American, Soviet to be moved to embassies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union are expected to release an American journalist jailed in Moscow and an accused Soviet spy to their countries' ambassadors later today, administration sources said.

But it was not clear whether the imprisoned reporter, Nicholas Daniloff, would be allowed to return to the United States, as the Reagan administration has demanded.

One source confirmed that Gennadiy Zakharov, a Soviet employee of the United Nations, was expected to be turned over to the Soviet ambassador to the United States in New York pending trial on espionage charges.

Another source said the cases of Zakharov and Daniloff were still the subject of intense negotiation.

That source said it was not clear whether Daniloff would be allowed to leave the Soviet Union.

In Moscow, his wife said Soviet authorities have agreed to release her husband from his KGB prison cell, but she indicated he would not be allowed to leave the Soviet Union immediately.

"It does look like there will be a remanding of both Zakharov and Daniloff in the course of the day to their respective ambassadors," one source said.

"Intense negotiations are still going on, but phase one appears to be in the works," the source said.

Both sources demanded anonymity.

Officially, the Reagan administration remained mum on the matter. White House spokesman Larry Speakes turned aside questions about the Daniloff case today, telling reporters, "There is absolutely nothing that I can or will say."

On Thursday, Secretary of State George Shultz says the administration will not settle for his temporary release to the American ambassador.

The secretary of state spelled out the American position on seeking the release of the U.S. News & World Report Moscow correspondent, whom the Soviets have accused of espionage.

"He is a hostage, he is not an agent," Shultz said. "He is a hostage to the Soviet Union as long as he is there, whether he's in jail or some other place. That doesn't change the fact that he's a hostage."

Shultz, continuing his tough talk, also said the United States "will not become reconciled" to the continued detention of Daniloff.

Shultz made his comments to a group from the private Chautauqua Institution. Sponsors of the meeting at the State Department had declared the remarks off the record, but they were reported by Cable News Network, the Mutual Broadcasting System and in today's editions of The Washington Post.

The United States and Soviet Union both have linked Daniloff's imprisonment to the case of Gennadiy Zakharov, a Soviet physicist jailed in New York on espionage charges.

The Reagan administration has publicly ruled out a trade for Zakharov, but has approached Moscow with an "understanding" that he would be released to the custody of Ambassador Yuri Dubinin if Daniloff were sent home, U.S. officials said earlier in the week.

Shultz said Daniloff was "in no way comparable to the Soviet spy to whom they are trying to make him the equivalent."

It was not clear whether Shultz was ruling out release of Daniloff to U.S. Ambassador Arthur A. Hartman as a satisfactory, if temporary, arrangement to end the superpower stalemate.

Technically, Daniloff would be on U.S. territory if he were placed in Spasso, the American residence in Moscow. But Zakharov, who worked at the U.N. Secretariat, still would have to face trial on espionage charges.

Shultz spoke to about 250 would-be participants in a meeting that Chautauqua intended to hold next week in Riga, the capital of Latvia. However, the trip was put in jeopardy by Daniloff's arrest on Aug. 30. The group originally had planned to leave the United States Thursday.

Another American kidnapped in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Four gunmen today kidnapped an American accountant in an ambush on the American University of Beirut campus, police and the school said. It was the second abduction of an American in Beirut this week.

A university statement said Joseph James Cicippio, 55, the school's acting comptroller, was kidnapped at 8:45 a.m. at the door to his campus apartment building in Moslem west Beirut.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the abduction. Police said witnesses told them one gunman hit Cicippio on the back of the head with a pistol butt as he was forced out the campus' seafont faculty gate and bundled into the trunk of a waiting car.

Police reported finding bloodstains and Cicippio's broken eyeglasses near the gate.

West Beirut was the scene of a spate of kidnappings and assassinations in 1984 and 1985 after Moslem militias wrested control of the sector from the Lebanese army. However, Syrian troops recently have tried to restore order, and the kidnapping Tuesday of Frank Herbert Reed was the first abduction of an American in 15 months.

Earlier today, the Voice of Lebanon radio station claimed that Shiite Moslem extremists of Hezbollah, or the Party of God, had kidnapped Reed and smuggled him into the Bekaa Valley in east Lebanon.

Sources at the American University said four kidnappers hid behind bushes at the apartment and grabbed Cicippio as he left for work.

Bombing of Paris store injures about 40 people

PARIS (AP) — A bomb exploded at lunchtime today in a crowded department store cafeteria, and the fire department said 40 people were injured, two of them seriously.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the blast at the Casino department store in the La Defense commercial complex west of Paris.

"I was bowled over by the blast," said an unidentified woman who was near the cafeteria's cash register. "I saw all the debris falling from the ceiling. There was smoke. My eyes burned. People were screaming."

The woman said she saw a woman next to her fall down. "She was pregnant and had pains in her abdomen. I went to look for an ambulance," she said.

Didier Peyssé, who works on the floor below the cafeteria, said there was no panic. About 1,000 shoppers were evacuated from the store.

Police said the explosives apparently were placed under a seat in the crowded second-story restaurant, which serves about 1,200 meals at midday.

Witnesses saw a man in his 20s fleeing the area after the explosion, said Interior Minister Charles Pasqua.

The fire department reported 40 people injured, two of them seriously.

A pharmacist who administered first aid said most of the injured were hit by flying glass and debris.

A fire department official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the explosion was reported at 12:29 p.m.

Restaurants report business down

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Some local restaurants have reported business is down 40 to 50 percent due to recent publicity about shigellosis, Permian Basin Texas Restaurant Association officials said today in a press conference.

Business has been slowed even more for restaurants mentioned by name in reports about the bacterial infection of the digestive tract, officials added.

The press conference was held so representatives of local restaurants could publicly discuss the issue.

"Our livelihood is on the line," said Sam Gonzales, an Odessa restaurant owner. "We want to be as forthright as possible."

Sid Clark, president of the association, said Permian Basin restaurants have had a solid track record the past year.

"We wish to point out that 50 million meals have been served in the Permian Basin the past year," Clark said.

"As a result of our performance and our ability to maintain an unblemished service, we have earned the full confidence of all our customers."

"Your Midland and Odessa health departments have confirmed the threat of this past outbreak of shigellosis is not a result of food poisoning and the outbreak is in its secondary stages."

"If this outbreak was in fact a problem within our industry, it no longer exists to our knowledge."

Restaurants that have received considerable publicity, Clark said, have indicated their business is off "up to 99.9 percent."

Midlander's rescuer among Carnegie honorees

Heroes, families receive $2,500 gifts

From Staff and Wire Reports

A 64-year-old man killed when a speeding car struck him as he pushed a Midlander out of the way in 1984 has been honored by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

The commission Thursday also recognized 19 others, seven posthumously, from 13 states and Canada.

Joseph A. Callcott, of Gallion, Ala., died when a speeding car struck him as he pushed David S. Schlemmer, 25, out of the way Aug. 3, 1984.

The hero fund, established in 1904 by industrialist Andrew Carnegie, awarded $2,500 to each hero or surviving family members.

The fund sometimes provides continuing assistance, but spokesman

Walter Rutkowski said no decision had been made about providing more money to any of the most recent recipients.

The commission also awarded $20,000 to the West Virginia Recovery Foundation to honor those who risked and sacrificed their lives trying to save others in catastrophic flooding in November 1985.

Also recognized as heroes Thursday were:

— Leatrice Harrison of Greenwood, S.C., who awakened her sister, Jametta, then led two young cousins to safety when their grandmother's house burned Feb. 1, 1985.

— Samuel C. Adair, 37, of Elliot Lake, Ontario, Canada, who crawled into a burning home in Sudbury on Jan. 4, 1985, to save Neil A. MacKay, 78.

— Forrest W. Chambers, 51, of Saint Mary-of-the-Woods, Ind., who drowned saving Luisa Marquez, 9, in the Atlantic Ocean at Cape Canaveral, Fla., on March 17, 1985.

— Paul A. Christensen, 52, of Nesconset, N.Y., who saved Kathleen M. Gautier, 22, from her wrecked and burning car in Nesconset on Jan. 15, 1985.

— David M. Enyeart, 30, of Lynnwood, Wash., who climbed through a window of a burning house to rescue James K. Bellman, 38, in Lynnwood on Nov. 5, 1984.

— Mark A. Foss, 14, of Warrenville, Ill., who drowned while saving a companion, Jeanice Cooper, 12, in Lake Michigan on July 4, 1985.

— John A. Hild Jr., 28, of Baltimore, Kevin S. Strohle, 26, of Joppa, Md., and Kenneth J. Wingo, 38, of Phoenix, Md., who pulled Mary L. McPherson, 27, of Fallston, Md., from her burning car in Fallston on Aug. 7, 1985. The pregnant woman recovered and gave birth to a healthy boy a month later.

— Freddie M. Hill Jr., 14, of Albany, Ga., who dove into swollen Flint River and rescued fellow Boy Scout Johnnie Bryant Jr., 14, on June 28, 1983.

— Maura Jane Isbell, 27, of Stamford, Conn., who crawled through a smoky hallway to reach Hugh Cunningham, 83, in his apartment and carried him to safety Nov. 12, 1985.

— Donald E. Kidder, 20, of Edgerton, Wis., who died in a futile attempt to save a fellow duck hunter, Dale A. Hanson, 49, from drowning in Lake Koshkonong on Nov. 4, 1984.

— Morris A. Neeley, 49, Gregory

W. Dickens, 16, both of Winona, Texas, and James D. Richardson, 20, of Tyler, Texas, who risked their lives in an attempt to save Anthony W. Lamb, 24, from a sewer where he passed out May 19, 1985.

Neeley and Dickens also passed out in the sewer and were rescued by Richardson, who entered the shaft three times. Lamb died.

— Edward Priestner Jr., 25, of Midland Park, N.Y., and Rita Sue Shively, 34, of Lake Mary, Fla., who tried to save Ezzel Daniels Jr., Daren E. Daniels and Ezzel Daniels Sr. from drowning in the Wekiva River, Sanford, Fla., on July 25, 1985. All three family members drowned as well as Priestner. Shively survived.

— James B. Salyer, 46, of Falcon, Ky., and James S. Clevenger, 44, of Salyersville, Ky., both who died trying to save Farmer Howard, 44, from suffocating in a sewer shaft where he had been working in Salyersville on Oct. 18, 1984. Howard also died.

Baby back in mom's arms; Probe slated

TEMPLE (AP) — Officials at Scott & White Memorial Hospital said they will review security at the facility after an infant was taken from a viewing room at the nursery just hours after he was born.

But Executive Vice President Robert Mason and assistant nursing administrator Karen Cure said at a news conference Thursday that they won't recommend "knee-jerk" security enhancement that would detract from the festive occasion of childbirth.

"When someone comes in to have a baby, that's an exciting time," Ms. Cure said. "So we try to celebrate."

Philippine Supreme Court voids acquittals in Aquino killing

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Supreme Court today voided the acquittal of 26 people charged in the 1983 assassination of President Corason Aquino's husband and ordered a new trial.

In a 50-page decision written by Chief Justice Claudio Teehankee, the court said the acquittal of then armed forces chief Gen. Fabian C. Ver, 24 other military men and one civilian was reached in a sham trial orchestrated by then-President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

A new trial into the slaying of opposition leader Benigno Aquino is needed "so that the truth may be finally known and justice done to all," the Supreme Court said.

Teehankee and seven other justices voted to invalidate what they called "the non-trial of the century." The court's three other justices disqualified themselves from the deliberations.

State Senate proposes cash plan

By STEVE LEVINE

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate threw another tax hook into budget deliberations with the House Thursday, linking enactment of a "must-have" cash management plan to passage of sales and gasoline tax increases.

A bill introduced in the Senate Thursday would delay until February the $60-million-a-month transfer of general state revenue into pension funds for retired teachers and state employees.

The Treasury would repay the loan with a minimum 8-percent interest over the remaining seven months of the fiscal year.

The bill itself is a compromise with the House plan, as Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and key senators originally opposed any borrowing from the pension funds.

House Speaker Gib Lewis had proposed delaying the transfers for 12 months, repaying the lump sum of about $740 million on the Aug. 31, 1987 end of the fiscal year.

"That would be borrowing three-quarters of a billion dollars without having the revenues in sight to pay it off," Hobby said of the House proposal. "But this (the Senate bill) does pay it all off within the year."

Both sides agree that, with or without new taxes, the Treasury would not be able to pay its bills this winter without the money from the retirement funds.

"That's a piece of legislation we're definitely going to have to have," Lewis said.

But the Senate threw a kicker in at the end of the bill, stating that it would not take effect unless the Legislature increases the sales and gasoline taxes during the special session.

Twenty-one of the 31 senators have signed on to a resolution calling for a temporary 1.125-cent sales tax increase and a nickel-a-gallon increase on the 10-cent gasoline tax.

Mubarak, Peres agree on international committee

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — President Hosni Mubarak and Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres today agreed to set up a committee to prepare for an international conference on Middle East peace. Egypt announced it was returning its ambassador to Israel.

The agreement appeared to be the major achievement from the first summit between the two countries in five years. However, it was not referred to in the official statement issued at the end of the two-day meeting.

Peres then flew back to Tel Aviv, Israel, where he said he expected some opposition within his coalition government over his agreement on a world conference.

Mubarak told reporters, "We have both of us agreed on an international conference and...a preparatory committee. Still, there are some issues to discuss.... You can't imagine such a problem to be solved in 24 hours, but we made good progress." Neither man mentioned details, but Peres said the committee would discuss procedure and composition for a conference.

Syria and Libya, the Soviet Union's closest Arab allies, assailed the summit and called for Mubarak's ouster.

Jordanian newspapers described the meeting as "Israeli blackmail" and a propaganda ploy.

Egypt and Jordan have favored an international conference to provide a framework for direct negotiations between Israel and the Arabs.

The United States, and Israel until now, has voiced opposition to an international conference because it would include the Soviet Union.

"If we had had more time, we would have made more progress," said Peres, standing beside Mubarak inside a mammoth hall of the ornate 19th century Ras el-Tin palace. "We have reached much more understanding on a very complicated issue."

Peres said in an interview from Alexandria on ABC's "Good Morning America" program that after the summit, "I feel that today the road is open more than ever before to go ahead with the peace process."

He said he was "extremely satisfied" with the degree of understanding achieved and that he and Mubarak "came extremely close" to defining "the exact relations between the Jordanians and the Palestinians acceptable to us and to Egypt."

Peres also noted, "Without the U.S. we wouldn't have achieved what we achieved."

On the same ABC program, Mubarak termed the summit "very fruitful" and said "such a big problem...can't be solved overnight...we have to keep contacts."

Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid read a statement announcing that Egypt was appointing Mohamed Bassiouny its ambassador to Israel.

Bassiouny has been charged d'affaires in the Egyptian Embassy in Tel Aviv since Mubarak recalled his ambassador in 1982 to protest Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

Abdel-Meguid said Peres and Mubarak had agreed to declare 1987 "a year of negotiations for peace."

Today's one-hour private meeting between Mubarak and Peres was delayed for two hours. A senior Israeli official said the two delegations spent the time working to bridge the gap between their positions on the Palestinian issue.

But the final statement referred only to the need for "resolution of the Palestinian question in all its aspects" and "solution of the Palestinian problem in all its aspects."

Peres told Israeli radio in an interview that "the issue of Palestinian representation still constitutes a problem." Egypt, the only Arab state with diplomatic ties with Israel, and the rest of the Arab world says the Palestine Liberation Organization is the only legitimate representative of the Palestinians.

Israel considers the PLO a terrorist group and refuses to deal with it.

The senior Israeli official, who insisted on anonymity, said "that Egypt wanted to say (in today's communiqué) that a solution for the Palestinian problem should be reached through self-determination, within the context of a Jordanian-Palestinian confederation. Israel responded that that is PLO language and we are not willing to accept."

Another senior Israeli delegation member, minister without portfolio Ezer Weizman, said, "Mubarak expected more (in the communiqué) and we could not give him what he wanted.... We must remember that Peres' problem is not only with Mubarak, but he also has the Likud to deal with."

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, leader of the rightist Likud bloc, swaps jobs with Peres on Oct. 14 under a power-sharing agreement. Before Peres left for the summit on Thursday, Shamir elicited from him a promise to give Mubarak no concessions on the Palestinian issue.

Peres said Thursday the Palestinians have a right "to participate in the determination of their own future," underscoring a tenet of the Camp David accords signed in 1978 by Israel, Egypt and the United States.

The document formed the basis for the 1979 peace treaty between the two Middle Eastern neighbors, but its clause on Palestinian self-determination in territory occupied by Israel remains unfulfilled. "We have no desire to dominate another people," Peres said.

DISEASE

Clark said the restaurant association is "not trying to cover up — nor is the Ector County Health Department."

On Thursday, Texas Health Department officials said the outbreak of shigellosis has expanded beyond Odessa and Midland to include cases in Big Spring and Hobbs, N.M.

Lettuce distributed to various restaurants in the infected areas is suspected as a "possible link" in the spread of the disease, which is symptomized by high fever, diarrhea, nausea and vomiting.

Health Department officials have tested cultures taken from lettuce shredding equipment at the plant of Comark Distributing, which distributes food products to a number of area restaurants in Odessa and Midland, as well as Hobbs.

Comark is owned by Cox Marketing, which also owns and operates the Taco Villa fast food chain.

Officials say the tests so far have produced negative results as have those conducted involving four restaurants in Midland and Odessa.

The Texas Health Department in Austin, which has conducted most of the tests run in an effort to isolate the source of the shigella bacteria, Thursday released a list of the restaurants involved in the test.

THD officials said tests of food products from Taco Villa, Texas Burger, Sonic Drive-in, and Chili's restaurant in Midland have produced negative results.

According to state health officials, products from the four restaurants were tested because a number of shigellosis victims had indicated they had eaten at one of the restaurants.

State officials say that Comark Distributing, which distributes produce to the four restaurants, has been determined not to be the source of the bacteria.

Although lettuce and onions were early suspected as the possible source of the shigella bacteria, health officials say they have not been able to pinpoint the source with tests. Testing is continuing.

Health officials say they believe the outbreak is now on the downside and could be moving into the secondary phase.

Those who may have ingested the bacteria initially, without being too sick, and didn't seek medical treatment may find themselves with the symptoms again.

Humanitarian group stirs attention in hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — "With the help of decals, public service announcements and three former hostages, a humanitarian group is launching a nationwide campaign today to draw attention to Americans still held captive in Lebanon."

"Remember our American hostages — We want them home," is the theme of the campaign that has been organized by the No Greater Love group on behalf of the hostages' relatives.

Jeremy Levin and the Revs. Lawrence Martin Jenco and Benjamin Weir, three men who spent time in captivity in Beirut, were scheduled to kick off the project at their first joint press conference today.

"I made a commitment to my fellow hostages that I will do all that I can to make sure they are not forgotten," said Jenco, who was released July 26 after 19 months in captivity.

"I urge you to support No Greater Love in its effort by giving its campaign and its logo the widest possible exposure," Jenco, 51, of Joliet, Ill., said in a prepared statement.

Jenco was head of the Catholic Relief Services office in Beirut when he was captured. Weir, freed in September 1985, is a Presbyterian minister from Berkeley, Calif. Levin, an employee of Cable News Network, gained freedom in February 1985.

Peggy Say of Batavia, N.Y., sister of hostage Terry Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, said, "I recommend this campaign to all Americans as a means of showing they care."

No Greater Love is sending packages containing decals, slides for television, public service announcements and photographs to newspapers and radio and television stations in Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Washington, New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Tampa, Fla., and Denver.

Each radio station in the selected cities will receive about 200 "Remember our American hostages" decals. Listeners can receive the decals free from the radio stations by agreeing to write a letter to the hostages, letting them know they are not forgotten.

No Greater Love is an organization that promotes humanitarian causes, such as assisting the children of men who died in the Vietnam War. Its money comes from contributions, many of which are in-kind items.

Other hostages besides Anderson are David Jacobsen, 55, the administrator of the American University Hospital in Beirut, Thomas Sutherland, 55, acting dean of the school's agriculture, and Frank Reed, 53, head of a private school in Beirut.

Jenco said he was held in a room with Anderson, Sutherland and Jacobsen, whose captors are thought to be members of Islamic Jihad, a Moslem fundamentalist group with ties to Iran.

The Jihad reported last October that it killed another hostage, William Buckley, 58, a U.S. embassy political officer, but no body was found.

WHAT IS PREVENTIVE MEDICINE TODAY?

1. It is much more than the prevention of contagious diseases!
2. It is involved in treating the patient as well as the disease; it is much easier to treat the patient before the disease occurs
3. It is improving the immune system to make it competent through dietary control, lifestyle programs, exercise programs, relief from mental stress, and early detection of disease & malignancy.
4. A competent immune system that can be maintained will avoid most of the degenerative diseases, allergic and autoimmune diseases, and many forms of cancer
5. Lifespan can be increased along with a better quality lifestyle
6. Lengthy illnesses and pro-longed hospitalization can be avoided

A Lebanese janitor who said he witnessed the abduction said Ciccipio tried to resist the gunmen. The janitor, who spoke on condition he not be further identified, said the kidnappers saw him watching and took him at gunpoint to a faculty lodge.

He said that after the gunmen left he rushed to Ciccipio's apartment to tell Ciccipio's in-laws of the kidnapping. "They screamed and panicked," he said.

The university sources said Ciccipio had worked as an accountant at the university's controller's office since coming to Beirut two years ago, and that he converted to Islam last year when he married a Lebanese woman, Ilham Ghandour.

We don't want to do anything so dramatic, to overreact in a way that would turn this into a prison."

Jeremy Scott Bobo was abducted from the viewing room about 12:30 p.m. Wednesday, eight hours after he was born. The child was found at a residence west of Temple Wednesday evening, and two suspects taken into custody, police said.

Valerie Elaine Dach, 19, was charged with kidnapping Thursday, and was being held at Bell County Jail on $100,000 bond. Her common-law husband was not charged in the kidnapping, but faces a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle because the truck the couple were in was reported stolen from a Temple car lot, police said.

"We talked with her, and she indicated she acted alone," said police Capt. Dave Wilde.

Police said the woman had donated blood at the hospital's blood bank prior to the kidnapping, and received a free child car seat the hospital gives to donors. Witnesses told police they saw a woman matching the suspect's description at the hospital Tuesday evening, and looking at the baby just before his disappearance.

The 6½-pound boy was found unharmed at the residence, police said.

The child's father, Hank Bobo, said Thursday he was tired, and upset.

"Anger is not the word for it," he said Thursday afternoon as he and his wife, Laura Bobo, waited to leave the hospital. "You go through a lot to have a baby, and to take it out from under you — there's no excuse for it."

He said he didn't blame the hospital, but added, "I do think they should do something a whole lot different than they've been doing so it won't happen again."

Executive Vice President Mason said prevention is difficult because it is "not unusual to see women carrying infants in the hall."

"If someone really wants to run off with a baby, they probably can do it," he said, but added, "We'll go over all our security procedures again."

Bobo said that the hospital had removed the doorknob from the viewing room door that officials believe the kidnapper walked through to get to the child. Removing the knob will prevent people from walking into the room but will allow people to leave in case of an emergency.

Nurses will be able to enter the room through a less-accessible door.

During the chaos of the Israeli invasion. They maintain close cooperation with Hezbollah.

Syria also stations forces in the Bekaa.

No Hezbollah spokesmen could be reached for comment on the radio report. Police said they could not confirm or deny it. The Phalange Party that operates Voice of Lebanon is an enemy of Hezbollah.

A telephone caller purporting to speak for the Islamic Jihad terrorist group claimed it was responsible for Reed's abduction, but Islamic Jihad issued a typewritten statement Thursday denying the claim.

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, is believed made up of Shiite Moslems loyal to Iran.

The cafeteria director, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said the cafeteria was crowded with lunchtime shoppers at the time of the blast.

All the windows in the cafeteria were blown out and the square in front of the building was littered with glass shards and debris. The inside of the cafeteria was wrecked, but there was no fire.

The blast was the second bombing this week. On Monday, a bomb exploded in a post office at Paris city hall, killing one woman and injuring 19 people.

Two groups claimed responsibility for the blast, one calling itself the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners and the other calling itself the Partisans of Right and Freedom.

Agents complete anti-narcotics training as House OKs drug bill

DALLAS (AP) — As U.S. Border Patrol agents in four states finished anti-narcotics training and anticipated more weaponry in an effort to beef up the fight against drug smuggling, the U.S. House gave final approval to a bill designed to further escalate the war.

Provisions related to the U.S.-Mexico border included in the bill, approved late Thursday night in the House and now headed for the Senate, are instructions to the President to send military forces to U.S. borders to stop drug smuggling and give them power to make arrests.

Despite opposition from Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and others to military involvement in drug enforcement, the bill also orders radar aircraft deployed for surveillance and drug seizures, and use of the National Guard and Army Reserves.

Meanwhile, training specialists from Drug Enforcement Administration headquarters in Washington, D.C., and DEA agents from Dallas and elsewhere trained hundreds of agents last week on stopping drug trafficking.

The agents were from 39 Border Patrol stations in Texas, four in New Mexico, six in Arizona and 19 in California, said Philip Jordan, regional DEA special agent in charge.

"We're getting prepared for the harvest season of marijuana in Mexico. It gets really active until December," said Silvestre Reyes, chief patrol agent in McAllen.

Each of the patrol agents was granted new drug-fighting authority, Jordan said.

