One winning ticket

One ticket purchased in the Panhandle correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The ticket is worth $10 million. The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 23, 25, 30, 37, 46 and 48. In addition to the jackpot winner, there were 70 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $3,953. There were 5,531 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $180. And there were 132,789 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Votes 'not there'

WASHINGTON — Senior lawmakers said Sunday that President Clinton has not adequately articulated his Bosnia policy and lacks the votes in Congress for approval of military action against Bosnian Serbs. "Ordinary members of Congress are really frustrated," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. "They are crying out for more information. They want to hear the roles, the objectives, and the costs articulated."/4A

Gas prices rise

LOS ANGELES — The price of gasoline at the nation's pumps increased slightly since mid-April, an oil industry publication said Sunday. The average price, including all grades at full- and self-serve pumps, was 116.67 cents a gallon in the May 7 survey, up .81 cent from the previous survey on April 16, the Lundberg Survey reported.

NIGHTMARE WITH NO END

A victim of domestic violence tells her story

By Sandy Shore
Associated Press writer

DENVER — The first inkling of trouble was when the chickens died.

Returning home late from work, Stephanie Sund was met by her boyfriend, Jeff Thomas. Her dogs, he said, had killed some of her chickens and her landlord had ordered him off the property. Confused, Ms. Sund confronted the landlord; he would say only that Thomas was violent and she should avoid him.

"When he said that, it scared me. I got this sick pit in my stomach and I thought, 'Boy, he better not be right,' " she said.

But he was. In the next seven months, Thomas verbally abused her, harassed her, threatened her.

And then, on Feb. 25, 1992, Thomas gunned her down outside the Fort Collins Police Department as she ran for help. In her hand, she clutched a restraining order against the man with whom she had lived.

Much has happened since she was shot. Thomas, 30, is serving a life term for the attack. Ms. Sund has recuperated from her wounds. She and another victim of domestic vio-

Twisters rip Dallas area, kill at least 1

■ Officials estimate damage in tens of millions of dollars.

By Bill Hanna and Jack Douglas Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

WYLIE — Tornadoes struck northeast Texas on Sunday with little or no warning, killing one person and injuring at least 60 as buildings were flattened and a hospital was evacuated. Damages were estimated in the tens of millions of dollars.

Hardest hit by the swarm of twisters was Wylie, a town of 8,700 residents about 22 miles northeast of Dallas.

Few details were immediately available about the death, other than that the victim was believed to be a man in his 30s who died when the storm ripped into Wylie's Glen Knol mobile-home park. He was found in the rubble of his mobile home, which had been flipped on its side by the tornado.

Two people from the mobile-home park were unaccounted for, Wylie City Manager Steve Norwood said. "We're still trying to look for some people, but we've got most of the people accounted for," he said. "It looks like most people survived this."

Those hurt were sent to area hospitals. Ambulance helicopters in Dallas were on standby.

But most of the injuries were said to be minor, mainly cuts and bruises from flying debris. Officials expressed relief that the ferocity of the storms did not cause more casualties.

In addition to Wylie, tornadoes were confirmed in Sachse, northeast of Dallas, and near Terrell in Kaufman County farther east. There were also unconfirmed reports of at least one tornado touching down near Waxahachie to the west, the National Weather Service said.

The most devastating twister cut a swath through the center of Wylie about 2:15 p.m. Sunday, catching people by

Study: Defense cuts hit job market

By Robert Burns
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Work in U.S. manufacturing industries is the scarcest in nearly three decades, and those jobs — once the backbone of the American economy — are due for still heavier blows as the effects of defense spending cuts take hold.

A study by a Labor Department economist estimates that if President Clinton's proposed defense cuts are carried out, 594,000 manufacturing jobs will disappear between now and 1997. That's even more slots than the military itself would lose.

What's worse, the study says, the de-

Pope reddens with rage at Mafia bosses

AGRIGENTO, Sicily (AP) — Pope John Paul II lashed out at Mafia bosses Sunday, warning they face the wrath of God unless they forsake their evil ways.

"God once said, 'Don't kill.' Man, any man, any group of men, the Mafia, can't change and trample this most sacred law of God!" the pope said in a voice shaking with rage, his face reddening.

The outburst at the end of his visit to this Mafia bastion was the Roman Catholic Church's strongest condemnation of organized crime. The tongue-lashing came in impromptu remarks at the close of an outdoor Mass beneath a hilltop cluster of 5th century B.C. Doric temples.

The pope exclaimed that people here have the right to live "without murder victims, without fears, without threats."

Referring to mobsters, the pope said, "these who have on their consciences the weight of so many human victims, must understand — must understand! — that they can't be allowed to kill innocents.

"I say to those responsible, 'Repent!' One day the judgment of God will come," he said.

John Paul urged Sicilians to reject "Mafia culture, which is a culture of death."

Senate panel must decide if Packwood lied to voters

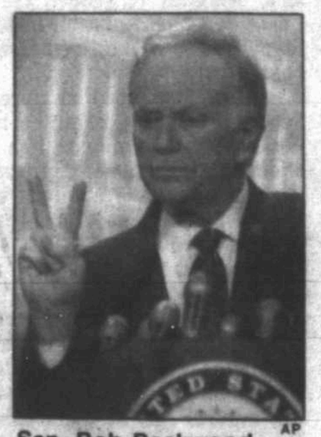

WASHINGTON (AP) — The case of Sen. Bob Packwood enters uncharted legal territory when a Senate panel hears legal arguments today on unseating the Oregon Republican for allegedly defrauding the voters of his state.

The stated offense: lying to reporters to block pre-election news stories about his sexual conduct.

The Rules Committee session will take the normally dry form of lawyers arguing a case before 16 senators.

But underlying the legalities is a volatile political issue: how the Senate deals with a colleague accused by nearly two-dozen women — former employees and acquaintances — of making unwanted sexual ad-

Clinton shuffles on Btu tax; lobbyists try to kill measure

By Steven Greenhouse
N.Y. Times News Service

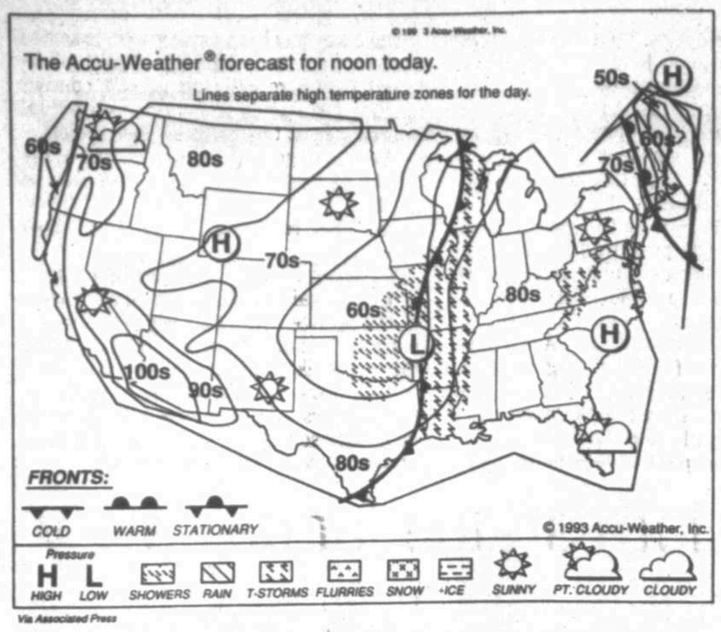

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration has altered major facets of its proposed energy tax in response to political pressures and is now struggling to rescue the tax against a horde of lobbyists straining to pick it apart.

Some of Washington's most potent industry groups — the National Association of Manufacturers, the American Petroleum Institute and the American Farm Bureau — have vowed to kill the tax altogether, while dozens of other lobbies are mounting a major effort to amend the administration's proposals.

Although some lobbyists say they have a good chance to kill the tax outright, administration officials and many members of Congress predict it will survive surprise as it destroyed or heavily damaged buildings and caused a massive power outage.

Near the intersection of state Highway 78 and FM 544, a Brookshire's grocery store, an Eckerd drug store and a motor bank were heavily damaged. A Subway sandwich shop was leveled and the golden arches of a McDonald's sign were mangled.

The tornado then skipped over railroad tracks before pummeling warehouses and businesses in an industrial area.

Trooper Robert White of the Department of Public Safety in Dallas said about 25 homes were destroyed and another 100 severely damaged. At least 10 businesses were demolished, with another 15 heavily damaged, White said.

Jerry Johns of Southwestern Insurance Information Service said, "We think that the damage is probably going to be in the tens of millions of dollars, if not in the hundreds of millions."

Late Sunday, police and sheriff's deputies in emergency vehicles lined the streets of Wylie, ordering people to clear the area to make room for relief and cleanup efforts.

But people still wandered, and some expressed relief that they escaped with their lives after being surprised by the tornado.

Peewee Lemons, 49, was in his work shed when the tornado ripped through the home in which he grew up.

The winds knocked him to the ground, pinning him between a washing machine and his truck as sparks from a severed circuit breaker fell around him.

"It seemed like an eternity, but it was probably only 10 to 15 seconds," Lemons said. "When I looked up, the shed was gone. All that was left was me."

Sgt. John Norton of the Collin County Sheriff's Department said emergency shelters were set up at the National Guard Armory in north Wylie, at the First Baptist Church east of downtown and at the Wylie Middle School on the south side of town.

The Physicians Regional Hospital in Wylie was damaged by the tornado and the facility's backup generators failed, Norton said.

None of the 19 patients at the 34-bed hospital were injured, but efforts were made to move them to other facilities, said spokeswoman Kathie Sukkar.

Chief Executive Officer Larry Wedekind said the hospital treated at least 30 minor injuries before shutting down.

At least 18 people were sent to HCA Medical Center in nearby Plano, said Sally Boesdorfer, director of the hospital's medical staff services.

"There are no life-threatening injuries," Boesdorfer said. "Most of them have received lacerations from flying debris."

At least nine people went to Baylor Medical Center in Garland with minor injuries, said Howard Walker, assistant administrator at the hospital.

Bob Pritchett of Care-Flight Dallas said helicopters were on standby in case victims needed to be flown to larger hospitals in the area. He said he was surprised that so few people were hurt by the tornadoes.

Kevin Cooley of Wylie said he was shaken when he saw that his friends' house was destroyed, and feared for their lives.

Expect sunny skies, mid-70s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the mid-70s and north winds at 15-25 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low near 50, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be partly cloudy with a high near 80.

After an overnight low of 52, Sunday's high reached 74, compared to the record high for that date of 101 set in 1967. The record low was 40 set in 1981.

NATION

Tornadoes smashed into northeast Texas on Sunday, and more rain fell on an already-soggy southern Oklahoma.

Tornadoes touched down in Texas in Wylie, Sachse, Terrell, Forney and Lake Lavon, the National Weather Service said. Tornadoes also were reported near Covington, Woodbury, Maypearl, Rice and Italy.

From Saturday morning to Sunday morning, at least 21 tornadoes touched down in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Thunderstorms continued to pound the Plains and the Mississippi Valley on Sunday.

Thunderstorm winds caused damage in Oklahoma at Haileyville and Pittsburg and near Eufaula and Wilburton.

Winds caused damage at Gainesville, Texas, while hail 1½ inches in diameter fell north of Weatherford, Texas. Dime-size hail fell in Texas at Abilene, Dublin and near White Settlement.

Flood water from weekend storms covered fields and barnyards in South Dakota, and extensive flooding was reported in Cooke County in north central Texas.

Rising water forced the evacuation of about 340 homes in Oklahoma in Kingfisher, Guthrie and Skiatook.

By dawn Sunday, rain had swollen Cottonwood Creek above its record 29.25 feet set in 1959, although equipment problems made an exact reading on the new height impossible, Guthrie authorities said.

At midday, rainshowers and thunderstorms were scattered over the Mississippi Valley, Kansas, Texas, the central Rockies, and portions of southeast Louisiana and northern Florida.

Rain also fell Sunday on Florida, the eastern Gulf of Mexico coast and western Washington state.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

PANEL: Case enters uncharted legal territory

vances over two decades.

The women are demanding a fair hearing on their contention that the senator committed fraud by successfully scheming to delay stories about his conduct until after last November's election.

Also watching carefully are politically influential national women's organizations, who could make life miserable for senators sitting in judgment of Packwood.

"I'm hoping it's not just for show," said Katherine A. Meyer, the attorney who will argue the case for nullifying Packwood's election to a fifth term last November.

"We've been treated fair — so far."

Packwood's lawyer, James F. Fitzpatrick, would not comment on the committee's procedure, saying only "we look forward" to the oral argument.

In written filings, he contends that a 1969 Supreme Court case, in which the House tried unsuccessfully to exclude then-Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of New York, prevents consideration of the challenge because Packwood met all constitutional election requirements.

Key members of the Rules Committee bristle at the suggestion they are being anything less than scrupulously fair.

"I'm not going to give that statement credibility by responding to it," Democratic Sen. Wendell Ford of Kentucky, the committee's chairman, said of Meyer's doubts.

The hearing is separate from an Ethics Committee investigation of whether Packwood broke Senate rules. But Packwood's opponents have the same goal in both proceedings — to kick him out of Congress.

And there is no doubt that the ground rules have shifted since the last high-profile case involving sexual harassment — confirmation hearings two years ago for Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas.

Several women — including at least one newly elected senator — say they decided to run for office last year in reaction to the treatment that Thomas' accuser, Anita Hill, received at the hands of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

RAGE: Pope, in Sicily, blasts Mafia bosses

the first time, hardly anyone in the Mafia fiefdom dared denounce Cosa Nostra openly. But public outrage over recent slayings of crusading prosecutors has changed that.

Earlier Sunday, thousands cheered when John Paul paid homage to those and other law-enforcement heroes killed by the mob.

"During this latest visit in Sicily, I can't help but recall, with particular emotion, those who, in affirming the ideals of justice and law, paid for their commitment to the struggle against the violent forces of evil with the sacrifice of their lives," John Paul said.

He spoke to a cheering crowd outside Agrigento's cathedral from a balcony adorned with lemon and orange tree branches.

Later, the pope met privately with the parents of Judge Rosario Livatino, who was gunned down on a highway outside Agrigento in 1990. The Mafia allegedly ordered Livatino's slaying after he refused to let the Mafia sway him in issuing a sentence.

Last year's killings of prosecutors Giovanni Falcone and Paolo Borsellino — Italy's leading Mafia investigators — fueled anger against Cosa Nostra across the island. They were the latest in a long series of prosecutors, judges, police, journalists and politicians slain by the mob.

"They are martyrs of justice, indirectly of the faith," John Paul told Livatino's parents, squeezing their hands.

When John Paul went to Sicily in November 1982, becoming the first pontiff in six centuries to do so, he visited Palermo, the Sicilian capital. Since then, grassroots groups led by schoolteachers, priests in poor parishes and some politicians have blossomed there to challenge the Mafia's grip.

But such opposition pulses more weakly in Sicily's hardened heartland.

JOBS: Cutbacks reach market, study finds

fense-related manufacturing jobs most likely to be eliminated are held by people with relatively little formal education. Thus they are likely to have a harder-than-usual time finding other jobs.

Clinton recognizes the risk to manufacturing, and he's trying to put into place a comprehensive "defense conversion" program to retrain laid-off defense workers and to find new civilian markets for the remaining defense companies.

The president highlighted his concern in a speech Thursday to an international trade conference.

"Do we have anything so far to replace the steep, steep cuts in defense spending which have gone to the very heart of a lot of our high wage, high-tech economy ... to date? No, we don't," he said. "But we need a technology policy and a defense conversion policy that attempts to replace that."

Economists generally agree that the loss of manufacturing jobs over the past few years is one reason the recovery from the 1990-91 recession has been slower than expected. The Labor study said 450,000 defense-related manufacturing jobs disappeared over the past five years — about half of all job losses from defense cuts.

Thus it seems likely that further manufacturing losses will act as a heavy drag on the economy, even if other industries begin generating more jobs.

"I see it as a burden yet to be dealt with," Jerry Jasinowski, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, said in an interview Friday. "We haven't felt the full effects yet."

Manufacturing is not the only part of the economy due to be hurt by shrinking Pentagon budgets.

Norman C. Saunders, the Labor economist who wrote the study, said service industries would lose 286,000 jobs between now and 1997; retail and wholesale trade would shed 139,000; and the transportation businesses would give up 62,000.

He says nearly every corner of the job market will feel some of the pinch. Aircraft manufacturing, missile makers, ship builders and manufacturers of navigation equipment are among the most obvious industries that stand to lose. But some jobs also will be lost in coal mining, hardware, refrigeration, autos, photographic equipment, apparel — even bars and shoe repair shops.

If Clinton's plan works, a portion of the economic resources freed from defense spending will create more work in other areas such as the environment and communications. Thus at least some of the effect of job losses would be offset.

Saunders bases his estimates on Clinton's proposal to cut defense spending to $192 billion in 1997 — about $100 billion less than was spent in the peak year 1987

ENERGY: Lobbyists try to pick apart Clinton's energy tax plan

— even if substantially reworked.

It should be no surprise that the energy tax faces so much opposition: it is a new type of tax, it would touch all Americans and industries, and it would raise a lot of money. The tax — based on the heat content of fuels as measured in Btus, or British thermal units — would cost a family of four earning $40,000 about $200 a year, according to administration officials.

Aluminum producers want an exemption from paying the tax on the huge amounts of electricity they use, the trucking industry wants its diesel fuel exempted and farmers are resisting a tax on the fuel they use.

"There's a lot of grass-roots lobbying about this because it touches so many people," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, which acts on tax legislation. "I would expect more changes in it because it has so many moving parts."

Lobbying groups have been emboldened to seek changes in the proposal — the most significant new tax in the president's economic package — because the administration has already made so many major concessions on the tax in response to searing political heat. Since President Clinton proposed the tax on Feb. 17, it has probably been altered more than any of his other tax proposals.

Originally, the White House had hoped to generate $22 billion from the energy tax. Administration officials say that the exemptions already agreed to would reduce the tax revenue by a few hundred million dollars, although some environmentalists say the revenue erosion is much more than that.

As a result of farm state lobbying, the administration now proposes to exempt ethanol, a fuel made from corn. Responding to steel industry pressures, the administration has proposed exempting coal used for making steel.

And to protect domestic airlines against foreign competition, the administration has bowed to industry pleas to exempt fuel used for international flights. Seeing all these concessions, other industries are shouting "me too!"

If the lobbyists succeed in truncating or killing the tax, it would be a major setback for the administration, which has already seen the Senate block its stimulus package, and which appears to face almost certain defeat on its plan for an investment tax credit.

Clinton embraced the energy tax — which would add 5 percent to 10 percent to the price of oil, gas and electricity — because it is expected to encourage conservation and reduce pollution. But any environmental benefits from the tax seem largely forgotten as lobbyists line up to eviscerate it.

"The energy tax is important to help us get the deficit down," said Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen.

The tax could face its biggest test in the Senate Finance Committee, where the Democrats, many from oil or farm states, have an 11 to 9 edge. That means the administration may be forced to make concessions to individual Democratic senators to keep them on board.

Take Kent Conrad, D-N.D. He points to studies showing that the tax would cost $1,200 a year for a typical North Dakota farm family, whose income averages only $17,600.

"My view of the Btu tax is we're better off without it," he said. "In terms of my constituency, it hits agriculture very hard. I can foresee a possibility where I'd vote for it, but that would be assuming it included broad exemptions for agriculture."

Conrad merely wants what many of his colleagues have already won. Responding to pressures from Moynihan, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and others, the administration has exempted home heating oil from the proposal to tax oil products at a higher rate than coal or natural gas, a provision designed to reduce the nation's dependence on oil imports. Many homes in the Northeast are heated by oil.

Bentsen described at a recent Senate Finance Committee hearing how the administration had changed its energy tax proposals. He noted that the administration moved to exempt ethanol after Conrad and Sen. Thomas A. Daschle, D-S.D., voiced their concerns.

Then he noted that Democratic Senators John Breaux of Louisiana and David Boren of Oklahoma were unhappy with a proposal to tax natural gas at the wellhead. Gas companies feared that fixed-priced contracts might prevent them from passing on the cost, so the Treasury proposed that the tax be collected once the gas leaves the pipeline.

Similarly, coal was originally to be taxed at the mine, but many mining companies complained that it would be hard to measure the Btu content of their coal and hard to pass the cost of the tax through because of fixed-priced contracts. Now the administration proposes that the tax be collected from utilities and industries that use coal.

"We get criticized for some of these changes, but this is in reply to members of this committee who've had constituents talk to them about specific concerns," said Bentsen, who not long ago was Senate Finance Committee chairman.

Environmentalists and electrical utilities are at loggerheads over the industry's effort to move the collection point from the utility, as the administration has proposed, to the consumer.

Electric companies are concerned that if the tax is collected from utilities, they might need to go through regulatory hearings before passing the tax onto consumers.

Utilities are not eager for such hearings, fearing that rate commissions might seize the opportunity to push electric prices down, because lower interest rates have cut the capital costs of many utilities.

Environmentalists say it is important to keep utilities as the collection point because that will increase their incentive to use cleaner, more efficient fuels. Environmentalists fear that the House Ways and Means Committee will approve the utility-backed proposal — unless the administrations fights hard against it — because several committee members are close to their local utilities.

"This proposal can hurt consumers," said Edward S. Rothschild, an energy expert at Citizens Action, a consumer group.

Another big fight involves the aluminum industry, which is intensely jealous that the steel industry has won an exemption for its coal. Aluminum producers have mounted perhaps the largest pressure campaign in the hope of exempting the electricity it uses. Turning ore into pure aluminum requires great amounts of electricity, and industry lobbyists say the tax will cost aluminum makers $170 million a year.

Coal and coke used to make steel are exempted because some carbon from the these fuels goes into the steel itself. They are thus considered feedstocks, rather than fuels. Similarly, petroleum products that go into plastics are exempt, while those used for fuel are not.

Rep. Michael Kopetski, D-Ore., is pressing the administration to exempt the aluminum industry's electricity from the tax, saying it could drive two Oregon aluminum plants out of business, costing the state more than 1,500 jobs.

"There is already an exemption for coal used to make steel," he said. "There is an exemption for oil as a feedstock to make plastics. All we're asking for is a consistent policy."

In a recent hearing, Bentsen was hanging tough — and sounded surprisingly like a chemistry professor in explaining why electricity used to make aluminum was not a feedstock and did not deserve an exemption.

"In making petrochemicals, the atoms of the feedstock hydrocarbons become the atoms of the polymers and other products," he said. Contrary to claims advanced by aluminum industry officials, he said, "electricity does not contribute net electrons of the reaction; it contributes the energy that causes the chemical reaction to occur."

Sailors may have to be coaxed for views on homosexuals

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Senate committee pondering the ban on gays in the military takes its inquiry to the decks of U.S. warships Monday, seeking the views of rank-and-file sailors out of earshot of Navy brass.

The senators have guaranteed confidentiality, but some crew members clearly regard the arriving Washington delegation as a minefield to negotiate with the utmost care.

"If they ask me, I'll tell them," said one veteran submariner whose boat is in port at the 130-ship Norfolk Naval Base, headquarters of the Navy's Atlantic Fleet. "But I'm not going looking for them." The submariner declined to share his opinions with a reporter.

Members of the Armed Forces Committee will visit the base for the first of two field hearings on the Pentagon's ban on gays serving openly, which President Clinton wants to lift. The second hearing is scheduled for May 17 at an as yet unannounced military base.

After the morning shipboard tours and interviews at Norfolk, the senators will hold a more traditional afternoon hearing, complete with facing tables, microphones and TV cameras, open to all military members and their families.

Far from encouraging openness, however, that session in a Naval Air Station auditorium is stacked against anyone who opposes the ban, asserts Lt. j.g. Tracy Thorne, a Navy flier until he disclosed his homosexuality on national television a year ago.

"I'm disappointed they've chosen this setting. It makes it very difficult for anyone to come out and testify to overturn the ban," said Thorne, who last week learned he was to be placed on inactive reserve while his case is reviewed.

"The environment is completely hostile to someone who would move from the status quo," he said. "It's difficult for any straight member to come out and testify against the ban without being implicated as being gay."

Last week, other details of the hearings provoked angry words between two committee members. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., argued with Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the committee chairman, about the expertise of witnesses testifying about gays in foreign military forces, all of whom were American. Tempers have also flared at hearings held by the House Armed Services Committee.

The shipboard interviews were arranged to permit more private conversations away from superior officers, who will likely attend the afternoon hearing. Any crew member may call a special telephone number to request time with a senator. The panel has promised confidentiality, saying names and information provided in those interviews won't be disclosed to superiors.

