Captain Hawks Completes First Two Laps Of Cross-Country Flight In Glider

Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

Talker received a basket of Bebbs flowers, snapdragons, with the compliments of William F. Kimze, mayor Minneapolis. The flowers were sent to call attention to the opening of the 11th annual flower show in Minneapolis, and their delivery was made possibly by a world wide organization of 5,000 bonded members of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, Inc.

What promised to be a rather tame affair developed into a lively contest when it became known a few days before the city election tomorrow that petitions were in circulation asking the city council for an election to do away with the city manager plan of government. What promised to be a dull election without an issue had one thrust into it. The time, of course, was too short for any review of the results under the city manager plan or any thorough discussion of the issue. The abandonment or the retention of the city manager plan is the real issue in tomorrow's election.

Have you been reading those advertisements that have been appearing in The Sunday Times over the signature of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce? These advertisements are loaded with facts about Wichita Falls, its resources and opportunites. If you will read them you can understand why Wichita Falls has grown, why it can be expected to continue to grow and why business in a period of general depression is better here than in many other cities of the country. Talker believes these advertisements are contributing materially to an improved morale in Wichita Falls.

Wichita Falls is faced with the problem of making more adequate provision for its Junior college. While the problem is immediate it must also be solved for the future. The Junior college is serving too well the young people of this community and section to think of discontinuing it. Talker has confidence that the problem will be solved and solved in a way that will provide a better and a bigger Junior college. Our people have a genius for solving such problems.

Did you ever visit one of those old and settled communities where every need seemed to have been met, where everything was settled and fixed? Of course you have and you surely must have been glad to get back to a town where there were many needs unfilled and problems to be solved. Surely no West Texan would want to live in a town that was finished and complete. It doesn't detract from the desireability of living in Wichita Falls to know that it has many problems to solve and that the people who live here will have to solve them.

Next to Tulsa, Okla., Wichita Falls claims to be the largest independent oil refining center in the world. It supports its claim with figures showing 17 refineries in operation, using 14,900,000 barrels of crude oil yearly and an annual payroll of $2,300,000.

Wichita Falls is also one of the great centers of oil production by independents. More than two-thirds of the district's oil production of more than 100,000 barrels daily is produced by independent operators. The Wichita Falls district is one of the few remaining oil districts where independents predominate and it is because it is one of the few oil districts where the little operator can still operate at a profit.

It's good to see Wichita Falls again taking its place among the leading cities of the state in the issuance of building permits. It's an advertisement to the world that the spirit of enterprise still lives in Wichita Falls and that the people who live here have confidence in its future. We can't expect every week or every month to make as good a showing in this particular as the past week or the past month but we are assured that our record this year will be much better than that of last year.

Did you see that cartoon in Sunday's paper? It pictures two frogs who had gotten into a churn of milk. Try as they could they could not scale the slippery sides. The one, discouraged, said: "Aw, what's the use?" and turned up his toes and died. The other frog, however, kicked and splashed determinedly until he had churned a chunk of butter from which he jumped from the churn. We are going to churn a lot of butter in Wichita Falls this year and everybody might as well make up their minds that they can sit at the top of the churn if they will.

Two hundred and forty acres of the University of Texas oil leases in Ector county sell for a bonus of $173,776. It is fortunate that there have been changes in the law and its administration that permit the university oil lands to be sold for something like they are worth instead of having to be sold for 10 cents an acre as was once the practice.

Narcotic Smuggler To Face Hearing Today

NEW YORK, March 30. (US)—After three days of rigid grilling, Jacob Bloom, alleged wholesale narcotic smuggler, will be arraigned in federal court tomorrow to plead to an indictment against him.

Bloom is held responsible for the importation of $300,000 worth of drugs in two trunks in the Ile de France several weeks ago.

'AIR TRAIN' AT TUCSON AFTER DAY IN CLOUDS

Motorless Craft Towed by Biplane Due to Arrive Here Wednesday

LANDING IS PERFECT

Famous Airman Exhibits Flying Skill in Feat Over Arizona

TUCSON, Ariz., March 30. UP)—After a flight over mountains and treacherous Arizona deserts, Capt. Frank M. Hawks landed his glider Eagle here early tonight, completing the first leg of a transcontinental jaunt from San Diego, Calif., to New York.

Since taking off from San Diego at 7:47 a. m. he had ridden alone in the motorless craft, which was attached by a 500-foot-rope to a tow plane piloted by J. D. Jernigen Jr.

Makes Good Time

Hawks landed at 7:30 p. m. He made the 420-mile flight today in just 17 minutes less than 13 hours after he left San Diego at 7:47 a. m., Pacific standard time. En route, stops were made at Yuma and Phoenix, Ariz.

Cheers came from hundreds of persons, including Indians in native garb, as Hawks dropped his tow cable to the local flying field, released his glider and made his third and final landing of the day.

"Great stuff," Hawks said, as he stepped from the glider. "Might not not be as fast as a regular plane, but it's lots more fun and much easier to ride in."

Half Hour Late

Captain Hawks arrived at the local airport more than 30 minutes late. Darkness had crept over the field, and owners of more than 1,000 automobiles turned on headlights to aid Hawks in landing.

Hawks began the 2,800-mile flight, which he expects to complete in eight days, from Lindbergh field, San Diego, taking off after a delay of three hours because of a heavy fog.

The air train had a lone passenger. He was Wallace Franklin, who rode in the power plane with Jernigan. It was Franklin's brother, Prof. R. E. Franklin, of the University of Michigan, who designed and built the Eaglet, the first cabin glider ever constructed.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 30. (US)—There are 200,000,000 pounds of excess fat on Americans, in the belief of Dr. Eugene Lyman Fiske, medical director of the Life Extension Institute.

Dr. Fiske says so in an article in today's Princetonian. Assuming the population of the United States to be 120,000,000, this means that you are one and three-fourths pounds too heavy.

Follies Beauty, Broken by Dieting, Leaps From Apartment to Death

Allyn King Dies From Injuries; Night of Revelry Ends in Death of Young Girl From Alcoholism

NEW YORK, March 30. (AP)—Allyn King, southern beauty who became a Follies star, died in Bellevue hospital today from injuries suffereed yesterday when she jumped from a window of her bedroom on the fifth floor of an apartment house.

The former actress' death today was unexpected. Yesterday physicians at Bellevue hospital said her arms and legs were broken but that she had escaped more serious internal injury. Early today, however, her condition suddenly became serious and she sank rapidly.

Miss King had suffered a nervous breakdown, relatives said, as a result of continued dieting to keep the slim figure demanded by the stage. She had been a patient in a private sanitarium nearly three years. About 18 months ago she left the sanitarium apparently much improved, and resumed the study of voice, hoping to return to the stage.

The daughter of a physician in Winston-Salem, N. C., she went on the stage when she was 17. One of Ziegfeld's scouts found her singing in a cafe in New Haven, Conn., and she entered the "Follies of 1916." Her rise was rapid and she became prima donna in the "Follies of 1922." She played the lead in "Florida Girl," "Ladies' Night," and "Out in the Night," a Chicago production. At the time of her breakdown she had a contract with the Shuberts.

Army Air Forces To Maneuver in California

MATHER FIELD, Sacramento, Calif., March 30. (AP)—California skies will become battle spaces for 24 days starting Tuesday, as 160 airplanes of the army air corps participate in the most ambitious maneuvers ever planned for them.

The planes with the 200 pilots and 350 enlisted men make up the "blue" provisional wing which is to take over the aerial defense of the state during the three-week period. Their opponents will be a "red" invading force which in theory will already have captured Los Angeles harbor and Monterey bay and pushed its outposts into the San Joaquin valley.

Royalty Owners 'Tear Their Hair' As O. C. Gusher Wastes Wealth

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 30. (AP)—Oklahoma's newest and largest oil and gas gusher continued today to spout its golden burden into the path of a stiff wind that scattered the spray across the countryside at a mounting loss to owners of the well, the Mary Sudik No. 1 of the Indian Territory Illuminating Oil and the Foster Petroleum companies. It came in Wednesday as a dry gasser but later drilled itself in for an initial production estimated at 2,000 to 3,000 barrels of oil an hour and 200,000,000 cubic feet of gas a day.

Scores of workmen have been engaged day and night in efforts to tame the gusher and save the heavy waste of petroleum. The constant danger of ignition from friction or other possible sparks makes the task extremely hazardous and tedious. An attempt to install a master gate still was being made today and workmen hoped to accomplish the task late tonight or tomorrow.

Motorists from all over the state came here to get a glimpse of the spouter.

Royalty owners literally were "tearing their hair" over the situation as they saw the golden spray dissipating and evaporating in the wind. Due to the heavy gas content, little of the oil was salvaged in nearby pools and it was out of the question to consider catching the highly volatile fluid as the wind whipped it into the distance.

Scores of persons who made their homes on the windward side of the gusher, south of the field, have been obliged to evacuate their houses and the oil companies are paying their expenses in Oklahoma City hotels. Damage to the oil drenched homes must be paid, as well as damage to farms in the path of the spray.

COLEMAN BANK HEAD PASSES

Famous Pioneer Cowman, 70, Dies on Ranch

COLEMAN, Texas, March 30. (AP)—J. C. Dibrell, 70, president of the First National bank of Coleman and also the Coleman County Fair association, died today at his ranch home near Echo, near here.

He was born in 1860 at Hallettsville, Texas, and came to Coleman from Galveston in 1883, since that time becoming actively interested in the business and civic life of Coleman.

He owned the land on which the Gwinnup oil pool was discovered several years ago and always had been an admirer and advocate of fine cattle.

The Dibrell Herefords are known all over Texas. He had a display at the recent Fort Worth exposition and fat stock show and also was actively interested in the sheep and goat business.

Judge Spanks Boys For Minor Offenses

EMPORIA, Kan., March 30. (UP)—When Wilford Riegle, Lyon county's youthful probate judge heard parents of three boys had not spanked them for misdemeanors which brought them into his court, he decided they needed one.

So Saturday, he turned two of the youths over a table and spanked them soundly after finding them guilty of truancy. The third was spanked for general mischievousness.

RESCUE SQUADS PROBE FOR 16 ENTOMBED MEN

Mine Experts Brave Death In Desperate Fight For Comrades

HOPE GROWS FAINT

Searchers Only 200 Feet From Victims Trapped After Blast

KETTLE ISLAND, Ky., March 30. (AP)—Rescue crews, fighting carbon monoxide that made short shifts necessary, tonight had reached within 200 feet of where they believed 16 men, trapped by an explosion yesterday in the Pioneer Coal company mine, are entombed.

The workers expected to reach the men early tomorrow but feared only dead bodies would be found.

Expert Directs Rescue

John Daniel, Kentucky state mine inspector, directed the squads. Under him was what experts at the mine called the finest assembly of skilled rescue men ever gathered for rescue efforts in this section.

The mine, which goes back for miles into the interior of the great mountain that overshadows this camp, is all there is to Kettle Island, and any disaster that threatens death to 16 of the few hundreds who live here strikes at every person in the community.

No sooner had news of the explosion spread than groups of miners gathered at the entrance yesterday afternoon. Soon they were joined by another group, the families of the entombed. Only one of the 16 was without a family, and he was a boy of 17. Several of them were foremen. Most of the others were coal loaders, and the remainder were men employed in maintaining the ventilating and bracing systems of the mine.

Many Escape Blast

Ordinarily many more than the 16 would have been trapped, but Saturday afternoon the mine did not operate full force, and only 20 were inside when the explosion occurred from some cause still undetermined.

Most of the experts attributed it to a gas or dust explosion, caused possibly by a mishap as one of the men blasted a shelf of coal.

The one hope held for them was that some or all might have got together and erected temporary walls of lumber and air-tight cloth provided in constructing the mine, in order to exclude the foul air which follows explosions.

Gunmen Add New Peril To Tiny Golf Course

LOS ANGELES, March 30. (UP)—As though there aren't enough natural perils on a golfing green, bandits took a hand today to give early morning habitues a thrill on a local miniature course.

Gordon Page, manager, was watching from his office and perhaps smiling at the efforts of a half dozen dubs. Then an automobile containing six men pulled up at the side of the road.

But when each man could cover two or three greens the leader shouted a signal and each bandit whipped out a revolver. The surprised players were ordered to drop their clubs and lie down. They did. Then the bandits took $25 from Page in the office and fled.

