THANKFUL FAMILY--The Kenneth Parkers have a special reason to be thankful this Thanksgiving Holiday. Steve, 13, is recovering nicely from a late August farm accident which thrust the entire family into an ordeal they will not soon forget. Also pictured are sons, Jay, 9, and Daniel, 2. Kenneth Parker Family...

Has Much To Be Thankful For

By Shirley A. Gorman

The Kenneth Parker family has a lot to be thankful for this Thanksgiving Day. Thirteen-year-old Steve continues to recover from serious injuries sustained in a farm accident and soon will be recovered enough to participate in his favorite sport--basketball.

Now Mr. and Mrs. Parker are optimistic; their son is almost completely well again. But the ordeal has not been an easy one for the Snyder family. And they are quick to point out that if not for the support of local people they would not have made it this far.

Steve, an eighth grader at Snyder Junior High, was seriously injured August 29 when he fell from a tractor and was run over by it, sustaining multiple injuries including two broken pelvic bones, three cracked ribs, a broken jaw and a broken neck bone. He also sustained dental injuries including losing a tooth and one lung was partially collapsed.

Steve does not remember the actual fall only waking up afterward. "The tractor lurched and I fell backwards," he explained.

Steve was transported to Cogdell Memorial Hospital where he remained in traction for three weeks. An active boy, Steve found the ordeal boring. But it also had its compensations. A steady stream of friends visited him, playing games after school and on Saturdays and Sundays.

At first it was also hard for Steve to talk because of the broken jaw. For the first six days he was also heavily sedated.

The eighth grade football team provided another surprise. After winning the season opener, team members all chipped in to purchase the game ball which they presented to Steve. A bus transported the team to the hospital and while two members went inside with the ball, Steve was able to look out the window of his hospital room and see the rest of the team lined up by the bus.

Steve missed 20 days of school but managed to keep up with his studies through the cooperation of teachers who prepared assignments for him. His first week back at school, Steve was in a wheelchair.

"I felt left out," Steve commented about his wheelchair experience. "But my friends were nice. They helped me all they could."

Steve also spent several weeks on crutches. As mobility returns, he is able to do more, including participate in basketball drills and practice sessions, but no contact sports are allowed.

Steve's doctors think that by January 1 he will be improved enough to resume an active sports schedule, but Steve is hoping for December 1 instead.

"Steve's doctors say it is amazing that he has recovered so quickly," Mrs. Parker said. "They attribute it mainly to his interest in sports. It is a goal for him to aim at."

Presently, the doctors are watching Steve's progress. He still limps because his left side is a half inch shorter than his right side.

When Steve was first released from the hospital about all he could do at home was sit and watch television. For the first two weeks he had physical therapy twice a day and for the third week only once a day.

"The physical therapy was to keep the muscles in his left side from atrophying," Mrs. Parker explained.

Not being as active as he wanted to be was hard on Steve. Sometimes out of sheer frustration he would say to a member of the family, "But you can walk."

The accident and subsequent hospital stay and convalescent period was also hard on Steve's younger brothers.

"At first Jay, 9, didn't understand what was going on," Parker said.

But then he sat his younger son down and explained about the accident and that Steve would get better with proper care.

"After that, Jay was all right," Parker said.

It was another story though for Daniel, 2, who really could not grasp what had happened to his oldest brother. All he knew was that for a period in his young life, his brother was not there.

"When Steve first came home from the hospital Daniel wouldn't say a word, but he would pat him on the shoulder and lay his head down on him," Mrs. Parker said.

It has been a tough experience for the Parker family, one they would no care to repeat, but they made it with more than a little help from their friends.

In Morocco...

Arab Summit Opens

FEZ, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II opened the 12th Arab summit with a call for solidarity among the Arab nations, but the meeting was boycotted by hard-line leaders who oppose a Saudi Arabian plan for Mideast peace.

The plan, proposed by Saudi Crown Prince Fahd, was called a "sellout" by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy, who is among those boycotting the summit.

Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud told reporters his government was prepared to discuss possible modifications to the Fahd plan.

Libyan Foreign Minister Abdelaati Obeidi branded Fahd's controversial peace plan "outright treason" because he said it requires the Arab states to recognize "the Zionist enemy."

"We established the principle that recognizing the Zionist enemy is treason," Obeidi said prior to today's opening of the 12th Arab summit conference. "We excluded Egypt from the Arab League and branded (the late President Anwar) Sadat a traitor for that reason. And now, they are asking us for collective Arab recognition, which is even bigger treason."

Obeidi said the plan had no chance of being approved by the summit and was certain to be shelved. But a Saudi source said his government "is not likely to scrap the plan and forget all about it."

The Saudi foreign minister told reporters once the plan was offered to the summit, it automatically would become a pan-Arab blueprint and would cease to be a purely Saudi document.

Khadafy and several other hard-liners were boycotting the summit to avoid being associated with the plan proposed by Fahd on Aug. 7. Eight of the 19 chiefs of state were reported staying home. All 21 Arab League members, however, sent representatives to the summit.

The eight-point plan, intended as a substitute for the Camp David peace process, has been rejected by Israel and is viewed with misgivings by the United States because it calls for a Palestinian state with East Jerusalem as its capital and Israel's withdrawal from all territory taken in the 1967 war.

It is backed by the moderate majority of the Arab League's 20 members but the militant minority may be strong enough to block its adoption as pan-Arab policy.

The Arab leaders were meeting in Morocco's picturesque religious capital under the most stringent security precautions ever seen in this security-conscious country. Paratroopers in combat uniforms carrying loaded submachine guns were posted every five yards around their villas occupied by the foreign delegates.

Obeidi said Libyan Prime Minister Abdesselam Jalloud would urge the summit to expel Sudan from the Arab League because of its close ties with Egypt and because Sudanese President Gaafar Nimeiri "walked side by side with the traitor (Israeli Prime Minister Menachem) Begin at Sadat's funeral."

Legislators Scheduled Here Monday

Two state legislators, one of whom hopes to succeed Billy Clayton as Speaker of the House and another who hopes to represent Scurry County in its new legislative district, are scheduled to be in Snyder on Monday, Nov. 30.

Rep. Gib Lewis of Fort Worth and Rep. Walter Grubbs of Merkel will be on hand for an informal reception at 2 p.m. in the Western Texas College Student Center hosted by a local Political Awareness Committee.

Lewis has been regarded for some time as a likely contender for the Speaker's position when Clayton steps down, and he now claims to have written pledges of support from 113 of the 149 members of the House of Representatives.

Lewis, 45, has been serving in the House for 10 years.

Grubbs, who was gerrymandered out of his Abilene district by the redistricting board, moved to Merkel to qualify himself to run for the new District 78 House seat. Scurry County is being switched from the 63rd District to the 78th District.

Petro Piracy Hearing Delayed

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Because of "overwhelming response," a legislative hearing into oilfield thefts and schemes has been postponed until January to give witnesses more time to prepare, according to a state legislator.

"We initially anticipated about a five-hour hearing, but the response has been almost overwhelming in persons wanting not only to testify, but to be given time to document testimony," Rep. Tommy Adkisson, D-San Antonio, said in announcing the postponement Tuesday.

Adkisson originally asked Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, chairman of the House Intrgovernmental Affairs Committee, to schedule the hearing in San Antonio for Dec. 3.

"It just seems that the more publicity there is on this petro piracy, the more information comes forward from throughout the state," Adkisson said. "This petro piracy is obviously running into the tens of millions of dollars."

Adkisson said the investigative hearing, at which he will preside, will look into numerous schemes and thefts in the oil fields "that are ripping off landowners, taxpayers, oil companies and the general public."

He said the hearing was planned to show the problems involved and determine what legislative and administrative remedies are necessary to "slow these rascals down, if not put them out of business."

A new hearing date will be announced within a few weeks, Adkisson said.

Adkisson said he has conducted his own investigation in cooperation with landowners, the Texas Railroad Commission, state law enforcement agencies, the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Associations and petroleum companies.

"I had no idea it would become a statewide investigation," he said.

Watt Angered

HOUSTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt refused to respond to a question from an ecologist wondering how he reconciled his Christian beliefs and his "apparent disregard of endangered species."

Watts spoke to about 1,000 business leaders Tuesday about expanded leasing of federal lands to energy companies. After he finished his prepared remarks, he read a question from Patricia Reiff, president of a conservation group.

Her query began, "Jesus said not a sparrow fell to the ground without God paying attention. How do you reconcile your Christian beliefs ..."

Watt broke off and sharply responsded, "I will not read the rest of this insulting question. I'm continually surprised at Americans. I thought we had put religious bigotry behind us."

Nuns Found Safe

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Two American Roman Catholic nuns found safe after they had been missing for five days were planning to return to the United States next month because they feared for their safety, church officials said.

The nuns, a Guatemalan priest and a seminary student were found Tuesday unharmed in western Gratemala, an unidentified church official said. He said there were indications they had been abducted.

The U.S. Embassy could not confirm the report. The official at the Catholic parish in Panajachel gave no details and asked, for his own safety, not to be identified.

Policeman Suspended

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today upheld the suspension of Fort Worth policeman E.L. Lockhart after Lockhart had failed to respond to a shooting report in an apartment complex where he was visiting a friend.

Police Chief H.F. Hopkins suspended Lockhart indefinitely on Dec. 5, 1979, and the Firemen's and Policemen's Civil Service Commission of Fort Worth affirmed the suspension.

A state district court also upheld the suspension, but the Fort Worth Court of Civil Appeals supported Lockhart's argument that Hopkins' letter of suspension was not specific enough in saying what the officer had done wrong.

The SDN Column

We like variety in our weather---unless, of course, it goes to extremes. The past week's menu from the elements has been one of those examples of West Texas at its best. Days like those are what make autumn the favorite season of many people, and we have heard plenty of comments on the subject.

There are those who recall that it was in November last year that we got a big snowfall. In fact, it turned out to be the biggest snow of the season, and those of us who remember it can fully appreciate these past days of autumn sunshine with bright, seasonal foliage to provide splashes of color.

It is days like these that make the Thanksgiving season more meaningful.

We always felt kind of sorry for people who lived in areas where there is little or no change in the climate from season to season. Ordinarily, if someone asks which is our favorite season, we say autumn. But the truth of the matter is, we like the seasons as they come, and usually the changes come at the best time possible, just when we are beginning to get tired of the season on the way out.

Back in the summer, we were interested in the comments of Pat Bullard, former city accountant who was visiting here following a stay in Indonesia. In trying to adjust to the change from this country, she said the monotony of the weather pattern there was a big obstacle. No matter how many problems it may cause, people who are accustomed to changing seasons sooner or later reach a point when they want to see some snow. Not during a football game, of course, but there definitely can be too much of a good thing, especially the weather.

Since we were first introduced to stories about the first Thanksgiving in our grammar school days, we imagined that the weather during that festive event was a bit on the crisp side, but with glorious sunshine and scenic foliage. This impression still endures and we have never pursued anything which might tend to disprove it. So, that's the way we "remember" it today.

Fourth Graders Share Thanksgiving Thoughts

By Shirley A. Gorman

Thanksgiving is a time to pause and reflect on the events of the previous year, especially on the good things that have occurred. Thanksgiving is also a time to visit friends and relatives and share the traditional feast--turkey, dressing and all the trimmings.

Thanksgiving means many things to many people. The following are a few thoughts about the holiday as stated by a fourth grade class at Central Elementary School. Diane Morton is the teacher.

"I am thankful for the food and when all of my family gets together," says Sandra Gutierrez, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tomas Gutierrez.

"I am thankful for the food that God gives us when the family gets together," says Marcie Rodriguez, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Rodriguez.

Hilda Molina, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Molina, says, "I am thankful for God because he loves us and I am thankful for good food and friends and for my family. I am thankful for clothes, shoes, and puppies."

Responding to the question, "What does Thanksgiving mean to me?", Raul Rodriguez, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raul Rodriguez, sais, "It's wonderful to eat with the family, friends, and aunts and uncles and to thank one another."

