LINDY CHEERED BY THOUSANDS IN MEXICO CITY

HAILED AS HERO EVERYWHERE
HE ACCEPTS PLAUDITS AS HE ALONE CAN; MORROW PLEASED

(By The Associated Press)
MEXICO CITY, Dec. 15.—Cheered by crowds that gathered in the streets everywhere as he passed, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh this morning paid an official call upon President Calles who again felicitated him upon his brilliant flight from Washington to Mexico City.

Completely rested after a 12-hour sleep and looking fit and fine, the American air hero made a series of official visits with American Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow and then went out to the Valbuena air field to see his beloved Spirit of St. Louis with which he has gained such world wide fame.

Among the places which the American aviator visited were the foreign office, Chapultepec palace, and the national museum, at the latter place inspecting the famous Aztec calendar stone.
Joyfully Greeted
Everywhere he went the boyish-looking smile of the good-will ambassador was greeted joyfully by Mexico's citizens into whose hearts he has completely won his way.

A passerby who noticed smoke pouring from windows of the building turned in a general alarm and police, firemen and volunteers directed their efforts toward rescue work. Many were carried down ladders which were placed on all sides of the building and others jumped from windows into life nets.

Human Chain Formed

Early in the rescue work a human chain was formed, stretching from the orphanage to a tobacco factory directly across the street. As scores of terrified children, many of them half-conscious, were removed from the burning building their screams mingling with the fear of the flames—they were lifted from one to the other of those in the chain to the factory. Three doctors and nurses hastily gathered to care for them.

Rescuers groping through blinding smoke and flames in their search for the children, many making general traps into the building before the collapse of roofs and walls forced them to abandon their tocs.

Many of those rescued were hurried to private homes and other institutions throughout the city for shelter from the moderately cold atmosphere, a fact which made a complete check of the missing practically impossible. Firemen held that the spread of the flames had been so rapid that many could not have been brought to safety.

Number in School

Although the hospice was conducted mainly as an orphanage, a number of children had been placed by their parents in the institution's school. When they learned the building was on fire, these frantic parents besieged the fire lines and were directed to the factory across the street.

Many happy reunions followed as rescued children were recognized, while the anxiety of other parents was increased when they failed to find their children at the place of refuge. Some sorrowfully made their way to the hospitals and morgues in an effort to learn the fate of their loved ones.

Most of the children in the institution were from the city, Quince and surrounding towns and their ages ranged from 2 to 16 years.

Great Record

LOREN BROWN

Loren Brown, Michigan State college cross-country star, has proven that size and height have little to do with the proficiency of a runner. Weighing but 116 pounds and standing only a few inches over five feet Brown has been a consistent winner this fall, leading his team to victory over Marquette, Notre Dame and the University of Michigan in the University of Michigan course. Brown broke the western conference record that was made by Phelps of Iowa in 1924. Brown's time was 25 minutes 21 seconds for the five-mile run, exactly 20 seconds better than Phelps' mark.

GEHRIG CANT DECIDE ON IT

WHETHER TO THROW OR MAKE PLAY PUZZLES YANKEE STAR

When to make the play at first base on a ground ball or toss it to the pitcher who is covering is the hardest play in baseball for a first baseman, thinks Lou Gehrig, star of the Yankees. At least that is the way it strikes him.

"When a first baseman handles a ground ball when playing deep, he must make his mind quickly as to what he intends to do or he will lose the decision," says Gehrig.

"With the pitcher racing over to cover, my first thought is to toss the ball. Often when I do, I could have made the play better alone. I guess it would have been better in the fourth game of the world series had I done that, rather than toss the ball to Pitcher Moore, who covered. He snuffed the ball and gave the Pirates a chance to score the two runs that tied up the game."

GRID SQUAD OF CITY GUEST OF KIWANIS CLUB

CIVIC WORK DISCUSSED AT WEEKLY MEETING OF LOCAL CLUB

Headed by Coach Henry Friska and Dell Morgan, members of the Lubbock High School football squad were guests of honor at the Kiwanis club luncheon at Hotel Lubbock, Thursday noon. Members of the team were introduced by Coach Friska, who had a few comments to make on each of the players.

The program which was in charge of T. B. Zellner, was devoted to the 1928 platform of civic work to be promoted by the Chamber of Commerce and Board of City Development. A. P. Davis, manager of the organizations, outlined briefly the recently announced plans of the organization which were developed through a canvass of the citizenship of Lubbock and a series of questionnaires. Mr. Davis introduced George P. Kuykendall who gave a brief resume of the community advertising project and urged prompt action on this plan. Harley D. Woods spoke of the proposed zoning arrangement, street improvements, parks and playgrounds.

cept some expenses when I was on a lecture tour about Mexican affairs," he said.

"These checks were from Protestant ministers, KKK men, and others interested in my lectures," continued Hefflin.

"No official nor representative from the Mexican government ever approached me."

"I first heard of this from a newspaperman several days ago. This man said he got it from the Hearst men."

"At this point Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, chairman of the investigating committee, disclosed that the documents named Dudley Field Malone as financial agent for the Mexican government in the alleged transaction."