Texas Guinan Faces Busy Twelve Weeks

NEW YORK, March 30. (US)—"Have I any plans? Say, I've got more plans than an architect."

That was what Tex Guinan said today when she arrived from Chicago where, after a rather exciting season, she witnessed a shooting affray in her night club which provided, she said, "more fireworks than at any other sendoff I ever enjoyed."

La Guinan and her "gang" will appear April 28 at the Capitol theater and after other appearances for 12 weeks in theaters of this city, they will leave for London and Paris. She intends to open a night club in New York in September.

Sothern Better After Collapse in Theater

DENVER, Colo., March 30. (UP)—Condition of E. H. Sothern, veteran Shakespearian actor who collapsed during his closing performance at the Denham theater here last night, was reported improved tonight by his physician, Dr. Sherman Williams.

Sothern, who is 71, was portraying a scene in Hamlet when he was stricken with an attack of acute indigestion. He apologized to the audience and retired to the wings. After an examination by Doctor Williams, the famous actor was taken from the theater to his hotel in an ambulance.

College Girls Urged To Dance in Chorus

EVANSTON, Ill., March 30. (UP)—One way for the college girl to attain success after schooldays is to become a chorus girl, Florence S. Robnett, dean of women at Northwestern university, believes, after seeing some of them in action. "It isn't improper any more to be in a chorus, but the girls shouldn't dance until their legs give out," she said, "rather use it as a stepping stone."

Death Halts Dancing As Schooner Tears Hole In Crowded Pleasure Vessel

VANCOUVER, Wash., March 30. (US)—Four dead, four missing and believed dead, 60 injured. The toll of dead may run higher.

That was the tragic story today of the ramming of the excursion barge, Swan, carrying hundreds of merrymakers from the Longview bridge opening, in the Columbia river last midnight.

With 286 passengers, the Swan was struck by the lumber schooner Davenport as the gay men and women danced to waltz music by a United States army band.

Passengers in Panic

The crash threw scores into the swirling waters of the Columbia as panic stalked the decks of the darkened, careening barge.

The dead: Mrs. Nettie Dee Hagedorn, 63, Vancouver; J. E. Larson, prominent Vancouver Mason and florist; Mrs. Stanley Stone and G. E. Lundy, Vancouver.

Missing: Richard Belland, 14, son of Capt. R. J. Belland of the Swan; Lee Seigle, Vancouver; Sergeant Don Walker, Vancouver barracks; an unidentified man last seen falling overboard.

Sixty Injured

The 60 injured were rushed to hospitals by ambulances and private automobiles, or were given emergency treatment for injuries ranging from severe bruises to broken bones.

As none of the passengers were registered, and only 286 out of the 377 who left on the Swan for the bridge celebration returned, accounting is difficult. It is believed a careful check may result in an increase of the missing.

In tow of the tugboat Dix, which was capsized, the Swan met disaster about 15 miles west of here. The Vancouver barracks band was playing a waltz, and nearly all aboard were dancing when the Davenport rammed the Swan.

Lights Go Out

The Swan was instantly thrown into darkness and as it tipped over on its side the passengers madly scrambled in the opposite direction to right it. They succeeded only in throwing it into another dangerous list. Eleven times the terrified passengers rushed in a body from one side to the other before they finally spread out in such a manner that the barge regained an even keel.

Great Hole Torn

The crash tore a gaping hole in the side of the double-decked pleasure boat. Only extraordinary skill and good fortune kept the crippled craft from plunging to the bottom with her helpless human cargo.

The Davenport's crew got alongside and made fast with hawsers before then Swan sank lower than awash of her bottom deck. The pleasure boat's two lifeboats were immediately lowered and dozens of persons who had been thrown into the river or had jumped overboard in terror were rescued from the floating wreckage. It is not yet known how many were drowned or carried away in the swift current.

Larson was drowned in saving the life of Dan DuBois, 30, of Orchards. DuBois was badly injured and was among those rescued by the lifeboat crew.

Young Belland was ill in a berth of the Dix and is believed to have gone down with the tug without a chance to fight for his life. Mrs. Hagedorn died an hour after being rescued from the water.

Body Found in Pecos Tentatively Identified

FORT WORTH, March 30. (AP)—The nude body of a man with a bullet wound in his heart and another in his head found Tuesday in the Pecos river near Fort Stockton, Texas, was believed to be that of H. M. Polan, of Plentywood, Mont., who was in Fort Worth from Feb. 18 to March 11, according to identification announced today by Deputy Sheriff H. W. Hawks.

Identification was made by several local persons from a photographed sent by W. P. Rooney, sheriff of Fort Stockton. Polan spent much of his time while in Fort Worth at a recreation club.

Convicts At State Farm Make Beer

HOUSTON, March 30. (AP)—Even the convicts in the Texas penitentiary are making beer and getting "soused" in prison.

But not under official auspices declared J. O. Jacks, guard at the Wynne state farm, who helped raid the tuberculosis department of the prison Sunday and found four gallons of beer.

"It has created a bad situation," Jacks asserted. "The tuberculosis patients have revolted and refuse to take their medicine. But we cannot permit beer making or beer drinking in prison, you know."

He said the man had been using potato peelings, yeast, and "left overs" from their meals to make the beer and were brewing it in old medicine bottles and jugs.

Ringleaders have been transferred to "the walls" at Huntsville and placed in solitary confinement.

UPSHAW RAPS LIQUOR TRADE

Education in Observance of Law Urged Here

Eloquent pleas for more comprehensive educational programs in support of prohibition and scathing denunciation of both "dispensers and drinkers" of bootleg liquor pointed the address of Congressman W. D. Upshaw of Georgia which was delivered Sunday afternoon before a crowd which filled the main auditorium of the First Baptist church.

Leaning first upon his crutch, then resting upon a table as his animated delivery continued without lapse; diminutive in stature but aggressive in bearing despite his physical ailment; red-headed both in fact and in style of thought, Mr. Upshaw exhibited to his audience Sunday afternoon the fire and oratory which have gained for him title of "the most amazing man in congress."

Idealism Urged

The discourse delivered by the famous leader of the "drys" made a two-fold plea for more attention to building a higher degree of idealism and moral principle into the coming generation of voters, and for faithful compliance with the constitution of the United States.

"Young people of today ask the question 'Shall we go into politics?' because they have heard much and seen some of the corruption supposed to permeate that part of our national life, and which is all too prevalent. I urge you to consider your active participation in politics as much an obligation as a privilege. But, before entering upon a political career, go into a room by yourself and hold serious communion with the person who faces you from your mirror; then hold conference with the God of your creation, and with the Christ of your

Victims Identify Shipment Of Beverage Seized by Officials

MINISTER STRICKEN

Two Women and Boy of 14 Included in Sufferers At Lakeview

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, March 30.—With around 40 Hall county residents suddenly stricken with the "jake paralysis" which has swept sections of the country during the last several weeks, the sheriff's department Sunday pressed investigations which began with the seizure of a 144-bottle case of the suspected liquor awaiting delivery at the express office here.

Four of the 40 victims dragged themselves to the sheriff's office to identify the captured shipment as containing the same liquid which occasioned their illness. Sheriff F. A. Christian and Contsable J. D. May, who have been conducting the probe since the epidemic assumed serious proportions, believe they have traced the source of the poison to a drug store in a rural community thought to have been bootlegging the "jake."

Druggist Leaves

The former manager of the store abruptly sold his holdings and disappeared immediately after the first paralysis was reported, Constable May declared. It was when the new proprietor refused to accept the shipment at the express office that the case was seized by the state, the officer explained. The 144 bottles are being held for federal authorities at Amarillo who will continue the inquiry. An analysis will be made to determine the nature of the poisoning.

Meanwhile law enforcement officers here are watching all drug stores and drug shipments to intercept any further supply of the dangerous drink. No arrests have yet been made.

Minister Stricken

Among the victims of the "jake" are reported two women, a 14-year-old boy, and a minister. The min-

Hambone's Meditations

Jailed Spinster Stays by Her Guns While Interest in 'Dry Martyr' Flags

PAMPA, Texas, March 30. (UP)—The lack of interest of Pampa citizens in her cause, tonight failed to dampen the spirits of Beulah Allred, middle-aged spinster whose crusade for prohibition has led her to the county jail.

Miss Allred was charged with possession and transportation of liquor when, waving a pint flask of whisky, she strode down the main street enlisting men and women in her cause. Placed in the county jail, she asked the city commission to clean her cell and refused to make bond.

Although the huge "W. C. T. U. headquarters" sign hung over the door of her cell drooped a bit tonight and Pampa citizens refused to take her arrest seriously, Miss Allred refused to become discouraged.

"I've been fighting liquor here for two years. What if I do have to stay in jail two weeks, even two months? If it helps my cause, that's all I ask," she said stroking the back of her pet kitten who shares her cell and her food.

Prominent persons have offered to go Miss Allred's bond but she still refuses aid.

"Police Chief Downs had me arrested and I intend to stay here until he frees me and admits that he had no just cause for locking me in here," she told two wealthy ranchers who came and offered aid.

LEAP FATAL TO STAGE BEAUTY

Allyn King Succumbs to Her Injuries

and mysterious, crept in to seize pretty Gladys Grant and leave an enigma for police.

She was found, devoid of clothing, red marks on her throat, flung across a bed. Scantily clad women went screaming to the street and aroused the neighborhood.

Police immediately seized the girls closest friend, James Boyce, who was thought to have been the last to leave. But while they were questioning him, Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner, viewing the body, expressed the opinion the girl, 24, had died of acute alcoholism.

It was an elaborate party. There were nine women, nine men. Boyce told police he bought the liquor, 14 bottles for $12. And just before the party began, Miss Grant told N. N. Weiss, architect, who lived next door:

"I'm giving a birthday party, and I don't know where I'm going to wind up when it's over."

Her body is in the morgue. There will be an autopsy.

Interesting to police was the discovery in the basement apartment of a card: "Rev. John T. Prout, No. 34 East Seventy-sixth street."

Prout is a former clergyman, reputed wealthy, who was brought into the limelight by the openly voiced threats of Rachel A. Fredericks, who said she was his secretary for nine years, to sue him for $100,000, alleging breach of promise. While Miss Fredericks was announcing her intention, Alma Dowling, southern beauty, defended Prout stanchly, insisting his home was the gathering place of a cult of culture.

About 10 days ago, Miss Dowling disappeared, and nothing was heard of the southern beauty until she was found in a taxicab, moaning, having taken poison. She is now in Bellevue hospital.

Miss Fredericks said today she knew the dead girl, Miss Grant, and that she had been a frequent caller on Prout.

Auto Wrecks to Claim 4,000 Lives in 2 Months

CHICAGO, March 30. (UP)—Some 4,000 Americans will lose their lives in automobile mishaps in the next months and 140,000 others will suffer injuries from the same cause, the automotive research foundation estimated here tonight.

"At this season of the year the number of automobiles on the streets and highways increase materially," said a bulletin released by the foundation. "Motorists drive faster than in the winter months when snow and ice on pavements make this cautious. This is why the checking of brakes at this season is vital."

LOS ANGELES, March 30. (UP)—Indictment of persons high in business, official and financial circles on charges growing out of the wrecking of the Julian Petroleum corporation three years ago has been promised for the coming week by District Attorney Buron Fitts.

Ripley Character Visits Wichita

Champion Hitch-Hiker Tells of Travels

One of Robert L. Ripley's "Believe It or Not" cartoons in the flesh ambled into Wachita Falls Sunday afternoon and furnished his own proof of the authenticity of the artist's statements. He was Ralph K. Bradford, 31, a deaf mute, formerly of Indianapolis, Ind., but for the last seven years a hitch hiker over all of the 48 states and three European nations, with news clippings from most of the towns he has visited to show he has traveled more than 32,000 miles alone.

Ripley's famous cartoons appear daily in The Record News. Readers will remember having seen a few days ago a sketch of Bradford trudging off the miles with a knapsack on his back and the explanation that he had hitch hiked more than 30,000 miles.

Stricken with paralysis at the age of three, he attended the Indiana state school for the deaf for 15 years, graduating with the class of 1923. He is unable to use his right hand and can converse only by scribbling with his left. His worldwide hiking tour resulted from the advice of physicians who told him they had no hope for him unless he lived a life in the open.

When he struck Wichita Falls, he was wearing a French helmet which was given to him in Paris last summer by a French war veteran, Capt. Louis LaVerne. He made a promise to wear the hemet across the United States and has kept his word.