"I am thankful for my doctors, clothes, food, family, stores and school," says Pamela Pruitt, daughter of Ira and Jo Ann Pruitt.

"I am thankful for the Pilgrims coming to the new land and bringing freedom," says Jason Massingill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Aikin. "I am thankful for my family being together and for all the blessings said on Thanksgiving Day."

"Thanksgiving is a time for God," says Tammy Ellis, daughter of Linda Ellis. "Thanksgiving is a time for Indians and it is a time for us."

Becky Morales, daughter of Lupe Morales, says "Thanksgiving is a time to be thankful for all kinds of stuff. The most wonderful thing is when the whole family gets together and the blessing of God."

"I am thankful for many things," says Nancy Ybarra, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Ybarra. "I

Shuttle Airborn For Cape Kennedy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A jumbo jet carrying the space shuttle Columbia took off under cloudy skies today on the second leg of its journey from California to Florida.

The Columbia had made a refueling stop at Bergstrom Air Force Base near the state's capital city, arriving about 8 p.m. CST Tuesday after a 3½-hour flight from California.

An estimated 20,000 people drove by the shuttle and 747 as it sat on the runway, causing some minor traffic problems for Air Force police. Cars tended to stop for a longer look.

NASA officials had planned an 8 a.m. takeoff but the shuttle was not in the air until 9:05 a.m.

"It's not a scheduled airline," said Air Force Maj. Bob Masters of Bergstrom, adding there were no particular problems.

An unending procession of vehicles rolled by the shuttle during the 2½-hour public viewing period. A long line had already formed by 5:30 a.m., an hour before the public was allowed on the base.

Crowds also gathered on two highways adjacent to the base to get a look at the shuttle as it lifted off into an overcast sky.

A chase plane, used to make sure the shuttle — bolted onto the 747 — had no apparent problems after takeoff, lifted off at about the same time.

Both disappeared quickly into the cloud cover.

Tuesday evening, flashbulbs popped on a nearby highway as sightseers tried to get photos of Columbia's first-ever nighttime landing.

"The airplane doesn't know whether it's day or night. It doesn't make much difference. We would like to always make the takeoff in the daytime, at least at this stage of the game," said NASA pilot Fitzhugh Fulton, who guided the Boeing 747 from Edwards Air Force Base.

NASA spokesman Jim Kukowski had said morning fog could delay the trip to the Kennedy Space Center, where it will be readied for a third trip into space in March.

Tuesday's takeoff from Edwards was delayed by minor problems. Earlier this month, the Columbia's second space flight was shortened because of fuel cell problems.

"We've had a lot of little (problems)," said Donald "Deke" Slayton, orbital flight test manager of the shuttle. "As long as they're little ones we don't really care."

Slayton flew a chase plane that accompanied the 747 and Columbia to Texas. His job was to see "if we have anything flopping around loose after takeoff." However, Slayton said once it got dark he was just along for the ride.

Fulton said it was dark for the final two hours of the flight.

A different crew was scheduled to take the shuttle from Texas to Florida.

Among the problems faced at Edwards were cracks in the tailcone fitted onto the 747 to maintain a smooth airflow. Slayton said it took an "on-the-spot design and build" and some all-night work to get the shuttle off the ground at 2:28 p.m. PST.

"This is the first time we've flown after dark," NASA spokesman Jim Kukowski said at Bergstrom. He said the decision to fly at night was made after a storm threatened to move into California, which could have delayed the flight by several days.

About the only problem caused by the darkness was the inability of bystanders to identify the 747 as it came in.

"That must be it," Kukowski told reporters as slow-moving lights approached the runway. "There are not that many things that large that fly so slow."

Although it was dark, the pilots made a swing around Austin to give residents a look.

"We did want to circle the town and give everybody an opportunity to see the airplane," said NASA pilot Thomas McMurtry, who added that the sightseeing was not limited to people on the ground.

"The flight actually draws a lot of interest from other airplanes and we frequently had airliners flying nearby asking to be vectored over to get a look at (the shuttle)," he said.

The 710,000-pound package touched down softly and taxied to a floodlit area, where base personnel were allowed to have a look.

The shuttle's third mission into space is scheduled for mid-March, after the craft is refurbished. The historic second mission — the first time a used aircraft was sent back into space — was cut short by failure of one of the fuel cells which produce its electrical power.

Kukowski said the crew for the seven-day March mission would be announced next week.

Fonda To Stay In Hospital

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Henry Fonda, suffering a heart problem, must settle for a hospital menu on Thanksgiving even though his family had hoped the veteran actor could spend the holiday at home, a hospital spokeswoman said.

"His doctor thinks he wants to keep him a little longer than that. He wants to observe him a little longer," Cedars-Sinai Medical Center spokeswoman Virginia Bohannon said Tuesday.

Ms. Bohannon said doctors described Fonda, 76, as "OK," but could not say when he will return home.

Fonda's daughter, actress Jane Fonda, had said the family hoped he could be home by Thanksgiving when he entered Cedars-Sinai on Nov. 17. Doctors brought him here to monitor his response to a change in heart medication.

He has been in and out of the hospital for the past year, underwent exploratory heart surgery in May and has worn a pacemaker since 1974.

10 Days To Consider Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Federal Trade Commission have 10 days to decide whether to pursue a long-running antitrust case against the three largest makers of breakfast cereals.

The staff of the FTC told commissioners Monday it does not intend to appeal an administrative law judge's ruling that threw out the case.

The judge said in September that the FTC staff had failed to prove charges that Kellogg Corp., General Mills Inc. and General Foods Corp. had violated antitrust laws.

The commission members now must decide whether to let the administrative law judge's ruling stand, to order its staff to appeal anyway, or to extend the time during which it can make a decision.

Berry's World

"We're having an up-dated Norman Rockwell Thanksgiving. I prepared the dinner and grandmother will carve the bird!"

at wits end

by erma bombeck

Sometimes I feel the real meaning of Thanksgiving is lost in a flurry of turkey, prayers and homecomings.

What we're really talking about is a wonderful day set aside on the fourth Thursday of November when no one diets. I mean, why else would they call it Thanksgiving?

It's pig-out time throughout the land. No sauces made from blue milk. No pies constructed with sugar substitutes. No potatoes baked with the nutritional value still in the skins. No trade-offs for the next five weeks for a spoonful of dressing.

It's elastic waistband time, when you not only plan on eating everything in sight, but usually exceed your own expectations.

I have come to await Thanksgiving Day like a child with her nose pressed against the cold window awaiting the arrival of Santa Claus. It's the only day of the year I set my alarm. This morning, I will get up at dawn and have my turkey-preparation breakfast. This is followed by my turkey-in-the-oven formal breakfast with the family.

The third breakfast I will combine with snacks and tasting sessions with the cranberries, carrot-cabbage salad, pumpkin chiffon pies, relish plate, vegetable casserole and dressing.

By three or four in the afternoon, my fourth breakfast will consist of crackers and cheese, canapes and hors d'eouvres of varying sizes and consistencies as I certainly do not want to ruin my dinner.

Around five or six, dinner will be served, at which time I will announce that I have had nothing to eat since breakfast. (Dieters are always managing the truth. It's their way.)

After dinner, I will offer to clean out the roaster only to chip the turkey skin out of the grease and pop it in my mouth before anyone notices. Every bowl I return to the refrigerator as leftovers will also be sampled.

Around 11 tonight, I will sneak out and put together a dressing sandwich...my last official sin before saying goodbye to the day. As a dieter, I have had my day of liberation.

If the president ever put Thanksgiving on a Monday, I don't like to think what dieters would do to him.

The pimento or allspice tree is the only common spice that has its origins in the New World.

Beta Sigma Phi Has Thanksgiving Feast

The historic Johnson ranch house, located northwest of Snyder, was the scene for Beta Sigma Phi's Thanksgiving feast the evening of November 20. The ranch house is the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Hamlett. Upon arrival, guests were given a brief history of the house, which was built from 1902 to 1910. A tour of the house, which features a veranda on all sides on the top and bottom floors, was given.

Tables for the dinner were covered with white cloths and centered with white tapers in brass candlesticks. Each candlestick was nestled in an arrangement of brown silk flowers and dried flowers.

Hostesses for the evening in addition to Mrs. Hamlett were Mona Bryan, Wanda Early, Nancy Ballinger, and Brenda Hedges. Couples included Mona and Truett Bryan, Wanda and Bill Early, Nancy and Ken Ballinger, Brenda and Byron Hedges, Dena and Harold Ellis, Donna and Joe Fowler, Carlyon and Keith Glaze, Carolyn and John Greene, Laura and Mackey Greene, Judy and Ray Max-Grimmett, Carol and Chuck Kelly, Carolyn and Howard Dimmer, Margaret and Jerry Corkran, Betsy and Merle Griffin, Jackie and Buck Buckland, Georganne and Gary Conway, Marie and Billy Boone, and Sue and Morris Sewell.

Here is a good hand for Thanksgiving Day. South can give thanks that his opponents did not get into the bidding. Everything breaks for West and except for unusual and almost impossible defense by North-South, West can make five diamonds.

The defense to beat five diamonds would be a low heart lead by North, ducked by South. Then North must grab the first diamond and lead his second heart to get a ruff.

Actually the hand was played in an important English match in 1964. The late Kenneth Konstamm elected to open the South hand and found himself in a good game contract doomed to defeat because the clubs and hearts were wrong for him.

Not that Ken was daunted. Hugh Kelsey reports that he gave his opponents a chance to go wrong and they obliged.

Ken took dummy's ace of diamonds; ruffed a diamond and led a low spade toward dummy. West took his singleton ace and had to guess between a heart and club lead. With nothing to guide him West went wrong. He led a heart and Ken's heart loser had vanished into thin air.

It was quite a swing. At the other table the hand was passed out.

Short-legged women can give the illusion of long, lean legs by wearing short-shorts. How short? The shorter the better, if you dare! Look for a pair that is slit on the side for an even leggier look. If your legs are on the thin side, choose a pair that is cut full from the hips down. They will make both your hips and legs look shaplier.

Memories Shared At November Meeting

The home of Mrs. J. M. Kayser was the scene of the Zeta Lambda Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma Society International meeting on Monday night.

Hostesses for the meeting were Phil Kelley, Monette O'Day, Ruby Anderson, Margaret Presswood, and Mrs. Kayser.

The meditation "The First Thanksgiving - Having an Attitude of Gratitude" was led by Carol Miller.

The program was directed by Gerrie Parker, chairman of the research committee. Opening the program with a recording of "The Way We Were" by Barbara Striesand, program participants shared memories (those not to painful to forget) of their early teaching careers. Some recalled memories of the classrooms as early as 1922 when their duties included such things as tending the fire, sweeping and cleaning classrooms, and accepting room and board in students homes as part of the pay for teaching duties. One recalled that $70 a month was her monetary reimbursement for her first teaching job and that cursive writing was the only method taught in the first grade. Others mentioned multi-level grades in the one-room school concept having as many as fifty or more students at the same time.

Many memories were stirred; unforgettable, laughable moments were shared by Ruby Anderson, Virginia Grove, Mary Davenport, Phil Kelley, Delia McPherson, Evelyn Boone, Nellie Smith, and Georgene Galloway as they explored the program topic, "Educators Then and Now."

Mippie Brownlee closed the program with a paraphrase of the Barbara Striesand recording, entitiling hers "The Way We Are." She read a humorous poem of today's educational system.

Monette O'Day led the group in singing "It's a Small World After All."

El Wanda Nall, president of Zeta Lambda, conducted the business meeting, pausing briefly for silent prayer in memory of Agnes Kunkle, recently deceased member of the chapter.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses to the twenty-nine members present.

Ira PTA Sees Slide Program

Ira PTA met November 19 in the school library.

Peggy Hamm of Snyder Travel Agency presented a slide program on Hawaii.