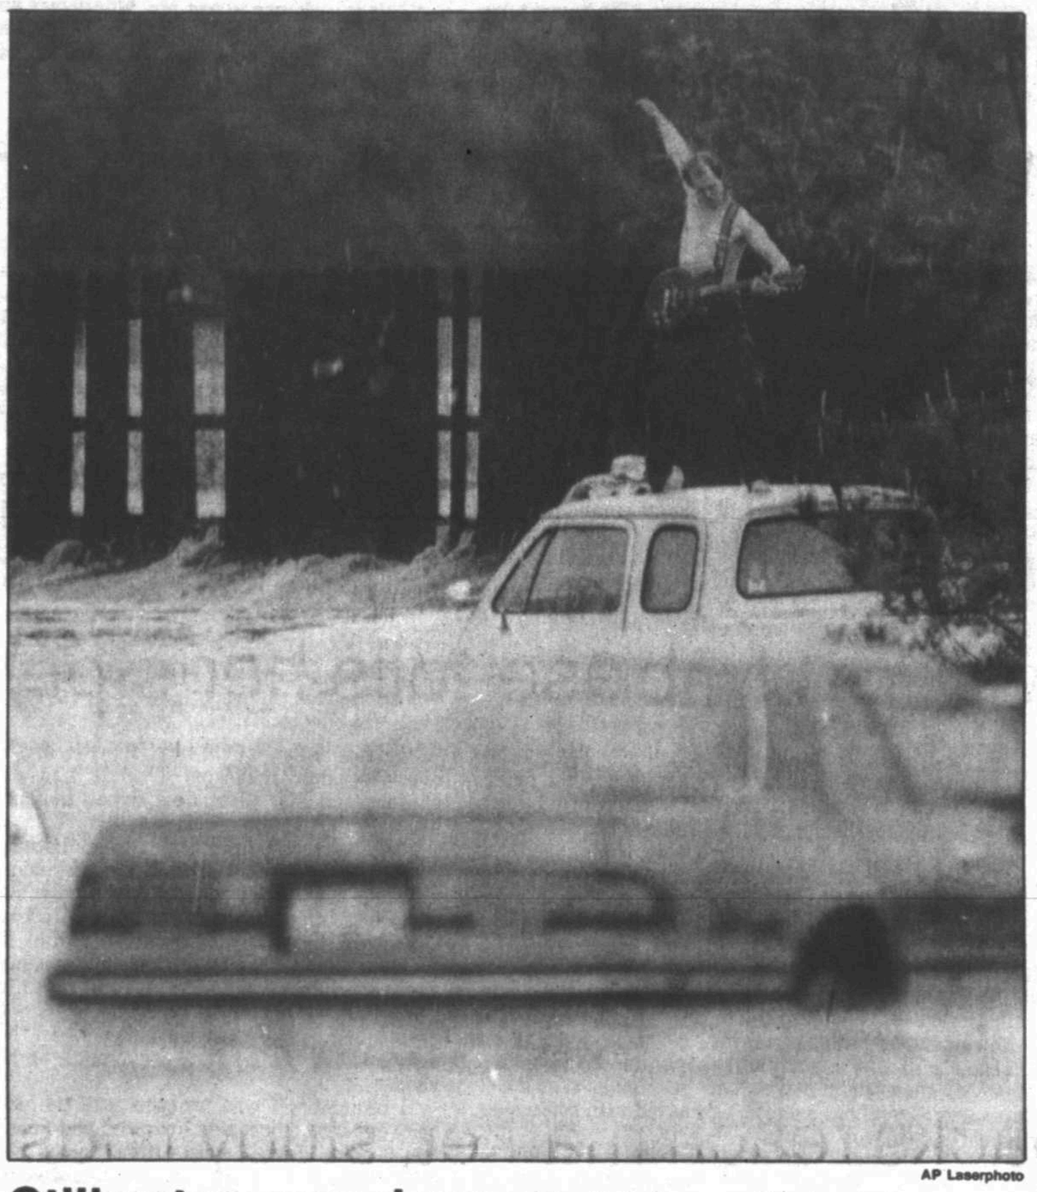

But sailors who spoke to The Associated Press after the field hearing was announced last Tuesday expressed concern about the event. All requested anonymity for this story, and many lamented the recent intrusion of politics into their lives.

The Navy has been coping with assorted economic and social changes, from plans to cut fleet strength and permit combat training for women to fallout from sexual misconduct at the Tailhook convention.

"I'd like to go, but I'm not getting in the middle of that mess," one sailor said of the hearing. "It won't make any difference. They're going to do what they want."

A two-year Navy man assigned to a shore unit said he plans to make a career of the service and didn't want to hurt his chances for advancement. "My command might not like me talking," he said.

With varying degrees of reluctance, most sailors said they were willing to accept homosexuals at base jobs. But none wanted to serve with gays at sea.

Armed Freedom statue lands safely

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the statue of Armed Freedom touched down on the Capitol Plaza shortly after dawn Sunday, a worker climbed a ladder, unhitched a web of protective straps and kissed the bronze goddess on the cheek.

A crowd of hundreds cheered as a helicopter crew plucked the statue from the U.S. Capitol dome where it has stood guard for 130 years.

Bringing the seven-ton, 19-foot 6-inch statue down from its perch 268 feet above the ground took months of planning. Architect of the Capitol George White was obviously relieved.

"'I told everyone that if we dropped it, I had a 7 a.m. ticket to Mexico," White said. "I've just torn that ticket up. Everything was done in the best way possible. There weren't any hitches."

Armed Freedom now begins five months of repair to mend the ravages of 13 decades of Washington weather.

Pilot Max Evans flew the rear position on the bright orange Skycrane helicopter, owned by the Erickson Air-Crane Co. of Central Point, Ore.

"The back seat does the lift work and pickup," Evans said afterward. "I just picked it up and set on the stand down here."

"This was quite a normal operation," Evans said nonchalantly. "The ground crew does quite a lot of preparations to make this go easily. When that's over, we come and do the easy part."

It was making it look easy that impressed Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.

"The smoothness and perfection with which it happened was amazing," he said.

"After seeing that statue up there for all of those years, to see it come down safely was truly great," said Diane Lane, a Capitol staff member and one of the hundreds of people who rose before dawn to witness the operation.

When spectators were allowed near the statue, they saw Rick Mountjoy of Annapolis, Md., climb a ladder and give the statue a kiss on the cheek.

The workers who prepared the statue for its move from the top of the dome also got into the act. They pasted on the statue's sword and shield two large red, white and blue labels which read: "Proud to be American."

To prepare the hollow statue for lifting, workers had to jack it up with an internal column and slip a lifting ring under the base, White said.

"It had to be lifted from the bottom because it was assembled in five sections and we couldn't be sure that it wouldn't come apart," he said.

The lifting ring will be made a permanent part of the statue's base, adding four inches to its height.

"We're doing that because if it ever has to come off again we'll be ready and we won't have to go through all of this work again," White said.

In the meantime, Armed Freedom will get a much-needed cleansing.

"When it's finished it's going to look like a bronze statue again instead of a corroded green statue," White said.

Authorities seize estimated 11,000 pounds of cocaine

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A ship seized in the Pacific Ocean after authorities said it was carrying an estimated 11,000-pounds of cocaine along with its cargo of fish meal arrived in Florida on Sunday.

Coast Guard officials said the seizure was at least the second-largest made at sea, but the drug's final weight would not be available until later in the week.

The ship had sailed from Esmeraldas, Ecuador, two days before and was bound for Manzanillo, Mexico, according to its crew.

Workers on Sunday began unloading 230 bales of cocaine weighing between 40 and 60 pounds each, the Coast Guard said.

Disabled rally to launch drive for in-home care

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of disabled Americans, many in wheelchairs, rallied near the Capitol on Sunday to launch a three-day lobbying drive to shift federal dollars from nursing homes to in-home care.

"For every dollar we spend in nursing home care, we can provide services for two people in the community," rally organizer Mike Auberger said. "And nobody wants to go to a nursing home."

"Our homes, not nursing homes," said a placard attached to Sharon Sutow's wheelchair as speakers denounced requiring many elderly persons to be confined to nursing homes if they are to get affordable health care. A crowd of perhaps 500 was on hand for the rally.

Ms. Sutow, 35, of Philadelphia, who lives with her mother, said the elderly and disabled should not be forced into nursing homes.

ADAPT, a Denver-based group that organized the lobbying drive, wants $5.5 billion in Medicaid funds shifted to help pay for in-home care for the elderly and disabled. He said the Clinton administration has expressed interest but thus far has made no commitment.

Neither has any legislation been introduced.

The ADAPT proposal does not call for new spending but rather moving a substantial sum out of nursing homes and into home care. "What we're dealing with is the $60 billion nursing home industry," said Auberger.

■ Domestic dispute leads to three deaths

TEMECULA, Calif. — A sheriff's deputy called to a domestic dispute was shot to death by a man who fled with his 12-year-old son and later killed himself, police said.

The man's girlfriend was found dead in her apartment, while a 6-year-old girl also found in the apartment was unharmed, authorities said.

Mark John Kamaka, 37, was in the building parking lot with his son when he fatally shot the police officer and fled, Riverside County Sheriff's Detective Henry Sawicki said. The deputy apparently did not draw his gun.

Kamaka was found dead in his car after his son was dropped off on an interstate highway and used a roadside phone to call the California Highway Patrol, Sawicki said.

Kamaka had what appeared to be a self-inflicted gunshot wound, he said.

■ Police chief shot in routine traffic stop

MOUNT PLEASANT, Miss. — A police chief was shot to death shortly after pulling a man over for "bad driving," police said.

Potts Camp Police Chief Joe Thomason, 45, was shot in the head at least once after getting out of his car on a routine traffic stop, said Lt. Ken Dickerson of the Mississippi Highway Patrol.

Jackie Russell Crouch Jr., 22, was being held without bond Sunday, charged with Thomason's murder.

Other charges were pending in connection with the abduction of two teen-age boys following the shooting.

Crouch allegedly rear-ended a Porsche being driven by the two teens. When they pulled over, Crouch held them at gunpoint for several hours, Dickerson said. The teen-agers, whose identities were not revealed, were not hurt.

■ Train hits woman trying to rescue dog

GLEN JEAN, W.Va. — A 25-year-old woman was killed when a freight train hit her as she tried to pull a dog from its path, authorities said Sunday.

A 24-year-old man accompanying her was seriously injured, U.S. Park Service officials said.

The victims' identities were not immediately released.

The man had severe injuries to his head and legs, said Park Service spokeswoman Lizzie Watts.

Investigators said the two were walking along the train tracks near the New River Gorge National River when the 150-car train came around a bend behind them.

They got off the tracks, but the dog stayed on, authorities said. The woman tried to grab the dog, while the man tried to move the woman out of the way. All three were hit, Watts said.

■ Family leaves $37 million for ecology

BRATENAHL, Ohio — A mother and son with no heirs left $37 million to a conservation group seeking to preserve the hemisphere's fragile ecosystems.

Mildred Putnam and her son, Peter, bequeathed their family fortune to the Nature Conservancy, the world's largest nonprofit land preservation group.

According to the May issue of Nature Conservancy magazine, the gift is the cornerstone of a $300 million program called "Last Great Places," which seeks to save 75 of the most vital ecosystems in the Western Hemisphere.

"Here was a family who knew they had no heirs, so they made all of mankind their heirs," said Barbara Lipscomb, a member of the Nature Conservancy's national board.

■ Artist Noel J. Quinn dies after strokes

LOS ANGELES — Noel J. Quinn, an internationally known artist whose paintings hang in the U.S. Capitol and the Pentagon, has died. He was 77.

Quinn died Wednesday in a nursing home after a series of strokes, most recently May 1, said his daughter, Erin.

A native of Pawtucket, R.I., Quinn studied art at the Rhode Island School of Design and won a fellowship for post-graduate study in Paris.

He is survived by his wife, Helen, five children. Erin, Brian, Tara, Terence and Sheila, and seven grandchildren.

Officials: Clinton lacks votes for Bosnia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior lawmakers said Sunday that President Clinton has not adequately articulated his Bosnia policy and lacks the votes in Congress for approval of military action against Bosnian Serbs.

"Ordinary members of Congress are really frustrated," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. "They are crying out for more information. They want to hear the roles, the objectives, and the costs articulated."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., joining Hamilton on NBC's "Meet the Press," agreed that the discussion on military options in Bosnia "is extremely vague, most members of Congress very uneasy, perhaps the allies too."

The American people, Lugar said, "need to hear from the President of the United States why this is in our national interest, what the plan is, the fact that others are going to cooperate with us."

Asked if the votes were there in Congress to back military action, Hamilton said: "I suspect they are not as of today. But I also expect if the president asserts leadership and he puts this in a national security context that he would carry the day."

Speaker of the House Tom Foley, D-Wash., said on CBS' "Face the Nation" that once the president finalizes a plan with allied and U.N. cooperation, Congress would go along.

"There's been no case in modern history where a president has gone to the Congress and asked for this authority, stating that the national interest was involved, where it's not been given," Foley said.

Under the 1973 War Powers Resolution, Congress must approve any decision by the president to involve American troops in hostile situations abroad. Those troops must be withdrawn after 60 days if Congress does not give its approval.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., speaking on CNN's "Newsmaker Sunday," said he did not think Clinton would move without the approval of Congress. "We haven't prepared the American people. We have to go to Congress and tell the American people what the end game is," Dole said, stressing that any action must be multinational in nature.

The president, who attended church and toured the National Gallery of Art with his family Sunday, ignored questions about Bosnia that were shouted at him. He had planned a meeting Sunday evening with congressional leaders on the topic, but it was postponed until Tuesday.

Clinton has been frustrated by the reluctance of European allies to back either an end to the arms embargo on Bosnian Muslims or Western air strikes against Serbian military positions.

On Saturday, Clinton directed Secretary of State Warren Christopher, just back from a trip to Europe where his efforts to organize a unified position on Bosnia met resistance, to telephone allied foreign ministers to discuss how they could ensure that Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic fulfills his promises.

Milosevic has pledged to seal his country's borders and cut off supplies to Serbian allies in neighboring Bosnia.

"This is a chance to test Mr. Milosevic's sincerity in this regard," White House spokesman George Stephanopoulos said. "Clearly, this is something we want to pursue and want to test and want to make work."

Drug crimes push prison populations higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — An increase in inmates convicted of drug crimes helped boost the nation's prison population to a new high of 883,593 at the end of 1992, the Justice Department reported Sunday.

The total number of federal and state prison inmates was up 59,460, a 7.2 percent increase over the previous year, the Bureau of Justice Statistics announced. The federal prison population grew much faster than that of state prisons, up 12.1 percent to 80,259 inmates, while state prisons grew by 6.8 percent to 803,334, BJS said.

"Drug offenders were a major source for the increased number of prisoners," Acting BJS Director Lawrence A. Greenfeld said in a statement.

Of all new court commitments to prison in 1990 — the last year for which BJS had available data — almost one-third were drug offenders, up from 11.5 percent in 1977.

Ensuring adequate prison space for violent criminals has been a particular concern of Attorney General Janet Reno, who knew from 15 years as Dade County, Fla.'s top prosecutor that prison overcrowding can lead to premature release of violent inmates.

"The most important problem in America today is violence, and people want those who hurt and maim and kill and brutalize put away and kept away for as long a time as they possibly can be," she told reporters recently. "That's my goal."

The problem has led Reno to suggest the possibility of replacing some mandatory minimum sentences for nonviolent offenders with alternative sentences.

Federal prisons thus far haven't had to free inmates early because of overcrowding, which has occurred in some state prisons.

"But ... if we keep sending people to prison at the rate we're sending them to prison, we're going to have a tremendous shortfall in terms of monies necessary to open the prisons and then operate the prisons," she said.

Some states have given cases to federal prosecutors to ensure that the defendants, if convicted, will stay in prison and not be freed prematurely, she told a meeting of drug control policy experts Friday.

STALK: A victim of abuse tells her story

lence have formed a nonprofit organization to provide security to others who face the same peril.

On a recent afternoon, Ms. Sund sat in a corner booth at a restaurant where, between sips of coffee and drags on Camel cigarettes, she recalled the events that turned her life upside down.

Ms. Sund, 24, has been on her own since she left home at 16, with $60 and a '72 Plymouth Duster "that drank oil."

A service station owner let her wash vehicles for half the profits; she worked on a landscaping crew alongside ex-convicts. Eventually, she earned an associate's degree in criminal justice and became a heavy equipment operator.

One day, she was working on Interstate 25 near Denver when Thomas drove into her life. There she stood, concrete in her hair and mud on her face, but it didn't seem to bother Thomas.

"He was so nice. Talked a mile a minute," she said. "So smooth, but it seemed sincere. It wasn't a smooth man with gold chains on his neck."

They shared a cup of coffee and a five-hour talk that night and went out the next night and the next.

During the next 2½ months, they met at her farmhouse nearly every evening and talked long into the night. Thomas was supportive; her career was one of the things he loved about her, he said.

Although she never found out how the chickens were killed, Ms. Sund was troubled by her landlord's mandate that Thomas remain off the property. At Thomas' urging, she moved her dogs, cats and 14 truckloads of furniture in with him until she could find another place to rent.

Things changed drastically about a month later.

Suddenly, Thomas didn't like her job. He didn't trust her or her coworkers, most of them men.

She couldn't call her friends or family.

She would talk of leaving, and he would demand she remove all her belongings in an hour, possessions she had purchased with pride over the years.

"I would end up in tears and say I can't do that in an hour. I'd say you need to let me look for a place to live and he would say, 'NO!'," she said, pushing her face close.

"He'd just rage and rage ... he'd scream for hours. And I'm not exaggerating."

Finally, she quit her job at Thomas' insistence and, at her lowest point, she was ironing shirts for a quarter apiece. "I was a heavy equipment operator. Ironing," she said with disgust.

The fighting grew worse.

"I'd think, 'Who is this?' This is dangerous. This is not somebody who is just mad. Stay alive. Do what he's telling you,'" she said.

At first, this fiercely independent woman was too embarrassed to tell her friends and family what was happening. Then, she began fearing for their lives.

One day in early February, the two argued over an adult magazine Thomas had purchased, and Ms. Sund fled to her mother's home in Fort Collins.

Thomas harassed her, calling her mother's home often. Sometimes he was polite; sometimes he threatened her and her family, she said. She obtained a restraining order to keep him away, but that didn't end it.

Thomas chased Ms. Sund to the police department. She jumped out of her car and raced for help. As she reached the door, the first bullet grazed her head. A second bullet struck her arm and the third struck the middle of her back.

"I remember I was trying to pull the door open and my body couldn't respond and I could feel it going down," she testified during Thomas' trial last fall. "I remember it was the most incredible experience, knowing just a few feet away there was help and I couldn't open the door."

She spent months learning to sit up, to turn over and to walk.

Thomas was convicted of attempted first-degree murder, first-degree assault and vehicular eluding in Ms. Sund's shooting. He maintains his innocence and is pursuing an appeal in the Colorado Court of Appeals.

Today, the slender, dark-haired woman lives in seclusion, believing Thomas would try to kill her again if given the chance.

She has eliminated routine from her life. If a dark-haired man with a build similar to Thomas gets in a grocery store line behind her, she bolts.

Something for everyone!

The World in brief

■ Survey: Danish treaty support drops

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Less than two weeks ahead of a second referendum on a treaty for closer European union, Danish support for the accord has dropped below 50 percent, according to a survey published Sunday.

The fall occurred even though Denmark has been exempted from treaty clauses calling for a common European currency and a joint defense. The concessions were granted after Denmark rejected the treaty in June.

The Gallup Institute said 46 percent of the voters backed the treaty, down from 51 percent a week ago. It said the number of opponents had swelled to 34 percent, from 30 percent, during the same period.

The poll, published by the Berlingske Tidende, said 15 percent remained undecided and 5 percent would not vote. The survey was based on interviews with 1,125 people and had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percent.

■ Canadian officials investigate deaths

BELET HUEN, Somalia — Canada's External Affairs Minister Barbara McDougall made a one-day visit Sunday to assess Canada's military involvement in Somalia.

The soldiers are preparing to leave the 11,600-square-mile district they have helped nurse back from chaos for the last five months.

But investigations are under way into the deaths of two Somalis by Canadians. Canadian media reports have alleged the military knowingly allowed members of extremist groups to enlist in the Canadian force.

Lt. Col. Carol Mathieu, the Canadian commander in Belet Huen, shrugged off the criticism and said his men have nothing to hide. He underscored their achievements in ending starvation and providing security for aid agencies.

"People at home should have faith in their troops," he said. "If the people don't understand what we have done here, they can come and see for themselves."

McDougall said the troops can go home with their heads held high. "Our soldiers have the right to be proud," she said. "I don't want them to feel they have been somehow diminished."

■ Chinese government lifts price controls

BEIJING — For the first time in four decades, Beijing consumers will have to pay market prices for grain and cooking oil, the government announced Sunday in a major move toward a market-oriented economy.

Since the 1950s, grain and cooking oil have been rationed in Chinese cities and sold to urban residents at state-subsidized prices.

But starting May 10, the ration coupons will be abolished and prices freed, the official Xinhua News Agency reported. Price controls on soy sauce, vinegar and milk also will be lifted.

The measure has gone into effect in other cities and provinces, including Shanghai and Tianjin and the southern provinces of Guangdong and Sichuan.

In Beijing, employees in government offices and state-owned enterprises will be given a $1.75 monthly subsidy to help offset the higher prices. The subsidy is intended to prevent public discontent.

Analysts predicted prices would go up by as much as 40 percent, Xinhua said.

Fighting rages in Bosnia despite cease-fire

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Fierce Croat-Muslim fighting broke out in Mostar on Sunday despite a general cease-fire in Bosnia, and U.N. officials accused Croats of rounding up and expelling hundreds of Muslims from the city.

Meanwhile, the first U.N. military observers reached the embattled Muslim enclave of Zepa on foot after their vehicles were blocked by a road barricade. A company of Ukrainian U.N. troops was reported blocked by Bosnian Serbs en route to Zepa, where the peacekeepers hope to begin implementing a plan signed late Saturday to disarm the town.

The demilitarization of Zepa and another eastern town, Srebrenica, was part of a cease-fire agreement signed by Muslims and Serbs. Bosnian Croats did not sign the pact, which went into effect at noon Sunday.

Some two dozen truces have broken down in the war, which began a year ago when Bosnian Serbs rebelled against Muslims and Croats, who voted to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia. More than 134,000 people have been declared dead or missing.

The Croats are nominally allied with Muslims in the war against the Serbs, but dream of linking Croatian-held territory in southwestern Bosnia with Croatia proper. The easternmost border of such a Greater Croatia would be the Neretva River, which runs through the center of Mostar.

U.N. spokesman Jose Gallegos said Bosnian Croats attacked the forces of the Muslim-led Bosnian government in Mostar, 45 miles southwest of Sarajevo, at dawn Sunday.

The fighting was so intense it forced a U.N. Spanish battalion based in Mostar to pull back to surrounding hillsides, officials said.

By mid-afternoon, U.N. military observers reported anti-aircraft machine gun and small-arms fire in the city, which was shaken by regular mortar hits. Several buildings, including Bosnian army headquarters, were reported on fire.

John McMillan, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Sarajevo, said several apartment buildings in Mostar had been "ethnically cleansed" of all Muslim inhabitants. The agency had reports that Croatian forces were planning to deport Muslims to the towns of Zenica and Jablanica to the north.

Ten busloads of people, including children, were seen leaving the city under Croat guard, U.N. officials said, citing military observers. The civilians had earlier been herded into a soccer stadium.

Lt.-Gen. Lars-Eric Wahlgren, the U.N. commander in former Yugoslavia, demanded "active and urgent intervention" from Croatia's leaders, a statement from his office in Zagreb, Croatia, said.

In Sarajevo, U.N. spokesman Cmdr. Barry Frewer said Croatian President Franjo Tudjman had promised to try to bring calm.

At Zepa, U.N. observers had to walk the last three miles into town because trees had been cut to block the road, Frewer said.

The demilitarization agreement requires all forces to withdraw or surrender their weapons to U.N. troops by 5 p.m. Monday (11 a.m. EDT) in Srebrenica and 5 p.m. Wednesday (11 a.m. EDT) in Zepa.

Hussein moves Jordan toward democracy

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Political change in the volatile Arab world has invariably come through coups and assassinations. But in Jordan, King Hussein is introducing democratic reforms that he believes will herald peaceful transitions.

He considers the program he initiated in 1989 as the "greatest achievement" of his 40-year reign and believes it will become a "beacon of hope" for the region where absolute monarchies and one-party rule is the norm.

Not everyone in Jordan is convinced the reforms, among the most far-reaching in the Arab world, will go far enough to immunize the kingdom and maintain its hard-won stability.

Hussein recently declared unequivocally that "anyone who dares to threaten democracy ... or exploit freedom with the aim of subverting it, will be stopped."

He underlined that last fall when two prominent fundamentalist legislators were sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment for plotting against the monarchy.

He pardoned them. But the message was loud and clear: the king gives and he can take away.

Some believe that the trial was a signal that reforms will have their limits and will remain vulnerable to interference from the top.

Few of the entrenched Arab regimes are showing any inclination to follow Hussein's lead as they go on the defensive against collapsing economies and Islamic fundamentalists, who are waging terrorist campaigns in Egypt and Algeria.