Hefflin declared that he had not met Malone for a number of years.

"This is the work of some enemy," he said. "I will have a good deal to say about this on the floor of the senate. Things have come to a pitiful pass when we cannot avoid blacksmilers getting up and saying that the committee will prosecute these crooks and scoundrels."

Senator LaFollette, named in one of the documents as the senator for whom a fund of $15,000 was provided, followed Hefflin on the stand. He asked to be sworn. Chairman Reed told him that only the initials "R. M. L." were used in the documents.

"Inasmuch as these initials correspond to my own and no other senator has such initials, I would appreciate the opportunity to speak."

Intolerable Fraud

"The attempt to link my name with these charges is an intolerable, intolerable fraud. I have never been approached, either directly or indirectly by a Mr. Haberman or one purporting to represent him. Nor have I been approached by any one else in connection with relations between the United States and Mexico."

"It seems to me that the committee is under obligation to prosecute this investigation to the limit to the end that the authenticity of these documents may be established or their falsity proved."

"I am not unmindful that these charges appear in newspapers published by Mr. Hearst," continued LaFollette. "I am not unmindful of the fact that these papers are the most ardent supporters of the present administration. I am not unmindful that I have resisted to the utmost the policy pursued by this administration in regard to Mexico."

"The startling attempt to link my name will not cause me to deviate from the course I marked out for myself in regard to the Mexican policy."

"I have not received any money, things of value, or emolument of any kind from any persons 'directly or indirectly.'"

Borah Takes Oath

Senator Borah took the witness oath and was informed by Chairman Reed that he was supposed according to the documents, to have been destined to receive $500,000.

As Reed read the amount, the crowded hearing room rang with laughter, and Borah smiled.

"My first information of this reached me about the time the documents were first published," said the Idaho senator. "Mr. R. E. McCarland, a newspaper man from Mexico referred to it."

He said he had heard of those documents while he was in Mexico.

Says Not Approached

"No one ever approached me in a matter of this kind. I had no communication from any one in connection with this either by mail, wire, word, or any other manner."

Reed said that Dudley Field Malone of New York was "supposed" to have been the intermediary.

"I have had no conversation or meeting with Malone of any kind about this. I know him five or six years ago. Has he been subpoenaed?"

Senator Norris is ill at his home, but his friends on the committee denied the charge on his behalf and moved to secure a statement from him.

Interested In Affairs

All of these four senators have been actively interested in Mexican affairs and at one time or another each of them has disagreed with the Mexican policies of the Coolidge administration.

Dudley Field Malone, New York lawyer, also took the witness stand and denied connection with any such project.

The documents were submitted to the committee by Mr. Hearst with the comment that although he had many reasons to think they had come from the officials files of the Mexican government, and was authentic, he did not believe any of the money had been paid over.

Senators Defended

After Borah, Hefflin and LaFollette had received their oaths and asked for prosecution of those responsible for the charges, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic floor leader, told the committee that in his judgment "there isn't any one who would think that any one of these senators received or would receive one dollar for any action touching their service."

Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, chairman of the committee, added that there was "no evidence" that any senator had received money from the sources named.

Malone began his testimony by saying he did not know and never had seen Arturo M. Elias, the Mexican consul general at New York, with whom he was represented in the documents as having worked.

Malone's Statement

"I never heard of the alleged transactions described, Malone said, nor had he ever acted as intermediary between Mexico and any other government, any members of congress, or any individual.

"I have no idea why my name was mentioned," he said. "I have never been in Mexico nor associated with Mexico. I have never had $1,200,000 in my possession from any source whatever.

"I have not seen Senator Hefflin since 1913. Have not seen Senator Borah for five or six years; Haven't seen LaFollette since he came to the senate. Haven't seen Senator Norris since 1918."

HEARST TELLS OF DOCUMENTS

SLUSH FUND CHARGED OFFERED BY CALLES FOR SENATORS

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—William Randolph Hearst today furnished a senate investigating committee with documents purporting to show that a slush fund was provided by President Calles for four United States senators. Taking the stand as the first witness in the committee's inquiry into the charges, Mr. Hearst said E. B. Coblentz, one of his New York editors, decoded the documents which were in code and which he claimed came from the Mexican official archives.

Mr. Hearst said that some of the documents came to him about May this year and some as late as a month before their publication.

Declining to give names, declining to make public the name of the person who gave them to him he said that "it would not be helpful for this man in Mexico."

He gave the name in secret to the committee on a slip of paper.

Chairman Reed, republican Pennsylvania, questioned Mr. Hearst about the documents, which have been appearing in the Hearst newspapers and which have been declared to be forgeries by Mexican officials. They have dealt largely with alleged propaganda efforts by Mexico against the United States.

The field for the airman broken, the surging crowds voiced their relief in mingled shouts of "viva" and "bravo." Three hours of apprehension that misfortune had befallen the flier, during which they comforted themselves with the thought that Lindy always arrives, gave place to a delightful demonstration of joy.

