NOT "POLITICKING" SAYS FERGUSON

Waco, Texas, Oct. 25.—After paying his respects to Attorney General Dan Moody here this afternoon, former Governor James E. Ferguson made this observation:

"Outside of a few ambitious young men who are afraid their campaigns will not get under way in time for next year's election, things are quiet just now. I have always observed that those who are running best the year before the election time somehow just don't seem to get anywhere when election year comes. So we are not running for anything this year.

"We've been too busy anyway, to do much politicking, and have just been trying to get along as best we could with the affairs of state. As to the penitentiary system, I reckon we've done pretty well. We've made 8,000 bales of cotton already on the prison farm, and are praying for the rains to stop so we can gather another 4,000 bales. If we can save this last 4,000 bales then the penitentiary system will have a surplus of $600,000 by the first of the year, the first time in the Lord knows when the system has had a cash balance.

The foot and mouth disease now seems under control, the former governor declared. It will take practicall all of the $350,000 borrowed by the state from Houston banks to pay for cattle destroyed in checking the disease, he declared.

"For those who have criticized this loan, let me tell them this: Had something not been done when we borrowed this money, the state would have lost far more than the $350,000 in cattle killed and business lst. If the quarantine on shipments of cotton from Galveston and Houston had gone into effect, as it was threatened, then cotton would have gone down at least $5 a bale, and the Texas farmers would have had to bear the loss. California lost $3,000,000 in cattle and $50,000,000 in business when the foot and mouth disease scourged that state. Chicago lost $10,000,000 in cattle and $100,000,000 in business fro mthe disease. Just think what Texas would have lost if the disease had been unchecked. And then criticize, if you want to."

Mr. Ferguson says neither he nor the governor now sees necessity for a special session of the state legislature. "The foot and mouth disease is now under control, and there is no other matter now of such importance as to call for a special session."

Governor and Mr. Ferguson arrived at 2:25 Saturday afternoon on the Texas Special, and were met by President W. V. Crawford and directors of the Texas Cotton Palace and a few personal friends, among them several state employes located at Waco. Several of the latter conferred with the ex-governor at the Raleigh Hotel during the afternoon.

Mr. Ferguson said both he and his wife were enjoying good health, Mrs. Ferguson having recovered from a recent indisposition. Because of the damp weather, it was considered inadvisable for her to attend the Baylor-Howard Payne football game, and she spent the afternoon at the hotel. They returned to Austin immediately after the Cotton Palace opening ceremony, leaving by train at 11:45 p. m.

ERNEST HAMER STILL PLAYING FOOTBALL

The followingis excerps from a recent article in a Philadelphia Daily describing the game between the two professional teams, the Philadelphia Yellowjackets and the Buffalo All Americans.

One day last week the San Antonio Light carried a half column write up of another game in which Hamer was the star, between the Yellow Jackets and the New York Giants which resulted in a score of 14 to 0 in favor of the Philadelphia players.

Since leaving Penn University, Hamer has ben playing professional football and has added to his splendid record established while Captain of the University team:

Fifteen thousand swept into the Yellowjacket Stadium, Frankford and Devereaux St., yesterday afternoon and saw their favorites plow through the invading Buffalo All Americans in the opening National League game here. The final tabulations read: Frankford 27, Buffalo 7.

The spectators came to see the great Walter Koppisch, captain of the Columbia eleven last year and All American back, swing into action. They went away chanting the praises of Ernest A. (Tex) Hamer, former captain of the Penn team, who stood head and shoulder above all the other players in the consideration of performance.

Hamer had one of the greatest days in his football career. Ile rose to heights that he had formerly never touched, to run through the powerful Buffalo eleven for four touchdowns, every six-pointer scored by his team, while Koppisch never broke loose and was an ordinary performer in the Bison backfield. The tip was out, "Watch Koppisch." But who could watch Koppisch when Hamer was roing everything that bore notice.

BIG INCREASE IN PECAN CROP SEEN

Dallas, Texas, Oct. 22.—An increase of 4,350,000 pounds in the pecan crop of Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma was estimated here Thursday by C. F. Hutches of San Antonio, prominent pecan dealer. Mr. Hutches based his estimate on reports from agricultural agents and shippers thruout the Southwest.

The 1925 crop promises to yield about 25,650,000 pounds, as compared with 21,300,000 last year, he said. Texas will have about 7,500,000, Oklahoma 8,250,000 and Louisiana 5,550,000. These three states produce about 90 per cent of the "native" pecan crop of the country, Mr. Hutches said. The largest markets are St. Louis, Chicago and San Antonio.

Despite a comparatively short crop last year, there is quite a carry-over of pecan stocks, Mr. Hutches declared, which will undoubtedly influence the market this year.