It was reported that five members attended Fall Workshop and Randa Sterling, Dee Shew and Shirley Bullard were named to the Christmas bag committee. A motion carried to sponsor a drug awareness program as soon as possible.

Betty House, local member, was elected PTA regional vice president.

Thanksgiving Thoughts

am most thankful for my family, the Indians and Pilgrims that came to Texas. I am thankful for God giving us freedom."

"I am thankful for my mother and father and sister and cousins," says Tracy Braziel, son of Mary Braziel. "I am thankful for my friends, and the Pilgrims and Indians who helped make this world better."

"Thanksgiving is a time to give thanks and to have turkey and good food and to have fun with your family," says Monty Montgomery, son of Jackie Montgomery.

"I am thankful for the Indians because they gave us freedom and our land," says Tracey Lindsey, daughter of Penny Case. "I am thankful for the Pilgrims because they gave us Thanksgiving and I am also thankful for America, home sweet home."

Loyd Gaddis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Evans, says, "I am thankful for all my friends and relatives and the Pilgrims and Indians. Thanksgiving is fun because we eat good food at my grandmother's house."

"I am thankful for the teachers who help us learn more," says Melisa Madrid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Madrid. "I am thankful for God's blessing. My whole family gets together to celebrate Thanksgiving. I am thankful for my mother buying us clothes and shoes. I am thankful for God coming to save us and most of all that Mrs. Morton helps me alot and I like her very much."

"I am thankful for Pilgrims and the Indians, but I like Thanksgiving because all my family gets together, says Jimmy Powell, son of Ginger Simmons.

"Thanksgiving is a time to be thankful and also for the whole family to get together," says Stacey Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie T. Thompson. "I am thankful for my food and my whole family. When we have our whole family at my house we have a good time."

"Thanksgiving is the time to give thanks to God for our many blessings," says Jerry Luna, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Luna. "It is time to be thankful for food, church, God, friends, and freedom."

Desire For Arms Reduction...

Soviet Offer May Be Genuine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says the Soviet Union's offer to reduce some portion of its European missile forces indicates that "our message is going through" and may signal that the Kremlin wants genuine arms reductions.

"A dialogue is under way, which in itself is reason for encouragement," the department said Tuesday of the proposal made in Bonn, West Germany, by Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Meanwhile, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, says he has urged President Reagan to hold a summit meeting with Brezhnev next year because "the world is too dangerous for us to go any longer without a direct meeting."

And Percy, too, said there may be a positive element to Brezhnev's rejection of Reagan's offer to cancel European deployment of U.S. medium-range missiles in exchange for dismantling Soviet missiles trained on European targets.

"I look at it as something that says, 'I can't accept this, but let's talk,'" Percy said.

The Washington Post, meanwhile, said in today's editions that the United States will propose at the Geneva talks a freeze on all U.S. and Soviet short-range nuclear missile systems in Europe.

The State Department statement said that "on its face," the Brezhnev offer to reduce the Soviet missile force in Europe by an unspecified amount in exchange for a moratorium on deployment of U.S. medium-range missiles is simply another version of a proposal advocated by the Soviets since 1979.

"It contains nothing that is significantly new," the department said.

At the same time, however, the department said it hopes Brezhnev's willingness to consider reductions of any type or duration "is a sign that the Soviets are beginning to see the advantages of pursuing genuine arms reductions in this area."

The department said Reagan committed the United States to negotiate in good faith at the Geneva nuclear arms talks starting Monday.

In Mexico City, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said he sees hope for "a new and constructive dialogue" with the Soviets on arms talks.

Haig said Brezhnev's reply to Reagan's offer to reduce nuclear arms "indicated our message is going through."

Publisher Ends 46 Year Career

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Mason Walsh, who began his career in journalism at age 11 as a news carrier for the Dallas Times Herald, retired Wednesday as publisher emeritus of The Phoenix Gazette and The Arizona Republic.

And though it was a long time before he turned from that to the newsroom, his news career spanned 46 years — including cub reporter with the Dallas Journal while attending Southern Methodist University.

Along the way he also served as sports writer, reporter, city editor and managing editor — the latter the position he held with the Phoenix Gazette when President J.F. Kennedy was shot in Dallas.

He had been news editor of the Dallas Dispatch-Journal when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. He heard of the attack while listening to a radio broadcast of the New York Philharmonic and, though his paper had no Sunday edition, managed to scratch up a staff to put out an extra.

The music to which he was listening at the time was no light interest. He played violin, viola and violoncello in movie and vaudeville theaters, on radio, in dance bands andd with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra.

Now, at 69, Walsh says he won't miss the business he's leaving. "After as long as I've been at this, I doubt it is going to be any great traumatic break for me," he said. "I figure I've done my stint."

He also held positions with the Austin (Texas) Tribune, the Dallas Times Herald and Northern American Aviation. He became general manager of the Phoenix newspapers in 1966, nearly six years after his arrival, and was named assistant publisher in 1975. He became publisher in 1978 and publisher emeritus in 1980.

Walsh married a newspaperwoman — Anne Calhoun — in 1947. Their careers have spilled over into a second generation. A daughter, Peggy, is news editor with The Associated Press in Atlanta and a son, Kevin, is a reporter for the Pacific Daily News on Guam.

Obsolete Laws To Be Stricken

LONDON (AP) — If the wheels of Justice keep on turning, all women in Scotland soon will be allowed to stand on their windowsills to wash windows without fear of arrest.

And Scottish men will be free to carry a picture with them while on horseback and buy tobacco before 5 a.m.

These bold new liberties are about to go into effect as Parliament considers the wishes of Scottish Office Minister Lord Mansfield, who is asking that obsolete laws governing Scotland be updated or scrapped.

The House of Lords cheered Tuesday as provisions of the bill were read and given an unopposed second reading. It comes up for a third reading and, if approved, must be passed by the House of Commons.

Under the changes, Scots no longer would have to seek municipal permission to sound a "steam trumpet" before driving off to work.

Under the U.S. Maritime Mammal Protection Act, walrus hunting in Alaska is strictly limited and walrus tusks may be sold only by native people who have worked them into "authentic handicrafts." Tusks are shipped to Hawaii with only scribbling on them, done by Eskimos with ball-point pens. There they are turned into "scrimshaw," by the etching of beautiful scenes, and some sell for hundreds of dollars.

U.S. Weighs Military Move In Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharp swing to the left by Nicaragua's revolutionary government is raising the possibility of the first U.S. military action in Latin America since Marines landed in the Dominican Republic 16 years ago.

High-level discussions about a possible military move in Nicaragua, U.S. officials say, have been accelerated recently after the Nicaraguans showed little interest in negotiating their differences with Washington.

Officials refuse to discuss the military options being considered, but the strategy regarded as most realistic is a naval blockade to interdict Soviet-bloc weapons flows to Nicaragua.

The stakes facing the administration are high. No official doubts that a decision to impose a naval blockade would touch off a wave of anti-American protests in Latin America, Europe and elsewhere.

Some countries such as Venezuela which have given cautious support thus far to U.S. policies in Central America would be expected to join the chorus of protests. There is also some concern that the Soviet Union would feel less inhibited about using military force in Poland.

But officials also say the United States would pay a heavy price if it adopted a hands-off policy in Nicaragua. The Soviets would gain a major propaganda victory and U.S. allies would raise questions about American resolve.

Previous Marxist leaning governments in Latin America have met U.S. resistance. The CIA helped depose the government of President Jacobo Arbenz in Guatemala in 1954 and financed groups opposed to Chile's late Marxist President, Salvador Allende.

In 1965, some 22,000 Marines were sent to the Dominican Republic to help quell an uprising which then-President Johnson blamed on "communist conspirators."

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who discussed the Nicaraguan issue during his visit to Mexico this week, has increased talk about military action by refusing to rule that option out.

Haig has denounced the "drift toward totalitarianism" in Nicaragua, citing repeated instances of press censorship, suppression of labor unions and the arrests of several businessmen.

After the Sandinista government assumed power in Nicaragua in July 1979, the Carter administration moved quickly to befriend the new leadership.

But even as Congress was authorizing a large aid program for Nicaragua, the State Department has alleged, the Sandinista authorities were secretly providing arms aid to leftist rebels in El Salvador. Last April, suspended economic the administration assistance to Nicaragua.

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Health Minister Roquelino Recinos Mendez was released Monday night by leftist guerrillas who kidnapped him nearly three months ago. He was kidnapped Aug. 31.

Must Move By 1985...

Navajos Have Land Dispute With Government

BIG MOUNTAIN, Ariz. (AP) — Out here in the high desert, where people are as scarce as trees, a trip to the trading post has always been a high point in a Navajo's lonely struggle with life.

So it had been with Ella Deal. As a girl and as a woman of 69 years, a day's journey to Oraibi to trade — but mostly to visit, gossip, swap news — was well worth the 40-mile effort.

No longer. Now Ella Deal and her friends meet at Oraibi, shake their graying heads in bewilderment, embrace, weep.

They weep because they are at a loss to understand why the United States government has determined that the only solution to a problem of the government's own making must be at their expense.

To clean up its own mess, the government has determined to banish one out of every 15 Navajos, maybe as many as 10,000, from their sacred ancestral homeland.

In other words, from the Navajos' point of view, destroy them. From the government's point of view, the accepted term is ruefully reminiscent of the Indian Removal Act of 1830: relocate them.

"In our tongue," says one of Ella Deal's friends, Pauline Whitesinger, "there is no word for relocation. To move away means to disappear and never be seen again."

But move they must, by 1986, off of land now decreed by the government to belong exclusively to their neighbors of antiquity, the Hopi Indians.

The Hopis, for their part, have likewise been told to move off of land decreed to belong solely to the Navajos, but only about 100 Hopis are affected and the Navajos are not interested in evicting them.

The Navajos must indeed leave; however, and the tragedy is that there is no place else on their reservation that they can go.

The government's solution: buy them houses in nearby cities off the reservation.

The seeds of all this turmoil were sown in the form of an executive order written in haste in Washington a century ago.

That brief order, over the years, has evolved into a mare's nest of decrees and acts and rulings entangling all three branches of government and finally came to be described as "The Navajo-Hopi Land Dispute," which, in origin, it never was.

"Stop. Stop everything and go back to the beginning," says Peter MacDonald. "That is the only way out of this madness."

MacDonald is chairman of the Navajo Tribe. Madness is one of the more temperate words he uses in discussing the matter. He also speaks of cruelty, and of a double standard.

"If this is an Indian land claim, then settle it the way every other claim has been settled from Alaska to Maine. Compensate the Indian for his land where businesses and homes now stand. Evict a white man? That would be unthinkable.

"This time Indians occupy the claimed land and somehow eviction, removal, relocation becomes acceptable. Why?"

All right, then, back to the beginning.

For all of their known history, the Hopis have lived in several tiny villages atop three mesas in the very heart of a vast area where the Navajos, for all of their known history, have also lived.

Both regard their ancestral homes as more than a birthright.

To the Hopis, a tribe of about 7,000, their mesas are holy ground, the place where life began and harmony is possible.

To the Navajos, who number about 150,000, the surrounding land, embraced by four sacred mountains, similarly defines not just their home but their culture. Within that embrace they have woven a mythological web that holds them together as a people. Beyond it, religious songs and ceremonials lose their worth.

The climactic moment in Navajo history, in fact, was when the U.S. Cavalry drove them from their homeland — burned their cornfields, slaughtered their sheep, marched them 350 miles to a desert outpost in New Mexico, Fort Sumner, and kept them there four years.

They were allowed to return, in 1868, when it was determined there was no gold in Navajo country after all. The Navajos call the experience The Long Walk. So wrenching was the ordeal that, like the Deluge, dates are reckoned from it.

"What we confront right now," chairman Macdonald says, "is a second Long Walk."

The Hopis, out on their remote mesas, bothering no one, numbering only about 1,800 at the time, were not treated to a Long Walk and not assigned a reservation.