It was doubted if even the crowd that greeted Lindbergh at the conclusion of his first great air venture at LeBourget, when he completed his New York to Paris flight, gave a greater demonstration of enthusiasm than those who hailed the ambassador of good will. Undaunted by hours at the controls of the Spirit of St. Louis, Lindbergh announced that when he left Mexico it would be by air. He did not say whether he would fly to Havana or to Washington.

Termed Wonderful Boy The American ambassador, Dwight W. Morrow, looked upon his fellow citizen with pride. "Isn't he a wonderful boy," he exclaimed. "He is perfect physically, mentally and spiritually."

At the American embassy, where he will be a guest during his visit, Lindy's thoughts turned to his mother in Detroit, and he telephoned her before he called it a day and retired at 6 p. m. What the flier told the mother, whose confidence in him has never wavered, was not revealed. Those who should be in a position to know said the mother told her famous son how glad she felt of his safety and success and Lindy replied in effect: "Oh shucks, it wasn't anything for you to be worried about."

Mechanics on Plane And while the crowds milled around the embassy shouting for the flier, mechanics at Valbuena field, two and a half miles from the other half of the famous team of "we—the Spirit of St. Louis," has flown approximately 35,000 miles since he left San Diego, Calif., last May on the first leg of his flight to Paris, was pronounced to be in first class condition. Every bit of cotton waste with which it was cleaned was carefully cherished by the mechanics.

"I wasn't worried at all about being lost," Lindbergh said. "I knew it was merely a question of floating around until I found some landmark or other."

Heavy Fogs Encountered Heavy fog off the coast and mountains caused him to go off his

QUERY BUREAU OF LOCAL C. OF C. IS BUSY OFFICE

Sufficient proof of this statement is given in a letter which was received by the bureau today from a certain woman in Wetumka, Oklahoma. The woman stated she and her husband were planning to move to Lubbock and wanted to save money in their moving if there was any possible way.

By shipping more than 2,000 pounds they could save a certain amount, she said.

In order to compare prices at Lubbock and her town, she inquired about the price of a four gallon per day Jersey cow, a span of good mules, coal per ton, pecans per pound and 6 or 7 foot fence posts.

An answer giving the information, was immediately dispatched to the woman by the bureau. She stated the prices prove to be satisfactory. Lubbock will likely have another family.

course at Tampico. He flew around until he saw the name Toluca on a railroad station. Then he knew he was close to the capital, Toluca being about forty miles to the south-west.

News that the American had been seen at Toluca reached the flying field and eight Mexican army airplanes set off in quest of him.

A few minutes later a tiny speck appeared against the purple mountain ranges in the distance. At least 50,000, perhaps 100,000 persons on the flying field watched the speck grow larger. They were afraid to cheer; they were almost afraid to hope. False reports that the plane had been sighted near at hand time and again had set their nerves on end.

Plane Closely Watched Then the white spot against the ranges that Cortez at his Spanish adventures crossed four centuries ago to conquer an empire and open a new world became larger. It became a broad winged silver plane. A new conqueror was now crossing those formidable mountains, where the great snow-tipped volcano of Popocatepetl (smoking mountain) towered against the azure sky. A new kind of messenger approached—a messenger of food will.

Eight Mexican army airplanes began to perform stunts overhead. The Spirit of St. Louis, a graceful creature of the air began to circle the field coming closer and closer. "Thank God—it's Lindy! viva Lindy! viva Lindy!" The throng cried with a roar that might have rocked those mighty distant hills.

Callers Apprehensive President Calles had sat since early morning awaiting the airman. He plainly showed his apprehension during those hours of waiting, smoking cigaret after cigaret, refusing to eat. His usually stern face became careworn, more set as the hours passed.

As the crowd strained forward on tip toes an aide whispered to the president: "It is Lindbergh— it is positively Lindbergh this time." Calles leaped to his feet. He gave one searching piercing glance into the air's face. Then accepting the information as genuine, Calles' face became radiant. He laughed aloud. He called loudly for the food he had been reclining for hours.

are of the opinion that the lad fell a victim of foul play. A tumbled and ragged tramp had been noticed in the cafe a few minutes before the disappearance of the boy and had gone out soon after the boy went to fill the can. He was not seen after that.

The boy did not leave of his own accord, other workers in the cafe say, as he had seemed satisfied was intending to stay and go to school here. He had no money with him, they say, and had a few dollars coming to him for work done at the cafe. His clothes, both at his rooming place and at the cafe, were not touched.

Had Been Seen In House Workers had been placing sacks of feed in the storage room back of the cafe during the night and had noticed the boy back there once or twice they say. The boy had played on the sacks several times, they said. The first suspicion, after hearing the suggestion, was this morning, was that the boy had been playing on top of the bags and slipped and fell with some of the bags on top of him. They were staked tight enough to prevent any slipping.

Approximately 200 sacks of the feed were moved in the search this morning when workers stopped, finding no clue. It is likely, officers say that the entire room will be cleared today in search of the boy's body.

EATON, STANGEL ATTEND MEETING OF DAIRY ASS'N

David F. Eaton, president of the association and W. L. Stangel, chairman of the executive committee, of the Panhandle Plains Dairy association will go to Tulsa tomorrow to preside in the final meeting of the year in which the date and place of the first annual exhibit will be decided upon. Members of the Chamber of Commerce Dairy Show committee and officials will probably attend the meeting also.