The buyer, Mr. Hutches, mentioned above is a San Antonio pecan buyer, and his father formerly lived here and held a position as bookkeeper with the Alex J. Hamer Co. While the drop in price is doubtless partly accounted for by the fact that more pecans are being gathered this year than was anticipated, the estimates given in this interview are rather exagerated according to the government report which was recently received by one of the local buyers. This government report estimates the crop total at 655 cars or approximately 19,650,000 lbs. distributed over the pecan producing states as follows: Texas, 225; Okla., 125; Miss., 50; Ala. and Ark., 50; Ga., 50; all others, 65.

A polo game between Junction and Watson Divide last Sunday in the Felix Watson pasture resulted in a score of 4 to 0 in favor of the Divide boys. Those representing Junction in the game were: Roland Martin, Marvin Skaggs, Pierce Hoggett and Watt Turner.

OLD SPANISH TRAIL SHOWN IN PICTURES

A half page of pictures of the Old Spanish Trail in West Texas was carried in the San Antonio Express last Sunday. Harral B. Ayres, the managing director, gathered over 150 photos of scenic spots in his recent trips westward and they are being published nationally. The El Paso Herald expects to carry a nice article with photos next Sunday. Mr. Ayres considers the West Texas O. S. T. territory the most inviting tourist and recreation section between Florida, California and Colorado, needing only the development of its hotel and camp accommodations and proper advertising. Even Texans, he says, do not realize the tourist and recreational value of that combination of hills, mountains, spring rivers and sunshine that characterizes the West Texas Old Spanish Trail with such historical and attractive cities as San Antonio and El Paso at each end of the 600-mile scenic drive.

The Sunday Express group included a picture of the Junction-Kerrville fish hatchery and one of the eight-mile crossings east of Junction in time of storm.

Old Spanish Trail Headquarters would like to see this photographic collection made into a booklet for general distribution as an education of the attractiveness of the Hill Country.

YOUNG MAN DIES AT RANCH MONDAY

Marvin Willie Dechert, son of Mrs. Anna Dechert, died at the Dechert ranch, eight miles east of town, at eight o'clock Monday morning after an illness of three or four days. The young man, however, had been ill at times for about two years and medical treatment had been unsuccessful in arresting the malady, but until a few days before his death he had been attending school regularly.

Deceased was born at the Dechert ranch, June 23, 1910, and has lived there or at the family residence in town all his life. He was a member of the Methodist Church and the funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. Virgil Davis, at the Methodist Church at ten o'clock Tuesday morning and interment made at the Junction cemetery immediately following.

He is survived by his mother, four brothers and three sisters as follows: Elgin, Ben, Perry and Clarence, Mrs. Rudolph Becker and Misses Emily and Marie.

TWO JAILS ARE FILLED BY PRO LAW BILLS

Best, Texas, Oct. 25.—The problem before officers here Saturday night was where to jail 200 persons indicted by a grand jury in connection with liquor raids conducted by federal, state and county officers 10 days ago.

The jails in Reagan County and Pecos County were filled to capacity, forcing a number of the defendants to be retained in garages, hotels, barns and rooming houses.

Regardless of the present inconvenience, liquor traffic in this region which was said to have been flourishing, is at an end.

The raids were conducted here and at Big Lake, near here, where 20 alleged saloons and dance halls were closed. Thousands of gallons of "good stuff" was said to have been confiscated by the officers.

Liquor was said by raiding officers to have been displayed openly on shelves. Truckload after truckload was brought here for distribution.

Best is a town of about 1,000 inhabitants.

After returning indictments by wholesale lots, the Reagan County grand jury adjourned Saturday.

TO THE PATRONS OF THE JUNCTION SCHOOL

The idea seems to be more or less prvalent that the Junction teachers, or at least some of the teachers, object to home study by their pupils. This is entirely wrong. So far as I know, all the teachers, with the possible exception of those of the first and second grades, are extremely anxious for their pupils to prepare some lesons at home, and, while we are not trying to manage your children outside of school hours, we do hope that you will give them an opportunity for regular study at home and that you will even require the more advanced ones to study at home.

I also wish to state that the teachers do not presume to tell children what they may or may not do after they have gone to their homes. No pupils are ever given permission to absent themselves from school for any part of the school day unless they are members of an athletic association, or unless they are sent home on account of sickness or some other sufficient cause.

THE PUBLIC ROADS AND GASOLINE TAX

So simple a question as levying a tax on gasoline and applying the money it produces to building or keeping up the public roads has been prevocative of a wholly unnecessary amount of discussion.

There is nothing complicated about the proposition. Gasoline is used as a fuel to propel motor cars. Motor cars are run on public roads. The more any car runs on a public road, the more it will wear that road nd the more gasoline it will consume.