Violent fundamentalism is likely to swell because of the region's grinding poverty, mushrooming populations and dwindling resources.

Veteran Middle East analyst Charles Snow noted that Hussein's experiment "cannot but look bold in a regional context, in which the appointment of powerless consultative councils passes for liberalization.

"Perhaps more importantly ... Jordan is now virtually the only Arab country which is testing the idea that political pluralism, even if limited can withstand the rising tide of Islamic absolutism," he wrote in the Middle East Economic Survey.

Most Arab states are either absolute monarchies or one-party-rule autocracies. However, Kuwait has an elected legislature and Yemen last month held its first parliamentary ballot since north and south merged in 1990. Israel also has a full parliamentary system.

Hussein's reform program was triggered by riots in April 1989 against harsh austerity measures and official corruption.

The unrest centered in bedouin regions, traditionally the bedrock of support for the monarchy, and it jolted the regime badly.

Hussein first allowed parliamentary elections in November 1989, the first full ballot in 22 years. He then legalized political parties for the first time in 40 years, lifted martial law imposed in the traumatic turbulence of 1948 and produced, with the cooperation of all factions, a 1990 National Charter that guarantees political freedoms.

New elections are scheduled for this year, although they may be postponed until the reform process is completed.

It will take time for pluralism to take root. After decades of political inactivity, politics has atrophied, with personalities rather than parties dominating.

Moscow crashes kill up to 19 people

MOSCOW (AP) — A stunt plane and a leafletting helicopter crashed in separate accidents during holiday celebrations Sunday, killing up to 19 people on the day marking Nazi Germany's defeat, news agencies reported.

The pilot and 14 people on the ground were killed when the single-engine plane plunged into a crowd in Nizhny Tagil, Siberia, during a Victory Day aerobatic exhibition, the Interfax news agency reported.

ITAR-Tass put the death toll at 17 — eight of them children — and said 18 people were injured.

The Yak-52 was flying with two other planes when it broke in two, caught fire and crashed near Nizhny Tagil's central square, Interfax said, quoting an official in the city 720 miles east of Moscow.

In the central Russian city of Saransk, an Mi-2 helicopter dropping leaflets struck a power line and crashed into a five-story apartment building, killing two crewmen and injuring three, Interfax reported. There were no casualties on the ground.

Public Notice

On April 16, 1993, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (SWBT) filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas (Commission) for approval of a new optional service, Network Subscriber Information Interface (NSII). NSII is a new service feature developed primarily for the provision of Voice Messaging Service (VMS). It will give a VMS provider (as SWBT's customer) the ability to receive originating call information from SWBT's central office and to activate and deactivate a Message Waiting Indicator (MWI) on the line of the VMS provider's patron. NSII also gives the VMS provider the ability to activate and deactivate an intermittent dial tone on a patron's line in multiple offices. The VMS provider will be able to perform these functions in multiple offices through a connection to a single Message Node office. The Message Node will be a predesignated central office and will interconnect with all central offices within the Message Node Service Area. Upon approval of this application, NSII will be available to customers where facilities are available. Available facilities are not currently deployed statewide. The proposed effective date of this service is June 20, 1993.

SWBT estimates these new services will increase its annual revenues during the first year by approximately $2.4 million. VMS providers and Telephone Answering Services and their subscribers are the types of customers likely to be affected by approval of these services.

The proposed recurring monthly rate and nonrecurring installation charge is as follows:

Rate Element	Recurring	Nonrecurring
NSII	$6,000.00	$2,000.00

Persons who wish to comment on this application should notify the Commission by June 10, 1993. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at 512-458-0256, or 512-458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Tragedy reigns across Sri Lanka

When Sri Lanka became independent in 1948, it was called Ceylon and seemed to have it all: reasonable prosperity, a stable parliamentary system, habits of nonviolence and a landscape of bewitching beauty.

Now Sri Lanka, its official name since 1972, is synonymous with strife and tragedy. May 1 its president and two dozen others were blown to bits by a suicide bomber. This followed the murder of the president's chief rival and leader of the opposition. The cycle of retribution seems certain to continue.

How did things go so horribly wrong? Sri Lanka's story says a good deal about the unintended consequences of rooting politics in religion and ethnicity.

It starts with the election victory in 1956 of the Oxford-educated Solomon Bandaranaike, a year that also marked the 2,500th anniversary of Buddha's attainment of Nirvana. Capitalizing on religious fervor, the prime minister made Buddhism the favored religion and decreed that Sinhalese, spoken by Buddhists, was henceforth the sole official language.

This angered a minority of mainly Hindu Tamils, who saw themselves at a permanent disadvantage since they spoke a wholly different language than the mostly Buddhist Sinhalese.

So Bandaranaike temporized, and suggested allowing "reasonable use" of Tamil. Communal riots erupted, and the well-meaning prime minister was murdered in 1959 by a fanatic Buddhist. In due course there followed a full-scale civil war as an extremist Tamil faction clamored for a separate state and found support in India, with its 50 million Tamils, just across the strait.

In a second unintended result, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi saw a chance in 1987 to placate Indian Tamils and win points as a peacemaker in Sri Lanka. He dispatched 50,000 troops to Tamil strongholds on the island as part of a peace accord signed in Colombo.

But India's sometimes brutal soldiers were unable to disarm Tamil militants, and in 1991 Gandhi himself was assassinated, almost certainly by a Tamil extremist.

The lesson is sobering. When an ethnic majority diminishes the citizenship rights of a well-established minority, even a pacific people in an idyllic island can plunge into a bloodbath. It is an open question whether Sri Lankans can ever recover what has been lost. But there is time for other countries with peoples of different creeds and cultures to ponder Sri Lanka's tragic experience.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, May 10, the 130th day of 1993. There are 235 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 10, 1869, a golden spike was driven at Promontory, Utah, marking the completion of the first transcontinental railroad in the United States.

On this date:

In 1774, Louis the 16th ascended the throne of France.

In 1775, Ethan Allen and his Green Mountain Boys captured the British-held fortress at Ticonderoga, New York.

In 1818, American patriot Paul Revere died in Boston.

In 1865, Union forces captured Confederate President Jefferson Davis in Irwinville, Georgia.

In 1908, the first Mother's Day observance took place during church services in Grafton, W.Va., and Philadelphia.

In 1924, J. Edgar Hoover was given the job of FBI director.

In 1933, the Nazis staged massive public book burnings in Germany.

In 1940, British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain resigned and Winston Churchill formed a new government.

In 1941, Adolf Hitler's deputy, Rudolf Hess, parachuted into Scotland on what he claimed was a peace mission. (Hess ended up serving a life sentence at Spandau prison, where he died in 1987, an apparent suicide.)

In 1968, preliminary Vietnam peace talks began in Paris.

In 1977, actress Joan Crawford died in New York.

In 1978, Britain's Princess Margaret and the Earl of Snowdon announced they were divorcing after 18 years of marriage.

In 1981, Francois Mitterrand defeated incumbent Valery Giscard d'Estaing in the second round of the country's presidential election.

In 1991, Alexander Bessmertnykh became the first Soviet foreign minister to visit Israel as he met with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Foreign Minister David Levy.

Ten years ago: A federal appeals court in Washington reinstated the Abscam bribery conviction of former U.S. Rep. Richard Kelly of Florida.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Espy gets aid package shipshape

WASHINGTON — Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy may have saved President Clinton's $1.6 billion Russian aid package recently by engaging in some Cold War-style brinkmanship.

Anderson

Espy was locked in a tense two-hour meeting with several top Russian officials, including Deputy Prime Minister Alexander Shokhin. The officials had been hinting for days that they might abandon a cornerstone of the Clinton-Yeltsin deal — $700 million in food aid. Late in the meeting, Espy one-upped them.

"I've got a plane to catch," Espy said, and headed for the door.

The Russians responded quickly, imploring Espy to return to the negotiating table, according to one source close to the talks. The showdown paved the way for the two nations to forge a compromise over the next few days.

What nearly derailed this key foreign policy initiative was literally "made in America." The Russians thought the aid package was pandering to American agriculture and maritime interests at the expense of the Russian people. Both government and industry officials agree that the aid package pays hefty dividends to farmers and shippers alike, who themselves have engaged in an unseemly scramble for a piece of the pie.

The two industries have been fighting over a U.S. law requiring that 75 percent of food aid be shipped on American-flagged vessels. Since American vessels are currently charging freight rates that are two to three times the world market level, the grain companies supplying the commodities for this aid program were lobbying for the "cargo preference" law to be waived.

That would have enabled the federal government to let foreign-flagged vessels ship the freight at a fraction of the cost, and free up more money to be spent on actual commodities instead of transportation.

But by the same token, the Agriculture Department could buy the commodities from foreign countries that offer lower prices. Of course, that would be heresy to agribusinesses that constantly clamor for the government to "buy American" — an ironic offshoot of this farmer-shipper family feud.

Espy's eventual compromise embraced the cargo preference requirements, and called for the Russians to foot the bill for most of the commodities to be transported, up to the amount that foreign-flagged vessels would normally charge. In turn, the United States has agreed to pay the difference between the foreign-flagged rate and the rate that U.S. vessels will actually charge.

"There's a little greed versus greed in all of this," one former high-ranking federal maritime official told us. "It comes down to people fighting over the share of a federal subsidy. The farmers want a subsidy to help them sell their products in foreign markets. And the maritime industry says, 'If you're going to do that, we want at least part of the benefit — ship it on U.S. vessels.'"

Kirk Miller, director of international programs at the North American Export Grain Association, contends that the maritime industry is "getting it both ways: They get preferential set-asides and they charge monopolistic rates." Miller agrees, however, that "this is probably the best of all worlds for us. It moves U.S. commodities to the world market, it helps the U.S. maritime industry, and it especially helps the Russians."

As one American shipowner, who has been making deliveries to Russia in recent months, told us: "It's like pouring 10 tons of cargo into a 1 ton port."

America is a tasteless, corrupt nation

The lip-trembling, bug-eyed feminist hysteria about the Tailhook Incident — a rowdy party of aviators at a convention nearly two years ago — has somewhat subsided now that a new Defense Department report shows some of the aviators grabbing and groping were female officers.

Reese

Apparently, not only will boys be boys, but girls will be girls.

It now appears that the aviators will simply be quietly burned on the altar of hypocrisy, rather than be dragged through the streets of Washington in chains before their crucifixion. The presence of willing and playful women sort of spoils the feminist party line that Tailhook was just another example of awful males taking unfair advantage of innocent women.

Fate's funny. As I was driving to work, thinking about a column on the Tailhook Incident, I looked up and saw a nice suburban station wagon being driven by a nice suburban housewife down a nice suburban street with a nice suburban small child in the seat beside her. On the stationwagon was a bumper sticker that proclaimed: "I drive this way just to p– you off."

My point precisely. From the beginning, I have objected to the unbelievable hypocrisy of those who have singled out some young men and women who were cavorting, off duty, at a private party in a private hotel in an area reserved exclusively for such purposes.

The point all along has not been that their behavior at the party met the standards set by Emily Post but that their behavior was fairly mild given that America today is a tasteless, standardless, decadent and corrupt country. The men and women at the Tailhook party were choir kids compared to Sen. Edward Kennedy and some of his cohorts.

The injustice being done these young men and women is that they, for political and pecuniary reasons (the woman who blew the whistle had already hired a lawyer to sue the hotel), are suddenly being held to the standards of the Victorian Age by people wallowing in the Caligula Age. It's as if Caligula, one of the most depraved and demented of Roman emperors, had suddenly reprimanded the Pretorian Guard for having sex without benefit of marriage.

What planet do these hypocrites inhabit? This is the society that makes multi-millionaires out of psychoneurotics for cavorting on the stage, playing with their genitalia, and spouting the most coarse, vulgar, profane and blasphemous words. This is the country that made Roseanne the number one rated television show. This is the country that shrugs its shoulders over the drunken sexual escapades of Kennedy, the seduction of congressional pages by congressmen, the fixing of parking tickets by a congressman living with his male whore he found in a classified ad. This is a country that reveres a former president who turned the White House into a whore house.

This is a country where television and motion picture executives have practically put pornographers out of business by stealing their product and showing it in living rooms and movie houses. This is the country that calls a closeup photograph of a male anus with some object sticking out of it art. This is a country where exploitation of sex, violence and race is called entertainment.

What exactly do you expect of young men and women who come of age in such an anything-goes society? That they not get caught? You want to condemn some young men who got tanked and played sexually with some women, most of whom were also tanked and some of whom were hookers? But it's okay for an "entertainer" to stand in front of 300,000 people and on national television, grope her own crotch, and scream vulgarisms and profanity?

As I said, the people who pretend to be outraged by the Tailhook Incident, must be living on a different planet. Set some standards, if you can find any, apply the same standards to everyone, and then come talk to me about Tailhook.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

LETTERS

Resident points out president's problems

Upon reading Don Handley's letter (Letters, April 16) "Veteran Extends a Healing Hand," I was incredulous to say the least! Bill Clinton admitted that he has smoked dope, dodged the draft and organized anti-U.S. rallies in the USSR. He switched (out of political expediency) to a "pro-choice" stand. Numerous women have claimed to have slept with him. The president of the United States has said that he "loathes the military," and, it is alleged, he wouldn't allow U.S. soldiers to wear their uniforms in the White House.

Handley tells us that we should open our hearts, forgive and forget, and give the poor guy a chance. Attitudes like this are pushing the United States further and further down the path of degeneracy, racism, mediocrity and a disregard for the sanctity of life. Organizations such as NOW, ACLU, NEA are the offspring of this kind of thinking. They promote "new age" thinking where anything goes (except God); just live and let live, whatever despotism or decadent theories come along, embrace them. In the interest of peace (at the expense of all else) let's get along. And for sure, don't hold anyone accountable.

Handley alluded that Dan Quayle was a hyprocrite because he joined the National Guard instead of going to Canada or Russia. This kind of reasoning leaves me dumbfounded. I see nothing disgraceful about the National Guard, I do though, see plenty wrong with the attitude, morals and integrity of a president of the United States who would willfully elect to disregard his draft notice, lie about it 20 years later, and then admit it only when confronted with the truth. I have a problem with a man that actively crusaded against the United States while in a country that was aiding and abetting our enemy. I have a problem with a man that has broken every campaign promise except to select groups that supported him during his campaign like the Gay-Lesbian Alliance, Queer Nation and Act Up. I have a problem with a man that lacks honesty, fidelity and credibility being president of my country.

Simple conduct code rejects school prom

Well, it's prom time again and the community braces itself for the inevitable consequences of allowing unbridled, untutored youth to drink and run loose.

Each year as this time rolls around I think back a few years to the time my two youngest were junior and senior high school students. They were both artistic, enthusiastic and willing and had contributed a proportionate share to preparations for the bash looming on the horizon. We have never been party people, do not smoke or get drunk or cuss or any of those things, so I was a bit surprised when they came to me and asked if they might attend their prom as boy and girl dates. I saw no harm in it because I knew that their lifelong lessons in decency and indecency had had the desired effect.

So they got all dolled up to the nines, took the family car and were off to their first prom. Within 30 minutes or so they returned home a bit crestfallen. When we asked them why they had not stayed at the dance they told us that they had never seen such drunkenness, foul speech and conduct, loud vulgar music and general badness before. Interesting. If we had told them what to expect they, like most youngsters who are wise beyond their means, would have thought we were trying to "deprive" them of something.

All it took was careful lessons in right-and-wrong (it won't work if you're afraid of your kids) and a simple code of conduct by which the whole family lived. Try it.

Young children need more mature animals

This is a response to a letter from Sylvia Howard (Letters, April 30).

A big "thank you" goes to the SPCA for not allowing young children to adopt very young kittens. I have known of instances where young children accidentally killed very young kittens. Young children need a more mature pet, so the pet can protect itself if children play rough.

In addition, when responsible people move, they do not abandon their pets. Pets should be considered part of the family. When the family moves, the pets go with them. An untrue story that is sometimes told is that a cat cannot be moved. They most certainly can. Just keep them restricted for several days after a move, and they will adapt to the new home.

Many thanks to the SPCA for their kind care and concern for unfortunate animals. In honor of "Be Kind To Animals" Week, everyone send a generous donation to the SPCA.

Physicists try to calculate strength of gravity

NEW YORK (AP) — At the doorstep of the 21st century, as physicists probe deeply into the atom and out to the farthest reaches of space, an experiment planned on a lonely New Mexico mesa sounds downright quaint.

Its job: to measure how strong gravity is.

Yep, our old friend gravity.

Despite nearly 200 years of careful experiments, this familiar and fundamental force has eluded the kind of precision measurement that physicists are used to obtaining.

The mass of the neutron, the electrical charge of a single electron and the speed of light in a vacuum, for example, all are known to an accuracy of 1 part per million or better. But the strength of gravity is known only to 128 parts per million.

That still can be equated with knowing the weight of a 790-pound grizzly bear to within the weight of a candy bar, which sounds pretty good to a layman. But for a handful of physicists, it's a call to action.

"We aren't to first base-on measuring the strength of gravity," said Alvin Sanders of the University of Tennessee. "I think that's important, to know how big the darn thing is."

The goal is not measuring Earth's gravity, which can be determined very precisely. Rather, it's the strength of gravity in general, as it applies to any two objects in the universe. This is the Newtonian constant of gravitation, called "G" or "big G."

Sanders concedes that the current estimate for big G is good enough for now and that most physicists don't care about pinning it down further.

But he maintains that greater precision will be needed in the future to help choose between competing fundamental theories of physics and to aid in understanding the interior of stars.

Some other physicists aren't so sure.

"Do we really need it better?" asks Jim Faller of the joint Institute for Laboratory Astrophyics at the University in Colorado at Boulder, who has tried to improve the measurement.

"I'm not sure we do," he said, "other than it's sort of like climbing one of the great mountains and if you're so clever as to figure out a way to do it, great.

"The measure of G is somehow embedded in the several-hundred-year-old culture of physics. You're competing with some great minds of 100 years ago or 200 years ago. They weren't dumb."

So why is G so elusive? One reason is that gravity is extremely weak. When a magnet picks up a paper clip, it defeats the gravitational pull of the entire Earth. And scientists can't even use Earth's gravity in their experiments, in part because its density is too uneven.

So researchers are stuck with measuring the vanishingly small gravitational tug between objects small enough to fit into a laboratory. Measurements of something that small easily can be thrown off by such things as tiny, undetected variations in the density of the objects.

What's more, since everything exerts gravity and there is no way to block it, scientists even have to worry about interference from gravitational tugs by other things.

"You and me and a car in the parking lot," Sanders said, "a deer that walks by at 2 in the morning if you go to a rural area to get away from the cars — these things mess up the gravitational field in ways you just can't predict."

Gravity measurements have been affected by the gravitational tugs of passing field mice and the water deposited by sprinklers outside a lab building, Faller said.

So scientists have to get away from it all, which is why Gabriel Luther of the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico plans to set up his experiment on the mesa overlooking the Rio Grande.

Luther plans to move his apparatus to the mesa soon and have it working a year after that.

The measurement device contains a small dumbbell hanging horizontally from a slender fiber. Two tungsten balls, each weighing 23 pounds, will rotate around the dumbbell. The gravitational tug of the balls on the dumbbell's weights, which would tend to make the dumbbell rotate, then can be calculated precisely. Since the distances involved and the masses of all the objects are known, the results should reveal big G.

Luther, co-owner of the current precision record, is aiming to refine the measurement to 10 parts per million, a tenfold improvement.

Two proposed space-based experiments are aiming for 1 part per million, though some physicists say it will be hard to reach such accuracy without any way to fiddle with the instruments once they're in orbit.

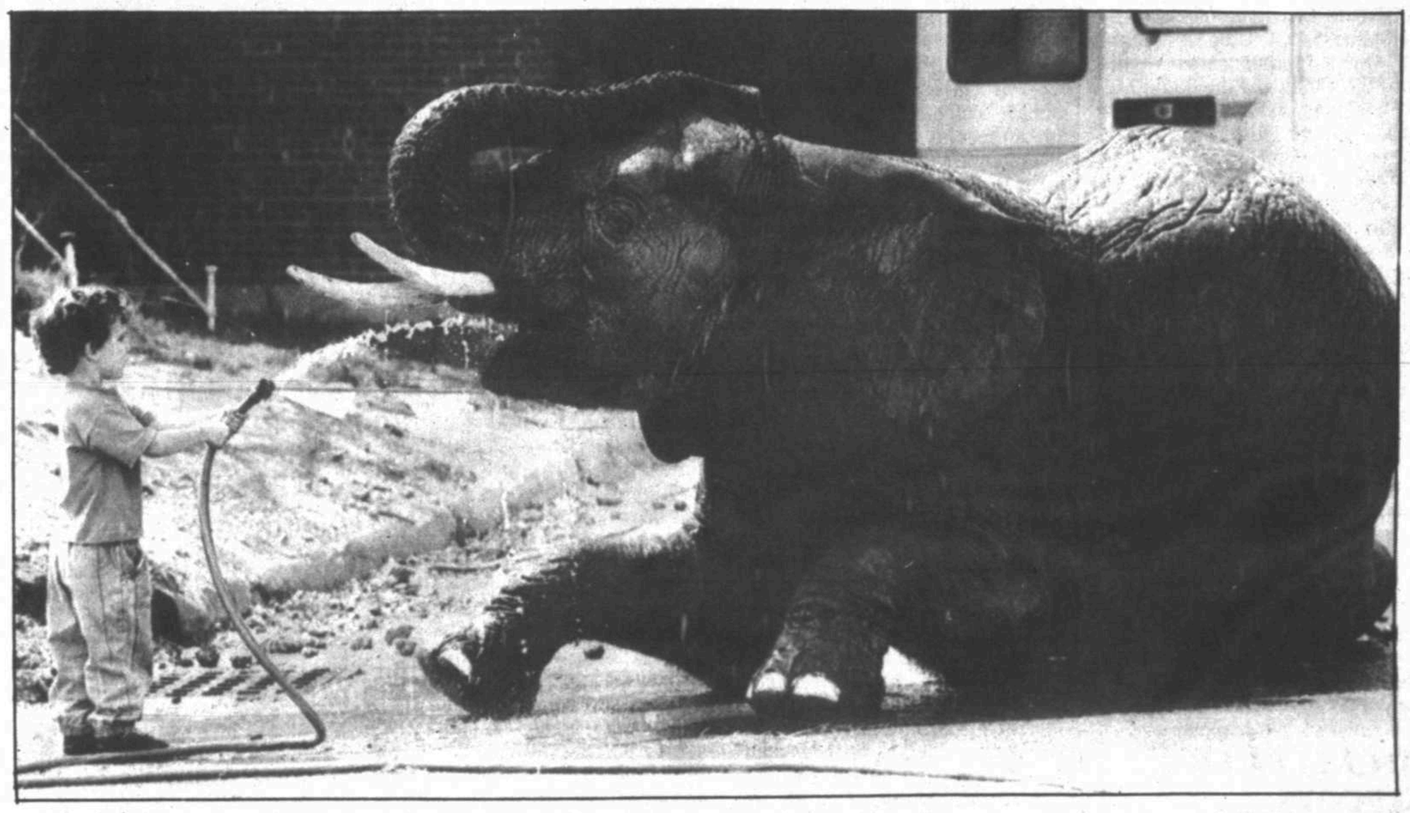

Ho Jung Paik of the University of Maryland in College Park designed one experiment as part of a larger investigation of gravity, which may soon get approval to fly in the year 2001.

His design calls for two pairs of cylinders, each with a smaller cylinder inside a bigger one. For each pair, a very dense mass would be moved back and forth through the inner cylinder. Its gravity would make the cylinders move and the motion could be precisely measured to yield a value for big G, Paik said.

Sanders still is seeking funding for his experiment, which would involve a sphere a little bigger than a basketball and several times the size of pingpong balls. By observing how the larger ball affects the motion of the smaller ones as they float in weightless orbit around Earth, scientists should be able to calculate big G, Sanders said.

Clearly, after 200 years, the lure of trying to outfox the elusive big G lives on.

"Everybody solves the wrong problem," Luther said. "You read all the previous measurements and say, 'Aha, I know how to do it better,' and then you try and you don't do it better."

Minister changes role of chaplain of U.S. Senate

By Philip Brasher
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Rev. Richard Halverson, the chaplain of the U.S. Senate, was walking with a senator one day when a police officer asked him to pray for his ill wife.

Halverson did, right there, along the east front of the Capitol.

"He didn't wait to go to the office and pray," said the senator who was with him, Mark Hatfield, R-Ore. "It was on-the-spot chaplaincy."

Halverson is best known for his folksy prayers — he opened one especially difficult session by admitting to the Almighty that he didn't "know enough about this situation to pray intelligently."

But he is credited with moving his job beyond just giving the Senate's opening prayer to include ministering to those on Capitol Hill. It is his counsel and humility that will make him difficult to replace, Hatfield said.

Halverson, 77, tendered his resignation last fall for health reasons. He agreed to stay in the job until the Senate leadership finds a replacement.

