Chamber talks economic development

Sales tax receipts up 12.8 percent in June

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

The June sales tax report for the city of Midland shows a 12.8 percent gain over a year ago. June's report is based on April sales.

"We're happy with that number," Assistant City Manager Tommy Hudson said.

The June reporting period is the first to include the quarter-cent adjustment in sales tax that went into effect April 1. The local sales tax rate is now 8 percent.

But, the income received from that additional quarter-cent is not included in the 12.8 percent increase. Funds received from the quarter-cent sales tax increase will be used to pay the debt on the bonds that will fund the construction of the Scharbauer Sports Complex.

According to the State Comptroller's Web site, the city of Midland received 40.99 percent more sales tax income than last year, when that extra income is included.

Sales tax receipts received this month, including those funds to pay off the sports complex bonds, totaled $1,088,071.42. In a press release, the city of Midland excluded the sports complex portion of the sales tax receipts and reported that city sales tax income from the 7.75 percent sales tax rate totaled $870,457. Last June the city of Midland generated only $771,707.50.

Troy Gifford, director of finance, has said comparisons of three-month moving averages from one year to the next may be more reliable than month-to-month comparisons of sales tax receipts. In comparing April, May and June to the same three months last year, sales tax receipts are higher this year by 5.4 percent.

The funds from this sales tax report to be devoted to the debt payments on the sports complex total $217,614.42.

To pay the debt on the bonds, the city of Midland is planning on receiving between $2.8 million and $3 million a year. City Manager Rick Menchaca has said this estimate was made conservatively and that there never should be any difficulty in meeting those numbers on an annual basis.

Menchaca also pointed out that if the quarter-cent sales tax increase had been in place last June, then this month's number, inclusive of the quarter-cent sales tax increase, also would be 12.8 percent higher.

Menchaca added that the sales tax holiday — sales tax-free shopping on the first weekend of August — will include shopper exemption from the quarter-cent sales tax increase.

■ Several chamber members feel they will have to bring the subject of an economic development tax before voters for a third time.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

As directors and members of the Midland Chamber Commerce discussed the chamber's priorities for the next year, economic development rose to the top of the list, with two subjects coming into focus: the possibility of an economic development tax and garnering community support for that and any other economic development initiatives.

During the Friday closing session of the chamber's annual retreat, several chamber members discussed the possibility of bringing the issue of an economic development tax before Midland voters a third time.

"At some point in time, a tax will have to be brought before voters," said Mike Conaway, a Midland accountant and chairman-elect of the chamber board of directors. "It's too vital an issue to the long-term health of the community."

Midland Mayor Bobby Burns, who spearheaded a proposal to establish a quarter-cent economic development sales tax while also reducing property taxes, said that it is a subject he believes in strongly.

"Midland will have to take a look at an economic development tax," he said, adding that with not only Odessa but cities like Abilene and Amarillo having success with their tax programs, Midlanders must understand the need.

"We may not like the rules but we have to understand that's how it's played," Burns said.

Officials, realizing the difficulty of passing an economic development tax on the heals of the sports complex vote and a planned school bond election, will not push for a tax until after the school bond election.

"It's important we support the school bond," Burns said. "Education and jobs are the two most important things on the plate, and I think it's important to constantly talk about" economic development and an economic development tax.

Conaway said that while an economic development tax will be a piece of the strategic plan, the emphasis will be on education, "laying the groundwork for the community to understand it is the best way to develop Midland and Midland County."

Orland Purcell, one of those in attendance, said that education should include demonstrating how the tax would affect an individual household.

For example, he said, for a quarter-cent economic development tax, a household with $1,000 a month in disposable income would spend eight cents a day on the tax.

Bobby Norman, president of First American Bank and chamber vice chair of membership and communications, noted that Lubbock voters defeated an economic development tax proposal and observed that there is a general mistrust of government entities and skepticism about how the fund would be handled.

He credited Odessa with establishing the Odessa Development Corp. and showing voters how the economic development tax would be appropriated and said a successful effort in Midland would have to be as well organized.

He called for plans to show the community how economic development, or the lack of, affects each household.

"They ask, 'Why should I care?' and 'What does it mean to me?'" he noted. "Without economic development, the tax base declines, education declines. All that needs to be brought home to the individual."

Oil prices give energy stocks lift

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The rebound in oil prices that began in March 1999 and lifted prices to more than $30 on the futures market has given a lift to energy stocks.

Amarillo Economist Karr Ingham reported in his Oil and Gas Regional Stock Index that it grew 81.5 percent in April, to 211.3, from 116.4 in April 1999.

Jim Bob McNeil, an Midland investment representative for Edward D. Jones, said that the energy sector has been performing well over the last six to eight weeks.

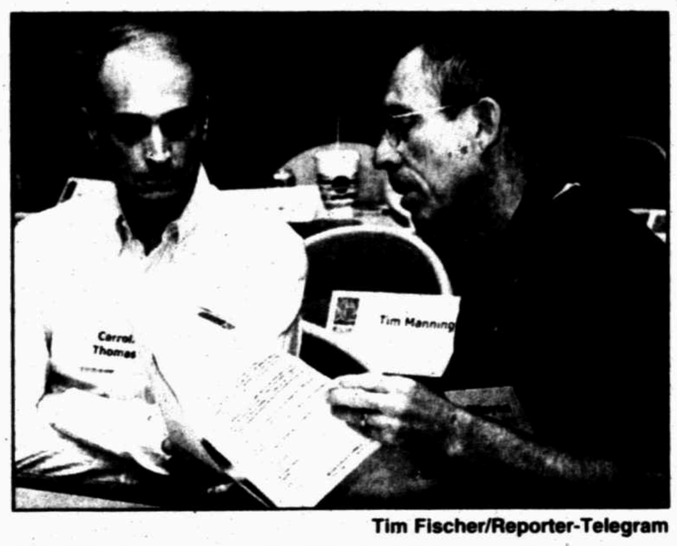

Warren Bell, senior vice president with First Union Securities, said that activity does not appear to have responded to the strong price levels.

"Rig count is not at record levels," he observed. "It's curious to me — the people that punch holes in the ground are apparently not that confident."

He said the fully integrated oil companies like Texaco, Chevron and Exxon-Mobil have benefited from high oil prices and have passed along higher prices for products — like gasoline, jet fuel and lubricants — to consumers. Oil service companies, he said, are holding steady and should continue to do so as long as activity remains stable.

Glenn Little of Little & Co. commented, "It does seem, from an observer's standpoint, that we may have a situation where oil and gas prices are on more of an upward trend than they have been. I don't expect them to scrape bottom

Odessa woman recuperating after killer bee attack

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 79-year-old Odessa woman is in stable condition in Odessa Medical Center after being attacked in her yard by a swarm of Africanized honeybees May 31.

Odessa Police Chief James Jenkins announced Friday that the woman, who has asked to not be identified, was attacked after the so-called killer bees were disturbed after someone mowed the woman's yard. The person who mowed the lawn was not attacked, Jenkins said.

The woman was stung more than 481 times in the attack, Jenkins said. The attack occurred about 7:30 p.m. at the oman's home in the 3400 block of Boulder, he said.

"It is a miracle that she's alive," Jenkins said. "I have seen people far younger get stung fewer times and not make it."

A report from Texas A&M University showed that the bees were, in fact, the Africanized variety.

The bees first started to make their way into Texas in October 1990, said P. Kirk Visscher, an associate professor of entomology and associate entomologist The University of California — Riverside.

An active researcher on the bees, Visscher said Africanized honeybees are the same species as the familiar European honeybees. They are called "Africanized," because of the inbreeding of European bees with African bees. The bees were accidentally set loose in the 1950s. They earned the name killer bees because of aggressive behavior.

Visscher said that it is not easy to tell which variety is encountered.

"Many people expect Africanized bees to be larger and very distinctive, but in fact they look nearly identical to the honeybees we have long had here California," Visscher said. "Honeybees are about 3/4 inch long, brownish, and a little fuzzy.

Avoiding bee attacks

✔ Bee proofing: Look for cracks and holes in your house that might lead to wall voids or other cavities a colony could occupy. Screen or caulk these holes, or fill the cavity with insulation, and bees will not move in. Clean up debris (tires, pots) that might provide nesting sites on your property.

✔ Be alert: Look before disturbing vegetation. Many bees coming and going from a single spot (not just many bees at flowers) may indicate a nest.

✔ Get help: Contact trained and equipped personnel (see "bee removal" in the Yellow Pages) if you discover a honeybee colony. Don't try to remove them alone.

✔ If stung: First, get away, run to shelter of a car or building, and stay there even if some bees come in with you (there are more outside). Do not jump in water (bees will still be in the area when you come up). Once safe, remove stingers from your skin (it does not matter how you do it) as quickly as possible to reduce the amount of venom they inject.

Citizens who see unusual bee activity around their homes are asked to stay away for the bees and notify Animal Control or call 911.

OBITUARIES

Patrick Anderson

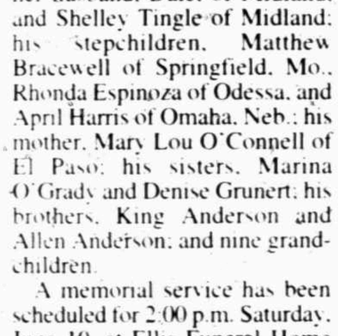

George Patrick Anderson was born August 1, 1940 in El Paso, Texas to George Lucas and Mary Lou (O'Connell) Anderson. He grew up in El Paso, and at the age of 17 he entered the U.S. Air Force. He was stationed in Offut, Nebraska. After his discharge, he returned to El Paso and then moved to Midland in 1977. Mr. Anderson worked as a master carpenter for many years and was the owner and operator of Nova Star Windfield Repair. Then in 1993, he joined MRT in the single copy department. He was later promoted to manager of the department. Mr. Anderson established the Optimist Club in Greenwood, coached in the Greenwood Little League, and was an active member of the Greenwood Baptist Church, which he helped construct.

Mr. Anderson died at his home on Wednesday, June 7, 2000.

Survivors include his wife, Wyleen Anderson of Midland; his son, Michael McCrae of Cordiss, California; his daughters, Penny Maureen Levy of Al Crescenta, California, Tammy Sierman and her husband, Dale, of Midland, and Shelley Tingle of Midland; his stepchildren, Matthew Bracewell of Springfield, Mo., Rhonda Espinoza of Odessa, and April Harris of Omaha, Neb.; his mother, Mary Lou O'Connell of El Paso; his sisters, Marina O'Grady and Denise Grunert; his brothers, King Anderson and Allen Anderson; and nine grandchildren.

A memorial service has been scheduled for 2:00 p.m. Saturday, June 10, at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Waymon Swopes officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is handling the arrangements.

The family requests memorials be directed to the American Lung Association, P.O. Box 26460, Austin, Texas 78755.

Bill Mayne

Memorial services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 10, at First Presbyterian Church.

Bill died at his home surrounded by his family on Thursday, June 8, 2000.

Bill Mayne was born January 25, 1918 in Austin, Texas. He graduated from the University of Texas in 1941 with a BBA degree. Following graduation, he remained in Austin and worked with his father in the food brokerage business. After his father's death, Bill spent a brief time in Miami, Florida as a salesman for Decca Records. At that time, World War II was just getting under way. Bill returned to Austin, and volunteered for the Navy, but was not accepted because of a minor medical condition. He then began working in the mortgage loan business.

During this time, he met his wife, Annette Taylor. Annette and Bill were married on November 29, 1945 at the University Baptist Church in Austin. After several years, they adopted their first two children, Laura and Thurman.

In 1954, the family moved to Hobbs, New Mexico, where their third child, Taylor, was born. In Hobbs, Bill owned and operated Bill Mayne's Toys and Hobbies. He sold the toy store in 1961 and moved the family to Midland to assist his sister-in-law, Adell Vosatko, and her husband, Rudy, who was very ill. He helped Adell and Rudy with their jewelry store until Rudy's death. Following the closing of that store, Bill became a securities and real estate broker.

During their early years in Midland, Bill and his family were members of Fannin Terrace Baptist Church. Later, Bill and Annette became involved with a non-denominational Christian organization known as Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship International. Bill served as president of this organization for eight years. At this time, Bill began distributing Christian materials from his home. The need for a wider distribution of Christian material inspired him to found Christian Faith Mission, a non-denominational, non-profit organization that supplies books, tapes and other witnessing tools at no cost to the Christian community at large.

A fourth child was added to the Mayne household around 1970 when Grady McGowan came to live with them. Annette met Grady while teaching school at South Elementary, and Bill and Annette offered him a home and became his legal guardians. Grady has certainly become a member of the family and is considered one of the children.

Bill's wife, Annette, preceded him in death on November 29, 1994—their 49th wedding anniversary. They are survived by their four children, Laura Curry and her husband, Glenn, and their daughters, Adell and Helen of Midland; Thurman Mayne and his wife, Cheryl, and their sons, Michael, William and Stephen, of Coppell, Texas; Taylor Mayne and his wife, Jeannie, and their children, Howard, Patrick, Russell and Annette of Midland; and Grady McGowan and his wife, Lila, and their children, Kathryn and Grant of Midland. Also surviving are Bill's sister-in-law, Adell Vosatko; and several nieces and nephews, including Jonell and Mike Cristiani, and Elmo and Kitty Cummins and their families.

Over the years, Bill was involved in many Christian organizations including Teen Challenge, Crisis Pregnancy Center and Community Bible Study. He served as director of Christian Faith Mission until the time of his death. He was actively involved with Christian care groups and non-denominational home fellowships. Bill's goal in life was always to be conformed to the image of Christ.

In lieu of flowers, donations are to be directed to a Christian organization of one's choice.

Naomi Brown

Naomi Faye Brown was born on November 24, 1924 in Waverly, Kansas to Clarence and Velma Oden. She married William Allan Brown on October 25, 1941 in San Diego, Calif. Mrs. Brown was a homemaker and minister's wife. She was a Bible teacher for over 50 years. Mrs. Brown was a resident of Alabama for the last seven years and a member of the Moulton Church of Christ.

Mrs. Brown died in Birmingham, Ala. on June 7, 2000.

She was preceded in death by her son, John Michael Brown. Survivors include her husband, William Brown of Moulton, Ala.; her son, Dale Brown of Midland; her daughters, Linda Strickland of Houston, Reta Becker of Moulton, Ala., and Margaret Blackwood of Hartselle, Ala.; 11 grandchildren, including Tod Brown, Cary Brown, Alan Brown, and April Brown, all of Midland, and Trisha Wall and Randy Brown, both of Tyler, Texas; 21 great-grandchildren; her brother, C.W. Oden of Cordelle, Okla.; and her sisters, Fern Britton of Plainview, Texas and Barbara Watts of Chowchilla, Calif.

Funeral services have been scheduled for 1 p.m. on Saturday at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ with Tod Brown, Darin Kennedy, and Bill Becker officiating. Interment will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Serving as pallbearers will be Tod Brown, Cary Brown, Alan Brown, Randy Brown, Cory Becker, Darin Kennedy, Ben Wall, Brady Stewart, and Donnie Green.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Naomi Brown Memorial Fund, c/o Moulton Church of Christ. These funds will be used to establish a service award at National Health Care in Moulton, Ala.

Spencer Bramlett

Spencer Gage Bramlett, infant son of William Walker and Julianne (Dean) Bramlett, died at a local hospital on Monday, June 5, 2000.

He is survived by his parents, William and Julianne Bramlett of Midland; his sister, Ava Noelle Bramlett of Midland; his grandfathers, Robert A. Dean of Midland and Billy W. Bramlett of Huntsville, Texas; his grandmother, Judy Bramlett of Houston, Texas; his aunt and uncle, Chris and Steve Swenson of Houston, Texas; and his aunt, Leslie Dean of Midland.

Graveside services were held on Wednesday, June 7, in Resthaven Memorial Park Babyland. The Rev. Jeff Fouts, of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, officiated. Ellis Funeral Home is handling the arrangements.

Center to hold annual bike event

Centers for Children & Families will have its 6th annual bike event — "Break the Cycle of Abuse 24 Hour Bike Event" — beginning at noon Saturday, June 17. The family-oriented event builds awareness and raises funds to help "break the cycle of abuse" for children and families in the Permian Basin.

Dozens of riders from the Permian Basin Bicycle Association and concerned citizens will join together to ride a route from Midland/Odessa and Gardendale for 24 hours for Centers.

Cyclists will depart from Cumulus Broadcasting on FM 191 and a rest stop has been at the Kent Kwik on FM 158 and FM 1788.

Bodies pile up in Kisangani, thousands hide from shelling

By Hrvoje Hranjski
Associated Press

KISANGANI, Congo — Mortar and artillery shells rained down and stray bullets whistled through the deserted streets of this Congo River port Friday, where 200,000 terrified, angry residents waited in vain for the Rwandan and Ugandan forces to cease their relentless firing.

The Red Cross said more than 150 civilians have been killed and 700 wounded since the shelling and shooting began Monday. Rwanda and Uganda use Kisangani as a logistics base to support rival rebel groups, and despite an agreement to demilitarize the city, have begun fighting for control of it.

The bodies of three people, two of them women, lay decomposing in the back yard of their home Friday where a mortar round fell Wednesday night as they were preparing food.

Two more people were buried under rubble inside. Nobody had dared to collect or bury the bodies because of the constant shelling and gunfire.

"We have no food or water. It's all because of Rwandans and Ugandans. They are killing us," said Gabriel Makoko, who lived next door to the dead. Other neighbors, their faces covered with shirts to ward off the stench, peered at the bodies and shook their heads in disbelief.

"I left Beirut like this. Now I have to see it again," said Hussein Abad, a Lebanese who in better days purchased gemstones from Congolese traders.

In New York, the heads of five U.N. humanitarian agencies called Friday for Rwanda and Uganda to immediately stop fighting.

Declaring that the entire civilian population of the northern town of Kisangani was "completely cut off from humanitarian relief," the senior U.N. officials said, "we urge the governments of Rwanda and Uganda to immediately end the fighting that is killing innocent civilians."

Both armies were in the process of withdrawing from the city in accordance with a prearranged plan. But U.N. military observers said 6,000 mortar shells have fallen on Kisangani since the latest fighting broke out this week.

The trapped residents of Kisangani, already impoverished by decades of misrule under former dictator Mobutu Sese Seko and driven to despair by the second civil war in two years, ventured outside their homes Friday to gather firewood so they could boil the few cassava leaves they could gather to eat.

Lethal shrapnel sliced through palm trees, which toppled over onto crumbling, potholed roads. No one had any idea when the firing would cease.

The 22 unarmed U.N. military observers, based in Kisangani since the beginning of the year, were desperate because of the failure of the local Rwandan and Ugandan army commanders to respect a cease-fire they had agreed to at least 20 times since the fighting started.

"We cannot collect the dead from the street and houses. Part of the city is destroyed. Doctors cannot move from their homes. There is no cease-fire," said Lt. Col. Danilo Paiva, an Uruguayan who heads the observer team.

Under the terms of the Lusaka peace accord signed last July and August by the Congolese government, the three rebel groups and five foreign armies involved in the conflict, the observers are supposed to be reinforced by a 5,537-strong force. So far, only 100 U.N. personnel have deployed.

Both armies, initially allies in the 22-month war against President Laurent Kabila, blame each other for firing the first shot. Kisangani has been a key logistics base for both, and despite agreeing to a withdrawal, they are loathe to abandon the city.

On Friday, Lt. Col. Paiva secured a fragile, five-hour lull in the fighting to drive three U.N. vehicles to two hospitals. The observers — dressed in camouflage uniforms, flack jackets and some wearing blue helmets — were confronted by weary Congolese patients and doctors in dire need of power generators, medicine and clean hypodermic needles.

Lebanon tries more former pro-Israeli militiamen

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Seventy-two militia members who fought for Israel during its occupation of southern Lebanon faced a military court Friday on charges that included collaborating with the enemy.

Defense lawyers for the third group of South Lebanon Army fighters to be tried called for acquittals or lenient sentences, saying their clients had been coerced or forced into collaborating with Israel, court officials said on condition of anonymity.

After about seven hours of closed hearings, the court postponed verdicts for 32 defendants until June 30, the officials said. Decisions on 40 cases were expected within hours.

Other charges against the 72 defendants included joining the militia, entering Israel and marketing Israeli fish in Lebanon. Still technically at war with Israel, Lebanon prohibits any dealings with the Jewish state.

The court, whose verdicts cannot be appealed, has already sentenced 101 former militiamen to jail terms of up to five years. Anti-Israeli guerrillas viewed the sentences as lenient, while relatives of the accused and some politicians called them too harsh.

Hezbollah, the guerrilla group that led the fight to evict Israel from Lebanon, has demanded tough sentences, warning that ex-militiamen set free may not be safe in their villages.

For nearly two decades, the SLA helped the Israeli army control the southern Lebanese border and ward off guerrilla attacks on northern Israeli settlements. The militiamen also controlled the lives of the zone's 120,000 people, jailing and expelling those deemed a security threat to them or the Israeli occupation.

The SLA — which was trained, armed and paid for by Israel — collapsed amid the Israeli withdrawal last month, and about 1,500 former SLA members surrendered to Lebanese authorities. About 7,000 ex-militiamen and family members sought refuge across the border in Israel.

State forecast

AccuWeather® forecast for daytime conditions, low high temperatures

Via Associated Press

Texas weather

While soggy South Texas should expect more rain from the leftovers of a tropical depression, the rest of the state will continue to be muggy with a chance of showers Saturday.

South Texas was still being hit hard by the remnants of a tropical depression on Friday. Rainfall amounts varied from 1 to 3 inches across the area with isolated totals to 5 inches. Several flash flood warnings were issued. Highs ranged from 93 at Laughlin Air Force Base to 73 at Randolph Air Force Base.

Showers and thunderstorms associated with the depression should continue through the weekend. Temperatures will be moderated by clouds and rain.

Rain moved across most of North Texas in waves from south to north. Most of the region had totals less than an inch.

The rain cooled temperatures into the mid 70s, but the rest of the region was warm and muggy with highs in the mid 80s. Southeasterly winds from 10 to 20 mph helped to pull in more gulf moisture, making for sticky conditions where it wasn't raining.

Moisture continued to stream across West Texas with light rain in some areas. Highs were mostly in the 70s with wind from the south 10 to 20 mph and occasionally gusty.

The forecast calls for a chance of showers and thunderstorms for most of West Texas with highs in the 80s and lower 90s. Big Bend may reach into the 100s.

TAX: Board member recommends community survey

(From 1A)

Board member Joe Dominey recommended a survey of the community because "We don't know what the community feels about economic development or a tax."

Burns said he is sensing more support for such a tax.

"The voters are wise and very educated and they're seeing more and more the reason and the need for economic development," he said. "We're seeing the high paying oil jobs we've counted on for decades are changing and we need to develop the economy more."

Jane Phares, executive director of the Petroleum Museum and vice chairwoman of the Convention and Visitors Bureau for the chamber, and Shura Lindgren, director of convention and visitor development, presented ways tourism and conventions could be used to develop and diversify the economy.

Tourism provides Midland County's second largest payroll, $28 million, behind the Midland Independent School District, noted Ms. Phares, and is the third largest industry in the state.

"We are and we can get more of those visitors," she said. "Think of tourism not just in the traditional sense. You have friends and family who come to town. Business visitors come to town; there are people on their way to somewhere else but who stay a day or two. What they spend affects everyone else."

Ms. Lindgren said the challenges to developing tourism include raising community awareness of the impact of and importance of tourism. Challenges include infrastructure needs like public transportation, more leisure areas and pedestrian areas, development of Interstate 20 and revitalization of downtown.

She said opportunities lie in developing new features like a lake, attracting an amusement park to the area, building on the area's western heritage, establishing a professional car race track and capitalizing on Midland's geographic position as a gateway to Big Bend to build on the growing popularity of nature tourism and tourists seeking unique experiences.