The training, which concluded last Friday, allowed the DEA to "cross designate" the border agents with the DEA's sweeping search and seizure powers, officials said.

"This is a tremendous boost to federal narcotics enforcement," Jordan said. "All the border states will benefit without a doubt."

"All along we've been trying to get them (patrol agents) better equipment, and of course that includes better firepower," Reyes said.

"We have received some additional weapons and we're anticipating additional body armor and some more night-vision equipment — current generation stuff," Reyes said.

Reyes said there have been fewer drug-related arrests and confiscations by the patrol in recent weeks than earlier in the year, due to a seasonal lull in marijuana importation.

Hispanic group wants probe of San Antonio police agency

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Mexican American Democrats asked U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese to sanction a special federal grand jury investigation of the San Antonio Police Department.

Ruben Bonilla, a Corpus Christi lawyer who is chairman of the statewide organization that includes most Hispanics elected to office in Texas, said the special federal grand jury's target should be "civil rights, obstruction of justice and conspiracy." The Mexican American Democrats leadership is so alarmed that action by the United States attorney general is the only option," Bonilla said.

The San Antonio Express-News reported Thursday that inquiries into six murders in the past four years had allegedly focused at times on slain Patrolman Stephen Smith and the fellow officer who police said killed him, Farrell Tucker.

Slugs found in the bodies of two of the men who have been slain have been matched with an AR-15 semi-automatic rifle recovered by police from Smith's apartment after Tucker killed Smith on Aug. 18, the newspaper reported.

Mattox asked to rule on papers' bingo games

Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — In a sudden about-face, the state comptroller Thursday rescinded an order made Wednesday that would have required the San Antonio Light, the San Antonio Express-News and the Houston Post to stop publishing bingo-type promotional games.

Comptroller Bob Bullock said a staff error in his office led officials to send letters to the newspapers telling them that the reader participation contests violate state bingo regulations.

Tony Proffitt, director of tax information, said Thursday morning that the officials who issued the letter without Bullock's knowledge Wednesday "were reprimanded quickly" and that Bullock himself had rescinded the order to stop the games and had instead personally requested Attorney General Jim Mattox to review the matter.

"Because of some erroneous information," Proffitt said, "the request not to play the games was put forward."

Proffitt said there were still legal questions whether the newspapers' games, which can be considered promotional, fall under the state's strict charity bingo game laws.

"It's a very, very gray area about promotions that simply use the bingo format," Proffitt said.

He declined to identify the officials responsible for the error, saying only they were "our bingo people and one of our legal people."

On Wednesday, Willis Whatley, associate deputy comptroller for legal affairs, had confirmed that "cease and desist" letters had been sent to the newspapers charging contests such as The Light's "Quarter Million Dollar Bingo" and the Express-News' "Wingo" are illegal under current bingo regulations because the newspapers are not licensed by the state as bingo operators.

The bingo law recently was altered to expand the definition of bingo to cover contests in which no financial consideration is paid. Whatley said. Under state law, bingo can be played legally only under the sponsorship of a licensed operator with the proceeds going toward some charitable purpose.

Light Publisher William C. Thomas had said Wednesday that The Light "will go forward" with its current promotional game pending a possible determination by the attorney general whether a court injunction might be sought to stop Quarter Million Dollar Bingo.

"We are law-abiding citizens and intend not to violate the law in any shape, form or fashion," Thomas said. However, the game will continue until or unless "it is presented to us that we are violating the law."

Houston Post Publisher Donald Hunt late Wednesday said he was not aware of the cease and desist letter from the comptroller's office.

"Certainly, we ran the same contest before and had no complaints. We had it checked out with our lawyers and everything checked out OK."

"I don't know what they're complaining about," Hunt said.

Express-News Publisher Charles O. Kilpatrick commented through a spokesman that he also was unaware of the action.

Temporary prison not welcomed by Mineral Wells

AUSTIN (AP) — The mayor of Mineral Wells is less than thrilled about state officials' decision to set up a temporary prison near his city.

Gov. Mark White and the Texas Department of Corrections on Thursday announced that as many as 300 inmates would be housed at a National Guard barracks at Fort Wolters in an effort to reduce prison crowding.

The barracks will be a minimum security facility with a fence around it, according to TDC spokesman David Nunnelee. The inmates will be trustees who have behaved well in prison, he said.

The building is about five miles from Mineral Wells. Mayor H. Arthur Zappe said local residents are not happy about having a prison — even a temporary one — nearby.

"If these trustees get out you can't tell what will happen," Zappe said.

The Fort Wolters facility will be used while the TDC awaits completion of 10 trusty camps that will hold a total of 2,000 inmates. The camps are being built at existing prison sites. The first two are scheduled for completion in March.

The others should be ready in May, according to Nunnelee.

White said he asked prison officials to find ways to increase capacity on an emergency basis. In addition to using Fort Wolters, TDC will transfer 150 illegal aliens from prisons to alien detention centers.

"The board is taking these steps in response to the unprecedented increases in prison admissions that have occurred in recent weeks. Admissions are up 20 percent over the prior year," White said.

"The citizens of Texas have indicated through the sentences they have handed down in our state courts that additional prison capacity is needed," he said.

Zappe said city officials were notified of the decision Wednesday.

"I would be very much opposed to it as a permanent institution, and most of our people feel the same way," he said in a telephone interview. "As a temporary situation we can live with it. (White) has assured us it's a temporary situation. Anyway, there's not much we can do about it."

Nunnelee said the barracks could prove vital in avoiding speeded-up release of inmates.

"It was available and we took it," he said of the TDC decision to use the building. "We're hoping that by doing this we can stay below the 95 percent capacity level until we can get the trusty camps on line. We've been awfully close for awhile."

Under state law, all inmates in the parole process get an additional 30 days of "good time" credit when the prisons reach 95 percent of capacity.

As of Thursday, the inmate count was 38,317, or 94.7 percent of capacity, Nunnelee said.

Man admits to killing girlfriend

ARLINGTON (AP) — Two hours after a woman dying of multiple stab wounds told police her boyfriend attacked her, the boyfriend drove up to an officer on Interstate 20 and admitted the crime, officials said.

Arlington police were traveling to Fort Worth to find John Betliskey Jr., 22, suspected in the death of his 26-year-old Arlington girlfriend, when they received a teletype that he had been arrested in Ranger, about 90 miles farther west, said Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson.

The suspect had pulled up behind a patrolman issuing a speeding ticket to another motorist on I-20 in Ranger and said he killed his girlfriend in Arlington, Ranger police said.

Betliskey was charged with murder in the death of Jean Rochelle Gasner and was being held Thursday night in Arlington City Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Police say Betliskey drove up to the Ranger officer about two hours after they received the phone call from the dying Gasner.

"She called, and she made a statement implicating this guy before she died," Anderson said.

Ms. Gasner was pronounced dead at Arlington Memorial Hospital shortly after 5 p.m. Wednesday, about 40 minutes after she called Arlington police from her residence, Anderson said.

R.O. Parkey, Tarrant County medical investigator, said Gasner suffered multiple stab wounds.

Ranger Police Capt. John Mackey said Betliskey approached Ranger patrolman Wesley Sumpter about 8:30 p.m. as Sumpter was ticketing a speeder.

"Officer Sumpter asked if he could help him, and he said, 'I just killed my girlfriend in Arlington,'" Mackey said.

Panel: Chronic pain alone should not be awarded benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are not many malingers on Social Security's disability rolls, but people should not be permitted to win benefits solely because they claim to be in chronic pain, says the Commission on the Evaluation of Pain.

The commission recommended Thursday that Congress extend a two-year-old statute, due to expire at the end of the year, that allows disability examiners to consider pain along with other medical or mental factors.

Four of the 20 commissioners filed a sharp dissent in which they asked, "What is it about pain alone that provokes such discrimination and the denial of a statutory entitlement?"

The majority of the commission, chaired by Dr. Kathleen M. Foley, chief of pain service and neurologist at the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, called for further study to determine how many cases there are in which a person claims to be suffering from such chronic conditions as back pain or severe migraines and has no other medical evidence of disability.

"Some commission members believe the granting of disability benefits may have unintended consequences resulting in reinforcement of chronic illness behavior," said the report, which Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen forwarded to Congress on Thursday.

The commission concluded, "There are simply not very many malingers in the Social Security disability applicant population," in part because the examiners and medical professionals are good at spotting fakers.

But the commission noted that pain remains subjective, defying objective measurement. It recommended that the government conduct rehabilitation experiments to try to get chronic pain-sufferers back into the workforce.

When the results from further studies and those experiments are in, the majority said, Congress should appoint a new pain commission to decide whether chronic pain alone should be classified a disability.

The dissenters, including three of the panel's 11 physicians, said:

"We see no adequate reason...why victims of disabling pain should be singled out for particularly harsh denials of the benefits that are routinely paid to victims of other disabling conditions such as heart disease, diabetes, alcoholism, obesity or paranoid schizophrenia."

"There is no good reason to wait for another study, another three years, another pain commission, to do our work," said Dr. Richard Black, a professor of anesthesiology and former director of the Pain Clinic at the Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions; Harold Carron, a professor of anesthesiology at the Georgetown University School of Medicine; and Marc Hertzman, a professor of psychiatry at the George Washington University Medical Center, along with David A. Koplow, a Georgetown law professor.

The commission, which included experts in nursing, rehabilitation and insurance, said pain is an issue in as many as half of the 55,000 disability claims now pending in federal courts.

Social Security pays almost $20 billion a year in disability benefits to 2.7 million workers and 1.2 million members of their families. The average family gets $691 a month. In addition, a related welfare program, Supplemental Security Income, pays almost $8 billion a year to 2.6 million blind and disabled poor people.

The commission said the typical chronic pain sufferer might be a middle-aged manual laborer who suffers a severe back injury in a fall and is out of work for months. "The pain persists despite apparent tissue healing," it said.

"The stereotypical chronic pain syndrome claimant is not a hypochondriac, a malingerer or a hysteric."

House votes to arm government in drug fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has voted to arm the government with expensive new tools to fight illegal drugs, but amendments requiring use of military muscle and renewing the federal death penalty leave the bill vulnerable to a Senate filibuster.

Despite an overwhelming 392-16 vote for final passage Thursday night, a bill that began with harmonious praise ended its initial journey through the House with angry bickering about its constitutionality.

But with all House seats up for election in November, even many of those who complained the loudest voted for the politically popular measure. The "no" votes came basically from liberals and staunch conservative Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., who unsuccessfully tried to reduce the bill's cost.

House Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., called some parts of the bill an "attack on the Constitution" and predicted it would be "filibustered to death" in the Senate. Still, he voted for the measure.

Rep. Tommy Robinson, D-Ark., said he was so delighted by the bill that he thought he had "died and gone to heaven."

Although the bill is an authorization that only sets spending ceilings, its price tag would be extraordinary during an era of balanced budget fever.

If all programs are fully financed, Congressional Budget Office figures peg the cost at more than $4 billion over three years and more than $6 billion over five years.

Just as extraordinary were the deadlines set for the president to make use of the armed forces.

He would have 30 days to "deploy equipment and personnel sufficient to halt" smugglers at the borders and arrest them when in hot pursuit. The bill also stipulates that within 45 days, "The president shall substantially halt the unlawful penetration of United States borders by aircraft and vessels."

Major provisions of the bill would, among other things, increase penalties for violators and establish a 20-year-to-life sentence for trafficking and manufacturing that results in serious injury or death. The legislation also would provide money for additional drug enforcement agents and prison construction, increase Coast Guard personnel and provide equipment for airborne and seaborne interception of drugs.

The legislation would use a broad approach, pouring money into enforcement, education, rehabilitation, crop eradication, and withholding aid from recalcitrant producer countries.

The military amendment, sponsored by Reps. Robinson and Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., passed 237-137. In other significant changes made on the House floor, lawmakers:

— Voted 296-112 to permit imposition of the federal death penalty for individuals involved in a continuing criminal enterprise, who intentionally cause the death of another individual. The change was sponsored by Rep. George W. Gekas, R-Pa.

— By a 259-153 tally, approved language that would permit use of improperly obtained evidence seized in warrantless searches, provided officers acted in good faith. Sponsored by Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif., the change is not limited to drug cases. The Supreme Court already has made a "good faith" exception in cases where warrants were obtained.

— Voted 242-171 for an amendment that would give state and local law enforcement agencies a bonanza in federal grants to fight illegal drugs. The original bill would have allocated $300 million for the grants in fiscal years 1987 and 1988, but the change, sponsored by Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., would raise the figure to $1.3 billion. The state-local matching share would be reduced from 50 percent in the original bill to 10 percent.

— Approved 355-54 a provision for life imprisonment without parole for a second conviction of anyone 21 years or older who sells a dangerous drug to a child or teen-ager, or sells the drug on or near school grounds. The amendment was sponsored by Rep. Ken Kramer, R-Colo.

The inflexible requirements for the military were opposed by the Justice and Defense departments. Pentagon chief spokesman Robert Simr said, "Generally, Secretary (Caspar) Weinberger's view is that it is a bad precedent to use the Army as a police force." Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland commented, "The attorney general has expressed his own misgivings about such legislation and has said that any such legislation should at least make this a matter of discretion for the president instead of being mandatory."

Bullock's bullseyes

Over the nearly 12 years he has served as the state's chief financial officer, we've not always found Bob Bullock's revenue projections pleasant reading but they have been nonetheless exceedingly accurate indicators of Texas' fiscal health.

Bullock is the one, you'll recall, who originally forecast the state deficit and who kept updating his budgetary shortfall prediction until Gov. Mark White could no longer ignore the fiscal crisis and called legislators into special session.

Now, as legislators are in the initial days of yet another special session after failing to resolve the budget crisis in this summer's first, Bullock has come forward with a new budget prediction. This time he's reducing his earlier budget deficit projection of $3.5 billion to about $2.8 billion. That's right, reducing it.

But we join Bullock and a number of other Texans who are warning legislators not to get overly optimistic because of the comptroller's new projection. It was based on savings approved during the first summer session and other updated financial information. The financial picture for Texas simply hasn't improved much — if any — in the past month or six weeks.

In fact, Bullock went so far as to tell legislators as his budget prediction was made: "Again, I would caution you that the Texas economy shows no significant signs of upturn within this period. While oil prices may appear to be stable, and even strengthening, this is already anticipated in our estimate, as is an expected decline in oil prices in the spring of 1987."

That is definitely not pleasant reading for us or for state legislators. But, as we noted at the start, while Bullock's predictions down through the years haven't always been pleasant, they have been consistently accurate. Legislators can't really ask for anything more.

What they should do is act as quickly as possible to resolve the continuing fiscal crisis in order to protect the state's vital services for the future.

Another View:

Gen. Pinochet's war

Chile is "in a war," Gen. Augusto Pinochet declared after he survived an assassination attempt Sunday night. Who is the enemy? In his view, it is the vast majority of the Chilean people.

Seizing on the assault that killed five of his guards, the general has declared a new state of siege. Tanks have rolled into residential areas. Moderate leaders of the sizable opposition have been thrown in jail. A well-known journalist has been found murdered after being picked up by men who reportedly identified themselves as police. Even conservative publications have been shut down.

Thursday will be the 13th anniversary of Chile's military rule. The crude repression of a people hungering for democracy is by now a familiar story. But an even more depressing stage may be at hand: the confrontation between armed extremes of the left and right.

For months, in the face of a broadly based opposition movement that was firmly committed to nonviolent change, the regime had been telling Chileans that their only choice lay between the menacing violence of an armed left and acquiescence in military rule. Such claims met a mostly skeptical response; two magazine editors were recently jailed for a story questioning the regime's account of finding arms caches.

But now, the ambush of the general's motorcade, presumably by leftists, has lent plausibility to his crackdown. "People don't realize the danger we are in," the general insists. However effective in the short run, this willful campaign of polarization invites disaster. Neither the 70-year-old general nor his regime will last forever. Why strengthen the guerrilla left by driving all opposition underground? Chile was a mature democracy for generations before the 1973 coup against the left-leaning Allende government. More wisely led, the country would surely choose a moderate course.

The Reagan administration perceives the dangers in Pinochet's course. That is why it resists the agitation on his behalf by Senator Jesse Helms. That is why Ambassador Harry Barnes maintains highly visible contacts with leaders of the nonviolent opposition. And that is why the State Department, in condemning the ambush this week, also expressed proper concern about the state of siege.

The administration will soon have to decide if the Pinochet regime has sufficiently improved its respect for human rights to warrant a U.S. vote in favor of multinational bank loans to Chile. Far from improving conditions, General Pinochet is turning bad to worse.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Sept. 12, the 255th day of 1986. There are 110 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Sept. 12, 1609, English explorer Henry Hudson sailed into the river that now bears his name.

On this date:
In 1814, the Battle of North Point was fought near Baltimore during the War of 1812.

In 1880, author and journalist H.L. Mencken was born in Baltimore.

In 1913, Olympic legend Jesse Owens was born in Danville, Ala.

In 1943, during World War II, German paratroopers took Benito Mussolini from the hotel where he was being held by the Italian government.

In 1953, Massachusetts Sen. John F. Kennedy married Jacqueline Lee Bouvier in Newport, R.I.

In 1960, Democratic presidential nominee John F. Kennedy confronted the issue of his Roman Catholic faith by telling a Protestant group in Houston, "I do not speak for my church on public matters, and the church does not speak for me."

In 1974, Emperor Haile Selassie was deposed by Ethiopia's military, after ruling for 58 years.

In 1977, black student leader Steven Biko died while in a South African jail, triggering an international outcry.

Ten years ago: Five Croatian nationalists who had hijacked a TWA jetliner during a domestic U.S. flight, forcing it to fly to Paris, surrendered to authorities.

Five years ago: The White House announced that President Reagan would trim his proposed Pentagon spending increase by $13 billion over the following three years.

One year ago: The British government announced the defection of Oleg A. Gordievski, a key Soviet intelligence agent.

Today's birthdays: Actress Linda Gray is 46. Singer Maria Muldaur is 43. Singer Barry White is 42.

Thought for today: "Think wrongly if you please — but in all cases, think for yourself." — Gotthold Lessing, German dramatist-critic (1729-1781).

WHOM TO WRITE

Following is a list of the names and addresses of various state and federal officials Midlanders may wish to contact from time-to-time:

PRESIDENT: Ronald Reagan (R), The President, The White House, Washington, D.C. 20500.

SENATORS: Lloyd Bentsen (D) and Phil Gramm (R), Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515.

REPRESENTATIVE: Tom Loeffler (R), 1212 Longworth Building, Washington, D.C. 20515; or Room 206, George Mahon Federal Building, 200 E. Wall, Midland, Texas 79701. Also 33 W. Twihg, San Angelo, Texas 76903.

GOVERNOR: Mark White (D), State Capitol Building, Austin, Texas 78701.

Donations gave State new splendor

WASHINGTON — A tipster on Capitol Hill telephoned the other day with a real shocker: Secretary of State George Shultz had spent $2 million on a rug for his office. It wasn't true.

But in checking out the astonishing allegation, we turned up some fascinating information on life at the top — the top — the top — the top floors of the State Department building, that is.

A lot of money has indeed been spent recently for improvements and fancy furnishings in 10 suites on the seventh floor — including Shultz's office — and on the eighth floor, which is used for diplomatic receptions, banquets, tea parties and other high-toned affairs. Another $2 million will be spent on antique furniture.

But the money is being donated, and the only really valuable rug in Shultz's private office is an Oriental worth about $20,000 — a pittance by Washington carpeting standards.

How did Foggy Bottom acquire all this for nothing? It was accomplished by Clement Conger, 73, a smooth-talking, arm-twisting Virginia gentleman. A newspaperman in his youth, he turned to a higher calling as a Foreign Service officer and then curator of the State Department's diplomatic reception rooms (and later of the White House).

"The Grand Acquisitor" specializes in persuading millionaires, corporations and assorted patriotic patrons of the arts to donate Federal Period antiques or ante up the money he needs to buy them. Among the donors is Shultz himself, who has kicked in $10,000 a year ever since he became secretary ("I didn't ask him, either," said Conger), and Shultz's deputy, John C. Whitehead.

Though he derides the original decor of the top floors as Airport Lounge Modern, Conger is both a pragmatist and an eclectic. As a result, Shultz's office is a mixture of old and new. Mahogany floors (and the Oriental rug) replaced the institutional wall-to-wall carpeting. Cherry paneling covers the walls and the room's acoustical-tile ceiling has been redone.

In Shultz's study, family pictures share space with portraits of James Madison and John Quincy Adams. The leather-covered phone (with direct line to the White House) sits on an 18th century Pembroke table. A personal computer is hidden in an antique desk.

But the rug, you say: What about the rug and the $2 million? Was it all a figment of imagination?

Not exactly. Conger's redecoration of the enormous Ben Franklin Dining Room on the eighth floor cost $2.5 million, and it did include a huge, expensive rug.

"Nobody's ever had a rug this big," Conger proudly told our reporter David Davis. It's 90 feet long and 36 feet wide and cost $253,000, plus $25,000 to lay it. There are 50 stars woven into the background, American eagles at each end and part of the Great Seal of the Republic in the center, exactly beneath the Great Seal in the ceiling.

One of the biggest problems with the rug was getting rid of the pinkish stand-in rug that it replaced. Despite the celebrity feet that had trod upon the old rug, Conger's assistant, Gail Serfaty, found there were no takers. She couldn't even give it away to the Salvation Army. Goodwill or Mitch Schneider's homeless shelter. Finally, a group in Virginia that cares for the homeless took it off her hands.

Incidentally, not everything in Conger's kingdom is real. The Corinthian columns in the Franklin Dining Room are faked to look like red French marble. The genuine articles would have gone crashing through all eight floors.

AIRWAVE ANXIETIES: The federal government has belatedly decided to stop releasing lists of the radio frequencies used by various government agencies, declaring them classified. But Bob Grove, a communications enthusiast and publisher in North Carolina, has been selling a list of the 160,000 frequencies since 1962. Grove says he's sure the government knows he's offering the now-classified list for sale, but no one has complained to him. Soviet embassy officials regularly obtained the list of frequencies, which are now no longer available to the public.

At a lower level, police and other law-enforcement agencies have increasingly taken to scrambling their radio communications, both to keep crooks from knowing their plans and the press from getting tips on stories. Now a product is on the market for less than $50 that will put the Mafia and the media back in touch with the boys in blue. It's a device specifically designed to de-scramble law-enforcement communications. This poses no threat to national security, because the gizmo can't penetrate the scrambling techniques used by the military and other sensitive agencies.

JAMES RESTON

Continuation of alliance should be debated

LONDON — During every American presidential election since the last world war, Europe has asked the same nervous question: What will happen to the Alliance after Roosevelt, after Truman, after Eisenhower and so on. Now it asks: will it hold together after Reagan?

The answer this time is somewhat different, for much will depend on what Britain, West Germany and France do after their elections in the next two years, and this time it is America that is asking the nervous questions.

On what conditions will the United States be expected to continue the part it has played in maintaining the peace for more than two generations? Is it to keep sending its men and the weapons it thinks essential to their defense, or just the men with only the weapons the allies approve?

These are not mere Fleet Street questions. The British must hold a general election by June of 1988, and the Labor Party, which has been running ahead in the popularity polls, has put some stiff conditions on an American military presence under a Labor government.

If elected, Labor Party leaders have promised to remove all U.S. nuclear weapons from Britain, to cancel the British government's plans to buy modern nuclear Trident submarines, to propose a moratorium on the deployment of new strategic weapons systems and to support a negotiated freeze on the deployment of intermediate-range missiles in Europe.

Two points should be made about this: first, these are not vague party promises, like the casual jargon of U.S. political platforms, but part of a specific policy manifesto; second, all these proposals have been rejected in advance by the U.S. government.

In West Germany, the new leader of the Social Democratic Party, Johannes Rau, has called for the removal of U.S. nuclear weapons from that country, but this is less of a challenge, for his chance of defeating Chancellor Helmut Kohl is remote.

It is true that Prime Minister Thatcher has a very large majority in the House of Commons and might be able to hold off the new leadership of the Labor Party under Neil Kinnock.

Kinnock has made progress by concentrating on domestic issues and would prefer to fight the election on the issues of unemployment, public services and urban decay.

Accordingly, comparatively little attention has been paid to the political consequences in the United States of his unilateral disarmament policies. Already The Economist, ahead of public opinion as usual, has observed that "politicians and officials of all stripes regard as absurd the proposition that American troops might stay in Britain if American nuclear weapons did not. Domestic political pressure in America would make it impossible."

How could it be that in Britain, of all nations, a major political party could present such a threat to the unity of the most successful political and military alliance of the century?

There are several possible explanations. Kinnock and other leaders of the Labor Party are different from the Callaghans and Healsys who went through the post-war reconstruction of Europe with the New Deal, Fair Deal, Marshall Plan leaders in Washington.

Second, they take a more hopeful attitude toward the Soviet Union, particularly since the arrival of Mikhail Gorbachev and the other new leaders in Moscow who have played to the fears of nuclear war.

Third, many socialist leaders in Britain do not like President Reagan's marketplace ideology, or his militaristic and moralistic rhetoric, or his public diplomacy or his Hollywood television popularity.

Their dilemma, however, is that they don't know what to do with the United States and they don't know what to do without it. What asks The Economist, would they do without America's six divisions and 700 fighting aircraft in Europe? How would they replace the American Second Fleet in the Atlantic or the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean?