"You ask any policeman, the pages, elevator operators. He has reached out to truly be a support, an encourager of the whole institution," Hatfield said.

Halverson, a native of North Dakota, was appointed to the Senate post in 1981 after a long career as pastor of Presbyterian churches in California and suburban Washington, D.C.

But the secret of his success goes back to a painful childhood in North Dakota, even before he went to Hollywood seeking fame and a pastor introduced him to Christianity instead, Halverson said.

Halverson was poor, his father was an alcoholic, and his parents divorced when he was young. He was born in Pingree, N.D., but his family moved from town to town as his mother tried to eke out a living.

"I grew up with a very low self-image that persists to this day," Halverson said in a recent interview. "Even to this day I'm not comfortable around the kind of people I serve, for example. I never feel I really belong."

He said he learned to turn that low self-esteem into humility.

One senator recently told him he was the "most Christlike man I've ever known," said Halverson, whose office walls are adorned with pictures of Jesus.

"I believe that Christlikeness is there because I'm not in the way of it with my ego," he said.

Before Halverson, the chaplain's primary job was to open the Senate with prayer. He still does that, nearly every day, with an originality that regularly makes its way into news pages.

During one prayer, he referred to the Senate's leaders as "maestros conducting a symphony while each musician plays his own music."

Another time, he quoted a nursery rhyme: "Humpty Dumpty . . . had a great fall. Dear Father, help the Senate not be Humpty Dumpty."

But Halverson's biggest contribution has been in turning the job into a pastoral role, said Hatfield.

Senators seek him out for advice on legislation. He said he doesn't give advice, only opinions, and that he urges them to vote their consciences, even if that doesn't please constituents.

The toughest issue he has faced, he said, is that of gays in the military.

Halverson, an evangelical, said he thinks gays should be allowed to serve in the military as long as they observe rules against homosexual relations.

"I believe homosexuality is wrong, but I don't think it's worse than any other sin. I think that homophobia is wrong," Halverson said.

Ostrich-breeding business takes flight

By Denise Lavoie
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, Conn. — An 8-foot-tall bird with a bald head sticks his long, swiveling neck through the holes of a fenced pen, a strange sight on land where dairy cows once grazed in the green pastures of western Connecticut.

As the ostrich playfully nibbles owner Madeleine Calder's fingertips, the real estate agent-turned-farmer predicts the funny-looking birds soon will become as common as cattle on farms nationwide.

"This is a golden opportunity for farmers," says Calder, who recently started an ostrich-breeding business in the rural town of Washington. "My phone rings off the hook all week from people who want to buy ostriches."

Since the mid-1980s, ostrich breeding has increased rapidly in the United States. There are now about 40,000 to 50,000 ostriches in the United States on about 3,500 farms and ranches, according to the American Ostrich Association, founded four years ago in Fort Worth.

Although most ostrich farms are located in Texas and California, they also are popping up in Oklahoma, Florida, Pennsylvania, where farmers range from bored retirees to stockbrokers trying to escape the rat race.

Calder got into the ostrich business about a year ago, after seeing a television report about a New Jersey ostrich farm.

Last January, she bought her first pair of blueneck ostriches. A few months later, she bought another pair in Texas. Now, Floyd and Bonnie, and Gallagher and Juliet, live in two 60-foot by 85-foot pens on Calder's property, a four-acre parcel in a quiet subdivision that was once a dairy farm.

"Never in my wildest dreams did I think I'd get into something like this," Calder says. "But once you get started, you just fall in love with this business."

Ostriches, fast-moving birds native to Africa, are valued for their hides, feathers and meat.

Their hides are used to make pocketbooks and cowboy boots that can sell for $1,000 or more. The bird's feathers are used for dusters and Las Vegas costumes. Their corneas have been used experimentally for human transplants, and their long, lush eyelashes become the fabric of paintbrushes.

Ostrich meat, which has the texture and taste of beef but is significantly lower in fat, calories and cholesterol, has become a popular delicacy.

At the Huntington Grill restaurant in Dallas, they serve about 300 orders a month of ostrich cutlets.

"It's very appealing for people who need a very low cholesterol diet," says Fahmi Sukhan, a sous-chef at the restaurant. "What's interesting about it is it doesn't taste gamy. It tastes pretty much like a piece of beef."

Because ostrich farming is so new to the United States, there still aren't enough ostriches to support tanneries and slaughterhouses.

So for now, the only real ostrich products being sold here are ostrich eggs, chicks and birds. Breeders across the country say they are being inundated with requests from farmers who want to buy their chicks so they can start their own ostrich farms.

"Any age bird is very easily snatched up in this industry because, right now, there is a great shortage of birds," says Debra Taylor, who runs a 235-acre ostrich ranch in Jacksboro, Texas, with her husband, Paul.

"The demand is remarkable," she says. "I could have a waiting list for the next two years if I wanted to."

Taylor and her husband began ostrich farming three years ago, after leaving their white-collar jobs in search of a respite from the business world.

Today, 100 ostriches roam their 235-acre ranch in the heart of cattle country. "The Golden Quill," as the ranch is called, is one of the largest ostrich operations in the country.

Halfway across the country, seven pairs of mated ostriches roam W. Logan Dickerson's ranch in Greensburg, Pa.

Dickerson was in the cattle business for 23 years when the high price of land and labor on the East Coast prompted him to look for a business where he could be more competitive with farmers in other parts of the country.

In the fall of 1991, Dickerson decided on ostrich breeding.

Eighteen months later, Dickerson has almost completely phased out his cattle business. His ostrich farm sold out its 1992 production of chicks and has orders through August for its 1993 production.

"This has an almost awesome potential for growth," says Dickerson, who also breeds horses on his farm, located about 35 miles east of Pittsburgh.

Industry experts say it will take at least another three to five years before there are enough ostriches to begin selling their byproducts.

Once the industry reaches that point, it has unlimited potential, says Susan Adkins, executive director of the American Ostrich Association.

"You've got a bird that has the potential for a very large number of offspring and products from that offspring that are in demand and higher-priced."

Although ostrich breeding is still considered an alternative agricultural venture, industry supporters say it's more than just a fad.

"Unlike other animals that have hit the marketplace, which had no other economic base other than selling them as pets or oddities — like llamas or pot-bellied pigs — the ostrich has a true economic base," says Dickerson. "It has the tender meat and it has a very durable leather that is in great demand."

Despite the potential for ostrich farming, breeders warn that the business of growing the world's largest birds comes with no guarantees and is not a get-rich-quick venture.

It takes at least three years — the time it takes for an ostrich to breed — for most investors to recover their investment.

And even though an average hen lays 40 to 50 eggs a year, only about 25 percent to 40 percent become viable adults. The chicks require extensive care, and most investors spend thousands of dollars on incubation and hatching equipment.

"We try to tell people not to just look at the blue sky," Taylor says. "There's a lot of re-investment required."

The Taylors made an initial investment of about $150,000, covering breeding stock, hatchery equipment, barns and other facilities. In 18 months, they made back their investment, but they've put some of that money back into new equipment.

Still, with a healthy number of eggs and a little luck, a breeder can do quite well. The current market price for a pair of 3-month-old ostrich chicks is about $8,000, while yearlings bring $20,000 a pair.

But once they reach adulthood, ostriches require little care and cost only about 80 cents a day to feed.

Calder's operation hasn't been without problems, however. The arrival of the strange-looking birds raised some objections from her next-door neighbor, and Calder is currently battling in court for her right to raise the ostriches.

DEATHS

Norma Anderson

Services for Norma Elizabeth Joley Anderson, 66, of Midland will be at 1 p.m. today at First Presbyterian Church with the Revs. Steve Schorr, associate pastor, and Jerry Hilton, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Anderson died Thursday.

She was born on April 12, 1927. She was valedictorian of the Pana High School Class of 1945. She received a bachelor's degree in English from Centenary College in Shreveport, La., in 1971 and had attended the University of Illinois in the 1940s. She received a master's degree in education from Louisiana State University and had taught English at the secondary-school level. She served as president of the Midland Chapter of the American Association University Women in 1990 and was involved in the Midland Alumni Chapter of Phi Mu sorority. She was a member of First Presbyterian Church, the Santa Rita Guild at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and had served as a hospital volunteer Pink Lady. She also was involved in the Girl Scouts, Geo Wives and the PTA.

Survivors include her husband, Gerald Keith Anderson of Midland; two daughters, Janet Anderson Kahl of Houston and Nancy Anderson Hill of Midland; a son, Keith A. Anderson of Iraan; a sister, Mrs. Marguerite Ramseyer of Pana, Ill.; a brother, Charles L. Joley of Marshall, Ill.; and three grandchildren.

Pallbearers are Thomas Hill, Keith Anderson, John Kahl, Frank Bell, Charles Pendleton and Eddie Hill.

Honorary pallbearers are Gene Erwin, Wayne Greenlee, Cary Geron, Charles Joley, Robert Anderson and Clyde Anderson.

Memorials may be made to the Norma J. Anderson Scholarship Fund, Midland University Graduate Women, c/o Barbara Lansen, 2103 Ward St., Midland 79705, or to Midland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, 15 Kerry Road, Midland, 79703.

David Weeks

Graveside services for David R. Weeks will be at 11 a.m. Tuesday at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. William Simpson, of Tall City Baptist Church, officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Weeks

Weeks died Saturday at a local hospital.

He was born Sept. 27, 1923, in Roby. He served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He married Ina Faye Newsome on March 26, 1949. He had worked as a crossing guard at Parker Elementary School since September 1992. He was a member of Temple Baptist Church, VFW, American Legion, Eagles and Elks.

Survivors include his wife, Ina Faye Weeks of Midland; two sons, David Weeks Jr. and Reginald K. Weeks, both of Midland; a sister, Doris Weeks Rector of Yorktown; six grandchildren; a great-grandchild; two nieces; and two nephews.

Honorary pallbearers are James Rector Jr., Cody Weeks, Michael Marquez, Rodger Rector, Kenneth Green and Terry Childers.

Barbara Bartlett

Services for Barbara Jean Bartlett are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Ms. Bartlett died Sunday in Lubbock.

Jewell Hodges

Services for Jewell Hodges are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Ms. Hodges died Sunday at a Houston hospital.

Adrian Roe

Services for Adrian Shane Roe, 23, are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Roe died Saturday in Houston from injuries sustained in an automobile accident.

Gilmer Davis

Service for Gilmer Don Davis will be at 11 a.m. today at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Jerry Murphy, of Jesus Way Church, officiating, assisted by George Baley, of First Assembly of God, and Gayle Reeves, of Calvary Assembly of God. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Davis died Saturday at a local hospital.

Pallbearers are Billy Pruitt, Tim Culver, Steve Culver, Greg Davis, Colton Lann and Jason Lann.

Honorary pallbearers are Jim Ainsworth, Ralph Holder, Earl Smith, Oscar Smith, Charles Tapley, Larry Murphy, James Applegate, Tate Gowin, Nathan Lann, Preston Lann, Cliff Roberson and David Snyder.

Memorials may be made to Allison Cancer Center, 2200 W. Illinois Ave., Midland 79701, or Cornerstone Christian Fellowship, 1610 W. Wall Ave., Midland 79701.

Ophelia Welch

Services for Ophelia Ann Welch, 40, of Midland will be at 3 p.m. today at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Colquit Nash, of North A Street and Tennessee Avenue Church of Christ, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Funeral Home under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Welch died Friday at a Borger nursing home.

She was born March 31, 1903, in Blocker Indian Territory, Okla., where she taught school. She later moved to Texas, where she worked as a telephone operator in Floydada. She married Walter F. Welch on Feb. 5, 1921. She later moved to San Angelo, where she worked for Lollars Interiors making draperies. She moved to Midland in 1955, where she worked for Knorr Furniture, Sears and in her home making draperies. She was a lifetime member of the Church of Christ.

She was preceded in death by her husband in 1969; a son, Maynard F. (Ken) Welch of Kermit; and a daughter, Mrs. O.L. (Doris) Haney of Midland.

Survivors include two sons, Jim Welch and Paul Welch, both of Midland; 14 grandchildren; and several great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers are Thane Akins, Harvey Strickland, Paul Cooper, Les Fisher, Ed Stewart, John Flynn, Don Merritt and Bill Balke.

Memorials may be made to North A and Tennessee Church of Christ.

DEAR ABBY
Resentful daughters don't deserve reward

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: "Vacillating in California" — a 76-year-old woman — wrote to say that she had been married to a practicing alcoholic for 42 years, and stayed with him because she wanted their two daughters to finish college. Their father died at home from cancer. During his long illness, his daughters refused to help their mother, saying, "He did it to himself," and they could never forgive him.

Van Buren

Mother was left with a $400,000 estate, and asked: "Shall I leave it to my daughters, or to the organization that cares for battered women in our community?"

My reply: "The battered women's organization gets my vote," and I asked my readers for their input.

I received an avalanche of mail (mostly negative). Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am writing as the former wife of an alcoholic and an active member of Al-Anon. One letter cannot possibly describe the hellish lives those daughters must have led and the sort of abuse they had to endure. I think they deserve the $400,000 inheritance — which can't make up for what they've been through, but it might make a dent in their psychiatrists' bills.

I hope those daughters find their way to Al-Anon and Adult Children of Alcoholics. I don't blame them for turning their backs on their father after all he put them through. — BEEN THERE

DEAR ABBY: I'm with you 100 percent. Why should "Vacillating" leave her $400,000 to those two ungrateful daughters who refused to help their mother with their father's care when he was dying? I'm for helping battered women — not rewarding selfish brats. — WILLIE LEE CRADER, CHOW CHILLA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Vacillating" to spend her money on herself. She can afford to travel in style — and take along a less fortunate friend or two. With $400,000, she could make substantial contributions to deserving local charities, and set up a trust fund at a college to help some needy students. She shouldn't cut her daughters out completely — $25,000 to each of them would be plenty. — FAITHFUL READER, TAIPEI, TAIWAN

DEAR ABBY: I disagree with your advice to "Vacillating." She says she stayed with her husband all those years for her daughters' sake. It would have been far better for her and her daughters had she left her husband — even if she had to work two jobs to support them. Most alcoholics have someone who has stayed with them, covered for them, and accepted the most unacceptable behavior. That's called "enabling." Please, Abby, no signature on this one. My mother is still living with her alcoholic husband. — WATSEKA, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: I vote for "Vacillating" to spend the $400,000 on herself and some charities of her choice, but she should leave each daughter $1 so she can't be accused of "forgetting" them. (Advice from a lawyer who taught a class on how to write a will.) — S.M. IN MINNEAPOLIS

Replicas of Columbus' ships to come to Texas

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Replicas of Christopher Columbus' three famous ships — the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria — will be on display in Corpus Christi for 50 years, beginning next month.

Under an agreement signed Saturday, Spain will be paid $1.6 million for the replicas of the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria. The money will come from bank loans and foundation gifts and will be used to build two more replicas for cities in Spain.

"The vessels will be an important visitor attraction," said Gary Bushell, director of the Corpus Christi Bay Area Economic Development Corp., which was involved in the negotiations in Seville, Spain.

"Perhaps Mayor Mary Rhodes said it best ... when she said, 'They will bring my city together.' I really believe they will tell a great story. It will bring Anglo and Hispanic citizens here together, and that is more important than the economic contribution they will make."

The Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria will leave New York May 15 and are expected to arrive June 11 for a special public welcoming ceremony.

The ships have been on display in New York City since August and will be towed to Naval Station Ingleside, where they will remain for more than two weeks for refurbishing, said Janet Rice, chairwoman of the Corpus Christi Quincentenary Commission.

The commission brought the vessels here for a 10-day visit last year.

A parade of sails, welcoming ceremony, state reception and public party at the barge dock next to Bayfront Plaza have been tentatively scheduled for what is being touted as "Texas Welcome Weekend" on June 11-12.

Lynne T. Dean, development director for the Corpus Christi Museum of Science and History, said organizers hope dignitaries from Spain and Texas, including Gov. Ann Richards, will attend.

Musuem officials are considering incorporating periodic sailing excursions into educational programming being planned around the ships, Ms. Dean said.

Because they will be navigating contrary to northerly winds and tides, the three vessels will be towed rather than sailed from New York to Texas, said Mike Kershaw, a member of the Aransas-Corpus Christi Pilots Association.

Sailing the ships would take months, perhaps a year, and would require a full crew on each vessel, said Kershaw, one of three people who piloted the replicas from the Aransas Pass jetties to Homeport and to Corpus Christi when they were displayed here last year.

Kershaw again will be piloting the vessels here from the jetties.

"It is possible to sail them, but it would be an immense and lengthy undertaking," the deep sea vessel pilot told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

"Right now we are estimating it will take 17 to 20 days to get them here, depending on the weather."

Riding crews of one officer and three seamen will likely be aboard each vessel, Kershaw said.

The vessels are basically downwind sailers, which, unlike modern sailing craft, have great difficulty cutting into winds, he said. They also make for awkward sailing.

"They are remarkably simple and primitive crafts. It's hard to imagine how those who were making voyages aboard these vessels were living so close to the elements. (Their crews) had very little protection from the seas and weather," he said.

'They are remarkably simple and primitive crafts. It's hard to imagine how those who were making voyages aboard these vessels were living so close to the elements. (Their crews) had very little protection from the seas and weather.'

— Mike Kershaw
Aransas-Corpus Christi Pilots Association

"It took great determination to make the vessels sail in the general direction they wanted them to go. They learned how to be patient in waiting for the winds and they learned how to make great use of the tides and currents if they wanted to make any time at all."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Aggravated robbery

A Midland man was in jail Sunday and charged with attempting to shoplift a camera at Wal-Mart, 4715 Billingsly Blvd., on Saturday.

According to a police report, officers were called to Wal-Mart at 5:55 p.m. in reference to employees chasing a shoplifter. Security guard Jackie Lindsay, 39, believed Tyree Jackson, 41, was stealing a camera, the report said. When Ms. Lindsay tried to detain Jackson, he struck her in the stomach, the report said. He was then pursued by four employees and caught.

Jackson was charged with aggravated robbery. No bond had been set late Sunday.

Automobile rollover

A Midland man was in critical condition at Odessa Medical Center Sunday after a one-vehicle rollover late Saturday.

According to a Department of Public Safety report, an automobile driven by 37-year-old Daryl Paul Sanchez, was eastbound at a high speed on Highway 191, 8.3 miles west of Midland, at 9:55 p.m. The vehicle went off the right side of the road and Sanchez overcorrected, first to the left and then to the right. The vehicle rolled over four times and Sanchez was ejected from the vehicle.

MONEY MATTERS
YOUR PERSONAL FINANCES

Nearly everyone needs a will

By Leonard Sloane
N.Y. Times News Service

Mark C. Kruse, 34, a vice president of Mercantile Mortgage Bankers in Rye, N.Y., and his wife, Lynn, 32, had no wills. But with two children and a third on the way, they decided it was time to put their wishes in writing and are consulting an estate lawyer.

"I've got my insurance policies in place, my net worth is starting to grow and this is the next step," he said. "I'd feel more comfortable in case anything happens to me and it makes my wife more comfortable."

Like Kruse, millions of Americans do not have wills. In fact, estimates are that over 60 percent of American adults die without a will. Yet experts say that almost everyone — rich or poor, young or old, working spouse or non-working spouse — should have an unambiguous will.

And with a slew of changes in the estate tax laws pending, more people are talking about wills these days. That's because both the Clinton administration and Congress are considering ways to change the $600,000 amount exempt from federal estate tax — with some proposals to lower that amount and others to increase it.

"Dying intestate — without a will — is a fate worse than death," said Conrad Teitell, an estate lawyer in White Plains. "If you have property, you need a will if you want to distribute it according to your own wishes."

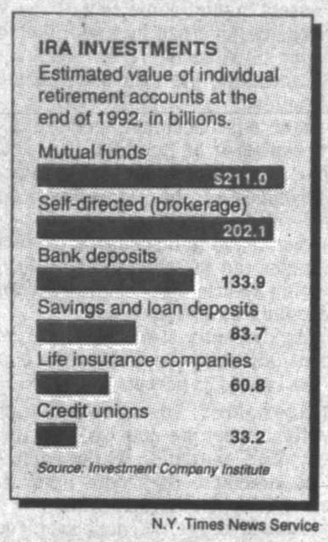

The role of a last will and testament is to transfer ownership of assets from a testator — the person who writes the will — to beneficiaries. Although each state has different laws governing various aspects of a will, the basic reason for spending the time and money to draw it up is the same everywhere: only with a will can you decide, sometimes within limits, who gets your assets.

While a formal will may frequently contain elements that are not found in any other — "no will has a broth-

'Love me' tender

Wasn't it bound to happen? First, those paintings on black velvet. Then decorated dinner plates and the much-ballyhooed United States postage stamps. And now, yes, Elvis coins.

The Marshall Islands has released three legal tender coins to mark the 40th anniversary of the year that Elvis cut his first record, "My Happiness" and "That's When Your Heartaches Begin."

One might wonder what connection a small island republic in the South Pacific might have to the King of the Rock-and-Roll.

In a news release, the finance minister, Ruben R. Zachras, explains all:

"In the Republic music is an artistic medium practiced by young and old alike. It is an important part of weekly religious activities and of particular importance to the traditional Christmas annual holiday events."

Yo, Ruben! We're talking Elvis here! The King. The man who brought foot-stomping black rhythm-and-blues to toe-tapping white America. The Elvis who still has millions of fans years after his death. The Elvis who is said to reappear from time to time in shopping malls around the United States.

Notwithstanding the finance minister's slightly outmoded tone, the coins themselves are quite attractive. The $50 silver proof commemorative, about one and a half inches across and weighing one troy ounce, depicts a mature Elvis. Two smaller-denomination coins portray Elvis as a young man: the $10 coin, made of brass and 10-sided instead of round, and the $5 coin, made of cupronickel.

The coins cost $65 for the set, or their face value if ordered individually. More information is available from: (800) 443-3232.

Too many eggs?

Many financial planners advise employees to invest their assets outside their own company to achieve better diversification. They argue that if you have your paycheck, your pension and your portfolio all tied to the same company, you are in a very high-risk position.

In fact, companies that offer financial counseling to senior executives find that the planners typically advise executives to sell their company stock and diversify.

The new rule on mandatory holdings of company stock, then, "clearly flies in the face of that advice," said Michael Guthman, partner at Hewitt Associates.

"In one company, where they use a single financial planner, the company told him: 'Don't go around telling people to diversify any more.' "

Family budgeting requires year-round fiscal restraint

By Deborah Yu
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Lindy Dawson liked to shop so much that she once spent $300 on a casual black dress she had dreamed about.

The Glendale, Calif. resident said that at the time she had 14 credit cards with bills totaling $10,000.

"I got it and I wore it twice," she said. "After that, the dress just sat there and I said to myself, 'never again.' That was three years ago."

Today, the single mother of two children — Gerald, 13 and Ashley, 8 — has cut her credit card debt to $1,200.

Dawson began changing her spending habits by taking stock of where her money was going.

Financial planners say families should assess their net worth once a year.

"You'll know where you are today and where you would like to be in the future," said Bill Jennings, chairman of the department of finance, real estate and insurance at California State University, Northridge.

Net worth is assets minus liabilities. Ideally, assets total more than liabilities. If not, consultants advise cutting back on expenses or increasing income.

To tally assets, estimate the value of income, homes, cars, investments, retirement plans, pensions, savings and the cash value of life insurance, said Brian Frazier, manager of the personal financial planning group at Arthur Andersen in Los Angeles.

John Reed, an Oak Park financial planner and accountant, advises conservatism in estimating income, especially for self-employed workers.

"Quite often they are overly optimistic and their budget goes to pieces," he said.

Liabilities include credit card debt, mortgages, car loans and taxes, Frazier said.

'There's something really wrong if you've worked all this time and don't have anything to show for it.'
— Lindy Dawson, single mother of two

One way to increase net worth is by increasing savings, Frazier said. Another is to not over withhold taxes. Third, cut debt and manage expenses better.

Ron Rahav, a self-employed computer and engineering consultant from Northridge, said he is slowly whittling down his $10,000 debt on business and personal expenses.

With income fluctuating between $1,000 to $7,000 a month, Rahav has to play with a flexible budget. Keeping costs down is crucial.

He said he's a conscientious shopper and avoids buying on credit.

"Don't buy with the money you don't have," he said.

After a family assesses its worth, the information can be used to develop a budget.

Every family or household should have a budget, Frazier said. A budget can help a family allocate resources to reach a goal — whether it's buying a car, putting cash away for a rainy day or saving for a mortgage down payment.

How did Dawson put together a workable budget? With her children in private school, the computer graphics artist said it wasn't easy.

First, she said she had to realize budgeting was necessary. It wasn't good enough just to "wing it" anymore.

"It just struck me one day," Dawson said. "I never had any money after I wrote my checks

BUDGET BASICS

Brian Frazier, manager of the personal financial planning group at Arthur Andersen in Los Angeles, offers these tips:

GOALS: Set a goal. For example, save money for retirement, college costs or reducing credit card debt.