Representatives from approximately 25 Plains counties will be present at the meeting. Mr. Eaton said this morning. Chief among the business of the day will be the acceptance of recommendations made by the executive committee in their meeting here, December 9.

Lubbock is to make a bid for the first annual exhibit, it was intimated by Chamber of Commerce officials today.

SALVATION ARMY POTS ARE READY

"Keep The Pot Boiling" That will be the slogan in Lubbock, as in all of the principal cities of the nation, from now until Christmas as the Salvation Army begins its drive for the poor at this time.

Pots, destined to collect many a nickel, dime and half dollar between now and Christmas, have been placed in operation at the corner of Broadway and Texas avenue and in front of the post-office, according to Salvation Army Captain O. L. Hittenbury, and the merry jingle of the bell will call attention to shoppers to the fact that there are people in Lubbock who have not the funds to enjoy the necessities of life, much less the holiday exchange of gifts.

The local Army unit will also collect food and clothing if donors will call at headquarters, 602 Avenue N. or phone the authorities there at number 1638, the captain stated. The Army will supervise a Christmas tree, for the benefit of poor kiddies, on Monday night, December 24.

Unknown to the general public.

New Traffic Code To Be Instituted Here

Lubbock will again have a stop signal ordinance, a new one going into effect tomorrow. Chief of Police John Lemond said this morning.

Unknown to the general public.

CROSBYTON HIGH SCHOOL HONORED

Rebecca Held Sane By Austin Doctor

CROSBYTON, Dec. 15.—The growth and improvement of the Crosbyton high school is evidenced by the recent report that it has been received into the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges without any recommendation for further improvement. The number of Texas schools in the association is one-third larger than any other state.

The twenty-eight piece high school band is doing excellent work under the direction of J. C. Allen. Friday evening the band entertained an enthusiastic audience with a free concert of about one hour's duration.

The old ordinance has been invalid for the past several weeks, having been adjudged so in a recent trial. Since that time the citizens have been observing the regulations without an ordinance.

A number of new stop signals will be placed at various points over the city in the near future, Mr. Lemond said.

duration, in the high school gymnasium. After the band concert the passed to the gymnasium where interesting basketball games were played. Crosbyton won with a score of 15 to 9.

LA GRANGE, Texas, Dec. 15 (AP)—Dr. Joe Wooten, Austin physician, today said that the trial of Mrs. Rebecca Bradley Rogers, charged with robbing the Farmers National bank of Buda, of approximately $1,000 nearly a year ago.

Dr. Wooten has testified that Mrs. Rogers is sane. The defense today bent its energies toward breaking down his conclusions. It was subjected to a severe cross examination. Some of his answers apparently greatly angered prosecuting Attorney Fred Blandell who was cautioned by Judge M. C. Jeffrey, "not to get mad about it."

Another time the cross examination will be placed at the judge ordered Mr. Blandell to sit down.

Enthusiasm Over Feat Is Unbounded

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 15. (AP)—Unbounded enthusiasm prevailed today over the lone eagle's flight in fog and over mountains to the halls of the Montezumas.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh completed the last stage of his flight from Boling field, near Washington, over a region unknown to him, mountains and sparsely settled. The trip was made in 27 hours and ten minutes.

President allies gave Lindy a full "embrace," a real hug, expressing his joy and the joy of the people at the airman's successful termination of the flight after being lost in the heavy fog off Tampico. Not content with merely shaking hands, the president threw both arms around the flier's shoulders and patted him affectionately.

THE STORY THIS FAR

CALDWELL, Kas., in 1880 was a wicked town, close to the border of the Indian territory. There GORDON W. LILLIE, later to be widely known as PAW-NEE BILL, was waiting on table in a restaurant, when JOE CRAIG, foreman of the Bar K ranch in the Cherokee Strip, came to town and quarreled in the restaurant with TOM BENTON.

Smearing under the quarrel, Benton later that night picked a fight in a poker game with JEFF HARRISON, professional gambler who had come to Caldwell with his small son, TONY, and shot him.

After the killing Benton rode away and Craig took Tony Harrison to the Bar K ranch, where COLONEL TITUS MOORE, owner of the Bar K brand, welcomed the orphaned boy.

In Caldwell Gordon Lillie is meeting DAVID PAYNE, leader of the movement to open the Indian territory for settlement. Lillie thinks somewhat of joining Payne's "Boomers."

CHAPTER V

At the postoffice Gordon Lillie found a letter from his father. Enclosed in the envelope was another letter, addressed to him at Wellington, from the Indian agent at Pawnee, Okla.

This one contained real news. It announced that the post of teacher in the Indian day school at Pawnee was open and Lillie might have the job if he acted quickly.

"It looks to me like a real opportunity," his father wrote for he had opened the letter before forwarding it to his son. "You can do what you like, of course, but thinking at the mill are slow and are not likely to be much better."