There is one other critical question: Do they know how pleased the Soviets would be to get rid of the Americans in Europe? This has been Moscow's principal objective ever since the beginning of the Cold War. Or ironically, how pleased many Americans would be if Western Europe, with a population larger than the U.S. and more than a third of the world's trade, finally agreed to unite and provide for a much larger part of its own defense?

No doubt these questions will eventually be debated in the coming elections here and in the United States. And the sooner the better.

CHARLEY REESE

Americans don't look for man on white horse

One of the fortunate things about America is that most of the people, whether they think of themselves as liberals or conservatives, are fundamentally pragmatists.

It's only on the fringes in either direction that you find the ideologues. The ideologues are people who meet and marry a theory and after the wedding have no use at all for the real world or the people in it.

They are people with The Right Answer. Out of power, they are boring and argumentative. In power, they are dangerous. People who have The Right Answer often try to produce The Final Solution.

We have been most fortunate in America. Our system by and large produces pragmatic leaders who, whatever their faults and mistakes, have a basic decency and enough self-doubt that they are not inclined to kill people who differ with them.

Since we are privileged to choose our own leaders, we can congratulate ourselves that we are not the kind of people who are always looking for someone to salute. The great atrocity-committers in this century have all been men who were convinced beyond all doubt that they had The Right Answer and The Final Solution — Lenin, Stalin, Hitler, Mao, and Pol Pot. You have to be extraordinarily sure of yourself to order as many millions of executions as these characters did.

I can think of a lot of American presidents whose policies or ideas I don't agree with, but not one that I dislike or fear. I can't think of one I don't respect. Man, there are a lot of people in this world who wish they could say that about their country's leaders.

That statement may produce letters from Reagan-haters, Nixon-haters, Carter-haters, even a few left-over FDR-haters. Well, that's my point. No American is justified in injecting hate into American politics. The most conservative of Americans is not justified in hating the most liberal of our presidents nor is the most liberal justified in hating our most conservative presidents. Hey, they've all been fundamentally decent men.

Sometimes in the heat of political campaigns we lose our perspective and in these dog days of late summer when the polls are out there sweating on the stumps, I thought it would be a good time to toss in a little perspective.

We can feel very good about ourselves that as a people we never fell for either communism or fascism, though both made a run at us. We've grown mighty fond of some politicians — Franklin Roosevelt, for example — but we never surrendered the country to any one man. We've had our share of rascals and even incompetents but never a tyrant. We've had ideologues come along, but we always end up choosing a pragmatist.

We can thank our republican heritage from the American Revolution that we are disinclined to look for men on white horses. We have no tradition of kings or aristocrats. We never developed the habit of kneeling. We have to be reminded to take our hats off.

Nor are we, as a people, obsessed with government, though I sometimes think my colleagues in journalism are. Most Americans are concerned primarily with their private pursuits and tend to be indifferent to government until they have a problem or government steps on their toes.

That's probably more of a virtue than many political scientists think. People obsessed with government or looking to government to run their lives are apt to get into trouble. It's hard to be a man on a white horse when nobody pays you much attention.

We have problems. We have faults. But, Lord, we are a blessed people whether we deserve it or not. We have a Constitution which, though it has been bent and stretched, has nevertheless remained an anchor. We have an independent judiciary, however much we may be annoyed at times with its decisions. We have a mighty army that not once, though it's always had the power to do so, even thought of taking over the government. We have our Bill of Rights which, though we argue about them and sometimes have ignored them, have remained as the fixed ideals of a majority of Americans of all political persuasions.

That's a lot to be thankful for.

NATION IN BRIEF

Presidential intentions of Bush to come next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush's announcement of his presidential intentions probably will come in late summer or early fall of 1987.

Bush's press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater said Thursday that Bush had decided to delay the long-expected announcement. Since the 1984 election, Bush had indicated he would make an announcement after the 1986 elections in November. Most recently, he had suggested he would reveal his plans early next year for the 1988 race.

"The vice president keeps suggesting a later point in time," Fitzwater said. "I would guess the announcement will come sometime in the late summer or fall of 1987. That's assuming that he decides to announce."

Fitzwater acknowledged that the delay "does represent a change in thinking...but I think as time has passed it has just looked like moving it later in the year would be preferable."

Chrysler argues EPA claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chrysler Corp. is disputing a claim by the Environmental Protection Agency that 93,000 cars violate federal air pollution standards.

The EPA on Thursday ordered Chrysler to recall Dodge Omni, Dodge 024, Plymouth Horizon and Plymouth TC3 models from the 1981 model year that are equipped with the 1.7-liter engine and manual transmissions.

The EPA said tests at its Springfield, Va., lab showed the cars averaged 1.4 grams per mile of oxides of nitrogen, well above the permissible 1.0 gram per mile. Oxides of nitrogen are a major precursor in the formation of smog.

But Chrysler spokeswoman Karen Stuart in Highland Park, Mich., read a statement saying Chrysler believed the EPA's contention "has not been proven" because the tests did not follow established EPA procedures.

In particular, the humidity at the Springfield lab was higher than it was at the EPA's Ann Arbor, Mich., labs when those models passed the certification tests that permit them to be sold, she said.

But Andy Brooks, an engineer in the recall branch of EPA's Office of Mobile Sources, said both labs applied the proper correction factor for humidity in computing grams-per-mile emissions for raw tailpipe data.

Debated labor study to run

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite objections from three of its commissioners, the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights will go ahead and publish a staff study concluding that the gap in earnings between black men and white men narrowed significantly between 1940 and 1980.

The commission debated three hours Thursday before voting 5-3 to accept the study, which the three dissenting commissioners charged was simply a rehash of a Rand Corp. study completed earlier this year for the Department of Labor.

"In stark contrast to the emphasis of this report, black male unemployment and underemployment remain serious problems in our country," Commissioners Mary Frances Berry, Blandina Cardenas Ramirez and Francis Guess said in a statement distributed after the vote.

The three complained that the study downplayed the significance of the enforcement of civil rights laws in income gains by black men. Ms. Berry suggested the staff had presented the data in a way that purposely understated the impact of such laws.

The staff study, made public last week, said real earnings of black men increased 300 percent between 1940 and 1980, while earnings of white men increased 163 percent.

Shuttle funds considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee will consider next week a Pentagon budget for the upcoming fiscal year that includes almost $3 billion to build a new space shuttle to replace the destroyed Challenger.

When that panel completes action on the bill, it will be made part of a continuing resolution, a congressional budget device used to pay for federal agencies for which Congress has not yet enacted a separate spending bill.

The Appropriations defense subcommittee approved the measure, which appropriates $264.5 billion to pay for most of the Pentagon's programs, by a voice vote Thursday.

A similar bill appropriating money for the Pentagon for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1 is now on the floor of the Democratic-controlled House and it eventually will be made part of that chamber's continuing resolutions. Differences between the two resolutions will eventually be reconciled by a conference committee.

Remains to be returned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Vietnamese government plans to turn repatriate the remains of an individual believed to be a soldier missing from the Vietnam War to U.S. officials later this month, the Pentagon says.

Arrangements are being made now for U.S. officials to receive the remains in Hanoi on Sept. 17 and then fly them to the Army's Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu for identification, the Pentagon said Thursday.

"The U.S. government appreciates this repatriation of remains and hopes it represents just one of many continued steps to resolve this longstanding humanitarian issue," the Defense Department said in a prepared statement.

The Pentagon currently lists 2,434 Americans as missing from the war in Southeast Asia. Of those, 1,789 are listed as missing in either North or South Vietnam.

Contra aid bill pushed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is pressing Congress to act quickly on a bill providing $100 million in aid to Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole says.

Dole, R-Kan., released a letter Thursday from the president urging speedy final action on the bill. In a brief Senate floor speech, Dole promised to try to meet the request.

The Republican-controlled Senate last month voted approval of the aid package, which includes $70 million for military purposes and $30 million for non-military aid such as food and clothing.

The Democratic-run House earlier approved a similar proposal, but final action has been stalled because the aid package has been attached to an unrelated bill appropriating more than $8 billion for military construction projects.

Differences between the two versions of the bill will now have to be ironed out by a House-Senate conference committee. The committee has not begun meeting, but final action is expected before Congress adjourns Oct. 3.

Brand of cheese causing illness, being recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Virginia is recalling a brand of cheese distributed in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area after discovery of a bacteria in one sample that can cause a flu-like illness and sometimes death.

State officials notified the Food and Drug Administration Thursday of the recall of Buena Ventura brand Cujada Salvadorina cheese, manufactured by the Buena Ventura Partnership based in Fairfax, Va.

A sample taken from a store in Falls Church, Va., tested positive for listeria monocytogenes, according to FDA spokesman William Grigg.

Grigg said probably between 60 and 300 pounds of the cheese is manufactured a week and distributed in the District of Columbia, Virginia and Maryland.

"We just know that Virginia stopped production and issued a recall," Grigg said Thursday. "I don't know if this is being done on the basis of preliminary or firmer findings. A recall doesn't necessarily mean that a contaminated lot has gotten into consumers' hands," he said.

Grigg said he knew of no illnesses that had been reported. State officials could not be reached Thursday night.

The District of Columbia cleared store shelves Thursday of Buena Ventura products after learning of the Virginia test results, according to Benjamin Johnson of the D.C. Department of Consumer and Regulatory Affairs.

Listeria contamination caused state and federal health officials in California last year to recall a Mexican style soft cheese.

Pleasant weather in area forecast for this weekend

From Staff and Wire Reports

Permian Basin residents can look for pleasant weather Saturday. The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for fair skies with a high in the upper 80s and winds out of the south at five to 15 mph.

The NWS forecast for tonight calls for a low in the middle 60s and fair skies. Winds will be out of the south-east at five to 15 mph.

Thursday's high was 20 degrees below the record high of 102 set for that date in 1930. This morning's low of 57 was six degrees above the record low set in 1975.

STATE

A cold front moving southeastward through Texas early today brought showers and some heavy thunderstorms in its wake, and forecasters expected additional rainfall later.

The front stretched across the Lone Star State from Del Rio to Lufkin and into Louisiana. Skies were partly cloudy in areas close behind and just ahead of the front. Further behind the front, North and West Texas had clear skies.

Clear skies also prevailed over the Rio Grande valley of South Texas.

Winds were southerly in South Texas, ahead of the front, and in the High Plains where south wind returned to the region.

Northerly winds flowed behind the front in West, North and East Texas at 5 to 10 mph.

Early morning temperatures in the north half of Texas behind the front ranged from the 50s to low 70s. South of the front, temperatures were in the mid-70s and 80s.

Extremes were 51 degrees at Marfa and 83 degrees at Galveston.

NATION

Rain spread from the Midwest into the South today while most of the West had fair weather.

Showers and thunderstorms extended from the lower Great Lakes across eastern sections of the Ohio Valley, the Tennessee Valley and northern Louisiana into south central Texas.

Rain also spread across upstate New York and northern New England.

Rain was scattered in Michigan, where flash flood warnings were posted in southern sections of the state because of three days of thunderstorms that dumped up to 13 inches of rain.

Skies were clear to partly cloudy across the Western half of the nation, with only a few showers in southern Montana.

Lee war machine gets first Bulldog test

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

After a 48-7 bombing of Lubbock Coronado last week, Midland Lee brings its 1986 war machine to Memorial Stadium for the first time under new head coach Earl Miller at 8 p.m. today against the Plainview Bulldogs.

Coach Greg Sherwood's Plainview team dropped a 26-0 decision to Class 4A state-ranked Lubbock Estacado last week, but Miller isn't expecting an easy outing in his first test against a Bulldog team. The Midland High Bulldogs are on the Sept. 26 horizon.

"We've played Plainview five times since I've been at Lee, and you better be ready to play," notes Miller. "Everyone in the state knows Sherwood. He's past president of the Texas High School Coaches Association and I think he invented the Wing-T. His teams are always sound fundamentally and we know we'll be facing a well-coached team."

But Sherwood would be satisfied if his squad came out of this game with just a good showing.

"Estacado whipped us every way you can think of and Lee is better than Estacado. They have team quickness and a great swarming defense. It's a typical Lee team. Earl's team looks just like all those others that Lee has had under Spike Dykes, Jack Tayrien and Gil Bartosh," said Sherwood.

"What has hurt us this year is that we had five starters move out of town since spring training. We don't even have the same team we had during spring training."

"We'll have to be errorless to stay in the game with Lee. It's just a tough, tough deal to play Lee. We think we may be a pretty good team as time goes along, but I hope opening with Estacado and Lee doesn't destroy our confidence."

The two teams last met in the 1984 bi-district playoffs in Lubbock's Jones Stadium. Lee won that outing by a 42-7 margin.

"Plainview has a great back in Willie Ansley. He was a freshman when we played them in the playoffs and he ran through us a lot before he got hurt," says Miller. "I'm sure he's better as a junior now."

Sherwood, however, lists 10 juniors and a sophomore starting among his top 22 players. Seven of them are on offense and all of the Bulldog backfield are juniors. The sophomore is 280-pound defensive tackle James Cargill.

"Cargill is one of the largest players I've ever had, but we're basically a small team this year," said Sherwood, who used to give Bartosh nightmares with his beefy teams in the late '70s. "We think Cargill is going to be a good player, but he got pushed around pretty good by Estacado."

Lee, on the other hand, rolled up big offensive numbers last week. The Rebels' 482 total yards was the best offensive showing among 4-A teams.

Among that total was 151 yards rushing by quarterback Rodney Johnson, who had one run of 99 yards. He also threw for 58 yards and another TD. Halfback Dennis Sterling had 133 yards rushing in only six carries and caught a 42-yard scoring pass from Johnson for a total of four touchdowns.

"Dennis Sterling's stock went up in my book after the Coronado game," said Miller. "He had some great blocks in front of him from the other halfbacks, but he ran hard and fast when he got the ball."

Norman Johnson's view of tonight's games

MBT makes Hogan Park debut today

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Midland Baptist Temple football coach David Pearcy doesn't let the lack of numbers dampen his enthusiasm for this year's six-man squad.

"We're a little short on people, but we're looking better this year, a whole lot better," says Pearcy of his 11-man roster.

MBT opened the season Friday in El Paso against Northeast Christian Academy in disappointing fashion, falling 20-6.

Today, MBT opens its home season with a 7 p.m. game against New Life Christian on the field at Hogan Park.

Junior Josh Wasson directs this year's offense for Pearcy, and he has some strong young runners to hand the ball off to in freshman Keith Blake and another junior Eli Kuhlmann.

Blake, the brother of lightweight boxer Robin Blake, is starting his second year with MBT after playing in 1985 as an eighth-grader. Injuries to the first-string tailback last season forced Blake into the tailback slot, and this season he accepts that job from Day One.

"He's really developed some good moves in the backfield," Pearcy said. "I think by the time he graduates he's really going to be a boss."

A preseason, non-football related injury to his finger has hampered Blake's progress so far, however, and Kuhlmann has stepped up from his fullback position to fill the bill at tailback.

Heath Kuhlmann; from back left, safety Eli Kuhlmann, linebacker Keith Blake and safety Jeff Maius.

"He's a good smooth ballplayer, and with a little experience, I think he could be the star of the show," Pearcy said.

At 6-3, 190, Kuhlmann is better suited for fullback, however, and the MBT attack will improve upon Blake's return to the lineup.

Up front, center Bob Callendar anchors the line which includes Eli's freshman brother Heath and the only senior on the team Dale Sierman.

"Our front line on defense looks excellent, I've been very impressed," Pearcy said, referring to the Kuhl-mann brothers and Blake.

Sierman doubles as the team's nose guard on defense where safeties Louis Shanks, Chris McKinney, Jeff Maius and Bobby Floyd share time.

Pats manhandle division mate

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — It might not look that way on the scoreboard, but everyone at Giants Stadium knew the New York Jets had been manhandled by the New England Patriots.

The final score Thursday night was 20-6. It could have been 40-6 for all that it mattered. The AFC champion Patriots dominated the Jets, who also lost star running back Freeman McNeil for four to six weeks with a dislocated right elbow.

"We can do that to anybody," claimed linebacker Don Blackmon. "We never take a thing for granted out there. We haven't made a lot of changes, we play a basic defense and they know we're coming at them every play."

The Patriots, who got a pair of touchdown catches from Tony Collins, have allowed only three field goals in two games. They are 2-0 and will lead the AFC East regardless of Sunday's results.

"We're more confident this year," Blackmon said after the Patriots held the Jets to 33 and 47-yard field goals by Pat Leahy and didn't allow New York close to the end zone in the second half. "We believe in each other, that we can do anything we put our minds to."

The Patriots' offense put the Jets in ideal position on the third play from scrimmage when quarterback Tony Eason fumbled when hit by nose tackle Joe Klecko. Linebacker Lance Mehl dived on the ball at the New England 10.

But it took the Patriots' defense just one play to get the ball back, as nose tackle Toby Williams stripped the ball from fullback Tony Paige and end Brent Williams grabbed it.

"(Safety) Fred Marion came out on the field and said we can't let them score, we got to get a turnover," Blackmon said. "First play, we got an arm in there and the ball popped loose. I think that set the tone."

The Patriots nearly scored on an option pass by Craig James to Irving Fryar later in the period, but Fryar dropped the ball. Still, New England continued to drive and Collins sneaked into the left flat to haul in a 6-yard pass from Eason.

"Tony just faked a handoff to Craig and nobody went with me," Collins said.

Jets quarterback Ken O'Brien, who hit on 16 of 30 passes for 180 yards, threw the first of two interceptions — he also was sacked four times — on the next series. Cornerback Ronnie Lippett tipped, then caught a pass intended for Al Toon at the New England 15.

Tony Franklin missed a 40-yard field goal try, then the Jets moved 53 yards in 13 plays for Leahy's 33-yard field goal. On that drive, in which New York had the ball for 7:28 after holding it for only 4:33 in the first quarter, McNeil suffered his injury. He fell on his right arm when tackled following a 7-yard gain.

"Freeman's a big part of our offense," Johnny Hector, his replacement, said. "But I don't think anyone said, 'Let's give up because Freeman is out.'"

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Tall City rich in class runners

After one week of the high school football season, the Tall City had three backs over the 100-yard rushing mark in Midland Lee's Rodney Johnson (151), Dennis Sterling (133) and Midland Lee's Anthony Adkison (148) to start things off. Look for much more of that in the future.

In fact, we may see as many as six backs in a one-week span turn in those numbers. In addition to the above, MHS' Tyrone Oliver and Jaime Madrid and Lee backs Joe Woodard and Durian Jenkins all have the 100-yard night capabilities.

THE BIGGEST surprise was Sterling's 133-yard effort on just six carries. He scored four times, including a pass play for 42 yards. He has won himself a lot more playing time after that. The biggest complaint from Midland High fans at Memorial Stadium last Friday night was the fact that the field wasn't marked with yard-line markers on the field itself. It was very difficult to tell where the ball was on any given play.

Gil Bartosh, Midland athletic director, said Thursday that he would try and have the field marked soon. Heavy rain was one reason given for the lack of a marked field for the MHS-Lubbock Monterey contest.

Rain also kept the Memorial Stadium field from being mowed prior to the MHS-Monterey game, but no one can say that caretaker S.L. Vann didn't have a solid bed of grass on the field. Vann has the best turf I've seen in many years and it looks even better after he got his mower on it.

I may have been a little tough on KPEJ-TV last week when writing about its Mojo-laden lineup for Saturday replay. We still will get Odessa Permian games seven times, but Memorial Stadium is part of the problem.

BARTOSH REPORTS that the station approached him about doing some games from the worst stadium in the league, but Memorial wouldn't stand up to the pressure, according to Bartosh.

"We just don't have room in the press box for TV on a regular basis. We even had an engineer come in and see about building a platform on top of the press box, but the engineer said it would be unworkable," said Bartosh. "We also talked about adding to the press box or building a platform on the East side of the stadium. An addition to the press box would cost as much as building a new one and a platform on the other side would have to be supported all the way to the ground and the school board thought that would cost too much also. We had to tell KPEJ that we couldn't do it, but gave them permission to telecast any of our out of town games."

So, Lee and MHS have one TV replay each. Crushed again by Memorial Stadium. Wonder if we could work out a deal to play all our home games at Ratliff Stadium?

The quote of the week comes from former Lee line coach David Browning, who lost a 16-4 decision to Cleveland in his head coaching debut at 4A Willis. "We had new uniforms and looked like we walked out of Nieman-Marcus. Unfortunately, we played like we were coming out of J.C. Penny."

Picking District 4-5A games is sure a lot of fun, especially after a 7-0 perfect week the first time out. Here's this week's picks:

Midland Lee 28, Plainview 6: Surely the Rebels are two points better than Lubbock Estacado and the Bulldogs scored only seven points against Lee when they were a playoff team. And this one is for Stan Cobb.

Midland High 35, Andrews 7: The Mustangs have shown no offensive punch, scoring only once in two scrimmages and one game. The MHS speed should be even more apparent this week on a dry field, but Andrews will score.

Odessa High 29, El Paso Austin 12: Both teams lost big last week, but when 4-5A goes against any El Paso team, bet on 4-5A.

Odessa Permian 42, El Paso Ysleta 8: Both teams were winners last week, so I guess that means that Mojo won't score 55 points this week.

San Angelo 30, Austin McCallum 10: The Bobcats don't have a road game until the sixth week of the season against Midland High. We'll wait till then to see if the "obkittles" will fall.

Ablene High 10, Sweetwater 8: This is the making of a barn-burning fantasy, but the edge goes to the Eagles because they learned last week that they can come from behind late in a game. Wichita Falls 28, Abilene Cooper 6: The woes of the Cougars continue, but they have hope next week against Lubbock Monterey.

Holtz joins Irish pressure cooker

Associated Press

Lou Holtz on Saturday becomes the latest head football coach to step into the pressure cooker known as Notre Dame.

As the 25th coach in the history of the Fighting Irish, Holtz begins his reign at home against third-ranked Michigan.

"There are probably no teams playing this year with greater football traditions than Michigan and Notre Dame," said Bo Schembechler, opening his 18th season at Michigan and 24th as a head coach. "I wouldn't want to play them later in the year, because it's too tough a game and could detract from the Big 10 season."

Two games pitting Top Twenty teams against each other are also on tap for Saturday — No. 10 Ohio State at No. 17 Washington and No. 7 Texas A&M against No. 14 Louisiana State. But the biggest share of the attention will be in South Bend, Ind., where the Wolverines tackle the Fighting Irish on national television.

"Anytime you play Notre Dame in South Bend in the opening game of the season, it wouldn't make any difference who's coaching. There will be tremendous enthusiasm," Schembechler said, speaking of Holtz. "We can offset that with our own enthusiasm."

Former Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine says of Saturday's confrontation:

"The circumstances of this game — Lou's first game and playing Michigan — could be unequal to anything."

Michigan is a 6-point favorite over Notre Dame and has a 12-5 advantage in the series.

"There are lots of pluses and minuses to opening with a team like Michigan," Holtz said. "If we want to be the best we've got to beat the best, and Michigan may be the best team in the country."

"This (game) will be a great yardstick for us, a great way to measure just where we are," Holtz said. "I really don't know how good we can be this year. But I do know we've made a commitment to these seniors to do whatever is necessary to allow them to finish their careers on a winning note."

"I don't know how this team will react to adversity. I don't know what will happen the first time we turn the ball over. I don't know how much confidence our players will have."

Michigan, 10-1 last year — the Wolverines' best record since 1974 — finished second in the Associated Press rankings to national champion Oklahoma.

In other games involving Top Twenty teams, No. 2 plays host to Texas Tech, No. 4 Alabama will take on Southern Mississippi at Birmingham, Mississippi State is at No. 8 Tennessee, New Mexico is at No. 11 Brigham Young, Louisiana Tech is at No. 12 Baylor, Mississippi takes on No. 18 Arkansas at Little Rock, Duke is at No. 19 Georgia and No. 20 Michigan State travels to Arizona State.

Ohio State is coming off a 16-10 loss to Alabama in its season opener in the Kickoff Classic. But the Buckeyes are a slight favorite over Washington in the Huskies' first game of the season.

"I hope we're a better football team than we were two weeks ago," said Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce. "I think we are and I know we're going to have to be."

"But you don't know until we meet an opponent like Washington. We will certainly have a tough test in Seattle."

Despite Ohio State's opening loss, Washington Coach Don James is worried.

"Experience tells me that anybody who loses regroups and comes back harder the next time," James said. "I don't think it'll make it any easier."

"They're a solid team. They've got a lot of ingredients and they're really an aggressive team. They're really a big, physical team."

This will be the first game between the two college football powers since 1969, when Ohio State won 41-14 in Seattle. The Buckeyes were coached by Woody Hayes then and the 1969 Huskies were coached by Jim Owens.

But Bruce and James are not strangers to each other. Bruce led Tampa to a victory over James' Kent State team in the 1972 Tangerine Bowl.

The Huskies are concerned with Ohio State quarterback Jim Karsatos and linebacker Chris Spielman. Spielman had 16 tackles, picked off a pass and caused a fumble against Alabama, and was voted the game's most valuable player.

Rookie Brian Claar making first win bid

PGA Tour

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Brian Claar, bidding for his first major victory as a rookie on the PGA Tour, and Australian Wayne Grady, shot 5-under par 66s Thursday to share the first-round lead in the $450,000 Bank of Boston Golf Tournament.

Claar, 27, playing at Pleasant Valley Country Club for the first time although he grew up in Westport, Conn., and competed frequently throughout New England, had six birdies and just one bogey in conquering "a lot of downwind" and crosswinds as a midmorning starter.