SPENDING: List expenses to see where money is spent. For example, housing expenses — rent or mortgage, homeowners' insurance and taxes — should not exceed a third of the household's gross income. Car loans or leases, credit card payments and other installment debt should not exceed 35 percent.

CUTTING COSTS: Look for areas in which to cut costs, such as eating at home instead of going out, stopping cable television service or shopping at cheaper stores.

SAVINGS: After cutting debt, save at least 10 percent of the household's take-home pay. Set aside that money before deducting expenses. Then, adjust to living on 90 percent of household income.

TAXES: Do not overwithhold taxes. This gives Uncle Sam an interest-free loan. Instead, that money could buy extras for the family ASSISTANCE: Read books on investment or consult a reputable financial planner to make money grow. For a financial planner referral, call the National Association of Personal Financial Advisors (800) 366-2732. (For credit counseling, call the National Foundation for Consumer Credit at (800) 388-2227. Los Angeles County residents, call (213) 386-7601.

Building child's future with tax benefit

By Rachelle Garbarine
N.Y. Times News Service

One of the simplest and least expensive ways to save for a child's financial future is to open a custodial account. Along the way it also allows grown-ups to realize some tax benefits.

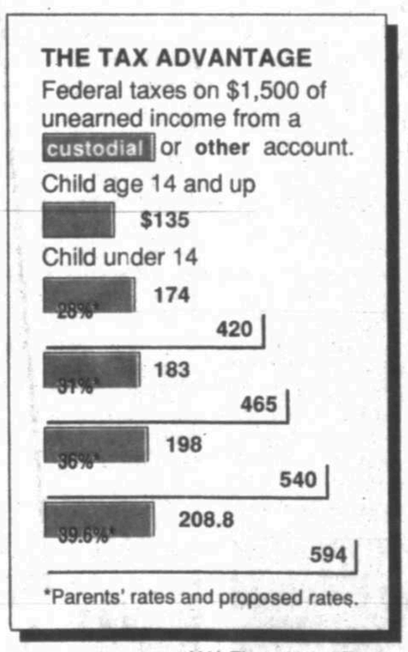

Such accounts, which have been around for a long time, can be opened at banks, brokerages or mutual funds, without cost, though there may be annual fees. Once established, usually for a child's education, they function in much the same way as any savings or investment account.

But they contain some important distinctions that bring both drawbacks and rewards. The assets that go into the account are the child's, not the parents. But as such, the unearned income from it is taxed at the child's lower rate.

"These accounts hold a child's funds without running afoul of taxes," said Stuart Kessler, a partner at Goldstein Golub Kessler & Co., an accounting firm in Manhattan.

To achieve the tax benefit, custodial accounts must be in the child's name and Social Security number. But they are managed by a custodian, usually a parent, who cannot tap the assets and must turn over the account when the child reaches the age of maturity, which — depending on the state — is 18 or 21.

"The questions parents should ask before opening a custodial account are: Can we afford to give up control of the money? And do we want our child to have it when he matures?" said Stuart M. Berson, a partner at the Manhattan accounting firm of Backer & Berson. Berson said the drawbacks could sometimes be outweighed by the tax benefits.

Kevin J. O'Donnell, a tax partner at the law firm of Pitney, Hardin, Kipp & Szuch, in Morristown, N.J., cautions that "the parent setting up the account should not act as custodian because if he dies before the money is transferred to the child it will be taxable to his estate."

Custodial accounts are governed by rules laid out under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act. If the child is under age 14 all his unearned income is subject to the so-called Kiddie Tax.

Under the Kiddie Tax, the first $600 of unearned income is tax exempt; the next $600 is taxed at 15 percent. Earnings after that are taxed at the parents' highest marginal Federal tax rate, which in 1992 was 31 percent. Under the Clinton tax plan that could jump to 36 percent next year, with a 10 percent surcharge for wealthy people, pushing their rate to 39.6 percent.

After age 14, the first $600 is still tax exempt. But then the child pays 15 percent on unearned income up to $21,450; 28 percent over $21,450; and 31 percent over $51,900.

Some tax advisers recommend limiting the annual unearned income in the account while the child is under 14 to avoid paying taxes above 15 percent.

If you then want to give more to the child, tax-free investments like municipal bonds are suggested. "Take the money and invest in Series EE or Series HH United States Savings Bonds," Kessler said. "When the child turns 14 they can be redeemed and the federal tax owed would be paid at the child's lower rate."

Though minimum rates on bonds dropped to 4 percent from 6 percent, Kessler said they were still attractive compared with other guaranteed investments.

When the child turns 14, O'Donnell advises changing the account to emphasize taxable investments like certificates of deposit and stocks and bonds because the Kiddie Tax no longer applies.

From an estate planning perspective, he said, custodial accounts are a "good way to reduce taxable estates and pass assets to the next generation." A parent or grandparent can give a grandchild or child $10,000 annually without paying an estate or gift tax.

Pension plan conflicts

Q. I retire on June 30, 1993, and expect to be self-employed part of the rest of 1993. Can I have both an employer-sponsored pension plan and a Keogh plan in the same year?

E. Howard Green, Old Greenwich, Conn.

A. Yes, you can. In fact, you can have both even if you are working for a company and working for yourself at the same time, because that is no different from working for two different companies.

In general, the rules governing employer-sponsored pension plans and Keogh plans for the self-employed are the same. And the maximum pension amount based on compensation from each employer can be contributed to each plan.

"There are certain limits as to how much can be contributed," said Paul Strella, a principal of the New York-based consulting firm William M. Mercer Inc.

A defined-benefit Keogh plan provides for a specific retirement benefit, while a defined-contribution plan sets the amount of annual contributions.

You can contribute up to $30,000 to a basic Keogh plan this year — although there is a percentage-of-compensation limit that will often be less — and still be covered by your employer's pension or retirement plan.

Brokerage house risks

Q. What happens if a large brokerage house goes under holding your custodial account worth over the Securities Investor Protection Corp. limit of $500,000?

David F. Yamada, Pasadena, Calif.

A. Before any insurance comes into play, each customer of a liquidated brokerage firm is entitled to a pro rata share of the available assets of that firm. Thus if the firm's assets are $80 million and customer claims amount to $100 million, you would get 80 percent of your claim from the firm.

"To the extent that your claim is not satisfied by that pro rata distribution," the maximum guarantee from the Securities Investor Protection Corp. is $500,000, said Theodore H. Focht, its president.

SIPC insurance for cash in a brokerage account, however, is limited to $100,000.

In addition , some brokerage houses also offer excess insurance from private companies to meet the claims of their customers. The coverage of these policies ranges as high as $10 million.

What's in a fund name?

Q. Can a fund be called a government securities fund if as little as 51 percent of the fund is in such securities?

Ann L. Bick, Moorestown, N.J.

A. No. The Securities and Exchange Commission requires mutual funds that feature a particular kind of security in their name to have at least 65 percent of their assets in that security.

"Behind this concept is truth in labeling to protect consumers and to let them know what they are buying," said Joseph W. Norton Jr., vice president of the Benham Group of Palo Alto, Calif., and a director of the 100 Percent No-Load Mutual Fund Council. Otherwise, a fund could hold just a small amount of certain securities, misleading buyers.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Stock recipient's basis is the same as donor's

By Bill Doyle

Q: A friend tells me that if I give stock away, I do not have to pay capital gains tax on it.

Here's an example: Years ago, I bought stock for $1,000. That stock now is worth $9,000. I will have the name on the stock certificate changed to my son's name.

Because I gave the stock away and did not sell it, I owe no capital gains tax on the $8,000. What's more, according to my friend, my son's "basis" — cost for tax purposes — is $9,000.

Seems too good to be true. Is it?

Doyle

A: Of course it is. Your friend is correct on the first step — but then becomes very wrong.

In the example you use, your son's basis on that stock is $1,000. If he sells the stock at a higher price, the difference between his $1,000 basis and the proceeds from the sale will be a taxable capital gain.

When a stock or other capital asset received as a gift is sold at a profit, the recipient's basis is the same as the donor's basis. Your basis is the $1,000 at which you bought the stock. If you give that stock to your son, his basis would be $1,000.

This situation applies not only to stocks but to all capital assets. If your friend's story were true, parents and grandparents would transfer securities, real estate and other things that have risen in value to family members, who could then sell and realize no taxable capital gains.

Q: I have inherited 1,200 shares of a well-known stock from my father, and I intend to sell them. The lawyer who settled the estate gave me the stock's market value on the day Dad died — $34.75 per share. But don't I have to know the price my father paid, so I can calculate my capital gain correctly?

A: No, because the basis of inherited stocks and other inherited property generally is the market value on the date the person who left it died. There can be an exception, when an alternate valuation date is used to settle the estate, but that evidently does not apply here.

Unlike assets received as gifts, the basis on inherited assets "steps up" to the value on the date of death.

Your basis on that stock is $34.75 times 1,200, which equals $41,700. If you sell and receive more than $41,700, you will have a taxable capital gain. If you sell for less, you will have a capital loss.

Q: Our son owns more than 1,000 shares of stock that has multiplied in value. He has agreed to give 500 shares to us. How does he arrange for the stock to be registered in our names?

A: Through the stock's transfer agent, whose name and address are listed in the latest stockholder report.

Your son should fill out the assignment form on the back of the stock certificates he intends to transfer to you, have his signature there guaranteed by a brokerage firm, commercial bank or trust company and deliver the certificates to the transfer agent. The transfer agent will then change the shares' registered ownership and send new certificates to you.

Q: Is it necessary to pay a brokerage commission when transferring stock as a gift, such as among family members?

A: No. A gift does not involve a sale or purchase. A brokerage firm, bank or trust company might levy a service charge for handling the paperwork, but a full commission would be highway robbery.

Q: My husband and I anticipate receiving stock worth about $20,000 as gifts. What federal gift tax will we have to pay?

A: None. Recipients never pay gift tax. Donors pay that tax, if any is due.

WILL: Misconception abounds over estates

er," estate lawyers say — it can be as simple or as detailed as you want it to be. It should, however, indicate who is to get what legacies, state how remaining assets will be disposed of and establish the process for carrying out your instructions by naming an executor and a guardian for minor children. Of course, you should appoint someone who has already agreed to serve in those roles.

"If you die without a will, an administrator will be appointed by the court," said Ralph M. Engel, a partner in the New York law firm of Rosen & Reade. "You don't get to pick him. And generally that person will have to post a bond."

Along with a general reluctance of people to write wills are a number of common misconceptions about them. For example, not everything owned by an individual can be bequeathed to someone else through a will.

"You may have assets in joint name or with designated beneficiaries that are not governed by a will," said John M. McFaul, a lawyer in Mineola, N.Y. "That includes jointly owned bank accounts, life insurance policies and retirement plan accounts."

Another widely held misconception, according to Jerome M. Leitner, a professor at Brooklyn Law School, is that you can disinherit a spouse in a will. "But most states provide minimum shares of the estate for surviving spouses, usually one-third or one-half," he said.

Any amount that you leave to a spouse is exempt from federal estate tax under the so-called marital deduction, but when the surviving spouse dies, estates become subject to this tax beginning at $600,000.

The estate tax rate currently starts at 37 percent and goes up to 50 percent, although the Clinton tax plan calls for increasing the top rate to 55 percent.

Kruse, the mortgage banker, was made aware of some of these misconceptions when he and his wife met with McFaul this week. For example, while each spouse named the other as executor, they both appointed his brother as alternative executor in their wills.

"I'm relieved that this is all set," Krause said. "And I'll be even more relieved on Thursday when we sign the wills."

Standard will forms and computer software for writing a will can be bought inexpensively in a store and completed without using a lawyer. Yet a lawyer's fee is often recouped in the form of advice dispensed or taxes later saved. Fees vary widely from less than $100 for a simple will prepared by a lawyer in a rural area to as much as $10,000 or more for a complex document in a big city.

Once a will has been written, it should be executed by the creator by signing the document in the presence of either two or three witnesses who have no interest in the will.

A will can be changed or revoked at any time. It ought to be reviewed, though, at least every three to five years, when you move to another state or whenever there are major changes in family or overall economic conditions. If appropriate — and you are legally competent — you can then write a new will or a codicil modifying your existing will.

It is not a good idea to keep a will in your safe deposit box because the box may be sealed at your death and require court approval to be opened. Leave it in your lawyer's custody and keep a copy at home.

Borrowing policy could affect consumer rates

N.Y. Times News Service

The government's decision this week to try to save money by borrowing for shorter periods is likely to affect consumers in important, though only slowly unfolding, ways.

The dominant Wall Street view is that by halting sales of new seven-year notes and shrinking sales of 30-year bonds — replacing this financing with nearer maturities — the Treasury will inevitably put upward pressure on short-term interest rates.

If so, one effect will be to lessen the present strong incentive for consumers to shift money from low-yielding certificates of deposit to bonds and stocks. CD's, in other words, will be relatively more appealing and most of the riskier alternatives less so.

Another impact of the administration's move will be on borrowers who have adjustable loans tied to short-term rates.

People will be more inclined "to take the plunge and lock into longer-term" fixed-rate loans, suggested David M. Jones, chief economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. This would avoid the pain of a jump in, say, monthly mortgage payments.

At the same time, investors who have grown fond of intermediate-maturity Treasury paper will still have a sizable choice of merchandise. While no new seven-year notes are to be issued, existing ones will continue to trade as will longer-term bonds that become seven-year securities through the aging process.

There may even be some pluses for consumers in the new financing strategy, though skeptics abound. To the extent that the government places fewer financing demands on the long-term, or 30-year, market this could allow corporate borrowers to tap this area more freely and thereby add to investor choice.

Some, of course, dispute the assumption that the shift in strategy will raise short-term rates — or do anything really noticeable.

"The government is a drop in the bucket in the long-term credit market," said David Ranson, president of H.C. Wainwright Economics in Boston.

But all Americans may lament the downgrading of the 30-year bond for one, albeit intangible, reason. Even though it has been auctioned regularly only since the late 1970s, its existence means that at least one country in the world enjoys a political and economic system of such stature that lenders willingly part with their money for a generation, confident their purchasing power will be preserved.

The standard in other nations is 10-year bonds, Jones noted, contending that the administration has tarnished a national "badge of honor."

Stability looms in real estate market

By Chet Currier
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — After a spell of extreme mood swings in recent years, some analysts think the real estate market is heading into an era of greater calm and stability.

In the process, they say, the old image may be restored of homes as simply a solid, conservative investment — neither the gold mines nor the pitfalls they have seemed to be at times in the recent past.

Since the late 1980s many real estate markets around the country, for both residential and business properties, have undergone a widely publicized shakeout after the inflation-fueled boom of the previous 20 years or so.

Now, quite a few of those markets have come back to life or at least leveled off, aided by the lowest interest rates in a generation. "It's not the Titanic any more," says Michael Oliver, portfolio manager of the PRA Real Estate Securities Fund, a mutual fund.

One notable bright spot, Oliver notes, is the market for rental apartment properties in the Southwest, which are now enjoying strong occupancy rates after a long period of depession since the collapse of the energy economy in the mid-1980s.

"Those markets are going to demonstrate what happens when real estate recovers," he declares. "The rest of the country will eventually be able to do the same thing."

At the same time, however, the economy appears to face no immediate prospect of a revival of inflation to anywhere near the double-digit pace of the '70s and early '80s.

Moreover, the baby boom bulge in the nation's population has passed the prime age for first-time house-hunting. So any return to a runaway rise in property prices doesn't seem imminent.

The way many observers see it, that's a healthy development, helping to guard against another boom-bust cycle.

"Stability best describes the overall mood in the real estate industry this year," reports Ferguson Partners Ltd., a Chicago consulting firm.

"The ingredients for a long-term housing recovery are still intact," asserts the Value Line Investment Survey, the nation's largest investment advisory service.

"For one thing, mortgage rates are now at their lowest level in two decades. This should not only help to bring first-time buyers into the market, but should also attract those seeking to trade up to larger, more expensive homes.

"For another thing, the depressed price of housing in many locales, which is making ownership more affordable, and indications that the worst may be over on the employment front, should also help to lift traffic at many real estate offices in the coming months."

BUDGET: Discretionary costs can be place to start trimming

(From 1B)

(to pay bills). There wasn't any money left. I was literally living from paycheck to paycheck."

Dawson said she decided things had to change.

"I've worked for 10 years and I don't even own a home," she said. "There's something really wrong if you've worked all this time and don't have anything to show for it."

What's important, Frazier said, is to start budgeting early, and to remember it's never too late to start.

After a budget is established, Frazier said, family members can examine their expense list to see where they can save money.

The first place to cut is discretionary costs like entertainment or cable television.

"They're nice to have, but in a crunch you can probably live without them," Frazier said.

Dawson said that her family has cut back on eating out and going to the movies.

She said that she doesn't shop for herself unless she has cash to pay for it. Weekday lunches for herself and the children also have been cut, saving the family $200 a month.

With the cutbacks, Dawson is able to save 10 percent of her pay and has enough left to invest in bonds and Individual Retirement Accounts.

HEART BREAKERS

Larry Gaston cradles "Pinkie" the Chihuahua after adopting the dog at the Humane Society SPCA.

Wide-eyed kittens perch on a chair.

It's a dog's life.

Especially for the residents of the shelter operated by the Humane Society and the Society for the Prevention of Cruetly to Animals, better known as the SPCA.

These cats and dogs beg for attention from every soul who steps foot into the shelter at 15 Kerry Road. Even the heartiest people will leave with tears in their eyes for the animals who won't survive.

But this place is not about sadness; it's about second chances for animals who had none. There is no better example than Fred, who was adopted as the SPCA resident mascot and has lived in the shelter since it was started in 1984.

Fred was brought to the shelter with a broken back and unable to walk. After receiving treatment, the long-haired dog was presented with his very own "cart" complete with wheels so he can roam where he pleases, as long as the surface is smooth.

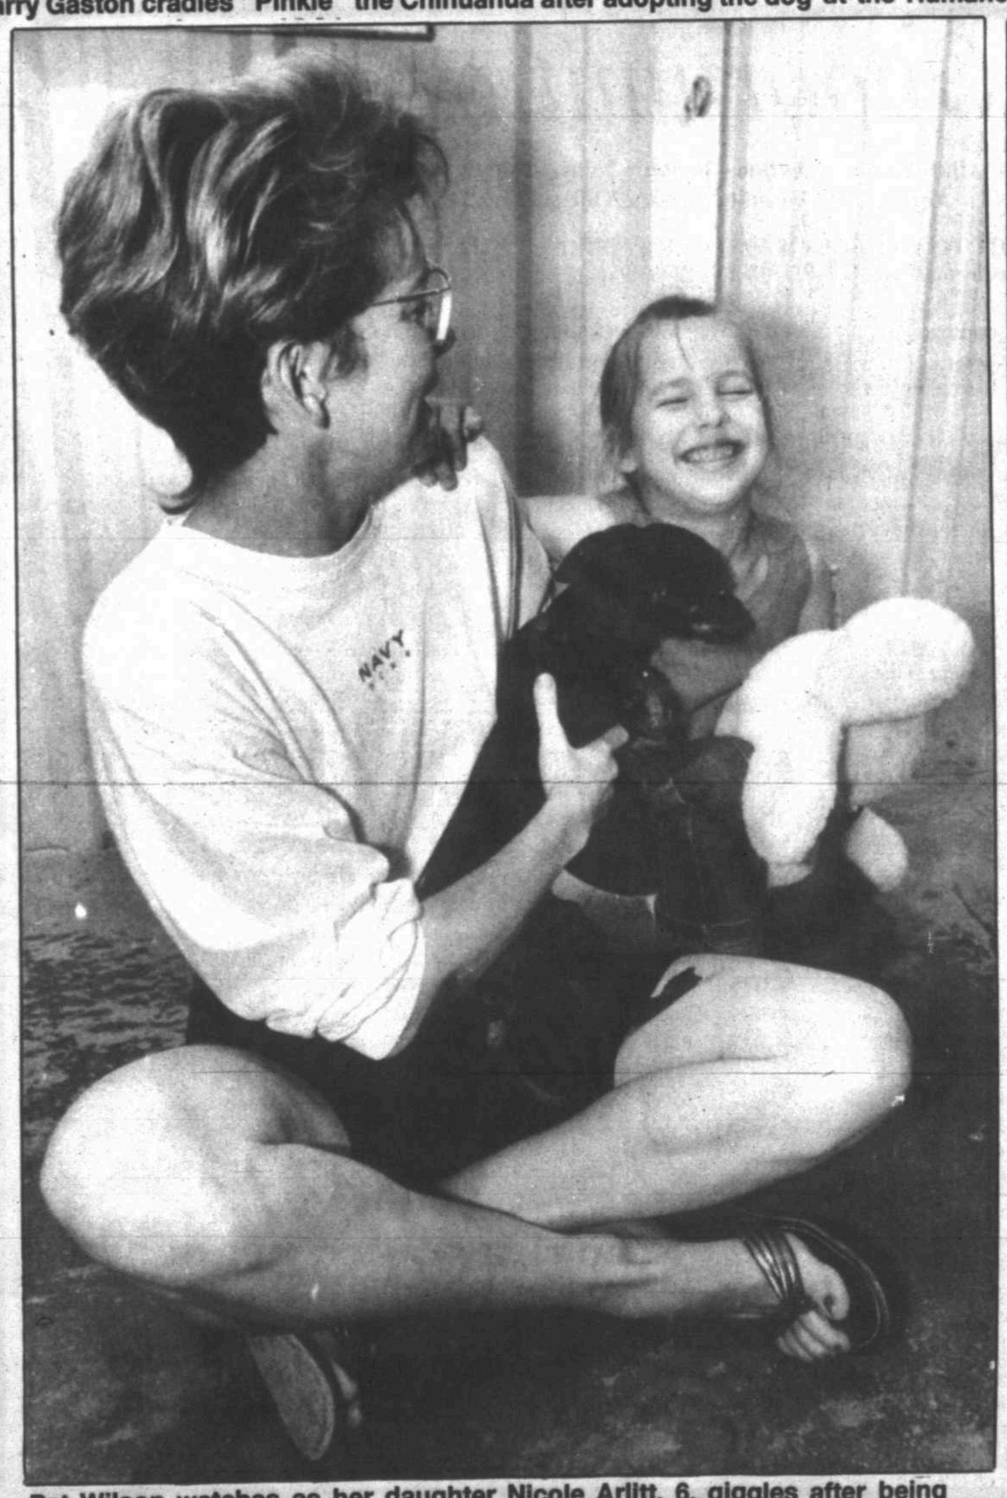

But Fred is just one of many stories of hope. There are many adoptable animals needing loving homes.

Shelter Director Debbie Hill said the shelter usually houses approximately 20 dogs and 30 cats all the time, so good animals are always available. She advises prospective families about the animal's personality and what would be a suitable home for a particular dog or cat.

No matter how beneficial the shelter's services are, the shelter depends upon contributions and volunteers to exist. Money is always needed to keep the doors open and those who want to give their time can make arrangements to play with the animals and help with their routine needs.

"We view these animals as a joy and if we didn't do something, some of these animals wouldn't get adopted," said volunteer James Lary.

"(The animals) don't ask for anything in return. They just want affection," volunteer Kelly Lary concluded.

Both sides use terror to prevent fair election

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (NYT) — After 14 years of savagery in a civil war that has taken tens of thousands of lives, the Cambodian government and the rebels of the Khmer Rouge have settled on a common strategy, if not a common goal. Both are using terror to try to prevent a free and fair election this month in their shattered homeland.

The Khmer Rouge does not want an election at all, and the Maoist-inspired guerrillas have stepped up a terror campaign intended to sabotage the vote, scheduled for May 23 to May 28.

According to the United Nations, the rebels' victims have included nine U.N. peacekeepers who died during preparations for Cambodia's first truly democratic elections, the centerpiece of the largest peacekeeping operation in the history of the United Nations.

Two of the peacekeepers, both civilian policemen, one from Japan, one from the Philippines, died last week. In a meeting here on Sunday with Japan's home affairs minister, several Japanese peacekeepers asked that they be pulled out of Cambodia before more of them are killed in guerrilla attacks.

The Cambodian government appears willing to allow the voting to take place, but it is accused of doing whatever it can to guarantee that the election is not fair. U.N. officials say that the government is engaged in an intimidation campaign intended to coerce voters into believing that their votes will not be secret, and that they will be punished if they do not vote for candidates of the government's newly formed political party, the Cambodian People's Party.

The United Nations insists that it will go forward with the election even though it is taken for granted that the last two weeks of the campaign will be a frightening, violent time — and that the weeks after the election may be worse as the armed factions jostle for control of the new government. The election will choose a 120-seat constituent assembly, which will have three months to draft a constitution acceptable to two-thirds of its members.

The U.N. Transitional Authority in Cambodia, the 22,000-man peacekeeping force that came here under a 1991 peace treaty, is incapable of stopping the bloodshed. The peacekeeping force failed in its mission of disarming government and rebel soldiers, and Cambodia remains a nation awash in guns.