A much larger Midland Center, no matter where it is located, would enable the Convention and Visitors Bureau to attract larger meetings, she said, calling for a center with at least 40,000 square feet for an exhibit hall, 20,000 to 25,000 for a ballroom and meeting rooms for breakout events.

STOCKS: Oil prices to have trickle effect, observer says

It will have a trickle effect, bringing more operations and that will trickle into other sectors like tax collections, he said.

"I heard this comment from an acquaintance of mine in the insurance business about the majors leaving: 'Who cares? Let 'em.' Their properties are still here and they never gave me one dollar. The small operators that bought those properties, they've insured their trucks with me,'" Little said. "In the past, the large nameless companies, their insurance, their finances, their printing, have all moved out of town. But when those properties are bought by new, strong independents that are locally based, those dollars stay here and circulate.

"We're in a situation now," he said, "where people have been sitting back to see if the prices are real and dusted off their properties. Now psychologically they can say 'Whew! The coast is clear' and then activity will take off."

McNeil placed the performance of the energy sector in the middle of the market, which some local analysts say is trying to find a direction.

Violet Singh, a financial analyst with Waddell and Reed, said she believes the market has bottomed out.

It took into stride the ruling Wednesday that Microsoft should be broken into two separate companies because that decision had been anticipated, she said, and that's why she believes the market has hit bottom.

"When the final ruling comes, and I'm sure it will go through an appeals process, the impact if the decision is not what was anticipated, will be dramatic," she said. "This is a test of whether or not this is really an entrepreneurial nation."

Bell said that the initial ruling in April that Microsoft had indeed violated antitrust laws was the pin that burst the technology sector's bubble, sending the technology-heavy NASDAQ index from over 5,000 points to just under 3,500, a correction he said was a healthy dose of reality.

He said the market is trying to find its direction and is waiting to see how Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan interprets upcoming economic indicators.

"I don't look for the market to do a whole lot either way," he said. "It will move in a channel and we shouldn't anticipate seeing a lot of movement up or down through the summer. It won't hit 20,000 and it won't fall to 5,000."

Little said the market is meandering and is being led by individual stocks rather than a large group like technology.

McNeil said his company likes telecommunications and health stocks and some good technology stocks.

"With earnings reports about to hit the streets, people need to be careful what sector they're invested in," he cautioned, adding that in the coming week the Consumer Price Index, retail sales, housing starts and other key economic indicators will be announced.

"Next week will be a good indicator of what the Fed will do at its next meeting," he said.

ATTACK: Odessa woman stung more than 480 times

(From 1A)

Their nests are normally hidden in cavities. Less fuzzy insects with bright yellow and black markings, or with gray paper nests are probably wasps, not bees. Larger bees are not honeybees."

He said the difference between African bees and European bees can only really be seen by microscope and DNA. He warns that any bees not under the care of a bee keeper should be treated as Africanized bees.

Visscher said there are a couple of serious problems a person can run into when dealing with Africanized bees.

"Stinging. Africanized bees defend their colonies much more vigorously than do European bees. The colonies are easily disturbed. When they do sting, many more bees may participate, so there is a danger of receiving more stings," Visscher said. "This can make them life threatening, especially to people allergic to stings, or with limited capacity to escape and to confined livestock or pets. Once disturbed, Africanized honeybees will continue the attack for a long distance.

"Swarming and nesting. Africanized bee colonies are likely to be more common than European bees have been, and they swarm more frequently. They nest in places European bees did not, including small cavities near the ground like water meter boxes or overturned flower pots."

Most people will probably never see a colony of Africanized bees, Visscher said. However, he said, there are a number of steps they can take to stay as safe as possible (see related box on 1A).

From Staff Reports

The investigation into the death of three-year-old Micheal Chilcoat is still ongoing, according to Tina Jauz, public information officer for the city of Midland.

Micheal died June 4, at 5:25 p.m. after he accidentally shot himself in the left eye with a 9mm handgun belonging to his father.

"The Texas Penal Code states that the offense is making a firearm accessible to a child, which is a Class A misdemeanor," said Ms. Jauz, adding that it has not been determined whether any charges will be filed in connection with the case.

The law also stipulates that if the person making a gun available to a child is a family member, police must wait seven days before filing charges. If any charges were to be filed, it would not occur before Monday.

Authorities said it appeared that 3-year-old Micheal, of 3904 Cedar Spring St., built a makeshift stairway to the top of his parents' closet, where he found his father Steven's loaded 9mm handgun. Micheal is then believed to have carried the gun into the back yard and climbed into an abandoned boat. The shooting occurred about 3:30 p.m., police said. The child was pronounced dead at 5:25 p.m.

18 years later, Iowa woman confronts Guatemalan nightmare

By Will Weissert
Associated Press

RABINAL, Guatemala — The little girl ran for her life with a 9-day-old sister strapped to her back. Soldiers, distracted by the process of tying the girls' mother to a nearby pole, didn't follow.

"She told me to take the baby and run and never look back," said Denise Becker. "The soldiers were everywhere but all I could see was their big black boots because I was so short."

Becker, then named Dominga Sic, fled and hid. She watched Guatemalan soldiers march women and children into nearby hills. An hour later she heard the gun shots: hundreds and hundreds of them.

Now a 27-year-old cosmetologist from Iowa, thanks to adoption, Becker returned to Guatemala this week to meet relatives she had never seen — and along the way decided to give what is apparently the first eyewitness testimony of the incident.

On the Net:
Physicians for Human Rights site, http://www.phrusa.org

The journey brought Becker to this mostly Indian mountain village, 125 miles northwest of Guatemala City, where a scorching sun bakes the dusty, narrow roads in the morning and unrelenting rains flood them at night.

On March 13, 1982, Guatemalan soldiers here killed an estimated 77 women and 100 children in what is known as the Rio Negro Massacre — one of the worst mass killings of a 36-year civil war that killed some 200,000 Guatemalans before 1996 peace accords.

Weeks passed before relatives found the terrified girl hiding in a mountain cave. By then, her tiny sister — who had not yet been named — had died of exposure.

"I remember times hiding when there were soldiers very close and I thought, 'They are going to finish killing the rest of my family,'" said Becker, whose 5-foot frame and long black hair are unmistakably Mayan, even though her light tan skin earned her the nickname "Little White Girl."

She recalls staying in a series of rural Indian nunneries, hidden in case officials were trying to find her. At an orphanage in a run-down section of Guatemala City, she first me lock out what happened that I really began to think it was all just my active imagination playing tricks," she said. "I carried a burden that was so awful it began to feel unreal."

Becker still lives in Algona, a town of 8,000 people, with her husband and two children.

Local church groups and some of her clients helped Becker and her husband come for a visit with her surviving relatives and try to help scientists prove her links to them using DNA tests.

AP Photo

Denise Becker and her husband Blane meet with the press in Rabinal, Guatemala 125 miles northwest of Guatemala City, on Thursday. Becker returned to Guatemala from Iowa, 18 years after Guatemalan soilders killed both of her parents. Becker returned to Guatemala to help try to identify the remains of her natural parents and give what is apparently the first eyewitness testimony of the incident in this mostly Indian mountain village.

"My first reaction here was just incredible joy at knowing I could answer some of my questions," Becker said Thursday during a visit to the home of her aunt, Dorothy Sic. "But also there's incredible sadness as my experience comes rushing back."

The one-room, dirt-floored house outside of Rabinal that her Guatemalan relatives call home has technically belonged to Becker since the government awarded it to any of her father's surviving children — reciprocity for the violence of the civil war.

Her father's other sister, Julia Sic, had tears in her eyes as she put a traditional Mayan headdress on a not-so-willing Becker.

"You remind me of how your mother looked," Sic said first in Achi and then in Spanish, neither of which Becker could understand.

Becker and all of her Guatemalan relatives gave blood samples to anthropologists from the Boston-based Physicians for Human Rights this week. DNA analysis is expected to prove their links — and the validity of her memories.

On Wednesday, authorities gave Becker an ID card that belonged to her father. Its tiny black-and-white mug shot is the only picture she will ever own of either of her Guatemalan parents.

Becker said that a week before the massacre that killed her mother, soldiers collected ID cards from all of the men in Rio Negro. They were told to go to a courthouse in nearby Xococ to retrieve them a few days later. None of the men returned.

Becker canceled a planned trip to the clandestine cemetery in Xococ where her father is buried because human rights activists convinced her that hostility from people linked to the military made it too risky.

"You're talking about a place where the military had absolute control over everything, and that just doesn't disappear even after as much time as 18 years," said Kathleen Dill, an anthropologist from the University of California at Davis who works in the area.

While in the region, Becker was to present what the rights group said was the first eyewitness account of the Rio Negro incident to local officials in hopes that they will try to prosecute those responsible.

Most of the old village is now under water, flooded behind a dam that supplies electricity to Guatemala City.

"You get the feeling here that everyone here is trying to cover up what happened," Becker said. "Until Guatemala can come to terms and admit what it did to it's own people, there will never be any real progress."

Pinochet goes to highest court to keep his immunity

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Defense lawyers for Gen. Augusto Pinochet on Friday appealed a court ruling that stripped the former dictator of immunity from prosecution.

The appeal to the Supreme Court was aimed at reversing last month's decision by a lower court allowing Pinochet to stand trial on human rights charges.

Defense team lawyer Gustavo Collao said the decision by the Santiago Court of Appeals was "a judicial offense" to the 84-year-old Pinochet, who as a senator for life previously enjoyed immunity from prosecution. The appeal stressed Pinochet's innocence, Collao said.

Pinochet faces 110 criminal complaints stemming from abuses during his 1973-90 regime.

The bulk of the complaints stem from the so-called "Caravan of Death," in which military officers toured several cities shortly after Pinochet's coup, dragging political prisoners from jail and executing them. An official report says 75 people were killed.

The Santiago appeals court voted to remove Pinochet's immunity, stating that "there are clear suspicions" of his responsibility for the caravan.

Putin won't pressure North Korea on missiles during upcoming visit

■ The United States is considering building a limited anti-missile defense system against "rogue states" such as North Korea.

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Vladimir Putin won't try to persuade North Korea to drop its missile program during an upcoming state visit, despite U.S. concerns that the isolated communist country is a growing threat to world peace, Russia's foreign minister said Friday.

The Kremlin announced that Putin will visit North Korea shortly, but did not give a date. The visit would be the first by a Russian leader to North Korea, and comes at a time when Moscow and Washington disagree over its possible threat.

The United States is considering building a limited anti-missile defense system against "rogue states" such as North Korea, a proposal strongly opposed by Russia, which sees the U.S. plan as a threat to its own nuclear forces. Putin's visit to Pyongyang could further strain ties with Washington.

"President Putin is coming on a visit to a friendly country and he does not intend to talk anybody out of anything," Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov told a news conference when asked if the Russian leader would urge North Korea to curb its missile program. He added that Russia wants to help promote stability on the divided Korean peninsula.

Putin's foreign policy aide Sergei Prikhodko said the visit would be before the meeting of the G-8 industrialized nations in Japan on July 21-23.

Russia firmly rejects Washington's argument that the threat from "rogue states" is so great that the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty must be amended to allow construction of a U.S. national missile-defense system. Russia proposes developing an alternate system jointly with Europe and NATO, but Washington says such a system is inadequate.

Putin and President Clinton failed to reach agreement on the ABM issue during a summit in Moscow last weekend, although Russian officials acknowledged there was a threat. Putin has warned that Russia could pull out of all arms control agreements if Washington breeches the ABM treaty.

Although Russia is potentially as vulnerable as the United States to rogue missile attacks, Ivanov said "we proceed from the view that currently, there is no realistic threat."

In terms of the future, naturally, nothing can be excluded," he added.

Also Friday, North Korea accused the United States of using "fictitious" threats to justify its missile defense plan.

"The U.S. employs the trite method of sacrificing small countries to please big countries, but it is gravely mistaken if it thinks that will work on (North Korea)," the North's Foreign Ministry said.

Putin called Clinton on Friday to discuss several issues, including missile defense. His impending visit to North Korea was not discussed, a White House official said on condition of anonymity.

By making the visit, Putin aims both to undermine the United States and expand Russia's influence in foreign affairs, analysts said. Restoring some of Moscow's global clout is among Putin's top goals.

"To a certain extent, it's an anti-American move, a Russian retaliation for the U.S. dismissal of Putin's proposal to jointly build anti-missile systems," said Yevgeny Volk, an analyst at the Heritage Foundation in Moscow.

Although Ivanov said Putin wouldn't try to dissuade North Korea from its missile program, some analysts suggested Moscow may be seeking a compromise such as putting the Korean missile force under international supervision.

"Putin may try to reach an agreement that would place North Korean missiles under international control in exchange for financial assistance — a deal similar to that reached before on a North Korean nuclear program," said Sergei Markov, director of the Institute of Political Studies.

"That would deprive the United States of its key argument in favor of anti-missile defense," he said.

Moscow has been trying to revive some of its Soviet-era alliances. Moscow was a key backer of North Korea during the Cold War, but relations fell apart after the Soviet collapse.

North Korea has been taking small steps toward ending its isolation. The announcement of Putin's trip came just before North Korean leader Kim Jong Il was to meet for the first time with the president of South Korea, President Kim Dae-jung.

"Russia is trying to return to areas where it was traditionally present, which puts it on a collision course with the United States," said Ivan Safranchuk, a world affairs analyst at the PIR-Center independent think-tank.

Ivanov said the Russian leader was also considering an invitation from South Korea, but noted that it was "too early" to speak of anything definite.

Few clues, little hope in probe of elusive Greek terrorists

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Scotland Yard experts joined the probe Friday into the slaying of a British defense attache with few clues and little immediate hope of cracking the Greek terrorist puzzle that has frustrated a generation of agents.

For 25 years, the terrorist cell November 17 has completely eluded Greek investigators and a host of outside sleuths: Interpol, CIA, FBI and others. There were no indications of a different outcome following Thursday's ambush of Brig. Stephen Saunders — the group's first British victim and its 22nd killing 1975.

"I see no reason to be optimistic," said Maria Bossi, a former member of Greece's anti-terrorist commission.

The text appeared to reflect the group's evolution from Marxist ideology to a populist perspective. The NATO action was strongly opposed by most Greeks, who objected to the alliance's intervention in the region and felt kinship with fellow Orthodox Christian Serbs.

But the British Defense Ministry said Saunders had no role in planning the NATO campaign and was based in Kuwait as part of a U.N. observer mission when the bombing began in March 1999. He later helped direct Kosovo-bound British troops, the ministry said.

A much bigger riddle than the communique confronted investigators once again: how does November 17 continue to get away with it?

Some critics — especially in Washington — claim Greek officials lack the will to risk political upheaval and wage an anti-terrorism crackdown. Others blame gross incompetence by Greek investigators and an unwillingness to fully cooperate with foreign colleagues.

Former CIA Director James Woolsey has suggested the governing Socialists refuse to move against known suspects of November 17 — a charge the administration denies.

"But it can't just be such simple explanations. This is a group that knows what it's doing. It's a very sophisticated organization," said Bruce Hoffman, head of terrorist research for Rand Corp.

Hoffman and other analysts hold a common view of November 17's structure: a small, tightly controlled group that meticulously plans its strikes.

AP Photo
Heather Saunders, widow of British defense attache Stephen Saunders, speaks to media outside her home in a northern Athens suburb on Friday. Stephen Saunders was killed Thursday by the elusive Greek terrorist group November 17.

The latest declaration was dated "March," suggesting the slaying was in the works for months. Saunders, who drove alone in a car without bulletproofing, was ambushed by motorcycle-riding gunmen wearing helmets on a road always clogged with morning commuter traffic.

"November 17 plans their hits very, very carefully — having clear escape routes and leaving no clues," said Hoffman.

November 17 has also avoided evolving into a mass armed movement and collapsing under relentless police and army pressure, such as Italy's Red Brigades and Germany's Red Army Faction.

Police have very little to go on. A few witnesses gave sketchy descriptions of tall, muscular young men. This could suggest recruits are brought in by older members. One witness also spoke of a neck scar — a possible link to an injury suffered during last year's missile attack against the German ambassador's residence.

But the November 17 statement said no member was hurt then, casting some doubt on the importance of test results from blood found at the scene: male, type B, estimated age 30.

British investigators could scale back their operation by the weekend unless new evidence emerges, said police sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Some commentators have demanded action this time and bemoaned another serious blemish on Greece's international image.

"I don't care how they catch them, who catches them, what steps are used to catch them," wrote Yannis Pretenteris in the daily To Vima. "I don't care if Greek police catch them, American cowboys or the Chinese. It's enough that they catch them."

Saunder's widow, Heather, sobbed as she read an appeal to authorities: "For the sake and future of Greece within the European community, these wicked men must be brought to justice."

Security measures were immediately beefed up at British and U.S. embassies. The cost for protection at the U.S. Embassy in Athens is already the highest in the world, but officials refuse to give a specific figure.

Greece is under extremely heavy American pressure to catch and prosecute members of November 17, which takes its name from the 1973 student-led uprising against the military junta that ruled Greece from 1967-74. The group's victims include four American officials and one U.S. Embassy employee.

Others wondered whether Greece has the competence to handle security for the 2004 Olympics.

"They have a lot of work to do before 2004," said an editorial in the left-leaning British daily The Guardian.

LONDON (AP) — A battle royal over the copyright of Prince William's 18th birthday photos led to the resignation Friday of Prince Charles' press secretary.

Charles announced in a statement that he accepted "with deep regret" the resignation of Sandy Henney, who had been his press adviser for seven years.

With William's birthday approaching June 21, his father's office at St. James' Palace had invited Daily Telegraph photographer Ian Jones to take a set of pictures for release June 17 and 18 to all national and regional newspapers and magazines.

Photos of William and his 15-year-old brother Prince Harry are valuable because so few are taken in the course of the year. The boys' privacy is strictly protected and their father has made clear he does not want them treated as commercial commodities.

The usual palace procedure is to retain the copyright on such arranged photos and to give the sales proceeds to charity.

Friday's statement from the palace said the office had failed to ensure it held the copyright.

"We share our part of the blame — in that we should have taken action to ensure that copyright was vested with us," the statement said.

For that reason, Henney resigned.

The palace said Prince Charles hoped that "no one should profit from pictures, either of Prince William or Prince Harry, and that those who do own the copyright will make clear that all proceeds will go to charity."

Later that evening, Jones announced he would transfer the copyright of the photographs as Prince Charles wished.

A statement from Jones said he had been honored by the invitation to take exclusive pictures of Prince William at Eton.

"The law conferred the copyright on me and no suggestion has been made until today that I should donate it to the Crown," he said. "Now that the suggestion has been made, I shall gladly assign the copyright as the Prince of Wales may direct."

Editor Charles Moore said The Daily Telegraph had no financial involvement with the photographs.

"While I am personally sorry that Sandy Henney has resigned, we see this as an acceptance by the Prince of Wales's office that they did behave unprofessionally toward the Telegraph," Moore said.

On Thursday, Moore had accused the prince's office of distributing the pictures inequitably and going back on a promise to allow an early release of the photos so they could be processed for a Daily Telegraph magazine.

The palace replied that the photographs were being made available fairly to all national and regional newspapers and magazines.

Henney was well-respected by many in the news media and was known to have a good working relationship with Charles and his sons.

Justice Department finds no conspiracy in King assassination

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After 18 months, a Justice Department investigation rejected allegations that conspirators aided or framed James Earl Ray in the 1968 assassination of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. It recommended against further investigation.

The new investigation found no credible evidence to support allegations in recent years from former Memphis bar owner Loyd Jowers and former FBI agent Donald Wilson, and earlier from Ray himself, that a mysterious "Raoul" or others, including federal agents, police or black ministers, participated in a plot to kill King.

As in four earlier investigations, the Justice investigators "found no reliable evidence that Dr. King was killed by conspirators who framed James Earl Ray," according to their 150-page report released Friday. "We found nothing to disturb the 1969 judicial determination that James Earl Ray murdered Dr. King."

"We found no credible evidence to support allegations of any conspiracy to kill Dr. King involving Jowers, Raoul, the Mafia, Memphis police officers, figures involved in the Kennedy assassination, federal agents, U.S. military personnel or African-American ministers close to Dr. King," said Barry Kowalski, head of the investigation and one of the department's leading civil rights prosecutors.

"We are convinced of our conclusions beyond a reasonable doubt."

But the investigation did not convince the King family and some others close to the case.

"We are disappointed," said Martin Luther King III on behalf of the family, "but this is certainly not something we did not expect." He recalled that the family had sought an investigation conducted by a "commission independent of the government, because we do not believe that in such a politically sensitive matter the government is capable of investigating itself."

The younger King told an Atlanta news conference his family planned no further action but stands by a Memphis civil jury's ruling that Jowers and "others, including government agencies" conspired to assassinate King.

In Smartt, Tenn., James Earl Ray's brother Jerry said, "The American public and the King family believe James was innocent so it doesn't matter to me what the politicians say." The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who was with King when he was shot, told CNN he still believes other people assisted Ray.

Although Ray pleaded guilty in 1969 to killing King, he claimed three days later — and until his 1998 death in prison — that a mysterious Raoul, later Raul, had framed him.

AP Photo

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. stands with other civil rights leaders on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel in Memphis, Tenn., on April 3, 1968, a day before he was assassinated at approximately the same place. From left are Hosea Williams, Jesse Jackson, King, and Ralph Abernathy. Rejecting a series of conspiracy allegations, the report from an 18-month Justice Department investigation released Friday found no credible evidence that anyone but James Earl Ray killed King. It recommended no further investigation.

But the weight of the evidence "establishes that Raoul is merely the creation of James Earl Ray," the report said.

Prodded by the King family's embrace of some of these theories, Attorney General Janet Reno ordered the new probe Aug. 26, 1998, even though two Justice Department investigations, a U.S. House committee and the Shelby County, Tenn., district attorney's office previously studied the murder.

Last December, a Memphis civil court jury ruled for the King family in its wrongful death lawsuit against Jowers and concluded Jowers and "others, including government agencies" plotted to kill King.

The new Justice Department probe rejected those findings as well, although King's son Dexter had said after the verdict: "We know what happened. This is the period at the end of the sentence."

The Justice team also "found insufficient evidentiary leads remaining after 30 years to justify further investigation" of suggestions by the House Select Committee on Assassinations in 1979 and the Shelby County district attorney in 1998 that Ray's surviving brothers may have helped him.

In 1993, Jowers, who owned a tavern across the street from the motel where King was shot, said a produce dealer involved with the Mafia gave him $100,000 to hire an assassin and assured him Memphis police would not be around. Jowers, who died last month, claimed someone named Raoul gave him a gun and the assassin fired from behind Jowers' bar, not from a rooming house window above it where Ray had stayed.

S&M sex, possible money woes linked to suburban murder mystery

OLATHE, Kan. (AP) — Even to the neighbors who shared their garden vegetables with John Edward Robinson and saw him working in his yard and doting on his grandchildren, there were disturbing things they couldn't help noticing.

There was the surveillance camera he installed on his home, facing the street, and tense arguments between the 56-year-old Robinson and his wife. There were allegations he propositioned some neighbors for sex, and there were often barrels and loading tools in his truck.

Over the past week, police have colored in that picture with sinister details.

They say Robinson trolled the Internet for sadomasochistic sex under the name "slavemaster" and may be connected to the deaths or disappearance of at least nine people, including five women who were bludgeoned to death and stuffed in barrels.

While Robinson's lawyer has said his client is innocent and is unfairly being branded 'a serial killer, prosecutors have said their case against Robinson continues to grow. No murder charges have been brought against him.

"We don't want to believe that he's done this," said one neighbor in this Kansas City suburb, Sara Khamsihong, "but we're going to have to."

Robinson was arrested June 2 at his home at Santa Barbara Estates, a quiet, tree-lined mobile home park managed by his wife in Olathe. He was charged with sexually assaulting two women at hotels in the area and held on $5 million bail.

