock exchange, with 235 members, was founded in 1882. It has 500 listed securities and deals daily in about 300.

The curb, founded a year ago, rather as a kindergarden for board of trade members, has 200 members. The most recent seat sold brought $8,800. Known as the "poor man's market" because its dealing units are blocks of 50, the curb handled 4,440 shares its first week of life, and now about 70,000 weekly.

Trading on the new market will be from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., making Chicago the final market in the world.

THESE LAZY MALES!

NEW YORK, Aug. 3—The woman really does pay in elephant herds. The bull elephants are inclined to be lazy, says James L. Clark, noted animal student. The bull leaves the responsibility of watching for danger, of hunting for feeding grounds and so on to some female. While she is leading the herd he walks slowly behind, taking his time and growing fat.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Aug. 3—Otoe county has a school teacher that it might well be proud of. She is Ruth McCormick, who has driven more than 5,400 miles to teach her class of 11 boys. During the school year she has made a round trip of 30 miles from her home to the school every day. She did not miss a day during the entire year nor was she tardy once.

Problem Before Dairy Farmer Is Production Cost

Promotion Of Dairy Industry In South Is Over; To Learn To Produce Cheaply Is Present Job.

COLLEGE STATION, Aug 3.—Declaring that the promotion end of the dairy business is over in the South and that the job in hand is to learn to produce dairy products economically, J. H. McClain of the United States Bureau of Dairy Industry pointed out at the general morning session at the Farmers Short Course at A. and M. College of Texas Wednesday, that volume of production should be the guiding principle in dairying as well as banking or merchandising.

Studies made in Tennesee show that cows producing 2,000 pounds of milk yearly did so at a feed cost of 35 cents a pound butterfat, whereas butterfat cost only 21 cents a pound for feed with cows producing 6,000 pounds of milk yearly. That is what is meant by volume of production in the dairy business.

Markets Are Fixed.

"The markets for dairy products which are applicable to the rank and file of farmers," Mr. McClain said "are fixed by the law of supply and demand. The hope of profit to farmers who patronize most dairy markets is that they produce milk for about 18 or 20 cents a gallon and still make a profit. To do this a man can't quit farming and go into the dairy business, but he must farm for his cows. That means raising enough feed and pasture to furnish the bulk of the feed required. In the main a farmer patronizing creameries, condensories and cheese factories cannot purchase any considerable part of his feed except the grain, and make a profit.

"Success at handling cows in Texas must rest on the production of an adequate supply of hay and pastures, and on materially increasing the production of the average Texas cow. A pure bred bull is the most rapid way, after the cows are properly fed, to obtain high producing cows on a large scale."

The Farm Week In Washington

By FRANK L. WELLER
(Associated Press Farm Editor)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 (AP).—Permanent organization of a "National Chamber of Agricultural Cooperative" is to be effected at the fifth annual meeting of the American Institute of Agricultural Cooperation in Baton Rouge, La., July 29 to August 24.

Obviously, the national chamber is to offer representatives of member associations an opportunity to meet periodically or otherwise, to discuss national problems and policies in which all are, more or less, interested. The cooperatives, themselves, know it has another and equally important purpose. It is to smooth out the internal difficulties incident to the handling of a $900,000,000 business each year for more than 800,000 members of farm cooperatives.

In agricultural cooperation, as in private business, individual organizations take the position most advantageous to themselves on major questions, some of which are national in scope. Such positions are drawn by hard and fast lines, even where the interest of each group involved would see mto be mutual and reciprocal. Leaders of cooperative thought hold that such a condition weakens the influence of cooperatives as a whole in molding national policies and public sentiments.

How circumspect the national chamber must be in creating unity of thought and purpose among the dozen or more great cooperatives, some of which, such as the National Milk Producers' Federation have as many as 13 to 30 subsidiaries and do an annual business of from $50,000,000 to $340,000,000 a year is seen in the assurance that the chamber is not to be a super-organization and is not to have any power except by unanimous vote of the membership.

Each association or federation is to retain its individual sovereignty and power of independent action. The rules permit the utmost freedom of discussion but prohibit any action that could be interpreted to bind any member without its consent.

Need for a national chamber was recognized at the meeting of the Institute of cooperation in Berkeley, Cal., last year, and a committee headed by C. O. Moser, president and general manager of the American Cotton Growers' exchange has the plans of organization completed. Virtually all of the great central organizations representing major farm commodities are expected to join.

St. Kilda, one of the Outer Hebrides, has no postoffice, so stamps cannot be purchased there. Letters are put into tin cans with the necessary amount of postage fastened to sheepskin buoys. These are cats upon the waters and allowed to drift until picked up.

Abortion Contril Is Pressing Need

COLLEGE STATION, Aug 3.—Telling dairy farmers at the Farmers Shore Course, A. & M. college of Texas, that "contagious abortion is a very unprofitable thing to have around your place," Dr. H. Schmidt of Texas Agricultural Experiment Station outlined the cause, spread and control of this cattle disease. "Contagious abortion," he said, "is caused by the bang bacillus and is always introduced into a herd by some infected animal. Abortion may occur at any time during the pregnancy but most frequently during the fifth to seventh months. In a large number of cases the animal does not readily conceive again and a comparatively large percentage of animals may even become barren.