They needed one, though, or so the agent assigned to see to their well being decided. He wanted to get rid of a couple of preying Anglos and needed government property to kick them off of.

In 1862, by that troublesome executive order, President Chester A. Arthur gave them a reservation — sort of.

An arbitrary boundary was drawn around the Hopi villages: a rectangle of one degree latitude, one degree longitude. Tidy. An area of 4,000 square miles — twice the size of Delaware — for the use of those 1,800 Hopis and "such other Indians as the secretary of the interior may see fit to settle thereon."

Hundreds of Navajo families had been settled thereon for generations. Ella Deal's mother, grandmother and greatgrandmother lived there. The latter two survived The Long Walk.

One day recently Ella Deal led her son, Percy, to the top of Big Mountain to point out his ancestor's graves. She also showed him where, at his birth, she had buried his umbilical cord, according to Navajo tradition. They stopped at one of four Navajo shrines on the mountain to weep and pray. The graves will soon be off-limits to them.

During the 1940s, to control overgrazing, the government divided both reservations into grazing districts. An area of about four square miles surrounding the Hopi mesas, Grazing District 6, was set aside strictly for Hopi use. About 100 Navajos had to clear out.

The remainder of the 4,000 square miles was designated a Joint Use Area to be shared by both tribes, although only a few hundred Hopis lived there compared with several thousand Navajos.

Picture, then, a target. The bullseye, District 6, was for Hopi use; the first ring for Navajo-Hopi joint use; the remainder for Navajo use.

That division happened in 1962. What remained was to apportion the Joint Use Area equitably to the people who lived on it, had lived on it all those generations.

Without listing each step of the way, it is enough to say that the federal court ruled that joint use meant equal ownership. Congress agreed, and so the Joint Use Area was finally divided by no more complex a formula than simple geography: half to the Hopis, half to the Navajos.

Thus the first ring around the bullseye became two rings.

Perhaps, after all those years since the 1882 executive order, no other or fairer way could be found. The real culprit is history. Certainly the members of the government's Relocation Commission are going about their joyless job with reluctance, and not without compassion.

The actual half-and-half division, for example, is not so neat as describing circles. The boundary is most irregular, designed to dislocate the fewest number of people.

It is so irregular that, to make sure everybody knows where it is, it was necessary to build a fence. The fence is 300 miles long. A five-strand barbed wire fence long enough to encircle Delaware.

About 7,000 Navajos and 100 Hopis found themselves on the wrong side of the fence. They have until 1986 to get on the right side of the fence or ... Or what?

Surely not the cavalry. A member of the Relocation Commission staff, speculating, says, "What will probably happen is that at the end of five years the names of those who have not relocated will have to be given to some law enforcement arm."

If the birth rate of the fenced-out Navajos continues at its present level they will number about 10,000 in 1986. The problem nags. Where will they go?

The tribe owns reservation land jointly; homesites are assigned by customary family usage. Where your umbilical cord is buried, that's where you belong. Besides, the land is woefully overused now. There is just no room for 10,000 more.

As for the 100 Hopis, chairman MacDonald says, "Let them be. We are not interested in moving Hopis."

Congress, realizing the Navajos' landless plight, authorized them to pick a suitable place to relocate. The place the Navajos selected was a federally-owned site near the Grand Canyon, still within their holy mountains' benevolent embrace.

Irony dictated otherwise. It turned out to be white man's happy hunting ground — a place where a group of sportsmen had a long-standing interest. The parcel was withdrawn. So far, no other has been found.

No other solution, either, than to get out.

"If it were possible to go back 100 years and start over, another solution might have evolved," says Paul Tessler, a Relocation Commission official.

"Relocation is not good for people. That is the general sense of everybody on the commission. But what are we to do?

"Yes, the government got us into this mess and it is the government's duty to get us out. But every alternative that has been proposed has been rejected, so we are down to this. It is the law of the land. Our job is to carry it out as painlessly as possible.

"It is not easy, and it is often ugly. When an old lady cries and says you are tearing out her heart, destroying her life, her religion, her identity, it tends to keep you up up at night. I wish it could be another way, but, as I say, nobody has another solution."

So the solution falls on the Navajos. On people like Ella Deal, the burden is heavy. She is on the Navajo side of the fence (although her windmill and stock pond are not) and doesn't have to move. But she represents one of maybe 100 Navajo families who have intermarried with Hopis.

Her late husband was a Hopi, her second husband a Navajo. "My stepsisters, my aunts, my uncles are Hopis," her son says. "Must I climb a fence to visit them?"

It falls heavily, too, on Navajos who know only the life of the reservation. Many have never lived in a city, which is where the relocators propose to buy them homes. Many speak no English.

Perhaps, in the end, the burden will fall heaviest on the tribe itself.

The fenced-off area is in the remotest part of the reservation, the heartland in more ways than one. It is the areas least touched by Anglo influences. It is where the Navajo culture flourishes, inspiring the less-traditional Navajo who lives off the reservation and returns home for spiritual sustenance. The Navajo Mecca.

At Last...It's The Last

By BILL McCLELLAN

Somebody's gonna' crack a joke about my predictions on "Turkey Day". Don't let it be you. That's too cheap.

Okay, so I blew it last week. So I picked South Carolina and Oklahoma. So what? I got Washington and USC right didn't I? So I missed Ohio State. Big deal.

How can he remain this composed, you ask? How can he smile in the face of a sub-.500 week?

No problem. I just keep telling myself this is the last one. That's right sadists, no more goodies after this week. You'll have to look elsewhere.

But let us not dilly-dally any further. For the season, it's a grand 148 right, 92 not right, for .616. Important matters at hand...

Texas at A&M-- Maybe they ought to call this one the injury bowl. Everybody's looking for an upset, so maybe there won't be one...Texas 24, Texas A&M 21.

Alabama at Auburn-- 'Bama's bound for the Cotton. They won't mess up here, Alabama 34, Auburn 17.

Florida State at Florida-- Gee, I don't know. Really. How 'bout Florida at home? Sure...Florida 27, Florida State 24.

Penn State at Pittsburgh-- I (almost) always like to see the big boys get knocked off, and this wouldn't be any exception, but frankly, I think it'll be Pittsburgh 23, Penn State 21.

Houston at Rice-- Rice is capable of winning this one - the Owls' bowl game, I guess - but I'll have to go with Houston 35, Rice 24.

Oklahoma at Oklahoma State-- It's not often the Sooners lose to these guys, but...State 20, Oklahoma 14.

Navy at Army-- I hope these teams aren't representative of our fighting forces. At any rate, Navy 35, Army 17.

Georgia at Georgia Tech-- A traditional battle, traditionally won by Georgia 27, Tech 17.

Kermit vs Breckenridge-- I'll go with...Breck 19, Kermit 14.

Plains vs Hamlin-- On a hunch, Plains 20, Hamlin 14.

Motley County vs Aspermont-- Aspermont 26, Motley County 21.

The Pros-- Dallas will defeat Chicago 27-17; Kansas City will handle Detroit, 35-31 in a wild one; Atlanta has too much fire power for Houston and will win, 27-21; Cincinnati continues its winning ways by defeating Cleveland 24-21; San Diego will somehow beat Denver 17-14; Pittsburgh will edge Los Angeles 20-17; Buffalo will top Washington, 35-17; and San Francisco will bomb the Giants 28-10.

Fingers MVP Too!

NEW YORK (AP) - Milwaukee Brewers reliever Rollie Fingers, who earlier this month won the Cy Young Award as the American League's best pitcher, added the league's Most Valuable Player honors today.

Fingers, 35, became the first relief pitcher - and the first pitcher since Oakland's Vida Blue in 1971 - to sweep both honors.

His margin over A's outfielder Rickey Henderson was just four points, one of the closest races ever in the voting by the Professional Baseball Writers of America.

Fingers collected 15 first-place votes, nine for second, two for third, one for fourth and one for sixth, giving him 312 points. Henderson collected 12 first-place votes, 13 for second, two for third and one for fourth for 308 points.

Fingers and Henderson were the only players named on all 28 ballots.

Baltimore first baseman Eddie Murray was third with 144 points, followed by Boston outfielder Dwight Evans and Oakland outfielder Tony Armas.

Fingers came to the Brewers from San Diego by way of St. Louis last winter.

Cowboys 'In The Stretch Now'

DALLAS (AP) - Dallas coach Tom Landry says the Cowboys can recapture the National Football Conference East title from Philadelphia, but he tempers that comment with caution and with praise for the Cowboys' next opponent, Chicago.

"We're in the stretch run now," he said at his weekly press conference Tuesday. "We'd like to play steady, consistently good the last four weeks to prepare for the playoffs.

"But you can't think that far ahead. We've got a short week and Chicago can be tough."

The Bears, who come to Dallas for a Thanksgiving Day game Thursday, have upset San Diego and Minnesota this season. Chicago is 3-9 in the NFC Central.

The Cowboys bounced back with a 24-10 win over Washington after losing to Detroit on a last-second field goal. That win, combined with a Philadelphia loss to New York, puts the NFC East title at Dallas' fingertips.

Dallas is 6-3 against Chicago, including five consecutive victories. The Bears haven't beaten the Cowboys since a 23-19 triumph at Chicago in 1971 and haven't won in Dallas since 1962.

After Thursday's game, Dallas gets 10 days of rest before it plays Baltimore. The Cowboys host Philadelphia Dec. 13 in a National Conference Eastern Division showdown.

Landry said the 10-day break after the game could be just the tonic his team needs.

"We've been doing the same things over since July and it can get to be a mental drag," said Landry. "It gets you down mentally more than it does physically. The rest could be just what we need."

The Cowboys and Eagles are tied 9-3 atop the NFC East.

Jones Doubtful For Longhorns

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Texas running back A.J. "Jam" Jones is doubtful for Thursday's game between the Cotton Bowl-bound Longhorns and Texas A&M, said coach Fred Akers.

Akers said the Longhorns' leading rusher missed Tuesday's practice with tendonitis in his left knee. Jones left the Baylor game Saturday because of the knee problem, he said.

Running backs John Walker and Don Holloway will start against the Aggies, Akers said.

Defensive back Bobby Johnson also will miss Thursday's game because of a broken wrist, Akers said. Craig Curry will start in Johnson's position.

Wood's Lions To Battle Top-Ranked Borger Here

One of the nation's most successful high school football coaches will step on the turf at Tiger Stadium 7:30 Friday night as Brownwood and Borger clash in a Class 4A regional playoff here.

Brownwood's Gordon Wood, former coach at Roscoe, Seminole and Stamford, will be hunting for his ninth state championship. He has a career record of 371 wins in 38 seasons and is the winningest coach in America.

Wood will be pitting his Lions against a No. 1 ranked Borger Bulldog squad that toppled No. 5 ranked Andrews last week, 14-10. The 'Dogs, 9-2, suffered losses to Hereford and Dunbar this year, but have won five straight games.

Brownwood, ranked No. 4, lost to Abilene Cooper in its season opener, 14-13, and has since won 10 straight, including four shutouts. The Lions tripped Wichita Falls Hirschi 17-0 in bi-district play last weekend.

Wood began his coaching career at Rule in 1940. In 1945 he joined the staff at Roscoe, and in 1947 took over at Seminole. He coached for one year at Winters in 1950, before gaining wide recognition at Stamford from 1951-57. With an 81-6 record at SHS, he took the Bulldogs to two state championships and six district titles.

Wood also coached at Victoria from 1958-59 before coming to Brownwood in 1960. At Brownwood, he has a record of 213 wins, 38 losses and 6 ties, including six state championships.

Don't Fear Responsibility...

Many Young Girls Opt For Unwed Motherhood

NEW YORK (AP) — At 18, Stephanie Palmer welcomed the baby girl she had out of wedlock. But marriage? She wanted to wait until she was more mature.

"Yea, we have a kid, but marriage is a big responsibility," says Miss Palmer, now 20 and living in New York City with her 2-year-old daughter, Chastity.

