Extradition of hijack suspect likely

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Justice Ministry today predicted West Germany would quickly extradite to the United States a Lebanese accused of hijacking a TWA jetliner and killing one hostage.

Justice Ministry spokesman Juergen Schmid said, however, that before extradition could be granted, West German law required a guarantee that the suspect, Mohammed Ali Hamadi, not be sentenced to death if convicted.

The 22-year-old Hamadi was seized at Frankfurt airport when customs agents discovered in his carry-on luggage three wine bottles containing methyl nitrate, a fluid sometimes used in making explosives, security officials said Thursday.

He was one of four people indicted in the United States on charges of conspiring to commit air piracy and murder in the 1985 TWA hijacking, during which a U.S. Navy diver was shot to death.

The hijackers held 39 Americans hostage for 17 days in June 1985 before releasing them following Syrian mediation. Then, hooded and carrying handguns, the hijackers read a statement at Beirut airport before vanishing.

In Washington, U.S. officials said they were talking with West Germany about extraditing Hamadi, believed to have been one of two gunmen who carried out the hijacking.

■ Mock hijacking taken seriously; Indictment procedure debated — 2A

"It would appear this (extradition) can be handled quickly," Schmid said at a news conference in Bonn.

He said the decision would be made by West German prosecutors, courts and the justice and foreign ministries.

Air piracy contains a death penalty provision in the United States, but U.S. officials have declined to comment on whether the government would seek capital punishment if Hamadi is extradited and convicted.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Robert Heath said today he could not comment on whether the United States would give assurances that the death penaly will not be invoked.

U.S. and West German authorities said they were investigating whether Hamadi had any connection with 26-year-old Lebanese Bashir al-Khodr, who was arrested Monday in Milan, Italy, with more than 20 pounds of plastic explosives and detonators in his luggage.

Italian Interior Minister Oscar Luigi Scalfaro on Thursday said there was a link between al-Khodr and Hamadi, and the operation leading to their arrests was continuing, according to the Italian news agency AGI. Scalfaro, speaking in Rabat, Morocco, was quoted as saying the arrests were the result of better international cooperation against terrorism.

Interior Ministry spokesman Michael Butz said Hamadi had sought political asylum in West Germany from 1982 to 1984, but then returned to Lebanon. Hamadi has a daughter by a West German woman, and a brother still living in West Germany.

Butz refused to say whether Hamadi's arrest Tuesday was a coincidence or whether authorities knew he was coming. Security officials said he was arrested upon arrival from Beirut on a Middle East Airlines flight. The arrest was announced Thursday.

Bonn security officials said Hamadi told police he carried the wine bottles containing the methyl nitrate for an unidentified man he was to meet in Frankfurt.

Living room 'freed' as right of way abandoned

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

When Bob Helm began building his geodesic dome on County Road 1285 South in 1980 he became curious after noticing that other homes nearby were set a good distance back from the road.

To his horror, he discovered that the county's right of way went directly through the living room. That meant work crews could park their equipment there, or even build a road — if the county so chose.

So Helm three years ago went to the county commissioners and asked them to abandon the right of way.

And starting March 23 — after action last week by commissioners — Helm's home will at last be safe.

"It's really screwed up in one sense. The only reason I'm doing this is if ever I have to sell, there will be a clear title to this acre," Helm said.

Three years after Helm made the request for right of way abandonment, the county has agreed to give up 40 feet of land on the east side of CR 1285 South along a one-mile stretch.

Helm's house was the only one in the right of way, but some of his neighbors had landscaped into the area, said Commissioner Durward Wright.

County Attorney Mark Dettman explained that the county usually requires a right of way 30 feet on each side of a 30-foot road.

But the county once considered expanding CR 1285 South into a major road and the former property owner dedicated more right of way than was needed.

Wright said, "Apparently years ago in the '50s, the road was expected to be a longer, boulevard type."

Wright said he is concerned about county home-builders who fail to check platting before starting construction. "These people have become squatters, with their fences, yards and in this case this guy's living room."

Helms said the three-year delay resulted from his own spotty attention to the problem as well as a change in county attorneys.

Dettman said this is the first time he's known the county to give up a right of way.

"It's not something that happens frequently," Dettman said.

Sale of oil equipment to Soviets may resume

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will lift the ban on sales of oil and gas drilling equipment to the Soviet Union, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said.

A lift on the unilateral 9-year-old ban had been urged for years by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and more recently by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. Both argued that it was ineffective because the banned equipment can be purchased by the Soviets from dozens of other sources.

On Thursday, Baldrige said he agreed.

Gramm said an informal decision to lift the controls took place at an inter-agency conference Thursday morning attended by representatives from Commerce, State, Defense and Energy departments.

The administration must decide by next Tuesday — when the controls would lapse — whether to renew the ban on petroleum technology exports to the Soviets.

The USSR is the largest petroleum equipment market outside the U.S.

American firms had controlled about 35 percent of the market prior to the ban, Bentsen said. Since its imposition in 1978, the U.S. share shrunk to .04 percent, with the difference going to Italian and Japanese firms.

"We cannot hope to be a major trading nation if we unilaterally restrict trade and leave our allies free to take advbantage of a major market without U.S. competition," Bentsen wrote in a letter to Baldridge last month.

The ban was begun by the Carter administration after the jailing of several Soviet dissidents, including Anatoly B Shcharansky, who last year emigrated to Israel.

It has cost U.S. manufacturers, half of whom are based in Texas, almost $2 billion in sales through 1986, Bentsen said.

"In the last five years the market value of the ten largest U.S. oilfield equipment companies has dropped by 73 percent. Over 4,000 jobs have been lost in this industry in Texas alone in the first five months of 1986," he said.

"Over 600 firms in 38 countries produce oilfield equipment and are not restricted by comparable export controls."

A National Academy of Sciences report released Wednesday said such unilateral bans would be "feasible only in the shrinking number of cases where the U.S. is the only country posessing the technology."

Bentsen introduced legislation last May designed to end the controls, which failed to make it to the president's desk.

In the bill, Bentsen noted that the Central Intelligence Agency had documented the futility of the controls in a report entitled 'Soviet Needs for Western Petroleum Technology and Equipment.'

A declassified copy of the report released by Bentsen's office listed 34 catagories of oil drilling equipment needs and indicated that 32 of those were available from sources outside the United States.

Incoming storm prompts travel advisory

From Staff and Wire Reports

Arctic temperatures swept through Midland-Odessa this morning as the third winter storm of the season blew in from New Mexico, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a travelers advisory for much of West Texas.

A strong low pressure system — the cause of a winter storm over much of the Central United States — is expected to move south later today, bringing with it colder temperatures, freezing rain and possible snow.

The storm already has wreaked havoc across the Texas Panhandle. Snow was falling in Amarillo where the temperature dropped to 17 and the wind chill index was at 18 below zero. Amarillo recorded 3 inches of snow between midnight and 5 a.m.

"The major snowfall is going to be in the South Plains and to the north," an NWS spokesman at Midland Regional Airport said. "We don't expect to see much in the way of significant accumulations here."

Although the forecast calls for snow continuing in the Panhandle and South Plains today, weathermen say there is a chance of freezing rain or drizzle over northwest sections of the Permian Basin and Concho Valley. Rain or drizzle is forecast for the rest of the state.

An official low of 32 was recorded in Midland early this morning and the wind chill index was at 17 degrees.

Other wind chill index readings around West Texas early today included 3 at Lubbock, 10 at Wichita Falls and 21 at Abilene.

Forecasters say Permian Basin residents should brace for colder temperatures tonight and Saturday, with lows in the lower 20s and highs in the mid 30s expected.

A 30 percent chance of snow is forecast for tonight, but will decrease to 20 percent by Saturday.

Lows tonight will be near 10 in the Panhandle to the 20s and 30s over the rest of West Texas, the 20s and 30s over North Texas and in the 30s and 40s over most of South Texas, ranging upward to the lower 50s in extreme South Texas.

Highs Saturday will be in the mid teens in the Panhandle, the 30s and 40s over most of North Texas and the 40s and 50s over all of South Texas except in the Hill Country where readings will be in the 30s.

Early morning temperatures were in the teens in the Panhandle and mountains of Southwest Texas, in the 20s over the South Plains, the 30s and 40s over Noerth Texas and in the 50s in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 17 at Amarillo to 60 at Brownsville.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 34 at Wichita Falls, 42 at Fort Worth, 46 at Waco, 48 at Austin, 49 at San Antonio, 59 at Corpus Christi, 55 at Houston, 37 at San Angelo, 28 at Lubbock and 33 at El Paso.

Hefty medical expenses can make healthy tax return

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

After his gross 1987 income is adjusted, a taxpayer could find hefty medical expenses that cut into his vacation nest egg may be just the income tax deduction that gets him to Rio after all.

A Midland tax expert explained medical expenses are a lot more than a trip to the doctor to treat the Taiwan flu; yet because of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, they will be harder to deduct on next year's returns.

Adjusted gross income (AGI) is salary, wages, interest and dividend income less expenses related to income — such as unreimbursable business or moving expenses, said Stephen F. Huggins, tax partner in charge at Price Waterhouse.

On 1986's income tax returns, those due in 89 days, a person could deduct any medical expenses that exceeded 5 percent of his AGI.

Next year, Huggins said that person will only be able to deduct medical expenses that top 7.5 percent of his AGI.

If one's AGI is $50,000 in 1987, $3,750 or 7.5 percent worth of medical expenses must be incurred before any other medical expenses can be deducted, Huggins said.

"Medical expenses are anything you expend for health care...paid to doctors, including psychologists and psychiatrists, hospitals, prescribed medicine, including insulin, medical and dental health insurance premiums and monthly expenses associated with capital medical expenditures," Huggins explained.

One may not realize, however, the spectrum of the Internal Revenue Service's definition of medical expenses.

A nose job? Sure.

Breast expansion? Yes.

Hair transplants? No problem.

A swimming pool built for theraputic reasons? Well, court cases disputing that one have been won by the taxpayer, Huggins said.

"A medical expense that includes surgery for purely cosmetic reasons" is OK with Uncle Sam, Huggins said.

Texas sheriffs await new prison count

HOUSTON (AP) — Sheriffs around Texas today nervously waited to learn if state prisons would refuse to accept new inmates to avoid exceeding a population limit set by a federal judge.

The population count, however, will be updated about 2 p.m. today, therefore putting off any action on hold until then, prison spokesman David Nunnelee said.

One sheriff already has threatened to continue sending inmates even if the prisons close.

"I'll handcuff them to the inside of the fence," Bexar County Sheriff Harlon Copeland of San Antonio said.

Texas has the nation's second-largest prison system. As of Thursday, there were 38,469 inmates throughout 25 prison units, said Carl Jeffries, assistant director for treatment and classification in the Texas Department of Corrections.

That number, if calculations were accurate, would mean the TDC surpassed the limit imposed by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice to settle an inmate lawsuit against overcrowding and other prison conditions.

A 1983 state law passed to meet the judge's standards set 95 percent of capacity as the population limit. The irony of the TDC having beds available even if the agency exceeds the 95 percent ceiling was not lost on Harris County Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen, one of several officials who also face violating their own court-ordered population limits.

"How can they have the luxury of having 2,000 open beds, but then have them sleeping on the floor in the county jail?" Klevenhagen asked Thursday night.

"We certainly appreciate their problem," said Jeffries.

Jeffries said TDC officials would closely monitor the numbers today.

However, all of Friday's new prisoners should be accepted by late today and the closing would affect those scheduled to arrive Monday, he said.

County jails "will just have to maintain the prisoners a while longer," Jeffries said.

He said prisons would be reopened when the population count dips below the cap. No incoming convicts are sent during the weekend, he said.

Indictment alleges four people conspired in TWA hijacking

WASHINGTON (AP) — A long-sealed indictment in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA airliner alleges that four people, including a man now in custody in West Germany, conspired to kill a U.S. Navy diver and assault eight other people during the 17-day hostage ordeal.

The 15-count indictment alleging conspiracy to commit air piracy and murder omits the name of one of the four defendants and was handed up Nov. 14, 1985, but kept under seal until Thursday night.

The 16-page set of allegations says Mohammed Ali Hamadi, the man now under arrest, and the other three conspirators plotted to smuggle at least two hand grenades and a 9mm pistol aboard the TWA flight and then took over the aircraft.

Air piracy contains a death penalty provision, but Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten declined to discuss the possibility that the United States would seek capital punishment if it is able to have Hamadi extradited to this country to face the charges.

A significant development in the indictment was that it charged a total of four people, while naming only three of them. Previously, the U.S. government had issued arrest warrants for just three people, including Hamadi. The other two, Ali Atwa and Hasan 'Izz-Al-Din, are fugitives and also were named in the newly released indictment.

The department gave no explanation for dropping the name of the fourth defendant. In place of a name, the indictment substituted the words "under seal."

The indictment says that on June 14, 1985, the first day of the 17-day hostage-taking, the hijackers shot to death U.S. Navy diver Robert Dean Stethem and assaulted eight passengers and crew members.

"The fact that we have an indictment in hand to present to the Germans speeds up the process of getting" Hamadi back to the United States to stand trial, Korten said.

Earlier in the day, officials at both the State and Justice departments made clear they were eager to have Hamadi returned to the United States to stand trial for air piracy and murder.

"We are very interested in having this individual sent to the U.S. in order to face charges," State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said. "We have notified (West Germany) that the arrested man is wanted in the U.S. for air piracy, murder and other offenses related to the TWA 847 hijacking in June of 1985."

The hijacking was "one of the most despicable acts of international terrorism ever carried out against Americans and we would like to see him face the music," Korten said.

The TWA airliner was hijacked on a flight from Athens to Rome. It was taken to Beirut, where the hijackers killed Stethem and held 39 other Americans for 17 days before releasing them.

Discussions are under way involving the West German government and Richard Burt, the U.S. ambassador to Germany, "regarding the dispatch of this individual" to the United States to stand trial, the Justice Department spokesman said.

Indian Airlines passes test as mock hijacking mistaken for real thing

NEW DELHI (AP) — Security forces posing as Sikh terrorists staged a mock hijacking today to test security responses, but airport officials mistook it for the real thing, ordered a red alert and surrounded the jet with heavily armed police.

Minister for Civil Aviation Jagdish Tytler, the nation's top aviation official, said the exercise was conducted to find out "whether everying works and to test the security situation."

He said only he and one other ministry official knew in advance of the exercise, which caused a flurry of conflicting reports for about 4½ hours.

Initial reports said a Bombay-bound Indian Airlines Boeing 737 carrying 97 people was hijacked to Aurangabad, 185 miles east of Bombay, after leaving New Delhi at 6:40 a.m.

"We are told the plane has been hijacked and is on the ground at Aurangabad. We are not aware of any exercise. We are on red alert," said Indian Airlines spokesman A.K. Bashist in New Delhi.

However, government information officer Ram Mohan Rao told the Associated Press the plance was chartered by the government "to test the responses of security agencies" and was on a flight from New Delhi to Bombay when it was "taken to Aurangabad" in Maharastra state.

Aurangabad airport duty officer Rajiv Saxena had a hard time believing that the hijacking was a fake and discounted the government disclaimers as "rumors."

Just before landing at Aurangabad, about 650 miles south of New Delhi, at about 8:15 a.m., the jetliner's captain radioed the control towar to say flight 491A had been hijacked.

Saxena, who said he monitored the situation from the airport control tower, told the AP that immediately after the plane landed the airport was cordoned off and the plane was surrounded by more than 80 heavily armed police.

He said he was in radio contact with the hijackers who claimed to be holding two government officials hostage. He said they were demanding the release of four Sikh militants jailed in Bhopal, $1 million in ransom, and passage to some undisclosed destination.

Saxena said that at 2:40 p.m. he received a distress call saying a woman on board the plane was wounded and bleeding.

But he said the hijackers refused to allow a doctor onto the plane or give food to the passengers.

Six survive Alaskan plane crash

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Six people injured in the crash of a small plane survived a night of subzero cold on a snowy mountain pass by huddling in the wreckage and burning aviation fuel, but a baby who had been aboard died.

The three men and three women were rescued Thursday morning, 22 hours after the single-engine Cessna on a 200-mile charter flight from Anchorage to Nondalton went down in blinding snow and clouds about 65 miles west of Anchorage.

"We laid blankets over everybody so we could keep them warm so they wouldn't start getting hypothermia. People were in a lot of pain. They were screaming," passenger John Kuczmarski, 22, said Thursday.

Pilot Fred Simms of Anchorage started a fire with fuel. The plane's wings, tail and nose had been shorn off, but the fuselage shielded them from the wind, Kuczmarski said.

Two women in the rear of the plane couldn't join the others because their feet were caught in the seats, Kuczmarski said. They huddled under a sleeping bag.

The passengers tried to keep awake, though everyone fell asleep at one time or another, Kuczmarski said. "I was yelling at people, 'We're going to keep moving all night, so we don't get frostbite.'"

Simms was treated for broken bones and released Thursday evening. The others were hospitalized for cuts, broken bones and hypothermia, or extreme loss of body heat.

Temperatures dipped to minus 4 degrees overnight, the National Weather Service said.

State trooper identified the other survivors as Evie Mujica, George Koktelash Jr., Natasha Dolly Koktelash and Sophie Roehl, all of Nondalton. Mrs. Roehl's 13-month-old son Joseph was dead when rescuers arrived.

"I tried to keep the baby warm. He died in my arms, but I didn't tell the mother. She was too hurt," Kuczmarski said.

Utah airport radar didn't detect plane in commuter flight's path

KEARNS, Utah (AP) — Airport radar did not detect a small plane before it collided with a commuter aircraft, killing all 10 people aboard both planes and showering a residential area with debris, officials said.

The crash, 1987's first U.S. commercial aviation disaster, occurred five months after a small plane collided with an Aeromexico DC-9 as the jetliner was approaching Los Angeles International Airport, killing 82 people.

The collision Thursday 7,000 feet over the Salt Lake Valley damaged several houses, but there were no injuries or fires on the ground.

Dozens of police, sheriff's deputies, firefighters and rescue workers rushed to the snowy crash site about 15 miles southwest of downtown Salt Lake City, cordoned off the area and fanned out to recover debris over three square miles.

It occurred as a Skywest Airlines 18-seat Fairchild Metroliner turboprop carrying six passengers and a crew of two was making its final approach to Salt Lake International Airport from Pocatello, Idaho.

The other plane, a single-engine Mooney M-20 carrying a licensed pilot and a flight instructor, had taken off 26 minutes before the collision from Airport No. 2, a small facility near the crash site.

The Mooney went undetected by either radar or radio at the larger airport's control tower, said Tom Doyle, an assistant air traffic manager at the international airport.

"I don't know where that aircraft was," he said.

"We were in complete control of that Skywest aircraft. He was inbound to the airport and doing exactly what he was supposed to do, from our perspective on radar and voice communication."

Salt Lake County firefighters probe the wreckage of planes that collided over suburban Kearns.

Sheri Casen, a Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman at the Seattle regional headquarters, also said "there were no other targets observed on the radar" when the twin-engine Skywest aircraft dropped off the screen at 12:56 p.m.

"It shouldn't have happened because everybody on board (the Mooney) was an experienced pilot," said Ron Nelson, base operator at Airport 2.

One woman was walking to her bedroom when landing gear smashed through the ceiling, killing her two cats.

"All of a sudden it was just boom! I was four steps away from opening up the door and it hit," said Rebekah Whitelock, 20. "I feel like the Lord kind of watched over me."

Aboard the Mooney were pilot Chester Baker and passenger Paul Lietz, an instructor, Nelson said. The identities of the other victims were not immediately released.

Tremors surprise West Texas residents

ROTAN, Texas (AP) — When the first pre-dawn jolt hit, a few folks thought it was a supersonic jet fighter breaking the sound barrier.

But the noise came from below ground, not above. Four earth tremors shook houses and produced a flurry of phone calls to city officials. No injuries or damage was reported.

A University of Texas geophysicist said the earthquakes were probably caused by underground pressure changes in natural gas and oil.

"I've been living here 70 years, and this is the first one I've felt here," said Jack Aaron, the town's water superintendent. "We got a lot of calls here at the city office. The people were just concerned. They didn't know anything. They didn't know if it was a sonic boom or what."

Mayor Jerry Marshall said residents are accustomed to sonic booms from jets flying from Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene.

About 2,300 people live in Rotan, which is in Fisher County, about 50 miles northwest of Abilene.

In Austin, Toshimatsu Matsumoto of the University of Texas said underground pressure changes probably caused the earthquakes.

"I feel the earthquakes may have been triggered by changes in pressure associated with production of natural gas and oil," Matsumoto said.

The Fisher County Sheriff's Department said tremors were reported at 5:30 a.m., 5:34 a.m., 8:40 a.m. and 9:45 a.m.

Bill Schmieder of the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., said the tremors were not recorded on the agency's earthquake-measuring equipment.

TAX

For instance, those sincerely unhappy with themselves because the nose is out of whack or the hair is gone or the breasts are just too big may have an inferior sense of well-being or mental health.

Work done or services rendered to increase the sense of a positive mental well-being are considered deductible medical expenses, Huggins explained. "And it does affect the structure of the human body."

As for the swimming pool, Huggins said if a physician prescribes water therapy for a patient with arthritis and there is no lap pool near, one may deduct a part of the cost of the pool on his income tax return.

He explained that if a home has a fair market value of $75,000 and the owner adds a $15,000 swimming pool that increases the fair market value of the home to $80,000, the taxpayer can deduct $10,000 of the cost of the pool.

The other $5,000 of the cost of the pool could not be deducted because that was the increase of the home's fair market value, he said.

A health spa for losing weight would be deductible only if it "was not personally motivated and if there were no doctors in attendance," Huggins said.

However, if the doctor sends a person to the health spa to lose weight to combat high blood pressure or for something else medical in nature, the cost could be deducted.