The extent to which it will hurt the road and the amount of gasoline it will consume, will be in exact proportion to the number of miles it runs; therefore, logically and justly, it ought to pay for the use of the road and the harm it has done, and what is just can safely be measured by the quantity of gas it consumes. To say it is enough to tax the value of the car is absurd, because the tax on the average car would not be enough to keep 25 square yards of road in good repair.

Such a tax would not be unjust to the producers of gasoline, because whatever the tax might be, they would promptly and justly pass it on to the consumer.

Some may say that it would be a hardship on the consumer, but the adage is as old as the ages, that "he who dances must pay the piper."

Two-thirds of the people who keep cars do so for the purposes of pleasure. They travel in summer over thousands of miles of Texas roads, and wear away the roads of counties in which they do not pay a penny of taxes.

A gasoline tax, whether it be 2 cents or 5 cents a gallon, will not cause one person in a hundred to quit using his car. There is not a man in Houston who can truly say that there was any perceptible decrease in the number of cars in use when gasoline was 31 cents a gallon.

"Caritis" or "automobilitis" is a disease that no amount of taxation can cure. When people forego homes and default in payment of rent, and buy gasoline with money which ought to go to the butcher and baker, they cannot be frightened by a tax on gasoline.

How the tax shall be collected and how apportioned is a matter for the legislature to determine, but every dollar should be put on the public roads.

If there are 40,000 cars and trucks in Harris County, and each one used only two gallons of gasoline in a day, the consupmtion will be 80,000 gallons. Multiply that quantity by 365, and we have 29,200,000 gallons. If the gasoline tax be 3 cents, the total would be $876,000. If that sum could, as it should be, kept in Harris County, the roads of which will be worn away by the cars the gasoline would propel, in a few years we would have a system of macadamized or tarvied roads over the entire county.

Let those who use the roads pay to build them and keep them up. That is equality and uniformity, essential attributes of just taxation. — Houston Chronicle.

BEWARE OF PEDDLERS

A polite request that peddlers and agents "move on" has been posted beside the front doors of most of the homes in Winters by housekeepers in sympathy with the town's campaign against irresponsible merchandise salesmen. A neatly printed card, posted in a conspicuous place beside the door bell, reads: "Peddlers and Agents: We live in Winters and buy from our home merchants. Do not disturb us trying to sell your wares. In your canvass, pass up this house." It looks like a hard winter for the peddlers in Winters.

Nobody has ever been able to discover a very good excuse for patronizing the itinerant peddlers and agents who call so frequently at the front and back doors of homes in every town and city. Their merchandise is never of exceptional quality, and the prices they demand are invariably as high as the quality of the goods justifies. They never contribute anything to the town's enterprises, but carry away with them all the money they receive. They are never available for the return or exchange of unsatisfactory merchandise, and they sell for cash on delivery.

The home merchant, on the other hand, sells dependable merchandise at fair prices. He contributes to the churches and the schools and the county fair and every other enterprise, including the tax revenues of city, county and state. He is always available to "make good" any merchandise which does not give satisfaction; and he is always willing to extend credit accommodations to every one worthy of such confidence. He is entitled to the respect and patronage of the people, and to protection against the business leakage that is brought about by visits of the irresponsible itinerants with their little packs of wares.

The town of Winters is to be congratulated upon its campaign against the peddlers. It is an indication of a genuine appreciation of the established business houses which are building the town and assisting its people every day in the year.—Brownwood Bulletin.

HEART OF TEXAS IZAAK WALTON LEAGUE

Mrs. E. T. Neal has just returned from the Wichita Falls section of the State and while there she saw the North Texas Fish and Game Protective Association merged bodatiously into the North Texas District Izaak Walton League of America.

Quite a number of the counties in sections have units or chapters of the I. W. L. and the suggestion has been made that it would be a fine thing to perfect a district organization in the heart of Texas. There is ample room in this district for a great game preserve, just such as are being established in different sections of the State for the preservation of the wild life of the State. What say you, sportsmen?—San Saba News.

A BROKER'S WILL

The following is an excerpt from the will of a Wall Street man, which has recently been probated in the New York courts:

"To my wife I leave her lover and the knowledge that I wasn't the fool she thought I was.

"To my son I leave the pleasure of earning a living. For thirty years he has thought that the pleasure was all mine. He was mistaken.

"To my daughter I leave $100,000. She will need it. The only good piece of work her husband ever did was to marry her.

"To my valet, I leave the clothes that he has been stealing from me regularly for the past ten years. Also my fur coat that he wore last winter while I was in Palm Beach.

"To my chauffeur, I leave my cars. He almost ruined them, and I want him to have the satisfaction of finishing the job.