The letters in his hand, Gordon Lillie walked down the street and considered. A day before he would not have hesitated; would, in fact, have jumped at the chance. But with the fiery speech of David Payne still ringing in his ears, he found a quick decision difficult.

The man's enthusiasm was contagious; besides, now that the job he had sought was in his grasp it lacked some of the allure it had possessed when it had belonged to another.

Still, what was he to gain by joining Payne and his Boomers? They might convert hundreds to their cause by their exhortations, but would their efforts hasten the opening of Oklahoma? Wasn't something else besides mere rebellion needed to force the hand of the government?

On the whole, he thought, it would be better to take the job and sit tight. If anything came of it—and there was no telling what it might lead to—perhaps in time, when an Indian agent's commission he would be infinitely better off while Payne's cause certainly would not suffer for not having had him.

He wondered what it would be like—teaching Indians, many of whom would be almost entirely ignorant of the English language. Would they submit to class room discipline? He glanced at the thought and tried to picture himself in front of a blackboard explaining rules of grammar to a class of noble red men.

He thrust the letters in his pocket. Then it was that he caught sight of the little knot of men just ahead of him. There was a scuffling going on in the center of the group, and Lillie heard hoarse voices raised in loud laughter. Evidently something was pleasing them. He hastened forward.

His eyes met an all too familiar scene: some others were having a fight with a drunken Indian. Although the government frowned on the sale of whisky to the Indians, still those aborigines who craved their fire-water had very little trouble getting it. Once a month the red man was in funds, and it was not hard to walk into Caldwell, flash four or five dollars on a man with an easy conscience and get in return a bottle of whisky which the unprincipled one could purchase in any saloon for a dollar or a dollar and a quarter.

This Indian was staggering and scuttling wildly. Opposite him stood his tormentor, a rough looking, unshaven fellow, probably from a railroad camp. He held a watch in his hand, and as the Indian lurched toward him and reached for it he suddenly withdrew the extended hand and with the other gave the red man a violent push that sent him sprawling into the dust.

"Come on, Little Wolf, or Lame Dog, or whatever your name is," he called tauntingly. "Come and git it. It's your'n."

The Indian scrambled to his feet with an effort and again staggered toward the watch. Again he was met with a push and again he went down to the ground. Words of bitter protest poured from the tormented one's lips. They were in the Indian tongue, and unintelligible to his audience; therefore, highly amusing.

Lillie edged into the group, frowning. "Whose watch is it?" he asked.

The man next to him answered, "It belongs to the Indian, Breardon's teasing him, that's all."

"I suppose he thinks he's having a lot of fun," Lillie spoke bitterly. "The man glanced at him sharply. "I reckon he is aimin' to amuse himself. Why don't you speak to him if you don't like it?" He spoke as one disclaiming all responsibility and welcoming any interruption that might start an argument.

"I will." He turned abruptly and strode toward Breardon just as the latter was extending the watch for the fourth or fifth time. Breardon hadn't seen him coming and Lillie's fingers had closed about the time piece before he was aware of what was happening.

"I hate," said Lillie calmly as he clenched the watch out of Breardon's hand, "to interrupt your little party, but I'm just tender hearted enough to be rubbed the wrong way when I see somebody being picked on."

He turned his back deliberately on the amazed Breardon and placed the watch in the eager hands of the Indian, who thanked him volubly if incoherently. "You'd better tuck it away in a pocket, if you've got one," Lillie advised him, and then went crashing down into the dirt himself with Breardon's voice crackling in his ears. "Maybe you're just tender hearted enough to prefer being pushed over yourself."

Breardon stood over him menacingly, his fists cocked, threatening to knock Lillie down again the moment he scrambled to his feet. But others had been attracted to the scene by now, and someone from the fringe of onlookers cried, "Fair fight, Adam. Let him git on his feet. He's littler than you are anyway."

Breardon, the first flush of hot anger gone, assented willingly and stepped back, grinning with anticipation. "Git up and fight," he invited.

He coolly stripped himself of gun belt and hat and handed them to a bystander. A volunteer referee stepped forward and cleared a large open space for the combatants.

From the doors of the Red Light, not fifty yards behind, men came running, for nothing entertained Caldwell like a good fight. Mag Woods herself poked a curious head out and then joined their ranks.

"Gentlemen," announced the referee importantly, "this here fight will get on when one of the principals has signified he has had enough or is unable to continue." Slowly he sized up the respective sizes of the two combatants, his eyes lingering sympathetically on Lillie as he was saying how there's quite a difference in weight," he continued. "This will be strictly a flat fight, with strange holds and gougin' barred." He eyed the throng combatively and patted his six-shooter. "I'm seeing that the rules are enforced," he concluded impressively.

Lillie, perhaps 20 pounds lighter than his opponent, was grateful that it was not to be a test of strength. He was a shade under medium height and his youthful frame had not yet filled out. Breardon was very little taller, but he bulked larger and seemed quite powerful.

"Ready?" the referee asked.