"For each abortion occurring we have lost the offspring, much if not all of the expected milk flow, and the upkeep of the animal during the unproductive period resulting from the abortion, to which must be added the outright loss of all animals that has aborted; for it may again abort during the next period of pregnancy or it may carry the next calf to full term or even the next two or three calves and then abort again," Dr. Schmidt said.

The infection may spread in a herd through feed and water, through the bull or through the milk, the speaker pointed out, and its control is difficult. "Knowing that the disease is always introduced from the outside the farmer must see to it that an infected animal does not enter his premises for any purpose, that his cows are not bred to a bull in an infected herd, and that his cows do not mingle in any way with those infected herds either at home or at fairs. Farmers must raise their own animals for replacements to be safe, but if animals are introduced into the herd a blood-test should first be made in a special laboratory."

DATES ALWAYS FILLED

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 3—The most popular co-ed in college is the freshman, according to Ohio State University. A survey taken there showed that the impertinent little freshmen gadded about 95 per cent of their evenings—24 out of every 25 nights. They also go to more dances than any other classmen. The sophomore, junior and senior women, more settled, only go out half of their evenings.

A python's eggs are about the same size as those of a hen. After laying about a hundred, the female coils herself round them and remains thus until the young are hatched. This takes two months, during which time the snake fasts.

Time Will Bring About Union Of All Protestant Churches, Local Pastors Believe; Their Views Are Presented

TIME IS BRINGING about conditions which a half century ago men did dream would come to pass. There is a breaking down of denominational barriers and a cooperation between different sects of Christians today which would be hard for some of our forefathers to realise. In some communities it has been found profitable for churches to merge in a single body. Some people think that all protestantism will unite some day, basing their opinions on the knowledge that it is being done in some parts of northern United States and Canada and meeting with success.

Lubbock Ministers Agree

Lubbock ministers are alike in voicing a belief also that the day will come when there will be one protestant church instead of a dozen more.

Rev. Walter P. Jennings, of the First Christian church, says that he thinks it will be a good idea if such a thing should happen.

"The Christian world is growing closer together all of the time, the minister stated. "The points of similarity seem to be greater than those of difference."

Fraternal Orders Aid

Reverend Jennings spoke of the fraternal delegates who are sent from various denominations, when a church holds a national convention. These people find that they have much the same ideas concerning religious principles.

"Youth, also, according to Reverend Jennings will have a say-so regarding the union. They are not afraid that their denominations and denominationalism means little to them.

"I truly believe," he said, "that the emphasis of the future will be less on administration; less upon finance; less upon things and more upon the Christlikeness of life."

Missionaries Serve

Roosevelt once said that the Orient would be the center of the world's thinking for the next 500 years. The Orient has one-half of the world's population and the missionary enterprise has been a great single influence. Its institutions dot China; its representatives have gone out to serve, not to exploit.

Dr. Jack Lewis, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, believes that the fact that denominationalism is not given a head start in the foreign fields will have something to do with bringing about a union of religious institutions in America.

"I expect within ten years to see the different branches of the same church families united, and within 25 years to see one universal protestant church," he said.

Tired of Divisions

Dr. Lewis further said that the world is tired of so many divisions and is looking forward to a cooperation of all churches.

"I think it will be a great thing," he stated, "and am anxious for that day to arrive."

Rev. H. L. Munger, pastor of the First Methodist church, believes that there will ultimately be one great protestant church with branches of individual churches much the same as our Federal government with its state branches.

"We will always need denominations I believe," said Rev. Munger. "It would be a mistake, I think, to enforce unity. It has been done and persecution followed. There are needs for a great many denominations because there are so many people who have different intellectual slants."

Churches Crowded

He further stated that there is an over-churching in many small towns, but the majority of churches in the cities are crowded.

"We need not so much an organiz union as we do cooperation," said Mr. Munger. "To say that we need a union of all denominations is the same as saying that drug stores or grocery stores should be consolidated. Many churches will never accept beliefs foreign to their present creeds."

Each minister agreed that there is an overlapping of different branches holding practically the same faith but all said that churches will have to come a long way before the dream will be realized.

Where Does Your Garbage Go?

City Of Lubbock Has Big Job In Disposing Of Waste Food And Home Products; Spends $6,000 Yearly

By MARGARET TURNER
Avalanche-Journal Staff Writer

Did you ever wonder what happens to the garbage after you place it in the can and the garbage collector takes it up? Do you know how much it costs the city yearly to keep Lubbock looking clean? Have you ever thought why it is that there are not so many swarms of flies as was the condition in former years?

Probably not. Most likely you have enjoyed the conveniences of a clean alley and sanitary conditions and let it go at that.