Then, Grady, winner of only $31,000 and disqualified three times this year, rode a hot birdie start through the wind in the afternoon to tie Claar on Pleasant Valley's 7,110-yard, par 36-35-71 layout.

That gave Claar and Grady a two-stroke lead in the 72-hole test worth $81,000 to Sunday's winner.

Locked in a tie for second at 68 were 1980 Pleasant Valley winner Wayne Levi, Bobby Wadkins, Larry Rinker and Bill Glasson.

Next at 69 were Lou Graham, the 1979 winner here, leading rookie Davis Love III, Robert Lohr, Antonio Cerda, J.C. Snead, Donnie Hammond and Al Geiberger.

Defending champion George Burns slipped to 74 and 1977 Pleasant Valley winner and reigning U.S. Open champion Ray Floyd struggled to 76. Both were in danger of missing the 36-hole cut for the final two rounds.

Mike McCullough, Mark Calcavecchia, Brett Upper and Gene Sauers were four strokes off the pace with 70s.

Monaghan holds lead

KENT, Wash. (AP) — It took Kris Monaghan four tries to get onto the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, but now that she's made it, the 26-year-old is on her way to establishing herself as a force to be reckoned with.

She birdied her first hole and three of her first four, then eagled her fifth en route to a 5-under-par 67 to take the first-round lead in the $200,000 Safeco Classic Thursday.

Her first-round showing on the 6,222-yard Meridian Valley Country Club course was her best as a professional, giving her a one-stroke lead over early finishers Hollis Stacy, Juli Inkster and Amy Benz.

"I had been pressing after getting a couple of bogeys and shooting 75s and 76s," said Monaghan, who has missed the cut in seven of her first eight tournaments this year, six of them in a row.

"A start like this instantly makes you comfortable," she said. "I felt very relaxed, very pleased with myself. I think that's a sign of maturity."

Lauren Howe, Jan Stephenson, tour rookie Deb Richard and Betsy King were tied at 68. Mary Beth Zimmerman, Janet Anderson, Bonnie Lauer, rookie Sis Seman and M.J. Smith tied at 70.

Monaghan, who started on the back nine, sank her 132-yard, 8-iron second shot to eagle the 363-yard 14th hole.

Lauer, a 12-year tour veteran, had a share of the early lead after 15 holes, then bogeyed the next two.

Chap golfers hit road

From Staff Reports

With just one tournament behind them, the Midland College Chaparral golf team begins conference play Saturday. Western Texas College in Snyder is hosting the first of six conference tournaments, this one on WTC's own course.

Each of the six colleges in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference which play men's golf hosts an 18-hole tournament. The season is divided into fall and spring competition. Delnor Poss, Midland College golf coach, will be selecting the team for Saturday's competition from among seven players.

Each college enters a five-man team with the best four scores counting. Poss is relying heavily on West Texans with Class 4-5A experience this fall. Three of his players are from San Angelo Central and one from Abilene Cooper.

Squad members include: Glenn Collins, sophomore from Winniepe, Manitoba, Canada; Gordon Wessels, sophomore from Krugersdorp, South Africa; Steve Alexander, sophomore from San Angelo Central; Arnie Burttschell, sophomore from Abilene Cooper; Joey Allen, sophomore from San Angelo Central; Rob Anderson, freshman from Kelowna, British Columbia, Canada; and Ricky Cruz, freshman from San Angelo Central.

South Plains College hosts the second conference tourney on Sept. 19 at the Levelland Country Club course. Midland College is host for the final fall tournament on Oct. 4. That event is scheduled for Greenville Country Club, New Mexico Military Institute, Odessa College, and New Mexico Junior College will host the spring tournaments.

Midland College will conclude its fall season with two regional tournaments.

Columbia worst of worst

NEW YORK (AP) — Columbia University, which has lost 21 consecutive games and has not won in 25 straight contests, has been rated the No. 1 school among 20 worst college football teams in the country, according to Penthouse magazine's October issue.

The Lions, which have lost every game since a 17-17 tie with Dartmouth in November, 1983 and have not won since defeating Yale 21-18 four weeks before the Dartmouth contest, were rated ahead of Kansas State, Texas El-Paso and Northwestern.

Northwestern holds the record for consecutive defeats with 34, which ended with a 31-6 victory over Northern Illinois in 1982, but had a 3-8 record last season.

"I obviously don't think we're that bad," said new Columbia head coach Larry McElreavy, whose club opens its season Saturday at Harvard. "As human beings, being rated in the bottom 20 doesn't help my players feel any better."

Finishing out the bottom 20 were Oregon State fifth, Wake Forest sixth, Wichita State No. 7, Boston University eighth, Vanderbilt ninth and Tulane 10th.

Kent State was No. 11, followed by Navy, New Mexico State, East Carolina, Houston, Rutgers, Wyoming, North Carolina State, Louisville and Rice.

Bears edge against Eagles

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

If you don't think Mike Ditka has it in for Buddy Ryan, think again. Ryan's Philadelphia Eagles go into Chicago this week to play his old buddies, the Bears. They are 16½ point underdogs, a dastardly spread this early in the season, particularly since the Bears will be starting Mike Tomczak at quarterback in place of Jim McMahon.

Why?
1. The Bears really are better than anyone else.
2. When the Bears have incentive, they can destroy even the best of the rest.
3. The Eagles aren't among the best of the rest. Despite what Ryan says, they're not even close.
4. The Bears have incentive. Or at least Ditka has incentive — the incentive to demonstrate that Buddy wasn't the only genius in town last year.

If the Eagles found a way to lose to the Redskins by 27 last week, they can probably find a way to do it again. If they don't, the Bears will give it to them. BEARS, 31-10.

Raiders (plus 2) at Washington: Tom Flores (and Al Davis) believe the officials cost them last week's game at Denver. Maybe, but three fumbles didn't help any either.

A guess: A lot of yellow flags will drop Sunday.

Another guess: Jay Schroeder will have a hard time with Howie Long and his friends. RAIDERS, 23-20.

San Francisco (minus 3) at Rams: Bill Walsh keeps finding ways to plug his holes — trading for Joe Cribbs, claiming Tom Cousineau on waivers, throwing in two rookie cornerbacks and surviving. But can he survive Jeff Kemp, who will probably start for banged up Joe Montana? RAMS, 21-17.

Dallas (minus 2) at Detroit: The Cowboys got ambushed in the Silverdome last year after a big Monday night win the opening week. They did it again Monday night, but they probably won't make the same mistake twice. COWBOYS, 24-14.

San Diego (plus 3½) at Giants: Why, the guy asked, are the Giants favored? What Danny White can do, Dan Fouts can do better — Bill Parcells says San Diego is the best offensive team he's ever seen.

Yeah, but until they change the rules, you have to stop the other guys. GIANTS, 38-37.

Kansas City (plus 4½) at Seattle: Were the Seahawks that good or the Steelers that bad?

Both. SEAHAWKS 23-13.
Denver (minus 5½) at Pittsburgh (Monday Night): See Above. BRONCOS 34-13.

OTHER GAMES (Home Teams in Caps):
CINCINNATI (minus 6½) 28, Buffalo 24.

NEW ORLEANS (minus 2) 17, Green Bay 13.

St. Louis (plus 2½) 20, ATLANTA 17.

HOUSTON (minus 2) 21, Cleveland 16.

MIAMI (minus 13½) 31, Indianapolis 21.

Minnesota (minus 2) 24, TAMPA BAY 20.

LAST WEEK: 10-4 (straight up); 8-6 spread.

"This year I feel we're moving past the point of having to spend so much time just teaching the game to these kids," Pearcey said. "Many of them were just playing for the first time last season. But now with that experience, I think we can have a much improved season."

Next week, MBT makes another trip to El Paso on a Saturday to play Jesus Chapel before returning home

Sept. 26 for a date with Amarillo West Texas Christian.

The Oct. 17 date is also important. That's when MBT meets cross town rival Midland Christian.

Midland Baptist Temple: Sept. 5 — Northeast Christian Academy 20, Midland Baptist Temple 6. Sept. 12 — New Life Christian at MBT, 7 p.m. Sept. 20 — MBT vs. Jesus Chapel at El Paso, Sept. 28 — Amarillo West Texas Christian at MBT, 7 p.m. Hogan Park. Oct. 4 — MBT at Bethel Christian, Oct. 10 — open, Oct. 17 — Midland Christian at MBT, 7 p.m. Hogan Park. Oct. 25 — MBT at New Life, Oct. 31 — Loraine at MBT, 7 p.m. Hogan Park. Nov. 7 — open.

Rangers face key battle with Owls

From Staff Reports

Greenwood tries to even its record at 1-1 tonight as the Rangers open their home season with a game against former Class 2A rival Reagan County at 8 p.m. at the Greenwood Stadium.

The Rangers opened the 1986 season last week with a disappointing 25-0 loss to McCamey. This is the opening game for Reagan County. Stanton tries to jump out to a 2-0 start tonight, but the Buffs will be on the road at Coahoma. In other area games, Crane and McCamey square LONDON (AP) — The dollar slumped against several major currencies in European trading after opening higher today. Gold prices rose sharply.

Dealers in Frankfurt said the U.S. currency's ascent is bound to slow down.

The dollar had opened higher against all major currencies, buoyed by rumors of high U.S. retail sales figures, but quickly dropped against the West German mark and Swiss franc and lost early gains against the French franc and yen.

Prices plunged on the New York Stock Exchange on Thursday partly as a result of the rumors that August retail figures to be released today would show a 2 percent to 4 percent rise.

But some currency dealers in Frankfurt said they were suspicious of the rumored rise, well above the previous sales expectations of 1.2 percent to 1.5 percent.

"I'm baffled about these rumors," a dealer said. "I first want to see the figure before I believe it."

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 156.65 yen from Thursday's 155.35. Later, in London, it was quoted at 155.75 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Thursday:

- 2.0840 West German marks, down from 2.0890
- 1.6885 Swiss francs, down from 1.6942
- 6.820 French francs, unchanged
- 2.3683 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3520

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $414.00 a troy ounce, compared with late Thursday's $404.50. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $418.75.

In Zurich, the bid price was $419.00, up from $403.50 late Thursday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $7.01 to close at a bid $413.25.

Silver was quoted in London on Friday at a bid price of $5.79 a troy ounce, up from Thursday's $5.58.

Dow suffers worst loss ever

By JAMES F. PELTZ
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The stock market faces a major test today in trying to recover from its worst one-day drubbing in history.

The market rebounded from other severe declines this year, but analysts said investors' willingness to bid prices higher this time could be seriously challenged following Thursday's nosedive, in which the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks plunged a record 86.81 points to 1,792.89.

The stock and bond markets both were crushed by waves of selling. Prices of some long-term Treasury bonds tumbled $30 for each $1,000 in face value.

"It was constant, persistent, unrelenting selling all day long," said Alfred E. Goldman, vice president of the investment firm A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis.

The selling also produced Wall Street's busiest day ever as a record 237.57 million shares changed hands on the New York Stock Exchange, surpassing the previous high of 236.57 million set Aug. 3, 1984.

Some market trackers attributed the sudden slide to a growing belief among investors that the economy is picking up steam.

An economic upturn generally would seem welcome, but in the financial markets worried investors previously had sent stock and bond prices higher on the premise that the economy would remain sluggish, which could lead to further declines in interest rates. Stock prices generally go up as interest rates go down.

The prospect of a growing economy, however, dampened hopes that the Federal Reserve Board would continue to push rates lower.

Some economists said expectations of an economic rebound and that the Fed will not lower rates further to spark the economy appeared premature.

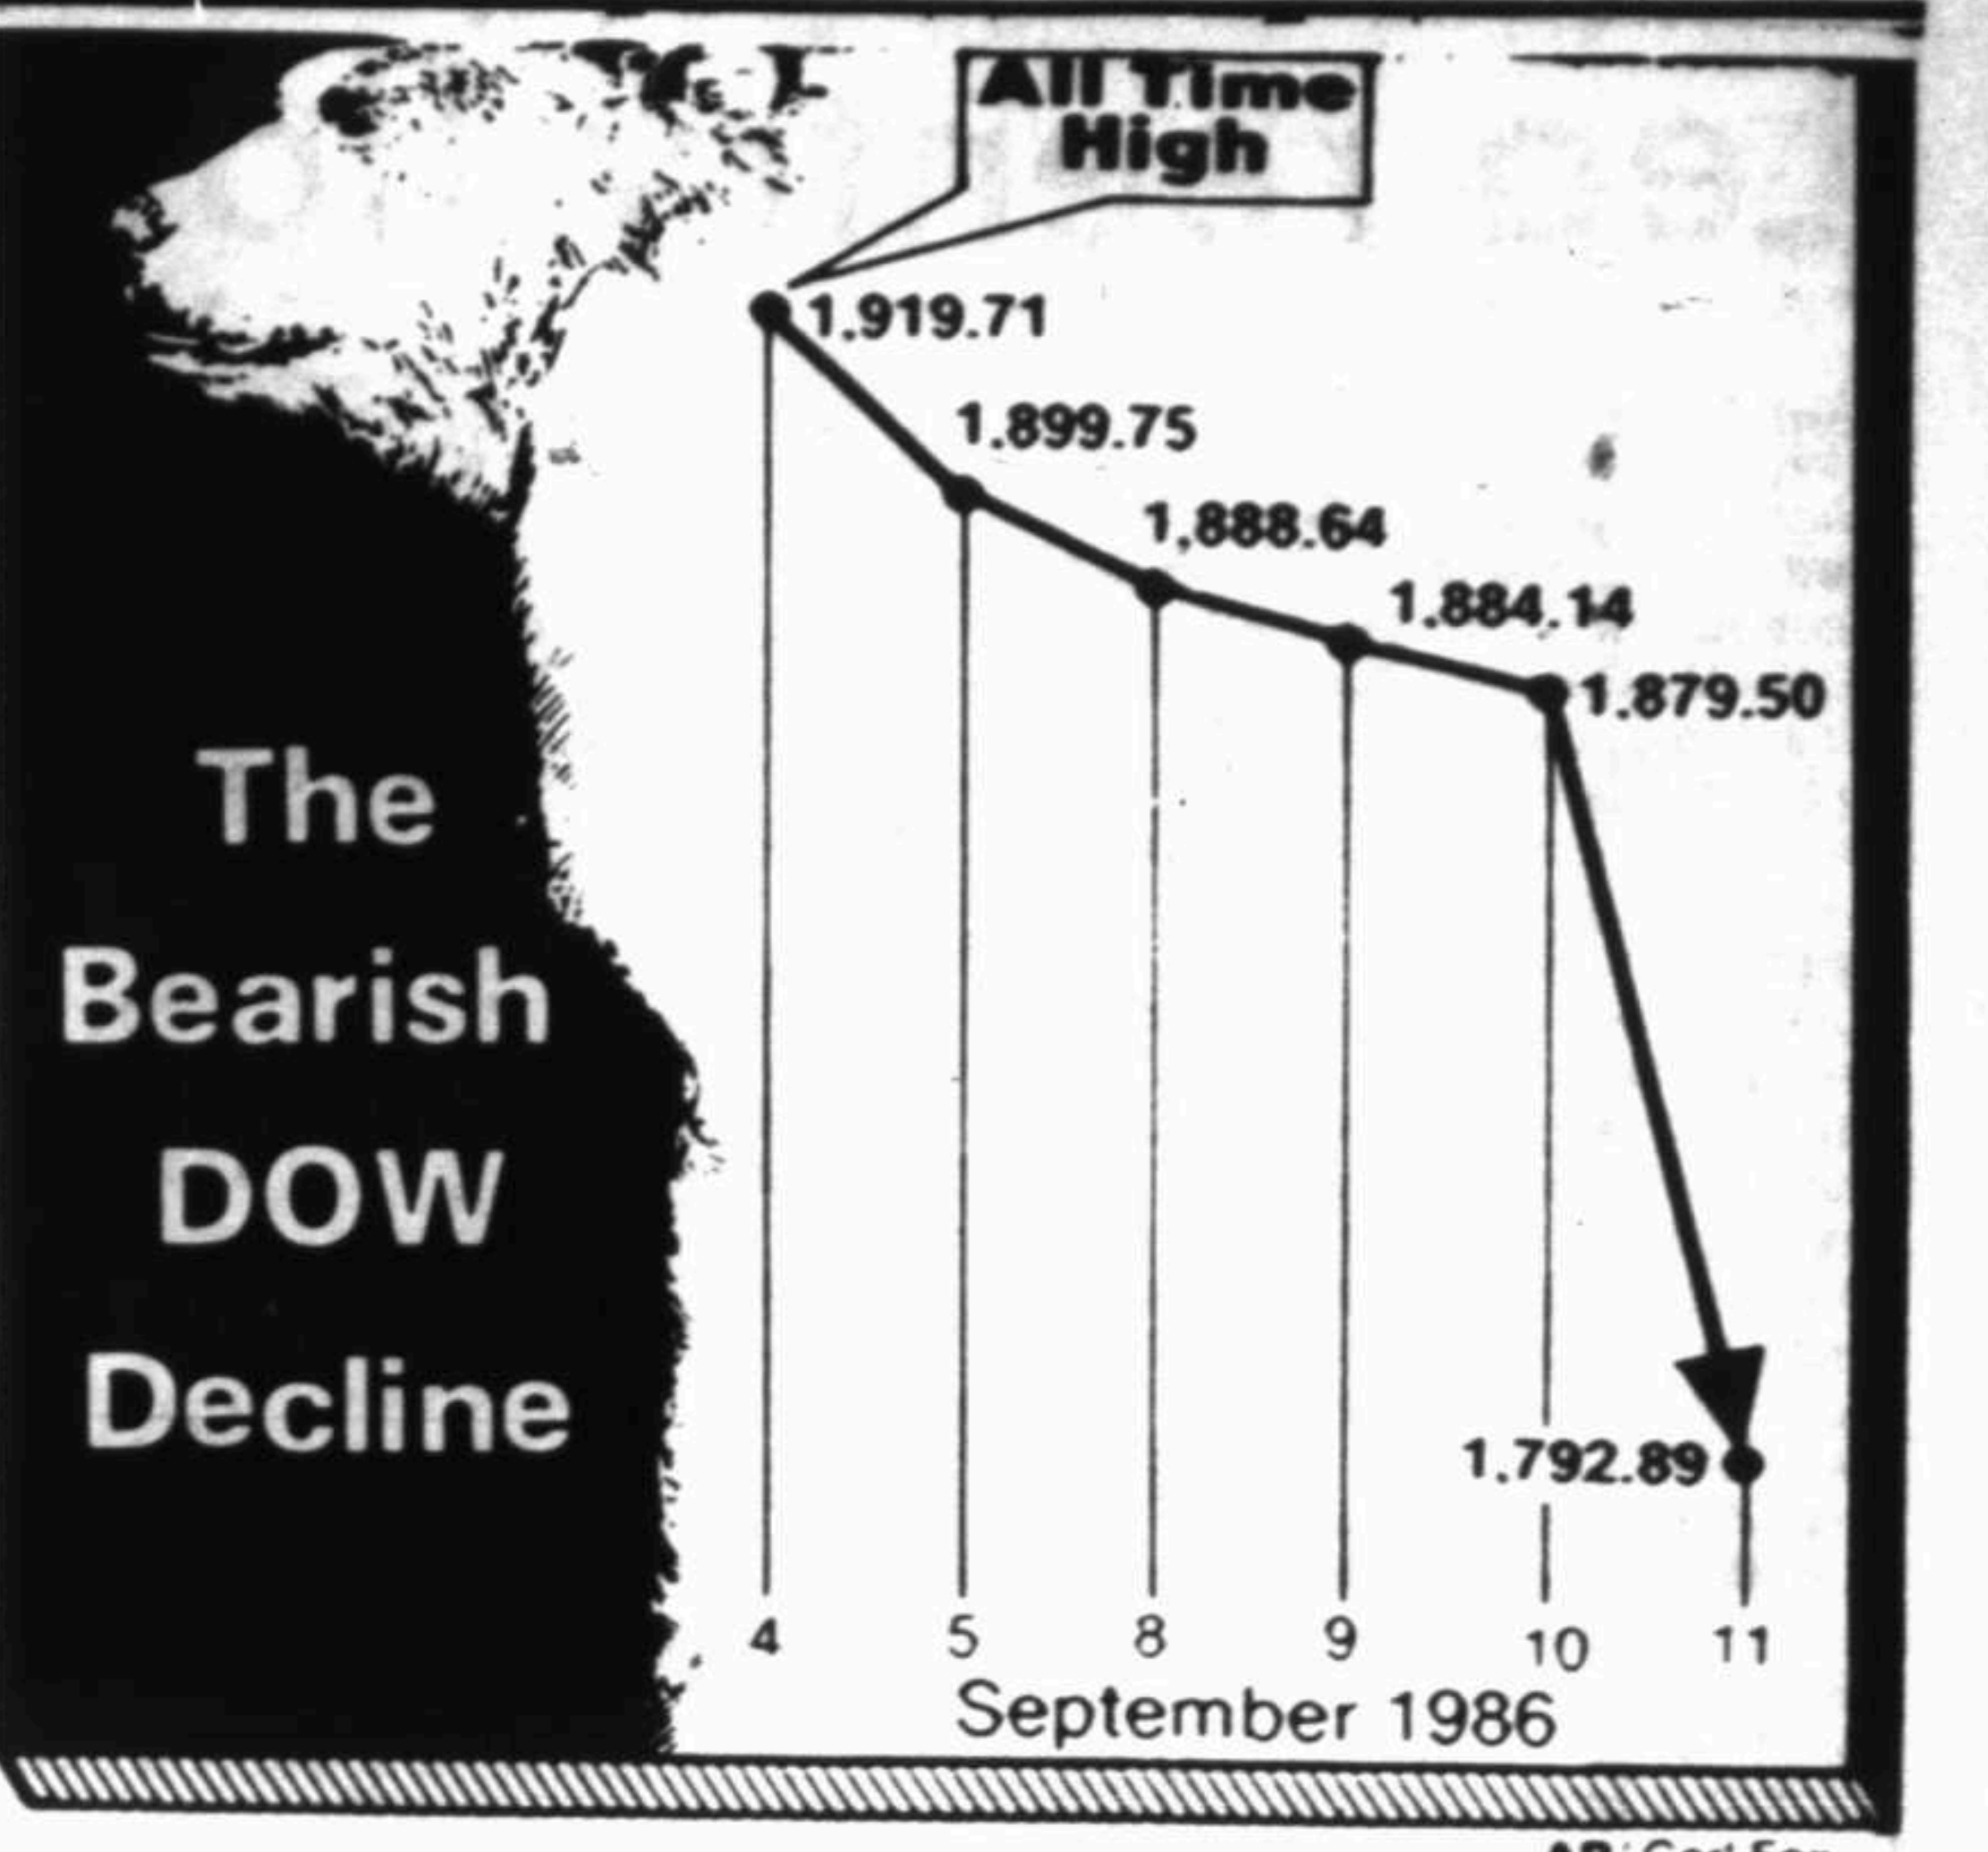

"I don't think there's much indication that the economy's picking up," said Gordon B. Pye, senior vice president of Irving Trust Co., a New York bank.

Instead, Pye suggested, the markets "overreacted in getting too pessimistic about the economy in July and August, and maybe now they're correcting that overbearishness on the economy."

For the Dow Jones industrial average, the "correction" came only a week after it climbed to a record 1,919.71. The loss also shattered the average's previous one-day record setback of 61.87 points on July 7.

On a percentage basis, however, Thursday's drop amounted to 4.6 percent of the average's total value. By contrast, the 38.33-point loss on Oct. 28, 1929, in the market's Great Crash was 12.9 percent.

The markets' decline snowballed into dramatic proportions with the help of computerized trading programs that are increasingly being used by large institutional investors to quickly buy and sell huge portfolios of securities.

Wholesale prices rise 0.3 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices jumped 0.3 percent last month as the third hefty food price increase in four months more than offset a small drop in gasoline prices, the government reported today.

Both meat and eggs registered substantial gains.

Even with the increase last month, the Labor Department said prices at the wholesale level fell at an annual rate of 5.0 percent for the first eight months of 1986.

But economists cautioned that the August rise, only the second this year, was a signal that the best news on inflation is over.

Fears of renewed inflation were cited as one factor behind the record plunge in stock prices on Wall Street Thursday as nervous investors expressed concern about recent rises in the price of commodities such as oil, gold and platinum.

The bulk of last month's gain came from a 1.3 percent spurt in food prices, which came on the heels of a 1.9 percent July jump. Food prices had held flat in June but had risen 1.3 percent in May.

Beef prices rose 5.8 percent in August, their second big monthly gain, while pork prices were up 11.5 percent.

Analysts have said that farmers' decisions to reduce cattle herds, which drove beef prices down earlier this year, are now booming as supplies at supermarkets.

Egg prices jumped 12.5 percent while poultry prices gained 11.2 percent. Both increases were blamed on the South's summer-long heat and drought, which decimated chicken flocks.

Bucking the trend, fresh fruit prices fell 19.4 percent.

Gasoline prices were down 1.5 percent, a small fraction of the 19.3 percent drop in July. Overall energy prices moved down 1.5 percent after a drop of nearly 12 percent in the previous month.

Heating oil costs gained 15.2 percent, a moderation from the 17.2 percent drop in July.