Bradford has hiked over the soil of the British isles, crossed the Atlantic and even poked about a bit in the Hawaiian islands, where his story appeared in Chinese characters. Even Central American countries and the Panama canal have come under his feet. Blizzards, storms, desert winds and almost every other kind of weather have found him trudging onward, undaunted by hardship and determined to maintain his health in spite of the gloomy outlook of the doctors.

In his hiking, he accepts rides when they are offered. The longest he ever obtained was from Jacksonville to New Orleans back in 1927. On one occasion he got a "lift" from Rochester to Syracuse, N. Y., in an "extra" plane on a test flight of an airline company.

When informed The Record News carried Ripley's cartoons, his face covered with smiles and he scribbled, "Die 'Recordal' Neura ist un goot waffer," meaning, of course, "The Record News is a good paper."

Two Davidsons May Swell Number Of Gubernatorial Candidates to Fourteen

Latest Corrected "Score Card" Shows Even Dozen in Great July Democratic Sweepstakes

By R. W. BERRY
Associated Press Staff Writer

AUSTIN, March 30.—Twelve candidates for governor already in the Democratic race, rumors had it the list was not closed by any means. There were reports the two Davidsons—Lynch of Houston and T. W. of Marshall—both former lieutenant governors and both candidates for governor in the primary of 1924, would make formal announcements of their candidacies soon.

The Davidsons ran neck and neck Lynch receiving 141,208 votes and T. W. 125,011, the former being third from top and only 5,216 votes behind Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, who went into the run-off and won the nomination from Felix D. Robertson of Dallas. In the 1926 primary, Lynch Davidson was a candidate and again rain third, Governor Moody receiving as many votes as Davidson and Mrs. Ferguson, seeking renomination, combined.

List of Candidates

The latest, corrected list for candidates for governor: Oscar F. Holcombe of Houston, former mayor; E. G. Senter of Dallas, state senator; Thomas B. Love of Dallas, state senator, former national committeeman and one of the leaders of the movement within the party to bolt the presidential nominee in 1928; Miss Katie Daffan of Ennis, active in work of the United Daughters of the Confederacy; Barry Miller of Dallas, lieutenant governor for six years and former state senator; T. N. Mauritz of Ganado, member of the house of representatives and advocate of an income tax; W. Gregory Hatcher of Dallas, state treasurer for six years; Charlton Brown of Mineral Wells, mayor; James Young of Kaufman, former congressman; Earle B. Mayfield of Austin, former United States senator and former member of the railroad commission; James E. Ferguson of Austin, former governor and husband of former Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson, Texas' first woman chief executive, and Fred B. Robinson of Waco, former newspaper publisher.

In this connection it is interesting to list candidates for other state offices. Next to governor, lieutenant governor, the attorney general's place and the office of commissioner of agriculture are attracting the most aspirants.

Lieutenant Governor

Candidates for lieutenant governor are James P. Rogers of Houston; J. D. Parnell of Wichita Falls; W. H. Bledsoe of Lubbock; Virgel E. Arnold of Houston; Sterling P. Strong of Dallas and H. L. Darwin of Paris.

R. L. Bobbitt of Laredo, filling out the unexpired term of Attorney General Claude Pollard is a candidate and others seeking the office are Representative Cecil Storey of Vernon; J. V. Allred of Wichita Falls; Joe Burkett of San Antonio, and Ernest Becker of Dallas. Storey was a member of the house for eight years. Allred was a candidate in 1926 and lacked only a few hundred votes of topping Attorney General Pollard, and Burkett is a former state senator and a former member of the state highway commission.

Officers Jail Man In Theft of Poultry

Barney Stout, arrested in Walters, Okla., on a charge of theft in connection with the stealing of a large number of chickens, was brought to Wichita Falls late Sunday by Sheriff W. G. Bralley to answer similar charges here. He was placed in the county jail.

A companion, arrested in Walters with Stout, was tried, convicted and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary by an Oklahoma court, Mr. Bralley said. Stout was held for Wichita county officers so that his trial could be held in Texas. He is charged specifically with burglarizing a hen house on the Burkburnett highway near here.

CAFE ROBBED

Thieves took 10 cartons of cigarets from the Evans cafe, 602 Burnett street, Saturday night, according to a report made to police Sunday morning. Entrance was made through the back of the building.

Chicago police found George M. Sunday, 36, son of Billy Sunday, famous evangelist, floundering in a snowdrift and arrested him. He was held for Los Angeles police on a charge preferred by his wife.

Swiftest, Easiest Way to End Bilious Spell

When you neglect those first symptoms of constipation—bad breath, coated tongue, listlessness, the whole system soon suffers. Appetite lags. Digestion slows up. You become headachy, dizzy, bilious.

It's easy to correct sluggish bowel action! Take a candy Cascaret tonight. See how quickly—and pleasantly—the bowels are activated. All the souring waste is gently propelled from the system. Regular and complete bowel action is restored.

Cascarets are made from pure cascara, a substance which doctors agree actually strengthens bowel muscles. All drug stores have Cascarets, 10c.—Adv.

ister protests that he had not had any of the liquor, but physicians assert that his symptoms are identical with those of the other sufferers, the officers declared.

The epidemic is at its worst at Lakeview, 12 miles from Memphis. There many imbibers are without the use of their legs. Some are forced to crawl about. Others use crutches. The malady extends in some cases into the hands, the officers were told. A number of victims are believed to be in a serious condition.

Cases have been reported in Brice, Leslie, Estelline, Turkey and Newland, as well as in Lakeview and Memphis. Physicians declare that other cases from the original source may yet develop, explaining that the illness sometimes does not show itself until a month after the poison is taken into the system.

Special to The Record News

AMARILLO, Texas, March 30.—"Jake paralysis" has appeared in scattered cases in and around Amarillo according to reports reaching health authorities here. Only one case has developed at Amarillo, but two are reported from Lubbock and several from neighboring towns. Both federal and state authorities are initiating a widespread investigation of the sources of the malady.

"BLISTER LIQUOR" FOUND ON COAST

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30. (US)—Bootleg liquor of a new and highly poisonous type has made its appearance in San Francisco during the past 10 days, it was revealed today in reports of the clinic conducted at the Canon Kip community house.

Virulent in its action, the new liquor causes an almost immediate outbreak of blisters on the hands, arms and faces of its victims, later spreading to the feet. Blackening of the interior of the mouth follows imbibing the powerful new type of outlaw alcohol.

Upshaw Scores Liquor Traffic

redemption. Go into politics with the determination to go to your grave unhonored and unsung, perhaps unknown, rather than surrender one single moral principle to any man for his vote."

Europe draws her ideas of the United States' prohibition largely from tourists, many of whom have the unrestricted use of liquor as one of their chief aims in going overseas, the speaker said.

"I find the English language bankrupt," he continued, "as I draw a sight-draft for an expression to convey my pulverizing contempt for a man who, because of bootleg dollars in his pocket, a bootleg appetite under his belt, or a bootleg vote in his ballot box, seeks to pour rotten liquor upon the flag which our children are taught, and wish, to regard as the most beautiful, and the cleanest flag on earth. A man who puts his appetite above the constitution will, nine times out of 10, defend the bootlegger who is the enemy of both your home and your constitution. For that reason, no liquor-drinking man should be elected to any public office."

Referring to his own designation by politicians as "driest of the drys" Mr. Upshaw declared that there can be no comparative and superlative degrees in the present quality of "dryness."

Urges Education

"Either you are dry, or you are not," he exclaimed. "Some call me extreme, telling me they approve of prohibition, but 'don't want to be extreme.' In this case there is no such thing as an extreme view. Who of you would deposit your money with a banker who was not 'extremely honest?' How long would a teller hold his job in your bank if he said he approved of honesty, but did not want to be 'extreme' in that quality? Is it sufficient for you to say to your wife, to your community, to your government, that you believe in being reasonably decent and clean?"

Citing the expenditure of $1,600,000,000 in the past 10 years by the United States government in teaching better methods of producing better farm crops against the expenditure of $50,000 for education in support of prohibition, the speaker urged the necessity of teaching the young people of the country to practice prohibition as a result of their own moral and intellectual equipment. Children in the public schools are being pointed, Mr. Upshaw said, to the following recent declaration of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh: "I am thankful that among the thousands of gifts which have been showered upon me during the past three years, no one has presented me with a hip-flask or a cocktail shaker." The intensive education of children now being pressed by the Anti-Saloon league and allied agencies should have been started 12 years ago, he said.

Congressman Upshaw was introduced by Dr. O. L. Powers, pastor of the First Baptist church. He spoke before the Men's Bible class of the same church Sunday morning, at the First Methodist church at Iowa Park at 11 a. m., and at the First Presbyterian church at 7:30 p. m.

Throughout the world friends of music are alive to the cultural menace of Canned Music in Theatres. Even the governments of England, France, Spain and Italy are considering measures to prevent this artistic debasement.

American music lovers have chosen the popular and democratic course—that of registering public demand through the Music Defense League.

What if theatrical interests are momentarily deaf to all considerations save profits gained through false economy? They will heed the voice of the public when that voice attains a sufficiently compelling volume. For the public must be served.

Bearden Suit to Open In Graham Court Today

Oil property valued at several million dollars is involved in a suit brought against the Texas company and several other defendants by Lee O. Bearden, adjudged legally dead several years ago, which will go to trial Monday at a special term of the 30th district court at Graham.

Bearden returned to Young county after more than seven years' absence, during which time he was declared legally dead. He claims in his suit a child's share in the estate left by his father. Oil was discovered on the property after the father's death and Bearden also claims a portion of the oil produced in the last several years.

Bearden's former wife is one among several intervenors. She has sued to protect the interests of her child by her former husband should he be granted judgment by the court.

An exchange of benches will place Judge P. A. Martin of the 89th district court here in the Graham court in the place of Judge Allan D. Montgomery of the 30th district.

WHY APPETITE LEAVES HOME

Lack of Vitamin B Causes Loss of Interest

By WOLF LARSON

CHICAGO, March 30. (UP)—Why appetities leave home was revealed today to the federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, concluding its annual meeting at the University of Chicago.

Vitamin B was revealed as the reason for appetite. It seems that wherever vitamin B goes appetite goes trailing along. It was shown that when the vitamin fails to appear at the table appetite falls likewise to show up.

Lack of one of two vitamins, B or G, was believed responsible for inducing anorexia, as loss of appetite is properly known, when the detective work was started, Prof. George R. Cowgill of Yale university, explained to the gathering of biologists who have been exploring life most of the week.

The discovery was made through experiments with dogs which first were fed a diet lacking vitamin G, valued as an anti-pellagra substance.

Denied vitamin B, the dogs lost all interest in life and food, paid no attention to prowling cats, fell off weight and developed neuritic symptoms. All of those symptoms were put to flight however when the vitamin was furnished them. Cats again became their eternal quarry as the appetite stimulating vitamin was placed in their food, which lo longer went untouched.

Vitamin G was eliminated as a causative factor when it failed either to drive away appetite or bring it back.

Vitamin B travels in the company of unrefined grains, such as whole wheat, unpolished rice and other crude cereals. When these grains are dressed up and husked of their rough exteriors, B refuses further association with them. Both B and G vitamins are found in fresh fruits and vegetables.

Worth More Than A World of Money

Since Taking Argotane Wichita Woman Is Now Able to Do Her Housework With Ease

"I would rather be well and happy like I am since taking Argotane than have all the money in the world," declared Mrs. Rosie Coe of 2115 Ave. C, Wichita Falls, Texas.

"Before I took Argotane," continued Mrs. Coe, "I had stomach trouble and headaches so bad that it just simply racked my whole nerve center. My stomach was in such a bad condition that I could hardly digest anything. The gas on my stomach would cause intense pains in my sides and oftentimes such palpitation of the heart that I could hardly stand it. I was extremely nervous, my breath was short and I felt miserable all the time.

"My son advised me to take Argotane and at the time I started it I really did not feel like doing my own housework. The headaches and stomach pains have all left me and I can eat a good hearty meal and never have a sign of indigestion. I am not the least nervous any more, sleep like a child every night and am as well as I ever was. I can't find words to express my thankfulness for what Argotane has done; it is nothing short of wonderful."

Genuine Argotane may be bought in Wichita Falls at the Allison Drug store.—Adv.