"Everybody knows what it's like dealing with a child, but not everybody can deal with a husband," she said. "I think I'll be a better wife when I get older."

Many young, unmarried mothers like Miss Palmer are viewing marriage with more fear than child bearing or child rearing.

And one of the results has been a soaring rate of out-of-wedlock births — nearly one in three white teen-agers and more than four out of five black teen-agers giving birth in 1979 were not married, according to the Urban Institute's analysis of recent Census Bureau figures.

This is all happening despite the fact that birth control is more widely available and abortion is more accepted. Among the reasons, experts say, is that more women want to marry at a later age and there is less of a social stigma for an unmarried mother who decides to keep her child.

"The trend has been for unmarried teen-agers who have babies to keep them, where more of them used to give the babies up for adoption," says Barbara Parks, spokeswoman for the Alan Guttmacher Institute. The institute, in 1978 studies for the Planned Parenthood Federation of America Inc., found that 96 percent of all the unwed teen-agers who gave birth kept the baby.

"There seems to be less of a stigma for unwed teen-agers to be walking around pregnant," Ms. Parks said. "And those who do not want their baby — and would have given it up for adoption — now are having abortions."

But for poorer young mothers, birth control and abortion are not so easily available. And many of them come from families where single parenthood is the rule, rather than the exception.

They may have given little thought to becoming pregnant, but once pregnant they are thoughtful and reluctant to head down the aisle with the child's father — or anyone else.

Valerie Rodriguez of Brooklyn miscarried when she was 17 and gave birth to her first baby at 18 — all the while living with her boyfriend. In an earlier time, a girl in her position might have considered holding a quick wedding.

But while Miss Rodriguez willingly entered into the lifetime commitment of motherhood, she was afraid of that other lifetime commitment — marriage.

"Marriage was just too heavy a responsibility," says Miss Rodriguez.

Now her daughter is 15 months old, and her boyfriend has moved out.

Isn't being a single mother a heavy responsibility?

"I never thought about that," she says. "I feel good when I take care of Nina."

An estimated 597,800 out-of-wedlock babies were born in America during 1979, the most recent year for which comprehensive national statistics have been compiled. That's 17 percent of all births, compared with 10.7 percent of all births in 1970.

Fifty-five percent of the black babies were born to unwed mothers, compared to 38 percent in 1970. But the percentage increase among white unwed mothers was even steeper, rising from 5.7 percent of all births in 1970 to 9.4 percent in 1979.

In some ways, the plight of the unwed teen-age mother today is not so different from earlier generations. They feel outside the mainstream of adolescent life — while their friends are double-dating, they are changing diapers. Their peers are pondering the future; theirs already has been set.

"After Chastity came along, I knew I had to begin making exceptions," said Miss Palmer of the Bronx. "From then on, I was thinking about her, planning for her. Once you get pregnant you know you have to stop doing the things you used to do.

"I had planned to do other things with my life, but you don't always get what you want."

Other problems face these young, unwed mothers. Family members, friends and even strangers voice doubts about their aptitude for motherhood. In many cases, they were women who had difficulty taking care of their own lives. Suddenly, they're responsible for another.

People sometimes stare at Irene Trujillo, 18, and her daughter, Kimberly, 2. "They ask me how someone so young can be a good mother," she says. "I know I'm young, but I can handle it. I had her with no regrets. I've always wanted to be a mother."

Each weekday, Valerie, Stephanie and Irene trek to midtown Manhattan where the YWCA has a special program for out-of-school, unemployed teenage mothers. They work toward a high school diploma and talk to counselors about the problems of parenthood, such as how to scold their children. It is one of only a few programs in the New York area that provides on-site day care.

In interviews, several participants outlined ambitious plans for the future. Miss Trujillo wants to be a veterinarian. Miss Rodriguez wants to go to college, too. But they realize the limitations their cute little offspring have brought.

After Miss Rodriguez had Nina, the baby's father left home and left town. The tiny 20-year-old who named her baby after a soap opera character decided it was time to get out of the house.

"Often young unwed mothers will stay home and continue to have more children," says Claire Harnan, director of the YWCA's program. The program "helps bring them out of that isolation," she says.

Population Is Booming

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — The population of some parts of Wyoming is booming, but it's booming mostly with men, a fact that is catching the interest of a few women in undermanned areas to the east and west.

"Send them east!" exclaimed Pamela Stevens of Vermont in a letter to the editor of the Casper Star-Tribune, which reported recently that Census Bureau statistics show single men vastly outnumber single women in Wyoming.

Another letter in the newspaper's Sunday edition came from Carol and Ann at a box number in Naches, Wash.

"We heard on the news that you are short of women in Wyoming. We have more women in our area than men. We are interested in meeting good working men, clean, good sense of humor," the letter said. "We love to cook and have a good sense of humor."

The original newspaper report said of the 80,260 single people counted in the 1980 census, 62 percent were men, and nearly 28 percent of all Wyoming men were single. Only 18 percent of the women were single.

Wyoming's booming energy industry attracts men to its coal mines and oil fields.

Carney Case Dismissed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department failed to prove that former Rep. Charles J. Carney accepted an oil credit card in return for political favors, a U.S. District judge ruled in dismissing the illegal-gift charge.

New Treatment Is Available

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — People afflicted with asthma, bronchitis and emphysema are rebounding here and jumping for joy about a novel treatment for their diseases.

Lansing General Hospital has patients jumping up and down on what it calls "rebounders" — a piece of plastic 40 inches across and 19 inches off the ground. The effect is similar to jumping on a trampoline.

"Unlike stationary bikes or treadmills, rebounding conditions the body for activities of daily living" and uses every bit of muscle and tissue, said Dr. John Morelock, who helps run the program.

"Some patients can pedal a stationary bike for seven miles but can't walk a block," he said.

Bouncing also exercises the skin and is considered safe, protecting the spine and joints from damage associated with jogging and more rigorous sports, he said.

Rehabilitation instructor Phoebe Dotterer put the program together nine months ago and it reduced the length and frequency of hospital stays for a trial group of 12 patients.

"They used to be in every two or three months," Morelock said. "Now, it's about once every nine months and they're out in days instead of weeks."

Although it is not a cure, the exercise can keep lung diseases from getting worse, Ms. Dotterer said.

Sarah Perez Receives Crash English Course

By Noble Bryant Young

Sara Perez, a sixth grader at Northeast Elementary in Snyder, is receiving a crash course in the English language.

Sara came to the U. S. in June of this year and spoke almost no English when she arrived. Long time Snyder educator Merrill Kayser volunteered for the task of getting her to a functional level of fluency by the first of the year. They spend about an hour and a half together each morning and Kayser calls her progress remarkable.

Miss Perez moved to Snyder from her home in Ciudad Acuna, Mexico. While staying in Snyder, Sara lives with her sister, Isabel Martinez. Her parents, who still reside in Mexico, recognized Sara's abilities and sent her to live with her sister in order to expand the scope and quality of her education.

Kayser has high praise for her abilities and background. Although she spoke little English, he says her background and knowledge in math, science and other subject areas is excellent for a sixth grader anywhere. He also says that she is a fast learner. Together, they work on a vocabulary list of 15 to 20 words each day and she is making rapid progress. Kayser estimates her IQ to be between 120 and 140.

The goal for this project, he says, is to have Sara using English as her primary language in school by the first of the year. Already, she can read aloud with a suprising degree of fluency and prospects are good that she will be proficient enough in her new language to go on to junior high next year.

Sara, who will be 12 on Dec. 18, says she wants to be a police woman when she grows up.

ASTRO-GRAPH

Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

November 27, 1981

Several old friends of whom you were once very fond of are likely to reenter your life this coming year. These old relationships will pick up again as if no time ever elapsed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In your desire to satisfy your ambitions today, be very careful that you don't unintentionally offend a friend of long standing. Look before leaping upward. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) As long as you adhere to your normal, cautious instincts, your possibilities for success are good today. Should you get a little too reckless, you might miss your mark.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Pals will be willing to do you favors today, provided you don't pressure them. Make tactful requests. Avoid appearing demanding.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In joint ventures today, act on your own if you see there is something that needs doing. Too much valuable time could be lost if you wait on others to move.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't let your impulsiveness override your experience and common sense today. If you do, there's a chance you'll needlessly repeat an old mistake.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Substantial rewards are likely today in situations where you are prepared to work for what you get. Your something-for-nothing possibilities are nil.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you are likely to be extremely tolerant with friends, and readily forgive things they do which displease you. Not so with family members.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Tackle difficult chores as early in the day as possible. Your enthusiasm for getting your tasks done is likely to wane as the day wears on.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though your prudent judgment will dictate that you do otherwise, there's a strong possibility you could be quite extravagant today. Heed your logic, not your impulses.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Conditions continue to look favorable where finances or material acquisitions are concerned, provided you don't take foolish gambles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Plan wisely for what you hope to accomplish at this time, but don't discuss your ideas prematurely with others. Their suggestions could get you off track.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Financial conditions are mixed for you today. In certain situations you will be wise and practical, while in others you could blow all you gained in one fell swoop.

Reagan Hosting Family Reunion

Reagan, who arrived here late Monday night plans no public appearances during his stay in California, which runs until next Monday or perhaps Tuesday.

As snow mixed with rain fell Tuesday in Washington, the president and his wife, Nancy, rode horses under a mostly sunny Southern California sky as temperatures climbed into the mid-60s.

Reagan also spent part of the day showing off the ranch to ABC-TV's Barbara Walters for a Thanksgiving Day program.

The Reagan's guests for the holiday include his older brother, Neil "Moon" Reagan, and his wife, from San Diego; his daughter Maureen and her husband; and his daughter Patty, an aspiring actress. His two sons, Michael and Ron, will not be able to attend.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Tuesday that a Republican task force was being formed with representatives of the White House and Congress to develop a short-term spending bill to replace the one that expires Dec. 15. An organizational meeting of the group was held Tuesday in the office of Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee..

Speakes said he would not discuss the administration's strategy for the new spending bill while the discussions are continuing on Capitol Hill.

He refused to say whether Reagan still was willing to meet Congress halfway and accept half of the 8.5 billion in spending cutts he had proposed earlier. "I think we'll just have to see what evolves between now and Dec. 15," Speakes said.

However, there were strong indications that the administration was still willing to accept a bill with only half the proposed cuts.

Budget Cuts Force Layoffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's budget cuts are forcing cities to lay off workers, raise taxes and reduce or eliminate such services as recreation, street paving, garbage collection and school lunches, a survey by the U.S. Conference of Mayors says.

The survey of 100 cities, taken Nov. 3-10, indicated that nearly three-fourths of them have laid off employees, or plan to, with the heaviest ax falling in cities in the economically hard-hit Middle West and South.

Further, the survey found, 41 percent of the cities that responded said they have raised or will raise taxes to meet mounting costs and cover cutbacks in federal assistance.

Reflecting what the conference called the "immense burdens on city budgets" imposed by federal budget cuts, 69 percent of the cities responding to the survey said they were reducing services, and 63 percent reported they were deferring capital spending plans.

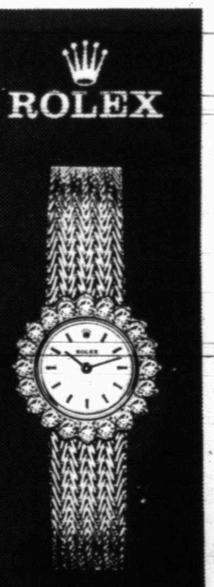

"We are paring our essential services to the bone," the report, which appeared in Wednesday's Washington Post, quoted one unidentified city official in the Far West as saying. "Where do we go from here?"

Modern Thanksgiving Might Give Pilgrims Shock

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — The Pilgrims and Indians who celebrated the first Thanksgiving 360 years ago might be shocked to see how the holiday is celebrated in modern America.