If a person saw a staff physician on his "voluntary" stay, he could deduct the cost of the doctor's bills.

Other concrete medical deductions for 1987's return now include the full cost of home improvements made by physically handicapped persons, Huggins said.

In the past, the tax laws were unclear as to handicapped persons' home improvements. Some felt only those handicapped accidentally or through later illness should be eligible for full deductions, and not those handicapped from birth, Huggins said.

"Anything that makes the home more accessible to the handicapped, regardless of its source, is deductible."

"These would include ramps for wheelchairs, exterior and interior doors being made wider to fit wheelchairs, lowering counters or moving electrical outlets," Huggins said.

One last new amendment to the tax law may apply and appeal to many this next year — the new 25 percent family health insurance premiums deduction for those self-employed.

Prior to the new tax law, Huggins said, health insurance premiums were not deductible at all.

But the 25 percent deduction will be in effect only through 1989.

However, Congress included in the tax reform the 25 percent clause to attempt to change "the motivating reason for choosing the form in which you operate your business," Huggins explained.

Some people may have incorporated their businesses instead of remaining sole-proprietors or partners to be eligible for that premium write-off.

Now, a self-employed person may deduct the cost of 25 percent of all health insurance premiums he pays for himself and his family.

But, the 25 percent deduction comes "above the line" or directly from the gross income.

The deduction will not reduce the self-employment income when it comes time to figure self-employment tax, a Price Waterhouse guidebook stated.

If the self-employment stems from a moonlighting job and he's eligible for another health plan, nix the deduction.

Ditto if he loses money on his business for the year or doesn't provide a health plan to his employees, Huggins said.

The remaining 75 percent he spends on health insurance premiums falls back into the medical expenses category which then could possibly be deducted.

Libyan warplanes bomb Chad

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — Libyan warplanes bombed outposts in northern Chad this morning, including Fada, an oasis that was retaken by government troops early this month, the official Chad Radio announced.

The radio said Libyan planes also were bombing Wour and Zouar in the extreme northern Tibesti mountain region.

It said a young girl was killed and two women were seriously injured in the raid on Fada. Chadian government troops retook Fada from Libyan forces Jan. 2.

The radio gave no further detail on the bombing raids.

President Hissene Habre, whose government controls the southern region of the former French colony, ousted Goukouni Oueddei from power in 1983, and Goukouni launched a rebellion with Libyan backing.

In October, Libya dropped its support of Goukouni and launched an offensive against his rebels in the northern Tibesti region. Goukouni, who was wounded in a shootout with Libyan guards, reportedly is under house arrest in Tripoli, Rebels loyal to Goukouni then turned against their former Libyan allies, joining Chadian government troops in battling for control of northern Chad.

Correction

An article in Thursday's newspaper about Texas Air Control Board hearings for a plant proposed about a 7 mile west of the city limit called the facility a "cement batch plant" and a "cement plant." The plant in question is a "concrete batch plant," an installation which mixes concrete from cement, gravel and other elements and emits less dust than a cement plant.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Astronomers say they have detected forming galaxy

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — Astronomers say they have detected starlight from the birth of a galaxy 12 billion years ago, which would mean galaxies kept forming long after the universe emerged from the "Big Bang."

"It's probably the first forming galaxy we've seen, and if that's right, galaxy formation is a much more extended process than heretofore imagined," said Stanislav Djorgovski of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics.

While some astronomers believe the universe is much younger, Djorgovski and others believe it is about 20 billion years old.

To them, the discovery that a galaxy was born from a collapsing cloud of gas and dust 12 billion years ago means galaxies were not all created at the same time shortly after the universe is believed to have formed in a massive explosion known as the Big Bang.

"That's something very new and changes our conception of how galaxies form," Djorgovski said.

The discovery was announced last week at the American Astronomical Society's annual meeting by Djorgovski, James Liebert of the University of Arizona and Patrick McCarthy, Hyron Spinrad, Wil van Breugel and Michael Strauss, all of the University of California, Berkeley.

The object is too far away for positive identification, but scientists detected evidence that perhaps 1 billion suns ignited as a huge gas cloud collapsed under its own gravity 71 billion trillion miles, or 12 billion light years, from Earth. A light year is the distance light travels in one year, so the birth of the galaxy actually happened 12 billion years ago.

"We're talking about the turn-on of an entire galaxy, or at least that's what we think," Spinrad said. Stars form when the collapsing gas "heats up to the point where it can turn on thermonuclear reactions," he said.

The researchers focused on the possible "proto-galaxy," known as radio wave source 3C 326.1, with the Very Large Array radio telescope in New Mexico and with optical telescopes at Lick Observatory near San Jose and at the Multiple Mirror Observatory and Kitt Peak National Observatory in Arizona.

Using special filters, they detected mostly extreme blue light from the object and some other colors. The blue light indicates most of the object is a huge cloud of electrically charged hydrogen gas about three times bigger than our own Milky Way galaxy.

The cloud is about 100 times brighter than the starlight, suggesting that the cloud is in the earliest stages of galaxy formation and will continue to collapse to spawn many more stars.

"It's on its way to becoming a giant galaxy and hasn't quite got there yet," Spinrad said.

The galaxy eventually might contain 10 billion stars, McCarthy said.

Djorgovski said the number of stars was hard to measure because using telescopes to detect light from the proto-galaxy is like trying to detect a 25-watt lightbulb on the moon.

The fact that 3C 326.1 is a powerful source of radio wave energy poses a problem for the idea that it is a proto-galaxy, Spinrad acknowledged.

Prevailing theory holds that such radio signals are produced when vast amounts of material are sucked into a black hole, an older star so dense that its gravity pulls in even light. The astronomers cannot explain how a black hole might exist, if one really does, within a newborn galaxy.

But McCarthy and Spinrad said some scientists believe very dense matter like a black hole can exist at the centers of young galaxies.

Two years ago, van Breugel theorized that a new galaxy might be formed by a collision between a cosmic jet of energized gas from dying stars and gas in a strange, luminous region of space known as Minkowski's Object, located 240 million light years from Earth, much closer than 3C 326.1

But Spinrad said Minkowski's Object is much smaller and more completely formed than the possible proto-galaxy and really may be an older galaxy.

Siblings put up grape vines for adoption

HECTOR, N.Y. (AP) — Will Wickham and Judy Butterfield have been able to give their grape vines a good home on the sloping hills near Seneca Lake, but with 140 acres of vineyards it has been difficult to see that their vines are raised properly.

So the brother and sister put up their vines for adoption.

"It's kind of like an adult version of the Cabbage Patch doll," said Butterfield. "They have a picture and a certificate and the parents can come down and show people their vines — and they do."

"People come down with watering cans or wearing T-shirts with their vine's name written on it. They send them birthday cards and Christmas cards. I can't really believe it sometimes," said Butterfield. "They even gather around the vine for family pictures."

Recently, about 20 people who share in the ownership of several vines held a "parents weekend" at the vineyard.

About 15 people adopted vines in 1983, the first year. Now, more than 600 vines have foster homes, with parents coming from as far away as California and British Columbia.

Gramm pays tribute to Democrats' education reforms

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm paid cross-partisan tribute to outgoing Gov. Mark White on Thursday for his work with other Democratic leaders in focusing attention on education needs.

Gramm, the first-term Republican senator, told a joint session of the 70th Legislature the key to balancing the state's budget is in rebuilding the its economic base.

Education reforms that White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis, all Democrats, pushed during White's term will be instrumental in that rebuilding effort, Gramm said in a House of Representatives chamber with many empty seats of lawmakers who ducked out after the first three days of the regular session.

STATE

"I would...like to congratulate you (Hobby and Lewis) and I congratulate Gov. White on your leadership in the area of focusing attention on quality education," he said. "I believe it's an indispensable ingredient to attracting new industry and creating new jobs."

Gramm pledged his support in that effort, and in obtaining a greater share of federal research money, especially in defense matters. "While we have been leaders in virtually every other area of national defense," he said, "we haven't played a leadership role in doing defense research."

As a member of the Armed Services Committee, Gramm said he intends to bring a defense research center to the University of Texas, which would be able to subcontract work to other institutions in the state.

In addition to his kind words to Democrats, Gramm said he is confident that Republican Gov.-elect Bill Clements is the "hard-nosed bulldog businessman to lead us in making decisions that will be critically important for the future of our state."

Gramm said he has talked with Democratic U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and others about a bipartisan energy policy that will provide incentives for domestic oil and gas production.

He hopes for repeal of the windfall profits tax, the fuel use tax and natural gas regulation. With Clements in office, he said, "I believe we can put together the bipartisan effort in Austin and Washington to get the job done."

In remarks on the state deficit estimated at $6 billion over the next two years, Gramm said "You'll never balance the state budget by cutting state spending, nor are you going to balance the budget by raising taxes..."

"In the final analysis, the state budget is going to be balanced only by rebuilding the economic base of Texas to attract new industry and create new jobs. That will generate a new tax base to pay for the schools, roads and prisons that our people need."

Gramm opened his 25-minute speech by telling the legislators, "No one will ever refer back to this meeting of the 70th Legislature as dull." He added, "When you run for reelection, no one will be able to say you haven't earned your salary of $7,200."

Later, Gramm said he remains opposed to a proposed oil import fee, preferring the production incentives.

Insurance heir removed from Moody board

GALVESTON (AP) — The 24-year-old nephew of indicted Galveston insurance heir Shearn Moody Jr. will take over his position on the charitable Moody Foundation.

Moody's mother and brother voted in a closed session on Thursday to remove the 53-year-old Moody, who has been indicted twice in a month on charges he defrauded the foundation.

Frances Moody Newman and Robert L. Moody, trustees of the foundation, then appointed Ross Rankin Moody, the son of Robert Moody, to take the third trustee position.

"I feel kind of bad (about) the circumstances of which I was put on the board," Ross Rankin Moody said. "I'm very happy. I've got some new ideas (about the foundation)."

He is a corporate financial analyst for a Wall Street investment firm and on the board of directors of several insurance companies and the Moody National Bank.

Shearn Moody refused to comment before and after the vote.

His brother said only "We're glad to have Ross on the board."

The Thursday session was described as a tense and tearful meeting.

Hours before, U.S. District Judge Ross N. Sterling refused to block Shearn Moody's removal. His attorney, Marian Rosen, had filed a motion, saying state and federal laws used to back up the ouster are unconstitional.

The senator's logic

The Sandinistas delivered a new constitution to Nicaragua the other day and at the same time said they won't obey it, extending their restrictions against a host of civil rights that have been formally prohibited since 1982.

President Daniel Ortega asserts he cannot grant political freedoms to his long-suffering citizens because of the military threat posed by the U.S.-backed rebels. Let's look at the logic of that position.

If Ortega and his colleagues really intended to establish freedom in Nicaragua, wouldn't the quickest way to do it be — just to do it? For if the Sandinistas initiated a genuine policy of human rights and all its attendant political freedoms, does anyone believe the administration would dare seek congressional support for the Contra rebels? More important, backing for the rebels in Nicaragua itself would evaporate.

But the Sandinistas — regardless of whether they are opposed militarily — simply do not intend to establish liberty — not this year, not next year, not ever. For they worship a doctrine — communism — which does not work, which necessitates totalitarian control just to keep the system limping along without collapsing from the weight of its own failed logic. The Contra units were formed years after the Sandinistas seized power in 1979. Ortega and his cohorts had plenty of time — without military opposition — to establish the freedoms they had promised, but they refused.

Congressional opponents of aid to the rebels are now smacking their lips over the Iran-arms affair, assuming they can use its revelations to sink the administration's Nicaragua policy. But this argument is absurd. For whether a renegade operation within the administration did or did not divert funds from the sale of arms to Iran to the Contras is not germane to the fact that a totalitarian Soviet-Cuban ally controls the government in Managua and entombs the country in an ever-expanding gulag.

The new Nicaraguan constitution — even if it were enforced — legally ordains the Sandinistas as having a special place in the government. The opposition newspaper La Prensa remains closed, along with the Catholic radio station. The Sandinista Defense Committees extend their control over virtually every facet of life. An avalanche of documentation shows that the climate of fear and repression intensifies. Strong evidence indicates that the Sandinistas are in fact giving less aid these days to the leftist rebels in El Salvador, but only because they are concentrating their resources against the Contras.

Recently, Sen. Thomas Dodd, D-Conn., a longtime opponent of aid to the Contras, conceded that the Sandinistas are firmer than ever in the Soviet-Cuban camp and have increased the tyranny against their own citizens. But he contends that the Sandinistas were driven to communism because of U.S. opposition to them. This echoes the twisted logic that presumed that the United States, by opposing communist dictatorship in Cambodia, was thus responsible for the fact that its communist rulers slaughtered and starved some 3 million of its citizens.

Sen. Dodd's Nicaragua solution is to stop all funding to the Contras and then sign an agreement with the Sandinistas "that would go a long way toward eliminating our immediate national-security concerns." In other words, he says, abandon Nicaragua to communist rulers if they promise to let their neighbors alone — then believe the promise. And he is serious.

Sometimes it takes a jolt from abroad to get the U.S. educational wheels rolling. Sputnik envy resulted in more rigorous math and science instruction in the late 1950s; three decades later, Toyota envy may give rise to an American system of education modeled at least somewhat on Japan's. There is much to embrace in the splendid Japanese example, but there are some things to reject, too.

In a new report, the U.S. Education Department draws a direct connection between Japan's spectacular economic gains and its demanding elementary and secondary schools. More than 90 percent of Japanese children graduated from high school. The comparable figure in the United States is about 70 percent. Japanese students consistently outrank their American counterparts on achievement tests, and virtually every Japanese high school graduate is literate, something that cannot be said for a sobering percentage of America's graduates.

How can there be such an enormous gap in achievement? Among other reasons, the Japanese spend more time in school — about 240 days a year against the 180 or so typically chalked up by Americans. Moreover, teachers in Japan are revered and consequently are paid better (although Japan spends less of its gross national product on education than does the United States).

And Japanese students are required to take more math and science courses than Americans ordinarily are.

But there are intangible factors, too. Can the achievement ethic so prevalent among Japanese children be instilled in American youngsters who lack it? Could uniform educational standards, readily embraced in Japan's homogeneous culture, be enacted in America's pluralistic society, where local school boards ferociously defend their right to set standards and policies?

While there is much in the Japanese system that the United States could well borrow — the longer school year, better compensation for teachers, higher achievement standards, more parental involvement — there also are drawbacks that Americans would best avoid. The fierce competitiveness among Japanese youngsters to get into the best schools and colleges is probably unhealthy. The rigidity of Japan's educational standards can produce automatons instead of creative thinkers.

U.S. educators ought to take a careful look at the report on Japanese schooling, with an eye toward skimming off what seems to work best — indeed, desirable — to give children a world-class education without needlessly regimenting or pigeonholing them.

Sultan didn't intend money for contras

WASHINGTON — The Sultan of Brunei says the State Department lied when it claimed he had donated $10 million to aid the Nicaraguan contras, according to sources speaking for the Southeast Asian ruler.

Jack Anderson

State Department officials insist that a "third country's" money was intended for "the Nicaraguan resistance." But they maintain that Brunei has never been officially identified as the country that was importuned to help with U.S. efforts in Central America.

In numerous published reports, however, Foggy Bottom officials have said that Hassanal Bolkiah, sultan of the tiny, oil-rich country and the world's wealthiest man, was told that any donation he made would go for non-military aid to the contras. But Bruneian officials told us emphatically that the U.S. request was for humanitarian aid to the needy of Central America.

If the sultan had known that the $10 million was to be used to help the anti-Sandinista rebels, he would not have given the money, the Bruneian officials told us. Though he is a dedicated anti-communist, the sultan does not wish to prolong the fighting between the leftist regime in Managua and the contras supported by the Reagan administration.

Dale Van Atta flew to Brunei last month to check into the donation, which has figured in the uproar over secret funding of the contras at a time when Congress had forbidden any official U.S. aid. The press-shy ruler was indisposed and unavailable for a personal interview, but he met with his top officials to prepare a statement for us to explain his role in the burgeoning scandal.

The carefully worded statement, amplified by Bruneian officials on a background basis, made clear that the sultan and his advisers feel they were "stung" by U.S. officials and resent their innocent involvement in the Reagan administration scandal.

The statement stated: "His Majesty the Sultan and Yang DiPertuan of Brunei Darussalam (Brunei, Abode of Peace) said that he had made a personal donation to the United States to be used for humanitarian purposes in Central America."

According to a secret report of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, the sultan was asked to put $10 million in a secret Swiss bank account controlled by Lt. Col. Oliver North, deputy national security adviser. North was fired from his post after it was discovered that profits from the sale of U.S. arms to Iran may have been diverted to the contras through a Swiss bank account.

The sultan's aides confirmed that he did donate $10 million. But they insisted that the sultan had no idea the money was going to the contras. They compared it to the $500,000 that the sultan gave to New York Mayor Ed Koch in 1984 for the city's meals-on-wheels program, in accordance with his desire as a devout Moslem to follow the Koran's injunction to the rich to care for the poor.

"The donation was made at the request of the United States secretary of state, Mr. George Shultz, in the summer of 1986," the Bruneian statement said. Shultz, who has denied that he personally asked for the donation, met with the sultan for 45 minutes in the course of a two-hour visit to Brunei last June 24. U.S. Ambassador Barrington King, who was present at the meeting, refused to comment when we asked if the donation was solicited at that time.

"It was his majesty's understanding from the personal representative of Mr. Shultz that the donation would be devoted to welfare purposes, and his majesty assumed that it had been so applied," the statement continued. "Once the money had been paid it was beyond his control."

Bruneian officials told us that Shultz's "personal representative" was Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs. The final paragraph of the sultan's statement reflects his feeling of betrayal:

"His majesty was given to understand that the United States was approaching other countries ... for donations. On this basis, he agreed to accede to this request in good faith as a gesture of good will and friendship to the United States."

'Cap's' thrust firming Reagan's hand on SDI

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has suggested early deployment of space-based missile defense in a private session with President Reagan held against the backdrop of sharpened congressional opposition to the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) and bureaucratic jockeying over a 1987 U.S.-Soviet arms-control summit.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The idea was put forth at the Dec. 17 White House session as something the president might or might not wish to pursue. But the wealth of evidence that deployment of an initial stage of space-based defense against Soviet attack was entirely "feasible" by 1993 or 1994 impressed Reagan. It was Weinberger's first and very secret suggestion to Reagan that the 10-year extension of the ABM treaty tentatively agreed to at Reykjavik could dangerously set back the entire SDI program.

Thus opened a new round of familiar struggle pitting the Pentagon against congressional and State Department detentists. This is a harbinger of the struggle ahead between Reagan advisers for positions to be taken at any summit later this year with Mikhail Gorbachev.

Weinberger has never sought to conceal his dismay that, in his absence from the October Reykjavik summit, Reagan agreed to a 10-year moratorium on withdrawing from the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty (ABM). That arms control bargain, tentatively reached at the Iceland summit, collapsed not over the 10-year moratorium but over the unacceptably narrow Soviet definition of permitted research and testing during the 10 years.

What Weinberger has now offered the president is this significant but intentionally low-key warning: Progress in research and development so far shows that the proposed 10-year moratorium carries real, not just psychological, penalties for SDI, the program Reagan wants to leave as the most important legacy of his presidency.

That parallels rising demands from the president's staunchest backers on Capitol Hill. Defense-minded Sens. Pete Wilson, Jim McClure, Malcolm Wallop, Gordon Humphrey and Dan Quayle — and a GOP presidential aspirant, Rep. Jack Kemp — have repeatedly issued this warning to the administration: If SDI does not demonstrate some visible function to prove its future viability, it will be eviscerated and die on the congressional vine.

That brought Quayle's outburst on ABC's David Brinkley program: "The patience of Congress is running out on SDI .... We want to see action .... We ought to look at deploying SDI."

But for Weinberger, pressuring Reagan on early or near-term deployment of SDI is a dangerous way to proceed. It would galvanize Capitol Hill liberals and State Department detentists, led by Secretary George Shultz, who would accuse the Pentagon of brazenly undermining arms control. That is why Weinberger was so careful to make his pitch to the president low-key, described even within the Pentagon as "educational" — a "concept" rather than an option. If the president grabs the "concept," he will be leading Shultz, not following the Pentagon.

The experts who accompanied Weinberger to the White House (including the SDI director, Gen. James Abrahamson, and Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs) left Reagan in no doubt. They said that deploying the first stage of an anti-missile defense system by 1993 or 1994, based not on the ground but in space, has now become a realistic option for the U.S.

The system, known as Space-Based Kinetic Kill Vehicles (SBKKV), would employ kinetic energy to destroy missiles in the boost phase, soon after they left the ground. That would amount to a partial defense umbrella effective not just for the protection of land-based U.S. missile silos but also population centers.

Neither Shultz nor his top arms control specialist, Paul Nitze, was invited to the Dec. 17 session. But when word of the meeting spread through the bureaucratic maze, Shultz quickly dispatched Nitze to the White House to stop Reagan from changing his mind about the 10-year moratorium he agreed to in Reykjavik. No decision has been reached.

The fact Weinberger has now made the solid move that he failed to make last fall for stronger protection of Reagan's investment in SDI, whatever the cost to the ABM treaty, heralds a shift. The president's position in a third U.S.-Soviet summit is likely to be firmer on safeguarding the heavy stake he has made for himself in SDI, and less pliant in buying Soviet siren songs to neutralize it.

CHARLEY REESE

What the devil's happening to the U.S.?

I asked the devil (imaginary, of course) the other night, "If you wanted to take a country in which there was plenty of land and plenty of freedom and convert it into the miserable state of traditional Europe, what would you do?"

Charley Reese

The old devil scratched his ear with his pitchfork, pawed the ground in an absentminded manner, and commenced to talk.