COAT WRECKED

MILWAUKEE, March 30. (UP)—When Marie Jackson gets out of the county jail, some time in the distant future, she will have a nice leather coat, even if it is too small for her. Her fur coat went through the laundry, as all prisoners' clothing does, and it came out minus fur and just half as big as it was before.

She Can't tell the Truth

It happens every month, but its very regularity makes excuses the more embarrassing. What a pity all women harassed by painful periods have not learned to depend on Midol!

A tiny tablet of Midol ends menstrual pain in five to seven minutes. Not even discomfort need now be experienced at such times. Your first trial of this marvelous product of specialists will prove the truth of this glorious news. Midol is not a narcotic and is perfectly harmless to use, but it acts directly on the organs affected and relieves completely and immediately in even severest cases. And Midol costs but fifty cents! You will find it at any drug store in handy little carrying case of aluminum that will tuck away in the smallest purse or pocket.—Adv.

SHOULDER BONE SECRETS TOLD

Psychiatrist Makes Study of Types of Blades

CLEVELAND, March 30. (AP)—The type of shoulder blade a person possesses may hold secrets of considerable value in the study of those factors underlying his health, the length of his life and his adaptability.

This is the belief today of Dr. William W. Graves, professor and director of the department of neuropsychiatry, St. Louis university school of medicine, who is examining blades and other bones in what is said to be the largest and most complete collection of human skeletons in the world conserved in the Hamann museum, Western Reserve university school of medicine.

Blades Classified

He has classified shoulder blades according to the contour of their vertebral-borders which lie adjacent to the spinal column.

He had found that the borders of shoulder blades in all accessible races of man, whether ancient or modern are readily classifiable into convex, straight and concave types. The three types are found before birth as well as in subsequent life.

Studying these three types, Doctor Graves discovered the straight and concave predominate in frequency of occurrence in the young, whereas the convex predominate in frequency of occurrence in the old.

"From my own studies, of the living, when chosen at random, in various periods of life from birth to old age, approximately 65 per cent in the first 10 years of life are possessors of the straight and concave, whereas only 35 per cent are possessors of the convex. In people, similarly chosen, beyond 65 years of age, 35 per cent have straight or concave and 65 per cent convex."

One Explanation

Seeking corroboration and explanation of these findings, which Doctor Graves said are unparalleled by any other feature of man's makeup, he and other workers have found supporting evidence for only one explanation. This is "that a larger number of possessors of straight and concave than of convex types are among persons unduly susceptible to disease, the sick, and the shorter lived individuals of the race."

During 20 years, while Doctor Graves has had several hundred individuals of various ages under continuous observation, he has found that the shoulder blade type in each individual remains unchanged, regardless of disease, glandular function, occupation, or a natural process of growth or advancing age.

He has found that the "plus potentially sick," in the broadest sense such as the feeble minded, the insane, the tubercular and the groups classified as criminal, show relatively large percentages of straight and concave shoulder blades than groups considered healthy and normal.

Constant Heredity

Doctor Graves said that aside from the commonly observed physical characteristics of races, there is no physical characteristic more constantly transmitted by heredity than a shoulder blade type.

"Obviously, a shoulder blade type cannot have a greater significance for the individual than his heredity," Doctor Graves said. "The part is never greater than the whole, nor the whole greater than the sum of all its parts. Therefore, whatever type a person may possess he has probably gotten it from his ancestors and whatever type or any other inherited feature he may have, it is a cause neither for elation nor depression."

THE ANTIDOTE FOR DOTAGE

Daily Editorial

THE fool theory that men appreciably lose mental and physical vigor as they enter fifties, will please note that George F. Baker is "doing business as usual," on his 90th birthday—and with no apparent loss of hair or anything under it.

The field on the other side of Doctor Osler's ridiculous deadline is just as fertile as the first half century of life.

Germany's two greatest field marshals, Von Moltke and Hindenberg, didn't show best lines of goods until they were past three-score-and-ten.

No one has yet observed any body creaks or rattling bolts in the menagenarian decisions of Supreme Court Justice Holmes.

And the brainpan of Thomas Edison is sizzling as hot with original ideas as when first fired by inspiration.

The increasing weight or responsibilities has neither bent Mr. Baker's back nor judgment. He remains active captain of one of the mightiest banks and private fortunes in the world. His eyesight may be falling, but the panic of '29 disclosed an undimmed financial vision.

Aphorism and experience concur in the opinion that it requires a more alert wit to retain wealth than create it.

But the popular presumption that money is a self-prepetuating force and will indefinitely reproduce in kind, without the same cultivating energy that earned it, isn't so. Shrewdness, vigilance and verification of fact are the only locks to hold property intact from the thieving fingers of dissipation and mismanagement.

Players who retire from big games, and relinquish stacks to the seats to substitutes, always risk their chips.

The heirs of going concerns are apt to subject their assets to speculative risk and gambling chances.

Which explains why so many of our rich men's sons wind up in grandfather's shirt sleeves.

THE Vanderbilts and Astors are such exceptions to that general rule that their unaverage example all the more confirms it.

The secret of their continuing affluence is revealed by the presence of family members in the executive personnel or directorships of every corporation in which their funds are heavily invested.

Thorough jobs are never done by proxy. Stick to your knitting as long as you can hold the needles. Hired fingers inevitably drop some stitches.

Fundamental training and hard sense are not easily entailed.

Paul Morton, when president of the Santa Fe, changed his mind about the qualifications of a possible successor after a certain inspection tour with that promising young man.

They were riding through Kansas during a late spring snowstorm. Morton pointed to the blanketed fields and asked his companion what he saw out there.

The other official answered, "I see snow."

"I see unexpected moisture and the probability of bumper grain crops," said Morton.

Most of us never look below the surface and consequently can't estimate what's likely to happen.

Mr. Baker is also a student of storms and root action.

His thoughts are full of cause and effect, instead of retrospect. He stays fit by exercising with a drum-major's baton, while thousands of his juniors prematurely wither on the sidelines of action.

Ponce de Leon went off on the wrong scent; had he searched himself, he would have discovered the fountain of youth bubbling above his neck-ruff.

The antidote for dotage lies in "keeping everlastingly at it."

We Can Flee From Others, But We Must Live With Ourselves

ROMANCE that was stranger than fiction came clattering over the newspaper telegraph wires just at edition time the other day. Dispatches from far-off Austria brought the news that Dr. Ernest Watzl and his pretty secretary with whom he had eloped had been found dead in a Vienna hotel, victims of a suicide pact.

The "plot" was one that would drive an author or a movie scenario writer into ecstasies . . . Dr. Ernest Watzl, prominent Cleveland, Ohio, chemist, artist and clubman . . . disappeared mysteriously last fall on business trip to Philadelphia . . . his wrecked and burned auto found in rural Pennsylvania, footprints leading therefrom to a nearby river . . . several thousand dollars in his pocket, theories of robbery and murder . . . mystery, oblivion . . . and then evidence hinting that Dr. Watzl still lived.

Next, the subsequent and equally mysterious disappearance of Dr. Watzl's pretty young secretary and art model . . . and she was married, too, leaving a husband just as he had left a wife . . . and her young husband's suit for divorce.

Months, and no trace of either of them . . . hints that they were in South America . . . where they could be alone together . . . strange rumors that both were dead . . . mystery seemingly impenetrable, utterly baffling.

And then the discovery of two bodies in a Vienna hotel . . . a middle-aged man and a pretty girl . . . bullets from an Austrian army revolver through the hearts of each . . . notes left behind to identify them, letters explaining the futility of their ill-starred romance to their friends back home.

Dead in each other's arms, four thousand miles from home . . . a climax to a tragic adventure in defiance of convention.

This story was its own editorial. It needed no embellishment to present a conclusion or point a moral. Such was already there.

Dr. Watzl and the girl fled 4,000 miles to be alone. They wanted to be free, to get away from others.

They did get away from others, yes—but they found a far more vigilant companion hounded them wherever they went. They could not get away from themselves.

After all, conscience is the most relentless of our tormentors—and remorse the most cruel of all tyrants.

We can flee from others. But we cannot escape living with ourselves.

Seven Democrats for the Tariff Act

NAPOLEON GRUNDY put over his tariff act in the senate. Seven Democrats voted for the bill on its final showdown. Senator Bob LaFollette of Wisconsin characterized the measure as "the worst tariff bill in the nation's history and one that should be known as Grundy's billion dollar tariff bill." Three Grundy senators were named as conferees. They gave pledges they would vote against the elimination of the farm debenture plan and the Simmons-Norris substitute for the existing flexible tariff by the Republican house conferees unless instructions to do so were given by a majority vote of the upper house.

Senator Borah is an aggressive champion of the farm debenture plan and the flexible tariff plan, and promises to fight elimination to the very death. By the by, Alexander W. Legge, chairman of the federal farm relief committee, and an appointee of President Hoover, has branded the debenture plan as uneconomic, out of place, unworkable, unscientific, a breeder of discord in European countries and utterly without value to the growers of things in the United States. The prediction is that Napoleon Grundy and his fellow brain workers will throw the debenture plan in the discard and retain the flexible tariff provision which makes the president of the United States the real tariff maker of and for the government.

Hindenburg's Greatness

TWELVE years ago it would have been hard to find anyone in the United states who would say a good word for the German, Paul von Hindenburg.

Today, however, Germany's grand old man seems to be demonstrating his greatness in a way that makes us glad to forget our wartime hatreds.

As president of Germany, Von Hindenburg recently signed the Young plan, against the advice of thousands of indignant Germans. Signing it, he made this remark:

"During my entire life I have served in the school of duty, and I have learned to do my duty for the fatherland without consideration for my person. Therefore any thought my person had was abandoned in this decision, and I gave up any idea of relieving myself of the responsibility by a plebiscite or resignation."

The Naval Holiday

THE suggestion for a six-months holiday in the naval disarmament conference may turn out to be a life-saver for the proponents of naval reduction and world peace.

It is disappointing, of course, when we recall the high hopes that we had when the conference opened. But it is becoming apparent that our hopes were unjustifiably exalted. We expected more than we had any right to expect.

There have been plenty of chances for the conference to end in something very like a row, with all kinds of ill-feeling engendered on all sides. The six-months holiday might avert those chances. It might pave the way for real naval reduction later.

To be sure, it isn't nearly as good as what we expected. But it's perhaps the best way out of a very difficult situation.

Quotations Worth Noting

The Girl With The Red Hair by Rob Eden

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Desperately in need of money to send her sick mother to Arizona, pretty Gay Morris agrees to marry her wealthy employer, Frank Patterson, for a loan of $5,000. To provide a few additional luxuries for her mother she also agreed to represent a prominent society woman, Fania Crandall, at a fashionable masquerade ball. For that evening's services Gay received $200. Her conscience was not at ease on either score, however, for she had later learned that she could never love the man she had promised to marry, and learned, too, that Fania Crandall was a thief and had stolen a valuable necklace at the ball at which Gay appeared in her place. Both of Gay's mistakes has injured the man she really loves. Mark Loring, nephew of the man Gay has promised to marry, is hurt because he believes she is merely marrying his uncle for his money, and he was arrested at Mrs. Crandall's suggestion for the theft at the ball. Gay's promise to Mrs. Crandall, and her fear after what Paul Ladishaw has told her of the woman's unscrupulous methods, alone deters her from telling Andy Grant, reporter, of the whole wretched business.

CHAPTER XXII

Gay didn't hear a word Andy Grant was saying, for as she walked along beside him, she was lost in her own dreams. Ladishaw and Mrs. Crandall were forgotten—the terrible tale Paul had told her only this morning—forgotten for a time.

She was thinking of Mark, knowing she would see him in a little while, wondering what he would do, say. There was a new brightness in her restless eyes, a soft smile on her lips. She wanted to walk faster, faster, but Andy was trudging on slowly. She couldn't very well tell him to hurry—that the minutes were so precious on account of Mark.

A cloud, of course, on her happiness. The cloud of Nita. A stab of jealousy stung the girl, and lingered. When Nita had asked her to her apartment tonight, with Andy, Gay had wanted to refuse. Indeed, she had been about to refuse when Nita's next words made her accept.

"Oh, your friend Mark Loring's going to be there. A little celebration because he's out of jail. The police let him go." The triumph in Nita's eyes when she said this, the slightly superior toss to her head.

Gay wanted to ask Nita more about Mark, what he had said when she called him—for she must have called him—every detail of her conversation. Her pride held her back, so she asked nothing.