"To my partner, I leave the suggestion that he take some other clever man in with him at once, if he expects to do any business."—Wall Street Journal

A Chicago youth says he likes the girls that dont smoke, pet or drink, and when he gets ready to marry he will pick one, BUT, in the meantime he likes to kill time with the crazy ones. Ain't Human Nature Wonderful?

GOV. PROCLAIMS NOV. 16-22 EDUCATION WEEK

Austin, Texas, Oct. 19.—Asserting that the age of ignorance is forever past, Governor Ferguson Monday issued a proclamation urging the observance of American Education Week in Texas, from November 16th to 22nd.

"Since 1920, American Education Week has been proclaimed annually by the President of the United States," the proclamation reads. "The week is sponsored by the United States Bureau of Education, the National Education Association, the American Legion, with numerous other organizations cooperating. During this week, the people of the State are urged to concentrate on the importance, needs and the problems of the public schools."

The proclamation urged the development and cultivation of the young, discipling of the mind and building of the character of children; points out that ideas govern mankind, and declares the school is the foundation of democracy. "Progressive civilization depends upon progressive education," the proclamation continues. "The inauguration of American Education Week is of paramount importance to us as a State and as a Nation, and the proper observance of each day, and the careful consideration of the problems and aims of the public schools is earnestly urged as the patriotic duty of every alert and thinking citizen."

The Governor requested that all civic, social and religious organizations co-operate during this season toward the advancement of education, the needs of the public schools and the maintenance of an educational system which will perpetuate the best in the life and ideals of our great democracy.

CONSTRUES LAW ON LEASES FOR HUNTING

Austin, Texas. — Following many inquiries concerning construction of the State game laws pertaining to leasing of lands for hunting purposes, the following interpretation of the law has been given out by the State Game Fish and Oyster Commission, signed by Chief Deputy J. R. Smith:

"The owner of any lands who leases the same for hunting purposes and pay, is required to take out a hunting preserve license, and to keep a record of those who hunt and the number and kind of game killed on the premises during the season, and at the close of the season make a record of the hunting operations on the hunting preserve during the season. If the lessees of the premises leased sublet or use the premises for pay by granting hunting rights to others, they in turn have to designate some one as manager and said manager on behalf of the club, also has to take out a license and keep a record as above mentioned. This, however, we think would apply only in cases where the club used its lease for profit.

"Licenses may be obtained by making application under oath and transmitting fee of $5 direct to the commission's office."

FLIVVER HOBO BECOMING A NATIONAL MENACE

Small towns thruout the country are facing a growing and perplexing problem in that latest form of modern tramp known as the "flivver hobo," a product which seems to be the natural result of misdirected charity, ill considered sentimentality, cheap gasoline, the ease with which a well seasoned flivver may be obtained, plus objection to work on the part of that portion of our population that believes the world owes it a living.

A survey in the state of Arkansas reveals pregnant facts touching on this modern form of nomad mendicancy. The "flivver hobo" usually is accompanied by a fairly large family. He appears in towns and villages and applies to various social agencies for financial help. He is far from home. He has been forced by poor labor conditions to move from his old surroundings. The "flivver" was his only hope. Now he is stranded with his wife and children. He has no fixed destination, and is passed along from town to town with no solution of the problem in sight anywhere. The usual requests are for money, for gasoline, oil and repairs, and for food. Offers to buy the automobile and send them home by train reach deaf ears. The "flivver is their only hope" they say.

The worst phase of the situation lies in the problem presented, the children, often undernourished and stripped of all opportunity for schooling. They do not remain in any one spot long enough to come under the jurisdiction of the authorities; also, for the most part, local officials are more disposed to pass them along to some other community rather than saddle the expense and responsibility on their own county taxpayers.

The flivver hobo brings again sharply to mind that at best charity is but a palliative, and that more than ever the world needs some change in its social system that will establish even justice in its place. As administered charity seems chiefly to develop the very condition its good hearted but shallow thinking advocates seek rather to believe.

HIRING AN EXPERT

A capitalist, before investing heavily in a project, gets an exhaustive report on it. He demands a survey by trustworthy experts. He may engage from one to six or more engineers to analyze and report on various phases of it. In a majority of cases this careful looking before leaping is what makes him a capitalist. Chambers of commerce seeking industries for towns should look with askance upon those that are too easily persuaded. The best plan is to seek the ones that demand to be shown and then to endeavor to show them.

The town which has something to offer should have a careful survey of its resources and adaptability made by an expert of standing. Armed with such a report its chamber of commerce has a better chance to attract enterprises that are suitable to the town and which have some guarantee of becoming a permanent part of the town's industrial life. Frequently we notice a survey made and featured by a town's newspaper. It may not carry the authority of one made by technical experts of reputation, but it helps. It is a good field of leadership for a newspaper; better than the indiscriminate boosting of every hit-or-miss proposition conceived by a town's chamber of commerce.