The city officials are the ones who worry about these things and to them go the complaints about sanitation or the lack of it.

No Small Task

According to City Manager Gus McCleary it is no small task to superintend the job and please every one in so doing.

"If everybody would only cooperate as they have been asked to do time and again conditions would be much better," he said. "The housewives are asked to buy garbage cans with tops as this goes far towards preventing spread of flies and disease.

The joke about the lady who ran exitedly out of the back door waving a bucket of peelings and calling to the garbage man "Oh, am I too late for the garbage?" and his reply of "No madam, jump in," is almost similiar to some of the experiences that the men in Lubbock have, with the cans overflowing and everything in the house except the piano leaning against the garage waiting to be hauled away.

Incinerator Maintained

North of town about two miles is a large incinerator and directly east of this building is the dumping ground for the residential and business sections.

Daily in the business district the trash, boxes and refuse is gathered up, placed in a large wagon and taken to the city dumping ground and once or twice a week a similiar trip is made through the residential section. After the hauling the debris to the ground east of the incinerator, the drivers back the wagons against a bluff and empty them of their loads. At the end of the day all of the things which will burn are consumed and cans are buried under dirt, sand, or the broken mortar hauled from places where buildings are being built or remodeled.

Only Carcasses Burned

Because of the smallness of the incinerator only carcasses of animals are burned there, while everything else is burned with the city refuse.

R. D. Maynard is in charge of the incinerator. He is permitted by the city to keep kindling and scrap iron which is brought out and sells it to dealers. It is a man-sized job to run the incinerator, which is to be heated at a terrific degree to burn the dead animals. It is regulated with flues and grates. An immense stack carries out the fumes and smoke.

In addition to this there is the necessity of keeping the grounds in as neat an appearance as possible.

Spends $6,000 Yearly

The city spends about $6 000 a year in destroying its refuse. This includes the salaries of the men who drive the wagons and the cost of running the incinerator.

Before the state highway was changed the public did not get even a glimpse of the tin cans and the bluff, but now with Highway No. 9 running along the side a rather unsightly view is presented.

The city officials realize this and have set out trees which they secured from the Experiment farm. There are 75 arbor vitaes which will grow tall and branch out and a good many Chinese elms. Castor beans were planted but have not grown because of insufficient rainfall.

Within a few years it is expected that a row of pretty trees will meet the public gaze rather than an incinerator and a bluff of cans and worthless scrap iron.

Pioneers To A New Era

Not so long ago people stretched their necks to see the daring balloonists sail off into empty space. They were the pioneers of a new era that looks to air for quick, convenient transportation. Today air transport in the form of commercial aviation is a recognized necessity. It has been accepted and fits in with the modern idea of speed and dependability.

The same spirit that urged the pioneer aviator on to the ultimate development commercial aviation for humanity has been depicted and expressed in the development of Lubbock and the Great South Plains. Business men who have shared in providing the happiness and conveniences of thousands of people are today keeping up with the age in rendering greater services. The Texas Utilities strive at all times to keep up with the age in progressiveness and service, as do we cherish the pioneer days of our experience in public service.

Women Will Prove Auto Travel Ease

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 3.—The ease with which women can travel alone over long distances by automobile, will be demonstrated next month when Mrs. Frances Weber, member of the editorial staff of the A. A. A. National Touring Bureau, accompanied by three friends, will make a 5,000 mile journey through a large section of the country.

The national motoring body says the purpose of the trip is to send an editorial representative into important touring areas for the purpose of securing first hand data to be used in A. A. A. publications. She wil pay particular attention to the Southwest.

The A. A. A. pointed out that it is no uncommon sight to see a party of women travelling alone on long journeys and the standardized motoring facilities offered 1 every section eliminate all possible thought of inconvenience.

Mrs. Weber, with Mrs. Lyne S. Williams of Science Service, Elizabeth Olsen of the Danish Legation and Helen Smith of the Treasury Department, will begin their lengthy journey on August 1. They will spend a total of 33 days in the East, Central West, Southwest and Southeast, visiting points of interest. At these places they will have personal contacts with authorities on the various sections covered and will return to the nation's capital in possession of an invaluable supply of information which will be of advantage to future travelers.

Eureka! Parking Is Solved

By NEA Service

APPLETON, Wis., Aug. 3.—The business men of this city who drive to their offices and park in front of their business places, have put one over on the city authorities who limit parking in the office district to 90 minutes.

The business men have thought of a novel scheme. They set alarm clocks in their cars to ring at the end of 90 minutes. When the startling sound of the clock interrupts the calm routine, a mad rush is made for the curb. Into their cars the big butter and egg men hop, drive them around the block and park them in the space next to the one they had used before.

And calm again reigns for another 90 minutes.

Devout Robber

Always Kneeled In Thefts

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 3.—Albert Cuistis is probably the most devout robber in his trade. He was recently arrested in a church for robbing poor boxes. He said that he always prayed before robbing churches, and from his praying position could see if the coast was clear. He used a corset stay covered with mucilage to extract coins from the boxes.