The government does not shrink from using violence. U.N. investigators have linked the government to several political slayIngs, most of them against the opposition political party founded by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the nation's beloved former monarch. The party, the United Front for an Independent, Neutral, Peaceful, and Cooperative Cambodia, is known by the French acronym FUNCINPEC.

"In a number of instances, we're confident that the attacks on FUNCINPEC have been carried out by SOC police and security officials," said Dennis McNamara, the U.N. human rights director in Cambodia, using the acronym for the state of Cambodia.

Party members in the northwestern province of Siem Reap were visited in their office on Wednesday by a group of drunken, heavily-armed government soldiers who threatened to kill them. When a U.N. human rights investigator went to investigate, he later told colleagues, he found himself with a grenade at his feet — as one soldier threatened to detonate it with his rifle.

"There's a $50,000 price on my head," said Ung Huot, a Cambodian businessman who has lived in Australia for years and who returned to direct the party's election campaign.

"The state of Cambodia is creating the terror because they know that FUNCINPEC will win," said Ung Huot, who is so worried by the threat of assassination that he and his colleagues rarely venture beyond the high walls of the party's offices in Phnom Penh. "We must be very careful."

Government officials have repeatedly denied any involvement in political violence or intimidation, although there is compelling evidence to suggest that they are not telling the truth.

The Khmer Rouge insists that its troops would never harm a U.N. worker, an assertion that few here find persuasive, knowing the history of the Khmer Rouge.

Spain to curtail violence, sex on TV

MADRID (NYT) — Bending to strong government pressure, Spain's state-owned and private television companies have agreed not to broadcast programs with gratuitous violence, explicit sex or improper language during hours when children or adolescents are likely to be watching.

The accord forms part of a new ethics code negotiated by the Education Ministry and television companies with the specific aim of protecting minors. Adherence to the code is voluntary.

The code is the first move to temper the rush toward liberalization that followed Spain's return to democracy after the end of the Franco dictatorship in 1975. Until now, defense of freedom of expression has prevailed over attempts at censorship in the name of morality.

"We felt self-regulation was preferable to the risk of excessive administrative control," Alvaro Marchesi, the deputy education minister, said. "We think this will make a difference. There's a general public demand for less aggression and more protection for children on television."

One group, the Association for Children's Rights, has already demanded that two stations operated by regional governments, Telemadrid and Canal Sur, take a Japanese-made cartoon called "Dragon Ball" off the air because it is "excessively violent, offensive to girls and stimulates selfish attitudes."

Within days of signing the code, the main state-owned channel, TVE-1, canceled an American movie, "Beyond the Valley of the Dolls," that had been scheduled for a 9.30 p.m. broadcast and took another Japanese cartoon called "Winspector" out of its Saturday morning children's program.

Complaints about excessive sex and violence on television grew sharply after private stations were given licenses to operate here in the late 1980s for the first time. Since then, competition has intensified, with Spanish children, who watch an average of four hours of television a day, becoming an important target audience.

"This is when things started getting out of control," said Ramon Colom, the head of the state-owned Spanish Television. "The competition was so tough that some companies began to buy any kind of program. There was even one cartoon where characters wore swastikas."

TEXAS LEAGUE — Tulsa Drillers vs. Midland Angels, 7 p.m., Angels Stadium, KCRS (550 AM) radio.

Playoff up in air

Midland Lee will play El Paso Coronado in a one-game Class 5A Area state baseball playoff match Saturday, but the site and time have yet to be worked out.

Lee lost its flip with Coronado Saturday after winning its bi-district playoff against Lubbock Coronado at Angels Stadium, forcing the Rebels to travel to El Paso for the next round. However, it has been a task to find a field suitable to both coaches since the El Paso Diablos are in town and using the new Cohen Field.

There was even talk late Sunday that the game may be moved to a site in New Mexico.

One million fans

DENVER — The expansion Colorado Rockies reached the one-million mark in attendance Sunday faster than any other major-league team ever in only their 17th home game.

Sunday's crowd of 70,786 — their third-largest of the season — gave the Rockies a total of 1,017,678.

The Toronto Blue Jays reached the million mark in 21 dates last year, the previous fastest.

Colorado also set a record attendance figure for a four-game series. The four-game series against NL champion Atlanta, which concluded Sunday, drew 251,447, bettering the previous mark of 218,948 set in 1963 by the Los Angeles Dodgers against San Francisco.

Earlier this year, the Rockies set an opening-day attendance record with 80,227 for their home opener April 9 against Montreal. That figure also was a National League regular-season record, as well as the largest crowd ever for a single game during the regular season in either league. Cleveland drew 84,587 in 1954, but that was a doubleheader. The all-time record was 92,706 for Game 5 of the 1959 World Series at Los Angeles.

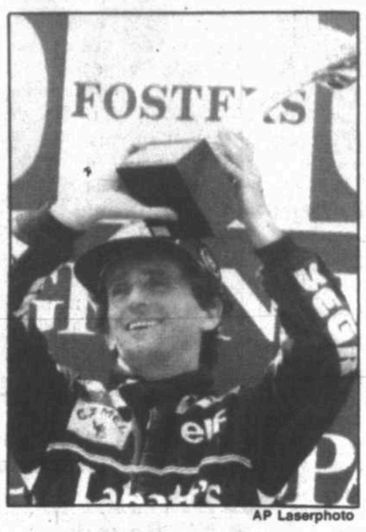

The Rockies also established a major-league standard for a three-game series by drawing 212,465 for the April 9-11 series with the Expos.

"We never expected it (one million in attendance) to come this soon," Jerry McMorris, the Rockies chairman, president and chief executive officer, said Sunday.

"We knew the response to a franchise in this region would be good, but never in my wildest dreams did I think it would be as strong as it's been. Obviously, the fans are having fun, and everybody is behind the Rockies."

General manager Bob Gebhard noted that, since 1980, 17 teams have failed to draw one million in entire seasons — a figure the Rockies reached in about one-fifth of their inaugural season.

TV deal risky for baseball

■ With uncertain TV revenue, small market teams could be forced to drop free agent spending.

By Jim Donaghy
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — Baseball's new deal with ABC and NBC could be risky business for the owners.

Under the last agreement — a four-year, $1 billion deal with CBS — teams could count on splitting up $250 million each year. That's about $10 million per team, not including cable and local television rights.

But under the proposed package announced Saturday, baseball won't receive an upfront TV rights payment for the first time.

With the deal, reportedly a six-year agreement, baseball and its network partners will form a separate venture that "will be responsible for administering the product, and for the marketing and sales of major league baseball," San Diego Padres owner Tom Werner said.

Neither baseball nor the netowrks wanted to guess at the new venture's start-up costs. And, it's uncertain just how much money each team will make annually from the deal, if any.

A cable deal is still to be negotiated, most likely involving ESPN, TNT or USA Network.

The problem, at least for the first year, is for the front offices to figure out how much money they have to work with. This could mean a difference in signing free agents or letting them go.

The Milwaukee Brewers, for example, make only $3 million annually from local TV and about $13 million from their share of the current national contracts with CBS and ESPN. If the Brewers' lose $6 million or more from that total, it might mean either trading some of their high-priced players or letting others become free agents.

The Brewers had to let free agents Paul Molitor and Chris Bosio sign elsewhere after last season to keep the club's payroll in line with their shrinking revenues.

One of the solutions being discussed is revenue sharing. But owners in most major markets are not convinced it will work. Players union chief Donald Fehr asks why should the players, averaging more than $1 million a year, be asked to make givebacks when the owners can't even agree among themselves.

The owners will meet in Chicago on Thursday to vote on the TV package.

"This is the wave of the future," said Bud Selig, baseball's interim commissioner and owner of the Brewers. "We believe we have control over our destiny in this partnership. Baseball's been slow to react and this shows us to be proactive."

He still has to convince some other owners, though.

"I didn't buy into Pittsburgh or Milwaukee," Chicago White Sox vice chairman Eddie Einhorn told "Frontline" in a PBS program on baseball's troubled times. "How do I know what they will do with my money?"

Because of the new Comiskey Park, lucrative local TV deals, and a successful marketing strategy, Einhorn and

Baseball TV Deal

NEW YORK (AP) — Key points of the agreement announced between NBC and ABC with Major League Baseball:

—Baseball reached agreement with NBC and ABC on a joint venture that will create another round of playoffs in 1994 and have a prime-time game of the week.

—For the first time, baseball will not receive an upfront TV rights payment.

—Under the reported six-year deal, baseball and NBC and ABC will form a separate venture that will sell advertising and market the product, according to Padres owner Tom Werner.

—All regular-season and playoff games will be broadcast to at least four regions. Only World Series games will be seen by all viewers.

—There will be six regular-season ABC telecasts, followed by six NBC telecasts once a week in prime time after the All-Star break. A day of the week has not been decided, but it probably will not be Saturday.

—For the playoffs, one network will televise the proposed new divisional round and the World Series. The other network will get the All-Star game and two best-of-7 league championship series. Divisional playoffs, if approved by the owners, would include eight teams and each of the four series will be best-of-5. They would be televised simultaneously, as would the league championship series. In the final playoff round, however, games 6 and 7 would have staggered starts so the end of each could be televised.

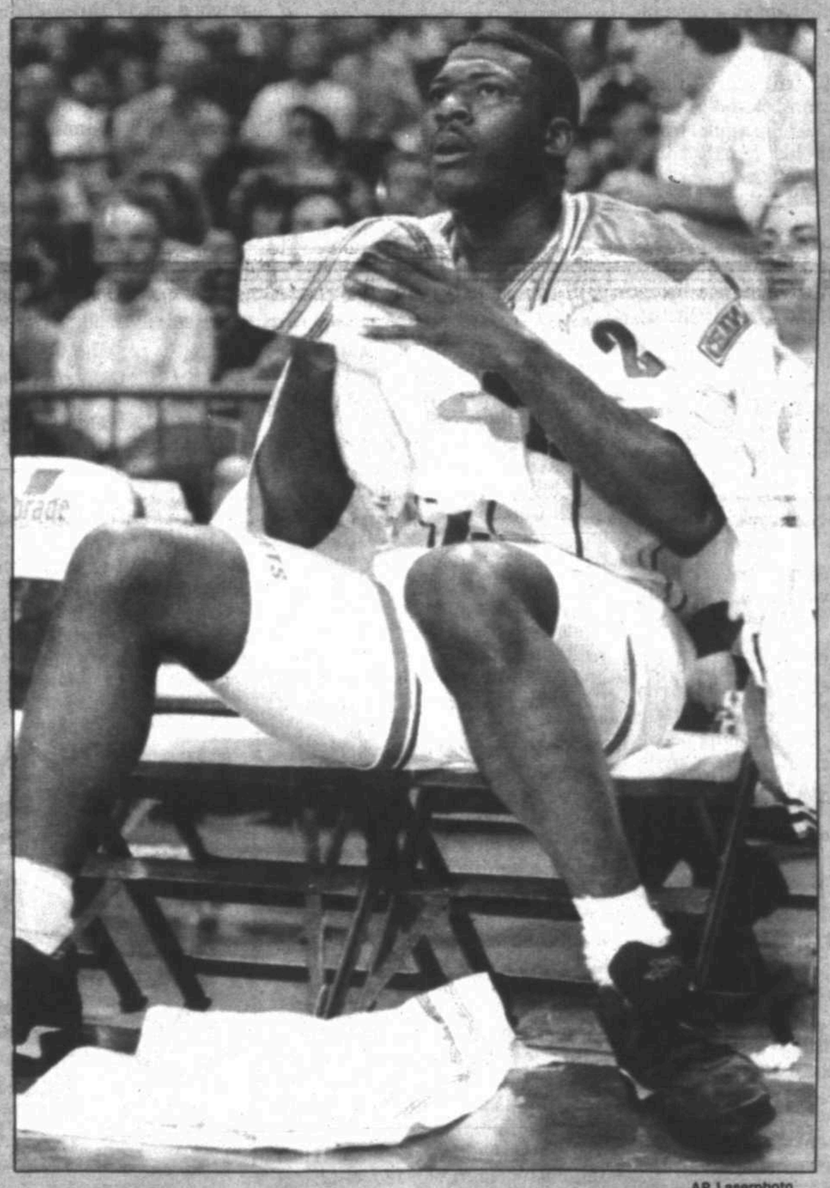

—There will be coin flip in mid-June to decide which network gets what.

—All weekend World Series games will start no later than 7:20 p.m. Eastern Time.

—The owners still have to work out details of the divisional playoff format.

—A cable deal is still to be negotiated, most likely involving ESPN, TNT or USA network.

■ Charlotte, now down 1-0 to the Knicks, suffered more than a loss by losing Larry Johnson.

AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing scored 33 points and the New York Knicks shackled Alonzo Mourning and the Charlotte Hornets in the second half Sunday, winning the opener of their playoff series 111-95.

The Hornets led most of the way even though All-Star Larry Johnson sprained his right leg above the ankle a minute into the game, forcing him to the sidelines after he hit two jumpers in the first 46 seconds.

His absence for more than half the game hurt the Hornets. Johnson played more minutes than any player in the NBA this season, averaging 22.1 points and 10.5 rebounds as Charlotte made the playoffs for the first time in its five-year history.

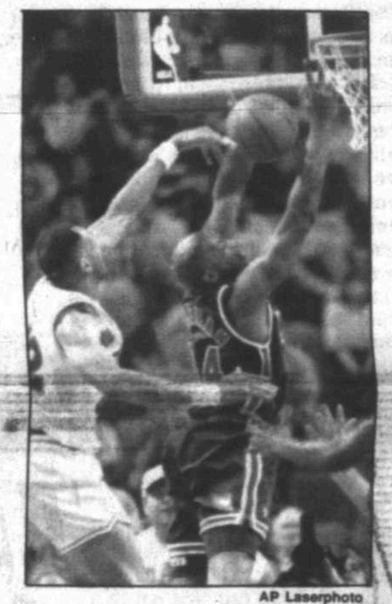

Johnson returned in the third quarter, but he finished with just nine points and could not stop New York from winning the opener of the best-of-7 series, which resumes Wednesday at Madison Square Garden.

Mourning had 21 of his 27 points and nine of his 13 rebounds in the first half as the Hornets led by as many as 12 in the second quarter. The Knicks came back to tie the score at halftime, but Johnny Newman scored six of his 18 points as Charlotte started the third quarter with a 16-6 spurt for a 73-63 lead.

However, the Hornets were outscored 48-22 in the final 18:47.

Charles Oakley had 17 points and 10 rebounds for the Knicks, while John Starks added 14 points and 12

Cavs' close out Nets

By Chuck Melvin
AP Sports Writer

RICHFIELD, Ohio — The Cleveland Cavaliers never bought it, and they still don't.

While the rest of the world expected Cleveland to dismiss the New Jersey Nets with a simple wave of the hand, the Cavs worried from the moment the first-round pairing was announced.

They didn't relax until they won 99-89 Sunday, eliminating New Jersey in the fifth and deciding game. Next up are the Chicago Bulls, who have ousted the Cavs three times since 1988.

"We were never overconfident playing New Jersey," said Brad Daugherty, who led Cleveland with 24 points and a team playoff record 20 rebounds. "In this locker room, we knew they're capable. They were one of six teams to beat

Laker upset bid fails

By Steve Wilstein
AP Sports Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Call them cocky, call them lucky, call the Phoenix Suns escapees from the greatest upset in NBA playoff history.

The Suns, pushed by Charles Barkley's 31 points and 14 rebounds, slam-dunked the Los Angeles Lakers 112-104 in overtime Sunday to become the first team to rebound from two home losses to win a best-of-5 series.

The Suns escaped as a winner after scoring the first seven points of overtime as Barkley and center Oliver Miller grabbed every loose ball in sight.

Barkley's strong finish after a stuttering start would have meant nothing without Miller's monstrous overtime — nine points and five rebounds — after scoring only eight in regulation. Miller also blocked seven shots in the game.

The Suns, who meet San Antonio in the second round, made good on coach Paul Westphal's bold guarantee of victory after they lost the first two games at America West arena.

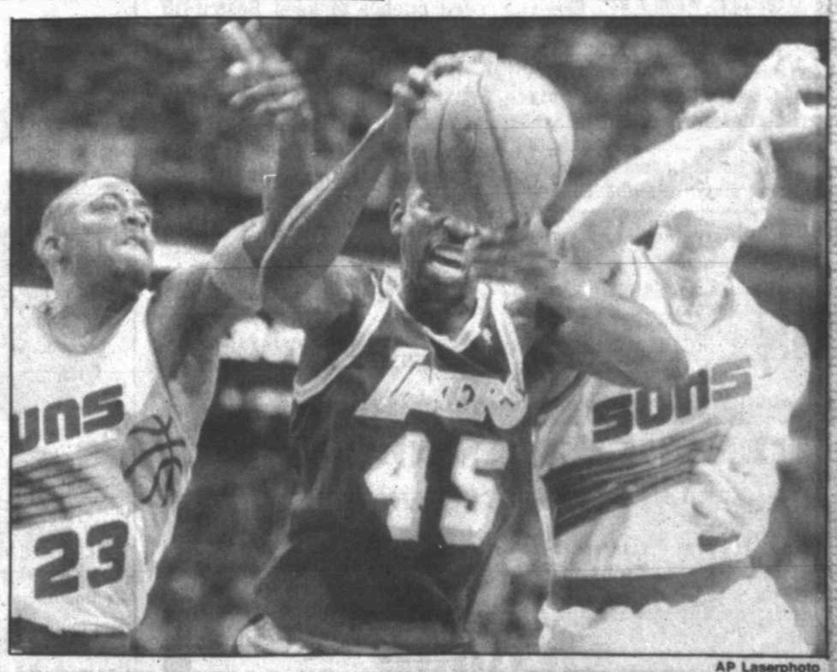

The Lakers, the only team in the playoffs with a losing record, had three chances to knock off the team with the league's best record and become the first No. 8 seed to beat a No. 1 seed.

Led by James Worthy's 24 points, the Lakers had a shot right down to the end of regulation, but Byron Scott's 3-pointer with the score tied 95-95 bounced off the rim.

Barkley and guard Kevin Johnson, who had 24 points and 13 assists, refused to let the Suns crash after a brilliant season and link up in NBA infamy with two other notable nosedives: the 1981 Lakers, who in defending their 1980 title lost in the first round to Houston; and the 1984 Philadelphia 76ers, who also went from defending champions to first-round losers against New Jersey.

Barkley hit his first shot, a 3-pointer, as the Suns burst to a 9-2 start, then he hit only one of his next eight in the first

Tiny New York Yankee Spike Owen, center, is greeted at home plate by teammates Matt Nokes (38) and Kevin Mass after hitting a three-run homer in a win Sunday over Detroit.

Brown nails Royals

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Juan Gonzalez hit a two-run homer and Kevin Brown pitched his league-best fourth complete game as Texas beat David Cone and Kansas City.

Cone went to 0-5 after his seventh start of the season in a game delayed 2:39 at the start by rain. Gonzalez' homer was just one of two hits off Cone, who struck out five and walked three.

The Royals have scored just 16 runs for Cone, who pitched the 35th complete game and third two-hitter of his career.

Brown (4-1) lowered his earned run average to 1.27, best in the majors. He gave up six hits and retired the last 12 batters. But the Royals helped him out by losing three baserunners.

Brown did not walk a batter and struck out one.

Gonzalez, who had seven hits in his last nine at-bats and homered Friday, hit a drive over the 410-foot sign in left-center for his ninth home run after Julio Franco singled leading off the fourth.

George Brett doubled, moved to third on a single by Felix Jose and scored on Wally Joyner's sacrifice fly for the Royals' only run.

Keith Miller singled leading off the first for Kansas City, but was picked off. Brent Mayne reached third in the fifth, but was out in a rundown when Greg Gagne grounded back to Brown. Felix Jose was caught stealing at second in the fourth.

Yankees 11, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Spike Owen had a three-run homer, drove in four runs and scored three, and Bob Wickman won his seventh straight decision as New York beat Detroit.

Wickman (4-0), who allowed two runs on 12 hits with four strikeouts and four walks while pitching eight innings plus, is 10-1 in his career. That start — including a loss to Chicago last Sept. 14 — is second in team history behind Whitey Ford's 16-1 beginning.

John Doherty (3-2) allowed four runs on seven of New York's 14 hits in 5 2-3 innings.

With the Yankees trailing 2-0, Matt Nokes started the fifth with a single and Kevin Maas doubled before Owen's first homer of the season — a liner into the lower deck in right — just eluded a leaping Tony Phillips.

In the sixth, Doherty retired the first two batters, but allowed a single to Paul O'Neill and Tom Bolton relieved. Bolton, who allowed hits to all five batters he faced in a start Saturday, wasn't any better Sunday.

Mike Stanley doubled, and after Bolton intentionally walked Jim Leyritz, Owen hit an RBI single to chase Bolton for Mark Grater.

Pat Kelly hit a two-run single to make it 6-2, and Bernie Williams became the sixth straight Yankee to reach base with another RBI single.

Angels 7, Athletics 6

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Torey Lovullo's third clutch hit of the game, a double with one out in the 10th inning, gave California a victory over Oakland.

Lovullo, who drove in the tying run in the sixth and a go-ahead run in the eighth, doubled against Rick Honeycutt (0-2) to score Tim Salmon. He had singled and taken second on a sacrifice by John Orton.

Reliever Joe Grahe (2-1) held Oakland hitless over the final two innings.

Chad Curtis drove in three runs for California, which also got a solo homer from rookie J.T. Snow.

California went ahead 6-5 in the eighth on Lovullo's RBI single with two outs. Oakland tied it in the ninth on Dave Henderson's leadoff solo homer.

The Angels tied the game at 5-5 on Lovullo's RBI double in the sixth after the Athletics rallied for three runs in the top of the inning to overcome a 4-2 dificit.

White Sox 6, Indians 5

CHICAGO — George Bell singled home Ozzie Guillen in the ninth inning, giving surging Chicago a victory and a sweep of their three-game series with slump-ridden Cleveland.

Guillen opened the inning with a bloop single to left off reliever Derek Lilliquist (1-1). Joey Cora sacrificed, and Guillen took third when first baseman Paul Sorrento booted Lance Johnson's grounder.

After Frank Thomas was walked intentionally, Eric Plunk replaced Lilliquist and Bell singled to center to make a winner of reliever Scott Radinsky (2-0).

Robin Ventura drove in three runs for Chicago, which won its fourth straight game and 10th in its last 12. The loss was Cleveland's fourth straight and sixth in a row on the road.

Trailing 5-4, the Indians tied the game in eighth on Glenallen Hill's pinch-hit homer off Radinsky.

Chicago's Kirk McCaskill allowed four runs in six innings. Cleveland's Mark Clark, making his first start since April 22, gave up five runs in four innings.

The White Sox went up 2-0 in the first when Johnson and Bell singled. Both scored on a hit by Ventura.

Cleveland tied the game in the third when Lance Parrish scored on a wild pitch and Kenny Lofton's single drove in Felix Fermin.

The White Sox took a 3-2 lead in the third on Thomas' double and Ventura's RBI single.

Brewers 6, Red Sox 0

MILWAUKEE — Mike Boddicker, using an assortment of off-speed pitches to keep Boston off balance, allowed four hits in 7⅓ innings.

The 35-year-old Boddicker (2-1) allowed a double to Ernest Riles and infield single to Carlos Quintana in the first. The Red Sox didn't get another hit until Mike Greenwell's two-out single in the sixth.

Tony Pena singled to start the eighth. Boddicker got two more outs, then was replaced by Graeme Lloyd.

Orioles 4, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — Damon Buford — who homered earlier — singled in the winning run with two out in the ninth inning as Baltimore rallied to beat Toronto.

Chris Hoiles reached on a one-out walk from Duane Ward and took second on a wild pitch. Hoiles scored the tying run on a two-out single by Harold Reynolds, who positioned himself to score the winner by stealing second.

Reliever Mark Williamson (1-1) allowed one hit over three innings. He struck out two and didn't walk a batter in helping the Orioles to a split of the four-game series. Greg Olson pitched the ninth for his sixth save.

Ward (0-2) blew a chance for his 10th save by allowing two runs on two hits over 1⅓ innings.He struck out three and walked one.

The Blue Jays had scored three runs in the bottom of the fifth to take a 3-2 lead. Ed Sprague led off the inning with his fourth home run, hitting a pitch from Arthur Rhodes off the foul pole in left.

Dick Schofield reached on a one-out single and took third on Devon White's double. Luis Sojo drove in Schofield with a fielder's choice back to the mound that deflected off Rhodes' leg, and Paul Molitor singled in White.

Mariners 6, Twins 4

SEATTLE — Seattle continued its early-season power binge, getting home runs and three RBIs apiece from Tino Martinez and Ken Griffey Jr. to beat Minnesota.

Martinez and Griffey made it 11 home runs in four games for Seattle, which moved into a tie with Detroit for the most homers in the majors with 36.

Martinez had three hits and put Seattle ahead 6-4 with a three-run homer off Scott Erickson (1-4) to cap a four-run sixth inning. Griffey, who homered in the fourth, drove in the first run in the sixth with his second sacrifice fly.