"Well," he said, "the first thing I'd do is figure out a way to get people off the land and out of small towns into big cities. A family that owns their home or business and a little patch of ground on which to grow food is too independent. You can't do anything with people who are independent. The very first step in controlling people is to make them dependent.

"One way to do that is to fool them into accepting a money economy. The real wealth, as you know, consists of tangible things like land and intangible things like skills. Big shots tend to know that, but you can always fool the uneducated into thinking that a paycheck denominated in money is more important.

"After you do that, you can lure 'em into the cities to work for paychecks. Of course, most of them won't realize that as long as the big shots retain the power to raise or lower the value of the money, a working man is never going to get ahead. Especially if you encourage him to get in debt at compound interest rates.

"Now I know that's creating a proletariat but don't worry, they'll be docile. Pretty soon it'll dawn on them that they are at the mercy of their paychecks and if they forget, all you have to do is tighten the money supply and put a few million of 'em out of work.

"In the meantime, give them nonstop entertainment and make sure their kids get a lousy education. And don't forget to kill off or at least minimize religion. That way the kids will adopt material values and then you've got 'em between a rock and a hard place. They'll only measure success by how many things they can own and they can only get the things by working in the cities and going into debt.

"Be sure you don't tell them about any great or good people, as that will set a bad example — bad for our purposes, of course. Hold up neurotics, sluts, jugglers, singers, actors, successful criminals and demagogues as heroes. Remember, always make money the only measure of success.

"Then give the banks the power to create money and lend it out at interest. Pretty soon there won't be one person out of 100 who owns anything except mortgages and installment loan books. Everybody will be dependent — on a paycheck from a corporation over which they have no control; on a check from a government over which they have no control — all denominated in a monetary system over which they have no control.

"Bingo, you've got a European-style country and now your bigshots can go ahead and play aristocrats like they've always wanted to do.

"Oh, one more thing. Just to be on the safe side, you'd better make sure they can't get their hands on guns. There will be a lot of crime in the cities — they're a perfect environment for creating criminals — so you can justify disarming the population.

"You never know when some upstart, like Emiliano Zapata down in Mexico some years ago, will come along and figure out the system and start trouble."

I thanked the devil for his suggestions and then thought to myself how good it is to be living in the United States where such a bad state of affairs would never be allowed to occur.

The American people, blessed beyond comparison with a constitutional government, would never hand over their monetary system and their lives to a few elitists. They would never allow a public education system that didn't produce knowledgeable children with the ability to reason. They would never allow someone to elevate trash to the status of heroes.

Take the Vietnam War. Every child knows the stories of 289 Army and the 47 Marine Corps Medal of Honor winners.

Don't they?

PUC discusses partial deregulation of AT&T

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Utility regulators Thursday discussed a two-year plan to partially deregulate AT&T Communications, permitting it to change its long-distance rates by as much as 7.5 percent.

The proposal, which the Texas Public Utility Commission will publish for public comment, would allow AT&T to increase or lower its current basic long-distance rates — without PUC approval — by 1 cent per minute per rate band in the first year. That amounts to a 2.5 percent average change in current long-distance rates, said Philip Diehl, director of telephone regulation for the PUC staff.

In the second year, the plan would allow AT&T to increase or lower its long-distance rates by 2 cents per minute per rate band, resulting in a 5 percent average change in current rates, Diehl said. A rate band is a measured distance used to calculate long-distance charges.

If approved, the two-year plan would begin July 1. AT&T, because of its size, is the only one of 160 long-distance carriers in the state that the PUC regulates.

Today, an AT&T customer pays $1.86 for a five-minute daytime call from Houston to Dallas.

Diehl said the open marketplace and competition from other long-distance carriers would determine whether AT&T lowers or increases its rates by the allowable increments.

"The commission has stated that this is not the time for total deregulation," he said.

Currently, AT&T must present evidence in what usually is a lengthy regulatory process and gain approval from the PUC before changing its phone rates.

During the two-year period, the commission would require reports on the impact of the new rules on ratepayers and other long-distance carriers. After two years, the commission would review the effectiveness of the plan and make appropriate changes.

The proposed rules "are a step in the right direction," said AT&T spokesman Philip Bode, but they do not go far enough.

"We feel there is enough competition out there for even more flexibility in these proposed rules," Bode said. "We just want AT&T to be treated as other long-distance companies."

Although AT&T still garners a hefty majority of the total long-distance revenues in Texas, Bode says the company's market share in metropolitan areas has slipped below 50 percent, giving unregulated competitors an unfair advantage.

"We just want assurances that when the two-year process is over, that the process continues toward greater flexibility," he said.

AT&T will seek legislation this year that would free AT&T of all state controls within a couple of years, Bode has said.

Under the proposed rules, AT&T could increase or lower its current rates for WATS service by 5 percent the first year and by 10 percent the second year.

Colonias eligible for water aid

McALLEN (AP) — Impoverished communities along the border will be eligible for aid to develop sewage and drainage systems under a $3.5 million appropriation approved Thursday by the Texas Water Development Board.

The funds represent just a fraction of the cost to bring water and sewage systems to the state's colonias, isolated communities without basic utilities, said Herbert W. Grubb, director of planning for the water board.

Thousands of people live in colonias along the Rio Grande from Brownsville to El Paso, Grubb said.

The cost of supplying sewage systems to the Rio Grande Valley's colonias is estimited at $93 million, Grubb said, with better systems costing up to $150 million.

He said the $3.5 million could be used in individual projects to bring sewage and drainage to a colonia, to help a community pay the interest on a loan from the board for such a project, or to leverage a loan.

The Valley alone has 435 colonias, Grubb said, while El Paso County also has a high concentration of the settlements.

"Ninety percent of the colonias have a water line right to it or right by it, but not every house on every street has a connection. The pipelines to get the water to the colonias are in place, but that's not to say they're big enough. They're not. And that's not to say there's enough water in their pipelines to meet the ultimate need," he said.

One-year budget won't end deficit, lawmakers say

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A one-year budget is an "unrealistic" solution to Texas' budget shortfall — which Thursday climbed $200 million to a flat $6 billion — Senate leaders said.

Some lawmakers and Gov.-elect Bill Clements have suggested that the 70th Legislature consider writing a budget only for fiscal 1988 and set spending for fiscal 1989 during a special session next year, giving the economy a chance to improve. Legislators traditionally write a two-year budget during each biennial regular session.

During the first meeting of the Senate Finance Committee Thursday, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby pointed out that writing a one-year budget now would force lawmakers to come up with deeper cuts and/or larger tax increases than if they followed the traditional method. The problem, as Hobby outlined it, is two-fold:

— The Legislature must deal with the $1 billion deficit left over after last summer's special sessions. A one-year budget would have to make up that entire deficit in 12 months, while a two-year budget would spread the $1 billion over 24 months of spending and taxation.

— Comptroller Bob Bullock estimates the state will raise $20.04 billion in taxes over the two year period. However, he predicts fiscal 1988 tax income will total just $9.73 billion while fiscal 1989 tax collections should climb to $10.31 billion.

"It doesn't evade problems," Hobby said. "It complicates problems."

Legislative Budget Board Director Jim Oliver said a one-year budget "would require more serious austerity than a two-year bill."

Finance Committee Chairman Grant Jones offered two options, both of which would require Clements' cooperation, that would allow legislators to wait for the economy to improve but would get around the problems Hobby outlined. Under both scenarios, the Legislature would write a two-year budget that Bullock would certify as taking care of the deficit.

Then Clements could veto the fiscal 1989 portion of the budget and call a special session next year to rewrite that budget. He could also sign the entire appropriations bill into law and simply watch the economy for signs of recovery.

"If the economy improves so that you have the generation of more tax revenue than you had anticipated, he could call a special session for the purpose of reducing taxes," Jones said.

Clements' press secretary Reggie Bashur said the governor-elect believes a one-year budget is "an idea worthy of consideration...It is not something he is firmly in support of."

Also during Thursday's Finance Committee meeting, Oliver told the senators that the Budget Board staff had refigured the deficit in the wake of the final estimate Bullock issued last week. The changes, based on technical shifts in various state funds and accounts, boosts the estimated 1988-1989 shortfall from $5.8 billion to $6 billion.

Spokesman blames S&L for not helping condominium buyers

AUSITN (AP) — A spokesman for Barnes-Connally Investments says a New Mexico savings and loan is to blame for not helping buyers and others hurt by a time-share promotion of the firm's New Mexico condominiums.

Jim Lindsey, manager of the Austin-based partnership, said the firm's principals intend to sue the savings and loan because it has prevented them from making restitution after a promoter misrepresented their Triple Crown time share units.

Former Texas Gov. John Connally and former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, partners in Barnes-Connally, were named this week in a lawsuit filed by the New Mexico attorney general under provisions of the Deceptive Trade Practices Act because of alleged misrepresentation at the Ruidoso Downs development.

Lindsey said Thursday that the savings and loan cut off funds after Barnes and Connally had reached a settlement with the New Mexico attorney general's office.

He said the problems surfaced after a marketer hired to promote the time-share condominiums offered Hawaiian vacations and other gifts the firm had not sanctioned.

Lindsey said the promoter was fired and that Barnes and Connally, who developed Triple Crown through a company called Alta Enterprises, had agreed with the former New Mexico attorney general on a plan to set up a restitution fund.

Airport faces crowded future, director says

America West brings number of major airlines to five

and ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Staff Writers

America West Airline's inaugural flights from Midland Regional Airport Thursday meant more than additional convenience for Permian Basin flyers.

The flights marked the first time since last April that five major airlines claimed slots at the airport, an occurrence that also has a downside, Vic White, Midland Director of Aviation, said Thursday.

White said that with the addition of Tempe, Ariz.-based America West's eight daily flights, the airport may see times when as many as seven major carrier aircraft must compete for the airport's four gates.

That most likely would occur after 11 p.m., when aircraft scheduled for departure the following day sometimes wait at gates, which makes finding room for arriving flights a problem, White said.

Negotiations among the airlines could solve the problem by allowing arriving flights that continue to another destination board passengers at a different gate, he said.

But that would mean towing the plane to a second gate, a process for which some airlines lack the necessary equipment. It also might mean delays, even for airlines with equipment, because of inclement weather or equipment breakdown, he said.

As a result, passengers on some flights may be asked to deplane using the rolling stairways of old rather than the more modern deplaning tunnels, he said.

The potential crowding problems should revive discussion of airport expansion plans which were tabled last year for economic reasons, White said. In addition to stimulating reconsideration of previous proposals, the situation may generate new solutions, he noted.

One solution could be the addition of a fifth gate with a loading bridge at the end of the embarkation concourse, he said. That could cost as much as $250,000 and would increase crowds at that end of the area.

Should ongoing negotiations with a sixth potential airport user, Delta Airlines, prove fruitful, the problems could become even worse, he said.

"I don't think you'll see them for a year," he predicted, but a smaller "feeder" airline associated with Delta — the Delta Connection — could start flights by early spring, he said.

"It's just another example of the real Delta's interest in the airport. They're just testing the waters," he said.

On the ticketing level in the terminal, there are only four full-size counter spaces, to match the four boarding gate areas, White explained. During the 1982-84 period when as many as eight airlines were competing for fliers' dollar in Midland/Odessa, the airlines worked out sub-lease arrangements between themselves to share the existing counter space.

However, neither America West nor United Express — the two newest arrivals — were interested in a sub-lease, so it was up to airport management to subdivide the space and coordinate use of the last remaining counter area.

"The two airlines will use the same baggage conveyors and share hallways and other space, but each has separate private office areas as well," he said.

Aside from logistical problems associated with more aircraft traffic, White said America West's entrance into the Midland market represents a greater choice for West Texans flying from Midland.

The five carriers currently in operation — America West, Southwest, American, Continental and United Express Airlines — offer non-stop service to 11 destinations, White said.

Those destinations include Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, Dallas Love Field, Houston Hobby, Houston Intercontinental, Denver, Phoenix, El Paso, Albuquerque, Austin, Amarillo and Lubbock.

And among those, "hub" systems at five airports — D-FW, Dallas Love, Houston Hobby, Houston Intercontinental, Denver and Phoenix — offer West Texans connections virtually coast-to-coast and border-to-border.

"We are now officially 100 percent leased," said White. "There's not a square foot left."

The new American West departures bring to 68 the number of flights the airport handles on peak days, a figure that may be an all-time high, he said.

According to Mark Coleman, senior vice president for market development for America West, the airline chose this time to enter the Midland/Odessa market in hopes of "becoming a part of the community and playing a part in the economic rebound of the area by providing low fares to important West Coast business centers."

He noted that America West is now the largest of the more than 170 airlines that have sprouted up since the industry was deregulated in 1978. More than 60 percent of those start-up ventures have ended in bankruptcy, he said. Until People Express was purchased by Texas Air, America West was number two among post-deregulation carriers.

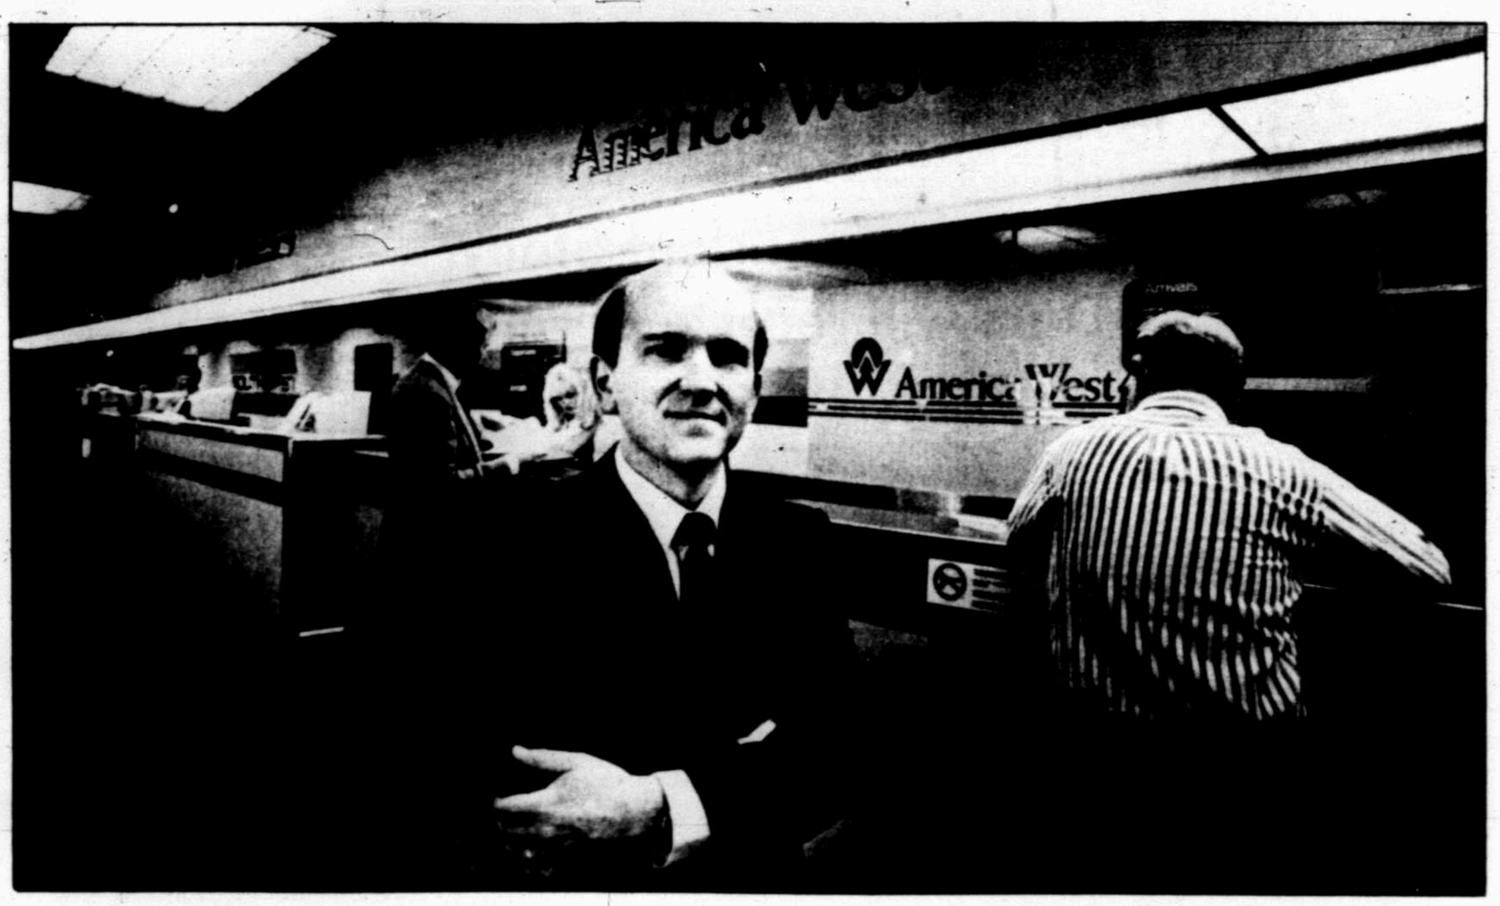
White noted that the new airline means additional revenue for the city airport. A "typical" airline lease agreement brings in around $100,000 yearly, depending on space rentals and the number of flights the airline operates, he said.

Additional passenger traffic also means more airport revenue from parking and concessions, such as the airport coffee shop, newsstand and rent-a-car services, he said.

Increasing total traffic, not "stealing competitors' business," is one of America West's marketing strategies, Coleman said.

"In our first five major markets, within three years, America West was carrying more passengers than had been the total market in 1983. Other airlines continued to have significant market shares, but low fares and high frequency flying enabled us to increase the size of the entire market," he explained.

The airline brought six full-time and ten part-time jobs to Air Terminal which were filled with local workers, in addition to eight employees who transferred in to the area.



America West Airline's Midland city station manager Paul Martin was on hand to greet the corporate staff and initial passengers who came into town on the carrier's inaugural flight. "America West is excited about bringing our low fare, more care philosophy into the West Texas market," Martin said.

Work on Stacy project could begin in April

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Work on the $70-million Stacy Reservoir project to supply additional water to West Texas may get under way by April, according to Joe Pickle, secretary-treasurer of the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

The district's board of directors has agreed to open bids on the $37- to $40-million dam and spillway project at 10 a.m. on March 5. An additional $30 to $33 million will be expended on buying land for the 30-square-mile lake, relocating highways and engineering costs. The $70 million does not include the construction of pipelines to move the water.

Pickle said it's likely bids will be plentiful and attractive due to the economic slump and widespread hunger for work contracts in Texas.

The dam will be 10,000 feet — almost two miles — long and will incorporate a 300-foot-wide concrete spillway with five Tainter gates.

The reservoir will impound 554,000 acre feet of water, he said.

The project, which is to take 2½ to three years for completion, is to be finished by January 1990.

The board approved $250,000 to acquire tractors and equipment to clear the dam site and the basin and approved an additional $70,000 for office-laboratory and maintenance buildings.

The Stacy Reservoir, which will be in Runnels and Coleman counties in Central Texas, will be about 25 miles southeast of Ballinger and will be below the joining of the Colorado River and Concho River. The site is about 150 miles east of Midland.

The Colorado River Municipal Water District currently operates J.B. Thomas Lake near Colorado City and Snyder and E.V. Spence Reservoir near Robert Lee.

The district furnishes water to a dozen West Texas cities, including Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Stanton, Rotan, Ira-Dunn, Robert Lee, Snyder and Pyote.

Midland, Odessa, San Angelo and Abilene will be the primary users of Stacy Reservoir water.

Four more shigellosis-related lawsuits filed

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Four more lawsuits have been filed in Midland state district court in connection with the shigellosis outbreak that struck the Permian Basin last August and September, according to records in the district clerk's office.

Among the defendants named in the suits were Chili's Inc. and subsidiaries including Chili's Hamburger Grill and Bar. Also named were Taco Villa Inc., Creative Food N Fun Company and Comark.

The first of the most recent suits filed was Dec. 5, and the latest was filed Wednesday.

According to a Texas Department of Health investigation following the outbreak, more than 300 residents in the Basin were affected when a batch of shredded lettuce contaminated with the shigella bacteria was distributed to several restaurants, including Taco Villa in Odessa, Texas Burger in Midland and Chili's in Midland.

Officials said the lettuce was shipped Aug. 29 by Comark, a wholesale food distributor, to the restaurants. Creative Food N Fun Company owns Comark, according to a petition in one of the suits.

The suit filed against Taco Villa, Inc. by John M. Zalesny alleges that a taco, burrito, and order of french fries he bought at a restaurant location caused him to contract shigellosis, which caused physical suffering and caused "severe traumatic nervous shock"..."It is likely that the plaintiff will suffer from impaired earning capacity as long as he lives."

Zalesny's suit specifies no money damages, but asks for a jury trial.

In another suit, plaintiff Debra Van Auken Lloyd, who also contracted shigellosis, alleges Taco Villa Inc., Creative Food N Fun Company and Comark violated the Deceptive

Odessa commission OKs proposed rule for halfway houses

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A heated public hearing on a proposal to establish a halfway house for prison parolees in a former East 2nd Street motel failed to materialize Thursday during a meeting of the Odessa Planning and Zoning Commission meeting.

Debate of the issue was precluded when Commission Chairman Ronald Crain announced the five-member group would only consider a proposed ordinance that would set guidelines for establishing such facilities citywide.

However, after approving a proposed ordinance that will be recommended to the City Council, Crain allowed brief comments for and against location of a halfway house on East 2nd Street.

Former Ector County Sheriff Slim Gabrel, who operates an Army-Navy surplus store in the general area of the proposed halfway house, told Planning and Zoning Commission members he opposes placement of such a facility "anywhere close enough to Odessa where you would ever read about it in the newspaper."