Louisiana merchants are considering the shipment of 5000 pounds of muskrat meat daily to the large markets of the country this fall and winter. Here alone 5,000,000 pounds of muskrat meat are available annually for food consumption.

Pulling Power Of Viking Is Proved

If it were possible to build a road from the lowest depth in the oceans to the peak of the highest mountain in the world, would it be possible for an automobile to drive up this grade, an elevation of nearly 12 miles, without overheating?

While such a road is an impossibility, yet the engineers who designed and perfected the Viking, the new V-type, eight cylinder companion car to the Oldsmobile Six, are able to give an authoritative answer to the question. They know the performance qualities of a car under such circumstances without having this impossible road at their command.

The engineers were enabled to obtain this accurate knowledge through the use of the new towing-dynamomter at the General Motors Proving Ground, one of the many testng deves utlzed n perfectng the Viking.

By means of the towing dynamometer, engineers can approxmate on a level road the pulling effort and effect of an automobile climbing varying grades or running through heavy sand. And they can keep up this test hour after hour without cessation until the ultimate of car performance in this respect has been definitely established.

The towing dynamometer is a truck equipped with specially devised electrical apparatus whereby a load may be held constant or varied at the wishes of the operator.

The truck is coupled to the car being tested through a draw bar, which is connected to a registering apparatus that records the pull required by the automobile to draw the truck.

It is to be 1000 feet long, weigh 60,000 tons and have the biggest Diesel engine installation and electrical plant yet employed at sea. One thousand horsepower is expected to be developed in the engines used. It is being constructed for the White Star line.

The largest motor lifeboat in the world has just been constructed at Cowes, England. It is 61 feet long, has cabin accommodations for between 50 and 60 people, with room for 300 people on deck in calm weather.

Rumors about Chrysler's plans are flying thick and fast. The man in the street is saying, "Chrysler has something up its sleeve" . . Widespread gossip insists that Chrysler will soon make an announcement fully as sensational as its dramatic debut of five years ago. Everywhere you hear that Chrysler is going to write another thrilling page of automotive history. The public, which has long expected the unexpected from Chrysler, is waiting in anticipation . . Chrysler greatly appreciates the splendid compliment expressed in this nation-wide belief that something important impends—that whatever Chrysler does is of vital interest and tangible value to the motoring public. It is particularly gratifying right now, in the face of the announcements recently made or promised by other manufacturers, to have American motorists thus reiterate their implicit confidence in Chrysler's ability to stay ahead—and go even farther ahead . . The highest possible tribute to Chrysler prestige is this fact that, after all, everybody is watching Chrysler.

Physician Drives His Sixth Buick

Active In Profession 74 Years, Aged Doctor Of Rochester, Minn., Drives Own Car On Calls

The oldest practicing physician in the world is driving his sixth Buick.

Dr. W. A. Allen, Rochester, Minn., who will be 96 years old his next birthday, has been an enthusiastic motorist since the days of the "horseless carriage" when the automobile, as we know it today, was but an ambitious dream.

Dr. Allen has been active in the profession for more than 74 years. At present he averages 30 calls a day, and continues to drive his own car, rain or shine, day or night. He has the remarkable record of having attended more than 1,700 infant arrivals.

Born in Pendleton county, Indiana, in 1834, Dr. Allen moved to Minnesota in 1861, after having taken a full course in medicine and receiving his degree in 1855. His instruction was received from the liberal use of medicine books and from the old family physician whose apothocary shop was the delight of the ambitious youngster. He moved to Rochester in 1865.

The aged physician is now driving a Buick closed-coupled, five-passenger sedan, which he recently purchased.

Open Cars Replace Closed Models As Motor Aristocrats

The open phaeton, once the most common type of car on the road, today has assumed the aristocratic position formerly held by the closed automobile according to executives of the Oakland Motor Car Company.

Not so many years ago, only the well-to-do were able to purchase the closed models. Due to the limited production of this type, its cost far exceeded that of the open models. Naturally the latter greatly outnumbered the former. And the passage of a closed car on the road invariably caused envious comment and a curious turning of heads.

Price was of course the principal factor in determining the original popularity of the phaeton and the roadster. But as new production methods and greater factory efficiency were introduced into body building, the cost of the closed cars was brought down to a level that opened a wider market. Appreciation of the greater utility of the closed models brought a steady increase in demand until sales volume exceeded that of the open cars.

Now the tables are turned. The phaeton attracts the same envious attention formerly given to the closed bodies. Today the open car demand comes from three sources. First is the hardy open car enthusiast who always has driven an open car in all seasons and who always will. Second is the youthful motorist to whom the freedom of the open model makes an appeal. And third is the two or three car owner who desires a open model for motoring to the country club and for summer touring.