For one thing, the original event likely took place in October — not November. And the main dish was probably venison, not turkey.

"The Pilgrims would have been horrified to hear it called Thanksgiving," said Jim Baker, research librarian for Plimoth Plantation, an exhibit depicting Pilgrim life in the 1600s.

"A thanksgiving was one of three allowable church holidays in the calendar, a very specifically defined event. It was a declared holiday to go to church all day. It was like a sabbath, with no games or recreation.

"The whole thing (today) would have struck them as kind of odd," Baker said. "First you can't have a harvest in New England in late November. Second, it's a secular event."

Laurence Pizer, director of the Pilgrim Society here, says the first celebration apparently took place in mid-October of 1621.

When 102 passengers of the Mayflower landed in Plymouth — originally spelled Plimoth — on Dec. 21, 1620, they didn't realize how tough it would be to establish the first successful colony in the New World.

Half of them died during the first terrible winter, but in the spring they met Squanto, the last surviving member of the Patuxet Indian tribe, which had been wiped out by a plague. They learned to plant corn, catch herring for fertilizer and tap maple trees for sap.

The colony thrived during the first summer. Grateful for a plentiful harvest, Gov. William Bradford called for a celebration.

The 50 Pilgrims invited the Wampanoag Indians to join them, and Chief Massasoit brought 90 braves and five deer with him. The festival lasted until the food ran out — at least three days.

Besides venison, they feasted on turkey, cod, sea bass, wild fowl, pumpkin, squash, Jerusalem artichoke, beach plums, beans and corn.

Despite the success of the first festival, the Pilgrims and Indians were not back for a harvest bash the next year.

"The next year they had a flop, a bad harvest," Baker said. "The Fortune, the second ship, arrived next year without adequate provisions."

The Thanksgiving custom spread from Plymouth to other New England colonies, but for many years there was no regular national Thanksgiving Day in the United States. President Lincoln proclaimed the last Thursday in November 1863 as a Thanksgiving day.

Plymouth will be the site of Thanksgiving observances Thursday, but the modern-day Pilgrims and Indians will not be celebrating together.

Townfolk and visitors will gather at Plymouth Rock for a re-enactment of the Pilgrims' procession to worship, then attend an ecumenical service and a public turkey dinner at Memorial Hall.

But the Wampanoag tribe, which for many years considered Thanksgiving a day of mourning, will for the second year in a row observe a "Day of Awakening," said John Peters, head of the Massachusetts Commission on Indian Affairs.

Of Committee Assignments...

Boll Weevil Threatens To Switch If Stripped

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Rep. Phil Gramm, a Democrat who helped the Reagan administration to get its budget legislation through the House, says he will switch parties after the 1982 election if he is stripped of his position on the House Budget Committee.

"If the Democratic Party decides to take positions away from people who don't espouse the party line," Gramm told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Tuesday, "then I'm going to lose my committee assignment. And then, if I decide to stay in Congress, I'm going to change parties."

The College Station Democrat said in Washington that he has been encouraged to run as a Republican against U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, but "at this point" has decided to seek a third term in the House instead.

Gramm, who has come under sharp attack from mainstream Democrats for his leadership role on Reagan's budget programs, also said he will reassess his political future after the 1982 elections to honor a longstanding commitment to his family.

"After the next election, I intend to sit down with my wife and family and make a deicsion whether nor not I want to make a career of politics," the former Texas A&M economics professor said.

Gramm said he will resist any effort to take away his budget committee position.

"I've never suffered in silence," he said. "I'm certainly not going to allow myself to be deprived ... just because I'm conservative."

Typhoons Hit Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Several towns on the Philippines' main island of Luzon were flooded Tuesday as one of the most powerful typhoons to reach the country in a decade approached land.

Heavy rains that began early Tuesday caused waters in Laguna de Bay, 15 miles south of Manila, to rise eight feet, but the Red Cross reported no casualties. The oyphoon, with winds gusting up to 138 mph, was expected to hit land about 70 miles northeast of Manila.

High School Students Keep Murder Secret

MILPITAS, Calif. (AP) -Officials and some of the students at Milpitas High School reacted with shock and revulsion to reports that more than a dozen of their classmates were shown the body of a murdered girl but failed to report it to police.

"It kind of makes me feel ashamed to go to Milpitas High," said senior Maria King. "We were disgusted that nobody reported it."

"This is causing our campus a tremendous amount of grief," said Principal Charles Perotti. "An awful lot of kids are upset. And teachers are upset, too."

Milpitas Police Sgt. Ron Icely said 13 students who saw the body of 14-year-old Marcy Renee Conrad were cold and callous about the incident.

"Their prime objective was to cover up their friend," said Icely. "They showed no remorse at all for the girl. ... These kids got their priorities messed up. I just couldn't believe it."

Police finally were notified of the partially clad body in a ravine near a reservoir by an 18-year-old auto worker who had gone to the site with friends from the school.

Anthony J. Broussard, 16, ex-boyfriend of Miss Conrad, was arrested for investigation of murder Nov. 5, nearly 48 hours after police say the girl died. The county coroner's office said she was strangled, and an autopsy was being performed to determine if she had been sexually assaulted.

Sheriff's Sgt. Gary Meeker said several students told police Broussard had bragged about the slaying and offered to show friends the girl's body.

According to Icely, one student covered the corpse with leaves so it could not be seen from the road, and others threw rocks at it.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Painful, puzzling disease

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have rheumatoid arthritis and I was taking gold shots with good results until I broke out in a very bad rash. I am 29 years old with two children. I still cannot accept the fact that this condition can cause so much pain. Now I am taking the new drug penicillamine and am hoping for good results. I have taken it for three months.

I have been told by my doctors that my white blood cells are getting low, but they have not taken me off the medication. I would like to know what it could mean when my white cells drop like that. I'm worried.

DEAR READER — Rheumatoid arthritis can be a painful and disabling disease. It can vary from mild to severe. And it can undergo unexplained spontaneous remissions, sometimes for long periods. Such remissions may not be related to any medicines at all. That makes it hard to tell if a medicine is doing what you want it to do or not.

Gold has proved to be a very good aid in many cases that can't be managed adequately by more conservative measures. And penicillamine is also used in those cases in which other conservative treatment has not produced satisfactory results. It is not for everyone. It can affect the bone marrow's ability to produce white blood cells and that is what your doctors are watching in your case. If it is too toxic for the body, then it has to be discontinued.

Rheumatoid arthritis is not the same as osteoarthritis, which is common in people in later years. It is an inflammatory process as explained in The Health Letter number 4-11, Rheumatoid Arthritis, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

You are young and I'd like to give you some encouragement. Each year new discoveries about rheumatoid arthritis are being made. Recently, studies suggest that some cases may be caused by a virus that can be isolated. These and other studies suggest that the day will come when rheumatoid arthritis can be treated effectively without using strong drugs. And there may one day even be a vaccine to prevent some forms of rheumatoid arthritis.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm concerned about wrinkles. My neck looks like crepe paper. I'm a female, 59 years old, 4 feet 11 and weigh 105 pounds. I can't take estrogen because of cancer I had several years ago. What can I eat or take or rub on to help? I don't drink except a little wine now and then and do not smoke.

DEAR READER — You may get some help with a moisturizer technique. Trapping moisture in the skin area that bothers you may plump it out and make the wrinkles less noticeable. There is no better moisturizer than petroleum jelly, also known as petrolatum, and one common brand is Vaseline.

A good method would be to cover the area with petrolatum, then wrap the area if you can and leave it on overnight. If that doesn't do the trick you may wish to see a plastic surgeon who does cosmetic surgery.

Women who cannot take estrogen should avoid moisturizers that contain estrogen. Some of the estrogen in these "beauty" preparations will be absorbed into your body.

Young Chefs Give Turkey Hints

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Yum yum. Your Thanksgiving bird will taste just fine if your follow the proper directions:

"Get the turkey at the grocery store. Clean it; wash it in the dish washer. Put 50 pounds of salt inside. Now cook it 32 hours."

That recipe by Andrea Johnson, age 5, was shared with her kindergarten classmates and a reporter at Marked Tree Elementary School. But it was not the last word on birds.

"Shoot a turkey. Leave feathers on it," said Amy Greene, 5. "Put two carrots inside, one lettuce, three eggs, four pounds butter, 10 cups of sugar, 11 pounds of salt.

"Cook him 12 minutes."

That plan did not jibe with John Buck Brewer's.

The class has instilled in him the kindergarten approach of following the dots:

"Add a litsy bitsy dot of salt, two dots of sugar, one carrot, two tomatoes, two potatoes."

The recipe of Heath Jackson, 6, starts at the beginning.

"Go shoot a turkey in the field," he said. "Skin it. Stuff it with pickles and salad, one cup pepper. Cook it for three minutes. Eat it."

But where does one go to get a turkey? "At the zoo," said classmate Raynessia Chandler, 5.

"You turn the stove on to 9" to get things started, said Audie Swan, 6. "You put any kind of sauce on the turkey. Put a little bit of pepper on it. Then put lemon juice on it, but not too much.

"Spray Pam on the pot, and put the kind of juice that you put on turkeys. Then, clean the dirt and the feathers off the turkey. Cook it nine to 15 hours."

At Brady Primary School in Little Rock, there were different approaches.

"Get an axe, and kill one, and chop its neck off," said Ronnie Barnes, 5.

"Put it in the mierowave for 40 minutes," said Chris Hall, 5. "You cook it in the oven until the buzzer goes off," said classmate Amy Wright, 5.

But what is a Thanksgiving turkey without the trimmings? The Brady children were not caught off-guard.

"You put fruit on it," said Cherlene Folly, 5.

"First, put a little bit of spaghetti sauce or something on it," said Heath Anderson, 6. "Put it in a pan and cook it for three minutes. Say the blessing, and then you eat it."

Classmate Cody Kreulen, 5, had a more pragmatic approach to the whole idea of feasting. "You would take the turkey to a restaurant and get them to cook it 'cause little boys don't know how," he said.

Keenya Freeman, 5, may have had the right combination when she came up with another key ingredient: tradition.

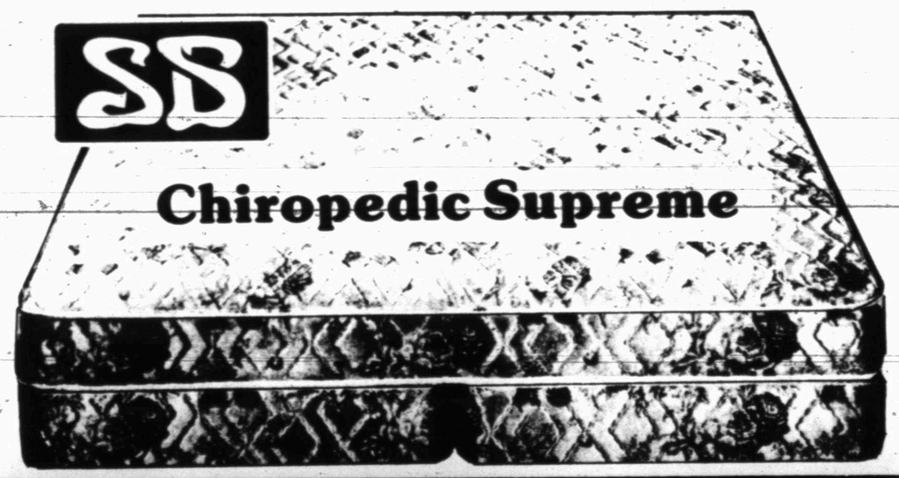

"You take the turkey over to grandmother's house and get her to fix it," she said.

Viruses Lurk Within Body Before Striking

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It lurks within the body, waiting for a chance to attack. Suddenly it strikes, sometimes with devastating force; then it quietly disappears.

Doctors think as many as 20 million Americans may have recurrent bouts of genital herpes — nobody knows for sure. Several hundred thousand more get the disease every year.