She was glad Mark was innocent, but she had known it all the time. She needn't have worried so much this morning, rushed so madly up to Mrs. Crandall's. But even the recollection of her conversation with Fania could not take away the pleasures she felt at seeing Mark again.

Andy had told her the mistake the police had made in arresting Mark. Told her reluctantly, for it was partly his fault, he claimed. He had his information from Mrs. Crandall. It seemed a good tip, too good not to follow up.

Gay caught her breath at the mention of Fania's name. So she was the one who had told the police Mark's name!

Loring had explained his attendance at the ball satisfactorily. A college friend of his, whom he had run into, had given him the invitation, as he couldn't go. The friend had verified Mark's statement. All a silly mistake.

"Of course, Mrs. Crandall was doing the best she could, giving me the tip," Andy grumbled. "I asked her if she remembered anything suspicious—"

Doing the best she could! Gay wanted to tell Mark what she knew about Fania. How she knew. In time she remembered Ladishaw's caution for silence. The incident of the masquerade she would always keep to herself. Always. Now that Mark was all right, there was no need for her to do anything. There was too much depending on her silence. Her mother—it would kill her to know that Gay had done anything like this. Mark, too, what would he say?

Patterson she dismissed with just a vagrant thought.

Her heart began to beat queerly as they approached Nita's apartment house. She stumbled once or twice on the stairs going up. How many days was it since she had seen Mark? Years! Only last night . . . Only last night.

Nita opened the door and Gay saw Mark fussing with the small portable phonograph on the table. He looked up when she came in and nodded casually, coming forward to shake hands with Andy.

Gay's fingers were shaking as she took off her hat. This frightful pounding all through her body. The tears that welled into her eyes. Tears she could not control. Mark had only nodded when she had come in. Now he was smiling, holding out his arms for Nita. They were dancing in the little room, Mark, tall, handsome, Nita, slim, frail, and nearly as tall as he was. Nita was wearing black tonight. Black with her white face, her red lips, a short black skirt of fringe whipped about her legs as she danced.

The music from the phonograph was tinny. It got on Gay's nerves, and she pressed her fingers to her forehead. Cold, clammy fingers. The record ran out and Nita changed it, smiling at Mark while she wound the machine. Mark's dark hair, Nita's dark hair, so close together . . . .

—I can't stand it—the girl thought. Why don't they stop?—

Andy was showing her a story in the paper he had dragged from his pocket, but although she pretended to look, she had no eyes for it. Eyes only for Nita and Mark whirling over the floor.

If only he would look her way. The room was dancing to her now, spinning around. There were a hundred Nitas and Marks.

This was jealousy. She must stop thinking about Mark—forget him. She shouldn't have come tonight. All the joy she had felt walking over was pain now . . . .

Last night Mark had told her he loved her. Tonight he was dancing with Nita . . . .

She breathed a sigh of relief when they stopped at last to rest, but it was only for a second for Nita had dragged Mark into the kitchen.

"What's the matter, Gay?" Andy asked.

"Nothing—" she murmured, but her lips were drooping.

"There is, child. Listen,—is it Loring?"

"Why—"

"It is, isn't it?"

"No—"

"You'd like to talk to him alone for awhile?"

She didn't answer but he saw the hope that flashed into her eyes. "I'll fix it, Nita's too darned possessive." With that Andy ambled into the kitchen, and came back with Nita protesting. The phonograph started again, and they began to dance.

Gay tried to keep herself away from the kitchen, but couldn't. She wanted to wait until Mark came out to her, but he didn't. Then, she found herself standing beside him—near the sink. "Hello," she said, trying to smile.

"Hello." Mark made a move to leave, but her fingers caught his coat. "Please—don't!"

Her pride was gone. Nothing left but her love. "Do you hate me—so much tonight?"

"I don't hate you, Gay," Mark's voice was very quiet, but he did not look at her. "I don't understand you, that's all—"

The phonograph had stopped, Gay prayed that Andy would start it again, anything to keep Mark here with her, Andy did.

"Will you forgive me?"

"There's nothing to forgive. You're doing what I think is a rather despicable thing. I told you that last night, and I say the same thing tonight."

"You—you don't understand—"

"I think I do. It's better if I never see you again." Mark's voice was not quite steady as he said this.

Nita burst in on them then. Mark seemed glad. His face lost its tenseness, and he started off with Nita for another dance. Andy joined Gay and gently touched her cold hand. "No luck, child?" he asked comfortingly. "I did my best for you."

"It isn't that, Andy. I can't explain—please, let's go." They slipped out without either Nita or Mark knowing they had gone.

"You love him, I guess," Andy announced when they were out on the street.

Gay nodded. The music from the phonograph was still beating in her ears. Her body was strangely weak, limp. It was an effort for her to walk, Andy was a dear. He understood.

"Do you want him very badly?" he asked.

"More than anything—" good to tell someone. No one she could tell but Andy.

The reporter sighed. This red haired girl more than interested him. He was beginning to fall in love with her himself. Those violet eyes, so hopeless now—that white face. "You're not worrying about Nita?"

"No." She knew she was lying. She couldn't bear to think of anyone but herself with Mark. Selfish, but love was selfish. The kind she had for Mark.

Nita dancing with him. Nita having him for her own.

At the steps of her house, she left Andy, and slowly dragged up the five flights of stairs to her room. On each floor a dim light burned, barely enough to light the landing.

Mark was right. They couldn't see each other again. She should have known. But love was so new to her. Harder each time they saw one another. Like tonight.

A despicable thing she was doing, Mark had said. Was it really that? Despicable to marry a man who had done her a great favor? A man she never could love?

A muffled buzz in the hall. Four more. That was her call to the telephone.

As she left the room, she looked at her clock. Eleven. Who could it be so late?

The voice that greeted her was half hysterical, panicky. "Gay, this is Paul—" All the fear she had forgotten rushed back to her. Fania, the necklace. Now Paul calling . . .

"Gay, she knows—Fania. Knows I told you. I don't know what she'll do. You'll be careful, won't you? I'm afraid for you—terribly afraid. There's nothing she wouldn't dare. Promise me you'll be careful—"

"I will—"

"Anything that looks like a trap—don't trust her in anything—" The receiver clicked, and Gay was left, bewildered, still looking into the mouthpiece. She pressed down the receiver hook once or twice, thinking that she had been cut off. But apparently Paul had said all he could. What had made him stop just then? Had Fania come in?

He became the idol of the French theatergoes. He fought in the world war and received a decoration for bravery. Since coming to America, his talking pictures have been received with enthusiasm.

Q.—What is the difference between a certificate and a diploma?—M. J. C.

A.—A certificate is merely a written testimony of the truth of any fact, such as the completion of a certain course of study, whereas a diploma confers some privilege, honor, or power and bears record of a degree conferred.

Q.—What is the Canton water clock?—C. K.

A.—The water float or clepsydra in Canton dates back some 500 years and has been destroyed and rebuilt many times. It is composed of three copper vessels placed one above the other on step-like platforms. In the bottom vessel is a float with an indicator scale passing through it, which as the water fills the lower vessel rises and shows the time.

Q.—What is a chanty-man?—L. T.

A.—The chanty-man is no more. He was the chorister of the old packet ship. He sang the lines of the chanties and the crew joined in the chorus, performing their tasks as they sang. There were pulling songs, windlass songs, setting and furling sail, pumping the ship out. Some were intended to beguile the men while getting up the anchor.

Q.—What is the temperature of cold-blooded animals?—L. J. H.

A.—They have body temperature much the same as the surrounding medium in which they live.

Q.—How far south is ice found in the Mississippi river?—P. S.

A.—The Mississippi River commission says that in severe winters floating ice is found in the Mississippi river as far south as Vicksburg, Miss., but that it is usually not found farther south than Memphis, Tenn.

Q.—How can a camphorwood chest be preserved without destroying the odor?—L. R.

A.—It should be rubbed with camphor oil or a mixture of camphor and linseed oil.

Q.—How much was the housekeeper at Mount Vernon paid?—G. J.

A.—Excerpts from a letter from George Washington to Samuel Fraunces follow: "As no other person can judge better of the qualifications necessary to constitute a good housekeeper, or household steward than yourself, for a family which has a good deal of company, and wishes to entertain them in a plain, but genteel style, I take the liberty of asking you, if there is any such one within your reach, whom you think could be induced to come to me on reasonable wages. I would rather have a man than a woman, but either will do, if they can be recommended for their honesty, sobriety and knowledge of their profession; which, in one word, is to relieve Mrs. Washington from the drudgery of ordering, and seeing the table properly covered, and things economically used. Nothing more, therefore, needs be said, to inform you of a character that would suit me, than what is already mentioned. The wages I now give to a man, who is about to leave me in order to get married (under which circumstances he would not suit me), is about one hundred dollars per annum; but if one who understands the business perfectly, and stands fair in all other respects, I would go as far as one hundred and twenty-five dollars." Washington's diary indicates that he found it necessary to pay Richard Burnet forty pounds a year as steward. This is about $200.

Q.—Why is water sometimes cloudy when drawn from the faucet and clear after it stands a few minutes—J. F.

A.—Air in the pipes has been forced into the water by pressure. It is soon released and the water becomes clear.

Q.—What would it cost to eliminate grade crossings at railroads?—L. A.

A.—Crossing are classified according to the extent and nature of the traffic on both railroads and highways and the cost of elimination estimated. Class A, number 1972, cost of elimination, $281,810,000; class B, number 2548, cost of elimination, $166,760,000; class C, number 2884, cost of elimination, $185,825,000.

Q.—Was the red flag an emblem of anarchy in ancient Rome?—B. C.

The Cost of Vitamins

A great deal of research has been going on during the past 10 years in investigation of the elusive and mysterious vitamin. Druggists tell me that there is an increasingly large number of customers coming in each day asking for this or that vitamin, thinking they can buy them by the package. Indeed, a number of manufacturers have put out products which they claim contain a large amount of vitamins.

Up to date, no one has been able to see a vitamin. They are probably not material substance at all, but some form of electrical or vital energy which is contained in varying amounts in different kinds of food.

Experiments have been made on animals and birds to prove the vitamin theory, and from these experiments it seems that practically all uncooked and unprocessed foods contain one or more of the vitamins.

Those who live on a mixed diet, and can afford to have a large variety of foods, need never fear the danger of not being supplied with enough vitamins. But the one whose purse is small must select his food more carefully.

The food of the poorer family usually consists of white flour products, meat, sugar and other cheap foods deficient in vitamins. If they could afford to eat plenty of green vegetables both in and out of season, the vitamin deficiency in the bolted flour products would be more than made up by the vitamins contained in the greens. But the succulent, non-starchy vegetables are often too expensive, and the results are seen in the pinched faces and rickety bodies of the children from the poorer classes. The easiest solution for such families is to substitute wholewheat flour and other whole grain for the white bread, pastries and puddings which they have been using, and which are mostly made of white flour, which is totally deficient in vitamins except for those added through yeast and milk.

Vitamin B apparently exists in large quantities in the whole grains, and it is absolutely necessary to use these foods unless the green foods can be purchased. Those physicians and physiologists who recommend the use of white flour readily admit that it is deficient in vitamins, but say that it is still a good food if used in combination with plenty of green vegetables. The problem is for the poor man to get enough money to purchase such a varied diet for his family.

Sir Arbuthnot Lane, famous English surgeon, recently said, "Poor children depend upon bread and margarine and jam (mostly made of syrup with very little food in it), and it is essential to them to have a whole-meal flour. Most decayed teeth and rickets are due to this diet. It is absurd to waste money on dentists and dental clinics, and on cure for rickets due to a poor diet. For well-to-do people who have access to a variety of good food it doesn't so much matter whether they eat brown bread or white."

Most families could afford to use a certain amount of greens during the winter, even if the cheaper canned varieties were used. The cheaper grades of canned spinach, beans, asparagus and other non-starchy vegetables are equally as wholesome as the more expensive, and a can or two of these vegetables should be used each day by every family in the colder climates where the fresh greens are not available except at what often is a prohibitive price.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Flat Chest

Question: M. L. L. asks—"What is the cause of a flat chest?"

Answer—One with a flat chest is usually born that way and continues to remain so during life unless the proper physical culture exercises are taken. A child with a flat chest should be able to develop a strong chest through proper breathing and physical culture exercise if he starts soon enough.