The two women — including a Texas psychologist who came to Kansas for an S&M encounter with Robinson in April — told authorities they objected to his photographing them and said he brutalized them in a way that went beyond what they intended.

Armed with evidence from Robinson's arrest in those cases, detectives went to a 16-acre piece of land he owns in La Cygne, Kan., 35 miles away. Near a trailer, investigators found two 55-gallon industrial barrels, each containing a woman's body.

Two days later, three more bodies were found in barrels inside a storage locker he had rented across the state line in Raymore, Mo.

Investigators have since said that Robinson was investigated in the disappearances of three women and an infant in the mid-1980s, but that no bodies were found and authorities were never able to prove foul play.

In addition, Johnson County, Kan., District Attorney Paul Morrison said Robinson was connected to a Polish woman who has not been seen for months. Morrison said one of the bodies found in La Cygne may be that of the Polish woman.

Authorities have identified one of the dead as Suzette Trouten, 28, of Newport, Mich. Her family said she was lured to Kansas through an Internet chat room on the promise of $62,000 to care for "an elderly father."

Trouten moved with her dogs to Lenexa, near Olathe, in February. But her family soon became worried and called police.

Morrison has not elaborated on Robinson's relationships with the other victims, saying only that the case continues to grow from a mountain of documents, computer files and calls to police.

He said there are allegations Robinson deceived people over the Internet through dummy corporations, but he would not provide details.

Robinson's family — in addition to his wife, he has at least two grown children — have said the allegations are "almost beyond comprehension."

The allegations have unnerved Robinson's neighbors. Khamsihong, who has lived in Santa Barbara Estates with her husband and two children for six years, said the two families often helped each other, and Khamsihong would share vegetables from her garden.

But neighbors also noticed the barrels in Robinson's truck and the alarm he recently installed on it. He later put up the surveillance camera.

Several doors down, Corey Friedemann described Robinson as a "lonely old man" who propositioned his wife and a neighbor. Friedemann said his wife threatened to tell Robinson's wife, and the propositions stopped.

House passes 10-year repeal of estate tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republicans, joined by dozens of Democrats at odds with President Clinton, won easy passage Friday of a bill to repeal inheritance taxes by 2010. Supporters said they were acting to prevent taxes from ruining family farms and small businesses, but detractors decried it as a costly giveaway to the wealthiest Americans.

Clinton promised to veto the bill, citing revenue losses of $750 billion in the decade after repeal is fully in place and calling it a "windfall" for the rich. "If this bill were presented to me in its current form, I would veto it without hesitation," he said in a statement Friday.

The president said he would sign a less costly Democratic alternative geared toward the handful of farms and small businesses that are hurt most by the estate tax.

But supporters of full repeal brushed aside that alternative and ignored Clinton's veto threat, winning a 279-136 vote to send the bill to the Senate.

The bill, which would cost $105 billion during the 10-year phaseout, would cut the top 55 percent federal rate in 2001 and gradually reduce all other rates over the next few years, with full repeal coming in 2010. While the bill doesn't directly affect state inheritance taxes, many that link collections to the federal tax would have to rewrite their laws if they want to keep the tax.

Only about 2 percent of families of people who die pay the estate tax, which applies this year to estates above $675,000 for an individual. In 1997, about 43,000 estates out of 2.3 million adult deaths were taxable. Because of more generous exemptions, only a tiny fraction of farm and small business heirs are affected.

But sponsors said the threat of the tax forces people to do costly estate planning, restrains expansion and investment and jeopardizes jobs.

"The death tax is a natural born killer of everything they have worked for their entire lives," said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. "This isn't a rich against the poor issue. This is a jobs issue and a fairness issue."

Texas Gov. George W. Bush, the presumptive Republican presidential candidate, applauded the House for passing the legislation and urged Clinton to sign it.

"This tax violates virtually every principle of common sense and free enterprise," he said from his campaign headquarters in Austin.

Although repeal is a top GOP priority, co-sponsors included many black and Hispanic Democrats and liberals not normally allied with such tax cuts. They agreed the tax was causing headaches for minorities and other middle-class entrepreneurs who are taking advantage of the booming economy to build successful enterprises and create jobs.

"Who hires the workers in America? Is it the guy on the street corner or the people who achieve some success?" said Rep. James Traficant, D-Ohio.

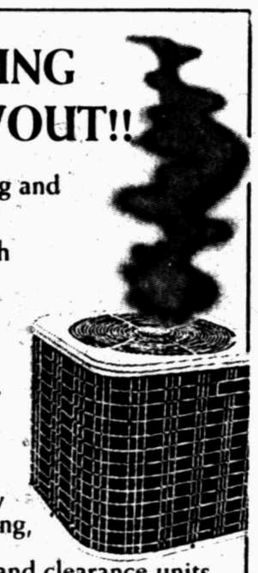

Sixty-five Democrats and one independent joined Republicans in voting for the measure, sponsored by Rep. Jennifer Dunn, R-Wash., and John Tanner, D-Tenn. The margin was just enough to override a veto, but Democratic leaders said a combination of absentees and members promising to switch would give them 10 more votes necessary to sustain a veto.

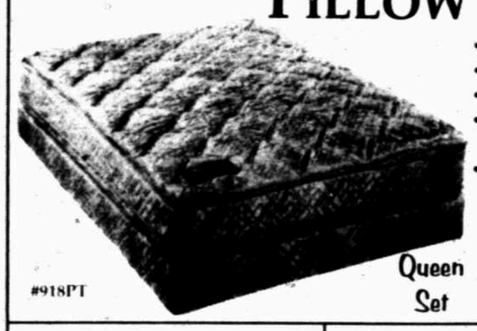

Democratic opponents said their alternative would better help the family farms and small businesses by raising exemptions and cutting all rates by 20 percent in 2001. At a cost of $22 billion over 10 years, they argued their measure would leave more of the projected future budget surplus for spending priority programs, paying down public debt and ensuring Social Security and Medicare don't go broke as baby boomers retire.

Democrats also pointed to Internal Revenue Service figures showing that almost half of all inheritance tax revenue comes from estates over $5 million and contended that many of these wealthy people could escape taxes entirely through shelters that protect their incomes while alive.

Phone monopoly offers many breakup lessons

WASHINGTON (AP) — The decision to slice Microsoft Corp. in two sends it down a path already well-worn by Ma Bell, whose breakup enabled consumers to price shop for long-distance service and buy their own phones. But experts warn that there are limits to the parallels and that it's too early to say if the impact will be the same.

"Microsoft is no AT&T," argues Rick Rule, a former Justice Department attorney who administered the phone company's consent decree and is now a consultant for Microsoft.

There are stark differences between the cases. For one, American Telephone and Telegraph, created through a series of acquisitions during the early part of the 19th century, already had fairly autonomous divisions.

When the phone giant was broken off from its local businesses in 1984, the lines were easy to draw and there were physical assets that could be divvied up.

"AT&T may have had a head start because it basically had the splits between local and long-distance already done," said Bell Atlantic President and Chief Operating Officer James Cullen, who was director of corporate planning at AT&T from 1981 to 1983. "The hard work was taking the network and figuring out how to divide it."

To this day, AT&T still houses some of its equipment in the central offices of its offspring — the Bell companies.

In contrast, Microsoft's case represents the challenge of separating intellectual property and breaking up a company in cyberspace, said Nicholas Allard, a communications lawyer at the Washington firm of Latham & Watkins.

"The split of Microsoft is much more metaphysical," he said.

From the consumer's perspective, that could impact how competition evolves. The local phone companies that broke off from AT&T still controlled the copper lines leading into people's homes, and it took time for other businesses to lease or build their own facilities to offer rivaling service in the residential market.

Software is "arguably easier to duplicate than the phone network, which could clearly not be duplicated," said Steve Sunshine, a former Justice Department antitrust lawyer.

Consumer advocates and others have contended that the AT&T agreement merely replaced one relatively benign phone monopoly with seven much more aggressive ones; because consumers in local markets had few alternatives open to them.

"The biggest political mistake made after all the logic of the breakup is that the railroad of telecommunications — the local telephone companies — became the powerhouses," said Gene Kimmelman, co-director of the Washington office of Consumer's Union. "They became much more powerful in the political arena than their previous parent."

More than 15 years later, many of those pieces have begun to come back together. The original seven Baby Bells, through various mergers, have been consolidated down to four.

But some argue that the AT&T agreement still managed to constrain the resulting monopolies from extending their dominance to new arenas.

For example, the decree kept the Bell companies from monopolizing the equipment manufacturing, long-distance and fiber optic industries, said Reed Hundt, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

"All of those industries are robustly competitive now," Hundt said.

Hundt believes that as in the AT&T case, the most important part of the Microsoft order is not the breakup itself — but the limitations placed on the company from taking over new markets.

But Rule and others says that some legacies of the AT&T case should serve as warnings for Microsoft's future. Namely, the divestiture created a complex regulatory regime to oversee the actions of the Bell companies and the implementation of the decree.

"Here was a purely structural decree that became very regulatory," Rule said. It so slowed innovation that a 1996 telecommunications law — freeing local, long-distance and cable companies to compete with each other — had to be enacted to help drive competition, he said.

Companies, in the interim, had to devote large amounts of time and energy on legal and regulatory disputes — rather than just focusing on consumers and innovation.

"A lot of things just didn't get done quickly," Cullen said.

In areas where competition has flourished, consumers have quickly learned that the end of a monopoly can put a new onus on them. Americans now must sort through a dizzying variety of equipment and long-distance plans.

"Consumers may find life more confusing and more difficult in the short-run," Sunshine said.

Dickinson's scribbles are 'of absolute interest'

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Notes scribbled to friends could provide new insights into the childhood of poet Emily Dickinson, according to Amherst College officials, who say they have acquired her high school Latin textbook.

The book, an 1838 edition of "The Works of Virgil," was a commonly used text whose binding was battered and pages ripped.

But in the margins and on the torn inside cover is inscribed, "Miss Emily Dickinson, Amherst, Mass.," with notes and inscriptions by the poet and friends as they attended Amherst Academy.

Although existence of the book has been long known, it has never been formally studied.

"Anything that shows her development and upbringing, and her own growth and maturity, is of absolute interest," said David Porter, a retired professor of the University of Massachusetts, which bought the book from a broker for an undisclosed sum.

"The scope of her mind and her linguistic skills were just remarkable, and it all started when she was very young," he said.

The notes range from complaints about homework and sketches of faces to quotations from poets Robert Browning and William Cowper and a poetic inscription to her best friend.

On the back cover, Dickinson jotted down a quotation from Browning: "Friendship often ends in love, but love in friendship never."

Dickinson would have been about 16 years old when she studied from the textbook with longtime friend Abby Wood, said John Lancaster, curator for special collections at Amherst College.

Byrnes' two-run single lifts 'Hounds to 4th straight win

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

Eric Byrnes probably isn't real thrilled about having to leave Midland right now, but the Tulsa Drillers sure are.

Friday night, Byrnes ended a solid three-day stint against the Drillers, and appropriately was the catalyst for what was a historic night for the Midland RockHounds. Byrnes started a rally from a five-run deficit in the bottom of the ninth with a double, then finished it with a two-run single to give the 'Hounds an exhilarating 9-8 victory, marking the first Christensen Stadium home sweep in over five years.

The last time a Midland team swept an opponent in Christensen was when the Angels pulled off the trick in May 1995. Completing what was an utterly ironic evening, Byrnes' single came against Tulsa reliever Mike Freehill (0-3), a former Midland Angel.

The series also marked the first sweep anywhere this season for the 'Hounds, who took all four games from Tulsa, which has the Texas League's worst record. It concluded easily the best homestand of the first half of the season for the 'Hounds, who will conclude the first half of the TL schedule on the road starting today when they travel to Wichita for a 7 p.m. game. The 'Hounds won't return home until June 26 when they host — perhaps the best news yet — Tulsa.

Friday looked almost certain to end the first half of Midland's home schedule on a down note for the first 8 1/2 innings. The 'Hounds certainly weren't lacking for opportunities as they picked up 17 hits off three Tulsa pitchers. Through eight innings, though, they left 10 runners on base, a negative trend from the previous night's 8-5 win when they left 11 runners on.

In the previous two games against Tulsa, Byrnes had been one of Midland's best hitters, picking up five hits and delivering with runners in scoring position. With the 'Hounds trailing 8-3 heading into the ninth, though, Byrnes was hitless in his previous four at-bats, although he had driven in Midland's first run with a fielder's choice grounder.

But things turned around in the ninth when Byrnes led off the inning with a double down the left field line off Hank Woodman. Clean-up hitter Jason Hart — the only RockHound regular who would go hitless on the night — then popped out to second, but that was about the only time in the inning a 'Hounds' hitter didn't deliver.

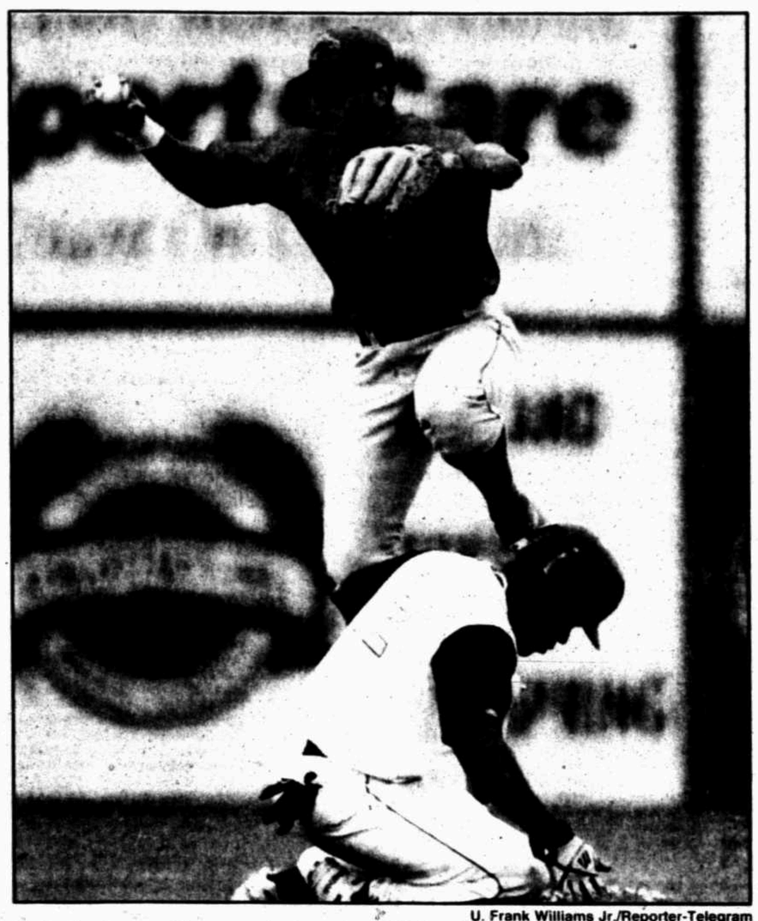

Cody McKay doubled off the right field wall to drive home Byrnes, then went to third on a single by Todd Mensik. Oscar Salazar and Jacques Landry each drove in runs with singles to left which cut the lead to 8-6 and got Woodman taken out of the game.

Freehill, the all-time Midland franchise career saves leader with 27 in 1996-97, then came on with runners on first and second. John Schaffer, pinch hitting for Gary Thomas, greeted Freehill with a single to left to drive home Salazar and make it 8-7 while advancing Landry to second.

Josue Espada then hit a chopper between the mound and third base which Freehill fielded before throwing out Espada at first to move up both baserunners. Freehill then walked Dionys Cesar to complete the 'Hounds lineup and bring it all back to where it started with Byrnes.

Lakers take 2-0 advantage

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

LOS ANGELES — This wasn't just Hack-a-Shaq. This was Hack-a-Shaq in hyperdrive, Hack-a-Shaq hysteria — and it still didn't work.

Shaquille O'Neal took so many foul shots — hitting 18 of 39 — that he knocked Wilt Chamberlain and Bob Cousy out of the record books.

It was part of another incredible statistical night for O'Neal, who had 40 points and 24 rebounds as the Los Angeles Lakers overcame an injury to Kobe Bryant to defeat the foul-happy Indiana Pacers 111-104 Friday night and take a 2-0 lead in the NBA Finals.

In the entire history of the league, no player had taken so many free throws in a game. Chamberlain set the overall record of 34 in 1962, and Cousy set the postseason record of 32 in 1953.

O'Neal left them in the dust long before this one was over, making just enough to allow the Lakers to maintain a slim lead down the stretch. The shocking numbers followed O'Neal's 43-point, 19-rebound performance in Game 1.

Game 3 is Sunday, and the Pacers will be hard-pressed to come up with a crazier strategy to turn this series around and try to become just the third team in league history to come back from such a deficit in the finals.

If committing 38 fouls couldn't do the trick, even with Bryant sitting out the final 3 1/2 quarters with a sprained ankle, maybe nothing will.

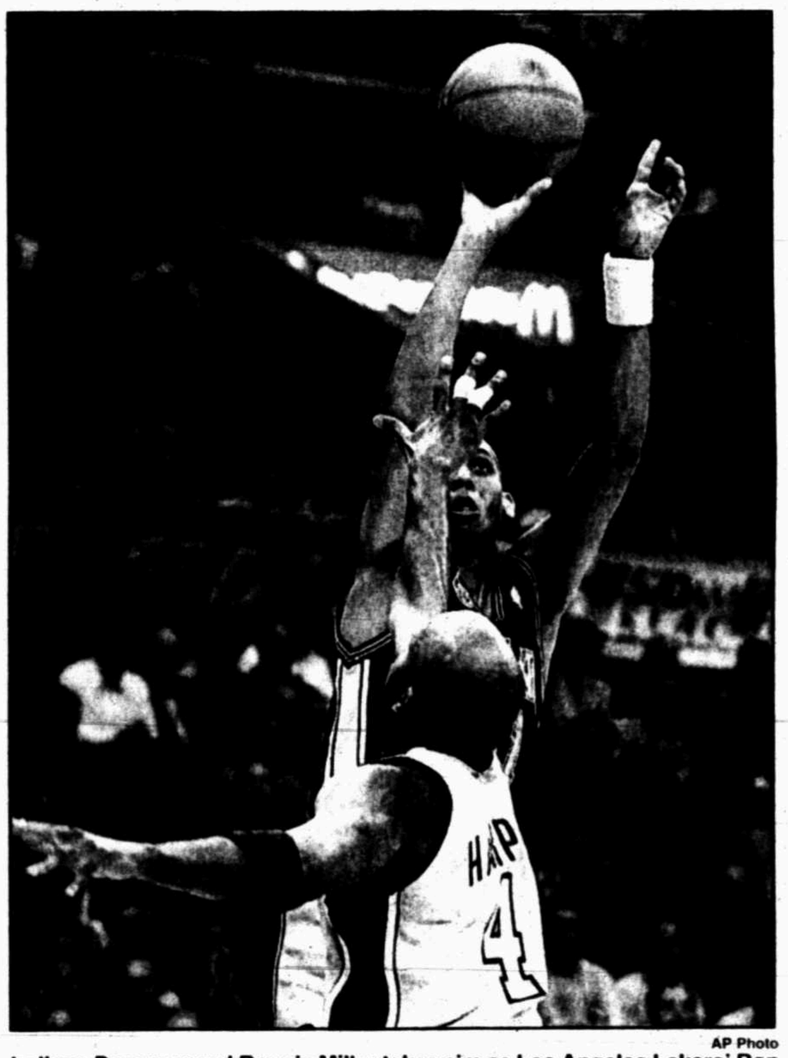

Glen Rice and Ron Harper both stepped up in Bryant's absence, scoring 21 points apiece. Harper was aggressive with the ball, driving repeatedly to the hoop, while Rice found his shooting touch and made five 3-pointers after scoring just three points in Game 1.

Jalen Rose scored 30 to lead Indiana, Austin Croshere added 24 and Reggie Miller had 21 — just two coming in the fourth quarter.

Sam Perkins and Dale Davis fouled out from hacking Shaq, while Rik Smits committed five fouls and Miller, Mark Jackson and Croshere had four each. Of the 10 Pacers who played, each fouled O'Neal at least once.

Of O'Neal's 39 foul shots, 16 came in the fourth quarter when the Pacers employed the strategy of sending the 7-footer — a 49 percent foul shooter

Mojo's former coach takes job in Arlington

Staff Report

ARLINGTON — The Arlington Morning News confirmed Friday that former Odessa Permian head football coach Randy Mayes has been named as the head coach and athletic coordinator at Arlington Sam Houston.

Mayes was named as the new coach at a 5 p.m. news conference Friday at the Downtown Annex in Arlington on Friday. He was chosen over two Arlington assistant coaches, Kenneth Perry of Lamar and Maurice Flowers of Sam Houston. There were approximately 40 applicants for the job.

Mayes replaces Ken Ozee, who retired recently. Nine applicants were interviewed for the job.

Mayes was still under contract by the Ector County Independent School District after losing the head coaching job after the 1999 football season. Mayes had coached Permian for six seasons, finishing with a 45-25-1 record.

Under Mayes, the Panthers reached the state semifinals in 1994 and the state finals in 1995. He was reassigned by ECISD last December and has been working as a social studies coordinator for Permian.

Mayes came under fire at Permian after tying for last place in two of the last three seasons in District 4-5A. Permian posted a 4-6 record in 1999, going 1-4 in 4-5A play. Permian has also lost five games in a row to arch rival Midland Lee, a record winning streak for any school against Permian. The Panthers also lost to Midland High for the first time since 1974.

Mayes did go out on a high note, beating cross town rival Odessa High, 21-0, in his last game as Mojo's head coach. It was the only district win of the season for the Panthers, however.

Permian replaced Mayes with T.J. Mills, who coached at Class 3A Sealy last season. Mills will make his 4-5A football debut this fall.

Ozee, 55, had a 122-85-6 record as a football coach in Lancaster, Amarillo Palo Duro, Mansfield and Sam Houston. As a head coach at Sam Houston for the past 11 years, he compiled a 59-56-4 record, including 4-6 in 1999.

The Texans were last in the state playoffs in 1993.

CWS veterans open play today

By Doug Alden
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. — Waiting another day doesn't seem to bother the teams that don't play in the College World Series until Saturday.

Experience is making the wait easier for Florida State, Southern California, Louisiana State and Texas, who got the extra day to prepare.

Florida State (51-17), which plays Saturday at 12:30 p.m. EDT against USC, is the only school in the bracket without a CWS title. USC holds the record with 12, and Texas and LSU have four titles each.

Florida State coach Mike Martin said the Seminoles, who lost to Miami in last year's championship game, are not letting the wait get to them.

"That doesn't concern me," Martin said Friday. "It would be hard on us if we had not played for the national championship. But a majority of this team was on the field last year."

The Seminoles have six returning starters, including pitcher Blair Varnes (11-2), a right-handed sophomore who lost in last year's title game. Varnes will start for Florida State on Saturday.

USC (43-18), which has won 15 straight going into the tournament, will start Rik Currier.

Texas and LSU play in the second game Saturday night.

The Longhorns hold the NCAA record with 28 CWS appearances. LSU has 11 appearances, but this is its first since win-

Stars still standing after hockey marathon

By Alan Robinson
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Maybe it was an omen for the Dallas Stars. They stayed alive in the Stanley Cup playoffs the same way they won the Cup last year.

The Stars won hockey's most prized possession on Brett Hull's much-debated third-overtime goal in Buffalo last June. This time, another third overtime on unfriendly ice, with the Stanley Cup in the house awaiting a possible ceremony, prevented the Stars from handing it over to the Devils.

Mike Modano's deflection of a Hull shot — there he is again — at 6:21 of the third overtime won a tense, 1-0 goaltenders' duel that ended early Friday morning and kept the Devils from claiming the Cup.

For at least one night. Possibly two. If the recent history of extended overtime playoff winners holds up, possibly forever.