Lillie nodded grimly, and Breardon stepped forward, a confident grin on his face, fists aching. Determined to get the fight over with, he launched a vicious swing at the youth, but Lillie sprang back to safety and then closed in quickly. His fist smacked squarely on Breardon's mouth, and the larger man, caught off balance, staggered backward, shook his head and glared balefully.

Cries of approval went up from the crowd, for the smaller man had caught his sympathy. But they died out with, alas, suddenness. Breardon had gathered himself together and had come on in a bull-like rush. His arms were swinging like flails. He mouthed curses as he came. Blood coursed down his chin from his broken lips.

Again Lillie tried to spring back out of harm's way, but to have avoided this veritable windmill of swinging fists would have required more science than he possessed. One of them caught him high up on the arm, spinning him halfway around, and the arm felt suddenly numb. Another struck him solidly in the chest and knocked him flat. Breardon did not stop. He would have fallen on him and beaten him into insensibility if the referee had not interposed.

"Git back there," he said menacingly to Breardon. "You wait till he kites up on his feet or quit." His hand closed over the butt of his six-shooter, and Breardon reluctantly stepped back.

Lillie scrambled to his feet in a half daze. His legs were unsteady, and he braced himself to meet Breardon's next assault. When it came, he lashed out blindly with his right arm and had the satisfaction of feeling his fist connect solidly with flesh and bone. The blow checked Breardon's onslaught, and Lillie became a tiger. In that instant he discarded defense for attack. He leaped at the other like a wild fury and beat him across the improvised ring in a surprising and relentless rush, born of this sudden surge of passion.

Breardon was too surprised to meet it. Their positions had amazingly reversed. A moment ago he had been the aggressor; now he was trying to keep from being hit. He fell back against the ring of spectators and the referee called time while he brought him back to the center and started them off again. A look of uncertainty had replaced the grin on his features.

"Two to one on the little fellow," someone called. It was all that Lillie needed. It was his fight now and he'd finish it. He rushed in gain, heedful of the menace that still rested in Breardon's powerful

"I SLEEP BETTER"

Says Illinois Man, Bladder Action At Night Is 'One of Nature's Danger Signals'

C. E. Hodges, Unity III, says in his own home paper, the Carlo Bulletin, "Lithiated Buchu relieved me of a bad case of bladder irritation. I sleep nights and am better in day time. It has also helped my wife. I will tell or write my experience to anyone."

Lithiated buchu acts on the bladder as epsom salts do on the bowels, drives out abnormal deposits and neutralizes excessive acids, thereby relieving irritation, which causes "getting up-nights." The tablets cost 2 cents each at leading drug stores. Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio. Locally at Bowen's Drug Store.—Adv.

Judge Not
One of the plights that have become quite popular of late is to the effect that the flagger, though far to look upon, is really quite dumb.

Certainly!
Two learned gentlemen hold a debate the other night on the question of knowledge.

About Crime
In the year 1713, a crowd of rascals there were 124 cases of murder.

THE PLAINSMAN

Says:
That girl on Broadway says the thing a chorus girl needs most is to put her best leg forward.

The Plainsman sees a vast difference between an honest, conscientious citizen, who, in an effort to uphold the laws of his country, goes to peace officers and informs them of the commission of a crime, and the man who makes a practice of informing on his cash register for the habitual informer, who for a few paltry dollars will snoop into the affairs of another and who owes out his existence through the coming of trouble to his fellow man.

Nearly all of the officers of the country uphold what is commonly referred to as the 'stool-pigeon' system. The Plainsman is frank enough to admit that the system is a great aid to the officer in the apprehension of criminals but he is also frank enough to say in print that the practice goes against his grain and he has no regard for the habitual informer, who for a few paltry dollars will snoop into the affairs of another and who owes out his existence through the coming of trouble to his fellow man.

The Plainsman expects a large number of his readers to disagree with him in his views upon the practice of stool-pigeoning. Yet if those who disagree will only stop to consider the question from the standpoint of the law-abiding citizen who feels it his duty as such to report law violations to the proper authorities, the Plainsman readily admits that right and sees that such communications are not only in the best interests of the community but also in the best interests of the individual citizen.

It seems to the Plainsman that there is some shared judgment behind the last act of the great Charles Lindbergh from Washington to Mexico City, via the 'Spirit of St. Louis.' That young man has proved himself to be worth more than a whole staff of diplomats with portfolios and if his coming of former friendship between America and France can be taken as a criterion of the work which he will do in the hand of the friole, the trip will be well worth the expense to your Uncle Sam.