Jams

Question: W. S. writes—"I wish you would say something respecting jams, marmalades and preserves. There must be many people like myself who would be pleased to read your views on this matter."

Answer—I say very little in this column about jams, marmalades and preserves because I do not consider them the best kinds of foods owing to the large amount of sugar which they contain. If they are used at all it is best to use only small amounts with meals which do not contain starchy foods.

Clubbed Nails

Question: Mrs. J. M. writes—"Some years ago I had an acquaintance whose fingernails were capped down over the ends of his fingers. What was the cause? I've heard that a severe case of pneumonia will do it. Is it so?"

Answer—Yes. Any bronchial trouble interferring with the breathing may cause a clubbing of the fingernails.

Children's Teeth

Question: Mrs. A. S. asks—"If a child's first teeth are soft and decay easily, will the second teeth also be that way?"

Answer—Yes, there will be a tendency for the child to have the same trouble with the second teeth, but this can be prevented to some degree if you will immediately put the child on a proper diet containing the special bone-building foods.

WILTSE CHECKS SAINTS' RIOT BUT SPUDDERS LOSE, 12 TO 3

VISITORS EVEN SERIES HERE

St. Paul Swatters Get 11 Runs Off Steengrafe

BY FRED D. THOMPSON
The Record News Staff

With plenty of strike-out medicine tucked under his south paw, smiling curly-headed Hal Wiltse came to the rescue of our Spudders Sunday afternoon in the sixth inning, when things were going hard as the result of Steengrafe's five frames in the box during which the St. Paul Saints tallied 11 runs and smacked their jaws for more.

Hal held them to one run during his sojourn and provided enough good pitching to satisfy some 888 fans who watched the Saints get revenge for the 6 to 5 defeat they suffered at the hands of the Spudders Saturday. The final score was 12 to 3.

Yanks Here Thursday

The two clashes with the American association Saints marked the first home exhibition games of the season. The next will be Thursday with the New York Yankees.

Had Wiltse not been sent in to check the Saints' scoring riot Sunday afternoon there is no telling what the score might have been. The holy ones started clouting hard in the first inning, driving in four runs. In the third they chalked up three Saltzgaver smacked a homer in the fourth, and Anderson did the same thing in the fifth. But there was more damage in Anderson's homer. It drove in two runs. Then Wiltse finished warming up and entered the box, holding his foes to one run in the eighth.

Hooten, the tall outfielder, and Allday scored two Spudder runs in the second and stimulated the hopes of the home-towners; but Levey's tally in the fifth was the only result of all those hopes.

The Saints used three hurlers, Hariss and Moore, former American leaguers, and Betts.

Levey Cheered

There was little in the game for Spudder fans to acclaim, but cheers were forthcoming nevertheless. Wiltse got his share when he started striking out a few of the class AA hitters. Levey, the Spider, drew two or three bursts of cheers when he skimmed over the lot after some hot ones and got them, too. The veteran Howard Fitzgerald didn't have to do anything but walk to the plate to get an ovation. It was his first time at bat. He struck out. He did not disappoint the crowd, however, for he shagged some good flies in the center portion of the garden, and in his later trips to the plate smote mightily, even if his hits availed little.

The Saints started annoying Steengrafe from the very first. Anderson, first up, singled to second. Saltzgaver hit in the same direction, and made first while Anderson was thrown out at second. Paschal came up and singled to left field, advancing Saltzgaver to second. Roettger smote to Levey at short and made first base when Levey muffed it. Saltzgaver went to third, and Paschal to second on the error. Haas, the fast switch hitter, hit a good one past first base for a single, scoring Saltzgaver and Paschal and advancing Roettger to third. Hopkins doubled to left field, scoring Roettger and Haas, and went to third on the fielder's choice when Tesmer was thrown out, third to first. Herber flied out to center field to close the inning.

More Scoring

Steengrafe allowed only one hit in the next inning, but in the third the base-running started again. Roettger went out, pitcher to first. Then Big-boy Haas cracked a mighty double to right field. Hopkins strolled. Tesmer doubled to Kloza out in the left garden. The hit scored Haas, and Kloza muffed the ball, the error allowing Hopkins also to score. Herber was out, third to first. Harriss' light infield tap got him a single, scoring Tesmer. Anderson flied out to left for the third out.

Saltzgaver's homer over the right field fence was only tally for the Saints in the fourth, but three more were to come in the next inning. Hopkins was thrown out, short to first. Tesmer was hit and went to first. Herber singled to right field and when Hooten dropped it Tesmer went to third. Fenner, batting for Harriss, struck out. Then Anderson heaved up a four base swat over the left field fence and scored Tesmer and Herber.

Wiltse Goes In

Skipper Carl Williams thought that was about enough, and in the next inning little Harold started hurling for the Spudders. He allowed no hits in the sixth and seventh. In the eighth, Fenner, who had entered the game as catcher, was first up, and he struck out again. Anderson got a single on a hot one to short. Saltzgaver went out, pitcher to first. Paschal singled on an infield fly, and when Burns, at first, threw to Bradbury in an effort to stop Anderson's charge home, Bradbury dropped the ball and Anderson tallied. Davis singled to right field, advancing Paschal to third. Haas was thrown out, third to first, closing the inning.

Our Spudders got not a single hit in the first. The second, however, was a little better. Burns walked. So did Hooten, advancing Burns to second. Allday tapped to the pitcher for a single, and Burns was thrown out at third. Hooten went to second on the play. Crouch struck out, scoring Hooten and Allday. Levey got to [illegible] shortstop's error, and [illegible] out, short to first, to close the most productive inning the Spudders could manage.

Third Run Scored

The third run came in the fifth. Orr batted for Steengrafe and was struck out. Levey singled to center and went to second on a passed ball. Storti walked. Fitzgerald clouted an infield fly which the shortstop handled for the second out. Kloza singled to right field, scoring Levey, and advancing Storti to third. Burns hit to second and was thrown out at first to close the period.

PHILLIES' BOSS IS OPTIMISTIC

Shotton Thinks His Club Will Go Far

(This is one of a series of first-hand Associated Press stories on major league baseball prospects.)

By BRIAN BELL
Associated Press Sports Writer

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 30.—The demeanor of Burt Shotton, one of baseball's real horse traders, gives the Phillies' baseball secret away. A year ago Burt thought his team had great possibilities but he was afraid to say so. To visiting newspaper men he played soft and low in his predictions and was more apt to shush than cheer.

Twelve months later it is different. "You can write a piece about the Phillies now, you won't have to take back," said the manager jubilantly. "No, sir, if you say the Phillies are tough, you won't have to eat any crow."

No one could blame the shrewd Shotton for a measure of satisfaction at the performance of his team last year. And he has no reason to believe the players will not be even harder to subdue in 1930.

Set Six Records

In 1929 the Phillies took their bats in hand and set six records, four by the club and two by individuals. Lefty O'Doul led the National league in hitting and his 254 hits made a new league record. Chuck Klein hit the most runs, his mark of 43 breaking Rogers Hornsby's old record of 42. The club piled up a record for most total bases, most long hits, most extra bases and most home runs. The Phillies in a body made 153 home runs in 1929.

All the long distance hitters of yesteryear are back with at least one new candidate for admission to the robust circle. Trippsigman slipped into the lineup late in the season and for his few games he hit for an average of .517, his hits including some extra long ones.

Except for the addition of some much needed strength in the batteries and reserves, the club is intact. Don Hurst, Fresco Thompson, Tommy Thevenow and Arthur Whitney will be doing business at the same old infield stand.

Sherlock Added

John Sherlock, a youngster from the Mission club, who seems to be able to qualify as a hitter, will join Barney Friberg to form the infield emergency corps. Chuck Klein and Lefty O'Doul will be two of the outfielders and Denny Southern, a right-hand hitter, may alternate with Sigman who bats left handed in the other field. Cy Williams, 41 years old, but still a batting menace, will be an outfield replacement.

"Old Pete" Alexander, still a pitcher although he has celebrated his 43rd birthday, may hold in his sinew arm and keen pitching brain the hopes of the pitching staff. He will pitch and win some games for the Phillies, the club with which he started his major league career 19 years ago and he will tell the ambitious young pitchers all he knows of the tricks of the trade.

"I think he will win a lot of games for us," said Shotton. "And certainly he won't beat us any, as he has been doing for St. Louis."

Alexander, as the dean of pitchers, will not be seen on the mound so much as some of the younger men. Claude Willoughby, Phil Collins, Ray Benge, Harry Smythe, Lou Koupal and Les (Sugar) Sweetland will work often. They were on the club last year, as were Harold Elliott and Sam Dailey who will be given every chance to make good this year.

New Pitchers

Among the promising new pitchers, Byron Speece from Indianapolis, and Early Collard from Shreveport seem sure to stick. John Milligan who had a sore arm last year, thinks he has recovered. This is the confident position also of Benge who had trouble with his arm in 1929 after a great year in 1928.

Harry McCurdy, former White Sox catcher, has returned from the minors to join Virgil Davis and George Susce, two holdover receivers. Al Cooper, a great hitter in one of the minors who has had two major league trials, also is a prominent member of the spring catching staff.

The Phillies with their bats loaded with dynamite, are certain to be dangerous all along the National league trail, Shotton summed it up. "They were glad to see us come a little while ago," he said. "Now they are glad to see us go." He was referring to the other National league clubs.

1,000 ATTEND OPENING CLASH

Army Four Plays Game Without Star

Approximately 1,000 people watched the Wichita Falls polo team ride to a 10 to 5 victory over the Kelly field team from San Antonio Sunday afternoon in the first of a series of games to be played on Clinerowe field during the spring and summer polo season. Captain John Smith, veteran back for the airport quartet, was unable to arrive for the game. Jim Minnick of Norman, Okla., filled his berth.

Unaccustomed to the ponies they were riding, the Kelly field team was late in getting started. The Wichita Falls team ran the score up to 5 to 0 in the first half, with the one goal advantage given them by the difference in the handicaps of the two teams. The visiting team came back in the last half to make goal for goal with the home players.

The Lineups

Kelly field lined up with Captain Boyle in front, Lieutenant Barden at No. 2, Jim Minnick, No. 3, and Lieut. G. Irvin, back. Wichita Falls played Hubert Stringer in front, Horrace Robbins at No. 2, John Fastnow and Cecil Wilfong at No. 3, and Charles Featherstone, back.

The Kelly field team played a good defensive game in the first chukker, to gain time to learn their ponies. Minnick, playing No. 3, and Lieutenant Irvin, No. 4, both were playing well back in the game. Minnick fouled in the middle of the chukker and Wichita took a free shot at the goal from the 40-yard line. Irvin stopped the ball just before it passed the goal posts. San Antonio got a good run for the Wichitans' goal, but the ball was backed before the visitors could carry through. The ball was knocked to the side boards and a stiff fight for its possession put it over the goal line outside the posts to end the chukker.

Fastnow Scores

On the knock-in at the beginning of the second chukker, John Fastnow got the ball for a good shot at the goal and scored for the home team. The Kelly field players began to play an offensive game. The ball changed possession repeatedly during the rest of the chukker. Long races down the field were stopped by the backs to be reversed in the opposite direction. Minnick got a good crack at the ball to hit it 20 feet into the air toward the goal posts. The ball failed to go directly over the goal and the ball was called outside to end the chukker with Wichita two goals in the lead.

Wichita came back in the third with Hubert Stringer scoring on a setup directly in front of the goal. A close fight for possession of the ball on the throw-in after the score put the ball out of bounds when one of the players hit to the side. Wichita took the ball to the goal line to hit outside in a trial for score. The army players carried the ball to the opposite end of the field on their knock-in to miss and hit outside again. A race to the San Antonio goal ended in a visiting player picking the ball from almost between the posts to stop Wichita from scoring again. Stringer scored his second time after a knock-in. Cecil Wilfong got the ball after the throw-in to raise the score to 4 to 0 at the end of the chukker.

Fast Chukker

The fourth chukker was fast from the beginning to the end with neither side getting within striking distance of the goal until close to the end when Wilfong scored by hitting the ball under two of the opposing players. The half ended with Wichita five goals in the lead.

Captain Boyle got the ball on the throw-in at the beginning of the fifth chukker to score. Wichita then took the ball toward the opposing goal to hit outside on two successive shots for goal. On the knock-in, Featherstone got the ball to score. Boyle scored the second time soon after the throw-in. Both teams put up a hard fight for the ball with first one then the other getting a good start to be stopped by the guards. Featherstone got the ball from between his pony's front legs to score.