Natural gas prices fell 3.0 percent, continuing a string of declines, and were almost 15 percent below their level a year ago.

In the last year, overall energy prices have fallen 36.2 percent. Gasoline prices have dropped 46.0 percent.

These declines have largely been the main restraint on inflation this year.

Analysts had predicted an increase in August gasoline prices following the decision by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to reduce production levels.

On Aug. 5, after months of wrangling, the 13-member cartel agreed to cut production from a level of 20.5 million barrels a day to 16.7 million barrels daily.

Analysts predict that action will push gasoline prices up 10 cents a gallon in the coming months.

Labor Department analysts said their gasoline price survey was done Aug. 12 and did not reflect later increases.

Retail sales jump 0.8 percent in August

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales rose 0.8 percent in August, more than doubling the increase in July, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department reported that sales amounted to $120.2 billion in August following a much smaller increase of 0.3 percent in July.

Economists had been expecting a good showing for sales in August following reports of strong demand for back-to-school merchandise at the nation's major department stores.

Sales at department stores rose a substantial 0.7 percent in August. However, the best showing for the month came in sales by auto dealers, which were up a sharp 3.2 percent.

The expected gain had also been noted on Wall Street, where it was cited as one of the factors which contributed to a record stock market plunge on Thursday. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell a record 86.81 points as 10 stocks fell for every one that advanced.

Investors, who had been expecting that sluggish economic growth would contribute to further declines in interest rates, are now fearful that news such as the retail sales figures will convince the Federal Reserve Board that it does not need to push interest rates lower.

The Federal Reserve has cut a key bank lending rate four times this year in an effort to prod a sluggish economy. But the strong retail sales report and signals of renewed inflation have investors worried that further expected cuts in the Fed's discount rate will not materialize.

Disgruntled bank employee caused early closure

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A disgruntled employee's rumors about problems at Central Bank and Trust of Tulsa precipitated a $15 million run on the bank, forcing regulators to close it a day earlier than planned, state Banking Commissioner Robert Empe said Thursday.

"There's no stopping a run... It's maintained by fear," Empe said.

Federal regulators announced Thursday that Central Bank and Trust would reopen Friday as a branch of F&M Bank and Trust Co. of Tulsa, one of four institutions to bid on assets of the failed bank.

Regulators were to have closed Central Bank and Trust on Thursday. They shut it down Wednesday, however, after determining the run had sufficiently weakened the bank to the point that it was "not in viable shape to open up in the morning and carry on through the day," Empe said.

The disgruntled employee called Tulsa radio and television stations and newspapers but none of them carried a story on an impending failure, Empe said. Nevertheless, there was "an awful lot of person-to-person communication," leading to the run on deposits.

One of the deposits withdrawn Wednesday far exceeded the federally insured limit of $100,000 per depositor, Empe said.

"There was a particular viciousness related to this one not present in other towns," where employees also have spread rumors of an impending failure, Empe said. He said the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., named the bank's receiver Wednesday, would likely refer the employee's actions to the Tulsa County district attorney or federal prosecutors.

The board of directors of the FDIC approved the assumption of Central's deposit liabilities by The F&M Bank on Thursday afternoon.

"The failed bank's two offices will reopen on Friday as branches of The F&M Bank," said Julie Amberson, spokesman for the FDIC in Washington, D.C. "Its depositors automatically will become depositors of the assuming bank subject to approval by the appropriate court."

The F&M Bank will assume about $54.5 million in 10,800 deposit accounts and has agreed to pay the FDIC a purchase premium of $407,000, she said.

The Tulsa bank also will purchase some of the failed bank's loans and other assets for $57.6 million.

"To facilitate the transaction, the FDIC will advance $14.3 million to the assuming bank and will retain assets of the failed bank with a book value of about $18.9 million," Ms. Amberson said.

At a news conference Thursday morning at the state Banking Department, Empe said 140 banks were invited to submit bids, and between 12 and 15 of them attended a bid information meeting Tuesday.

Empe blamed the bank's failure on a checkered past and its current management, but said less than 7 percent of loan losses were energy and agriculture related.

"It was a considerable combination of problems," Empe said. "One of its main problems was the handicap of its predecessors."

Auction prices may be rebounding

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Auction prices on used oilfield equipment may have finally bottomed-out and begun to rise, according to a leading energy and construction equipment auction company.

Tempering its optimism with precautions, Superior Auctioneers & Marketing, Inc., San Antonio, announced encouraging results from its latest drilling equipment auction. Held in Victoria, Texas in August, auction prices exceeded the company's early projections, with prices for comparable rigs averaging 35 percent higher than comparable sales two months ago.

A five-year-old Gardner-Denver 800 rig sold for $239,000, while the same brand and quality rig sold for $167,000 in June of 1986. At a Houston auction in April, 1986, a similar drilling rig sold for $125,000. In December, 1985, in Casper, Wyoming, auction prices for Gardner-Denver 800 drilling rigs netted-out at $266,000. At an Oklahoma City auction in November that year, the same brand and quality rig sold for $342,000.

"For this auction, prices were up by 87 percent over our usually accurate projections," said Gary Bergman, a principal in Superior. "Additionally, attendance for this particular auction was up by a like amount."

"Factors which may have contributed to this response include OPEC's commitment to firming-up oil prices, a slight increase in rig activity, and investors looking at drilling rigs for their investment potential."

"While one major auction doesn't guarantee a turnaround, the price differential was a strong positive indication. Further evidence of a potential turnaround will become evident in the results of upcoming auctions."

Earlier this month, three drilling rigs were auctioned in Houston and four complete and six partial rigs were auctioned in Oklahoma City.

Results from those sales aren't yet available to map a continuing trend, according to company officials.

Another seven complete rigs are crossing the auction block today in Lafayette, La.

Superior Auctioneers & Marketing, Inc., claims three-quarters of the domestic energy equipment auction business. The San Antonio-based company had sales in excess of $66 million for fiscal 1985, up from $22 million in the previous year, the company's first.

Research firm introduces improved survey

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

"Knowledge is power; power is delightful, and absolute power is absolutely delightful," said Christopher Jackson, guest speaker at a gathering Thursday aimed at introducing area business people to what are being termed major improvements in Midland/Odessa PULSE, a marketing research service.

Owner Gregory K. Goree said the research firm's reports will be rewritten to be more easily understood as well as more thorough in evaluating local residents' opinions. In addition, PULSE will offer follow-up seminars for subscriber merchants and media. "It's imperative that you know what your customer needs and wants, and they'll tell you if you'll listen," he stated.

Speaker Jackson, a former national vice president at Sears Roebuck & Co., pointed out that this is the only market its size where the yellow pages outnumber the white pages by more than 2-to-1. "Either you've got a hell of a yellow pages salesperson or there's a lot of competition out there."

He said the more a business knows about its customers and competitors, the more successful it can become. "Are your competitor's prices lower than your regular prices? Are your salespeople up on current trends? Are you too aggressive with your markups?" he asked.

PULSE's research supervisor, Arthur Pratt, outlined the method of research. He said the report would be released two ways: in written form with verbatim comments, and in an oral form with questions and answers. "Our primary objective is to evaluate the attitudes and perceptions of Midland-Odessa residents," he commented. PULSE will conduct 600 interviews twice a year, half in Midland and half in Odessa, according to Pratt, and the summaries will be distributed in November and April.

Pratt, who is president of Creative Consumer Research in Houston, said a pretest of the research questions was conducted earlier this month.

Meeting attendee Harold Moore argued that the release dates might be too late to help clients buy their media time for the rest of the year. Goree answered that his aim was trying to move the dates up about three weeks.

Another attendee, Bob Hicks, questioned the need for questions regarding political opinions and affiliations, and opinions of local and state governments and public agencies. Goree replied that the broader base of knowledge a merchant has to draw on, the better able he is to respond to consumers' needs.

PULSE has been in existence 15 months and has issued three reports. The members of the PULSE team include Goree, Pratt, Jackson and Kenny Karr.

Pan Am, Texas Air near accord

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Pan American World Airways said Thursday that it was close to an agreement with the Texas Air Corp. on acquiring added landing and takeoff slots at three airports. The slots would enable Pan Am to start a more competitive shuttle service from La Guardia Airport in New York next month.

In another development, sources close to People Express said the carrier had been seeking a buyer or a partner to strengthen it. The sources said the airline had talked to Texas Air but that no offer had been made.

Meanwhile, Texas Air came closer to surmounting an important obstacle to the completion of its takeover of Eastern Air Lines. Three weeks ago the Department of Transportation rejected Texas Air's proposed acquisition of Eastern by citing doubts that Pan Am could mount a shuttle service that would be competitive with Eastern's entrenched 25-year-old shuttle. Selling additional slots at La Guardia to Pan Am would seem to answer this objection.

In a proxy filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Texas Air said that a new application for the control of Eastern would be "filed promptly" with the Transportation Department.

In the filing it was also disclosed that the department had said that Texas Air might have violated federal regulations by purchasing more than 10 percent of Eastern's voting stock before the department had approved Texas Air's voting trust agreement with Mbank of Houston. The filing said that the department had referred the matter to its enforcement division.

The filing also disclosed that Charles E. Bryan, president of District 100 of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, had made an offer earlier this year on behalf of employees of $10.25 a share for Eastern.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Lea reentry flows 209 barrels oil

From Staff Reports

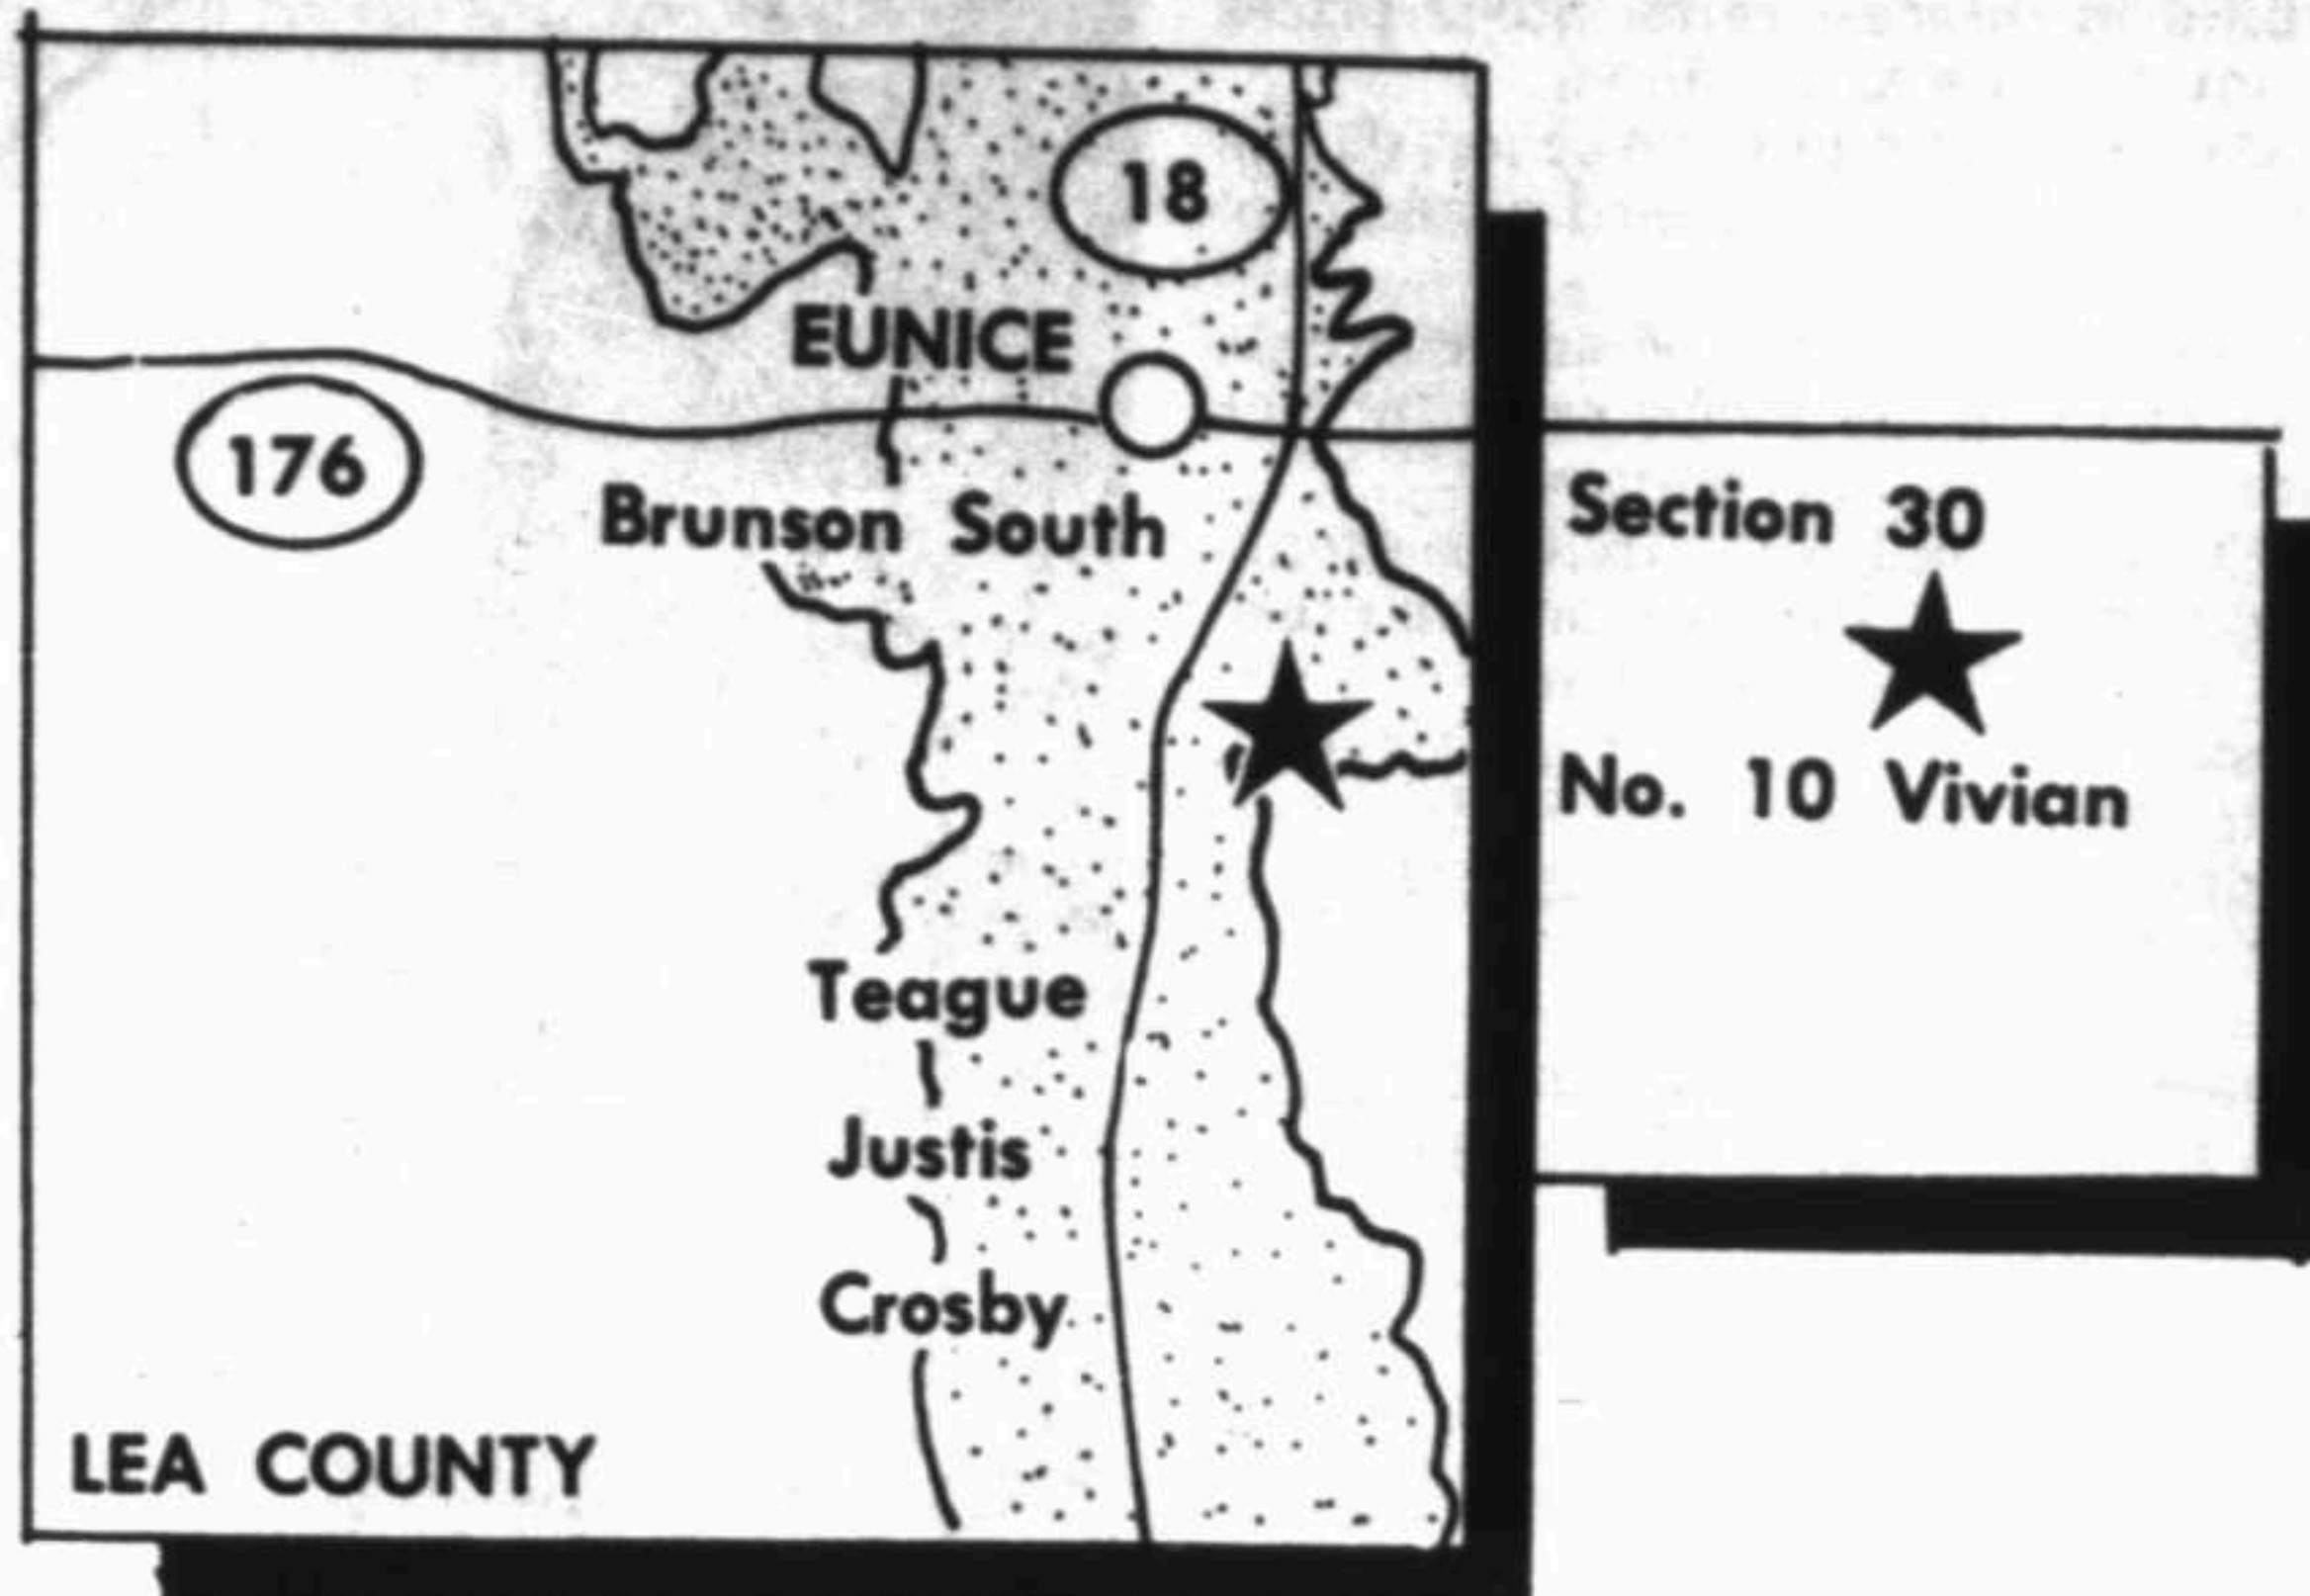

A recompletion effort in Lea County, N.M. has yielded an Abo producer in the Brunson South field.

CHEVRON U.S.A., INC. reentered and recompleted the No. 10 Vivian to flow 209 barrels of 44.9 gravity crude, 619 Mcfd and no water on a 12/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 900 psi. Production is from perforations 6,569 to 7,245 ft. The interval was acidized with 5,000 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid and fractured with 28,000 gallons of HCL. Gas-oil ratio is 2,962:1.

Formerly completed in the Drinkard and Wantz Granite Wash field, the well was plugged back with a cast iron bridge plug set at 7,310 ft. with 25 ft. cement on top. Original depth is 7,588 ft., where seven inch casing was set.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,382 ft., include the Anhydrite at 1,185 ft., Salt at 1,274, Base Salt at 2,430, Yates at 2,574, Queen at 3,394, San Andres at 3,989, Golieta at 5,126, Tubb at 6,010, Drinkard at 6,293, Abo at 6,610, and Granite Wash at 7,367 ft.

Location is 800 ft. from north and 2,250 ft. from east lines of Section 30, T22s, R38e.

with 8,000 gallons of 15 percent NEA. Total depth was 8,191 ft. with seven inch casing set at 8,132 ft.

The well topped the Wolfcamp at 6,350, Cisco at 7,216, and the Canyon at 7,590 ft. on ground elevation of 4,295 ft. Pay was topped at 7,802 ft.

Location is 1,270 ft. from south and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 32, T21s, R24e.

with 7,950 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 23,500 gallons of gel and 42,000 lbs. 16/30 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 12:1.

Drilled to 2,600 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 2,527 ft.

The well topped the Grayburg at 2,222 ft. and the San Andres at 2,400 ft. on ground elevation of 2,671 ft. Pay was topped at 2,120 ft.

Location is 330 ft. from west and south lines of Section 6, Block 3, T-2 S, T&P survey, two miles southwest of Forsan.

Yates producer tested in Pecos County field

The Belding (Yates) field of Pecos County has gained a modest Yates producer as SANTA FE-ANDOVER OIL CO. completed the No. 2-A Puckett "G" in the field.