Gabrel indicated 20 miles outside the city limits would be too close.

Crain accepted a petition bearing 510 names opposing the facility from Marge Brawley, who resides a few blocks from the proposed facility.

Carl Bing Jr., owner of Bing's Auto Sales, 1302 E. 2nd St., told commission members he believes "we need to bring into Odessa anything to help the economy," but because of a massive investment and people residing near the proposed halfway house he opposes location of the facility at the old Sands Motel, 1401 E. 2nd St.

The controversy arose when Walter and Jaye Young approached the Planning and Zoning Commission last August with a proposal to set up a halfway house that would serve as a detention center for state prison parolees.

As opposition to the plan surfaced, commission members found the city had no ordinance to govern establishment of such a facility. One of those opposing the East 2nd Street location of the halfway house was, and is, Sam Gonzalez, owner of Manuel's Crispy Tacos restaurant, 1404 E. 2nd St. Gonzalez also sits as a member of the City Planning and Zoning Commission.

The planning body Thursday approved a proposed ordinance that will now be recommended to the City Council for consideration.

The proposed ordinance would require anyone seeking to establish a detention center for prison parolees to obtain a specific use permit from the city.

Such facilities would be allowed only in areas zoned as light or heavy commercial, or light or heavy industrial. Such halfway houses would be required to have a minimum of 10 public parking spaces plus one for each employee.

The ordinance also stipulates a separation of at least one mile between halfway houses.

A halfway house could be no closer than 500 feet to any single- or multiple-family dwelling or any home for the elderly.

According to Judy Miller, approval of the ordinance by City Council members could block granting of a specific use permit for the East 2nd Street halfway house proposed by the Youngs.

The proposed location may be within one mile of an existing halfway house, Alternative House II, that has been located at 415 N. Texas St. for the past 4½ years.

Ms. Miller also indicated the proposed location may be within 500 feet of residential dwellings.

Mrs. Young thanked Planning and Zoning Commission members for passing an ordinance that sets guidelines for facilities such as she and her husband propose and said they would be back after the council acts on the ordinance.

Utility adopts new name: TU Electric

From Staff Reports

DALLAS — A new corporate identity, "TU Electric," and a new logo are being adopted by Texas Utilities Electric Company.

The company, which serves more than two million customers in Texas, was formed in 1984 by the merger of Dallas Power and Light, Texas Electric Service Company, Texas Power and Light and Texas Utilities Generating Companies.

The four companies kept their historic names, and became divisions of the new company.

According to TU Electric, a number of functions performed by the four divisions have been consolidated, and organizational changes designed to improve efficiency are ongoing. Use of a single name will help save money and customer service.

The transition to the new name and logo will be gradual, according to the company. In many cases, the change will be made only when existing equipment is replaced.

Annual judging of livestock begins Saturday at County Exhibit Building

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Judging of lambs, steers and swine in the 38th annual Midland County Livestock Show will begin Saturday in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

The livestock, including about 40 calves, 115 swine, 125 lambs, rabbits, chickens and goats, will be exhibited by 200 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America boys and girls in Midland County.

Rabbits, chickens and goats will be judged at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Closing out the show will be the auction of about 120 premium calves, pigs and lambs at 7 p.m. Monday. Calling the auction will be Tommy Marricle of Snyder.

Jim Mazurkiewicz, the Brazos County agent, will judge the steers at 1 p.m. Saturday.

"He judged last year," said Charlie Green, president of the Midland County Livestock Association which sponsors the show, "and everybody liked him so well. He's good with kids. He talks with them and tells them the reasons why they were not first or 10th." Green said that the exhibitors appreciate the explanations. Mazurkiewicz, the former Ector County agricultural agent, is stationed at Bryan-College Station where he is the Brazos County agent.

Lamb judge Kyle Smith of Seminole is "well known in sheep judging in Texas," Green said. "He's well thought of as a sheep judge by breeders, exhibitors, 4-H and FFA instructors. He satisfies all of them pretty well."

Smith, who is the Gaines County agricultural agent, will judge sheep at 8 a.m. Saturday.

Seth Ralston, the Castro County agent, will judge the swine at 3 p.m. Saturday. "He's in the pig business himself," noted Shane Lowrie, assistant Midland County agricultural agent. "So, he has quite a few dealings with pigs. He's pretty well qualified."

And judging the goats, rabbits and chickens will be Robert Berry, a retired plant pathologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Lubbock.

"If there's a Mr. Rabbit in West Texas, it's Mr. Robert Berry," Green said.

Green said the 4-H and FFA livestock projects are "just vehicles" by which youngsters learn to "become good, useful, contributing citizens."

The projects help the youths to "develop their abilities to manage their own finances." The youngsters feed, train, show and offer their premium animals for sale in the auction and then invest proceeds — any profits — from the sale. The 1986 auction grossed $90,000 for the youngsters, and the 1985 auction, which set the existing sale record, brought in $105,500.

"If you get out there and work, the rewards will come to you as a result of that," Green said of the philosophy behind the 4-H and FFA projects.

The animals in the show are not pets, Green noted.

"These are animals that represent an edible product. They are meat animals," he said. "The judges are making the best guesses that those animals will produce the best percentage of high-priced meat, which are lean cuts of meat and less fat."

Indictment hangs over woman for five years

HAWLEY, Texas (AP) — Barbara Sharp had been under an indictment accusing her of murder in the strangulation death of her husband for more than five years when she finally had her day in court.

Mrs. Sharp, 63, was given a probated sentence after she agreed to plead guilty to a charge of voluntary manslaughter before District Judge Quay Parker.

Quinn Sharp was found dead at his home April 5, 1981. His wife was indicted a month later and she and her lawyer agreed a month after that to waive the state's Speedy Trial Act, which requires a trial within 90 days of an indictment.

Ms. Sharp says she can now get on with her life after spending five years under indictment.

"That hung over me for five years, not knowing what was going to happen from one day to the next," Ms. Sharp said Thursday.

She said that while she was under indictment, she could not find a job nor could she receive most forms of government assistance. She survived on donations from her neighbors and Hawley churches.

"Not having that hanging over my shoulders is a big relief," she said.

Ms. Sharp was given a "deferred adjudication" sentence, meaning that if she commits a misdemeanor or felony crime, Parker would be required under state law to sentence her to prison time for the voluntary manslaughter conviction. The conviction carries a prison term ranged from two to 20 years.

Police seek men who held family hostage

McGREGOR, Texas (AP) — Police in Central Texas were searching today for three men who sent a bank president to his bank twice for money while they held his family hostage, authorities said.

Authorities said the men were waiting at the home of Mike Beard, president of the First National Bank of McGregor, when the family returned home about 8 p.m. Thursday.

The men wore ski masks and were armed with a shotgun, a handgun and a knife, said a police dispatcher who asked not to be identified.

"It's (the money) all under time locks, and he could only get a little money," the dispatcher said. She said several household items were also taken from the Beard home.

At the time Beard was being sent to the bank, the dispatcher said, all available emergency vehicles had responded to a fire at a vacant house.

"It was set in order to keep the police and fire department away from what was happening," she said.

Vicki Beard, the banker's wife, told the Waco Tribune-Herald that when the family arrived home, her husband and two of their children, ages 4 and 2, went into their house, while she and their 8-month-old baby went to the home of their neighbors, the Don Cantrells, for a visit.

Gramm confident Stacy Dam will receive permit

SAN ANGELO (AP) — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm says he's confident that the Stacy Dam and reservoir will soon be awarded a construction permit.

"I think I would not be taking a great risk to say Stacy will become a reality," he said.

Gramm, a Republican from College Station, spoke at a news conference Thursday in San Angelo.

At the conference were Owen Ivie, executive director of the Colorado River Municipal Water District which will build the dam; John Curry, chairman of the CRMWD board's long-range planning committee; and Col. Albert Gennetti, head of the Fort Worth District office of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The corps has jurisdiction over all waterways.

The reservoir would be located at the confluence of the Colorado and Concho rivers 35 miles southeast of Ballinger. Gramm applauded the fact that the project will be funded entirely with local funds instead of federal dollars.

The project had been threatened by environmental concerns that the construction would harm the habitat of the Concho water snake. However, agreements were reached between the Colorado River Municipal Water District and the Environmental Protection Agency.

Gramm said those agreements may set a precedent for future environmentally related agreements.

"I hope this is a pattern that will be followed all over the country, where the interests of wildlife and people blend together," he said.

The agreements, close to being concluded and published in the Federal Register, are expected to set a designation of certain areas around the dam as habitats for the snake, Gramm said.

Judges focus on those areas, such as loins and rear-ends, where high-priced cuts of meat are found. They decide which animals would yield the "most valuable carcass."

A new feature of the 1987 livestock show will be in the auction in which Midland Jaycee Vicky Welch and other Jaycees will be giving red bandannas to buyers in the auction.

"Maybe they (bidders) will get caught up in the spirit of things," Green said.

However, due to the economic slump, Green said that some buyers will be "cutting back a little" on their bids. And, he noted, some businessmen who bought animals in last year's auction are no longer in business.

"We are extremely grateful for the people who have supported the show year in and year out."

The conference annually attracts more than 500 recovering alcoholics and their friends and spouses from throughout Texas and neighboring states.

AA speakers at the conference usually "tell their stories" — their lives in active alcoholism and their renewed lives in AA, a spiritual fellowship.

Speakers in Alanon, a spiritual program for non-alcoholics who suffer from the effects of alcoholism in the lives of their families and friends, also will tell of their recovery from the effects of the disease of alcoholism.

AA speakers will include Ray V. of Hogansville, Ga., at 8 p.m. Friday; Willie B. of Spring, Texas, at 11 a.m. Saturday; Ed. C. of McLean, Va., at 8 p.m. Saturday, and Don P. of Aurora, Colo., at 10 a.m. Sunday.

Members of AA use only their first names and initials from their last names to assure their anonymity.

A night-owl AA meeting will be held Friday night.

Alanon speakers will include Martha C. of Virginia Beach, Va., at 10 a.m. Saturday.

The meeting for Alateens, teenagers who are in a recovery program, will be at 2 p.m. Saturday.

The annual AA conference dance will be held following the Saturday night meeting.

Hospitality rooms for fellowship, food and coffee will be open except during meeting AA times during the course of the conference.

Border Patrol chief to use new technology

McALLEN (AP) — The man with a new congressional mandate to control the nation's borders said Thursday he will use additional manpower, equipment and technology to accomplish his mission.

Hugh Brien, chief of the U.S. Border Patrol since September, was in the Rio Grande Valley for four days this week to meet agents and discuss with them how the patrol will implement an immigration reform act signed into law Nov. 6.

"We're taking a three-pronged approach — we'll have an increase in personnel of approximately 1,000 positions, with increases in equipment and technology," said Brien, who began his career with the Border Patrol 27 years ago in Brownsville.

"We must fulfill a congressional mandate under the new law, which says we will have control of the border," Brien said.

The legislation also includes amnesty and possible citizenship for aliens who can document they have been in the United States since 1982. Another section subjects employers to civil fines and criminal penalties for knowingly hiring illegal aliens.

"The mandate that Congress has given us is like a three-legged stool — it's a balance of legalization, sanctions and control of the border. If one of them is missing, you're not serving the purpose.

"I think we have to get a message out to employers...to in fact persuade them to abide by the law and I think most will abide by the law," he said.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service, of which the patrol is a part, has established a new position of commissioner for employer relations to help educate employers about the legislation, Brien said.

An educational period ends in May, when agents will begin giving first offenders warnings. Warnings will no longer be given beginning in May 1988, when the full penalties take effect.

Brien said it was too early to say what type of businesses would be targeted for investigation of possible violations of the law.

PDAP holds annual training program for counselors

Woman files $2.5 million suit against local doctor

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 42-year-old Midland woman has filed a $2.5 million malpractice suit against a Midland physician she claims was so negligent in the surgery he performed on her that he left a hole in her stomach, according to records in the Midland County Clerk's office.

In the suit, plaintiff Joann Lopez alleges the care and treatment of N.S. Rao, M.D., following an operation for a hernia, caused her to suffer necrosis, or the death of local tissue caused by injury or disease.

Among the allegations is "plaintiff advised the defendant that the necrosis had broken loose resulting in a large gaping hole in the plaintiff's abdominal area."

Damages are asked for "physical pain and mental anguish," Ms. Lopez has already suffered and is likely to suffer in the future; diminished earning capacity, past and future; and "gross disfigurement to her body."

According to the suit, the plaintiff requests a jury trial.

According to John Pratt, attorney for Ms. Lopez, the amount of damages is not extraordinarily high considering the situation.

"In this particular case this lady has been severely damaged," Pratt said this morning from his Odessa office. "She has an actual hole in her stomach, and at one time it was big enough to put both of your hands through."

Pratt said he is also considering a suit against the Midland County Hospital District.

Rao's attorney, Charles Tighe of Midland, could not immediately be reached for comment.

"She was complaining of abdominal pain going in," Pratt said. "He (Rao) operated, but not quickly enough, in our opinion."

Pratt said Rao also prescribed penicillin to Ms. Lopez, even though she told him she was allergic to the antibiotic.

Pratt said the woman, ironically a registered nurse, is still working, but he is appalled by her condition.

"I have never seen anyone with a hole in her stomach," he said. 'It is just incredible."

Late registration for MC semester begins Monday

From Staff Reports

Late registration for Midland College's spring semester begins on the first day of classes Monday.

About 2,750 students have registered and will be attending classes, with several hundred more expected to enroll late.

Persons planning to take full course loads of up to five classes must register no later than Jan. 26, while persons desiring to enroll for three classes or less may do so until Feb. 3.

Late registration is conducted in the Office of Student Services, Administration Building, between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. Monday through Thursdays and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Fridays.

"Although late registration continues through the twelfth class day, we urge prospective students to sign up as quickly as possible," said Dee Windsor, associate dean of students and registrar. "First, some of the classes they want to take may be closed due to capacity enrollment, and secondly,...if they wait too long it will be difficult for them to catch up with the missed classwork."

Information about classes which still have vacancies may be obtained by calling 685-4501.

Spring course bulletins are available at all Midland banks, the Chamber of Commerce,and the Midland County Library.

U.S. agriculture trade

In 1985, U.S agriculture exports stood at $31.2 billion -- the lowest since 1978. In the face of a sharp export decline from 1984 levels, imports of farm products rose to $19.7 billion -- the highest since 1978. For fiscal year 1986 to date (Oct. '85 through May '86), exports stand at $19.1 billion and imports at $14.3 billion.

'Bristle tails' survive in home environment

Minzenmayer

Silverfish are primitive (older than cockroaches), wingless insects that are ½-inch long when fully grown. They are covered with silvery scales, are flattened and somewhat "carrot" shaped. Three long, slender "attennae-like" appendages project from the end of the abdomen, giving them the name "bristle tails."

Silverfish are tropical insects that are able to survive in the environment man creates in his homes. They are found living in warm (71-90 degrees), moist locations and are most often found damaging books, cloth and sometimes dried meats or dead insects. They seem especially fond of the sizing on books and paper as well as the glues and pastes found on wallpaper, labels and paper products.

The female lays eggs singly or two to three at a time, often depositing them in crevices or under objects. The female molts after laying a batch of two or three eggs and may shed her skin as many as 50 times after becoming an adult. The eggs hatch in about 43 days at 72-90 degrees. The young silverfish look exactly like the adults, except smaller and eat the same foods. Under ideal conditions, they molt every two or three weeks and grow to adults in three to four months. Silverfish are unlike other insects in that they molt after becoming adults. They live a long life of up to three years.

Silverfish are easily controlled with carefully applied residual insecticide sprays and dusts, including beniocarb, chlorpyrifos, diazinon, DDVP, malathion, pyrethrins, propoxur and silica gel. Care should be taken to treat wall voids, cracks and crevices and other suspected harborage areas thoroughly. The same careful application of residual insecticides used for cockroach control is needed to effectively control silverfish. Sanitation is helpful, but may not greatly reduce the problem because these pests feed on so many paper products.

Milk producers want tougher regulations on pizza cheese

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — No matter how you slice it, National Pizza Week could be better, as far as the National Milk Producers Federation is concerned.

Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng has proclaimed Jan. 18-24 as a time to reflect on pizza's contribution to the American farmer. A kickoff luncheon was held Thursday in the Agriculture Department.

Meanwhile, the federation, which represents thousands of dairy farmers and their co-ops, says Lyng has stalled too long on deciding whether to adopt tougher federal regulations aimed at curbing the use of imitation cheese and substitutes in frozen pizzas.

The first National Pizza Week was a year ago when the National Restaurant Association asked USDA to lend it official status by issuing a proclamation, signed by Lyng's predecessor John R. Block.

Ron Buckhalt, director of USDA's office of public liaison, said the association was so pleased by the attention paid to pizzas that it asked Lyng to "dust off the old proclamation" and reissue it this year.

Buckhalt said the luncheon ceremony was intended to pay tribute to the pizza trade, which serves an estimated $11 billion to $14 billion worth of U.S. farm commodities to consumers each year, not counting the frozen pizza industry.

The pizza festivities were greeted with mixed emotions by the National Milk Producers Federation, which has been trying for years to get a final decision from USDA on the use of imitation cheese and substitutes in the manufacture of frozen pizza.

Doni Dondero, a spokeswoman for the federation, said in an interview that National Pizza Week would be an approriate time for Lyng to announce a decision on the regulatory plan, which was formally proposed Aug. 5, 1983, after 10 years of lobbying by dairy interests.

The federation wants the USDA to adopt the tougher rules included in the 1983 proposal. Pizzas sold in restaurants and pizzerias would not be affected, only the frozen kind.

Under the proposal, frozen meat pizzas would have to contain at least 12 percent cheese, at least half of which would have to be natural cheese.

Current rules define pizza as "a bread base meat food product with tomato sauce, cheese and meat topping" but do not define cheese or specify a minimum amount. The proposal also would require new labeling to call consumer attention to the use of imitation cheese or substitutes.

The USDA held hearings and reviewed nearly 5,600 public comments on whether pizza rules should be altered.

"The same things are true today that were true then," Ms. Dondero said. "And that is, people buy frozen pizzas and have an expectation that they are getting a product that has all real cheese. They don't have the slightest notion that they're getting an imitation or substitute...and that is real consumer deception."

Makers of frozen pizza contend the proposal would lead to higher costs for consumers by forcing them to switch to an all-cheese recipe.

Department officials said the imitations and substitutes often employ imported casein, a milk derivative, which is less costly in pizza manufacturing.

Asked about Ms. Dondero's comments, Buckhalt said he did not know the status of the cheese proposal. "I'm not involved in that one," he said. "I don't know what will be decided."

Buckhalt said National Pizza Week is "a staged event, it's a fun time, nothing heavy."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A preliminary report by the Agriculture Department showed milk production last year was record high and about in line with previous forecasts.

The department's Agricutural Statistics Board said Wednesday that milk production in 21 selected dairy states, which account for 85 percent of the U.S. production, totaled 9.77 billion pounds in December, 3 percent less than the final month of 1985.

Officials said that if milk production in the remaining 29 states which are not surveyed each month was in line with the 21 that were surveyed, total U.S. milk production in 1986 was a record of nearly 144.9 billion pounds, up 1 percent from the previous high in 1985.

Department economists had predicted that 1986 milk production would rise about 1 percent from the previous record, due to heavy production in the first half of last year. In the second half, declines were reported as a result of the government's whole-herd buyout or dairy termination program designed to reduce surplus milk production.

The decline in milk production is expected to continue in 1987, at least until Sept. 30 when the buyout program ends. In all, according to USDA economists, this year's milk production could decline 1 percent to 3 percent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — High-quality U.S. beef and seafood are being promoted at the America's Cup races in Perth, Australia, the Agriculture Department says.

The department's Foreign Agricultural Service said an agreement was reached to permit regular shipments of U.S. top-grade beef to be imported for the event.

"The high-quality beef is intended to be used in high-visibility promotions in five-star restaurants and for special events in Perth during the America's Cup races," the agency said Wednesday in a brief report. "In addition, U.S. soft shell and Alaskan king crabs will also be promoted."

EARNEST KIKER

Gardeners can start fruit, vegetable transplants not available at nurseries

Kiker

It will be time to set our garden transplants before you know it. Although nurserymen try to stock representative varieties of vegetables and flowers during the spring garden rush, it's not possible for even the largest nursery to have every variety. For this reason, you may want to start your own transplants.

The 1987 mail order nursery catalogs are arriving at a steady rate. View them and make purchases with a purpose. Inexperienced gardeners (or those unfamiliar with the Texas climate) should not waste money on seeds that have no chance of blooming or coming to fruit in Texas. Experienced gardeners may want to try new and different varieties in addition to the old standards. Restraint is not easy when you look at page after page of pure horticultural perfection, but remember that ordering seed is the easy part.

Sow seed for your transplants at the proper time. Some transplants, such as cabbage, broccoli, lettuce, green onions and spinach, can be set in the garden four to five weeks before the last frost. Now is the time to sow the seeds of these early transplants.

Use a soilless, or commercial potting mix, available at nurseries. Expandable peat pellets also work well. Germination temperatures should be near 70 degrees during the day and 65-70 degrees at night.

Seeds can be started in milk cartons, cake pans, flower pots or any other container in which holes can be punched in the bottom for drainage. Thoroughly moisten the planting medium and evenly space the seed on top. Cover lightly, re-water and then enclose the container in a plastic bag. Keep the plastic-covered container out of direct sunlight or it will overheat.

When seeds begin to sprout, gradually remove the bag during a several day period (this lessens the shock) and water more often.

Most would-be transplant growers make two big mistakes. They start seed too early and they don't provide sufficient light for the developing seedlings. Flourescent grow lights help overcome this problem. The lights must be within four inches of the seedling leaves to be of much benefit.