Both teams began an intense fight at the beginning of the sixth period. All began to ride their hardest. The visitors were more accustomed to the ponies than in the first half of the game and began to exert all their attention to the ball. Neither side scored until Robbins fouled and gave the visitors a free shot from the 40-yard line. The shot failed and the ball went outside. On the knock-in, Minnick got the ball to score again for the visitors.

Players Change Mounts

The last two chukkers were a real test of the two teams. All the players were at their best. The fight for possession of the ball ended in the seventh with Captain Boyle and Lieutenant Barden scoring for the visitors and Featherstone scoring for the home team.

In the eighth Wilfong got the ball to make the 10th score for the Wichita team. Hard riding wore the ponies down before the end and two of the San Antonio players called time out to change mounts, but they could not break through the home players to score before the bell sounded to make the score 10 to 5.

City Bowling Tournament Opens Tonight

Three-Day Event To Decide Winner Of Championship

The city championship bowling tournament, a scheduled three-day event sponsored by the Wichita Falls Bowling association and The Record News-Times, will get under way at the Spudder Bowling alley Monday evening promptly at 7 o'clock, John J. Laughlin, secretary of the bowling association, announced. The public is invited to attend.

Twenty-two teams had been entered in the tournament Sunday night, the latest addition to the entry list being the Huff Insurance company team. The entry lists will remain open until 10 o'clock Monday morning and several other teams are expected to enter the competition before the deadline is reached.

To Decide Handicaps

Last minute preparations for the tournament, which will see at least 131 individual bowlers in action, will be made at a meeting of the executive board of the bowling association Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock. At that time the board decide the handicaps of the players, and allot the prizes to the winners of the various contests.

Prizes are being contributed by various merchants in the city. The latest prizes offered, according to Mr. Laughlin, include a bowler trophy, by the Art Jewelry company; a gold fish and bowl, Berry Seed and Feed company; and an electric pop corn popper, John Oechsner Electric company.

Mr. Laughlin announced Sunday that captains of all teams must turn in a list of the men on their teams before noon of the day they are scheduled to bowl. All matches will start promptly at the time the teams are scheduled to play, whether all the team members are present or not.

Two Alleys Reserved

There will be two alleys reserved for the use of the public during the three days of the tournament.

At least three of the bowlers in the tournament will be men identified with the Wichita Falls baseball club. Jack Kloza, outfielder, and Lin Storti, second sacker on the Spudder team, will bowl on the Security National bank team; while William E. Huff, president of the Spudders, is one of the mainstays on the Huff Insurance company team. Other men from the Spudder squad may participate.

The object of the tournament, in addition to stimulating interest in the sport by deciding the city championship, is to raise funds to send several bowling teams to the state championship tournament at Beaumont early next month. An entry fee of $20 is charged each team participating. There will be no admission charge for the public at the tournament.

The schedule for Monday night's matches follows:

7 o'Clock

Alley No. 1—Fox Chevrolet company.
Alley No. 2—Handy's.
Alley No. 3—Wolff Brothers Y-B's.
Alley No. 4—Mahanay's cafeteria.

YANKEES BEAT HOUSTON BUFFS

Ruth Goes Hitless in Five Trips

HOUSTON, March 30. (AP)—A ninth-round rally, featuring well smacked singles by Lou Gehrig, Tony Lazzeri and Dusty Cooke, here Sunday scored two runs and enabled the New York Yankees to beat the Houston Buffs 6 to 5. Around 7,000 fans, the largest crowd of the Yankees' exhibition series, saw "Babe" Ruth go hitless in five times at bat, and fail to get the ball out of the infield.

Floyd Rose, a little right-hander with great curve ball, made the Yanks look very foolish the first six rounds. During that period he fanned seven, permitted four singles and a double, and the one run was unearned. Rose tired under the strain of throwing so many curve balls, and was jerked in the seventh after the Yanks scored two runs. The loss was charged to Allyn Stout.

Play Indians Today

SAN ANTONIO, March 30. (AP)—Back from Austin where they defeated the Texas university Longhorns, 29 to 0, the San Antonio Indians had a three-hour workout Sunday morning in League park in preparation for their game with the New York Yankees Monday.

Orioles Beat Waco

WACO, Texas, March 30. (AP)—Failure of Ellison to get the Orioles out or the ball over cost Waco the game today with Baltimore. The Orioles won 12 to 7. The game produced 21 walks, and when Bill Harris of Waco left the mound after pitching the first five innings, the Cubs had a lead of 6 to 2.

FORT WORTH, March 30. (AP)—The Fort Worth Panthers defeated the Dallas Steers today, 2 to 1, in a snappy game. Dick Sullivan made four bases on a bunt and Grimm's wild heave for the first Cat tally. Mallon's triple produced the other. Radcliff's triple accounted for the lone Herd marker.

Pitching of Ferdie Schupp was another feature of the contest. He had the Steers helpless before his hooks. Two thousand saw the game, which evened the exhibition series.

Five Days Remain To Submit Slogans

Five days remain in which to submit slogans for the season's opening day here April 9 when the Spudders meet the Shreveport Sports. Suggestions for the slogan, to be picked by judges named by the athletic committee of the chamber of commerce, continue to come in. The city having the largest attendance opening day will receive a $250 cash prize which will revert to that city's community chest. The prize is offered by J. Alvin Gardner, president of the Texas league. A prize of six box seats to the game here will be offered the winner of the slogan contest. If you have a suggestion, mail it to The Record News-Times.

Among the latest slogans submitted were the following:

"'Closed for the game' on every door'"—W. B. Swint, 1403 Monroe.

"Spudders gime'em the ax, the ax, "Spudders give 'em the ax, the ax, wise.

"If you can't spud in, don't spud out, let's see Carl win"—C. P. Perkins, 2125 Princeton.

"Spudders' spunk and speed is sure to win the league!"—L. J. West 405 Burnett.

"Spudders! Spudders! Opening day, fill the seats and watch 'em play"—L. J. Garner, 1609 Austin.

"Ten thousand Spudder boosters can't be wrong"—J. B. Stewart, 900 Indiana.

"The Spudders are going over the top, believe it or not"—D. B. Davis Jr., Henrietta, Texas.

"Wishing God's speed for the Spudders to lead 1930"—Paul V. Gorechie, 2301 Buchanan.

Jones Practices Up For Cash Golfers

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 30. (AP)—Bobby Jones showed 69 in a practice round over the Forrest Hills-Ricker course here today and thus served notice on the contingent of professional shooters that the Atlanta amateur was ready for his second battle of the year with the cash players.

Jones' card was one stroke above the course record held by Ernest Ryall, professional at the club who is also entered in the two-day $5,000 southeastern open golf tournament which starts here tomorrow.

CONFESSES SLAYING

PORTLAND, Ore., March 30. (UP)—Although he claimed that the shooting was an accident, Clarence L. King, 27, confessed to Captain of Detectives Harvey A. Thatcher today that he killed his common law wife, Mary McCoy, near Eureka, Calif., on the night of Feb. 20.

SINGER OUT FOR REVENGE

Bronx Lightweight Meets Filipino Friday

NEW YORK, March 30. (AP)—On the theory, perhaps, that lightning doesn't strike twice in the same place, Al Singer, Bronx lightweight, again will take on the slugging Filipino, Ignacio Fernandez, in Madison Square garden Friday night.

This return battle features a rather dull week for the fisticuffers.

Singer, when on a sensational winning streak, met Fernandez at the garden last year and made the mistake of dropping his guard for an instant in the third round. Fernandez swung his right with all the speed and precision of a trip hammer and Singer went to the canvas where he was counted out. That is the only bad defeat on the Bronx lightweight's record and he would like to get even with the record book. The betting fraternity probably will be willing to lay odds of 2 to 1 or more that he succeeds.

Vince Dundee, of Baltimore, battles Ben Jeby, of New York, in a welterweight semi-final. Joey Medill, Chicago junior welterweight, takes on Hubert Gillis of Belgium in the opening 10.

The only other bout of particular interest on the national list is Tuffy Griffith's 10-round struggle with Jack Gagnon, Boston heavyweight, at Philadelphia tomorrow night.

Retiring Fire Chief Honored at Iowa Park

Special to The Record News

IOWA PARK, Texas, March 30.—The Iowa Park volunteer fire department gave their retiring chief, Hill Anglin, a farewell celebration in the form of an old-time barbecue feast, which was served at the city fire department. Mr. Anglin had also been presented with a new model 30-30 rifle, for use on his ranch at Naravisa, N. M., where he is moving early in April.

Mr. Anglin has served as chief of the department for the past three years and during this time has aided in securing a lower rate of insurance for the town. R. A. Dahl, assistant fire chief, was elected to succeed Mr. Anglin.

Hoovers to Go Fishing Over Next Week-End

WASHINGTON, March 30. (US)—The president and Mrs. Hoover today decided that the next week-end would find them casting for trout at the president's fishing lodge at Rapidan, Va.

The president had intended to go to the camp today, but since the fishing season does not open until April 1, he decided to defer the trip for a week. He spent the day at his desk.

Mrs. Hoover motored to the camp yesterday to make the necessary arrangements for the visit early next week. She returned this morning.

Lott Defeats Doeg In Tennis Tourney

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 30. (AP)—George Lott, Chicago, fourth ranking amateur tennis player in the country, defeated Johnny Doeg, Santa Monica, Calif., third ranking player, in the finals of the South Florida tennis championships today. The scores were 2-6, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, 8-6.

SPUDDER PLAYERS AND OFFICIALS HONORED AT BIBLE CLASS

GARDNER, HUFF AND AIREY TALK

Team's Songsters Give Special Musical Number

Players and officials of the Wichita Falls baseball team, and J. Alvin Gardner, president of the Texas league, were honor guests at the services of the Kay Bible class Sunday in the auditorium of the old First Methodist church. An attendance of 281 was recorded at the class, the highest attendance in several months.

The program was not only featured by the talk of Rev. John Daniel Barron, teacher, but by addresses by Spudder officials and music by members of the team.

Mrs. J. W. Akin Jr. opened the program with an organ prelude, which was followed by congregational singing led by Paul F. Rutledge. The class then gave the Lord's prayer in unison.

Jones Welcomes Visitors

Welcome to the visitors was given by Oral Jones, president, in a brief address. During his talk, Mr. Jones revealed that three members of the old Wichita Falls baseball team of more than 20 years ago were present at the services. The members included Mr. Jones, former Sheriff Fred Smith and W. E. Huff, present president of the Spudder team.

Mr. Jones' talk was followed by an address by J. Alvin Gardner, Texas league president, in which Mr. Gardner answered the questions, "Are many games lost because of wrong decisions?" "Do you think an umpire intentionally rules wrongfully in order to favor a particular team?" and "Are umpires really as rotten as the people say they are?"

Members of the Spudder team then gave a musical number, singing "Living for Jesus." Walter Fuller, Jack Kloza, Irving Burns, Art Bradburry and Larry Bettencourt gave the song accompanied at the piano by Phillip Wagner.

Wm. E. Huff, president of the club, followed with a talk on the benefit of a successful baseball club to a city. Guy Airey, secretary of the club, discussed "the most important attributes of the ideal ball player other than those of offense and defense."

Carl Williams, manager of the team, introduced the more than 25 players present for the services.

Next Sunday, it was announced, the Kay Bible class services will especially honor veterans of the wars, participants in the civil war, the Spanish-American war and the world war being urged to attend.

Baseball also formed the theme of the address of Rev. Mr. Barron Sunday, in his regular talk to the class. His address follows:

Quotes Branch Rickey

"In a talk to a group of men in Louisville last December, Branch Rickey, the vice president and general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, asked: 'What is the greatest single thing in the character of a successful enterprise, in the character of a boy, in the character of a great baseball player?' And in answer to the last part of his question he said: 'I think it is the desire to be a great ball player, a desire that dominates him, a desire that is so strong that it does not admit of anything that runs counter to it, a desire to excel that so confines him to a single purpose that nothing else matters.' 'The greatest single thing,' continued Mr. Rickey, 'in the qualification of a great player, a great team, or a great man, is a desire to reach the objective that admits of no interference anywhere. That is the greatest thing I know about baseball or anything else.'