Hupp Pistons Are Carefully Made

DETROIT, Mich. Aug. 3.—Most every small boy knows the joy of making a whistle from a willow shoot in the spring. And every small boy who has made such a whistle knows that to obtain the best results and the clearest tone, the willow selected must be straight and free from defects; that the plunger must closely fit the interior of the thin bark, and that there must be no leaks or cracks within his new instrument.

In many ways the care used in fitting engine pistons at the great Hupmobile factories is similar to that exercised by the boy making his willow whistle.

In the first place the piston material must be free from all defects and exactly suited to the use for which it is intended. Hence, a special analysis of gray iron is employed. The co-efficient of expansion of this material is similar to that of the cylinder block. In other words, the rate of expansion of obth piston and cylinder block is about the same. The advantages of this material include the minimizing of the possibility of scored cylinders, pistons slaps when the engine is cold, and excessive oil consumption. At the same time this material provides a uniformly longer wear than others. It is thoroughly seasoned to prevent warping and carefully machined.

Motorists Praise Nash "400" Model

KENOSHA, Wis. Aug. 3.—While the biggest vacation touring movement in automobile history surged over national highways this week, officials of The Nash Motors company received reports from every section of the country which indicate that, in the new type "400" Nash models motorists have found a car that overcomes any and all driving conditions and whose utility is unhampered by the old time problems of changing temperatures, altitudes, and roads.

Assurances of this versatility lie in official registration lists, which show an unusual equalization of Nash "400" sales throughout the United States during the last five months. The national maps in which the motor tourist sees endless trails through the prairies, woods, and mountains of his chosen route, picture another vital Nash achievement when spread before experts of the sales department and shaded to reveal the registration percentage ratio of new Nash cars.

Airport Booms Tourist Trade For Snyder; Yoder Field Is Car Mecca

A view of the Snyder, airport showing hangars for planes and the "Cabin Inn" accommodations for tourists.

By NEA Service

SNYDER, Aug. 3.—The tourist trade is booming and the aviation industry is doing likewise in this town of 5000. It has made arrangements for both on a scale that rivals cities with twenty times the population.

D. P. Yoder, an engineer, hit upon a combination idea of attracting tourists and airplanes at the same time. The result is a fine airport and a series of modern "Cabin Inns" for tourists.

The port is situated in a spot to attract tourists. It has a landing area of 3000 acres, approachable from all directions. One hangar completed will house six planes. The field sports an electric refueling pump, an administration office, plane supply room and machine shop.

As part of the field equipment, a monoplane is used for commercial work, flying school and cross-country hops indulged in by tourists. A government licensed pilot is in charge. Air markers have been placed in the center of the field and can be seen for 15 miles. A wind indicator and other weather instruments are also part of the equipment.

After the airport attracts the tourists, he "Cabin Inns" and surrounding conveninces keep them there. The inns are individual units, each as modern as a hotel. They are constructed of stucco, the color scheme being green and white, telephones, telegraph facilities, gas water, electricity with radio hookup and other modern conveniences.

Restaurants, groceries and sundries are found in buildings making up part of the group plan. The Santa Fe railway depot is nearby.

Additional lures for tourists are offered by the Snyder Golf and Country club and a swimming pool. The airport is only one mile from the heart of the city, on a good highway.

First Production Chrysler Winning

No. '70' Phaeton, One Of First Cars Bearing That Name Still Leading Dirt Track Races In Penn.

A Chrysler "70" phaeton, one of the first of the cars bearing that name to come off the production line in Detroit in 1924, is still winning dirt track stock car races throughout Pennsylvania at a mile a minute pace.

For the greater part of the Chrysler's existence it has been owned by Paul Lasischo, of Mauch Chunk, Pa., a youngster as skilled in getting the best out of a good motor car as is a born jockey in bringing out the speed in a thoroughbred horse.

Lasischo, an auto race enthusiast, long cherished ambitions to be a speed demon of the dirt tracks, of which there are several circuits throughout the eastern part of the Keystone state. Many of these events are of a "free-for-all" character, and it was in these competitions that Lasischo gained his first lessons in race driving.

Confident that his Chrysler could show its rear tires to the other stock cars entered in these contests, the youth stripped the automobile of its top, windshield and fenders and began to win races in a manner that has since gained for him an enviable reputaton als a daring, skillful driver.

Six Cylinder Cars Leading Fours In National Output

Chevrolet's Change-Over To Bigger Automobile Means Huge Deduction From Lighter Class

DETROIT, Aug. 3.—For the first time in the history of the automobile industry, six cylinder cars promise to lead the field in production this year, according to a survey by the Chevrolet Motor company today. Up until this year four cylinder cars ranked first in annual production volume.

Comparative production figures for the first six months of this year are offered in support of the forecast. During this period there were produced approximately 1,800,000 sixes as compared with approximately 1,265,000 fours, an indication of what the total for the year is apt to be.

How the change comes about is illustrated in the survey. Chevrolet's manufacturing goal for the year is 1,350,000 cars. Chevrolet's change-over from a four to a six means a deduction of this enormous total from the four cylinder field and adds it to the six cylinder field.