The fourth longest game in Stanley Cup finals history — the Stars have played two within a year — forced a Game 6 Saturday night in Dallas, with the Devils clinging to a 3-2 lead. A lead that doesn't seem nearly as secure as 3-1. A lead that could be gone completely by the time they return to New Jersey.

"We have been in the same situation, up 3-1, and the last thing we wanted to do was go to the other team's ice for a Game 6," Dallas captain Derian Hatcher said Friday. "I think the further the game went on the more we kept saying, 'If we can win this one, boys, we are going to be right there.'"

The Stanley Cup was there for the Devils to win, on home ice before their fans. Several NHL officials were polishing it in a dressing room for the postgame ceremony that never occurred.

Even after playing nearly two full games in one night, the Cup remains an elusive one victory away.

Now, they must make a hurried road trip they didn't want to make. To play a game they didn't want to play. To play in a building where they have won twice but, deep down, they know it will be extremely tough to win in again.

"I think we feel we got a good hold on this series as far as what it takes to be involved in each game and give ourselves a chance to win," Modano said. "We feel good about (Saturday) night and feel that it will be going to Game 7."

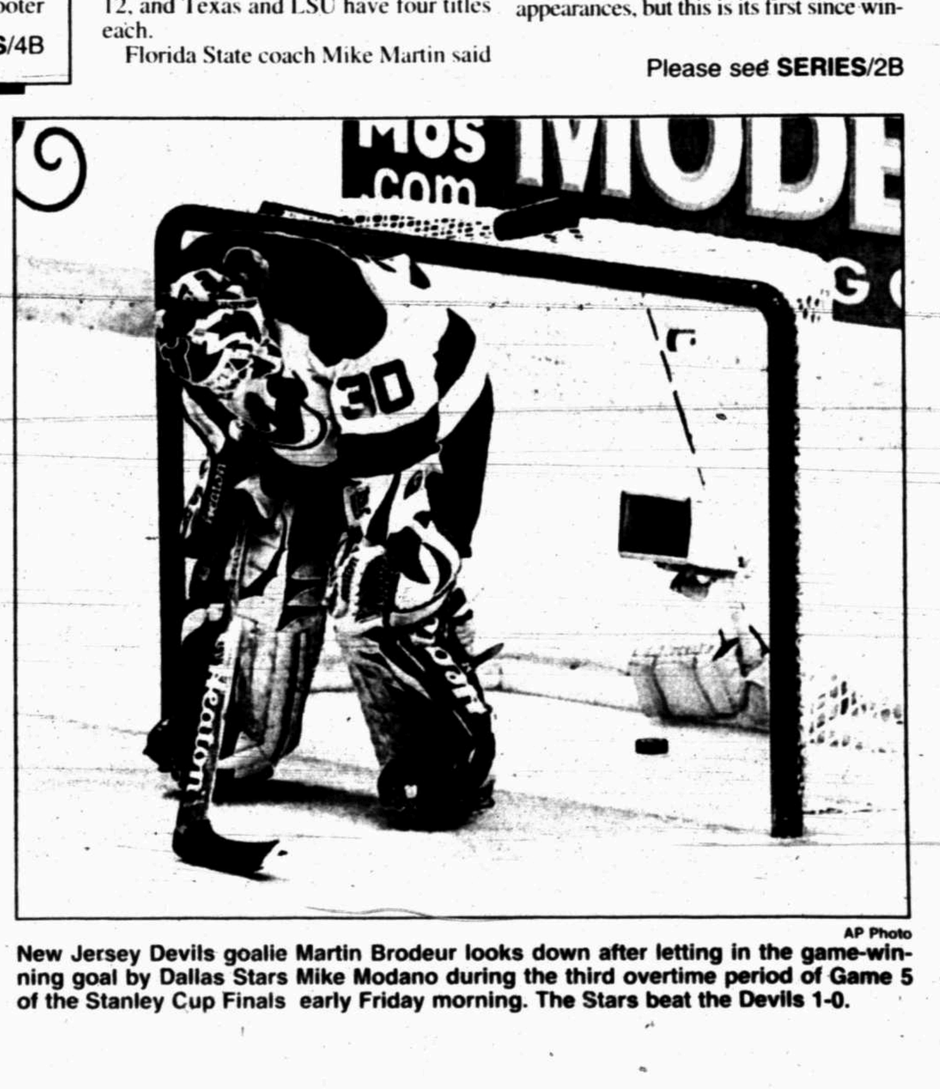

History says teams with 3-1 leads don't lose in the finals; only one of the 25 teams to try to overcome such a deficit has done so. But history also said a team couldn't rally from a 3-1 deficit and win a conference final, but the Devils are here only because they did exactly that against Philadelphia a few weeks ago.

"I'm pretty exhausted," said Devils rookie Scott Gomez, who at 20 is half as old as Stars center Guy Carbonneau. "It was a long game, and it was tough to take. It could go either way."

Now, so could the series.

The Devils still have the edge, but perhaps not if they don't win Game 6 in Reunion Arena, where the Stars were 9-1 in the playoffs before losing Game 3 and Game 4.

Paulson increases Buick lead

By John Nicholson
AP Sports Writer

HARRISON, N.Y. — Dennis Paulson and Skip Kendall got a jump on the field in the second round of the Buick Classic.

Playing in the first two groups Friday, Paulson and Kendall were off the course and on top of the leaderboard well before the wind and sun-dried greens sent scores soaring.

"I'm an early riser. I like an early tee time, except on the weekends," Paulson said after shooting a 3-under-par 68 to increase his lead to two strokes over Kendall at 9-under 133.

Paulson, who lost a playoff to Duffy Waldorf in last year's tournament, teed off on No. 1 at 7 a.m., while Kendall, who matched Paulson's 68, was in the first group on No. 10.

"I hope it dries out a lot," Kendall said of the Westchester Country Club course, drenched by nearly 3 inches of rain Tuesday. "That's better for my game than having it play wet and soggy."

Joey Sindelar, in the second group off the 10th tee, was three back at 136 after a 68. David Duval, also an early starter, was another stroke behind after a 67.

Waldorf, playing in the afternoon group, shot a 72 to drop into a six-player group at 138.

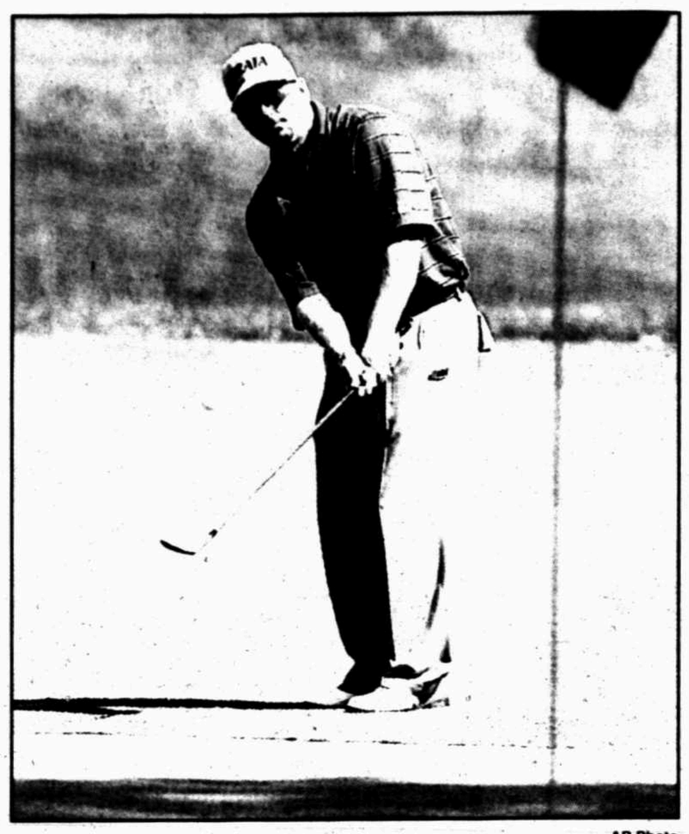

"Westchester has a way of dealing out some pain," said Waldorf, who was a stroke behind Paulson after the first round. "The wind became a pretty big factor."

Davis Love III and Spain's Miguel Angel Jimenez, also one back after the first round, followed their opening 66s with 74s.

Phil Mickelson and Ernie Els, the 1996 and 1997 Buick Classic winner, were six back at 139. Mickelson had a 69 and Els shot a 70.

"Playing this golf course when the wind is blowing is not all that easy," Els said. "I really played very well to shoot 69."

Scott Gump shot a 64, the best round of the tournament, to jump from 111th to 11th at 139. He had five straight birdies and seven in an eight-hole stretch.

Dennis Paulson chips to the 12th green during second round play in the Buick Classic golf tournament Friday at Westchester Country Club in Harrison, N.Y.

Masters champion Vijay Singh, also a two-time Buick Classic winner, was at 141 after a 71.

Paulson had a brief run-in with a tournament volunteer on the 2nd hole after hooking his tee shot into the thick rough.

"He said something like, 'You're going to have fun with this one,'" Paulson said. "I'm dead behind a tree in 6 inches of grass. It's not that hard. I've just got to pitch out sideways.

"You love having these people out here there to help you out, but they try to be witty sometimes and say something that's kind of cute. It just didn't go over very well at 7:30 this morning."

After pitching to the fairway, he hit a wedge shot to the green and two-putted for bogey.

"The lie was perfect for what it was, because if I had a decent lie, I might try to pull something off and get up by the green," Paulson said. "It was just a smart bogey. I could have made a really stupid double or triple."

Paulson also bogeyed No. 4 to drop to 4 under, but regained the lead midway through the round with three straight birdies.

He made a 17-foot putt from the fringe on No. 8, a 10-footer on the par-5 9th, and closed the run with a 5-foot putt on No. 10. After six straight pars, he birdied the final two holes.

With its deep rough and tight fairways, the course is a good primer for next week's U.S. Open at Pebble Beach.

"It's the hardest short course we play on tour by far," Paulson said of the 6,722-yard tree-lined layout. "They don't need to be 7,300 yards to be good. The greens and the rough are its defense."

SERIES: Longhorns start play today

ning the title in 1997.

"It gives us a chance to come out here and practice and work on some things. We're going to be ready," said Brian Tallet (14-3), LSU's starter on Saturday. "We're all laid back and have a lot of fun in what we do. There's not any more pressure to wait an extra day and it's not any more relaxing."

The Longhorns are 6-1 since the Big 12 tournament and appear to have recovered from a tailspin at the end of the season, losing 12 of their last 20 games.

"We're most likely the most thankful to be here," said Texas coach Augie Garrido, in his fourth season at Texas. Garrido hasn't been back to the CWS since coaching Cal State Fullerton to the 1995 national championship.

Stanford, Clemson are victorious at CWS

Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Jason Young gave Stanford the norm: a good outing and another strong start in the College World Series.

The junior right-hander gave up six hits and four runs in 7 1-3 innings as Stanford beat Louisiana-Lafayette 6-4 Friday night, winning its opening game at Rosenblatt Stadium for the sixth time in its last seven trips.

Young (9-1), who picked up two wins for the Cardinal in last year's CWS, sprinted off the field and into the dugout after handing reliever Jeff Bruksch the ball and giving him a pat for support.

Young received the same from his teammates, despite giving up three solo home runs to Louisiana-Lafayette. Bruksch pitched 1 2-3 scoreless innings, striking out three, for his 13th save.

Stanford (48-15) advanced to play Clemson in the winners' bracket on Sunday. Louisiana-Lafayette (47-19) and San Jose State will meet in an elimination game.

Louisiana-Lafayette, which entered the CWS with a 3.20 ERA — third best in the nation behind Texas (3.13) and Nebraska (3.14) — still hasn't given up double-digits in runs this season.

The Ragin' Cajuns just didn't score enough against Stanford.

Young struck out the side in the first inning and retired the Ragin' Cajuns in order in the third and the fifth.

He looked like he might be in trouble in the seventh, after giving up the second of two home runs, but he retired the next four batters.

Nathan Nelson then hit a solo shot, his sixth of the season, to bring Bruksch out of the bullpen.

Stanford scored two runs in the third inning and added another pair in the fourth off starter Justin Gabriel (9-4). Gabriel walked three of the first four batters and never recovered.

He gave up four hits, seven walks and four runs in 3 1-3 innings.

■ CWS Roundup

Clemson 10, San Jose St. 6

OMAHA, Neb. — Patrick Boyd's three-run home run highlighted an eight-run second inning as Clemson beat San Jose State 10-6 Friday in the first game of the College World Series.

The Tigers (51-16) ruined San Jose State's CWS debut with seven runs off four errors. Clemson will face the winner of Friday night's game between Louisiana-Lafayette and Stanford on Sunday.

The Spartans (41-23) outhit the Tigers 11-10, but couldn't rally from a 10-2 deficit.

Casey Stone and Justin Singleton each drove in two runs for Clemson, which has won six straight since losing to Georgia Tech in the Atlantic Coast Conference championship game.

Ryan Mottl (10-3) allowed nine hits and six runs in five innings. Steve Reba, who got the Tigers out of a jam in the seventh inning, earned his second save of the season.

The Tigers chased San Jose starter Chris Key (13-3) after just 1 1-3 innings. It was the shortest outing of the season for Key, who went at least seven innings in each of his three NCAA tournament starts. Key allowed eight runs, three earned, on seven hits.

Aptitude could complete sweep at Belmont

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Although the Belmont Stakes will lack the excitement of a Triple Crown bid for the first time in four years, Aptitude could complete a unique three-horse sweep.

Should Aptitude, the probable post-time favorite, win the 1 1/2-mile Belmont, it would mean the first three finishers in the Wood Memorial would have won the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont in the order of their finish in the Wood.

Fusaichi Pegasus beat Red Bullet, with Aptitude third, in the Wood Memorial on April 15 at Aqueduct. Fusaichi Pegasus then beat Aptitude in the Derby, and Red Bullet beat Fusaichi Pegasus in the Preakness.

Also dimming the glamour of the Belmont is the fact that there will be no rubber match between Fusaichi Pegasus and Red Bullet. The Derby winner injured his right front foot when he was startled in his stall last Saturday.

The connections of Red Bullet, who skipped the Derby, decided it wasn't in the colt's best interest to race 1 1/2 miles at this time.

This will be the first time since 1970 that both the Kentucky Derby winner (Dust Commander) and the Preakness winner (Personality) did not start in the Belmont. The last time the Triple Crown was divided three ways was in 1996 when the winners were Grindstone (Derby), Louis Quatorze (Preakness) and Editor's Note (Belmont).

Of the 19 Derby starters, the only one who will have started in all three races will be Impeachment, third in both the Derby Preakness. He has lost seven straight races since winning his debut Dec. 26.

"If they (Fusaichi Pegasus and Red Bullet) were in there, they'd be the first and second choice, granted," said D. Wayne Lukas, trainer of Commendable, who goes into the race not having won in six starts dating to his winning debut Aug. 14.

The 11 Belmont starters, however, have a total of only five wins in 33 starts in graded stakes. That includes no wins in 11 Grade I races.

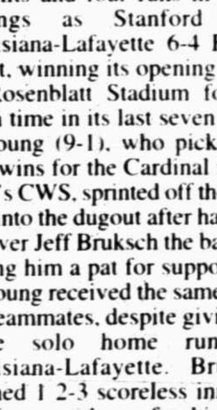

"I think it is a solid field and time will bear this out," Lukas said Friday. "I think there are some talented horses in this race, and we're just going to have to go further down the road to see it."

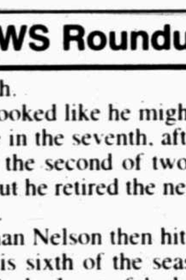

Besides Aptitude, Belmont starters who ran in the Derby but not the Preakness are Wheelaway (fifth), Curule (seventh) and Commendable (17th). Hugh Hefner skipped the Derby and finished sixth in the Preakness.

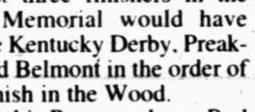

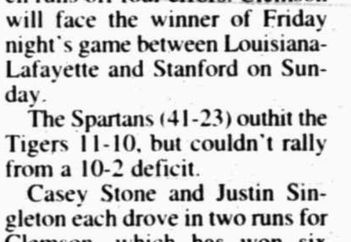

The stretch-running Aptitude has won only a maiden race in six career starts. In his last three races he was second to Red Bullet in the Gotham, third in the Wood Memorial and second in the Derby.

One of Wheelaway's two wins was in the ungraded Tampa Bay Derby. Curule won one of four starts in Dubai before running in the Derby. Commendable finished fourth in each of four graded stakes before the Derby. Hugh Hefner is winless in three starts dating to a 13th-place finish in the Breeders' Cup Juvenile on Nov. 6.

■ Baseball Roundup

NEW YORK — Mike Piazza hit a 11th career grand slam as the New York Mets bombarded Roger Clemens for nine runs in routing the New York Yankees 12-2 Friday night in the opener of this year's Subway Series.

Slumping Derek Bell homered and drove in five runs and Edgardo Alfonzo also connected as the Mets closed their deficit to 7-6 against the Yankees in four seasons of interleague play.

Al Leiter (7-1) beat Clemens (4-6) for the third time in two years. Clemens matched his career high for runs allowed and dropped to 1-4 against the Mets with a 9.10 ERA.

Blue Jays 13, Expos 3

TORONTO — Shannon Stewart went 4-for-5 with a two-run homer and three doubles, tying the team record for extra-base hits set by Roy Howell in 1977 and matched by Damaso Garcia in 1986.

Carlos Delgado hit his AL leading 23rd home run — his 11th in 22 games — and also doubled.

Chris Carpenter (5-5) allowed three runs, six hits and five walks in seven innings as Toronto improved to 10-4 against its Canadian rival. T.J. Tucker (0-1) gave up five runs and five hits in three innings.

Devil Rays 6, Marlins 4

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — John Flaherty homered, and Vinny Castilla and Felix Martinez each drove in two runs as Tampa Bay won for the fourth time in five games and improved to 3-8 against Florida.

Steve Trachsel (4-6) stopped his four-game losing streak, allowing four runs and five hits in 5 2-3 innings to win for the first time since May 11. Roberto Hernandez got three outs for his seventh save.

Ryan Dempster (6-4) gave up five runs and five hits in five innings.

Indians 7, Reds 4

CLEVELAND — David Justice had his second two-homer game in four days and Richie Sexson homered twice.

Justice, who was born in Cincinnati and still has a home there, hit a two-run homer in the first off Denny Neagle (5-1) and added a solo homer in the third. Justice has 17 homers, six in his last seven games.

Neagle, who had won 11 consecutive decisions, lost for the first time in 20 starts since last Aug. 25.

Jim Brower (1-0) allowed four runs and eight hits in six innings, and Steve Karsay worked the ninth for his 13th save.

Tigers 4, Cardinals 2

DETROIT — Garrett Stephenson (8-2) lost his second straight decision after an 8-0 start, allowing four runs and seven hits in six innings.

Mark McGwire, who missed the previous two games with a sore hamstring, went 0-for-4 with three strikeouts and has one home run since May 24.

Jeff Weaver (3-5) gave up two runs and four hits in eight innings, and Todd Jones finished for his 18th save.

Braves 6, Red Sox 4

ATLANTA — Greg Maddux (8-1) extended his unbeaten streak to seven starts since May 3, allowing four runs and seven hits in 6 2-3 innings. Mike Remlinger and Rudy Seanez completed the eight-hitter, with Seanez getting three outs for his second save.

Andres Galarraga hit his 16th home run as Atlanta won for just the third time in eight games. Boston has lost seven of 10 overall and dropped to 2-5 at Turner Field.

Jeff Fassero (6-2) allowed four runs, six hits and three walks in 3 1-3 innings.

Phillies 9, Orioles 5

BALTIMORE — Scott Rolen homered in a seven-run second inning and Philadelphia overcame two homers by Charles Johnson and one each by Albert Belle and Jeff Conine.

Doug Glanville homered and drove in three runs for the Phillies, who improved to 5-2 against the AL and dropped the Orioles to 1-6.

Randy Wolf (6-3) won his third straight start despite allowing four runs and seven hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Pat Rapp (4-4) gave up eight runs — just three earned — and nine hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Royals 6, Pirates 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jeff Reboulet drove in four runs, including a game-winning single in the 10th off Jason Christiansen (1-5). Kansas City has 14 victories in its last at-bat, including nine walkoff wins.

Reboulet hit a three-run double in the fourth, and Mike Sweeney added four hits, including his 13th homer, as the Royals improved to an AL-best 18-7 at home.

Brian Giles' second homer tied the game in the ninth off Jerry Spradlin (2-0), who blew his third save in nine chances. The Royals have allowed a major league-leading 103 home runs.

Twins 9, Brewers 6

MINNEAPOLIS — Cristian Guzman drove in a career-high four runs and David Ortiz hit his first homer since Sept. 9, 1998, connecting in the fifth off Jamey Wright (1-1) for a 4-3 lead.

Guzman hit his major league-high ninth triple in the fifth off Steve Woodard, capping a four-run inning that sent the Twins on to their third straight win.

Sean Bergman (4-4) allowed five runs — four earned — and seven hits in five innings, dropping Milwaukee to 0-4 in interleague play. Brewers' pitchers walked 10.

White Sox 6, Cubs 5,

CHICAGO — Ray Durham's RBI single in the 14th inning gave the White Sox a 6-5 victory over the crosstown rivals Cubs on Friday night — the longest game of the season for both teams.

With one out, Herbert Perry singled to right and then stole second. Todd Van Poppel (0-2) walked pinch-hitter Jeff Abbott, putting runners at first and second with only one out.

Van Poppel was relieved by Daniel Garibay, and Durham sent a 2-1 pitch bouncing down the left field line to score Perry, ending it after 4 hours, 42 minutes.

Van Poppel gave up one run on two hits in 1 1-3 innings. Jesus Pena (1-0) walked one and struck out one in two innings.

Rocker blows up in bullpen following TV station's report

By John Seewer
Associated Press Writer

MAUMEE, Ohio (AP) — John Rocker was in complete control during his first minor league appearance Friday, but he couldn't keep his temper in check around reporters.

Rocker, making his first appearance for the Triple-A Richmond Braves, struck out the side in the ninth inning against the Toledo Mud Hens.

Rocker threw 20 pitches, missing on just five. He walked one batter. His fastballs were in the 93-95 mph range.

"He pitched ahead, which was the key," Richmond pitching coach Mike Alvarez said. "It was all good."

Facing the bottom of the order, Rocker struck out right fielder Chris Wakeland on three straight pitches. After giving up a walk, Rocker came back to get second baseman Chris Lemonis on three straight pitches.

"He was popping his fastball and his slider looked good," Lemonis said.

Rocker was much better than he had been in Atlanta where he had 10 saves in 11 opportunities and a 3.93 ERA this season, but had walked 25 batters in 18 1-3 innings.

Rocker did not talk to reporters.

He signed some autographs during the game, setting off a run on souvenir baseballs at the gift shop. There was question who the crowd of 7,733 came to see.

They went wild when he sprinted into the game. He warmed up with "Wild Thing" playing on the Ned Skeldon Stadium speakers.

When Rocker got up to stretch in the sixth inning, fans immediately swarmed toward a railing along the bullpen. Sheriff's deputies quickly moved them back.

Before the game, an angry Rocker stalked off into the clubhouse following a throwing session in which he was agitated with reporters.

Rocker appeared angry as soon as he stepped out of the bullpen.

A few tosses later he again glared into the stands.

"Let me ask you something, is it more exciting to watch a guy throw or paint dry?" Rocker said to Alvarez. "Paint probably."

Rocker threw for about 10 minutes, with most of his pitches far from the strike zone. After four pitches landed in the dirt, Rocker's bullpen catcher moved up a few feet.

Finally, a frustrated Rocker tossed a ball in the stands and stalked off into the clubhouse.

Braves assistant general manager Frank Wren said he was not upset by Rocker's reaction before the game.

"You can understand why he feels like he does," he said. "Bullpen blowups are not unusual for relief pitchers. That neither bothers me or concerns me."