The herpes viruses fight a guerrilla war, hiding somewhere in the nervous system and darting out for surprise attacks. Researchers think that once the viruses enter the body, they are there for good.

Three years ago, Jane Rubinsky, a 29-year-old New Yorker, developed severe back and leg pains and a strange tingling sensation on her skin. She knew what it was, because her boyfriend had herpes.

"We thought we could prevent transmission," she says. They were wrong. The relationship fell apart.

"I was the first person he'd given it to, and he couldn't deal with it," she says.

She abandoned hope of becoming a ballet dancer. The pains in her legs were too great. She quit a job as photo editor for a dance magazine — the stress of the job seemed to aggravate the disease.

She tried to fight the virus any way she could. "I had to get enormous amounts of sleep. As soon as I missed some, it brought on the outbreaks.

"After a year, the symptoms began to subside a little, but I'm always aware there's something in there."

Doctors are optimistic that treatments for herpes will eventually be found, but at the moment there is no cure. When the virus is dormant, doctors can't even find it, let alone fight it. They don't know what triggers the outbreaks, or why they disappear.

"People get scared to death," says Dr. Mary Guinan of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga. "It's presented as incurable, and when you say incurable, people think of cancer."

Herpes, which Ms. Guinan calls a "white, middle-class disease," is more frightening for women. Men get it just as frequently, but women face two complications.

They are more likely to get cervical cancer, and they risk infecting their babies at birth.

Most genital herpes sufferers get the disease worst when they are first exposed to it. Many become feverish, get headaches, and develop a sick-all-over feeling — what doctors call malaise.

Although doctors don't understand why the virus recurs, they do know that recurrences can be triggered by emotional stress, sunburn, or the onset of menstruation.

The disease is usually transmitted by sexual contact, but that can only happen around the time when lesions appear. "It's clear that we have cases that are not caused by sexual contact," says Ms. Guinan, "but I would say those are less than 10 percent of all the patients we've seen."

Genital herpes is usually caused by the herpes simplex virus type II. It can also be caused by herpes simplex type I, the virus that normally causes cold sores on the lips.

About half of American adults in higher economic groups have been exposed to the two herpes simplex viruses, and that figure rises to almost 100 percent for adults in lower economic groups.

Another herpes virus causes chicken pox in children, half of whom get the disease before they reach school age. The culprit is the varicella-zoster virus, a wildly infectious virus that hits 96 percent of those exposed to it.

Doctors believe that virus remains latent in the body and sometimes reappears in the elderly and in cancer patients as shingles, a painful skin condition.

The other herpes viruses are Epstein-Barr virus, which causes mononucleosis, and cytomegalovirus, which causes potentially fatal infections in cancer patients and others and can produce congenital deformities in newborns.

The herpes viruses, which can also cause rare eye infections and a deadly brain infection called herpes encephalitis, all have the property of latency, according to Dr. Sally Stansfield of the Centers for Disease Control.

Medical science has made great strides in treating bacterial infections, but viruses — responsible for herpes, the flu, the common cold and many other diseases — are tougher to fight.

One reason is that viruses are much smaller. One hundred thousand of them lined up end-to-end would stretch about an inch.

Another reason is that viruses burrow into human cells and take over. Bacteria attack from the outside, where drugs can reach them more easily.

The viruses alter the cells' genetic material — DNA — turning the cells into tiny factories that churn out more herpes viruses. When those viruses infect neighboring cells, a herpes lesion results.

"It's difficult to find a drug that would specifically attack the viral DNA without attacking normal cells," Ms. Stansfield says.

Tests are under way on several drugs that would interfere with the triggering process that causes herpes to recur, but none of them would actually eliminate the virus from the body.

"I think the best bet is that they could suppress the severity of the episodes and reduce the likelihood of transmission of the virus to other individuals, which is no small accomplishment," says Dr. James Overall Jr., a specialist in infectious diseases at the University of Utah College of Medicine.

Shock Sends Man To Knees

MIDDLETOWN, Del. (AP) — When the 14,400-volt shock hit him, volunteer fireman Albert Cipollone Jr. was thrown four feet and landed on his knees.

"He was holding his palms face up and in a real weird voice he said he'd been hit," Deputy Chief Kenneth Branner said.

Cipollone was left with blisters on three fingers and a burned shoe.

"Don't ask me why I'm alive," said the 33-year-old chief engineer of the volunteer fire company. "Just say someone was with me."

Stepmother Recalls Joys, Aches Of Parenthood

By Amy Pett
For The Associated Press

I don't even know how to refer to them. I feel as if I am taking undeserved credit if I call them "my children. I feel as if I am creating an unloving distance if I call them "my husband's children." And I don't like to call them "my stepchildren."

Not only does that designation also create an unloving distance, but everyone knows how pitiful and abused stepchildren are. And stepmothers are just slightly less dreadful than wicked witches in the myths and fairy tales we were all raised on.

There are days, of course, when our teen-age girls are so repulsive that I am delighted to make the distance, avoiding blame at the same time, and call them my stepchildren. And there are days when I feel so loving toward them, and am enjoying them so much, or feel so much for their pain, that I almost think of them as my children. Almost, but not quite.

My life with my stepchildren began easily enough with them visiting my husband and me on weekends and school vacations. Then, after several years of serious problems with her mother, the older one came to live with us when she was 14. I became a mother rather abruptly. Most new mothers deal with crying in the night, formula, and mysterious fevers.

I dealt with a constantly ringing telephone, a gallon-a-day Hawaiian Punch habit, and a string of broken evening curfews.

When the older girl came to live with us, I thought that we would be a real family, that I would rescue this child from a difficult home situation, and that my husband and I would help her start a new life. I imagined a family like in the magazines.

My trouble was that I was reading the wrong magazines. We were a family out of "True Confessions," not "Woman's Day." Instead of gathering at dinner each evening to share the triumphs of our separate days, we slugged it out at the table over when she had gotten in the night before, whether or not she would be allowed to go out that night, what classes she had cut that day, and how many failure notices we had gotten from her teachers.

Instead of cozy family chats about current events, we had fights about things like whether I felt I was doing the kid a favor by letting her live with us (I did); whether she was going to treat us as she treated her mother (she tried); and whether my husband was going to get tough with "his kid" (he tried).

The family I imagined had a set of grandparents on each side, aunts and uncles on each side, and a scattering of cousins, all warming birthday celebrations and joining together with love on the holidays.

The family I have has had most of those ingredients, plus my husband's ex-in-laws and ex-wife. Rather than warmed, our holidays were heated by the complicated problem of who would be with whom, on what day, where.

I challenge a team made up of the White House chief of protocol, Emily Post, and the entire staff of the United Nations to have turned our family festivities into serene, affectionate celebrations. We were all usually so exhausted by the complex arrangements and emotions that we were glad the special days were over.

My husband's younger daughter came to live with us when she, too, was 14, after her mother died. Trying to comfort herself after the loss, not only of her mother, but of her home, her community, and her whole way of life, she told me when she moved into our house, "Well, at least now we'll be a nuclear family." Oh, baby, have you got a lot to learn, I thought as I tried to figure out what I was supposed to say to her.

I am stubborn in my desire to make the myths reality, so when the younger girl arrived, I was suckered into the "now we'll be a real family" dream all over again. After all, there we were in our own little house, my husband and I and the two girls. Wouldn't we graduate now to real family status?

We have and we haven't. We look like a real family. We are a family. We are not even a very unusual family. One social worker who has worked with groups of stepparents estimates that there are now about 6.6 million children in the United States living as stepchildren with a stepparent.

Before either of the girls lived with us, I used to listen smugly to the tales of this or that dreadful thing their mother made them do, or did to them. With all the wisdom of the childless, I knew the intelligent thing to do, and I was looking forward to getting my chance to prove how good a mother I would be.

There is a bond between parents and children that does not break even in the midst of serious strife. But when you take a stepmother who got involved with the children because she fell in love with their father, and children who got involved with the stepmother because their father fell in love with her, you have a difficult situation at best. Everyone thinks, at one time or another, "I don't have to take this stuff. What do I need it for?" In our house, at times, we've all threatened to run away.

I don't want to give the impression that being a stepmother is only a bed of thorns. There are roses too, and they smell very sweet.

Just a few months ago the older girl graduated from high school. She attended enough classes, did enough homework, and passed enough tests to wear a cap and gown, march in the procession, and get a diploma.

There I was that day, surrounded by members of our complex family, full of joy, as this stormy child had her first real success in the world. The party that followed for our extended "blended" family was the happiest moment for me in many years.

Out of all the fights, all the tensions, all the worries, came this sunny, happy graduation day, and that was my daughter out there with her diploma.

Appeals Court Rejects Waste Disposal Plea

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The 3rd Court of Appeals today rejected a plea by Browning-Ferris, Inc. that state regulations governing the use of land for solid waste disposal facilities are unconstitutionally vague.

Browning-Ferris appealed after the Texas Department of Health denied the company's application to construct a solid waste landfill project in southwest Houston.

The landfill would have been on a 293-acre tract where the company planned to dispose of 4,000 tons of municipal solid waste a day.

An Austin district court affirmed the health department order, which said operation of the site "would constitute improper land use of the property."

On appeal, Browning-Ferris contended the department's regulations furnish no adequate guidelines or standards for denying or granting a permit.

The 3rd Court of Appeals said the regulations "do not define 'land use' or 'improper land use,' but it upheld the district court ruling.

"The standards regulating municipal solid waste disposal are doubtless difficult to devise, but if such controls are to be effective, they, of necessity, must be broad and somewhat flexible. If controls are too precise, they will provide easy escape for those who wish to circumvent the law," the appeals court said.

The court also rejected Browning-Ferris' argument that the health department order was not supported by substantial evidence.

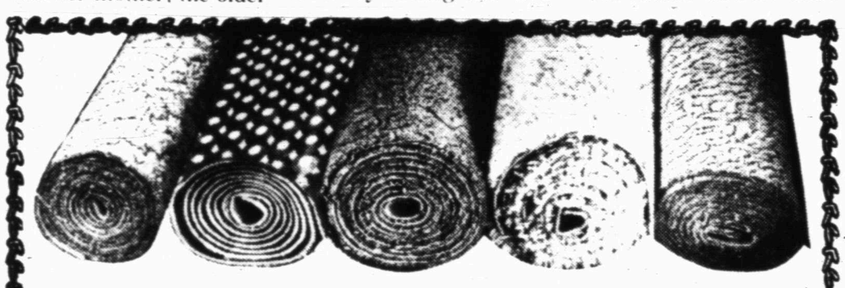

The court said the hearing record contained more than 1,000 pages, and witnesses testified that a Browning-Ferris landfill adjacent to the proposed site emitted an "overpowering stench." They said the garbage attracted rats, flies and stray dogs.

Correspondence from the Texas Air Control Board said the proposed site was a potential source of odors and dust, and a letter from the Texas Department of Water Resources warned of potential damages to surface and sub-surface waters near the site.

Browning-Ferris has the right to appeal today's decision to the Texas Supreme Court.

Walls Come Tumbling Down...

Demolition Experts

PHOENIX, Md. (AP) — Jack Loizeaux is a dentist of urban decay, a Mozart of dynamite, a guru of gravity. Like Joshua, he blows, and the walls come tumbling down.

Over the years he and his two sons have, with exquisitely placed explosives, blasted some notable gaps in the world's skyline. They are wreckers, their works TV spectaculars.

Loizeaux pere or fils, or maybe the mayor, poises at the detonator. Loizeaux reverently invokes the deity, pushes the button and the old landmark where Mom and Dad honeymooned or you dictated your first business letter suddenly takes on a boozy list. Wall sections begin to slide like runaway elevators. Then everything — memories or monument — crashes into a doomsday cloud of dust.

Controlled Demolition Inc. has struck again.

"Anything standing vertically wants to fall," says Loizeaux, a mild, religious (Plymouth Brethren) man with a curling white beard of Hapsburgian distinction. "The Lord made gravity, and if you knock out something's supports, it's got only one way to go — down."