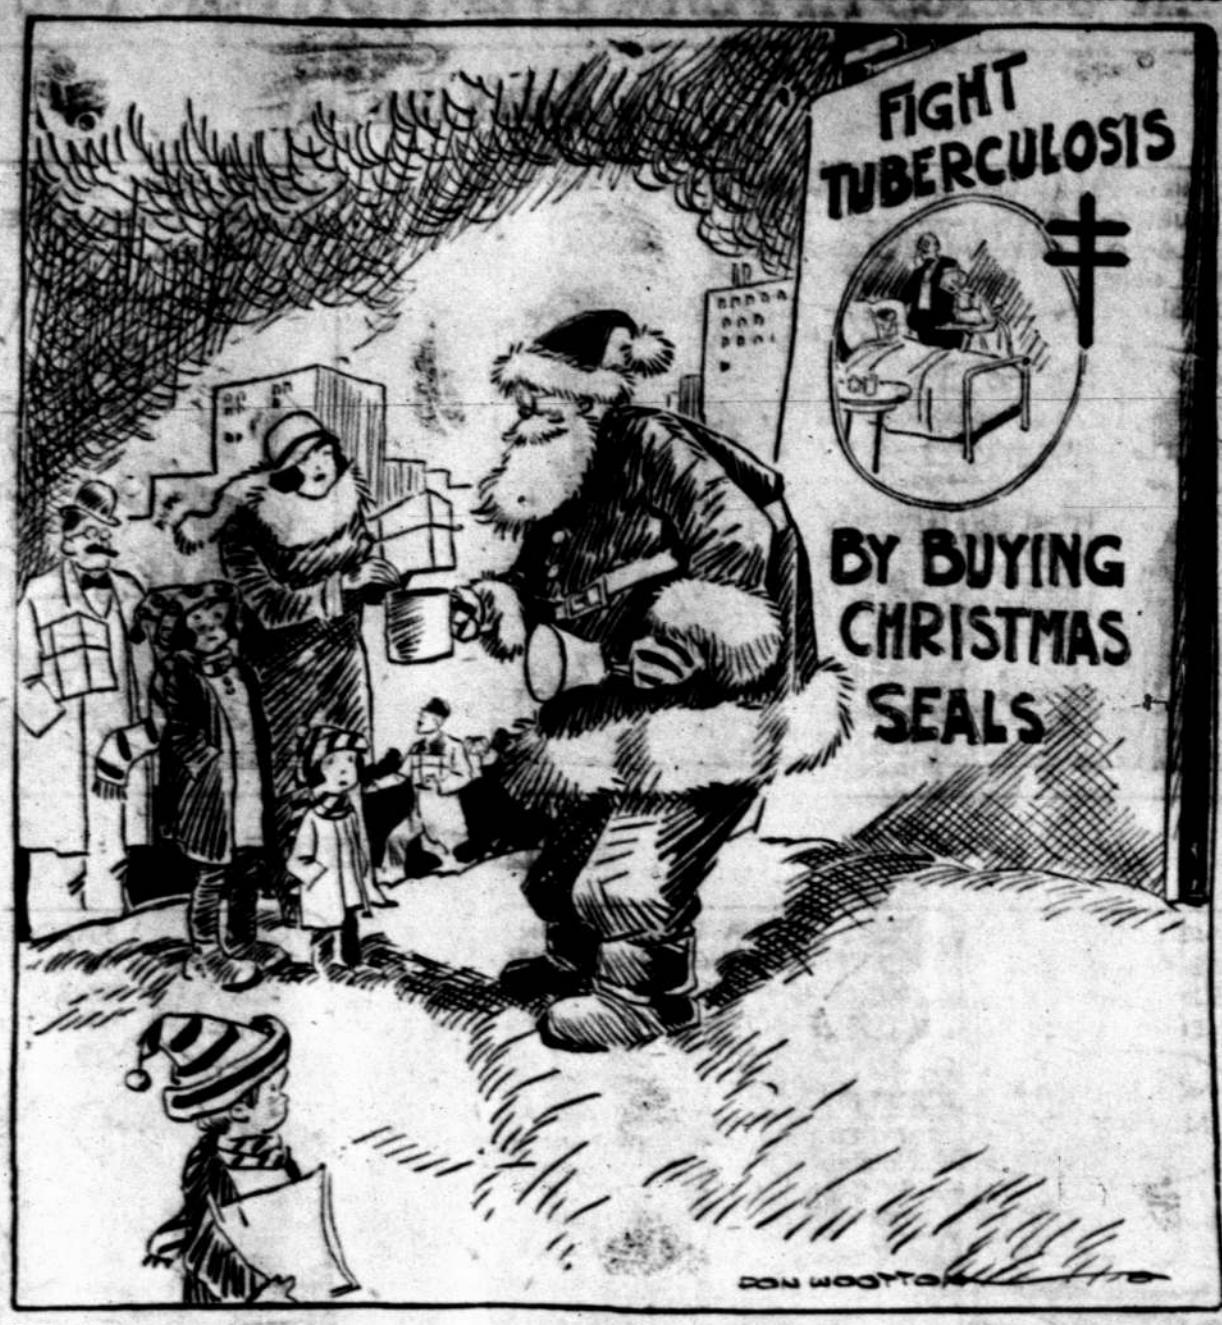

The sending of Dwight D. Morrow as ambassador to Mexico was the first smart move made toward Mexico by the American diplomatic corps in many months. Right on the heels of Mr. Morrow's arrival in Mexico City will Rogers, who is in most representative of our own people, representing our own people, representing our own people, representing our own people.