Rocker didn't seem bothered by a much larger crowd of reporters who watched him throw in the bullpen Thursday.

Rocker, who had 38 saves last season with Atlanta, was banished to the minor leagues Monday for control problems. He also was fined $5,000 for a confrontation, before Sunday's home game in Atlanta, with Sports Illustrated reporter Jeff Pearlman. In December, Pearlman had written a story on Rocker's comments about gays, minorities, and foreigners.

Rocker's outburst Friday came one day after a Toledo television report claimed the pitcher made an obscene gesture toward a camera crew.

The video shown by WNWO-TV showed someone in a cab making the gesture after Rocker and the Richmond Braves played the Toledo Mud Hens on Thursday night.

Wren said Rocker was not the person in the video, and that Rocker was on the team bus.

"It's a joke, Wren said after watching the video. "They should've checked with the club."

Toledo general manager Joe Napoli said he also watched Rocker get on the bus.

"He absolutely, positively, undoubtedly got on the bus," Napoli said. "I didn't even see a taxi cab."

A WNWO executive said there were conflicting statements from Braves management and players about whether Rocker was on the bus.

"All we did is put it out there and give the Braves a chance to make their position," said Tim Livingston, the station's executive producer.

Cubs get Brant Brown, send Dave Martinez to Texas in 3-way trade

By Nancy Armour
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — Now Brant Brown will never hear the end of that dropped fly ball.

Brown, whose muffed catch almost cost the Cubs a trip to the postseason in 1998, was reacquired by Chicago on Friday as part of a three-way trade with the Texas Rangers and the Florida Marlins.

The Marlins sent Brown to Texas for right-hander Chuck Smith, a minor leaguer. The Rangers then dealt Brown to Chicago for outfielder Dave Martinez to bolster their injury-depleted outfield.

"Obviously we know Brant. He's a 28-year-old guy who hit .290 for us in 1998 and drove in 48 runs. He hit 14 home runs in 350 at-bats," Cubs general manager Ed Lynch said. "We think (hitting coach) Jeff Pentland can get him back on track to where he was in 1998. We think it makes us better."

And that fly ball?

"I knew somebody was going to bring that up," Lynch said.

Riding Sammy Sosa's 66-homer season, the Cubs were closing in on the NL wild-card spot on Sept. 23, 1998. As they began the ninth inning in Milwaukee with a 7-5 lead, Brown was in left field, inserted as a defensive replacement the inning before.

Geoff Jenkins hit what seemed to be a relatively routine fly ball, but Brown, adjusting to the late-afternoon sun and wind, didn't make the catch. The ball skittered toward the fence, all three runs scored, and the Cubs lost a game they couldn't afford to lose.

The Cubs ended up getting the NL wild card after beating San Francisco in a one-game playoff.

"He had a great year for us," Lynch said. "He really saved us when we had some key injuries. He had a good year for us. We're excited about reacquiring him."

Brown hit .192 with two homers and six RBIs in 41 games with Florida this season. He is a career .255 hitter in five major league seasons.

The addition of Martinez, as well as the activation of Gabe Kapler from the 15-day disabled list, should shore up the Rangers outfield. All three Texas starters have missed games due to injuries, and Ruben Mateo is out for the season with a broken leg.

Kapler, who had been out with a partially torn quadriceps muscle, will take Mateo's spot in center. He hit .200 with three homers and 12 RBIs before getting hurt on May 2.

Martinez, 35, hit .234 with one homer and 13 RBIs in 47 games with Tampa Bay and Chicago this season. He was sent to the Cubs on May 12 in a trade for pitcher Mark Guthrie. Texas will be his seventh team in 15 seasons in the majors.

"You wish it didn't happen, but it's part of the game," Martinez said. "I've been through it before. I'm just going to go over there and hope to hit a little better and help those guys win."

Texas also optioned right-hander Jonathan Johnson to Triple-A Oklahoma. He made one appearance after being recalled June 6, allowing two earned runs in three innings Wednesday against the Dodgers.

Smith is scheduled to make his first start for the Marlins on Tuesday at Philadelphia. The 30-year-old was 5-3 with a 3.78 ERA with 73 strikeouts for Triple-A Oklahoma this season.

FINALS: Bryant listed as day-to-day in the playoffs — to the line repeatedly.

(From 1B)

O'Neal never made two out of two in the fourth, but he never went 0-for-2 either. And although the Pacers drew within three points several times, they never completely caught up.

The Hack-a-Shaq strategy heated up in the final three minutes. Every time the Lakers inbounded, the Pacers hacked him, grabbed him, tackled him or climbed all over him. He took 12 free throws in a span of 1:46, making half of them.

"I was trying to get myself to calm down. I was looking over at my father. He told me to take my time, follow through and shoot," O'Neal said.

His success rate was good enough, it turned out, to help the Lakers overcome what could have been a devastating loss.

Bryant went down in obvious pain just 7 1/2 minutes into the game when his foot landed on Rose's foot after Bryant shot a jumper.

He tried to get up, stumbled down and then repeated the process again. Hopping around on his uninjured foot and not knowing in which direction to turn, he looked like the human equivalent of a thoroughbred horse pulling up lame with a fracture.

The Staples Center crowd went silent as Bryant limped off the court and to the locker room, where he underwent X-rays that came up negative. He was later seen walking down a hallway near the locker room, unable to put any weight on the injured foot. The Lakers listed him as day-to-day.

The Lakers started pulling away early in the fourth after Indiana got within two with 8:25 left. Harper drove for a bank shot, Derek Fisher hit a wide-open 3-pointer as the Lakers swung the ball out of a double-team and O'Neal went 1-for-2 from the line.

That made it 86-78, but Indiana came back as O'Neal was whistled for his fifth foul — a highly questionable call that appeared to be a clean block of Travis Best's shot. Best made both shots to start a 6-0 run that made it 86-84.

Rice answered with a 3-pointer. O'Neal scored the Lakers' next two baskets and the stage was set for Indiana to start fouling.

That they did, but to no avail — just like the Portland Trail Blazers found out in the Western Conference finals when they sent O'Neal to the line 25 times in the fourth quarter of Game 1.

Despite Bryant's injury and O'Neal's 5-for-17 shooting from the foul line, the Lakers still held a 52-49 halftime lead as O'Neal scored 15, Rice 13 and Harper 11.

Miller served notice early that he was eager to shoot himself out of his slump, making his first attempt — an 18-footer — on the Pacers' first possession. Breaking from their usual habit of trying to get Smits involved early on offense, the Pacers looked to go to Miller or Rose nearly every time downcourt.

Rose finished the first quarter with 10 points, Miller had eight and O'Neal had just six. Los Angeles stayed ahead early in the second quarter, but the Pacers stayed within striking distance and finally regained the lead when Rose followed an airball by O'Neal by pushing the ball into the lane for a short turnaround that made it 38-37 with 6:32 left.

The Lakers held a 52-49 halftime lead, and the score was tied 60-60 with 7:09 left in the third quarter when Smits picked up his fifth foul. Undaunted, the Pacers pulled ahead, Miller gaining confidence as he hit a wide-open 3-pointer and a two-handed jam — both on fast breaks.

Indiana's lead didn't last long, though, and the Lakers took a 73-69 lead into the fourth.

Notes: Cousy of the Boston Celtics shot 32 free throws against Syracuse in a quadruple-overtime playoff game March 21, 1953. There were 128 total free-throw attempts in that game — 32 more than Indiana and LA combined for. ... Bob Pettit of the St. Louis Hawks held the NBA Finals record of 24 free throws against Boston on April 9, 1958. ... Actress Pamela Anderson was among the courtside celebrities, sporting a temporary "Man of Steel" tattoo just like O'Neal's on her right arm. Tracy McGrady of the Toronto Raptors sat directly behind her wearing a black doo-rag and a red NBA Entertainment credential.

Agent: Sosa wants to stay in Chicago

By Nancy Armour
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa's agent said he doesn't have a gut feeling one way or the other whether the slugger will stay in Chicago but said Sosa wants to remain in a Cubs uniform.

Adam Katz, Sosa's agent, met with Cubs president Andy MacPhail on Thursday as part of ongoing talks about a possible contract extension. Sosa is signed through 2001.

"His preference is to stay," Katz said Friday before the Cubs began their Crosstown Series with the White Sox.

"You're jumping ahead," he said when asked if Sosa would approve a trade. "The Cubs have to decide if they want to go that direction. I'm not sure they've made that decision."

Though his contract doesn't expire for another 1 1/2 years, Sosa is looking for an extension that could pay him as much as $15 million-$20 million a year. If the Cubs decide they don't want to spend that kind of money, they might look to trade Sosa and kick start their rebuilding process.

As a player with 10 years in the majors and five with the same team, Sosa has veto power over any trade. But if the Cubs make it clear they feel a trade would be the best for the organization, Katz said Sosa would cooperate.

All of this could be premature, though. Cubs general manager Ed Lynch said the team isn't shopping Sosa or looking to trade him.

"I was asked yesterday, would I consider trading Sammy Sosa. I said I would trade anybody if it helped make this organization a better organization," Lynch said. "I think any general manager would tell you (that).

"The way our pitching's been over the last 2 1/2 weeks, we feel like we've got a chance to make some noise in the division," Lynch said. "We want to keep the team intact and see where we're going to go."

The trade rumors come on the heels of Sosa's much-publicized spat earlier this week with Cubs manager Don Baylor. Sosa, unhappy about what he perceived as negative comments about his playing by Baylor, lashed out at the manager in the media.

The two met after Wednesday's game and cleared the air.

"With both guys, yes, it's resolved," Baylor said.

And Katz said this week's blowup has nothing to do with Sosa's future.

"This is not some orchestrated or contrived thing," Katz said. "Baylor is a terrific manager and Sammy knows that. They can get along just fine."

Gabe Kapler finished his rehab assignment from the Texas Rangers for the Drillers in Midland Tuesday, and two nights later, the Famous Chicken came to town. Friday, not only were pro wrestlers The Hammer and The Honky Tonk Man at Christensen, but Billy Beane, the general manager of the Oakland Athletics, the 'Hounds' parent club, also was in town to look at some prospects.

Kuerten rises to French Open final against Norman

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

PARIS — Gustavo Kuerten barely escaped the bite of a scrawny, pesky kid they call "Mosquito," and Magnus Norman kept up his cool, conquering ways to charge into his first Grand Slam final at the French Open.

With his long locks flying and with desperation in his eyes, Kuerten flitted around the court in the final two sets Friday to avoid an upset against 20-year-old Juan Carlos Ferrero, winning 7-5, 4-6, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3, in 3 hours, 38 minutes of drama.

The 1997 French Open champion, Kuerten shook off back spasms and fatigue to impose his elegant, fluid style on the aggressively attacking Spaniard playing his first French Open and first Grand Slam semifinal.

Kuerten came off the court looking a bedraggled mess, clay in his hair and beard and every crevice of his clothes, but his skinny legs didn't wobble despite pushing his court time this tournament to 15 1/2 hours with his second straight five-setter.

"I'm very strong now, and I'm going to be more stronger in the final," the Brazilian said with a smile.

No one has seemed stronger in this tournament than Norman, a fitness-obsessed Swede who has lost only one set so far while playing a total of 12 hours in six matches.

Norman looked comfortable with his latest workout, a 6-1, 6-4, 6-3 rout of Argentina's Franco Squillari, as if it were a nice interlude between his morning jog and his afternoon weightlifting.

It was a far different experience for the 24-year-old Norman from his first Grand Slam semifinals, which he lost badly in straight sets to Yevgeny Kafelnikov at the Australian Open in January.

"Down in Australia, things got a little bit too big for me," Norman said. "I was very nervous. Today, I had a lot of confidence in myself. I said to myself, 'I've been here before. This is my day. I'm going to do everything I can to be able to be in the finals.'"

Squillari, a 23-year-old who had never gone past the third round of a Grand Slam tournament, stood so far away from the net in this match he should have been charged for a spectator's seat.

Norman is hardly a net attacker himself, but he looked like Pete Sampras compared with Squillari. All the footprints in the clay on the Argentine's side were between the baseline and the back fence, while the court stayed neatly untrampled, pockmarked only in the spots where the ball landed.

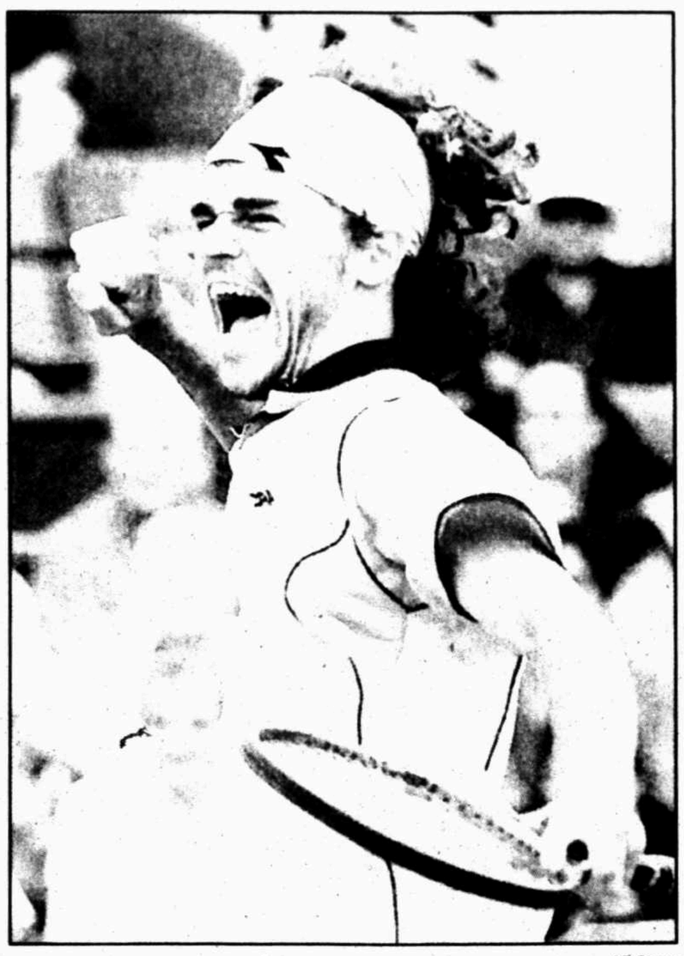

Squillari showed stamina, nice strokes, hustle and a deft touch. If he can add a net game and some power to his serve, he might even win a major someday.

"I had a lot of problems concentrating because there was a lot of wind on center court, and it was swirling," Squillari said. "He took advantage of these conditions and played less badly than me. That's why he won.

"The new challenge I have is to maintain this level and improve my ranking. I have the ambition to go further."

Ferrero exhibited far more potential in defeat. With a mere 160 pounds on his 6-foot frame, Ferrero picked up two nicknames from his fellow Spaniards — "Mosquito" and "Chavalito," which means little kid.

He surely buzzed around the court enough to annoy Kuerten, and he didn't play anything like a little kid. Ferrero pressed points from just inside the baseline while Kuerten stayed deep, and the Spaniard's compact, two-fisted backhands and topspin forehands kept Kuerten on the run.

Fifth-seeded Gustavo Kuerten reacts after he defeated sixteenth-seeded Juan Carlos Ferrero 7-5, 4-6, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3 during their semifinal match at the French Open.

French Open fans have been partial to the 23-year-old Kuerten since his surprise run to the championship three years ago, and chants of "Gu-ga, Gu-ga," accompany every match he plays. But the fans also took a liking to the baby-faced Ferrero, with his fashionably frosted blond hair.

They admired the way Ferrero chased down balls that seemed out of reach; the way he came right back from his only break in the first set, in the final game, to break Kuerten in the first game of the second set; and the way he had Kuerten in trouble, leading 3-1 and serving, in the fourth set.

"I was confident that I could win this match," Ferrero said. "But, once again, it proves that in tennis you should not be too confident because, until the last point, nothing is done."

Even when it became clear in the fifth set that Kuerten had the endurance and the experience to pull this one out, Ferrero earned the respect of the crowd and Kuerten for the way he never gave up.

"He's going to be here for many more years," Kuerten said. "I think we played one of the best matches here, a great performance. The crowd was into it. The fifth set I was so excited, I was pumped up. That's the feeling that we always try for on court."

Ferrero acknowledged that experience made the difference in the end, but noted he has time to acquire such experience.

"It's the best tournament in the world here for me," he said. "It was my first semifinals. What I hope is to come back and play better."

Ray needs strong finish to defend IRL points crown

Ray, ranked 17th in driver points this season, appeared set to start tonight's Casino Magic 500 on the front row at Texas Motor Speedway just miles from his home. Then rain wiped out the rest of qualifying and his second-best lap.

Because 10 drivers never got a chance to qualify Friday, the starting lineup was instead set by the Indy Racing League's current season points. That dropped Ray back seven rows and ended his streak of 15 straight top-5 starts.

"Our year hasn't gone the way we wanted to, though we had some good runs. Yeah, we're kind of disappointed," said Ray, whose qualifying lap was 212.022 mph.

While the rain hurt Ray, the reshuffled lineup pushed Buddy Lazier and Robbie Buhl into the front row after qualifying runs not worthy of the top two spots.

Lazier, who started 16th or worse the previous three races, turned a lap at 209.873 mph Friday. That was seventh-best among the 17 drivers who finished qualifying and five spots better than Buhl's time of 209.043 mph.

"The way we have been qualifying this year, it was already a successful qualifying run," said Lazier, who went from last to first to win at Phoenix. "We'll definitely take it, but we feel bad for some of the guys."

Lazier, the season points leader, earned his only other pole in the IRL's inaugural race at Disney World in 1996. The only other time Buhl started on the front row was in Texas three years ago.

Scott Goodyear, the defending race champion, will start third based on points. He had run a qualifying lap of 210.929 mph that was fifth-best.

Mark Dismore, who had the provisional pole at 212.065 mph when the rain started, will instead start on the third row.

Bobby Labonte wins pole; Jarrett blows engine

Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — The fans at Michigan Speedway haven't forgotten last year's sleep-inducing blowout victory by Dale Jarrett in the Kmart 400.

They stood and cheered as the powerful engine in the No. 88 Ford blew in a ball of grayish-blue smoke as the defending Winston Cup champion, who led 150 of 200 laps last June, warmed up for a qualifying run on Friday.

Besides that mocking celebration, the biggest cheers were reserved for record-setting pole-winner Bobby Labonte and Ricky Rudd, the man he knocked off the top spot.

Moments after Jarrett's Ford coasted silently back to the garage area, teammate Rudd set a qualifying record of 189.021 mph on the 2-mile, high-banked oval.

That broke the mark of 188.843, set last August by Ward Burton. Rudd's speed buried the June race qualifying record of 186.945 by Jeff Gordon last year.

But Rudd was one-upped by Labonte, who calls the Michigan track his favorite oval.

"When the crew told me what we ran, I was like, 'Well that is just truly amazing.' I don't know how that happened," said Labonte, who picked up his first pole of the season and the 19th of his career.

■ Auto Racing

"We just changed a few things on teh car and we kept getting a little bit better. We made a couple of adjustments there for the weather or for the track conditions, we thought might be better. It blew me away."

Labonte, the 45th of 46 drivers to making qualifying attempts on Friday, also blew Rudd's record away with his 189.883.

"I'd probably be more frustrated if it was closer, but Bobby really beat us by a bunch," Rudd said. "We'll be right on his rear bumper when the race starts."

Jarrett, who was second fastest in practice behind Rudd, "Going into turn three, I felt it and then it just let go. We'll just have to be ready to race. It's a long 400 miles, so if you have a good car, it won't matter where you start."

As strong as Labonte and Rudd were Friday, Gordon doesn't expect a Jarrett-like blowout on Sunday.

"The tires are a lot different this year than they were last year," Gordon said. "Last year's cars were real uncomfortable and unstable. Jarrett's team hit on something and boy they were extremely fast here.

"But that lap Bobby put up there is extremely fast. He could be real tough here because he runs well here no matter what."

Rusty Wallace was fourth at 188.122, followed by Joe Nemechek at 188.053, Dale Earnhardt Jr. at 187.754, Jeff Burton at 187.622, Bill Elliott at 187.485, Dale Earnhardt at 187.456 and John Andretti at 187.251.

Jarrett, who failed to post a speed, will have to try again on Saturday in the second and final round of time trials. Among others who failed to lock in a starting position by qualifying in the top 25 Friday were Tony Stewart, who was 26th after winning last Sunday in Dover, Del., Kyle Petty in 32nd, Terry Labonte in 38th and Sterling Marlin in 42nd.

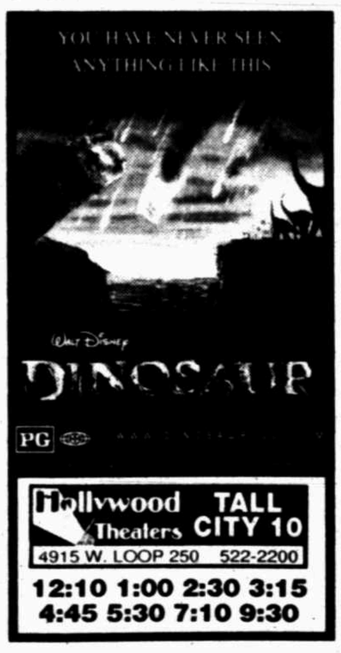

Biffle wins NASCAR Trucks Pronto race

FORT WORTH, — Pole-sitter Greg Biffle regained the lead with 36 laps to go and held on to win the rain-delayed NASCAR Trucks Pronto Auto Parts 400 on Friday night.

Biffle took the lead for good on lap 131 when he first passed Roush teammate Kurt Busch and then went high on the backstretch at Texas Motor Speedway to overtake Mike Wallace. He won the race by 2.741 seconds ahead of Wallace.

STANLEY CUP NOTEBOOK

Stars home, happy to prepare for Game Six

By Ira Podell
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — The Dallas Stars' trip back home wasn't easy. Just think how much worse it would have been had they lost Game 5.

The defending Stanley Cup champions stayed alive early Friday when Mike Modano scored 6:21 into the third overtime, preventing the New Jersey Devils from claiming the trophy from Dallas.

The Stars, who still trail the best-of-seven series 3-2, spent another night on the road since the game ended at 1:13 a.m. EDT. They were so tired, recalling the details later in the day was not easy.

"Basically, I don't know," captain Derian Hatcher said. "We had a bus ride, I think 45, 50 minutes whatever, somewhere in there, to a hotel. I am not even naming the city it was in.

"Eleven o'clock bus this morning and I don't know, three-hour flight and then I think we tried to land twice and we had to circle back around, seems like it just dragged it on a little bit longer."

The Stars have a chance to even the series Saturday night at Reunion Arena. If successful, a decisive seventh game would be in New Jersey on Monday night.

ROAD WARRIORS: Again, the road teams are feeling at home in opponents' arenas.

Ever since the New Jersey Devils routed the Dallas Stars 7-3 in the opener of the finals, the visitors have come out on top four straight times.

The Stars were 9-1 in Dallas before the Devils swept Games 3 and 4 at Reunion Arena to take a 3-1 series lead. The favor was returned when the Stars won Thursday night at Continental Airlines Arena, a venue in which the Devils are only 6-5 during these playoffs.

"Being down 3-1, we had to go into their building and have a big effort, and we did that," Stars center Joe Nieuwendyk said Friday. "Coming home, I think we are nothing but confident right now."

The Devils will surely feel confident as well, winning nine of 11 playoff games away from home. With a Game 6 victory, New Jersey will claim its second Stanley Cup and also tie its own playoff record with 10 road playoff wins.

MOTORING MODANO: For all the skating Mike Modano did Thursday night, he was worthy of scoring the only goal of the game.

Modano led the Stars in ice time in Game 5, logging 43 minutes, 37 seconds. His goal at 6:21 of the third overtime was his first of the series against New Jersey and his second career overtime tally.