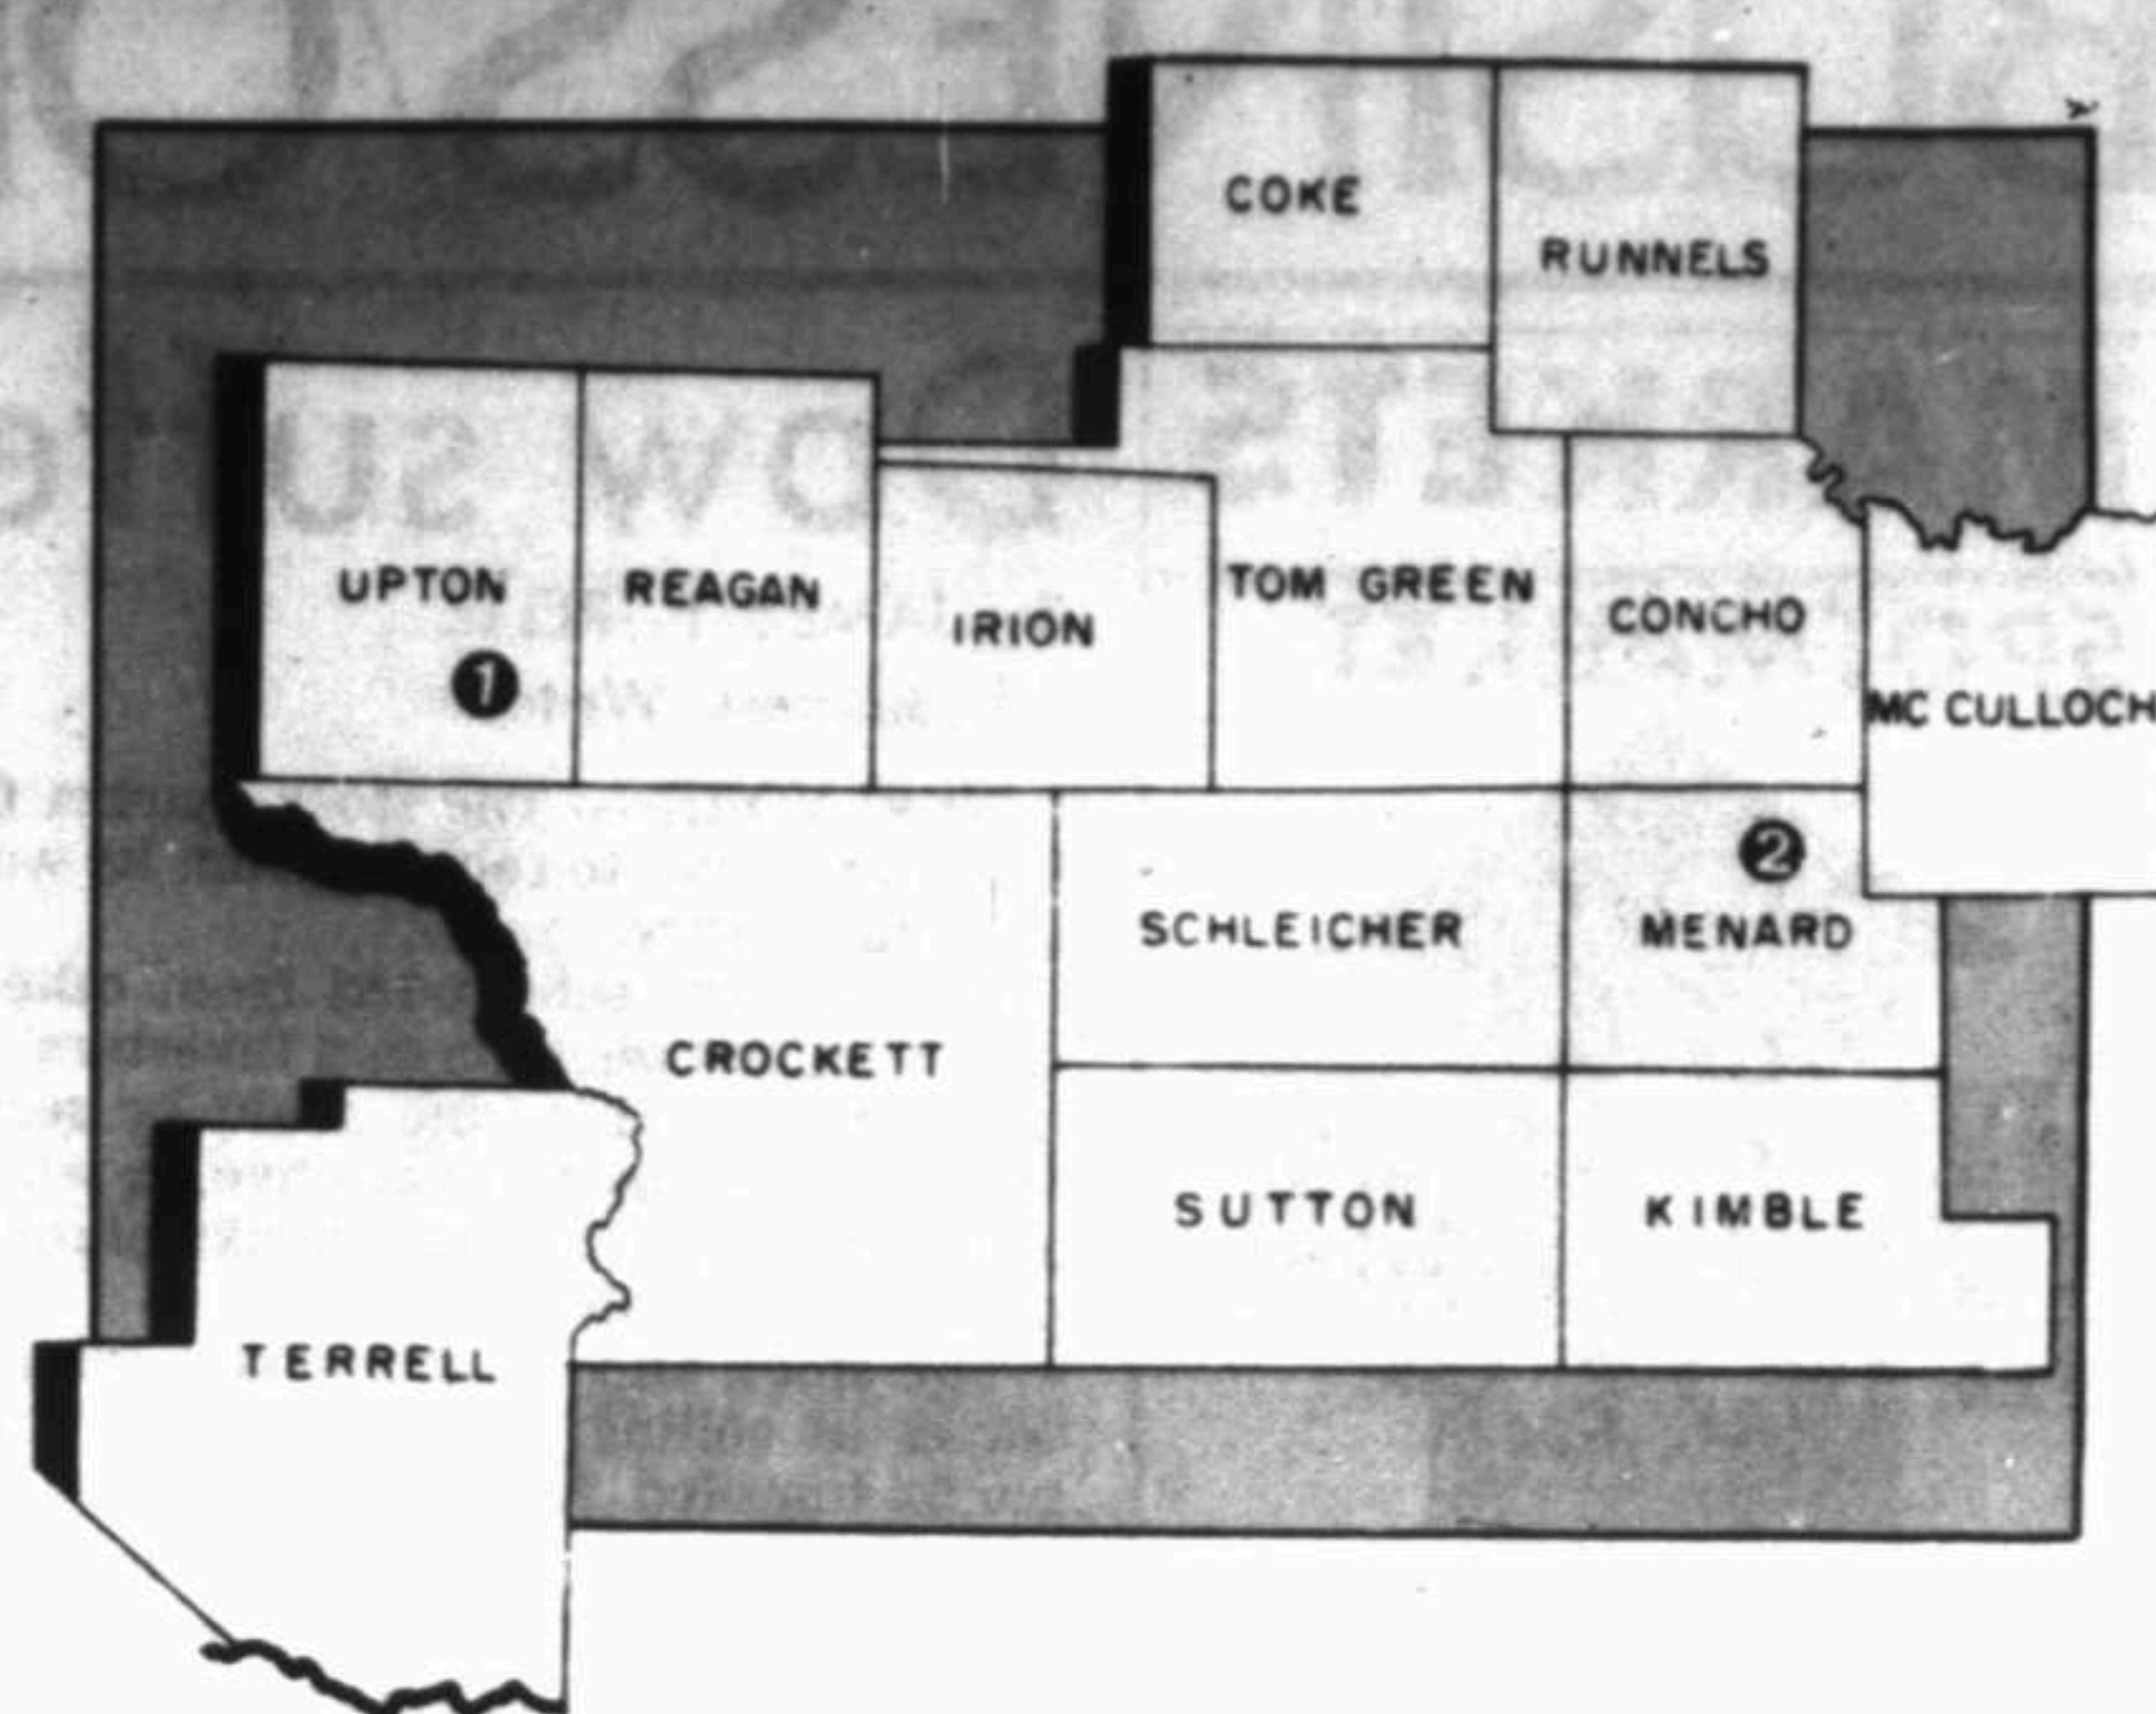

On potential test, the well pumped 12 barrels of crude, 13 Mcfd and 61 barrels of water from perforations 2,616 to 2,774 ft. The interval was treated with 30,000 gallons of gel. Gas-oil ratio is 1,083:1.

Drilled to 3,060 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 2,936 ft.

The well topped the Yates at 2,616 ft. on ground elevation of 3,284 ft. Pay was topped at 2,616 ft.

Location is 1,076 ft. from east and 467 ft. from south lines of Section 65, Block 3, T&P survey, five miles northwest of Fort Stockton.

1. MIDLAND FIRM WILL EXPLORE IN UPTON COUNTY. Terra Resources, Inc., Midland, will drill its No. 1 Windham, a 10,000 ft. wildcat in Upton County, 10.4 miles northwest of Rankin.

Location is 1,220 ft. from north and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 16, Block 2 of the MK&T survey on ground elevation of 2,675.4 ft.

2. 4,300 FT. WILDCAT STAKED IN MENARD COUNTY. H-M Oil Co., Houston, will drill its No. 8 G.W. Kothmann, a 4,300 ft. wildcat in Menard County.

Location is 1,100 ft. from south and 2,000 ft. from east lines of John H. Gibson survey No. 93. Ground elevation is 2,263 ft.

Eddy field producer flows 3.04 Mmcf

TEXACO, INC. has added to Morrow production in the Indian Basin field of Eddy County with completion of the No. 1-Y Getty "IB" 32 State.

The well was finished for a calculated absolute open flow of 3.045 Mmcf from perforations 7,802 to 7,822 ft. The interval was acidized

Conoco finals well in Howard-Glasscock

Activity continues in the Howard Glasscock field of Howard County, with CONOCO, INC. completing a well in the field.

Conoco completed the No. 16 S.T. Eason to pump 83 barrels of 30 gravity crude, 1 Mcfd and 69 barrels of water from perforations 2,120 to 2,474 ft. The interval was acidized

Salomon Brothers releases survey of energy companies

NEW YORK (SWN) U.S. crude oil reserves fell modestly last year, and gas reserves plummeted because Atlantic Richfield (ARCO) dropped Northern Alaska natural gas from its proved reserves, according to the annual survey by the Stock Research Department of Salomon Brothers, International finance, market making and research firm.

Titled, "Proved Petroleum Reserves of 30 Large Energy Companies, 1978-85," the survey was conducted and written by Bernard J. Picchi, CFA, and Caren Ellis Winnall.

The 30 energy companies surveyed replaced only 57 percent of their U.S. oil production last year and 78 percent of their gas production, before revisions and purchases.

"Worldwide oil and gas reserves of our 30-company group fell from 74.1 billion barrels of oil equivalent (BOE) in 1978 to 67 BOE at year-end 1985, an average yearly decline of 1.4 percent. This year's 3.9 percent drop, which was skewed toward gas, reversed two consecutive years of rising worldwide reserves," Picchi and Ms. Winnall stated.

"Of the total, 12 firms reported higher reserves in 1985 than in 1978, but the five firms showing the greatest gains were helped by reserve purchases. In addition, 12 companies also increased their reserves during 1985, but purchases were a smaller factor last year than in most other years."

The finding costs rose markedly in the U.S. last year — to $20.55 per barrel of oil equivalent — as well as in foreign areas, the Salomon Brothers authors commented.

According to the report, the average company managed to achieve only about a 6 percent return on its exploration and production outlays over the 1982-85 period.

Oxoco seeks reorganization

HOUSTON (SWN) — Oxoco Inc. announced that it had filed a voluntary petition for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal Bankruptcy Code in the United Bankruptcy Court, Southern District of Texas, Houston Division on Sept. 10. The company has no present intention to seek protection for any of its subsidiaries under the federal bankruptcy code.

Under Chapter 11, Oxoco will continue to operate under court protection from creditors while seeking to work out a plan of reorganization. The company stated that its bank lending group has agreed to continue funding operations of the company and its subsidiaries on an interim basis.

Oxoco stated that its filing resulted from an inability to reach agreement with a sufficient number of holders of the company's subordinated debt on a debt restructuring, and particularly a result of legal proceedings commenced against the company by one of the subordinated debtholders. The company suspended interest payments on its approximately $90 million in subordinated debt in April, 1985 and has been negotiating with the holders of such debt on various plans for restructuring since that time.

Oil spill clean-up begins in Venezuela

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — An oil spill extending more than six miles has been spotted in Lake Maracaibo, South America's largest lake and the heart of one of the world's richest offshore oil deposits.

The lake, the center of Venezuela's oil industry, is dotted with oil wells.

A spokesman for Lagoven, an affiliate of the state oil monopoly Petroleos de Venezuela, said the company already had begun clean-up operations.

The company estimated that some 37 barrels of oil had spilled and would "slightly" affect waters around at least some towns.

The Venezuelan oil industry had its worst oil spill in decades in the same area about three months ago, but Lagoven sources said the leak had been controlled and the spill cleaned up.

Mitchell seeks to enforce contract with Natural

THE WOODLANDS (SWN) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. has filed a suit in the District Court of Wise County, Texas, against Natural Gas Pipeline Company of America (NGPL). The suit seeks to force NGPL to meet the terms of its gas-purchase contract for the Wise County area.

Subsequently, Mitchell obtained a temporary restraining order directing NGPL to take its contractually obligated minimum volumes in accordance with the contract provisions.

Mitchell Energy's suit against NGPL claims that the pipeline company is required to take approximately 155 million cubic feet per day of wellhead gas well as and casinghead gas production owned by Mitchell and its royalty owners.

BHP makes record Australian oil strike

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Broken Hill Proprietary (BHP) recorded an Australian oil strike that flowed at the rate of 9,989 barrels a day from the Challis 3 exploration well in the Timor Sea.

The find, about 450 miles west of Darwin, is further proof of the commercial prospects of the Timor Sea as Australia's leading offshore oil exploration site.

Before the Challis 3 test, the previous two Challis wells established up to 120 million barrels of reserves.

Of this, about 30 million to 40 million would be considered proven or probably recoverable, oil analysts said.

Arco to sell pipeline, gas production in Utah

DALLAS (SWN) ARCO announced that it has agreed to sell a pipeline and its interests in 38 natural gas wells in Utah to the Maple Corp. and its subsidiary, the Birch Corp., both of Denver, Colorado.

In the agreement, ARCO plans to sell the Mesa Pipeline to Maple. Mesa Pipeline, a wholly-owned subsidiary of ARCO, operates 108 miles of transmission and gathering lines in Grand and Utah Counties, Utah.

ARCO will sell all of its interests in the 38 natural gas wells from four fields in Grand County to Birch. The Mesa Pipeline transports gas from these wells to purchasers, ARCO said.

Rio Grande Drilling loses in second quarter

SAN ANTONIO (SWN) Rio Grande Drilling Co. announced revenues and operating results for the quarter and six months ended July 31. Revenues for the second quarter were $299,000 for the three months ended July 31, compared to $2.01 million for the three months ended July 31, 1985. Losses for the same periods were $6.9 million and $1.1 million respectively.

Revenues for the six months ended July 31, were $791,000 as compared to $4 million for the six months ended July 31, 1985. Losses for the six months ended July 31, were $8.1 million as compared to $2.7 million for the same period ended July 31, 1985.

Railroad Commission grants pipeline permits

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman James E. Nugent has announced that 18 permits to operate new pipelines in Texas were granted by the RRC in July. In June, the Commission approved 18 permits.

Thirteen of new permits were for gathering pipelines, two were for trunk transmission lines, one was for a gas plant line, and two were for multi-purpose and other lines. Gathering lines bring oil and gas from production leases, while trunk lines are larger diameter lines into which smaller pipelines connect. As gas plants, natural gas is stripped of the liquid components usually present in gas as it is produced at a well.

In July, two operating permits were approved for gathering lines in the San Antonio area, two in the Refugio area, one in the South East Texas, three each in deep Texas, and East Central Texas, one each in Texas, West Central Texas, and the San Antonio area, three in the Midland area, and one in North Texas.

Operating line permits approved: Progressive Gas Services, Inc., Houston, gas, Henderson County; Exxon Corp., Corpus Christi, gas, two lines — one in Starr County and one in Nueces County; TAG Corp., Fort Worth, gas, Callahan County; Apache Transmission Corp., Houston, gas, Navarro County; Anasole Exploration, Inc., Longview, gas, Smith County; GCO Drilling Co., Houston, gas, Schleicher County; Genesis Petroleum Corp., Corpus Christi, gas, Chambers County; Producer's Gas Co., Midland, gas, two lines — one in Val Verde and Crockett counties and one in Howard County; Cities Service Oil & Gas Corp., Tulsa, gas, Archer and Young counties, Texas Gas Corp., Corpus Christi, gas, Freestone and Leon counties; and Harvard Pipeline Co., Midland, gas, Victoria County.

Trunk transmission lines approved: Richardson Fuels, Inc., Ft. Worth, gas, Lavaca County; and Liberty Natural Gas Co., Dallas, gas, Culberson County. Multi-purpose lines approved: Marathon Oil Co., Midland, gas, Pecos and Crockett counties; and Arco Oil & Gas Co., Houston, gas, Duval County. Gas plant lines approved: Amoco Production Co., Brownfield, gas, Hockley County.

Operating line permits approved: Progressive Gas Services, Inc., Houston, gas, Henderson County; Exxon Corp., Corpus Christi, gas, two lines — one in Starr County and one in Nueces County; TAG Corp., Fort Worth, gas, Callahan County; Apache Transmission Corp., Houston, gas, Navarro County; Anasole Exploration, Inc., Longview, gas, Smith County; GCO Drilling Co., Houston, gas, Schleicher County; Genesis Petroleum Corp., Corpus Christi, gas, Chambers County; Producer's Gas Co., Midland, gas, two lines — one in Val Verde and Crockett counties and one in Howard County; Cities Service Oil & Gas Corp., Tulsa, gas, Archer and Young counties, Texas Gas Corp., Corpus Christi, gas, Freestone and Leon counties; and Harvard Pipeline Co., Midland, gas, Victoria County.

Court orders Hunt case to Dallas

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A three-judge panel of a federal appeals court here has rejected arguments from lawyers for the billionaire Hunt brothers who said bankruptcy proceedings should be heard in Louisiana, the site of most of Placid Oil Co.'s assets and ordered the case returned to Dallas.

"Placid is here because its assets are here in Louisiana," Stephen Gordon told the judges from the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeal on Thursday.

Gordon added that U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas did not make it clear in his earlier order that bankruptcy filings were to be filed exclusively in Dallas. "If he meant to include it (bankruptcy), why didn't he tell us what he meant," Gordon said.

But the judges, Alvin Rubin,

Thomas Reavley and Henry Politz rejected the Hunts' argument. They issued a ruling within an hour after the hearing closed.

"This court orders immediate transfer of the Chapter 11 proceedings to the bankruptcy court for the northern District of Texas," the judges wrote. They said they would issue reasons for their ruling later. They expedited the ruling because Sanders had given the Hunts a Thursday deadline for transferring the case to Dallas.

The Hunts, fighting to keep 23 banks from foreclosing on $1.5 billion of their property, had wanted to keep Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings here where they filed petitions on Aug. 29. But the banks' attorneys argued that the Hunts were trying to complicate an already complicated case.

"The game isn't to win. The game is to spread things out," said attorney Melvyn Cantor, representing Manufacturers Hanover Trust.

The Hunts attended the Thursday morning hearing and left immediately afterward for Dallas without commenting. Asked if the Hunts would comply with the instructions, family spokesman Keith Burton said, "I have no reason to believe that that is not going to be the case." But he had no reaction on what the Hunt's next step might be.

The ruling marked the latest skirmish in a complicated series of financial and legal battles pitting William Herbert Hunt, Nelson Bunker Hunt and Lamar Hunt — the three sons of the late oil tycoon H.L. Hunt — against the 23 banks.

Senate OKs Super Tuesday primary bill

By DAVID PLESA

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate Thursday approved a bill that would add Texas to a Super Tuesday list of 11 southern states that conduct presidential primaries in March.

But Gov. Mark White said he wants lawmakers to concentrate on the state's $2.8 billion deficit during the special session rather than consider the bill, which is designed to give the South more clout in selecting presidential nominees.

"I don't have any plans at this time to do that," White said when asked if he would open the special session to include the measure.

Only the governor may set the agenda for a special session.

In a 21-2 vote, Senate members gave final approval to the bill that moves all Texas primaries from the first Saturday in May to the second Tuesday in March.

A similar bill is pending in the House, where it gained committee approval Wednesday.

Senate co-sponsor Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, said he will ask White to add the issue to the session's agenda after legislators make progress on the state's budget problems.

The bill would give Texans a strong voice in setting the national agenda on such issues as energy, national defense and agriculture, he said.

"Why should votes in New Hampshire and Iowa count more than the votes of our Texas citizens?" Edwards said.

"It simply does not make sense. It's time to make a change."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he supports presidential primaries in March, but would rather see general state primaries conducted in August or September.

"But this does improve the position of the state in the presidential selection process," Hobby said.

The bill gained the support of Republicans, who had been reluctant to back it, after Vice President George Bush indicated his support for the measure to state lawmakers.

Only three southern states, Texas, Arkansas and West Virginia, still retain the May primaries. Arkansas also is considering the move to March.

House, Senate back where they started

By STEVE LEVINE

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Even with a little heavenly guidance, the current special session of the Texas Legislature opened pretty much where the last one left off.

The Rev. Gerald Mann of Riverbend Baptist Church in Austin offered the invocation as the House convened Monday morning.

"Our father," Mann intoned, "here we are again, and we sure hope you are too."

Apparently the weekend off did little to dilute the rancor between the House and Senate. When the traditional five-man committee of senators reported to the House to inform representatives that the senior chamber was formally in session, Port Arthur Sen. Carl Parker stepped to the back mike to deliver the message.

"We have completed our karate lessons and are organized and ready to do business," Parker said. Before Parker spoke, the Senate delegation listened to Mann's invocation, which seemed to offer little solace to Houston Sen. John Whitmire. "We're going back to God's country, God's side of the Capitol," Whitmire said as the senators left the House.

Over in the Senate, Brownfield Rep. Jim Rudd told senators, "We have our hard hats and defense equipment, and we are ready to do battle again."

Doing a little research, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby found such House-Senate altercations took place way back in 1842, when the Legislature met in Washington-on-the-Brazos. Hobby read from the Dec. 22, 1842 issue of the Houston Morning Star, which quoted a visitor watching the House:

"Finding nothing there to interest me, I proceeded to the Senate...where I found the president looking at the senators, and the senators looking at him. The Senate, I learned, was waiting for the House to progress with business, and the House, I suppose, often waits for the Senate, and in the meantime certain members steal away occasionally and consult the book of prophecies, alas, a pack of cards. Thus our legislators labor for their country."

In other action Thursday, Senate sponsors failed to win the necessary votes to consider a controversial bill that would give the governor the power to transfer state funds within an agency or between agencies if an "emergency situation" arises between regular sessions of the Legislature.

Any proposal by the governor to transfer state funds would be submitted to the 10-member Legislative Budget Board, which would approve, reject or modify the proposal.

But Sen. Carl Parker, who voted against the bill, said he was concerned that 11 people — the governor and the budget board members — could override the wishes of a majority of the House and Senate.

"I don't want to give up that much authority," said Parker, D-Port Arthur.

Voters approved a constitutional amendment authorizing such emergency budget execution in 1985.

Republican gubernatorial nominee Bill Clements maintains such authority could have eliminated the need for the current special session.

Also, the Senate passed a bill that would transfer nearly $5.5 million from dedicated highway and transportation funds to the general revenue fund to help alleviate the state's revenue shortfall.

Library's mall branch exceeds expectations, library director says

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Despite its sometimes vacant appearance, Midland Centennial Branch Library circulation figures have increased steadily, since its opening last year, said Library Director John Deats.

The branch has shown a steady increase in circulation and patrons since opening Nov. 10, Deats said.

Since January the branch has handled between 16 to 23 percent of the library system's total book circulation, Deats said.

Deats said he had expected a total book circulation of 50,000 for the year, a figure which has already been reached.

"We really didn't know what to expect. We thought we would do real well to do 50,000 a year. Now we have realized 50,000 and easily expect 70,000."

The main library has a circulation rate of about 300,000 books a year.

In July the branch began counting patrons at the request of the commissioners, Deats said.

That month 3,212 people visited the library, with an average of 105 visitors a day. In August the library had 3,412 people with an average of 133 patrons a day.