How the automobile picture has changed almost overnight will be noted in an inspection of the 1928 showing. Last year when Chevrolet was produsing a four cylinder car, four cylinder manfacturers built approximately 2,068,000 cars, with one large manufacturer of four cylinder cars on limited production due to model change, while six cylinder manufacturers were making 1,617,000 cars.

As it now stands the year 1929 should show approximately 3,000,000 six cylinder units as compared to only 2,350,000 four cylinder units.

Consequently this significant development, which will make the current year an epochal one in the annals of the automobile business, comes about chiefly as a result of the entrance of Chevrolet into the six cylinder field. In lay circles, this event is seen as a tribute to the automobile industry and the newest step which this gigantic business has taken in the direction of constantly offering its patrons more automobile per dollar.

Great volume production, coupled with expert direction in the engineering, manufacturing and selling branches of the busines sare given as reasons that are making it possible for the automobile industry to lead all others in giving the public the utmost for its money.

Romance Harbored In Relics Of Old New Orleans For Visiting Tourists

Adventure Offered For Guests In Quaint City

By NEA Service

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 3.—From Cairo, Ill., where the waters of the Ohio join the Mississippi, along this gigantic waterway into one of the most picturesque cities of the Uniter States, New Orleans, is a summer tour which will fill with adventure and romance the two weeks allotted the summre vacationist.

One day's drive out of Cairo on Highway 51 by way of Fulton, Dyersburg, Ripley and Covington—181 miles—is Memphis, busy town on the Father of Waters where Andrew Jackson was one of the first real estate investors. River scenes, distant blue bluffs, President's Island, the famous zoo and the "pink palace" built by Clarence Saunders, originator of chain grocery stores, are points of interest well worth taking time off to see.

About 230 miles south of Memphis along the Mississippi is Vicksburg, reached by taking the route including Clarksdale and Leland through the heart of the cotton growing Yazoo Delta where the white bolls extend as far as eye can see. Hidden away in the bustle of modern civilization are unhealed scars of one of the most torrid battles of the Civil War. All this is along Highway 61.

Enter City From North

A little over 300 miles from Vicksburg the motorist enters the outskirits of New Orleans. Down through a canopied street covered by oaks and palms, through the residential section on St. Charles avenue and finally into the business section of this bustling city of 432,000 persons.

Once here the motorist is guaranteed to lose his wanderlust for the time being and settle down to a delightful exploration of a town where the romance and history of two races, French and Spanish, are still in the blood of the inhabitants.

Here is the famous Vieux Carre, an old section of the city established in 1718 by the Frenchman Bienville. Antique shops clutter either side of Royal street, the old colonial section of the city. In this district zoning ordinances skyscrapers, and the section still retains much of that romantic splendor that one reads about in story books.

Here filigree-iron balconies adorn the plaster facades of brick buildings thre and four stories high. Buildings with arched doorways lead back through tunnel vaults into cool courtyards where fountains play in the shade of banana and palm trees.

Ancient Memories

A typical house is the Patio Royal on Royal street. Constructed 150 years ago, a balcony looks down upon the inner court where Paul Morphy, one-time world champion chess player, was accustomed to sit over his knights and pawns.

South through a narrow paved lane known as "Pirates' Alley," there is Jackson Square with its grand old statue of Old Hickory in the center.

On the northwest corner of the square the cool arches of the Cabildo and the entrance of the Louisiana State Museum invite the guests. In the museum are thousands of articles representative of the Mississippi Valley and souvenirs reminiscent of the time when New Orleans was a center of past-century culture and a haven for pirates, murderers, outlaws and other criminals.

Next to the Cabildo is the St. Louis Cathedral built on the site of the first church in Louisiana in 1794. It is a fine example of spanish colonial architecture and is in regular use.

Historic Houses Remain

Another day in New Orleans can be devoted into further delving into the historic past of New Orleans. On the corner of Chartress and St. Louis streets is the "Napoleon House," prepared by Governor Girod of Louisiana for reception of the exiled French emperor when plans were made to smuggle the mighty military mind of France from St. Helena.

Close by is the Old Absinthe House, built in 1796, for the expert satisfaction of thirst, but now the headquarters for the Vieux Carre Association. Then there's the home of the fiery Creole leader in the Civil War, General P. G. T. Beauregard. It was recently saved from the ignominy of being converted into a macaroni factory.

All the while the tourist remains in New Orleans his palate is tickled with savory culinary efforts of Pairs-trained chefs in quaint little restaurants. Among the best known are Antoine's, Arnaud's, Maurice's, and Brouusard's. Here are rare dishes—"bouillea-braisse," "bisque d'ecrivisses," "pompano en papier" and other foreign tasties.

A third day can be spent here taking an excursion by water along the 51-mile New Orleans water front, seeing boats of 90 steamship lines from all corners of the globe, levees which protected New Orleans from the great 1927 flood, drydocks, special banana unloading wharves and the great grain elevators.