"Well, I didn't score all last year so I didn't really care if I did or not," said Modano, who had no goals and seven assists against Buffalo and goalie Dominik Hasek in the 1999 finals. "Last year, someone was doing it and that is pretty much what we base our success on, a lot of contribution from everybody."

Modano beat St. Louis last season, scoring in overtime in the sixth game of the second round to eliminate the Blues en route to Dallas' first Stanley Cup.

TIRED WHISTLE: Early risers beware when referee Dan Marouelli takes the ice for a playoff game.

Marouelli, who along with Don Koharski policed the Game 5 thriller between Dallas and New Jersey, has worked four playoff games in his career that have lasted at least three overtimes.

He was also in Pittsburgh in the second round when Philadelphia's Keith Primeau finally scored at 92:01 of overtime, ending the third-longest NHL game. In 1996, Marouelli was on the ice for Petr Nedved's goal that gave Pittsburgh a victory at Washington 45 seconds before the fourth overtime ended.

A year later, Marouelli watched Detroit top Anaheim 1:31 into the third overtime on Vyacheslav Kozlov's goal.

Maybe all of this hard work has worn Marouelli down. By the time Mike Modano scored 6:21 into the third overtime Thursday night, at 1:13 a.m. EDT, he had only whistled five penalties.

SHORT CUTS: Dallas won 82 of 130 faceoffs in Game 5. New Jersey outhit Dallas 62-26. ... Devils defenseman Scott Stevens led all players in ice time Thursday with 45:37. ... Since 1990, the road team is 8-2 in the Stanley Cup finals.

STARS: Dallas keeps hope alive

(From 1B)

In 1994, Vancouver faced an elimination game on the road in Game 5 against the Rangers and won it, plus Game 6, too. But the Rangers came back to win Game 7.

"We still have two more chances to finish this thing," Devils rookie defenseman Brian Rafalski said. "It's not over."

However, history — funny how it keeps figuring in this series — hasn't treated the losers of long playoff games very well. The Devils are now just such a loser.

In 1996, the Capitals won twice in Pittsburgh to take a 2-0 series lead, then lost a four-overtime game at home. They never won again in the series. Earlier in these playoffs, the Penguins won the first two in Philadelphia, then lost successive overtime home games, the second in five overtimes. They never won again in the series.

"It takes a lot out of you to lose a game like that," Penguins goaltender Ron Tugnutt said. "To play that long and that hard and to lose ... ."

The Devils, who rely heavily on four rookies, expect to bounce back easier than the more experienced Stars. Neither team took the ice Friday to rest their weary legs.

"Modano probably played more than half our team put together. Every second shift he was out there," Devils coach Larry Robinson said. "He's not a young man anymore, and they have a lot of guys that played a lot of hockey. So I think, with the fact we use more guys than they do, it should be an advantage."

So can momentum and confidence, two factors clearly lacking in the Stars before Game 5. Not now.

"We feel that we can't lose three in a row at home," Modano said after the Stars returned to Dallas. "We are planning on playing our best game (Saturday) night and continue on with the things that we did.

"It is a patient game. It is whoever can wait out the other guys, mentally break down the other team. It is whoever cracks. We finally got a little seam there and took advantage of it."

The Devils still plan to hoist the Cup — if not Saturday, then Monday.

"We're still up in the series," Devils rookie Colin White said. "And we're not going to get down."

Stars confident returning home

Associated Press

DALLAS — Too proud to be knocked out of the Stanley Cup finals in five games, the Dallas Stars are intent on stretching the series to a seventh game.

"We all felt if we got one last night that we'd be going back to play Monday. That's still our mindset," said Mike Modano, whose goal 6:21 into the third overtime gave the Stars a 1-0 victory over the New Jersey Devils, to force Game 6 in Dallas on Saturday night.

The longest shutout in finals history was only the start of a long 24 hours for the Stars.

Rather than fly back immediately after the game, the team had a 45-minute bus ride to Piscataway, N.J., the closest place they could find a hotel. After another bus ride back to Newark, their flight home was forced to circle the airport several times because of weather. It finally landed on a far away runway, forcing them to roll all the way to their destination.

The trip was worth it, though, because it means the Stars are still defending champions — at least for another day.

Dallas, trying to become only the second of 26 teams to overcome a 3-1 deficit in the finals, can force a deciding game with a victory at Reunion Arena, where it is 9-3 this postseason.

Two of those losses, however, came to New Jersey.

"We feel that we can't lose three in a row at home," Modano said. "We plan on playing our best game, too, and continue on with the things we did last night.

"It's a patient game, whoever can wait out the other team and mentally break them down."

The Devils, especially Bobby Holik, had plenty of chances to claim the Cup, but couldn't get past Stars goalie Eddie Belfour. New Jersey's Martin Brodeur also was brilliant.

"Mentally, I think we may have an edge," Stars center Joe Nieuwendyk said. "I'd like to think we do.

"This can be a real tough loss for them because they had the party ready to go and we took it away from them."

New Jersey can take solace in having played a great game, too. And if the Devils check the standings, they still have two chances to get the one victory needed to clinch the Cup.

Two other factors work in New Jersey's favor: overcoming a 3-1 deficit the previous round, which helps the Devils understand the mindset needed to avoid such a collapse; and a 9-2 postseason road record.

Young formalizes retirement; 49ers ready for farewell news conference

By Dennis Georgatos
AP Sports Writer

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Steve Young sent his formal retirement notice to the San Francisco 49ers via fax on Friday, and team officials prepared for Monday's farewell news conference.

Young, 38, told general manager Bill Walsh of his intention to retire in a mid-week phone call and followed that with his retirement letter.

Young has not spoken publicly since word came down Thursday that he was ending his 17-year pro career, including 15 NFL seasons, the last 13 with the 49ers.

The highest-rated passer in league history, Young led San Francisco to its fifth Super Bowl title following the 1994 season. He hasn't played since going down last September at Arizona with his eighth known concussion, and fourth in three years.

His formal retirement announcement will be held in an unusual setting: the 49ers' locker room at club headquarters. The guest list is lengthy and includes former 49ers owner Eddie DeBartolo, who turned over control of the team to his sister earlier this year as part of resolving a family feud, and former club president Carmen Policy, who left San Francisco to join the new Cleveland Browns after a falling out with DeBartolo.

Young's wife, parents and other relatives also are coming, along with Brigham Young coach LaVell Edwards, who was Young's coach in college. Denver coach Mike Shanahan and Seattle coach Mike Holmgren, both former offensive coordinators in San Francisco and both influential in Young's development, were also on the guest list.

Among the teammates expected to be on hand are Jerry Rice, with whom Young formed the most prolific touchdown-pass tandem in NFL history, Harris Barton and Brent Jones.

There was no word if four-time Super Bowl winner Joe Montana, who was both a teammate and rival of Young, would attend.

Walsh, 49ers coach when he pulled off the 1987 trade to bring Young to the 49ers from Tampa Bay, will miss the the quarterback's departure. Walsh has already left town on a previously scheduled family vacation in Hawaii.

While Young spent much of Friday talking with friends and relatives and getting invitations out to the news conference, 49ers officials were preparing the locker room for Monday's gathering.

The logistics of squeezing everyone in posed a bit of a challenge.

"But we're going to make it work," team spokesman Kirk Reynolds said.

Meanwhile, the tributes to Young have already started.

"I really believe he's one of the top five players ever to play the game at his position," Shanahan said Friday. "I think the world of him. What a career he's had.

"He could do it all. He had a great sense of timing. He could make all the throws. He was a great competitor. He was a leader, both on and off the football field. And he could make plays when nothing was there. He was a legitimate sub-4.5 quarterback, and they don't exist very often. He had that burning desire which only the great ones have to be as competitive as anybody."

Offensive guard Ray Brown said Young will be missed.

"He was obviously very talented athletically," Brown said. "But he was on the same page as the coaches because he knew the system as well as they did. That's going to be sorely missed.

"That guy has been through the battles and the wars. He stood out among stars in this locker room. To be a star guy and be very approachable, that's unique. He was very much one of the guys."

RELIGION

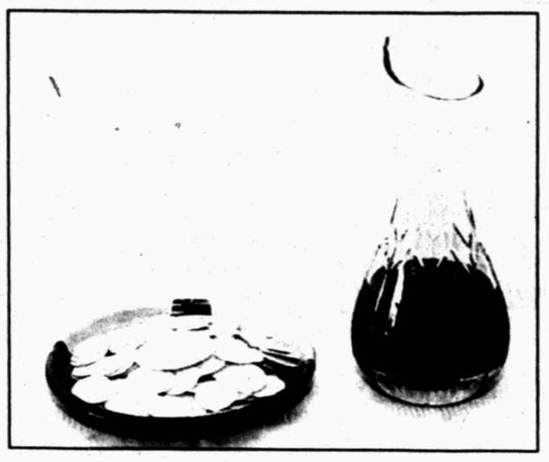

Religion in Brief/3C

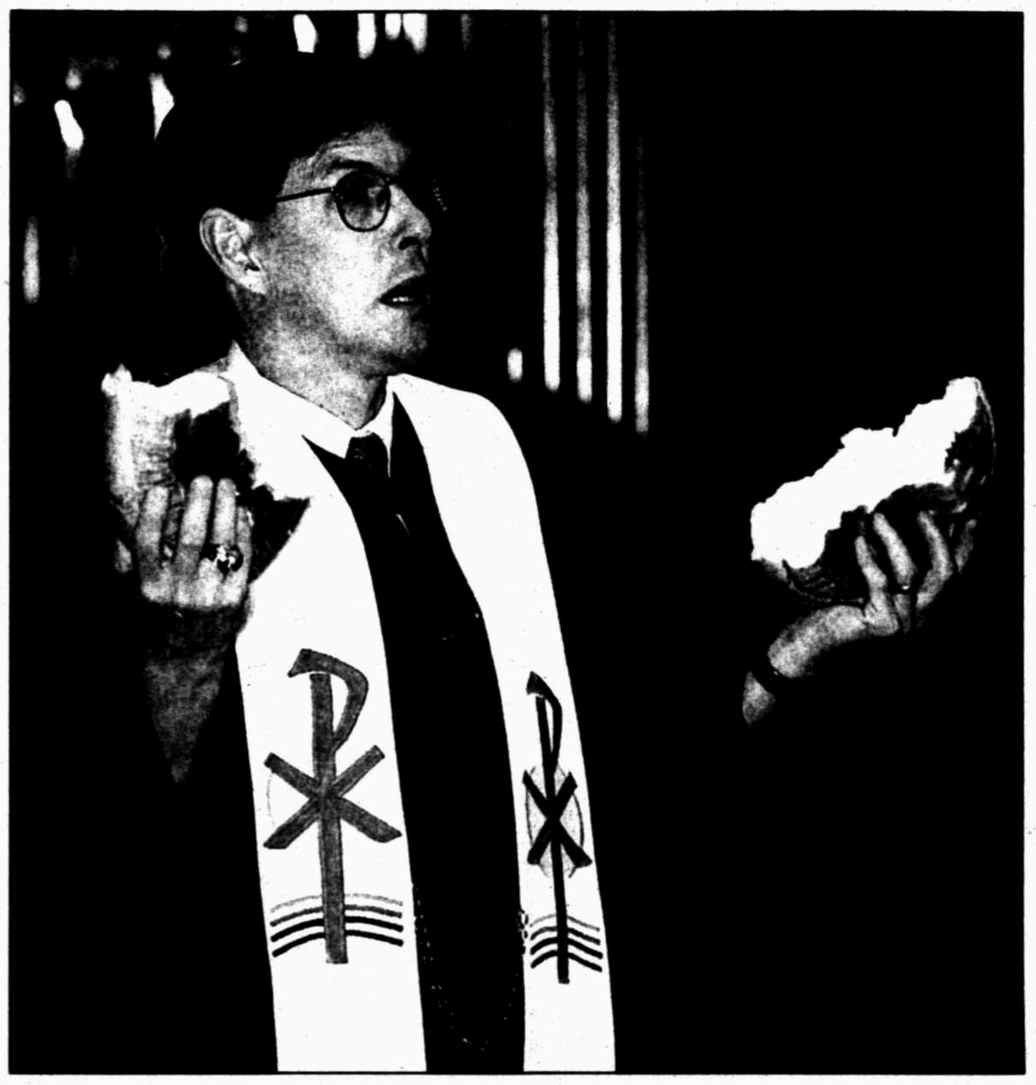

'I am the bread of life'

"... The Lord Jesus on the night he was betrayed took bread and when he had given thanks, broke it and said, 'This is my body, which is for you. Do this in remembrance of me. In the same way, after the supper, he took the cup, saying, 'This cup is the new covenant in my blood. Do this, whenever you drink it, in remembrance of me.'"

— 1 Corinthians 11:23-25

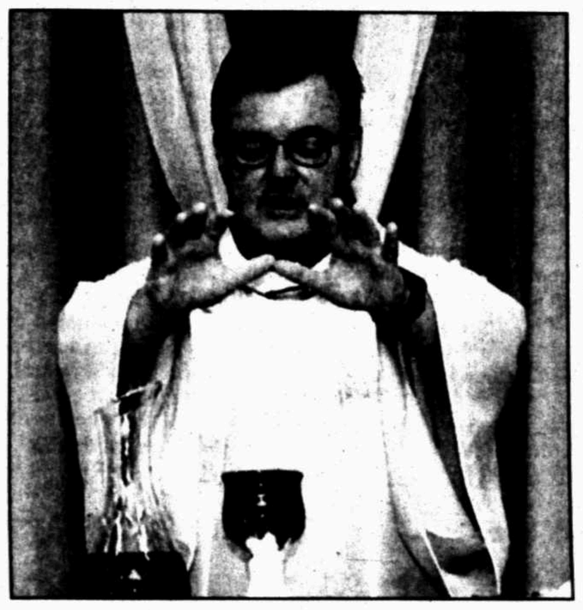

Tradition of Lord's Supper varies from faith to faith

In the movie, "Places in the Heart," Sally Fields' character sits in a little country church at the end of the movie taking communion, and as the tray of communion cups passes from person to person, each says, "Peace of God." Then slowly the pews fill with the characters, both good and bad, who have died during the movie, all reunited, all intoning the prayer/benediction/statement of universal fact: "Peace of God."

"Communion with Jesus is for everyone," says the Rev. Tom Kelley, pastor of Our Lady of San Juan Catholic Church. "We are all called to be part of His life. And that is the heart of the Catholic Eucharist, the Catholic Mass."

Midlander Jim Bradshaw, a retired Baptist minister of education, recalls that during a trip to East Texas many years ago, his family has stopped at a Baptist church where communion was served.

"My youngest daughter had just been baptized a week or so before and she wanted to take communion," he said. "But many Baptist churches observe closed communion — that is, it is restricted to members of that congregation.

"Other churches offer it to others as long as they are Baptists. Still others say all baptized Christians may partake as long as the baptism was by immersion.

"I asked to speak to one of the church's deacons and explained the situation to him, and he invited us to take communion."

Bradshaw said that had the man told him the communion was closed, he would have felt no rancor.

Nor would any of his family have taken communion without establishing beforehand that they would be welcome to do so.

"Every Baptist church has its own customs in dealing with communion," he explained. "But one thing that Baptists agree on is that the communion is not a sacrament, but a memorial. That's why, when we go to a liturgical church such as the Presbyterian or the Catholic, we don't partake."

That said, Bradshaw admits that when he attends church with his Presbyterian aunt, he takes the cup and wafer with her. "It's a cultural thing, and as Paul said, I won't offend her by refusing. But I'm not speaking for other Baptists — only for me, and only when I'm with my aunt."

The very act, imbued with love and mysticism, symbolizes at once the unity of the Christian family, and its splintering. Almost universally, the Lord's Supper is regarded as too holy to be taken lightly. Yet Christians can't agree on how often it should be eaten, how it should be eaten, who should eat it, or even what they're doing when they eat it.

Communion was the stumbling block over which Ralph Waldo Emerson resigned as pastor of the Unitarian Church. In a lengthy essay, he explained that his examination of the Gospels and of I Corinthians11:17-30 led him to believe that Jesus did not intend to establish an extension of the Passover in perpetual observation.

The position of the Roman Catholic Church is that the wine and bread become the body and blood of Christ during the liturgy, a process that is referred to as transubstantiation. It has been a major point of dissention through the ages, yet while liturgical Protestants may disavow a belief in transubstantiation, their view of the presence of Christ in the Eucharist has caused non-liturgical believers to refuse to share communion with them.

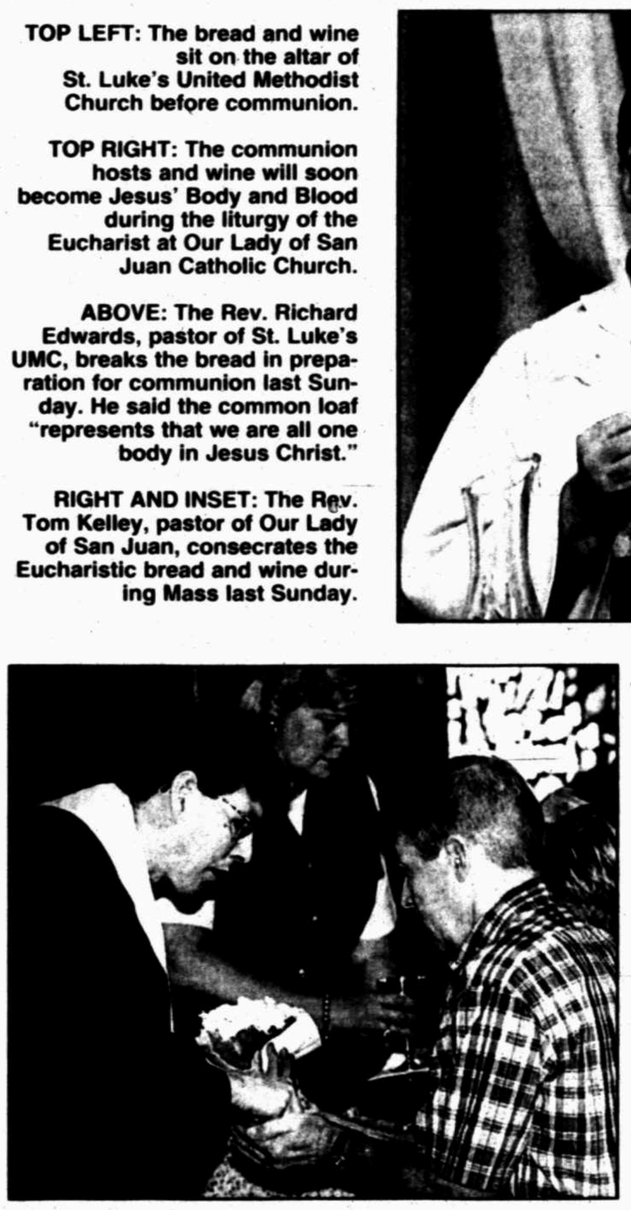

What is the position of other faiths? Following is what various faiths believe communion is.

LESLIE WILLIAMS

God is ready to prove that He can resurrect even a flat, flat tire

Williams

I've decided that, whenever possible, it's best to start a long car trip with a flat tire. You get it out of the way quickly, and, besides, a flat tire affords immediate opportunity for prayer.

Several summers ago, we pulled up to the office at the dude ranch at dawn, ready to blaze a nine-hour trail across West Texas in the sizzling summer heat — and the back tire expired with a sigh. At first, I thought it had simply sagged from the 16 tons of rocks, sticks, and other objects of nature my children had collected and crammed into the already-overloaded minivan. But no. It was definitely flat, and all the jokes about "It's just flat on the bottom" didn't soothe my irritation.

In fact, I said, "damn," an event my children found far more exciting than the flat tire.

Which led to more opportunity for prayer on my part.

Guiltily, I tried to turn the occasion into a "Do-what-I-say, not-what I-do" lesson, with a corollary of "parents-are-human, too" theme.

About that time, someone from the dude ranch gave us a doggie bag with cranberry and pecan muffins, as my husband injected the sagging tire with Gunk from an aerosol can. Driving away, I sighed at the chorus from the back: "Yuck! These muffins taste like barf!" and "Mommy, you said the 'D' word!"

At this point, I began to pray in earnest. Did this tiny Texas town contain a tire our size? Would a gas station be open at this hour? Could we make it the mile or so down the caliche road before the Gunk exploded, blowing white polyurethane and black tire shreds against the peaceful dawn landscape of bluebonnets and sunflowers?

Miracles do happen. Against all odds, a mini-van tire materialized from the back of the pit of the only mechanic pit in town. We celebrated in thanksgiving with a breakfast of Cokes and Cheetos, ditching the muffins. It's hard to whoop it up with food that tastes like cardboard and contains no fat grams at all. After all, what's the point of a vacation? We eat tasteless, good-for-you food at home.

As I mentioned in last week's column, within two days of my husband's departure, the engine and the brakes both went out in my car. What I didn't mention is that several days later the engine went out again and the car spent four more days on vacation in the Automotive Hilton.

Each week I pray for material for this column — for examples to highlight how God works in our daily lives. Maybe I should mention to the Lord that the car theme is getting old.

On the other hand, it could be a lot worse. Car trouble is minor in the total scheme of things. Plus, I have to admit, He has eventually redeemed every rattle, squeak, and flashing light.

I am slow to learn the lessons of life, and often have to receive repeated lessons. This go-around, I guess God is using a tire iron instead of a two-by-four. The point? God is with us always (even when we're stranded by the side of the road), ready to prove that He can resurrect even a very, very flat tire.

'I am the bread of life'

SUPPER: Some churches have open communion doesn't refer to himself as minister or pastor), said his church takes communion each Lord's Day, and invites all baptized Christians to take communion.

(From 1C)

"We leave it up to the worshipper to determine whether to participate."

In answer to a question about the customs surrounding communion in his congregation, he said, "In light of evidence from Scripture and early church history, we observe the Lord's Supper weekly ... while some argue that this is too often or that it becomes too common, I find it interesting that the same ones who argue this do not make a similar argument regarding financial offerings (which are also a part of worship)."

Fleming said that as a part of the communion service, someone from the congregation usually reads a passage of Scripture. "We also tend to have a song beforehand to aid our preparation for Communion.

"Given our lack of a clergy-laity distinction (all Christians are 'priests'), the distribution and prayers associated with Communion is done by members of the congregation (preachers may do this at times but only as another member of the congregation, not because of being a preacher). We tend to have a person who is asked ahead of time to prepare what we term a 'communion meditation.' This consists of a Scripture reading followed by brief comments intended to help prepare the congregation for participation.

Fleming concludes with a quote from Justin Martyr (Apology 1, 67-c. 150 AD), taken from "Early Christians Speak, Faith and Life in the First Three Centuries":

"And on the day called Sunday there is a gathering together in the same place of all who live in a city or a rural district. The memoirs of the apostles or the writings of the prophets are read, as long as time permits. Then when the reader ceases, the one presiding in a discourse admonishes and urges the imitation of these good things. Next we all rise together to send up prayers. And, as I said before, when we cease from our prayer, bread is presented and wine (mixed with) water. The one presiding in the same manner sends up prayers and thanksgiving according to his ability and the people sing out their assent saying the Amen. A distribution and participation of the elements for which thanks has been given is made to each person and to those not present it is sent by the deacons."

Assembly of God

The Rev. Sammy Hayes, pastor of First Assembly of God, said communion in his congregation is a time not only of reconciliation, but of healing.

It is taken the third Sunday of each month and consists of "unleavened bread, which symbolizes the absence of sin or evil. We do not use wine, but grape juice, usually the darker varieties."

Hayes said communion is "open to born-again believers. We do not encourage the very young (under 5 or 6) to partake. Parents are encouraged to decide for their children when to participate."

He said that "each participant is encouraged to examine himself as directed in I Corinthians 11:28 before receiving the emblems.

"Communion is a declaration (a remembrance) of Christ's death and a proclamation of his return (I Cor. 11:26)," said Hayes. "It provides a time of special communion with Christ and the setting and opportunity to receive bodily healing and strength."