In mid-February sow tomato, eggplant, pepper and flower seeds. You may want to try these tomato varieties in comparison plantings with your usual ones: Spring Giant, Early Girl, Park's Whopper, Floramerica, Big Set, Super Fantastic, Celebrity and President. The results may be enlightening.

Sowing small-seeded annuals directly in the bed usually ends in failure and frustration. For this reason, start your own transplants of alyssum, moss rose, fibrous rooted begonia, petunia, cockscomb, impatiens and coleus. Move your transplants to their final location when they are of adequate size (at least three to five true leaves) and conditions are suitable for outdoor plant growth.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇

The obvious suit to develop first is not necessarily the right suit. This hand, constructed by Eddie Kantar, is an object lesson.

Note North's rebid. Since two spades was retrogressive he chose the jump rebid, and South had nowhere to go other than three no trump.

After the lead of the jack of diamonds, your first chore is to count your tricks. You start with six top tricks, so you have to develop three more. Which suit are you going to tackle first?

If your answer is the club suit, you must have miscounted. At best, you can develop two extra tricks in clubs (barring Q-J bare), and that will still leave you a trick short. Spades offers a much better chance.

That also tells you where to win the first trick. To develop and bring in the long spades, you need as many entries as possible to dummy. So win the first trick in hand and lead the ten of spades. Since you expect to surrender at least two tricks in the suit, you must find a 4-2 split.

If West covers, win and drive out the remaining honor. As the cards lie, he will play low. You do the same from dummy, and East's king wins. Let's presume East wins and returns a diamond. Win on the table, cash the ace of spades and continue with the jack. Regardless of what the defenders do, your contract is assured since the ace of clubs is still on the board as an entry. By tackling spades, you have increased your black-suit tricks to six. Had you played on clubs, you would have realized only five.

'Wizard of Oz' Scarecrow dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ray Bolger, the last surviving member of the whimsical foursome that skipped down the Yellow Brick Road in the classic film "The Wizard of Oz," has died less than a week after his 83rd birthday.

Bolger

Bolger, the lean and limber actor and dancer whose career spanned six decades, died at a nursing home Thursday from complications of cancer, said family spokesman Barry Greenberg. Bolger had celebrated his birthday Saturday.

"Now, Dorothy and her friends are back together again," said Jack Haley Jr., whose father played the Tin Man to Bolger's Scarecrow in the 1939 movie. Dorothy was portrayed by Judy Garland, who died in 1969, two years after Bert Lahr, who played the Cowardly Lion. Jack Haley Sr. died in 1979.

Bolger, who appeared in more than a dozen movies, preferred to think of himself as a comedian rather than a dancer.

"I was hired as a comedian in my first show and I'm still a comedian," he once said. "I became a dancer in self-defense. I was doing a comedy monologue and didn't know how else to get off, so I danced off."

"The Wizard of Oz," in which he portrayed the brave man of straw in search of a brain, was his favorite film. But he said he had no idea the movie would become a classic.

"I knew that I was taking part in a strange kind of adventure," he said. "Everything had to be invented for the picture — the effects, the sound, the Technicolor. It was all new. But when the reviews came out, it was a terrific disappointment. The picture got terrible notices.

"It was only when 'The Wizard of Oz' came into the home with television that it redeemed itself. Then it was no longer a picture, it was an institution. After all, 'The Wizard of Oz' carries the message that there's no place like home."

Raymond Wallace Bolger was born in Boston in 1904.

He said he became interested in dance after stepping all over his date at a senior prom.

He first performed in an amateur show put on by the insurance company where he worked. He avidly attended the theater, and picked up pointers on tap from a night watchman. He was fired for dancing in the halls.

Bolger continued studying dance and by 1924 was in vaudeville, where he met Gwendolyn Rickard, whom he married in 1929. He spent two years on Broadway in "George White's Scandals of 1931," and got good reviews in "Life Begins at 8:40."

Stardom came in 1936, when he appeared in "On Your Toes," which included the celebrated and exhausting dance number "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue." His later films included "The Great Ziegfeld," "Rosalie," "Sweethearts" and "Sunny."

He later returned to Broadway for appearances in several shows. His television career began with the ABC musical comedy show "Where's Raymond" from 1953-54, followed by "The Ray Bolger Show" from 1954-55 and NBC-TV's "Washington Square" in the late '50s.

He took his show on the road for months each year well past middle-age, no longer lean but delighting audiences with his soft-shoe and tap routines.

In 1980, the year he was elected to the Theater Hall of Fame, he played a dour Catholic Church dignitary in the movie "The Runner Stumbles."

A funeral Mass is tentatively scheduled for Monday at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Beverly Hills, Greenberg said. He is survived by his wife. The couple had no children.

Jackson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Jackson is making two new Pepsi commercials in an estimated $10 million, multi-year deal.

The new spots will be Jackson's first solo appearance for Pepsi, and the first since he and his brothers appeared for the soft-drink company in 1984.

One of the new commercials will appear on the Feb. 24 Grammy telecast. Jackson also will do a Spanish version, Pepsi-Cola Co. spokesman Ken Ross said Thursday.

The singer has signed a three-year contract with Pepsi that will pay him more than the $5 million he received three years ago and less than a reported $15 million. "It's about in the middle," Ross said.

Jackson suffered burns during the filming of the 1984 ads when some rigged explosions went awry.

HONOLULU (AP) — Los Angeles Lakers superstar Kareem Abdul-Jabbar has formed his own record company and says he wants to be a full-time promoter of jazz when he leaves basketball.

Cranberry Records' first signed artist is pianist Kenny Kirkland, who has played with Wynton Marsalis and Sting.

Abdul-Jabbar said in a recent interview he planned to showcase his recording artists in Hawaii, where he lives part time. He was named to the Hawaii Jazz Preservation Society's board of directors this week.

"I've always loved the music," said Abdul-Jabbar, whose father, Ferdinand Alcindor, played jazz trombone. "It's been a passion."

Bennett

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Tony Bennett has filed a $100 million countersuit against a woman who alleged in a lawsuit that he gave her herpes.

Bennett said in his lawsuit filed Thursday that Linda Feldman disgraced and discredited him in a $90 million lawsuit she filed in state court shortly before Thanksgiving charging that he gave her herpes during a seven-month affair in 1985.

In his lawsuit, the singer demanded that Ms. Feldman submit to a physical examination.

Composer won't let 'Gentle on My Mind' be used in ads

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Composer John Hartford vows he'll never allow his popular song, "Gentle on My Mind," to be played in a television commercial as so many other former hit tunes are used.

"It seems to me that when a song gets identified with a product, it loses credibility," Hartford said. "I've never authorized it for a parody or commercials and I think possibly it may have had something to do with its staying power."

The sentimental 1967 song has been recorded by more than 400 people, with Glen Campbell's version the best known. It's been performed at least 4.4 million times, making it the second most performed song licensed by Broadcast Music, Inc., one of the two major performing rights organizations. Paul McCartney's "Yesterday" is No. 1.

"It's just a love song," said Hartford. "It's what it means to you. Once a song is done, it's unto itself and means different things to different people.

"I just wrote it. I didn't ever intend to record it. It was like a stream of consciousness."

Hartford, whose own recorded version of the tune also was a hit, wrote the song in a back room of his mobile home in 20 minutes after seeing the movie "Dr. Zhivago."

"The lonesome feeling (in the movie) triggered a lot of things," the 49-year-old Hartford recalled in an interview. "It conjured up a lot of scenes in my memory. That's what came out.

"I was writing two or three songs a day as hard as I could, about everything and anything. If someone lit a candle or the phone rang, I wrote a song about it. I had no idea of the impact. I even tried to change the word 'gentle.' It seemed too sweet, too soft.

"I sang it for some people and noticed the reaction it got."

Hartford has just used his writing talents in another direction: He composed a poem for a new coffeetable book, "Steamboat in a Cornfield." It's about the steamboat, "Virginia," which ran aground in the Ohio River in 1910 in Willow Grove, W.Va.

A new album, "Annual Waltz," has just been released, many of its songs featuring 12 fiddles in three-part harmony.

He also does one-man band concerts, playing the banjo, fiddle and guitar while wearing a trademark black derby. He spices his show by dancing on an amplified piece of plywood.

"I'm not sure what it is. Irish step dancing is probably as close to being accurate as you can get," he said. "It just came to me. I'm not a legitimate dancer doing a legitimate, recognized style. Somebody told me it was a version of 'shuffle off to Buffalo.' "

In the summer, he spends an average of two days a week at the one thing that rivals music as his passion: riverboating. For the past several summers he's been piloting the Julia Belle Swain between Peoria, Ill., and Utica, Ill. This summer the stern-wheeler will run between Galena, Ill., and Le Claire, Iowa.

And topping off a five-year project, he's just finished designing a banjo, for commercial sale, with a wood tone ring instead of the traditional metal.

"This gives it a fuller sound," the lanky Hartford said in his home overlooking the Cumberland River.

Hartford, who won two Grammy awards for "Gentle on My Mind" and another for his album "Mark Twang," was born in New York City where his father was a medical intern. The family moved to St. Louis shortly after his birth.

"I was born 'on the road' and have spent my whole life traveling," he said. "That's natural."

Growing up in St. Louis, he taught himself to play the five-string banjo and learned the guitar and fiddle.

Afghan leaders still unsure if cease-fire will hold

WORLD

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — A senior official said 800 Moslem rebel units have laid down their arms since the government called for a truce, but that it is too early to determine if the day-old unilateral cease-fire is holding.

Internal Security Minister Gulam Faruq Yakubi, one of several top Afghan officials who met with foreign reporters Thursday, claimed that debates over the cease-fire among Moslem rebels leaders show "the power of our proposal."

The Marxist Afghan government announced the cease-fire Jan. 1, and it took effect at midnight Wednesday. It is to last six months if the guerrillas honor it.

The government said all Afghan soldiers and their Soviet support forces were withdrawn from field positions to permanent military bases, and will not fight the guerrillas unless fired upon.

No fighting was evident Thursday immediately around the capital and a military officer who identified himself only as Col. Fakhri said there were no reports of fighting elsewhere in the country.

However, Western diplomats based on Kabul, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there was small-arms fire in the Kabul area and sporadic, heavier exchanges at Kandahar in southwest Afghanistan.

In Pakistan, guerrilla spokesmen claimed dozens of Afghan soldiers and militiamen were killed or wounded in attacks Thursday on government positions in eastern and southwestern provinces.

The reports could not be idependently verified and the Moscow-based group of reporters flown here at the government's arrangement on Thursday was kept in the capital.

The leaders of seven main guerrilla groups individually have rejected the cease-fire, but were meeting in Peshawar, Pakistan, to discuss it. The guerrillas began fighting after Communists seized power in April 1978 in a coup, and have said they will not stop until the estimated 115,000 Soviet troops aiding the government leave and the government is ousted.

In Washington, the State Department said undersecretary Michael H. Armacost was going to Pakistan to coordinate a response to the truce call and a possible political settlement in the war.

The security minister told reporters 800 insurgent bands had laid down their arms since the cease-fire announcement on New Year's Day. He did not give a total number of fighters, but said one band that surrendered in Herat province had 1,500 fighters.

Defense Minister Mohammad Rafi said there are about 1,300 "counter-revolutionary bandit" groups with a total of about 100,000 fighters.

Rafi and some of his officers displayed a U.S.-made Stinger anti-aircraft missile and a Blowpipe rocket, which he said were supplied to the insurgents by the United States through Pakistan, where guerrillas maintain training camps among the 3 million Afghan refugees.

Reports from several sources have said the rebels are using sophisticated U.S. missiles, and losses of Soviet and Afghan aircraft appear to have increased in recent months. The news conference did not last long enough for reporters to ask detailed questions about the guerrillas' weapons or other aspects of the insurgency.

WORLD in brief

Work on Truman statue approaches completion

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Hoisted upright by ropes, a bronze statue of former President Truman has reached the final stages of reconstruction after it was blown up by a terrorist bomb almost 10 months ago.

The future of the 12-foot memorial has stirred a bitter public debate over America's role insteering post-World War II Greece away from Communism. Among those joining in the fracas was New York Mayor Edward I. Koch.

Pressured by an influential Greek-American organization, Premier Andreas Papandreou this week pledged that the statue would be returned to its original site in a prominent Athens square.

"The statue is a symbol of resistance to Communism by the Greek people. It is a bastion against Communism in this part of the world," said John Plumides, head of the American Hellenic Educational and Progressive Association, which commissioned and erected the statue in 1963.

Arms negotiators meet

GENEVA (AP) — Soviet and U.S. arms control negotiators held informal meetings today, a U.S. official said, but no details were released on the new round of superpower arms talks.

The spokesman for the U.S. team, Terry Shroeder, said today's meetings involved the three top negotiators from each side. He refuse to say when or where the meetings were held or how many sessions were scheduled.

The seventh round of negotiations in the 22-month-old talks began Thursday with a private lunch meeting between the two delegation heads, American Max Kampelman and the newly appointed Soviet envoy, Yuli Vorontsov.

Pollution plan criticized

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A leading ecology group said Thursday the government's new 100-point anti-pollution program was "far from sufficient" and was mostly a rehash of plans announced in the past but never put into practice.

Ecologists from the Mexican Ecology Movement, or MEM, said they would watch for signs in the next month that the government is serious about carrying out the program announced earlier this week.

If there are no indications of government action, "we ecologists will begin our own actions" in trying to close down the worst polluters in greater Mexico City, Antonio Cipres Villarreal, MEM president, told reporters.

The Department of Ecology and Urban Development program, called "100 Actions," includes 37 measures aimed at reducing air pollution, mostly generated by cars and factories, that plagues Mexico City year-round but especially in winter.

Filipino rebels battled

COTABATO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Troops pounded Moslem rebels with heavy artillery overnight and were fighting today with insurgents near a lake southeast of the city, military officers reported.

Police and military sources said the casuality toll in four days of fighting between security forces and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front, or MILF, had climbed to at least 15 dead with dozens injured.

President Corazon Aquino on Thursday rejected demands by another Islamic group, the Moro National Liberation Front, to suspend parts of the proposed constitution to win peace.

The MILF launched its attacks Tuesday because Mrs. Aquino had centered efforts to end the 14-year Islamic insurgency on the Moro National Liberation Front.

New capital proposed

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — President Raul Alfonsin accepted a draft plan Thursday for moving the capital to the northern fringe of windswept Patagonia, saying it will transform Argentina into "a new country."

The draft, prepared by a presidential commission, includes 750 square feet of drawings for the new capital, to be located in the twin cities of Viedma and Carmen de Patagones.

According to the report, 80,000 homes and other buildings will have to be constructed in the first stage of the move, from 1987 to 1989, to handle an expected population of 320,000 in the new federal district at the end of the decade.

The twin cities now have a combined population of about 50,000. They are at the mouth of the Rio Negro on the Atlantic coast, 600 miles south of Buenos Aires, the present capital.

64 escaped in 1986

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Sixty-four East Germans escaped across the heavily guarded border into West Germany during 1986, according to a Bonn government report.

The Interior Ministry's annual year-end report said 12 of the escapees were East German soldiers in uniform.

The report said East German soldiers foiled at least three escape attempts with gunfire during the year but the fate of those who tried to flee was unknown.

East German troops have standing orders to shoot when confronted with an escape attempt across the border between the two German nations.

Chaps survive scare from Howard Hawks

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland College defeated Howard College, 86-82, in a Western Junior College Athletic Conference thriller at the Chap Center Thursday, a game that was a lot closer than the final score indicates.

When Herman Henry strode to the line for a one-and-one free throw opportunity, it was 84-82 with one second to play. "The only thing I was thinking," said the 6-7 freshman from South Grand Prairie, "was that I had to make them."

As far as Howard Coach Larry Brown was concerned, the decisive played occurred when Midland tried to drive the basket with a two-point lead and only 10 seconds left.

"If we get the rebound or draw the foul — and I'd like to think if we had been playing in Big Spring it might have been called — we were going to call time and set up a play in hopes of tying it and sending it into overtime."

Tie it? The way Howard was sinking three pointers down the stretch, they might have won it.

Instead, MC came up with the ball in the frantic scramble and Henry drew the foul and sealed the Hawks' doom with his free throws.

MIDLAND led by 20 after Todd Duncan went on a seven point binge to make it 62-42 with 10 minutes left. It was 72-55 after Lincoln Minor drove the lane with less than six minutes to play.

In view of the Hawks' blistering finish down the stretch, MC Coach Jerry Stone was understandably upset. "We didn't play like a No. 7 team (MC's national ranking). Howard is a good team, quick. They had more hustle than we had.

"We didn't take care of the ball in the closing minutes and they forced us clear out of our offense."

"I just wasn't pleased with the way we played, but of course right after a game I see only the negative."

This is also a Howard team that is 10-9 for the season and now 3-3 in WJCAC.

"We have played the toughest non-conference schedule in the country," protests Brown. "We lost to San Jacinto, Tyler, McLennan, Kilgore and Midland, all strong teams, earlier in the year. Also we got two kids back at mid-semester, which has made a big difference, and we lost four games when our point guard was out with an injury."

KEVIN BRADSHER, who wound up with 31 points, keyed the Hawk rally, sinking three-pointers on three of his last four shots as the HC, which trailed 78-67 with 2:18 to play, quickly closed to 82-79 with 42 seconds remaining.

Bradsher, who missed practice this week with a pinched-nerve in his shoulder, is a 6-1 sophomore from Bryan, where Brown coached before coming to Howard this year.

"He's that kind of player. He'll go on streaks when his shooting is uncanny, as he did tonight." Brown said.

BILLY RAY Smith, the Chaps' 6-5½, 225-pound freshman from South Garland, scored 19 and Henry 14. Both were factors when it counted most. Smith was 4-for-4 in the last half and Henry scored 12 of his points in the final 20 minutes.

"After we got that 20 point lead, I guess we relaxed," said Smith.

Comparing NMJC, which handed MC its only defeat in 18 games this year, with Howard, Smith added, "Really, they are about the same. They don't have much height, but they are quicker than we are."

Midland, which upped its record to 4-1 in WJCAC, took a 35-20 lead into the second half after an opening 20 minutes in which MC was a dismal 16 of 38 and Howard was even worse with eight of 28 from field.

NMJC Coach Ron Black, whose Thunderbirds handed MC its only loss of the season 75-73 last month, had predicted Midland might have trouble with Howard. "They have the numbers to stay with Midland," he appraised.

"We told our kids we had a good chance to win," said Brown, "but the way they played in the first half, I wasn't sure we'd convinced them."

In the first half, it looked like both teams might have trouble breaking 50.

MINOR HAD 16 points, Mookie Blaylock 12 and Duncan 12 to go with the 33 from Smith and Henry. But MC made only two three pointers, both in the first half.

Despite a finish that left the crowd limp, Howard's lone lead came at 4-3 1:10 into the game. Duncan's three pointer put MC ahead and after the Hawks tied it at 6-6, they never again forged in front, trailing by as many as the 20 in the second half.

CHAPSTYQUES— MC travels to Snyder for Western Texas College Monday....Coach Jerry Stone's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Stone, Arkansas, Kansas, were on hand for the game....Chap reserve Juan Hewitt dropped out of MC....At times in the second half, MC's transition game was clicking on all fives with the MC finding the open man on 2-on-1 and 3-on-2 breaks to build up a big lead....

New Zealand defeats S&S

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — New Zealand shot ahead after Stars & Stripes' spinnaker collapsed on the second leg and went on to a 38-second victory and cut the U.S. boat's lead to 2-1 in the best-of-seven America's Cup challenger finals Friday.

In the defender finals, Kookaburra III enhanced its status as favorite with a one-sided 46-second victory over Australia IV to take a 2-0 lead in the best-of-nine competition. Kookaburra III won Thursday's race by a similarly convincing 1:34.

The next race in each series is scheduled for Saturday, unless a boat requests a lay day.

The successful challenger meets an Australian defender in a best-of-seven series for the America's Cup starting Jan. 31.

Stars & Stripes led by 21 seconds after Friday's first leg on the 24.1-mile Indian Ocean course with winds out of the southwest at 16 knots. But after that windward beat, disaster struck.

About 10 seconds after the spinnaker was set for the downwind run, the sail came down.

Dennis Conner's crew got a new spinnaker up in 70 seconds. But the damage had been done and New Zealand had a six-second lead at the second mark. It never trailed on the remaining six legs.

Stars & Stripes did come back near the end, cutting the margin from 29 seconds at the sixth mark to 15 seconds, at the seventh. The final leg was into the wind, the U.S. yacht's strength. But New Zealand skipper Chris Dickson matched Conner's tacks on the final leg, sailed in heavy winds of 25 knots that Conner prefers.

New Zealand flew a protest flag on the second leg, apparently because Stars & Stripes was sailing below its proper course — a straight line between his boat and the mark.

Gooden leads arbitration deluge

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets and Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees were among the deluge of 97 players who filed for salary arbitration Thursday before a midnight deadline.

A total of 106 of the 139 players eligible filed for salary arbitration this year. Last year, a total of 159 players filed, all but four on the final day.

Among those also filing Thursday were Toronto stars Jesse Barfield and George Bell, Willie McGee of St. Louis, Ron Darling and Kevin McReynolds of the Mets and Julio Franco of Cleveland.

By Monday, players and teams must submit their salary figures for consideration by an arbitrator, who picks one or the other. Negotiations are permitted until a decision is made and some hearings have ended abruptly when the two sides reached agreement while the arbitrator was considering his decision. Last year, only 35 cases went to the hearing stage, with the clubs winning 20 of them.

Hearing dates are from Feb. 5-15.

Both Gooden, the 1985 National League Cy Young winner, and Mattingly, the 1985 American League Most Valuable Player, filed for arbitration last year, but but both settled before their cases were heard.