Pertinent Facts About Automobiles By Israel Klein, Science Editor For NEA Service

By ISRAEL KLEIN
(Science Editor, NEA Service)

There is a mental hazard in driving an automobile that results, in many cases, from defects in the car itself. Chattering brakes, slapping pistons, a noisy distributor, rattling fenders, squeaking doors are only a small number of the many inconveniences that can get on the nerves of a driver.

It isn't traffic alone that causes the mental hazard. It's the car and its parts—and the original cause, if we should trace it down to the beginning, is the owner himself.

Let the owner of an automobile look after the little things, as well as he does the more important running parts, and he will avoid that mental hazard in driving that might at any time unnerve him when an emergency arises.

Brakes wear down, get out of true and began to chatter and squeak and slip if the wriver neglects them. Of course the remedy is to reline them and see that they grip evenly all around. But even better is the practice of avoiding such difficulty by having the brakes checked up regularly, to see that they take evenly on all four wheels.

Sometimes even the newest brakes squeak or, in wet weather fail to hold. To avoid this a Buffalo, N. Y., firm has been putting out a plastic material which, when applied to the brakelining, will weatherproof it and enable the brakes to hold evenly. This substance fills the rivet holes, wherg in rainy weather the water might enter the depressions and cause slipping. It also works into the lining itself to give it more gripping ability and to keep the brakes from squeaking.

Piston slap, on older cars, should warn the driver that his engine not only is being beaten to pieces by the constant hammering of the piston at fault, but that it is also losing power and wasting fuel as a result. A slapping piston is a sign of looseness in its cylinder and wearing of that cylinder out of its true shape. The remedy might be costly for its means reboring the cylinder and installing oversize pistons and rings.

Letting the piston slapping continue for a time is wearing not only on the motor but on the driver's nerves. The constant hammering from beneath the hood may eventually cause a serious traffic accident.

The tick-ticking of the distributor is another annoying hazard to the motorist and can easily be avoided. It is usually due to lack of lubrication. A drop of oil every 500 miles or so is enough to prevent this annoyance.

Similarly, a turn of a screw driver or wrench will tighten up loose screws or bolts in the door hinges and fender supports enough to avoid squeaking and rattling from these sections.

A quiet car is a good car. And it saves the driver from losing his patience and nerve. It can easily be kept quiet by regular inspection of the wearing parts and tightening of the body bolts and screws. The new car, especially, needs this attention.

Influx Of People Expected For Fall Opening Of Tech

Housing Demand In City Likely To Become Great

Officials Looking For Enrollment Of Over 2,500 Students; Dormitories Ordered For Girls

WITH THE opening of the fall session of Texas Technological college will come a demand for homes, apartments and rooms that will tax the city to supply, according to officials of the college, realty men of Lubbock and other interested citizens. Dr. Paul W. Horn, president of the college estimates that the total enrollment of the coming term will be between 2500 and 3000 students, an increase of some two or three thousand or more over last year.

This condition will serve as an impetus to home-building in the city, in the opinion of some of the leading realty men, and with fall an era of construction is expected. All are firm in their belief, however, that ample housing facilities will be furnished and that families and students moving to Lubbock for the educational advantages offered here will find room in the homes that have been and are being built expressly for these residents.

Dormitories Promised

Texas Tech, anticipating this increase in its enrollment, has designated two private dormitories near the college campus to be used exclusively for freshmen women. These two, College Inn and Annex A, will have a housing capacity of 120 women and are located on College Avenue just opposite the campus. Should these buildings fail to accomodate all freshmen women students others will be designated and used by the college, according to officials, until the dormitories can be built on the campus which recently were authorized in a bill passed by the legislature.

Realty men state that vacant lots over the city are being filled up with a greater rapidity this year than ever before though building has at times seemed somewhat curtailed the character of the structures now being laid is proving much better and contractors and builders alike are exercising greater care in making of homes a more rigid and higher class of dwellings.

Houses Vacant Now

A recent survey made in the residential district of Lubbock showed that at this time there are 155 vacant houses in the city. This survey included an area of 26 miles and does not include apartment houses. Classified the structures showthat there are 93 vacant brick veneer single family dwellings, 6 vacant brick veneer duplex apartments, 20 vacant frame single family dwellings, 3 vacant frame duplex apartments, 7 vacant single family dwellings, 2 vacant stucco duplex apartments, 23 new brick veneer single family dwellings under construction, 1 new brick veneer duplex under construction. Since the time of this survey, which was made by Joe Hess, an estimated total of 20 additional foundations have been laid, making a supply of about 175 homes ready for the influx of fall students of Texas Tech.

This figure, multiplied by four as the average number of persons to a home would mount to 700.

With these additional housing facilities then, aside from rooms in private dwellings and apartment houses, authorities state that there will be no shortage of space and that every student and every family will be amply provided for.

Northern New Mexico A Wonderland In Vacation Time; Offers Many Features

Playground At Back Door Of Lubbock Is Enchanting

THE ENCHANTMENT of mystery overhangs northern New Mexico an incites the superficial sightseer into bewitching dreams of civilizations which are evidenced now by a few crumbling adobe ruins basking in the famous sunlight of this western country at Lubbock's backdoor.