United Methodist

The Rev. Richard Edwards, pastor of St. Luke's United Methodist Church, said the United Methodists also practice open communion.

"Our invitation simply states: 'All that do truly and earnestly repent of your sins, are in love and charity with your neighbors, and intend to lead a new life, following the commandments of God, and walking from now on in his holy way' are invited to take communion.

"Lay readers assist in the liturgy and the serving of the communion," Edwards said. "We serve communion in a variety of methods since we stress the meaning behind communion, not the method. We normally use a common loaf which represents that we are all one body in Jesus Christ; however, we have also used wafers or unleavened bread."

He said the congregation comes to the communion rail where they receive grape juice in individual cups, or they intinct — dipping a small piece of bread in a common cup, then eat.

They usually take communion once each month, at Christmas and on Maundy Thursday.

Baptist

The Rev. Mike Vestal, pastor at Dellwood Baptist Church, said his congregation takes communion — they refer to it as the Lord's Supper — every three months.

Vestal said that in order to share the Lord's Supper at Dellwood, participants must be "saved, be baptized, and be a member of our local church."

Vestal stressed, however, that every Baptist church is an entity independent of the Baptist church down the street, and that he speaks only for his own congregation.

"But Baptists traditionally use the Lord's Supper symbolically as a memorial to the life, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ."

He said the communion tray of individual cups of grape juice and bread are passed around the congregation.

He added that he had at one time come across a recipe book with more than 55 recipes for communion bread listed in the index.

Presbyterian

The Rev. Bill Clark, pastor of Grace Presbyterian, said Presbyterians traditionally take communion with the congregation remaining in the pews. Each person takes bread then passes the loaf to the next person, saying, "The body of Christ, broken for you."

The tray of individual cups of wineand grape juice is then passed around, with parishioners saying, "The blood of Christ, shed for you."

A less traditional method sometimes practiced is intinction, where parishioners come to the table and dip the bread into the cup. Clark said an important distinction to remember is that Presbyterian churches don't have altars.

"This is a meal that we share with Christ," he explained. "The sacrifice has already been made, once and for all."

He said anyone who has been baptized in the name of Christ is welcome to share communion at Presbyterian services.

Lutheran

The Rev. Alan Williams, chaplain at Midland Memorial Hospital who serves Calvary Lutheran Church in San Angelo on Sundays, said his congregation takes communion weekly, and that communicants are baptized Christians, fifth grade and older, who have received instruction as to the meaning of communion.

"Lutherans use 'Words of Institution' and a liturgy or service format around communion that includes the 'Great Thanksgiving,' preface followed by 'Sanctus,' 'Words of Institution' which always include 1 Corinthians 11:23-26, followed by the Lord's Prayer."

He said the communion is followed by a blessing, a song of thanks, and prayer, then a closing benediction.

Episcopal

The Rev. Stockton Williams, rector of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, said Episcopalians practice open communion, with all baptized Christians welcome, including children, with their parents' approval.

It is customarily celebrated at every service, including most funerals, and its form is set out in the Book of Common Prayer, found in the pews alongside Bibles and hymnals. Eucharistic language varies according to the preferences of the communicants and the clergy, with the two most common forms being Rite 1, in the traditional language of the 1928 Book of Common Prayer, or Rite 2, in more contemporary language authorized by the 1979 Book of Common Prayer.

"In our Rite 1 services, we have long sentences we say while people are receiving communion," said Williams. "'The Body of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was given for thee preserve thy body and soul unto everlasting life. Take and eat this in remembrance that Christ died for thee, and feed on him in thy heart by faith, with thanksgiving.' There is a similar statement with the wine," he said.

"One of my favorite church history stories has to do with why we say that long, two-sentence statement. The first Book of Common Prayer, of 1549, had only that first sentence. The second Prayer Book, of 1552, was much more reformed, and had only the second sentence.

"Then Queen Mary came in, outlawed the Prayer Book, burned Archbishop of Canterbury Thomas Cranmer, who was the primary compiler of the Prayer Book, at the stake, and brought the church back under the authority of Rome.

But when Queen Elizabeth I became queen, she caused a new Prayer Book to be issued in 1559.

"A huge debate arose over which of the two sentences to include — the first, more 'Catholic' sentence, or the second more 'Reformed' sentence. So the story goes that Elizabeth brought the feuding bishops, theologians etc. together, and said 'Boys, boys, boys. Quit your fighting and put both sentences in.'

"(This is) yet another example of the traditional Anglican 'Via Media' between Catholicism and Calvinism — holding the best of both together at the same time."

Catholic

Only Baptized Catholics may receive communion in the Catholic Church. This is the official position of the Catholic Church, according to Monsignor T.J. Murphy, pastor of St. Anne's Catholic Church.

"This can sometimes be painful, we admit, especially since on the one hand, it unifies us as Catholics, yet it sets us apart from the world."

Murphy said that Holy Communion is offered at every Mass, and that baptized Catholic children may take it at about age 7, "... when they've reached the age of discernment."

"The communuion rite of the Catholic Mass begins with prayer of "The Our Father,' which calls us to be in communion with Jesus as he is with the Father," Kelley said. "And so before we enter into communion in body and blood, we must be in communion with Him as he is living with the Father. That is the Catholic tradition.

"At Our Lady of San Juan, we invite all to the altar — if not to receive His body and blood, then His blessing."

'Technology is work of God,' believes Internet company executive

By May Wong
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — At church services, worshipers are not just feeling the power of God these days. They also witness the power of technology.

Every weekend at Menlo Park Presbyterian, a full-time crew of six works behind the scenes, offering up snazzy graphics and live close-ups on two large screens flanking the altar.

While many mainstream Protestant congregations report declining attendance, this church packs as many as 1,000 smartly dressed people into each of five weekend services.

It took some time for them to adapt, but parishioners say they like the state-of-the-art audio and visual aids, which make for a spiritual experience previously embraced only by televangelists.

"We're much more into it. We could see and hear what's going on much better," said Kay Huber of Redwood City, a member of Menlo Park Presbyterian for 10 years.

Presentation software like Power Point was nonexistent in mainstream American churches five years ago, but is used at many churches now, said Laurence Iannaccone, a Santa Clara University economics professor specializing in religion.

"The person who works in sound and video has suddenly become a very important person in churches, whereas 15 years ago it was a teen-ager who was trying on the mikes," he said.

No one tracks how churches nationwide are using technology, but Iannaccone predicts that in a few years, most churches will use computers as a preaching and communication tool, by using Power Point, posting Web sites, broadcasting live sermons on the Internet or taking prayer requests online.

Walt Wilson, an Internet company executive and author of "The Internet Church," says the Los Gatos, Calif., church he attends initially wanted to throw him out when he pushed for Power Point sermons four years ago.

"I don't view technology as the work of men. I see it as the work of God," he said.

An 8-by-10-foot high-tech monitor shows the words to a hymn at Menlo Park Presbyterian Chruch in Menlo Park, Calif., last month. The screen, one of two on the stage that serve as visual aids for the congregation, is a prototype designed for the church by Ceitronics Inc. of San Jose, Calif.

At Menlo Park Presbyterian, audio cassettes of sermons are available for $2 almost immediately after each service. The church is equipped to dub 23 tapes in four minutes.

Sermons also appear within a day on the church's Web site, and this month, the church's tech crew members hope to begin streaming worship services live onto the Internet.

Their goal is to use technology to enhance, not overpower, the spiritual experience.

"We're cutting edge for a mainline church, but not so much so that we'd lose our congregation," said Cort Bender, the associate minister of worship who oversees the media department.

Not everyone wants to tune in electronically to a spiritual experience, however. Increasingly popular among some young adults are so-called postmodern congregations that sing Gregorian chants and line worship halls with candles.

Yet some churches that are resisting or lagging behind in technological change are finding themselves losing members to churches more aligned with the frenetic pace of today's media and culture.

First Baptist Church in Menlo Park, only a few blocks from the Presbyterian church, resisted change for years and saw its membership figures dwindle from 500 a quarter century ago to 80 today.

A year ago, First Baptist hired someone to maintain its Web site. The church's elders also boldly decided to cross denominations, seeking advice and loans of equipment from its Presbyterian neighbor. The Baptists even began experimenting with video projections during its services last month.

Senior Pastor Rick Line said the verdict for the congregation is still out. While the church's membership has remained steady at 80, the segment of baby boomers is growing. "We are younger today than we were three months ago," he said.

"We are living in an area filled with people who are making change in the world," Line said. "And not allowing them to make change in the church was locking them out."

Woman Holocaust survivor returns to Jewish roots, is ordained a rabbi

By Julia Lieblich
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — Helga Newmark was 11 when she first heard the 23rd Psalm at the Theresienstadt concentration camp in Nazi-occupied Czechoslovakia. Each evening as she lay on her bunk, she listened to a woman's voice from the bed below.

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me ..."

Then she added, "Go to sleep, my beloved child."

The psalm brought her comfort then, Helga Newmark, now 67, recalls. But by the time she was liberated she had no use for a God that could allow a Holocaust, and no use for being a Jew.

Now, half a century later, at an age when others retire, Newmark has become the first woman Holocaust survivor to be ordained a rabbi.

Some survivors can recall the details of 1940s European Jewish life, she says. "I remember bits and pieces."

She remembers, for example, that she didn't like to play with Anne Frank when they were growing up in Amsterdam: "She was very bossy." And she didn't think much about being Jewish until her mother told her she'd have to wear a yellow star.

"Some kids couldn't play with me anymore because I wore the star," she said.

Soon her family was told to board a freight train for Westerbork, a holding camp in Holland. There her father was put on another train, presumably headed for a labor camp. Later, when Ms. Newmark's mother was told she could sign up for a transport to join her husband, she doubted officials and refused, infuriating her young daughter.

"What's wrong with you?" Ms. Newmark recalls saying. "I'm going to go myself." It would be years before she learned that her father had already been killed at Auschwitz.

She would live in three camps, separated from her mother for long stretches, making friends she couldn't keep. She lost her friend Beatte, a pregnant woman, when guards forced her to have an abortion.

"I loved her and she disappeared. Then she came back and was never the same, and she died."

Then, when Ms. Newmark was 11, a guard raped her. "I didn't even know what was happening to me," she said.

It was one of many traumas she and her mother would not discuss after they were liberated from Theresienstadt in 1945 and moved to Amsterdam and then New York City.

"I needed to talk about it, but my mother didn't want to hear or ever talk about it again," said Ms. Newmark.

They didn't go to temple in New York or observe the Jewish holidays. "My mother said, 'There is no God, and I don't particularly want to be a Jew.' I said it, too. What good was being a Jew? I was in a camp for being a Jew."

At 17, Ms. Newmark married another survivor, but they tried to put the experience behind them. Not until she had children did she

RABBI: Years later, she wondered where was God at death camps

One of them came when she was stopped at a railroad crossing and saw a freight train. "It scared the living daylights out of me. I was in the train smelling the smells and screaming. That's when I went into therapy."

She didn't talk about the "whys" in therapy. "I could not face those questions. They were too painful." But she began to wonder what she would say to her three children if they asked whether there was a God and if they had a religion.

After exploring Buddhism and Catholicism, Ms. Newmark decided to try her own religion, joining a small synagogue in Ridgefield Park, N.J. Gradually, she became more interested in the Jewish rituals and she began to enjoy the communal prayers.

"There's something very magnificent and awesome about sometimes listening to a community, a congregation pray," she said. "The sound of it, as corny as it sounds, nourishes my soul."

In time she began saying her own prayers. "I pray under the shower and thank God for letting me be able to get into the shower and feel clean and move around."

Still, it would be years before she would approach the question: Where was God in the camps?

In 1987, after the death of her grandchild, "the question of why surfaced all over again," forcing her to confront the issues.

She does not agree with Anne Frank's famous statement that all people are "really good at heart."

"There is good and evil in all of us," Ms. Newmark says. "If we can accept that, then we can accept it in ourselves and then we can accept it in others and take the necessary precautions against evil."

Ms. Newmark continued to find sustenance in Judaism, and the knowledge that she "came from a people that had survived for centuries." She began teaching Sunday School at the synagogue and later accepted a job as principal of a religious school.

Eager to continue her education, she applied to rabbinical school but was rejected. Instead, she studied for a master's degree in social work from Yeshiva University.

At age 58, she reapplied to the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in New York. This time she was accepted by the Reform movement college and "entered the world of the Talmud."

She was ordained the end of May to two standing ovations.

For her thesis topic, she chose, "Hope and Destruction in Selected Psalms," recalling how the 23rd Psalm had soothed her in Theresienstadt. For thousands of years, she says, "the psalms have shown people crying out to God."

She hopes to become a congregational rabbi and that her experience as a survivor will help her reach people recovering from the kind of trauma it took her years to speak about.

"For a long time I lived in a narrow room and I didn't know how to get out," she said. "A number of people also live in rooms and prisons. And I think I can encourage them to look out a window.

"Many times people say to me, 'This is nothing compared to what you went through.' I disagree." To single out the suffering of survivors of war and genocide isolates them, she said. "Everyone's suffering is very personal and there are many similarities," she says.

She rarely mentions her own experience when talking to congregants in crisis. A shared pain, she said, can be communicated without words.

"It may be sufficient to get up from my chair and simply hold the person," she said. "Sometimes that's all that's needed to let a person know they're not alone and it's possible to survive."

Pope's declining health raises question of who will succeed him

By Victor L. Simpson
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — Now that celebrations for Pope John Paul II's landmark 80th birthday are over, Vatican watchers have turned to that perennial guessing game: Who will succeed him?

Will the next pope be an Italian, after a historic Polish pause, or might the electors make history again by choosing a prelate from the developing world? Will they seek to make the next one a "short" papacy — or again opt for someone young by papal standards?

In the eyes of some, naming an Italian would represent "a return to normalcy" after such an event-filled pontificate, said Vittorio Messori, an Italian who collaborated with John Paul on his book "Crossing the Threshold of Hope."

The pope has reached what he calls his "twilight years," and in the 22nd year of his papacy, he has reached the age — 80 — when cardinals are barred by church law from casting votes in conclaves to elect a new pope.

He is also frail, with his suffering clear to any observer: Tremors in his hands and slurred speech, symptoms of Parkinson's disease, a progressive neurological disorder, and a shuffling gait dating to hip-replacement surgery six years ago.

But he's also pushing ahead with his agenda during the Holy Year, with such audacious acts as asking forgiveness for the sins of Roman Catholics and praying at Jerusalem's Western Wall as part of efforts for reconciliation with Jews.

What makes the guessing game even more difficult is that John Paul has already outlived many cardinals once seen as "papabile," and Vatican officials have brushed aside speculation that the pope's ailments may force him to resign soon.

Rumors had swirled over appointments to such important posts as the archbishop of Westminster, succeeding the late Cardinal Basil Hume, and archbishop of New York, succeeding the late Cardinal John O'Connor.

With those appointments decided, the gossip has turned to naming cardinals.

"All you hear is talk about cardinals and when they may be named," said Bishop Joseph Fiorenza of Galveston-Houston after a recent visit to Vatican offices.

In fact, the number of cardinals under 80 and eligible to vote in a conclave has dwindled to 100 from the 120 maximum allowed, meaning John Paul can name as many as 20 more cardinal-electors — and potential papal candidates themselves. He is expected to do so by the fall.

It's not that cardinals exactly lobby. They say their vote is guided by the Holy Spirit, although they clearly had politics in mind in 1978 when they elected the Polish John Paul in a stunning challenge to his country's communist rulers.

Some have taken highly visible roles.

Cardinal Roger Etchegaray, a 77-year-old Frenchman, heads the Vatican's Holy Year Committee, travels with the pope and meets often with the media. But some say he's too old and too liberal.

Cardinal Camillo Ruini, who heads the Italian Bishops Conference, is another prominent figure. He spent several weeks in the United States last year to bone up on English, considered important, particularly in light of the multilingual John Paul.

Other Italians mentioned are Cardinal Dionigi Tettamanzi, the archbishop of Genoa, and Cardinal Carlo Maria Martini, the archbishop of Milan.

He raised eyebrows at the Vatican last year when he suggested that the church needs to re-examine its stance on sexual issues and the reason for the shortage of priests, which some blame on mandatory celibacy.

A powerful choice would be Cardinal Francis Arinze, a Nigerian who heads the pontifical council for interreligious dialogue. He would be the first black pope in modern times and send a message of the church's interest in the developing world.

Two Latin Americans have also been mentioned: Cardinal Jaime Ortega of Havana, who helped prepare the pope's historic visit to Cuba in January 1998; and Cardinal Norberto Rivera of Mexico, although at 57, he is considered young.

Other possible candidates include Miloslav Vlk of the Czech Republic and Godfried Danneels of Belgium.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 10, 2000:

Make the most of opportunities for travel and mental growth. For many, a foreigner or someone quite different could come into your life. Be open to different ideas. As a result, you'll change. Partners and friends respond to you differently as you develop and grow. If you are single, romance can be confusing, but you will meet someone very special and unique. If attached, discuss feelings. You begin a new 11-year lucky cycle. LIBRA catches your fancy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Others seek you out, wanting some of your time and feedback. It is your pleasure. You'll enjoy making a difference. Go with the moment and don't let momentary confusion or misunderstandings overwhelm you. Popularity soars. Tonight: Say yes to another.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Get into what you consider a relaxing hobby after you touch base with a parent or someone who might need your help. Invite a partner to join you; he puts an interesting twist on this project. Share more of your leisure time. A friend affects plans. Tonight: Don't push yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Someone could struggle with a task that you find easy. Break your thinking and point of view down into terms others can understand. Your willingness overcomes a problem. Romantic moments are likely if you're available. Pace yourself. Tonight: Stop only when you are too tired to go on!

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Home and family are high priorities, but especially now. Someone goes out of his way to express how important you are. Adjust plans, keeping a special person in mind. A misunderstanding could happen if you don't clarify. Tonight: At your pad.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Follow another's lead, and you won't be disappointed. A fun venture appeals to you. Don't let logic interfere right now. Go with the moment. Your sense of humor emerges with a friend, even if plans get confused. Tonight: Where the action is.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Give up the need for perfect organization. Allow yourself to flow and not have as much structure. You don't need to be so controlled. A family member responds to your laissez-faire attitude and reverses his position. Tonight: Relax.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Establish a better rapport with a child or loved one. Run with one of his ideas; acknowledge his contribution. Plans change rapidly. Be flexible. Refuse to take a sharp statement personally. You can straighten this out later. Tonight: You are the party.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Take your time. Don't feel that you must do anything. Taking your time and flowing from one situation to another allows a more relaxed pace. Even you cannot continue with such a stressful pace as you have lately. Ease up. Make fewer demands on yourself. Tonight: Do for you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Acknowledge that you have changed a lot. What might have appealed to you before might no longer. Flow freely. You know what is good for you; now follow through. Associates or a partner could be upset, but it all works out. Tonight: With friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Listen to a boss, who means well. An older relative you care a lot about needs your time. Spending goes out of whack, but you might not be sure how to cut back. The answer might not be working longer hours. Confusion surrounds plans. Tonight: A force to behold.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Take off and spend a day away from it all. Your mind and soul merge together in a different setting. Take off and enjoy yourself. You reverse a decision regarding a long-term desire or wish. Friendship plays a strong role in a decision. Tonight: Don't push another.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Relate on a one-on-one level with a dear friend or loved one. You don't have to do what you have planned. Run with your mood. Relating can be challenging. Give someone who's out of sorts space to work through it. Be indulgent. Tonight: Process and work through a misunderstanding.

Presley wants to give hope, shelter

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Lisa Marie Presley, whose childhood home is one of this city's most famous landmarks, wants to give hope — as well as shelter — to families who have nowhere to live.

The daughter of Elvis Presley was in her hometown Thursday to break ground for Presley Place, housing for the homeless that will open in January.

Presley Place is a way to give "hope and opportunity back to those who may have lost it," she said.

Elvis Presley was born into poverty and lived in public housing in Memphis as a youth. Rock stardom brought him the money to build his mansion, Graceland, which is now one of the city's most popular tourist spots.

The Metropolitan Inter-Faith Association hopes to begin construction on Presley Place by the end of June with $1.3 million donated by the Elvis Presley Charitable Foundation.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Elisabeth Shue is leaving Cambridge.

Shue, who earned an Oscar nomination for "Leaving Las Vegas," was among the thousands who donned caps and gowns and graduated from Harvard University on Thursday.

Shue was one semester short of earning a political science degree when she dropped out of Harvard 15 years ago to start her acting career.

The new degree doesn't mean a change in career. Shue's newest film — "Hollow Man," a science-fiction thriller starring Kevin Bacon — opens July 28.

PRINCETON, W.Va. — The courage of the fearless crew wouldn't have helped the residents of "Gilligan's Island" if they'd been stuck with CBS' newest crop of castaways, Bob Denver says.

Since the debut of the network's "Survivor," Denver says he's repeatedly been asked how the show compares to the fictional situations faced by the passengers of the shipwrecked Minnow.

"We didn't have rats to eat and we had no poisonous snakes," Denver said. "We had pretty much a vegetarian diet and some fish."

The 16 contestants on "Survivor" were left to fend for themselves on an island in the South China Sea. Each week one is voted out, and the last person wins $1 million.

Viewers of cable's Nick at Nite are being asked to choose which "Gilligan's Island" character could survive "Survivor."

"Mary Ann was ahead. She could do everything right, and she could cook and take care of herself," said Denver, who played feckless first mate Gilligan. "I was in second place — I don't know how."

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. — Geoffrey Fieger and Christopher Darden, famous for their courtroom performances for Jack Kevorkian and O.J. Simpson, will be in the public eye daily on a new television show.

The two — along with fellow high-profile attorneys Dominic Barbara and Edward Masry — are featured on a new syndicated series called "Power of Attorney." It premieres Aug. 28 on stations across the country.

Fieger is no stranger to the media. He spent eight years representing "Dr. Death," ran unsuccessfully for governor in 1998 and was host of a radio talk show.

He said he agreed to do the TV show because it focuses on lawyering and the personalities of the lawyers.

"Also, I think America would get a kick out of seeing me more often than on Court TV," he said.

Darden was one of the prosecutors in Simpson's murder trial. Barbara represented Joey Buttafuoco, whose wife was shot by Buttafuoco's teen-age lover Amy Fisher. Masry employs the real-life Erin Brockovich, the subject of a recent movie starring Julia Roberts.

LOS ANGELES — Luke Perry is a father again.

Sophie Perry weighed 7 pounds, 14 ounces when delivered at 9:30 p.m. Wednesday at an undisclosed Los Angeles area hospital, publicist Paul Bloch said.

It was the second child for Perry and his wife Minnie. They have a 2-year-old son Jack.

"Both mother and daughter are doing well," Bloch said.

Gore attends State Convention via video tape

By Connie Mabin
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Democratic presidential candidate Al Gore didn't make it in person Friday night to the Texas Democratic Convention, so he sent a videotaped message.

The vice president didn't mention Republican challenger Texas Gov. George W. Bush by name in the five-minute speech, but alluded to him.

"Some of you may have heard that I've got some concerns about the leadership in Texas, but the truth is, I think the executive leadership in Austin ought to stay exactly the way it is — at least for a couple more years," Gore quipped

Gore apologized for not wandering into Bush territory, but wished the struggling state party well.

"If we keep fighting hard in this year's election we can win some Texas-sized victories all across this country," he said before touting what he called Clinton-Gore administration successes such as a balanced budget and a strong economy.

Party chairwoman Molly Beth Malcolm welcomed about 7,000 delegates from across the state by saying the party is alive and well in Texas, despite criticism by Republicans.

"Those same Republicans in Texas say the Democratic Party is in ruins, that our time has come and gone, and boy are those Republicans wrong again," Malcolm said to a cheering crowd that filled the Fort Worth-Tarrant County Convention center.

The party, which is running no prominent candidates in statewide races this year, has vowed to focus on legislative races and rebuilding for the 2002 election.