Weak industries in various portions of the country, secured by extravagant inducements of the towns in which they are situated, and the citizens of the towns bearing the burden thru taxation, testify to the lack of economic sense of the towns' leaders. In each case the town would have been better served and its tax rate kept down if it had employed experts to report upon its adaptability and particularly upon the character solvency and permanency of the institutions sought. These are matters in which all of a town's citizens are interested, and, since the newspaper serves all the citizens, matters for the newspaper to take leadership in.—Exchange.

One reason only, because your FORD has these selling points possessed by no other make and they know it.

Why are they not as anxious to trade for other makes at long prices? And why, we ask, WHY—WHY—WHY will they not trade for THEIR OWN MAKE of car at long values? Your neighbor who has owned one knows WHY. ASK HIM.

MY TRIP ABROAD

By Sol Frank in Stephenville Tribune.

LONDON

London claims to have the largest population of any city in the world, and the Britisher thinks it has the largest and best of everything else in the world. New York claims that she has a larger population than London. I have made some research toascertain the facts in the case, and my findings are that they have practically the same population. Greater London has a population of about 7;500,000, but she has taken in all the towns and cities within a radius of 20 miles. Greater New York has approximately the same population, but if she were to take in Newark, Jersey City, Orange and East Orange, and other cities on the Jersey side, she would add at least another million to her population. Without regard to population, the financial capital of the world has been changed from London to New York.

London was originally only one mile square, and the present population of old London is probably less than 100,000. Westminster was then laid out, and was a separate municipality for many years, and not only rivaled London, but became a larger city before their consolidation. London is a very old city, dating back before the Christian era. It is said that a Greek navigator by the name of Pytheas visited the eastern coast of Britain as early as 285 B. C. and founded the city of London. Tacitus, the Roman historian, in the first century A. D. refers to it as a trading station. During the Roman occupation it became a prominent city.

The Norman conquerors of England contributed greatly to the advance of London, as many wealthy Normans were trading interests in France and other countries played a leading part in the government of the city. After London and Westminster were united there was a general era of prosperity, and the population increased rapidly, adding borough after borough, until now there are twenty-seven metropolitan boroughs, with a population of over seven millions.

We arrived in London on Good Friday and stayed there three weeks. Being there thru the Easter festivities, we saw a great deal of their services. In Westminster Abbey, which is the greatest Angelican church in the world, the services were very impressive. We attended several of these services, as we did also at St. Paul's cathedral. London has many wonderful cathedrals, both of the Roman and Protestant faiths. The services in Westminster Abbey were strictly "High Church." We were at several of their services, as all visitors who are in the building at the hours of their services, at 11 a. m. to 12, and from 3 p. m. to 4, either have to get out or attend the services, as no sightseeing is allowed during these hours. Their services partook too much of the spectacular to interest me, but the music was very fine. The dust of England's greatest men and many of other nations repose in this wonderful church. There is a bust of our own Henry Longfellow, and a memorial window to James Russell Lowell. The United States is pretty well represented in London, as there is a large statue of Abraham Lincoln on a public square near Westminster Abbey, and one of George Washington in another part of the city. These monuments were donated by Americans. I was not surprised that permission was obtained for Lincoln's, but was a little surprised that they would give permission and space for George Washington, as I have it on good authority that John Bull and G. Washington had a little tussle about 150 years ago, in which John Bull came out loser. The English people seem to think a great deal of Americans. Upon the whole, they are the most accommodating people I ever saw, and would go out of their way to show you a favor.

I will not attempt to give a description of London, as it would take a book instead of a letter to do that. but will tell of a few of the principal things we saw. Next to Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral is the largest and finest church in England. This cathedral is the first great Protestant church built in England and is the masterpiece of Sir Christopher Wren, and is on the site of the cathedral which was damaged beyond repair in the great fire of 1666. Sir Christopher Wren was reputed to be one of the greatest architects of his time, and was the principal architect for the rebuilding of London after the great fire of 1666. Wren was also architect for 51 other churches and a large number of public buildings. When we visited the cathedral, it was undergoing repairs, and we were debarred from seeing it fully. Its length is over 500 feet and its height about 250 feet. The church has many statues of great men, among them Dr. Johnson William Jones, the oriental scholar, and John Howard, the philanthropist. The dome is one of the largest of all the cathedrals. To appreciate these great buildings you would have to see them, and then study them to get an idea of them.