Martinez and Griffey lead the Mariners with nine homers each and are tied for second in the AL behind Albert Belle of Cleveland, who has 11.

Tim Leary (2-1) was the beneficiary of Seattle's power although he gave up four runs on 10 hits and two walks in six innings. Norm Charlton, the fifth Seattle picther, worked the ninth for his sixth save.

The Mariners went ahead 2-1 in the fourth when Griffey led off with a home run headed for the Kingdome's third deck in right field until hitting one of the overhanging speakers in the outfield. It fell into the second deck.

Phillies sweep Cards

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Mariano Duncan hit a grand slam in the eighth inning to give red-hot Philadelphia a victory over St. Louis and a three game sweep.

The victory improved Philadelphia's record to 22-7, tops in the majors. It tied the Phillies best record ever after 29 games as they were 22-7 in both 1911 and 1913. Philadelphia has won 12 of its last 15 games.

The Phillies comeback sent the Cardinals to their fourth straight loss.

St. Louis led 5-2 going into the bottom of the eighth and Bob Tewksbury had a seven-hitter going.

Tewksbury retired the first two batters, but Darren Daulton singled and went to third on a double by Wes Chamberlain. Lee Smith (0-1), making his first appearance since April 29, relieved Tewksbury and walked Milt Thompson to load the bases.

Astros 6, Reds 3

HOUSTON — Pete Harnisch struck out 10 and scattered six hits over seven innings as Houston salvaged a split of their four-game series with Cincinnati.

Houston got to Cincinnati starter Tim Pugh (2-3) right away, scoring five runs in the first inning.

Consecutive one-out singles by Luis Gonzalez, Jeff Bagwell and Eric Anthony gave the Astros a 1-0 lead. Reds second baseman Jeff Branson misplayed Ken Caminiti's ground ball for a two-base error that allowed Bagwell to score, and Kevin Bass followed with a single to center to score Anthony.

A walk to Andujar Cedeno loaded the bases before Eddie Taubensee lined a hit down the right field line to drive in Caminiti and Bass. Pugh retired Harnisch and Craig Biggio to end the inning.

Marlins 6, Mets 4

NEW YORK — New York lost for the 11th time in their last 13 games as Walt Weiss had three hits and drove in two runs for Florida.

The loss dropped the last-place Mets 11½ games behind first-place Philadelphia in the NL East, and three games in back of the expansion Marlins. Florida (14-16) has won two of three in the four-game series against New York, and seven of its last 11 overall.

Chris Hammond (2-3) gave up one run and five hits in seven innings for the victory.

Bryan Harvey got the last three outs for his 10th save in 11 opportunities, allowing Dave Gallagher's RBI single in the ninth. Enrique Romo holds the expansion record of 16 saves for Seattle in 1977.

Mets starter Frank Tanana (2-2) was hit hard, allowing six runs and nine hits in three-plus innings.

Jeff Conine's second-inning one-out walk and consecutive singles by Alex Arias and Weiss gave the Marlins a 1-0 lead.

One-out singles by Orestes Destrade and Dave Magadan and a wild pitch made it 2-0 in the third and Weiss scored the second run of the inning with an RBI double.

Braves 12, Rockies 7

DENVER — David Justice homered twice and drove in a career-high five runs, and Atlanta disappointed Colorado's one millionth fan by roughing up the Rockies for a four-game sweep.

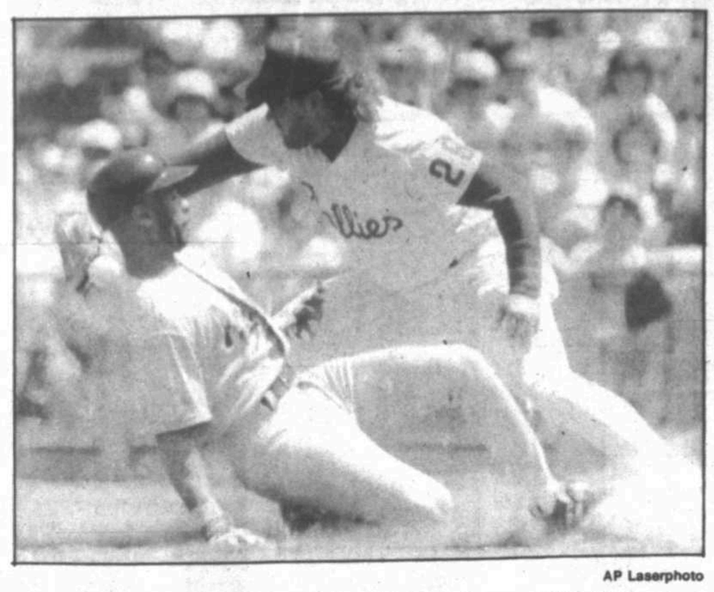

The Rockies became the fastest team to draw one million, doing it in 17 dates and surpassing Toronto's mark of 21 dates last year. A crowd of 70,786 gave the Rockies an average attendance of 59,863.

But the big support was not enough to stop the Braves. The two-time NL champions swept their first meeting with the expansion entry, hitting 11 home runs and outscoring Colorado 46-22.

Atlanta won for the sixth time in seven games. The Rockies' longest losing streak of the season reached five, and they lost their sixth in a row at Mile High Stadium despite outhitting the Braves 14-11.

Justice, coming out of an early-season slump, had 10 RBIs in the series. Jeff Blauser got three hits and drove in two runs, making him 9-for-17 with three homers and eight RBIs during the weekend.

Andres Galarraga, hitting .395 and leading the league with 33 RBIs, got two hits for Colorado before leaving because of a strained right hamstring.

Pirates 6, Expos 5

PITTSBURGH — Andy Van Slyke, who hit a two-run homer earlier, singled in the winning run in the 11th inning as Montreal closer John Wetteland blew a ninth-inning lead for the second straight game.

Montreal took a 5-3 lead into the ninth before rookie Al Martin hit a two-out pinch homer off Jeff Shaw and Jay Bell doubled in the tying run against Wetteland, who pitched in all three games of the series.

The Expos blew a 9-8 lead when Van Slyke homered off Wetteland with two outs in the ninth in the Pirates' 10-9, 10-inning victory Saturday night.

Blas Minor (4-0) worked out of a bases-loaded, two-out jam in the top of the 11th before Lloyd McClendon walked and was balked to second by Brian Barnes (1-1), prompting manager Felipe Alou to intentionally walk Jay Bell.

Van Slyke, who was 3-for-5, singled to center and McClendon easily beat the throw home to give the Pirates a 2-1 edge in the series, only their fourth victory in 11 series this season.

Padres 5, Cubs 4

CHICAGO — Mark Grace hit for the cycle, but it wasn't enough as San Diego held on to beat Chicago.

Grace hit a three-run homer off reliever Rich Rodriguez with two outs in the ninth inning to complete the cycle. He also doubled in the first, singled in the third and tripled in the seventh.

The first baseman became the first Cubs player to hit for the cycle since Andre Dawson on April 29, 1987, against San Francisco.

Bob Geren and Fred McGriff hit solo homers for the Padres. Geren's homer came in the seventh off Dan Plesac and McGriff hit his fifth in the eighth off Chuck McElroy.

Greg Harris (2-5) broke a personal three-game losing streak in gaining his first victory since April 17. He allowed nine hits and one run in seven innings. Gene Harris got the final out for his seventh save.

The Padres scored twice in the first inning against Jose Guzman (3-3). Jeff Gardner led off with a double to extend his hitting streak to 11 games and scored on Gary Sheffield's triple. McGriff singled in another run.

Dodgers 6, Giants 4

SAN FRANCISCO — Consecutive home runs by Darryl Strawberry and Tim Wallach in the sixth inning rallied Los Angeles over San Francisco.

The Dodgers got three homers off Jeff Brantley (2-2), and Orel Hershiser (4-3) struck out a season-high eight to give LA a 2-1 series victory. The right-hander improved to 18-6 lifetime against the Giants.

Hershiser allowed four runs, three earned, and walked five in seven innings.

Jim Gott, the third Dodgers pitcher, recorded the last five outs for his fourth save. He has not allowed a run in 19⅓ innings this season.

Making his first start in six games, Strawberry led off the inning with his fourth homer to right, ending a 2-for-31 slide with his second RBI of the game, tying things at 4-all. Wallach then hit his fourth homer of the season.

The Giants took a 4-3 lead in the fourth after Hershiser struck out the first two batters.

SUNS: Spurs next

half while Phoenix struggled to a 46-45 lead at halftime.

The Lakers, errorless in the first quarter and aided by seven Phoenix turnovers in the period, rode power forward Elden Campbell's nine points during a 13-2 streak to grab a 15-9 lead. But Phoenix made up for its sloppy passing by ruling the backboards, 14-7, and tied the game 24-24 with two seconds left on a pair of free throws by Barkley.

With Barkley on the bench at the start of the second quarter, Dan Majerle scored the first eight points for Phoenix on a drive and two 3-pointers to put the Suns ahead 32-28. But as the Suns tried to break the game open by stepping up the tempo, they were thwarted by more turnovers that let Los Angeles stay within one at the half despite 43 percent shooting.

Phoenix finally seemed to find its stride with a 13-2 run of its own. The burst featured a rebound by Barkley and a fullcourt drive that drew Los Angeles center Vlade Divac's fourth foul with 4:03 to go.

Barkley scored 13 points in that quarter, more than offsetting the 10 points on 5-for-5 shooting by Divac.

Los Angeles had the ball now with a chance to win it, but after a timeout the desperation shot at the buzzer by Scott caromed away.

After Charlotte took a 73-63 lead, New York rallied with 13 consecutive points, including a 3-pointer and 18-footer by backup point guard Greg Anthony. After Tony Bennett's 3-pointer gave Charlotte an 80-78 lead, Anthony tied it with another jumper with 20 seconds left in the third period.

A 7-0 run early in the final quarter, capped by Ewing's three-point play, gave the Knicks the lead for good, and a 13-4 burst later in the period gave them a 102-89 advantage with 4:06 left.

Oakley, who averaged just 6.9 points in the regular season before improving to 10.5 in the Knicks' first-round victory over Indiana, scored six of his 10 first-quarter points in the first four minutes, helping New York take a 15-10 lead after Johnson was injured.

Then Newman and Mourning, who each scored 10 points in the first period, had four each in an 8-0 run that put the Hornets ahead 18-15. Two dunks by Kendall Gill expanded the margin to 30-22 late in the quarter, and Charlotte took its first double-digit lead at 36-26 on a hook shot by Mike Gminski in the first minute of the second period.

CAVS: Nets out in five

us here during the regular season. We knew they were going to be difficult."

The Nets stretched the series to five games despite the absence of point guard Kenny Anderson (broken wrist) and center Chris Dudley (broken ankle) throughout and the loss of centers Sam Bowie (sprained foot) and Rick Mahorn (flu) for portions of it. Mahorn played Sunday; Bowie did not.

Keeping them competitive was Derrick Coleman, praised by Cleveland players throughout the five games as the best power forward in basketball. Coleman had 33 points and 16 rebounds Sunday.

"Derrick scores. Derrick can block shots. Derrick can rebound. He shoots the 3-point shot pretty well. I don't know what his deal is, why he's not getting the recognition he deserves," Daugherty said.

The Cavs had endured heavy criticism in local newspapers and broadcasts after the Nets beat them 96-79 Friday night in New Jersey, forcing a fifth game.

Two reserves, Terrell Brandon and John Williams, finally brought them to life Sunday.

Brandon replaced an ineffective Mark Price midway through the first quarter and scored 10 points while joining Williams in bothersome double-teaming of Coleman. Cleveland trailed by two when Price left and led 47-38 when he returned at the start of the second half.

Cleveland's starters took over from there. In addition to Daugherty, Larry Nance had 20 points and 12 rebounds. Price, a 37 percent shooter in the first four games of the series, redeemed himself by scoring 16 second-half points.

Coleman scored only eight of his points in the first half, hounded much of that time by Williams and Brandon.

PROST: Andretti fifth

who finished second.

Prost has 34 points and Senna 32 this season.

Michael Schumacher of Germany and Riccardo Patrese of Italy finished third and fourth place, respectively, in Benetton-Fords.

Michael Andretti, Senna's McLaren-Ford teammate, was fifth, completing his first race of the season after four dropouts.

It was the third Grand Prix on the Circuit of Catalunya, Britain's Nigel Mansell having won the first two in rainy conditions. After brief showers in the morning, Sunday's race was run in bright sun.

Prost covered 65 laps, or 191.727 miles, over the 2.95-mile circuit in 1 hour, 32 minutes, 27.685 seconds, an average of 124.415 mph.

Prost had the pole position but was beaten to the first turn by Williams-Renault teammate Damon Hill.

"At the start, I didn't change from first to second gear and I lost a lot of time," Prost said.

He went into the lead after 10 laps and held it the rest of the way.

"The advantage I had was that I was braking later at the end of the straightaway," Prost said. "I went in the middle and stayed on line."

By the end of the 11th lap, Prost had a lead of 1.6 seconds.

Over the next 30 laps, Hill made a few attempts to pass Prost but the Frenchman withstood them.

Hill dropped out after 41 laps with engine problems.

Senna was 24 seconds behind Prost at that point. Senna pitted for a tire change after 51 laps and fell 53 seconds back. He cut the deficit to 17 at the end as Prost let up while comfortably in front.

"I was hoping Alain would have problems but it was not to be," Senna said. "Second in the circumstances is an excellent result."

Andretti was happy to finish.

"I am relieved," Andretti, a former IndyCar champion, said. "Though it wasn't very exciting, it feels as if a weight has been lifted off my shoulders. I brought it home finally and that's what matters."

TV: 80 percent for pay

(From 1C)

White Sox chairman Jerry Reinsdorf have turned the club into a profitable venture. A few years ago, the White Sox were minutes away from moving to Florida.

George Steinbrenner, in addition to his revenue from national TV, receives about $45 million a season from the Madison Square Garden network for the Yankees' local rights.

Reinsdorf also owns the Chicago Bulls, and revenue sharing has been very successful in the NBA. The NBA's rise also has a lot to do with commissioner David Stern's influence.

The main reason Fay Vincent was forced out was because the baseball owners, particularly Reinsdorf and Einhorn, did not want him involved in contract negotiations with the players. Selig, chairman of the excutive council until a commissioner is selected, was also against Vincent remaining in office.

Richard Ravitch, chief negotiator for the owners as president of the Player Relations Committee, says about 80 percent of a club's gross revenues will soon be paid for salaries.

"No club can afford to pay 80 percent of its gross."

Guerrero trying to forget 500's first to last exit

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Roberto Guerrero shattered a couple track records in Indy 500 qualifications last year, then broke his heart with another record on race day that he'd just as soon forget.

A crash on the backstretch of the second parade lap — a lap and a half before the start of the race — gave Guerrero the quickest exit of any pole-position starter in Indy history.

First to last in an unbelievable instant.

"It wasn't easy, but you learn through your racing career to put those disappointments to one side and think of the next race," Guerrero said as practice continued Sunday for the May 30 race. "As far as I'm concerned, it's all in the past. It never happened."

Among drivers practicing for the first time on Sunday were Canadians Scott Goodyear and Paul Tracy, and Brazilian Nelson Piquet. Piquet, making a comeback after serious leg injuries in a crash during practice last year, had a top lap of 214.480 mph.

Goodyear, second to Al Unser Jr. last year, had a lap at 222.239, and Tracy, who replaced the retired Rick Mears as a fulltime driver with the Penske team, had the fastest lap so far in practice, 223.931.

■ Indy 500 Roundup

"Since the last time we tested here, the track has changed," Tracy said. "We were just trying to get the car to work well so we can work on durability tomorrow.

"I feel pretty good coming in," said Tracy, winner of the most recent Indy-car race, at Long Beach. "We've had a good season so far, but again, we just want to get the car working well. I'm not here to get into a qualifying battle. I just want to qualify well and concentrate on my race setup."

Mario Andretti, who had the top speed on Saturday of 222.124, improved his best to 223.514 mph. Others over 220 on Sunday were 1990 champion Arie Luyendyk, Gary Bettenhausen, and Andretti's son, Jeff. Mario Andretti also had a lap at 221.359 in teammate Nigel Mansell's car.

Mansell, recovering from a back operation, is expected to arrive at the Speedway in mid-week.

Guerrero's top speed on Sunday was 219.042 in teammate Jim Crawford's car.

Last year, Guerrero wasn't the only crash victim. Just the first.

Temperatures in the 50s made it the coldest Indy and contributed to 10 crashes that wiped out more than a third of the field. A record 85 of the race's 200 laps were run under the yellow caution flag, and Unser's average of 134.477 mph was the slowest winning speed in 34 years.

"Obviously the weather was one reason," said Guerrero, who was not hurt. "It was extremely cold, and I was totally shocked how cold the tires were. I was trying to put as much heat into them as possible ... and it kind of caught me. Then it was responsible for most of the other accidents in the race, too."

By the end of the race, there were almost as many drivers in the hospital — both Mario and Jeff Andretti, Rick Mears, Emerson Fittipaldi, Crawford, Jimmy Vasser, Brian Bonner and Tom Sneva — as there were on the track.

Guerrero, who set a one-lap record of 232.618 mph and a four-lap record of 232.482 in qualifications, became only the third pole-position starter to finish 33rd. The others were Pancho Carter, who lasted six laps into the race in 1985, and Cliff Woodbury, who managed three laps in 1929.

Guerrero, the 1984 Indy co-rookie of the year with Michael Andretti, is trying for his ninth start. He and Crawford, who last year had the fastest unofficial speed in practice at 233.433 mph, are teaming with four-time winner Al Unser Sr.

"The biggest change from last year to this year is obviously the power plant. We're running a Chevrolet-C instead of a Buick, so that's a major difference," Guerrero said. "With the new rule changes the nose is a little longer, and they took away downforce from the car. I really don't know what the speeds are going to do."

Guerrero was among a number of drivers who tested here over the winter and early spring.

Teo Fabi carries hopes of Hall/VDS team

Staff report

INDIANAPOLIS — For the first time since he was a rookie pole-sitter in 1983, Teo Fabi has crept through the Indy car racing ranks to establish himself as one of the favorites to win the Indianapolis 500 on May 30.

Fabi will drive the Pennzoil Special for Midland-based Hall/VDS Racing. The Milan, Italy, native currently ranks third in points toward the PPG Cup IndyCar championship with top 10 finishes in the first three races of the season.

After a preseason crash during testing upset the team's timetable, Fabi has finished progressively better each week, including ninth at Surfer's Paradise, Australia; fifth at Phoenix, and fourth at Long Beach.

At Indianapolis Motor Speedway, where Fabi is acknowledged to be one of the most competent driving technicians on the 2½ mile oval, the team will have a full week to prepare its Lola T9300 Chevrolet V8-6 for pole qualifying next Saturday.

Fabi was a virtual stranger to the neighborhood in Northwest Indianapolis when he arrived on the scene 10 years ago, strugglin, with what he believed to be a language barrier. The perks that went with his pole-winning performance were cultural shock to him.

"I am happy to win the pole, but I don't know what this is all about," Fabi said, referring to the constant media and fan attention, including luncheons held in his honor and requests for personal appearances leading up to the race.

Fabi led the 1983 Indy but dropped out with mechanical problems. He led the race again in 1984 before dropping out and didn't return to the speedway until the Porsche team brought him to Indy in 1988. He also drove for Porsche in 1989 and 1990.

Henning survives playoff

AUSTIN (AP) — Harold Henning started Sunday seven shots behind George Archer and didn't think he had a chance in the Legends of Golf Tournament.

■ Legends of Golf

But Henning shot a 7-under-par 65 and survived a playoff with Tom Weiskopf and Don January to win his first tournament of the year and a $250,000 first place prize, richest in senior golf.

Henning got it up and down out of a bunker for par on the 191-yard, par-3 No. 17 to beat January, who bogeyed on the second hole of the playoff after he sent his second shot into a bunker.

Henning, January and Weiskopf all birdied the last hole, a 546-yard, par-5, to tie at 12-under and force the storm-plagued tournament into sudden-death.

In the playoff, Henning and January birdied the hole with 4s again as lightning flashed and rain fell.

Weiskopf, irritated because January was late getting to the tee, drove poorly into the right rough. He moved his second shot only a foot, pitched out, and was on the green in four. He never putted out.

Weiskopf said before he left "We had to wait 15 minutes on the tee for January. That's bull."

The tournament was delayed four times for a total of 101 minutes by a series of storms that hit Barton Creek Country Club.

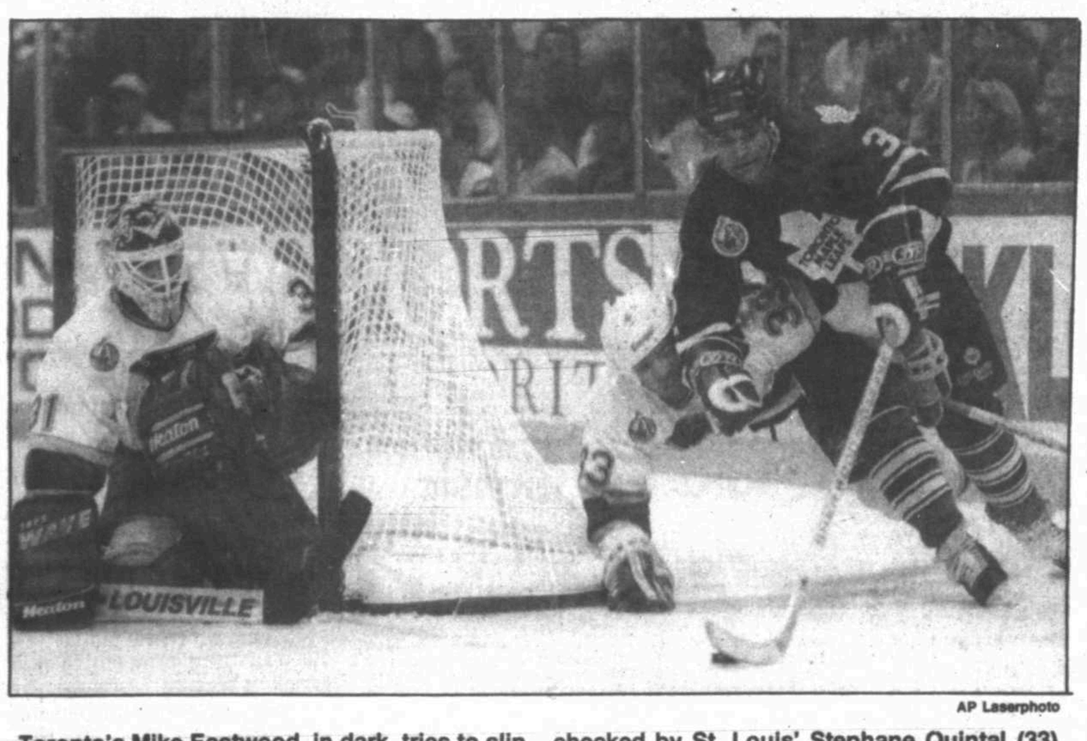

"I didn't think either Don or I had a chance when the day started," said Henning. "I'm just surprised to be here. I thought I was out of it then the lights came on the last four holes."

Henning played with a bruised left foot that he injured while driving his golf cart two days ago.

"It's more colorful then any rainbow you've seen," said Henning, who last won in 1991 at the First of America Classic. "I didn't think I could make it two days ago."

Henning and Al Geiberger won this event as partners in 1989.

Archer, who had a four-shot lead over three players when the day began, struggled to a 74 to finish at 206.

Leafs even series with Blues

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Dave Andreychuk scored on a rebound to snap a second-period tie as the Toronto Maple Leafs beat the St. Louis Blues 4-1 on Sunday and evened their best-of-7 playoff series at two games apiece.

Todd Gill added a third-period score and Peter Zezel scored into an empty net with 44 seconds to go as Toronto became the first team to win by more than a single goal in the series. The first two games went to double-overtime.

Toronto, which had 99 points in the regular season — 14 more than the Blues — wore down St. Louis with solid positional hockey to reclaim home-ice advantage in the series. Game 5 is set for Toronto on Tuesday night.

On the go-ahead goal, Blues goalie Curtis Joseph stopped Gill's drive from the point, but Andreychuk was all alone in front of the net and scored on a backhander at 16:25 for his eighth playoff goal.

Gill scored from the right point as the puck trickled between Joseph's pads at 12:55 of the third period.

The Blues outshot Toronto 10-8 in the third, but couldn't get the puck past rookie goalie Felix Potvin as the Maple Leafs frustrated a standing-room crowd of 17,948. St. Louis has been held to a single goal in each of the Toronto wins.

Wendel Clark also scored for the Maple Leafs and Doug Gilmour had two assists, while rookie Denny Felsner scored for the Blues.

The Maple Leafs shut down the Blues' Brett Hull, limiting him to three shots and only one at even strength. Hull had nine shots and got his seventh goal of the playoffs in Game 3.