"I know and you know that Texans are looking for leaders who have a positive agenda for the future, who will work hard to improve our public schools, expand health care, protect Social Security and Medicare and reduce the cost of prescription drugs," Malcolm said.

"That just happens to be the Democratic Party agenda, not the Republican agenda," she said.

Malcolm and former party chairman Bill White joined other Democrats in criticizing Bush throughout the evening, saying the GOP governor often takes credit for Democratic successes during his presidential campaign.

It was Democratic legislators who were responsible for the Children's Health Insurance Program and teacher pay raises, they said.

During Texas' last legislative session when Texas had a budget surplus, the governor "was looking after the future of George Bush and what he had to do to win the right wing in the Republican primary in stead of taking the unique opportunity Texas had," White said.

"He squandered that opportunity in order to buy himself a presidency with a token trophy tax cut," he said.

Speaker Laney?

He may be the Speaker of the Texas House and the party's highest ranking elected state official, but Rep. Pete Laney had little to say Friday.

After attending a caucus meeting with agriculture leaders, Laney ducked questions from reporters who asked him what he thought about the convention.

"No, no, I'm not going to talk about anything," Laney said as he trotted through the crowded convention center, away from reporters.

"You need to talk to leaders of the Democratic Party," he said.

When reminded he was Speaker of the House — a leadership position — Laney said, "I'm a member of the Democratic Party. ...I'm just a representative from Hale Center."

Laney finally gave in to repeated questions regarding his feelings about the meeting many analysts have called lackluster.

"I'm excited," Laney said dryly.

"I'm Pete Laney and I'm proud to be a Texas Democrat," the speaker said.

Hablo espanol

Gore showed Texas delegates that Governor Bush is not the only Spanish-speaking presidential candidate. He spoke a bit of the language in his videotaped message Friday. "We are a nation of immigrants. We have pride," the vice president said.

U.S. Energy Secretary Bill Richardson — a possible Gore running mate and Hispanic — also spoke Spanish during his speech at an opening reception Thursday.

Honoring Carr

Carr, who has served since the 1970s, has stepped down because of illness.

Her service to the party proves "one person can make a difference, especially if they work with another person and another person and another person," she said as the crowd gave her a standing ovation.

Chaplain, 78, has wrist cut in attack by death row inmate

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — A death row inmate attacked a 78-year-old volunteer chaplain Friday, severely cutting the man's right wrist, officials said.

William Paul Westbrook was doing volunteer ministry on death row when he was attacked by condemned murderer Juan Soria, 33, who is facing execution next month for a 1985 robbery-slaying in Fort Worth, Texas Department of Criminal Justice spokesman Larry Fitzgerald said.

"The inmate pulled the chaplain's arm into the cell, tied a sheet around the arm and pulled the arm into the cell up to the elbow," Fitzgerald said. "Then he took out two razor blades and started cutting."

Officers at the Terrell Unit, which houses some 460 condemned men, responded to the commotion late Friday morning but Soria refused to back off until they fired gas into the cell.

Westbrook, from the Livingston area, was transported to Memorial Hermann Hospital in Houston, about 75 miles to the southwest, for additional treatment. The hospital specializes in microsurgery.

Hospital spokeswoman Beth Sartori said his arm was not nearly severed, as first was feared. Westbrook was undergoing surgery to repair damage from two deep lacerations to his wrist, she said.

Fitzgerald said Westbrook also was thought to have suffered a fracture.

Westbrook is among 17,000 prison chaplains statewide and has been qualified and certified to minister to death row inmates since 1997, Fitzgerald said. The attack was being investigated by prison system internal affairs officers.

Soria, convicted out of Tarrant County, is scheduled for lethal injection July 26. He was convicted of killing 17-year-old Allen Bolden of Arlington on June 28, 1985.

Bolden was reported missing when he failed to return home from the Fort Worth Boy's Club, where he worked as a lifeguard.

Two days later, Soria was arrested along with two other teen-agers, Mike Lagunas, 18, and a 14-year-old when they were spotted driving Bolden's father's car on U.S. Highway 90 near Del Rio.

Lagunas received a 45-year sentence for aggravated kidnapping.

Soria told police Bolden was ordered to drive him and Lagunas to a secluded area near a bridge in north Fort Worth where he was taken from the car, beaten and stabbed to death. Then they picked up the 14-year-old companion and planned to sell the stolen car for $5,000.

Friday's attack is the second serious incident at the Terrell Unit since death row was moved there from the Ellis Unit, just northeast of Huntsville. That move to the more modern and presumably more secure Terrell Unit was prompted by the attempted escape of seven condemned men from the Ellis Unit on Thanksgiving night in 1998.

One of the inmates, Martin Gurule, managed to scale a pair of fences and flee the prison. His body was found a week later and it was determined he drowned in a creek near the prison.

Both surrendered after prison officials allowed them to meet with death penalty opponents. Corrections officer Jeanette Bledsoe, 57, was not harmed.

Moments before Wilkerson was executed on March 14, he spat out a handcuff key while strapped to the death chamber gurney. Authorities do not know how he obtained the key.

On Wednesday, a female prison guard was attacked by a convicted rapist serving a life sentence. Corrections officer Irene Fonseca was in serious but stable condition Friday at a San Antonio hospital after confiscating items from inmate's cell at the Connally Unit in Karnes County.

After using a pocket knife to free himself from the plane's seat belt, Middlebrook, a 26-year-old Nacogdoches County Sheriff's deputy, lugged a piece of the plane's wing almost 200 feet to a spot where the sun glinting off the metal caught the attention of search crews.

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — Despite head contusions and a serious knee injury, an East Texas man crawled out of the wreckage of a downed airplane — using a tree branch as a crutch — as he fought to save his wife and their pilot.

In the moments after Thursday's crash, George Middlebrook realized the wreckage would be difficult to spot through the area's tree cover, investigators said. So after using a pocket knife to free himself from the plane's seat belt, Middlebrook, a 26-year-old Nacogdoches County Sheriff's deputy, lugged a piece of the plane's wing almost 200 feet to a spot where the sun glinting off the metal caught the attention of search crews.

"It would have been difficult to see from the air had he not gotten out there with the wing," said Nacogdoches County Sheriff Joe Evans. He said the injured Middlebrook's trek took him down and up the steep banks of a southeastern Nacogdoches County creek before he reached the open pasture where he had positioned the wing in the sun.

Three people, including Middlebrook, were being treated for injuries related to the crash.

Pilot Clay Jones, 27, was taken to a Tyler hospital, where doctors treated him for two broken legs. He remained in fair condition in the intensive care unit Friday.

Middlebrook's wife, Amy Middlebrook, suffered a collapsed lung, a broken arm and several lacerations. The couple was listed in stable condition at Nacogdoches Memorial Hospital Friday.

Before the crash, witnesses said the single-engine plane appeared to be having engine trouble. Evans said after it went down, the plane suffered severe damage.

"The whole plane was torn up. It was bad," he said.

Evans said Jones was giving flight lessons when the accident occurred and the craft evidently lost power for a while before it hit trees in the area.

The four-seat plane was registered to George Middlebrook III, the deputy's father, and took off from A.L. Mangham Regional Airport at an unknown time for recreation purposes.

FORT WORTH (AP) — A truckload of mail has been stolen from the U.S. Postal Service while a driver ate supper at a fast-food restaurant.

Postal inspectors and police were searching Friday for the 48-foot trailer, containing mostly packages and legal-size or larger envelopes. The abandoned cab of the 18-wheeler was found abandoned Wednesday afternoon near Interstate 35W, a day after the theft.

"In my 30-year career, I have never seen this," Postal Service spokeswoman Pat Kunkel told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in today's editions.

The rig was taken from in front of a McDonald's restaurant along the interstate about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday as a private contractor for the postal service left it running while he ate inside, according to postal inspectors and police.

The trucker returned after 15 or 20 minutes to find his rig gone. He told investigators he could not remember whether the tractor, which was 40 percent full of mail, was locked.

Postal Inspector Adam Thomas said the missing mail was to have been flown to other parts of Texas and other states. Senders will be notified if the mail is recovered, he said.

The Postal Service is offering up to $10,000 for information leading to an arrest and conviction for theft of mail. The missing trailer has "U.S. Mail" printed across a roll-up door in the back and the vertical numbers 4801 on the driver's side near the front.

AUSTIN (AP) — How's this for a twist? A politician asking lobbyists to pay for his education on ethics.

Lobbyists contribute to lawmakers' campaigns all the time. But on Wednesday, state Rep. Fred Bosse, D-Houston, sent out a letter asking Texas lobbyists to kick in $50 each to offset the roughly $10,000 cost of attending a three-week course at Harvard University in July. The course includes discussions on "ethical and professional responsibilities of leadership."

Bosse said the state will not pay for the course, which is aimed at helping state and local executives improve their leadership skills.

"It occurs to me that the burden for improving my ethics should rightfully fall on those who have tried hardest to undermine them, the lobby," Bosse wrote. "I figure that $50 each from the 200 or so lobbyists who have posed the biggest problem would do the trick and also fall below the state's very ethical reporting limits."

Under state law, officials don't have to report political contributions of $50 or less.

Mother sues Border Patrol for schizophrenic son's drowning

SAN JUAN (AP) — Javier Pelayo was a legal resident of the United States, but he'd left his tattered identification card at home the day he was picked up by Border Patrol agents.

That mistake might have cost Pelayo, 22, his life.

Pelayo, a schizophrenic who took prescription psychotropic pills, caught a lift to a Rio Grande City fast food restaurant the afternoon of April 26. Later that day, he was taken into Border Patrol custody and deported to Mexico.

Pelayo's mother, Olivia Pelayo, on Friday sued the Border Patrol, the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the federal government for her son's death. She is asking $5 million for wrongful death and violation of her son's constitutional rights.

While in the custody of Border Patrol agents, Javier Pelayo signed a form admitting to being in the United States illegally and asking to be returned to Mexico, Border Patrol spokesman Ramiro De Anda said.

It is unclear why Pelayo signed the document — his legal status was good through 2003. Olivia Pelayo said her son often became jittery and uncommunicative around uniformed officials, and probably didn't understand the paperwork.

"They should have known something was wrong," Olivia Pelayo, 59, said. "It's their job to find out."

Everybody agrees that Javier Pelayo's death was unnecessary. But who the question of fault remains murky.

By law, the young man should have had his paperwork, De Anda said. Legal non-citizens are required to carry identification cards in public at all times.

But as a general rule, Javier Pelayo left his card behind when he loped around the streets of Rio Grande City — most people in the rural border area knew him. Besides, his mother explained, Javier didn't want to risk losing anything.

The family — Olivia, Javier and his seven siblings — has lived in South Texas nearly 20 years after arriving from Mexico. Javier Pelayo spent time in mental hospitals in the Rio Grande Valley and in San Antonio, and was unable to hold a job, his mother said.

Seated in the steaming heat of a United Farm Workers union hall Friday, the mother trembled when she spoke of her son's disappearance. Tears ran down her face when she remembered the frantic trips to hospitals, jails, police stations.

"At first when he disappeared I tried to find him, asking everybody for information," she said. "That was for weeks. Then they told me he was dead."

Once agents sent him across the border into Mexico, he was on his own, with neither identification nor pills.

"We're not interested in money, we're not interested in legal mumbo-jumbo. We're interested in Javier," said Raymond Gill. The South Texas Civil Rights Project lawyer is representing Olivia Pelayo.

"We believe the Border Patrol, the INS and the U.S. government are in some way responsible for his death."

Review finds eight more murder cases in which psychologist discussed race

HOUSTON (AP) — A review has identified eight more cases in which a psychologist offered testimony that race should be a factor for the jury to consider in determining the sentence in a capital murder trial.

But state officials expect possible further legal action in only six of these cases because in one case the defendant was not a member of a racial group identified by the psychologist. In the other, the prosecution did not introduce race as a factor.

The review of the cases by Texas Attorney General John Cornyn began two months ago after Cornyn's office found problems associated with the testimony of psychologist Walter Quijano.

Already, a death sentence handed down in one case in which Quijano testified has been overturned.

On Monday, the U.S. Supreme Court requested a new sentencing hearing for convicted murderer Victor Hugo Saldano because Quijano testified the Argentine laborer's Hispanic heritage was among several reasons he was a future danger to society.

"It is improper, especially in assessing the death penalty, the ultimate penalty, to consider someone's race," Cornyn said. "What we ought to be focusing on is the behavior."

In Saldano's trial, Quijano listed 24 factors in making such a prediction, including Saldano's ethnicity. He testified that blacks and Hispanics are over-represented in prison, and the fact that Saldano is Hispanic "was a factor weighing in favor of future dangerousness."

To impose a death sentence, a jury must decide if a convicted murderer is a future threat.

Lawyers expect the state appeals court to review the Saldano case in September.

Cornyn said the review of the eight cases did not show there is a problem with how the death penalty is administered in Texas.

"I think what it says is the system works," Cornyn said. "The attorney general is one of the checks in the system."

Cornyn said his office's review found that six of the eight cases in question are similar to Saldano's. In these cases, letters have been sent to the local prosecutors and defense attorneys involved, advising them of the findings.

In these six cases, three of the inmates are Hispanic, and three are black.

"Right now we're in the stages of reviewing these cases and seeing what further action is needed," said Heather Brown, a spokeswoman for the attorney general's office. "It's premature for us to speculate what might happen in these defendants' cases."

But Brown said if the defendants in these six cases raise the same claims that Saldano did, the attorney general's office would not file documents opposing those claims. However, the court has to make the ultimate decision, she said.

On the two cases that are dissimilar to Saldano's, officials with the attorney general's office said no further action is anticipated with regard to Quijano's testimony.

The attorney general's office has also reviewed the case files of all executions in Texas since 1982 and has not found any cases in which a defendant was executed on the basis of this kind of testimony by Quijano.

Quijano has defended his testimony, saying as a professional scientist he is duty-bound to report what he knows to be true.

"I don't make these things up. They ask me questions on the stand and ask me what the factors (of future dangerousness) are," Quijano said earlier this week.

But defense attorneys have said his comments about race and criminality can prejudice a jury.

Quijano, the former chief psychologist for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, has testified as an expert witness in more than 100 capital cases. Most often, Quijano has testified for the defense. Quijano is now in private practice in Conroe, north of Houston.

Brown said the attorney general's office is aware of at least another case in which Quijano gave similar testimony. In that case, Carlos Granados was convicted of the September 1998 killing of the 3-year-old son of his girlfriend near Austin.

"The Granados case has not yet reached our office for review," she said. "It is currently in the hands of local prosecutors. When it reaches our office, it will be handled in a similar manner to the Saldano case. We are aware there may be such cases in local prosecutors' offices. When they get to our office, they will be handled in the manner the Saldano case has been handled."

Brown said she did not know how many such cases might still be in the offices of local prosecutors.

Ten Commandments to be printed on school book covers in Grand Prairie

By Susan Parrott
Associated Press

DALLAS — A Grand Prairie woman can distribute book covers printed with the Ten Commandments on school campuses, but they can't be printed by a school district supplier, said trustees with the suburban Dallas school district.

Karen Wiegman previously had been prohibited from handing out thousands of covers at the campuses of the Grand Prairie Independent School District because officials questioned whether it would violate a contract with the district's book cover supplier.

But attorneys for the district told trustees Thursday night that the district already allows the voluntary distribution of approved nonschool materials on designated campus locations.

Some trustees say allowing the covers violates the separation of church and state. Others say the content is constitutionally protected free speech.

"We are not endorsing or favoring one religion over another," said trustee Michael Grace. "I would encourage other religious groups to do this. These kids need to understand the principals we live by in society."

But school board Vice President John Pogue said he believes the policy may set a dangerous precedent.

"If you do this, you must allow anyone else that falls within the guidelines to do this. You've got witchcraft, you've got Satanism. If they bring material in, there will be an outcry about it."

Wiegman originally wanted the Ten Commandments printed on the book covers that are provided by the district. When that effort failed, she said her group would provide the covers but wanted the district to help distribute them.

On Thursday, Wiegman amended the request to include printing the Declaration of Independence on the back side of the cover so students can choose which document they want to display.

School board President Norris Rideaux said nonschool materials are reviewed by administrators to ensure they are not obscene, critical of school officials or promote violence, hate, alcohol or drug use.

He said he doesn't know of other religious materials made available in the past, but that political literature has been offered.

While a local chapter for Americans United for the Separation of Church and State has opposed district distribution of the book covers, Rideaux said it has not been challenged legally.

"It's not something we are anxious about," he said.

Eliot Shavin, a lawyer with the American with Civil Liberties Union, said district's policy seems fair.

"I'd see more of a problem if she was prohibited from doing this," he said.

Wiegman could not be reached Friday by the Associated Press.

Kelly Shackleford, executive director of the Liberty Legal Institute, a legal watchdog group, said he has advised the Grand Prairie woman and is pleased with the district's decision.

"It's basically equal treatment," he said. "Her goal is to get a positive message throughout the schools."

State Rep. Ray Allen, R-Grand Prairie, has publicly supported allowing the covers in schools.

In a letter to trustees, he said "clear decisions from recent federal courts unmistakably empower local districts to allow voluntary participation projects of this sort. Reminding our states' public school students that our nation's rich heritage includes values derived from religious faith is an important aspect of any well-rounded education."

The Liberty Legal Institute has dropped a federal lawsuit accusing teachers at a Houston-area school district of confiscating and throwing away Bibles and ordering students to remove book covers printed with the Ten Commandments.

PLACING AN AD:

A friendly Advertising Consultant will help you word and schedule your ad for best results.

HOW TO WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!

❶ Promote Your Merchandise - The more descriptive you are the more likely your merchandise will appeal to someone.

❷ Check The Market Value - The most common mistake that occurs is over or under pricing your goods.

❹ Keyword Your Ad - Begin each ad with the name of the item such as 'Stove' or 'Guitar' rather than 'Kenmore' or 'Gibson'. 'Ford 1997' instead of '1997 Ford', or by its key reference point, such as location or area in real estate ads.

2001 Chrysler PT Cruiser

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

OK. You have seen the prototypes in the news and at the major car shows for almost two years. You have wondered if they would ever build it, then once they announced they would, you wondered if you could afford it. Well, the wait is over! The Chrysler PT Cruiser has hit the United States like a tidal wave.

The "PT" stands for "Personal Transportation." If you were one of the first ones to take delivery, you now have some idea of how famous movie stars feel. With sheetmetal that looks like a cross between a sedan that carried the television gangsters of the 1930's to an early beach wagon and panel van, the PT Cruiser is retro chic in a modern sort of way.

If the looks and response I received from total strangers in America's heartland during the week I drove one was any indication, this vehicle is the one to drive in the new millennium. Built at DaimlerChrysler's Toluca, Mexico assembly plant, the Chrysler PT Cruiser is one fun vehicle to drive. The standard drivetrain is a 2.4L DOHC 16-valve four-cylinder engine mated to a five-speed manual transmission. A four-speed automatic slushbox is $825 additional.

While it is available only in one trim level, buyers can choose to upgrade to the Limited Edition Quick Order Package. This $4,580 ($3,170 net) equipment package adds many features including: interior assist handles, cargo net, overhead console with temperature and compass, deep tinted glass, remote keyless entry, alarm system, bright exhaust tip, luxury front and rear floor mats, fog lights, side-impact airbags, leather wrapped steering wheel, touring suspension, 16-inch aluminum wheels, power moonroof, fold flat front passenger seat, drivers seat power height adjuster, leather seating and cruise control.

On the road, the four-cylinder engine/five-speed manual is responsive. The manual transmission makes the most of the available torque throughout the power band. An independent front suspension utilizing a traditional MacPherson strut setup and a solid twist beam axle rear suspension with Watt's linkage is complemented with front and rear stabilizer bars. The result is a dynamic chassis that exhibits very little body lean at speed in the twisties.

Inside the cabin it becomes quickly obvious this new vehicle interior is the fruit of many hours of computer calculations. The driver enjoys a commanding view of the road. The placement of displays and controls is excellent. The interior is most likely the best use of space I have ever seen in any type of vehicle.

This maximum use of all available space means storage pockets in doors and the back of the front seats. With the rear seats carrying passengers, there is still 19 cubic feet of usable space. The 65/35 split rear seats are of the fold/tumble/remove variety that allow consumers "limitless versatility."

A Ford Crown Victoria has just over 20 cubic feet of cargo space! The PT Cruiser has a total of 64 cubic feet of available cargo space with the rear seat removed. A clever rear security cover/divider maximizes the usefulness of the cargo space. The cargo area also sports a rear powerpoint.

By the numbers

Engine performance numbers are 150 hp at 5,600 rpm and 162 lb/ft of torque at 4,000 rpm. EPA fuel economy figures are 20 city/26 highway using regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are easily accessible and clearly marked in the tightly packaged engine bay.

Standard safety/security equipment includes dual front airbags. Optional safety equipment includes: side-impact airbags ($350) and four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock and traction control ($595).

The base Manufacturers Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the 2001 Chrysler PT Cruiser is $15,450. Destination charge adds $550. This vehicle is so hot the automaker has increased its production schedule since its launch three times. Be patient if you just got to have one. There are no rebates.

New & improved:

2000 OLDS INTRIGUE SEDAN

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

The words "new and improved" may be some of the most overused in the English language, but in looking at the improvements and enhancements Oldsmobile has made to the Intrigue this year, these words are the best to describe the 2000 Intrigue.

This midsize sedan is built on GM's midsize "W" platform with the Buick Regal, Buick Century and Pontiac Grand Prix. Manufactured exclusively in Kansas City, Kan., alongside the Pontiac Grand Prix, the Oldsmobile Intrigue is a welcome breath of fresh air in almost every way. The sedan is available in three trim packages: GX, GL and top-of-the-line GLS.

An all-new 3.5L Twin Cam 24-valve V-6 cast aluminum engine introduced last year is now the sole powerplant for the entire Intrigue lineup. A beefed up version of the 4T65E four-speed electronically controlled automatic transmission is mated to this engine to exploit its full potential.

Also new for this year is an ($595) optional electronic vehicle control system called Precision Control System. This system provides greater vehicle stability in emergency maneuvers. It is comprised of four major components: four-wheel speed sensors, steering angle sensor, integrated yaw sensor and a hydraulic control unit. Fully automatic, the system requires no input from the driver and is designed to help drivers maintain control in the event of a driving emergency including heavy braking or avoiding obstacles.

On the road, the new engine delivers plenty of seamless power and great gas mileage. This sedan was born to be driven hard, with minimal body lean in tight corners at speed. The Intrigue's sheet metal is very handsome, with a family resemblance to the larger Aurora sedan. A novel headlamp design allows for easy removal of the headlamp assembly from the car, in order to change front turn signals, headlights and daytime running lights, by removing two plastic clips.

Inside the cabin, displays and controls are thoughtfully laid out – everything falls easily to hand and eye. The driver has an excellent view of the road. Comfortable front bucket seats are complemented with a large, padded armrest that allows the driver to store plenty of stuff. The rear seating area has decent room for two adults, with an armrest and cupholders. A 60/40 split folding rear seatback is a $150 option on the GX model, standard on GL, GLS.

Do-It-Yourself Ideas

Wheelbarrow Planter

This versatile wooden wheelbarrow planter is a do-it-yourself version of a garden classic. Filled with plants or flowers, it's perfect for the porch or patio, or even indoors. And although it's not designed to carry load, the wheel actually turns so it's easy to move.

To build, simply trace the full-size patterns onto redwood (other woods may be substituted), cut the pieces out, assemble and finish. The planter measures about 40 inches long by 19 inches wide by 15 inches tall.

Wheelbarrow Planter plan (No. 879)	$8.95
Planters Package (No. 0128 Three projects incl. 879)	$19.95
Catalog (pictures hundreds of projects)	$3.95

To order, circle items(s). Include your name, zip & send all/ check to: address and the name of this newspaper. Prices include postage. Allow 3-4 weeks for delivery.