Westminster Cathedral is the largest Catholic church in Great Britain, and is the finest church building erected in London since Wren built St. Paul's. This is a comparatively new building, having been completed in 1903. In common with so many of the lagrest cathedrals, there are a large number of chapels in this cathedral. Some of the side chapels have already been completely decorated. In the chapel of St. Thomas, there is a monument to Cardinal Vaughn, with recumbent effigy, and on the wall of the aisle, a mosaic of St. Joan of Arc. Other chapels I noticed were those of St. Gregory, St. Augustine and St. George. There are hundreds of other fine churches in London, but these mentioned are the most notable. The Houses of Parliament are probably the most notable buildings in England. The present group of buildings were designed by Sir Charles Barry in 1840 to replace the old palace in which Parliament used to meet, and which was destroyed by fire in 1834. There are three principal towers, the Clack Tower at the northern end, the Middle Tower, with a graceful spire 300 feet high, and the Victoria Tower, 366 feet high. The clock faces are 23 feet in diameter, and the hours are struck upon a bell weighing 13 tons. We were in both the House of Commons and the House of Lords, on two occasions, but Parliament was not in session at either time, to our great regret. The walls and ceilings in both houses are decorated with beautiful paintings, depicting the history of the country for centuries back. The House of Peers or Lords is perhaps the most beautifully decorated apartment in the whole Kingdom. It is 90 feet long, 45 feet high and 45 feet wide, with elaborately decorated ceiling and walls. In the stained glass windows are the portraits of all the English Sovereigns since the Conquest, and between the windows the statues of all the Barons, whose seals were attached to the Magna Charta. The House of Commons is less sumptuously finished and decorated than the House of Lords, and slightly smaller, being 71 feet long, 45 feet wide and 41 feet high. There are many more things in this wonderful building that might be mentioned, but space forbid and as I cannot finish what I have to say about London in this letter, will have to reserve it for another letter; when I will try and wind up this series of letters, no doubt to the delectation of the editors and their readers.

Two Letters

The first written twenty years ago, the second recently by Mrs. J. H. Bourland, Frankston, Texas.

June 2, 1904, she writes:—

"For twenty-three years I was a constant sufferer from chronic catarrh. I had a severe misery and burning in the top of my head, a continual dropping of mucous into my throat causing frequent expectoration. My entire system became involved and I grew worse. It seemed as if I could not recover from a constant cough and frequent attacks of bilious colic. My bowels were affected, causing alarming hemorrhages. I tried many remedies and finally took Pe-ru-na. In three days I was relieved of my bowel trouble and entirely cured by five bottles. I most cheerfully recommend Pe-ru-na."

June 30, 1924, Mrs. Bourland writes again:—

"I will soon be seventy-nine years old and enjoy god health for one of my age. I still recommend Pe-ru-na and take it myself when necessary."

For more than half a century Pe-ru-na has a proud record of good done. Men and women the world over stand ready to testify to its value in the treatment of all catarrhal disorders.

Send 4 cents postage to the PE-RU-NA COMPANY, Columbus, Ohio, for book on catarrh.

HOME ORCHARDS ARE ALMOST NECESSARY

Why not begin with a small home orchard this winter? It will repay you many times for the money and labor you may put into it. Most people are convinced that fruit is a necessary part of the diet, but because the supply on the market is often limited it is frequently a difficult matter to have enough of this very attractive food. The average person, if asked why he does not raise his own fruit, will say that it is cheaper to buy it. Perhaps so, because when one is forced to buy his fruit he does not have as much as he would like to have or should have. On the other hand, the man who has his own orchard has all the fruit he needs for his own home, and frequently can sell enough to his neighbors to cover all expenses of the trees. Fruits such as peaches, pears, plums, figs, and grapes can be grown in sufficient quantities so that an ample supply for the year-round use may be preserved and canned. The farmer who practices diversification and lives from his farm must consider his fruit trees a very necessary part of his living.

You may say that Texas is not an orcharding state. It is true that there are other crops of much greater value than the fruit crop, but there are sections of the state where the orchards are the equal of any in the country. We find citrus fruits, peaches, plums, figs, apples and pecans grown on a commercial scale in different parts of the state. While all of these fruits will not do well in any one section, it is safe to say that there is no section in Texas, except where water is lacking, where a home orchard of several different fruits will not succeed.

One of the most important things in starting an orchard anywhere is the selection of the proper varieties. It is especially true in the home orchard, because not only de we want varieties that are adapted to the section, but we want several varieties that will give fruit of the same kind over as long a season as possible. The best idea in choosing varieties is to consult nearby nurserymen who will be interested in selling you the trees which will grow and bear fruit in your own section. Perhaps you may not be able to grow the best varieties of pears, apples or peaches in your locality, but even Kieffer pears are better than none at all.