"At the rate we're going, if we maintain 15 percent or more of the overall library circulation, it's an investment well spent," he said.

However, the county has not had to invest any money in the branch since its opening in 1985, Deats said.

A $300,000 grant from the Abell-Hanger Foundation paid for part of the branch's $44,000 in construction costs and a $25,000 grant from the Friends of the Library paid for bookcase construction and furniture.

The rest of the branch's operation has been paid for from a $236,156 settlement with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the former First National Bank of Midland. About $127,000 is left.

The settlement came from interest on a $600,000 fund the failed bank set up to build a new library.

Since January the branch has handled between 16 to 23 percent of the library system's total book circulation.

Although rent at malls is traditionally very high, the county choose to locate there because they were offered 6 months free rent and a discount, Deats said.

Also the library wanted to locate a branch in an area where the city's population is growing.

"We were trying to find a north-west location geographically at the center of our population growth in a place everyone was familiar with," he said.

In 1986 the library paid about $896 a month for rent and utilities at the mall. This will increase to $1,354 a month in 1987.

With a budget of about $80,000 a year, the branch can probably operate another year-and-a-half without county money, Deats said.

"In part of '88 something's got to happen where we're taken under the umbrella of the county budget, if we're going to remain in business," he said.

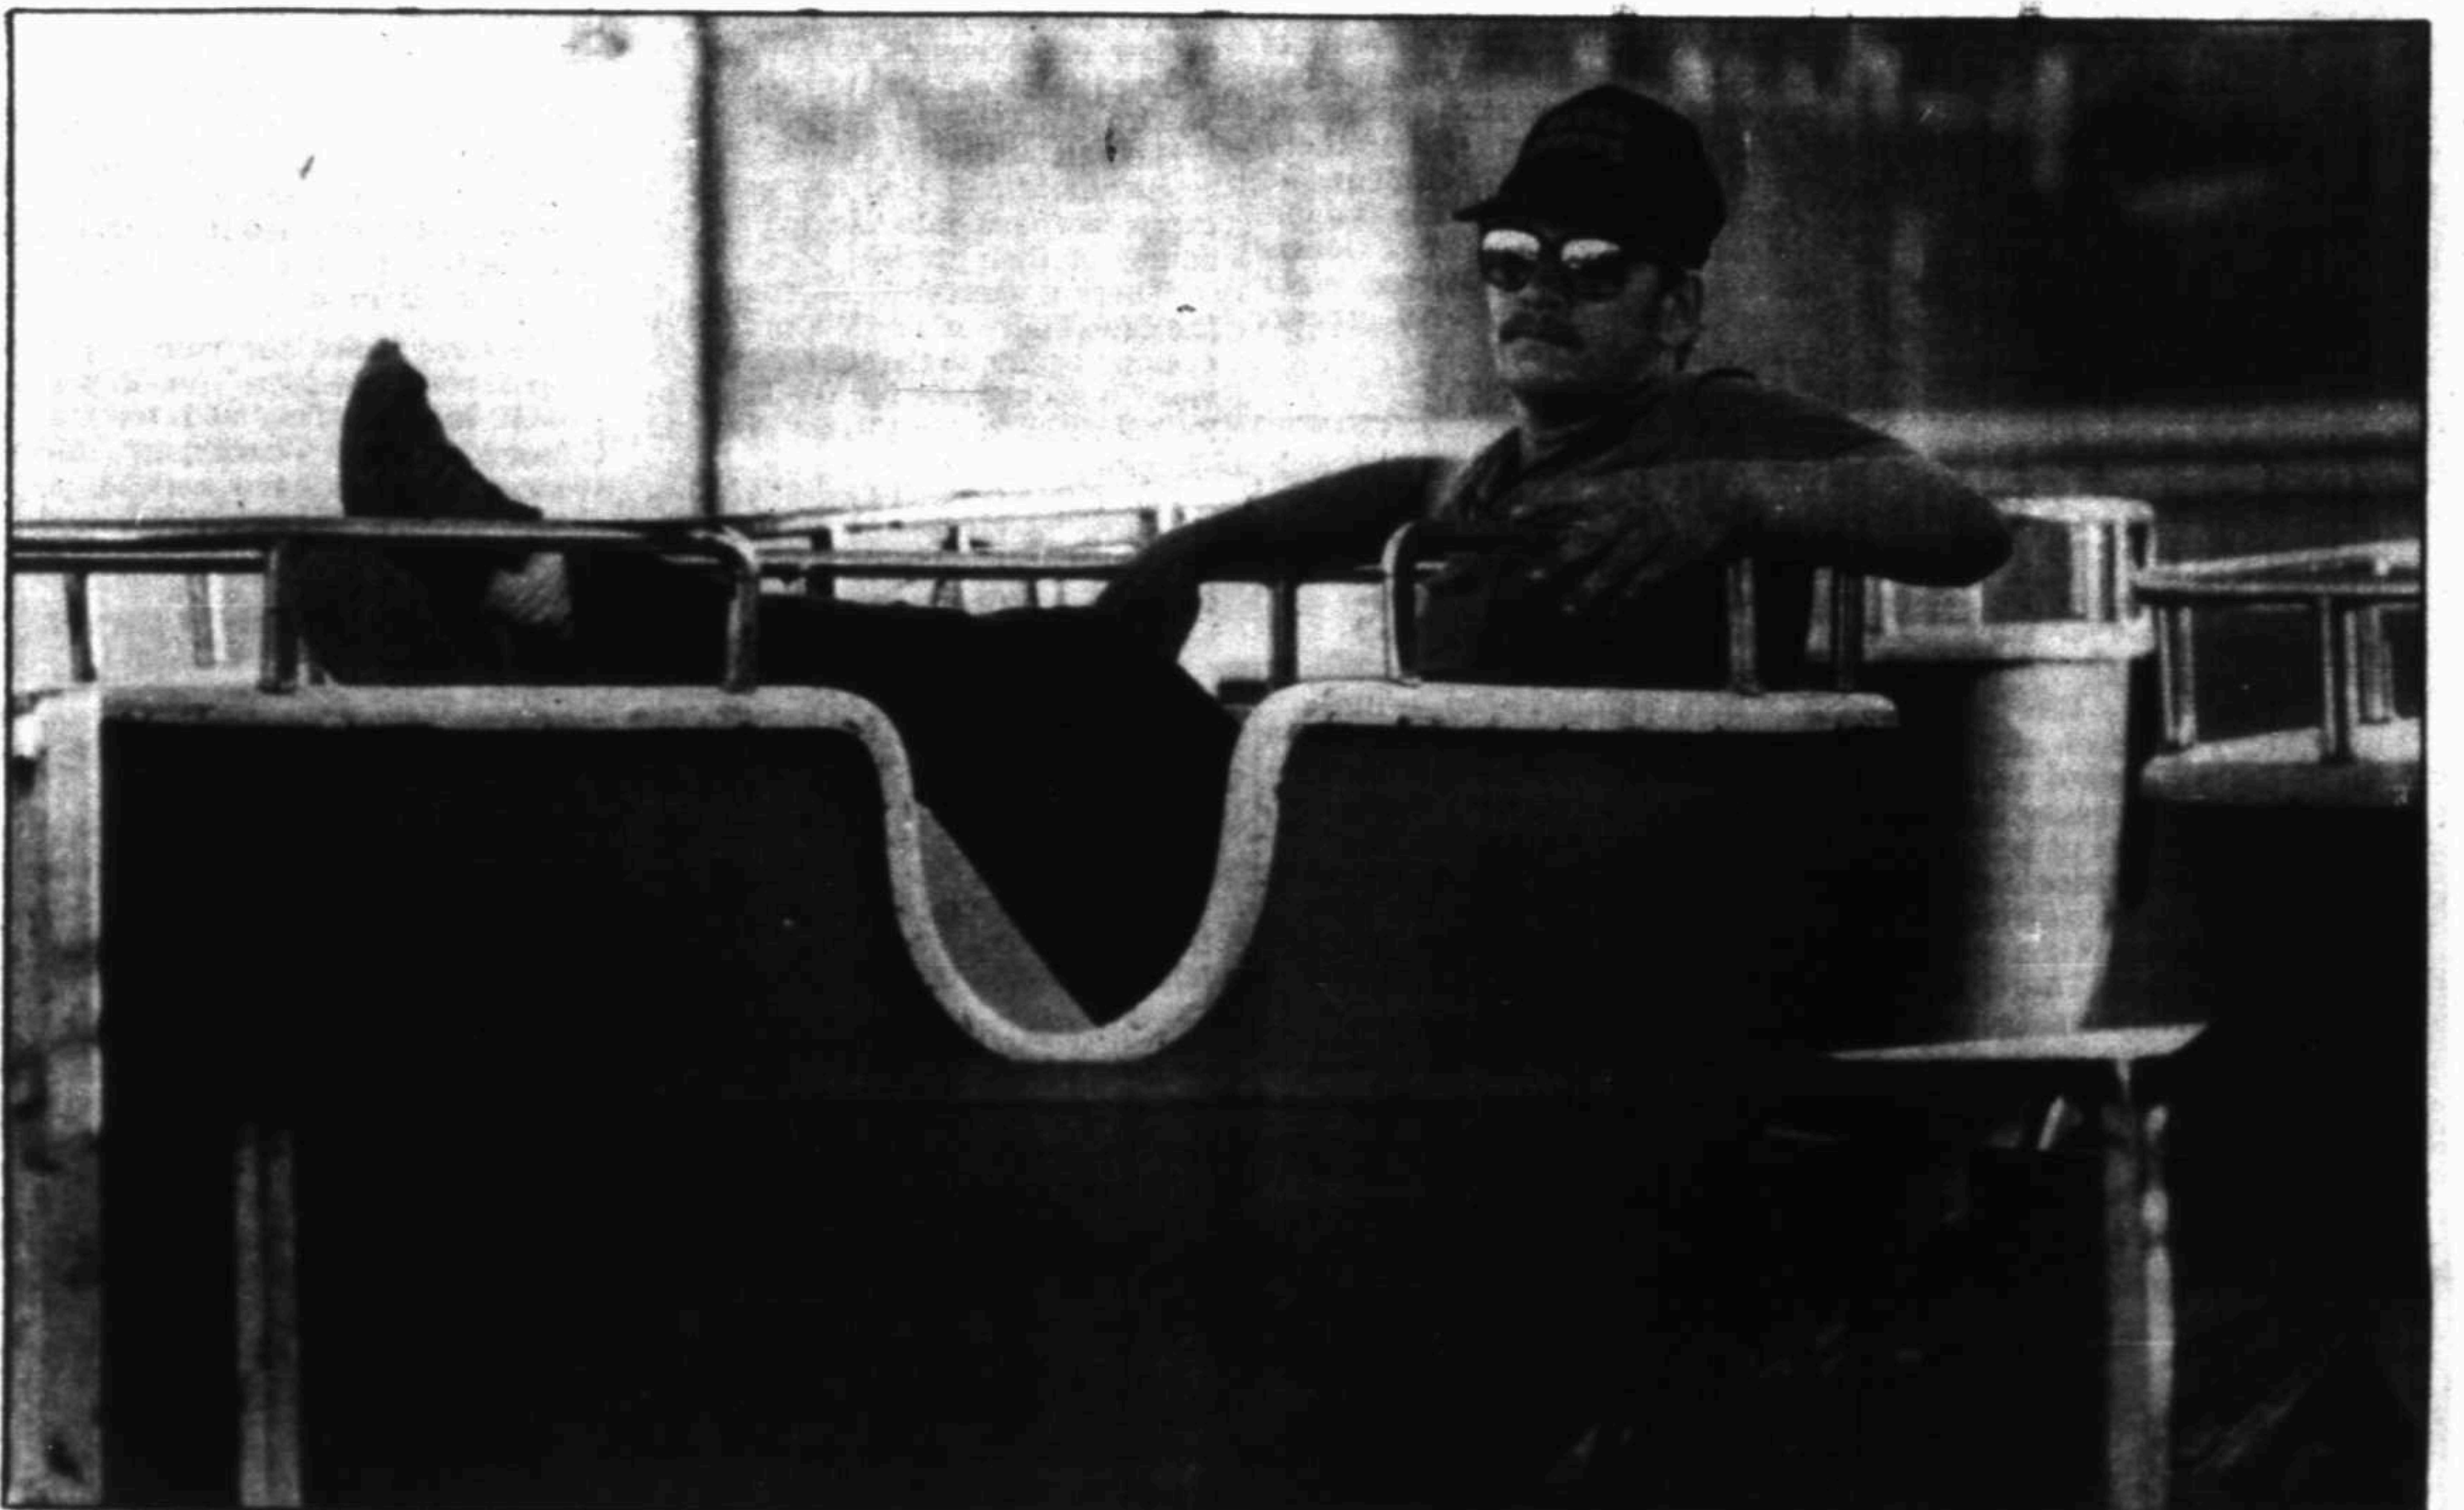

The commissioners said Midland's economy will decide within the next two years whether the library gets support.

"Our economic situation will dictate what happens in the future," Commissioner Winfree Brown said.

Commissioner Durward Wright said, "We're pleased with the situation at this point in time. We hope the economy will allow us to keep it open in the future and provide this very needed public service."

Deats said, "What would be tragic about having to close the branch is we have had a lot of community support and interest in it."

"If we ever had to close down the operation, I think it will be harder to ever open another branch," he said.

About 50,000 expected at fair

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — As many as 50,000 area residents are expected to pass through the gates before the 1986 Permian Basin Fair and Exposition closes at 6 p.m. Sunday.

Thursday was Senior Citizens' Day, with elder residents staging a variety show featuring singing and dancing.

Nearly 900 Ector County preschool and elementary school students were bused Thursday morning to the Ector County Coliseum grounds to ride some of the carnival rides, play some of the games and view the fair exhibitions.

Wednesday's opening day activities included the naming of 19-year-old Dawn Barton of Monahans winner of the Permian Basin Fair Scholarship contest.

Ms. Barton received a $1,600 scholarship, which she plans to use to attend Texas Tech in Lubbock.

First day attendance at the fair, 2,391, is slightly better than 1985, when 2,325 people turned out for the opening of the fair.

Activities this year include more than 40 carnival rides and games, food booths with fare to suit most every taste, nightly rescue demonstrations by Odessa fire fighters and stage shows every night featuring well-known entertainers.

A chili cookoff is slated for Saturday, and a barbecue cookoff will be one of the highlights Sunday.

The fair grounds open at 3 p.m. today and Saturday with activities continuing until 6 p.m. Sunday, the fair will open at 10 a.m. and remain open until 6 p.m.

In conjunction with fair activities, there will be a "hottest firefighter" contest at 8 p.m. tonight at the Odessa Hilton.

The annual Fireman's Ball will be held Saturday night at 8 p.m. at the Odessa Hilton.

Fair admission is $1 for children and $3 for adults, but from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. today, everyone was being admitted free of charge courtesy of Permian Distributors.

About $2,000 in items taken from home

From Staff Reports

A Midland man reported the burglary of almost $2,000 worth of property Thursday from his home, police said.

Christopher V. Garcia, 1700 North Fort Worth, reported the burglary of $1,765 in items, including a $700 sewing machine, a $200 hunting bow, a $150 oil painting, a $450 VCR, a $250 cable box and one $15 brass deer head bookend. The items were taken between 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday.

John C. Keffler, 905 West Kansas Ave., also reported a substantial loss of $1,565 worth of items through burglary.

Police Roundup

The items taken between 10 p.m. to 11 p.m. Thursday include a $300 .357 Magnum revolver, a $195 .22 caliber revolver, a $100 12-gauge shotgun, a $200 20-gauge shotgun, a $480 gold watch, a $100 silver watch, a $100 coin collection, $50 in change and $40 worth of shotgun cases, police report.

In other law enforcement reports, a Mercury Zephyr worth $1,500 was reported stolen between Tuesday and Thursday. Robert Stafford, address unknown, told police the car was stolen from 3007 Moss Ave.

Victor D. McGruder, West Wadley Ave. #35, reported the theft of $600 in cash around 11:30 p.m. Thursday from his residence.

Michael Sanders, 424 West Pecan Ave., Apt. A, reported the burglary of a $200 color television. The TV was taken between 9:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. Thursday, Sanders told police.

In Sheriff's Department reports, Cynthia Lynn Fought, Box 9712, reported the theft of a $600 homemade porch between 2:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday.

Man on trial in videotaped killing cleared, paper says

DALLAS (AP) — A 22-year-old man on trial for a Carrollton convenience store killing that was videotaped and later broadcast nationwide has been cleared, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

The newspaper, in a copyright story, said Marvin Maurice Wells is scheduled to be released today.

The Times Herald quoted unidentified sources on Thursday as saying that new evidence indicates Wells, charged with capital murder, is not the man who killed 17-year-old Matt McKay of Oklahoma City.

McKay, who was a customer in the store, was shot during the Nov. 21 robbery and died 18 days later.

Sources told the newspaper it was "determined conclusively" this week that Wells was not involved after investigators found his voice did not match that of the robber shown on the videotape.

Wells passed lie-detector tests administered during the Labor Day weekend. The district attorney's office asked Houston police for help in comparing his voice with that of the robber on the videotape.

Sources told the newspaper that a "voice print analysis" completed in Houston earlier this week confirmed Wells' innocence.

"The voices are very different," said one source. "They're different like the difference between Ronald Reagan and (former Congresswoman) Shirley Chisholm."

Authorities were searching Thursday night for a Dallas man who resembles Wells and who allegedly was one of three men who participated in the robbery.

Snelson, Smith debate slated

From Staff Reports

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association and the Midland Reporter-Telegram will co-sponsor a luncheon and debate featuring Pete Snelson and Lamar Smith, District 21 candidates for U.S. Congress. The debate will be held Thursday, Oct. 2, 1986, at noon at the Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center in Midland.

Advanced reservations for the luncheon are available from the PBPA office at $12 each. Admission to the event at the door, if seating is available, will be $15 each. To guarantee reservations, reservation forms and payment must reach the PBPA office by October 1.

Etta Mae Murray

ODESSA — Etta Mae Murray, 82, of Odessa, died Thursday in an Odessa nursing home.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Hubbard-Kelley Funeral Home chapel with Don Mitchell officiating. Burial will be at Sunset Memorial Gardens.

Mrs. Murray was born Aug. 18, 1904, in Fort Worth. She married A.W. Hoss Murray Feb. 16, 1924, in Fort Worth. He preceded her in death Jan. 25, 1981.

She was a homemaker and a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors include two sons, Jim Murray and Jack Murray, both of Odessa; two daughters, Juanita Swihart of Midland and Marie Anderson of Midwest City, Okla.; two brothers, Malcolm J. McGregor of Abilene and Charles McGregor of Waxahatchie; two sisters, Flora Largent of Odessa and Loma deBaun of Tucson; eight grandchildren; and 10 great-grandchildren.

30 others were arrested by university police during April demonstrations that violated campus rules. No charges were filed.

Disciplinary proceedings against the students were dropped this summer after UT President William Cunningham accepted an advisory committee recommendation to relax the limits on demonstrations.

Jim Simons, one of the attorneys filing the suit, told a news conference Thursday the arrests were illegal and violated guarantees of freedom of speech and assembly in the state constitution.

The spring demonstrations were in protest of UT System investments in companies that do business in South Africa.

Mexican Independence Day celebrated

By DAVID SEDENO

Associated Press Writer

With the Texas Sesquicentennial as a backdrop, celebrations begin this weekend for Mexican Independence Day, which commemorates the day in 1810 when a Mexican priest called on his countrymen to revolt against their Spanish rulers.

Beginning Saturday, thousands of people will gather in the Mexican-American communities across the state, listening to mariachi bands, patriotic speeches, viewing folkloric dancers and plays, crowning queens and eating ethnic foods.

The celebrations will climax Monday night when local dignitaries will cry for independence, trying to emulate the shout given by Father Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla on Sept. 15, 1810, in Dolores, Mexico.

The shout is known as "El Grito de Dolores" or the "Cry of Dolores." The priest, who later was executed for stirring revolt against the Spanish rulers, is regarded as the "Father of Mexican Independence."

Sept. 16 — diez y seis de septiembre — is regarded as Independence Day in Mexico, much like July 4th in the United States.

Although Texans have celebrated this year the state's 150-year independence from Mexico, many Mexican-Americans continue to celebrate Mexican Independence Day.

"I've always argued that Mexican-Americans are bicultural people. They have allegiance to two countries," said Dr. Arnoldo De Leon, a history professor at Angelo State University. "Their patriotic allegiance is to the United States and their cultural allegiance is to Mexico."

In Laredo, a parade on Saturday will wind down the streets of the border city into Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, which is hosting its annual nine-block fair and exposition. A softball tournament, 10 kilometer run, a fashion show and dances also are on the agenda in Laredo.

Mike Herrera III, chairman of the Laredo festivities, said the border celebration is unique.

"It's more of an authentic flavor because the ambience is so strong here because of the interaction of the two cultures," Herrera said. "That's what it really is: friendship and camaraderie."

In San Angelo, thousands are expected to gather on the grounds of Fort Concho for a four-day celebration, beginning Saturday. A scholarship pageant, a parade, food booths, Mexican rodeo, and historical pageant incorporating the Texas Sesquicentennial theme are among the attractions.

"We're going full blast," said event co-chairman Alma Perez. "I think we can celebrate diez y seis and the Sesquicentennial because we had Mexicans fighting at the Alamo."

De Leon, a Texas historian, has written a five-act historical play beginning with the conquest of the Aztecs by the Spaniards and the arrival of Mexicans in San Angelo in the 1800s and their evolution in that West Texas city.

He has added a sixth act portraying the roles of Mexican Texans during their fight with Mexico in the mid-1830s. Many Mexicans died while defending the Alamo in March 1836 after Texas, then a Mexican state, declared its independence from Mexico.

Celebrations also are planned in small towns and in the metropolitan areas of Austin, Houston, Dallas and San Antonio.

In the border town of Hidalgo, dignitaries from the city and Reynosa, Mexico, will place a wreath on statue of priest.

In Dallas, a parade is scheduled for Sunday and thousands are expected at Pike Park, west of downtown, to celebrate the event with food, songs, dances and speeches.

In Austin on Tuesday, State Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, will sponsor for the 11th year a noon celebration in the Capitol Rotunda.

Some Texas law officers staying out of Mexico

LAREDO (AP) — Just weeks after Mexican authorities pledged to cooperate in a U.S. effort to curtail drug smuggling, American law enforcement personnel have been told that armed U.S. officers will be detained in Mexico, according to published reports.

Although federal officials questioned the bulletin, some South Texas law enforcement agencies have ordered their officers to stay out of Mexico.

Mexican authorities denied plans to detain armed U.S. officers who carry weapons into Mexico in the course of their duties.

"There is absolutely no change in the law. There is no new order for customs agents to change their behavior," a spokesman for the Mexican Foreign Ministry in Mexico City said Thursday.

The ministry spokesman was responding to reports of a U.S. Customs bulletin that said U.S. law enforcement officers entering Mexico with weapons would be detained.

The bulletin was distributed to American law enforcement agencies along the U.S.-Mexico border, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Wednesday.

Customs sources in Dallas and El Paso verified the existence of the bulletin, but said they were unsure whether the information was accurate, the Star-Telegram said.

The paper said the bulletin was issued Tuesday by customs officials in Arizona and was based on information from informants in Mexico.

The Laredo News said the Mexican directive was contained in a message intercepted by U.S. intelligence sources in El Paso.

"We have heard the rumor over the past couple of days," Jim Mahan, a public affairs officer with the U.S. Customs office in Washington, said Wednesday. "We have noticed no change in the Mexican policy and there is certainly no change in our policy."

But Webb County Sheriff Mario L.

Santos said he advised his deputies Wednesday not to go into Mexico. The Laredo Police Department's chief of detectives, Lt. Ismael Alaridin, instructed his officers likewise, the News reported.

Laredo detectives previously had been instructed that they needed authorization before going into Mexico, the newspaper said.

An official at the Mexican Embassy in Washington quoted without identification by the Star-Telegram said he knew nothing of a plan to confiscate weapons.

Alfredo Paez Galindo, chief administrator of the Nuevo Laredo state judicial police, said armed U.S. law officers are only allowed into his country if they have a permit from the Mexican attorney general's office.

"We have had good relations with Laredo police officers," he said. "We hope they will continue to be that way."

Phil Jordan, special agent in charge of the DEA regional office in Dallas, which supervises drug agents in El Paso, said DEA agents will continue their work, which often includes carrying weapons into Mexico.

Jordan said he doubted the veracity of the information in the bulletin. "Based on the progress the attorney generals of both countries have been making, you would think we would have had some kind of inkling about this," he said.

One DEA agent was killed last year in Mexico and another was detained and allegedly tortured recently by Mexican police.

Last month, Mexican authorities pledged their cooperation in a massive U.S. effort aimed at curtailing drug smuggling across the border

Early morning fire damages house

From Staff Reports

A early morning house fire caused heavy heat and smoke damage to a Midland home, the fire department reports.

At 6:30 a.m. today four units from the fire department responded to a house fire on Rankin Highway about one-half mile south of Interstate 20. The occupant, Wes Bacon, Rt. 4, Box 3T, was not injured, the department says. The house is owned by D.M. Williams.

The fire took 1,500 gallons of water to extinguish, the department reports.

The fire originated in the home's garage, but by midmorning today the cause of the fire had not been determined.