Loizeaux has brought the Lord into gravitational partnership with almost unearthly precision. CDI recently dropped a building at the University of Minnesota Hospital without the least disturbance to electron microscopes and intensive care patients only eight feet away. They toppled a 32-story skyscraper in Sao Palo, Brazil, without ruffling a cathedral next door. They can telescope 300-foot smokestacks, collapsing them in their tracks like altitudinous basketball centers most egregiously fouled.

They are unashamed of what they have unwrought. Age, blight or America's uplifting faith that higher is better have already condemned CDI's victims. "We're not the judge who passed sentence. We're just the guillotiners," says Loizeaux, a disclaimer he quotes frequently to the nostalgic.

When opposition gets too emotional, he brings in Freddie Loizeaux, his wife and mother of the firm's two vice presidents, to soothe the antis with a woman's touch. At least the old girl will go quickly, she says. No lingering death for months from the battering of a wrecker's two-ton "headache" ball. And the departure will, to say the least, be memorable.

Loizeaux, 66, the seventh son of a seventh son, first saw the light of dynamite at his father's knee. He was a Baltimore engineer, who also farmed, transplanting orchard trees with judiciously blasted holes.

As a forestry student at the University of Georgia, Loizeaux further broadened his experience by being allowed to detonate a megablast that straightened out a pesky bend in the Oconee River.

"I was impressed by the awesome power of dynamite. That shot moved more earth than I could in three lifetimes."

His lifetime blasting career started in the late '50s, when he got a call from Washington, D.C. John Foster Dulle's view was offended by some old eight-story apartment buildings next to the State Department.

Loizeaux came, saw and blasted, and a business was born.

Could he handle The Eiffel Tower? "That would be interesting."

"No, you wouldn't do that," interrupts his son Doug, 31, who like his brother Mark and their father is not without architectural sensibilities.

In more than 3,000 jobs CDI has had only one fatality, in an unexplained explosion of 37 sticks of surplus dynamite after a job in Jacksonville in 1973.

The art comes from poking around for years in the guts of old buildings.

"We usually know more about a building than the builder because we can see what time has done," says Mark.

One of the greatest downfalls you'll ever hope to see was the Baker Hotel job in Dallas last year, a whole block of hotel mishmash including wings of 18, 13, 12, 7, 5 and 3 stories plus a 250-foot stack.

Mark spent eight minutes walking around the building in a preliminary appraisal, five minutes more inside. He went down into the basement, counting each step and multiplying by eight inches. The basement could hold the rubble, he calculated, 65,000 tons of it as it turned out.

Southwestern Bell, which was clearing the 55-year-old landmark for a new office tower, was particularly edgy that the blast not upset its adjacent neighbor, Dallas Power and Light.

Per usual, Jack sold the job. CDI's bid of $1 million was a third of the top bidder.

Cables cobwebbed key columns of the Baker so when one part went, it would pull the walls inward after it.

Snyder Man Gets Good Persimmons

Charles C. Cain, a welder who lives east of Snyder on the Roby Highway, has pulled off another horticultural miracle.

This year, Cain managed to get a crop of persimmons from a 6 year old tree in his front yard. According to most folks, persimmons are strictly an east Texas crop, and won't grow at all in arid west Texas. Charles maintains that the secret to the whole deal is plenty of water. The story, however is a bit more complex than that.

With years of practice, Cain has masterd the art of budding and grafting his trees to improve production. Among other hybrid oddities in his front yard is a pecan tree that produces three different types of nuts.

This particular persimmon tree began life six years ago as a wild or native tree from east Texas. After the tree was firmly rooted, Charles obtained some tame wood, again from an east Texas source, and proceeded to graft the new limbs onto his tree. Now, in just two short seasons he is the proud owner of a fine persimmon producing tree.

Cranberry cuttings are planted in a sand bog and flooded until they mature in four to five years. Each winter the bog is reflooded to protect the plants from frost injury.

Unions Begin To Bailout Faltering Companies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Once upon a time, not all that long ago, the idea of unions bailing out faltering companies was almost unthinkable.

Nowadays, it's not only thinkable, it's happening, and labor, business and academic leaders say the trend is likely to increase as more companies sag under the pressure of the economy losing bouyancy.

"Without doubt there are dark days ahead for organized labor," says Jack Blackburn, head of the Labor Studies Center of the University of California at Los Angeles.

"Clearly, a trend is developing, and unless the Reagan administration policies tremendously stimulate the economy, it will spread," adds Michael Kieschnick, director of the California's Office of Economic Policy

Kieschnick suggests that "many workers may find they give up so much in the next decade they will be back where they were in 1970."

One certainty, experts say, is that workers who forgo wage hikes or join stock plans will have more stake in their companies and will work harder — at least initially. The degree to which workers become part of companies' decision-making process may determine how long the harder work — and the higher productivity — will continue.

Richard Daniel, Security Pacific National Bank's senior vice president for special assets, who deals with foundering companies, says union participation can negate apathy among employees.

"Too often, there's no drive, no identification with the company, and the only thing workers think about is getting more money for less work," he says. "If workers have some stake in what they are doing, it is amazing what can occur."

Daniel says in a recent meeting he had to lay down the law with a union from a financially troubled company.

"I told the union representative that if they didn't agree to a 15 percent pay cut and an incentive plan, I didn't see any way the company could get through the current period. We would have to withdraw our financing and the company would go out of business."

Faced with that prospect, the union acceded.

"It sometimes boils down to whether you want 80 or 90 percent of what you have been earning or 100 percent of nothing," adds a union leader, who asked not to be identified.

The most publicized bailouts have been in such basic industries as steel, autos and rubber — all hard pressed by lowpriced imports — and the airline industry, which was reeling under spiraling fuel costs even before the losses suffered from the controllers' strike.

—Retail clerks at the FedMart discount chain accepted a meager pay raise and agreed to work with the company to find ways to economize after looking at the company's books and conceding it needed help.

—In Northern California, construction industry operating engineers agreed to an 18 percent cut in fringe benefits because their companies were unable to compete effectively with nonunion firms.

—Teamsters chief Roy Williams, who weathered the Great Depression of the 1930s, says he would be willing to forgo wage increases in upcoming negotiations with the trucking industry if it would help get laid-off Teamsters back to work. The union currently has 117,000 truckers and dockmen out of work.

—In Ontario, Calif., 1,000 union members are working with the state to determine the feasibility of buying a flatiron-making plant which General Electric says it will shut down next year after 77 years.

—In Pennsylvania, unionists at the Philadephia Bulletin reluctantly agreed to cuts rather than let the paper fold.

—In Pueblo, Colo., 450 of the 500 former employees of a meat-packing plant are seeking to reopen the facility under an employee stock ownership plan, paying for the stock out of future wages.

The cranberry-harvesting technique is to flood the bog in which they grow and churn the water to shake loose the fruit, which is scooped up as it floats to the surface.

Live Music Adds Festivity

WILMETTE, Ill. (AP) — The tradition of entertaining guests with live music, which goes back many centuries, was an option usually for the rich who employed full-time musicians.

That's not the case any more, according to the American Music Conference, which reports there are more than 50 million amateur American musicians of all ages. So finding musical party-goers willing to take part in the entertainment should be no problem, notes Jan Whitlock, director of special services for AMC.

"This holiday season, instead of depending on standard Christmas carol records, you can make your yuletide celebrations even more festive and keep party guests in the proper mood with live music," suggests Ms. Whitlock.

"If you want to bring in musicians to entertain, it doesn't have to be expensive," she points out. "Every community has dozens of young grtoups or solo artists looking for opportunities to use their talents. To find them, just call the local high-school music teacher, university music department or a music store. Also, don't forget to check with neighbors or family members who might enjoy playing before an audience."

Another way of creating a musical party that involves guests is to ask your friends who play to bring along their instruments, she adds. These can be anything from cellos and trumpets to triangles or guitars. Have the musicians practice together for half an hour and once the music starts everyone will want to get into the act by playing and singing along with their favorite holiday songs.

"Plan some holiday-inspired games, such as Name That Carol, or Carol Charades," says Ms. Whitlock, explaining:

To play Name That Carol, have available a wide selection of carols and also suggest that guests bring along their favorite Christmas sheet music. Arrange to have at least one person present who can hum a few bars of the tune, strum a guitar or pick out the notes on a piano.

Players can compete in groups, individually or as a whole and winners are those who name the carol first.

Housewife Wins $10,000 Prize

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Irene Rigby won $10,000 for tracking down 30 seconds of missing music.

Radio station KAYK promised listeners it would provide that reward to anyone who could find it playing less than 51 minutes of music an hour between 9 a.m. and 6 a.m.

Mrs. Rigby, a housewife from Pleasant Grove, said she sat by the radio for the past two months — and passed the time making quilts — waiting for a slip.

Then, Friday night, disk jockey Kidd Kraddick played 50 minutes and 30 seconds of music — and Mrs. Rigby nabbed him. She collected her money Tuesday.

Program manager Jim Sumpter said the station slipped once before and played just 48 minutes of music, but no one had caught them.

On a busy day, visitors eat 5,000 hamburgers, 4,500 hot dogs and a ton of french fries at the Visitors Center at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, according to TWA Services Inc.

Dear Abby

Give Thanks, Give Praise, For We Are Richly Blessed

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: It's Thanksgiving again. A few years ago I wrote a column especially for Thanksgiving. It was so well-received that I was asked to repeat it, and now it's become a tradition. Here it is again:

On this Thanksgiving Day, take a few minutes to think about what you have to be thankful for.

How's your health? Not so good? Well, thank God you've lived this long. A lot of people haven't. You're hurting? Thousands — maybe millions — are hurting more. (Have you ever visited a veterans' hospital? Or a rehabilitation clinic for crippled children?)

If you awakened this morning and were able to hear the birds sing, use your vocal cords to utter human sounds, walk to the breakfast table on two good legs and read the newspaper with two good eyes, praise the Lord! A lot of people couldn't.

How's your pocketbook? Thin? Well, most of the world is a lot poorer. No pensions. No welfare. No food stamps. No Social Security. In fact, one-third of the people in the world will go to bed hungry tonight.

Are you lonely? The way to have a friend is to be one. If nobody calls you, call someone. Go out of your way to do something nice for somebody. It's a sure cure for the blues.

Are you concerned about your country's future? Hooray! Our system has been saved by such concern. Concern for fair play under the law. Your country may not be a rose garden, but it also is not a patch of weeds.

Freedom rings! Look and listen. You can still worship at the church of your choice, cast a secret ballot and even criticize your government without fearing a knock on the head or a knock on the door at midnight. And if you want to live under a different system, you are free to go. There are no walls or fences — nothing to keep you here.

As a final thought, I'll repeat my Thanksgiving Prayer; perhaps you will want to use it at your table today:

O, heavenly Father: We thank thee for food and remember the hungry.

We thank thee for health and remember the sick.

We thank thee for friends and remember the friendless.

We thank thee for freedom and remember the enslaved.

May these remembrances stir us to service

That thy gifts to us may be used for others. Amen.

Have a wonderful Thanksgiving and may God bless you and yours.

Love, ABBY

P.S. Want an instant high? The surest cure for the post-holiday blues is to do something nice for someone. Why not call someone who lives alone and invite him (or her) over for leftovers?

Better yet, call and say, "I'm coming to get you, and I'll see that you get home." (Many older people don't drive, and those who do don't like to go out alone after dark.)

Try it. And let me know the results.

Can't Affirm U.S. Allegations

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A group of chemical warfare experts from the United Nations says it is unable to determine whether Soviet-produced chemical weapons were used in Southeast Asia as the United States alleges.

The four-man panel, which visited refugee camps in Thailand for 10 days at the beginning of the month, said it still has questions about evidence the United States submitted to substantiate charges that chemical weapons have been used in Cambodia and Laos for several years.

Vietnam and Laos have denied the U.S. charges.