Gooden is seeking a raise from his 1986 salary of $1.32 million after going 17-6 for the World Series champion Mets. Mattingly hit .352, second best in the AL, with 31 home runs and 113 runs batted in, and is hoping for a $2 million contract after making $1.375 million last year.

Barfield, who led the majors with 40 home runs and won a Gold Glove in right field, and Bell, who hit .309 with 31 homers and 108 RBI, are each said to be seeking in excess of $1 million next season. Both earned base salaries of $650,000 last year, plus performance bonuses.

Several players filed for arbitration for the second straight year. Those who won their cases in 1986 and filed Thursday were Marty Barrett of Boston, Frank Viola of Minnesota, Phil Bradley of Seattle, Brett Butler of Cleveland, Charlie Leibrandt of Kansas City and Ed Lynch of the Chicago Cubs. Los Angeles' Orel Hershiser, who won a $1 million contract last year, filed Wednesday.

Those who lost in 1986 and filed Thursday were Darling, McReynolds, Franco, Alvin Davis and Mike Moore of Seattle, Eddie Milner of Cincinnati, Gary Pettis of California, Jeff Dedmon of Atlanta and Tim Laudner of Minnesota. Major-league Wade Boggs of Boston, who lost his case last year and wound up with a $1.35 million contract, filed last week.

To be eligible for the arbitration process, a player must have completed three major league seasons.

Navratilova, Bird named top athletes

NEW YORK (AP) — Martina Navratilova, continuing her assault on the record book every time she steps onto the court, was named today as The Associated Press Female Athlete of 1986.

Basketball star Larry Bird of the Boston Celtics was named The Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year.

It is the second time in four years the world's No. 1-ranked tennis player has won the award. Navratilova also won in 1983.

This year, she polled 377 points to easily outdistance golfer Pat Bradley, who finished second in the nationwide balloting of sports writers and broadcasters with 240 points.

Finishing third was track star Jackie Joyner with 126 points, followed by distance runner Grete Waitz of Norway with 99; world figure skating champion Debi Thomas, 97; basketball star Cheryl Miller, 87; and distance runner Ingrid Kristiansen of Norway, 38.

Bird, who won the NBA's most valuable player award for the third consecutive year in 1986, edged the American League MVP Roger Clemens of the Boston Red Sox for the AP Athlete of the Year honor.

Bird was named on 60 of the 95 ballots cast by a nationwide group of sports writers and sportscasters.

Clemens, who had a 24-4 record in pitching the Red Sox to the American League pennant, was named on 63 ballots, but Bird had 30 first-place votes and 214 points based on five points for first, three for second and one for third. Clemens had 19 first-place votes and 189 points, while Mike Tyson, 20, who became the youngest heavyweight boxing champion in history, had 22 firsts and 186 points.

Five points were awarded for a first-place vote, three for second and one for third.

"It is always special to be picked for an award like this," Navratilova said in Melbourne, Australia, where she is competing in the Australian Open, when she learned of her selection. "Women's tennis has tended to be overshadowed by other sports only in Olympic years, and it's nice to keep it at the forefront, to keep the torch burning."

"I'll tell you, I can't vision myself playing for somebody else," Bird said Thursday.

4-5A turning into 'homer' league

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The District 4-5A basketball race still remains a mystery and probably will until the final gun sounds.

It looks like this league is going to be a "homer" league. Winning on the road is as hard as hitting an NBA three-pointer.

And that's why Odessa Permian is perched at the top of the loop with the only perfect 3-0 reading. Old Mojo is the only team to escape the hazards of road travel.

Midland Lee, who is open tonight, felt the home court edge of the Abilene Cooper Cougars Tuesday in a 54-51 loss to fall to 2-1. Midland High (1-2) pulled off a 68-63 upset over 1-1 San Angelo Tuesday.

LAST WEEK, Abilene High, who many thought might win the whole thing — and still might — lost on the road at San Angelo. Odessa High also lost to Lee on the road. Abilene Cooper lost on the road at Odessa High.

Permian is the only team to escape a road loss, defeating both Odessa High and Abilene High in overtime on foreign hardwood.

Following San Angelo's loss to Midland High Tuesday, Bobcat coach Scott Galloway said, "You're going to see a lot of this in this league this year. Whoever can win on the road is going to be in good shape. That's why I think Permian's win over Abilene High was one of the biggest games of the year and that one went to overtime.

"Permian is playing very well right now and I never did understand why all the polls picked us and Abilene High to win this league. They have three returning starters back and won the district championship a year ago. You can't buy that kind of leadership."

San Angelo will host Odessa High tonight, which doesn't bode well for the Bronchos.

Under the "home court" theory, things don't look bright for the Midland High Bulldogs, who travel to Abilene High. The Eagles are 0-2 in league play, but lost in overtime to Permian and by three points in San Angelo. The Eagles will be heard of before this race is over.

BUT A win by the Bulldogs, could vault Midland High back into the thick of the race with an important road victory of their own.

Permian will host Cooper tonight, which looks like that old Mojo will be 4-0 before the night is over.

And the "home court" theory is just fine as far as Lee coach Paul Stueckler is concerned since his Rebels face Permian in a key matchup Tuesday at Chaparral Center.

"I don't know if there is anything to that, but I hope it holds up Tuesday when we play Permian," said Stueckler.

But the Rebels will host Plainview Saturday at 7 p.m. at Chaparral Center in a non-conference game. Stueckler notes, "Plainview is tied for the league lead with Amarillo High at 3-1 and they are playing very well right now."

THE 4-5A girls aren't immune to the "home court" theory either. Here, however, San Angelo, Midland High and Lee have already established themseleves as the class of the league.

Still, MHS lost a key road game in San Angelo to drop from the league lead and Lee lost to both of those teams, losing to San Angelo at home in a key game that will make the Lady Rebels almost having to win in San Angelo later in the year.

Midland High's girls will host Abilene High at 8:30 p.m. today in Chaparral Center in hopes of keeping their foot in the playoff door. Tonight's game will start 30 minutes later than usual in a schedule change. San Angelo travels to Odessa High. Lee is open.

Former Chap saves No. 16 Sooners

Associated Press

The blocked shot that sealed the victory for Oklahoma over Kansas came from an unlikely source — point guard Ricky Grace, a star last year for Midland College.

The 16th-ranked Sooners led the No. 20 Jayhawks 76-74 Thursday night on a field goal by Tim McCalister with nine seconds to play.

Kansas still had a chance to tie, or win, and the last shot, a 3-pointer by guard Mark Turgeon, was blocked by the 6-foot-2 Grace.

"It was clean all the way," Grace said of his defensive play. "I saw him fake Mac and I just came over to help out."

"We were going for three. We were trying to hit the trailer, but Turgeon had a good shot," Kansas Coach Larry Brown, whose team was 1-for-3 on long-range shots before Turgeon's, said. "Grace made a super block."

Lest you think Grace is strictly a defensive specialist, the junior college transfer finished with eight points and 10 assists as Oklahoma improved to 11-3 overall and 1-1 in the Big Eight Conference. Kansas, which was led by Danny Manning's 21 points, fell to 9-5 and 2-1.

Grace got his chance at being a hero because of the rebounding of his teammates in the final seconds.

Oklahoma rebounded a missed Kansas shot with 1:15 to play and the score tied 74-74. The Sooners took two shots and missed them both. But each time they were able to get the rebound. After running 36 seconds off the 45-second clock, McCalister, who finished with 21 points, took his game-winner from the left side of the lane.

No. 1 UNLV 88, Cal-Santa Barbara 74

The top-ranked Runnin' Rebels got a slight scare by Cal-Santa Barbara before extending their unbeaten streak to 15 games.

College Basketball

The Gauchos, 6-6 overall and 1-2 in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, used a 13-1 run in the second half to take a 64-62 lead with 7:56 to play. But Mark Wade's layup put Nevada-Las Vegas back in front and the Runnin' Rebels were never headed.

Armon Gilliam led the Runnin' Rebels, 4-0 in the PCAA, with 25 points, while Freddie Banks added 20 including four of 11 shots from 3-point range.

Carrick DeHart and Brian Johnson led the Gauchos with 15 points each in the game played before a UCSB Campus Events Center record crowd of 6,214.

"I'm very happy to escape Santa Barbara with a win," Runnin' Rebels Coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "I was afraid our team might look past the Gauchos, but they always play us real tough. Although our intensity wasn't there all together, I hope it will be back for Saturday's game (at No. 16 Oklahoma)."

No. 4 Indiana 103, Wisconsin 65

Steve Alford made 7-of-8 3-point attempts, the only shots he took in the game, as he passed the 2,000-point mark for his career. The Hoosiers won their 10th consecutive game to improve to 13-1 overall and 4-0 in the Big Ten Conference. Two of Alford's 3-pointers came in Indiana's game-opening 12-0 run.

Indiana beat visiting Wisconsin, which was led by Trent Jackson's 21 points, for the 14th consecutive time as the Badgers fell to 10-8 and 0-5.

No. 7 DePaul 84, Loyola, Ill. 65

DePaul improved to 13-0 and posted the 1,000th victory in school history by beating its cross-town rival.

The Blue Demons used a 16-2 run at the start of the second half to overcome a 43-42 halftime lead by the Ramblers and open the game up.

Dallas Comegys scored 23 points for DePaul, while Kevin Edwards added 21 points and nine rebounds. Loyola, 7-7, was led by Bernard Jackson and Andre Moore with 18 points each.

No. 11 Temple 66, Penn State 49

Howard Evans scored a career-high 24 points, 17 in a 23-4 second-half run by Temple, which held a 59-29 lead with 9:25 to play.

The victory was the 27th in a row at McGonigle Hall for the Owls, 15-2 and 5-0 in the Atlantic 10 Conference. Penn State, which was led Paul Murphy's 14 points, fell to 8-4 and 2-2.

No. 15 Alabama 69, Louisiana State 65

Jim Farmer's 19 points included four free throws in the final minutes as the Crimson Tide won its ninth consecutive game. Louisiana State rallied from an 11-point first-half deficit to take a 46-44 lead with 11 minutes left. But Alabama, 12-2 and 5-0, went on a 12-2 run and was able to hold off the visiting Tigers' last-minute rally with Farmer's free-throw shooting.

No. 17 North Carolina State 75, Wake Forest 67

North Carolina State held a 57-38 lead with 12:31 left in the Atlantic Coast Conference game and was able to hang on for the victory. Bennie Bolton scored 14 of his 18 points in the first half for the Wolfpack as Wake Forest, which hit 11 of its first 14 shots, missed 12 of 15 from the field after a 22-22 tie and was never able to recover.

North Carolina State improved to 11-3 and 3-1, while Wake Forest, 8-5 and 0-3, lost its 20th consecutive conference game.

Vainisi, Bears split

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — The dismissal of Jerry Vainisi as general manager of the of Chicago Bears has caused a ripple on the lakefront, including some very emotional words from Coach Mike Ditka.

Vainisi, who served Chicago for 15 years in various capacities, was removed Thursday as general manager of the team that captured the Super Bowl last year.

"Fired is too harsh a word," said Michael McCaskey, president and chief executive officer of the Bears and grandson of the late George Halas, founder of the NFL club. "It was more a parting of ways."

Vainisi, 45, was originally hired by Halas in 1972 and served as controller, treasurer and club counsel. When Jim Finks resigned as general manager of the club in 1983, Halas named Vainisi as Finks' replacement.

"I feel very sorry for his wonderful family and his children," said Ditka, his voice breaking. "Jerry Vainisi is a class person. He's my best friend, and I and the players will miss him very, very much. He's respected in our business as one of the best and he was."

Vainisi and his wife, Doris, have five children. Ditka and Vainisi were close friends and partners in a downtown restaurant and night club.

Immediately, there was speculation on Ditka's future with the Bears, but McCaskey gave Ditka, who guided the team to a 32-4 record the last two seasons, a vote of confidence.

McCaskey said Thursday that a mutual decision had been reached by the two men as to a parting of the ways. But Vainisi's contract runs through mid-1988 and indications were he was not prepared to leave quite so soon.

"Based on Mr. McCaskey's statement, while I apparently no longer have the title of general manager, I will continue to serve the Bears to the best of my ability until this matter is resolved."

Lakers' defense rocks Warriors

NBA Roundup

Associated Press

James Worthy and Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 31 points apiece, but Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley talked about the Lakers' defense.

"The key to our game was defense," Riley said after the Lakers defeated the Golden State Warriors 129-109. "The double figures in blocked shots definitely played an important part."

The Lakers took a 106-95 lead in the fourth quarter after Byron Scott, who finished with 26 points, scored the Lakers' first seven points in a 9-2 run. And although the Warrors scored the next six points to cut the margin to 106-101 with 8:03 left in the game, Golden State could get no closer.

"We just had to go back to basics like we did in the first quarter," Scott said. "We had to pressure them, make them take shots they didn't want to take, and run."

THE LAKERS' defense blocked 13 shots, forced 19 turnovers and pulled down 36 of a possible 49 defensive rebounds.

Terry Teagle hit a 20-footer from the right of the key with 36 seconds left in the third period put the Warrors ahead for the first and only time in the game, 93-92. But Kurt Rambis' three-point play and Johnson's two free throws gave the Lakers a 97-93 lead after three quarters.

Then, when the Warriors pulled within five points late in the game, the Lakers went on a tear, Johnson feeding Worthy with a behind-the-head pass for a slam dunk to climax the run that gave the Lakers a 115-101 lead.

"It just didn't seem like anyone was serious," Warriors Coach George Karl said of his starters, who started slowly and were quickly removed. It was the bench, led by Teagle, Rod Higgins and Greg Ballard, that kept Golden State in the contest.

"Our bench has been a very good part of our team and will have to continue to be," Karl said. "They have been giving us more of a defensive lift than an offensive one."

Eric "Sleepy" Floyd led Golden State with 21 points, while Teagle added 16.

Rockets 107, Bulls 96

In Chicago, Akeem Olajuwon hit eight points in the final 4:31, and Robert Reid scored 26 points to lead Houston over the Bulls.

It was the Rockets' fourth straight victory, even though only eight players saw action for Houston following the suspensions of Lewis Lloyd and Mitchell Wiggins for drug use. The loss ended the Bulls' four-game winning streak.

Michael Jordan scored 43 points for Chicago.

Kings 120, Trail Blazers 118

Forward Eddie Johnson hit a three-point jumper from the right corner with three seconds left to boost Sacramento over visiting Portland. Seven seconds earlier, Johnson hit a 15-foot jump shot from the top of the key to give Sacramento a 117-116 lead.

Portland regained the lead with nine seconds remaining when guard Terry Porter sank a pair of free throws.

The victory snapped a four-game Sacramento losing streak. The Kings have lost 18 of their last 23 games.

Forward Otis Thorpe and guard Reggie Theus led Sacramento with 29 points apiece. Portland forward Kiki Vandeweghe paced the Trail Blazers with 37.

Hawks 130, Bucks 91

Glenn Rivers sank a 76-foot shot at the halftime buzzer as everything worked for Atlanta in its victory over Milwaukee.

Dominique Wilkins scored 32 points to lead the Hawks as Milwaukee never threatened after a 9-1 Atlanta run snapped a 4-4 tie.

The Hawks ran off streaks of six and seven points in the third quarter, building a 94-69 lead late in the period.

Kevin Willis finished with 28 points and Mike McGee added 23, while Rivers had 18 assists — 13 in the first half.

"Tonight, everything just went right for us," Rivers said. "We knew they were going to make us pass the ball. Usually when a team does that it gives us problems, but we worked on it today. Tonight I didn't have to look for the ball. I could distribute the ball all game long."

Ricky Pierce scored 19 points and Jerry Reynolds had 15 for the Bucks, who lost for the fourth time in five games.

Pacers 113, Bullets 105

Rookie Chuck Person scored 29 points, reaching double figures for the 14th consecutive game, as Indiana stopped Washington in Indianapolis.

The victory snapped the Pacers' three-game losing streak and a four-game winning strek by the Bullets.

Leading 88-78 after three quarters, the Pacers outscored Washington 8-2 to start the final period and were never seriously challenged again.

Moses Malone was used only sparingly in the second half, scoring just 13 points in 23 minutes of action for the Bullets, who also played much of the second half without Jeff Malone. He left the game with a back problem.

Suns 123, Jazz 107

Shifted to forward to replace the injured Larry Nance, Walter Davis scored a career-high 45 points as the Suns snapped a four-game losing streak by defeating visiting Utah.

Davis, a five-time All-Star, scored eight of his 10 second-period points in the final 48 seconds to erase a 54-53 deficit and give Phoenix a 61-55 halftime lead.

Davis had 10 more points in the third period and Alvan Adams added seven to put the Suns up 96-85 entering the final quarter.

Utah never got closer than nine from there, losing its third straight game.

Karl Malone paced the Utah with 27 points.

Eight players sign, skip arbitration process

Associated Press

The Kansas City Royals signed veteran Juan Beniquez and his 17-year-old son Thursday while the Boston Red Sox reached agreement with postseason star Dave Henderson hours before a deadline for filing for salary arbitration.

Among the eight players signing Thursday was Texas shortstop Scott Fletcher, a .300 batter last season and a former Midland Cub. Boston pitcher Al Nipper, who started Game 4 of the World Series was another to sign.

Beniquez, acquired by the Royals in a Dec. 17 trade with the Baltimore Orioles for two minor-leaguers, was eligible for salary arbitration but chose to sign a one-year contract.

Beniquez, 36, hit .300 with six home runs and 36 runs batted in for the Orioles last season in a multi-purpose role. Terms of his contract were not announced, but it had been reported Beniquez was seeking the same $450,000 salary he made in 1986 and that the Royals were offering slightly less.

The Royals, who had veteran Hal McRae and his son under contract last season, added another father-and-son tandem by signing Juan Beniquez Jr. The younger Beniquez was an undrafted free agent who is a left-handed hitting outfielder from Puerto Rico.

Henderson and Nipper each agreed to one-year contracts.

Henderson began last season with Seattle and was traded to Boston late in the season. With the Red Sox, Henderson batted just .196 with one homer in limited time.

But in the postseason, Henderson emerged a hero.

Henderson did not start the first four games of the American League playoffs against California and only got into Game 5 when center fielder Tony Armas hurt an ankle. The Red Sox were one strike from elimination when Henderson hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning that helped rally Boston to victory in that game, and eventually the series.

In the World Series against the New York Mets, Henderson hit .400 with two home runs. One of his homers came in the top of the 10th inning of Game 6, which put the Red Sox three outs from the championship. The Mets, however, came back to win the game and the World Series.

Henderson is expected to be Boston's center fielder on Opening Day this year. Armas was released after last season.

Nipper went 10-12 with a 5.38 earned run average. He missed several weeks with a knee injury.

Nipper did not pitch in the AL playoffs, but started Game 4 against the Mets with Boston leading the World Series two games to one. Nipper was hit hard and took the loss.

Fletcher, 28, enjoyed the best season of his career. His .300 average was 15th-best in the AL, and he hit three homers with 50 RBI. He signed a one-year contract.

The Montreal Expos signed infielder Tom Foley to a two-year contract. Foley, acquired in a July trade with Philadelphia, hit .257 with one homer and 18 RBI in 64 games with the Expos.

First baseman-outfielder Len Matuszek signed a one-year contract with the Los Angeles Dodgers. Matuszek, 32, hit .261 with nine home runs and 28 RBI in 91 games. He was on the disabled list until May 24 because of off-season surgery on his right shoulder.

The New York Yankees signed pitcher Pete Filson to a one-year contract. Filson, acquired earlier this month from the Chicago White Sox, was 14-3 with a 2.26 ERA for Class AAA Buffalo. He has a 14-14 record in the majors with Chicago and the Minnesota Twins.

Navratilova runs match victory string to 55

Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Defending champion Martina Navratilova, seeking her fourth singles crown on the grass at Kooyong, led the top three women's seeds into the fourth round of the $1.65 million Australian Open tennis championships.

Also posting victories today were second-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia and No. 3 Pam Shriver of Lutherville, Md.

Navratilova conquered the gusty winds to breeze past fellow American Camille Benjamin 6-2, 6-1.

"The conditions were difficult," Navratilova said after running her latest match victory string to 55, the third-longest since the open era in tennis began in 1968. "It was hard to plan an attack and place the ball."

Navratilova holds the record by winning 74 consecutive matches, which was snapped by Czechoslovakia's Helena Sukova in the 1984 Australian Open. Chris Evert Lloyd, who is skipped this Grand Slam event, won 56 straight matches.

The only seeded player to fall on a day that saw only women play singles was No. 15 Dianne Balestrat of Australia, who lost to Britain's Anne Hobbs 6-4, 6-2.

Navratilova, 30, took less than an hour to overpower former French Open semifinalist Benjamin, a 20-year-old baseliner from Bakersfield, Calif, who hit occasional passing shots but lacked the artillery to worry the top seed.

Mandlikova, winner of the Brisbane tournament earlier this month and the 1980 Australian Open champion, overcame dropping her serve early in the first set to romp to a 6-3, 6-2 victory over veteran Anne Smith of Dallas.

Shriver, 24, had no problems defeating young South African Elna Reinach 6-2, 6-4.

Sixth-seeded Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria had to struggle on an outside court before defeating the elegant Csilla Cserepy of Switzerland 6-3, 6-7, 7-5.

In other third-round singles action on a day dominated by doubles matches, Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden, the 10th seed, recovered from a slow start to defeat Marie-Christine Calleja of France 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, while vastly more experienced West German Sylvia Hanika ousted teen-ager Akiko Kijimuta of Japan 6-3, 6-3.

Jo Durie, the 14th seed from Britain, eased into the fourth round and a meeting with Shriver with a 6-1, 6-4 triumph over Austrian baseliner Judith Polzl.

Navratilova said she has seldom felt better going into a tournament.