While not all these fruits will do well everywhere, it is safe to say that most any one can have fairly good peaches, plums, figs, grapes and pecans, as well as pears and summer apples of a sort. A few favored sections in the West and Northwest can raise the very best apples and pears, as well as apricots and cherries, but as a rule these fruits do not succeed over the greater part of the state. In the same way the culture of fruits is limited to the Gulf Coast, especially the lower Rio Grande Valley. Do not allow yourself to be governed in your choice of varieties by what is grown in some other state or some other section. Any nurseryman will recommend the best that you can grow, as he wants you to be pleased with your orchard.

As a summary in the choice of varieties, get some of every fruit that will grow in your section, and get several varieties that will ripen over as long season as possible.

Buy your stock in your own State or as near home as possible, not so much on account of it being better adapted, but because the nurseryman near you knows better what you can grow, and also because you will save on express, especially within the State. Another thing, do not wait until the season is over and look for bargains. You do not want what everyone else has failed to buy. The best plan is to decide now what you want, get prices from several nurseries, and book your order at once. The importance of early buying is always stressed by nurserymen, and its importance cannot be emphasized too strongly.

Trees are sold either by height or diameter of the trunk. Most trees except citrus are sold in Texas by height. It is never advisable to buy trees with the tops already formed. Buy one-year-old "whips" and train your own trees. As a rule, the three to four-foot size trees are best, provided they are one-year trees. It is not a good idea to buy two-year trees, as usually they are trees that were not vigorous enough to sell the first year. Trees come cheaper by the hundred, or even by the dozen, so if several orders can be combined a saving on both trees and transportation can be effected.

It is essential for the successful growth of trees that the land be in good condition. Fruit trees should never be planted on land which has just been cleared. The soil is full of decaying roots which have a poisonous effect on the young trees. If a piece of woodland is to be planted to fruit trees it should be planted to some sort of a field crop at least one season after clearing; corn is a good crop. Land which has been in use for some time is more desirable for an orchard than new land. The trees will exploit the soil to a much greater depth than the annual crop which has been grown, so much so that an orchard is likely to succeed on what is thought to be worn-out land.

There is one thing that must not be done if you want your orchard to succeed. Do not plant fruit trees in unbroken sod land and expect them to grow. Orchards are grown in sod in the North and East, but even in that case they are planted in clean land, and kept clean several years. In the South, however, where lack of moisture in the summer is so often the limiting factor, sod culture for the orchard is never advised. A piece of sod land should be planted to a field crop for a season before using for an orchard, if possible. If not, it should be plowed in time to allow the grass to decompose before the trees are set.

In the late fall or early winter the land intended for the orchard should be plowed, and dragged smooth. It is almost impossible to lay out an orchard properly on land which has not been prepared in this way. Farm and Ranch.

BOOST, BUT DON'T KNOCK

To promote the interests of your own community at the expense of another avails little. You may live in the best place on earth, but if you try to build it up by tearing down some other community, the very instrument you use will prove to be a boomerang.

There is no place on the face of the earth that has no faults and the best places are those that live, not at the expense of someone else, but out of the fullness of their own generosity toward all the rest of the earth.

It is perfectly proper to tell the world about the advantages of your city, but when you do it don't point out the disadvantages some neighbor may have. This neighbor may know of disadvantages that your city may have and may be inclined to retaliate.

The most profitable way is to boost your own city; herald its advantages to the world, and in turn give the rest of the world credit for what it has coming. In this way you will earn the co-operation of your neighbors and will have the other fellow boosting for you—the best kind of advertising you can get.—N. E. A. Fulletin.

Now the Riff raffs would like Uncle Sam to break into the picture. As if we hadn't enough at home.

H. G. Perry----------Editor.

Our friend, Dollahite, of the Edwards County Leader, in commenting last week on the Highway designation article in the Eagle of the week before among other things says, "As we understand it, the counties must grade the roads, and so far as we know, the Junction road in this county (Edwards County) has been graded for the entire distance and most of it has a top surfacing." Editor Dollahite must have set the wrong word as a modifier of "surfacing." If he had been over the road recently, he would have set it "rock" surfacing instead of top surfacing, or top surfacing may be right as the rocks are so thick that the tires rarely ever touch the dirt, so it might be called a top surfacing after all. Anyway, we know Edwards and Kimble Counties are going to do everything possible to get thisJunction-Rocksprings road in a condition that will be accepted by the Highway Dept. on the first of the year.