"We immediately sense the fact that Mr. Rickey has made a clean hit with these remarks. It is evident that the baseball player who has no desire to be a great player—a desire that dominates him and determines his conduct—will never go further in his profession than the bush, or minor leagues. I expect these leagues abound with men who have the ability—that is, the natural ability—to succeed in the majors, but having lacked this dominating desire to excel have continued nearer the bottom. The same thing can be said of every other profession and business—only those go to the top who are mastered by a desire to excel in their respective careers.

"Mr. Rickey's happy observation suggests a still deeper truth which I want to drag out into the light if I may. The desire to be a great baseball player, a successful business man, a noted scientist, or a skilled surgeon is an expression of another and even greater desire, namely, the desire to live an abundant life. It lies back of the desires that drove men on in their varied activities from day and year to year. You and I are driven on to our tasks, our recreations, and pleasures by this fundamental desire. Whether we recognize it or not, deep down in every one of our hearts we long for an abundant life. Different conceptions of what constitutes it and the methods of gaining it lead us in different directions morally and spiritually, but at heart we seek the same thing—an abundant life.

"When the light of history dawns upon man we find him seeking this life. In every land of the shining sun he has sought for it unceasingly and in countless ways. Systems of religion, philosphy, ethics, law and government, have resulted from this search and aided him therein. Many of nature's forces have been harnessed to pull man in this direction. The wind and the waters, the sun and the seas, and the lightening have been made servants to bring him on his way. He has waded through rivers of blood, and trodden over deserts great, and caused enough sorrow and suffering which, I suppose, if they were expressed in one groan of agony would be so terrible it would melt hearts of stone. The search continues in every quarter of the world and in every normal human heart. And one need only lift up his eyes to see how partial is the victory so far.

"About nineteen hundred years ago there lived a man who knew the secret of this life for which men seek. He lived it fully till his death, at 33. Out of its experience He told men what constituted the abundant life and how to have it. And men wrote down what He said and what He did, and the impressions He made upon them. We have a book today which contains much that they wrote in which we see Him and learn the things He said and did. Those who knew Him were so inspired by Him and their lives were so enriched that they went over the world telling others the things they had heard, seen and felt. So through them and the many generations following the world has come to know His name and some of His words and deeds. We call Him Jesus Christ, and those who try to follow His Life and teachings Christians.

Jesus Misunderstood

"I do not suppose there ever lived a man more misunderstood by the world than Jesus. The mind of the average man is full of misconceptions about Him. Some men think of Him more as a robber than one who seeks to save them from a meager to an abundant life. They think of the Christian minister and church as agencies whose sole purpose it is to take from them the good things of life. They think of Christianity in terms of 'don't do this, don't do that, stop this, stop that, give up this, give up that.' The way of the Christian means to them a drab, unlovely, undesirable existence. And since they seek a full, rich, and happy life, Christianity as conceived has for them no appeal and they politely pass it up with the inward feeling that maybe it is all right for old people, small children, and weak-minded folks, but for a vigorous, healthy-minded man, no!

"This is the exact opposite of truth. Christianity's sole purpose—that is, real Christianity—is to enrich human life. It does not take from it, but to add to it, not empty it, but to fill it full; not to curtail, but to lengthen it; not to mar the beauty of all life. Its primary aim is not to insure men against fire [illegible] in the world to come, but to sustain in men a quality of [illegible] which perpetuating in still an-

Kiwanis Club To Honor Spudders At Lunch Today

Members of the 1930 Spudder squad will continue Monday noon the process of converting custom into tradition when they take luncheon at the Kemp hotel as guests of the Kiwanis club, and in exchange therefor will present the program for the day.

Monday's exhibition of talent will disclose whether or not the new arrivals in the Huff stables include a successor to the versatile "Rabbit" Benton, who headed Spudder entertainments during the past two years. Assurance of a full attendance of the ball hands was obtained by pledging that the luncheon will be served before the compensating song and dance is demanded, according to Gerald Pond, who will be ring-master.

Several members of the Henrietta Kiwanis club have made reservations for Monday's luncheon, it was said.

Tall Men's League Formed in Cardiff

CARDIFF, South Wales, March 30. (US)—Life in these regions has become so intolerable for those of six feet and upwards that a league of tall men has been formed.

The purpose of the league is to bring to the attention of furniture and building designers the requirements of extraordinarily tall persons.

"Furniture makers seem to have no consideration for us," complains one of the league members. "Beds are so small that we have to double up to get into them. In the streets awnings are so low that we have to duck to get under them. We are always having our hats knocked off by doors that are too low and advertisements that are not hung high enough."

Jimmy McPhail Joins Dallas Advertising Firm

J. A. (Jimmy) McPhail Jr., formerly advertising manager for Saul's Stores, Inc., and prior to that time a member of the advertising department of The Record News, is now connected with Tracy-Locke-Dawson, Inc., of Dallas, according to information received from that city.

The Tracy Locke Dawson firm is one of the best known advertising agencies in this section of the country. Mr. McPhail became widely known in Wichita Falls during the years which he spent here through his activities as an advertising salesman and a member of the Advertising club. He is a graduate of the school of journalism of Missouri university, besides having three years' experience in newspaper advertising and three years in retail merchandising.

BATTERY MEN HEAR MANAGER

Confidence in Business of Area Shown by Firm

Confidence of the Willard Battery company in the business outlook for 1930 was reflected in the statement that $200,000 more will be devoted to advertising this year than last, made by J. A. Rhoades, zone manager, before about 50 Willard Battery dealers present at a zone convention held at the local Willard station Sunday morning.

Development of the battery business with changing conditions was reflected in Mr. Rhoades' statement that 102 different types of batteries are now being manufactured, many of them for airplanes and buses. He also pointed out that different grades of batteries are being recommended now for different classes of motor vehicles, classified according to the manner and degree in which each will be used. Statistical information given showed that in the Dallas district one out of every 10 batteries in automobiles are of Willard make, while in Wichita Falls and vicinity the ratio is one of every 13.

Speaking on the subject of "Banking," Walter D. Cline told the battery dealers that business men and bankers have a mutual responsibility each to the other.

"You will find most bankers leaders in civic affairs in your communities," he said. "They will be helpful to you with sound advice on business matters. Consult and lay your problems before them, and if your financial requirements are worthy, they will assist you with money as well as advice."

Advertising was declared one of the first essentials of successful merchandising by J. H. Allison, who discussed advertising with relation to the battery business. Familiarizing the public with the service which a dealer is equipped to render is the burden of advertising and the key to success, Mr. Allison said. Newspapers continue to be the most effective medium for accomplishing this purpose, he continued, because they are universally read.

Those present Sunday morning were welcomed by John Boswell, general manager of the chamber of commerce. Following the morning conference, luncheon was served, and a general discussion of 1930 plans was given by Kendall Paulk, local Willard Battery company dealer, who presided over the meeting.

No Limitations Placed on Man's Right to Know Christ, Says Martin

Declaring that no "man-made limitations" are placed upon the right of all men to know Christ, Judge P. A. Martin, addressing the Men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning, presented his interpretation of Christ as the "good Shepherd." The address was illustrated by a colorful picture of a Texas shepherd sheltering his flock from the snow a part of the speaker's early memories of this section.

An outline of the address is quoted below:

"The lesson today is one in which Jesus calls himself the 'good shepherd.' I never think of this scripture, without being reminded of an incident in my own life during my first year in Texas. Some of you have heard me relate it before, others have not, but whether you have or not the experience will bear repetition.

"It was about this time in the spring of 1886. An old shepherd named Cabe Thomas and I were herding some 2,100 head of sheep on the unsettled prairie some 50-odd miles south of this city. We had divided the herd, for the 'lambing season' was on and I, in charge of the 'mutton herd' of some seven or eight hundred wild and wooley fellows was wandering about daily on the prairie anywhere from one to five miles from the main camp, where Cabe was attending the rapidly increasing herd of mother sheep and lambs near a convenient water hole. My herd traveled all over the country while his on account of their weakness had to be held near camp all the time, so we saw each other only at night and in the early dawn when I came in for my meals.

Describes Norther

"It was on the night of April 12. I lay down to sleep early, for a brisk norther was blowing and dark clouds were sweeping down. The herd was quiet. My bed consisted of some blankets, a 'fish-brand slicker' and over all a pretty good tarpaulin. I covered up, head and ears, and slept soundly, until near dawn on the morning of the 13th. When I awoke and peeped out from under my coverings an avalanche of snow fell upon my face and neck and I found that old Boreas had added about three inches to my covering during the night. I scrambled out and looking away off through the still drifting snow, I could dimly see the faint glimmer of the campfire and with a vision of hot coffee, fried bacon and sour-dough biscuit in mind I fought my way through the drifts to the camp, where a strange and never to be forgotten sight met my eyes.

"The old shepherd was standing out in the wintry blast, with a dozen or more mother sheep bleating around him, while in his little 'pup-tent' where he usually slept, safely and snugly wrapped up in his own blankets were a dozen or more little lambs that had come into the world that stormy night. The old fellow had been up all the long hours of the night, listening for the first faint cries of the new-born lambs and then, with painstaking, tender care he had gone forth into the herd, searched them out and tenderly borne them into his own tent, placed them in his own bed and saved the lives of every one of them, for none could have survived such a night as this. And there, in the flickering light of the little campfire, fighting its losing struggle with the light of a dismal day graying the clouded East, there burst upon me, more fully than I ever knew before, the vast depth of meaning in the words of the Son of Mary when He said 'I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.'

"And when, years afterwards, I heard the great Sankey sing his masterpiece 'The Ninety and Nine' there came into my mind a vision of my old friend, Cabe, plunging out through the drifting snow and braving the blast of the Texas norther to gather in the lambs that would have perished that night, but for such a 'tender shepherd's care.'

"Jesus lived and worked and taught in a pastoral country and among a pastoral people to whom his imagery was perfectly plain. Most of them were shepherds at some time of their lives and I feel that this little experience of my own early life has probably enabled me to better understand the many scriptures depicting Him as a good shepherd.

"He gave His life. He became a man, as well as a god. He worked with His hands even as you and I. He suffered pain, was tempted and tried even as you and I, yet without sin, (unlike you and I), He was hated and despised of men; was spit upon, derided wounded and bruised, for our transgressions; was crowned with a crown of thorns; was crucified between two thieves, dying the most ignominious death known to the age in which He lived.

"He became the propitiation for all the sins of the world. He gave His life for his sheep. This is called the atonement.

"I do not pretend to understand the doctrine of the atonement, any more than I understand why Saturn has rings and other planets including ours have none. I only know the rings are there. I do not know why the great sacrifice was necessary any more than I know why the comets were rent trailing across the heavens to be seen of men perhaps only once or twice in a century. I only know the comets come and go; now we see them and now they are gone and some great scientist tells us that some towards the close of this or the early days in the next century the same comet will come back into human sight again. No one tells us why they were created or what purpose they serve in the economy of the infinite.

"'God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' Or his words in this very lesson, 'I am come that they might have life and have it more abundantly.'

"The how and the why we do not understand, but we do understad that His atonement and His triumphant resurrection caused the daystar of hope to rise in the hearts of earth's teeming millions, guided the destinies of men and nations, led mankind upward and onward to higher and higher flights of wisdom and enlightenment, making always for a more abundant life, and now, after the lapse of 20 centuries His gospel is the greatest influence in the universe. We see and know the fruits of the atonement everywhere. No man, in the church or out of it, can escape its blessed influence. It's gentle showers of blessing fall upon the tares, as well as the wheat and they grow together until the time of harvest.

"He also said in this lesson 'I know my sheep and am known of mine.' To know Christ is the universal privilege of mankind, the rich and the poor, the high and the low, the ignorant as well as the learned, regardless of race or color; all, yes all men everywhere, may know Him and be numbered among those who shall be gathered into his fold, for did He not say, in the golden text of today:

"'Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd.'

"Yes, the time will come when there will be literally 'one fold and one shepherd.' In the past we have been told that it will be a Methodist, a Baptist, a disciple, a Catholic or Protestant fold; some sort of structure to fit our own peculiar sectarian beliefs or prejudices. I think if the Master ever indulges in a smile at the foolishness of His followers here below, it must be when some fellow advances the idea that gobody will ever be saved except his own little gang. I thank God that I believe the 'whosoever' of Jesus included men of all creeds and no creeds and that no manmade limitations are placed upon the right and the privilege of men to enter the fold of the Good Shepherd, and to know Him and be known of Him."