"Mentally, I feel as fresh as I ever have," she said. But she noted she had no sense of overconfidence against Benjamin.

"You still have to concentrate," Navratilova said. "On grass you can get into trouble against anyone.

Shriver echoed Navratilova's comments on the wind.

"You just had to concentrate on every point out there," she said.

Hobbs said she concentrated on putting pressure on Balestrat, who prefers to play from the baseline.

"A ball in court was a potential winner today," she said. "I can't remember playing in such bad conditions."

Diamond Shamrock again rejects bid

Mesa president confident shareholders will sell

DALLAS (AP) — The president of Mesa Petroleum Co. says he is confidant Diamond Shamrock shareholders will sell their common stock to a partnership headed by corporate takeover tycoon T. Boone Pickens Jr.

If David Batchelder's prediction comes true, it will happen despite the wishes of the Diamond Shamrock board of directors. The board Thursday unanimously rejected the partnership's $15 per share partial tender offer.

It was the second time the Dallas-based petroleum company has turned down a Pickens takeover bid.

Diamond Shamrock said in a statement that the latest offer was "even more inadequate" than Pickens' $2 billion stock trade offer that was rejected last month.

But Batchelder, president of Pickens' Mesa Petroleum Co., predicted that Diamond Shamrock shareholders will ignore the board of directors and sell their stock.

The partnership headed by Pickens, a Texas oilman who also heads Mesa Limited, and Birmingham, Ala., construction magnate John M. Harbert, offered to buy 20 million shares.

"It's just a continuation of their standard operating procedure," said Batchelder. "We believe absent a superior offer, many more shares will be tendered than than the 20 million we're offering to purchase. They'll offer because they haven't had the ability to realize $15."

Mesa owns 5 million shares of Diamond Shamrock, or about 4.5 percent of the common stock.

Last month, Pickens' Mesa Limited Partnership offered to swap one Mesa unit for one Diamond Shamrock share. The Mesa units were then trading at about $17 a share.

"Now, in the face of rising oil prices, Mesa is offering only $15 per share for only 18 percent of the common shares," the Diamond Shamrock statement said. The statement said Mesa admits not having developed a specific proposal to acquire the remaining Diamond Shamrock shares.

Diamond Shamrock also said Mesa has stated that neither the form of the transactions to be proposed nor the terms of the securities to be offered have been determined.

Diamond Shamrock common stock closed Thursday at 14¼, the same as Wednesday's close. Mesa Limited's stock closed at 17⅜, up ⅛ from Wednesday.

Dow Jones sets records in trade volume, industrial average

New York Times News Service

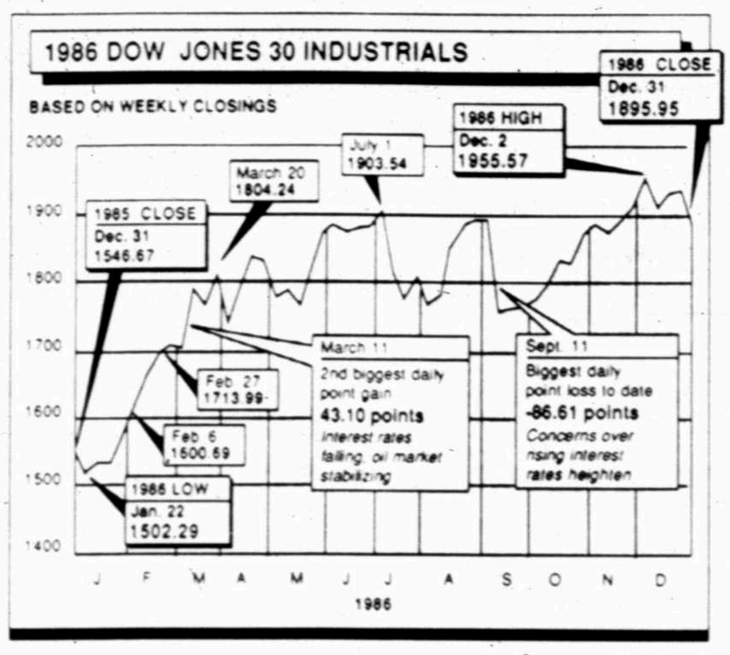
NEW YORK — Wall Street erupted into another explosive rally on Thursday that sent trading volume to a record high and made the stock market's current winning streak the longest — and most productive — in 14 years.

The stock market's recent climb, which has dumbfounded even the most experienced professionals in the financial community, has been relentless since Jan. 2, the first trading day of the new year. Since that session, the closely watched Dow Jones industrial average has soared nearly 175 points, or more than 9 percent.

And that blue-chip index has gone up in each of the year's 10 sessions, hit record highs in nine of them and set, according to market analysts, a modern-day record for the fastest jump in prices.

Thursday was like all the rest of 1987's sessions. The Dow, after a slow but positive start, gained 35.72 points, closing at 2,070.73, after buyers stampeded into the market, sending the volume on the New York Stock Exchange up to 253.1 million shares. On Wednesday, a still-impressive 214.2 million shares traded hands.

"We're hearing from customers we haven't heard from in three or four years," said William Coppel, head of the New York City branch of Quick & Reilly, a discount brokerage firm that deals mainly with small investors. "They're casting caution to the wind. People are kicking themselves for not buying last week."



The Dow Jones Industrial Average ended 1986 with a 12 point loss. Since the first day of trading in 1987, the market has risen nearly 175 points and set records in nine of the 10 trading sessions.

What is luring small investors into the market is an astounding rally that few people on Wall Street feel comfortable explaining.

Liquidity, that is, excess cash, is fueling the current Wall Street rally, many experts say, noting that investors during the latter part of 1986 sold large amounts of stocks, presumably to take advantage of the better capital gains tax treatment in the old tax law.

The cash raised from those stock sales, the experts believe, is now going into stocks.

"Everybody was sitting on the sideline, watching what the market was going to do," said Frederick Borusiewicz, manager of retail block trading at Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. When stocks went up, and up, and up, fence sitters jumped into the fray, he said.

Thursday's record Big Board volume topped the standard of 244.3 million shares set on Dec. 19, 1986, a day when programmed trading was very heavy.

On Thursday, however, those computer-driven buying programs had little impact; traders said investors, big and small, just wanted to buy stocks.

Other market indexes joined the Dow in breaking new ground. The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 1.51, to a record 152.09, and the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 2.85, to 265.49, also a record. On the Big Board, stocks that advanced outnumbered losers by 1,075 to 591.

Elsewhere, the American Stock Exchange index was up 2.87, to a record 292.55.

The NASDAQ index of over-the-counter stocks gained 2.68, to 392.57. The OTC market has also been showing new life, but the NASDAQ close was still considerably below the record 411.16 set on July 3, 1986.

Some experts have theorized that Wall Street may be more optimistic about the prospects for the nation's economy, and, as it often does, may be celebrating ahead of time. Some even said that the steep decline in the dollar — often a negative factor on Wall Street — might even be helping this time around because it could improve the nation's trade balance, lift corporate profits, and possibly force interest rates lower.

In the broadest sense, of course, lower interest rates are responsible for the market's climb. When rates fall, investors take their money out of such investments as certificates of deposit and money market funds and try to get higher returns in the stock markets. But the rate effect goes back more than four years to the start of the bull market, and nothing on the interest rate front has changed in the last few weeks to create the super-bullish mood on Wall Street.

One factor bolstering the market this week is that technology issues are in vogue after some signs of recovery in the long dormant computer and semiconductor industries.

The technology stocks, as well as some paper issues, began leading the market earlier this week, about the time when the rally looked like it might be fizzling out. And with these group providing new power, the market's climb could soon set a longevity record.

According to Laszlo Birinyi, manager of equity market analysis at Salomon Brothers Inc., the longest the Dow has gone without a loss is 12 sessions. That was back in 1970, when the Dow rose 8.4 percent on the 10 trading days in the Nov. 18 to Dec. 7 period.

The last 10-day streak, he said, occurred from July 16 to July 27, 1973, when the Dow rose 5.7 percent.

Elcor sees quarterly earnings rise

Elcor Corp. has reported a 16 percent increase in earnings before extraordinary item and net earnings for its fiscal 1987 second quarter ending Dec. 31, 1986. For this year's first six months, earnings before extraordinary item and net earnings were more than two and a half times year-ago levels.

Roy E. Campbell, president of the Midland-based company, said "The improvement in earnings exceeded our expectations and primarily resulted from continuing progress in reducing costs and improving product mix. The quality of earnings also improved dramatically. This year's earnings were mostly generated by operations as compared to last year, when nonrecurring gains on disposition of assets, sale of leasehold rights and a large patent royalty payment were significant factors in second quarter earnings.

"Earnings before extraordinary item and net earnings for the first six months of our fiscal year ending June 10,1987 are already substantially higher than for the entire fiscal year ended June 30, 1986. The outlook for second-half earnings continues to be excellent."

For the second quarter ending Dec. 31, 1986, income before extraordinary item was $1.145 million or $.33 per share, compared to $986,000 or $.28 per share. Net income was $2.142 million or $.61 per share, compared to $1.85 million or $.53 per share in the same quarter last year. Earnings from continued operations during this seasonally soft quarter were $1.3 million or $.38 per share, up 5 percent from $1.25 million or $.36 per share last year. Sales of $26.5 million were below last year's sales of $27.47 million, primarily as a result of having sold certain leasehold interests last year and lower patent royalty fees this year.

For the first half ending Dec. 31, 1986, income before extraordinary item was $3.4 million or $.97 per share, compared to $1.3 million or $.37 per share. Net income was $6.34 million or $1.81 per share, compared to $2.47 million or $.70 per share last year. Earnings from continuing operations were $3.8 million or $1.09 per share, up from $1.83 million or $.52 per share. Sales of $60.3 million were up about 9 percent from $55.2 million last year.

"Investment community estimates of $2.00 per share earnings from continuing operations and $1.75 per share earnings before extraordinary item for this fiscal year appear to be achievable based on current conditions," Campbell said.

He added that "Elcor's financial position continues to improve rapidly. Continuing strong cash flow permitted a $9.5 million or 24 percent reduction in long-term debt to $29.4 million in the last six months. During the same period, equity increased by 23 percent to $30.7 million."

According to Campbell, land has been purchased, equipment has been selected, and construction contracts are being awarded for Gory Industries' new state-of-the art highly automated concrete roofing tile manufacturing plant in Pompano Beach, Fla. The new plant should begin production in late 1987 and will augment Gory's two other concrete tile manufacturing plants in southern Florida. "Gory has chosen the best proven high-speed manufacturing system to assure that it is the low-cost producer of concrete roofing tile," he said.

Texas leads region in defense field

DALLAS (AP) — At the end of 1986, Texas again led the Southwest in the value and number of defense contracts and paced the region's growth in defense awards, officials say.

The obligated value of defense contracts in the region rose to a record $19.2 billion at the end of last year, a 19 percent increase over the $16.1 billion in contracts held at the end of 1985, the Defense Contract Administration Service region in Dallas reported Wednesday.

Total contracts increased to 33,007 from 31,010 at the end of 1985. The number of prime contractors in the southwestern region also rose to 1,914 last year from 1,856 in 1985.

Texas dominated the Southwest's growth in defense contracting, with $13.5 billion in contracts at the end of the year, up from $11.5 billion at the end of 1985. The number of Texas contracts rose slightly to 21,639 from 21,549 a year earlier, the report said.

Arizona was the Southwest's second-largest contracting state with $2.6 billion in awards, followed by Arkansas with $1.2 billion, Oklahoma with $795 million, New Mexico with $778.5 million and Louisiana with $92.3 million.

Texas Instruments Inc. of Dallas was the region's top defense contractor with $6 billion in contracts. That accounted for almost half of Texas' total.

The region's other four top defense companies were Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. in Austin with $1.2 billion in contracts; E-Systems Inc.'s Greenville division with $1.07 billion; General Dynamics Corp. in East Camden, Ark., with $1.02 billion; and Rockwell International Corp. in Richardson with $957 million.

Regulators close two Oklahoma banks

RUSH SPRINGS, Okla. (AP) — Federal banking regulators closed the First National Bank of Rush Springs and the First National Bank of Skiatook on Thursday, citing deteriorating loan portfolios and poor management practices in the separate actions.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. was named receiver of both banks and said both would reopen Friday under new management.

The FDIC approved the assumption of the Rush Springs bank's deposit liabilities by First National Bank of Maysville and the assumption of the Skiatook bank's deposit liabilities by American Exchange Bank of Collinsville.

Bill Olcheski, a spokesman for the FDIC, said First National Bank of Maysville would reopen the Rush Springs bank Friday as a branch office. Depositors of the failed bank will automatically become depositors of the new bank, he said.

He said American Exchange would open the failed Skiatook bank as a branch office Friday with depositors automatically becoming depositors of the assuming bank.

Frank Vance, a spokesman for the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency, said the Rush Springs bank was chartered Aug. 23, 1906.

Vance said in a news release that there had been a significant deterioration in the Rush Springs bank's loan portfolio because of a concentration of loans in the oil and gas sectors and because of the poor credit practice by prior management.

Olcheski said the bank was the third agriculture bank to fail in the nation this year. Banks with more than 25 percent of their loans in agriculture are classified as agriculture banks.

Vance said that on Sept. 30, the bank had assets of about $13.1 million with deposits of $12.68 million and primary capital of $579,000.

Robert J. Herrmann, senior deputy comptroller for bank supervision, declared the Rush Springs bank insolvent at the close of business Thursday.

Olcheski said First National Bank of Maysville will assume about $12.5 million in 3,000 deposit accounts. The bank has agreed to pay the FDIC a purchase premium of $150,000 and will buy some of the bank's loans and other assets for $10.4 million.

The FDIC will advance the assuming bank $1.9 million and will retain assets with a book value of $2.5 million, Olcheski said in a release from Washington.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Time, Inc. to take $63 million pretax charge

NEW YORK — Time Inc. said Thursday that it would take a $63 million pretax charge against earnings for the fourth quarter, resulting from the costs of staff reductions.

The publishing and cable television company would not say how many of its 20,000 employees would be affected by the reductions or the percentage by which its work force would be cut. Time said that the reductions were primarily in its magazine and corporate staffs.

Officials declare war on telephone hustlers

WASHINGTON (AP) — State and federal officials have declared war on hustlers trying to defraud Americans by telephone.

The aim is "to wage war on those who would fleece the American public," Federal Trade Commission Chairman Daniel Oliver said Thursday.

The FTC and the National Association of Attorneys General announced a campaign against con artists who used phony prizes, cheap products and high-pressure sales tactics to defraud Americans out of $3 billion a year.

Senators get warning about trade imbalance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee has been warned by businessmen that worsening trade imbalances are pushing the nation into foreign debt at an alarming rate.

In addition, efforts to dig out could prove much tougher than expected, businessmen told senators Thursday.

Edmund T. Pratt Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of Pfizer Inc., and John A. Young, president and chief executive officer of Hewlett-Packard Co., were among those who cited an estimated record $173 billion trade deficit for 1986 and a recent projection by the Federal Reserve Board that the nation will find itself with a $1 trillion foreign debt in three years at the present pace.

Merger reports lift Pan Am, American stocks

NEW YORK (AP) — The stocks of Pan American World Airways and American Airlines increased after it was reported that American is negotiating to acquire financially troubled Pan American.

But officials at the airlines would not comment on the New York Times report on Thursday.

At the close of trading Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange, Pan Am stock had risen $1.12½ a share to $5.50 in heavy trading. American was up $1 to $55.75.

Lockheed to cut $253 million from program

CALABASAS, Calif. (AP) — A unit of Lockheed Corp. has agreed to trim another $253 million from the cost of the Air Force's C-5B program, accepting a reduced $1.95 billion contract to build the final 21 giant cargo planes.

The contract will bring to 50 the number of C-5s delivered by the Lockheed-Georgia Co. in Marietta, Ga., a wholly owned subsidiary of the Calabasas-based Lockheed Corp.

Thursday's price reduction reduces the total cost of the 50-plane program to about $6.95 billion from the $7.8 billion called for in the original 1982 contract.

IRS urged to withdraw, simplify W-4 form

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's chief tax-writer is urging the Internal Revenue Service to withdraw and simplify the new W-4 tax withholding form that every employee is required to file this year.

The new form is just too confusing, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said in a letter Thursday to IRS Commissioner Lawrence Gibbs.

Gibbs did not provide an immediate response.

Philadelphia brokerage to appeal suspension

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Philadelphia-based brokerage firm says it will appeal a Securities and Exchange Commission decision suspending it from certain market-making activities in over-the-counter stocks for 30 days in connection with the sale of unregistered securities in 1977.

Howard B. Scherer, general counsel of Butcher & Singer Inc., said Thursday that the firm had not done anything wrong.

The SEC on Tuesday imposed the penalty on Butcher & Singer, rejecting the firm's appeal of an administrative law judge's decision.

Enron signs gas agreement

HOUSTON (AP) — An Enron Corp. subsidiary will supply Brooklyn Union Gas Co. with up to 60 million cubic feet of natural gas per day, the two companies said in announcing a long-term sales agreement.

The length of the contract and the money involved were not disclosed, Enron spokeswoman Diane Bazelides said Wednesday.

Over the life of the contract, Enron Gas Marketing Inc. expects to sell Brooklyn Union full-contract volumes exceeding 230 billion cubic feet of natural gas, according to a written statement.

Brooklyn Union, based in Brooklyn, N.Y., is the nation's fifth-largest natural gas distribution company. It serves half the population of New York and generates annual revenue of about $1 billion.

Enron, with headquarters in Houston, is involved in natural gas transmission and sales, exploration and production of oil and natural gas, the extraction, transmission and marketing of liquid fuels and international trading of hydrocarbons.

Exxon will accept Cash Flow cards

HOUSTON (SWN) Exxon Co., USA and Cash Flow, Inc., an affiliate of Sovran Financial Corp., Norfolk, Virginia, jointly announced an agreement that will enable the 800,000 Cash Flow cardholders to use their cards to purchase products and services at Exxon retail outlets equipped with Exxon's new electronic purchase transaction system. It is expected that Cash Flow cardholders can start using their Cash Flow cards at Exxon stations in the first quarter of 1987.

J.R. Allred, Exxon's Southeast Region sales manager, said, "Purchases made with the Cash Flow card will qualify for the 'discount for cash' price offered on gasoline at most Exxon stations."

"The Cash Flow card gives customers a quick and easy means for paying for purchases from their checking accounts. Exxon customers will be able to use the Cash Flow debit card in addition to the existing payment alternatives of cash, the Exxon credit card and the Visa, MasterCard, Choice and Discover credit cards," Allred added.

Thomas H. Lewis, president, Cash Flow, Inc., commented, "Until recently, Cash Flow cards were used primarily at automated teller machines (ATMs). However, we are beginning to see increased interest from retail merchants to accept Cash Flow cards as payment for goods and services. As more and more cardholders understand the new payment alternative, usage will increase. We believe this trend will continue, and our arrangement with Exxon is an important step in that direction."

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Unemployed husband needs support at home

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR COPING: Like most people in Midland I've been hanging on this last year. As an independent producer I have seen my net worth go from something to be proud of to barely solvent. I have even considered bankruptcy.

Thanks to the recent increases in the price of oil, I have been able to renegotiate my loan repayments and even have some money to live on. I should be happier, but I'm not. Why don't I feel better? My wife can't understand and neither can I. — OIL MAN

DEAR OIL MAN: A number of people have expressed similar sentiments. It may have to do with a continued awareness of the unknown.

Once we have experienced a very disturbing event, such as potential financial disaster, our anxiety level increases and often stays at an elevated level for some time.

Research notes that during the Great Depression, professionals who still had jobs experienced more stress than those who were terminated.

I think your concerns are well founded. This has been, and will continue to be, a difficult time for the foreseeable future.

Someone recently mentioned that since they couldn't do anything about the price of oil, they were going to do something about their family and their faith — spend more time on each. Naturally, I like that thought.

DEAR COPING: I seem to be in an endless round of problems in finding a job. I either have too much experience or not enough.

This is getting really frustrating. What am I supposed to do? I can't lie about my experience. I am willing to negotiate my salary, but I can't change history. — CR

DEAR CR: You are right, you cannot change history and it is inappropriate to lie. The main options that you do have are to put your experience in the best possible light, try to determine what a firm is looking for prior to applying and try not to apply for jobs you are not qualified for.

You may also consider practicing presenting your job experience to a friend in a "job interview" setting. Someone else may be able to make some suggestions about how to package yourself and your experience in a more marketable fashion. Good luck.

DEAR COPING: My father has been out of work for some time now. Every time I try to help him he acts like I have done something wrong. Is it wrong to try to help someone that you love? — CONFUSED DAUGHTER

DEAR CONFUSED: No, it is not wrong. However, "help" can come in many forms.

Your father has lost one of the males' traditional roles, that of provider. This is a significant loss. He may still be in mourning over his lost job/career.

As with a death, perceptions of all those involved must be considered. Sometimes it is more helpful to just be a good friend and offer a sympathetic ear rather than directed advice or encouragement. It is hard to do, yet it may be appropriate.

DEAR COPING: I think my marriage is about to break as a result of my employment.

I have had lots of time to consider what is important to me and I don't think it is with my present wife. I have applied for several jobs out of the city and out of the state, and if I get any of them I'm gone.

I don't think my wife has ever understood what I have been going through. She is sympathetic on the surface, but she is always after me to try harder to get a job, to decide what I really want to do and go do it, so I have. — NO NAME PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: You and your wife are going through one of life's most difficult processes. There is so much more to the process than just the loss of job.

You seem to have made up your mind about your next steps, but you might be interested in the experience of others in your situation.

It's not unusual to have strong mutual resentments involved in a jobless situation. These resentments often are not expressed directly, but are couched in other discussions.