L. F. Eckert, accompanied by his father, spent most of Tuesday in Junction on business. Mr. Eckert is the Ford Dealer at Mason and is a live wire business man and the Eagle editor knows him to be one of the most accommodating garage men to be found anywhere, as we had occasion to learn last winter, when a wheel ran off our flivver about three miles this side of Mason. We went back to town, all garages were closed. We telephoned for Lee Eckert and although his shop crew were out of town or had the flu, he came down, got us a wheel, took us back in a closed car, helped put the wheel on, all while suffering from a case of flu himself. When you pass thru Mason, you can't go wrong by patronizing L. F. Eckerts Ford Garage, on the right, just as you reach the square, going in on the Junction-Mason road.

Edgar Guest was written many inspiring things, among which is the following: "There is no free gate to anything that is worthwhile. Not to skill, or health, or to success, or friendship, or even to lasting love and respect of those who are nearest and dearest to us. These are the items that make up the best income that any human being can have, and the sum of that income will be measured by the sum that we are willing to pay to get it."

The Bank of England, known as "The Old Lady of Threadneedle Street" is to have its history written from the "human side," which provides a tough job for some aspiring author.

FOOT BALL

The local boys have been fighting a good many foot ball battles during the past few days. In the game with Menard, the score was 0 to 0, played at Menard. The first part of last week they defeated Rocksprings by a score of 13 to 0 and Saturday El Dorado came here for a game and was defeated to the tune of 25 to 0. Tuesday Schreiner boys went to London and defeated that team 13 to 6. The London boys however are making a good showing this year, considering the fact that this is their first year at the game.

Junction team is composed mostly of boys that have not heretofore played in interscholastic games, or if so, were only subs and for a comparetively new team are making an excellent showing.

NEW FORDS STILL ATTRACT ATTENTION

Every day new evidence comes in of the popularity of the improved Ford cars.

It is not only expressed in the crowds that fill dealer show-rooms all over the county and the groups which pause to inspect the cars where ever they appear on the streets nor alone in the thousands of orders being bookd for immediate deliveries of these cars is found in enrollments in the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan which have shown a remarkable increase since the cars made their appearance.

This increase was first noticed the last ten days in August, during which the announcement of the cars was made. In that period enrollments under the plan reached a total of 13,167 and in ten days following, the first in September, the number of new purchasers under the plan totaled 16,054.

Those enrolled under the plan at the time the improved cars were announced all benefitted by the change for they will receive the new types and will be given preference when they desire delivery of cars.

More than 175,000 are now enrolled under the plan and with others coming in at the rate of 1,600 a day it will not be long before the enrollment list will exceed 200,000.

Of course several times this many orders are on file with local dealers thruout the country, under the regular cash purchase plan and dealers are being supplied as fast as possible. The local Ford Dealers are supplying their demand as fast as they can secure cars and those who expect to receive one of the new model Fords between now and the first of the year should place their order at once.

Cars were delivered to the following during the past week: Marvin Skaggs, Tourer; S. P. Bennett, Tourer; Geo. Hamilton, Tourer; Bob Furr, Tourer; Gully Cowsert, Roadster; Gus Bannowsky, Roadster; C. M. Breeding, Coupe.

SOUTH LLANO NEWS

We have been blessed with abundance of rain, high water and bad roads. If the rain continues the roads in the low lands will soon become impassable for trucks and cars of heavy loads of cotton, freight and wool.

Everybody is busy now with pecans, cotton and feed stuff, as they are hindered by so much rain, also the hhearers are stopped from their work, however the rain insures good winter range for the stockmen and a good season for the farmers next year. Oats are looking good at present, altho few have planted small grain so far.

Ed Hunger and family visited in the J. Savage home Sunday.

Julius Hunger has been on the Hood place gathering pecans the past week. This place was recently bought by Theo. Hunger.

Mrs. F. M. Hodges is on the sick list this week.

Jack Hubbell and family attended the sales in town last week.

Grady Kendrick went to Menard Monday.

Brit Allsup took a bale of cotton to Junction Saturday.

F. M. Lane and Jim R. Hodges were in Roosevelt Sunday.

We had no Sunday school Sunday and no singing Sunday night on acount of the rain.

P. T. A. NOTES

The P. T. A. had a very interesting meeting Monday afternoon. Brownie Motley gave a pleasing selection on the piano, and Miss Shepherd favored us with an amusing reading in negro dialect.

A rising vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Andrew Patterson for a gift of fifty volumes to the school library, also to Mrs. M. E. Holland for a set of reference books. The loan library has received and contains a number of helpful books.

The Ways and Means Committee are planning a play to be given by home talent in the near future.

After some discussion, the members present unanimously endorsed plans to have Miss Wynce of San Angelo to put on an entertainment under the auspices of the P. T. A. and share the proceeds equally.

Our membership is not quite as large as it has been in previous years and it is earnestly hoped that every patron who has not done so will enroll and help us work for the good of our school. Reporter.