One awakes early in New Mexico towns to hear musical bells calling devout Mexicans to their prayers and the shadow of a cross from some venerable mission may, perchance, fall across the wide-flung window to encourage these dreams, for much of the history of this romantic state is written in the array of crosses which marches along the banks of the Rio Grande.

Many Objects of Interest

The curtain of centuries lifts at intervals to reveal incomplete pictures of brave Indians, of the adventuresome and gold - hungry Spaniard, of heavenly-minded Franciscan friars of Coronado and his band, of the peon; while almost any street is an exotic bit of the old world.

Moccasined Indians, their costumes garbling the old and new, mingled with chattering Mexicans and mince their English and Spanish dialect in peddling topaz rings, bracelets and pieces of pottery, or begging a nickle to assuage a probably fictitious hunger for food.

The broad faces of sandy palisades are pitted with holes to remind one of the warring cliff dwellers who flourished and passed on behind this curtain of centuries, leaving signs enough of their lives to make the unscientific wonder and dream.

El Capulin, the most perfect volcanic crater on this continent, strewn about by blackened rocks, reminds one that the sun-kissed plains about Raton have not always been as serene as they are today, while burned rocks, scattered about the rim of mountains further inland, for whose birth no volcanic cone has been discovered add only another mystery to this enigmatical land.

The recent history of Santa Fe, the capital city and the center of northern New Mexico's interest, dates back to 1530 when the first Spaniards wandered into this seat of ancient Indian government. Ten years later they returned to baptise the Indian and build missions, some of which remain today.

Has Oldest Church

Santa Fe boasts of the oldest church in America and the usual date given for this building is 1550. However, the stooped and soft-voiced priest who conducts one through the quiet aisles of the little structure informs visitors that the church dates back to 1541.

Thick doors swing open in this building to reveal the quaint interior. The building has been rebuilt through the centuries and yet there remain, among the time-stained columns, beams which were carved through the patience of those Indians of centuries ago—Indians who must have been devout converts to drag those huge logs over the weary miles from the mountains to the foothills of Santa Fe.

Bell Made In 1360

Inside this little church there hang smoky paintings which have been there for so many hundreds of years, that trace of their origin is lost and there is a monstrous bell, sitting alone on shafts back of the ancient pews, which bears the inscription of 1360 and which was brought here from Spain centuries ago.

This bell, which measures four inches in thickness, is an article of pride for the little priest who patiently raises and lowers the clapper, pointing out in monotones to each one in the stream of visitors the unusually musical peals which resound.

Mass is read in this church daily but the tourist may not attend. Ten years ago the little sanctuary became the mecca for so many travelers that its doors were closed to the public in order that this monument might be preserved. The 500 boys who attend St. Michael's school, of which this church is a part, are included in the group which is privileged to attend the ceremonies of this institution.

Old House There, Too.

Near this church there stands a low, two-roomed adobe which is said to be the oldest in America and which was the rendezvous for Coronado when his explorations led him this far into the west.

A radius of a few score miles about Santa Fe includes many points of interest and mystery.

The Puye cliff dwellings are typical of many of the early tribes in this country and descendants of these people live today within the shadow of these cliffs. One of these Indians, who has a conversational English gained in a government school and a style all his own of wearing the garb of civilization, is more than willing to conduct one along the edge of the cliff and tell of the discoveries there.

Only the last rooms of these dwellings are left today on the face of the cliffs and partial excavations on the crest of the plateau indicate that these hills were once the homes of some two thousand Indians.

Each of these dwellings, those built on the face of the precipice as well as those above, consisted of four rooms and were entered thru a small opening at the front. The first three rooms were quarters for living and in the last grains and other supplies were stored.

Some of the nooks for huge pieces of pottery and shelves which were hollowed out of the clay remain today in these structures, while crumbling ruins indicate the kivas or council chambers where weighty matters of these primeval governments were decided.

Pueblos There, Too

Remains o fa different civilization have a typical indication at Taos, north of Santa Fe, where some of the most complete pueblos in the state stand, the adobe and mud-plastered rooms rising story on story like so many mud-daubers dwellings in a sun-baked valley.

Indians in their awkward white white buckskin boots and flowing skirts and shawls climb about these pueblos pursuing their daily living habits while naked black-eyed children splash in the running mountain which divides the community into halves.

Famous People Visit There

And about all this historical setting there is a Bohemian spirit for artists and writers, famous throughout the world have been drawn to this portion of New Mexico by its magic and it is the mecca for tourists from every portion of the nation.

Effecting the gaudy colors and costumes associated with the Mexican, meeting each other and the world with a blaze of importance, these famed people fill coffee shops and restaurants or sit about the inevitable plazas of evenings, after having remained at their studios during the day recording the mysteries and beauties of this land in writings or on their wide canvasses.