For example, the unemployed husband feels entitled to strong support at home — after all he has provided for the family in the past — but often what happens is that he gets strong support initially, but it wanes.

The wife, on the other hand, feels the pressure of bills to pay and no money coming in; while she wants to be supportive, she is also very anxious about the family's financial condition.

It is very difficult for either to express these feelings without hurting the feelings of the other. You did not ask for advice, but this is a very stressful period in which to make such an important decision.

If you would consider discussing this with a professional, please write for names to chose from.

Fastest automobiles move slowly in traffic

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

There's a message here somewhere. The faster automobile manufacturers are making cars go, the slower the cars are moving in today's traffic.

At the peak of a rush hour in big cities, cars are averaging two blocks to a gallon and there's a projection for Los Angeles that by the year 2000 the average speed on the freeways will be 17 miles per hour.

A tortoise running away from home averages 23 miles an hour. A '48 Chevy whose motor has died rolls downhill at 30 m.p.h. The only thing that travels slower is the U.S. mail.

I think we're going to see a new wrinkle in our lifestyle. Everyone knows how much Americans hate to waste time. Whether it's leisure activities or work ... they are driven to fill every minute of every hour.

Drivers need to be kept busy. So, what can you do at 17 miles an hour or less? Games are good. How about MILEAGE BINGO? A cluster of drivers will all throw in a buck or two and the person having the best poker hand on his mileage gauge will win. The more serious players might want to engage in RADIATOR ROULETTE. This is for drivers who make book on the exact second a radiator will blow. That's fun for the whole family.

Oh sure, you can always read, take your blood pressure, clean out your glove compartment or drink coffee, but where are the challenges?

For a while, a Phoenix disc jockey, Alan Chilcoat, KOY, conducted stranded-in-traffic aerobics spots. At the height of the rush-hour traffic, drivers would don a headband and roll down the windows and do arm circles or grab the steering wheel and do buttock tucks.

Look for television cassettes to get into the act. "HONK IF YOU WANT TO SEE PARADISE" would bring a messenger on a bicycle with films to fill in your time while you wait for the lights to change.

Gridlock doesn't have to be a G word. Look upon it as an alternative to the bar scene ... at a reduced speed, of course.

DEAR ABBY

Reader hates being hounded by charities

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am not rich, neither am I poor. I've always contributed to the charities I feel are deserving, and nobody has to remind me to make my annual contribution, but things have now gotten out of hand.

Lately I have been deluged with what appear to be "bills" from numerous well-known organizations, pleading that they are desperately in need of funds. Yesterday, I received 16 requests from charities — yes, 16 — with urgent "please-help-us-now" letters, of which 12 were third and fourth requests! I felt as though I was being billed for a debt that was long overdue.

I am aware that charities need funding, but I am so annoyed at this point, I am ready to toss all of these letters into the wastepaper basket without even opening the envelopes — even though some may contain a 22-cent postage stamp that could be used for another purpose.

Abby, please get this message across. These people need to know how turned off some of us get when we are ... DUNNED TO DEATH

DEAR DUNNED: I couldn't agree with you more. But please don't quit giving to the charities of your choice because of those who dun you to death with high-pressure tactics.

McFarlane overruled North, ABC News says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane held out for the release of four U.S. hostages during his secret trip to Iran in May, rejecting an Iranian offer to release just two, according to a broadcast report.

During the mission to Tehran, McFarlane overruled fired White House aide Oliver L. North, who had wanted to give in to the Iranian demand that two hostages be freed immediately and two more would be freed after the delivery of more U.S. arms, ABC News reported.

The Americans had flown into Tehran with a planeload of weapons.

Only one hostage, the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, was released by a pro-Iranian group in Lebanon, and that was two months after the McFarlane trip. Hospital administrator David Jacobsen was released in November, following another arms shipment to Iran.

McFarlane, who was scheduled to appear today before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has said in previous public and private testimony that while he was involved in the implementation of the arms sales, he knew nothing of the alleged diversion of the profits to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

The alleged diversion is under investigation by Congress and an independent counsel.

Meanwhile, there were indications that the Iranian arms deals had their genesis in plans by commercial arms dealers and among Iranian officials more than a year before the Reagan administration began considering the sales.

Many of the arms dealers who eventually helped carry out the sales had been planning among themselves to sell American arms to Tehran, according to American and Iranian sources and documents quoted today by The New York Times. The discussions suggest that the Reagan administration's policies may have been influenced by the arms brokers, the Times said, citing American and Iranian sources and documents.

In 1984, Iranian arms dealer Manucher Ghorbanifar was planning to sell U.S. weapons to Iran, even though such sales were banned, the report said. Then, in 1985, he became a U.S. intelligence source about Iran and his observations and advice helped convince the White House to proceed with the arms sales, the newspaper said.

Iranian-born arms dealer Mahammedali Hashemi said on ABC's "Nightline" Thursday night that the Iranians, with the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini personally involved, instigated the arms deals in January 1985 by asking Hashemi, his brother and Ghorbanifar to pursue the idea of purchasing U.S. weapons from Israel.

Hashemi said Khomeini at the same time had instructed Iranian embassies throughout the world to establish better relations with the West and to "find some means of breaking the deadlock between the United States and Iran."

President Reagan has said his major goal in the arms sales was to establish ties with moderate elements in Iran.

Appearing before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on Dec. 8, McFarlane testified that the goal made sense.

And he said that because of the long duration of the costly Iran-Iraq war, pressures on Iranian government officials to modify their government's policies were intense.

Reagan praises King in TV address

Associated Press

Americans were urged to rededicate themselves to the principles espoused by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. as the slain civil rights leader was remembered in ceremonies marking the anniversary of his birth.

The memory of King "should serve not just as an inspiration to black Americans, but to each and every one of us, to stand firm for our principles and to strive to better ourselves and our country," President Reagan said Thursday in a television address made available to schools nationwide.

"During his short life span he touched the lives of every American and helped dismantle the legal vestiges of discrimination and racism," Reagan said.

King, a Baptist preacher awarded the 1964 Nobel Peace Prize for his leadership of the civil rights movement in the 1950s and '60s, was born in Atlanta on Jan. 15, 1929. He was shot to death in Memphis, Tenn., in 1968.

His birthday was Thursday, although a federal holiday and many state holidays in his honor will be observed Monday. The federal holiday was first observed last year.

About 500 people gathered at the Capitol rotunda to mark the occasion in Topeka, Kan., the site of a landmark 1954 school desegregation case.

Five black families in Selma, Ala., the site of a bloody confrontation in 1965 between civil rights marchers and police, moved from a rural slum known as Slave City into modern, federally subsidized apartments.

The move, the first phase in a project to relocate 17 households, was timed to coincide with King's birthday.

"This is the best way to demonstrate our love and respect for his dream," said lawyer Rose Sanders.

In the nation's capital, a wreath was laid on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, where King delivered his famous "I have a dream" speech in 1963.

U.S. Education Secretary William Bennett taught a class of Atlanta third graders about King, and later addressed an assembly at the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change.

"Use his birthday to rededicate yourself to make America what God intended it to be, to see that every American has a job...that every child receives an education."

— Rev. Hosea Williams
Atlanta city councilman

King "played a role in helping to topple Jim Crow, changed forever life in the South and profoundly altered the course of American history," Bennett said.

King "taught us of the importance of peace, but also of the value of struggle. He taught love, but also showed how deep the hatred of others can at times become. He awoke this country to its greatest failing, while awakening it to its greatest promise."

In nearby Decatur, the Rev. Hosea Williams, a King lieutenant during the civil rights movement, urged a crowd of about 500 to remember King with respect.

"Don't use his birthday to have a day off and hold parties," said Williams, an Atlanta city councilman.

"Use his birthday to rededicate yourself to make America what God intended it to be, to see that every American has a job...that every child receives an education."

About 250 people attended a ceremony at the Georgia state Capitol rotunda. Coretta Scott King said there that her husband left the state with a mission "to provide an irresistible example of interracial brotherhood."

In Birmingham, Ala., schools conducted a teach-in about King.

Elsewhere, an ecumenical luncheon was held in Minneapolis; a plaza was named in King's honor in Omaha, Neb.; and Newark, N.J., Mayor Sharpe James joined in a prayer service.

Naomi Tutu-Seavers, daughter of Nobel laureate Archbishop Desmond Tutu, likened King's struggle to that going on in her homeland of South Africa.

Parochial school segregates holiday

ATLANTA (AP) — Black students at a parochial school will be automatically excused on Monday's federal holiday honoring the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., but whites wanting the day off will have to give notice, a spokeswoman said.

Civil rights leaders Thursday attacked the policy announced by the Roman Catholic Marist School, saying it violates the principles espoused by the civil rights leader.

"Martin gave his life to the dream of a world where the color of a person's skin would not make a difference," said King's widow, Coretta Scott King.

Also leveling criticism were Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference which King founded, and U.S. Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga., a longtime civil rights activist.

The school will excuse its 20 black students, while any of the school's 900 white students "with a firm conviction" about the holiday will be allowed to take off if they give notice, said spokeswoman Carol Johnson.

"Kids will be kids, and there are students who will take advantage of (the holiday) who don't believe in what Martin Luther King believed in," she said, explaining the policy.

"We do the same thing for Jewish students who want to take their special days off," she said, adding that students seem to support the policy, instituted last year when the first federal holiday honoring King was observed.

Marist is not affiliated with the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Atlanta, which plans to close its 15 schools Monday.

Rivals for Armed Services post may vote against Contra aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reps. Les Aspin and Marvin Leath, two of the four Democrats competing to become chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, say they may change their positions and vote against further U.S. military aid to the Nicaraguan Contras.

All four candidates said Thursday they are unsure who will win the Jan. 23 vote. Aspin, D-Wis., is trying to win back the position he lost last week when he was voted out as chairman by House Democrats.

Leath, D-Texas, is considered Aspin's chief challenger, although two other Democrats on the Armed Services panel are also candidates. They are Reps. Nicholas Mavroules of Massachusetts and Charles Bennett of Florida.

All four said they are trying hard to line up support for the vote, which will be by secret ballot during a closed-door meeting of the 258 House Democrats. The party picks the chairman because it controls a majority in the 435-member chamber. Republicans will not vote in the election.

After last week's vote, Democrats said Aspin was rejected chiefly because party liberals had thought he would not support them in opposing aid to the Contras and in their opposition to more money for the MX nuclear missile, two controversial programs strongly supported by the Reagan administration. Aspin voted for both programs.

Asked about the chairmanship vote, Aspin said, "We'll see how it comes out" while Leath said, "I feel pretty good at this point, but these things can change overnight."

Mavroules said, "It's difficult to contact people away from Washington and do it by phone. But I feel pretty good about things right now, I really do. I won't say I'm going to win, but I think people are listening, at least when I can get them on the phone."

Bennett had predicted last week he would win but now says only, "I remain optimistic and hope I will be elected chairman." He was rejected by House Democrats two years ago when Aspin won the position.

Aspin said he will oppose more money for the MX, a position he said is consistent with his past public statements that the current limit of 50 of the weapons is enough.

As for Contra aid, Aspin said he supported it last June "as part of a package of things to promote democracy in Central America." But now, he said, "I'm skeptical of it, of whether it would do any good, because the administration has concentrated pretty much on that, and military aid alone doesn't seem to be doing much good."

Leath said he has supported the MX in the past "but I won't support any more. The 50 we've got plus the test missiles are all we need now."

Leath has in the past supported Contra aid, but said, "I've always had some degree of doubt in my mind about whether military aid is the right way to go."

"Now," he said, "in light of all that's happened with the Iran connection and questions about where previous money we've sent has gone, I don't know. I'm going to wait and see about more Contra aid. I'm not changing my position but I don't think the situation is as cut and dried as it was in the past."

Mavroules said he has opposed both the MX and Contra aid and still does, while Bennett has voted against the MX and for aid to the Contras.

Aspin was voted out only two years after he won the office, chiefly with support from liberal Democrats who say they believed he would back their positions.

New O-ring seals not without problems, council report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Engineers testing the redesigned space shuttle rocket booster have run into a problem: a new type of O-ring seal that leaks under pressure and deteriorates when it is in prolonged contact with a rust-inhibiting grease.

As a result, said a report sent to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration on Thursday, designers have returned to the same kind of O-ring that doomed the space shuttle Challenger.

In order to maintain proper temperature on the rubber-like seal — which loses resiliency when cold — the redesign uses heaters to hold temperatures to 75 degrees. That, in turn, creates the possibility of loosening adhesive bonds made weaker by higher temperatures, the report said.

The study by a panel of the National Research Council is the second this week critical of aspects of the booster redesign program. It used the O-ring problem as an example of the kind of contingency that caught engineers unaware.

NTSB seeks automatic brakes on trains using busy corridor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal board probing last week's fatal Amtrak collision near Baltimore is calling for automatic brakes on all trains sharing tracks with passenger traffic in the busy Northeast corridor and says regulators should have required such a backup device long ago.

The high-speed Amtrak passenger trains that use the corridor from Washington to Boston are equipped with the automatic braking systems which trigger within six seconds if a train operator does not comply with a change-of-speed signal.

Freight trains such as the Conrail locomotives involved in a collision with an Amtrak train Jan. 4 are not required to have the devices, although the National Transportation Safety Board urged at least three times in the past decade that some kind of automated train control system be put on trains as a backstop against human failings.

An apparent failure of the Conrail locomotive's engineer and brakeman to notice and properly respond to a reduction of speed signal as they approached an intersection with the main Amtrak line is being viewed as a primary factor in the collision that killed 16 people and injured 175 others.

Joseph Nall, who heads the investigation, told a television interviewer Thursday night the operation of the Conrail locomotive has become a major "focal point of the investigation," especially since drug tests earlier in the week revealed the presence of marijuana in both the engineer and brakeman.

Tests and other evidence indicate, according to investigators, the Conrail locomotive, pulling two other locomotives, sped through a slowdown signal, and by the time the engineer noticed a stop signal near the track interchange, it was too late to halt the train safely.

Nall said in an appearance Thursday night on the "MacNeill-Lehrer NewsHour" television program that the safety board expects to be able to eventually determine whether drugs impaired the two crewmen before the accident. He cautioned, however, that no such conclusion has been made.

At the same time, he said an automatic braking system likely would have prevented the collision because "the device, if it had been in place, would under normal conditions have slowed the (Conrail) train to a stop."

NATION IN BRIEF

Murder charges filed against hotel busboy

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Officials added 96 counts of first-degree murder to the arson charges already faced by a Dupont Plaza Hotel busboy in the New Year's Eve blaze that killed 96 people. Doctors said one set of remains may never be identified.

The murder charges were filed Thursday against Armando Jimenez Rivera, 28, who also was charged in San Juan District Court with arson, conspiracy and destruction of property.

He was charged Wednesday in federal court with arson and aiding and abetting another hotel employee, maintenance man Hector Escudero Aponte, whom officials believe actually set the fire.

Conspiracy charges were filed Thursday against Escudero Aponte, 35, who already had been charged with arson, destruction of property and 96 counts of first-degree murder.

The two men, both longtime hotel employees, were to appear in U.S. District Court today for bail hearings on the federal arson charges.

Work popular, study says

DETROIT (AP) — Whether you're an assembly-line worker or bank vice president, chances are you get more pleasure out of a day on the job than a night on the town, according to a study.

Asked to rank 25 activities in order of preference, about 3,600 men and women in a nationwide survey conducted by the University of Michigan ranked going to work third, behind child care and socializing with friends and relatives.

Work beat such leisure activities as going to the movies, watching television, playing sports, reading, working on a hobby, cooking and shopping, economics professor F. Thomas Juster said Thursday in a telephone interview from Ann Arbor.

Housework ranked last, he said.

The study found the satisfaction level of any activity depends primarily on the amount of interaction with other people it provides, Juster said.

"It's not that the jobs are interesting and fascinating," he said. "It's the interactive nature of the environment."

Panel tracks racial incidents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, prompted by outbreaks of racial violence such as last month's attack in the Howard Beach area of New York City, is launching a national effort to determine if such incidents are on the increase.

Commission Chairman Clarence M. Pendleton Jr. and the five other panel members told the heads of 50 state advisory committees that although the commission could do little to combat the violence beyond enforcing current law, information is needed to determine the extent of the problem.

In a letter sent Thursday on the birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., Pendleton asked the state chairmen to begin collecting data on acts of racial or religious violence.

"Although it is not yet clear what, if anything, government can do beyond the enforcement of current civil rights laws to deter racial and religious violence and promote harmony, it is unquestionable that we need to determine the magnitude of the problem," the letter said.

'Thought campaign' worries Chinese

By JIM ABRAMS

PEKING (AP) — Top Chinese leaders, headed by Deng Xiaoping, say the current campaign to snuff out criticism of socialism will not impede Deng's economic and political reforms and open-door policy.

However, the ideological chill stemming from the struggle against "bourgeois liberalization" has created a real dilemma for Deng — how to give intellectuals the freedom essential if they are to contribute to national development while putting a lid on debate over the political status quo.

"Chinese officials all say very clearly there will be no influence on the reforms," said one Asian diplomat. "But this thought campaign is a real source of worry to us."

Deng, in a meeting with a Finnish Communist Party leader Thursday, stressed that the battle against bourgeois liberals — those who question the infallibility of socialism and the Communist Party — will not affect the reform policies he has pursued since rising to power in 1978.

However, he also said that stability and unity are essential to economic development, and China must "remove all obstacles" that stand in the way of stability. The government has said stability was threatened by recent student pro-democracy demonstrations in at least 11 cities, including Peking and Shanghai.

Premier Zhao Ziyang also said this week that China's economic reforms are on track.

AP Laserphoto

The official Xinhua News Agency said the statements by Deng and Zhao "may well dispel the unnecessary worry that China's criticism of bourgeois liberalization might hamper its policies of reform and opening to the rest of the world."

Some diplomats agreed Deng is not about to "shoot himself in the foot" by abandoning reforms he has initiated since 1978, which include infusion of Western-style economic principles and greater freedom of expression.

The official press has made extra efforts to publicize the government's commitment to reform.

Earlier this month, while the government began moving against intellectuals it accused of instigating the student demonstrators, the State Council announced new measures designed to give factory managers more independence from local party functionaries.

Making factories more efficient by giving day-to-day decision-making power to managers rather than party officials with little expertise has been at the core of Deng's reforms. The measures called on the party to guide the ideological training at the working level and serve in a supervisory position.

On Tuesday, when Fang Lizhi, an astrophysicist known for his support of the students' democratic ideals, was fired from his university, Zhao met 19 scientists to stress their importance in the nation's modernization drive.

For the past year Deng has been encouraging intellectuals and scientists to contribute their thoughts, no matter how controversial, to national development.

That's unlikely now. Intellectuals have been burned in the past for speaking out, and are certain to be guarded about what they do and say in the coming months.

"There will have to be some kind of relaxation to persuade intellectuals to work for development," said one diplomat.

One theory is that Deng, after "redefining the taboos" on questioning the party line, will step back and again allow a measure of open debate that is deemed healthy to the economy.

Other areas of reform could be affected. The State Council issued a circular Wednesday saying the government will not allow an increase in the number of consumer goods for which prices are allowed to fluctuate according to market forces.

Reform of the pricing system, under which prices for food and other essentials are kept artificially low, is crucial to vitalizing China's sluggish economy. But the government reportedly is concerned about public anger over rising prices, and is opting for stability rather than reform.

"If Deng has to choose between stability and his policies, he'll choose stability," said one diplomat.

Deng also may have to pull back on the more controversial elements of his political reform program.

Chinese premier replaces party chief

PEKING (AP) — Communist Party chief Hu Yaobang resigned in disgrace today after weeks of student protests and a crackdown on pro-Western intellectuals whom he reportedly backed. Premier Zhao Ziyang was elected to replace him.

The 71-year-old Hu, once considered a likely successor to top leader Deng Xiaoping, resigned after saying he made "mistakes on major issues of political principles," the official Xinhua News Agency and national television reported.

The announcement ended days of speculation that Hu would be ousted. Deng reportedly was unhappy with the way Hu handled the students' pro-democracy demonstrations and the subsequent party campaign against critics.

An enlarged session of the Politburo, the party's top decision-making body, accepted Hu's resignation and unanimously selected Zhao as the new secretary-general of the 44-million-member party, Xinhua said.

It said the decisions on Hu and Zhao would be submitted to the next plenary session of the Central Committee for confirmation.

Politburo members "gave Comrade Hu Yaobang a serious and comradely criticism and at the same time acknowledged his achievements," Xinhua said.

Xinhua said Hu will remain a member of the Politburo Standing Committee.

The agency did not say whether Zhao, 67, will leave his post as premier and, if so, who might replace him. Possible successors mentioned by Chinese sources include Vice Premier Li Peng, 58, and Tianjin Mayor Li Ruihuan, 54.

The Politburo meeting urged the party to continue to stick to party policies and combat "bourgeois liberalization," Xinhua said.

The phrase "bourgeois liberals" has been used to describe those who question the supremacy of socialism and the Communist Party.

Hu and Zhao are both strong supporters of the economic reform and open-door policies Deng has promoted since he rose to power in 1978.

Zhao, however, has been involved mainly in economic matters and has escaped involvment in the turmoil that followed the student protests in at least 11 cities since December.

In recent statements, Deng and Zhao have stressed the crackdown on intellectuals will not affect the economic and open-door policies.

Fewer station breaks.

With more MPG* than any other two-seater, the CRX HF lets you spend more time on the road having fun and less time pumping gas.

In fact, with road-running rack and pinion steering, front-wheel drive, 5-speed manual transmission and power-assist brakes, the HF is so much fun you'll wonder whether it's an economical sports car or a sporty economy car.

Standard features like steel-belted radials, a tachometer, alloy wheels and a large cargo area with a lockable stowage compartment should leave no doubt. The HF is anything but an econobox.