Agricultural farm tour to zero in on cotton topics

An agricultural farm tour is slated for Thursday, Sept. 18, beginning at 9:30 a.m. The tour will be conducted at the Ervin Bauman farm, located at the junction of County Roads 1213 and 120.

Tour stops will include weed control in alfalfa and cotton; cotton insect management and economics; crop rotation; replanting cotton; and cotton and sorghum varieties. The tour will conclude with a question and answer period.

Speakers during the tour will include Richard Minzenmayer, County Extension Entomologist, Charles Allen, Extension Entomologist, Fort Stockton, and Charles Stiehler, Extension Agronomist, Fort Stockton.

Result demonstrations are conducted yearly through the cooperation of producers, product dealers, and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The Midland County Extension staff encourages you to attend the 1986 farm tour and review our research demonstrations.

The tour is sponsored by Midland County Integrated Pest Management and Field Crops Committee, Midland County Extension Service, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, and F.A.C. Committee.

A noon barbeque will be served courtesy of the Community National Bank.

Machine complexity, safety rules inhibiting farmers' daily chores

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — No one has bothered to count them, but there are probably thousands of farmers still around who were expert truck drivers and tractor operators before they reached their teens.

No big deal at the time. Farm boys and girls learned early to do chores around livestock and to handle machines. But as the machines grew in size and complexity, so have the risks. And insurance companies are getting fussier.

Gary L. Smith, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Maryland, says the recent concerns about the availability and rising costs of liability insurance are often as important to farmers as they are to other business operators.

In one local case, Smith said in a recent telephone interview from his office in College Park, Md., an insurance company threatened to cancel a farmer's policy if youths were hired to help with summer field work in violation of Maryland state child-labor laws.

But the company, he said, failed to note that Maryland state law excluded agriculture from child labor regulations.

There are still stiff rules affecting farmers, however, because Maryland stepped aside in favor of farm safety regulations administered by the federal government's Occupational Safety and Health Administration, Smith said.

"A lot of states simply rewrite the federal regs into their state regs," he said. "Maryland didn't do that. They just simply deferred to the federal code."

The 43rd National Farm Safety Week will be Sept. 21-27, an annual observance intended to call attention to farm safety and the hazards faced by families who produce the nation's food.

Farm safety, with the advent of insurance liability problems, has put an additional economic responsibility on producers and their families. In an effort to help explain the situation, Smith prepared a report on the federal order regulating the employment of youths on farms.

Generally, the report said, it is unlawful to hire anyone under 16 to do

AGRICULTURE

If a 14- or 15-year-old wants to hire out to work with tractors over 20 horsepower or general machinery described as hazardous, the youth "must enroll and successfully complete the approved training programs offered by the Cooperative Extension Service 4-H Program in your state or by the Vocational Agriculture department in your local school system."

— Gary L. Smith

any job listed as hazardous unless the work is on a farm owned or operated by the youth's parent or legal guardian.

Another partial loophole allows hiring if the youth has a training certificate which provides exemption from specific hazardous jobs, or is employed under a cooperative student-labor program in which there is a written agreement between the employer and the school.

The job activities listed as hazardous for anyone under 16 include operating a tractor of more than 20 horsepower or connecting or disconnecting an implement or any of its parts to or from such a tractor.

Another hazardous category is general machinery, which includes operation or assisting in operation of any of the following machines: corn picker, cotton picker, grain combine, hay mower, forage harvester, hay baler, potato digger, mobile pea viner, feed grinder, crop dryer, forage blower, auger conveyor, the unloading mechanism of a non-gravity-type self-unloading wagon or trailer, post-hole digger, power post driver or non-walking rotary tiller.

If a 14- or 15-year-old wants to hire out to work with tractors over 20 horsepower or general machinery described as hazardous, the youth "must enroll and successfully complete the approved training programs offered by the Cooperative Extension Service 4-H Program in your state or by the Vocational Agriculture department in your local school system," the report said.

Other jobs on the federal list of hazardous occupations which are generally denied hired youths under 16, with the exception of those on the farm of their parents or guardian, include the operation of specialized machines such as trenchers or earth-moving equipment, forklifts, potato combines and power saws.

The list also includes:

— Working around places occupied by a bull, boar or stud horse maintained for breeding purposes, or sow with suckling pigs or cow with newborn calf.

— Felling, bucking, skidding, loading or unloading woodlot timber having a butt diameter of more than six inches.

— Ladder and scaffold work at heights over 20 feet for painting, repairing or building structures, pruning trees or picking fruit.

— Driving a bus, truck or automobile when transporting passengers or riding on a tractor as a passenger or helper.

— Working inside a toxic atmosphere, including the cleaning or decontamination of equipment, disposal or return of empty containers, or serving as a flagman for aircraft applying chemicals.

— Handling or using blasting agents, including dynamite, black powder, sensitized ammonium nitrate, blasting caps and primer cord.

— Transporting, transferring or applying anhydrous ammonia fertilizer.

Oklahoma wheat farmers warned to watch for Russian wheat aphids

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma wheat farmers, used to detecting greenbugs on the underside of their plants' leaves, now are being warned to examine their fields for a new insect that poses a threat to their crops.

The Russian wheat aphid is a small insect that already has been located in southeastern Colorado and the panhandles of Oklahoma and Texas.

First identified in the wheat-growing areas of Russia, the aphid moved to the middle European countries. From there, it spread to Mexico and South Africa. In the African wheat fields, it became agriculture's public enemy number one, according to Chris Rink, assistant director of the Oklahoma Wheat Commission.

Miles Karner, Oklahoma State area entomologist at Altus, was one of several scientists called in recently to help identify the aphid when it was suspected in wheat fields around Amarillo, Texas.

Karner said he believes the insect poses a real threat to Oklahoma wheat. He urged farmers to get their feet muddy and start looking at volunteer wheat plants in their fields.

"We really don't know much about the Russian wheat aphid's ability to stay alive in this area during the summer," Karner said. "Although there hasn't been any wheat down yet, the wet weather has brought up a lot of volunteer wheat."

He said as soon as they can get out in their fields, Oklahoma farmers should start looking for the Russian wheat aphid.

"If they see something like it, they should let us know real quick," Karner said.

While it is a small aphid like the greenbug, the Russian aphid is different looking and is found in a different part of a wheat plant, Karner said. Greenbugs are found on the underside of wheat plant leaves. They are oval-shaped and have a green racing stripe down their backs.

"The Russian wheat aphid has a long, spindle-shaped body," Karner said. "It has a pointed abdomen and there is no racing stripe on its back. It is found at the base of the area of the plant in the whorl where the leaves start to come out of the wheat stem. This is where the new leaves meet the stem of the plant."

While wheat can outgrow problems with the greenbug, this is not necessarily the case with the Russian wheat aphid, Karner said. This insect has the potential to kill wheat right up the heading stage of the plant's growth. The toxin the insect injects into the wheat plant when it is feeding is thought to be more virulent to the plant than the greenbug's toxin, Karner said.

"Wheat farmers in the panhandle areas of Texas and Oklahoma found the Russian wheat aphid can kill young wheat plants before they ever suspect its presence," he said. "Farmers and entomologists are used to looking under the wheat plant's leaves for greenbugs. They aren't used to looking down into the creases of the new leaves emerging from the plant stem."

RICHARD MINZENMAYER

Caution: Excessive plowing can be costly operation

As farmers complete their harvest operations and turn to the matter of land preparation, they need to be cautious about plowing too much.

Excessive plowing is a costly operation.

More and more farmers are paying closer attention to the number of trips they make over a field each year. Farmers who used to plow their land 12 to 15 times a year are now down to five or six times or less. And that's still too many, in some cases.

Plowing for whatever reason is expensive. And with farmers currently fighting for financial survival, it just makes good sense to cut back on field operations.

Be sure any tillage operation affords some crop benefits that will contribute to higher yields rather than just appearance. Combine operations where possible so that more is accomplished with each field pass.

Excessive plowing also can lead to soil compaction, which in turn can reduce crop yields due to poor water infiltration, poor root penetration and other problems that rob soils of their productivity.

With today's large tractors — some weigh more than 10 tons without attached implements — compaction can be a real problem, particularly on wet, coarse-textured soils. Not only do tractor wheels compact the soil, they also produce large clods that break out upon tillage. This leads to additional tillage to break up the clods, leading to further compaction.

Although some compacted soils can be broken up by deep tillage and chiseling, the best way to deal with soil compaction problems is to prevent them in the first place by reducing tillage operation.

Not only will your land be better off with less tillage, but your bank account should also improve.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Jacqueline Bisset, singer-actress Nell Carter, singer Mel Torme, Claudette Colbert, Baltimore catcher Rick Dempsey, actresses Eileen Fulton and Barbara Bain, Ray Charles, producer Leland Hayward, bluegrass singer Bill Monroe, author Theodore Roosevelt Jr., writer J.B. Priestley.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A busy day lies ahead, perhaps even a trip to visit friends or family members. New plans can be firm up. You find a delightful way to combine business with fun.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Those who possess artistic or literary talent receive good news today. Return phone calls promptly. Your independent streak wins you many admirers.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Recent gains are the result of a brand new attitude. Member of opposite sex makes a lasting impression. A long-standing friendship could become something more. Take your time in romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Invite one or two close friends over. A moneymaking business proposition could be part of the picture. You receive some news that helps you set new priorities. Consult loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Distant affairs assume a new importance. Take any unexpected developments in stride. Pay more attention to educational opportunities, especially if you are just starting up the career ladder. Learn new skills.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Some pleasing but startling changes are on the horizon. Self-discipline helps you achieve your personal goals. Aim high!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Short trips can be very profitable. Take along a pleasant individual who shares your interests. The prospect of a career or lifestyle change excites you. Review your options.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do your grocery shopping early and get your household organized. Seek family members' cooperation in holding down spending. Romance adds glamour to your evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You enjoy a busy social life today. An innocent flirtation could turn out to be the real thing. An old friend shares a delicious secret! Plan a very special evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): This is no time to procrastinate. Quit sitting on the fence and make a decision. Investments, especially those in real estate, pay bigger dividends. Making a special gesture wins loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Try something new before you get stuck in a rut. Trust your intuition. Travel for pleasure. Creative projects flourish. Adopt a live-and-let-live attitude toward adult offspring. Be tolerant.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A good weekend to plan for your family's financial security. Minor disagreements should be no cause for concern. New developments make you feel better about something you did a long time ago.

third spade East discards a heart. What next?
Claim your contract before you make a mistake! If the opponents insist on your playing out the hand, simply throw West in with his remaining spade. He is down to nothing but hearts and clubs, so he will have to concede the 12th trick to you in whichever suit he elects to lead.
Should East show out on the second spade, you will have to rely on one of the two finesses, combined with the minuscule possibility of a squeeze. Therefore, it is slightly better to cross to dummy with a diamond and take the club finesse first. If it loses, win any return, run your diamonds and, since you won't be sure of the position, take the heart finesse.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Texas woman makes pageant 'supersuit'

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Common sense says that swimsuits bare all flaws. Ada Duckett, swimsuit maker to three Miss Americas, knows better. Mrs. Duckett created the so-called supersuit, which pageant superstition says increases a contestant's chances of winning swimsuit competition.

Nine Miss America Pageant contestants this year purchased Mrs. Duckett's custom-made, $150 Lycra and cotton suits, with white being the overwhelming favorite color.

In the past year, Mrs. Duckett and her assistant, Ann Bogart, made about 200 suits for pageant contestants in 25 states.

Countless other contestants wear suits closely modeled after Mrs. Duckett's and stitched by seamstresses in Mississippi. Of the 17 women in Wednesday night's preliminary swimsuit competition at the Miss America Pageant, 10 wore suits in the distinctive supersuit style.

"There's not one girl I fit I can call perfect," Mrs. Duckett, a war bride from Italy who now lives in Arlington, Texas, said during an interview here this week.

But by altering a seam, tightening a strap, or raising the suit's plunging back by fractions of an inch, Mrs. Duckett said she can compensate for what months of dieting, hours of intensive workouts, and nature have missed.

The result is a shape in the Miss America mold.

The supersuit is simple with a V-neck and a rounded V-shape low back. The original had a bar strap across the back and attached to each of the shoulder straps. A variation without the bar strap is now available, too. Underneath the bust is a band of material about two inches wide at the side seams, gradually narrowing toward the center.

Mrs. Duckett said she doesn't know who dubbed it the supersuit.

DU BOIS, Pa. (AP) — Forget Roy Rogers, Rory Calhoun or John Wayne. To those at the seventh annual Tom Mix fan roundup, the raven-haired idol of radio and the silver screen was the most enduring Western star ever to saddle up.

"If you talk about Western stars, the first person you think of is Tom Mix, not John Wayne. John Wayne is at the bottom. Tom Mix is at the top," said Hal Verb, 56, of San Francisco.

Verb and other Tom Mix fans from across the country, and a few from Europe, began stampeding into this central Pennsylvania town Thursday for a four-day festival honoring the film star who came to be called "King of the Cowboys."

Mix's publicists often claimed he hailed from the West, but most festival participants are certain he was born in nearby Mix Run in 1880 and moved to Du Bois at age 8. Several old-timers in town recall seeing Mix as a young boy.

"He used to ride the cows back from the pasture to the barn," said A.C. Nelson, 82. "I always said that's where he learned to ride. He had no bridle, no saddle. He just rode them."

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Diana Ross says the Central Park playground she's building as a gift from her violence-plagued 1983 concert is designed with the safety of children in mind.

"Some of the playgrounds I've seen, as I've traveled throughout America and even Europe, you find the swings that pinch the fingers and the concrete that might hurt if they fell down," Miss Ross said Thursday at the groundbreaking for the playground she helped design.

"So my intent in creating this playground is safety first," said Miss Ross, who was accompanied by her husband and three young daughters.

"Diana Ross, who has given us all the gift of song and music, has given our children the gift of play, swings and slides, jungle gyms and firepoles and cooling sprinklers," said Parks Commissioner Henry Stern.

The 1983 concert was marred first by a rainstorm that forced one day's postponement, then by marauding youths who assaulted patrons afterward.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Jerry Falwell says Jimmy Carter "continues to have my love and prayers" even though the former president said that the TV evangelist who often criticized his administration "can go to hell."

Carter, discussing religion during a question-and-answer session before delivering a speech Thursday at Meredith College, said Falwell had challenged the piety of people who supported some of Carter's initiatives.

"I don't let Jerry Falwell or anyone else define for me what is a Christian," he said. "There was a time when Falwell said anybody who supports the Panama Canal treaty is not a Christian, anybody who supports SALT II is not a Christian, anybody who supports the Department of Education is not a Christian."

"In a very Christian way, as far as I'm concerned he can go to hell," Carter said with a grin. His audience of perhaps 250 students burst into cheers and applause.

Falwell, whose ministry is based in Lynchburg, Va., issued a response through his assistant, Mark DeMoss.

"I have too much respect for President Carter as our former head of state and a brother in Christ to believe he would tell anyone to go to hell," he said. "I choose to believe he was either misquoted or taken out of context. He continues to have my love and prayers."

NEW YORK (AP) — A final bash for Lady Liberty next month will be Lee Iacocca's last official act as chairman of the foundation that led the project to restore the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island.

The Chrysler Corp. chairman said he would like to see the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation "bring in new blood to continue the work."

"I didn't realize when I took the job on, how much work it would entail," Iacocca said Thursday.

The gala, scheduled for Oct. 28 — the 100th anniversary of the statue's day of dedication, will consist of a musical salute at Avery Fisher Hall, featuring the world premiere of "On Freedom's Ground: An American Cantata," by William Schuman, with a text by poet Richard Wilbur.

The piece will be performed by The New York Philharmonic Orchestra, said Claudia Peltz, who along with her husband, Nelson, the chairman of Triangle Industries, and Iacocca and his wife, Peggy, will head the event.

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Uncertainty factor in oil business

By JIM MAY and MARTI VERMILLION

DEAR COPING: So far I have managed to do all right even though our income is off considerably. After I got laid off, my wife found a job and I have been able to find some work here and there.

However, the uncertainty really gets to me sometimes. If I knew that the oil business was going to stay like this, I would go do something else, but if it's going to improve I want to stay — it's the only business I know. What would you suggest? — FW, Midland

May

Vermillion

The first step of this process is to create a family budget. As Steve Huggins of Price Waterhouse recently observed on "Permian Basin Perspective," it is important to state what assets and resources the family has and how they will be used on a daily basis.

A budget is like a road map for the family to all review and agree upon a path to take — and to help reduce some of the uncertainty, while facing a personal journey within the context of a much larger industry one.

DEAR COPING: Recently several of my friends have had to declare bankruptcy.

While I still see them at different functions, I would like to say something to them but I really don't know what to say. What could I say that might help? Jim DEAR JIM: Sadly enough, financial failure is part of the present economic environment.

We all know that in such a severe economic downturn such failure is inevitable, but such insight doesn't necessarily make one feel a whole lot better. It is very akin to a death in the family — no one can really deny the physical reality, but knowing that doesn't make it any easier on the family.

In such a public statement of such a private matter (our finances), those experiencing bankruptcy often feel a greater guilt and sense of loss of self-esteem than those who have lost a job.

While it does help somewhat to at least be caught in a trap experienced by many, research points to the highly personal and profound nature of financial loss.

What can we do? Be a good friend. Offer support as they and their families pass through an often grief-filled process. They don't want our pity, rather our friendship, just as before.

DEAR COPING: I have recently had to go back to work as a teacher to help the family out financially. Occasionally one of my friends will very innocently say something like, "Why did you go back to work, I didn't know you liked teaching that much?"

I am at a loss for a real good answer, I know what I would like to say but wouldn't dare. Do you have a really quick response to such a question? JB

DEAR JB: We are not real quick, and your question is a good one.

We assume you would like to have a good response to an "innocent" question that would respond to the question, but maybe convey "how tacky of you to ask."

We would like to ask our readers for their help on this one. Well, readers, this is your chance to help. Send us your best responses and we'll share them with JB.

DEAR ABBY

'Lady-in-waiting' exiled

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My world is about to fall apart. I'm 68 and "George" is 70. We both lost our mates, and found love again with each other. It was like a dream. Then this came to light: George has a 38-year-old, twice-divorced daughter who is self-supporting but has moved back "home" with a girlfriend to look after her father and run his house. "Stella" is spoiled rotten and bosses her father around as though he were a child. He's a kind, gentle man who had been bossed by his deceased wife for 43 years, and now this daughter is taking up where her mother left off.

George will not stand up for himself, hoping the situation will solve itself. He doesn't want Stella to know that he bought me a new car and a lovely piece of jewelry as a wedding gift. He told her I already had them. I don't like all this deceit.

We have been married for seven months, and we are not even living together because his daughter is there and he says it will be too crowded with me there, too. Abby, I am his wife!

I didn't know all this was going to happen. George says neither did he, but Stella is his daughter, and he can't say no to her. So where does that leave me? — HUMILIATED

DEAR HUMILIATED: That leaves you outside looking in, which is where you will remain unless George sends Stella packing and moves you into his home where you belong.

Unfortunately, this is hardly a realistic expectation from what you've told me. Face it, you married a kind and gentle man — but a weak one — who can't stand up to his daughter. Don't waste any more time waiting for the problem to solve itself. Give George a deadline. You're not his wife. You're his lady-in-waiting.

(Is your social life in a slump? Lonely? Get Abby's updated, revised and expanded booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Drinking problem for many teens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Studies show 10 to 20 percent of America's teen-agers have a significant drinking problem, reports Clinical Psychiatry News.

Reporting on two studies, the medical publication says that by age 13 about 30 percent of boys and 22 percent of girls drink alcohol, and by age 18, 92 percent of boys and 73 percent of girls drink alcohol.

In another national study involving more than 13,000 adolescents, 11 percent drank at least once a week and consumed five or more drinks on each occasion. All studies reported a higher prevalence of drinking among boys than girls.

The publication says alcohol abuse also appears to be a prerequisite for drug abuse. Illicit drug use is almost non-existent among non-drinking teens, while more than 97 percent of drug-abusing adolescents in one study were drinkers.

ASK DR. RUTH

Girl wants friendship to remain just friendship

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Q. It was strictly friendship, no hint of romance, love or sex for four full years and then my male pal decided that sex with a nice sensible girl like me would be just the thing. Now how am I going to tell him sex is not what I want with him, or that he isn't what I want with sex? I don't want to hurt his ego or hurt his feelings.

Westheimer

A. Or lose that friendship, right? But there is little you can do, the truth being the truth. You can write him a sensible letter, friendly but not phony, and tell him that after being friends with him for so long you are hooked on it. Say you have to feel complimented but you want to go on being friends with him while you both look for whatever life holds.

And then call him up and suggest you do whatever you usually do with him — go to a movie, stop at a bar afterwards, whatever. Avoid long talking-out of this issue because it can only keep it alive. Let it be just a memory that fades. Try it.

Q. My dorm friends and I are all virgins and glad you have been giving us moral support about not giving in to pressure and not feeling freaky. But we are full of curiosity. What is an orgasm like? And do we have to masturbate or have experience now to have orgasms later on?

A. Absolutely not, to that last question. When the time comes, just relax and have a great time. Masturbating is harmless, sometimes instructive, but not required. An orgasm is a reflex, a contraction of the uterus and vagina, which some women do feel and some don't. Many who don't feel it at first can develop the ability to feel it as a pleasant experience.

It can be mild or intense, and should be taken as it comes. You have probably heard it compared to a sneeze. Some sneezes just happen, or they don't build up or amount to much, and others follow two or three involuntary intakes of breath and come as a thrill of release, with a resolution period afterwards. An orgasm is usually more pleasurable and intense, but much like that.

Q. I'm 19, my girlfriend is 16 and not allowed to have males in the house while her mother is working 3-to-midnight. Well, her mother caught me there and went into a screaming rage and now my girl isn't supposed to see me at all and we have to sneak, which I resent. We weren't doing anything. In fact, we have never had sex, but if I phone to explain her mother hangs up.

A. At 16 that girl is young. Naturally her mother is concerned, and makes rules about when she is out making a living. If this hard-working mother is unreasonable, remember, she let you see the girl before you broke her rule. Give this some time; mothers have been known to relent in their objections.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Nicaragua's Ortega in Peking on four-day visit

PEKING (AP) — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega arrived in Peking on Thursday for a four-day official visit.

Ortega was greeted at the Peking airport by Qian Qunying, minister of water resources and electric power.

China and Nicaragua normalized relations last December.

The Chinese have said that they support Ortega and his leftist Sandinista government in their battle against U.S.-supported Contra rebels, but that China will not supply weapons to Nicaragua.

Ortega plans to leave Sunday for North Korea.

vention can put an end to this bureaucratic red tape, help my family leave and save my brother's life."

Mrs. Fierov wants to go to Israel to donate bone marrow for her brother, who is stricken with leukemia. A successful marrow transplant could save his life, and as a sibling her marrow is more likely to match his than that from a non-relative.

Her brother, Michael Shirman, emigrated to Israel with their mother in 1980. The mother's bone marrow has been determined to be incompatible with Shirman's.

Mrs. Fierov initiated the emigration action in March, after being told by Soviet authorities that a travel visa to Israel was impossible because Moscow and Tel Aviv have no diplomatic relations.

Tons of drugs seized in Iran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Police in Iran seized more than 11 tons of narcotics between March 22 and July 22 in a nationwide crackdown, Iran's official news agency reported.

The Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said Thursday that Hojatoleslam Serajeddin Musavi, commander of the Islamic Revolution Komitehs, made the announcement in the southern city of Shiraz Wednesday.

IRNA did not say what narcotics were seized. Most past seizures have involved heroin and cocaine.

Daniloff's wife not talking to safeguard negotiations

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS

MOSCOW (AP) — The wife of jailed American reporter Nicholas Daniloff today awaited news about negotiations to free her husband but heeded the advice of the U.S. Embassy and declined to comment on the case.

"Clearly there are top-level negotiations going on, and the embassy doesn't want me to be discussing it now," Ruth Daniloff said. Her 51-year-old husband is jailed at Lefortovo Prison on espionage charges.

Daniloff has proposed that both he and Gennadiy Zakharov, a Soviet citizen jailed in New York on spy charges, be released to their respective embassies pending their trials. His jailers reportedly have indicated support for the plan.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, however, said Thursday in Washington that the Reagan administration would not settle for the temporary release of Daniloff to the U.S. ambassador in Moscow.

The New York Times today quoted unidentified State Department officials as saying the Soviets in three days of negotiations have said they would allow the U.S. News & World Report newsmen to return home only as part of an exchange for Zakharov.

Steve Hurst, Moscow correspondent for NBC News, said he was summoned Thursday by an official of the Communist Party Central Committee staff who told him that any deal to free Daniloff would have to include Zakharov.

"It's for sure that Zakharov must be released as well. Be sure both men must be involved," Hurst quoted the official as saying.

Daniloff, who was arrested Aug. 30, has said he was detained after a Soviet acquaintance handed him a package later found to contain documents marked "secret." He has denied the spying charges against him.

Hurst quoted the Central Committee official as saying the Soviet Union was surprised by "how high-level the support has become for Daniloff. We feel the CIA is lying to the president, is keeping from (him) the truth about Daniloff being a CIA agent."

Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir V. Petrovsky said Thursday that the two nations were in contact about the case and that he believed a solution was possible, but declined to be more specific.

Petrovsky insisted the Soviets were trying to prevent Daniloff's jailing from spoiling chances for improved U.S.-Soviet relations.