Women of Mexico are busily engaged in efforts to save A. P. Bruton from death in the electric chair. Bruton, convicted of bank robbery, was sentenced after his guilt was proved to a jury beyond all reasonable doubt. The action of the good ladies of Mexico, then, may be aptly classified as hysterical. They, who are humanitarian—but hypocritical. The bank robbery favors the punishment of bank robbers by law rather than by regard for their life's blood. But the law can never be followed out if the officials allow themselves to be swayed by well-meaning but hysterical advice.

The United States Flag Association protested Chicago's parade of 2,000 garbage wagons, each bearing an American flag. That raises the question of whether it is better to use the flag to decorate garbage wagons or reserve old Glory just for purposes of burn.

General Dawes has announced he is not a candidate for the presidency. Now we'll have to be keeping an eye on him, too.

Borah Seems Destined To Support Hoover If Latter Decides To Run For President, Rodney Dutcher Says

By RODNEY DUTCHER
WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—There continues to be good reason to believe that Senator William E. Borah will end up by supporting Herbert Hoover for the Republican presidential nomination.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Nowhere is there in a cemetery perhaps can be gained better the impression of sudden emptiness left when the crowding thousands have strewn away than in the canyon that is Wall Street, on a Sunday morning.

ON the other hand, although it is conceivable that Borah might line up the progressive senators behind his own candidacy, it does not now seem possible that he could swing a third of them to Hoover unless Hoover endorsed some of the progressive proposals. The thought has come to more than one person—and this probably includes the wise old senator from Idaho himself—that if Borah helps win the nomination for Hoover and then helps him win the election, Borah can be the secretary of state. And your correspondent is convinced that Borah would like that job.

There are in New York more than a dozen schools, where the classic brand of the dance is placed upon the candidates for the chorus these days. The schools furnish girls to musical comedies by the troupe or individual.

There still are Johnnies, of proved staid since they do not come to depend upon John any more. They have their own little flaps where they play, and when they study hard, looking ahead to better things as a principal.

There still are Johnnies, of course, and always will be with their field has been greatly narrowed. GLEBERT SWAN

ANOTHER PROHIBITION POLL
The American Legion is preparing to conduct a poll on its membership to determine the attitude of the ex-service men upon the prohibition issue, with the announced intention of voting to the officials of both political parties a complete report of the balloting.

There are many more than four million ex-service men in the country, and they belong to all the political parties. Nobody knows whether they approve prohibition, and it is probable that the straw vote will not give that information. It is a distinct affront to be patriotic ex-service men of the United States, however, to designate that any considerable number of them do not desire the enforcement of all the laws of the country, including the eighteenth amendment and Volstead act, regardless of their personal attitude toward prohibition.

NEW INCUBATOR INSTALLED HERE IS AMONG BEST

Placing Lubbock well in the lead as a poultry center of the South Plains, a gigantic 47,000 egg capacity incubator is being installed by The Lubbock Poultry and Hatchery, 110 Main, and will be in operation soon after the first of the year. With the eggs hatching every three weeks, the plant is capable of using 45,000 eggs during a year's time.

The incubator will be excelled by no other plant in West Texas, and other one of equal size being operated at Lockney. It is of the Smith make and is considered the most successful plant being in use today. Only one man is needed to operate it and the eggs can be turned in less than four minutes.

The new incubator is electric driven heated and has electric driven power.

The new unit is only a part of the giant poultry farm which is to be built by R. E. Swain, manager of the company here. A close-in acreage for a large poultry farm is to be secured to raise five or six standard grade of fowls. Mr. Swain says.

arms, raining furious blows at his enemy in a reckless attempt to put him down to stay.

And Brendan, turned panicky in the face of this youthful tiger, curled up and quit. He went down and stayed. Lillie stepped back, panting, and waited for him to rise, and the referee leaned over Brendan with a question.

The referee raised his head. "He says he's had enough," he announced, and smiled contemptuously. "Son," he said to Lillie, "you're a wildcat. You've whipped a bigger man and given me considerable pleasure doing it. In buying the drinks," and he linked his arm in Lillie's arm and walked off.

"My name," he informed the wildcat as they stood before Max Woods bar, "is Pate—Henry Pate. What'll you have?"

"Ginger ale."

Pate was mildly astonished. "I sort of thought," he said slowly, "that wildcats took their meat raw and their liquor neat. However—and he shook his head.

"That night Gordon Lillie gave notice to his employer that he was leaving."

RALLS NEWS

By MRS. G. H. NELSON

Supt. A. B. Sanders is in receipt of a letter from A. M. Blackman, chairman of the state committee of the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges, stating that at the recent meeting of the association held in Jacksonville, Fla., the Ralls High school was retained on the list without comment since it met all standards of the association.

The are 150 Texas high schools and academies in this association this giving Texas a membership one-third larger than that of any other state.

Bruce Spencer, druggist of this city, will have ready for occupation this week, two new modern five-room bungalows, located in the west part of Ralls. These houses are equipped with every convenience and add much to the attractiveness of the residence section.

Seals and sea lions are increasing rapidly along the coast of California that fishing is seriously menaced. Officials are considering the appointment of a hunter to partially exterminate them.

Three distinct courses of study in mathematics, for bright average and dull pupils are in process of formation by the Cleveland, O., bureau of educational research.