Canucks 7, Kings 2

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Gerald Diduck and Geoff Courtnall had a goal and two assists each as Vancouver scored six unanswered goals in a victory over Los Angeles. The Canucks evened the Smythe Division final at two games each.

Diduck's third playoff goal highlighted a four-goal burst in the second period for the Canucks, whose feisty play made it the most physical game so far in the best-of-7 series.

Game 5 is Tuesday at Vancouver.

Goaltender Kirk McLean stopped 29 shots for his 15th career playoff victory, most in Vancouver history.

Vancouver trailed 2-1 early in the second when Petr Nedved scored the first of four straight Canucks goals.

Murray Craven made it 3-2 when he took a pinpoint centering pass from Dixon Ward and slid it past the outstretched leg of Los Angeles goaltender Kelly Hrudey.

The Kings were outshot 13-7 in the decisive second period.

Cliff Ronning centered the puck from the corner while lying on his side and threw it to Diduck who beat Hrudey at 13:21. Ronning and Trevor Linden had assists.

Courtnall came out of the penalty box with Kings defenseman Marty McSorley hooking him all the way and scored his fourth playoff goal on assists by Craven and Diduck to give Vancouver a 5-2 advantage.

Henke wins; Price fades

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Nolan Henke birdied three of the last eight holes Sunday for a 5-under-par 67 to capture the Atlanta Classic over fading third-round leader Nick Price.

■ Atlanta Classic

Henke broke out of a tie with Price on the 15th hole when the PGA champion took the first of two consecutive bogeys.

Henke finished with a 72-hole total of 17-under-par on the hilly Atlanta Country Club course to post a two-shot victory over Price, Mark Calcavecchia and Tom Sieckmann.

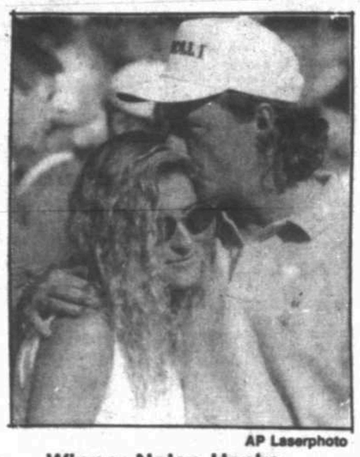

Price, who began the day with a one-shot lead over Calcavecchia, missed three consecutive greens beginning at No. 15, managing to salvage par only on the No. 17 when he made an 8-footer.

After falling into a tie for third place, Price moved back to share second when he birdied the final hole.

Calcavecchia, who has missed eight cuts so far this year, closed with a 72 and Sieckmann had a 69.

Henke's previous victory came in the 1991 Phoenix Open. His only other victory in a five-year career wa at the 1990 B.C. Open.

Henke earned a first prize of $216,000. He was only 72nd on this year's money list with $89,675 entering this tournament, having posted only one top 10 finish — a tie for seventh in the Hawaiian Open.

Winner Nolan Henke ...rewards of victory

Henke played a bogey-free round after starting the day four shots off the pace. He birdied the first and sixth holes, then moved into striking distance with a birdie on No. 11 that put him one shot behind.

Henke also birdied the 15th and parred the next two holes before closing the round with a tap-in birdie on the par-5 finishing hole.

Fulton Allem posted a 66 earlier in the day to finish alone at 274 for fifth place and another shot back was Mike Springer with a 72.

There was a six-way tie at 12-under 276.

Mallon wins on 30-foot chip

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Meg Mallon made a 30-foot chip from the rough for a birdie on the third playoff hole Sunday to beat Tina Tombs for the $525,000 Sara Lee Classic, her second victory this year.

■ Sara Lee Classic

Tombs, who had 10 birdies and two bogeys en route to a personal-low round 64 Sunday, missed a 20-foot putt inches to the left on No. 9 that would have sent the playoff to a fourth hole.

Mallon, who won in Tucson in March, had her chance to win the tournament on the final hole of regulation play. Her 15-foot putt was wide left and gave her a 2-under-par 70 for the day, a 54-hole total of 205 and a tie with Tombs.

Mallon earned $78,750 for the victory.

Mallon started the day at 9 under, two strokes off the pace set by second-round-leader Debbie Massey who finished with a 77 and a total of 210 after three bogeys and a double-bogey in the final round.

But Mallon played steady and made birdies on Nos. 3, 4, 7 and 11 to go 13 under. She ran into trouble with bogeys on 13 and 14 that dropped her even with Tombs who had finished about three hours earlier.

Tombs's final round bettered her personal record by two strokes and marked the third straight day that a player scored 64, a stroke off the record set by Amy Benz in the final round last year over the 6,311-yard Hermitage Golf Course.

Dana Lofland-Dorman missed a birdie putt on No. 18 that would have made it a three-way playoff.

Sonics ready for Rocket test

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle SuperSonics like the idea of playing the Houston Rockets in the second round of the NBA playoffs. The Rockets just like the idea that they're still playing.

After beating the slow-it-down, grind-it-out Utah Jazz, the Sonics are looking for a chance to run again.

"They like a quick game like us," the Sonics Sam Perkins said of the Rockets. "They have quick guards and strong forwards. It'll be an up-tempo series all the way."

The Rockets haven't made it past the first round in six years.

"Now, we've got to change our tires, check the suspension and get going again," Kenny Smith said.

The Sonics and Rockets, who both clinched their first-round series Saturday, open their best-of-7 Western Conference semifinals Monday night at the Seattle Coliseum.

Both clubs won 55 regular-season games but the Sonics will have the homecourt advantage because they beat Houston three out of four times during the regular season.

The Sonics and Rockets play Game 2 Wednesday night in Seattle before the series moves to Houston for Games 3 and 4 next Saturday and Sunday.

Seattle and Houston scored home-court victories to clinch their opening round series 3-2.

With Perkins making three 3-pointers early in the third quarter, the Sonics rallied to beat Utah 100-92 with a 70-point second half. It was the first time the Sonics were able to score 100 points in a game in the series. They set franchise playoff worsts in two games with two 30-point halves.

Perkins finished with 20 points and 13 rebounds, hitting four of eight 3-point attempts. The Sonics trailed 39-30 at halftime.

Acquired in a Feb. 22 trade with the Los Angeles Lakers, Perkins has quickly become a leader. His teammates say his leadership is a major reason why they feel they can win the NBA championship.

"I spent a lot of time listening and learning at Los Angeles from Magic," Perkins said. "I learned a great deal from him and the way he reacted to a lot of pressure situations."

The Rockets got 31 points, 21 rebounds and seven blocked shots from Hakeem Olajuwon in an 84-80 victory over the Los Angeles Clippers.

Houston advanced past the first round of the playoffs for the first time since 1987. The Rockets lost in the first round in 1988, 1989, 1990 and 1991. They didn't making the playoffs last season.

The Sonics beat the Rockets — with Olajuwon — 4-2 in the second round in 1987 and 3-1 in the first round in 1989.

"I'm happy to win the first-round series but this was only our first step," Olajuwon said.

The eight-time All-Star center said the Rockets are a much better team than they showed against the Clippers.

"Maybe in the second round, we will relax and play our game," Olajuwon said. "But we need to get everybody involved and play as a team."

In other words, Olajuwon would like some. He knows he's going to see a lot of double and triple teams.

WESTERN CONFERENCE

No. 2 Houston at No. 3 Seattle

Season series: SuperSonics won 3-1, winning homecourt advantage for the series despite having the same overall record and the lower seeding position.

Key Players

Seattle: The Sonics don't have a dominating player who can be counted on for 20-25 points every game and are capable of a 30-point half like they had in Game 5 against Utah. On the other hand, they have 10 players who can put together a 70-point half like they had in Game 5 against Utah. Shawn Kemp, Sam Perkins, Ricky Pierce, Gary Payton and Eddie Johnson are the most important elements of Seattle's success. Derrick McKey, Nate McMillan, Dana Barros, Michael Cage and Vincent Askew are capable role players.

Houston: Hakeem Olajuwon is the ultimate key player, but he won't decide the series because his outstanding performance is a given. Without him, Houston wouldn't have gotten this far. The players who have to come through are veteran guards Vernon Maxwell and Kenny Smith and forward Otis Thorpe.

Outlook

This series is a confrontation between a one-man team and a 10-deep team. The Rockets looked lost for entire quarters against the underdog Los Angeles Clippers when Olajuwon was held in check, but his overwhelming talent finally carried Houston through to the second round. If Smith, Maxwell and Thorpe come through, the Rockets would win, but the final vote is cast for Seattle's big cast.

Prediction: Sonics in 6.

Schultz decision due Tuesday

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A NCAA investigation targeting him gives "a much better feeling for the enforcement process," said Dick Schultz, NCAA executive director.

Schultz was in Nashville Saturday to speak during graduation ceremonies at Belmont University. An NCAA announcement is expected Tuesday on his status after a probe of no-interest loans made to athletes at Virginia while Schultz was athletic director.

Schultz said he was unaware of the loans, and "greatly surprised" when he was told of them.

Bruno wants boxing action

LONDON (AP) — Frank Bruno, who watched on television as Lennox Lewis defended his WBC heavyweight title against Tony Tucker, was as unimpressed with his countryman as the booing fans at Las Vegas.

"There are still a lot of questions left unanswered after this performance," Bruno said Sunday. "I shall be providing the answers if and when we get it together in September."

Summer Childcare DIRECTORY

As a childcare provider you are well aware of the vital concern for today's children by today's parents. For this reason we will be publishing the Annual Childcare Directory on Sunday, May 16th.

If you have ever wished for a method to reach more parents with information about the services that you provide, the Childcare Directory is your wish come true. Midland parents have come to rely on this directory as a guide to quality childcare. This section focuses on the basic "who, what, where and when" of quality childcare in the our area and includes a locator map.

You will probably want your facility represented with an ad in this special section, a dot on a location map, a photo and a story about your facility. We have some special packages for this ranging from 8" ads to 18" ads. We also have ads that are not packaged and can run in the section without any of the other special advantages. For more information and to reserve your ad in the Childcare Directory call:

Midland Reporter-Telegram 687-8813

The deadline for the Childcare Directory is Wednesday, May 12 at 5:00 p.m.

MONDAY, MAY 10, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your special talents receive new recognition and praise from those who count. The financial picture looks golden! Your sensitivity to others' needs serves you well, both professionally and personally. December is the best time to travel for business or pleasure. Look for romance to turn rapturous early in 1994. Unusual investment opportunities arise next March. Real estate deals will hold special appeal.

CELELBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: dancer Fred Astaire, rock star Bono, musician Dave Mason, actor Taurean Blacque.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An excellent day for taking care of details and answering overdue correspondence. Be prompt to job interviews. Romance will work out fine if you stand your ground.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A new discovery could rattle a relationship. A period of solitude sheds valuable light on your situation. Postpone making a long-term commitment. Romance on the rebound is best avoided.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your plans get a jump start, thanks to an intuitive decision or well-timed communication. You and a friend can begin anew if you build on trust. Say what you mean.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You enjoy new financial security, thanks to someone's help. Delegate routine work tasks in order to devote more time to your personal life. Creativity and sensitivity will get you what you want.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friends may be more helpful than family members today. Follow an expert's advice where insurance or real estate matters are concerned. Take a competitor's claims with a grain of salt.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A project could hit a snag today. Your willingness to be patient, supportive and flexible pulls you through. Your professional ambitions take center stage.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Planning is the key to greater success and financial security. An important business or personal relationship takes on a new dimension. Be prepared for surprises at both work and home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A good day for tying up loose ends. Do not take a VIP's lack of support personally. Residential or work enterprises can be pushed along. Romance and the arts receive wider attention.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An upbeat mood makes this quality time for your family. A new project has everyone full of enthusiasm. Other people are drawn by your positive attitude.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Communications linked to financial or residential matters are favored. People become most receptive when you talk to them privately, one-on-one. Sticking to traditional methods helps you reach your goals.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The favors or funds you want become available today. You see eye-to-eye with VIPs. New financial benefits are part of the picture. Romance deepens when you and mate share secrets.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Give a business partnership a second chance. Time and patience will put you on top financially. Avoid acting pushy with bank officials. A deal could fall apart if you try to rush things.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are enthralled with the written word and may one day make a good living in the communications field. Independent and bright, these youngsters tend to start more projects than they can possibly finish. Count on these resilient, optimistic Taureans to bounce back quickly from any temporary setbacks. They take an innocent pride in their accomplishments and abilities.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J53 ♡J6 ◇AKJ4 ♣AKJ9
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?
A.—What an ugly hand! You have a balanced 18 points with both minors triply stopped and no stopper in the majors. However, if you don't act now, your side might never get into the auction. Bid one no trump.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠9 ♡Q96 ◇Q1053 ♣AKQ86
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—There are hands where we would rebid one no trump with a singleton in partner's suit, but only if there is no alternative. Here, the salient feature of this holding is the excellent club suit and we would highlight that by rebidding two clubs.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q76 ♡QJ9765 ◇K ♣J72
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—It is tempting to introduce your six-card major, but the hand is not quite strong enough for a two-over one response. You have good support for partner's suit and a ruffing value in diamonds, so we would opt for a raise to two spades.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK7652 ♡K102 ◇2 ♣A106
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—A spade game looks to be your most secure contract and the way to get there is to jump to four spades now. Don't bid only three spades. After partner's one-no-trump rebid, that action is invitational, not forcing.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠32 ♡Q9765 ◇Q865 ♣K6
The bidding has proceeded:

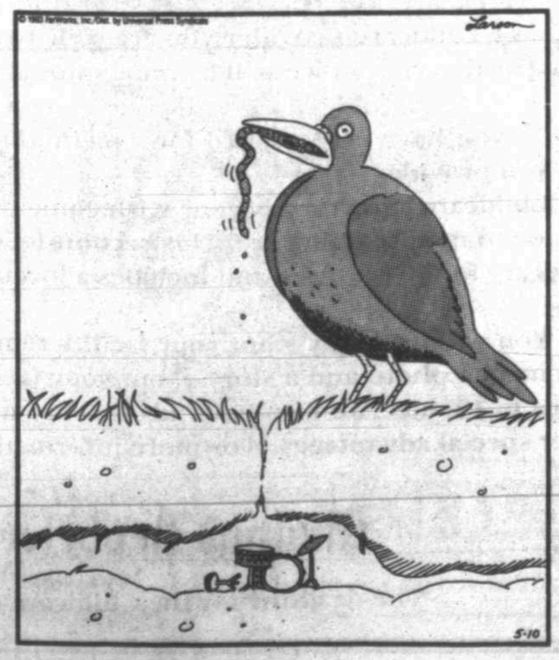

North	East	South	West
3 ◇	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—You can bet that the enemy has a laydown game, possibly even a slam. Therefore, you should increase the level of the preempt and it's just a question of how high. Six diamonds is a bit rich—the opponents might be happy to settle for a penalty double. Our choice would be five diamonds, which leaves West with the problem of whether we have a good hand or are trying to pull a fast one.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ9543 ♡102 ◇AK4 ♣A10
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?
A.—You have a good hand and a six-card suit, but neither the strength of the hand nor the quality of the suit merits first doubling and then bidding your suit. Overcall one spade. If partner can't act, you won't be missing game.

Singer Joel urges graduates to get away from mainstream

BOSTON — Billy Joel urged music-college graduates to create new forms of music and take risks when composing.

Speaking to 490 graduates of the Berklee College of Music, the singer-songwriter and six-time Grammy Award winner said Saturday that young musicians should get away from the mainstream.

Joel

"When you listen to the radio, you hear the canned, frozen, processed flutter being dished to the world as the American kind of music today," Joel said, speaking on his 44th birthday.

"For all the millions who buy this stuff, who like this stuff, there are millions more who don't like it, who are looking for something else"

Joel also told the graduates that being a musician is "a real job" just like being a doctor or teacher.

He received an honorary doctorate in music at the ceremony, as did Grammy Award-winning composer Johnny Mandel.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Jerry Lee Lewis' move to Ireland is not an attempt to evade back taxes in the United States, his spokesman said.

The rock 'n' roll legend moved to Dublin in March with his 30-year-old wife, Kerrie, and their 6-year-old son, Lee.

Lewis, 57, apparently intends to take advantage of a law exempting Irish residents from paying taxes on income derived from creating art. He has a history of clashes with the U.S. Internal Revenue Service.

"He is not giving up his desire to live in the United States or his intention to pay his tax debt," Lewis' attorney Charles Waldman told The Commercial Appeal newspaper.

"He would very much like to work this out with the IRS and get on with his life and making contributions to rock 'n' roll," he said.

The exemption is not automatic and must be approved by the Office of Revenue Commissioners, an Irish official said.

MALIBU, Calif. — The celebrity-soaked shores of Malibu are losing two famous residents: Cher and Van Halen rocker Sammy Hagar.

Cher has decided to leave the beach community after a bitter battle with the City Council over her proposed bluffside estate. She wants $3.2 million for the 1.7-acre lot.

The Pacific Coast Highway property near Pepperdine University was recently used for the film "Indecent Proposal."

The movie star-singer also is selling her Malibu home in nearby Point Dume for $5.2 million.

Hagar has listed for sale his $2.2 million home, which overlooks Broad Beach. Neighbors include Sylvester Stallone, Jack Lemmon, Steven Spielberg and Eddie Van Halen.

NORMAN, Okla. — Winning the Nobel Peace Prize gave Mayan peasant Rigoberta Menchu something the Guatemalan government did not — respect.

"Before I always entered through the kitchen. Suddenly there's a big door where I go in through," Menchu said Saturday during her commencement address at the University of Oklahoma. "Having to call me Miss Menchu was very hard and very curious" for the government.

Menchu, who received an honorary degree from the school, said she would help teach a human-rights course next spring, making her the first Nobel Peace Prize winner to teach at the university.

Menchu is using the $1.2 million that accompanied the prize to set up a foundation named for her father, Vicente Menchu, to pay for scholarships and projects for Indians and poor Guatemalans.

LOS ANGELES — Angie Dickinson's 30-year career in mostly glamour-girl roles is taking a turn: She's playing a murderous grandmother in a TV miniseries.

The star of the "Police Woman" series and more than 50 movies portrays a woman her own age — 60 — in Oliver Stone's eerie ABC miniseries "Wild Palms," beginning May 16.

"I do not get the things offered to Glenn Close," Dickinson said. "Even at my age, I am still into the glamour-girl syndrome: You know, she has great legs but she can't act."

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Nick Nolte is appealing a ruling that he can't subdivide a 4-acre lot he owns and name it after one of his movies, "Down and Out in Beverly Hills."

The Municipal Planning Commission last month rejected Nolte's plan to turn the family's former Charleston home into a subdivision. Residents of the affluent neighborhood fought the plan, saying the name was an insult and the subdivision would create too much traffic.

Nolte and his wife, Rebecca, filed an appeal Thursday in Circuit Court. They said their proposal was similar to one approved by the commission in 1988 that subdivided a property next to them.

Leaks, power outages aside, Pentagon hits 50

By Donald M. Rothberg
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Caught up in a world war, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Congress desperately needed temporary quarters for America's hastily expanding military bureaucracy.

What emerged on the Virginia side of the Potomac River was a unique, five-sided building which, 50 years later, has come to symbolize the military might of the world's only remaining superpower.

This Wednesday, the nation's military leaders will assemble in the Pentagon's 5-acre center courtyard to mark the building's 50th anniversary.

No such ceremony marked the 25th birthday, in 1968. Back then, there were 500,000 U.S. troops in Vietnam, and thousands of anti-war demonstrators regularly marched on the Pentagon — not to celebrate it, but, as Norman Mailer wrote, "to wound it symbolically."

It has been years since armies of demonstrators massed around the Pentagon. They come by the handful these days to make a statement about gays in the military or a bombing raid on Iraq. The atmosphere could quickly change, but this is a peaceful interlude in the building's history.

Inside, however, the structure is showing its age.

While leaders make decisions about the world's most technologically advanced weaponry, the pipes leak and the lights flicker.

The awful condition of the Pentagon is no military secret. In fact, Walt Freeman, who is the Defense Department's director of real estate and facilities, is happy to recite its problems:

"We have 20 to 30 power outages a day ... rusted water pipes ... sewage pipes I can puncture with a pencil ... asbestos in the ceilings and floors."

Parts of the basement floor have sagged as much as 12 inches. The building has no sprinkler system and only 13 elevators and 19 escalators. It falls far short of meeting federal requirements for handicapped access.

The cost of repairing and remodeling the Pentagon is estimated at more than $1 billion over 10 years. That's to modernize a building Congress thought was expensive when its cost was projected at $35 million, and outrageous when it ended up costing $87 million.

Roosevelt had toyed with the idea of building a huge square structure with no windows. In "Washington Goes to War," David Brinkley quotes Secretary of War Henry Stimson as complaining that he wouldn't work in a building designed like a cold storage house for bananas.

So the building ended up with windows, 7,748 to be exact. Most of them are steel-framed, now warped and rusted shut.

But everyone had to admit, the government got a lot of building for its money.

Until a couple of skyscrapers of more than 100 stories surpassed it, the Pentagon was the world's largest office building, with 6.5 million square feet.

The building has 17.5 miles of corridors arranged in five "rings." It is notoriously confusing to navigate; even Defense Secretary Dick Cheney once got lost there.

A Pentagon joke: A pregnant woman rushes up to a guard and says, "Quick, get me to a hospital, I'm going to have a baby."

"Why did you come here when you were this pregnant?" asks the guard.

"I wasn't pregnant when I arrived," is her answer.

Over the years, many of the main corridors have come to resemble museums, with some exhibits highlighting the different services, and others focusing on women, blacks and Hispanics in the military.

Like most enduring symbols, the Pentagon means different things to different people. Melvin Laird was defense secretary during the most turbulent period in its history, from January 1969 through January 1973.

"As far as military services are concerned and men and women who have served, the Pentagon has been a tremendous symbol of stability and strength," he said.

Fate of fishermen's fuzzy as fish stocks fall sharply

BOSTON (AP) — A sharp decline in the number of fish off New England is turning fishermen in the region into an endangered species.

The question now is how to boost the fish population without putting those who depend on the seas out of business.

The New England Fishery Management Council, a federally funded agency, proposes rebuilding dwindling fish stocks by forcing fishermen to cut back over a period of years.

Many fishermen say they couldn't survive under those kind of restrictions.

"If they shut us down for even two months of the year, I'm not going to make it," said George Walsh, 35, who docks his fishing boat in Quincy. "I'm barely making my boat payments now."

Faced with dwindling stocks of cod, flounder, scallops and other seafood, something has to give if the centuries-old New England way of life is to endure. It boils down to making short-term sacrifices for long-term survival.

"I don't think there's a rational fisherman out there who doesn't believe the stocks are depressed," said Joseph Dealteris, a fisheries expert at the University of Rhode Island.

But "how do we let the resource improve without putting everybody out of business?" he said.

The fishery council proposals, which must be approved by the U.S. Department of Commerce, could eventually give fishermen less than a third of a year, for example, to catch cod, haddock, flounder and other groundfish.

John Bullard, an official with the New Bedford Seafood Co-operative Association Inc. and a former mayor of that seaside city, said the loss of business for fishermen could have a devastating impact, similar to a major plant closing.

"The difference is, when a major plant closes, it's very visible, and people attend to it," Bullard said.

"With fishing, you don't have the visibility of a single plant," he added.

WEEKLY & MONTHLY INCOME
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its few "special allowance" routes. This larger route receives a $50 check each Friday, in addition to the regular monthly route profits. The route is in the Washington Park area.
As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.
Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for housewives/mothers, senior citizens, college students or any other adult wanting to "moonlight".
Apply in person or contact:
Circulation 688-2700
$100 Deposit is required.

LOOKING FOR EXTRA INCOME OR A STEADY PART TIME JOB..... Does A Weekly and Monthly Income Sound Appealing?
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its few "special allowance" routes. This route receives a regular income from the Greenwood Store sales, $250 per month gas allowance in addition to the regular monthly route profits. The route is in the Greenwood School area. There are approximately 130 customers on this route with lots of room for growth.
As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a P/T 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work which allows for time to go to your "regular job".
Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for housewives/mothers, senior citizens, college students or any other adult wanting to "moonlight".
Apply in person or contact:

DELIVERY
MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of distributor ship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subsribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or a family member to substitute a for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

Summer Childcare DIRECTORY ©

As a childcare provider you are well aware of the vital concern for today's children by today's parents. For this reason we will be publishing the Annual Childcare Directory on Sunday, May 16th.

If you have ever wished for a method to reach more parents with information about the services that you provide, the Childcare Directory is your wish come true. Midland parents have come to rely on this directory as a guide to quality childcare. This section focuses on the basic "who, what, where and when" of quality childcare in the our area and includes a locator map.

You will probably want your facility represented with an ad in this special section, a dot on a location map, a photo and a story about your facility. We have some special packages for this ranging from 8" ads to 18" ads. We also have ads that are not packaged and can run in the section without any of the other special advantages. For more information and to reserve your ad in the Childcare Directory call:

Midland Reporter-Telegram 687-8813

The deadline for the Childcare Directory is Wednesday, May 12 at 5:00 p.m.
